ROOSEVELT ON WAY TO WEST COAST TODAY

ABOARD PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SPECIAL TRAIN, Enroute to Seattle, Sept. 23.—President Roosevelt's 10-car special train sped across the prairies today in a hurried transcontinental journey which may determine whether congress will be summoned in a special session next month.

Consideration of the problems created by associate justice Hugo L. Black's alleged membership in the Ku Klux Klan probably will await the president's return to Washington, but some indication of popular sentiment in the Black controversy may be had as Mr. Roosevelt begins in the western half of the country, to meet the people.

Church Foundation Planned at Dallas

DALLAS, Sept. 23.—Dr. Glenn Flynn of Dallas said today that steps toward establishing a Methodist Foundation of Texas would be taken at a meeting on Oct. 8, of the arrangements committee.

At that time a charter will be drawn up to include the basic principles and goals of the foundation, which Dr. Flynn described as not a money-raising organization, but one to advise and direct persons seeking to leave money to Methodist institutions or to make donations or gifts.

Sen. Holbrook to Answer Allred

AUSTIN, Sept. 23.—Sen. T. J. Holbrook of Galveston, chairman of a state senate economy committee, will reply to Gov. James V. Allred's tax message to the state legislature the day after Allred speaks.

If the governor's message is delivered immediately after the opening of the session at noon Monday, Holbrook will reply in the senate Tuesday. If the governor delays his message until Tuesday Holbrook will reply Wednesday.

"It is the governor's right to place his views before the legislature first," Holbrook said.

Economy Body to Have Report for Special Session

AUSTIN, Texas.—The caustic pen of State Senator T. J. Holbrook of Galveston, chairman, will write a senate committee report of its investigations into state extravagance and waste. Holbrook will draft its findings and recommendations to the legislature.

Members of the committee have their choice of signing their names with Holbrook or they may attach supplements giving their individual views. A majority will sign with Holbrook.

The committee's work will not end when the special session of the legislature is opened Sept. 27. The hearings and investigations will continue in order that a complete report may be made to the next legislature. Frankly, the members do not expect immediate results from many of their disclosures.

"We are trying to arouse the public to a realization of conditions," Sen. Albert Stone, Brenham, said. "Then the abuses will be corrected easily."

