Front brings little relief to Midwest

Associated Press

A cold front brought rain to parts of the parched upper Midwest on Friday and record chill to the sweltering Northeast, but hot, dry weather elsewhere withered crops and boosted the cost of everything from grain to fish bait.

It was the eighth straight day of 100-degree heat over the central part of the nation.

A plan to pour more water into the Missouri River for shipping ran aground because it would have destroyed nesting areas for endangered birds. But the Mississippi was reopened to barges at Memphis, Tenn., after dredging opened a channel through a shallow area.

Forest fires fanned by hot winds blazed in Montana and Idaho, and at least seven North Dakota counties have banned fireworks on July 4 because of the fire danger. Wisconsin banned outdoor smoking, open fires and fireworks in all state parks, forests and other state land Friday.

Temperatures soared again at the end of a week that saw scores of high temperatures records shattered. The sun was barely directly overhead when the temperature at Sioux Falls, S.D., hit 100 degrees and tied the record. The overnight low at North Platte, Neb., was hardly low at all, dipping only to a record 74.

Fewer cities reached record high temperatures Friday. They included 97 at Casper, Wyo.; 101 at Chattanooga, Tenn.; 93 at Cheyenne, Wyo.; 100 at Des Moines, Iowa; 101 at Kansas City, Mo.; 101 at Paducah, Ky.; 103 at Sioux City, Iowa; and 103 at Sioux Falls, S.D. It was Sioux City's fifth consecutive record. The official 3 p.m. EDT high for the 48 contiguous states was 109 at Pierre, S.D., the National Weather Service said.

In St. Louis, the medical examiner's office said three elderly women had died of hyperthermia. In Georgia, Thomas County Coroner Sam Brown said a woman died of a heart attack brought on by heat stroke while working in a tobacco field.

In Savannah, Ga., the Senior Citizens of Savannah-Chatham County and the Savannah Energy Aging Consortium distributed 25 fans to the elderly Thursday, making it 424 given out since May.

Grain and soybean futures opened lower Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade after overnight thundershowers spread rain over parts of Minnesota across Wisconsin and Iowa into Illinois.

Some parts of Iowa got more than 2 inches of rain before the hot air returned to bake the soil.

"Last week the (soy) beans and corn were all curled and shriveled, and now it looks like they're coming back," said Morris Greenley, who farms near Independence, Iowa. But he said he still faces a 20 percent cutback on his normal yields.

Drought affecting Edwards Aquifer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A dry spell has caused the level of the city's only source of drinking water, the Edwards Aquifer, to drop by as much as a foot a day, and city officials say a water conservation plan may need to be strengthened.

Mayor Henry Cisneros sounded the conservation warning Thursday after the level of the underground water reservoir plunged another one-half foot in one day, to 648.4 feet above sea level.

Friday's reading was 648.3 feet for the vast aquifer, which is recharged by rainfall and streams through cracks in a limestone outcropping.

The mayor said a water conservation plan adopted by the city in 1984, calling for voluntary conservation at 625 feet, may need to be strengthened.

"There's no sense in waiting until we get to 625 and the level of water is falling at a foot a day," Cisneros said, adding he would bring area leaders together soon and possibly issue "a general call, an alarm" for water conservation next week.

Mandatory rationing under the ordinance begins at 612 feet.

Rainfall this year in San Antonio has totaled 7.63 inches, nearly six inches below normal, and farmers and city dwellers are consuming water at an increasing rate to water crops and lawns.

The City Water Board pumped 214.4 million gallons from the aquifer on Wednesday and 199.97 million gallons on Thursday, compared to 145.9 million gallons a day averaged during the rainy June 1987.

"This time of year everyone is out watering their grass, so it can really pull that number way up," said Chuck Ahrens, planning director for the Edwards Underground Water District. "That's the problem. Not only is it dry, but everyone is pumping, too. It's kind of a snowball effect."

Wejay Bundara, spokesman for the City Water Board, said Friday the aquifer is not in danger of drying up, but that the city needs to avoid pumping out more water than is replenished naturally.

Ranchers in Texas have been selling off parts of their herds because of the drought, and in some counties they have qualified for emergency feed programs and other assistance.

Highway 80 accident

Willie Lee Johnson, 58, of Midland, is removed from a pickup truck following a two-vehicle accident Friday afternoon on U.S. Highway 80. Johnson was listed in stable condition Friday night at Midland Memorial Hospital. Two other people were treated and released at MMH. According to the Department of Public Safety, the truck in which Johnson was a passenger swerved into the passing lane to avoid a car driving in the wrong direction and then was struck from behind by a van.

Freedom lacking at WTSU, report claims

CANYON (AP) — Violations of academic freedom by West Texas State University's administration have spawned widespread feelings of fear and distrust among faculty members and students, according to an investigative panel's report made public Friday by school regents.

The reports was written by an panel of academicians who were invited by the board of regents to investigate allegations of academic freedom violations at the 5,700-student school.

The six-page document cited eight specific cases of academic freedom violations by WTSU administration and 13 examples showing "academic freedom is virtually non-existent at West Texas State University."

However, regents and faculty members disagree on the validity of the report's findings.

In a statement made June 14, regents dismissed allegations contained in the panel's report as "trivial in nature." On Friday, regents issued another rebuttal, a 24-page document detailing "factual errors in the (panel's) allegations."

But Gary Byrd, president of WTSU's faculty senate, said the report may prompt faculty members to go public with their allegations of improper denials of tenure, promotions and pay raises.

"(The report) is a heavy indictment of what is going on," Byrd said.

As examples of academic freedom violations, the panel cited a denial of tenure to a faculty member who was given unanimous approval by the tenure committee and the denial of a salary increase for a professor who publicly opposed administration policy.

Faculty members this spring called for the resignation of WTSU President Ed Roach, saying he retaliates against those who oppose his policies and style of management.

Teen-ager 'improving' after marrow transplant

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland teen-ager Heather Preas remains in "serious" condition following her bone-marrow transplant June 11 in Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas.

However, she seems to be improving, said John Gossett, a registered nurse who is Baylor's transplant coordinator and supervisor of the hospital's Special Blood Services Laboratory.

"She is experiencing very typical problems for a transplant patient," Gossett said Friday. He referred to Heather's intermittent fever, weight increases due to water retention, and drop in kidney efficiency.

"It's nothing unusual," Gossett said. "It's normal for them (transplant patients) to have intermittent fever and to be on antibiotics." Heather has "gained quite a bit of water," he said.

"There are signs that the engraftment is working," Gossett said. "Her white blood-cell count is up, and that's gives us an indication that the engraftment is working."

Heather, who suffers from the leukemia-like aplastic anemia in which the bone marrow virtually shuts down its production of blood, was given the bone-marrow transplant June 11 by Baylor oncologist Dr. Joseph Fay.

The marrow, which closely matched Heather's marrow, was drawn earlier on June 11 from the hip bone of a Manchester, England, woman and was flown overseas to Dallas. The donor's marrow was injected into Heather's blood stream in hopes that the infused marrow would effect regeneration of Heather's marrow. The Manchester donor was located through a London tissue bank, the Anthony Nolan Laboratory.

Heather, who until the transplant has been kept alive through routine blood transfusions and medication, has a "50-50" chance of surviving the engraftment, Gossett said.

"Potentially, it is curative," he said of the disease. Heather's survival rate is less than some others, Gossett said, due to her intensive "blood transfusions and other complications."

Her kidneys are function at 50 percent efficiency, he said.

The 16-year-old girl, who is a Midland High School honor student, is the daughter of Cecil and Cindi Preas, who are in Dallas with their daughter.

Rather than being in isolation, Heather is in an Intensive Care Unit.

"She is very alert and has daily visits with her family," Gossett said. "There are going to be good days and bad days," he said. "There is still a good chance. She's hanging in there and is doing pretty well."

If she continues to progress, Heather could be released from the ICU eight weeks after the transplant. And if she survives, "She will need follow-up visits with a physician," he said.

Meanwhile, Heather, is still listed as serious, Gossett said, but "that could change to a (more grave) critical situation very quickly."

Diesel fuel tax bill closer to repeal

From Staff Reports

New life has been breathed into repeal of the 15.1-cent per gallon diesel fuel tax, according to U.S. Rep. Larry Combest.

Immediate repeal of the tax for off-road diesel fuel users, including oil-field contractors and farmers has been included in the technical corrections bill for the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, said Combest spokesman Rich Adams.

The House Ways & Means Committee voted late Thursday to include the tax repeal measure in the bill, Adams said.

Collections of the tax began April 1, and contractors, farmers and other users who are able to document off-road use will be able to apply for refunds at the end of the year.

Annual cash flow requirements have been estimated at more than a quarter of a million dollars for some medium-sized drilling contractors — among those hardest hit by the consumption tax.

Independent bankers vow to fight ruling

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Independent bankers vowed Friday to fight a ruling that allows national banks in Texas to operate branches anywhere in the state.

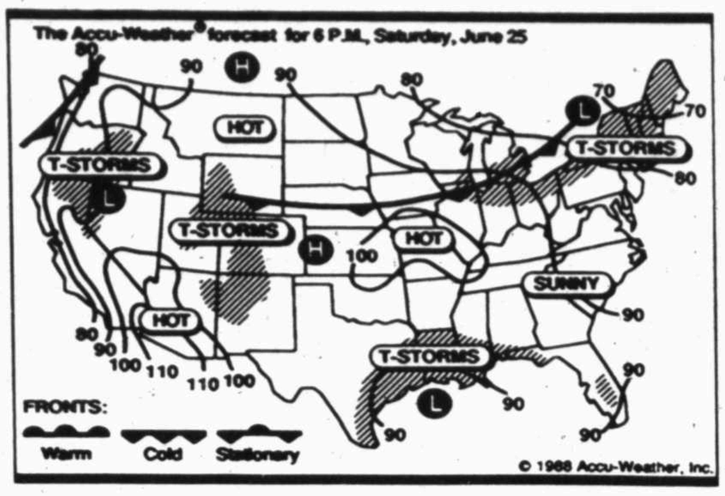

But Attorney General Jim Mattox has not decided yet whether to appeal the ruling by U.S. District Judge Walter Smith of Waco.

"There are still some issues that have to be resolved before we decide whether to appeal," Mattox spokesman Ron Dusek said.

In a ruling delivered to Austin Friday, Smith decided Union National Bank of Laredo and Texas Capital Bank-Westwood of Houston have the right to operate out-of-county branches.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Partly cloudy skies likely

From Staff and Wire Reports

Today will be partly cloudy, with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Winds will be out of the southeast at 5 to 15 mph. The high will be near 90 and it will be partly cloudy tonight, with a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms. The low will be in the mid-60s.

Sunday will be partly cloudy, with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high will be in the upper 80s.

Record high for June 24 was 104 set in 1980. The record low, which was established in 1940, was 57.

STATE

Scattered thunderstorms and heavy rain spread across much of Texas on Friday.

The National Weather Service reported a low pressure system moving through the Gulf of Mexico towards the Upper Texas Coast, and said the system should bring more rain to the state on Saturday.

Scattered thunderstorms will be possible across the greater part of the state through Saturday. Forecasters said most of the precipitation should occur during during the afternoon and evening hours.

Otherwise, skies are expected to be partly cloudy through Saturday.

Highs temperatures Saturday should range from the 80s along the coast and in the mountainous Southwest to the 100s in the Big Bend area and along the Rio Grande Plains.

Low temperatures Friday night were expected to be mainly in the 60s and 70s but in the 50s in the mountains of Southwest Texas.

NATION

Temperatures soared into the 100s across the central part of the nation Friday for the eighth straight day, and storms soaked the western Gulf Coast.

The heat wave extended from the central Plains through the middle Mississippi, Ohio and Tennessee valleys.

DROUGHT

Steve Hollinger of the Illinois State Water Survey said that as of June 15 there was "virtually no moisture available to plants in the top six inches of soil." Below that, down to 40 inches, he said, there is about a two-week supply of moisture.

The front ushered cool air into the Northeast and record lows were reported in a half-dozen cities, including Burlington, Vt., with a chill 40 degrees. Cool air also hit the Northwest, and Olympia, Wash., tied its record of 39.

It's not just plants that suffer in the heat.

Farmers have dumped about 40,000 pounds of dead cattle and hogs a day at the Worthington Rendering Co. in southwestern Minnesota, four times the usual volume, said manager Marlin Terhark. The majority were victims of heat, he said.

"It just hurts more when you stand there and count 'em," said Loren Forest of rural Luverne, Minn., saying he couldn't bear to count the 3-month-old pigs that died this week when a cooling sprinkler failed at his farm.

Urban shoppers may notice some price hikes caused by the drought, but a more immediate effect is visible at farmers' markets in some cities.

Candi Elston, who manages a farmers' market in Urbana, Ill., said five to seven regular vendors were missing this week and people who do show up have "less and less to sell. The drought is the major topic of conversation."

Even the price of fishing is going up because nightcrawlers, a large variety of earthworm popular as bait, have gone deep underground seeking cooler, moist habitat.

"Wholesale prices of nightcrawlers are the highest in the 46 years we've been in business," said Phil Koep, who runs a wholesale bait supply business in Clitherall, Minn. By July 4, he said, the wholesale price of nightcrawlers will have doubled from a year ago.

On the Missouri River, the Corps of Engineers can't increase the flow of water from the Gavins Point Dam on the South Dakota-Nebraska border to aid shipping because that would threaten nests of the federally protected piping plover and interior least tern. "Our attorneys tell us the Endangered Species law takes precedence over the corps' obligation to maintain navigation," said Chet Worm, chief of reservoir operations in Omaha, Neb.

Barges are carrying reduced loads because of low water, and corps officials fear two weeks more without rain could endanger traffic in some sections.

Dredging continued on the Ohio River near Mound City, Ill., which was closed Tuesday when a towboat ran aground in shallow water.

Odessan charged with attempted capital murder

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 38-year-old woman was charged with attempted capital murder and aggravated delivery of heroin Friday afternoon after she allegedly tried to run down a police officer during a drug bust, according to a press release from the department.

The drug charges against the woman and three men grew out of a combined operation that included police narcotics officers and U.S. Border Patrol agents who were acting on a Crime Stoppers tip, the press release from Deputy Chief Marvin Crumrine stated.

The attempt to run down Odessa police Lt. Billy Hammitt allegedly occurred about 12:30 p.m. Friday on the parking lot of the Holiday Inn Centre, 6201 E. Highway 80, the release said.

Following a drug buy of about five ounces of heroin with an estimated street value of $130,000 by an undercover narcotics officer, Crumrine said, officers had begun placing three men under arrest when a woman started up a 1974 Pontiac and headed in the direction of Hammitt.

Hammitt and Sgt. John Hubbs began shooting at the vehicle, firing a total of six shots, in an effort to stop the vehicle, Crumrine stated. The woman left the stalled vehicle and entered a room at the motel where she was arrested without incident a few minutes later, Crumrine said.

The woman and three men were booked into the city jail on charges of aggravated delivery of a controlled substance (heroin).

The woman was also charged with attempted capital murder in connection with her alleged attempt to run down Hammitt, according to Crumrine.

As of late Friday night, no bond had been set for the woman and three men.

In addition to seizing the five ounces of suspected heroin, Crumrine said, officers also confiscated $650 in cash.

Mattox joins Democrats who've endorsed Dukakis

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Probable Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis Friday added Attorney General Jim Mattox to the list of top Texas officials who have endorsed his campaign.

"I am supporting Mike Dukakis because I believe that he will appoint judges who will be strong law enforcers of our civil and criminal laws, while respecting the civil rights of our citizens," Mattox said. "And Mike Dukakis recognizes that one of the major solutions to crime is providing universal quality education."

Railroad Commissioner John Sharp was the only statewide elected official in the state to sign on with Dukakis before the March 8 primaries. Since then, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, House Speaker Gib Lewis, Treasurer Ann Richards and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro have endorsed the Massachusetts governor. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower supports the Rev. Jesse Jackson, and Republican Gov. Bill Clements backs Vice President George Bush.

Mattox aide Elna Christopher said the attorney general waited to endorse until after Dukakis had sewn up the nomination because of his close personal and professional ties with other Democratic presidential hopefuls.

BANKS

Smith, in effect, ruled banks should have the same branching power as savings and loans, which can have offices anywhere in the state.

Union National, which operates a branch in San Antonio, and Texas Capital, which has a branch in Austin, were challenging a state law that restricts branches to the county where a bank's home office is located. The law passed in November 1986.

Smith's ruling came in a lawsuit filed by Mattox after the U.S. comptroller of the currency late last year said the two national banks have the authority to operate the remote banking offices.

F. Hagen McMahon, executive director of the Independent Bankers Association of Texas, said Friday he fears the ruling could extend unlimited branching authority to state banks.

"The battle is not over," he said, noting that challenges to branch banking are occurring in other states and may end up before the U.S. Supreme Court.

McMahon said he has been in contact with Mattox's office about a possible appeal.

"Primarily the ruling is a blow to independent banking and a violation of state law," he said. The decision was improper, he said, because banks are "functionally different from S&Ls."

The result, McMahon said, is that unlimited branch banking will cause small communities to lose control over their deposits to large, out-of-town banks.

Smith's order and 15-page opinion follows a previous decision by the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans on the authority of national banks to branch throughout Mississippi because savings and loans in that state have the power to do so.

The state of Texas also comes under the jurisdiction of the 5th Circuit, so Mattox's chances for a successful appeal could be slim.

But Dusek said the case involving the two Texas banks has several different elements than the Mississippi case.

TAX

Adams said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's original bill called for a July 7 effective date for the repeal, but the actual date will depend on when the bill clears Congress and if it gains the president's signature.

The committee expects the bill to go to the floor of the House by the middle of next week, he said.

DEATHS

John H. Bragg

Services for John H. Bragg of Midland have been set for 4 p.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Bill Skaggs of Kelview Heights Baptist Church officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Bragg died at his home early Friday morning.

He was born Oct. 9, 1916, in Memphis, Texas. He was raised in Memphis and Ralls. He moved to Odessa in 1941. He was employed as a welder and pipefitter, and was a member of the Plumbers and Pipefitters Union, Local 239, in Odessa. Bragg continued his line of work after moving to Midland in 1949.

He met Inez Armstrong in Merkel in 1941. They were married in Sylvester on May 10, 1941.

A graduate of Portales High School in Portales, N.M., in 1934, he attended Eastern New Mexico University in Portales.

Bragg was a member of Kelview Heights Baptist Church, Acacia Masonic Lodge 1414 and the Scottish Rite and York Rite Bodies.

He is survived by his wife, Inez Bragg of Midland; a son, Johnny L. Bragg, of Midland; two daughters, Phyllis Van Dyke and Jeanette Moser, both of Greenville; one brother, Tom E. Bragg of Lubbock, three grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Pallbearers will be Joe Thornton, Bellie Dunn, Jim Laney, Clinton Bounds, Tommie Bragg, Joe Bragg, Ed Seago and A.C. Reeves.

Allen Patterson

HOBBS, N.M. — Services for Allen Patterson, 81, of Hobbs, will be held at 10 a.m. today at the Lane Chapel CME Church with Rev. H.L. Pacely officiating. Interment will be in the Prairie Haven Cemetery.

Griffin Funeral Home in Hobbs is in charge of arrangements.

He died June 22 in Hobbs.

He was born Nov. 11, 1906, in San Angelo, and married Ellen Cook on July 15, 1926, in Brady.

He had been an employee of Exxon in McCamey since 1926, and retired in 1971 to Midland. He moved to Hobbs and worked for the Lea County Airport from 1978 until he retired in 1987.

A son preceded him in death.

Survivors include his wife, Ellen Patterson of Hobbs; two sons, Cornelius Patterson of Hobbs and Zachariah Patterson of Austin; four daughters, Annie Wimbish of Hobbs, Mary Alice Brooks of Hobbs, Louise Pacely of Wichita Falls, and Juanita Parker of San Antonio; 27 grandchildren and 40 great-grandchildren.

Charlotte M. Ward

Services for Mrs. Charlotte M. Ward will be held at 9:30 a.m. today at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. Burial will be held at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Pallbearers will be Gail Stoddard, Bob Throckmorton, J.C. Williamson, Harvey Herd, Perry Pickett, John Mast and Charlie Walne.

WTSU

The panel's report concluded the violations of academic freedom have created an atmosphere that is deeply harmful to achievement of the school's educational mission.

"Feeling of fear, distrust and insecurity are widespread," the report said.

Regents previously had refused to make the report public, requesting a ruling on the matter from the state attorney general's office. The attorney general's office Tuesday said that under the Texas Open Records Act, WTSU must release parts of the report and could release all of it.

Meeting Friday their second emergency meeting in 11 days, regents decided to release the document and make another response.

However, faculty senate president and psychology professor Gary Byrd said the regents response is simply "their side of the story."

"Is it all a big lie?" Byrd asked, referring to the panel's interviews with of 145 WTSU faculty, staff, administrators and students. "Are 150 people in together on a big lie?"

The panel's report said the examples of violations of academic freedom weren't isolated incidents.

"In short, the committee is convinced that the specific problems of academic freedom and freedom of expression we are asked to investigate cannot be attributed to the actions of a few malcontents," the report said. "These problems reflect, instead, a more fundamental erosion of academic freedom and freedom of expression in the current management of the university."

Only one regent, Burk Whittenburg of Amarillo, voted against the regents' response.

"It's time to cool the rhetoric, and everyone (on the board) should ask himself or herself whether the things we are doing and saying are really in the best interest of the institution," Whittenburg told the Amarillo Globe-News.

Roach was out of his office Friday afternoon and unavailable for comment, his secretary said.

New judge assigned in dispute

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — A new judge has been assigned to hear an appeal by the city of El Paso, Texas, of a ruling denying its applications to drill for water in southern New Mexico.

The state Supreme Court assigned the case to District Judge Manuel Saucedo of Deming after the Texas city excused District Judge Joe Galvan from the case. Three other judges from the 3rd Judicial District also excused themselves.

State Engineer Steve Reynolds issued an order last December denying El Paso's applications to drill 287 wells in the Hueco and Lower Rio Grande basins in Otero and Dona Ana counties and to pump 256,000 acre-feet of water a year to meet future needs.

Reynolds issued the decision after 58 days of hearings between Nov. 18, 1986, and Aug. 12, 1987.

Stockholders fail to take action on Braniff sale

Foley

DALLAS (AP) — Stockholders for Braniff Inc. met in two brief sessions Friday, but adjourned both times without taking any action because of a delay in the sale of the Dallas-based airline.

"The transaction supposed to take place in New York today wasn't completed," Braniff vice chairman and chief executive officer Pat Foley said after the second adjournment. He would not elaborate or answer questions.

Braniff spokeswoman Irma Ellis said negotiations continued Friday afternoon between Dalfort Inc., Braniff's parent company, and an investment group led by Paine Webber Group Inc. of New York, which is leading the buyout attempt.

