Many of the hail stones were as large as baseballs and broke show windows, tore through car tops and skylights with little effort. Many roofs were badly damaged.

Hail accompanied the rain and farmers reported considerable damage to crops from the stones.

Although flashing skies were prevalent in Lubbock and immediate vicinity last night at a late hour, no moisture had been reported.

A fall of about one inch was recorded Thursday night which extended from one-quarter to two inches. Results of Thursday night's heavy rains were still in evidence Friday between Lubbock and Post as ditches along the side of the road were still almost bank full of water.

Presentations to Be This Afternoon And Tonight

BY AL HILL
Avalanche Staff Writer
EVEN though its lines were spoken in German to an audience of 1,500 Americans, among whom were probably no more than two score who understood the language, the Freiburg Passion play, presented for a first performance in Lubbock at the Texas Tech gym last night, possesses much of the power obtaining in the greatest drama ever known to mankind—the crucifixion of Christ.

Two more performances of the Passion play will be presented here, one at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon and the other at 8:15 tonight. A price of fifty cents for school children and seventy-five cents for teachers features the matinee. After 1:30 this afternoon and 7:30 tonight, city buses will go by the Tech gymnasium for the benefit of customers.

No better proof could be desired of the Freiburg players' genuineness of dedicating their lives to giving the world the lessons of the Passion play, than the circumstances under which last night's performance was given. Lubbock's lack of adequate stage and auditorium facilities compelled the cast to labor under prolonged wait before the show began, while stage hands and electricians hammered on sets and strung light wires. This delay was for half an hour.

High Stage Provided
The entire south end of the Tech gymnasium was made over entirely for the improvised stage. Mammoth sets were somehow put in place without any system of fly loft network of ropes for hanging drops. Rafters of the gym were utilized.

Practice Of Denouncing Democrats Branded Unworthy In Governor's Statement; Claims Party Still Dry

(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, May 2.—Governor Moody today issued an appeal for peace within the democratic party in Texas and urged its members to forget the controversy of 1928 over the presidential election, when the state gave the republican electors a majority for the first time in history.

He said "the practice of denouncing democrats of our state because they voted the ticket and supported their party is entirely unworthy," and that "attempts to pronounce party capital punishment on democrats who did not vote the ticket and close the party door in their face cannot possibly help the party."

Would Ban Bolters
The state democratic executive committee had voted to exclude as candidates for state offices in the 1930 primaries persons who bolted the party to vote for the republican presidential nominee.

Senator Thomas B. Love of Dallas, contested the rights of the party executives to bar candidates because of their failure to vote for former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York for president, and his case is now before the supreme court. He would force the committee

TRIED ALL KINDS OF LAXATIVES

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Gave Only Permanent Relief

As everybody knows, the market is flooded with cathartics, pills and patent compounds for the relief of constipation. At best, whatever results are obtained are temporary. Besides, there is the danger in certain drugs and the habit-forming nature.

Mr. P. M. Fisher, 517 Olive Street, Scranton, Pa., has something to say on this subject which will be interesting to all constipation sufferers. He says:

"For many years I suffered from constipation and used, for relief, all kinds of laxatives. After a few days' treatment, I would only find my condition the same as before and at times worse.

"Some time ago I started to use Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly, once a day as directed, since doing this, I have found that I do not need any other medicine to procure the desired result, and I keep me in a very healthful condition."

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is positively guaranteed to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation or the purchase price will be refunded.

In addition, it adds needed iron to the diet. You will like its delicious flavor. There are many delightful ways to eat it. Your grocer has Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR

MAY 4, 1930

General Topic: Promotions In The Kingdom.

Scripture Lesson: Matt. 20:17-28.

Matt. 20:17. And as Jesus was going up to Jerusalem, he took the twelve disciples apart, and on the way he said unto them, 'Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests and scribes; and they shall condemn him to death.'

18. And shall deliver him unto the Gentiles to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify; and the third day shall be raised up.