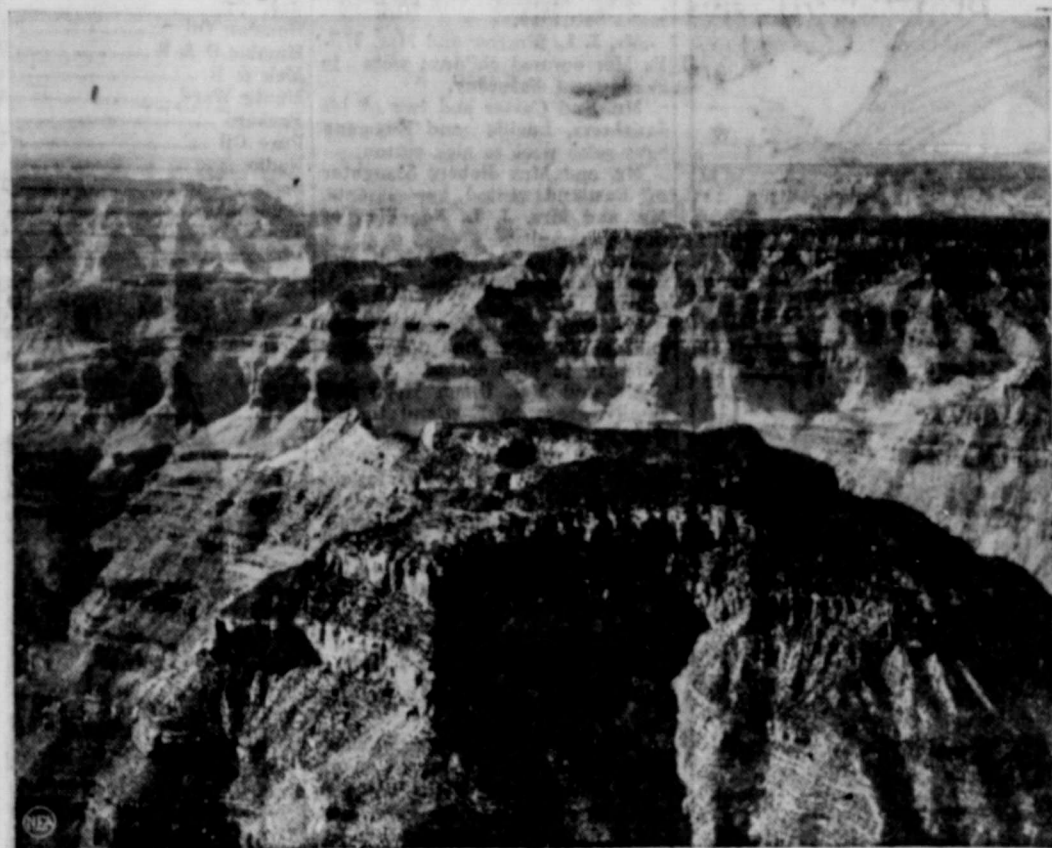

Although in comparative amount involved, committee members believe that the disclosure of a proposed airplane purchase for the state highway department is one of the most effective bits of information that has come from its hearings.

A few years ago there was a statewide protest against the cost of "government on wheels," when the amount of money used by state employees in travel was disclosed.

The committee's stress on the airplane incident was believed to indicate the group's conclusion that the public might be as averse to "government on wings."

From a practical standpoint, the highway department might be able to use an airplane effectively, but its failure to reveal the contemplated purchase laid it open to attack.

Shiva Temple, Where Scientists Seek 'New World'

On this verdant island in the sky, 4500 feet above the bottom of picturesque Grand Canyon, a party of scientists led by Dr. Harold E. Anthony of the American Museum of Natural History, searched for animal life which might show that the lofty temple was a "new world." This unusual aerial view shows at right the tortuous sandstone cliffs which it took five hours to ascend and seven hours to descend. Across the temple's heavily wooded terrain the scientists located their camp on the edge near the cleared spot in the center foreground. The first animals they trapped or shot all appeared related to specimens common to the vicinity. Pioneering prospectors scoffed at the "new world" theory, contending that animals had gone back and forth from the island to the mainland for centuries. To support their contentions, they cited that coyote tracks, but no coyotes were found, that deer horns, but no deer were discovered.

Cloudy Appearance Of Water Caused By Air In Lines

Announcement was made here today that the go-devil, which is used to clean out the main water line from Lake Hagaman to the standpipe on Eastland Hill, had been run through the main again as an additional cleaning process.

Since the go-devil was started through the main considerable air has collected in the lines, which has caused a milky appearance to the water. This cloudiness disappears after the water has settled for a few minutes and the air allowed to escape.

Fire plugs throughout the town are to be opened Saturday, it was stated today, in order that all air might be flushed from the water lines, after which the cloudiness should disappear from the water. Many water consumers were of the opinion that the color was caused by impurities in the water, which was not the case, it was pointed out today, and after the lines are flushed to release the air the appearance of the water will be back to normal.

FIRST BAPTISTS WILL BURN LAST NOTE AT HOMECOMING SERVICE

The First Baptist Church of Ranger will have a big homecoming and thanksgiving service Sunday of this week, when the final notes on the $125,000 church building will be publicly burned at the morning service.

The thanksgiving and homecoming will take the form of an all-day service, with dinner on the grounds at noon and services in the morning, afternoon and evening. The public, and particularly the former members of the church, are invited to attend and to bring a basket lunch.

The days services will begin with Sunday School in the morning, and Dr. J. B. Tidwell, president of the Baptist General Convention of Texas and head of the Bible Department at Baylor University for the past 28 years, will deliver the morning service. It will be at this service that the notes will be burned.

In the afternoon seven new deacons of the church will be ordained. They are W. A. Lewis, Dr. R. H. Hodges, John Tibbels, Frank Hanes, E. H. Ward, Charles Russell and Carl Page.

Rev. W. H. Johnson, pastor of the church at the time the new building was completed and dedicated, will be present and will have a big part on the program, preaching one of the sermons, as will Rev. G. W. Thomas, for seven years pastor of the church. These two and the present pastor, Rev. Charles T. Tally, Jr., are the only pastors who have served the church regularly since it was built.

Sunday night the installation of the church officers and teachers of the Sunday School classes will be held in the final service of the day.