Dalfort is owned by the Pritzker family of Chicago, who also own the Hyatt hotel chain.

Stockholders were to gather at the company's headquarters at Dallas' Love Field at 10 a.m. today for another meeting, and would elect a new board of directors if the sale is completed, Ms. Ellis said.

Earlier in the week, a Braniff spokesman said existing directors would not stand for reelection to the board if Dalfort sold the airline before the end of the stockholders meeting.

The spokesman said new directors would be nominated if Dalfort completed the sale.

Dalfort owns 64 percent of the airline's common stock and all of its Series A preferred stock, giving it more than 90 percent of the stock voting rights.

In the Paine Webber buyout offer, Braniff stockholders for each share would receive $7 and approximately one-fifth of a share of common stock in the restructured company. The deal has been valued at up to $100 million.

In addition, the Dallas Morning News reported Friday that Braniff may sell $40 million worth of assets, including terminal gates and landing slots, to American Airlines.

In North Carolina, the Charlotte Observer, quoting unnamed airline industry sources, reported Friday that Piedmont Airlines chairman William McGee would quit his job and join former Piedmont chairman William Howard and three other Piedmont officials in the purchase.

Under Howard's leadership, Piedmont grew into the ninth-largest U.S. airline and was consistently among the most profitable carriers.

Seminar didn't break laws, officials say

"My brother was murdered in Houston about four years ago and it took me a long time to come to terms with it and have faith in human nature again. I wish this hadn't happened to me."

— Judith Hurst, bank clerk

AUSTIN (AP) — Participants in a motivational seminar who were encouraged to walk on coals, hitch rides and jump off utility poles while wearing a harness may have been engaged in unethical behavior, but apparently no laws were broken, officials said.

Austin police investigated several complaints against participants in the Robbins Research International program, but no crimes were found to have been committed, the Austin American-Statesman reported Friday.

Officials at the state attorney general's Consumer Protection Office said some methods participants used to get money might have been unethical, but they did not appear to be illegal.

Seminar officials said the complaints stemmed from isolated cases. The seminar at an Austin hotel had 700 participants from all over the United States and Canada, the newspaper reported. The seminar cost $2,900 to $3,995 per person.

Some participants might have been a little overzealous in pursuing self-improvement, the La Jolla, Calif.-based organizers conceded. The newspaper reported it had received calls Thursday from people complaining they were conned by participants in one of the exercises.

Tuesday, participants were stripped of identification and money and given a quarter, an apple and a map. Their mission was to go to Dallas, Houston or San Antonio and be back in Austin by 6 p.m. Wednesday.

"They learn to be resourceful. They learn that they don't need money to do things," said seminar organizer Anthony Robbins of what he called the "Night Out" exercise.

Robbins, the 28-year-old founder and president of Robbins Research International, said the participants are taught to "give back to people more than they took" during the exercise.

He said the participants tried to pass on newly acquired knowledge about eliminating fears, phobias and biases.

"Some of them have taught others to stop drinking or smoking," Robbins said.

Judith Hurst, a clerk at San Antonio's MBank Alamo, said a female seminar participant said her purse had been stolen and she had to get back to Austin.

"If I or my daughter were in the same situation, I would want somebody to help, so I called the bus station and found out how much a ticket was and gave her the money and an extra $10 for lunch," Ms. Hurst said.

Ms. Hurst said she felt good about helping the woman until she learned that about 15 other people had come into the bank with similar stories.

"My brother was murdered in Houston about four years ago and it took me a long time to come to terms with it and have faith in human nature again," Ms. Hurst said. "I wish this hadn't happened to me."

Robbins said the complaints were unfortunate, isolated incidents. He said the good done by the majority of the participants outweighs the dozen complaints he had received.

Earlier in the week, participants wearing safety harnesses jumped off 50-foot utility poles while grabbing onto a trapeze. Some participants walked across a 45-foot bed of hot coals during the seminar.

These exercises were designed to show people that they can overcome fears and that there are no limitations to what they could achieve, Robbins said.

Former bank director pleads guilty

DALLAS (AP) — Former Interfirst Bank, Dallas director Edwin L. Cox Jr. pleaded guilty Friday to one count of federal bank fraud stemming from false statements he made to secure $80 million in loans, court officials said.

U.S. District Judge Sidney A. Fitzwater ordered Cox, 41, to be sentenced Aug. 26.

The Athens businessman has repaid the $80 million he received while a director of Interfirst Bank from 1984 to 1986.

A federal court filing claimed Cox "submitted false personal financial information and false information regarding loan collateral."

U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins said maximum punishment is five years in prison and $250,000 in fines.

Reports filed for continuation of the Cox loans indicated more than 20,000 head of cattle for collateral, when there were fewer than 5,000, worth a fraction of the value, according to Collins.

Cox announced last week he had agreed to plead guilty to the federal bank fraud charge, and at the same time resigned as chairman of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission. Gov. Bill Clements appointed Delo Caspary of Rockport Thursday to serve the remainder of Cox's term on the commission.

A&M scientists explore geology of underwater plateau

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Scientists say they now have a 97 million-year geological record of the Kerguelen Plateau, which once was a lush forest but now lies under water in a remote sub-Antarctic region of the Indian Ocean.

The plateau is about 1,550 miles in length and resembles the shape of Argentina, according to scientists at the international Ocean Drilling Program, headquartered at Texas A&M University.

Research conducted aboard the drillship JOIDES Resolution, operated and staffed by a Texas A&M crew, reveals the history of a region that began with a barren land mass, evolved into a lush primeval forest and underwent a long period of slow subsidence before reaching its present depth more than a half-mile below the surface.

Samples examined aboard the 470-foot ship show rocks had formed either above or very near to sea level, proof that the plateau existed as a land mass during the earliest phases of its history, Philip Rabinowitz, the director of the Ocean Drilling Program, said Friday.

Fingernail-sized fragments of fossil wood found in the reddish brown, soil-like silts and clays also point to terrestrial conditions existing in a warm, moist climate, he said.

The plateau then began to subside, and continued to do so until about 1.6 million years ago as the water deepened to present-day depths of more than a kilometer. The region's climate also began to cool significantly about 36 million years ago.

From about 1.6 million years ago to the present, blooms of microscopic marine algae called diatoms and layers of rocks carried by icebergs from Antarctica left a record of the climate changes that occurred during ice ages.

Scientists aboard the ship also are hoping to date the track of India's movement toward the Asian continent, and study the behavior of the region's climate patterns over millions of years.

INS calls arrests for false papers first of many

EL PASO (AP) — The arrests of four people accused of selling fraudulent work papers to undocumented workers are the first of many, an immigration official said Friday.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service is investigating 13 labor contractors in the El Paso area "who we feel have engaged in fraud concerning special agricultural worker applications," said Al Giugni, INS district director.

The three labor contractors and one notary public who were arrested Wednesday and Thursday represented half the people indicted by a federal grand jury in Albuquerque June 16 on fraud and conspiracy charges, Giugni said.

The other four, whose names were not released, were still being sought Friday, he said.

Arrested Wednesday were notary public William T. Moore and labor contractor Daniel Meza, both of Las Cruces, N.M., Giugni said.

Arrested Thursday were labor contractors Jesus Manuel Ochoa Sr. and his daughter, Carmen Ochoa, both of Salem, N.M., Giugni said.

All four were arraigned before U.S. Magistrate John Darden in Las Cruces and released on $10,000 in unsecured bonds, which are similar to personal recognizance bonds.

Meza and the Ochoas have unlisted phone numbers; there was no answer Friday afternoon at Moore's home.

The six labor contractors and two notary publics under indictment are accused of selling false labor contractor work letters and affidavits confirming seasonal agricultural employment to hundreds of aliens, mostly Mexicans.

Labor contractors are hired by farmers to find workers to pick their crops. Under the special agricultural worker program, some alien migrant workers who toiled illegally in the United States are eligible for temporary U.S. residency. They could later apply for permanent residency and eventually citizenship.

In their applications, the migrant workers have to submit proof that they worked on farms in the United States. Because many are paid in cash and few, if any, records were kept, the INS accepts affidavits from employers or labor contractors.

INS officials have said from the beginning they were prepared to investigate the inevitable abuses.

Pete Reyes, director of the INS' El Paso Legalization Center, said 23 percent of SAW applicants were using fraudulent documents in March and April. Those found using fraudulent papers are denied residency.

About 30 to 40 agricultural applicants walk into the Legalization Center a day now, Reyes said. The deadline for applying is Nov. 30.

Some 200 applicants got papers through the four arrested Wednesday and Thursday, Giugni said.

If convicted, the defendants could be sentenced to five years in prison and be fined $2,000 fine on each count, said Joe Bubich, INS supervisory special agent.

The defendants charged between $100 and $1,000 to have papers falsified or to have fraudulent papers notarized, Giugni said.

Rainbow Family member Hoot calls the tribes to a council meeting near Lufkin Thursday to discuss Judge William Wayne Justice's ruling that allows the "family" to gather in groups of up to 5,000.

Rainbow Family wins go-ahead for gathering

TYLER (AP) — After weeks of legal wrangling, the back-to-nature Rainbow Family has the go-ahead to hold its annual "gathering of the tribes" over the July Fourth weekend in an East Texas national forest.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice gave the Rainbow Family written permission Thursday to camp in the Angelina National Forest but attached strict sanitary and environmental stipulations to his order.

Rainbow Family members promptly selected a site at Zavalla and dubbed it "The Promised Land" and began preparing it Friday for the anticipated thousands of campers.

Justice was faced with deciding between the Rainbow Family's First Amendment rights and U.S. Forest Service concerns that the gathering would present a public health hazard. His order demands the group select three or more campsites and prepare sanitary accommodations that routinely could be inspected by the U.S. Public Health Service.

"It's about time the Forest Service understands that they need to cooperate with us and not interfere with us so that we can cooperate together and prepare the site for a healthy, happy and peaceful gathering," said a family member who identified himself as Water Singing On The Rocks.

Despite the ruling, Forest Service officials said they would continue to block three forest roads to additional members of the group until the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rules on an earlier Justice decision that deemed some Forest Service camping requirements unconstitutional, spokeswoman Gay Ippolito said.

The Forest Service is waiting for the appeals court to rule on the constitutionality of its requirement that groups of 25 people or more must obtain a specific use permit to camp.

"We are still under the temporary restraining order (preventing the group from camping until it gets a permit,)" Ms. Ippolito said. "The roads will still be closed until we hear from the 5th Circuit."

In Thursday's 43-page ruling, Justice authorized the Forest Service to close any site where family members were not complying with his requirements on food service, sanitation and disposal of sewage, garbage and solid waste.

"In requiring that the defendants (Rainbow Family members) observe sanitary and hygenic practices at the gathering, they will not be unduly burdened," Justice wrote. "In fact, the defendants themselves will be healthier as a result."

His order allows 300 family members to prepare each campsite once they have been designated. Public Health Service personnel must inspect and certify each site before it can be opened to additional campers.

Mauro says he's angered by FBI investigation

EL PASO (AP) — State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Friday that he's angry over an FBI investigation into Veterans Land Board transactions.

"Some of you have seen and heard news reports that question the integrity of our veterans programs," the Democrat told an audience at the state Veterans of Foreign Wars convention.

"You may have heard that I'm mad about those headlines and the federal inquiry that provoked them. Well, I'm here to tell you I'm damn mad. And I want you to know they're barking up the wrong tree."

The FBI last week subpoenaed records of Veterans Land Board transactions involving nine people, some of whom contributed to Mauro's campaigns. This week, the FBI sought from the secretary of state's office Mauro's campaign contribution reports for 1984 through this year.

"I think it's much ado about nothing," Mauro told reporters after his speech. "Once the FBI investigates and finds nothing, I think they'll go away...The only people who get special favors in the Texas Land Office are Texas veterans."

The Veterans Land Board, which Mauro chairs, oversees the program that permits veterans to borrow low-interest money to buy land.

"There is absolutely nothing they can find in the veterans program or anything else that the FBI will say is a problem," Mauro said. "I'm ready to cooperate with any investigation and I want to get it over with."

Mauro said he has not talked directly to FBI investigators, but said his lawyer, Gerald Goldstein of San Antonio, is dealing with the agency.

FBI spokesman Pat Calley in San Antonio said Thursday that Mauro is cooperating in the investigation. Calley would not discuss specific allegations being investigated.

Goldstein has said Mauro's political foes are using federal investigators to smear him.

Mauro, who has been rumored as a possible candidate for another state office in 1990, said he had no idea who those political foes might be.

"I would be surprised if it were Jim Mattox or Ann Richards because they're friends of mine and friends don't treat you that way," Mauro said in response to one question, adding that his gubernatorial race plans are up in the air right now.

STATE IN BRIEF

40 call decision on Austin mayor pro tem 'racist'

AUSTIN (AP) — About 40 people demonstrated during the first full-length City Council session conducted by new Mayor Lee Cooke, saying the council's failure to elect Charles Urdy as mayor pro tem was rooted in racism.

State Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, was part of a group of Urdy supporters carrying signs that read "Austin Loves Urdy." The group paraded into the council meeting just before its evening session Thursday.

"This is a racist issue," Ms. Delco said. "The council has betrayed Dr. Urdy. It is an insult when you tell a member of a minority group that when they have earned the right (to the mayor pro tem position), there are suddenly other factors that spring up to keep them from getting it."

During June 15 swearing-in ceremonies for council members who won the May elections, the council voted 5-2 to elect councilwoman Sally Shipman as mayor pro tem.

Urdy, who is black, has served on the council two years longer than Ms. Shipman. But in addition to Urdy's own vote, the only support he received came from new councilman Robert Barnstone.

Order to trim timber harvest

LUFKIN (AP) — A recent court order that forbids tree-cutting within 1,200 meters of woodpecker colonies could trim timber production by 75 percent on 2ω,000 acres of Texas national forest, U.S. Forest Service officials said.

The order by U.S. District Judge Robert Parker protecting the red-cockaded woodpecker would have relatively little immediate impact on timber production, but long-term yield could drop significantly on lands where clearcutting is halted, said Mike Lannan, supervisor of the national forests in Texas.

At a news conference Thursday, Lannan said the order could require the Forest Service to close one-third of its road system and put $12 million in timber contracts in doubt.

According to Forest Service estimates, one-third of the national forest lands in Texas are within 1,200 meters of one of the 455 known woodpecker colonies.

TCTA knocks career ladder

AUSTIN (AP) — The president of a state teachers' group said Friday that inconsistencies in career ladder rules have prevented the system from being applied fairly to all personnel and districts.

Inadequate funding also has forced districts to manipulate the process and circumvent the intent of career ladder rules, Susan Crocker of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association told a Friday State Board of Education hearing.

Ms. Crocker said in a statement that a rule requiring stricter performance criteria for teachers has been manipulated. She said many districts set the criteria for career ladder placement after evaluations are complete.

The teacher career ladder was established by the Legislature four years ago. Pay bonuses are provided to teachers who are placed on the ladder.

Cheap dollars helping state, Weinstein says

AUSTIN (AP) — Cheap dollars and the improvement in the nation's economy are helping Texas to rebound from its financial slump that lasted half a decade, an economist told the Texas Press Association on Friday.

But although the state's economy is looking up, "I don't foresee another oil boom — not in the next 15 years," economist Bernard L. Weinstein said.

Weinstein, director of Southern Methodist University's Center for Enterprising, said dollars and demographics are shaping the state's economic future.

Demographically, the number of working Texans increased by close to 80,000 in the past year, reversing two years of job losses, Weinstein said.

But those jobs barely begin to make up for the more than a quarter-million jobs that were lost between 1982 and 1987, the depth of the oil and agriculture slump, Weinstein said.

The dollar's lower value is helping the state's export-oriented industries — including petroleum — improve because more goods are in demand overseas. The state comptroller's office has said that for the first time in five years, Texas' petrochemical industries are running at full capacity and billions of dollars in new plant investments are in the works.

The same report by Comptroller Bob Bullock said that after three years of worsening bankruptcies, the trend has been reversed and the rate of business failures is down 14 percent so far in 1988.

The state's economic recovery is sustainable, Weinstein, "but I don't see a boom-time coming in the future."

"Texas will perform much more in lockstep with the rest of the nation," Weinstein said. "Sometimes we don't want to admit it, but Texas is part of the national economy."

National concerns that will affect Texas include real estate and banking woes that must be solved in Washington, Weinstein said. "Politicians know that this isn't a $3 billion to $5 billion problem, it's a $50-60 billion problem" that will be paid for by taxpayers, he said.

Texas taxpayers should "begin demanding fiscal equity," he said. They send more dollars to Washington than they get back.

Judiciary panel agrees salaries must be raised

AUSTIN — A judiciary committee agreed Friday that judicial salaries should be raised, but postponed a proposal to sever the tie between state district judges' pay and legislative retirement benefits.

The Joint Select Committee on the Judiciary also voted for restricting judicial campaign contributions by individuals and political action committees, both in dollar amounts and time periods.

Another committee vote recommended the printing and mailing of pamphlets by the state to inform voters about qualifications of judicial candidates.

The committee heard from only one witness Friday, state Sen. Cyndi Krier, who urged members to consider a proposal to make public judicial candidates' professional and law enforcement records.

Ms. Krier, R-San Antonio, said her proposal was aimed at making public the private reprimands of the Commission on Judicial Conduct and the State Bar grievance committees. No vote was taken.

On the salary issue, it was noted that Texas Supreme Court justices make $78,795 a year. Committee member Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said, "There is no question they could make a lot more money in the private sector."

Committee members were told the salary for justices ranks Texas 15th among the states. New York justices are paid the most, averaging $115,000.

No specific salary figure was recommended for various judges, but Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, suggested that salaries be linked to some type of index.

Texan builds submarine to 'get to bottom of things'

CORSICANA, Texas (AP) — When the city fathers prohibited any kind of swimming in Lake Halbert years ago, Ray Bass, an avid skindiver and fisherman, was spurred to action.

He built a 3,000-pound submarine.

It took three months of hard work, a dash of ingenuity, a heap of spare parts and a sprinkling of good luck, but on April 1, 1958, Bass and his partner-in-brine Pete Hardgraves launched Turtle II on her first journey to the bottom of the lake.

And two months later Bass surfaced from a barrage of press coverage and local curiosity to accept the commission of admiral in the Texas Navy from then-Gov. Price Daniels. It was 30 years ago this month.

Bass says he can't remember the governor's speech on the momentous occasion — a day kept alive in his memory by a scrapbook of newspaper clippings and a large photographic display on his office wall — but the excited throngs will forever stick in his mind.

"I looked across at all those people, I felt like I was standing out there just bare naked," he says.

The nation was exposed to Bass' successful scrap metal submersible through a flurry of attention from such media as Parade magazine, Mechanix Illustrated and NBC's Nightwatch news program.

The Submarine Library of the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics Corp., which built submarines for the U.S. Navy, gathered information on Turtle II for their historical journals.

Letters poured in from all over the United States and Canada asking Bass, now 65, for the plans to build their own submarines.

But Bass never responded to their inquiries for one reason: there were no plans.

"I just thought about it as I went along," he says. "You learn these weights and measurements in the eighth grade. It doesn't take algebra; it just takes a little arithmetic."

The nine-and-a-half foot craft constructed from old inner tubes, truck wheel rims, transformer cans and an Army surplus water tank cost about $100 to build, and for Bass, the price was right.

"It's an experiment," he says. "You don't know for sure, and you don't want to sink a lot of money into it."

When he built the submarine, Bass was in the fourth of his 16 years as an inspector for the City of Corsicana. Now, he runs an ornamental ironworks specializing in railings, fences and posts.

"If I had had all the equipment I have now, I could have really made a neat one," he says. "It was just like taking a pocket knife and glue and building it."

Bass, a native of Cryer Creek, and Hardgraves took a good bit of ribbing from local residents who initially dubbed the submarine the S.S. Sunk, but on its first launching in April, 1958, it didn't.

The vessel was built, Bass says, by determination. That determination made the skepticism easier to handle.

"I did it just to get to the bottom of things," he says. "It shows you with determination, a person can do anything he wants to do if he's got that determination and self-confidence."

Once the pair determined the craft would float, they decided it was time to try a dive. Curious onlookers jammed the area near the boathouse at Lake Halbert, but Bass says not one of the spectators would accept his offer to join them in the dive.

"Here were all these racing enthusiasts, all these adventurous people, but it was no, no, no," he says. So the two took the sub, equipped with a telephone connected by an extra-long cord to the boathouse, and took the plunge.

"We went and sat on the bottom, and there was a piece of pipe or something and the sub rested on it and rocked back and forth," he says. Undaunted, the duo sat since the compartment will not accomodate a person standing and watched the marine life in Lake Halbert swim curiously around the teetering hulk.

Once the hand-crank propelled sub was determined lakeworthy, news of the feat spread.

"After the launch, the Lions' Club saw the opportunity and they began to promote it," he said. "One thing led to another, and we got hold of the senator down there in Bryan who represented this district."

State Sen. William T. Moore got in touch with Gov. Daniel to inquire if he would be present during the christening of the Turtle II, and the rest was, well, history.

"The governor said 'I'll not only come, I'll make him an admiral in the Texas Navy,' " Bass says. Bass knows of only two other commissioned admirals in the honorary service, including former vice president John Nance Garner.

And on June 14, then-Miss Navarro Junior College Page Brown shattered a gallon jar filled with sea water that was transported through eight counties from Galveston Bay and officially christened the vessel during a day filled with parades, speeches and celebration. Bass, dressed in a borrowed naval uniform, beams at the memories.

"It's probably the biggest thing that's happened to Corsicana since the oil boom," Bass says.

The submarine made its home at Lake Halbert for some 10 years until Bass moved the rust-colored craft to his ironworks shop. It has been mostly dismantled, but visitors still clamour to hear the story of the historic submarine fleet of the state's navy.

Bass talks of perhaps building a better, more streamlined version of the submarine someday. But as he lovingly runs his finger down a welded seam on the side of Turtle II, it is obvious his heart belongs to his first.

"It's not the prettiest welding job, but it doesn't leak."

School districts can charge for bus rides, high court rules

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharply divided Supreme Court ruled Friday that children from poor families do not have a constitutional right to free bus transportation to and from school.

The 5-4 decision in a case from North Dakota has particular importance for people in rural areas. The ruling was denounced by the dissenters for denying hope and equal opportunity to the disadvantaged.

The court's majority, however, said North Dakota officials acted rationally and lawfully in permitting local school districts to charge busing fees.

In other decisions, the court:

— Limited severely states' authority to lower the electric rates public utilities charge as a result of agreements with federal regulators. The 6-3 ruling will cost Mississippi consumers $326.5 million.

— Voted 5-4 to uphold an Illinois man's murder conviction, ruling that its famous Miranda decision is sufficient to protect the rights of defendants questioned by police after they are indicted or otherwise formally charged.