19. Then came to him the mother of the sons of Zebedee with her two sons, worshipping him, and asking of him a certain thing of him.

20. And he said unto her, 'What wouldst thou? She saith unto him, 'Command that these my two sons may sit, one on thy right hand, and one on thy left hand, in thy kingdom.'

21. But Jesus answered and said, 'Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink the cup that I am about to drink? They say unto him, 'We are able.'

22. He saith unto them, 'My cup indeed ye shall drink; but to sit on my right hand, and on my left hand, is not mine to give; but it is prepared of my Father.'

23. And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation concerning the two brethren.

24. But Jesus called them unto him, and said, 'Ye know that the rulers of the Gentiles lord it over them, and their great ones exercise authority over them.'

25. Now so shall it be among you; but whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister; and whosoever would be first among you shall be your servant; and the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.—Matt. 20:28.

Time: March, A. D. 30, two or three weeks before the crucifixion.

Place: Peraea, on the way to Jerusalem.

Introduction.

'The Son of God goes forth to war; a kingly crown to gain; His blood-red banner streams afar; Who follows in his train? Who best can drink his cup of woe, Triumphant over pain; Who patient bears his cross below, He follows in his train.—Heber.

'Earthly thrones are built with steps up to them; the remarkable thing about the thrones of the eternal kingdom is that the steps are all down to them. We must descend if we would ascend, stoop if we would rise.—F. B. Meyer.

Jesus Foretells His Death. Vs. 17-19.

Mark mentions the interesting fact that on the way, Jesus being in advance—he is always 'on before'—they were 'amazed,' and 'afraid.' Was there something about Jesus' bearing, or some glory of countenance, now that he had set his face toward Jerusalem, that had not been there before? Luke adds that he told them that 'all the things that are written through the prophets shall be accomplished,' and Mark that 'they understood none of these things, etc.' Jesus' prophecy is remarkable for its detailed character (ver. 18, 19).

This was the third time, so far as we know, that he had alluded plainly to his passion (cp. Matt. 16:21 and 17:22). Yet it is evident from such references as Luke 12:50 that the catastrophe was often in his thought. He speaks 'here as a voyager to whom the sound of the cataract is no longer a distant murmur' (Rosa). When we read those words of his, 'Behold, we go up to Jerusalem,' we should never forget that he already clearly saw the cross standing on 'the place of the skull.' 'We hear it said sometimes that it was wonderful that Jesus, having undertaken the world's salvation, did not draw back at the sight of the cross. Would it not have been more wonderful if, being Jesus, he had drawn back?' (Phillips Brooks.)

Christ The Suffering Servant. Matt. 20:17-19.

Four times, as recorded by Matthew, our Lord solemnly predicted that he would suffer a violent, agonizing and shameful death. If Mat-theus recorded so many predictions, it is probable that the Saviour gave utterance to the prophecy very often, seeking to prepare his disciples for the awful event, and disclose to them the real nature of his kingdom, turning their minds, if possible, from just such ideas of worldly preferment and material triumph as are implied in Salome's request (verse 21). Christ's crucifixion and glorious resurrection are the most wonderful illustration in all history of the Christian principle that 'the last shall be first and the first last,' and therefore Jesus' announcement of his coming death is most appropriately placed here.

'Going Up To Jerusalem.' V. 17.

'And as Jesus was going up to Jerusalem.' He was leaving Peraea, the country east of the Jordan, and was journeying to the Holy City for the last time. 'He took the twelve disciples apart.' The great teacher and miracle-worker was always surrounded by a jostling, clamorous crowd, and Christ needed to withdraw with his disciples if he would have a quiet talk with them. 'And on the way he said unto them.'

The prediction he intended to make was poorly understood even by the disciples; it would be wholly misunderstood by the common crowd.

