Shultz will try again for troop withdrawal

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, in a switch of plans, made hurried preparations Sunday to fly to the Middle East to try again to secure a withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon.

George Shultz

He is scheduled to meet with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus but said he did not see "any real prospect" of a breakthrough.

"We are struggling to make progress" he told reporters, referring to the efforts of three American mediators already in the area.

U.S. officials said Shultz, ending a four-nation Asian tour, was making the Middle East trip because the Syrians have refused to talk to presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, the top American mediator.

Shultz is to visit Saudi Arabia today then travel to Lebanon, Syria and Israel.

"At this point we don't have a reading on the Syrian situation and we very much want to get one," Shultz said.

Syria has refused to negotiate a withdrawal of its 50,000 soldiers from Lebanon, and Israel has refused to withdraw its 20,000 troopers unilaterally. Shultz said, however, that Syria's refusal does not mean its troops would remain there permanently.

"We are assuming on the basis of Syrian statements that in one way or another, they intend to leave Lebanon. That's one thing they've always said and they've never contradicted that," Shultz said. "The question is what are the circumstances under which they would leave Lebanon. They've never said they wouldn't leave."

Even before Shultz set out for Asia on June 23 he had left open the possibility of a Middle East mission. But as he made his way through the Philippines, Thailand, India and Pakistan, he denied any change in his plans to fly to London todayand then home to Washington on Wednesday.

The change in plans was announced after Reagan and Shultz conferred by telephone Saturday. Arrangements were so hurried that on the eve of Shultz's departure U.S. officials did not know if he would fly to Jiddah or Taif in Saudi Arabia for his meeting with King Fahd.

Earlier Sunday, on a visit to the Khyber Pass on the Pakistan-Afghanistan border, Shultz called hundreds of cheering Afghan refugees "fellow freedom fighters" and said they were not alone in their struggle.

He strongly implied that the U.S. government backed Moslem Afghan guerrillas fighting the Soviet-backed government in Kabul.

"You fight valiantly and your spirit inspires the world," Shultz told the refugees who sat cross-legged in a carpeted tent in the Nasir-Bagha refugee camp. "I want you to know you do not fight alone."

At the refugee camp, a tribal leader, Nazir Malik, greeted Shultz through an interpreter as "the representative of peace in the free world" and said the Afghans were waging unrelenting war on the Soviets.

Reagan says he would get bored if he retired

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, while still saying he's not ready to announce for re-election, said in an interview published Sunday that he thinks he would "get bored" if he retired to his ranch in the mountains near here.

Reagan, 72, was asked if he is prepared to spend his remaining years doing what he is doing now or whether he looks forward to getting back to his ranch, where he enjoys a comparatively simple life, riding horses and performing chores.

"No, really, my mind is centered on things that I believe in deeply," the president was quoted as telling the Los Angeles Times. "And if I could help to do something about them, that's what I want to do."

Reagan, who has visited the ranch about once a month this year, didn't suggest he longs to spend the rest of his days there. If he decides not to run for re-election and retire, Reagan said, "I think I'd get bored."

But he carefully added with a chuckle, "I'm not saying I'm going to (run)."

The interview was conducted in Reagan's cabin aboard Air Force One as the president flew west to spend the Fourth of July holiday at the ranch, stopping along the way to press his recently launched campaign for tougher education standards.

Michael K. Deaver, the senior White House aide, sat in on the session and occasionally interjected his own observations. The interview was conducted with the understanding that questions would be restricted to matters of age and health.

"I can't reconcile the number of years...to the way I feel," Reagan said. "I do so many of the things that I always did with no change."

But the president acknowledged that the deafness in his right ear, which he attributes to the discharge of a handgun too close to his head on a movie set many years ago, "continues to deteriorate." And he disclosed that has acquired Dupetron's contraction, a tightening of the tendon in his left hand that causes the gradual curling of his little finger.

"Sometimes, like at the Cabinet table, when people are way at the other end, I turn my head this way to get that (left) ear over there," Reagan said.

And in discussing the hereditary condition in his hand, Reagan said, "Some people get it in the toe. I mean, that would be really awful if your toe had a damned curl."

As Deaver has reported on other occasions, Reagan said the assassination attempt in which he suffered a gunshot wound two months after taking office strengthened his commitment to the conservative causes.

'Bingo!' wins six players $16,667 in high-stakes game

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — Six women screamed "Bingo!" in unison early Sunday as 2,400 people played for the highest jackpot in what was promoted as the world's biggest bingo contest.

In more than 12 hours, $1 million was awarded, with $200,000 offered near the end of the session as the top jackpot. But no one filled all the spaces on a card in 48 calls or less, so the prize was halved.

Five numbers later, when "G-58" was called shortly before 2 a.m., the six winners ran to the front of the smoke-filled room where players sat elbow-to-elbow at 700 tables.

They went home with checks for $16,667 each, making them the biggest winners of the night.

It cost $500 just to sit down for the more than 60 games, but players came from as far away as Canada. In addition to the basic fee, which gave players three cards, many bought additional cards.

The bingo hall is on a Cherokee Indian reservation. State gambling laws don't apply on the reservation, which has relied on seasonal tourist trade to support its economy and where off-season unemployment reaches 40 percent.

"Oh, I don't believe it," said Helen Truxell, 62, of Peninsula, Ohio, as she stood at the pay-out window. "I want to buy myself a car and put a down payment on a house."

Customers often confused about air fares

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is part two of a six-part series detailing commercial airlines — what they can do, how consumers should use them and how a travel agent can help.

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Imagine making a reservation on a major airline — round trip, coach, to Baltimore. Spend 10 days there. Spend $626 on the air fare.

Assuming one is making a reservation a week or two before the trip (at least, although it's better to book and buy a ticket months ahead) half of that $626 was wasted. An economy SuperSaver fare on the same airline, American, in the same seat on the same plane would have cost $299 for a round trip.

Making a reservation on an airline is probably the least understood part of traveling by this modern conveyance.

Some problems exist. The airlines created confusing fare structures so they could offer super-discount seats — but those seats are limited to a certain number per plane. After they're gone seat prices tend to be coach or first-class, expensive seats that once dominated the industry.

Coach fares are already high and they are rising. The best deals are usually Super-something and may be with a major carrier or a regional airline.

United, TWA, American, Eastern, and possibly other air carriers ended 20 percent discounts on coach seats July 1. This reflects strong advance bookings for third-quarter travel. Eastern is trying to play leader and get the others to follow with a 5 prcent increase in all fares starting in mid-July.

Last year, discounts continued through summer because air travel had been weakened by the national recession.

A rash of "fare wars" broke out in the '70s and early '80s because relatively young airlines (i.e. Muse, Southwest and the defunct Braniff) sprang up and dropped prices to compete with the big boys in regional markets.

The airlines now are freed from government restrictions they once had. With deregulation, these firms started in-fighting and reckless price-cutting to compete for less travel money.

Many airlines have begun to lose money in an institutionalized fashion. They are selling seats for $99 that cost at least $150 for them to fly.

But with deregulation, airlines are too tempted by their experience with popular super-cheap fares. Carriers like Muse Air and Southwest cut fares to attract new customers and then they watched airlines like American play follow the leader. Instead of follow the leader, it gets to resemble a game of "chicken."

American now provides a week-end-only $180 round trip from Midland to Los Angeles. Southwest will fly you from here to L.A. and back, also on weekends, for $190 round trip. Muse Air, which had lowered fares in this rate-war, is back up to $200 for round trips to Los Angeles on Saturday or Sunday only.

The Civil Aeronautics Board and the Federal Aviation Administration — after tightening up on airlines while air traffic controllers went on strike — have gradually let go of the regulatory strings.

Now airlines do what they please, many losing money when they go on reckless price-cutting binges and some losing passengers because they kept the fares too high. It's a no-win situation for most airlines because of high costs per seat and enormous fuel bills.

High shouldn't rocket past 90s

Although Sunday's heat popped a record with a 106-degree reading, today's temperatures shouldn't rocket any higher than the mid-90s.

After Sunday's scorcher, today is expected to be just right for picnics and barbecues. According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it is expected to be sunny and warm through Tuesday.

Tonight's low should be a comfortable 70-degrees for watching fireworks. Easterly winds are expected to breeze through the Tall City 10-20 mph.

Sunday's low of 77 was 17 degrees higher than the record low of 60 set in 1972.

Arrest made in market firebombing

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A vagrant was arrested on murder and arson charges Sunday, accused of spraying gasoline over a busy supermarket checkout area and touching off a fire and explosion that killed two people and injured 16.

John Bill Ferry, 30, was captured while walking away from a convenience store in eastern Tampa around noon, Hillsborough County sheriff's spokeswoman Natalie Bodine said.

A clerk in the store had called police after recognizing Ferry from a police mugshot published in newspapers after Saturday night's firebombing at a suburban Winn-Dixie store, Ms. Bodine said.

"We had 40 to 50 units out, auxiliary and reserves, helicopters and canines, and had people on the scene immediately," said sheriff's Maj. Charles Fisher. "The suspect gave some small resistance, but nothing serious."

Warrants had been issued Saturday night charging Ferry with first-degree murder and first-degree arson after witnesses at the store identified him, Ms. Bodine said.

"He apparently lives under bridges or in vacant fields and travels on foot or by county bus," she said of Ferry.

She said no motive was known.

Ferry, handcuffed and in ankle chains, mumbled incoherently as deputies led him from the sheriff's office to be transferred to the county jail.

Asked by reporters if he was involved in the firebombing, Ferry replied, "I don't know what you're talking about."

A body rests near the entrance of a Winn-Dixie supermarket in Tampa, Fla., that was firebombed Saturday night. One person died and 16 others were injured.

Sunday morning, shopper Martha Vance, 23, whose entire body was burned, died at Tampa General Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Tito Gaw. Winn-Dixie employee Leigh A. Carter, 20, of Brandon, died Saturday night, officials said.

Nine people remained hospitalized Sunday. Ms. Vance's daughter Jenny, 5, was one of five victims listed in critical condition in the burn unit at Tampa General. Seven of the injured were released from hospitals Saturday night and Sunday.

"Hers is an extremely critical situation," Ms. Gaw said of the Vance child, whose body was also completely burned.

She said three other patients also had burns over 100 percent of their bodies.

Shoppers, cashiers and other store employees were taken by surprise Saturday night when a stocky blond man showered gasoline over the crowded checkout lines at the Winn-Dixie and ignited it.

People, some in flames, ran screaming outside. Others huddled in the back of the building to escape the smoke and flames that erupted near the front of the grocery in Clair Mel City, an unincorporated area just east of Tampa.

"A heavy-set guy with long hair and beard comes in...with gas in a can and threw it all over," said shopper Richard Serrano. "After that he threw a match. It happened so fast."

"A girl was laying there. She said, 'Am I gonna die?' I said no," said customer Gil Granda III. "Then she said it again, 'Am I gonna die?' I said, 'No, no, I promise you.' But she won't make it...the doctor said she had 100 percent burns."

Fisher said the attacker bought the gasoline at a convenience store across the street.

Convenience store clerk Neil MacDonald said he had seen the man before selling the gasoline to him.

MacDonald said the same man bought a soft drink earlier in the evening and came back to complain that it "tasted bad."

Rainwater collapses store roof

BOLIVAR, Tenn. (AP) — A woman who was among the 52 bargain hunters and employees injured when a department store roof collapsed said Sunday it was raining so hard she didn't even hear the rumble of the cave-in.

The rainwater, dumped by a heavy thunderstorm, may have caused the flat roof of the Magic Mart Discount Department Store to collapse with a "whoosh" Saturday night, briefly trapping 20 people, officials said.

Police Chief Don Clifton said he was "99 percent satisfied" that no more victims were buried under the debris. Rescue workers spent more than six hours searching for victims, he said.

"They checked it four times and went through the entire building," he said.

David Howell, director of the Hardeman County Emergency Medical Service, said Sunday area officials had expected far more serious injuries when the 100-foot by 150-foot roof collapsed.

When he arrived at the scene, Howell said, "I was sort of afraid of what we would find."

In Ohio, meanwhile, two people were released from hospitals Sunday after they were injured Saturday night when a storm blew down a tent around 250 people celebrating an elementary school's 50th anniversary. Eight others had been treated for cuts and bruises after the tent collapsed in Gratiot, a village in east central Ohio.

Most of the injured in Bolivar were treated at a local hospital and released; four were hospitalized overnight.

One of those four, 28-year-old Marie Campbell of Bolivar, was struck on the back by a piece of concrete from the store's front wall. Her two sisters, standing a few feet away, escaped with cuts and bruises.

"It was just raining so hard that all at once it collapsed and all she remembers is something falling. She didn't hear anything," Jimmy Campbell said Sunday from the Jackson-Madison County Hospital room where his wife was in fair condition. His wife was unable to come to the phone but Campbell relayed questions from a reporter.

The roof caved in with a "whoosh," said Dr. Jack Sawyer, assistant superintendent at the Western Mental Health Institute here. Sawyer had just walked in the front of the store after the 6 p.m. accident and did not know how he got out.

"You don't have to think, you just react," he said.

"In a matter of seconds, the whole thing just caved in. Water started pouring in," said 17-year-old clerk Sandra Doles. "I could hear screaming. People were hollering, 'Help me, help me get out of here!'"

The front of the store was leveled, but the rear wall and the two side walls remained standing. It was the only store in the shopping center that was heavily damaged, but Clifton said some structural damage was reported at adjoining stores.

Clifton said speculation about the cause of the accident focused on a heavy thunderstorm that hit the area shortly before the collapse, dumping as much as an inch of rain by unofficial reports. He said it appeared the roof fell in because of an overload of water.

Engineers and investigators also were trying to determine whether roof drains were clogged, allowing water to accumulate over days or even weeks, Clifton said.

The flat asphalt and gravel roof was supported by lightweight steel beams held by steel posts. A single heavy steel girder stretched across the center of the store.

Consumers are confused about the discount plans and which airline offers cheaper fares. Booking flights at a local travel agency, one woman said "People still call and ask to fly Southwest to a certain city, automatically thinking they will get the lowest fare," when Continental might have a similar flight for $100 less and American may have it for $50 less.

United Airlines and American Airlines control most reservations made on U.S. airlines because they sponsor the two major travel-computer systems in the country.

Travel agents use one of the two systems, which will show the major airlines' flights in more prominent places than it shows the discount carriers — on video screens full of flights from A to B.

Beginning in September, travel agents will be able to make a reservation and ticket arrangements with the airline and ticket passengers — with boarding pass — from the American Airlines 'SABRE' computer.

Even now, American's tickets can be issued on the machine. Special arrangements like low-sodium meals, special-order meals, certain seat preferences (to avoid noise or overcrowding), and handicap-required assistance at the gate can be entered into the computer and everything should be ready when the ticketed person gets on board.

If one only has carry-on luggage, the pre-ticketing can save time: Just go to the gate and board. Otherwise, the passenger will make sure his or her bags get the proper destination tag and go on their way.

This computer-age development will not apply to Southwest Airlines. In fact, Southwest is one airline that isn't in a computer system — the carrier is trying to come up with a data bank and software so it can be the third airline to offer computer travel services, like American and United.

One airline booking agent said, "We cannot book by computer with Southwest. We have to pick up the phone and call them just as you would from home."

This is a source of consternation to travel agents — as are some of Southwest's other policies.

Shultz hurries to Mideast, will meet with Assad

Shultz said the refugees flight from home "brings out the dimension of human tragedy brought about by the Soviet invasion."

About 3 million Afghans have fled to Pakistan since Soviet troops moved into their country in December 1979 to support the Marxist government of Kabul.

The trip to the Khyber Pass was Shultz' last stop on his Asia trip before traveling to the Middle East.

Shultz told reporters with him in Pakistan that he did not intend to get caught up in "a shuttle-type operation," but other officials said he might spend all of next week in the Middle East.

"I think it's important, sometimes, to gather information and get a direct reading," Shultz said. "If I can enhance the situation a little bit it probably will be worthwhile."

Until now, the American plan was to send Shultz to the scene only if the three American mediators, Habib, Morris Draper and Richard Fairbanks, working through Arab intermediaries, saw signs of Syrian flexibility.

Habib was instrumental in securing an agreement between Israel and Lebanon for the withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon. The pact was given its final boost by Shultz, who visited the area in May. Its implementation has been stalled by Syria's refusal to match Israel's offer to withdraw from Lebanon.

So far President Hafez Assad has remained flatly opposed to the withdrawal agreement Lebanon worked out with Israel and in a speech broadcast on Damascus Radio last Wednesday strongly attacked the U.S. diplomatic moves.

Unless he shifts gears and agrees to negotiate a pullout with Lebanon the Israeli troops now in the country will stay there as well.

This has caused a political problem in Israel, where a vocal minority opposed last summer's assault on the Palestine Liberation Organization and is now raising a storm ower mounting casualties.

Israel has notified the Reagan administration it may redeploy its forces to more secure positions in southern Lebanon.

Shultz denied last week that the administration was urging an unconditional Israeli withdrawal. Still, a partial pullback has raised concerns that the Arabs who support the agreement might conclude that it was giving way to an unofficial partition of Lebanon.

'Bingo!' wins six players $16,667

The others sharing the biggest jackpot were Loraine Anderson of Atlanta; Theresa Yost of Oak Lawn, Ill.; Joann Tyler of Louisville, Tenn.; Teri Kelley of Decatur, Ga.; and Anne Bliven of Tampa, Fla.

"This is the biggest game, as far as we know," said Jimmy Morris, cashier and computer services chief for the contest's manager, Cherokee Bingo Management Inc. of Virginia Beach, Va.

The firm was hired to stage twice-monthy sessions that average $250,000 in prizes on the reservation, which hugs the Tennessee-North Carolina line near Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

The tribe gets $150,000 a year from the operation, plus $2 per person, 1 percent of gross receipts, and 6 percent of concession sales.

In addition to Saturday's $1 million in winnings, promoters gave away two cars, a 25-inch TV set and a Caribbean vacation as door prizes.

Saturday's contestants came from as far as Canada, Des Moines, Iowa, and parts of southern Florida.

Some people, like retired steelworker Thelbert Clark, who lives near the reservation, won nothing but continued to play for amusement.

"I like to play anything I can gamble on," he said.

Others, like Sara "Punkie" Mostow of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who won $2,941, say they simply enjoy the high-stakes excitement. "I contribute to the churches, but I don't play their bingo," she said.

Ten members of a 24-member group who rode a bus from Wayne County, Mich., won a combined $46,155, said their coordinator, Alberta Thomas.

While the state can't touch the games, oficials of the U.S. Attorney's office in nearby Asheville are watching the games, fearing the big money will attract "the wrong element." And the Internal Revenue Service wants to ensure that Uncle Sam gets his share.

Morris said an IRS form is filled out when contestants win more than $1,250.

Dan McCoy, 39, a tribal official who heads the firm that hired the Virginia promoters, said he is aware of the criticisms.

"But my answer to them is, 'What's the difference between playing for $5,000 per game or for a $10 lamp?'" McCoy said. "It's a very good, economy-stimulating project for the area during the winter months."

"I couldn't help but come out of that — particularly after I found out how much more seriously I was wounded than I had believed, and hearing some of the kind of miraculous things, coincidences that worked to my benefit — (thinking) whatever time I've got, I owe to someone," Reagan said.

Despite his physician's report that he is in excellent health, Reagan said he thinks about death now and then but doesn't dwell on it.

"I don't think too much about it," the president was quoted as saying. "Now and then, as you get talking and thinking about the numbers, you say, 'Golly, I wonder how many more you have.' But I don't dwell on it. Certainly I don't have any morbid looking forward to it. But I also don't have any great fear of it. Maybe this is because I have a very deep faith."

Reagan attributes a five-pound weight gain since he has been in the White House to the muscles he has built up working out with weights and exercise gear in the White House.

Reagan pointed with some amusement to the few streaks of gray in his still-full head of hair.

"That has finally turned all of you off on that 'Does he or doesn't he dye it?'" Reagan said. But he hastily added, "Notice one thing," and he bowed his head and pointed to some hair on top. "That part of it is sunstreaked, so don't get that tagged as gray."

Reagan called life at the White House "fulfilling," adding, "Some nights you go home feeling ten feet tall."

At the White House, Reagan said, "you go to work in an elevator and go home from work in an elevator."

"It's very beautiful, and you're impressed by the history of the building and can't complain about the lack of comfort. It is a most comfortable place to live.

"At the same time," the president added, "there is a little feeling of being a bird in a gilded cage. You're rather restricted and limited in what you can do. Once you get upstairs there, that's about where you are until it's time to go to work again."

But at Camp David, the presidential retreat in the Maryland mountains, he said, "you can get back to a normal house and open a front door and walk out in the yard if you want to, take a hike and do things of that kind."

Americans celebrate July 4th in more than 207 ways

By The Associated Press

Americans waded through acres of picnic goodies and watched tons of fireworks go up in smoke as they celebrated the Fourth of July weekend at beaches, parks, parades, fairs, festivals, concerts, contests, speeches and protests.

Not to mention those who stayed in their own back yards for the nation's 207th birthday.

Ears were assaulted with the explosions of fireworks, shrieks of low-flying jets, blares and thumps of marching bands and hours of jazz, rock, folk, country and classical music.

There was everything from small-town firemen's breakfasts and cow chip-throwing contests to events expected to draw hundreds of thousands of people.

And there were whimsical, madcap events like the Kennebec River Whatever Race at Augusta, Maine, which had boats disguised as such things as a hot dog with bun, a gigantic sneaker and a pink elephant. Sunday's fifth annual race celebrates the clean water of the Kennebec, which until the late 1970s was unswimmable.

Thousands of anglers lashed the water of 28-mile-long Elephant Butte Reservoir in New Mexico hoping to hook one 11-pound striped bass carrying a tag worth $100,000.

The people of Midland, Pa., waited to see if the anonymous woman known only as Mrs. Calabash — who has donated $18,000 to feed the unemployed over the past year — would reveal her identity and take her place as marshal of the city's Fourth of July parade today.

