Petition circulating to change ambulance service decision

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The decision by the Big Spring City Council to award the city's ambulance service contract to the Big Spring Fire Department last week has several residents upset and questioning the city's motives.

Also, a petition is being circulated to present to the council to force the council to put the issue to a vote of the people of Big Spring.

During last week's two and a half hour City Council debate on the ambulance service, several residents and American Medical Transport (AMT) personnel spoke on behalf of the current ambulance service in Big Spring.

Paramedic James Futrell, currently the longest running AMT employee, said he moved to Big Spring from North Carolina and he plans to stay regardless of what happens.

"I make sure employees stay as current as possible (updated training) because I train them," Futrell said. "I stay current on all the trade journals and magazines."

He added he has rewritten AMT's protocol and that AMT has advanced and adjusted its service.

Futrell said, "We've saved many lives just by advancing our skills. We have something new and better in our protocols every 90 days."

He added there's a lot more involved with running the ambulance service than people know.

Stephen Stephens, AMT's EMS Supervisor added during the debate that the council should listen to the taxpayers on this issue and pointed to the petition that was presented to Acting City Manager Tom Decell.

According to AMT, the 450 signatures in support of it keeping the ambulance service were gathered in one day.

Dr. Bruce Cox also spoke out in favor of AMT saying, "I think the current system has done a very good job for the last seven years. They have produced. I'd rather a private enterprise take the risks. Let's pay for the system we already have."

Less than two weeks after the council's decision, employees of AMT and concerned residents of Big Spring and Howard County have begun a petition drive, in hopes of having 5,000 signatures to present to the council at its April 11 meeting, to force the council to put the issue to a vote of the people of Big Spring.

Stephens said, "I feel like what I had to say was said at the meeting last week, but the current petition was started by employees (AMT) and concerned citizens around Big Spring. They're the ones who decided to shoot for 5,000 signatures."

Change of venue denied

Judge Robert Moore III has denied a request by defense attorney Angel Nunez to move the capital murder trial of 17-year-old Levy Lee Edmondson Jr.

Moore announced his decision this morning but said he was unable to comment any further.

"We're gratified that we will be able to have the trial in Howard County. We believe the residents of Howard County will bend over backwards to give any defendant a fair trial," commented District Attorney Rick Hamby. Nunez did not immediately return a telephone call to the Herald.

Moore did say unless a continuance is filed by Nunez, the trial is still set for May 8.

Edmondson is being held without bond in the Howard County Jail facing murder charges in death of DPS Trooper Troy Hogue. Edmondson allegedly shot Hogue at close range when the officer was questioning the suspect after a one-vehicle accident.

If convicted, he could face life in prison without parole or death by lethal injection.

Avery appointed to aging conference

By CARLTON JOHNSON

Hard rain heavily damages mall

■ Teen Board activities still on

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The violent storm that passed through Big Spring Monday night, producing a possible tornado on radar, caused some severe damage to the Big Spring Mall.

According to Mall manager Tammy Watt, the mall closed early Tuesday, almost all of the skylights in the mall were broken, and several of the businesses in the mall are feeling the residual effects (leaks) of damage to the mall roof.

Watt said, "We have some pretty heavy damage out here. The Hallmark store was hit really hard. They're trying to get their insurance adjusters out here now."

She added an emergency roofing crew was due out this morning to begin repairs to the roof.

"We're trying to get things under control, but, until then, people will have to look at the mall without some ceiling tiles for a while," Watt said.

Although there is no official estimate as to the overall damage done to the businesses in the mall, Watt said her personal guess as to damage to the mall structure itself is about $30,000.

One of the biggest problems, as a result of the storm, according to Watt, was trying to deal with all of the water.

Despite Monday's storm and the mess it left in the mall, Watt said style show activities scheduled with both Teen Boards are still on for Saturday.

The Teen Board, which is divided into two groups, will have the first of its activities during the "Touch of Spring" style show Saturday at 3 p.m.

The style show will feature fashions from Bealls department store, The Cottage, Athletic Supply, and The Aerobic Connection. Also according to Watt, as a special bonus Anthony's, soon to be relocating to Big Spring Mall, will have a preview of their latest fashions.

Monday's storm produced high winds that, in some areas gusted in excess of 50 miles per hour, lighting, and pea-sized to baseball-sized hail.

Water was also a problem in other areas as well with some residents measuring as much as three and a half inches of rain Monday night.

Warm weather brings out the achoos, stuffy noses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two words may explain the sneezing, stuffy noses and itchy, watery eyes you may have been experiencing lately: warm winter.

The second-warmest winter in the past 100 years has caused trees to begin releasing their pollen a bit earlier than normal. Pollen counts usually begin to build about now, but high counts are being recorded nationwide because of the mild weather, said Sarah Kaluzny-Petroff of the American Academy of Allergy Asthma and Immunology in Milwaukee.

"It's kind of everywhere," she said. "Mild winter, with the real nice pop of weather that we had, really just jump-started all the trees."

Kaluzny-Petroff declined to forecast the severity of the 1995 allergy season, but said "indications are that it's going to be an active one."

"This year we're seeing high levels overall, so a lot of people aren't feeling good if they haven't started their medications up," she said.

Some 35 million Americans suffer from seasonal allergies.

The academy has about 70 stations across the country that count pollen, and only six cities had low readings last week for tree pollen, she said.

Grass pollen is also on the rise in parts of the South as well.

"It's not just trees out there; it's grass too," Kaluzny-Petroff said.

Trees generally pollinate in the spring, grass in the summer and weeds during the fall, Kaluzny-Petroff said.

But the situation could be helped by an unseasonable arctic blast of air that forced temperatures to record lows Wednesday from Illinois to Maine and southward into Kentucky and West Virginia, she said.

Kaluzny-Petroff said sufferers should take advantage of new allergy medications that are available, as well as antihistamines and nasal sprays.

When medicine fails, people should avoid exposure between 5 a.m. and 10 a.m., when the pollen is most active, use air conditioning in automobiles and in the home and get someone else to mow the lawn, she suggested.

Outdoor activities also should be scheduled for midday and be followed by a shower and shampoo because pollen sticks to hair and clothing.

And sufferers should find out exactly what they're allergic to.

They may also telephone the academy, toll-free, at 800-822-2762 for information on finding an allergist and for updates on pollen counts.

Take me out to the circus - tonight

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

The Carson and Barnes Circus is in town today and offers five rings of entertainment for the whole family.

There will be two performances today with one at 4:30 p.m. and the other at 8 p.m. After the second show, circus hands will dismantle and be prepared to be moved to a new town the next morning.

The circus is on the grounds of Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf. A portion of the proceeds will benefit the Optimist Club of Big Spring.

There are approximately 20 Asian and African elephants as well as 100 exotic and domestic animals in the circus. Some of the animals include a giraffe, rare white rhino, wallabies, hippopotamus, camels, tigers, lions, llamas and horses.

There are about 100 performers from the United States, Mexico, Canada, China, Peru, Argentina and Italy. There are aerial, acrobatic, juggling, clown and animal acts.

Avery

from all 50 states and the U.S. territories will gather in Washington's Hilton Hotel to develop resolutions designed to shape aging national policy for the next decade.

The theme of the conference is "America Now and Into the 21st Century: Generations Aging Together With Independence, Opportunity, and Dignity."

The agenda will consist of the following four issues: First, assuring comprehensive health care including long-term care; second, promoting economic security; third, maximizing housing and support service options; and fourth, maximizing options for a quality of life.

Avery will represent the Permian Basin area which covers a 17-county region, including Howard, Andrews, Borden, Crane, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Loving, Martin, Midland, Pecos, Reeves, Terrell, Upton, Ward, and Winkler counties.

She will carry her experience as a member of the boards of the area agency and the Texas Department of Aging.

In addition, she has also served, by governor's appointment, as one of the nine members on the State Board that oversees the Licensure of Nursing Home Administrators.

Two major concerns that will dominate the conference agenda will be the interdependence among generations and among members of extended families, and the responsibility of individuals to plan for changes that will occur throughout their lifespan; and unique contributions and needs of special populations, especially veterans, caregivers (including grandparents), rural elderly, women, minorities, and individuals with disabilities.

As a Texas delegate, Avery will be assigned to work specifically on issues regarding long-term care, Medicare and Medicaid, and revisions to the Older Americans Act.

As for being named a delegate Avery said, "I'm excited to have this opportunity to represent Texas at the WHCoA. And I take the responsibility seriously because our work in Washington in May will help define a national aging policy for America."

She added, "The follow-through to implement policy is also an extremely important part of the process."

Petition

According to Councilman John Paul Anderson, the council has made its decision and he sees the council sticking by it.

He said, "After all the name calling, after the allegations from the radio station, and after the smoke clears, our city is still faced with the problems of emergency medical service. The City Council's view remains centered on the care for the citizens of the area."

Several issues continue to be at the center of the ambulance contract debate including the need for two 24-hour ambulances, response times, subsidies to the ambulance service, Medicare and Medicaid assignments, and product delivery.

Anderson said, "AMT's company representative related that they would be willing to negotiate a change in subsidy for the change in accepting assignments. The BSFD proposal was definite in accepting assignments from the onset."

He added, "Should the decision have been made differently there would have been those who would have been equally vocal in opposition, screaming that the money would be best left at home instead of the annual drain of $150,000 going to either Dallas or Arizona."

Anderson went on to add AMT claims to be a private company, but yet the city subsidizes the service.

He said, "If the city subsidizes them they become a public company, but they're still based in Arizona. Why rent when you can buy?"

"People need to stop coming down on the City Council and look at the problem of AMT's corporation. They have good employees here, local people, but the problems are with their management. I don't think the people have all of the truth at the same time."

Big Spring Mayor Tim Blackhear said, "This issue should have been cut and dried. It was a bid award made in the best interest of the people of Big Spring. As far as I'm concerned the decision will stand."

He added this morning he had six calls; four in favor of the decision and two against.

This season the show presents the only Liberty Horse Act in the country composed entirely of Friesian Stallions. This breed of horses was common in the Netherlands before World War II but nearly all were destroyed by Adolf Hitler's troops out of fear they could be used by the resistance. A few horses survived and six of the stallions will prance and parade around the center ring.

The Super Dragon Troupe from China will be on hand to provide award winning acrobatic feats. There will be flying trapeze artists doing the triple somersault and the Rosales Troupe scaling the top of the tent on the "Death Defying Dual Wheels of Destiny."

Tickets are now available only at the circus box office today with adult tickets $9 and children $5.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Backlash continues against Howard Stern

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The backlash continues against controversial disc jockey Howard Stern for the distasteful comments he made about the death of Tejano singer Selena.

The League of United Latin American Citizens on Wednesday said they'll try getting Stern's nationally syndicated morning program off the air, either through the Federal Communications Commission or by pressuring advertisers.

LULAC officials said they may launch a nationwide campaign to boycott Stern's sponsors in retaliation for insensitive statements he made on the air this week about the March 31 slaying of Selena Quintanilla-Perez. A former employee was arrested and charged with the killing.

LULAC has more than 100,000 members nationwide.

Penal code revisions endorsed by House

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has tentatively approved a bill fine-tuning penal code revisions passed by the Legislature two years ago, but alcohol and abortion took center stage in the debate.