'Behold, we go up to Jerusalem.' 'Behold' indicates the solemn and important nature of the announcement. 'And the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests and scribes.' That is, the Sanhedrin, the highest court of the Jews, consisting of seventy senators plus a presiding officer, the high priest. The Sanhedrin (often called the Council) was made up of chief priests (those who had been high priests and the heads of the courses into which the priests were divided), with representatives of the scribes or lawyers, who copied and expounded the law, and also of the elders or heads of families. 'And they shall condemn him to death.' They could not put him to death without the consent of the Roman authorities, for those rulers reserved to themselves the right of capital punishment.

Crucifixion and Resurrection Foretold. V. 19.

'And shall deliver him unto the Gentiles.' That is, the Roman authorities. 'To mock, and to scourge, and to crucify.' This is the most particular prophecy of the horrors that were to attend the Saviour's death. 'And the third day he shall be raised up.' Our blessed Master added a word which overpowered the bitterness of the death-draught. Here was the bright lining of the black cloud. This poured a flood of light on what else had been a sevenfold midnight.—C. H. Spurgeon.

The Ambitious Apostles, James and John. Vs. 20, 21.

'Then came to him the mother of the sons of Zebedee with her sons.' Her name was Salome, and her sons were the two apostles, James and John. From their fiery impetuosity they were called by Christ Boanerges, or 'sons of thunder.' James afterwards was the first of the apostles to suffer martyrdom, and John became the bishop of Ephesus, wrote the fourth Gospel, three Epistles, and the Revelation, and died at the great age of nearly one hundred.—And asking a certain thing of him.' Mark tells us that John and James made the request for themselves, and says nothing about Salome. Probably all three combined to present the petition.

'She saith unto him, 'Command that these my two sons may sit, one on thy right hand, and one on thy left hand, in thy kingdom.'

Only a short time before this our Lord had promised all the Twelve that when he ascended his throne of glory, they should sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel (Matt. 19, 28). Now James and John sought to obtain for themselves the most honorable thrones. They felt that they had a right to this promotion because Christ had distinguished them (with Peter) above the others by admitting them to the inner circle, and besides, their mother was seemingly the sister of Mary the mother of Jesus, so that they were cousins of Christ.

'Ye Know Not What Ye Ask.' V. 22.

'But Jesus answered and said, 'Ye know not what ye ask.' Christ turns to James and John, recognizing their ambition as the real source of the request. Their praying, Christians do not seek greatness for themselves but to make others great. They do not ask for their own prosperity, power, and happiness, but for the joy of the world. Ordinary ambition is like the Dead Sea, always taking in, never giving out, and so stagnant, heavy, and lifeless. Christian ambition is like a great, clear, life-giving river, ever flowing outward, blessing wherever it flows. 'But whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister.' His followers are to be great, but they are to be great servants, great helpers, great restorers, great comforters, great guides, great teachers, great aids in the advancement of human welfare; in short, they are to be great as he is great.

The Son Of Man, A Servant. V. 28.

'Even as the Son of man.' Christ as representative man, standing in our stead, living our life and bearing our sins. 'Came not to be ministered unto.' As he might well have been, for the crowds wanted to make him a king, and his powers of miracle-working could win for him unbounded wealth and limitless glory; but he would be none of it. 'But to minister.' Literally, 'to be a deacon, or a servant.' 'And to give his life a ransom for many.'

Christ gave his life; he laid it down of himself; he offered himself as a living sacrifice. He came as a ransom, to do for us what we could never do for ourselves. We were bound, he came to set us free. We were captives, and he bought our release. We were slaves, and he rescued us.

'By the thorn-road and no other.' Is the mount of vision won, Tread it without shrinking, brother! Jesus trod it; press thou on.—Samuel Johnson.

Longhorns Sweep Rice Net Match

HOUSTON, May 2. (AP)—Bruce Barnes, Southwest Conference singles champion, won a hard fought 2-3, 4-6, 6-2 match from Jack Hess today as the Texas Longhorns made a clean sweep of the Rice dual meet, six matches to none.