And a grateful Calvin Jones planned to shower his home of Winfield, W.Va., with 1,000 $1 bills from a helicopter today. "I hope each adult who catches a dollar bill gives it to a child and tells him this country is worth working and fighting for," said Jones, a father of three and grandfather of six.

Korean-American residents planned to donate $30,000 to cover half the cost of the nation's largest fireworks show tonight in Washington, D.C., according to the National Parks Service. Korean karate master Jhoon Rhee, who conceived the idea, said it was intended as a show of appreciation.

In Renton, Wash., 28-year-old Randy Accetturo lost four fingers and part of his lower right arm when a firecracker he was making in a 1½-inch pipe exploded Saturday, King County Sgt. John Murphy said. Accetturo was hospitalized in stable condition Sunday.

Many of the U.S. sailors stationed on five ships off the coast of Lebanon celebrated Sunday with a deck-top barbecue and rock music.

Chicago planned a Sunday night canopy of fireworks choreographed to the marches of John Phillip Sousa.

Motel caters to bovine guests

CANTON (AP) — The average traveler can swing off the road and easily find lodging in most any roadside inn. But what do you do if you have four legs, weigh over half a ton and are traveling with a large group?

If you are of the bovine persuasion, you are welcome at the Holmes Cattle Motel in Canton.

Travel agents would envy the price — 50 cents a head — but not the accommodations.

"We can handle 400 cattle at night, no problem," motel manager Don Deegear, 67, told the Dallas Times Herald.

One of a handful of cattle rest stops across the Southwest, Deegear says the motel hosts mainly guests traveling by truck from Florida, Georgia and other southeastern states to markets in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

A rest out of the truck can be a life-saver for cattle, Deegear said.

"Once a cow lies down in the truck, the others will stomp him to death," he said. "All you can do with dead cows is haul them to the dump."

Deegear, who has managed the 10-year-old business for about a year, says some of his guests are less than well-behaved.

"Those mixed-breed Brahmans are the worst," he said. "They knock down gates and get me crawling up the fence like a dang squirrel."

Drivers can pull their trucks up to a chute and prod the herd into one of the pens to stretch their legs. The cattle will find bathtubs of water and coastal burmuda hay.

No reservation is necessary, and Deegear's shotgun wards off rustlers.

Drivers can have a nap or a shower, and Deegear will drive them to a nearby restaurant if they are hungry.

"Most don't stay overnight," Deegear said. "It only takes five or six hours for cattle to get rested up."

Glenn Holmes, a former Dallas car salesman, said he tired of city life and bought the unusual business in 1982.

Millionaire says he's for 'the people'

AUSTIN (AP) — To Clinton Manges, the combative South Texas millionaire who made sizeable contributions to an array of Democrat politicians in last year's campaign, the issue is control of Texas.

"This state has been controlled by such few people," Manges said in a rare telephone interview with the Fort Worth Star Telegram, "Oil companies, major law firms, insurance companies, banks."

Manges' political contributions, including some made by the political action committees he financed, totalled $1.8 million, the newspaper reported.

"There's been such a shakeup in Texas politics. You're seeing a complete fight by the old establishment to destroy the new politicians because they didn't support them and they can't buy them."

Manges said that is why Attorney General Jim Mattox is being investigated by the Travis County district attorney, why there is a motion to prevent two Supreme Court justices from participating in a lawsuit involving his oil interests, and why the rumor mill has it Manges is being rewarded for his contributions.

"I'm for the people. I'm tired of the same people controlling everything. You can't get a fair trial in this state."

Among the politicians Manges made contributions to were Mattox, who received $50,000, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who got $65,000, and Comptroller Bob Bullock, who received in cash $30,300, a guarantee on a $95,000 loan and $1,500 for campaign office space.

Manges also made contributions to Supreme Court Justice Ted Z. Robertson, who got $120,452, and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, who received $7,500, the newspaper said.

As a result of their elections, Manges said, Texas officeholders are now fighting for the "little people."

Mattox, who calls himself "the people's lawyer," has been battling high utility rates and industrial polluters. He has also pushed to recover $800 million from the Mobil Oil Corp. in a law suit that Manges initiated.

Mattox is also being investigated for a $125,000 loan he made to his campaign a few days after the Seattle First National Banks loaned the same amount to his sister and brother.

The Star Telegram reported the Seattle bank also loaned Manges about $40 million. Although Manges acknowledged he introduced Mattox to a Seattle bank loan officer, Y.C. Chao, he said he had nothing to do with arranging the loan.

"This is innuendo and guilty by association," Mattox said.

Both Mattox and Manges said they believe reports about the loan were planted by Mobil Oil attorneys defending the oil company against Manges $1.6 billion lawsuit.

Tom McDade, the attorney representing Mobil said this was "hoghwash."

"Mobil isn't trying to discredit Jim Mattox. This ain't that big of a deal to Mobil," he said.

McDade said Mattox's campaign finance reports and Seattle bank records raised questions about the attorney general.

Mauro, another of Manges' loan recipients, meanwhile, took on another oil giant: Exxon Corp.

He announced the state had obtained a $4 million settlement with Exxon as a result from questions he asked about Duval County leases.

But the settlement also raised questions about Mauro's dealings with Manges, who collected $1.4 million of the Exxon settlement because he shares in ownership of the mineral rights.

"What has Mauro done for me?" Manges asked. "He collected money for the state with information I dug out of the files."

Accidents kill 33 by Sunday, DPS says

DALLAS (AP) — At least 33 people had died in traffic accidents by Sunday, according to Department of Public Safety officials who estimated 49 motorists would perish on Texas roads during the three-day Fourth of July holiday weekend.

The grim toll ends midnight tonight.

A rash of pedestrian-vehicle accidents upped the death count by 15 late Saturday and early Sunday. Nine pedestrians were killed Saturday and Sunday, said DPS spokesman David Wells in Austin.

"We are still hopeful that the final count won't exceed the 49 (fatalities) estimated," said Wells.

The DPS said 64 people were killed or died of injuries sustained during the Fourth of July holiday weekend last year.

Thailand fights to preserve old treasures

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Thai princess is leading a campaign to restore royal palaces, Buddhist monasteries and other cultural treasures under threat of bulldozing to make way for more modern buildings or roads.

"The destruction continues, but we've come a long way," says architect Sumet Jumsai. "There's a lot of public consciousness, and now the movement has a leader."

The driving force behind historic conservation is 28-year-old Princess Sirindhorn, one of four children of King Bhumipol Adulyadej and Queen Sirikit, constitutional monarchs.

Over the past two years, the scholar-princess has personally supervised a major restoration of the Grand Palace, the golden-spired complex which since 1782 has served as the central palace of the reigning Chakri Dynasty and which had fallen victim to time and pollution.

Similar work was done at the Temple of the Emerald Buddha, housing an ancient jasper image over which wars had been fought.

Vimarn Meek, another royal residence and one of the world's largest teak structures, has been turned into a museum after more than 50 years deteriorating as a royal storage shed.

Besides her own expertise, the princess, because of her royal status, can cut through government red tape, deter powerful moneyed interests and raise large sums as she is doing for her various projects.

Architect Sumet, a leading conservation activist, says the new awareness came just in time because the Thais, like other Asians, had already destroyed much of their past.

In Bangkok, grand homes and old public buildings are being razed to make way for high-rise buildings; the few remaining canals, which once made Bangkok the "Venice of the East," are being paved over to become roads.

The "Save Old Thailand" movement got a big boost last year, when the country celebrated the 200th anniversary of both the founding of Bangkok, the capital, and the Chakri Dynasty. The year saw an outpouring of books and lectures on Thailand's heritage and money from private enterprise — something rare previously — for conservation projects.

More than 2 million foreign tourists visited the country in 1982 and the government has decided that proper preservation of historical landmarks makes good economic sense.

Education also has played a part. Thongthong Chandransu, a university lecturer who helped in the Vimarn Meek restoration, says that earlier in this century Thai children were taught little about their own history and culture.

"This has changed and in the next 10 to 20 years we'll be seeing the fruits of the program. If we would have opened Vimarn Meek 30 years ago nobody would have come," he says.

In the past, it has often been foreigners who have urged the Thais to keep the old. Sumet notes that in Thailand and other Hindu-Buddhist societies of Asia the concept of preservation is weak, while the tropical heat, moisture and insects also take a terrible toll on the left-overs of faded glory.

"In Asiatic tradition you don't preserve, you rebuild," Sumet says. "And Buddhists are taught that nothing lasts, everything is transient. So when a building crumbles or is knocked down why be sorry about it."

Sumet and his growing group of conservationists are trying to wean Buddhist abbots away from the traditional notion that putting up a new temple to replace an old one brings "merit" to those who donate for the construction.

Sumet also has been involved in a number of projects to reconstruct monuments swept away by development. Going up is Bangkok's 19th drum tower, once a city center landmark that served citizens as a clock, a fire alarm and a warning signal of enemy attack.

A future step will be to declare entire areas of Bangkok and upcountry towns "historical zones" protected by law. Sumet believes that funds for such major undertakings could be obtained from foreign governments since countries like West Germany and Denmark have already contributed substantially to various conservation efforts.

The Japanese are reportedly interested in helping to reintroduce a trolley-car line into the heart of the old city, around the Grand Palace. This move — besides adding a dash of quaintness — would ease traffic and pollution which is degrading this fairytale quarter.

Princess Sirindhorn, who has earned several university degrees, last year presented special gold medals to several owners of lovely old homes to encourage them not to sell out to developers.

Among the recipients were two old women whose traditional, wooden residence is sandwiched in between massive buildings in Bangkok's commercial center. The real estate is worth millions of dollars and Sumet acknowledges: "It's not hard to guess what will happen to that house when the ladies die."

Senators may want to print their money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress spend so much time spending money, they might want to consider printing some for a change — and make a few extra bucks for themselves in the process.

That was the whimsical suggestion recently of the chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, Jake Garn, R-Utah. Still smarting from the acrimonious Senate pay raise debate of a few weeks back, Garn proposed that colleagues who keep insisting they're underpaid might jump at a chance for a more lucrative job as government money printers.

The subject came as U.S. Treasurer Angela M. Buchanan testified before Garn's committee on proposals for new, labor-saving ways of printing $1 bills.

She said things are so backed up at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing that printers have been making plenty of overtime lately in trying to grind out the dollars as fast as Congress appropriates them.

One printer made $84,000 last year, another $77,000 and others nearly as much, she said.

Car jumps curb, hits crowd

LIDO BEACH, N.Y. (AP) — A car driven by a 70-year-old man went out of control when his sandal-clad foot got caught between the brake and accelerator, police said. Ten people were injured.

The accident occurred around 4:45 p.m. Saturday as Alexander Smith, of Long Beach, was on his way to pick up his wife, said Nassau County Police Officer John Blauvelt. The car jumped the curb and plowed into a crowd of people at a concession stand, he said.

Among the injuries were scrapes, cuts, back injuries, bruises, broken teeth and a concussion, hospital officials said.

Six men arrested in drug raid

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Six men have been arrested after drugs worth an estimated $25 million were seized in what authorities called the biggest cocaine bust in the state's history.

FBI spokesman Gene Pogue said three men were arrested Saturday. Three others had been arrested Friday when police seized 500 pounds of cocaine in a raid in the rugged hills of southeastern Oklahoma, he said. Agents said the cocaine was worth from $25 million to $123 million, depending on its purity and how much the sellers planned to dilute it before putting it on the market.

The arrests came after drug agents watched the cocaine being unloaded from a plane at an airport south of Talihina, Pogue said.

Marine dies in light plane mishap

VANCEBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 33-year-old Marine was killed when the wing on the ultralight aircraft he was flying collapsed and the aircraft plummeted 500 feet to the ground, officials said.

Staff Sgt. Daniel E. Howard of Tuscaloosa, Ala., who was based at Cherry Point Marine Air Station, died of severe head and chest injuries Saturday at Craven County Hospital, said Sgt. J.C. Woolard of the Craven County Sheriff's Department.

Woolard said the accident occurred just after Howard, who was off-duty, had taken off from an airstrip near Vanceboro.

Two men arrested in stabbings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police have arrested two men and booked them for investigation of attempted murder in the stabbings of five youths during a fight outside a restaurant.

David Cho, 19, and Sung Eun Chung, 19, were booked Saturday by detectives of the Community Resources Against Street Hoodlums, said Detective Thomas Jones.

Jones said police learned through witnesses that a group of about 15 young adults were attacked by 11 others on Thursday, and the attack stemmed from an earlier incident at a party.

Gay rights ordinance approved

RAJNEESHPURAM, Ore. (AP) — City officials say they expect no problems from a newly approved gay rights ordinance in this community founded by followers of a controversial Indian guru.

"Ordinances like this have created huge controversies in cities all over the U.S.A., but we anticipate no problem whatsoever in our city as a result of this measure," Ma Prem Sangeet, Rajneeshpuram's city attorney, said in a recent issue of the Rajneesh Times.

About 800 people live in Rajneeshpuram, a city in central Oregon founded two years ago by followers of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh.

Passenger remains hospitalized after ferry, freighter collision

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — An employee on a tourist-laden passenger ferry says he saw "people flying all over the place" when the vessel collided with a freighter in heavy fog, injuring six.

The 140-foot ferry Yankee, carrying 140 passengers, was headed toward Providence from Block Island about 5 p.m. Saturday when it and the Liberian-registered freighter Harbell Tapper collided on Rhode Island Sound. One injured person remained hospitalized Sunday.

"It was crazy for awhile," said ferry purser Chris Rupp. "All I heard was a loud crash, and I saw people flying all over the place. I looked up, and all I saw was about six stories of tanker."

The Yankee was carrying mostly day-trippers from Providence and had left Block Island about 3 p.m. Captain Michael Smith threw his engines into reverse and sounded a fog horn just before the collision.

Life jackets were distributed by the crew while first mate John Dennis rang the vessel's warning bell.

"Yeah, there was panic all right," said Rupp. "But it subsided as soon as people realized we were not going to sink. It was intense. People were screaming and yelling. That lasted for about 15 minutes."

Ferry passenger Leo Bromley, 69, of Smithfield, was in stable condition Sunday at Newport Hospital. Coast Guard Petty Officer Robert Caton said Bromley may have suffered a heart attack after the collision. The hospital, however, would give no details on his condition.

Bromley's brother, Raymond, also was on the ferry, and said Leo saved him from being crushed between the two vessels.

"At the collision, I fell," said Raymond, who was standing with his brother about 15 feet from the bow. "The railing went like toothpicks, and I started sliding toward the bow ...

"If I had gone down between them, I would have been a goner. My brother saved my turkey by grabbing both of my ankles and pulling me back along the deck."

The bow of the 76-year-old steel-hulled ferry, owned by Interstate Navigation of New London, Conn., was smashed about 10 feet above the waterline and about 10 feet back along each side, but did not take on water. It docked at Newport and its passengers were bused to Providence.

Many think Reagan shouldn't run again

NEW YORK (AP) — A plurality of Americans approve of President Reagan's performance in office, but a majority think he should not seek a second term, according to a New York Times-CBS News poll.

The poll, published Sunday, also ranked former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. John Glenn of Ohio about even for the Democratic presidential nomination. The Rev. Jesse Jackson and Sen. Alan Cranston of California were roughly tied for third.

Although Reagan's approval rating was up overall, his support remained far stronger among men than among women, the Times reported. It said the improving economy appeared to have sparked Reagan's popularity surge.

The poll was based on telephone interviews conducted with 1,365 people between June 20 and June 26.

Forty-seven percent of the respondants approved of Reagan's performance and 39 percent disapproved, approximately the reverse of a similar poll taken in January.

Fifty-seven percent of the men approved of Reagan's work while 39 percent of the women approved, the Times said.

Celebrating hope

July Fourth is a very special day in nations throughout the world, not just the United States of America. How we celebrate it isn't particularly important; the fact that we do still celebrate it 207 years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence is vastly significant.

Why? Because of the simple fact that more than two centuries after our forefathers declared this an independent nation and pledged our allegiance to the flag, we still are plotting our own course. Perhaps our lives today are not as free as we'd like — too encumbered by endless mountains of bureaucratic red tape and government gobbledygook — but we still hold within our collective hands the power to shape our future. The decision to use that power lies with us.

That brings us to the point of why this nation's birthday is so important to countries around the globe.

Have you ever stopped to imagine the wonder in the mind of someone who lives in one of this world's captive nations as he or she ponders our freedom? For one day each year, their mind can whisk them away to another land — a land of freedom to work as you want, to live where you want, to live without fear of what tomorrow will bring, a land where hope is not a meaningless word because fulfillment is a reality.

Each year, hundreds of Americans die in Independence Day automobile crashes, a sad commentary on how we enjoy our freedom. That truly must be the epitome of irony to those in other lands who may not even be allowed to travel to another city on this day.

Today, Midlanders will join millions of other Americans in celebrating in countless ways the birth of this nation 207 years ago. There will be picnics, fireworks, games and speeches. Some will work, most will play. Enjoy your independence on this day to the fullest.

You're giving hope to others.

Stepping backward

Congress is quietly moving ahead on a Reagan administration proposal to create a new federal department, this one to handle foreign trade matters now generally left to Commerce.

Administration spokesmen stress that the new agency will be "lean and mean," which in the government vernacular means only about 8,000 employees and a budget of several billion dollars.

Reagan supporters, of course, wonder what all this has to do with the president's promise to seek the elimination of such departures as Energy and Education. (Consult "The Republican Party Platform of 1980," GOP archives, Washington, D.C.)

We suggest a variation of the "build-down" plan for U.S. and Soviet missiles being advanced by arms controllers: For every new department created in Washington, two must go. It was Lenin who warned that communists might have to take a step backward in order to take two forward; maybe the maxim applies to the Reagan Revolution as well.

Another View:

Life-saving air bags

Air bags that automatically inflate on impact to cushion auto drivers and passengers, capable of preventing death or serious injury in many accidents, were developed in the 1950s. They were demonstrated to be effective and reliable in the 1960s. By 1976, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, an agency of the U.S. Department of Transportation, had calculated that air bags (or, as an alternative, seat belts that fasten automatically before a car can be driven) would save about 9,000 lives a year — a figure subsequently revised upward to 12,000. It also was calculated that more than 100,000 serious injuries a year would be prevented.

Yet the nation still does not require air bags or automatic seat belts even though the Transportation Department adopted a regulation in 1977 that would require one or the other on new cars sold in this country. A schedule of implementation, giving auto manufacturers more than adequate time to gear up for the change, called for the requirement to be phased in gradually in the early 1980s. However, the regulation was rescinded in 1981, in the first year of the Reagan administration, under heavy pressure from U.S. auto manufacturers.

In a unanimous decision June 24, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that withdrawal of the regulation in 1981 was "arbitrary and capricious" and in violation of the Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 that created the NHTSA and directed it to set and enforce safety standards for automobiles.

The decision requires NHTSA and, in effect, the Reagan administration to restore and implement the 1977 regulation on air bags and automatic seat belts. It may do so, perhaps, with modifications and undoubtedly with a new timetable for implementation, but if it chooses not to restore the regulation, it must provide reasons that would stand up under the mandate of the Motor Vehicle Safety Act. That mandate, as Justice Byron R. White noted in the court's opinion, is to make safety "the pre-eminent factor."

Clearly the public safety factor ought to dictate restoration and implementation. The air bag is the premier proven device to reduce deaths and injuries in automobiles. The automobile safety belt — a passive restraint because it would automatically grip driver or passenger with no positive "buckle up" action — also would be a major advance over existing seat belts, which most motorists don't use. Perhaps, if the 1977 order were to be modified, the best course would be to require, eventually, air bags and automatic seat belts instead of one or the other.

More lives are lost needlessly, and more injuries are suffered when they could have been prevented, in every year that passes without the federal government fulfilling its public safety responsibilities with respect to air bags. The Supreme Court decision should trigger prompt action to implement, not continuing efforts to delay or evade. There has already been too much of that.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. leaders don't convey true spirit

A friend and I recently went to an indoor gun range for some pistol practice. He was building a patio for his wife and was desperate for an excuse to take an evening off. He had already gained a new respect for the laborer and the carpenter.

Charley Reese

The range is in an old warehouse in an industrial neighborhood. There is a long, narrow gun shop in the front manned by two ex-policemen. Like most gun shop owners in the South, they wear loaded pistols while they work. They don't intend that anyone should rob them easily.

As it turned out, the local chapter of the practical shooters association had rented the range for the night to hold a match. We couldn't shoot, but we stayed to watch for a bit. Practical shooters shoot at man-shaped targets. The idea is to learn combat shooting techniques.

In this match, the scenario was that the shooter was about to open his car door when he is accosted by five armed men. At the sound of the buzzer, he drops his keys, draws his pistol, and begins to fire, moving as he does so, to three different barricades.

One mountain of a man, a detective whose hands made his .45 look like a lady's pocket pistol, shot the course in 17 seconds. He moved like a panther. Three of the targets were drilled through the head and the other two through the heart. It was as neat a display of quick shooting as I've ever seen.

Later we stopped for a plate of ribs and a pitcher of beer at a roadside barbecue joint. It was crowded with members of a First Baptist Church softball team. I can tell you it was a tastier meal than the one I shared with the Swiss Minister of Defense in a 16th Century mansion in Berne.

My friend is an ex-Green Beret, a lean and leathery man who could have been created by James Fenimore Cooper. He is fearless. Some months ago he was tossing a tennis ball into a lake for his retriever when a seven-foot alligator grabbed the dog. He dived into the lake, clothes and all, pried that gator's jaws loose, and saved his dog at the price of many stitches in his hand and arm.

As we finished the evening on his unfinished patio, drinking beer and swapping Army stories, he said, "I wonder if the Russians know what the American people are really like. I wonder if they know they are like us and the men we were with tonight."