The House added to the bill amendments to prohibit open alcoholic beverages in automobiles and to establish a criminal penalty for assaulting a pregnant woman if the assault results in a miscarriage.

The entire penal code revision was tentatively approved Wednesday by a voice vote. It faces a final vote of the House before it can be sent to the Senate, which passed a similar bill Tuesday.

At the heart of the bill are provisions increasing penalties for nonviolent "state jail" felonies, a new category of felonies created by the Legislature in 1993 that couples jail time with rehabilitation programs.

But the crime debate swiftly turned into an abortion dispute over an amendment to create a first-degree felony offense for assaulting a pregnant woman if the assault results in a miscarriage.

Helmet bill approved without penalties

AUSTIN (AP) — Under a bill tentatively approved by the Texas Senate, youths riding bicycles on public roadways would be required to wear protective helmets — sort of.

The bill by Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, requires that helmets be worn by juveniles under the age of 18, but it includes no penalties for violations, a situation that caused several senators to question why the measure was needed.

First victims of shooting rampage buried

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The owner of a refinery inspection service and his wife, gunned down during an ex-employee's rampage through their business, were buried Wednesday.

Walter and Joann Rossler, both 62, were buried in the same cemetery where popular Tejano singer Selena was buried just hours before James Simpson went on a shooting spree with a semiautomatic 9 mm pistol and a .32-caliber revolver.

Simpson killed the Rosslers, three others and himself Monday afternoon at Walter Rossler Co.

A 911 tape released by police revealed that Simpson, a 28-year-old former employee at the business, passed up a chance to shoot Lisa Marie Rossler, who was holding her 8-month-old son and pleading for her life.

"All I know is when he (Simpson) came into the office ... he saw me on the phone," Ms. Rossler is recorded saying. "He saw me hold my child and he just shook his head like, 'I'm not going to mess with you,' and he turned around and walked out ..."

Ms. Rossler begged for her life, then thanked the gunman for moving on. She had fled into the office to hide from Simpson and call police.

"He shot my father," she said.

Pallbearers carry the casket of Joann Rossler to the grave site at Seaside Memorial Park during funeral services for her and her husband, Walter, Wednesday. The Rosslers were two of five people killed by James Simpson during a shooting spree Monday at the Rossler's business.

Officer wounded by friendly fire

HOUSTON (AP) — A homicide sergeant wounded during a weekend gunbattle was hit by crossfire from his partner of the last four years, Houston Police Chief Sam Nuchia says.

Nuchia said Wednesday that tests revealed that Sgt. Jim Binford was hit by bullets from a Glock pistol fired by Sgt. M.E. Doyle.

"Mistakes occur, and that's what happened here," Nuchia said. "As brother officers we understand how it happened."

Binford, 47, a 25-year-veteran of the Houston Police Department, and Doyle, 49, a 23-year HPD veteran, were involved in a shootout Sunday with suspected kidnappers.

"It's something you have, what the military calls friendly fire ... and that's what we had here," Nuchia said. "These kinds of situations occur when men and women are involved in dangerous activities."

Binford was released Monday from Ben Taub Hospital. He suffered a broken rib and flesh wound from the gunshot.

The findings do not change the two-count charges of attempted capital murder of a police officer filed Monday against Jose Juan Salazar, 19, and Geronimo Soto Alvarado, 27. They're also charged with aggravated kidnapping.

The last time an officer was hit by friendly fire was in 1962 when officer Kathleen C. Schaefer was killed by a uniformed officer who mistook her for a drug suspect, said Houston police spokesman Jack Cato.

Regulatory issues agreement reached

DALLAS (AP) — Central Power and Light Co. said it has reached an agreement in principle with four major parties on regulatory issues — including rates — involving the South Texas Project Electric Generating Station.

A final agreement is expected within several weeks, the company said late Wednesday. It then would be presented to city councils in Central Power and Light's territory and to the Public Utility Commission for approval.

Corpus Christi is the largest of the cities that initiated a rate review of the utility with the PUC last year.

Under the agreement, CPL customers would be given a one-time base rate refund of $50 million. The company also wouldn't charge customers for $62.25 million in replacement power costs from the South Texas Project's outage in 1993 and 1994.

Appointed attorney for Saldivar considers safety issue before accepting case

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — With an attorney appointed to represent her, Yolanda Saldivar now faces a grand jury, which will decide whether she should be indicted for the murder of Grammy-winning Tejano music star Selena.

Prosecutors were scheduled to take the case this morning to the Nueces County grand jury. They intend to prove that Ms. Saldivar, 34, should be tried for murder.

State District Judge Mike Westergren appointed Corpus

Christi attorney Douglas Tinker to represent Ms. Saldivar. Tinker met with her for the first time Wednesday but said they discussed few details of the case.

Tinker said he considered the issue of personal safety for both his client and himself before deciding to take the high-profile case.

"I'm concerned about that (safety)," said Tinker, who added that he expects crank calls from Selena fans. "All of my friends tell me I'm crazy for accepting the appointment. My secretaries this morning said, 'What you oughta do, Douglas, you oughta call a press conference and announce that you have refused to represent her. You would be very popular.'"

Deputy killed at second job as security guard

HOUSTON (AP) — A Liberty County deputy has been killed while working a second job as a security guard at a video store.

Witnesses told police that Wilburn Junior Agy, 45, was forced to the ground by one masked man while a second person demanded money at gunpoint from the clerk.

Witnesses said the gunman shot Agy once in the head without saying anything and then took the deputy's 9mm pistol, police said. The men then robbed the clerk and fled on foot, they said.

Water standards for wastewater need to remain at a high level

Preliminary approval has been given by the Texas Senate to a bill lowering water quality standards used to license wastewater discharge projects by a 21-8 vote, according to an Associated Press story.

Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, concentrated his bill on smaller cities looking to build wastewater treatment plants, saying the bill would end unnecessarily harsh requirements, saving financially strapped communities millions of dollars.

Opponents of the bill say it would allow streams in Texas to be more easily contaminated.

As it stands right now, any stream not previously studied by the state is presumed to be a "high-quality aquatic habitat," resulting in any wastewater discharge into the stream to be purified to the highest quality level.

Here again we face a choice of saving money or protecting our natural resources.

We here in Big Spring know what it is like to have undrinkable water. While our water hasn't been contaminated through wastewater discharge, it has gone from a pristine water supply where Indians and travelers stopped for a drink to something that is just now becoming somewhat drinkable.

Grande. It has become so polluted, mainly through untreated effluent being dumped in it from the Mexican side, that federal money was set aside to help Mexico build treatment plants.

Water is an extremely precious commodity. The streams we dump our effluent into become someone else's drinking water down the line.

On some things, we have to start forcing ourselves to think about the long term effect of what we do. The environment is one area where the long term effects will end up being more costly than a short-term solution to save money now.

The state has a revolving loan program to assist cities in paying for wastewater treatment improvements or in the building of new plants.

Consideration should be given to expanding this program instead of cutting back on standards.

We need to keep our standards high, simply because while it may not be ourselves that suffer the effects of our decisions, it will be our children and their children.

Just another fish story

This is the true story of how I almost became part-owner of the Chicago Cubs and why I am so happy I didn't.

It was 14 years ago and I was sitting at a corner table in Billy Goat's Tavern with Charley Finley.

Mike Royko
Columnist

Finley was the former owner of the great Oakland A's team that won three World Series in the 1970s. We occasionally had a few beers and talked baseball.

That night we chatted about rumors that the Wrigley family might have to sell the team because P.K. Wrigley had died and left a whopping inheritance tax bill.

Finley said he thought the chronically mismanaged franchise could be had for about $21 million. If he was right, it would be a bargain, especially if the team fell into the hands of owners brilliant enough to develop a winner.

We agreed that we possessed the necessary brilliance. But we lacked $21 million.

Actually, Finley, a successful businessman, might have had the millions. But he didn't have enough to compete with wild spenders like George Steinbrenner or Gene Autry.

That's why he had sold the A's. And even if he wanted to buy the Cubs, he couldn't because the other owners hated him for being smarter than they were.

Ah, but I knew someone who had enough money to buy the team, fix up the ballpark, and sign good players.

He was my boss, Marshall Field, who owned the Sun-Times, where I worked.

With his distinguished Chicago go name the owners couldn't possibly object.

Finley and I hatched our plan. I would persuade Field to buy the team because it made good business sense. And he would bring Finley in as a 5 percent owner and general manager. I would mortgage and borrow and buy a small silver, which would permit me to be on the board of directors and cage free beer.

So we flipped for the tab and set out to make baseball history.

By chance, I was going on a fishing trip with Field soon after that evening. So he and I and two of his executives would be in a North Woods cabin or a boat for three days. Unless he jammed his fingers in his ears, he'd have to listen to my pitch.

He did, but at first he wasn't enthusiastic.

"I don't like baseball," he said.

I told him that he didn't have to like baseball. Finley and I liked baseball enough for all of us. He liked money and he would make money.

The two executives snickered and said it would be a foolish deal. But I persisted.

First, I said, we would yank the Cubs off Channel 9, which was owned by the rival Tribune Company. We'd see if they had enough old Charlie Chan films to fill those empty afternoons.

And we'd put the Cubs on Channel 32, which Field owned.

Meanwhile, the shrewd Finley would build a winner. The sappy but loyal Cubs fans would flock to the ballpark.

Fans would be so grateful to Field for giving them a good team, they would buy more of our newspapers.

Finally, I said, we could rename the ballpark after the new owner. We would call it Field Field. Catchy and easy to remember.

Instead, I can yawn at baseball while watching Michael

By the time the fishing trip ended and we were back in Chicago, Field had agreed. Probably out of exhaustion.

He met with Finley and said he would buy 51 percent of the franchise if Finley would put together a group of investors to buy the rest.

That would be easy, Finley said, and he set about doing it. Then the tarpon began running off the coast of Florida. What have tarpon to do with it? Field is an avid world-class fisherman, so when the tarpon run, he runs, that's what.

Finley kept phoning and asking when Field would return so we could make the offer.

Soon, I said. The tarpon would tire of running and Field had to get tired of running after them.

And we waited. On June 16, 1981, a sports reporter loped over to my desk and said: "Hear 'bout the Cubs?"

What about them? "They were just sold to the Trib."

I kicked the wall so hard that I limped for a month.

Every spring since I have thought about what might have been. I would be a part-owner at the training camp, saying: "Shawon, lay off the outside pitches this year. And Sammy, no law says you can't let the pitcher walk you, kid."

Of course, Finley would tell me to shut up and go sell beer.

But now the regrets are gone. What might have been would be that today I would be a base ball owner. I'd have to growl about how stupid the players are, which they are, without admitting how stupid I am, which I would be by default.

Instead, I can yawn at baseball while watching Michael

If I ever catch a tarpon, I'll give it a kiss.

TEXAS

Eighth execution

Mays executed for Good Samaritan stabbing

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A former oilfield roughneck was executed early today by Texas authorities for fatally stabbing a Good Samaritan who agreed to help him with a disabled car.

Noble Mays, 41, had no final statement and little reaction as the lethal drugs flowed into his arms beginning at 1:34 a.m. CDT. Eight minutes later, he was pronounced dead.

The execution — the eighth this year in Texas — came after the U.S. Supreme Court rejected several 11th-hour appeals.

A final appeal went to the high court just before midnight, a few moments before the execution normally would have been carried out. About an hour later, the justices — with no vote announced — rejected the request.