Earl Taylor had little difficulty in downing Norman Schwarz of Rice, 6-4, 6-2, but Rex White put up quite a battle against Ferguson, taking the first set to draw, though losing 6-8, 2-6, to the Texas.

Caldwell finished the singles cleanup by taking Tommy Henderson of the Orens into camp, 3-6, 6-1. Neither Hess nor Schwarz could do a thing with Barnes and Taylor in the doubles, losing, 3-6, 3-6.

In the number 2 doubles Caldwell and Hinchey walloped Henderson and White, 7-5, 6-2.

Louisiana Woman Holds Golf Title

BATON ROUGE, La., May 2. (AP)—Overcoming the sturdy challenge of Mrs. Dick Richards, Shreveport star, Mrs. Ruth Reynolds of Baton Rouge, three times state women's golf champion, again annexed the Louisiana title in the finals of the women's golf association tournament played today at Westdale Country club here.

SAN MARCOS WINS SAN MARCOS, May 2. (AP)—San Marcos Teachers won a double barreled victory over Southwestern University today, beating them at track 67 to 50, and winning five out of six tennis matches. Janca, weight man, scored fifteen of the Teachers' points, taking the shot, tissue and high hurdles.

Rain Prevents Friday Contest

Rain interfered Friday and caused the cancellation of the first major baseball attraction of the year for Lubbock baseball fans.

Game time found the Merrill Park playing field almost completely covered with water and the House of David baseball aggregation at Plainview, Word from the team's manager was to the effect that the club could not possibly make the trip over the roads between the Hale county capital and this city.

Because the Isaacites' playing schedule happens to be full between now and June 1, no attempt was made to arrange an appearance here at a later date.

Dallas and Waco Women Finalists In 36-Hole Struggle for Title in Women's Texas Golf Association Meet

Mrs. Cary conquered a courageous opponent in Mrs. G. B. Stuart, Texarkana, in her semi-final battle today. The Dallas champion was carried to the last hole before winning two up.

Mrs. Magruder had easier sailing with Countess Theo Von Knop, Houston, winning 5 and 3 and remaining well in front after the second hole.

The championship in the second flight went to Mrs. F. F. Dodge, Port Arthur, who received a default from Mrs. Dan Chandler, Dallas. Helen Nelson of Port Arthur defeated Mrs. A. O. Anderson, Dallas, 5 and 3 in the second flight consolation flight. Other finalists:

Loss Of Blood Means Nothing To Great One

Terrible Texan Anxious To Get Back In White Sox Line-up Despite Operation On Hip; Still Cocky

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK, May 2. (AP)—A pint of blood, more or less, means very little in the athletic life of Punch "Em Art Shires, the big blonde first baseman of the Chicago White Sox who made baseball prize ring conscious.

Chawing on a massive cud of ball player's delight, the terrible Texan mused his way into a uniform today and stood expectantly in hopes Donnie Bush, the little manager, would shove him into the White Sox opening match this season with the New York Yankees, and all this only ten hours after the Great One underwent a minor operation on his hip. Late last night doctors at a local hospital drained a pint of blood and pus from his right side injured April 22 in a collision with Johnny Hodapp, Cleveland second baseman.

Shires was bound in tape but highly expectant and ambitious as he took his turn in batting practice just as if nothing was wrong with him. He hasn't been able to play since the accident. But today, warm and bright, seemed to him just the right spot, operation or no operation, to resume his campaign for the first basing championship of the major leagues.

"I'm ready to go," he said as he leaned on his stick, "if it's only a punch hitter, I want to get in there today. I feel great, a little sore, but o. k."

He didn't get into the game, and Clancy who has been at first base for the Sox, was the star of the day.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them. Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is the pleasing unto the Lord. Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.—Colossians, iii. 19-21.

THE SCHOOL EXHIBIT

The Lubbock school system "muffed" a rare opportunity to further advertise its talents, when in holding its annual exhibit yesterday, officials decided to permit each school to stage its own showing for a few hours and let the matter go at that.