I wonder, too, because the Russians or anybody else whose impression of America comes from the government in Washington or the vision presented in the news media of New York and Washington would be far off the mark.

Wimpy Congressmen who "don't trust the President" to negotiate arms control in good faith (I suppose they trust Uri Andropov) or liberals who flagellate themselves because some peasant in a uniform shoots another peasant with an American bullet or the crowds of little nonukes are just warts on the still healthy body of America.

The majority of Americans remain a tough, proud and independent people. The national news media don't reflect that. Television doesn't reflect that. The government in Washington doesn't reflect that. But it's true nevertheless.

What's lacking is leadership which reflects the true American. President Reagan comes as close as any president we've had since Harry Truman, but he needs to take a broom and clean out his own White House.

Eventually, somebody will emerge who, like Teddy Roosevelt, reflects the true American spirit. That will be the dawn, ending a long night of malaise and drift. In the meantime, I hope the Russians have better sense than to have all of their spies spend all of their time on the cocktail circuits in New York and Washington.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Watt's lease giveaway questioned

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary James Watt has been catching it for leasing federal coal lands at "fire sale" prices. Watt denied granting any bargains, and both sides have marshaled facts and figures to support their claims.

Jack Anderson

The amazing thing, though, is that Watt's efforts to give away — that's right, give away free of charge — coal leases on nearly 300,000 acres of Western land have gone virtually unnoticed. The land includes proposed wilderness areas, wildlife refuges and priceless archaeological sites.

Destruction of these environmentally sensitive areas would be bad enough in itself. What makes Watt's intended giveaways outrageous is that there is strong evidence the lease applications are invalid under the law. Here's the story:

A loophole in the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920 allowed prospectors who stumbled across undiscovered coal deposits on federal land to claim the coal as their reward. They could submit Preference Right Lease Applications and extract the coal for free.

When Congress voted a moratorium on coal leases in 1970, there were more than 180 of these preference-right applications pending. Since then, environmental legislation has been enacted that protects certain areas from mining.

What the big coal companies are trying to do is push through old lease applications made before the current protections were passed — and Watt is going along with the idea. He plans to grant all but five of the remaining 134 pending applications by the end of next year. But evidence submitted by government agencies and environmental groups suggest that the applications are invalid. For example:

— A study by the Powder River Basin Resource Council found that coal companies "discovered" deposits that had been shown on U.S. Geological Survey maps dating back to 1909 — years before the claims were filed. The findings, supported by the Office of Technology Assessment, show that applications for 90,000 of the 138,000 acres Watt wants to lease in Wyoming are invalid.

— A similar study by the Colorado Open Space Council found that "nearly all" the 82,000 acres claimed for free leasing in Colorado were in "areas where the existence and workability of the coal were well known."

— The Natural Resources Defense Council submitted a study to the Interior Department that identified dozens of environmentally sensitive areas that would be destroyed by Watt's gifts to the coal industry.

They include land in the San Juan Basin of New Mexico that contains the last archaeological remains of the 10,000-year-old Anasazi Indian culture, as well as 54,000 acres of proposed wilderness that is the habitat of the golden eagle and other endangered species. The council's study concluded that environmental impact statements were either nonexistent or inadequate.

Sources told my associate Jock Hatfield that Watt, in his rush to approve the coal leases, has effectively eliminated all environmental restrictions.

Interestingly, three of the corporations that stand to make a bundle if the free leases are granted — Kemmerer Coal Co., Utah Power and Light, and Fluor Oil and Gas Co. — have been major contributors to the Mountain States Legal Foundation, which Watt headed before joining the Reagan administration.

These three companies have applied for free leases on more than 56,000 acres of federal land, and will get a lion's share of the 6 billion tons of government-owned coal Watt proposes to give away.

Footnote: Watt has severed his connection with the foundation, and he owns no stock in the three companies. An Interior Department spokesman denied that the agency favored the coal companies and insisted that the secretary's actions are entirely appropriate.

FONDA'S FBI FILE: The late Henry Fonda was regarded by the FBI as a possible embarrassment at the official reopening of Ford's Theater in 1968.

It wasn't Fonda's social graces that worried the G-men, but a 21-year-old congressional accusation that Fonda was either a communist or a Kremlin dupe.

When the reckless Red-hunters of the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) were looking for pinkos and headlines in Hollywood, 35 movie celebrities signed a protest saying they were "disgusted and outraged" by the committee's attacks. Fonda was a member of the group, Committee for the First Amendment, which HUAC promptly labeled a communist organization.

According to Fonda's 124-page FBI file, reviewed by my reporter Laurie Siegel, Fonda's signature on that 1947 protest dogged him for decades; it was apparently the main basis for suspicion that he was a closet commie.

The FBI did have one additional cause for suspicion against Fonda. In response to White House inquiries in 1961 and 1970, the FBI seemed to think it ominous that Fonda had always defended himself against accusations that he was a communist.

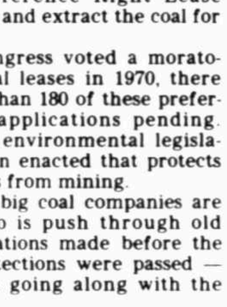
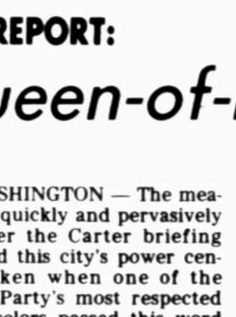
INSIDE REPORT:

Queen-of-hearts advice avoided

WASHINGTON — The measure of how quickly and pervasively hysteria over the Carter briefing book gripped this city's power centers was taken when one of the Republican Party's most respected senior counselors passed this word to his contacts at the White House: Off with their heads!



Rowland Evans



Robert Novak

Easily recognizable severed heads would belong to budget director David Stockman, CIA Director William Casey and, most notably, White House chief of staff James A. Baker III. President Reagan, this seasoned Republican strategist advised, should avoid Richard Nixon's fate by beheading lieutenants. The advice was rejected, but the very fact it was tendered reflects the early-summer mood in Washington.

Although no evidence of any crime was in hand, the normal business of government at the White House was suspended by the revelation that candidate Ronald Reagan's staff had access to some of candidate Jimmy Carter's briefing material for their 1980 debate. As in other post-Watergate incidents, the cry of the Queen of Hearts was heard: "Off with her head! Sentence first, verdict afterwards."

Senior aides at the White House who followed the queen's approach in their advice to Reagan about Richard V. Allen, Anne Gorsuch Burford and Ray Donovan stand to lose their own heads in this case, and therefore are uncharacteristically judicious. Nevertheless, the incident shows how the Washington-based media can start slowly and end up as a headlong stampede, pounding at the gates of the White House.

The first two weeks of harping about the briefing book incident by ex-Carter aides Pat Caddell and Jody Powell went virtually unnoticed by the media. Caddell advised one prominent Democratic spokesman that he was going to open the issue on NBC's "Today" program and advised him to be ready for a deluge of reporters' inquiries; the party leader received not one telephone call.

Such ennui was privately attributed by key Democrats to distaste for Jimmy Carter here, strangely building rather than diminishing in his third year of retirement. But what really discouraged early media interest in this case was the lack of novelty about leaked documents in a city where the omnipresent duplicating machine has made secrecy obsolete.

The president's senior staff, nonchalant considering the early lack of media interest, were overwhelmed by what happened next. "I think we were all caught off guard," one of Reagan's most politically astute advisers told us. With ABC's Sam Donaldson tenacious in pressing the story, his colleagues were pounding at the White House gates intent on not being left behind.

With the media pack in full cry, Republican strategists outside the White House began playing Queen of Hearts by urging that Reagan not duplicate Nixon's folly but get rid of his erring tacticians. One well-placed party operative passed word that Reagan could keep Baker, Stockman and Casey by quickly dispatching just one scapegoat: communications director David Gergen.

Baker, Stockman and Gergen were excused from Reagan's presence from that part of the briefing for his June 28 press conference that dealt with the Carter debate incident. But White House aides Edwin Meese and Michael Deaver strongly counseled the president not to condemn any aide on ethical grounds for receiving Carter campaign material, since that condemnation would have to be followed by their dismissal. Consequently, Reagan on six separate occasions during the press conference sidestepped ethical judgments about his senior staff.

Indeed, quite apart from any violation of the law, there is no evidence so far of any espionage operation carried on by upper levels of the Reagan campaign. It is the lower levels that cause concern at the White House. But what is expected at worst is interaction between the Reagan and Carter political operations in the gamy atmosphere that often prevails inside campaign staffs.

That hardly justifies parallels to Nixonian Watergate outrages. Nor does the vapid, predictable nature of the Carter briefing material, closely resembling President Carter's ineffective campaign rhetoric, validate suggestions that the leaked briefing material tipped the debate for Reagan. The ethical question involves possession of somebody else's memoranda – a moral failure of epidemic proportions in Washington.

Although some Republican conservatives see intrinsic value in any problem that could get rid of Jim Baker and Dave Stockman, the Reagan White House's first confrontation with the media pack has brought close together the president's frequently feuding assistants. They are united at least temporarily in a common loathing for erstwhile friends in the news business and a common determination not to follow the Queen-of-Hearts solution prevailing in Washington so often since Watergate.

PLO tries to patch up rift with Syria

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — PLO mediators met Sunday to try to patch up a major rift with Syria and settle the guerrilla movement's most serious internal crisis while a shaky ceasefire is held between the organization's rival factions.

Yasser Arafat

Six members of the Palestinian Liberation Organization's executive committee met to plan strategy to end the disputes that resulted in fighting between mutineers and those loyal to PLO chairman Yasser Arafat and Syria's explusion of Arafat on June 24.

The cease-fire between rebels and loyalists in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley held Sunday, following renewed battles Saturday that shattered a previous two-day truce. Lebanese police said six people were killed in the latest fighting.

The rift in Fatah, the largest PLO faction, erupted May 7 when Col. Saeed Mousa said he and fellow Fatahs were no longer taking orders from Arafat, the PLO leader since 1969.

Among other things, the rebels claim Arafat mishandled the campaign against Israel since they invaded Lebanon 13 months ago and has appointed aides based on loyalty rather than skill.

Following a first session, Khaled Fahoum, chairman of the Palestine National Congress, said the group would first try to mediate the dispute within the Fatah faction and then try to heal the rift with Syria.

Western diplomats and other observers believed the committee members faced formidable obstacles in resolving the disputes.

They believe Arafat's troubles reflect not only philosophical differences within the PLO but Arafat's weakness in fending off challenges from other Arab states or his Palestinian rivals now that he has been deprived of his "state within a state" in Lebanon.

Syria is believed to be exploiting the challenge to Arafat in order to rein in the guerrilla leader and make sure the PLO follows Damascus' line in dealing with Israel, the United States and conservative arab regimes such as Jordan.

Arafat last month accused Syrian President Hafez Assad of openly supporting the guerrilla rebellion, which prompted his explusion. Since then, Arafat has been based in Tunis, cut off from loyalists in Lebanon, the PLO's last front with Israel.

"The Syrians are in no hurry to resolve this thing," said one diplomat, who asked not to be identified. "And any solution will have to be on their terms. As for the dispute in Fatah, it involves fundamental principles of the movement. Matters like this cannot be papered over easily."

Western diplomats believe the rebels number about 1,000 men of 12,000 PLO fighters in Lebanon. There also are an estimated 50,000 Syrian troops and about 28,000 Israeli soldiers in Lebanon.

The committee members flew here early Sunday following a night-long meeting in Tunis in which the Fatah leadership discussed the mutiny and PLO-Syrian relations. It was the first meeting for the Fatah Central Committee, the group's only decision-making body, since Arafat's explusion.

An Arafat aide in Tunis said Sunday that Assad has demanded Arafat publicly apologize for accusing Syria of being behind the rebellion and that the PLO leadership implement the mutineers' demands.

Syria has effectively blocked that agreement by refusing to negotiate a withdrawal of its troops deployed in eastern and northern Lebanon. Israel has refused to remove its troops until Syrian and the Palestinians remove their forces.

Egypt tries to battle outbreak of cholera

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

CAIRO — The government has started a nationwide vaccination campaign following reports that an outbreak of vomiting and diarrhea in Egypt is being caused by cholera, a disease that supposedly does not exist here.

Health officials deny that any of the victims have been diagnosed as having cholera. They say the illness has been caused by "summer diseases," a euphemism that the government uses in connection with a variety of maladies ranging from typhoid to unexplained fevers.

Skeptics, however, remember that when there was a cholera epidemic here in 1977 the government — worried about protecting its tourist industry — denied the presense of the disease. It did not concede it until the World Health Organization issued a statement confirming the epidemic.

Although authorities at the Ministry of Health will not identify the vaccine they are using, they said that 12 million people — more than one-quarter of Egypt's population — had been inoculated in the last few weeks. There are adequate reserves of antiseptics and antibiotics on hand to meet any emergency, they said.

The vomiting and diarrhea come at a particularly difficult time, during Ramadan, the Islamic holy month during which Moslems do not eat, drink or ingest anything from sunrise to sunset. Ramadan began June 11.

However, Mohammed the Prophet decreed that the sick need not fast. He said that abstinence should not adversely affect anyone's health. Still, many Moslems who are sick refuse to take medicine during the daylight hours, preferring to continue their fast until sunset, as the Koran dictates.

Preliminary investigation by the Ministry of Health indicates that the vomiting and diarrhea are related to contaminated water. Cholera, which was carried into Egypt in 1977 by travelers from sub-Sahara Africa, is a gastro-intestinal infection.

IMF: Soviets moving ahead of U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union's economy did not slow as much as the U.S. economy did during the world-wide recession, and now the Soviets are moving ahead a little faster, according to figures published by the International Monetary Fund.

In a new report, the fund predicts that on the basis of statistics available in May, overall U.S. production will grow by 2.4 percent during 1983, while Soviet growth will be about 2.5 percent.

The figure for United States economic growth is considerably more pessimistic that the Reagan administration's estimates. President Reagan last month said his administration has raised its estimate of growth this year to 5.5 percent.

The IMF said Japan will do better at 2.8 percent, but other major industrial nations lag behind — 1.5 percent for Britain, .5 of 1 percent for West Germany, and a drop of .1 of 1 percent for Italy. Production in France is expected to be level, it said.

Latin American output on the whole is expected to show a small shrinkage — particularly in Brazil and Mexico, the fund said. China's high 1982 growth rate, 5 percent, will continue in 1983.

The Soviet economy grew by an annual 4 percent during the years 1976-80, compared with 3.7 percent in the United States, according to the fund's figures. Last year Soviet growth was only 1 percent, and U.S. growth dropped by 1.7 percent, it said.

"Output growth in the U.S.S.R. is ...expected to quicken, but may fall short of the planned 3.5 percent rate, which rests in part on a targeted growth of more than 10 percent in agricultural production," the fund said in its report, called "World Economic Outlook," released June 21.

The report said the Soviets are hampered by inefficient farming, a slower growth of the working population and less efficient use of resources. In foreign trade, the Soviets improved their position by sales of energy to countries that paid in hard currency, instead of selling to its allies in eastern Europe, which pay in their own money.

The IMF figures did not list total production, which is much smaller in communist countries than in the West. Trends are given in percentages, compiled partly from information of the United Nations, estimates by the fund's own staff, and statistics from the Soviet Union itself.

The report makes no direct comparisons between East and West. No reasons are given for the differences between the rates of growth. IMF officials said that because of different methods of accounting, the figures do not cover identical production but are close enough for comparison as trends.

British Parliament to consider death penalty

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LONDON — "Is this a hanging Parliament?"

The question was raised in the press here last week, and it may soon be answered.

The current session of Parliament is expected to deal with a proposal to restore capital punishment, abolished by a Labor Party government in 1965.

Last month's elections gave Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party a heavy majority in the House of Commons, and some political observers believe that opinion has shifted in favor of bringing back the hangman.

However, sources close to the prime minister say that while Thatcher favors reinstating the death penalty, a vote in the House could go against it, as it did the last time it came up, in May 1982. On that occasion, enough Conservatives lined up with the Labor opposition to defeat the measure.

The issue is complicated by divisions among the members of Parliament over what offenses might justify the death penalty. Some have indicated that, although they could not support the death penalty in a broader sense, they might do so in cases involving terrorism or the murder of police officers. For instance, Thatcher's new home secretary, Leon Brittan, voted last time in favor of capital punishment for terrorist killers but against it otherwise.

Moreover, many voters who supported Thatcher in the June election are thought to believe that the death penalty might serve to slow the homicide rate, which is on the rise.

When a proposal to restore capital punishment was last debated in the House of Commons, it was defeated by 124 votes. That proposal provided for the execution of anyone convicted of terrorism or of killing a police officer or prison officer.

Amendments covering other forms of murder were defeated by even greater margins.

Though the country's mood seems to have taken a more conservative turn, many observers suggest that sentiment in the House is still against restoring capital punishment. The Labor Party is opposed to capital punishment, as are the Social Democratic and Liberal parties.

Further, about a third of the new Conservative members of the House are known to be against it, and some of the long-serving Conservatives are also opposed. Thus, there seems to be a consensus against it.

In past votes on the question, Thatcher has allowed members to "vote their conscience" rather than insist on a strict party vote. She will reportedly do the same thing this time.

If Parliament rejects capital punishment again, many political analysts thinks that will put an end to it — at least for the foreseeable future.

Handicapped woman lies about attack hoping to find mother

ROME (AP) — A handicapped woman who claimed her face was slashed by a man with a razor blade for the second time in a month admitted Sunday she had cut herself and made a false report, police reported.

They said a prosecutor will decide if Clara Vitella, 33, will be indicted on a charge of faking a crime by cutting herself on both cheeks with a table knife.

A police spokesman said that Mrs. Vitella, a polio victim who walks with a limp, told investigators she was adopted as a child and hoped her mother who she never knew might recognize her from news reports and contact her.

There have been seven such attacks in the same area of the city since early June, and the Italian press has blamed them on a blademan dubbed by the news reports as "Jack the Razor."

Recommissioned ship in Manila

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The battleship USS New Jersey arrived here Sunday for its first foreign port call since it was reactivated last year to bolster U.S. striking power in the Pacific.

Recommissioned in December, the 40-year-old ship is equipped with 48 cruise missiles. It also has nine 16-inch guns and can fire armor-piercing projectiles weighing up to 2,700 pounds for a distance of 23 nautical miles.

Decommissioned for a third time in December, 1969, the New Jersey saw action in Leyte Gulf in World War II, and in Korea and Vietnam. It carries a crew of 68 officers and 1,325 men.

King Henry's wife's letter for sale

LONDON (AP) — A letter from Henry VIII's sixth wife, Katherine Parr, expressing her "great joy and comfort" at becoming the king's bride will be sold at auction by Sotheby's on July 11.

Miss Parr accepted the king's proposal knowing two of her predecessors had been beheaded, two divorced and the other died soon after childbirth. They were married July 12, 1543, and she was still married to Henry when he died in 1547.

The letter, part of Lord Astor's Hever Castle collection, is expected to sell for between $11,300 and $15,400. The sale, Sotheby's first devoted to the English Renaissance, also includes letters written by two of Henry's other wives, Katherine of Aragon and Anne Boleyn.

Monarch handing reins to son

VADUZ, Liechtenstein (AP) — Prince Franz Josef II, the ruler of tiny Liechtenstein and Europe's longest reigning monarch, has announced he will cede most of his constitutional powers to his son and heir apparent, Hans Adam, next spring.

The prince, who turns 77 in August, made the announcement at a ceremony Friday night marking the 45th anniversary of his rule.

He said that after so many years at the helm of the 26,000-population principality — one of the world's richest nations per capita — he would would like to hand over most duties to Hans Adam, who is 38.

Press agency under investigation

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police are investigating the South African Press Agency for reporting allegations of police atrocities in South-West Africa, SAPA reports.

At issue were statements made by Roman Catholic Archbishop Dennis Hurley, chairman of the South African Bishops' Conference in Pretoria, alleging police had committed atrocities against blacks in the South African-administered territory.

Editors of three newspapers already been warned of possible prosecution under a 1958 law that makes it is a crime to publish any report about the police "without having reasonable grounds for believing that the statement is true."

Tracking 2,500 MIAs slow, frustrating

HONOLULU (AP) — Tracking down 2,500 Americans missing in Southeast Asia has been slow and frustrating, says the man who has led four U.S. delegations to Hanoi.

"We certainly have a long way to go; progress has not been dramatic," said Lt. Col. Joe Harvey, who was in Vietnam in June of this year. "It's been agonizingly slow and very frustrating."

Since the 1974 Paris peace agreement, the United States has received the remains of only 88 Americans who died in Vietnam.

"We want to do everything we can to foster a dialogue as opposed to a shouting match," said Harvey, who commands the Joint Casualty Resolution Center. "What we're trying to achieve is a real genuine exchange of technical information between people at a technical level."

The Vietnamese have agreed to hold four meetings a year, all in Hanoi. At the June session, the Vietnamese turned over the remains of nine U.S. servicemen. The identities of eight were announced Tuesday.

The next meeting is expected sometime in September.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said earlier this week that working through official channels "is probably in the long run the most effective method" of obtaining the remains of the missing. But he did not discount private efforts, saying they "would have to be looked upon case by case.

"The key word is if it has a good chance of being effective," he said after a meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in Bangkok, Thailand. Accusing the Vietnamese of "a cruel and heartless action," Shultz asked the ASEAN nations — Thailand, Malaysia, the Philippines, Indonesia and Singapore — for their help.

He said the United States had intelligence information "that suggests the remains of quite a sizable number are in hand and have not been turned over to us."

The Reagan administration has criticized private efforts, especially attempts by former Green Beret James G. "Bo" Gritz, to locate MIAs.

At the meetings, Harvey said, the Vietnamese make political points, but he avoids this.

"I want to emphasize that I don't discuss anything political," he said. "We do make certain statements that can be construed as accusations, but we're not there for that purpose.

"We're there to to let the facts speak for themselves," he said. "Sometimes the facts themselves become contentious.