Earlier Wednesday evening, the court, in a 7-2 vote, also refused to halt the punishment.

When arrested a week after the April 7, 1979 death of 34-year-old Jerry Lamb, Mays was on parole for about 16 months after serving five years of an 18-year sentence for robbery. He had previous convictions for robbery and burglary.

Mays insisted he was innocent of the killing but in interviews expressed little anxiety about his punishment.

"I've never been very concerned about it," he said. "If it was possible to execute a man, it would be just because of the system. And you just can't do anything with the system."

Mays' attorneys contended he should be spared because trial lawyers failed to raise an insanity defense and because they believed the jury knew about the outcome of Mays' previous trials.

Mays went to trial four times for the slaying. The first was declared a mistrial in its early stages and the next two, which resulted in convictions, were reversed on appeal.

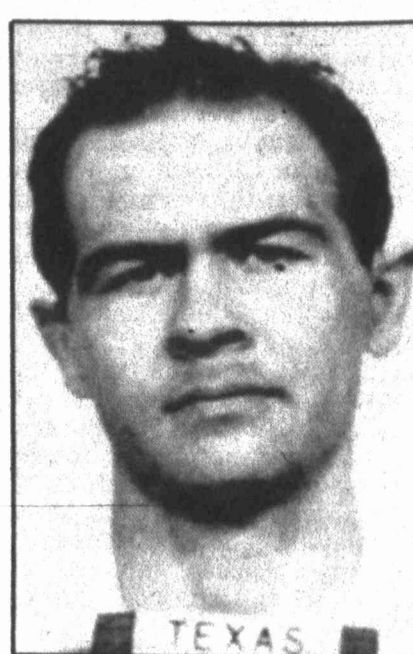

Trial testimony showed Mays and an accomplice, James Moore, confronted Lamb at a Wichita Falls park and asked that he drive them to their car that stalled in a remote area. Once inside the car, Mays pulled a knife and ordered Lamb to surrender his jewelry, keys and wallet. When Lamb, manager of the Sheppard Air Force Base officers club, tried to run away, he was caught and stabbed by Mays.

Lamb's body, strapped under the hood of an abandoned pickup truck, was discovered by a Texas Ranger.

Mays, who said he ran away from home at age 11, was arrested in Dallas a week after Lamb's death and in possession of Lamb's Lincoln Continental.

Moore testified against Mays and received a 45-year prison term. State records show he no longer is imprisoned.

Mays gained notoriety on

death row for slithering through a tiny air vent in 1989 in an unsuccessful attempt to escape.

A year earlier, he had offered to drop all appeals in exchange for a $10,000 payment to his wife. The offer never was considered by authorities and Mays later said he made it merely to play games with the criminal justice system.

Mays became the 93rd Texas inmate to be put to death since the state resumed carrying out the death penalty in 1982. The total is the highest in the nation.

Death row inmate kills another

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A death row inmate who has said he wants to die quickly was being investigated today for killing another condemned prisoner during an altercation in a prison recreation yard.

Jermarr Arnold, 36, was confined in a special area away from other inmates after he fatally stabbed fellow inmate Maurice Andrews late Wednesday, prison officials said.

Andrews, 39, was found fatally wounded on the ground in an outdoor area outside a death row wing at the Ellis I Unit northeast of Huntsville. A prison-made shank — a sharp piece of metal — was imbedded in his left temple, prison spokesman Larry Fitzgerald said.

Just one month ago, Andrews received a reprieve — his fifth — only hours before he was scheduled to receive lethal injection.

Both Arnold and Andrews were on death row for killing someone during a jewelry store holdup — Andrews in Beaumont in 1982 and Arnold in Corpus Christi in 1983.

"A disturbance broke out, and it could be anything — an argument, disrespect. Any number of things could have set it off," Fitzgerald said. "They're not left unsupervised, but I don't know if any guards witnessed the attack."

About 12 to 15 other death row inmates were with Andrews in the recreation area, which Fitzgerald described as about half the size of a basketball court.

He said prison officials hoped to wrap up their investigation today and turn over their findings to the Walker County District Attorney for filing of charges.

Fitzgerald said authorities have characterized Arnold as a troublemaker since he arrived on death row in December 1990 but had no specifics.

In a 1991 interview, Arnold told The Associated Press he was incapable of feeling sympathy for anyone and had few emotions.

"If someone were to walk up to me and stick a knife in my chest, when I go back to the wing, when we go to the rec yard, I wouldn't feel much regret if that happened to myself," he said. "So how could I feel any sense of regret or be sorry if that happened to someone else?"

"I've been desensitized and depersonalized in prison."

Arnold had asked that all appeals be dropped on his behalf and that he be put to death. He has not had an execution date.

It was not immediately certain if an additional murder charge against Arnold would affect any execution.

"It's an interesting question," Fitzgerald said.

Arnold said he killed Christina Marie Sanchez because she reached into a drawer for a .357 Magnum pistol after he demanded jewelry from a display case at her Corpus Christi store.

"I didn't want to have any more time with her. I thought it would be more efficient to kill her," Arnold said.

Arnold was in California, serving time for armed robbery, assault, attempted escape and weapon possession when he confessed in 1988 to the Texas slaying.

Wednesday's death row homicide is the first since Aug. 26, 1990 when condemned inmate Calvin Williams was strangled in a recreation yard.

Andrews had been on death row since Oct. 22, 1982.

He and an accomplice, Elliott Rod Johnson, robbed Granada's Jewelry Store in downtown Beaumont on April 8, 1982, then fatally shot the owner, Joe Granada, and employee Arturo Melendez as they lay on the floor.

Granado's widow, Lena Granado, found the news of Andrews' death hard to believe Wednesday night.

"What? You're kidding me," she said. "Well, I guess that takes care of that, doesn't it? It's been a long time, it really has. I hate to see it, but I'm glad maybe it will all come to an end now for us. We've had a hard time getting all of this behind us, especially since we've had to keep reading about it in the paper and watching it on TV."

At the time of the shooting, Andrews was on parole from Florida after an assault conviction. When arrested within days of the attack, he was wearing some jewelry taken in the robbery. Other items taken in the holdup were found at his home.

Johnson was executed in 1987 for his part in the robbery and slayings.

Water quality bill wins tentative approval

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate has given preliminary approval to a bill that would lower the water quality standard used to license wastewater discharge projects.

The bill by Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, was tentatively approved Wednesday with a 21-8 vote. It faces another Senate vote before it can be sent to the House for consideration.

Concentrating on small cities looking to build wastewater treatment plants, Ratliff said the bill would end an unnecessarily harsh requirement and save financially strapped communities millions of dollars.

Opponents say the bill would allow the degradation of the majority of streams in the state.

At issue is a Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission rule that says any stream or creek not previously studied and classified by the state is presumed to be a high-quality aquatic habitat.

As a result, any wastewater discharged into the stream must first be purified to the highest quality level, an expensive process for communities, Ratliff said.

"They are spending millions of extra dollars producing pristine discharge into a creek whose natural condition is much less than pristine," he said.

The bill would eliminate the presumption of high quality. Instead, the state would presume the water source is lower quality and would place the burden on the state to determine a higher quality level.

The bill has been opposed by the Sierra Club and other environmental groups, who say the law would make contaminating streams easier.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, voiced similar opposition to the bill during debate on the measure.

"This is not a local bill. This has statewide impact. And it's going to damage the streams ... all over the state of Texas," Truan said.

Sisters found killed inside their home by deputy serving papers

HOUSTON (AP) — Police have found the bodies of two sisters bludgeoned to death inside a bedroom of the Pasadena home they shared.

Martha Farmer, 43, and Linda

Harrison, 45, were found on the bedroom floor of their home early Wednesday by a Harris County constable who went to the home to serve civil papers to Ms. Farmer, said Pasadena Police Sgt. Kelly Payne.

No charges had been filed by late Wednesday, although investigators were questioning Ms. Farmer's former husband.

NEWS IN BRIEFLeaders hope
stalemate ended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders of both parties say they hope their tentative deal on a $16 billion package of spending cuts in domestic programs will end a weeklong stalemate.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., worked out an agreement late Wednesday giving both sides what they wanted. Democrats shielded housing modernization, anti-drug and other social programs from some cuts Republicans sought, while the deficit-conscious GOP gained even deeper reductions in other programs than the measure had contained initially.

"We hope to get it all done by tomorrow," Dole said Wednesday night.

Blanket will be a big deal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was no secret that O.J. Simpson's lawyers were going to make a big deal about the blanket tossed over Nicole Brown Simpson's body, the rookie criminalist and the crime-scene glove that got moved.

Yet when those issues were raised during a precise cross-examination of criminalist Dennis Fung, it all seemed so fresh, and so terribly damaging. All of a sudden, the defense was exposing cracks in the strongest part of the prosecution's case — the physical evidence.

By the end of Wednesday's court session, the defense had Fung, a prosecution witness, second-guessing his own decisions and those of top police investigators.

Reviews mixed
on GOP job

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans would rather see the government balance the budget than cut taxes, according to a New York Times-CBS News poll.

Only half of the respondents believed that both goals can be achieved at the same time, according to the poll released Wednesday.

Tax cut legislation including a $500-per-child tax credit, which passed the House on Wednesday night, had been a key clause of the Republican "Contract With America." The bill now goes to the Senate.

While 78 percent of those surveyed favored the credit, 56 percent preferred balancing the budget to cutting taxes. Only 44 percent thought the government could do both at the same time; half said it could not.

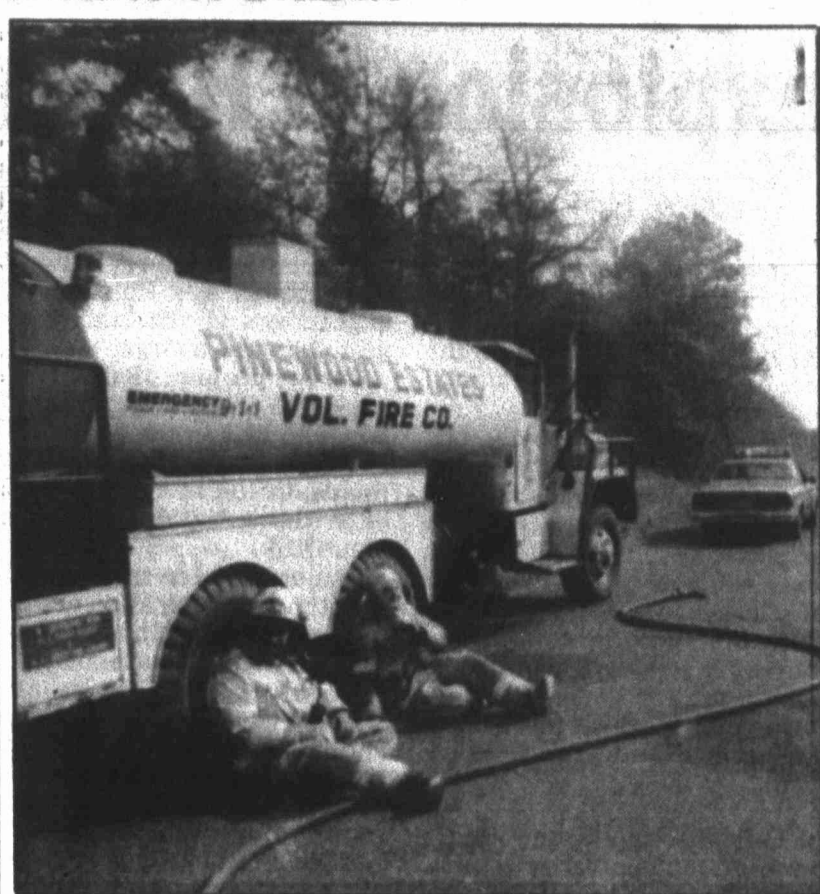

Reviews of Republicans' performance during Congress' first 100 days are decidedly mixed, according to the poll.