Rev. Tally today issued a special invitation to all who can possibly do so to attend the services Sunday, and an urgent invitation to all former members, who are not two residents of the city, was issued. The service is planned in order that many of these former members might be back to help rejoice with the present members upon the occasion.

The city equalization board, composed of C. D. Woods, S. P. Roon and A. J. Ratliff, will meet, beginning Friday, from 9 a. m. to 12 noon and from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

All who receive postcard notices should meet with the board in order that a fair rendition on their city taxes can be maintained, it was stated today by city officials and members of the board.

Notices are being sent to a large number of taxpayers, and their cooperation is urged by the board in order that the work may be completed as rapidly as possible.

BULLDOGS TO INVADE BUCKAROO STADIUM IN GAME ON FRIDAY NIGHT

The Ranger Bulldogs will open their 1937 Oil Belt football campaign against the mighty Breckenridge Buckaroos at Buckaroo stadium Friday night, beginning at 8 o'clock.

Coach Eck Curtis, after his team suffered a 14 to 7 defeat at the hands of Paschal High School of Fort Worth, is reported to have made some changes in his lineup that are designed to give strength to the middle section of his line, over which most of the Paschal gains were made.

Sleepy Harris, six foot two-inch end, has been shifted to center and Thorpe, starting center in the Paschal game, has been moved to guard. The change is expected to strengthen the weak guard positions on the team.

At the same time Coach Wright and Jennings have been working out their charges in hard daily grinds that are designed to work out the rough spots that developed during the Strawn game. Some minor changes may also be seen in the Bulldog lineup Friday night in order to strengthen the team.

The Bulldogs go into the game as underdogs, with the powerful Breckenridge crew expected to win, but the Bulldogs are just as determined as the Buckaroos could possibly be, and are expecting to throw a number of surprises into the ranks of their ancient foes. Over confidence on the part of the Buckaroos and determination of the part of the Bulldogs is reported from the two rival camps, but Coach Eck Curtis is not taking the Bulldog game too lightly, and the Ranger coaches are keeping their charges inspired to put up the best battle of the season.

A large crowd is anticipated for the game, with approximately 2,500 as the estimated attendance.

Snyder of Ranger, who was killed in an automobile accident in Denver, Colo., will be conducted Saturday afternoon at the First Baptist church of Ranger, with Rev. H. H. Stephens, pastor of the church, conducting the services, assisted by Dr. L. E. Gray, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

A squad of men from Company 1, 142nd Infantry, Texas National Guard, will attend the burial services at Evergreen cemetery for a military burial. The decedent was an ambulance driver in the United States Army at the time of his death.

His mother, Mrs. H. J. Lehman, and a sister, Mrs. H. C. Somers, both of Denver, Colo., will accompany the body to Ranger, arriving at 11:12 Friday morning. The body will remain at the family home until time for the services.

Injunction Halts Hiring of Negro Police In Dallas

DALLAS, Sept. 23.—An injunction issued by District Judge Tom Hall at Waxahachie, caused postponement today of proposed civil service examinations for negro policemen.

George W. Owens, Dallas lumberman and political leader, obtained the injunction at midnight last night from Judge Hall after withdrawing a similar suit in the court of Judge Sarah Hughes, who had postponed a hearing on Owens' complaint until late today.

Owens contended the proposal of Dallas city councilmen to hire negro policemen would violate the 14th amendment to the Constitution.

Senator Sees a Federal Oil Tax

AUSTIN, Sept. 23.—State Senator Joe Hill of Henderson, whose district includes much of the great East Texas oil field, today sounded a warning against a possible federal oil tax.

"A federal oil tax is a real peril," Hill said. "There is a well defined sentiment among the 40 non-producing states to impose a tax on oil to wipe out the federal deficit of $37,000,000,000. I am thoroughly opposed to any such movement but there is grave danger of it unless states preempt that field of taxation."

These included a parade of many sections, including a band section, float section, pet section, oil field transportation section with both teams and trucks, a kid's float and bicycle section, a school section with the pep squad, choral clubs and rhythm bands marching, a pioneer section and others that might be added.

"Our answer to the imperious Japanese government warnings is this: 'Go to hell.' Japanese paper, please copy."

Sport Glances. By Grayson

BY RICHARD McCANN
NEA Service Staff Writer

PART of Art Rooney's amazing race track winnings from New York bookies will build a mission church in China. . . . The Pittsburgh sportsman, you know, has a brother, Mike, who is a member of the Franciscan Order of the Catholic Church and when Father Mike told Art that he wished that some day he would be able to build a church over there. . . . So Art, who won a roll so big that a greyhound couldn't jump over it, peeled off $50,000 and sent it across the seas the other day.