Without fear of contradiction, The Morning Avalanche insists that there are few, if any, citizens in Lubbock with time to travel over the entire school system to view an exhibit in its entirety, even though they wished to do so. And we further insist that there are hundreds of people—yes, into the thousands—who would attend a general exhibit of school work grouped at one central place and held over a period of several days and nights each spring.

Many American cities are favored with an annual spring school exhibit which lasts for five or six days, when crowds attend to view the work of the individual students and classes, grouped in a large assembly hall. It is a municipal event—one which makes friends for the schools and performs an education for the public, which otherwise cannot be had. Lubbock, as we see it, may do well to investigate.

We believe the people of Lubbock, who are acquainted with the local school system, are proud of it. We further believe that others, if given an opportunity to know just what the schools are doing, would appreciate the educational organization more than they now do with little knowledge of it.

It is our suggestion, with these points in mind, that Superintendent M. H. Duncan and his aides plan to look carefully into the matter of a city-wide school exposition as a regular spring feature. The system used yesterday was entirely too futile when one considers how much could have been done with little more work.

OMEN

Ancient rabbinical tradition asserts that from the time of Adam to Jacob sneezing was a sign of death. Jacob thought long on these things and finally went into prayer for a reprieve of the law. So successful was he in his petition that the phenomenon of sneezing ceased to be a sign of death and became an infallible sign of life.

Homer, Plutarch and Xenophon have left us stirring accounts of a sneeze that brought joy to Penelope's heart and courage to the Athenians. Xenophon, addressing his newly-elected generals, pleaded with them henceforth to wear an impenetrable war, citing as an omen from Zeus the Savior a sneeze that escaped one of his soldiers as he spoke.

According to Homer and Plutarch, the doom of hostages of war was sealed on a number of occasions by a sneeze, which was each time interpreted by seers as a tip from the gods that human sacrifice were in order.

Even the primitives of today live in fear of a sneeze that they thus part with their soul. And in Germany, Spain, Italy and France the curse of the sneeze is warded off with pious words.

So also is the sneeze a sign and an omen in America. It is a sign of a draft on your back or an ill omen of such coming ills as hay fever, colds and the flu.

SUPPLANTING THE DAIRY MAID

The dairy maid has virtually passed out of the rural scene in the United States. The bureau of dairy industry at Washington reports that the picturesque young woman so long associated with the production of butter is rapidly disappearing from the dairy farms.

Instead of the old-fashioned dasher churn, which was followed later by the barrel variety, there is found today the cream separator and the milking machine. Farm butter is still looked upon in some sections as superior to that produced in the creameries—the industrial age's substitute for the dairy maid and milk house. But from 1904 to 1929 creamery production increased 40 per cent and during the following six years another 60 per cent increase in production by the creameries took place. Throughout that period farm butter production fell off.

The greater demand for milk in the cities has resulted in the shifting of the manufacturing center of butter from time to time. Increases in butter production by southern, western and central states has largely compensated for the decrease in the New England states. The Northwest now holds the lead in this industry, but it already sees in the South a real competitor. In twenty years the South has increased its creamery butter production 2,500 per cent.

PRISON HORRORS SEEN AS INEVITABLE UNDER SYSTEM THAT MAKES CRIMINALS TWICE AS FAST AS IT DOES PRISONS

By CHARLES F. STEWART Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 2.—"Prison horrors are inevitable," said Congressman Florence P. Kahn, of California, "a system which manufactures criminals considerably more than twice as fast as prisons can be built to put them in."

"Ohio's wholesale targey at Columbus seems like the limit of the grotesquely terrible—but who knows?"

"After the last year's series of uprisings and bloodbaths, in state and federal penitentiaries alike, the country over, one must be an optimist to feel sure that nothing can outdo what already has happened."