In telephone interviews of 1,089 Americans, conducted Saturday through Tuesday, 47 percent of those surveyed said they were "mostly disappointed" with what Congress had done during the first 100 days and 39 percent said they were pleased.

The poll has a margin of error of three percentage points.

The poll also suggests that if the "Contract With America" has been the Republican rallying cry, GOP lawmakers should yell a little louder. Only 38 percent of those surveyed said they had read or heard anything about the "Contract."

Woman kills mother,
self fearing illness
would prevent care

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — A woman shot her mother in the head in her hospital bed, then killed herself, because she was afraid her own illness would prevent her from caring for the 90-year-old woman, authorities said.

Mary Kathryn Ramsay, who had recently been diagnosed with multiple sclerosis, killed Florence Shockley in her hospital room Wednesday afternoon. Seconds later, the 58-year-old woman shot herself with the .38-caliber pistol.

Authorities found a suicide note in which Ramsay said she was worried about taking care of her mother as her own disease progressed. "So the daughter ended it for both of them," said Officer Mike Pease.

Multiple sclerosis can cause speech problems and a loss of muscle coordination.

Shockley was shot just before noon in her fourth-floor private room at Boulder Community Hospital. After Ramsay closed the door to her mother's room, the two apparently talked for a few minutes and then shots were fired, hospital spokeswoman Beverly Shaw said.

Shaw didn't know why Shockley was in the hospital's 30-bed surgical ward.

Shockley had lived in the Golden West Manor nursing home for the past two years, said John Torres, the home's director. She was taken to the hospital Tuesday night after she complained that she didn't feel well and began vomiting, Torres said.

Shockley was not bedridden, and was "a perky person, conversant yet quiet," Torres said.

After the shootings, hospital administrators visited with every patient on the fourth floor to reassure them.

"The hospital really is a secure place," Shaw said. "We've never had anything like this before."

That's hot!!!
Cook charged after spiking eggs

LEBANON, N.H. (AP) — A breakfast cook at a Denny's was charged with assault for allegedly spiking two Vermont state troopers' eggs with Tabasco sauce.

Michael Towne, 20, could get up to two years in jail and $4,000 fine.

Troopers Timothy Cloutre and Michael Manning, who had crossed into New Hampshire for breakfast on Feb. 7, said the eggs burned their mouths and upset one officer's stomach.

Towne claimed that the hot pepper sauce must have been left on the grill from an earlier order, police said.

He was arrested three weeks later.

"We've got enough trouble without people screwing around with our food," said Lebanon police Lt. Ken Lary.

In court papers, police quoted an unidentified witness who claimed to have seen Towne put a large amount of Tabasco on the food. The witness "said that Towne did not like police officers and did it as a joke," police said.

Towne's trial is set for June 6.

Tax cut bill rammed through

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the central promise of their "Contract With America" fulfilled, House Republicans are basking in triumph after ramming through a five-year, $189 billion tax cut Democrats say will rob from the poor to give to the rich.

But the glow may be short-lived. It's unclear which, if any, provisions of the huge package will survive a skeptical Senate and President Clinton's veto pen.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., declaring the moment "a truly historic and at the same time truly personal experience," shrugged off Democrats' criticism.

With victory in hand Wednesday night, Gingrich struck a conciliatory tone after a day of unusually acid debate. He thanked in advance of the vote the 27 Democrats who bolted to support the final chapter of the GOP's extraordinary 100-day juggernaut to reduce the size and reach of federal government.

"The American people can be proud of the United States House for what we have done together," he declared.

As midnight approached, Democrats ran out of procedural ploys and the bill Gingrich calls the "crowning jewel" of the "contract" passed 246-188. Republicans permitted no amendments and decisively rejected a $32 billion Democratic alternative.

The GOP plan offers a $500-per-child tax credit for families earning up to $200,000, a reduction in the so-called marriage penalty on two-earner couples, tax breaks for retirees, expanded Individual Retirement Accounts, a credit for adoptive parents and a list of business-backed measures headed by a sharp reduction in the capital gains tax on profits from selling securities and real estate.

Now it goes to the Senate, where senior Republicans such as Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici of New Mexico and Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood of Oregon have wondered aloud how they can cut taxes deeply and simultaneously eliminate the budget deficit.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., considered the front-running GOP presidential hopeful for 1996, assured reporters, "We're going to have a tax bill." But he warned, "We didn't get elected just to rubber-stamp everything the House did."

The tax-cut bill will join in the Senate many other House-passed components of the "Contract With America" — welfare, crime, changes in the civil justice system among them — facing extensive changes.

Senate democrats, although in the minority, wield more influence than in the House, whose procedures are designed to speed majority action. Their 46 votes are more than enough to stop action under Senate rules that require 60 of the 100 senators to break a filibuster.

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said the tax-cutting House GOP agenda was "designed to reward the rich and the well-connected at the expense of America's middle-class families."

"That is wrong and Democrats will fight it," he said.

Pressed by his Cabinet to threaten the House bill with a veto, Clinton sniped at House Republicans as "the less-than-everything crowd" but generally modulated his criticism at a news conference.

He said he would work with the Sen. to get a tax cut more like his own proposal — smaller and focused on promoting college education.

Rigged briefcase cause of explosion in Hamas' hideout

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — A stranger gave a rigged briefcase to a young boy and had him take it to a Hamas hideout minutes before a deadly explosion gutted the place, the Muslim militant group claimed today.

The man approached the boy as he played in front of the hideout, a second-story apartment in Gaza City's Sheikh Radwan neighborhood, and handed him the case, said a Hamas leaflet distributed today.

"He talked to the boy and then the boy was seen entering the apartment," the leaflet said. "After a little while, there was a huge explosion in the apartment."

The leaflet said Kamal Kahil, a senior commander of Hamas' military wing Izzedine al-Qassam, arrived at the hideout a few minutes before Sunday's blast. Kahil was killed in the explosion and the leaflet suggested he was a target.

Three people died in the explosion, including a 4-year-old boy who was in the apartment, Hamas said. Police initially put the death toll at six, but so far only three bodies have been identified.

Hamas has been trying to portray the explosion as an assassination carried out by Israel and Yasser Arafat's government.

Israel has dismissed the allegations as nonsense and Palestinian police said the blast was set off when Kahil and his comrades mishandled a booby-trapped suitcase they were putting together for an attack in Israel.

Israel's Davar newspaper suggested Wednesday that the blast may have been set off intentionally to kill leading Hamas activists.

Davar, quoting unidentified Palestinian journalists, said Israel's Shin Bet security service may have learned about the location of Hamas' hideout from a Hamas activist caught in Israel last month before he could carry out a suicide bombing in southern Israel.

Tensions between Arafat's Palestinian Authority and Hamas, its toughest rival, have risen since the explosion, and Arafat's police have arrested 10 Hamas activists.

Honduras' ship has finally come in TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — It may be nearly 400 years late, but Honduras' ship has come in.

More than one, actually: The Honduran government plans to recover booty from at least 20 sunken Spanish galleons and may use it to help pay its $3.8 billion debt to foreign creditors.

The government said Wednesday it has located the galleons in Honduran waters of the Caribbean. They hold treasure that today is worth an estimated $3 billion.

Culture Minister Rodolfo Pastor Fasquelle said his government withheld the information "so as not to awaken the greed of adventurers."

"But now," he said, "the time has come to do it."

Proceeds from selling the gold "could be used to pay part of the foreign debt of Honduras," Fasquelle said.

The Italian newspaper Corriere Della Sera, in an article this week, said Italian economist Claudio Bonifacio discovered the galleon San Roque that sank in what are now Honduran waters during a 1606 storm.

The paper said the ship was leading a fleet of ships to Spain filled with gold and silver valued at about $2 billion.

Bonifacio said the San Roque's remnants are under about 22 feet of water.

Written off as bandits, now group considered part of extremists network

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Six months ago, they were dismissed as bandits on the verge of extinction. Today officials consider them part of a network of Islamic extremists that includes defendants in the World Trade Center bombing.

Little is known about the Abu Sayyaf group, which officials blame for Tuesday's raid on the southern town of Ipi. It left at least 46 people dead, 47 wounded and the community in ashes.

Authorities are alarmed at the possibility that violent Islamic extremists are gaining influence among some Muslims in this predominantly Catholic country. Muslims account for estimated 6 million of the Philippines' 66 million people.

Extremists want to "re-establish Islam in this part of the world, especially since the Philippines is the only Christian country in Asia," Interior Secretary Rafael Alunan said Tuesday.

The recent violence has emerged at a time the government thought it was about to resolve a 25-year Muslim separatist movement in the southern Philippines.

Last year, the government began peace talks with the secular-oriented Moro National Liberation Front, which had waged a sporadic insurgency to establish a Muslim state.

The Front condemned the Ipi attack. But the military believes some Front renegades took part in it, adding to suspicions the group's leadership no longer controls its armed units.

Nearly all that is known about the Abu Sayyaf group, which also calls itself "the Islamic Movement," comes from the Philippine military.

The group's leader is Aburajak Abubakar Janjalani, 34, a former teacher from a Muslim-Christian family on Basilan Island, 550 miles south of Manila.

In the 1980s, Janjalani studied theology and Arabic in Libya, Syria and Saudi Arabia. He returned in about 1990 and began preaching in Basilan and other southern islands, attracting disillusioned young Muslims.

Military intelligence sources believe the group's first operation was a 1991 grenade attack on a cultural performance by young Christian missionaries in Zamboanga.

Mrs. Johnson was happy to find that we listen better than the average 4th grader.

Which isn't too shabby. Especially when you consider how quickly her class responded to our photographer. We said "smile" and they were all teeth. And when Angela Johnson suggested saving paper by not sending return envelopes to bank draft customers, we were all ears. We were also pretty excited when Spud Hammerbacher expressed interest in our new solar energy test project. After all, it's suggestions like these that are helping us build a brighter future. Which has us grinning from ear to ear.

Forsan tops 6-2A golf stop

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

For the Forsan boys' golf team, there really was no place like home.

Playing on their home course, the Buffs shot a team total of 315 to take a 25-stroke lead after the first round of the District 6-2A golf tournament Wednesday.

Winters' girls, meanwhile, apparently didn't care where they played, as they took a 42-stroke lead over Stanton after Wednesday's first round.

Comanche Trail Golf Course was wet and windy, but that didn't stop Forsan's boys from dominating the first round. Led by Rusty Baker's 75, the Buffaloes posted four of the five lowest scores during the day.

Jim Ned A was in second place with a team total 340, followed one shot back by Forsan B. Winters A was in fourth with a 343, while Coahoma A was sitting fifth with a 357.

