WTC trustees view enrollment report

College to step up student recruiting

Western Texas College trustees were provided a comprehensive report on enrollment trends and issues affecting the institution during a three-hour meeting Monday night.

Jim Clifton, dean of student services, led the presentation, outlining the direction his office and colleagues are heading in attempting to recruit more students and address problem areas on the campus.

Figures over the past five years reflect that part-time enrollment at the college is growing and that full-time enrollment has held steady over a four-year period, but it dropped slightly from last year to the present year.

Clifton attributed the decline in full-time enrollment to the economy, untimely teacher loss and "little or no recruiting" last year.

"We are going to drastically change that," Clifton said of the recruiting efforts.

The college lost several teachers near the end of the summer, including agriculture, chemistry, drama and speech instructors. Unable to fill the positions before the start of the semester, WTC had to cut several of its class offerings.

"The untimely teacher losses kind of bit us," Clifton said. "We are taking some steps to alleviate that."

The decrease in class offerings affected another area critical to the college — contact hours. State funds are determined by those contact hours.

"Contact hours are actually seat time in the classroom on a per student basis," Clifton explained. "For a full-time student that usually averages out at about 48 hours a student."

With a few less classes offered, as well as the loss of contact hours from inmate students when the Preston Smith unit was locked down earlier this year, WTC's contact hours for academic credit classes this year are down 40,120 hours compared to 1999.

Up until this year, Western Texas' contact hours in that area have grown steadily.

Looking at the entire picture, which includes academic, workforce and vocational students, the drop in contact hours is only 12,207 — 362,163 from March through September 2000 compared to 374,370 the same period in 1999.

The overall figures, Clifton said, reflect a slow, progressive growth.

"That is the kind of growth that will stay with you. I think that is healthy, especially in the kind of economy we have now."

Another area that is being addressed is the dorms, which are currently at only 40 percent occupancy.

"It is a decline. We usually have those things close to 90 percent full."

He said the same issues that affect the full-time enrollment, are affecting the dorms.

In addition, the number of in-county students has increased along with the number of part-time students.

"The in-county students have the choice to stay home and live. Our part-time students don't stay in the dorms, so that leaves only the out-of-county students who would stay in the dorm fulltime," Clifton said.

"Those out-of-county students are the ones who didn't get reached by a recruiter last year, or who chose to go to work or something else. The number of out-of-county students is what we will spend a lot of time on in our recruiting efforts."

In other items, Tammy Shirley, director of allied health, presented trustees an overview of the Emergency Medical Services program.

In action items the board:

—Approved the low bid from Snyder Janitorial Supplies for the college's janitorial supplies.

—Accepted a bid from Big Country Autoland on a new Buick LeSabre for $21,334.

—Approved a bid from Anson MultiWave for the purchase of 15 computers to be used at various locations around campus.

—Granted tuition variance requests for workforce education classes.

—Approved the small class report.

Trustees also granted a tax abatement for Farmer's Design Group identical to a plan approved by Scurry County Commissioners last Monday.

Fran Farmer, owner, requested the abatement as she plans to expand the business.

Approved was a four-year abatement plan for the improvements on the land only, beginning with 100 percent abatement the first year, 75 percent the second, 50 percent the third and 25 percent the fourth.

The plan does not include a tax break on the land or existing structures.

In other business, Johnson Controls gave its annual report on WTC's energy use and energy savings.

Board president Lee Presswood presided and all trustees were present including Carolyn Barbee, Eddie Peterson, Jackie Greene, Drew Bullard, Scott Richburg and Jay Kidd.

Registration deadline here for November general election

The Scurry County Clerk's office will be open until 5 p.m. today to register voters for the November 3 general election.

County Clerk Joan Bunch said interest in the election seems to be higher than normal.

This is probably due to the fact that Texas Gov. George W. Bush is challenging vice president Al Gore for president, and local citizens will have the choice between a former sheriff and three write-in candidates for the position of Scurry County Sheriff.

"We are having a lot of new registrations," said Bunch.

The sheriff's race came into being after Sheriff Darren Jackson was declared ineligible to be placed on the ballot as the Democratic nominee after voting in the Republican Primary.

Former sheriff Keith Collier was then selected by the local Democratic Party executive committee to run for sheriff. Collier has vowed not to campaign, nor take office if elected.