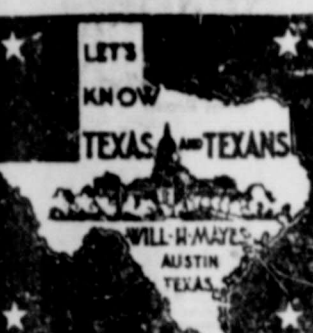

The Federal Writers' Project of the Works Progress Administration has discovered that it was once against the law to play golf or basketball, fence, ice skate, bowl, or use the shuffleboard. . . . The game of nine pins was banned in New York because of the excessive gambling by the players. . . . But they read the law carefully and jumped through the loophole by adding another pin. . . . That's how there comes to be 10 pins in the game today.

CHAHMED, no doubt, you will be to hear that the colonists of Newport are making headway in their plans for a super-exclusive race track for only the ultra-ultras up the way. . . . For three years now the ants, who think that such an establishment would ruin Newport, have been successful in their fight against a track. . . . But now the blue-blooded ants are going to get around the ants by building the track across the river in Bristol or Warren. . . . It seems, according to Mrs. Dame Rumor, who sure does get around, that Mr. William H. Vanderbilt will be president, there won't be any stock sale, attendance will be limited to 4000 at the most, and admittance will be by card only. . . . It was first feared that the veddy, veddy stern folks behind the movement would insist on slashing your wrist at the turnstiles to see if the blood ran blue. But they have relented some and all you'll need to show will be a towel that your great-grandpaw tumbled from one of the cabins on the Mayflower. . . .

RAY FABIANI, New York's new rassing promoter, is the son of a doctor, tried to follow in his dad's footsteps, gave up medicine for music, studied the violin in Europe, played with the Chicago Opera Company, and owns a Stradivarius, one of the most highly prized of violins, which goes to show that Jack Curley's successor won't be operating on just a shoestring. . . . During the Giant-Cub series the other day, a New York paper ran a flock of pictures of Billy Herman showing why the Chicago second baseman was the best in the league. . . . He made two errors that afternoon to cause his club's defeat.

Which recalls the time that a New York paper had a huge drawing of Babe Ruth shackled by old age, wobbling on time-worn legs, and expressing the belief that the old Bambino was finally done for. . . . That afternoon he hit two homers, a triple, and a double. . . . And the paper, unable to substitute the cartoon in such short order, simply put this headline over it: "This was a good cartoon—until 4 o'clock today."

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters, including the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—There is in the United States a certain publisher who sold 10,351,203 copies of his various publications during the past fiscal year, for $813,000. He has one best seller on his list that has sold 2,130,182 copies, another that has sold 1,735,066.

You'd think such a publisher would be quite a factor in the publishing field, wouldn't you? And you'd be right, too. It was the U. S. Government Printing Office which sold the 10,000,000 copies. "Infant Growth Record," and "Classroom Care" were the best sellers. . . .

TODAY, about 5500 people work for the GPO, a fabulously efficient production machine that is about to get a new plant costing almost $6,000,000. It is a $20,000,000-a-year business, this printing and publishing plant, and some idea of the amount of work turned out can be had from these items listed in the current annual report: A little matter of 7,000,000 copies of a Baby Bond booklet for the Treasury Department. Printing, punching, and packaging (within a month's time) of 31,830,000 cards for the Bureau of the Census. Printing, perforating, and pasting into sets 8,750,000 forms for the WPA. Printing nearly two billion postal cards. Printing $870,100 worth of the Congressional Record for the year. (This runs up to a million some years.) Printing 17,000,000 copies of various documents for the Agriculture Department, and 27,000,000 more for the AAA. And another 8 1/2 millions for the FHA and 9 1/2 millions for the Treasury. . . . THE GPO also manufactures a great many of its own supplies, like printers' rollers, and it produced in 1936 some 360,246 pounds of ink, furnishing hundreds of thousands of pounds of ink, paste, glue, and similar supplies to other government departments. . . . But the government's activities in the publishing field are not confined to mechanical reproduction of words. It is now producing the words, too. By Sept. 1, at least 5,000,000 words, the product of the Federal Writers' Project, were on their way to publication in about 30 volumes. . . . Within three months there will be 50 volumes, and when the whole project is carried through there will have been printed more than 250 books containing 20 million federally produced words. . . . Not all these books, you understand, will be actually printed by the government. Many of the local guidebooks written by WPA authors have local sponsorship, and well-known publishers have taken many of them for the actual printing. . . . But, in the publishing field, the government is daily occupying a more impressive position.