— Ruled, 6-3, that state and federal officials may not be sued for monetary damages by people whose Social Security disability benefits were cut off unlawfully.

— By a 6-3 vote, limited the government's broad immunity from negligence lawsuits. The court reinstated a suit by a couple shot at by a drunken, off-duty Navy medic in Maryland.

— Restricted the power of federal judges to dismiss criminal charges when prosecutors violate a law requiring speedy trial of defendants. The 6-3 ruling reinstated the indictment in Seattle of a man accused of cocaine trafficking.

— Relaxed the deadlines prison inmates face when seeking to appeal their cases in federal appellate court. The 5-4 decision revived the appeal of a convicted murderer serving a 50-year sentence in Tennessee.

— Ruled, 8-1, against a worker in California who was dropped from a race-discrimination suit against his company and labor union because of a clerical error.

In the busing case, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote for the court that states generally have a free hand in deciding whether families must pay to get their children to school

"A state's decision to allow local school boards the option of charging patrons a user fee for bus service is constitutionally permissible," she said. "The Constitution does not require that such service be provided at all and it is difficult to imagine why choosing to offer the service should entail a constitutional obligation to offer it for free."

The ruling is in line with earlier court decisions upholding laws that treat the wealthy and poor differently. For example, the court has upheld the use of property taxes to support public schools even though children from less affluent communities may suffer. The court has said such laws are permissible if they serve a rational purpose.

But in a dissenting opinion Friday, Justice Thurgood Marshall said, "For the poor, education is often the only route by which to become full participants in our society. In allowing a state to burden the access of poor persons to an education, the court denies equal opportunity and discourages hope."

Justices William J. Brennan, John Paul Stevens and Harry A. Blackmun also dissented.

Oklahoma county plagued by tuberculosis outbreak

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Eleven McCurtain County residents have been diagnosed as having tuberculosis in what an Oklahoma Health Department official said Friday is the largest current outbreak of the disease in the United States.

Dr. Scott McNabb, an epidemiologist with the department, said residents of a nearby Arkansas community also were exposed to the outbreak.

Most of the cases have been found in Idabel, Broken Bow and Eagletown, McNabb said. He said the illness has affected several families.

McNabb said 22 other people are suspected of having the respiratory disease and another 60 people who are believed to have come in contact with the disease are being given preventive treatments.

A health department nurse is going from house to house to administer daily doses of the drug Isoniazid to those who may be in danger of contracting the illness, McNabb said.

Tuberculosis is an infectious disease that is characterized by the formation of nodular lesions in the lungs.

The state health department began investigating when a 9-month-old girl was diagnosed April 17 as having tuberculosis meningitis. The girl now is in good condition, McNabb said.

"Right now we're in the middle of the outbreak," McNabb said.

Senators discuss stopping payments to contractors

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee, reacting to allegations of widespread fraud in the Pentagon's weapons-buying procedures, flirted briefly Friday with legislation that would have allowed the government to suspend payments to defense contractors under investigation in the case.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, offered the proposal to the Senate Appropriations Committee, but later withdrew it during the committee's consideration of a $282.6 billion Defense Department appropriations bill for fiscal 1989.

While the committee decided that such action is premature — no person and no company has been charged — Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said that if a substantial number of contracts turn out to have been tainted through corruption, they will have to be renegotiated.

"And that's a tough, tough problem, because those contracts are producing essential goods to our national defense today," Warner said on a syndicated television interview show, "John McLaughlin's One on One."

The Pentagon said Thursday it has as yet taken no steps to shut off dealings with any of firms involved in the affair. Between 75 and 100 contracts are believed to be tainted, prosecutor Henry E. Hudson has said.

The investigation focuses on whether private consultants, many of them former defense officials, bribed Pentagon employees for inside information and then sold the details to contractors. The secret information could have given the recipients the advantage in winning contracts worth billions of dollars.

Warner, a former Navy secretary, said on the TV show that he would "firmly" bar corporations found guilty in the case from doing business with the Defense Department for a period of time. Some of the nation's biggest contractors are under scrutiny.

Warner also said, "I hope and pray" that treason is not involved in the affair.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III, asked about the probe's status, said he did not know "whether it will expand at all," adding: "It's at the normal stage of an investigation...where you're collecting information, you're analyzing information and then you're determining what the next steps might be."

Meese had predicted indictments would be issued in 30 to 90 days, although Hudson said indictments might not be returned until after the November elections.

In Congress, the maneuvering at the Appropriations Committee provided an early indication of the repercussions likely to emerge in Congress from the investigation.

Stevens argued that his amendment would give the government an option, short of permanently terminating a contract, to halt payments temporarily where "these practices may have caused the government to be not treated fairly."

But other lawmakers argued that the enactment of such a law would interfere with the investigation of the scandal and threaten the jobs of defense contractors' workers.

"You're going to hurt a lot of innocent people," said Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H.

Stevens said he introduced the measure to head off amendments by Sens. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., and Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., that would have affected only specific contractors under investigation.

Postal Service to cancel mailing of germs, toxins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Germs and dangerous toxins will be banned from the mail under new regulations announced Friday in the wake of congressional concern over reports that the military has increased shipments of such items.

The action is being taken "to ensure the safety and health of...customers and employees," the Postal Service said. "The Postal Service is concerned that some customers are planning increased use of the mails for sending disease germs or hazardous toxins (etiologic agents)."

No date was set to implement the new rules, which must go through a formal regulatory process before they can take effect.

Jeremy Rifkin, an activist who heads the Foundation on Economic Trends in Washington, hailed the decision Friday as a step toward avoiding a potential catastrophe.

Rifkin, who petitioned the Postal Service to ban such shipments, said he now will turn his attention to the Transportation Department, which he wants to investigate shipments of dangerous products by private carriers.

Just last week the Postal Service had said it was reviewing its regulations on the shipment of potentially hazardous biological items.

Various products, including biological warfare toxins, have been mailed in the past under strict packaging and labeling rules, and postal officials say no problems have occurred.

But following reports that the Army planed to expand research facilities in Utah, California Attorney General John Van de Kamp complained that the need for increased shipments of dangerous biological products could create a hazard.

Army officials have told a House subcommittee that they actually ship very few parcels containing biological items, and those almost always by private, commercial carrier.

The packages have been tested and are literally able to survive an aircraft or highway crash, said Thomas R. Dashiell, director of environmental and life sciences at the Defense Department.

While attention has focused on shipments of germs and toxins by the military, the federal Centers for Disease Control and other medical establishments also make such shipments, officials report.

Of more than 10,000 shipments of biological items over a 16 months, fewer than 10 percent were hazardous items, Dr. John W. McVicar told a House subcommittee.

Of those, the agency said only three reports of leaks were received and none resulted in any infection.

"Our experience to date seems to support the opinion, expressed by medical experts, that there is little risk associated with handling properly packaged etiologic agents," Postmaster General Anthony Frank said in a letter to Rifkin.

The planned new rules would cover dangerous items, but would not affect the mailing of blood samples and other such materials.

NOAA lab issues solar flare warning for Monday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The largest solar flare in four years exploded from the sun Friday, spurring warnings that a major magnetic storm probably will disrupt global communications and satellite operations on Monday.

"I've got a major storm warning out for Monday," and it likely will ebb into a minor magnetic storm Tuesday, said Chris Balch, duty forecaster at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Space Environment Laboratory in Boulder, Colo.

The flare, an explosive release of hot gas, electrically charged particles and X-rays, poses no direct threat to life on Earth. But the magnetic storm could disrupt such ordinary matters as long-distance phone calls and electric power transmission.

Proton radiation associated with the solar flare should reach orbiting spacecraft Saturday, said Gary Heckman, NOAA's chief of space environment services. He said it should pose no danger to Soviet cosmonauts orbiting Earth as long as they stay inside their Mir space station.

The magnetic storm is expected to push Earth's auroras away from the poles, making the northern lights visible as far south as the Great Lakes, Boston and England in the Northern Hemisphere, he said during a telephone interview.

Vietnamese to visit U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnamese officials will visit two military facilities in Hawaii next week to discuss technical issues relating to the search for American servicemen missing from the Vietnam War, the Pentagon said Friday.

The Vietnamese team will tour the Joint Casualty Resolution Center and the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory during its visit, which begins Sunday and extends through June 30, the Pentagon said.

"They will discuss technical aspects of search and recovery operations and forensic identifications," the Pentagon statement said.

"The Vietnamese team will also receive orientation briefings and familiarization training on technical and forensic equipment used in the POW-MIA resolution effort."

The Pentagon lists 2,399 American military personnel missing from the Indochina conflict.

Jury sides with tobacco firm

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The jury in a case linking the hazards of asbestos and smoking found today that American Tobacco Co. was not liable in a former shipyard worker's lung-cancer death but should have put warning labels on cigarette packs sooner.

The federal jury awarded no damages in the death last year of John Ray Gunsalus, 55, of Chester.

The case was decided less than two weeks after a jury in Newark, N.J., decided three tobacco companies should pay $400,000 to the widower of a lifelong smoker. It was the nation's first monetary award against a cigarette maker.

The jury in the Gunsalus case had to answer two questions: were Pall Mall cigarettes prior to 1966 "defective at the time sold in that they failed to provide a warning," and were they a substantial cause of Gunsalus' death?

The panel answered yes to the first question, faulting the company for not cautioning of the dangers of tobacco before 1966, when warnings began to be printed on cigarette packages as mandated by Congress.

To the second question, the jury answered no. To award damages, it had to find that cigarettes were a substatial cause of Gunsalus' death.

Congressmen get first-hand look at hunger

MONTGOMERY, W.Va. (AP) — Members of a congressional committee peered into the virtually empty refrigerator of an unemployed woman who cares for two small children, as they investigated hunger in Appalachia on Friday.

Two congressmen, committee staff members and news reporters crowded into Gwendolyn Cole's kitchen during a tour of homes of poor West Virginians, before they listened to experts tell why some people go without food.

Cole told the U.S. House's Select Committee on Hunger that she's having a hard time feeding herself, her 3-year-old son and a 6-year-old girl she took in when the girl was abandoned.

They live in a rented, rundown home on $201 a month in welfare benefits and $228 a month in food stamps. Often, the food stamps don't stretch far enough.

With nearly a week remaining before she gets her next allotment of stamps, she showed visitors her refrigerator with not much more than a few slices of bread and bottles of water that she has because her water pipes are broken.

"I was working, but now that I've got the kids I can't," said the single mother. The nearest available day care center is 20 miles away, and Cole has no transportation of her own.

"Whatever job I could get, I'd have to take the kids, and getting the kids to day care would be hard," she said.

Ocie Taylor, 90, welcomed the committee on the front porch of her home in Oak Hill, about 40 miles southeast of Charleston. She told the congressmen she cherishes her independence but fears it is threatened by her inability to make ends meet on Social Security, a modest Veterans Administration pension and the Meals on Wheels program.

Rep. Harley Staggers Jr., D-W.Va., left, and Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, visit the home of Gwendolyn Cole, a resident of Page, a small community near Oak Hill, W.Va., Friday.

"When I get so I can't wait on myself, I hope the good Lord takes me," Taylor said. "They want me to come live with my children, but I'd rather live in my own house."

If it weren't for the daily visit of Meals on Wheels, Taylor said, "I wouldn't have a warm meal." As it is, she said, her finances can't be stretched to buy all that she needs and she sometimes has to budget her food to make it through the month.

Later in the day, committee members Reps. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, and Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., heard from Milton Ogle, director of the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund based in Charleston.

"The problems (with poverty programs) all originate with the notion that low income people are deadbeats, lazy and shiftless people. This is not true," said Ogle.

Rumors of sale of landmark cafe in Madrid cause stir

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Rumors the Gran Cafe de Gijon in Madrid might be sold to a British bank rattled coffee cups far beyond the century-old literary landmark once frequented by the likes of Ernest Hemingway and Truman Capote.

Legend has it that the actress Ava Gardner once punched a photographer there.

When the rumors spread recently of its possible sale, major publications rushed into print with what they called the inside story. Mayor Juan Barranco pledged to preserve the cafe. Part-owner Jose Lopez de Brito spent a week denying it was for sale.

"We are not selling. It is impossible," Lopez told reporters the day reports came out that an British multinational bank, not identified, had made a $5-million bid for the cafe that first opened its doors in 1888.

Although it was before noon, the Gijon was already thick with cigar and cigarette smoke, and most of its marble-top tables were filled.

The Gijon stands just off Madrid's traffic-clogged main thoroughfare, the Paseo de la Castellana, as a reminder of quieter days when cafes stretched across the city and coffee time was a ritual.

Although its glory days are past and Madrid is much busier in an economic boom, the Gijon still attracts dozens of "tertulias," groups of intellectuals, artists or retirees who meet once or twice a week for relaxed conversation with a cigar over coffee and brandy.

Lopez de Brito said accepting the unidentified British bank's offer would have broken a pledge made to his grandmother, Encarnation Fernandez, who bought the cafe from its original owners in 1913.

"Before my grandmother died, she made my father and my aunt promise not to sell. As long as my aunt is alive we wouldn't even consider it," said Lopez de Brito, who owns the cafe with his four cousins.

"After that, who knows?" he said. "The younger generation all have professional careers. They want their free time. The cafe doesn't allow that."

Grandmother Encarnacion and her daughter, Lopez's Aunt Maria, presided over the Gijon in the years after the 1936-39 Spanish Civil War, when struggling actors and writers were drawn to cafes because of their central heating and cheap admission — the price of a tiny cup of coffee.

By the time grateful artists showered Encarnacion with drawings and verse on her 100th birthday in 1968, most of them were eating better, and the Gijon was a grand old survivor, its fame cemented by the gradual demise of most competitors.

"The majority of the cafes were converted into bank branches, and the literary people took refuge here because there weren't many places left, " said Maria's son, Jose Garcia Lopez, who began working at the Gijon in 1950.

"The coffee hour was a bit sacred," he said. "People would talk about their projects, about bullfights. They generally avoided politics" during Franco's 36-year rule.

Pilar G. Nombrela, who has lived above the cafe for 20 years, said the Gijon in the late 1960s "was a classic cafe."

"People would spend three hours over a cup of coffee and talk about art and literature. There were tables and tables of famous people. It was incredible."

Today, the "tertulias" are fewer. At nights, the cafe is filled with young Spaniards who prefer gin-tonics to brandy. An armed guard stands inside the door to keep out heroin addicts who have occasionally robbed patrons at knife point.

Gentifrication has set in the neighborhood around the cafe and real estate values have shot up like the skyscrapers along the Castellana as the Spanish economy marks an annual 5.2 percent growth rate.

"The cafe has changed a lot, just like the country has changed," the 63-year-old Garcia Lopez said. "In those days, there were 20 cars circulating in Madrid. Horse-drawn carriages were used a lot. People worked less and had more time."

"Madrid was a city of cafes," he said. "One writer called it an archipelago of tertulias."

Syrian-backed rebels shell Arafat loyalists

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian-backed guerrillas Friday bombarded Yasser Arafat's loyalists in a bloody struggle for control of two Palestinian refugee camps. Police said 10 people were killed and 34 wounded.

At one point, police said five shells a minute were hitting the Chatilla refugee camp as Col. Saeed Mousa's radical Fatah-Uprising tried to crush Arafat's Fatah guerrillas. They said Chatilla's only hospital was hit dozens of times.

A Fatah spokesman charged that Mousa's fighters "started shelling the camps indiscriminately" to sabotage mediation efforts by Libyan officials. "They are massacring our people," said the Fatah spokesman, who refused to be named.

A truce announced in Tripoli Thursday called for the warring factions to return to positions they held before fighting broke out May 1 in Chatilla and the nearby Bourj el-Barajneh camp. It was reached in a meeting between Libyan officers and representatives of neutral Palestinian groups.

Since May 1, 112 people have been killed and 502 wounded in the fight for control of the refugee camps on Beirut's southern outskirts.

A Palestinian official said Mousa's gunners used 240mm mortars to shell Chatilla, the first time they have used the heavy weapons in the fighting.

The official quoted a doctor in Chatilla as saying most of the hospital's medical and surgical equipment were damaged.

"We're crippled. We don't have the means to carry out even minor operations. Even oxygen bottles and gauze supplies have been blown up," the official quoted the doctor as saying.

Fatah-Uprising said in a statement that Arafat provoked the clashes to "sabotage Syria's role in Lebanon...in order to be accepted in the American-Zionist arrangements."

Syria has 7,500 troops deployed in west Beirut to control unrest. Last month, Syria sent 2,400 troops into south Beirut to end a bloodbath between the Shiite Moslem militias Amal and Hezbollah. At least 300 people died in the battle for control of the southern slums, where Western hostages are believed held by factions of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah.

Mortar rounds and rockets fired by Fatah-Uprising gunners were raining down on the camps at a rate of five a minute around dawn, a police spokesman said.

Estonians demand republic, newspaper claims

MOSCOW (AP) — About 150,000 people rallied in the Baltic republic of Estonia last week to cheer radical demands for the Soviet Union to turn into a federation of republics with equal rights to manage their own affairs, according to a newspaper reaching Moscow on Friday.

The June 21 edition of Soviet Estonia quoted speakers at a rally organized by the National Front, a group of Communist Party members and non-party members founded in April with official backing, as saying that Estonia's 32 delegates to next week's party conference in Moscow should return with an OK to turn the region into a sovereign republic.

Five of the delegates spoke at the meeting, pledging to push a published conference platform calling for Estonia to fix its own prices, pay and investments, and to make its own cultural, ecological and other policies.

Tiit Vyakhi, a delegate from an Estonian auto repair shop, told the crowd, "I think it's very important for Estonia and all republics to get their sovereignty recognized. It's necessary to confirm the principle of a united federation composed of sovereign states with fully equal rights.

"And it's necessary not to talk about what rights we want for ourselves but the union republics should meet and decide which questions it would be better to turn over to the Union," Vyakhi said, apparently referring to some kind of federal government that the Estonian conference platform suggests should take care of national defense.

Other delegates and speakers at the unprecedented meeting in a meadow outside the Estonian capital of Tallinn demanded immediate condemnation of Stalinism and, by implication, of the Soviet seizure of the Baltic republics in 1940.

The official news agency Tass reported Friday that Estonia has set up a commission chaired by republican president Arnold Ruutel "to do justice" to thousands of victims of Stalinist deportations in 1941 and 1949.

"Dear delegates," a lathe operator from Tartu told the rally, "you don't have any time to wait for the final, titanic works of doctors of science about our history.

"Within a few days, you must make clear who it was in 1940 who hacked up our science books and children's books with axes and make clear that we are a people of many centuries of culture."

"In Moscow, you should tell them that the Estonian people will never agree to share the fate of the Karelians," lathe operator A. Danilson told the crowd, alluding to the incorporation of the remote northern region of Karelia into the Soviet Union following the Soviet-Finnish war of 1940.

The report said speeches at the rally were greeted "not just with applause, but with the thunder of ovations." Pictures published with the accounts showed crowds waving banners calling for an end to privilege and praising the new Estonian Communist party leader Vaino Vyalyas, named to his post June 16.

Wounded Jewish settler blames U.S. for attack

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Palestinian stabbed an American-born Jewish settler in the back Friday in the occupied West Bank, and the bleeding man chased his assailant and shot him before collapsing.

Both men were hospitalized in fair condition. Some Jewish settlers demanded revenge and the settler blamed American inaction against Arab unrest for the attack.

An Israeli couple opened fire on young Palestinians who threw stones at their car in the West Bank city of Nablus. Israel television showed scenes of the bearded settler crouching behind his white Ford Transit auto, dashing out to fire at the Arabs and ducking back.

Hospital officials said seven Arabs were wounded, including two 8-year-old boys. The two Israelis were slightly injured. Another six Arabs suffered tear gas and rubber bullet injuries when soldiers arrived to disperse the crowd, an army spokeswoman said.

In Gaza City, protests broke out after weekly Moslem prayers. About 150 Palestinian youths burned fires and shouted "Allah akbar!" before troops dispersed them with rubber bullets and tear gas, witnesses said.

The stabbing victim, Yohan Chaiken, was attacked while shopping before the Jewish Sabbath in Hebron, about 20 miles south of Jerusalem. The 33-year-old computer programmer from Boston suffered stab wounds in the shoulder and lower back.

He pulled out a gun, chased his assailant about 50 yards and shot him in the elbow, said Zev Hever, a Jewish leader in Hebron. About 200 Israelis live among 80,000 Arabs in the city.

Chaiken ran another 300 yards to a building housing Jewish families, where he collapsed and received first aid before being flown by helicopter to Jerusalem's Hadassah Hospital, Hever said.

It was the second serious attack on an Israeli in less than a week. Sunday night, a farmer was stabbed and bludgeoned to death, bringing to four the number of Israelis killed in 6½ months of Arab unrest. In addition, 211 Palestinians have died.

American-born legislator Rabbi Meir Kahane and about a dozen Jewish settlers gathered outside Hadassah's emergency room. Some carried machine guns. One wore a skullcap with the words "Jews, Revenge!" stitched on it.

Disarmament session magnet for peace seekers

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — These days, this East River enclave is a magnet for peace marchers, Buddhist monks, Nigerian "drummers of passion," victims of Hiroshima, poets and blues singers of the nuclear age.

All have converged on the Third Special Session on Disarmament, a monthlong gathering ending this week.

They have camped on the sidewalks and exploded 1,000 balloons to symbolize nuclear tests. They have gathered at a corner coffee shop to discuss radioactive military landfills, the evils of transnational corporations, and the future of the Siberian crane.

They range from a 12-year-old California girl who invented a peace game to Mother Teresa, the 77-year-old Nobel laureate.

But all the spinning of prayer wheels, scattering of flower petals, chanting of mantras, and meditation on brotherhood have not harmonized discordant views on disarmament.

The 159 U.N. members are trying to devise a realistic agenda for peace, and delegates hope they'll be able to adopt a final document by consensus, without divisive voting that usually pits the United States against most of the developing world and socialist countries.

The superpower backdrop is positive: the Moscow summit, the Soviet pullout from Afghanistan, and the treaty on elimination of intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

But differences over such issues as nuclear and conventional disarmament and a nuclear test ban treaty are enormous.

The United States has made clear it will not reaffirm what it calls a sweeping and unrealistic U.N. disarmament document adopted 10 years ago.

Last year, the United States voted alone on most disarmament issues in the General Assembly, ranging from a demand for a comprehensive nuclear test ban to prohibiting the military uses of outer space.

It refused to participate in a conference on the relationship between disarmament and development.

Third World nations have been clamoring for a disarmament fund of military savings in the industrialized world to be diverted toward economic and social development in poor countries.

Western diplomats say that the developing world should do its part by halting its regional wars and curbing its massive spending on conventional arms — spending that deprives people of food, health care and education.