Mrs. Kahn laid down the newspaper in which she had been reading of the warning, given months ago by President E. E. Dudding of the Prisoners' Relief society of the national capital to Gov. Myers Y. Cooper of Ohio, that conditions in the Columbus penitentiary already, at that time, were the worst in America, and of the governor's reply that the Buckeye state would look after its own penitentiary without any advice from outsiders.

"Possibly Ohio was worst," agreed the congressman, "but there cannot have been a great deal to choose between that and most other prisons."

"With Attorney General Mitchell only recently appealing to congress not to pass laws making still more crimes until additional penitentiaries are ready to hold new criminals, the federal government's dilemma speaks for itself. The accommodations of most if not all, of our state penitentiaries evidently are just as badly overstrained."

"Naturally," continued the California woman legislator, "existence must be well-nigh intolerable in a prison crowded far above 100 per cent beyond its capacity."

"And the discipline—plus the beastly crowding?"

"Well, without being told anything about the Columbus penitentiary (for example) this much is obvious: 'The prisoners there were forced to live under the same management which, put to the test of an emergency, allowed more than 300 of them to burn to death in their cells—whether due to their guardians' inefficiency or to their downright inhumanity in balking at the danger involved in releasing their wards.'"

"On either supposition, it was hardly a control which one can regard as having been, probably, very close to the ideal—even for a prison."

Is there any remedy—at least for the overcrowding evil?"

"Oh," replied Mrs. Kahn, "more paroles might help somewhat—as to the federal penitentiaries. For every 10 federal prisoners eligible for parole, who apply for it, perhaps one actually is released on his good behavior. There is no reason for holding the other nine except that they lack the necessary influence to get favorable action on their applications. 'It is too much a matter of politics.'"

"The convict whose congressman makes a strong appeal for him, wins freedom at the earliest legal moment. Another convict, just as entitled to it, stays behind the bars for lack of someone to plead his cause."

"But our real trouble," said the congresswoman, "arises from laws which make felonies out of what are, at worst, only misdemeanors. 'About half our convicts in no true sense are criminals. 'If our so-called criminals, who are not criminals, never were sent to our penitentiaries, there would be ample room for the genuine ones.'"

PROPER PRENATAL CARE IS VITAL FOR THE EXPECTANT MOTHER

Editor's Note: This is the second of four articles by Dr. Morris Fishbein discussing the advance of medical science in connection with childbirth.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEGIN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygieia, the Health Magazine

One of the greatest developments of modern medical care has been the establishing of scientific routine care of mothers previous to childbirth. This prenatal care involves first of all a careful examination of the mother to make certain that she does not suffer from any preventable or curable disease. It is important to know the condition of her heart, her lungs, her kidneys, her digestion, and to see to it that organs that are deficient are not forced to bear too great a strain in the process.

It is important to establish a good routine of hygiene for the patient, including particularly plenty of sunlight and fresh air, large amounts of rest, and sufficient exercise to keep the muscles in proper tone. More attention has been paid in the last 15 years to diet than to any of the other factors. The diet is important, not only for the good of the mother, but also for the good of the child. Of special importance in the diet are adequate quantities of mineral salts and vitamins.

Calcium and phosphorus are essential for the building of bone; iron for the building of blood, and all of the other metallic elements for the special functions that they have in the human body. Particularly important is a sufficient amount of vitamin D, which is concerned with the mobilization of calcium and phosphorus after they are placed in the body.

Recent discoveries in England tend to the view that vitamin A has a special function in resistance to infection. Professor Mellanby is convinced that the feeding of adequate amounts of vitamin A to the prospective mother is equally important in the prevention of infection during childbirth with any of the other procedures that may be adopted. He emphasizes particularly the danger of giving too much vitamin D without a sufficient amount of vitamin A; in other words, of creating what is called vitamin imbalance.

For this reason, physicians are more and more inclined to urge that the mother take during this period not the special concentrates of vitamin D that are known as viosterol or irradiated ergosterol, but instead cod liver oil to which viosterol has been added in order to raise its quantity of vitamin D. Cod liver oil is the richest substance known in vitamin A content.