Cilly shook her head. "The Buckminster exchange is in Flatbush," she reminded him. She had an idea whose number it was.

"Party named A. G. Harmon," he remarked to Cilly.

But he didn't go into the bedroom. To Cilly, he said:

"I wonder if the young lady left any personal information. . . . any letters, for example. Or an address book. Might find some relatives or friends in that whom you don't know about."

Cilly went over to the bureau. "Amy kept all of her things in here," she offered. "I'll look through it."

She opened the top right drawer. Amy's black pocketbook caught her eye. She handed it to the sergeant.

Dolan went through the bag, glanced at each item and laying it on the bureau. A compact and lipstick. Five dollars and some change. A bankbook (He noticed that it showed a balance of over two hundred dollars, made up of small, fairly regular deposits. That was not unusual for a girl with a good job.) A booklet on the care of a permanent wave. A timetable. . . .

HE laid the empty bag on the bureau and looked more closely at the timetable. Cilly looked at it too, a little fearfully.

"What's this?" he asked. "Southern Pacific timetable. Was Miss Kerr planning any vacation?"

"Southern Pacific," Cilly thought. "Why, that goes to. . . . With elaborate carelessness, she said: 'Not that I know of. I suppose we all consider a trip to Hollywood at one time or another.'"

She wasn't really sure that the Southern Pacific went to Utah. "Hollywood, eh? Well, that might be. . . . No! Here's some place she's checked off. Bluefields, Bluefields, Utah. Ever hear her mention that?"

Cilly's eyes widened. Her heart quickened, but she made a desperate effort to appear casual.

"She never said anything to me about Utah," she answered. "But the truth, Amy never had mentioned it. But the clipping was from a Bluefields paper. And Jim's postcard, so positively close. What would Dolan say if he found it under her pillow? He would know that she had deliberately hidden it."

But fortunately Dolan looked no further in the bedroom. He put the timetable into his inner coat pocket. Cilly knew that he would get in touch with the police at Bluefields, Utah. He'd check up with them just as he planned to check at Interlaken, New Hampshire.

What would be the outcome? What mystery would they discover in Amy Kerr's past? Would it affect Jim Kerrigan in any way? Cilly felt certain that it couldn't—yet Jim was on his way to Utah this very minute. Her head spun with the ever-increasing questions which popped into her mind.

SERGEANT DOLAN was back in the living room.

He walked over to the bridge table, looked down at it. Glanced at the score pad critically.

"Who kept score?" he asked carefully.

"Harry Hutchins, why?"

"Cheated his opponents out of two hundred. Should be 1440 here instead of 1240," he grinned.

Even as Cilly considered the pettiness of Harry Hutchins, she marveled at Sergeant Dolan's quickness in catching the error. Nothing would escape the man. Not the slightest thing.

The bridge-table had been set up against the divan, with three smaller chairs at the other sides. Amy had been sitting on the divan. Dolan pulled the table out. He picked up one of the cushions from the divan.

"Who sat here?" he asked. "Amy sat there. She and I were partners. I sat over here."

Dolan reached down and picked something up, something which had been tucked under the cushion.

"She did, eh? What's this little note? More cheating?"

It was just a scrap of paper torn from the score-pad. Probably the top sheet with some old scores on it. Cilly thought, which they had neglected to remove.

Then she saw that it was nothing so casual to Sergeant Dolan. He frowned darkly as he read it. He looked at Cilly sharply as he held the note out to her:

"Who wrote this?" he demanded.

Cilly read it. As she did so, the color left her face. She felt as if she had been struck a surprising blow. Her knees trembled. A sudden nausea overcame her. "Scrambled words on the paper said: 'Meet me up on the roof after we break up here.' And they had definitely, undeniably been written by Jim Kerrigan."

"Who wrote it?" Sergeant Dolan repeated.

He looked back at the score-pad, as Cilly hesitated.