"But generally the meetings are cordial, very professional and fairly informal," said Harvey, whose headquarters are at Barbers Point Naval Air Station, about 35 miles from downtown Honolulu.

"Our basic goal is to discuss cases.

"What we're talking about is presenting very compelling cases of missing Americans where we feel very strongly that they would likely know something already, or, with minimal investigation, would be able to find out something," Harvey said.

When a Vietnamese delegation visited the center last October, Harvey and his staff pointed out extensive information on 2,486 missing Americans.

"We did this not in a sense of intimidation, but that we are taking them at their word that they are acting in a humanitarian gesture," he said.

"We told them we are anxious to share that information with them on a cooperative basis," Harvey said.

He sees the Vietnamese agreement last Ocotober to meet regularly as "very promising."

Officers try to be cool about abbreviated duty

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Two police officers who volunteered for some abbreviated duty are trying to be cool about their assignment.

Officers Kevin Allen and Franklin Adderly are patrolling the city's beachfront this week in shorts, measuring citizen reaction to a possible summer uniform. The partners were the only volunteers.

In addition to the tan shorts, which end two inches above the knee, they wear brown, open-necked polo shirts, white athletic socks and yellow sneakers. Then there's a belt with gun, nightstick and radio.

"It's surprising," Allen said. "The citizens love the shorts. The other policemen have been, um, rather abusive."

If there is no public outcry, the shorts could become optional summer wear for the police department's 438 officers in a matter of weeks, said spokeswoman Diana Morrissette.

All the attention, however, hasn't stopped Allen and Adderly from doing their usual legwork. They clamped handcuffs on a woman last week and booked her for possession of marijuana.

Doctor celebrates 50-year-practice

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Clark Gable and Myrna Loy were starring in the feature movie at noon and the temperature hit 105 degrees in the shade that August day in 1934 when Dr. Ross Maynard opened his office.

During the Depression, it was not a propitious start for a 27-year-old physician one year out of medical school.

"The first year I was in the office, I did not collect enough money to pay my car expenses and the office rent," Maynard said in a recent interview.

"We had a welfare program that took care of the indigent that paid doctors $10 for a delivery of a baby, paid them $1.50 for office calls and no doctor in Pine Bluff was turning this down," Maynard said. It was cash, he said, and money was tight.

The Depression wasn't his biggest obstacle to establishing a practice, said Maynard, who was recently honored by the Arkansas Caduceus Club, along with 22 of his classmates from 1933, as they celebrated 50 years in medicine.

"The worst trouble in the early practice of medicine in Pine Bluff as far as doctors were concerned," he said, was that "doctors were very jealous of their practices, very uncooperative and (considered) a new doctor in Pine Bluff was taking their patients."

Maynard, the only physician practicing here who came to Pine Bluff before World War II, says physician attitudes have changed and there is much cooperation among colleagues now.

Rangers win on 12 in 15th

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bobby Jones smacked two of his three doubles to drive in three runs in a 12-run eruption in the 15th inning of a 5½-hour marathon Sunday to lead the Texas Rangers to a 16-4 rout of the Oakland A's.

The win was the Rangers' seventh victory without a loss this year against the A's. The 12-run inning, during which the Rangers smacked eight hits and drew four walks, broke by one the record for most runs in one extra inning, set by the 1928 New York Yankees.

A's reliever Dave Beard, 2-1, worked his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the 14th inning of the five-hour marathon, but got himself in trouble again in the 15th. Bucky Dent led off with a walk and Buddy Bell, who had homered earlier, followed with a single. Beard walked George Wright intentionally to load the bases one out later, and Jones followed with his fourth hit of the game, a line drive over the head of A's right fielder Bill Hancock.

Wright scored from third on a wild pitch to give Texas a 7-4 lead, and after another walk reliever Ben Callahan gave up a single to Larry Biittner that scored Jones. An error by second baseman Davey Lopes allowed two more runs to score, and Dent and Bell followed with RBI singles and Larry Parrish's smashed a two-run double to make the score 14-4. With two out, Jones doubled again to drive in Parrish, and Bobby Johnson singled in Jones to finish the scoring.

John McEnroe slams down a service to Chris Lewis on way to 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 win in Wimbledon men's finals.

McEnroe wins as expected

By WILL GRIMSLEY

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - "Everything went the way I wanted," a reserved, mild-spoken John McEnroe said Sunday after crushing unseeded Chris Lewis for his second men's tennis title at Wimbledon.

"People expected me to win easily and that's what I wanted to do. He was nervous, so I got on top early and was all over him all day."

The 24-year-old lefthander from New York needed only one hour, 25 minutes to score a 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 triumph over the scrambling New Zealander, who battled his way into the final despite a No.91 computer ranking.

The normally volatile McEnroe, with a history of feuding with umpires and linesmen, was the epitome of good conduct as he dominated his opponent with a brilliant service, remarkable quickness and anticipation.

While the one-sidedness of the match made it boring, he thrilled the packed Center Court crowd, including the Duke of Kent and Princess Michael of Kent, with some of the most dazzling shotmaking the old All-England Croquet and Tennis Club had ever witnessed.

"I made a conscious effort to concentrate on my tennis," McEnroe acknowledged. "As I have said in the past, I wanted people -the press particularly -to concentrate on my tennis rather than the way I act on the court."

McEnroe said he appreciated the good hand he got from the Wimbledon crowd, but he declined to suggest that a love affair had developed between him and this conservative old tennis establishment.

"I can't say that," he said, recalling that two years ago after winning his first title here in a tempestuous climate he had been denied the traditional membership in the All-England Club.

"But the last two years they have tried to be nicer and I appreciate that."

He said he still felt too much was made of his court deportment - particularly by the incisive British press.

"The press has always been trying to start something," he added. "I am not like Bjorn Borg. I am emotional. Everyone has his own way of getting psyched up. As long as I can do it without hurting anyone's feelings, it's all right.

Midland leads by one

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Sunday night's Texas League battle at Cubs Stadium between Midland and El Paso turned into a relief pitcher's battle — Jack Lazorko vs. Jim Gerlach. Neither gave up a run, earned or otherwise.

The lack of Midland scoring gave the Diablos a 6-4 victory and El Paso within one game of the West-leading Cubs. Midland has a 9-5 record with El Paso at 8-6.

GERLACH CAME in for Cub starter Ken Pryce with one gone in the eighth inning and runners on the corners. Carlos Ponce led off the inning with a single, stole second and went to third on the errant pickoff attempt by catcher George Borges. Frank Thomas was intentionally walked.

Gerlach didn't waste any time ending the inning. He threw one pitch, Jim Paciorek hit it and shortstop A.J. Hill started the double play which kept the score at 6-4. Gerlach did his job, the Midland batting lineup didn't.

Starting in the third inning when Trey Brooks sacrificed Bill Hatcher home with the then tying run, 4-4, El Paso starter Mark Effrig retired 14 straight Cubs.

In the bottom of the eighth he gave up a lead off single to Rick Baker, threw one strike to Hatcher and then let loose with a wild pitch. Lazorko came in to finish the game. In two innings of duty, he allowed only a double to Carlos Lezcano while striking out four.

THE DIABLOS jumped on Pryce quickly. Leadoff hitter Mike Felder stroked a shot into the right-center gap and kept going for three. Hill, who took the relay throw, looked to home plate and when Felder stopped, threw to third. Felder went for the plate and scored on the fielder's choice.

Juan Castillo followed with a bunt single, went to second on Ernest Riles' single and, two outs later, scored on Carlos Ponce's single. Frank Thomas followed with a single to left which easily scored Riles and Ponce scored when Hatcher's throw to the plate hit his helmet and bounced away from Borges.

With the ball rolling free, Thomas, who went to second on the throw to home, tried for three. Pryce backed up the play and Tom Lombarski took his throw for the put out to end the inning, 4-0.

Jay Loviglio led off the bottom of the inning with his second home run of the season (also his second in two days) to cut the margin to 4-1. Baker followed with a walk and Hatcher reached on a bad hop infield single. Lombarski's single to shallow right scored Baker and Brooks' double to right brought home Lombarski. Hatcher had been forced at second. Score: 4-3.

Hatcher tied the game at 4-4 on Brooks' sacrifice in the third but the Diablos added a run in the fifth and sixth innings to claim the victory.

CUB NOTES — Brooks, who went 1-for-3 with a double and RBI as designated hitter, made his first start since coming off the disabled list. He was injured in the last homestand against San Antonio while making a double play throw...Following tonight's 7:30 game, a fireworks show is scheduled at Cubs Stadium.

Smith, Ashford top world cinder marks

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Calvin Smith and Evelyn Ashford shattered the world records in the men's and women's 100-meter dashes Sunday on the final day of the National Sports Festival.

Ashford came within a bad handoff of being part of another world mark, as she anchored the national women's 400-meter relay team to an American-record time of 41.61.

In the 100s, Smith, a late replacement on the roster for Emmitt King, was clocked at 9.93 seconds, two-hundredths of a second better than the 15-year-old record set by Jim Hines in the Mexico City Olympics.

Ashford was timed at 10.79, beating the mark of 10.81 set by Marlies Gohr of East Germany exactly one month ago

A crowd of 15,500 watched the record-setting performances at the Air Force Academy track, just down a hill from the sold-out field house, where Kelly Garrison won gold medals in the balance beam and floor exercise in women's gymnastics. She also won a silver in the uneven bars and a bronze in the vault to give her a total of six medals at the festival. On Friday night, her South team won the gold, and she finished second to Pam Bileck in the all-around.

Scott Johnson of Colorado Springs won four golds in men's gymnastics Saturday night to tie his own festival mark with seven medals overall.

Tracie Ruiz, the world champion in synchronized swimming from Bothell, Wash., won a pair of gold medals Sunday. She took the solo with a score of 194.700, then combined with new teammate Holly Spencer to win the duet with a 190.000.

In the first event of the festival's final day, Rusty Hageman of Denton, Texas, and Debra Chaddock of San Diego were the men's and women's winners in the marathon. Hageman won for the first time in seven marathon tries with a time of 2 hours, 33 minutes, 22 seconds. Chaddock, in her first marathon, was 14th overall and first among the women at 2:54.02 over the 1¼-mile-high course.

January wins with birds

MARLBORO, Mass. (AP) — Don January came from two strokes off the pace with six straight birdies and set a hatful of records Sunday with a 3-stroke, victory over Gay Brewer and Miller Barber in the Marlboro $150,000 PGA Senior Classic.

January, 53, joked that it was "Christmas in July" as he pushed his career tour earnings close to the $1.5 million mark with his fourth tournament victory of the year and his ninth as a senior. The triumph was worth $25,000.

January shot a 7-under-par 64 over the par-71, 6,174-yard Marlboro Country Club course to finish with a tournament record 11-under 273 total.He broke Bob Rosburg's year-old course tournament record of 65 and defending champion Arnold Palmer's mark of eight under for the 72 holes.

Brewer fired a final-round 68 and Barber finished with a 66 for 276 totals.

Tour historians said the six straight birds, a run that January began on the sixth hole and continued through the 11th, tied an all-time senior tour record and was a mark for this season on the circuit.

Try 50 homers for difficulty

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Stop three out of three people on the streets and ask them what is the single most difficult feat in baseball and the chances are they will say hitting safely in 56 straight games the way Joe DiMaggio did. And there's no arguing with that. That's 12 more games than anyone else has ever hit in consecutively, and that's like Bob Beamon jumping 29 feat in an Olympics where no one else had ever even jumped 27 before.

But a lot of people will also suggest a no-hit game. No way. There have been a couple hundred of those pitched. They're like street cars. Miss one, and there'll be another one along any minute.

Actually, the rare commodity is home runs. Oh, not the quantity per game, per club, per ball park, per month. But what is rapidly disappearing from view is the 50-homer mark by an individual. In 1920, when Babe Ruth first broke the 50-homer barrier, his 54 home runs were more than any club in the league (save his own, of course) hit. You would have thought the dam would break after that. It does in most sports. I mean, Roger Fannister breaks the 4-minute mile and, within a few years, four minutes might not get you through the heats.

STILL, IT was 10 years before anyone but Ruth (who did it three more times) was to break that 50-homer mark. Then, a stubby, alcoholic Cub right fielder, Hack Wilson, hit 56, still an NL record.

If hitting 50 home runs merits a star in the crown, doing it twice should mean Instant Hall of Fame. I mean, do not stop at Go. Just send the bat directly to Cooperstown.

The year after Hack Wilson hit his 56, he hit 13, to give you an example. Two years later, he didn't hit any. He was gone.

Only five guys in the history of the American League have hit 50 or more home runs in one season. Only five guys in the history of the National League have hit 50 or more in one season.

Only five players in any league have done it more than once. Ruth, of course, did it four times. Only Willie Mays, Mmckey Mantle, Jimmy Foxx and Ralph Kiner have done it twice. The all-time home run leader, Henry Aaron, hit 755 home runs, but never 50 in one years, to give you an idea of the degree of difficulty. In the American League, it has been 21 years since anyone hit 50 or more. That year, Roger Maris hit 61. Mickey Mantle hit 54. In the National League, only two players have hit 50 in a season since that time, Willie Mays and George Foster.

SINCE GEORGE Foster is the only active ballplayer who even has a chance to break into this select two-time 50-homer club — most of the great sluggers seem to have topped out in the 40s, the Mike Schmidts, Wilver Stargells, Reggie Jacksons, Harmon Killebrews, even the Henry Aarons and the Lou Gehrigs — I thought I might ask George why this feat was becoming so rare.

A deliberate, methodical man who speaks in the sing-song voice of a Chinese street vendor, George considered the question. "First of all, you make yourself a marked man when you hit 50 home runs," he pointed out. "The pitchers fear you and fear encourages them to build up defenses."

Was he talking about the tactic which baseball calls "pitching around you"? In other words, never throw you a strike? "Well, that's only possible if there's nobody around you," George noted. Now with the New York Mets, George Foster was with Cincinnati when he hit 52 home runs in 1977 and 40 in 1978 and he had Pete Rose, Joe Morgan, Dan Dressien, Ken Griffey and Johnny Bench in the surrounding cast of characters. George walked 131 times in those two years, an average of 65 12 a year.

But you have to remember Babe Ruth walked 170 times in one season and regularly walked nearly 150 times a year until Lou Gehrig came along to hit behind him. This meant the doomed pitcher had a choice of a one-run homer by Ruth, or a walk to Ruth and a two-run homer by Gehrig.

"YOU NEVER run into a tired pitcher anymore," Foster adds. "You get home runs off tired arms." There is a well-bruited adage in baseball about a player like Foster, and it runs, in pure manager-ese, "Don't let George Foster (or George Ruth, for that matter) beat you a ball game." In other words, make him a gift of first base in tight situations. It's called "taking the bat out of his hands."

The double-50 club is not apt to be expanded this year. The 50-homer mark is becoming as extinct as the woolly mammoth, a far cry from the years when Jimmy Foxx and Mickey Mantle both hit over 50 home runs — and didn't even win the home run title!

Panthers wrap up USFL Central title

By Associated Press

Running back Ken Lacy threw for one touchdown and ran for another in the first quarter to lead the Michigan Panthers to a 33-7 victory over the Arizona Wranglers and the Central Division championship of the United States Football League, which ended its inaugural regular season Sunday.

The Panthers, 12-6, will host the Pacific Division champion Oakland Invaders, 9-9, in a semifinal playoff game next Sunday. Arizona ended their 4-14 season with 10 straight defeats and matched the Washington Federals for the league's worst record.

In other USFL games Sunday, the Chicago Blitz beat Oakland 31-7 and earned a wild-card berth, Washington upended the playoff-bound Philadelphia Stars 21-14, the Boston Breakers crushed the New Jersey Generals and league rushing champion Herschel Walker 34-10, and Los Angeles intercepted the Denver Gold 21-14. On Saturday night, the 9-9 Birmingham Stallions defeated 11-7 Tampa Bay Bandits 29-17.

Lacy, who finished the game with 92 yards on 13 carries, took a pitchout from quarterback Bobby Hebert, rolled right and flipped a 38-yard TD pass to Derek Holloway 2:24 into the game. On the Panthers' next possession, Lacy capped a 57-yard, five-play drive by scoring from nine yards out.

Safety Don Schwartz returned a third-quarter interception 45 yards for one touchdown and Eddie Brown ran 29 yards with another theft as Chicago, 12-6, earned a trip to Philadelphia for next week's other semifinal playoff game against the Atlantic Division champion Stars.

A crowd of only 12,346 — 6,463 below the average home attendance — sat through 80s-degree heat, while the players endured field temperatures reported as high as 116 on the artificial playing surface.

Kim McQuilken completed 18 of 27 passes, including 10 in a row in the second half, passed for 208 yards and ran 1 yard for the winning touchdown to lead Washington past the 15-3 Stars, who finished the regular season with the league's best record as 11,039 watched in the 92-degree heat of RFK Stadium.

Moreland keys 7-4 Cub victory

By Associated Press

Keith Moreland, who had homered earlier, triggered a tie-breaking, three-run sixth inning with a wind-blown double as the Chicago Cubs beat the Montreal Expos 7-4 for their sixth straight victory Sunday.

The loss was Montreal's fifth in a row, their longest losing streak of the season.

Moreland started the sixth with his double off Bill Gullickson, 7-9. Moreland moved to third on Jody Davis' infield hit and scored on Larry Bowa's sacrifice fly.

After a sacrifice by Steve Trout, 7-7, Mell Hall doubled in Bowa and Sandberg followed with a run-scoring single.

In other National League games, rookie Nick Esasky rallied Cincinnati with a two-run homer and relievers Ted Power and Bill Scherrer pitched out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the sixth inning as the Reds held off the Atlanta Braves 2-1. Atlanta had beaten Cincinnati 10 straight times since losing to the Reds on opening day.

Mike Schmidt, battling one of the worst slumps of his career, slammed an eighth-inning homer to snap a 4-4 tie and reliever Willie Hernandez tied an NL record for strikeouts as the Philadelphia Phillies downed the New York Mets 6-4.

Schmidt's 15th homer was the first blast allowed this season by rookie reliever Doug Sisk in 58 2-3 innings. Hernandez struck out all six batters he faced, tying the NL record for consecutive strikeouts by a reliever.

Steve Braun belted a two-run pinch-homer in the seventh inning to carry the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Steve Garvey belted a grand slam and Dave Dravecky won his major league-leading 12th game as the San Diego Padres stopped the San Francisco Giants 4-1. Dravecky is now 12-5.

In the American League, Seattle's Glenn Abbott outdueled Dave Stieb and Pat Putnam hit a two-run homer to lead the Mariners over the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1.

Lance Parrish keyed a four-run third inning with a two-run homer and John Wockenfuss added an eighth-inning grand slam, leading the Detroit Tigers past the Baltimore Orioles 10-1.

Gary Allenson slugged a three-run homer and Jim Rice continued his long-ball spree with his sixth homer in the last four games as the Boston Red Sox topped the New York Yankees 7-3. Rice leads the major leagues with 22 homers.

Ron Washington's bases-loaded single in the bottom of the ninth inning lifted the Minnesota Twins to a 4-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Bobby Grich lined a two-run single in the first inning and Ron Jackson later belted a two-run homer as the California Angels topped the Kansas City Royals 5-2.

In an NL night game, Los Angeles was at Houston. In the AL, Texas was at Oakland and Milwaukee was at Cleveland.

Campbell leads by two

Craig Campbell holds a thin two-stroke lead over Ernie Swart at 146 going into final round play today in the George Clark Tournament at Midland Country Club.

Right behind Swart's 148 is Kelly Sewell at 150, and Kelly Cox is five shots off the pace at 151.

Elsewhere in Clark Tournament action, Buddy Redden and Bill Hightower, Sr. are staging a personal war on two fronts. In Division I, Redden has fired a 135 after two days to lead Hightower by a stroke. But in the Seniors Division, Hightower carded a second-round 73 to take a three-stroke edge over Redden.

Here are leaders after two rounds of the 19th George Clark Tournament at Midland Country Club:

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT: Craig Campbell, 146; Ernie Swart, 148; Kelly Sewell, 150; Kelly Cox, 151.

DIVISION I: Buddy Redden, 135; Bill Hightower, Sr., 136; David Eckley, 138; Bill Granberry, 139; Bill Franklin, 140; Martin Allday, Dr. George Freetage, Dr. Jake Shapira, tied at 143.

DIVISION II: Bill Henry, 135; Kelly Baxter, Mark Embrey, tied at 136; Gene Motter, 137; Bob Jones, Rodney McDaniel, Lloyd Ugland, Leonard Busby, tied at 142; Kerry Blair, Bill Kennedy, John Rahlfs, tied at 143.

SENIORS: Hightower, Sr. 77-73—150; Redden, 76-77—153

Hood low at RHCC

Maurice Hood and Bill Cope in the Men's division and Mary Robinson in the women's dominated second round play in Ranchland Hills Country Club's Firecracker Golf Tournament Sunday.

Hood won the Low Net Men's Divisionwith a six-under 64, and Cope carded a 74 to capture first place in the Low Gross Men's Division. Both finished in the top three in the other division as well.

Robinson finished two shots behind Bobby Jean McDaniel in the Low Net Women's, but captured the Low Gross crown with an 82.

Final round play at the Firecracker, a four-man, two-best ball match, begins today.

Top finishers from Sunday action at Ranchland Hills Country Club: Low Net Men's: Hood, 64; Cope, 65; Ray Johnson 68. Low Gross Men's: Cope 74; Gene McDaniel, Hood, tied at 77. Low Net Women's: McDaniel, 65; Robinson, Wanda Kinder, tied at 67; Low Gross Women's: Robinson, 82; Betty Clark, Nina Colter, tied at 87.

O'Connors win at Hogan

The team of Danny and Tim O'Connor fired a four-under par 67 Sunday to win Hogan Park's July Fourth Tournament easily by five strokes.

O'Connor and O'Connor carded a 66 Saturday to lead opening round play, and finished with a nine-under 133.