TOMORROW—The Secret of the Statue of Liberty.

The Husband Hunter

© 1930 BY NEA SERVICE INC. BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY NATALIE CONVERSE tries to conquer the jealousy which consumes her when other women admire her handsome husband, ALAN. When he receives a phone call to the home of BERNADINE LAMONT, a popular night club hostess who has outraged the smug respectability of Westchester aristocrats by purchasing a home among them, Natalie demands that Alan refuse to go and that he give up the brokerage business of "that Lamont woman."

Alan tells her that Bernadine is the widow of a war buddy who had saved his life, and that she is doing the only work she was able to secure in order to support herself and her fatherless BOBBY.

Alan leaves, after a bitter quarrel in which he faulted her for her refusal to bear him the children he had hoped for, and Natalie spends a miserable evening trying to fight down her suspicions—never dreaming that Alan was listening to a grave-faced doctor who had just told him that Bernadine's recovery is in doubt. The actress surprises him by requesting that he take her son in the event of her death because she has no relative to leave him with. Alan promises, and tries to tell Natalie but her rebuffs silence him. Later, he confides in his secretary, PHILLIPS WEST, who has always been soothingly sympathetic.

This gives Phillips the opportunity she has been secretly waiting for. During the next few weeks, the girl develops her plan—to further the misunderstanding between Alan and his wife.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VI Phillips looked at Natalie with envious eyes when she came to the office. She watched, with a queer mixture of feelings at her heart, the other workers greet their employer's wife with extreme deference—which, Phillips failed to realize, was partly due to Natalie's aristocratic appearance.

She resented it—and yet she was glad of it, too, for she fancied herself receiving the same attention some day.

On this occasion she did not seek to keep Natalie from noticing her. On the contrary—she deliberately interrupted her as she was about to enter Alan's private office, with word that he was in conference. A very important conference, she added.

Natalie hesitated. Usually she went directly to the inner office, and if she found Alan busy, went out again to wait. She accepted Phillips' presence and interference with good grace on this occasion, being in excellent humor, and took a chair beside the secretary's desk.

She might have gone back to the reception room, which was separated from the space where Phillips' desk was placed, by a low partition, but she chose to wait nearer Alan's office. She did not expect to be long in being admitted to the private office.

This couldn't have suited Phillips better. They were out of earshot of the other employees, if they spoke in low tones, and Phillips did not raise her voice, as she asked Natalie how little Bobby Lamont was doing. She saw Natalie start, though she appeared to be busily engaged with some papers on her desk.

"I've so much enjoyed helping Mr. Converse choose toys for him," she chattered on airily, still not openly glancing up at Natalie, who was now sitting quite erect in her chair.

"We've just had a letter from his mother," Phillips went on gushingly. "They're in Atlantic City—but of course you know that." She looked up, smiling an apology for her stupidity.

"It's too bad you and Mr. Converse can't have him with you, isn't it?" she rattled on, wanting to get it all in before Natalie spoke. "Of course, I haven't seen him, but I know he's a darling because Mr. Converse is so fond of him." She paused now and waited—expecting anything.

But nothing happened. A sharp line replaced the soft curves that a moment before had formed Natalie's lips, but no word issued from it. "Perhaps you'd like to read the letter," Phillips suggested, reaching into a drawer for it. She seemed not at all aware of the strangeness of her conduct. Natalie would think her simper, of course, but let her.

The letter contained a slight reference to business. That fact, Phillips believed, would make it possible for Natalie to assume that she saw nothing unusual in its being sent to Alan's office instead of his home. And thus not attach suspicion to her showing of it.

Natalie took the letter, with fingers that were beginning to tremble in silence Phillips watched her read it. But no sooner had Natalie leaned over and laid it on the desk, however, and with a touch of fierceness than she began again her devilish interference. But Natalie was not given time to listen. The door to Alan's private office opened, and she saw him there, showing out a client. A woman client, chic and animated.