Baker's 75 was the low score of the day, and teammate Chris Spivey tied for second with a 78. Other Forsan A scores were: Mike Spivey and Chris Evans at 81; and Jason Brown with an 86.

Forsan B scores were: Jeremy Etheredge, 84; Andy

Epley, 85; and Wes Crow and Paul Kinsey, 86.

With his A squad in firm command of the district lead, and with his B squad in solid contention for second place, Forsan coach Jan East was understandably pleased. The top two teams in district qualify for the regional golf tournament.

"They played pretty good today," East said. "Four of them shot pretty much what they've been shooting all season, and Rusty played 10 shots better than he has been. He's starting to shoot like he did last year at this time."

The district tournament moves to Jim Ned's home course, Maxwell Municipal in Abilene, next Wednesday for the final round of district play. Jim Ned coach Chris Holson is hopes those familiar surroundings helps his team make up some ground.

"Forsan did well today. We just hope we stay within shouting distance of them," Holson said. "I think we're in pretty good shape coming back to our course."

Even with a 25-stroke lead with 18 holes to play, Chris Spivey doesn't think the Buffaloes are in danger of becoming over-confident.

"It ain't over until the fat

Lott, BSHS girls learning to win

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

Jay Kennedy refuses to be surprised anymore. Appreciative, yes; surprised, no.

Kennedy's Big Spring High School girls' track team, despite having only four juniors and seniors on its 38-person roster, has exceeded expectations this season and is considered among the favorites for next week's District 4-4A track meet - not to mention Saturday's Big Spring Relays.

Among the youngsters expected to be highlighted at Saturday's meet - which is sponsored by the American Business Club - is BSHS freshman Shakeesha Lott, who stars for the Lady Steers in the jumping events and in all three relays.

Lott, who prefers to be called Keesha, has posted area bests in the long jump (16 feet, 9 1/2 inches) and triple jump (35-10). In addition, she has helped the Lady Steers post more-than-respectable times in the 400-meter relay (51.3 seconds), 800 relay (1:48.4) and 1,600 relay (4:10.7).

"We knew she could run last year, but we didn't know she'd have such a big impact this year," Kennedy said of the 14-year-old Lott. "The nicest thing about her is her attitude. She's very coachable and very enjoyable to be around."

In that aspect, Lott is like the BSHS girls' team as a whole, Kennedy said.

"I didn't know what to expect of them this year, and it's always enjoyable when you don't know what to expect and it turns out good," the sixth-year track coach said. "With some of my other teams, there were high expectations, because we had some quality people. This year, I didn't know what to expect, but we've got a chance to carry a lot of people to regionals."

Lott also reminds Kennedy of the team's lone senior, Kathy Smith, who also stars in both the jumping and running events.

"She's a lot like Kathy was when she was a freshman," Kennedy said. "The only thing with Kathy, when she was a freshman, we had a lot of good seniors around her."

Lott appreciates the comparison.

"Kathy has helped me in just about every way," she said. "If we don't do things right, she tells us how to do it. She's like a teacher on the track."

Lott said a goal of her's is to qualify for the state meet this year, but realizes she's going to

We weren't any more fit back in the good ol' pre-Nintendo days

Every year, you hear some paper-pusher in Washington report that young Americans are getting flabby.

Not enough exercise. Too much Nintendo. Well, it may be true, but can anyone out there say the fitness of our youth was any better in the pre-Nintendo days?

Dave Hargrave
Sports Editor

I sure can't. Last Thursday I wrote a column about misadventures in my one-day running career, and several people told me of their own athletic accidents. Eventually I started talking about my physical education classes, and how bad they were, and some actually thought my P.E. training was pretty good!

Kickball? Does anyone play kickball anymore?

Please say no - the children at my grade school had their lifetime fill of kickball more than a decade ago. I was so glad to move on to high school, where in our first outdoor P.E. class we played...

Kickball.

Maybe it's because I attended a Catholic school, where funding was never automatic. They told us to sell all the popcorn and magazines we could to save the school - maybe a kickball was all we could afford. But Saturday Night Fever hit when I was in the second or third grade, and wouldn't you know it?

By fifth grade we spent valuable P.E. time trying to copy John Travolta's moves.

And others, from other parts of the country, have told me the same thing! They discoed in P.E.

We're blaming Nintendo!

At least with Nintendo you can make a fool of yourself without standing up. No effort is involved - only thumb blisters. Nintendo can get the heart pumping, too, when you get close to a record score. It's got to be more beneficial than disco dancing or kickball, for hand-eye coordination if nothing else.

Looking back, about the most strenuous thing we endured in grade school P.E. was prison ball - a slightly more compassionate form of dodgeball than the original game, where you stand against a wall while the class bully flings a 90-mph kickball at your head from 10 paces.

Jogging? Don't remember doing it.

Sit-ups, or push-ups? Nah.

We did have an arm wrestling tournament once. I lost in the first round and played basketball the rest of the period.

Oh yeah - basketball!

Growing up in Indiana, the average grade-schooler looks forward to shooting hoops in P.E. - until it happens. Since our teachers wanted everyone to play and had less than an hour to cram in some exertion for the students, they let EVERYONE play.

A 10-on-10 game is not basketball. It's Australian Rules Football - which is why it actually wasn't that bad, because teachers couldn't pick you out of the crowd when you A) tripped the girl who enjoyed being hall monitor, B) elbowed the kid who put a stink bomb in your locker or C) used your face to block a punch from the class bully.

Beat the heck out of kickball.

I came from the age of Pong, the pioneer of video games that's as popular as 8-track tapes these days, but my fitness level wasn't any better than today's Nintendo teenyboppers. Maybe I just came from a school weak in the P.E. department, or maybe it's a national epidemic. Either way, just think twice when you put down children for burning their retinas on Nintendo.

Besides - they'll tire of it sooner or later, and then take up a sport. It's a good thing I took up basketball in the third grade - otherwise the only exercise I would have had as a youngster would be walking to and from school.

I lived across the street.

Downhill both ways.

Individually, HC cowboys tough

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

Howard College's men's rodeo team had three regional championships last season, and it could have just as many this year.

The problem is, this year's team isn't in the running for the national finals.

The top two teams from each region in the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association make the national finals in Bozeman, Mont., this June. The past two seasons, Howard has finished third to barely miss a team berth in the nationals, but this year the HC cowboys are buried in sixth place with almost no chance of catching leaders Vernon Regional Junior College, West Texas A&M and Western Texas College.

Funny thing is, Howard's men's team is having a fabulous season when you look at the individual standings. How can that be? Well, out of the numerous cowboys on the team, Howard coach Mike Yeater must pick players to compete for team points. Yeater picks the ones he thinks are hot in a given week, and the rest compete as individuals.

Yeater would like to have a lot of his choices back.

"It seems like whoever I pick to be on the team has a bad draw, and someone else that I didn't put on the team gets a good draw and has a great rodeo," said Yeater. For exam-

Americans hold out hope for ending Masters' drought

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) - Little more than hints and hopes exist for an end to foreign domination of the Masters, and, in fact, pro golf itself.

The Masters tournament, a unique gathering at an exclusive men's club, started today on the flowered, rolling hills of the Augusta National Golf Club with an international field of 86 contending for the green jacket.

Coming into the first of the year's Grand Slam events, non-Americans have won the last four majors and nine of the last 12.

In the Masters, the most American of all tournaments, foreign-born players have won six of the last seven.

Some American players, Davis Love III among them, have gone into a form of denial.

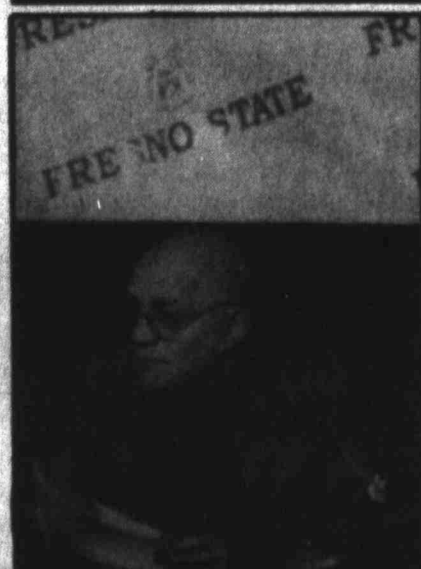

"If a guy comes to Augusta from Florida, where he has his home and where his family is, a guy who plays the American tour, I don't really consider him a foreigner," Love said.

That description, of course, fits Nick Price of Zimbabwe and Australian Greg Norman, Nos. 1 and 3, respectively, in the Sony world rankings and two of the principal reasons American hopes of breaking the foreign string are less than bright.

Neither has won the Masters, and neither has won this year, facts that are highly deceptive. Norman is a two-time runner-up in this tournament.

As for this year, Norman lost at Doral with a 72nd hole water ball and has to be considered a threat simply because this is the Masters and he is Norman.

Sophomore Brandon Arrington, who rode bulls last season but is sticking to bareback riding this year, said the luck of the draw and injuries are the main things that have killed Howard in the team standings. The team has had its share of injuries, including two season-ending mishaps for bull rider Ross Hataway (broken ankle) and steer wrestler Trey Fisher (broken leg).

Vernon Regional Junior College would dispute this, but Arrington would put his school up against anyone and expect to win.

"It's just hard to pick a team - so much of it is luck of the draw, who draws right," Arrington said. "Most definitely, that's been our biggest problem, because we have more talent at this school than any school in the region."

"Touch of Spring" fashion show Saturday

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

According to Big Spring Mall Manager Tammy Watt, responses to the mall's Teen Board three weeks ago was overwhelming.

The teen board will be active in mall sponsored activities such as the style show and other mall events during the year. The board will be supervised at all times during mall events and other activities the board may be asked to assist with.

Watt said, "The purpose behind forming a teen board for Big Spring Mall is to involve our local students in a positive manner and teach them the skills they must know when entering the job market."

The Teen Board, which is divided into two groups, will have the first of its activities during the "Touch of Spring" style show Saturday at 3 p.m.

The style show will feature fashions from Bealls Department Store, The Cottage, Athletic Supply, and The Aerobic Connection. As a special bonus Anthony's, soon to be relocating to Big Spring Mall, will have a preview of their latest fashions.

Watt added, "The response to the Teen Board has been excellent. We have formed two boards (a junior board for fourth, fifth and sixth grade students and a senior board for seventh through twelfth grade students), each with 22 members, and together they are working on this event to introduce themselves to the community."

In addition to assisting with mall activities, the board will also meet at different times and learn how to apply for jobs, how to present themselves during job interviews, and to discuss the requirements they must meet when looking for a job in the future.

"I think this board is something we can grow with and I think it's really going to fly," Watt said.

Each board member will have the opportunity to work toward prizes to be determined by a point system with four levels. The board is a self-paced program and each member can set their own goals.

She added there probably won't be an event every week-end and unless there are several events at any one time, the board will probably meet once a month.

She said there probably won't be any type of event that will require the board to leave the mall.

Watt said, "This will be something that can teach the kids commitment and responsibility."

Teen board members will wear matching t-shirts at all functions.

Watt added she wants the teen board to be fun at all times and not looked upon as a chore

College Heights Elementary School Principal Janice Rosson, left, receives a check for $250 from Mildred Buchanan and Doris Mason, member of the Retired Teachers Association's community participation committee.