Next on the boards is the City Championships July 30-31 at Hogan Park. Entry deadline for the Tournament is Thursday July 28 at 6 p.m. For more information contact the Hogan Park golf shop at 682-7891.

Following is a list of winners from weekend play at the Hogan Park Tournament:Championship Flight: O'Connor-O'Connor, 133; Roberts-Sikes, 138; Pyle-Higgins, 139.

First Flight: Manulik-Logan, 141; Hendrix-Ahern, Stanley-Day, tied at 144.

President's Flight: Daugherty-Daugherty, 71; Faulkner-Boyd, Herring-Herring, Thompson-Sullivan, tied at 75.

Youth scores GTCC ace

David Schmidt, age 11, became the youngest player to record a hole-in-one at Greentree Country Club Sunday. Schmidt, using a seven-iron, aced the 100-yard 16th. Art Schmidt, Lloyd Macdonald and Bob Peyton witnessed Schmidt's first ever ace.

Shoulder puts Orioles' Palmer goes on DL

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles placed three-time Cy Young Award winner Jim Palmer on the 21-day disabled list Saturday with recurring shoulder problems, leaving the veteran right-hander's career in jeopardy.

"Jim will undergo further testing on his shoulder later this week in Baltimore," said Baltimore General Manager Hank Peters in announcing the move. "Following the testing, he will need some time to rehabilitate himself. He is expected to miss a minumum of two starts."

The move marks the second time that Palmer, 2-2 with a 3.62 ERA this year, has been placed on the disabled list this season.

Astros beat LA, 8-1

HOUSTON — Joe Niekro tossed a three-hitter and Terry Puhl had three hits, including a two-run inside-the-park home run, while Jose Cruz belted a three-run homer as the Houston Astros toppled the Los Angeles Dodgers 8-1.

Niekro, 5-7, struck out five and walked five. The only run he allowed came on pinch hitter Jose Morales' second homer of the season with one out in the eighth.

Bill Doran, who had three hits, singled with one out in the second and scored from first base on Luis Pujols' hit-and-run single off loser Bob Welch, 6-8.

Doran tripled to lead off the fourth and Pujols knocked him in with a deep sacrifice fly to center field.

Houston made it 5-0 in the fifth when Cruz slammed his second three-run homer in as many days, his fifth this season.

The Astros added another run in the sixth on shortstop Dave Anderson's error. Omar Moreno singled, went to second on a fielder's choice and scored when Dickie Thon hit a grounder between Anderson's legs.

In the eighth with two outs, Moreno singled for his third hit and scored on Puhl's second homer of the season, which hit the top of the right-field wall and bounded away from right fielder Mike Marshall.

Stacy staves off Carner, Miller

POINTE CLAIRE, Quebec (AP) — Hollis Stacy shot a final-round 68 Sunday and held off a charge by JoAnne Carner and Alice Miller to capture the $250,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Peter Jackson Classic.

Stacy posted a 72-hole total of 277, 11 under par, over the par-72, 6,033-yard Beaconsfield Golf Club course. That was two strokes better than Carner and Miller, who made a dramatic run with 66s Sunday. Both players had entered the day at 3-under, five strokes behind the leader, M.J. Smith of New Zealand.

Stacy, meanwhile, was in a four-way tie for second, only one stroke behind Smith. Jan Stephenson, one of those tied with Stacy, alternated the lead with her early in the final round, before running into problems on the back nine.

It was the first time that Stacy, who is in her 10th year on the tour, has won the Peter Jackson, one of four major events on the circuit. The first-place finish was worth $37,500, pushing Stacy's career earnings to $831,105.

"I hadn't won a major tournament in so long," said Stacy, recalling the U.S. Women's Open championship she captured in both 1977 and 1978. "Every good player wants to win a major.

"After two Opens, you want to go on to other heights, and this is just as important."

Carner, in the three-some ahead of Stacy, had shaved Stacy's lead to two strokes with a birdie on the 12th hole, and both golfers parred the 13th.

"It was on the 14th that I started to realize JoAnne was making a charge," Stacy said. "I made sure I played hit-your-drive-on-the-fairway golf.

"I started playing cautious golf."

Stacy managed birdies on both the 15th and 17th holes before bogeying the 18th. By then, it didn't matter because Carner was in the clubhouse and Stacy held a 3-stroke advantage.

"I played the last hole conservatively," said Stacy. "I figured I could make a seven and still win."

Carner was still shaking her head over some erratic putting. She missed a five-footer for a birdie on the 14th, a six-footer for a birdie on the 15th

"Yes, I know you gave only last month. But that was for the wedding. This is for the divorce."

Blocks of ice are removed during construction of an ice road and a gravel island for the Gulf/Tenneco wildcat well off Cross Island in Alaska's Beaufort Sea. The $35 million well will be the northernmost offshore Alaska well when drilling begins on the gravel island in November. Gulf's Western Division office in Midland, through its Alaska Taska Force in Anchorage, is responsible for the operation. A 15-mile ice road more than seven feet thick was built from Prudhoe Bay to the ice island to allow movement of construction equipment and 3,393 truckloads of gravel, weighing up to 260,000 pounds each.

Gulf wildcats in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Gulf Oil Exploration & Production Company, a division of Gulf Oil Corporation, has contracted with Alaska United Drilling Inc. (AUD) to drill the Gulf/Tenneco Cross Island No. 1 wildcat well in the Beaufort Sea starting in November.

The Midland-based western division of Gulf Oil Exploration & Production Company, through its Alaska task force in Anchorage, is responsible for the Cross Island well.

AUD IS A 75-PERCENT native-owned company based in Anchorage. According to AUD, the drilling operation will bring training and employment opportunities for North Slope residents.

Native Eskimo workers would also be trained for employment in future production operations if the well is successful, according to a Gulf — North Slope Borough agreement.

Export of Alaska oil possible

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The question of the advantages or disadvantages of exporting Alaskan oil to Japan were thrown open to debate in Washington this week when congressmen and oil industry representatives pondered the effect either course would have on the big oil states of Texas and California.

Robert R. Nathan, economic consultant, and the powerful Gray and Company, public relations specialists with high Republican connections reaching into the White House, lined up with California's Sen. Alan Cranston to oppose export.

The Export Administration Act which now keeps Alaskan oil for domestic consumption expires in September. Those for export say selling to Japan would increase revenues for the federal government, Alaska and the oil companies as well as stimulate more exploration in Alaska.

Alaskan crude sells for $30.33 per barrel. It could be sold to Japan for $29.36 per barrel

GULF OIL AND TENNECO Oil Exploration and Production, a unit of Tenneco Inc., each own a 50 percent interest in three Cross Island area tracts. Gulf is operator for the $35 million well on Block 54, 17 miles northeast of Prudhoe Bay, which will be the northernmost offshore well.

The Gulf/Tenneco wildcat will also be the first test along the northern edge of the federal and state tract area and will test a new geological province. The well has a permit depth of 15,500 feet.

A 15-MILE ICE ROAD up to seven-and-1/2 feet thick was built from the Prudhoe Bay dock area to the wellsite to allow construction of a gravel island near the southwest end of Cross Island. Drilling operations will take place on the 250-by-650-foot island.

Construction of the island required the transportation of 3,393 truckloads, or 127,500 cubic yards, of gravel across the floating ice road in about 20 days. The weight of individual loads crossing the road reached 260,000 pounds, and each roundtrip for the gravel trucks was 44 miles.

A BERM 12 FEET WIDE and four feet high was built around the gravel island, and 2,888 bags filled with two cubic yards of gravel each were placed on two sides of the island for slope protection against sea waters.

Wilson still at work after Inns

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — In the three years since he "retired," Holiday Inns founder Kemmons Wilson has built two shopping centers and is almost finished with a couple of hotels and a $100 million vacation complex.

"I'm still pretty busy," says Wilson, 70.

He has been building things all of his life. Since he started in business as a high school dropout with a popcorn machine, he has formed hundreds of companies — the best known being Holiday Inns Inc.

After suffering a heart attack, Wilson retired from Holiday Inns in June 1980.

"But I couldn't quit work. To me, work is my fun, my pleasure," says Wilson, who splits his time between his office at Kemmons Wilson Inc. in Memphis and his newest major interest, Orange Lake Country Club at Kissimmee, Fla., four miles from Walt Disney World.

"I like to work a half a day," he says. "I don't care if it's the first 12 hours or the second 12 hours. I just put in my half-day every day. I think it's good for everybody. It keeps you out of trouble."

Wilson got into the Orange Lake project the same way he has gotten into all his other business ventures — by watching for an opportunity to make money.

"If you keep trying enough things, you're going to find some things that are going to hit," he says.

The first business venture he tried did just that.

At 17, he bought a second-hand popcorn machine and set up business in the lobby of a Memphis theater.

"I got it for nothing down and $1 a week. When you don't have any money that's the only way to do it," he says.

Business was good, too good. "I got to doing so well that I was making more than the theater manager and he took my concession away from me."

Wilson sold the popcorn machine for $50, and invested the money he had made in five pinball machines, which he placed around town. He continued buying pinball machines, became a jukebox distributor and extended his finances to the limit to buy 250 cigarette machines.

In 1933, Wilson bought a house for $1,700 and found out one day that he could use it for collateral on a $6,500 loan. He went into the building business.

His ventures were interrupted from 1943 to 1945 while he served as a pilot during World War II, flying cargo over the Himalayas from India into Burma and China.

After the war, Wilson went back into building and real estate, and in 1952 he built the first Holiday Inn on Summer Avenue in Memphis.

Wilson says he decided on a car trip with his family to Washington, D.C., that the motels of the time did not offer the traveling public enough quality.

He vowed to his wife that he would build a chain of 400 motels. When he left Holiday Inns, the company had more than 1,750 motels.

PERSONAL FILE: Kemmons Wilson

Wilson says he has always watched for business opportunities, big or small. One of the companies he recently formed makes and sells nacho chips and cheese dip.

"I was in California and I found a man who was making the best chips I'd ever tasted," Wilson says. "He said he was enlarging his plant and if I'd buy his equipment, he'd show me how to make chips."

Wilson's chip company, called Nachos Inc., did $2.5 million in business last year.

Typical of his way of doing things, Wilson hired someone to run the company after he set it up.

"I'm a great guy for partners," he says. "I always have someone doing the work."

Wilson says he got the idea for the Orange Lake Country Club while visiting a business associate in Florida.

The associate took Wilson to a condominium that was purchased for $7,000 on a "time-share" basis, and he liked what he saw.

With time-share a buyer purchases an apartment for a certain length of time each year. He owns it for that period, and he can sell it or leave it to his children or deal with it in many other ways that one handles private property.

So far Wilson has sold $32 million worth of units at Orange Lake and construction is expected to continue through 1984.

The development has 600 units, including a hotel with 168 units, also sold on a time-share basis. It also has a golf course, 16 tennis courts, four racketball courts, three swimming pools, an 80-acre lake and a 7,000-seat tennis stadium.

Wilson is a tennis player himself and tries to get in three or four matches a week.

Other projects he has started since his "retirement" include a conventional, 320-room hotel a mile from Disney World, oil exploration in Louisiana and two factory outlet malls.

Wilson has always been a family man and has a bank of 20 pictures of his wife, Dorothy, and their five children displayed on one wall near his desk.

"I've got 10 children," he says. "Five of my own and the five my children married."

A large portrait of his mother dominates the wall behind his desk, much larger than the dozens of awards, plaques and photographs of well-known people that decorate the office. Wilson was 9 months old when his father died, and his mother worked at low-paying jobs to support him.

Wilson's three sons work with him in his various enterprises and when his offspring were younger, he often took them with him on business trips.

"I think they're glad to keep me in the business. I keep things stirred up pretty good," he says.

Anti-Fencing Act opposed in letters

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A bill which would regulate buying of gold, silver, platinum, precious stones and jewelry, called the Anti-Fencing Act of 1983, is receiving much opposition in the mail, it was reported by the House Judiciary committee.

Most of this opposition is coming from coin collectors, who say the provisions of the bill would particularly add to their burden of record keeping. Many of them are small business owners who buy gold, silver and gems from collectors.

So far, the bill appears to be making no progress in the House of Representatives. It was offered by Rep. Dennis Hertel, D-Mich. and patterned after similar legislation in his state. But since offering it, even Hertel has not requested by letter to the committee that there be further action.

The bill lies in the sub-committee on crime of the Judiciary committee where no hearings have been scheduled, although there has developed a sizeable lobby against it, mainly from coin collectors and retail coin and jewelry dealers.

The bill would place several restrictions on persons who sell gold, silver, jewelry or gems to dealers, but does not affect transactions between dealers.

It would require identification of the seller, mainly with a thumb print. No cash can be paid for such sales under the bill; payment would have to be made by check or draft.

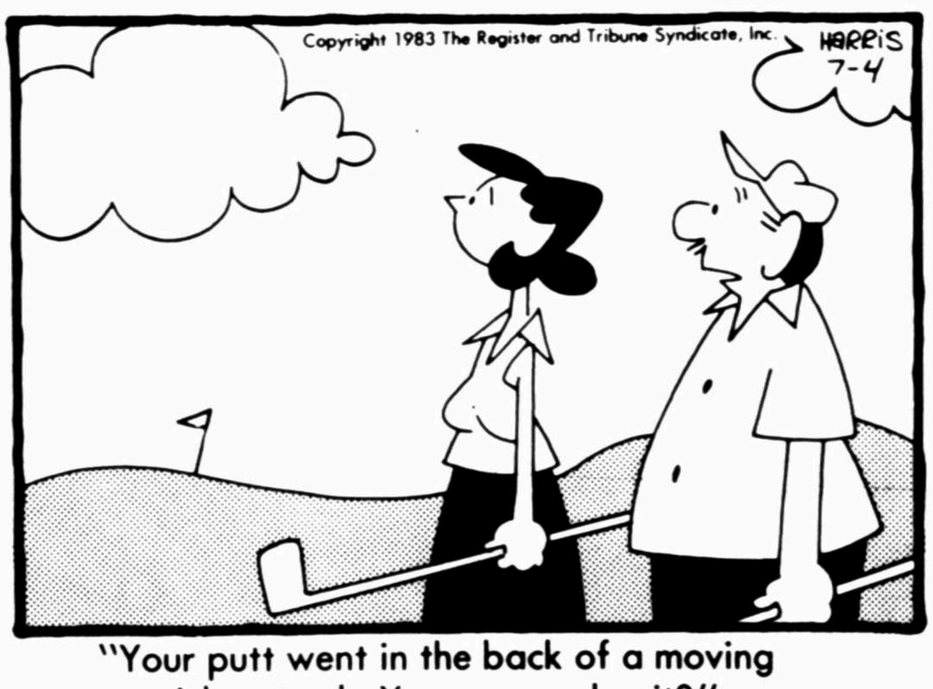
THE BETTER HALF



"Your putt went in the back of a moving pickup truck. You gonna play it?"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, July 5, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Poet Jean Cocteau, showman P.T. Barnum, Naval hero Admiral David G. Farragut, actress Ilona Massey and U.N. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Tampa Bay Bucs' coach John McKay and Julie Nixon Eisenhower. Your creativity is impressive in the months ahead. Count on enjoying greater business success. Honesty is the key to reaching your personal goals. Those who take risks will be the big winners, if they know their limits. Romance leads to a change in lifestyle. Patience is essential as you climb to the top. Be a team player at work. Higher-ups are favorably impressed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Contradictions make it difficult to reach the right decision. Put your faith in your intuition. Reject any unreasonable demands. A blind date could lead to a wonderful adventure.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Acknowledge your extensive talents and put them to better use. You get an important message. Loved one wants to share a triumph. Do not spoil his or her surprise. Go to lunch and celebrate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Constant travel is sapping your energy. Take a few days off and you will function better. The boss proves understanding. Settle an employment dispute before you lose money.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your creativity is high today. Tackle a difficult assignment. A pleasure outing may be too expensive. Think twice. Observe all safety rules as you go about your chores.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel is romantic and revealing. A colleague of the opposite sex pays you a compliment. The day gets off to a happy start. Deal with cash or credit problems before they escalate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The object of your affections lets you know that the feeling is mutual. A business deal can be finalized. Do not try to overwhelm people. A calm manner wins you acceptance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Increase your efficiency by focusing on one project at a time. Someone is working quietly behind the scenes to help you. Dreams and hunches are not productive. Face reality.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A change in lifestyle brings greater pleasure and comfort. Romance could be dangerously exciting. Be discreet and keep expenses down. You may not be ready to make a permanent alliance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could receive a terrific financial offer today. Strike while the iron is hot! The outlook is excellent. Be more cautious in your personal relationships. You are playing with fire in romance!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Make every effort to maintain good relations with your co-workers. A medical or social service career proves very fulfilling. Polish old skills and develop new ones to boost your earning power.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not be afraid to try new things. You feel very creative now. Choose your allies with care. You need to devote more time to routine tasks and health-care projects.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Romantic partner offers loving support. Scale down your hopes to more realistic proportions to avoid being disappointed. Shoppers should examine all merchandise very carefully. Sales may be final.

PBS sees problems, optimistism

From wire reports

ARLINGTON, Va. — Confident and optimistic: Those were the words that Public Broadcasting Service President Lawrence Grossman used to describe the mood at the public television network these days.

Given the current financial crisis at National Public Radio, which is more than $6.5 million in debt and is in danger of going bankrupt, it was not hard to see why Grossman and many of his colleagues were feeling cool, calm and collected at the 1983 public television convention, which concluded here over the weekend.

Unlike its radio counterpart, National Public Radio, PBS is in solid financial shape, with no long-term debt and about $7.3 million in working capital as it begins the new fiscal year Friday with a balanced budget of $61.9 million.

But it was not just its financial health that PBS was toasting here. Network executives also were boasting of their continued growth in audience — up 64 percent in prime time during the last six seasons — of their having survived the challenge of the now-defunct CBS Cable and Entertainment Channel cable services, and of a fall season that includes an hourlong "MacNeil-Lehrer Report," a major new series on the Vietnam War and such staples as "American Playhouse," "Masterpiece Theater," "Nova," "Sesame Street," "Great Performances" and a new selection of college-credit telecourses.

Yet it would be a grave mistake to assume that public television is out of the financial woods.

Even if the system escapes the most immediate danger of being caught up in a public or congressional backlash to the problems at National Public Radio, it still is in the midst of adjusting to the reduction in federal and other governmental support that has occurred during the past year.

"PBS is very healthy financially, but we can't operate in a vacuum. We're part of a system," Grossman acknowledged in an interview. "The stations are going to be feeling enormous problems. My own private theory is that the full impact of the cuts has not yet been felt."

That sobering assessment was echoed in a report from the National Association of Public Television Stations, which said that while public television's total annual income climbed 42 percent between 1978 and 1982 — to $676.5 million

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A6 ♡Q5 ◇K1054 ♣AQ874
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — While you might be in the slam zone, there is also the possibility that your best contract is three no trump. To test the possibilities of the hand, bid three diamonds. That's forcing in this auction. If partner persists with three no trump, settle for that; but if he bids anything else, make a slam try.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q6 ♡Q952 ◇J3 ♣AK1098
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — You have an awkward hand. You do not have enough to insist on game, so you can't afford to bid two hearts — that would be a reverse and, therefore, forcing. You can't rebid three clubs — that would show longer clubs and a weaker hand. That leaves only two no trump, even though we would hardly claim that your spade holding constitutes a stopper.

Q.3 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A9865 ◇K742 ♣10654
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — Even though you are void in partner's first-bid suit, don't consider your hand to be a minimum. You have an ace and four-card support in partner's second suit, headed by the king. Your hand could easily be enough for partner to make game, so you owe him another bid. Raise to three diamonds.

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQJ872 ♡K95 ◇762 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — With your unbalanced hand, you certainly don't want to play no trump. However, you aren't quite good enough for an invitational jump to three spades. Just bid two spades. If you can make game, partner should have enough to bid again.

Q.5 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQJ872 ♡762 ◇K105 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — Almost the same hand as in the last problem, except that we switched the red suits around. The point count is the same, but this time you have an honor in partner's first suit. That is just enough to justify an invitational jump to three spades — it is not forcing because partner rebid one no trump.

Q.6 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K10765 ♡KQJ6 ◇AJ6 ♣6
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A. — A difficult hand. You are too strong for a jump raise of partner's suit, but not quite good enough to jump shift — especially since your long suit is weak and higher ranking than the suit in which you wish to play the hand. The solution is to bid one spade, and then jump in hearts at your next turn.

Being an auctioneer is more than fast talking

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The staccato chant rattles through the old house, then suddenly stops as the young man looks puzzled and asks what the last bid was on a battered briefcase.

"You've got to be quicker than that," says state Rep. Jay Blodgett. "That's where a ring man comes in handy."

Six other people, sitting at a table and ranged around the wall on sofas and chairs, grin a little uneasily because they know that soon they will be on the spot, trying to keep up "the call."

All are student's at Cecil Abernathy's School of Auctioneering. And while there are those who think that auctioneers, like others with the gift of gab, are born, not made, Abernathy says it takes more than just the ability to talk fast to become a successful auctioneer.

IN FACT, FAST TALKING is a minor part of a 40-hour course designed to teach the intricacies of the trade.

By the time the students finish the 10-night session over two weeks, they'll not only know how to pry a higher bid from a hesitant auctiongoer, but how to get out the advertising, hire helpers, promote the sale and collect and record the money.

"Anybody can be an auctioneer with the right training," says Abernathy, who admits to auctioning off just about everything imaginable from a bed to heavy construction equipment over the past 30 years. "But to be successful, you've got to like people — and you've got to get them to like you."

A lot of the session is devoted to attitude; how to hit the right note of friendliness while still keeping it businesslike. He and the other eight instructors constantly hammer on the "friendly business" angle of auctioneering.