The American positions have not changed in the current disarmament session.

The U.S. administration and Western allies emphasize the importance of bilateral negotiations with the Soviet Union in nuclear and other fields and do not want bilateral talks subject to multilateral pressures.

"We are hearing a lot of cant," said one Western diplomat. "The U.S. and the Soviets are doing just fine. What we need is a realistic approach that will leave nations free to pursue their bilateral actions without multilateral interference."

At this session, the Soviet Union is a major player and is seen, far more than the United States, as a team player in the world body.

The Soviet Union has been calling for a larger and more powerful role for the United Nations in multilateral arms negotiations, disarmament verification and monitoring, expanded peacekeeping operations and crisis management. It has called for a new U.N. naval peacekeeping force and U.N. space agency.

But the United States, more than $400 million in arrears in U.N. dues, doesn't want to see expanded U.N. operations infringe on traditional areas of national prerogative.

Eduard A. Shevardnadze, the Soviet foreign minister, unfurled a sweeping blueprint of disarmament proposals and in a grand gesture, invited the U.N. secretary-general, Security Council and nonaligned leaders to attend the first Soviet destruction of intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Turkish workers search for landslide's survivors

CATAK, Turkey (AP) — Rescue workers dug in a 20-foot layer of mud and rocks Friday for about 100 people buried by a landslide, using sniffer dogs and dodging boulders that skittered down the mountain.

A truck driver and a resident were injured by the new rockslides that pelted down on what remains of this village in the rain-soaked mountains above the Black Sea port of Trabzon.

"It's too soon to give up hope of finding people alive, but I think we will soon be discovering bodies," said Klaus Kolter, a member of the West German Rescue Dog Association helping in the search for victims of Thursday's disaster. "We'll keep on trying."

Rescue workers abandoned plans for an all-night search because of fears of a new, major landslide. The operation was to resume at dawn Saturday.

"There's a risk that an entire hilltop could come crashing down in the same area. Cracks already have been observed but it's not possible to predict when it might happen," said Erkan Omarbeyoglu, Turkey's general director of highways.

Three West German tourists were among those missing in the landslide, which residents of Catak blamed in inadequate buttressing of the walls of the highway that runs through the village.

Blast rips Soviet meat plant

MOSCOW (AP) — A blast ripped through the refrigerated storage section of a meat processing plant in central Russia, killing two workers and injuring five others, it was reported Friday.

The explosion in Yaroslavl occurred when a high-pressure pipe burst during maintenance work, the news agency Tass said. Ammonia from the pipe leaked into an adjacent building and ignited.

Tass quoted rescue official Vladimir Vatin as saying the plant and four nearby kindergartens considered to be in what he called a "danger zone" were evacuated, and residents of nearby houses were warned of the danger of further blasts.

"The consequences of the accident could have been greater" if rescue services had not worked efficiently and promptly, Vatin said.

Tass said without explanation that "the accident was localized by 1:30 p.m."

26 killed in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — At least 26 people died in violence related to communist rebels, and government troops arrested a Dutch woman suspected of having links to the insurgents, the military said Friday.

Army Lt. Col. Rodolfo Lorayes said troops at a checkpoint outside the southern town of Bayugan arrested Conny Tromp on Thursday after she failed to produce proper identification papers. He said Tromp, 22, showed only a photocopy of her visa, which expired in April.

The soldiers took the woman to army headquarters in the provincial capital of Butuan for questioning.

Bayugan is near a mountain boundary where communist New People's Army rebels are known to operate.

Fire rekindles in gas storage unit in Mexico

GUADALUPE, Mexico (AP) — Fire rekindled in a gasoline storage tank Friday, just hours after officials declared it extinguished and 10,000 evacuated residents of the area started going home.

Flames and thick black smoke shot into the air over this industrial suburb of Monterrey for a second day. Radio and television stations warned people to stay away from the San Rafael gasoline depot, where three 40-foot-tall tanks exploded Thursday, killing at least four people and injuring at least 18.

It was the second explosion and fire in a month at a depot operated by Pemex, the government oil monopoly. On May 24, more than 100,000 people were forced out of the area around a gas and kerosene supply depot in the northern city of Chihuahua. No one was hurt.

News reports in Monterrey said the death toll at San Rafael might be higher. The daily El Sol said one of its reporters saw seven badly burned bodies at a local morgue and ran a banner headline saying: "They're Hiding Deaths."

Officials declared two of the blazing tanks extinguished late Thursday night. They reported the third one out Friday morning, but then said the collapsed tank began burning again a few hours later.

A Pemex statement Friday afternoon said two people were killed Thursday and two of the injured died Friday. It said firefighters had the new blaze under control and it was expected to burn out within hours.

One of the dead was Vicente Quiroga Garcia, owner-manager of the Monterrey construction company Constructora Quiroga y Villarreal, which Pemex hired to maintain fire-prevention equipment at the depot, Maria Estella Garcia, a construction company secretary, said by telephone Friday.

The construction company gave the Monterrey newspaper El Norte a list of the names of the 54 workers who were at the plant Thursday and noted that 13 had not been accounted for.

Some of the 13 missing may have died, "because we've been told there are people they haven't been able to identify because they are so badly burned," Ms. Garcia said. She said she did not know whether that information was from Pemex or state health officials.

Raul Robles, assistant commercial director of Pemex, blamed the explosions and fire on a leak in one of the tanks. Officials said each of the 23 tanks at the depot holds 2.2 million gallons of gasoline or diesel fuel.

Thousands of people who fled on Thursday had begun heading home, many searching for relatives lost in the rush to escape a fire that police say reached temperatures of 5,400 degrees Farenheit and melted several vehicles.

"We were going to take a bath and then get some sleep," said Minerva Garcia, a housewife who had to leave her home a second time.

"All of a sudden, we heard the fire trucks again and the street was full of smoke and flames. It was the same thing all over again: people were running around the streets."

Mrs. Garcia said her quick trip home paid off because she found her husband. They were separated in the first evacuation, but "I got home and there he was in the kitchen, waiting," she said in an emergency shelter.

When the fire began anew, police at barricades stopped residents who were returning home. The shelters soon were full again.

Concepcion Sierra Mendez, 32, among those prevented from returning, said she had left her three children at home Thursday while she went to a medical clinic.

She said she spent the night walking from shelter to shelter, searching for them and "the despair is terrible." She sobbed as she told the story.

Behind her, white chemical foam used to fight the fires filled a roadside ditch like a dirty bubble bath.

"I can't find my son. He's 10 years old," said Antonio Bernal, 36, walking through an auditorium packed with 300 people. "All the children were in the house and I guess he ran out...People left their houses wide open and just ran."

Pope condemns Nazism, but angers Austrian Jews

MAUTHAUSEN, Austria (AP) — Pope John Paul II Friday condemned Nazism on the site where 110,000 World War II prisoners died, but the pontiff angered Austria's chief rabbi by not making a specific reference to Jewish victims.

Earlier, John Paul urged Austrian Jewish leaders to accept the Vatican's call for a Palestinian homeland. The Roman Catholic leader did not respond to appeals for the Vatican to give full diplomatic recognition to Israel.

The pope also said Mass in Trausdorf near the Hungarian border for an estimated 80,000 people, most of them Yugoslavs and Hungarians.

The emotional high point of the day came at Mauthausen, Austria's most infamous death camp, where an estimated 110,000 Nazi prisoners died or were murdered.

On his arrival, six U.S. Jews who were opposed to the pontiff's meeting Thursday with President Kurt Waldheim scuffled briefly with police outside the camp. The group was kept away from the pope, and it was not known if he saw the altercation.

"They threw me down, they used excessive force," Rabbi Avi Weiss of Riverdale, N.Y., told The Associated Press.

Earlier in Vienna, police detained Nazi hunter Beate Klarsfeld and eight supporters.

Ludwig Soswinski, the head of the camp survivors' group, introduced the pope to 11 camp survivors, including a Polish priest, Rev. Zdislaw Lipinski.

The Polish-born pontiff, speaking outside a memorial chapel, said: "Here in Mauthausen were people who, in the name of a lunatic ideology, set into motion a whole machinery of contempt and hatred of others."

Delivering his remarks in German, the pontiff continued: "They tortured them, broke their bones, cruelly abused their bodies and their souls."

Camp inmates were forced to work in nearby quarries, carrying huge granite blocks up 189 steps known as the "stairway of death."

The pontiff mentioned Marcel Callo, a Catholic activist who died in Mauthausen, Polish priest St. Maximilian Kolbe, and two other Catholics who died in Nazi camps. But the Roman Catholic leader made no reference specifically to Jews.

That angered Chaim Eisenberg, Austria's chief rabbi, who told reporters in Vienna: "A visit to Mauthausen without mentioning the word Jews once is not satisfactory."

"The only Jew he mentions who suffered is Jesus Christ, and he didn't die in Mauthausen," Eisenberg said.

During the visit, John Paul stood silently for nearly a minute in front of a plaque written in Hebrew and German in memory of the Jewish victims of Mauthausen.

The Vatican, citing Austrian researchers, says that of the 44,000 Poles killed in Mauthausen, 7,000 were Jewish, while a majority of the 32,000 Hungarians who lost their lives there were Jewish. Tens of thousands of Soviets and Germans also perished.

Couple retires after total of 144 years

TYLER, Texas (AP) — When John R. Long went home from work for the last time, he crowned a record-book career with the St. Louis and Southwestern Railway's Cotton Belt Route.

"If I'd stayed until August this year, it's been 74 years," he said with his trademark chuckle.

Italine Long, his wife of 66 years, also is retiring as the only treasurer of T.B. Butler Publishing Co. Inc., after close to 70 years of full-time employment, also a company record.

"We've got 144 years together," he told a well-wisher as word of their retirements spread last week in Tyler.

Why would either of them want to work so long?

For her, "I just like to work. I like the business world."

For him, "Well, I just liked my job because you never did know what to expect. There was something new every day. There wasn't a routine."

"What makes me so mad," he said with emotion,"is people who say they hate their job. If they hate it so bad, why don't they get into something they want to do?"

Long was second two years ago in seniority among railroad employees nationwide according to records of the Railroad Retirement Board.

HE HOLDS the Cotton Belt and parent Southern Pacific Transportation Co. record, but isn't sure if he's taken the national lead.

"Well, we're just thankful we are still able to go," Mrs. Long said. "If it wasn't for this arthritis, I wouldn't have to retire," she said. "I sure hate to have to retire."

For those youngsters still at work, Long's advice is: "Well, I'll tell you what I told my grandsons. I said 'now, don't think when you go to work you know it all...you keep your mouth closed and listen very intent...you learn the most from just listening to what other people say. "If you don't like your job, get out and change it and get something you want to do."

Both the Longs say their careers were shaped by their fathers.

"My daddy said he wanted me to get into something that had a future to it," Long said of his father, John G. Long.

"When I went to work at the Cotton Belt, I worked for $15 a month and they took 40 cents for hospital dues. I got $14.60 and I'd been making that much in a week's time. I didn't want to go, but my daddy influenced me into going out there."

Long recalls a family friend helped him get a job in the accounting department. He started out sorting tickets and retired as Head Clerk, Agents Accounts. He credits a demotion during a merger for giving him 27 "bonus" years.

"I'VE BEEN ON an executive job as assistant auditor, freight accounts. When we consolidated in 1954, I was demoted, but I've been more in demand since I've been demoted than before. They know I know, and they call me. I help them out," he said.

He sees it as a part of a bigger picture: "If I had been on an officer's position, when I was 65, I would have had to retire. But I didn't have to retire. So I just figure the Good Lord was taking care of me, because He knew I wasn't ready to retire then."

"I've got more seniority since I was 65 than 90 percent of them out there," he says, laughing at the thought of the almost 27 extra years.

Former Cotton Belt President Robert M. Nall called Long a "remarkable railroad man" who wrote many rates and knew them by heart.

Long recalled days when a passenger train that went 60 miles an hour "was a fast train. Well, gosh darn, they've got freight trains that run 80 miles an hour, now, 90. It's just revolutionized them because there's been such an improvement in right-of-ways and tracks and rolling equipment.

"I honestly believe the biggest change in railroading has been what they call 'piggyback.' I don't believe they'll be anything ultimately but a flat car and these gondolas. They're loading stuff overseas in containers and you get about six of them on a flat car.

"I'll bet you that over 60 percent of the business that moves on a railroad now is either on those packages on flat cars or trailers on flat cars," he said.

HE REMEMBERED THE little Moguls, engines that could handle maybe 25 or 30 cars, but couldn't get up the hills without having to "double" or make two trips to get over the hills, disconnecting part of the train.

Mrs. Long, then Sarah Burnett of Tyler, started working full time at the Tyler Courier-Times in November 1918.

"We were going to get married when I got out of the Army, and we didn't marry until three years later," Long recalls.

Mrs. Long's father, John R. Burnett, was manager of the job printing department as an associate of Judge T.B. Butler. She worked for her father in the summers as a teenager, feeding the folder of the press nad familiarizing herself with the mechanical aspects of the printing business.

She began regular work after completing Tyler Commercial College, initially taking Associated Press news by telephone dictation. The main news of the day was "to get those who were wounded" in World War I.

Mrs. Long later was joined in the wire service duties by her longtime friend, former publisher Sarah Butler.

She remembers her starting pay, $10 a week.

"I just dreamed of the day when maybe I'd get to where I made $150 a month," she recalled. "And I finally did get there."

Lendl, Graf march on at Wimbledon

Top-seeded players move into 4th round

Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Ivan Lendl, whose favorite grass game is golf, found himself in the rough at Wimbledon Friday. It wasn't an unplayable lie, though.

Playing on a chewed-up outside court that his opponent likened to golf course rough, the world's No. 1 tennis player outlasted big-serving Dutchman Michiel Schapers to move into the fourth round of the Grand Slam tournament.

Lendl, the top seed, moaned over line calls and was distracted by noise from a nearby balcony, but he kept his concentration for the nearly four hours it took to win 6-7 (7-9), 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 6-7 (5-7), 6-1.

"I usually have trouble in the rough," Lendl said of the conditions on Court No. 2. "And the course I play at home (in Greenwich, Conn.) doesn't look that bad."

Court No. 2 is known as the "graveyard of champions" because stars such as John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors and Ilie Nastase lost there in past tournaments.

Lendl, who has never won a Wimbledon title and doesn't like playing on grass, nearly added his name to the list of upset victims. But after his 6-foot-5 opponent boomed a service winner to win the fourth-set tiebreaker, Lendl broke him twice in the final set before closing out the match with his own service winner.

"I felt in the fourth set he was getting tired and having more trouble with his serve," said Lendl, who reached the fourth round here for the sixth straight time. "In the fifth set, it really showed."

Schapers, the only player to win a set against eventual champion Pat Cash at last year's tournament, had mixed feelings about his losing effort.

"I beat Boris Becker in five sets once (at the 1985 Australian Open) and I didn't play half as well as I did today," he said. "Against Becker, I was happy with the win but not with the way I played. Today, I was happy with my play but not with the loss."

One day after McEnroe's Wimbledon comeback was shattered by Wally Masur, two more seeds were ousted.

American Paul Annacone, who beat McEnroe in the first round at the 1986 U.S. Open, downed No. 12 Jonas Svensson 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 and No. 9 women's seed Hana Mandlikova was ousted by Anne Minter of Australia 6-4, 6-3.

Mandlikova, who has won every Grand Slam event but Wimbledon, was sidelined for almost two months with a leg injury before the French Open, where she lost in the second round.

"I'm one of the most fragile bodies in the game," she said. "If you look at my body, it's not very strong or muscular. It's catching up with me. I'm 26 years old and I've been on the circuit since I was 15. The body is just giving you warnings all the time ... and that's what happens when you're 26."

Top-seeded Steffi Graf continued her dominance with a 6-3, 6-1 victory over American Terry Phelps. Although she lost, Phelps managed to win twice as many games as did Graf's first two opponents combined.

Sixth-seeded Helena Sukova, No. 12 Zina Garrison and No. 16 Mary Joe Fernandez also won their third-round matches.

Potter sparks court flap

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Barbara Potter, warned not to change her tennis shirts on court at Wimbledon, said Friday she was only following doctors' orders in trying to nurse a bad back through two weeks of damp British weather.

After being asked late Thursday by the All England Lawn Tennis Club to refrain from courtside wardrobe changes, the American twice went to the dressing room to swap shirts during her 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 third-round victory over Jo-Anne Faull of Australia.

Potter said she was merely trying to look after disc and muscle problems in her lower back that always seem to act up at Wimbledon.

"A dry shirt does wonders," said Potter, a 26-year-old from Woodbury, Conn.

Although she was accompanied by a club official, in accordance with tennis' so-called "bathroom break" rule, Potter was warned about wasting time by umpire Marleen van Noortwijk of the Netherlands.

During her first- and second-round matches, Potter caused a few raised eyebrows and even more stares when she changed shirts at courtside in the middle of matches.

The first time, she just sat in her chair, yanked the sweat-soaked shirt off and pulled a new one on, in full view of the crowd. The second time, she had ball girls stand around her with towels so no one could see.

The All England Club, where the tournament is held, said that while no rule exists barring any player,

Will Martin ever manage again?

NEW YORK (AP) — Will Billy Martin ever manage again, for the New York Yankees or anyone else?

"I hope he's back soon," said Richie Phillips, head of the umpires' union. "I haven't had any problems with him the last couple of weeks."

Martin, however, might not return this time. He has won division championships in New York, Oakland, Detroit and Minnesota, but has apparently worn out his welcome in the Yankee dugout.

Plus, the constant commotion may make him a risk not worth taking elsewhere and leave him no other place to go.

"Why me? I'm still the best manager in baseball," Martin said. "I'll try to handle it the best I can, but how many times can a man have his heart broken?"

Martin's latest heartbreak came Thursday when Yankees owner George Steinbrenner fired him for the fifth time and rehired Lou Piniella. That ended a tumultous term marked by Martin's feud with Phillips and umpires, a suspension, another bar fight, a recent disagreement with the front office over roster moves and erratic employment of his pitching staff.

"I don't think anybody can get along with George," Martin said. "You can't please him. If it's not one thing, it's something else."

The Yankees have made 15 managerial changes since Steinbrenner bought the team in 1973. No manager has survived more than two consecutive seasons.

Stenbrenner thought Martin would be the quick-fix the Yankees needed to get back to the World Series for the first time since 1981. Martin, an excellent offensive strategist, managed to overcome injuries to Don Mattingly, Rickey Henderson and other key players and keep the Yankees in first place in the American League East for most of the season until a recent 2-7 road trip.

But Steinbrenner, who had hoped Martin had cleaned up his off-the-field act, grew tired of the nonstop distractions surrounding his manager.

Old musical chairs games continue for ML managers

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Billy Martin asked the managerial question: "How many times can a man have his heart broken?"

In baseball, there seems to be no limit. It's like San Francisco Giants outfielder Bill North once said: "I think they recycle more managers than cans."

Or, in the insightful words of Leo Durocher: "If you don't win, you're going to be fired. If you do win, you've only put off the day you're going to be fired."

Already this season, six major league teams have gone looking for new managers.

During spring training, Gene Mauch retired from the California Angels rather than lose another game, and Cal Ripken Sr. had only lost six when he was fired by the Baltimore Orioles.

In May, Chuck Tanner was fired by Atlanta, and San Diego got rid of Larry Bowa. Both got fired for the first time — Tanner after 19 seasons as a major league manager, Bowa after his first.

IBF approves 12-round bout

Boxing

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The International Boxing Federation today gave heavyweight champion Mike Tyson the approval to fight a 12-round title bout against Michael Spinks, ending a long dispute over the length of Monday's $35 million bout at Atlantic City.

The decision means Tyson will defend his undisputed title against Spinks and that the IBF will withdraw its threat to strip Tyson of the championship.

It also ended an almost month-long battle between the IBF, the World Boxing Association, the World Boxing Council and state athletic commissioner Larry Hazzard, with the final days of the dispute being discussed in federal court.

The breakthrough came late Thursday when U.S. District Judge Alfred Wolin called representatives of the IBF, the WBA, as well as Hazzard and Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, into his chambers for a 3½-hour meeting.

The meeting came on the second day of a hearing on a suit filed by the IBF against the WBA, WBC, Hazzard and Cayton.

In the end, the IBF considered a second request by Cayton for an exception to IBF Rule 21, which calls for 15-round title fights. On June 7, the IBF had rejected an exception requested by Cayton, but IBF president Bob Lee said it approved the one submitted earlier Thursday by attorney Thomas Puccio, who represented Cayton and Tyson at the hearing.

"We think we agreed to 12 rounds because of the best interests of the public," Lee said when asked if the IBF caved into the WBC and WBA demands for 12-round fights in the interest of safety. ... "We didn't do it in the best interests of boxing."

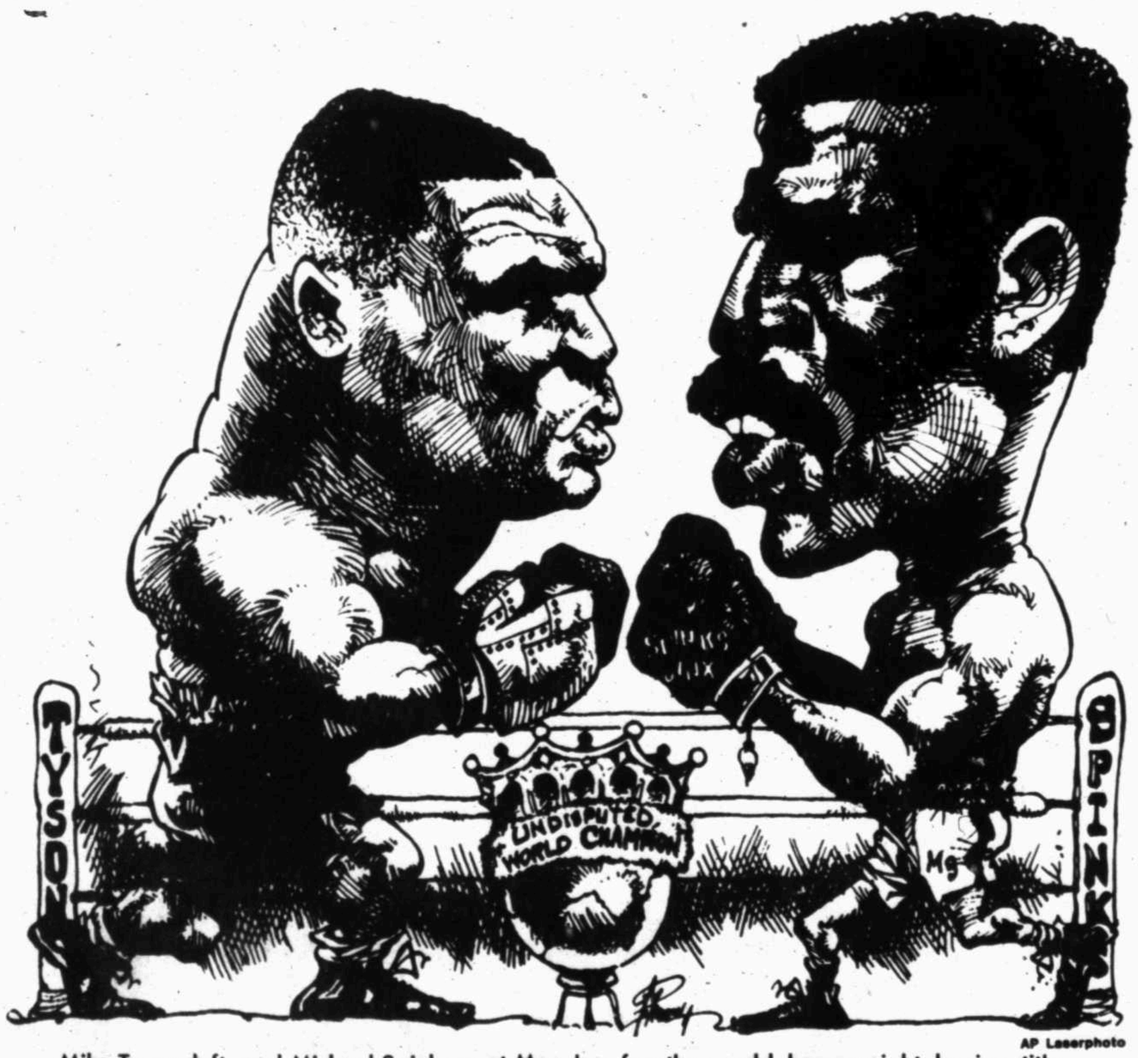

Lee said the second Tyson request for an exception to Rule 21 was approved by both the organization's seven-member championship committee and its 12-member executive commitee in telephone calls.