Educational Disney videos come to College Heights

By JANET AUSBURY
Features Editor

Students at College Heights Elementary School will be able to learn lessons with Disney educational videotapes starting next year, thanks to the Big Spring Howard County Retired Teachers Association.

On March 29, the association's community participation committee members Mildred Buchanan and Doris Mason presented Principal Janice Rosson with a check for $250. The money will be used for membership in a rental program for the Disney videotapes, which would not be funded through the school's regular budget.

The rental library has 150 tapes available in nearly all content areas, such as language, literature, social studies and others. At the end of the school year, College Heights can opt to return the videotapes and rent others, or continue renting the same ones.

The rental program is a good choice both economically and educationally, Rosson explained. "You couldn't begin to buy that many tapes for that amount of money," she said.

The rental program ensures the school can have the most up-to-date tapes available; purchased tapes could become outdated within a year or two and would be expensive to replace.

Teachers' manuals that accompany the tapes provide activities and lessons to be used in relation to what students see on the tapes. "It's not just sitting the children down and keeping them entertained," Rosson said.

She and Mason agreed the use of videotapes, computers and other popular technology is becoming necessary to keep students interested in learning.

She learned about the Disney tape rental program while at the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development Conference in San Francisco last week. "They had a booth there, and it caught my attention," Rosson said.

"We appreciate the Retired Teachers Association remembering us this way," she added. Mason quipped, "We're excited that teachers will have this kind of help in the classroom. We didn't!"

Child safety seminar is for every parent

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

It is a parent's worst nightmare - you send your child out to play and they never come back. This scenario happens at least 5,000 times a year in the United States. Children are sexually assaulted, murdered or their bodies never found.

Laura Proctor knows this scenario all too well. Her 10-year-old child, Christie, was abducted by a stranger in Dallas in 1986. Through networking with other parents, Proctor founded the Texas Association for Stolen Children.

"She (Laura) wanted to help others who were or who had gone through this type of ordeal. She founded the association before we found Christie," said Lynette Brooks, Laura's mother.

Brooks adds her granddaughter's remains were found two years later in Dallas. The case remains unsolved and no one has been arrested in connection with the murder.

Proctor will be the guest speaker at a child safety seminar at the Big Spring High School auditorium April 10 from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

She will present a program for all concerned adults and this is not suitable for children under 12 years old. Even children who are older may not be able to handle some of the graphic information and pictures Proctor will present in her seminar.

This is being sponsored by Moss, Marcy, Bauer, Kentwood, College Heights and Washington elementary schools along with the Anderson Kindergarten Center.

Admission is free. According to a TASC brochure, it was "created to aid in and effect the recovery of missing children, to provide assistance to all children at risk in the capacity of a child advocacy agency and to increase public awareness and support of missing and exploited children. TASC serves as a resource for all children and their families."

"Every child deserves a safe, healthy and happy childhood. It is the responsibility of all of us to work for the future of our country, our world, our children."

The association provides technical assistance and emphasizes support to the families. They also help distribute posters and information about missing children through various media in the United States, Mexico and Canada.

They also network with other national agencies and regional child advocacy organizations, law enforcement agencies and other governmental entities concerned with this dilemma.

Proctor's organization also educates and provides training for the public, law enforcement and other related professionals about missing children and child safety issues. As the executive director of TASC, Proctor regularly delivers safety programs to various groups.

"TASC provides its services without consideration to economic, geographic, racial, religious or social indications. It charges no fees to families enlisting help. TASC relies solely upon monetary contributions as well as public donations of goods and services to support its efforts in aiding missing and exploited children," the brochure states.

Some tips from Proctor on keeping your child safe include:

- Know your child's day care and sitters. You should be free to drop in anytime to observe and/or pick up your child. Get references and check them and visit them in person when possible. Be aware of who your sitters or home care persons are talking to or seeing while your child is in their care such as their spouse, boyfriend/girlfriend and family members.

- Make sure your child is never released to anyone unless you have specifically notified the person of who that person will be and the person must show identification.

- Know your child's friends and be involved in their activities.

- Never leave your child unattended in a car, store, restaurant, etc.

- Promote open communication between you and your child. Listen to them when they don't want to be with someone or feel uncomfortable with someone, there may be a very good reason why.

- Don't force your child to hug or kiss people they don't want to. Let them know they have control over their own body.

First Lady Hillary Clinton and daughter Chelsea ride an elephant during a visit to Chitwan National Forest in Nepal April 2. Chelsea's trip is seen by many as her chance to shine as a junior diplomat.

Chelsea Clinton is in international spotlight

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Spring break is turning into an international coming-out party for 15-year-old Chelsea Clinton.

The only child of Bill and Hillary Clinton, protectively shielded from the spotlight at home, is emerging as a poised junior diplomat on her mother's tour of the Indian subcontinent.

Photos beamed home from the other side of the world show her side by side with her mother in every setting from the top of an elephant to opulent official dinners, clearly fascinated at all she is seeing.

Her wonderment comes through in the questions she asks and the careful eye with which she studies her surroundings.

Visiting Mother Teresa's orphanage in New Delhi, India, Chelsea quietly questioned the nuns about adoption procedures before expertly cuddling a baby in front of the cameras.

Touring the splendor of the pearl-white Taj Mahal, she described the building as "the embodiment of the fairy-tale palace" of her younger days.

"I would see pictures of it and I would dream I was a princess or whatever," she recalled, "and now that I am here it's spectacular."

Visiting the sprawling Faisal Mosque in Islamabad, Pakistan, it was Chelsea who asked the most detailed questions.

Having studied Islam in history class at school, she engaged one of the scholars one-on-one while her mother conversed with another guide. And when White House aides working on a speech needed to double-check a reference in the Koran, it was Chelsea who readily produced one she had brought from home.

The first daughter sometimes breaks off on her own — security guards in tow — to explore these exotic Asian settings at her own pace. She headed off on an elephant Sunday morning while her mother went hiking. More often than not, though, she has elected to accompany her mother from one official event to the next, to the delight of their hosts.

At the Islamabad College for Girls, adoring teen-age girls gathered around her in their outdoor cantina while the first lady chatted with school officials elsewhere.

The worldwide exposure is an abrupt change of pace for a tenth-grader who attends private school and has been surprisingly protected from the spotlight during the first two years of her father's presidency.

Spokeswoman Lisa Caputo, who gets caught in the middle of the tug-of-war over coverage of Chelsea, said the eye-opening experiences of the Clintons' visit to Asia easily outweighed concerns about the increased public exposure for Chelsea.

"It's a learning experience of a lifetime," she said. "This is a remarkable experience for anyone to have — no matter what age."

School Teaching Inner-City Pupils to Mind Their Manners

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — With its front door locked against the evils of the inner city, Dupuy Elementary School doesn't look like an oasis of etiquette.

But inside, pupils are being drilled on the courteous way to eat and to answer the phone. A demure "Yes, ma'am," they learn, is the only proper response to a lady.

"If I just reached under Tiffinie's desk and took her books, would that be showing her respect?" etiquette instructor Adrian Pearson asks a fifth-grade class.

"No, ma'am," the youngsters respond.

"Should you stare at other people?" she asks.

"No, ma'am."

The next day's lesson: "Charming is as charming does."

Dupuy (rhymes with "soupy") is home to an experimental program aimed at restoring common courtesy to Birmingham's schools, which are struggling with problems such as drugs, violence and dropping out.

The theory is that pupils will do better academically if they learn to respect others, and, in turn, themselves.

"This is about early intervention, getting rid of those bad habits before they are established," Principal Samuella Drew says. "You can't curse everybody out or shoot everybody, although those seem popular now."

Ten-year-old Tiffinie Hawkins says she learned proper posture in etiquette class. And, she says, she has seen a change in her schoolmates.

"They treat people with more respect than they did before," Tiffinie says.

Ms. Pearson works for Etiquette Training Services Inc., which has a $10,530 contract to teach Dupuy's 208 pupils to mind their manners.

Kindergartners receive seven hours of "manner classes" during the year, while those in grades one through five get 10 hours. The company also put on a workshop for parents.

Once the program is over, the young ladies and gentlemen will be tested to see how much they remember.

The principal isn't expecting miracles. She just saw a need for more civility at the school when she arrived last year and launched the program.

Dupuy is in a blighted neighborhood. Steel gates cover the office windows to keep burglars out, and visitors must press a buzzer to get in.

"If these kids learn how to interact with each other, learn how to talk and eat properly, they will have better self-esteem," Superintendent Cleveland Hammonds said.

Use information from the story to answer the following questions:

1. Why are Dupuy Elementary School students being taught rules of etiquette, or proper behavior?
2. Who is teaching the pupils about manners?
3. What two examples of disrespectful school behavior were mentioned by Adrian Pearson?
4. What might be a courteous way to answer the phone?
5. According to the article, what is the proper way to respond to a lady?
6. How many students are receiving lessons in good man-

An Easter Egg Story

It was a beautiful day when Mr. Bunny Driver left to deliver the Easter egg dyes.

This read-aloud story is for older children or adults to read to younger listeners.

It was just before Easter, not too long ago. The Easter Bunny had just one last thing to do before the BIG DAY.

He had to dye the eggs! Since only the freshest eggs could go into the children's baskets, he always saved the job until last.

He had put in his order for the dyes two months ago and was waiting for them to be delivered.

The cart carrying the pretty dyes was on its way to Bunnytown from a factory in a village many miles away.

It was a beautiful day when Mr. Bunny Driver left, but soon a spring rain began to fall. It sprinkled, then it poured. What a storm!

"I don't have to worry," thought Mr. Bunny Driver to himself. "I carefully packed the dyes under a waterproof cover so they can't get wet."

But what he didn't know was that there were holes ... and quite big holes at that. Trails of blue, green, orange, yellow and purple dye started running out of the cart.

The road looked like a rainbow, but Mr. Bunny Driver didn't know.

When the cart reached Bunnytown, the rain had stopped and the sun was out. Mr. Bunny Driver drove to the Easter Bunny's house where all the bunny workers were waiting.

He threw back the cover, and what did he see? Wet, soggy, empty bags. And behind the cart, a trail that led right up to the Easter Bunny's house.

What to do? There was no time to put in another order for Easter egg dye.

"I have an idea," said the littlest bunny in the group. "It's the way my great-great-grandmother used to dye eggs many years ago!" Being very shy, he whispered it in the Easter Bunny's ear.

"That is a great old-fashioned idea," said the delighted Easter Bunny. "We'll get all the dyes from the gardens and kitchens here in Bunnytown."

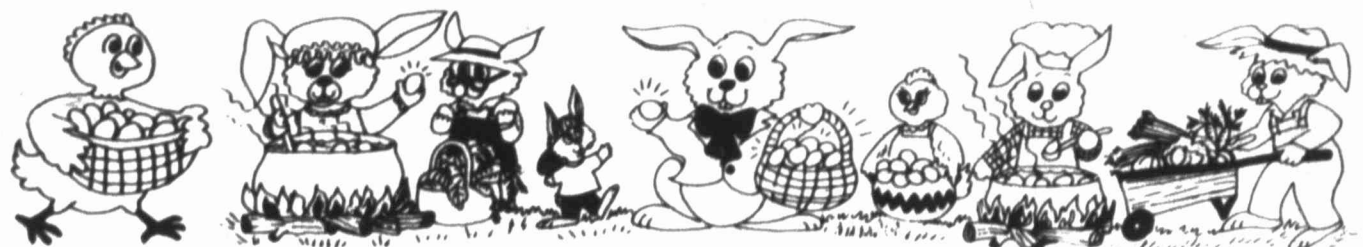

"We'll need all the red cabbage, oranges, carrot and celery tops, onion skins and vinegar we can find," he added.