For an instant Natalie was bewildered. Conference? Indeed! She glanced quickly at Phillips, but the latter was as innocent-looking as a pat of butter.

Inwardly Phillips was congratulating herself upon the lucky circumstance that had brought Natalie to the office when Alan was engaged with the attractive Mrs. Lowell.

"Oh, hello, Natalie," Alan said, as his client turned away and he saw his wife standing beside Phillips' desk. "Come in."

His tones were not weighted with welcome, though he did smile. He was busy. He wished Natalie had come a little later.

Natalie's head lifted haughtily. Color flamed high in her cheeks, but her voice was cool as she answered. "Sorry, I haven't time. I've been waiting."

Alan knew at once that she was angry. "Hell," he said to himself. To Natalie: "That's too bad, dear!" She moved away, and not even for Phillips' sake, could she summon a word of gracious farewell. Her eyes were smarting with unshed tears, and she wanted to run from the place blindly, impotent in the grasp of her obsessing passion.

Alan sheepishly avoided Phillips' glance, and closed the door upon his embarrassment. Phillips smiled. A little later she went in to him, and was so silently sympathetic in her demeanor, that he found himself conscious of a feeling of gratitude toward her.

She sat very still at the end of his desk, taking dictation. In her quietness and in the way she kept her head bent, as though she did not want to look upon his discomfiture, there was meaning.

One thing of beauty she had—lovely curling eyelashes. Now they veiled her downcast eyes, and lent her an air of demureness that Alan found vastly refreshing after a display of Natalie's temper, and a quarter hour of Mrs. Lowell's vivacious company.

True, her hair was only a commonplace brown, rather dark, but it was smooth and gleaming. Alan took his mind off a letter long enough to tell himself that Phillips should let her hair grow. There ought to be little silky tendrils about her forehead—serene forehead that—end at her neck. Er... where was he? Oh, yes, regarding Western Consolidated...

Long hair would suit her wonderfully. "That will be all, Miss West. Thank you." He was a bit abrupt.

Phillips got up, appeared to hesitate. Her gray eyes slanted at him appealingly. A half smile turned upward the corners of her mouth, as one smiles in pity.

How could Natalie humiliate him before his secretary, he thought angrily. "You were going to Frondell's to look at their cars today," Phillips said softly.

"Car?" "For Bobby," Phillips reminded him. "Oh, yes, yes, of course. I thought you meant real cars. Shall we go as soon as you get those letters off?" Phillips had not expected to accompany him, but she said nothing about that, and slipped out of room to settle herself at her typewriter, and make her fingers over the keys.

She was tempted to have on the typist finish the letters, thought better of it. Her work Alan was perfect. She wanted to find no flaws, either in it or her.

She'd once cautioned herself in love overlooks the faults he would seek to find in woman if he did not care for that is, if that woman were liberally trying to interest him in an humorous way. And she knew.

Had she been it, this was a straw in the. He was dwelling bitterly in life with Natalie, too un-der it to think of anything that she said needed his immediate attention, that he would return to the office after dinner and take care of it.

Natalie, cultured, charming, al could be guilty of such bition of temper as she had the afternoon, seemed to be amenable. And for what simply because he had waiting.

She saw, while putting his desk in order after his departure, that he had not been able to work that afternoon, at least not since Natalie had been there.

It was unusual for him to work in the office at night, but he did it occasionally, when Natalie attended a concert or lecture in which he lacked interest. He rarely came down from his home for the sole purpose of working.

When he left the office, he did not mean to go to Westchester and return. He'd take dinner in a restaurant. It didn't matter which restaurant. Ought to telephone Natalie, though. They'd had scenes before. No use making matters worse by worrying her.

He turned toward a cigar store and a public telephone, but on the way he decided he'd like a hot bath and a change before dinner. He stopped and looked about for a taxi. And in the back of his mind there was something more important to him than his comfort.