Lee said the IBF will be the lead sanctioning organization for the fight. He said the exception was granted in view of Tyson's outstanding record and the fact the fight was close at hand.

Lee said he spoke with Tyson by telephone today and wished him luck.

"I informed him we had his interests at heart," Lee said. "He is the champion and in our judgment a champion should be free of political involvement in sports, and I told him please don't get bogged down in these matters."

Lee said all other IBF title fights scheduled between now and Sept. 1 will remain 15-round bouts if contracted that way.

Spinks enjoys close ties with manager Lewis

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks and Butch Lewis are living proof that the fighter and manager who barbecue together stay together.

"If it was not for Butch I'd be out of boxing," said Spinks, who will challenge Mike Tyson for the heavyweight championship Monday night at the Convention Center.

"We're friends first, then comes business," Lewis said Friday.

Lewis, who will be 42 Sunday, lives with his family at Centerville, Del. The 31-year-old Spinks lives at Greenville, about five miles away.

"We go to each others place for barbecues," Lewis said. "Sometimes I'll call and say, 'Come on over Slim and let's watch the game on television.' "

Meanwhile, Tyson is unhappy with his relationship with manager Bill Cayton and is barely speaking to him.

There is speculation about whether the squabbling about Tyson will adversely affect his performance Monday night.

Lewis believes it won't be lack of concentration that will beat Tyson, but Spinks' boxing skill and intelligence.

"When he makes a mistake, we intend to make him pay. We definitely feel we can pierce his armor."

Lewis recalled a conversation he had with Spinks when he told the fighter, then the light heavyweight champion, that he should challenge unbeaten Larry Holmes for a piece of the heavyweight title.

"He said, 'do you think I can beat him?' " Lewis said.

"Sure you can beat him."

"OK, if you say I can beat him."

Spinks beat Holmes twice.

Spinks is guaranteed $13.5 million to fight Tyson.

Asked what the fighter's reaction was when he was told what his purse would be, Lewis said, "He really had Cash, coming off a tough five-set win over Javier Frana, breezed past fellow Australian John Fitzgerald 6-1, 6-2, 6-4. Joining him in the fourth round were two-time champion Boris Becker, seventh-seeded Henri Leconte and No. 10 Tim Mayotte.

Becker survived a first-set tiebreaker to beat American Sammy Giammalva 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, 6-4. The 20-year-old West German rallied from 0-40 in the final game to wrap it up on a service winner.

man or woman, from changing a uniform on court, "the practice is not encouraged."

It said the club's management committee had asked the Women's International Tennis Association "to pass this message on to Miss Potter."

After reaching the quarterfinals here for the third time in 1985, Potter pulled out of the tournament with back problems in 1986 and was a second-round loser last year.

"After two years of disappointment in the damp British weather, I have to do certain things just to stay alive," Potter said.

She said a doctor had advised her to change her shirt whenever it got too sweaty, because cool air blowing over the dampness tended to make her back stiffen up.

The tennis club said Potter was not fined for delaying the match against Faull because she had followed the rules by taking an official along.

"The position is that if there is an emergency, like a bloody nose, it is allowed," Sue Youngman, spokeswoman for the All England Club, said. "It's known as the 'bathroom break.' "

Potter said she was ready to put the controversy behind her and focus on her fourth round match against sixth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia.

"It's a non-story. Personally, I don't think it's a big deal," she said. "It's getting a little bit redundant.

no reaction, but I remember his reaction when I walked out on $10 million the day after the Holmes fight."

Cayton and the late Jim Jacobs, who co-managed Tyson, were furious when Lewis rejected their offer and said they would no longer deal with him.

Lewis told Spinks, "I can go back and get you the $10 million, but I can't be part of the deal."

"If you're not in the deal, there is no deal," Spinks said.

"Butch is like another me," Spinks said. "He can say things for me that I can't say. To me, he's a much brighter side of me."

"We've never come close to breaking up," said Lewis, who met Spinks when he and his brother Leon, the former heavyweight champion, were at the Montreal Olympics where they won gold medals.

Lewis signed them for Bob Arum's Top Rank, Inc., for which he worked.

Lewis split with Arum, not amicably, after Leon's loss in his title rematch against Muhammad Ali in 1978. When Lewis left, Michael wanted to go with him and told Arum that if he couldn't be released from his contract, he wouldn't fight again.

Spinks is his own manager of record since, as a promoter, Lewis cannot legally manage fighters.

"I perform managerial duties, but I don't take a manager's cut," said Lewis, who has promoted most of Spinks' fights. "I take mine out of the promotion."

Since Lewis is not involved as a promoter in Monday night's fight, he said does have a contract with Spinks for the match. He did not disclose the terms.

"Mike has very good common sense," Lewis said of Spinks, who obviously is satisfied with the business aspects of the relationship.

Lewis said that even without what Spinks will make Monday night, the fighter is in good shape financially.

His home and land are paid for, he has a pension fund "of over seven figures," various investment and government certificates and "when Michelle turns 21 she gets $1 million if he sees fit too turn it over to her," Lewis said.

Michelle is Spinks' 7-year-old daughter, whose mother was killed in an auto crash in 1985.

"I take my hat off to him," Spinks said. "I think Butch is best at what he does."

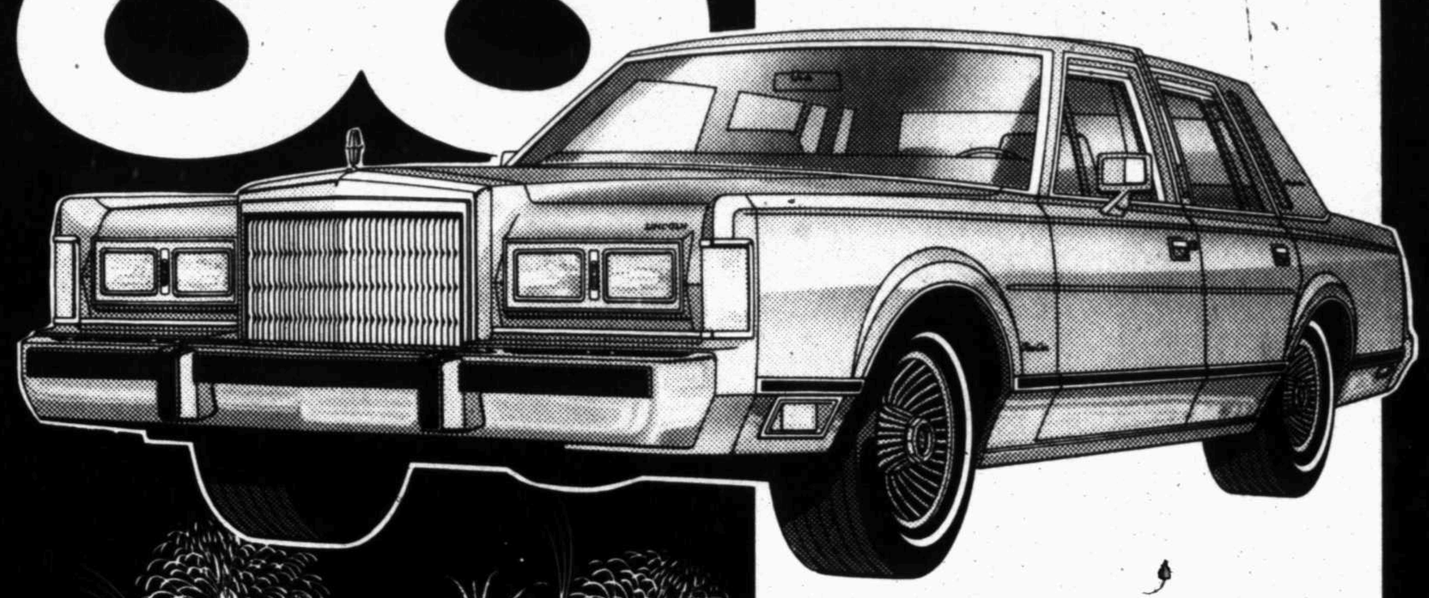

MANAGERS

Earlier this month, Dick Williams lost his Seattle job, apparently because he couldn't communicate with the players, and on Thursday, Martin was fired by the New York Yankees for the fifth time, partly for communicating too much.

EPSON®

FX-850

FX-1050

The best-selling printers in business history. The hardest-working computer printers in America. That's the legend created by Epson's FX-series dot-matrix printers. And now they're better than ever.

Introducing the FX-850 and FX-1050 Printers. Improved paper handling. Enhanced performance. Increased speed. More features. The FX legend grows stronger.

Improved Paper-Handling with SmartPark™. Epson's exclusive SmartPark lets you change between fanfold paper, single sheets or envelopes with the touch of a button and the flip of a lever. With the standard push tractor and automatic single sheet loading, the narrow-carriage FX-850 and wide-carriage FX-1050 easily handle an extensive variety of paper, including four-part forms.

Add Epson's optional Cut Sheet Feeder and you can keep up to 150 single sheets or 25 envelopes loaded simultaneously with tractor-fed fanfold paper or forms. And with SmartPark you can switch between these different types of paper almost instantly. SmartPark even remembers your pre-set top-of-form position and has a convenient short form tear-off feature.

High-Speed Productivity. The FX-850 and FX-1050 handle big jobs quickly and efficiently. Printing speed is faster than ever—264 characters per second in high-speed draft mode and 54 CPS in Near Letter Quality mode. And the well-insulated FX-series performs all printing operations at a quiet 56-decibel sound level.

Built-In Convenience. Epson's exclusive SelecType front control panel puts the printer controls you use most at your fingertips. With the touch of a button, you select print modes, typestyles, character pitch, and SmartPark paper-handling operations. Now customized documents are as easy to produce as a simple office memo.

Backed by the Leader. Epson printers are the industry standard by which all other computer printers are judged. Like all Epson computer products, the FX-850 and FX-1050 are supported by a nationwide service network and backed by Epson's one year limited warranty.

For legendary reliability and powerful performance, choose the first name in printers. Epson. The legend grows stronger.

Red-hot Sheehan leads by three over Lopez

LPGA

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Patty Sheehan shot a 5-under-par 66 Friday to take a three-stroke lead after two rounds of the $500,000 LPGA McDonald's Championship.

Sheehan has a 36-hole total of 8-under 134, three strokes ahead of Nancy Lopez, Kathy Postlewait, and rookie Dottie Mochrie.

Sheehan started the second round in a group of six at 68, one stroke behind first-round leader Juli Inkster. Inkster shot a 1-over 72 in the second round.

Lopez, one of four active LPGA Hall of Fame golfers and a three-time winner this year, shot a 66 after a par 71 in the first round.

Postlewait added a 68 to her opening 69, while Mochrie shot 67 to go with her first-round 70 over the 6,366-yard, par-71 DuPont Country Club course.

Mei Chi Cheng of Taiwan and Donna White were tied at 138.

At 139, were Dot Germain, Judy Dickinson, Sherri Steinhauer and Inkster.

Sherri Turner, a two-time winner this year, led a group of eight at 140, while Ayaka Okamoto, also a double winner in 1988, was among eight at 141. Defending champion Betsy King was at par 142.

Sheehan, who won at Sarasota this year and has had seven top 10 finishes, said that she scrambled despite her good score. She hit from under trees, around trees, out of a divot, hit a rock in a ditch and bounced out, and several times saved par from deep rough.

"Isn't God Irish?" she quipped. "At times I was real lucky. At times I hit good. And at times I didn't hit so good and got lucky."

Sheehan laughed as she recited her card after the round. It was as if she couldn't believe she survived some of the situations.

"I'm glad I ran out of holes. I was afraid what would happen next. There has to be a lot of luck involved in this game. Things average out, the good breaks and the bad breaks."

Nelson increases lead with second hot round

PGA

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — PGA champion Larry Nelson increased his lead to four shots after two rounds of the $700,000 Atlanta Golf Classic with a 6-under-par 66 on Friday.

Nelson had a 36-hole total of 129, tying the best halfway mark on the PGA Tour this year.

Jeff Sluman had a 129 total earlier in the season at Greensboro and Chip Beck shot 129 for the first two rounds at Phoenix.

"I played really well on the front side, but I got a little tired on the back," Nelson said after posting his 15-under-par total for 36 holes over the hilly, 7,008-yard Atlanta Country Club course.

The 40-year-old Nelson held his four-shot advantage over a trio of players — Bobby Wadkins, Paul Azinger and Beck.

Wadkins, who started the day one shot back, had it going before taking two double bogeys on his last four holes for a 69.

Beck, seeking his third victory this year, shot a 66 and Azinger, who won at Bay Hill this season, shot 67.

"I'm just leading after 36 holes," Nelson said after touring the course in searing 99-degree heat. "I've played well for two rounds. I feel like there's no reason I shouldn't play well the next two.

"I wouldn't feel safe with 23 under at this point," said Nelson, seeking his 10th tour victory.

Nelson, who started on the back nine, put together three birdies in a row beginning at No. 12, sinking putts of 20, 15 and four feet. He birdied the 17th from six feet and chipped to within a foot for another on the par 5 18th.

His only bogey of the first two rounds came on the first hole when he missed the green, then failed to drop a 4-foot putt. Nelson birdied the par 5 No. 8 from 12 feet.

Wadkins, winless in 14 years on the Tour, ran into trouble on his 15th hole, the par 3 No. 6 when he buried his tee shot in the left bunker. He missed the ninth green and had a bad lie, costing him his second double bogey in four holes.

"For the first 14 holes it was extremely fun," Wadkins said.

Rodriguez shares Silver Pages lead

Seniors

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Defending champion Chi Chi Rodriguez shot a 4-under-par 68 Friday to take a share of the first-round lead in the $250,000 Southwestern Bell Silver Pages Classic.

Rodriguez, a one-time winner on the Senior PGA Tour this year, birdied four out of five holes coming in, including three in a row, to tie Bobby Nichols and playing partner Gene Littler.

The crowded leader board had eight players at 3-under, including top money winner Orville Moody, Gary Player, Harold Henning and 66-year-old Jack Fleck, who is competing in the Super Senior division. Seven others were two shots back including Bruce Crampton, runner-up to Rodriguez here a year ago.

"It's the best round I've played since the Skins Game," said Rodriguez, referring to an unofficial event held in January in which he won $270,000.

"My confidence is back. Four days laying off did me a lot of good," he said.

Rodriguez, winner of seven events last year but only one in 1988, began his birdie streak at the par-3 12th hole by holing out from the sand. He then sank putts of 8 feet and 9 feet at 13 and 14, and added a 5-footer at the 16th.

"I shot sixty; I scored sixty-eight," said Rodriguez, who has finished in the top 10 only five times in 15 tournaments this year. "I missed eight putts inside ten feet, so my game is back."

So is his swing, evidently. Rodriguez, disappointed with his play in both rounds of the pro-am event, went to the driving range Friday morning to work on his game.

"I discovered the thing I've been doing wrong for six months," he said. "I hit one drive and told my caddie 'That's it. I got it.' And I think I do."

Sosa battles back for Tex-Okla victory

Youth Golf

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — John Sosa of El Paso battled from three strokes behind in the final six holes and scored a one-shot victory Friday over Brandon Knight of Denton in the 32nd Texas-Oklahoma Junior Golf Tournament.

Sosa birdied three of the last five holes at Weeks Park Golf Course and finished the day at one-under-par 71, giving him 1-under 283 for the tournament.

Knight also had a 71 on Friday and an even-par 284 finish.

Jason Brigman of Abilene has the day's best round, a 66, and tied Knight for second place, then edged Knight in a sudden-death playoff. Taylor Tipton of Kerrville was fourth with a 68 Friday and a 287 total.

Sandy Hamby of Houston shot a three-under 69 and won the girls championship by four shots. She posted a 292 over the four-day tournament to beat out Laura Myers of Missouri City and Marti Longoria of Corpus Christi, who tied for third at 296.

Banks continues quest for gold

Track

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Four years ago, Willie Banks had hoped to end his track career as the Olympic gold medalist in the triple jump.

But the dream went awry with a sixth-place finish at the Los Angeles Games.

Since then, there have been other disappointments for the man who has held the triple jump world record for the past three years.

He did not even qualify for the final at last year's World Championships in Rome. He has suffered ankle, foot and knee injuries. He became involved in a controversy with The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for track and field, after it did not provide him with financial support for this year's Olympic preparation.

Through all the troubles, Banks has not lost sight of his ultimate goal. Banks, 32, will attempt to win the triple jump in this year's Seoul Olympics.

Last weekend, he finished second in the triple jump at the Mobil Championships at Tampa, Fla.

Banks was hoping to prepare for the Olympics with $1,500 per month training expenses from TAC.

Award and Jesse Owens Award that year, respectively, recognizing the top male field event performer and top overall athlete.

In retrospect, Banks refers to his jump at Indianapolis as a "soft" record.

"There are a lot of people who can jump that far," he said. "In our national championships, you can't even win with a 58-foot jump. In order to win the Olympics, I'd say you'll have to go 59 feet because I'm going that far."

BOWLING BEAT

Pope joins Denton, West in state finals

By RANDY ISENBERG

Isenberg

Scott Pope advanced to the state finals of the Seagrams U.S. Open in qualifying action Saturday, June 18 at Dellwood Lanes. John Denton and Kathy West have already earned spots in the state finals by posting the highest average in Dellwood Lanes league play this past fall for men and women, respectively.

In addition to earning the right to compete in the state finals, Pope pocketed $130 in averaging 204.75 over the 12-game route. Darrell Boen finished 41 pins off the pace with a 201 average. Second place was worth $100.

Pope started out with a 243 game, but fell to 155 in his 2nd game. He did not get started until games six, seven and eight, when he put together games of 254, 219 and 263 for a 736 set. Boen started off slow, but also had a very good three-game set in games four, five and six, bowling 266-221-224 for a 711 series. Boen's 10th game was a 244, but he didn't cover enough ground in games 11 and 12 to overtake Pope. George Overton and John Burns finished third and fourth, earning $65 and $45, respectively.

Jan and Bob Wooten captured first place in the World Class doubles tournament conducted this weekend at Dellwood. First place was worth $80. Reid London and Pat Shores earned second place prize of $60, while Ron Hopkins and Pat Allen teamed for third place and Darren Tryon and J.C. Green took fourth place.

In league play, Mike Boyer is averaging 201 after the first month of league play. Boyer rolled sets of 632 and 602 this past week. Boyer also rolled a four-game set of 850 in the scratch league.

Also bowling well were Bob Voisine, 216-618; Alan Barnett, 216-605; and Vern Williams, 224-605. Jimmy Hodges rolled a 231 game.

Paula Bayleys, 200-553, paced the women. Andy Bayley placed the youth bowlers aged 13-18 with a 163 game and 433 series, while Chad Bayley led the youth bowlers aged 6-12 with a 149-409.

Frank Petro paced the seniors in the Rock N Roll League with a 219 game and 552 series. Bill Gay rolled a 211 game and 551 set, while Elvis Barrington rolled a 197 game and 511 series. Helen Poindexter paced the ladies with a 168 game and 475 series.

In upcoming events, Dellwood Lanes offers a Adult-Youth tournament at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. today; a scratch singles tournament at 12:30 p.m. July 2; a handicap singles tournament at 12:30 p.m. July 3; and a 12-game handicap marathon at 12:30 p.m. July 4. Entry fee is $35 for all three events.

Dodd honored by ex-players

ATLANTA (AP) — Former Georgia Tech football coach and athletic director Bobby Dodd was eulogized Friday as a winner who loved honor more than victories and taught "his boys ... to become men."

About 2,500 people, including many of his former players, attended services at Alexander Memorial Coliseum for Dodd, who died Tuesday of lung cancer. He was 79.

The Rev. Clifton Thorington, Dodd's pastor at Northwest Presbyterian Church, cited Dodd's many athletic accomplishments, including a 165-64-8 record in 22 years as Tech's football coach and victories in six consecutive major bowl games.

Giants pull plug on Ryan, Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Kelly Downs held Houston to two hits and Will Clark's home run fueled a three-run fifth inning off struggling Nolan Ryan, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 11-0 rout Friday night.

Downs, 5-7, allowed a fourth-inning single to Rafael Ramirez and a sixth-inning single to relief pitcher Rocky Childress. Houston's only other baserunner was Ramirez on a fifth-inning walk.

Downs struck out four and walked one. The Giants had scored only 22 runs while Downs was on the mound this season.

Ryan, 5-5, failed for the fifth time to get his 100th victory for the Astros. Ryan, who has 266 career victories, has not won a game since May 29.

Clark, who homered off Ryan in his first major league at-bat April 8, 1986, got his 18th home run of the season in the fifth inning, a two-run shot. Brett Butler walked and scored on Ernest Riles' double and Riles then scored on Clark's homer. All three runs scored after two outs.

Clark's homer gave him the National League RBI lead with 58, one ahead of Houston's Glenn Davis.

Kirt Manwaring doubled to open the third and scored when Ryan fielded Downs' bunt and threw in the dirt to third base. Downs went to second on the play and, when Butler put down another bunt, Ryan threw wild to first base, scoring Downs from second and sending Butler to third.