"You meet the best people in the world doing auctions," Abernathy says. "I's a wide-open field, and anyone with the right training can make a good living. But you've really got to like people"

BLODGETT, WHO RUNS an auction company in Duncan when he isn't taking care of state business as a legislator, says virtually the same thing the night he is the instructor. But he emphasizes that there's more to auctioneering than just making money.

"There are auctions that make you feel a lot better than others," Blodgett tells the students. "I auctioned off a machine shop just the other day for $71,000. I did it on 10 percent commission, and we sold it out in three hours.

"That's pretty good money. But I had another auction for a lady who was going into nursing home. She didn't have much furniture, and I auctioned it off for free. Now, that made me feel really good."

Abernathy and Blodgett don't hesitate to point out the possible financial rewards, though.

"The school costs $300 for the 40 hours," Abernathy says. "I've had students who graduate on Friday night and go out Saturday and make that back in one auction."

But, he says, only about half the average class intends to go into auctioneering as a business.

"Some take the course just to get some self-confidence in front of people," he says. "Others want to learn how to do it so they can do it at social events and the like."

THE STUDENTS ARE drilled in all aspects of the auctioneering business.

"One of the first things they have to learn is the count," Abernathy says. "There are basically only six numbers used in auctions. They are a quarter, a half, one, 2½, five and 10.

"Of course, each stands for any type of number. For instance, a half could mean a half a cent, a half-dollar, $50, $500 and so on. One could mean a penny or $1,0000.

"Ninety-nine percent of all auctions will use just these six numbers."

Before an auctioneer can make any money, he has to book an auction. That's where the hard work comes in, Abernathy says, and he explains to the students how to go about setting up an auction.

THE STUDENTS ALSO are taught how to make certain everyone understands what is going on at an auction.

"When you first start the sale, give them the terms," says Blodgett. "Tell them whether you'll take checks or credit cards. If I have somebody in the audience buying a lot and paying with checks, I make it a point to ease around and visit with him awhile and find out something about him.

"Somebody will always ask whether you'll help load what they've bought. That's up to you, but try to keep from doing it if you can."

Blodgett says he always makes it a rule to tell the audience "the only guarantee is that there is no guarantee. Make sure they know that you're taking the seller's word that if something is supposed to work, it should work."

WHILE OTHER STUDENTS take the portable public address system and practice actioning off Abernathy's office contents, others talk about why they are taking the course.

"I've been interested in this for a long time," says Jason Riddle of Oklahoma City, whose mop of unruly hair pokes out from under a baseball cap. "It is a growing business.

"I'm still going to school, so the only time I could take the course is during the summer. I'm taking it more or less for the experience and I won't decide until later whether I want to make it a career."

At 15 he is the youngest in the class, and the others kid him about being so "tight" when he won't raise the bid during their practice sessions.

LEARNING TO BE AN auctioneer was a matter of necessity for Eddie Shaw, a tall, weathered rancher clad in straw cowboy hat, blue shirt and jeans. He explains that he bought an auction house in his southwestern Oklahoma hometown of Wilson just about two months earlier.

"We used to sit around there and spend the time," he says. "The man who owned it sold out and the auctioneer asked me why didn't I buy it so we'd still have someplace to visit, so I did.

"Now my auctioneer says he is quitting, so I decided I'd better learn how to do it," said Shaw, at 51 the oldest member of the class. "We sell anything people bring in on consignment, for a 20 percent commission."

Shaw says the auction house is strictly a family opeation. While waiting to graduate, he serves as ring man — the man who walks along the edge of the crowd and relays a bid to the auctioneer — while his wife is the cashier and a stepdaughter is the clerk.

Poisonous mushrooms collected for research

Hearst Feature Service

For centuries, men have eked a living from the soil, but few have gone the way of Jonathan Ott – gathering piles of "poisonous" mushrooms.

A freelance chemist, Ott stalks the forests of western Washington State and gathers bags of toxic Amanita fungi. From these fleshy, colorful toadstools he extracts a compound which he sells to chemical wholesalers, government researchers and university laboratories around the world – for about $5,000 a gram.

Called 'ibotenic acid, it's used in animal studies that could help uniock secrets about human nervous disorders such as epilepsy and Alzheimer's Disease. The latter afflicts 10 to 15 percent of all Americans older than 65.

"It's by studying toxins that virtually all we know about drugs and human biochemistry is learned," Ott says.

Ibotenic acid is extremely difficult and expensive to synthesize, and the mushrooms are a plentiful natural source of the rare chemical.

Neurochemical researchers prize ibotenic acid because it mimics the action of a chemical called glutamic acid, which plays a key role in transmitting nerve impulses in the human brain.

Ibotenic acid is 20 or 30 times more powerful than glutamic acid, so its action on brain tissue is vivid and more easily traced. Therefore it allows scientists to map otherwise murky chemical pathways in the brain, which may be linked to nervous diseases.

Ott, 34, says he's the only chemist on earth who extracts ibotenic acid from Amanitas. He sold four grams last year and about 1.5 grams so far this year. Each time he makes a batch it takes some 110 pounds of fresh mushrooms to yield nine or 10 grams of final product. One batch requires a week of 18-hour days.

What's left after the labor's over is a little pile of white crystalline powder that tastes like "putting a penny on your tongue."

Ott's raw material is Amanita pantherina, which sprouts in the spring, and the muscaria species, which grows in the fall. The former has a large fleshy brown cap with white warts and a white stem; the latter has a yellowish or red cap with white warts.

"There are so many of them, you can collect 100 pounds in a few hours," Ott says.

Ott's highly specialized niche in the world of chemistry blends a spiritual inclination with scientific curiosity and good old-fashioned profit motive.

He's a friend and colleague of Albert Hofmann, the 77-year-old Swiss chemist who discovered LSD. Ott translated Hofmann's memoirs, entitled "LSD: My Problem Child." Like Hofmann, Ott has experimented with "mind-expanding" chemicals, which he calls "entheogens," or products which bring one closer to God.

Ibotenic acid, while a useful research tool, has both intoxicating and psychoactive properties, but no laws bar collection of Amanitas. Ott says he's eaten Amanitas three times, but he strongly advises amateurs not to do so.

"They're quite toxic, I wouldn't experiment with them. They tend to produce the effects of being very drunk: you fall down, stagger, can't drive a car."

Ott graduated from Evergreen State College near Olympia, Wash., in 1975. While there, Ott interviewed about a dozen people who accidentally ingested Amanitas and another dozen who intentionally ate them.

"The unintentional users panicked and thought they were going to die. One man even called his lawyer to make out a will before seeking medical aid.

Fire department hopes city won't have hot time

By DIANE BOOTH
Lifestyle Writer

It will be a hot time in the old town tonight if Midlanders celebrate Independence Day with fireworks.

Midland Deputy Fire Chief James Roberts is concerned about the dangers of lighting firecrackers and other fireworks under very dry conditions.

"This year we have had a lot of grassfires," he said. If Midlanders violate the city law by using fireworks, he said, "we will have a lot of problems because it is really dry."

Midland has received 2.36 inches of rainfall to date this year and .19 inches in June.

A city code makes it unlawful to possess, sell, have, manufacture, store or shoot any fireworks within city limits, according to Roberts.

Any person found in violation of the city code is guilty of a misdemeanor. The penalty is a fine not to exceed $1,000 and or imprisonment for up to one year.

Legal fireworks must be designated Class C Common Fireworks. These include regular firecrackers, sparklers, fire rockets and Roman candles.

THEY MUST meet minimum standards for sturdiness and safety labeling. Class A and B fireworks are available to professionals who put on fireworks shows.

Class C fireworks are sold outside city limits here at an estimated eight to 10 stands, Roberts said.

State law forbids using M-80 firecrackers and bottle rockets, Roberts said. The firecrackers were banned because of injuries suffered by many people using them.

Fireworks reportedly caused injury to about 8,500 people in the United States last year.

The large bottle rockets "caused more fires than anything that ever hit Texas," Roberts said. Last year was the first year Texans could not purchase them.

"Getting rid of bottle rockets will probably cut down on roof fires," Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said. His office has received reports of bootlegging bottle rockets, which he said is a misdemeanor.

Fireworks may be purchased and sold in Texas only from June 24 to July 4 and December 20 to Jan. 1, he said.

MRS. BECKY Jones and her husband, Tommy, a lieutenant with Midland County Sheriff's Department, have operated fireworks stands here for about eight years.

The couple sells fireworks in four locations outside Midland. The law requires stands be set up a minimum of 5,000 feet from the city limits.

Although Mrs. Jones wants to sell the firecrackers, sparklers, snakes and display rockets, she emphasizes caution in using the devices.

"Because it is real dry this year we recommend people stay away from grassy areas such as pastures. They could really cause a lot of damage if they are not real careful with fireworks."

The woman advises watching the burning material as it falls and making sure all sparks are out before leaving the area.

"A lot of people won't take our advice," she said. "They just shoot them wherever they want to.

"If it gets to the point where people are real careless, they'll just outlaw all fireworks. We'll get to the point where there's nothing more."

Fourth of July made for youngsters

"We celebrate Independence Day...to have fun..."

By FRANK CLARK
Summer Intern

Kids and the Fourth of July are a natural pair. There's fireworks and baseball, picnics and parades. What day could be better if your under 12?

Therefore, no one could be more qualified to answer questions about our nation's birthday than kids. After all, aren't they the ones who celebrate it with the most heart and enthusiasm?

With this in mind, and in an attempt to get the real story behind the national holiday, the Reporter-Telegram went to the source most qualified to answer questions about Independence Day...kids.

Why do Americans celebrate the Fourth of July? Why is celebration necessary? What can a red-blooded American do to properly celebrate the Day of Independence?

Some answers.

Sam Stratton, 7:

"Everybody knows about the Fourth of July. It's the world's birthday and also the day that America got its freedom from France about 200 years ago.....or was it a 1,000 years ago?"

Jennifer Ensminger, 9:

"July 4th is the day that America celebrates its independence from England and Ben Franklin. He discovered electricity you know."

Scott Roberts, 10:

"On Monday, we celebrate Independence Day because we live in a good country and all the wars are over and nobody has to kill anybody anymore. But the most important thing is that America is free and all the people who live here are free."

Shandon Nickle, 6:

"We have Fourth of July because of George Washington and to have fun. Everybody pops firecrackers and goes swimming and stuff because people have more fun in America."

Michael Smith, 9:

"America's birthday and mine are on the same day, July 4th, so I have two times as much fun. The best way to celebrate is to go rollerskating with your family and lots of friends. It's great because we're free to do everything we want in America...well, not everything, but almost everything."

Mike Williams Jr., 7:

Scott Roberts

"On the 4th, everybody is happy because they live in America and because they can go where they want and nobody stops them. Also, everybody's happy because they've got fireworks and can have fun."

Mike Williams Jr.

Anna Gamboa, 9:

"The Fourth of July is the day we celebrate America's birthday because we live in a free country. Americans can go to church and work and nobody tells them what to do, except maybe their parents. Everyone gets together with their families on July 4th and has picnics and watches fireworks and has a good time. I don't know any other country where people can do so much and be so free."

PUC chairman: Phone price is social issue

LONGVIEW (AP) — The chairman of the Public Utility Commission says his concern about Southwestern Bell's record $1.7 billion rate increase request is based not on dollars, but philosophy.

"Under President Ronald Reagan, the Justice Department is saying the pricing of a phone is an economic issue. I think it's a social one as well," said PUC Chairman Al Erwin in an interview with the Longview News Journal.

The $1.7 billion figure is the largest increase ever sought by a telephone company in any state, and it would more than triple present rates for basic services. It is also the first rate increase Bell has sought since the 1982 federal order breaking up AT&T's monopoly on phone service.

"We are the first state in the country to face this situation, but eventually every state will face it. Due to the breakup of AT&T (American Telephone and Telegraph), every state will have to face a brand new environment," Erwin said.

AT&T will say good-bye to its subsidiaries, such as Southwestern Bell, on Jan. 1, 1984. Bell will maintain contracts with its former parent for equipment and access to lines.

In simple terms, the divestiture order will give long-distance to AT&T and local service to Bell.

Bell attributes about $750 million of the $1.7 billion rate increase request to costs from the AT&T breakup, $450 million to changes in federal depreciation schedules, and allocates $502 million to profit and higher business costs.

Representatives of some of the new long-distance discount services, such as U.S. Telephone and MCI, have accused Southwestern Bell of seeking higher local rates to subsidize competitive long-distance rates.

Bell officials say the opposite is true — that for too long, artificially high long-distance rates have subsidized artificially low local rates.

Under divestiture, Bell will no longer reap profits from long-distance, so local rates must go up, Bell officials argue.

"What concerns me is the poor people, the people on Social Security," said Erwin. "They can't afford $30 a month for phone service (but) they need that phone to call the doctor or the hospital.

"What we are doing is keeping the price (of local service) below cost and realizing that long-distance calls are subsidizing the service. Now they want to charge the customer $30 instead of $10. They will still make money off that money but consumers will not get any benefits," he said.

Bell currently operates under a 1934 act of Congress known as universal service, Erwin said.

"The universal service act says regulators (such as the PUC) should price telephone service to make service available to everyone. In the past, the price of a telephone has been at a level everyone can afford. That price has benefited the consumer and the company," he said.

Slain man's sister angry at death

WHITE OAK (AP) — Roddy Harris' sister says when she heard he was one of four people stabbed to death in the apparent robbery of a Houston amusement center, her reaction was anger.

Harris, 23, was one of four employees of the Malibu Gran Prix miniature racetrack and arcade game center whose bodies were found Friday morning by a delivery man and another employee of the arcade.

"Right now, we just want justice," the sister, who asked that her name not be used, told the Longview News Journal. She said Harris' relatives in White Oak, the small northeast Texas community where Harris grew up, were angry, mostly "at the way he died."

Harris' mother said she was not angry, but hoped her son's killers would be brought to justice.

"I just hope (the killers) are punished," Mrs. Charles Trent said Saturday. "The Bible says an eye for an eye. No, I'm not angry. There's just an unbelief more than anything else. I do hope they get what's coming to them."

Harris' sister said the family was "taking it pretty good under the circumstances," but added there had not yet been time or reaction to set in.

"We're going to be in a state of limbo for awhile," she said.

Mrs. Trent said her son's father, Fred Harris, died in 1976. The elder Harris had been music director at a the First Baptist Church in Liberty City.

The son was following in his father's footsteps, majoring in music at Houston Baptist University and working as music director of the Quail Valley Community Church in Houston.

"He was a Christian young man," said Harris' sister.

Harris had taken the job at the arcade only two days before he died, his sister said. Before that, he had worked for the Supercut hair styling company as a payroll clerk in the firm's regional office in Houston.

"We didn't know he had taken the job at the arcade," she said.

The family learned of the murders at about 6 p.m. Friday when the Houston funeral home where the bodies had been taken called, Mrs. Trent said.

Harris' sister said the last time his family saw him was during the Memorial Day holiday when he visited White Oak.

"He had lots of friends here he enjoyed seeing," Harris' sister said.

"Roddy had no serious romantic relationships at the time," she said. "He was wanting to go into church work and would go where ever that took him. He was very dedicated to the church."

Mrs. Trent said on Saturday she received a telephone call from some people who knew her son at the Quail Valley Church. She said they told her Harris came to church even on weekdays when he wasn't working.

Mrs. Trent said Harris, who moved to Houston two years ago, was raised in the church, and always loved church work.

"I don't understand the things that happen in life," she said, but added, "I'm a Christian, he (Harris) is a Christian, and I know where he is."

Teen planned to kill witnesses, detective says

HOUSTON (AP) — A teen-ager accused in the stabbing deaths of four former co-workers at an amusement center planned to rob the arcade and kill any witnesses, a homicide detective said Sunday.

Richard James Wilkerson, 19, who was a supervisor of three of the four victims before he was fired from the Malibu Grand Prix arcade last month, was being held without bond on charges of capital murder in the death of Anil Vaughese, 18, night manager at the amusement center.

"They (the suspects) went to the place solely for the purpose of robbing it," said the detective, who asked that his name not be used. "But since some of the suspects could be easily recognized, the witnesses had to be eliminated."

Ernest Jaramillo, assistant manager of the arcade, said, "The only employees who would have remembered him (Wilkerson) are the ones who are dead."

Meanwhile, a search continued in Houston and surrounding communities for Kenneth Ray Ransom, a prison parolee named in an arrest warrant charging him with capital murder in the death of Rod Harris, 23, a music student at Houston Baptist University killed on his second night at work.

"We don't think he's far," Detective Tom Ladd said.

Ransom, 20, was paroled from the Texas Department of Corrections in October after serving 19 months of a four-year sentence for auto theft.

A 16-year-old cousin of Wilkerson, who is a juvenile, was being held in the Harris County Juvenile Probation Department. Authorities said they would ask a juvenile court judge on Tuesday to certify the youth as an adult for trial in the killings.

According to the detective who asked not to be identified, the minor told police he was playing a video game when the slayings occurred but insisted he did not participate. Wilkerson disputed that statement, however, and traces of blood were found on the juvenile's clothes, the detective said.

Ladd said each of the three youths was armed only with a knife when they entered the arcade shortly after midnight Friday, looted a safe and cash drawers and killed Varughese, Harris, Arnold Pequeno, 19, and his 16-year-old brother, Joe, after a violent struggle.

Varughese and the Pequenos had their throats slashed, and all had multiple stab wounds to the upper body, head and neck, Ladd said.

Money taken by armed robber

The Midland Sheriff's Department were searching for a suspect who took an undetermined amount of cash from a convenience store on Highway 80 early Sunday morning.

At 5 p.m. Sunday, the investigation had led to the name of the suspect and a description of his vehicle, but no charges had been filed.

According to the sheriff's report, a black male entered the Colonial Store on Highway 80 about 6:45 a.m. Sunday.

The armed suspect, who was wearing a blue T-shirt, grey pants and a navy-blue woolen mask, told the 29-year-old clerk to hand over the money from the register, the report said.

The sheriff's department was searching for a slender man in his early 20s, about 5 feet 10 inches tall and carrying a small caliber revolver. There were no injuries during the robbery.

Firefighters hope there isn't hot time tonight

THE STAND north of town off Highway 349 sells a variety of fireworks, mostly from China, including artificial satellites, pyramids and colorful display rockets such as "Garden in Spring," "Aerial Surprise," "Thunderstorm," and "Variegated Chrysanthemums." There is even a little tank driven by sparks when lit.

Smoke balls may be purchased at two for a quarter and a family pack of assorted fireworks costs $24.95.

The most popular fireworks, Mrs. Jones said, are Roman candles, firecrackers and "nearly everyone will buy one pretty display rocket."

Mrs. Jones and her family don't celebrate the nation's birthday until later in the summer when relatives gather for a family reunion brightened by fireworks — used according to the laws, of course.

The Joneses post "No Smoking" signs on their stand. "When I'm working out here I can smell a cigarette a mile away," Mrs. Jones said.

LAWS GOVERNING the use of fireworks state it is illegal to ignite fireworks within 100 feet of where they are sold, the fire marshal said. It is against the law to throw fireworks from a vehicle or at a vehicle.

It is against the law to sell fireworks to children under 10 years of age or to any intoxicated or irresponsible person, said Petree.

The American Pyrotechnic Association, which represents makers of fireworks, warns buyers to avoid any firework that leaks powder, appears old or shows signs of mishandling. These fireworks can misfire.

Firecrackers and outlawed larger devices account for most injuries, the association said.

The Midland Fire Department offers these safety suggestions:

—Adults should always supervise children with fireworks.

—Light fireworks outdoors, away from houses and trash and from any flammable materials such as gasoline.

—Have a bucket of water ready for any emergency and for dousing any fireworks that don't go off. Never try to pick up a firecracker or other device that has misfired or try to relight it.

—Make sure people are out of range before lighting fireworks.

—Never light fireworks in a container, particularly one made of glass or metal.

However, the safest way to celebrate the holiday is to enjoy fireworks at a public display, said Roberts. There will be two free fireworks shows here today.

Midland Kiwanis Club will present a fireworks show at Cub's Stadium beginning at 9:30 p.m. There will be a display at Water Wonderland off Highway 80 starting at about 9:45 p.m.

Burglaries investigated

Midland police were kept busy investigating burglaries over the holiday weekend.

Allison Burns reported Sunday to the police that between 10:30 p.m. Saturday and 10:30 a.m. Sunday the back door to a business at 1300 S. Garfield had been broken. The soda and candy machines were reported to be damaged with $8 missing. Damage to the machines were valued at $250, according to the police report.

On Saturday, Bob Thurman reported that the Bethal Assembly Church at 611 S. Terrell St. was burglarized. According to the police report, an amplifer and guitar valued at $340 was taken and small fires were set throughout the church.

For Midland firefighters, the Fourth of July is a busy weekend.

The fire department responded to about 20 grass fires this weekend caused by fireworks. And Deputy Chief James Roberts said today could be just as busy.

Since late Friday night, there were six fires extinguished in the county and five in the city. The remainder of fires throughout the city and county began at dusk Sunday and continued through the night. Fires ranged from a small patch that was buried with shovels to a large grass fire extinguished with 1,500 gallons of water.

Most of the fires occurred in vacant lots. According to Roberts, the fires were either reported to be caused from fireworks or there was evidence at the scene.

St. Augustine oldest

The oldest community in the United States is St. Augustine, Fla. It was founded in 1565. The newest, according to Rand McNally's "Road Atlas," is La Paz County in Arizona. It was formed in the fall of 1982.

Class teaches Midland women home nursing care

By DIANE BOOTH
Lifestyle Writer

Some women are learning how to better care for their families and others are training for new jobs.

About 16 Midland women of varied backgrounds are taking a Home Nursing class at the American Red Cross Midland branch from now through July 7.

At the conmpletion of the 20-hour course taught by Mrs. Ruthe Owens, a registered nurse, each student will receive a home nursing certificate.

"When they get through with the course they will have a certificate that says they're nurses aides and we can trust them doing nurses aides duties."