The bunnies got to work. They fetched water from the wells. They got vinegar and pots from the kitchens. They built fires and dipped and dipped hundreds of eggs.

Many people say the eggs the Easter Bunny delivered that year were the prettiest ever. In fact, the Easter Bunny decided he would dye some Easter eggs the old-fashioned way each year.

If someday you are riding along the highway and see a trail of many colors, you might want to follow it all the way to the Easter Bunny's house.

He loves visitors — especially those who bring him red cabbage, oranges, carrot and celery tops, and onion skins!

- Orange peels: yellow

Natural Easter dyes

Here's how to dye eggs the natural way.

You'll need:

- saucepan (enamel pan works best)
- vinegar
- eggs

CAUTION! GET AN ADULT'S HELP WHEN USING THE STOVE.

What to do:

1. Put eggs in a single layer in a pan. Cover with water.
2. Add a teaspoon of vinegar.
3. Add whatever natural dye you are using. (The more eggs and water, the more tops and peelings you'll need.)
4. Bring just to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 15 minutes.
5. Remove whatever you used to make the natural dye. Put eggs in a bowl. To get a darker color, cover the eggs with the dye and let them stand overnight in a refrigerator. What a surprise you will have the next morning!

Packaged dyes and food coloring

If you buy egg dyes, just follow the directions on the package. If you use food coloring, add a tablespoon of vinegar to each cup of water.

Leaf

Wrap a leaf around an egg that is dyed a light color. Tie it in a piece of nylon stocking. Dip it into a darker color. Let it dry before unwrapping.

Marbled

Wrap a piece of cloth around an egg dyed a light color. Tie it at the top. Dip it into a darker color. Let it dry before unwrapping it.

Plaids

Fasten strips of masking tape around an egg dyed a light color. Dip it into a darker color.

Here are a few of the many ways to dress up your dyed eggs:

Make a lion out of yarn and paper.

Make a bunny from cotton balls and paper.

Glue your name on an egg using alphabet macaroni. You might want to dye the macaroni, too.

Rookie Cookie's Easter Egg Safety Recipe

Here are some tips from the American Egg Board.

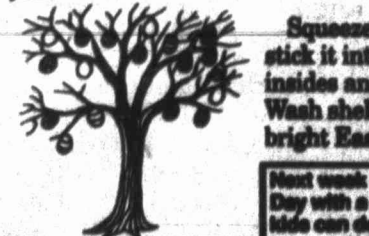

You'll need:

- clean hands. Wash them every step along the way.
- a refrigerator to put your eggs in right after cooking and after coloring. Don't eat any eggs that have been out of the refrigerator for more than 2 hours. Don't eat any that have been in the hot sun for any time at all.
- eggs with no cracks. Do not eat or color eggs with cracks.

Make an Easter egg tree

Here's how to remove the insides of an egg to make an egg tree.

Use a pin to poke a hole in one end. Wiggle the pin to break the yolk.

Squeeze the bulb of a baster and stick it into the hole. Draw out the insides and put them into a bowl. Wash shells and paint them with bright Easter colors.

Next week we celebrate Earth Day with a story about what kids can do to help.

Weight: 85
Birthplace: Dnepropetrovsk, Ukraine
Last year 16-year-old Oksana Baiul won a gold medal at the Olympics. It was the first time a female won a world championship in her first try. The day before the finale, she was injured during practice.

She learned to skate as a child on old, bent-up skates with crooked blades and holes in the toes.

She was orphaned at 13 and was adopted by her coach. Oksana's brother-in-law is former skating champion Viktor Petrenko.

Oksana now lives in Connecticut and has learned to drive. She is learning to speak English and is being tutored in high school courses.

She likes pizza and playing Nintendo.

Children crave structure

By MIA B. MOODY
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas — Although it may seem that children would beg for freedom, most parents are surprised to learn children crave structure and consistency, said Pearl Beverly, director of student activities at Baylor University.

"It's difficult for parents to know exactly what children need and want from adults, so who better to ask than them," said Beverly.

Since children spend 50 percent of their time with parents, 25 percent in the community and 25 percent at school, parents have the largest influence on their children's lives, Beverly said.

Cheryl Nichols, a parent educator for the Waco Independent School District, said parents can make the most of the time they spend with their children by planning ahead.

"Good parenting skills don't come naturally," she said. "They are something that you must work on."

Based on research and personal experience, Beverly and Nichols believe these are the top 10 things children want from their parents:

1. Consistency. Don't set rules one day and change them the next. Inconsistency confuses children.

2. Patience. Don't give up. Children know when their parents have given up on them.

3. Fair discipline. Use a positive approach to disciplining your children whenever possible.

4. Balance. Don't harp on your child's weak points.

5. Open communication lines. Children want to be heard and understood. Don't do all of the talking without stopping to listen to what they have to say.

6. Separate identity. Allow them to develop their own personalities.

7. Precision. Children want to know exactly what is expected of them on a daily basis. Make a list of their chores and follow through.

8. Structure. Don't threaten to do anything that can't be carried out. Tell them the consequences of inappropriate behavior only after thinking it out.

9. A strong shoulder. Children want parents who will serve as a strong shoulder for them to lean on when they need help and guidance.

10. Unconditional love. Children need to know their parents will always love them even when they mess up.

HOROSCOPE

FOR FRIDAY, APRIL 7, 1995

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What starts out as confusing develops clarity by the end of the day. You can make peace where war seemed to exist. Stay firm in your convictions. Be true to yourself and you everything will turn out fine. Take a walk at lunch to center yourself. Tonight: Veg out at home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Verify news. Don't get upset over a change in plans. A boss may be difficult, or a partner may be contrary. You communicate very well and resolve a problem. Be ready to discuss what's on your mind. Don't be overly sensitive. Tonight: Hang out with favorite friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Curb spending while you can. An impulsive act could cost you. A friend encourages and supports you. Instant gratification doesn't do it for you in the long run. Stay connected to bottom lines as you deal with your finances. Be gentle with a co-worker. Tonight: Your treat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A positive approach will help bypass a problem with an insensitive, difficult boss or co-worker. Pointing out that person is wrong will not help the situation. Reach out to others who are at a distance. Resolve the immediate problem by examining the bottom line. Tonight: As you like it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Kick back, and gain information. Confusion surrounds communications and a potential trip. Listen to what another is sharing. This person cares deeply about you. A loved one offers financial and emotional support. You can no longer back off. Tonight: Take a night off from the grind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Zero in on what's important. Don't do anything halfway. Be sure of yourself. Communications that surround a business matter could be confusing. Keep your eye on the long term. A partner is there for you and clearly lets you know that. Tonight: Go out on the town.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You need to handle responsibilities. Confusion surrounds a relationship. You might feel as if too many people are making too many demands. It is up to you to decide what is appropriate for you to do. This is a question of discrimination. Tonight: Work late.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Partners may be unsure about what to expect from you. Instructions involving work also could be confusing. You might not be clear about what you are doing. Verify before you take action. Openly demonstrate your creativity. Look at life in new ways. Tonight: Reach out for another.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): One-to-one relating is highlighted. You are feeling very good about yourself. You resolve immediate problems. A child or loved one may throw a tantrum. This person doesn't understand your choices. Be understanding. Tonight: Entertain the one you love at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be diplomatic with partners. You might like the flak that comes from a family member. This person means well but has an odd way of communicating it. Be sensitive to what's being offered. Stay centered; don't let someone upset you. Tonight: Go out.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Work is demanding. Finances may put you in an undesirable situation. Release tension, stay anchored and know your limits. Finances will improve when you put in that extra amount of effort. Stay secure about what you want. Tonight: Get some physical exercise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You solve a problem because of a surge in creativity. Another gains a new perspective of you. Money matters are favored. Brainstorm with a friend or loved one. Do not push another away. Stay centered about what is right for you. Tonight: Let out the romantic in you.

IF APRIL 7 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Confusion surrounds relationships and family matters. You need to always give someone the benefit of the doubt. Being vulnerable when discussing feelings will prove to be a winning suit for you. New perspectives, detachment and understanding others will allow you to embark on a new course. Allow yourself to open up to what life offers. If you are single: Romance may have a unique quality; it could involve a foreigner, or you might find yourself in a quiet relationship that you don't want to discuss with others. If attached: Most of the focus is on your home life and being together; you might buy a new home or put on an addition; romance could carry you in many strange directions. CANCER is loyal to you.

Living will needs doctor's OK

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Grieving Widow, Edgewater, Fla.," concerning Living Wills brought back some painful memories.

My husband died of a heart attack a year ago. When I discovered him, he had already started to turn blue. I called 911. The police arrived quickly and began administering CPR. After what seemed like a long time, I finally said, "Please stop; my husband has suffered with pain for years, and lately he's been talking about suicide -- let him go! He has a Living Will."

They said they were under standing orders to apply CPR until the emergency medical technicians arrived. When they got there, the police told them about the Living Will, but they insisted on contacting his doctor. I was grateful that the doctor instructed them to discontinue CPR. This illustrates that only the doctor's decision counts -- not what the patient wants.

Later the police officers, who were very comforting, told me that my husband was already gone when they arrived.

It angers me when doctors who oppose the right to die insist they can keep patients free from pain. My husband tried for years to get some relief from constant pain.

Doctors are not gods, and we should stop putting them in that position. -- WITHOUT

FREEDOM OF CHOICE

DEAR WITHOUT: Your letter underscores the importance of stating one's wishes in writing. That is why I urge readers to have a Living Will. Also, it is imperative that physicians agree to honor it.

DEAR ABBY: I was shocked by the report of the grieving widow in Edgewater, Fla., whose physician refused to honor her husband's Living Will. His refusal was contrary to federal law.

The Patient Self-Determination Act became effective on Dec. 1, 1991, and established without question that medical personnel and health-care institutions must respect and comply with Living Wills executed by mentally competent persons. Failure to abide by those instructions may lead to malpractice suits.

It is also now well-established by law and by court decisions that a mentally competent patient may accept or reject any recommended treatment. If the patient has signed a Living Will and should become unable to communicate, the "next of kin" is authorized to make decisions on behalf of the patient.

Even now, it may not be too late for the grieving widow to take action. -- ROY TORCASO, PRESIDENT, HEMLOCK SOCIETY OF THE NATIONAL CAPITAL AREA, MCLEAN, VA.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD

Start your ad with the item for sale, service you are offering, or job title of the person you're looking for. Be descriptive. The detail information is what sells the item to the reader. Always include the price of the item. Avoid abbreviations they only confuse the reader. Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, always check your ad for correct phone numbers, addresses, etc. on the first day of publication.

This date in history

Today is Thursday, April 6, the 96th day of 1995. There are 269 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On April 6, 1909, explorers Robert E. Peary and Matthew A. Henson became the first men to reach the North Pole. (The claim, disputed by skeptics, was upheld in 1989 by the Navigation Foundation.)