Riles' sacrifice fly scored the third run.

The Giants got four runs in the eighth. Downs contributed a run-scoring single with the bases loaded, Butler doubled in two runs and Downs scored on Riles' groundout.

Dodgers 5, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Orel Hershiser got his fourth consecutive win and Dave Anderson tripled home a pair of runs.

The victory was the sixth in seven games for the Dodgers, who lead the National League West. The fourth-place Reds have lost four of their last five to slip to 7½ games behind Los Angeles.

Hershiser, 11-3, allowed eight hits, struck out five and walked four in 7 2-3 innings. After Jesse Orosco got the final out of the eighth, Tim Belcher pitched the ninth, striking out the side for his second save.

The Dodgers took advantage of two Cincinnati fielding mistakes for a pair of first-inning runs.

Steve Sax opened the game with a first-pitch single off Ron Robinson, 3-6. Franklin Stubbs laid down a sacrifice bunt to third baseman Chris Sabo, who threw to second for a force — but shortstop Barry Larkin was several feet off the bag, leaving both runners safe. Kirk Gibson was hit by a pitch to load the bases.

Mike Marshall's grounder up the middle was stopped by a diving Larkin, but his flip to second went over Jeff Treadway's head for an error as two runs scored.

John Shelby and Mike Scioscia singled ahead of Anderson's opposite-field triple with two out in the fourth. Stubbs hit a solo homer, his third, off Robinson in the fifth for a 5-0 lead.

The Dodgers gave the Reds one of their two fifth-inning runs with a fielding lapse of their own. Treadway led off the inning with his first homer and third in the majors, and Larkin singled with two out. Dave Collins then hit a grounder to Anderson at shortstop, but Sax failed to cover second base, keeping the rally alive. Hershiser walked Sabo and Davis to force in another run.

Mets 8, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — Len Dykstra and Lee Mazzilli scored on a disputed rundown play in New York's three-run sixth inning, and the Mets scored three more runs in the ninth, ignited by Howard Johnson's homer.

David Cone, 9-1, gave up three runs and eight hits, while striking out nine in 6⅔ innings.

The Mets were trailing 2-1 in the sixth when Dykstra singled and went to third on a single by Mazzilli. Dave Magadan tapped back to pitcher Pat Perry, and Dykstra was caught in a run-down between home and third.

Third baseman Vance Law's throw hit Dykstra in the helmet and rolled away. Dykstra and Mazzilli both scored while Magadan took third, and Magadan scored on a sacrfice fly by Darryl Strawberry.

The Cubs argued to no avail that Dykstra threw up his arm and interferred on the play.

Pirates 5, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Andy Van Slyke's one-out double scored Barry Bonds in the 10th inning.

Bonds started the inning with a single off reliever Bob McClure, 1-3, moved to second on Jose Lind's sacrifice and raced home as Van Slyke doubled into the right-field corner. Van Slyke continued to third when Hubie Brooks fumbled the ball for an error. Darnell Coles' sacrifice fly scored him.

Jim Gott, who allowed the tying run in the bottom of the ninth, got his fourth win against two defaets. Barry Jones got his first save by pitching the 10th.

The Expos trailed 3-1 entering the ninth, when Brooks opened with his eighth home run against starter Bob Walk, the first homer off walk in 118 innings.

Gott relieved and Tim Wallach lined a broken-bat single to right field. Wallach was replaced by pinch runner Rex Hudler, who scored one out later when Tom Foley doubled. Foley went to third on the throw home. He was stranded when pinch hitters Graig Nettles and Jeff Reed struck out.

With the score tied 1-1, Bobby Bonilla opened the sixth with a double off starter Dennis Martinez. After advancing to third on Coles' groundout, Bonilla scored easily on Sid Bream's line drive to Mitch Webster in left field.

Bream, who had driven in four runs the night before, extended the lead to 3-1 in the eighth, bringing home Van Slyke with a one-out sacrifice fly. Van Slyke opened the inning with a double and continued to third when center fielder Otis Nixon mishandled the ball for an error.

Braves 4, Padres 3

ATLANTA — Ozzie Virgil capped a four-run first inning with a run-scoring double and Atlanta held off San Diego.

The Braves got four first-inning doubles off Eric Show, 5-8, to help rookie right-hander Pete Smith, 2-7, end a six-game losing streak. Bruce Sutter, the fourth Atlanta pitcher, got his 11th save, pitching the final two innings.

Ken Oberkfell began the Braves' rally with a one-out double. After Dion James walked and Dale Murphy flied out, Atlanta followed with three consecutive run-scoring doubles.

Ted Simmons' blooper to left fell for a tw-base hit, scoring Oberkfell, and when Keith Moreland's throw hit James at third base, he also scored.

Andres Thomas followed with another double, scoring Simmons, and Virgil followed with the fourth double, scoring Simmons.

Phillies 7, Cardinals 6

ST. LOUIS — Mike Schmidt had three hits and drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning.

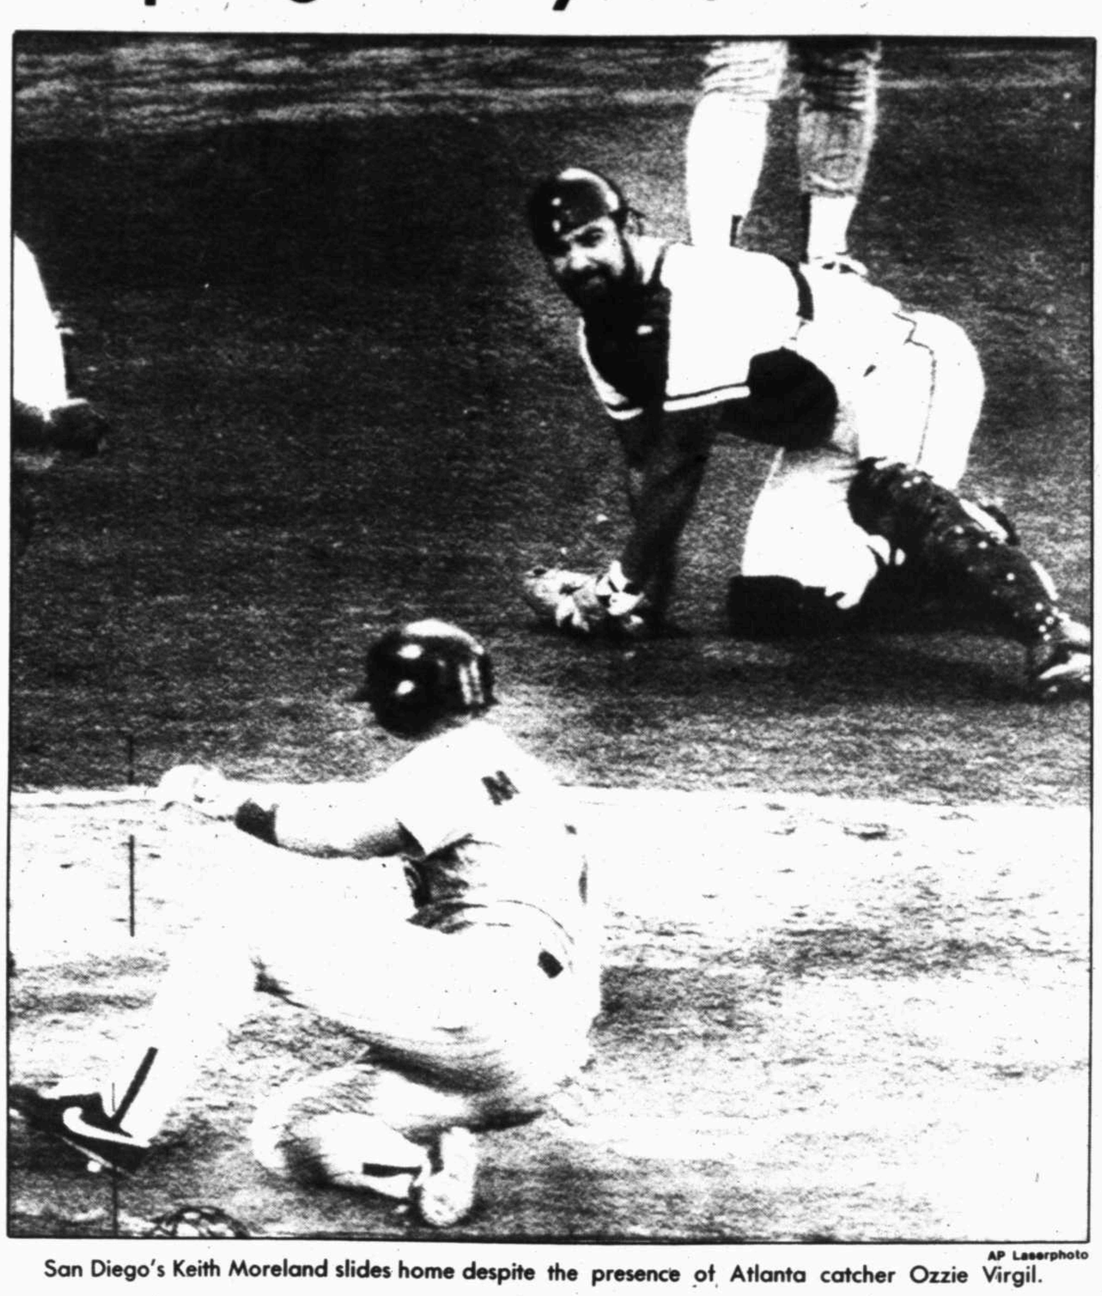

Pinch hitter Milt Thompson doubled, moved to third on a groundout and scored the winning run on Schmidt's flyout to right field in the eighth.

Bruce Ruffin, 5-6, making only his second relief appearance of the season, pitched three shutout innings for the decision. Steve Bedrosian stopped the Cardinals for two innings and got his 12th save.

Todd Worrell, 3-3, was the loser.

The Phillies, who had 15 hits, got three runs off starter Larry McWilliams in the first inning. Juan Samuel and Bob Dernier singled and Schmidt doubled home the first run. Lance Parrish's groundout and Chris James single also knocked in runs.

The Phillies made it 6-0 in the third. Dernier and Schmidt singled, chasing McWilliams, and Parrish lofted a sacrifice fly off reliever Scott Terry.

Brits defeat Yank tracksters

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — England beat the United States 130-90 Friday in a track meet as the American team was depleted because of another meet in Lausanne, Switzerland.

Linford Christie of England beat Lee McNeil by 54 hundreths of a second in the 100 meters, finishing in 10.81 seconds, and won at 200 in a personal best of 20.37 seconds, 35 hundreths of a second in front of teammate John Regis.

In the 800-meter race, England's Ikem Billy went between two Americans on the final bend and pushed his way to the front, leaving one of the Americans, Thomas Johnson, careering towards the outside lane.

Steve Crabb of England won in 1:47.66 while Billy finished second and Johnson last. Billy was disqualified for barging and placed last.

NOW head pushes for Knepper fine

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Houston Astros pitcher Bob Knepper should be fined or suspended from major league baseball for derogatory comments he made about the National Organization for Women, the head of the women's group said Friday.

"This is not about women wanting to be men — that's the way Bob Knepper described it. It's about women wanting the same rights as men. We will not stop until those rights are restored," NOW President Molly Yard said at a news conference.

Knepper said two weeks ago in a sports publication that NOW was a "blowhard, lesbian organization." A born-again Christian, Knepper also said "women are a gift to take care of men" and that he wouldn't play with a female umpire.

He has since apologized for the comments.

Green Tree golfer holes second ace

The second ace of Finley's golfing career was witnessed by Bob Beck, Wayne Youngs, Harry Bettis, Tom Newman and Jamie Winkle.

Wilkerson's triple keys Ranger win

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Curtis Wilkerson tripled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and scored on a throwing error on the play, lifting the Texas Rangers to a 5-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox on Friday night.

Wilkerson's one-out triple scored Jeff Kunkel, who singled off Chicago starter Melido Perez, 6-4. Wilkerson scored when the cut-off man, second baseman Donnie Hill, threw the ball into the stands behind third base.

Texas' Charlie Hough, 7-7, struggled with his control, walking seven, but finished with a five-hitter for his sixth complete game.

Perez yielded only one hit before the Rangers tied the score 2-2 with two runs in the fifth. Steve Buechele drew a one-out walk and went to second on Kunkel's single. Wilkerson drove in Buechele with a single and the runners advanced on center fielder Daryl Boston's throwing error. Cecil Espy's sacrifice fly scored Kunkel.

The first five Chicago batters reached base in the first inning but the White Sox managed only two runs on Harold Baines' homer. Redus led off with a single but Hough picked him off. Steve Lyons then walked and Baines hit his home run of the season.

Greg Walker and Dan Pasqua also walked but Boston aand Ozzie Guillen grounded out.

Hough picked off another runner in the second inning, giving him eight for the season.

Indians 7, Yankees 5

NEW YORK — Doug Jones celebrated his 31st birthday by setting a major-league record with a save in his 14th consecutive appearance and Cleveland rallied from a 4-1 first-inning deficit to defeat the New York Yankees.

Jones broke the mark of 13 straight saves set by Philadelphia's Steve Bedrosian last season. He retired all seven batters he faced, including pinch hitter Dave Winfield on a soft grounder with two runners on base to end the seventh inning. It was his 17th save overall.

During his record streak, Jones has given up only one run in 22⅓ innings.

Ron Kittle homered and drove in four runs for Cleveland and Julio Franco's homer capped a three-run fourth inning that put the Indians ahead 6-5. The Indians have homered in 13 straight games with a total of 20 during that span.

The Yankees lost for the first time in two games under Manager Lou Piniella, who replaced the fired Billy Martin on Thursday. New York has lost eight of its last 10.

Kittle, released by the Yankees after last season, hit a two-run homer in the third inning. That gave him 11 home runs, seven in his last 31 at-bats. Kittle had RBI singles in the first and sixth.

Franco's seventh home run of the season chased New York starter Richard Dotson, 7-3, against whom Franco is 16-for-35 in his career.

American League

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 3

TORONTO — George Bell hit a two-run homer in the first inning, his first at Exhibition Stadium this season, and rookie Todd Stottlemyre recorded his first home victory.

By winning for the eighth time in their last 11 games, the Blue Jays reached the .500 mark at 36-36 for the first time since April 26. The Tigers have lost only four of their last 16 games but have dropped three of five to Toronto in that stretch.

Stottlemyre, 3-7, allowed six hits and the three Detroit runs in 6⅓ innings. Duane Ward went 1⅓ innings and Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 14th save.

Orioles 6, Red Sox 2

BOSTON — Jim Traber and Larry Sheets hit consecutive two-run doubles as Baltimore chased Boston ace Roger Clemens in a five-run third inning.

Clemens, 10-5, allowed seven hits, two walks and six runs — one unearned — in suffering his fourth straight Fenway Park loss and his fifth in his last six starts. He is 8-0 on the road.

After pitching into the seventh inning in 16 previous starts this season, the two-time Cy Young Award winner equaled the earliest exit in his five-year career when he was relieved by Wes Gardner with one out in the third. Last June 26 he was unable to hold an 8-0 lead and was replaced after 2⅓ innings of a game in New York.

Mariners 7, Royals 0

Mike Moore pitched a four-hitter and Seattle's dormant offense got home runs from Rey Quinones, Jim Presley and Mickey Brantley.

The Mariners, who snapped a nine-game losing streak on Wednesday night, had scored just 15 runs in their 10 previous games.

Brantley's 12th home run of the season was a three-run shot off Kansas City starter Floyd Bannister in the fourth inning to put Seattle ahead 7-0. Bannister, 7-6, lasted just 3 2-3 innings.

Moore, 4-8, struck out seven and did not walk a batter in earning his first win as a starting pitcher since April 20.

Gulf Coast boyshatters state mark

BAY CITY (AP) — Ten-year-old Wally Escobar Jr. of Bay City knew when he hooked his big fish he'd have the family record, but what he didn't count on was breaking a 24-year-old state mark.

"The first thing he said was, "I broke the record, I broke the record,'" his mother, Irene, says. "He thought he had broken the record between him, his dad, his uncle and his cousins. But when we got the fish to Allen's Landing, they told us it was a state record."

Wally set a state record by reeling in an 81-pound black drum, caught on Father's Day from a pier a few miles up from the mouth of the Colorado River.

The Escobars tried four different bait camps before finding a scale certified to weigh state-record fish.

Just by chance, two Texas Parks and Wildlife Department marine biologists from Palacios awaited them with all the forms necessary to certify a record fish.

Fishing

"We just happened to be there when they came up," said Mike Weixelman, one of the biologists. "And it was just an accident we had the forms. Someone had called thinking they had a state record for Lookdown. It turned out to be an African Pompano."

All that awaits certification of the record is official confirmation from Parks and Wildlife headquarters in Austin, but Weixelman said that should be a mere formality since two state marine biologists were on hand to examine the drum.

Only four other state records for saltwater fish have lasted longer. The previous mark for black drum was held by Marvin McEachern of Nederland, who hauled in a 78-pounder June 25, 1964 near Sabine.

"It's going to be hard to beat," Wally told The Daily Tribune of Bay City.

In fact, it may never be topped.

"The really neat thing about this is, if the current black drum proposal goes though, he's got that record for eternity," Weixelman said.

Proposed maximum length limits on black drum — part of the saltwater fishing proposals discussed in public hearings across the state this week — could be accepted by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission July 21. The proposed limit for black drum is a 14-inch minimum and 30-inch maximum. Escobar's fish measured 51 inches.

Ironically, Wally Jr., described by his mother as "a true fisherman," was fishing for large gars while his father was angling for drum.

Fortunately, he was using a 50-pound test line and a sturdy rod to handle the fish, which fought for 30 minutes.

Confederate, Union 'troops' clash again at Gettysburg

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — The largest contingent of men to don Confederate uniforms since the Civil War on Friday reenacted the opening skirmish of the Battle of Gettysburg, 125 years after the war's bloodiest confrontation.

Nearly 5,000 Confederate infantry, artillery and cavalry engaged more than 3,000 Union troops in a 90-minute reenactment of the chance meeting at McPherson's Ridge that started the Civil War's most famous battle.

To the thunder of cannonfire and the reek of gunpowder, Confederate troops pushed back the Union's black-hatted "Iron Brigade," as scores of men on both sides feigned death in the tall grass and spectators watched from a hill overlooking the field.

Organizers said the 4,800 men to don Confederate uniforms was the most since the end of the Civil War in 1865.

"What you're going to see will be tremendous amounts of noise, smoke and confusion. Those are three prerequisites of a Civil War battle," said Kim Bernard Holien, a historian for the U.S. Army Center of Military History.

Napoleonic Tactics Inc., which sold tickets to cover its $450,000 budget for staging three days of ersatz warfare, has billed the event as the largest Civil War reenactment ever. The consulting company was hired by the event's sponsor, the American Civil War Commemorative Committee Inc.

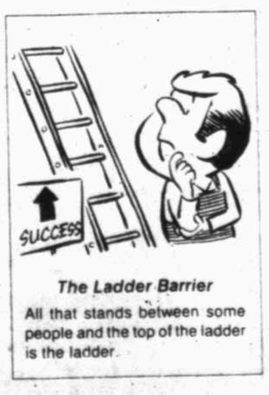

A total of 75,000 spectators are expected to attend over three days of reenactments on farmland five miles south of the actual Gettysburg battlefield.

The events are to climax Sunday with the restaging of Pickett's Charge, the Confederates' last push of the battle.

The Battle of Gettysburg took place from July 1-3, 1863, and resulted in nearly 50,000 dead and wounded. Confederate General Robert E. Lee invaded Pennsylvania for provisions and to beat the Union army on its own soil in hopes of winning diplomatic recognition for the Confederacy, Holien said.

Tactical commanders for both sides met Thursday night to map out the next day's skirmish.

What Makes A Father?

Sunday Psalm 27
Monday Psalm 31
Tuesday Psalm 41
Wednesday Psalm 51
Thursday Psalm 59
Friday Psalm 61
Saturday Psalm 70

It takes more than the birth of a child to make a father.

Something miraculous happens when a man realizes he is really a father. It may happen when he holds the baby in his arms for the first time or when he sees its first radiant smile. Suddenly, a man realizes that he is responsible for another human life. He knows that the kind of person he is will determine the kind of person his son or daughter will become. The values that he holds become more important than ever.

It is often at this point in life, that many men seek to re-establish their religious affiliation for they need the guidance of their church more than ever.

Whether you're a new father or one of long standing, attend the church or synagogue of your choice this week. It will make you a better father.

Midlanders named missionaries at Southern Baptist convention

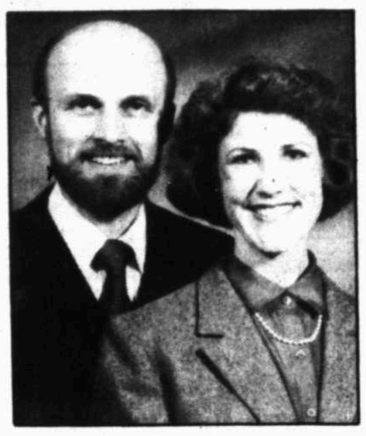

The Rev. and Mrs. David C. Dixon were among 35 people named missionaries by the Southern Baptist foreign Mission Board June 15 at the Southern Baptist Convention, San Antonio.

Born in Odessa, Mrs. Dixon, the former Susan Frazier, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Frazier of San Antonio. While growing up she also lived in Midland, Wichita Falls, Electra, Libya and Drumright, Okla. She considers Midland her hometown and First Baptist Church her home church.

During her college days, she attended First Baptist Church, Lubbock, received a bachelor of science in education degree from Texas Tech University, Lubbock, a master of divinity degree from Southwestern Seminary and a diploma in Hispanic studies from the University of Granada, Spain. She took the clinical pastoral education training at Baylor Medical Center, Dallas.

The Dixons will live in Spain, where he will be developing churches through seminary teaching and they will be involved in a variety of outreach ministries.

He is the pastor of Iglesia Bautista Central, Fort Worth, and attends Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth. Born in Grand Saline, Dixon is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. James Dixon of Longview. He grew up in Longview and considers Greggton First Baptist Church there his home church.

The Rev. and Mrs. David C. Dixon

He received his bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from North Texas State University, Denton, a diploma in Hispanic studies from the University of Granada, Spain, and a master of divinity degree from Southwestern Seminary. He expects to receive his doctor of philosophy degree from Southwestern Seminary in July.

He has been an English instructor at Tarrant County Junior College, Fort Worth; music minister/associate pastor at Primera Iglesia Bautista, Fort Worth; a Foreign Mission Borad Mission Service Corps worker in Spain; a Southern Baptist Home Mission Board summer missionary in Washington and Oregon; and a Baptist Student Union summer missionary in Texas.