Women in the class include a nursing student from Texas A & M University, several homemakers, nurses aides and a respiratory therapist.

Training gleaned from the class will help women take care of their children and prepare women for the job market, Mrs. Owens said.

"The economy in Midland is really bad right now. One income is not enough so many women have to work. The class prepares women to be nurses' aides, which pays a little bit more than (a fast-food restaurant).

The course includes classroom lecture and discussion as well as practical instruction at local nursing homes, said Mrs. Owens.

At the nursing homes, students will practice skills learned in the classroom such as how to check vital signs, bathe and feed patients, make beds and assist in activities of daily living.

"We're here to improve our observation skills," Mrs. Owens told the class. "You'd be surprised at how many people can't read a thermometer."

The course covers basics of home nursing and good health, Mrs. Owens said. The class includes information about nutrition for example. Not only will special diets for diabetics and heart patients and sugar-free and low-cholesterol menus be discussed but the emphasis will be on good overall nutrition, which is important to maintaining good health, she said.

"Good health is not necessarily the absence of disease," Mrs. Owens stressed.

Mrs. Owens has 27 years of nursing experience and considers one of her top qualifications for teaching the class is her role as mother of three children.

Ruthe Owens, a registered nurse, left, talks about nutrition and patient care as part of a five-day, 20-hour class in Home Nursing, currently being taught by the Midland branch of the American Red Cross. The class is for everyone from prospective mothers to women in training to become nurses aides. The 16 women enrolled in this course will be given home nursing certificates after they complete the classroom instruction later this week.

Riding horses more popular

Hearst Feature Service

In an age when the average urban adult takes his or her exercise on a tennis court, jogs across city streets or makes an appearance at the friendly neighborhood gym, a growing number of city slickers are becoming horse folk.

Until now, horseback riding was typically a hobby cornered by 13-year-old girls who dutifully entered horse shows, garnering blue ribbons for their bedroom walls. But this new adult "horsey set" is finding horseback riding an antidote to the stresses of big-city living and high-pressure jobs.

Of course, the plethora of horse images across America hasn't hurt the cause. Even on a tennis court, you can hardly avoid running into a player bearing designer Ralph Lauren's signature polo player on his or her chest, ankle, tote bag or warm-up suit.

And then there's President Reagan touting horseback riding as a way to forget the woes of the world — at least momentarily. And let's not forget Prince Charles and his horse pratfalls. Any press agent will tell you that even they make for good horse P.R.

That the whole country has gone horse-crazy is no surprise. The American Horse Council in Washington reports that the United States' estimated horse population has risen from just over six million in 1971 to 8,434,000 this year.

And this is in spite of the rise in cost of maintaining a horse. Upkeep — food, medical care, shoeing — has escalated 100 percent in 10 years to a current $1,500 a year, not including boarding fees. Outdoor stall rentals start at $150 a month in Los Angeles, and can go up as high as $500 a month depending upon amenities. As far as buying a beginner's horse (not a thoroughbred), the $1,000 price is double that of a similar horse five years ago.

In spite of high costs, a spokesman from the Horse Council claims America is saddling up because "the baby boom decided it liked horses. We were all reared on Kit Carson, Roy Rogers and the romance of the West, so the horse holds a dear place in our hearts. And now we're in a place, income-wise, where we can own them."

"Horses are natural, they're organic, they offer companionship, and you can only develop so much affection for a tennis racquet," says Mitchell Schechter, associate editor of Horse Show magazine, a publication of the American Horse Show Association. Schecter reports that nationwide, the number of horse shows has increased. Five years ago, the American Horse Show Association sanctioned 1,300 shows. "This year there will be more than 2,000."

"In the last two years, business has more than doubled in everything from polo to dressage," says Hank Corcoran, manager of Fair Hills Farms, a stable in Los Angeles' Topanga Canyon. "A lot of riders are blue-blood families who consider equestrian activity a fine art, but for the newer people, it's purely recreation. Both groups get along fine. The common denominator is the love of horses."

"We see a lot of lawyers, secretaries and professional people who are somewhat sedentary during the week and like the idea of being outdoors, so they take their exercise that way," explains Samuel Freshman, owner of the Malibu Riding and Tennis Club. "Eighty percent of horse activity at the club involves adults. Ten years ago, 80 percent were juniors." For the first time in its 10 years, Freshman says, the club has a waiting list for horse stalls.

Actually, horse activity isn't new to Los Angeles. The Beverly Hills Hotel's Polo Lounge, that bastion of Hollywood dealmaking, was once used as an actual polo lounge. Fifty years ago, "the polo gang" — which then included Hollywood royalty such as Will Rogers, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Darryl Zanuck, Errol Flynn, John Barrymore and later young Robert Stack — would congregate in the Polo Lounge (supposedly so-named because the gang could no longer tolerate the sissy handle of the "El Jardin" room) following a match at Rogers' ranch in the Pacific Palisades or at the Riviera Country Club.

Horse activity was big in Los Angeles until the Depression, when the costly "sport of gentlemen" was all but wiped out.

But the horsey set that has risen from its ashes is nothing like the blue-blood riders of Westchester County, N.Y., Palm Beach, Fla., or Camden, S.C. It's a heterogeneous group.

Kid's tales ideal for summer dreams

Hearst Feature Service

Cloud watching, star gazing — summer is the golden season for day dreaming of personal achievement. Here are a few children's books help to dream the just possible dream.

"Cornelius," Leo Lionni's wonderful crocodile, is born with the ability to walk on two feet. From this vantage pont, he is able to see things no other crocodile can. His abilities are met with a "so what" response from his friends. Undaunted, he goes on to learn tricks from a friendly monkey. He still gets an annoying "so what" reaction, but all the other crocodiles, despite what they say, are busy trying to copy him. Three to seven-year-olds will delight in Cornelius' discovery of the pains and pleasures of being different in this bright and bold picture book.

A skillful retelling of a Grimm fairy tale, "The Devil with The Three Golden Hairs" is for ages 4-8. The timeless story of a poor boy destined to marry the king's daughter is filled with the struggle between good and evil.

The prophecy comes true, as it must, only because the boy is as quick-witted as he is good. The suspense mounts as he sets off on an impossible quest, and the conclusion is very satisfying. Children who feel destined for great things — and what child does not? — will relish the boy's solutions and appreciate his unexpected sources of help.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of 22-month-old twin boys. When we're out shopping, someone will say, "Look, twins!" Then someone else says, "Cute to look at, but not to have."

I've been stopped by people who ask, "Are they twins?" (What a question! They're identical.) And when I say (proudly), "Yes," they say, "Well, I'm sure glad they're yours, not mine!" Abby, I'm GLAD they're mine, and it angers me to hear such unkind remarks. Of course, I had no say in the matter, but I consider myself lucky to be the mother of twins. And my husband feels lucky, too. As for the double trouble and expense of raising two instead of one, they're well worth it.

Please, Abby, ask people not to feel sorry for me. And if you can put in a good word for twins, I'd appreciate it. — TWICE-BLESSED IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR TWICE-BLESSED: Not only are you "twice-blessed," your twins are. Being a twin offered countless advantages to me. I was never lonely. I always had a best friend — someone to play with, to sing with, to dance with. Someone to laugh (and cry) with, to share my most intimate secrets.

Parents of twins worry less because they feel that there's safety in numbers. (There is.)

Twins get the usual teasing: "What are your names? Kate and Duplicate? Pete and Repeat? Me and My Shadow? Or Double Trouble?" And silly questions: "Do you ever get yourselves mixed up? How do you know which one you are?"

Twins share a very special relationship — so aptly described by Lord Byron:

"All who joy would win
"Must share it.
"Happiness was born a twin."

DEAR MARC: Try these:

1. Never forget her birthday, anniversary or Valentine's Day. A kiss, a card or a single rose could save the day.
2. Don't keep talking about the beautiful young chicks at work.
3. Don't turn on the radio or TV, or pick up something to read, when she's trying to talk to you.
4. Don't bring a friend home to dinner without advance notice.
5. Don't use her car and return it with an empty gas tank.
6. If you know you're going to be late getting home, call and tell her.
7. Don't try to make her jealous.
8. Don't look like a slob all weekend — unless she looks worse.
9. When you know you're wrong, admit it.
10. Never criticize her in the presence of others.

Older mothers increasing

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Stacy Smith always thought she would be finished heating bottles, washing baby clothes and waking at 3 a.m. for night feedings by the time she reached the age of 30. Her own mother had children in her 20s, and she expected to repeat the pattern.

But recently, at the age of 34, Smith became part of a growing population of older moms.

When Micah, the new daughter of Stacy and Greg Smith, finishes high school her mom will be 52. Many of Micah's friends' mothers also will be in their 50s because women here and across the nation are showing a distinct preference for delaying childbirth.

A study released in June by the U.S. Census Bureau showed that the number of women between 30 and 34 years old having children increased 22.5 percent from 1980 to 1982. The number of women giving birth in the age bracket rose to 73.5 per 1,000 from 60 per 1,000 women two years earlier.

At the same time, women between 18 and 24 years old had 8.6 percent fewer babies. In 1980 96.6 in 1,000 of those younger women had babies; in 1982 88.3 in 1,000 had children.

Statistics for women on the West Coast paralleled the national figures, said Martin O'Connell, chief of the fertility statistics branch of the U.S. Census Bureau in Washington, D.C.

Kristin Luker, associate professor of sociology at the University of California at San Diego, said American women traditionally have completed their childbearing by the age of 25.

"I think those days are probably gone for good," Luker said.

One of Luker's 40-year-old colleagues recently attended a college reunion and met a former classmate who had just become a grandmother and another who had just had her first child.

As more women put off having families to pursue educational or career goals the 40-year-old mother wil' be more common than the 40-year-old grandmother, Luker said.

One obstetrician who welcomes the trend toward older motherhood is Dr. Katherine Carson, whose 25-year practice has reflected the national trend.

"In the past I think a lot of women had babies young because they really couldn't help it. Now we have effective contraceptives and abortions to back them up," Carson said.

"Today women are waiting to have babies until they can afford it, have time and have done some of the things they wanted to do. I really think that makes for better child raising.

"It's more fun to be an obstetrician when everyone is mature enough that they want their babies," Carson said.

Smith and another new mother at Sharp Memorial Hospital, Linda Johnson, both wanted their newborns very much.

Smith spent her 20s getting a master's degree in art, marrying a fellow graduate student, setting up a home and establishing a career in painting.

When her first child, Rachel, was born two years ago, "I was so happy because I was finally having a child. I felt very resolved, very settled.

"I can't imagine having a 14-year-old child now. I've changed so much since I was 20. I'm much more contented and satisfied with my life, and I feel like I have more to offer my children," Smith said.

Johnson, 34, whose daughter, Ashley, was born June 14, had her first child 16 years ago, and has since had three more. With Ashley she'll be a more experienced, mature mother than she was with Ashley's 16-year-old brother, Kirk, Johnson said.

Johnson, a teacher's aide, said pregnancy at 34 was a breeze. "It was one of the easiest pregnancies I had. Some people think we (older mothers) are old and feeble, and it's just not true," she said.

Rolls-Royce test drive different for women, men

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer, who usually takes to the road only in taxis, was invited recently to test drive a Rolls-Royce as part of a publicity campaign aimed at women.

CHEFFES, France (AP) — At 40 mph the loudest noise in the new Rolls-Royce comes from the public relations man, who grabs for the wheel and hisses, "Look out, you're on the curb."

The admonition was issued a split second before I missed sideswiping a stone wall with a $93,000 car during a test drive of "the king of motor cars and the motor car of kings."

I had been invited to the western French countryside near Angers to drive Rolls-Royces in what was billed as a publicity campaign to make the roadster more familiar to the world's 28,000 women who are millionaires.

I am neither a millionaire nor a regular driver. I have not owned a car in five years and since then my favorite word in any language has become "taxi." I am, however, a woman.

But when I arrived with my "woman's" invitation, I was told the test drive also was designed to promote "product familiarity" and not only as a special appeal to women. That was the reason men were there, too.

I came away from the test drive — after the stone wall, the rest of it came off just fine — with two distinct impressions. First, a Rolls-Royce is a nice car to drive even if you hate taking to the road. Second, I reacted differently to cars than the men did.

The second observation hit me even before the test drive got under way when five other American journalists and I were asked to select a car from a lineup of five Rolls-Royces and a Bentley, also produced by Britain's Rolls-Royce Motors Ltd.

We were looking at $672,000 worth of machinery.

"I'll start with the green car," says the only other woman in the group, who also had been told this test drive had been designed to reach woman millionaires.

"I'd like the blue one," I say.

I'm not exactly sure how the first of our male colleaques voiced his colorless request, but it was something like, "I'll take the Bentley Mulsanne Turbo with the Solex 4A1 four-barrel carbureter — the world's fastest accelerating car which can jump from 50 to 70 mph in 5.5 seconds and which can't be sold in the United States because of engine emission laws."

The green car and the blue car were soon overtaken by the Bentley, the three other Rolls-Royces, an aging Citroen with suitcases on the top and a 16-wheeler truck transporting livestock.

"I'm remembered in my family as the only person to ever get a ticket for going too slow on a highway," I tell the Rolls-Royce P.R. man.

He slinks deeper into the Silver Spirit's upholstery, which a publicity folder had told me is made from 12 hides that "come from remote parts of northern Europe, where the relative absence of insect pests and barbed wire produces the unblemished quality required."

I also learn that the car has enough leather to make 300 pairs of "expensive" shoes and that only one hide in 500 is judged good enough for a Rolls-Royce.

As the sun blazes down, we are cooled by an air conditioning system that changes the air three times every minute, is equivalent to that of 30 refrigerators and costs as much to make as a small car.

Beneath us is an exhaust system that has six separate silencer boxes, each acoustically tuned to suppress a different range of sound frequencies.

The car is so quiet that the 1950's advertising line, "At 60 mph the loudest noise in the new Rolls-Royce comes from the electric clock," is appropriate no longer. The clock now is digital.

The Silver Spirit — "your basic Rolls," the P.R. man says — takes three months to build. The Corniche convertible takes five months. Nine months is needed to build a Phantom, whose standard equipment includes a cocktail cabinet with cut glass decanter and whose price tag starts at around $250,000 and climbs steeply. Two Phantoms were made last year.

In all, only 85,000 Rolls-Royces have ever been produced by the 79-year-old company founded by Charles Rolls and Frederick Royce. More than 60 percent of those cars are still on the road, I'm told.

"About 95 percent of the people who buy Rolls-Royces are men," the P.R. man says. "We'd like to see more women buying them."

Failed transplant can lead to suicide

DENVER (AP) — Despair over failed transplants can push kidney disease victims to suicide, a study says, but two patients whose operations succeeded say the psychological hardships are a reasonable price to pay for health.

Transplant patient Dave Daggett, 54, is now enthusiastic after 14 months with a new kidney, but said Thursday that when he was on dialysis, "I really didn't feel like a person. I felt like someone they were keeping alive artificially."

In a study reported today, researchers at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center examined causes of death in 209 patients who received kidney transplants during a 5-year period ending in 1979.

During 2½ to 7½ years of followup, 26 percent — or 54 — of the patients died, including eight who committed suicide. Most of the rest died from infection or heart or blood vessel problems.

Both Daggett and fellow transplant patient Calvin Dahl, 24, said they experienced extreme fatigue and depression while on dialysis at the medical center.

Daggett had to quit his job until he got the transplant, while Dahl took Mondays off.

Dahl, who spent 20 months on dialysis and 53 days in the hospital after the transplant and gained 30 pounds due to a change in metabolism sparked by anti-rejection drugs, said the possibility of kidney rejection "is always there."

"But when you get out of the hospital, you're just pretty thankful," said Dahl. "You try and live as normal a life as you can, and you just forget about it. If you're a positive thinker, you'll do real well."

Despite the hardships, Daggett called the transplant "the most marvelous thing that's ever happened to me," and said that if his body rejected the organ, he would probably get another transplant.

Not all kidney disease patients are so resilient.

"Although we try to support these people and motivate them to go back on the (kidney hemodialysis) machine or have another transplant, in some patients the despair is so extreme that they're not able to accept that," said Dr. Richard Weil III, one of four physicians conducting the study, published today in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

In the same issue, New York medical researchers concluded the psychological toll on kidney disease sufferers was apparently the same whether patients get transplants or rely on dialysis.

"Life with even the best-functioning transplanted kidney is a life with a baseline of uncertainty" because of fear recipients might reject the new organ, the researchers concluded.

"We always knew that chronic illness can take a terrible psychological toll," said Weil. But he said the suicide rate in the first sample "was a little higher than we expected."

Of the eight suicides, seven had failed transplants. The eighth, a 26-year-old woman with a perfectly functioning transplant, shot herself five months after the operation.

Weil said the outlook has improved for kidney transplant patients.

Doctor: DMSO hinders medication

WASHINGTON (AP) — The controversial chemical DMSO may interfere with prescribed medication and may lead to nerve damage, a researcher concludes.

Human and animal tests show that DMSO, sometimes used in arthritis treatment, blocks the effectiveness of a commonly prescribed anti-arthritic drug called sulindac, said Dr. Brian N. Swanson, a pharmacologist at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia.

Sulindac, sold by Merck Sharp & Dohme under the brand name Clinoril, is an anti-inflammatory medication used by thousands of arthritics.

DMSO has gained an underground following among some arthritis sufferers as a treatment. The Food and Drug Administration has banned the use of DMSO as a treatment, except for a rare bladder disease called interstitial cystitis, saying there is insufficient evidence that the chemical is safe or effective for that purpose.

Swanson, in an article in the July issue of The Journal of Laboratory and Clinical Medicine, said DMSO chemically inhibits the conversion of sulindac into its active form in the body.

Following tests with rats, Swanson studied eight healthy male volunteers given sulindac alone and with DMSO. Blood samples showed that concentrations of the active form of sulindac were significantly lower when DMSO was given with the prescription drug, said the report.

"Anything that interferes with this transformation would likely diminish the beneficial effects of sulindac," Swanson said.

DMSO, or dimethyl sulfoxide, is a wood byproduct used as an industrial solvent. The chemical rapidly penetrates the skin and has been used for years in veterinary medicine to treat animals for muscle aches and inflammation.

Fragrances plug into outlets

Copley News Service

By next September you'll be able to buy a small black plastic box about 3-by-5 inches called an "Aroma Disc Player." Plug it into a wall outlet, slip in a long- or short-playing disc and fill your room with fragrance.

It's a new development from Environmental Fragrance Technologies of New York, a subsidiary of the Charles of the Ritz Group, which expects to market the player for $20 and the short-playing discs for $1.50.

The disc player will "play" the fragrance for an hour, and can be "played" at least 150 times. Long-playing discs, which last for five hours and also can be used 150 times, are going to sell for $4. (The discs don't go around and around like a record; the scent is emitted through a heat process.)

The fragrance discs or "albums," as Leslie Maryon, product manager of the company, calls the small flexible records which slip into the player, will come in at least 20 scents, with more planned.

Some of those which will be available in September are called Ocean Breeze, Seduction (said to "set the mood for a special night"), A Dozen Roses, Passion, Movie Time (which smells like popcorn), After Dinner Mints (a mint fragrance), Christmas Tree, Man's World (which smells like a wood-paneled study), Baby Powder and even Neutral, which removes scents.

It is supposed to take about three or four minutes for the fragrance to "fill an average-size room, about the size of a living room," Maryon said. The level of fragrance then is maintained for either the hour set for the short-playing disc or the five hours of the long-playing disc.

Maryon said that the secret process by which the records are made is being patented.

Crime statistics jump in Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The capital's chief medical examiner slapped a small automatic pistol onto his desk as he described a recent sharp increase in crime.

"Mexico City was a safe place once," said Dr. Ramon Fernandez Perez. "But now I find myself carrying one of these for protection."

Mexican police officials reluctantly acknowledge a jump in street crime during the past year in this city of 15 million. They blame it on the growing number of unemployed people during Mexico's worst economic crisis since the 1930s.

Few officials will discuss the problem publicly and most who do request anonymity for fear of reprisals, not wanting to be blamed for sensationalizing the situation.

HOWEVER OFFICIALS STATISTICS obtained by The Assocated Press show a 100 percent increase in automobile theft in the capital during the first four months of 1983, a 60 percent increase in all robberies and lesser increases in property damage cases, fraud and some non-violent crimes.

The statistics may represent the tip of the iceberg, said one specialist at the National Institute of Penal Sciences. Crime statistics, like those obtained by the AP, are not always made public here.

Rzstered homicides were down almost 10 percent from the previous year, however, from 1,992 during the first four months of 1982 to 1,823 from January-April of 1983.

Fernandez said the drop was due to fewer accident-related deaths, noting that both accidental and violence-related deaths are classified here as homicides. He estimated that murder cases have increased by about 40 percent in the last six months.

Looking out from his office window at a dilapidated tenement building nearby, Fernandez said increasing economic hardships facing most Mexico City residents were a key factor in explaining the rise in crime here.

"The No. 1 problem is economic," Fernandez said, "but as a result of that we have an alarming increase in criminality."

A SPOKESMAN AT THE CITY police headquarters put the problem more directly: "If you have no job and your wife and children are home hungry then you're going to go out and rob or steal or whatever you have to do to bring home the bread and tortillas."

They are no figures on unemployment in Mexico City, but an estimated 40 percent of the work force nationwide is unemployed or chronically underemployed. That figure is believed to be much higher in the sprawling slums that surround Mexico City.

Car thefts, which totaled 3,450 during the first four months of 1982, more than doubled to 7,061 during the same period this year, according to the police report.

Criminologists say car thefts are among the most reliable indicators of crime in a given area because cars are usually insured and the owner can only collect the insurance by reporting the crime.

Widespread mistrust and fear of Mexico City's understaffed and notoriously corrupt police force cause many crimes to go unreported, said the specialist at the National Institute of Penal Sciences.

About 18,000 policemen patrol the Mexico City area, a sprawling city of 577 square miles. That works out to about one policeman for every 1,200 people. The average Mexico City policeman earns the equivalent of about $125 a month.