"It wasn't Hutchins, because this is his writing here. So it must have been the other young man. Your friend Kerrigan. Isn't that so, Miss Pierce?"

"I would seem so," Cilly admitted, weakly. She sat down in a chair. Her legs refused to support her any longer. She was frightened—wildly frightened.

"So that's it!" Sergeant Dolan went on brutally. "Mr. Kerrigan was up on the roof with the young lady. Now the question is, what were they doing up there? Was it a friendly visit—or did they have a quarrel? Doesn't look so good, does it, Miss Pierce?"

Cilly did not answer.

"You're quite sure," Sergeant Dolan asked, "that last night was the first time Kerrigan and Miss Kerr met? Sure they didn't know each other before?"

"I'm sure they didn't," Cilly replied. Yet even as the words left her lips, she remembered the sudden light that had dawned in Amy's eyes as she met Jim.

"The housewife moves the equivalent of six tons of brick each time she does the ironing for an average family." Fred Maytag II of Newton, Iowa, pointed out to Texas Maytag Managers at a convention and school held recently in Dallas.

Mr. Maytag, vice president and sales manager for the Maytag Company, Newton, Iowa, which is the largest manufacturer of washing machines in the United States, introduced to the Texas Organization, six new model Ironers at a price to meet every purse. He said, "We are now completely in the home laundry business, as the Ironer solves the other half of the laundry problem."

P. T. A. President Hears
Complete Reports from Active Committees

Thirty members made up of parents, teachers and visitors attended the opening meeting of Young School Parent-Teacher association meeting held at the school Tuesday afternoon presided over by the president for 1937-38, Mrs. Arthur Murrell. An executive session called at promptly 2:30 o'clock was held in the office of Principal Hill, prior to the program which presented as guest speaker Superintendent of Ranger public school, W. T. Walton, whose subject was "The Importance of P. T. A.'s in Schools." Climaxing his splendid talk Mr. Walton suggested that some measure of safety be executed this year and as a result the president named Mrs. J. J. Kelly, Mrs. Stanley McAnelly and Mrs. S. P. Boon, as chairmen, who are to report at the coming meeting two weeks hence.

Mrs. J. E. Jacobs, a past president of the association and now president of First District of Congress Parent-Teacher association was also included on program and emphasized well her topic, "Aims and Purposes of P. T. A." Before any one individual can be of genuine help in making their association good and keeping them so, she must create for herself an educational ideal and comprehend the objectives toward which our most far sighted educators are working. Through-out the summer the standing committees have continued their work and those who offered summerized reports were: Program committee chairman, Mrs. T. J. Anderson, who with her committee had ready the year books which were distributed. Membership chairman, Mrs. Dan Neville, hospital, Mrs. S. P. Boon. Welfare, Mrs. Magahagee. House committee chairman, Mrs. Pleas E. Moore, Congress publication; Mrs. F. E. Jacobs, budget for the year was given by Mrs. C. E. Maddocks and accepted by the body, magazine chairman, Mrs. Stanley McAnelly.

With the full cooperation as indicated at the opening meeting another red letter year will be added to that of last year when the membership was responsible for one of the most successful years since its organization.

Employment and Payrolls Shows An Increase In August

AUSTIN, Texas.—The number of workers in Texas industry and trade during August was moderately larger than during the like month last year, and the total payroll of these workers was substantially above that of August last year, a report by the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas said.

"Reports from over 1,800 Texas establishments show a total of 91,282 workers, an increase of 7.9 per cent over August last year," it was stated. "Total weekly payrolls of these establishments was $2,335,941, an increase of 23.9 per cent over the corresponding week last year."

Cities in which the gains in both employment and payroll were above the average gain for the State were Amarillo, Denson, El Paso, Houston, Port Arthur and Wichita Falls.

Reports Gas Process
Aids Fruit Ripening

ST. PAUL, Minn.—A process for ripening fruits in half the usual time has been announced by Dr. R. R. Harvey, plant physiologist at the University of Minnesota.

The process—using ethylene, a non-poisonous, odorless gas—not only speeds ripening but "imparts a sweeter flavor to the fruit so treated," Harvey said. The process benefits growers in two ways—he said—gives evenly ripened fruit for early marketing at higher prices, insures sounder products.