Mrs. Dixon has been a kindergarten teacher and an English teacher at Tarrant County Junior College, both in Fort Worth.

She also was a Mission Service Corps worker with her husband in Spain; a BSU summer missionary in Mexico; and a summer missionary in Texas and Mexico, sponsored by the Baptist General Convention of Texas River Ministry. She is a teacher with the Fort Worth Independent School District.

The Dixons have two children, Daniel Bryant, born in 1984; and Joel William, born in 1986.

'Separation' favored but not results

NEW YORK (AP) — In a curious inconsistency, most Americans approve the slogan "separation of church and state," but not its results.

Most favor public prayers before high school sporting events, a moment of silence in schools for voluntary prayer and inclusion of biblical perspectives about creation in discussions of evolution.

Majorities also say public schools should allow student religious groups to meet in classrooms in off hours and that it's OK to put Christian or Jewish holiday symbols on government property.

These beliefs, along with approval of the "separation" phrase exercised in prohibiting them, emerged from a nationwide survey of 3,017 Americans.

The telephone survey, taken Dec. 1-15, 1987, for the Williamsburg Charter Foundation, a private, non-profit, non-sectarian project in Washington, D.C., gauged attitudes on religion within politics and public affairs. The participants, chosen at random, were 18 and older, and the survey had an error margin of 2.4 percentage points either way.

More than 100 prominent Americans were to join in a reaffirmation of the Constitution's religious-freedom clauses at the "First Liberty Summit" at Williamsburg, Va., on June 25.

The event marks the 200th anniversary of Virginia's call for the First Amendment's Bill of Rights.

The survey findings indicated that in this presidential election year, denominational bias about candidates has dwindled to a remnant, in contrast to what it was 30 years ago.

Only 8 percent of Americans would refuse to vote for a Roman Catholic on the basis of religion, compared to 25 percent in 1958, and only 10 percent would refuse to vote for a Jew, compared to a previous 28 percent.

However, 70 percent say it is important that the president have strong religious beliefs, and more than 60 percent say they wouldn't vote for an atheist or a homosexual.

Only 43 percent, however, say they wouldn't vote for a candidate who "has been having other love affairs."

Public unfamiliarity with the actual grounding of the volatile relationship of religion and government was seen in the survey finding that only a third knew freedom of religion was guaranteed by the Constitution's First Amendment.

The phrase "separation of church and state" appears nowhere in the Constitution, but it is held to be reflected in the Amendment, which actually says:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

In the survey, however, 54 percent favor "laws against the practice of Satan worship."

A bigger majority, 67 percent of those familiar with the American Civil Liberties Union, thinks it files "too many lawsuits regarding religion," which often have figured in barring practices most respondents approve.

Sixty-eight percent think religous groups have a right to get involved in politics, but 57 percent would prefer they didn't.

Local church continues summer film series

The Family Ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ is presenting two special film series at 7 p.m. Wednesdays.

The special series of video-taped presentations are entitled "You and Your Teen" in Room 12 through August 24 and "Strengthening Your Grip," a film series by noted author Dr. Charles Swindoll through July 13.

The video tapes in "You and Your Teen" are the combined efforts of Oklahoma Christian College and Group Magazine to provide insight and guidance from a variety of family experts to those who are parenting teens.

The series includes the topics "Help, I've Given Birth to a Teenager," "Living Through Teenage Years," "Whose Turn to Talk, Whose Turn to Listen," "Discipline," "Responsibility," "Self Esteem," "When Tempers Flair," "Drums, Sex and Alcohol," "Kids in Trouble," "Communication," "Friends and Peer Pressure" and "How Do You Rate as a Parent?"

Speakers in this series include Dr. Tony Compola, Keith Olson, David Mitchell, Ron Rose, Lynn McMillon, Tom Millholland and others who have expertise in the field of parenting.

Swindell's six-part tackles the issues that keep people from being all they want to be. the films include such topics as "Priorities: Freedom from the Tyranny of the Urgent," "Aging: Refusing to Shift Your Life into Neutral."

The public is invited to attend. For more information call Dr. Gary Grady, 694-8836.

Missionary in Africa to speak

"A great challenge to the church in Africa is the training of leadership — pastors, elders, deacons and teachers," says the Rev. William Teague, Assemblies of God missionary to Togo, Africa, and president of the West Africa Advanced School of Theology.

Teague will be the guest speaker at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Calvary Assembly of God, 908 S. Johnston St.

Teague and his wife, Jerlene, worked on the Ivory Coast from 1972 until 1985, following a year in Sausanne, Switzerland, where they studied the French language.

While on the Ivory Coast, they were involved in evangelistic ministry, the establishing of new churches and founded the Bible Institute in Daloa for the training of national leadership.

Teague was chairman of the board of governors of the West Africa Advanced School of Theology, Lome, Togo, from 1976 to 1982, and served as president of the Accrediting Council for the Bible Schools and Institutes of West and Central Africa. He was also the superintendent of the Western and Central District of the Assemblies of God and chairman of the Missionary Field Council in Ivory Coast from 1976 to 1980.

In 1985, Teague was named president of the West Africa Advanced School of Theology. This school offers higher education in Bible and theology for the many nations of the region which includes an area larger that the continental United States.

The school presently has pastors and leaders from 13 of these nations studying on the campus, and plans are underway to establish a network of six extension centers to reach many leaders who are unable to leave for long periods to study on the campus.

Prior to missionary appointment the Teagues pastored in Headlton, Okla., and also traveled in evangelistic ministry in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Teague holds a bachelor of science degree from Southwestern Assemblies of God College, Waxahachie, and a master of arts in biblical studies and a master of divinity degree from the Assemblies of God Theological seminary, Springfield, Mo.

He has also studied at Brite Divinity School, Texas Christian University, Fort Worth and the Phillips University Graduate School, Enid, Okla. He is a graduate of Lemania College in French studies in Lausanne, Switzerland.

On returning to Africa, the Teagues' primary work will be the directing of the West Africa Advanced School of Theology, where Teague will continue to serve as president and Mrs. Teague will serve as the librarian and an instructor.

The Rev. Gayle Reeves, pastor of the Midland church, invites the public to hear Teague speak.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Lutheran meeting held in San Antonio

Delegates to the 51st convention of the Texas District of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, met June 16-19 at the convention center in San Antonio.

Organized in 1906, the Texas District now numbers 98,000 members in 340 congregations throughout the state and is one of the largest and fastest growing districts of the synod.

Among the voting delegates, advisory delegates and guests officially registered at the convention were Walter Teinert, lay delegate; Kasey Kelly, youth delegate; and the Rev. Ray E. Johansen of Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church, Midland.

"These delegates, together with Lutherans from throughout Texas, enjoyed spirited debate, voted on resolutions of ministry which will take the district into the 1990s, and worshipped and shared the faith which brought them together," says a release from Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church.

The convention theme, "Launch Out into the Deep," was based on Christ's commands concerning the challenges he has given his church. Convention devotions, reports, resolutions, debate and worship centered on that theme.

At the convention, the Rev. Glenn O'Shoney of Austin was re-elected as district president and the Rev. Carroll Kohl, pastor of St. Paul Lutheran Church, Big Spring, was elected as vice president. Among the resolutions approved were commitments to growth in evangelistic work, seminary support and the development of commissioned lay pastoral assistant positions.

Swedish groups to perform

Two of Sweden's outstanding choral and instrumental groups, will be performing together in a rare "Made in Sweden" performance at 7 p.m. July 3 at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Bolinden Ungdomkor is a 50-person choral group from Boliden village near the Artic Circle in Sweden's far north. The other is a 59-person band, Roke Musikkor, from Sweden's southern most province, Skane. Both groups are connected to the evangelical movement within the Church of Sweden.

Roke Musikkor has traveled throughout the Scandinavian countries and Great Britian. This marks the group's third trip to the United States.

Boliden Ungdomkor has toured Scandinavia and Germany. This marks the choir's second trip to the United States.

Both groups have appeared on Swedish State Television and recorded a number of albums.

The July 3rd concert will include traditional Scandinavian folk music, gospel, gospel jazz, classical religious, familiar hymns and South African and American black spirituals.

The concert is only one of four the groups will present together during their three-week tours of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico. Each group will present 16 concerts on its own.

Those interested in hosting any of the musicians or singers are asked to call First Presbyterian's music office, 684-7821.

A free will offering will be taken at the concert. A $3 donation is suggested.

July Jubilee scheduled

South Plains Church, Levelland, will sponsor its 4th annual July Jubilee July 10 through 13.

Patsy Behrman will minister through song and teaching July 10. Ms. Behrman is a graduate of Rhema Bible Training Center and has acted as coordinator for Kenneth Hagin's Prayer and Healing Center, Tulsa, Okla.

Steve Vickers, the pastor of Christian Life Church, Montgomery, Ala., will be ministering at 6 p.m. July 10.

Then, at 10 a.m. July 11, Denice Vickers, Steve Vickers' wife, will share her testimony of "how God supernaturally healed her of rheumatoid arthritis," says a release from the church. "Mrs. Vickers has shared her miracle healing on the 700 Club and the Richard Roberts Show."

At 7 p.m. July 11, Willie George, producer of the "Gospel Bill Show," will speak. George is involved in family relationship and child training seminars throughout the United States and Canada.

Closing out the July Jubilee will be Billye Brim at 7 p.m. July 12 and 13. Mrs. Brim was the editor of publications for Kenneth Hagin Ministries, Tulsa, Okla., for more than eight years. She also ministers during Kenneth Copeland Believer's conventions.

South Plains Church is located on East Cactus Drive. Pastors Eddie and Patricia Trice invite the public to attend the Jubilee. For more information call 894-9674.

Mel Taylor to perform

Taylor

Mel Taylor and Friends, "Keys for the Kingdom Tour '88," will be at the Christian Church of Midland, 2608 Neely Ave., at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

"In the past 20 years Mel Taylor has traveled countless miles, held thousands of concerts and seen hundreds of lives changed through the miracle power of Jesus Christ," says a news release from the church.

Taylor, a member of the Gospel Lads Quartet from 1967-87, appeared on national television with Stuart Hamblin, author of "It Is No Secret" and "This Old House," and Paul Anderson in 1971; with Art Linkletter and former Miss America Vonda Van Dyke in 1972; with then governor of California Ronald Reagan in 1974; and with the Oak Ridge Boys in 1974.

He has appeared in concert with Hamblin, Dale Evans, Pat Boone, Tom Netherton, Miss Van Dyke, The Blackwood Brothers and The Imperials. He was also the pianist for the North American Christian Convention main evening sessions 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1987.

Joining Taylor on his Tour '88 are Johnny Sluyter and Genevieve Morse, students at Pacific Christian College, Fullerton, Calif;, and Judith McDonald from St. Charles, Mo.

The biennial convention of the Texas District of the Lutheran Women's Missionary League was held this past week in Galveston with "Cast Your Nets — Turn Your Eyes Upon Jesus" as its theme.

The LWML is an international organization within the Lutheran church, Missouri Synod, whose purposes include promoting growth in Christian knowledge, supporting monetary programs and objectives such as Mites for Missions, providing for active participation in Christian services and fostering Christian fellowship.

Members of Parish Workers of Grace Lutheran Church, a local affiliate of the LWML, attended the convention and will report on its activities at the monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the home of Lyn Brown, 3609 Wedgewood.

All members are encouraged to attend. For more information call Pam Hughes, 697-1965.

Church sets 'La Promesa'

Our Lady of Guadelupe Catholic Church is hosting its 27th annual family fair, "La Promesa," on the church grounds, 1208 Cherry Lane, from noon to 10 p.m. July 9 and 1 to 10 p.m. July 10.

The fair will have food booths, games, entertainment and rides. The Pride of Texas Carnival will operate July 7 through 10.

The fair includes a drawing at 10 p.m. July 10 for a 1988 Nissan, $500 in cash and $300 in cash. For more information call the church or ask about the drawing at the fair.

All proceeds from the fair go to Our Lady's Grotto. No admission is charged at the fair. Those desiring a place to sit need to bring lawn chairs.

Garage sale set today

A giant garage sale is being held today to help send Shelby Bond to "Up With People."

The sale is being sponsored by St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 1701 N. Main St. For more information call Peggy Thorsen, 683-5925.

Rummage sale scheduled

Greenwood United Methodist Church will be having a rummage sale from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. today at Asbury United Methodist Church, 106 W. Dakota St.

Proceeds go to the paving of the parking lot at Greenwood UMC.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be willing to move for a new job or for the sake of a relationship. This year can be a real turning point for you. Your finances should improve as a result of both trimming expenses and shifts in the job market. You find more time for a pet project. Your ability to think big brings you unexpected success. Career changes will be for the best. You value your health and work to stay in good shape. Encourage partner to do the same. A love relationship has you thinking of marriage, children.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Pearl Buck, baseball inventor Abner Doubleday, film villain Peter Lorre. ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your enthusiasm for a Sunday outing wanes. Think about curling up with a good book at home. You may find yourself attracted to a friend. Be compassionate and forgiving in a family matter.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You sense a major development is about to occur that will affect a relationship. Hang on! Although you could be in for a bumpy ride, you will emerge from the experience much happier.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The undercurrents of a relationship need to be dealt with head-on. You will come out of a family squabble in good shape. Do not let a bitter individual rain on your parade. Have faith.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have compassion for just about everyone. Why not show the same kindness to yourself? Stop being so self-critical. Forget past mistakes. Relax and have fun today. You deserve it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do something to cheer up a family member who has suffered recently. A calculated risk is worth taking. A relationship can be salvaged if you face up to your responsibilities. Be reliable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today seems to be tailor-made for carrying out your personal plans. A change of scenery provides inspiration. Get in touch with a friend at a distance. A romantic rendezvous is thrilling.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Quiet study or meditation holds special appeal. Mate or partner is especially sensitive to your needs. A frank discussion about family finances will prevent an ugly confrontation. Make up a budget.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A sermon or conversation inspires you to give more thought to the needs of others. Pay attention to someone who may feel slighted. A visit or small gift will work wonders.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Important business and family matters require your personal touch. Carefully consider all options before committing yourself either verbally or in writing. Others share secrets. Keep your own counsel. Discretion is vital.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friends and relatives are enthusiastic about your recreational suggestions. Carry on the good work begun by another family member. Pursue romance actively. Seek an introduction to someone you have admired from afar.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are on the same wavelength as mate. Make a special effort to restore order to your financial affairs. Personal spending must be curbed until income catches up with outlays.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good-natured, intelligent compromise will restore domestic harmony. Extend the olive branch. Romance is in high gear. Avoid being overly solicitous with young people. Encourage self-reliance.

'Carhenge' almost ready to stop traffic

ALLIANCE, Neb. (AP) — James Reinders is completing "Carhenge," his replica of England's Stonehenge fashioned from old cars welded together in a farm field.

Reinders said Thursday he has spent nearly $10,000 on the project, which he's building a mile and a half north of town on U.S. Highway 385.

Reinders, 60, a retired oil consultant who lives in Houston, was in Alliance this week adding ten cars to the 22-car sculpture he erected last summer.

A photographer from People Magazine was expected to come to Alliance Monday and a representative from a Paris magazine was expected early next week.

"I'd be hard pressed to explain why all of the excitement about Carhenge," Reinders said.

"Something about this is imaginative. People see it as creative, unique, and novelty, but art — I don't know," he said.

Reinders said he will go to China in August to determine if a part of the Great Wall might be represented near Carhenge.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Former Miss America Bess Myerson asked for a delay in prosecution of shoplifting charges against her until after her federal trial this fall in New York City.

Lycoming County Judge Thomas C. Raup scheduled a hearing July 6 on the motion, filed Thursday. Miss Myerson's trial, scheduled to begin Monday, will be temporarily postponed at least until the hearing.

Her lawyer argues that publicity about the shoplifting trial could keep her from getting an unbiased jury in the federal trial. But District Attorney Brett O. Feese opposed the delay, saying, "It's just another shoplifting case."

Miss Myerson, 63, was charged with shoplifting May 27 after she allegedly tried to leave a department store with six bottles of nail polish, five pairs of earrings, a pair of shoes and flashlight batteries.

The former New York City cultural affairs commissioner contends she planned to go back to the store to pay for the items after locking her car.

Miss Myerson is scheduled to stand trial in New York in September on charges of mail fraud, racketeering, conspiracy and influencing a judge. The indictment, returned last October, accuses her of trying to influence the divorce case of her reported lover, millionaire Carl Capasso.

NEW YORK (AP) — Patty Hearst, who once handled automatic weapons as a kidnapped soldier in the Symbionese Liberation Army, says she now keeps a gun by her suburban bedside.

"There are guns all over the house," she says, including a handgun "a little more substantial than a Magnum" kept by the bed, she said in an interview in Vogue magazine.

The 34-year-old publishing heiress recalled that during her time with the SLA, she "really began to notice I was no longer in control when, without a thought, I just did what I had been trained to do — fire the machine gun and the other guns in sequence."

A few weeks after she was kidnapped by the SLA in 1974 in Berkeley, Calif., the radical leftist band released a taped message from her declaring that she had decided to join the group. She subsequently took part in a bank robbery and spent more than a year on the run before being arrested.

At her trial, her lawyers argued that she had been mistreated and did not freely join the SLA. Though she was convicted and spent time in prison, her sentence was eventually commuted.

Hearst married her former bodyguard and now lives in Westport, Conn.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A couple who filed for bankruptcy six weeks before winning $4.6 million in the lottery say they'll pay their debts even though they're not required to by law.

AP Laserphoto

Members and sympathizers of the Writers' Guild of America picket NBC Studios in Burbank, Calif., Friday, after refusing acceptance Thursday of the latest offer in the four-month-old strike.

"We're not criminals," Jerome Jenks of Haines City said. "We want to clear up our credit."

The first of 20 yearly Florida Lotto checks for $229,000 was issued to the Jenkses Friday. Legally, their creditors can't demand a nickel from the windfall.

"They can tell them to go fly a kite," Chief Bankruptcy Judge Alexander Paskay said.

The Jenkses listed debts of more than $17,000 when they filed the Chapter 7 bankruptcy petition May 3.

Jenks, 42, a $300-a-week night shift supervisor at a soap plant, and his 38-year-old wife Theresa, a $290-a-week housekeeper at Walt Disney World, said bankruptcy was their last resort when their income dropped because of cuts in overtime.

Chapter 7 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act anticipates inheritances, among other windfalls that can change a bankruptcy status, but lottery winnings acquired after filing for liquidation can't be touched.

"Timing is everything," said Terry E. Smith, the trustee in the case. "A bankruptcy is a snapshot of an individual at a point in time. It doesn't matter whether they get better off or worse off later."

The Jenkses were able to keep their home, a few household possessions and their two cars as long as they kept up with the payments.

And they got to tear up their other bills — more than $14,000 owed on credit cards, $3,473 owed to the Florida Central Credit Union of Lakeland and a disputed $389 car-repair bill.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producers vowed Friday to tape a new fall TV season despite the 3-to-1 rejection of their latest contract offer to scriptwriters, but the union said its walkout would keep Hollywood paralyzed.

As the strike continued in its 16th week, layoff notices began almost simultaneously with the announcement of the voting results Thursday. At Universal Studios, a memo to employees announced that the commissary was closing Friday.

The Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers offer was turned down 2,789 to 933. The 9,000-member Writers Guild of America voted Wednesday night during spirited meetings in Los Angeles and New York that injected a renewed dose of union solidarity.

Archaeologists' helmets and charts lie in front of a portion of what they believe may have been a defensive wall surrounding ancient Rome. Discovered last month at the heart of the Roman Forum, the squared-off stones may be sitting on top of an earlier wall that figures into the legend of the brothers Romulus and Remus, who were said to have founded Rome after being suckled by a wolf as babies.

Archaeologists unearth ancient wall at center of Roman Forum

By CAROL CIRULLI

ROME (AP) — Archaeologists have dug up a wall in the heart of the Roman Forum that could help them discover the secrets of the founding of Rome. The city could be older than it thinks it is.

The archaeologists say the discovery also could find some truth in the legend of Romulus and Remus.

According to the legend, Romulus established Rome by building a defensive wall around the Palatine Hill, the site where he and his twin brother, Remus, were suckled in their infancy by a she-wolf and reared by a shepherd. Romulus then founded Rome in 753 B.C., as the legend goes.

While the archaeologists don't believe they'll find any proof of Romulus, Remus, the she-wolf and the shepherd, they do think they might find some truth in the legend about the way Rome was founded and when.

Andrea Carandini, a University of Pisa professor who is leading the dig, said archaeologists in May uncovered a stone wall on a slope of the hill just at the spot described by the ancient Roman historian Tacitus as the site of the wall that first defined and protected Rome.

Experts have dated the find to the 7th century B.C., but Carandini said in an interview he suspects underneath it is an earlier version of a defensive wall that could have been built a century earlier.

Archaeologists say reaching the wall could be the first tangible piece of evidence to back up the story of Rome's legendary founding in 753 B.C.

But secrets of the earliest days of Roman civilization may stay locked in the ground if the government fund that has financed the dig for the last three years is not replenished. Carandini says the team needs the equivalent of about $400,000 to continue.

For now Carandini keeps digging.

"We will never discover the wall of Romulus because Romulus is a legend, of course," he said. "But I think the nucleus of the legend is right, and in a way, we already proved this because nobody believed that there really was a fortification of the Palatine Hill."

Experts who have observed the excavations say the discoveries, if fully documented, will provide significant insight into the little-known period between the 8th and 6th centuries B.C.

"It is interesting that the physical objects that (Carandini) is discovering not only seem to be dated very early in the history of the city but are related to the historical texts that talk about the foundation of the city," said Richard Brilliant, a professor of art history and archaeology at Columbia University in New York, who visited the site in May.

"Whether or not conclusions can be drawn about the wall in the development of the city is something much more research is needed to demonstrate."

Alessandro Guidi, an official with the regional archaeology office, said the find indicates that Rome may have evolved much earlier than was once believed from a primitive village inhabited mainly by shepherds into a more advanced society.

"This could be very important because it may be proof that before the Etruscans conquered Rome, Rome already was a very big center," Guidi said.

The defensive wall, discovered about 10 feet below a grassy surface, probably surrounded a "pomoerium," or holy place, in the city that had been founded with the gods' blessings, Carandini said.

Above the excavated wall, archaeologists found remnants of houses they believe date back to the end of the 6th century B.C. and belonged to aristocrats of Etruscan origins.

The houses probably were built after the defensive wall was expanded to surround the seven hills of Rome, Carandini said.

But it is what lies below the wall that may give real insight into the founding of one of the world's most ancient civilizations.

"We go with clues like Sherlock Holmes," Carandini said. "It is the only way we have of checking the history of Rome, which at this point is a legend. But I think a legend is another way of writing history."