On this date:
In 1830, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was organized by Joseph Smith in Fayette, N.Y.
In 1862, the Civil War Battle of Shiloh began as the Confederates attacked Union forces in Tennessee.

In 1896, the first modern Olympic games formally opened in Athens, Greece.

In 1917, Congress approved a declaration of war against Germany.

In 1945, 50 years ago, during World War II, the Japanese warship Yamato and nine other vessels sailed on a suicide mission to attack the U.S. fleet off Okinawa; the fleet was intercepted the next day.

In 1963, the United States and Britain signed an agreement under which the Americans would sell Polaris A-3 missiles to the British.

In 1965, the United States launched the Early Bird communications satellite.

In 1983, saying rock 'n' roll bands attracted "the wrong element," Interior Secretary James Watt declined to invite the Beach Boys to perform at a Washington Fourth of July celebration — a stand he later reversed.

In 1992, ethnic warfare erupted in Bosnia-Herzegovina as the European Community recognized the former Yugoslav republic as an independent state.

Ten years ago: William J. Schroeder became the first artificial heart recipient to be discharged from the hospital as he moved into an apartment in Louisville, Ky. Gaafar Nimeiri, the president of Sudan, was overthrown in a coup.

One year ago: Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun announced his retirement after 24 years. The presidents of Rwanda and Burundi were killed in a mysterious plane crash near Rwanda's capital — widespread violence erupted in Rwanda over claims the plane had been shot down. A Palestinian suicide-bomber killed seven Israelis in an attack on a bus in Afula.

An Easter Egg Story

It was a beautiful day when Mr. Bunny Driver left to deliver the Easter egg dyes.

This read-aloud story is for older children or adults to read to younger listeners.

It was just before Easter, not too long ago. The Easter Bunny had just one last thing to do before the BIG DAY.

He had to dye the eggs! Since only the freshest eggs could go into the children's baskets, he always saved the job until last.

He had put in his order for the dyes two months ago and was waiting for them to be delivered.

The cart carrying the pretty dyes was on its way to Bunniytown from a factory in a village many miles away.

It was a beautiful day when Mr. Bunny Driver left, but soon a spring rain began to fall. It sprinkled, then it poured. What a storm!

"I don't have to worry," thought Mr. Bunny Driver to himself. "I carefully packed the dyes under a waterproof cover so they can't get wet."

But what he didn't know was that there were holes ... and quite big holes at that. Trails of blue, green, orange, yellow and purple dye started running out of the cart.

The road looked like a rainbow, but Mr. Bunny Driver didn't know.

When the cart reached Bunniytown, the rain had stopped and the sun was out. Mr. Bunny Driver drove to the Easter Bunny's house where all the bunny workers were waiting.

He threw back the cover, and what did he see? Wet, soggy, empty bags. And behind the cart, a trail that led right up to the Easter Bunny's house.

What to do? There was no time to put in another order for Easter egg dye.

"I have an idea," said the littlest bunny in the group. "It's the way my great-great-grandmother used to dye eggs many years ago!" Being very shy, he whispered it in the Easter Bunny's ear.

"That is a great old-fashioned idea," said the delighted Easter Bunny. "We'll get all the dyes from the gardens and kitchens here in Bunniytown."

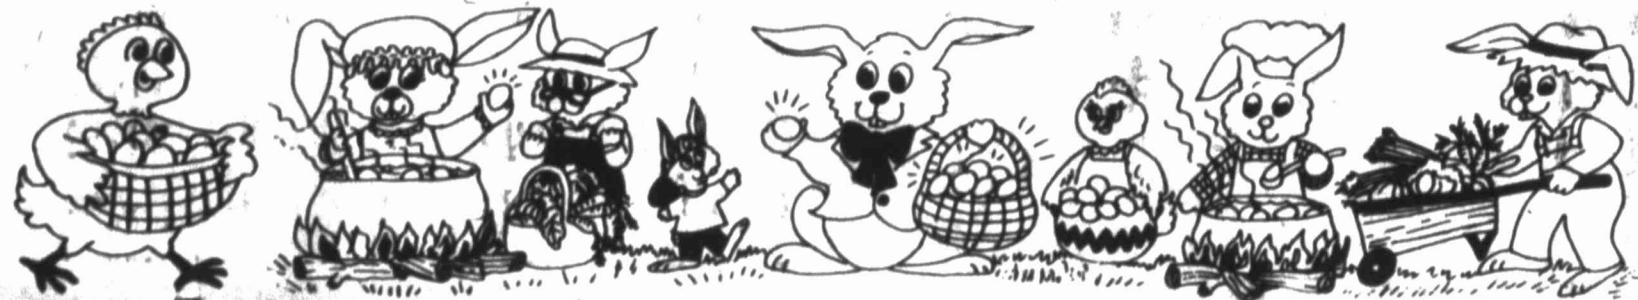

"We'll need all the red cabbage, oranges, carrot and celery tops, onion skins and vinegar we can find," he added.

The bunnies got to work. They fetched water from the wells. They got vinegar and pots from the kitchens. They built fires and dipped and dipped hundreds of eggs.

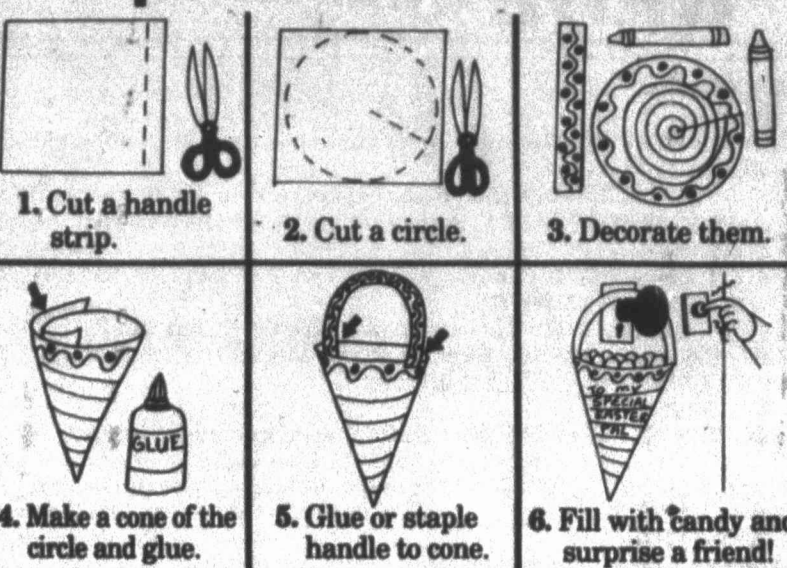

Many people say the eggs the Easter Bunny delivered that year were the prettiest ever. In fact, the Easter Bunny decided he would dye some Easter eggs the old-fashioned way each year.

If someday you are riding along the highway and see a trail of many colors, you might want to follow it all the way to the Easter Bunny's house.

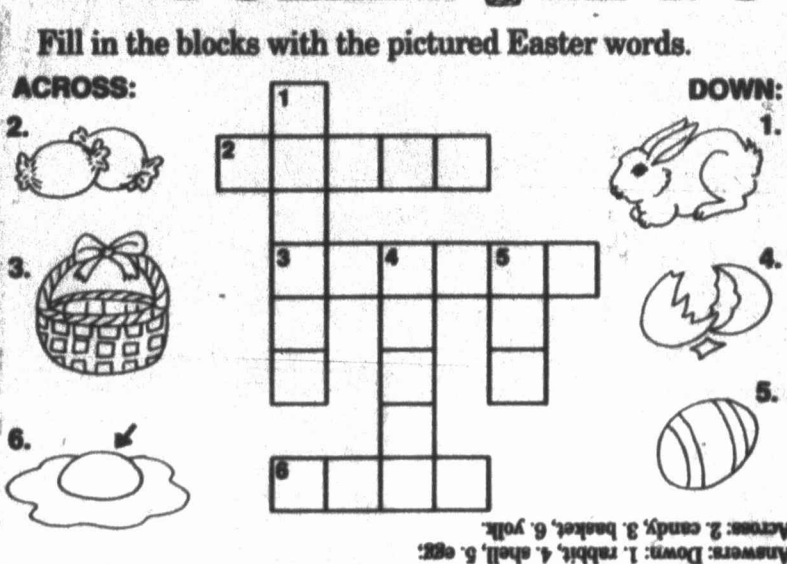

He loves visitors — especially those who bring him red cabbage, oranges, carrot and celery tops, and onion skins!

Rookie Cookie's Recipe Eggcellent Breakfast

You'll need:

- 1/2 green pepper, chopped
- 1 tablespoon margarine, melted
- 4 eggs
- 1 can cream of mushroom soup

What to do:

1. Cook green pepper and margarine in a microwave-safe casserole 1 minute or until green pepper is tender.
2. In a medium bowl, combine eggs and soup. Mix well.
3. Add egg mixture to casserole with green pepper. Cover.
4. Cook 4 to 5 minutes on HIGH or until eggs are cooked. Stir halfway through cooking. Serves 4.

EGG DECORATING

Natural dyes, and colors you'll get!

Red cabbage leaves: blue

Spinach: golden-pink

Carrot tops: greenish-yellow

Yellow Delicious apple peels: lavender

Onion skins: orange

Orange peels: yellow

Natural Easter dyes

Here's how to dye eggs the natural way.

You'll need:

- saucepan (enamel pan works best)
- vinegar
- eggs

CAUTION! GET AN ADULT'S HELP WHEN USING THE STOVE.

What to do:

1. Put eggs in a single layer in a pan. Cover with water.
2. Add a teaspoon of vinegar.
3. Add whatever natural dye you are using. (The more eggs and water, the more tops and peelings you'll need.)
4. Bring just to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 15 minutes.
5. Remove whatever you used to make the natural dye. Put eggs in a bowl. To get a darker color, cover the eggs with the dye and let them stand overnight in a refrigerator. What a surprise you will have the next morning!

Packaged dyes and food coloring

If you buy egg dyes, just follow the directions on the package. If you use food coloring, add a tablespoon of vinegar to each cup of water.

Leaf

Wrap a leaf around an egg that is dyed a light color. Tie it in a piece of nylon stocking. Dip it into a darker color. Let it dry before unwrapping.

Marbled Wrap a piece of cloth around an egg dyed a light color. Tie it at the top. Dip it into a darker color. Let it dry before unwrapping it.

Plaids

Fasten strips of masking tape around an egg dyed a light color. Dip it into a darker color.

Here are a few of the many ways to dress up your dyed eggs:

Make a lion out of yarn and paper.

Make a bunny from cotton balls and paper.

Glue your name on an egg using alphabet macaroni. You might want to dye the macaroni, too.

Rookie Cookie's Easter Egg Safety Recipe

Here are some tips from the American Egg Board.

You'll need:

- clean hands. Wash them every step along the way.
- a refrigerator to put your eggs in right after cooking and after coloring. Don't eat any eggs that have been out of the refrigerator for more than 2 hours. Don't eat any that have been in the hot sun for any time at all.
- eggs with no cracks. Do not eat or color eggs with cracks.

Make an Easter egg tree

Here's how to remove the insides of an egg to make an egg tree.

Use a pin to poke a hole in one end. Wiggle the pin to break the yolk.

Squeeze the bulb of a baster and stick it into the hole. Draw out the insides and put them into a bowl. Wash shells and paint them with bright Easter colors.

Next week we celebrate Earth Day with a story about what kids can do to help.