Diplomats, Educators Turn to Radio

Representatives of foreign governments see Philco radios prepared for new uses. Czechoslovakia will keep all diplomats in touch with home government by radio, and Uruguay will use them for public education on wide scale. Left to right: Walter S. Crammer and Myron Whitney, Philco; Charles R. Toothaker, Consul of Czechoslovakia; Dr. M. E. Moreno, Consul of Uruguay.

An American product, the Philco radio, just has received international recognition as a medium of education, and of important governmental business.

The Government of Uruguay has installed 220 Philco radio receivers in the public schools of that progressive South American country in order that the Government of teachers and students.

Czechoslovakia has placed short-wave Philco receivers in the headquarters of its diplomatic representatives in nineteen countries in order that the Government may have private and rapid communication by radio with its diplomatic corps.

Representatives of the two governments recently visited the Philco plant in Philadelphia with Walter S. Crammer, Director of Foreign Trade for Philco, and watched the last of the allotment being assembled.

Dr. M. E. Moreno, Consul of

Uruguay, pointed out that the use of radio was a step forward in education in his country. Uruguay, he said, had spent more on schools than on armament every year and never had had a revolution.

The reorganized Uruguayan system for using the radio for education makes use of government operated broadcasting stations. Three kinds of programs will be sent out, those to children in the classrooms, those to teachers in special pedagogical lectures and finally the pupils' parents. The latter represents a trail-blazing experiment in enlisting the co-operation of parents in the teaching of the youth.

Charles R. Toothaker, consul of Czechoslovakia, believes that the tying of the diplomatic representatives of that country to the home government by radio will be as successful in emergency matters as well as a general daily utility that it will be widely adopted.

PEEPING THRU The KNOTHOLE

WITH BILL MAYES

P. O. Hatley jumped us out last night because we had had so little to say about the Bull dogs in the past three days, but we pleaded other duties, including the 20th anniversary homecoming, that had kept us occupied. However we have clipped a few cocky and optimistic statements from the Breckenridge paper that shows the Buckaroos, or at least some, one in Breckenridge is confident of victory or is trying to pep up the Buckaroos. The clippings:

"The Bulldogs had better watch out, for the Buckaroos intend to snatch them baldheaded and pluck out their teeth. Some have already said the Bulldogs are toothless."—From which it seems that if any of the Bulldogs have storebought teeth they had better leave them at home Friday night. That baldheaded business might be overcome by keeping helmets on, or shaving heads. Anyway if the Buckaroos get to snatching hair and teeth that might be a good opportunity for someone to make a touchdown or a first down or something.

And, in speaking of the 14 to 7 Paschal defeat, we find the same writer says "They knew that the blame was on them. Ranger, you had better be prepared." But the warning is superfluous. The Bulldogs have been preparing for more than a month, and since the Strawn game have been working doubly hard, so we hear, and Coach Wright and Coach Jennings got that preparing idea several weeks ago. However all suggestions are appreciated, no doubt.

Coch Curtis sounds another note, however. In another column we find that "Curtis isn't selling Ranger short. He says they are really pegged up over their team over there this year and believe they're on the way back. It's hard to beat a team like that, but if the Buckaroos are the better team, they'll do it."—That sounds more like Curtis. He can do more worrying over one ball game than anyone we ever saw, and we never remember him going into a game when he wasn't prepared for the worst.

Benny Combs, Buckaroo tackle, who weighs somewhere around 220 pounds, is reported to be the mainstay of the Buckaroo line and one who will give any team plenty of trouble. But a good big man can be blocked by a better man of less tonnage, as has been demonstrated on a number of occasions, so if the blocking is vicious enough on the part of the Ranger linemen Combs can be kept out of many plays. We say "if" because it takes plenty of good blocking to halt a man like that.

Anyway the only wager we would make on the game would be that the Bulldogs will put out everything they have to win and will, no doubt, make many Ranger fans proud of them before the game is over. Are there any takers?

'Experts' Chided By Eastland Fans

Eastland High school football fans will have you believe the Mavericks are going further than "experts" predicted after seeing the Brownwood-Eastland game last week.

The fans are waiting until Friday night when Eastland plays Big Spring for the proof of their belief. While Eastland was losing 13 to 6 last week to Brownwood the Big Spring Steers were losing 13 to 2 to Wink, Class B team.

Preparations for the game were viewed Thursday as satisfactory by Coach E. B. Grady, Jr., of the Mavericks.