Widely acknowledged police corruption is being attacked by President Miguel de la Madrid, who took office last December with a pledge to carry out a campaign of "moral renovation."

Gary Hart seeks tonic for financially ailing campaign

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

DURHAM, N.H. — The Gary-Hart-for-president campaign is alive and resuscitating in the bracing primary air of New Hampshire.

The candidate for the Democratic nomination is in the pink. His spiel is more spirited, his message more compelling and his audiences more responsive than before.

But his campaign is in the red.

Miscalculations led him into costly, losing straw-poll efforts that were never budgeted, and that badly tarnished his reputation with party pros and potential contributors.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., is banking on a flurry of fund-raising events to get him into the black by June 30, when all campaigns must report on their fiscal health for all to see.

Still, his view remains rosy. Hart tells audiences that he will be their next president and that the race for the Democratic presidential nomination will come down to two finalists, Hart and either former vice president Walter F. Mondale or Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, — "I'm not sure which."

There was no evidence of damage from Hart's well publicized, unsuccessful presidential straw-poll efforts in Massachusetts and Wisconsin as he rolled through a visit several days ago to the state where the nation's first presidential primary traditionally is held.

His supporters were enthusiastic as he opened his headquarters in Concord; teachers, labor leaders and just plain folks pronounced themselves impressed with what he had to say at rallies; local media coverage was extensive when he toured a toxic-waste site and held forth on the horror of it all.

But perhaps there was evidence of the fallout from the straw polls when he hit New York City. His campaign managers had hoped to raise $20,000 to $25,000 at a fund-raiser at the home of Loulette and Howard Samuels, the chairman of the National Soccer League and a prominent New York Democrat. But they netted, by their own count, just $10,000.

Hart, meanwhile, appears to have come away from his latest encounter of the third-place kind in Wisconsin with new resolve.

In what could be crucial to his chances, he voiced confidence during an interview that he can capture the nuclear-freeze issue, which so far has helped to bury him in these early tests, and make it his.

Spices can help fight disease

UNION BEACH, N.J. (AP) — When you bite into a cool, refreshing peppermint candy, do you kill germs that can cause bad breath? Is that entrancing cologne you're wearing protecting you from disease?

"It might be," says Dr. James Morris, a member of the American Chemical Society and a project biochemist for International Flavors and Fragrances in Union Beach. "Most fragrance materials aren't as powerful as chemical disinfectants, but some do have a measurable antibacterial and antifungal effect."

Peppermint oil was recently shown to be one of the most potent flavorings, he said. A team of biologists at Gorakhpur University in India reported that the oil kills a fungus that causes lung disease and ear infections.

Peppermint also works well against other fungi that cause animal diseases and spoil food. Tests showed that peppermint is twice as strong as quintozene, which is used to protect seeds from fungus, and up to seven times as potent as other antifungal chemicals.

According to Morris, people have used spices and perfumes against microorganisms for centuries. The Israelites of the Old Testament did not have water to spare to clean clothes, so they used perfumes to keep them clean. When sacrificed animals were burned the smell was terrible. The Israelites purified the temple by burning incense, a practice which has been adopted by the Catholic Church and others.

"Spices were also used against plagues," Morris adds. In the 1600s, physicians treating plague victims wore leather beaks stuffed with clove, cinnamon and other aromatics to ward off infection.

Morris says that many fragrances and flavorings are chemicals called terpenes, which are not very attractive to microorganisms. He and his colleagues have tested more than 500 fragrance materials and have found that more than 200 of them show some effectiveness against microorganisms.

Panel: welfare system could expand with age

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Medicare trust fund is inching toward insolvency, according to projections released last week. But an advisory panel thinks that by raising the eligibility age to 67 and charging higher premiums, the system can not only survive but expand its benefits.

The Social Security system's trustees, who issued their annual assessment of the retirement fund, said the trust fund that pays Medicare hospital bills may face bankruptcy between 1988 and 1996. The precise date depends on the economy.

One of the trustees called the report "an early warning" but said there is no reason for alarm about the program's income.

"It's adequate for now," said Carolyne K. Davis, administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration which oversees Medicaid and Medicare.

"So many of the elderly people are afraid when they read about this problem," she said in an interview. "We intend to solve the problem. It's not going to be a simple solution. But I think we have time on our side."

The Advisory Council on Social Security, which already was at work devising a bailout for Medicare, adopted its first set of recommendations last week. They call for boosting the eligibility age from the current 65 to 67 in gradual steps between 1990 and 2002.

They also call for charging beneficiaries more for one type of Medicare insurance while extending coverage to include catastrophic hospitalization expenses.

The Social Security retirement fund's eligibility age also is due to rise to 67, but not until 2022.

The advisory panel, which will issue a report containing recommendations to the president and Congress by the end of the year, also opposed using general revenues from the Treasury to finance Medicare.

It still must consider a variety of other options before settling on a final package of recommendations. Notable among the remaining issues is whether taxes from alcohol and tobacco ought to be used to pay for Medicare.

Medicare is one of the fastest growing segments of the federal budget. At the end of 1982, there were 26 million persons over 65 and three million disabled persons under 65 covered by the hospital insurance portion of the program, called Part A. Some $34.9 billion was laid out on their behalf during the year, about 19.2 percent more than for the previous year.

GRANTSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — Statistically speaking, Calhoun County is a pitiful pocket of poverty in one of the nation's most economically depressed states.

The 1980 census showed Calhoun had a higher percentage of residents below the poverty level than any of West Virginia's 54 other counties. Even before the nationwide recession began, more than 25 percent of its residents were at the bottom of the economic barrel.

So now, with West Virginia leading the nation in unemployment and even more people sinking beneath the poverty level, Calhoun County's 8,000 residents are destitute, right?

"Wrong," says Merrill Pollack, editor of the weekly Calhoun Chronicle. "In fact, compared to the wealthiest population centers in our country, Calhoun County emerges as being better off than any of them, despite the statistics that insist life here is literally in the pits."

Pollack and a host of other county residents insist that they'd much rather be poor in the hills and hollows of central West Virginia than almost anywhere else, especially the nation's big cities.

They contend that Calhoun Countians fare better than their big-city cousins for a variety of reasons, one of which is that jobs have always been scarce here and the people are used to making do.

One way of making do in these parts is to raise a large vegetable garden — and Pollack says most everybody has one. His statement is easily verified by driving along the county's narrow mountain roads, where myriad brown rectangles of plowed earth patch the hollows and contrast darkly with the lush, green hillsides.

Pollack, who worked with senior citizens before becoming the Chronicle's editor, says demographics make the county seem poorer than it is. Nearly a quarter of the residents are 65 or older, and while most no longer bring home a salary, Pollack says they receive various monthly benefit checks and pensions. In addition, he says, some of this money "trickles down" to their children, even those who are unemployed or have only seasonal work.

And finally, according to Pollack, folks in Calhoun County stick together and take care of each other during hard times. Church-going is high and crime is low, and the poor here don't have to live in the constant fear that pervades big-city slums, he says.

Earl Nicholson, the county welfare director, agrees with Pollack that Calhoun County is a good place to be poor.

"I'd much rather be broke in Calhoun than poor in Cleveland," he says. "The recession has not hurt us nearly as much as some of those highly industrialized counties."

Calhoun hasn't lost much industry during the current recession because it never had much to begin with. The county's industrial base consists mainly of two rubber fabricating plants that each employ about 100 people. Other than that, scattered oil and gas operations are about the only private employers with more than a dozen people on the payroll.

Calhoun is distinguished by the absence of other features of modern life, as well.

There's not a single, sit-down movie theater in the entire county, just a drive-in that last week was showing "The Gates of Hell" and "Funeral Home." Also, the county doesn't have a traffic light unless you count the yellow caution blinker at Grantsville, Calhoun's biggest community with a population of about 1,000.

Perfume, blocks, mother's touch to be used to awaken boy in coma

OCEANSIDE, N.Y. — A mother's touch, a perfume's fragrance and the sharp clack of wooden blocks smashed together will be used in an effort to awaken a 15-year-old Florida youth who lapsed into a coma last summer after he was hit by lightning.

This unusual procedure will be tried on Luis Sierra-Florian, whom doctors at a Coral Gables hospital have declared brain-dead. They have recommended to the youth's parents that a respirator that keeps the youth alive be turned off. The intense multisensory procedures, which involve bombarding the youth with exaggerated sounds, odors, tastes and physical contact for 12 to 14 hours a day over the next 10 days, will be carried out at South Nassau Communities Hospital.

The treatment will be administered by Dr. Mahai Dimancescu, a neurosurgeon who heads the International Coma Recovery Institute of Garden City, N.Y. The institute, which has treated about 150 patients since its founding five years ago, claims the treatment has enabled 35 percent of its patients to function independently.

Lius' grave condition suggests that he has little chance to become one of the successes. He has been in the intensive care ward of Doctors' Hospital in Coral Gables since Aug. 12, after lightning struck him, stopping his heart for 10 minutes and sending him into a coma. His parents, Guideo and Yolany, have maintained a daily vigil for Luis, who lies rigid with his neck extended, back arched and mouth and eyes wide open.

"The prognosis among doctors here is that there is no hope for recovery," said Cecila Sauvigne, a spokesman for the Florida hospital. "There have been no recognizable responses but the father feels there is still hope." Sierra-Florian said he feels prayer may cause his son to wake up. "It's possible. I have already had one miracle," he said.

Deputies found on wrong side of the law

CHICAGO (AP) — Cook County sheriff's deputies are sworn to uphold the law. But with embarrassing regularity, a few have recently found themselves on the wrong side — accused as hit men, pornographers and swindlers.

Deputy John Gattuso was accused of moonlighting for organized crime after he allegedly pumped three bullets point-blank in the head of a mob gambling boss who lived to talk about it.

Deputy Claude Bernhard was charged with trafficking in child pornography after he allegedly showed investigators photos of children performing sex acts.

And Deputy Jerome Weatherly was snared by the law after he used a judge's chambers in a scheme involving about $37,000 in stolen U.S. savings bonds.

The three — since fired — are among eight current or former deputies in the office of Cook County Sheriff Richard Elrod charged or convicted since January. Elrod acknowledges problems, but says it's a few rotten apples.

OTHERS HAVE BEEN accused of rigging auto accidents to collect insurance, selling drugs, shaking down businessmen and running a house of prostitution.

Federal prosecutors are investigating the 26-member levy section, which serves warrants, inventories business property and collects taxes due from businesses. The focus is alleged extortion and mail fraud. Three one-time Elrod employees have been indicted in the last year.

In 1982, there were other troubles, including suspension of high-ranking deputies for arranging a reputed crime figure's romantic trysts in empty court chambers.

The flurry of allegations has drawn criticism from county board members, calls for an investigation and tighter screening for hiring deputies — who often get their jobs via patronage recommendations.

THE CHARGES TIE "the sheriff to certain aspects of organized crime and just plain illegal activity that shouldn't be part of a law enforcement operation," says Republican state Sen. Bob Kustra.

Kustra called for a probe of the hiring practices of deputies in Democrat Elrod's office by the Illinois Legislative Investigating Commission this year, but the measure stalled in a committee.

Elrod, a Machine loyalist and former city prosecutor who broke his neck during a melee in oing to go astray," says Elrod, sheriff since 1970.

Elrod says he is working on improvements in screening processes but feels any wrongdoing by his employeEs has been kept "to a bare minimum." And, he adds, "we still strive for perfection."

Elrod's also appointed a five-member committee to recommend improvements in employment practices.

DEPUTY SHERIFF'S JOBS start at about $12,000 a year. But there are potential fringe benefits — the authority to carry a badge and a gun — which sometimes draw the wrong people.

I AM THE NATION

I WAS BORN on July 4, 1776, and the Declaration of Independence is my birth certificate. The bloodlines of the world run in my veins, because I offered freedom to the oppressed. I am many things, and many people, I am the nations.

I am 213 million living souls-and the ghost of millions who have lived and died for me.

I am Nathan Hale and Paul Revere. I stood at Lexington and fired the shot heard around the world. I am Washington, Jefferson and Patrick Henry. I am John Paul Jones, the Green Mountain Boys and Davy Crockett. I am Lee and Grant and Abe Lincoln.

I remember the Alamo, the Maine and Pearl Harbor. When freedom called I answered and stayed until it was over, over there. I left my heroic dead in Flanders Fields, on the rock of Corregidor, on the bleak slopes of Korea and in the steaming jungle of Vietnam.

I am the Brooklyn Bridge, the wheat lands of Kansas and the granite hills of Vermont. I am the coal fields of the Virginias and Pennsylvania, the fertile lands of the West, the Golden Gate and the Grand Canyon. I am Independence hall, the Monitor and the Merrimac.

I am big. I sprawl from the Atlantic to the Pacific...my arms reach out to embrace Alaska and Hawaii...3 million square miles throbbing with industry. I am more than 5 million farms. I am forest, field, mountain and desert. I am quiet villages-and cities that never sleep.

You can look at me and see Ben Franklin walking down the streets of Philadelphia and his breadloaf under his arm. You can see Betsy Ross with her needle. You can see the lights of Christmas, and hear the strains of "Auld Lang Syne" as the calendar turns.

I am Babe Ruth and the Super Bowl. I am 110,000 schools and colleges, and 330,000 churches where my people worship God as they think best. I am a ballot dropped in a box, the roar of a crowd in a stadium and the voice of a choir in a cathedral. I am an editorial in a newspaper and a letter to a Congressman.

I am Eli Whitney and Stephen Foster. I am Tom Edison, Albert Einstein and Billy Graham. I am Horace Greeley, Will Rogers and the Wright brothers. I am George Washington Carver, Jonas Salk and Martin Luther King.

I am Longfellow, Harriet Breecher Stowe, Walt Whitman and Thomas Paine.

Yes, I am the nation, and these are the things that I am. I was conceived in freedom and, God willing, in freedom I will spend the rest of my days.

May I possess always the integrity, the courage and the strength to keep myself unshackled, to remain a citadel of freedom and a beacon of hope to the world.

Fans lost chance to tell Channing 'Hello Dolly!'

Carol Channing

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — For the first time in 33 years, the show didn't go on for actress Carol Channing, and 2,000 fans were sent home without getting a chance to say "Hello, Dolly!"

A Saturday afternoon power failure darkened Omaha's Orpheum Theater, preventing her matinee performance in the musical.

Producer Dick Walter's decision to cancel the matinee broke Miss Channing's record of not having missed a show since 1950, she said. Saturday night's show went on as scheduled.

In her dark dressing room below the Orpheum stage, the 60-year-old actress held an impromptu news conference by flashlight.

"It's a horrible feeling — like a racehorse waiting at the starting line and the gun doesn't go off," she said.

Jackie Gleason

MIAMI (AP) — Fans of the old TV series "The Honeymooners" offered a winning bid of $650 for the bus driver's uniform worn by actor Jackie Gleason in his role as Ralph Kramden.

The Royal Association for the Longevity and Preservation of the Honeymooners, or RALPH, made the bid Saturday at an auction of Gleason's former Miami estate.

RALPH co-president Peter Crescenti, 31, of Greenvale, N.Y., said his group was formed last year to stir support to get the show — starring Gleason, Art Carney, Audrey Meadows and Joyce Randolph — back on television.

The group, with 200 members in 10 states and one in Yugoslavia, plans to display the uniform at a Honeymooners' convention next March at the C.W. Post Center of Long Island University. It eventually will end up at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, in the television and film wing, Crescenti said.

ROME (AP) — A Rome court has sentenced Princess Ira Furstenberg, a former Italian film actress, to eight months in prison for illegally transferring money out of Italy, two newspapers reported Sunday.

Rome's Il Messaggero and Turin's La Stampa said the court on Saturday also fined her $12,460 for using a credit card to spend $13,600 outside Italy in 1977. At the time it was illegal to transfer more than $700 out of Italy.

The princess, 42, is a daughter of German Prince Tassilo von Furstenberg and Clara Agnelli, sister of Fiat chairman Gianni Agnelli.

She was discovered by producer Dino De Laurentis in the 1960s and appeared in such movies as "Brother Sun, Sister Moon."

She was married and divorced from Austrian-Hungarian Prince Alfonso Hohenlohe and Brazilian industrialist Francisco "Baby" Pignatari.

Ansel Adams

WASHINGTON (AP) — Photographer-conservationist Ansel Adams, quoted as saying he hates President Reagan, got to meet Reagan to discuss his grievances with the administration's environmental policies.

"He was very amiable, very sincerely cordial," said Adams, 81. "He was a gentleman, he'd be a nice neighbor. But there is that stone wall when someone has a totally different concept of the world and it's very hard to break through."

Adams feels Reagan "doesn't have any fundamental interest or knowledge in the environment as a concept," The Washington Post reported Sunday.

Adams was quoted in Playboy magazine's May issue as saying, "I hate Reagan."

Michael K. Deaver, deputy chief of the White House staff, called Adams and told him "the president walked into his office and said: 'I want to talk to this man Adams to find out why he dislikes me so much,'" the photographer said.

The two met Thursday in Beverly Hills, Calif., for 50 minutes instead of the scheduled 15.

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Author Truman Capote has been charged with driving while intoxicated on a road near his home in this posh Long Island beach resort community.

Police said he was arrested Friday evening after officers saw his car weaving down a street near his home, and a breathalyzer test registered above the 0.10 percent blood alcohol limit.

Capote, 58, whose writings include "Breakfast At Tiffany's" and "In Cold Blood," was jailed overnight because of a 1976 felony conviction for the same offense, police said.

He pleaded innocent to the charge Saturday and was released on his own recognizance. If convicted, he could lose his driver's license for a year and be fined $250.

Pill decreases risk of ovarian cancer

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have heard and read on several occasions that women who use the pill are less likely to have cancer of the ovary. Is this generally true of all women? — Constance, Painesville, Ohio

Dear Constance: According to a study of almost 300 women by Dr. Daniel W. Cramer, of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, and his colleagues, there is a decreased risk of ovarian cancer associated with the use of oral contraceptives in women 40 through 59 years of age. In this particular study, at least, a decreased risk of ovarian cancer was not evident in women who were less than 40 years of age.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 40 years old and have smoked for half my life. My wife is bugging me to stop. What I would like to know is whether it would do any good. I don't think you can fool Mother Nature, and I don't think I can wipe out 20 years of smoking. But I promised my wife I would get your opinion. — Mr. T.J., Phoenix, Ariz.

Dear Mr. J.: If a person stops smoking, the risk of lung cancer decreases significantly after 10 years. Moreover, after 15 to 20 years, the risk for lung cancer is the same as that for a person who has never smoked.

You call it bugging, I call it concern. Listen to your wife.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If a person has a seizure for the first time, what are the chances that he will have another one? I am taking medicine because I had a seizure and I don't even know if I need it. — Melvin, Duluth, Minn.

Dear Melvin: There is a general lack of information about the prognosis in patients who experience an unprovoked seizure — that is, a seizure not related to an injury or illness. However, the results of a study of almost 250 patients of all ages who had a seizure may give you some idea of what might be expected. Sixteen percent of the patients had a recurrence within 12 months after the first seizure, 21 percent had a recurrence within 24 months, and 27 percent within 36 months.

One conclusion that may be drawn is that the decision to treat an unprovoked seizure with anticonvulsant medication must be based on each patient's specific needs. Apparently, your physician feels that treatment is necessary for you. If you have some question about ths, why not discuss it with your doctor? He or she should be willing to explain to you why anticonvulsant medication is advisable in your case.

For Corinee, Hanover, N.H.: After studying 17,000 people with mild hypertension, British researchers have concluded that blood pressure increases when the weather is cold. This variation was found to be more pronounced in older than in younger patients, and in thin rather than in obese patients. The researchers note that cold weather appears to be an important factor in the high rate of cardiovascular deaths reported during the winter months.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Newton tired of 'bum rap' he's taken over free concert

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer Wayne Newton said Sunday he's tired of the "bum rap" he's taken because he will peform at a Fourth of July concert at the Washington Monument instead of a pop group like the Beach Boys.

"I feel like I've gotten a bum rap because of this whole thing. It's sort of like getting the old pie in the face," the Las Vegas entertainer said during an interview as he prepares for today's free show.

The "whole thing" Newton referred to is a flap that arose three months ago after Interior Secretary James Watt said he had invited Newton because previous July 4th concerts featuring rock bands had attacted the "wrong element."

Watt's remarks touched off a storm of criticism from fans of the Beach Boys, one of the nation's most enduring pop groups, who had attracted hundreds of thousands of people to free concerts in 1980 and 1981 at the Monument.

After even first lady Nancy Reagan declared she was a Beach Boys fan, Watt backtracked and emerged from a White House meeting with President Reagan carrying a plaster foot with a hole in it — a trophy for symbolically shooting himself in the foot.

"Actually, we'd arranged to do the show six weeks before this whole thing started," said Newton. "When I first heard about all the furor, I laughed. I thought it was funny because the Beach Boys are friends of mine. I love those guys. I'm still amused by it, but I'm also pretty tired of it."

Newton interrupted a tour to fly here last Wednesday at Reagan's invitation, he said.

"He said he simply wanted to reiterate what he said on the phone, that he'd appreciated the way I handled this whole thing and that he was somewhat embarrassed by it all," Newton said.

"I feel like I've gotten a bum rap... like getting the old pie in the face."
— Wayne Newton

"He probably didn't want me to feel everybody was running for the woods and would be out of town," Newton said. Reagan is spending the holiday weekendat his California ranch.

"This whole thing has been unfortunate, but in retrospect, I'd still do it again," he added.

Newton pointed out that he's paying for the show, including flying in his entire orchestra. "It'll cost us about $500,000, including the money lost that we could have made doing shows we charge for."

But the taxpayers will still be picking up part of the tab. The National Park Service will pay $69,000 in production costs after a local radio station that had paid a similar tab in past years refused to pick up the bill for Newton's concert.