Dugout beached 7,000 years ago now resting in Denmark museum

By FRANK POWLEY

ROSKILDE, Denmark (AP) — Experts have begun painstakingly piecing together the crumbling remains of a newly discovered ancient dugout boat beached near a Stone Age settlement more than 7,000 years ago.

The dugout, thought to be one of the oldest vessels ever recovered, was spotted last summer by skin-diving scientists and historians on an expedition to an area where Paleolithic flint tools had been found earlier.

Stone Age shipwrights made the boat by hollowing out a lime log with flint axes. A carbon 14 test of the vessel's lime wood dated it to 5250 B.C.

By chance the divers caught sight of the boat's gunwales sticking up from the sandy seabed at a depth of about 6½ feet.

They named it the "Korshavn Dugout" after the bay in the northeast of the island of Funen where it was found.

Following a troubled salvage operation that shattered the hull, the dugout was brought in pieces to Roskilde Ship Museum on the main island of Zealand, which houses a major collection of restored Viking-age ships from nearby excavations.

"It could take up to two years to assemble the thousands of boat pieces onto a frame," said Tinna Damsgaard-Soerensen, the historian in charge of reconstructing the dugout.

"It's like a big jigsaw puzzle, but solvable."

The delicate pieces, each wrapped in a spongy cloth, are laid out in water-filled trays to conserve the wood. None is larger than a paperback book.

The painstaking task of drawing, photographing, conserving and cataloging each piece is being carried out in full public view as a working exhibition, which includes a video tape of the salvage.

It proved impossible to measure the boat's length because the ends were missing. But 12 feet of the dugout survived, and restoration workers estimate it was at least 13 to 16½ feet long with a 24-inch beam.

The dugout had a surprisingly thin hull, less than two inches thick at the bottom and 1.2 inches along the gunwales, said curator Flemming Rieck.

"It's a superb example of handicrafting," he said.

To gain a better understanding of Stone Age methods, Rieck's group hauled a fresh lime log into the museum hall and carved a replica of the Korshavn boat with flint tools.

Rieck, an expert on ancient vessels of northern Europe, said dugouts were used mainly for hunting and fishing close to home, and for transporting people and goods between settlements.

Dugouts like the Korshavn, which could carry four or five people, often had a clay fireplace in the stern because ancient man carried fire with him on his travels, Rieck said.

The dugout apparently was abandoned on the shore near a settlement. But the rising waters from melting glaciers north of Denmark flooded the area, and the boat was discovered underwater, Rieck said.

The boat rested in an eight-inch-thick culture layer containing bits of flint and food scraps that can reveal glimpses of settlement life.

The excavation of the Korshavn Dugout presented a special problem requiring a method that had never been tried before, said Rieck.

Due to the advanced decomposition of the wood, salvagers decided to bring up the boat together with the layer of sand in which it was embedded.

A strong salvaging frame was dug into position around the boat. Thin copper pipes were inserted through the frame's lower edge beneath the boat through which liquid nitrogen was pumped at a temperature of minus 392 degrees Fahrenheit.

It was hoped, Rieck said, the intense cold would freeze the water around the pipes, forming a firm base of ice within the salvaging frame that could be raised out of the sea with the dugout intact.

But a severe storm broke as the salvage was under way. Large amounts of sand shifted as waves beat against the seabed. The next morning the divers found the dugout lying in fragments within the frame, which were sent to the museum on wooden planks.

"We still have faith in the freeze technique and probably will try it again in some future excavation," said Rieck.

Divers examine fragments of what is thought to be an ancient dugout boat, one of the oldest vessels ever, during an expedition last summer off the island of Funen, Denmark. Experts have begun painstakingly piecing together the crumbling remains of the dugout which was beached near a Stone Age settlement more than 7,000 years ago.

Caesar takes flight for two days

WATERTOWN, Conn. (AP) — They came to curry Caesar, not craze him.

Caesar, an African gray parrot that's been the Briere family pet for 11 years, took his first-ever flight Sunday afternoon while his cage was being moved outside and spent two days as a free bird.

The parrot, who eschews the traditional cracker in favor of provolone cheese and bolgona, perched atop a tall tree across the street from his home after he flew the coop. Caesar remained free until Tuesday.

The fire department Sunday responded by sending Chief Charles "Buddy" Judd up in a ladder truck bucket. Judd said as soon as he got close, Caesar just squealed and flew away.

The bird's quest for freedom kept family members, friends and neighbors busy as they took shifts throughout the day and night keeping track of the parrot, according a family member.

Jeannine Briere said she spent the days sitting in the back yard, whistling and calling the bird until her voice started tiring. She then made a tape recording of her calls and played it over and over.

Her husband, Fern, said he told her at one point that the parrot was trying to come home, but didn't know how to land.

On Tuesday, the Brieres bought a large fishing net and attached it to a 10-foot pole.

Bezoar among British crown jewels

Copley News Service

Legend has it that among Queen Elizabeth I's crown jewels there was a gold-framed bezoar listed in the royal inventory of 1622.

Bezoars were very rare in those days and thought to have magical properties because they can only be obtained from the stomachs of select animals.

You see, bezoars actually are stomach stones made from clumps of fruit and vegetable matter, hair, textile fibers and other foreign substances that accumulate in the gastrointestinal tract.

With the advent of 20th century drugs, carpet fibers and modern industrial pollutants, bezoars have become all too common in the '80s.

But every so often, one pops up in surgery that amazes even the experts.

Father gives unwanted kids home, hope

By SHARON COHEN

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — He's a bachelor who long ago traded the solitary life for 15 loads of wash every day, a four-figure grocery bill every month and enough sons and daughters to fill a classroom — 35 in all.

Meet Kojo Odo. Adoptive father. Tenacious fighter. A man who takes in children no one else wants: the abused, the abandoned, the sickly, the scarred. It doesn't matter. Odo finds a place for each in his heart.

In his private life, Odo gives unwanted kids a home and hope. In his public life, he urges others to do the same.

As Ohio's administrator for special adoptions, Odo works to find homes for children, especially those hard to place. He needed no training for this job. His life is his resume.

In 15 years, Odo has almost single-handedly raised 35 children. Seven sons now live on their own; the 21 sons and seven daughters who share his 10-bedroom home range from 6 years old to 22.

They were together Father's Day, but "it's just another day," Odo said. There may be handmade gifts, but the gifts he treasures most are his children.

"The kids are my dreams," he said. "They bring me a level of satisfaction and achievement. You can take my life...my money...my car. You can burn down my house. You can't take away whatever I helped my kids achieve."

THE ACHIEVEMENTS for some of the children include walking with crutches after doctors predicted lifetimes in wheelchairs, or living when they were supposed to die.

If this seems like a miracle, it isn't — Odo says love and stability are all-important. If it sounds inspirational, it is.

"If you have the capacity to raise...and deal with all those children, you're definitely a credible individual," said co-worker Carol Hector-Harris. "Someone who lives it as well as works it: they're believable."

Odo says he is proof people needn't be "mainstream America" to adopt a child.

In a gray flannel world of button-down bureaucrats, Odo, 48, favors knee-high boots, a knit skull cap and thick, clanging silver bracelets. Ten golden earrings circle one ear, a gold ring pierces a nostril and a jeweled stud sits smack dab at the center of his chin.

Odo, former civil rights activist and teacher, originally planned to adopt children once he married. When he was ready, however, he was still single. And adoption posed many obstacles for a single, black man.

AP Laserphoto

After a long investigation, Odo received his first child — a 7-year-old, one-armed boy. "He had had seven placements in seven years," he recalled. "He was emotionally scarred right to the heart...but a survivor."

Once when Odo hoisted his son up to a mirror, the boy broke into tears. Odo thought he was hurting him. Then he found the problem.

"He had always been told he would grow an arm," Odo said. "When he didn't grow an arm, he stopped looking in the mirror."

That boy became Odo's pride. "He grew and made you grow, too," he recalled. At 16, he played football and basketball, had girlfriends and took college entrance exams.

BUT IN 1982, an assailant stabbed the boy to death in New York City. "I'm still in mourning for my son," Odo said, his eyes filling with tears. "Nothing hurt me like that."

Yet, he added, "he made it possible to take some of the others."

Some of Kojo's kids have visible scars. A boy whose legs were burned when he was dunked in boiling water. A nearly blind hyperactive child. A boy with deformed ears, a cleft palate, dislocated hips and a heart murmur. A boy with spina bifida. A girl with syphilis of the spine.

Others have emotional scars. One son saw his mother's boyfriend beat his younger brother to death. "He was like an animal," Odo said. "They couldn't put him in a house. They put him in an institution."

His children's abilities vary — some earn A's and B's at school, others never finish. Some help with the cooking and watch the younger children; others are limited to simpler tasks, such as sweeping floors.

Odo had reservations as his family grew.

"Up to 12 or 15 kids, after every kid, I'd say 'No more.' I'd reach a place at where the kid had adjusted. (I'd think) God, there are so many kids out there. We've gotten the routine down well. I can take one more."

Odo adopts sight unseen. He reviews their records, but says: "There is no way you can fabricate a meeting without the kid knowing you're shopping."

Some of Odo's children had families unwilling or unable to care for them — 11 of the children are siblings from five families. Others came from institutions.

Odo never calls his children handicapped. "I consider labels to be cages," he said. "If I say 'challenged,' the sky's the limit."

That attitude motivates.

"HE WAS THE first man who opened my world," said son Konata, 28, a social worker and free-lance artist who lives in New York. "He was to me the ideal man...successful, very articulate...He loved people, he loved kids."

But Odo's no pushover.

"He expects a lot from us," said his 17-year-old son, Kefentse. "He taught me self-respect. He taught me how to love — you have to look at the person and see what they need...He's broadened (my) horizons. He's made a future for me."

The children share a tradition — African names beginning with 'k.' Odo composes a list of choices after "they tell me what they want their names to say about them or their potential."

Kojo's kids live in a rambling, white-frame former retirement home. Assigned chores are listed on a kitchen wall. The children rise and go to bed in shifts. Allowance varies according to age.

Odo is father, mother, teacher and friend. After work, he ignores the ringing of video games and the TV and maneuvers around wheelchairs and braces cluttering the hallway, reprimanding one son for acting up in school, a daughter for wearing a short skirt.

"People have told me I should have help," he said. "I want the children to feel it's a family, not an institution."

Odo wakes up about 5:30 a.m. and stuffs the first load of laundry into the machine. He spends about $1,600 a month to feed his huge family. Every three months, he buys a cow for slaughter.

Odo supports his family with his salary, money from speaking engagements and government subsidies paid for his children.

"I think every kid has the potential to do more than they have done," he said. "If we give them the vehicle...that's all I've been...they'll make use of it. Some will be doing it better than others. Some will be doing it quicker than others. All of them do it."

Couple flies high on banner mission

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Every day is a banner occasion to Jack and Minnie Dawson.

Their aim is to keep America clean and beautiful from coast to coast — a mission they can carry out without ever leaving downtown San Antonio.

The Dawsons are members of the Beautify San Antonio Association who volunteer to maintain the city's flags and flagpoles that grace the Patio of States at the Convention Center.

"When we took over two or three months ago, there were 18 flagpoles missing," Mrs. Dawson said. "We had to order new flags. That took a lot of research because a lot of the flags don't have a name on them. So we had to look in a book and learn which flag represented each state so we would know which ones to order."

Mrs. Dawson, 73, and her 75-year-old husband visit the patio on the northwest side of the Convention Center at least once each week and, frequently, two or three times.

Unfortunately, no matter how hard they try, they have noticed on each visit that something is missing. Usually that something is a state flag.

"We're told that visitors from out-of-state take the flags from their states as souvenirs," Jack Dawson said.

In addition to making sure each state has a banner waving under the Texas sky, Dawson also repairs broken flagpoles. Sometimes the 20-foot-tall poles are damaged by people who steal flags. He is thinking of replacing the aluminum poles with galvanized pipe because the flags get dirty when winds wrap them around the poles.

Rust also is a major problem.

Mrs. Dawson tried washing the banners, but she was not pleased with the results. Colors were not bright. Whites were dingy and remnants of rust still remained. The Dawsons are hoping new poles will solve the problem.

Otherwise, the couple believe the only solution is ordering new flags every six months — an expense that would be borne by the city.

The patio was a gift to the city from the beautify association.

Tree limbs also create a problem, as flags sometimes get caught in the branches and get ripped. Although the association provides upkeep for the patio, which is in the shape of a map of the United States, the city is responsible for maintaining the trees.

The Dawsons joined the beautification organization in 1978 after meeting Robert Schnabel, the brother of the association's late founder, O.P. Schnabel

It was O.P. Schnabel's widow, Lillian, who recently asked the Dawsons to maintain the patio.

Texan fiddles around with violins

By ROBERT CARTER

HALE CENTER, Texas (AP) — Charles Overstreet says a set of braces on his teeth changed his musical future.

"I was 17 and the dentist had put braces on my teeth and it was impossible to play the trumpet," says Overstreet, president of Mercy Missions Inc. "So I picked up the violin."

Within a year after those braces went on his teeth, the Dougherty native had won the junior division trophy of the fiddlers' contest here.

He went on to Texas A&M, where he graduated in 1973 as a doctor of veterinary medicine, practicing as a vet for 13 years before going into mission work full-time.

In 1975, his musical interest took another change of direction after a horse fell on him, breaking two bones in his leg in eight places. Since he was immobilized, Overstreet decided to whittle himself a fiddle.

"I couldn't work with crutches," he says. "So I bought enough wood to make five violins and the equipment to make it with.

"The violin is beautiful on the inside as it is on the outside," he explained. "The top board is the sound board and the finer the grain of the wood, the better the sound."

Overstreet said the best wood for making violins is spruce for the top board and curly maple for the sides and the back. "The best wood is spruce that is stressed by the forces of nature and age," he said. "A fast-growing pine is no good. It's got to be spruce.

Charles Overstreet of Hale Center learned to play the violin because of braces on his teeth and learned to make violins because of a broken leg.

"I use curly maple because a hard, dense wood would have a better resonance than a soft wood," he said. "The back mellows out the other part of the instrument. Basically, the back has a resonance due to the positioning of the sound post. The sound post is a peg that's moved vertically inside the violin to improve the sound quality."

Overstreet has made three violins so far and though he hasn't sold one yet, the violin maker has repaired many. "It helps the quality of an instrument to play it," he said. "The sound vibrations, if it's in tune, will improve the quality. Violins in the Smithsonian Institution would lose their value if they're never played."

The sides of the violin are the only parts that are bent, according to Overstreet. The rest is cut out or hewn from planks of wood.

Overstreet, 40, grew up with a bugle and by the time he was in high school he was playing the trumpet.

"I worked on one (violin) last year," said Overstreet. "I haven't had a lot of time to build one because the mission keeps me busy."

Children with cancer flourish at camp

SPRING, Texas (AP) — Horses gallop under the heat of a summertime Texas sun as laughing children learn to fish along a cool forest lake.

The scene is the same for those who go to summer camp every year, but for those who have cancer and leukemia the normal experience of camping often is a dream out of reach.

For children undergoing treatment for cancer at the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, the dream can be reached through The Rainbow Connection, a medically supervised camp for children ages 6-17 located in the wooded hills north of Houston.

The Rainbow Connection is the realization of a dream for Ruth Anne Harring, a nurse at UTMB who is the camp's founder and has been co-director for four years.

"Five years ago I went to a conference and heard about camps for special children," she said. "It touched a special chord in me, and I began exploring how I might bring the magic here. I wanted to create a place where they can go and be normal kids. I wanted them to be able to rediscover what it's like to be regular kids."

The children are like any others, Ms. Harring said.

"They need acceptance. They need friendship and they need love," she said. "Here they can get that because here the cancer does not make them different. They are all treated the same and the illness is downplayed.

"They paddle canoes. They shoot arrows. The kids come away from this camp with a remarkably more upbeat approach; an improved self-esteem and an increase in their abilities," Ms. Harring said.

Celeste Ybarra of Galveston, a camp counselor and nurse's assistant at UTMB, says the camp has been an important part of her life.

"I have been helping out here as a counselor for four years," she said. "The kids had needs that weren't being met and we are helping to meet them. Because the kids have cancer their parents are often overly protective and won't let them go to regular camp or play outdoors much.

"Many regular camps will discriminate against them because they falsely think the cancer is contagious," Ms. Ybarra said. "We give them an environment where they can play without worrying about cancer."

A physician and nurses are the grounds at all times and the children are watched closely to ensure their safety, Ms. Ybarra said. Most of the camp staff are medical personnel and all work in hospitals when not at camp.

"To see the kids faces light up, their glowing feelings of accomplishment, makes this all worthwhile," she said. "The important thing is that we treat them as people, not just as poor sick children."

With 23 adults and 12 children the campers seem to get special attention beyond that found at other camps. Some of the children receive one-on-one attention depending on the degree of their illness.

While at camp the youths receive music and art therapy from professionals in those fields. They enjoy swimming and other sports, campfires, beach parties, talent shows, hayrides and other traditional camp activities including a day at Astroworld and a night out for pizza.

The Rainbow Connection has a special agreement with the YMCA to use Camp Pinetree, its grounds, facilities and staff. Pamela Cadenhead, Camp Pinetree's director, says this is the YMCA's way of helping the special children of the community.

"They have special needs as we all have special needs. This is just one way of ours to try and meet those needs," she said.

Democrats stress 'competence, caring'

Dukakis has not ruled out the possibility of higher taxes if he is elected, but he has refused to allow any discussion of higher taxes in the platform.

DENVER (AP) — Democrats released a preliminary draft Friday of what could be the party's shortest platform in half a century: an eight-page document that promises to restore "competence, caring and incorruptibility" to Washington but avoids any talk of higher taxes, a freeze on Pentagon spending or a Palestinian homeland.

A 16-member drafting committee was making revisions and planned to vote late Friday on the 3,500-word draft. Jesse Jackson supporters were expected to voice objections to the platform's language on taxes and defense and foreign policy issues.

But the emphasis in the drafting committee was on points both the Michael Dukakis and Jackson camps agreed on, and any fights may be put off until the full 186-member Platform Committee meets in Denver on Saturday.

Rep. William H. Gray III of Pennsylvania, the chairman of the drafting committee, said, "Will there be differences? Yes. But will there be a sort of bloodletting? No...There will just be agreement to disagree."

Jackson, the only Democratic challenger who has yet to concede to Dukakis, has said previously he may take his fight over such issues as higher taxes on the rich and a Pentagon freeze to the floor of next month's Democratic convention in Atlanta.

But Eleanor Holmes Norton, Jackson's platform chief, told reporters, "There are no non-negotiable demands from the Jackson campaign." She praised the Dukakis forces' efforts to find common ground and said her side also was willing to bend.

Dukakis has not ruled out the possibility of higher taxes if he is elected, but he has refused to allow any discussion of higher taxes in the platform.

Norton said the Jackson strategy on taxes now is to press for specific commitments in the platform, such as a promise that no one should be denied the opportunity to attend college for financial reasons.

Dukakis has also rejected any mention of a Palestinian homeland.

"The fact that we may not get the words 'Palestinian state' does not mean that there are not ways to show greater recognition of the rights of Palestinians," Norton said.

The full Platform Committee will try to put the document in final form by Sunday.

The preliminary draft incorporated language on a dozen issues that Dukakis and Jackson representatives agreed to two weeks ago on Mackinac Island, Mich.

But in every significant area of dispute, Dukakis' preferences, not Jackson's, were embodied in the preliminary draft.

Ted Sorensen, the onetime John F. Kennedy speechwriter who penned an earlier platform "discussion paper" for Democratic Party chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr., said in an interview Friday, "I am the drafter of the present draft as well."

"It's fairly clear now this will be the shortest platform in over a hundred years," said Sorensen. "It will be a thematic, readable platform. It will not have the traditional, negative cast. Reagan, Republican, Bush — those words aren't even mentioned," said Sorensen.

Sorensen apparently overstated the case. The shortest platform in recent history was Franklin D. Roosevelt's two-page document in 1932.

In contrast, the 1984 platform ran to 58 pages and more than 40,000 words.

Computer thefts from SDI offices investigated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Department and FBI investigators are probing the thefts of two small computers on two consecutive nights from the Star Wars offices in the Pentagon, a tightly controlled security area.

Pentagon officials who asked not to be identified said Friday the theft of one privately owned computer and one government-owned computer occurred two months ago and appeared to be "an inside job."

The thefts did not compromise any classified programs, but were troubling because of the emphasis placed on physical security by the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, the Pentagon unit responsible for the Star Wars anti-missile program, the sources added.

The thief or thieves entered the facility by sabotaging the security system protecting the Star Wars office, local television station WJLA reported Friday. Videotape cameras failed to record the theft because they had not been loaded — a common occurrence in the high security office, the ABC affiliate, citing unidentified Pentagon investigators for the information.

Maj. Bill O'Connell, a Pentagon spokesman, said in a statement that "one privately owned stand-alone personal computer was stolen from offices within the SDIO's Pentagon complex in early April."

"Since that theft, the Defense Criminal Investigative Service and the FBI have been conducting an investigation. The investigation to date leads us to conclude that no national security information was compromised in any way."

Late Friday, the spokesman released a second statement, saying agents were investigating "a potentially related matter (involving) the disappearance of an IBM compatible AT class personal computer...from the SDIO computer training center."

"No classified materials of any sort are used in the training facility."

O'Connell declined to elaborate, but a source said the thefts occurred over the weekend of April 9 and 10.

The first theft, involving a Commodore personal computer owned by a "mid-level manager" in the kinetic energy program, occurred between Friday evening and Saturday morning. The second theft occurred between Saturday evening and Sunday morning, the official said.

Kinetic energy weapons are designed to destroy enemy missiles through the sheer force of impact.

According to the source, investigators believe an SDIO employee with the proper door-security card and clearances entered the basement complex through the main doors, where a guard was on duty, but then left with the computers through another security door that is under television surveillance but not guarded.

The Star Wars office complex is one of the few areas of the Pentagon building that is off-limits to those without a special security pass in addition to the normal building pass.

Time to quit asking machines to make media decisions

Computers don't have all the answers. Cost per thousand is not a magic talisman. You have to factor in some imponderables, because what do machines know about human emotions like trust and believability? Asked in which medium they found the advertising most believable, more consumers said "newspapers" than the other four major media combined:*

Believe in newspapers. They can work marketing magic.

Now Pick.
It's tough when they look so similar. And so with apartments. Many communities look similar, but looks can be deceiving. So how do you pick the good apple in the bunch?
Begin by looking at a Balcor Community. Saddle Club Apartments have been individually designed for their location. And developed to be worthy of the highest honor you can give it - to call it home.
But there's more...something at the core of each Balcor Community that can't be seen at all. And that's a passion for service. Saddle Club management professionals will go out of their way to ensure that your neighborhood is what you expect it to be. The very best.
So look beyond the first blush on the apple. And you'll pick Saddle Club every time.
Expect the Best.