Carrying Pistol Charge Is Filed

Constable Aaron Bryant of Gorman filed Thursday in county court a charge of carrying a pistol against W. A. Graves.

Bryant stated the charge was in connection with the disappearance of a pistol from the home of Clyde Capers Wednesday at Gorman. He stated a charge of theft was filed previously in the justice of peace court at Gorman.

Dr. M. E. Davis to Preach On Sunday

Dr. M. E. Davis of Howard Payne College will give his first of four lectures at Central Baptist Church Friday 7:30 p. m.

Every member of the church is urged to hear him and the public in general has a cordial invitation to come.

Black Controversy Recalls How Quick KKK Faded Out

AUSTIN, Texas.—Wide interest aroused in the status of Hugo Black, associate justice of the United States Supreme Court, has turned the Texas political spotlight again on something that apparently had been forgotten—The Ku Klux Klan.

Belief is increasing in Austin that the Klan again will become an issue in the 1938 state political campaign.

A spirited fight against the Klan in the heyday of its success launched a little-known district attorney, Dan Moody, into one of the most spectacular political careers Texas has seen. Moody, one of the first Texas officials to wage a relentless prosecution of mob whippings, became famous almost overnight. He followed an easy victory in a campaign for attorney general by a successful campaign that made him governor.

How quickly the Klan issue had faded was shown by his defeat of Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson, who had been elected as an anti-Klan candidate when Moody was made attorney general. Defeat of Earle B. Mayfield, Sr., for re-election to

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Many people will remember that the entire railroad system of the country became "public business" during a period of the World War, and that the government came within an ace of taking it over on a permanent basis when the war was over.

But not so many will remember that the government embarked at that time on a transportation system of its own, which is still operating, still the subject of controversy as it was then, and today a tremendous factor in the transportation system of the country.

This is the Inland Waterway Corporation, familiarly known as the Federal Barge Lines. Last year it operated water-transportation lines on the Mississippi, Missouri, Illinois, and Warrior River systems. It operates the barges and terminals, and even runs a railroad connecting the Warrior River system with the Birmingham steel district.

EVER since the government was first established, it has poured millions of dollars into widening, deepening, and keeping open the rivers for transport. Nobody ever objected to this except an occasional taxpayer, but it was not until 1918 that the logical step was taken.

The corporation was formed, and Congress directed the War Department to carry on this shipping enterprise "in the same manner, and to the same extent, as if such transportation facilities were privately owned and operated."

Stock to the amount of $12,000,000 was issued and sold to the treasury, which holds it.

An additional $3,000,000 has been appropriated to buy more stock, and this has been available since 1932. But, reports Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, the very able head of the Federal Barge Line, "it is apparent that the corporation will never need it," and he recommends that it be turned back to the general funds of the treasury.

PROPOSALS are now being made to extend the barge line service to the Savannah and Columbia rivers.

All this is, of course, highly displeasing to the railroads, who are being helped by various other federal agencies at the same time this federal agency is clipping their potential revenues. "It has cost the taxpayer $46,000,000," the Association of Railway Executives complained a few years ago, stressing the fact that the barge line, free of heavy taxes and burdensome regulations, is a most unfair competitor of hard-pressed railroads.

But on the other hand, in the current report of the IWC, a saving of $2,050,000 to the public is claimed for 1935 as "the difference between charges paid on traffic routed via the barge lines and what the charges would have been if the traffic had moved by rail."

Here, then, regardless of worth or right or wrong, exerting a definite effect on labor and transport on the rivers, on shipping costs, and on railroad competition rates, is a huge transportation system run by the government. And that is just one item.

NEXT: A publisher who sold 10,000,000 copies of his publications last year and has one best-seller that has sold more than 2,000,000. Who is he? Your own Uncle Samuel!

THE United States Senate was attributed largely to the belief of voters that he had first been elected by Klan support.

With these examples in mind, prospective candidates for office in the 1938 election would like to know to what extent the Black incident will fan the political fire again in Texas.

Of Texas is making a noise. The noise maker is Dr. C. P. Boner, professor of physics. He doesn't make the noises just for fun. He's calibrating the sounds.

The practical purpose is to simplify the production of wind instruments. It is so important that the federal trade commission is sponsoring the tests.

To avoid echoes and reverberations, tests are made outdoors. Two cranes are used. One supports the noise maker that is being tested. The other supports equipment that calibrates the sounds in a huge electrical device.