If Collier wins, Democrats are hoping that the Scurry County Commissioners Court would then appoint Jackson to the post.

The sheriff's race has generated three write-in candidates, however.

Fluvanna farmer and rancher Cole Herring, former DPS trooper and current personal fitness trainer Joe Salinas, and Kwik Lube and Tune manager Kirk Taylor, all have filed the necessary papers to become write-in candidates.

Other contested races include the county commissioners' seat in Precinct 3.

Incumbent Republican commissioner Howard Limmer is being challenged for the post by Democrat Donna Gray.

There is also a contested race for Justice of the Peace in Precinct 2 where Republican Travis Brackeen faces independent candidate Pam Bryant.

Election Thursday for local SWCD

A hamburger lunch will be held Thursday in conjunction with the election of a soil and water district director for Zone 4 of the Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District.

The election will be at noon at the Union Community Center.

Max Jones is currently the director for the zone and is seeking reelection to the post.

Zone 4 includes the area north of Highway 180 in Borden County. Other members of the board are Jimmy McMillan, chairman, representing Zone 1, Ted Crenwelge, vice chairman and representative of Zone 3, and Myron Calley of Zone 2 and John Anderson, Zone 5.

State law decrees that in order to vote in a soil and water conservation district director election, a person must own agricultural land within the district where the election is being held. The person must also live in a county in which all or part is in the district, and the voter must be at least 18 years of age.

The purpose of the Upper Colorado SWCD is to promote sound soil and water conservation programs on agricultural lands within the district and to serve as a voice for farmers, ranchers, and local community entities on conservation matters.

The district's board of directors coordinate the conservation efforts of various local, state and federal agencies and other organizations. The district has the authority to enter into working agreements with these governmental and private agencies to carry out the purposes of the district.

All conservation programs managed by the district are of a voluntary nature to the landowner or operator, or other potential users of the SWCD's programs.

Amy Shankles of 1908 Coleman won the second prize $25, and Tony Hayley of 3201 Hill Ave. won the $15 third prize.

United Way drive continuing

Scurry County United Way campaign has reached 36 percent of its goal of $80,000. A report was given Monday at the chamber of commerce board room.

Eight agencies are recipients of the United Way — Gateway Family Services, Snyder Child Day Care, Boys and Girls Club, West Texas Girl Scouts, Buffalo Trail Council Boy Scouts of America, Snyder Area Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, Scurry County Food Cupboard and American Red Cross.

Dallas trustees hire former commissioner of education

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas school trustees voted unanimously Monday evening to hire former education commissioner Mike Moses to lead the nation's 10th largest school district, ending a three-month search to replace fired leader Bill Rojas.

Moses, deputy chancellor of external affairs for the Texas Tech University System, was superintendent of the Lubbock School District before being appointed state education commissioner in 1995. He held the post four years before joining Texas Tech, where he earned $195,700 annually.

Moses has said the Dallas job appealed to him because he wants to return to public education.

After the vote late Monday Moses told reporters he hopes "to make this educational system work in a way of which we can all be proud."

Chancellor John T. Montford has said Moses is "imminently qualified" to turn around the troubled district and has a knack for dealing with boards and commissions.

Moses is credited with helping to raise more than $400 million for the system since 1997 through various fund-raisers. He's also credited with helping to raise Texas Tech from a Tier 4 to Tier 3 school in the latest US News and World Report college rankings.

Outside of his chancellor duties, Moses taught in the college of education on the Lubbock campus. Montford has said he will ask Moses to stay on as an adjunct professor.

Dallas trustees also considered Dallas County Judge Lee Jackson and Randolph Ward, state administrator for California's Compton Unified School District. They were rejected as candidates last month.

Trustees in July fired Bill Rojas, who had sparred with the school board for most of his 11-month tenure. He was fired 7-1 by trustees who invoked a "good rapport" clause in his contract with the 163,000-student district, which has gained a national reputation for instability.

Rojas had been hired in 1999 to replace Yvonne Gonzalez, who was sentenced to federal prison for embezzling funds to buy personal furniture. Trustees had agreed to pay Rojas a base salary of $260,000, the highest in the nation at the time.

Jordan Rodriguez may only be in elementary school, but he plays the accordion like a pro. At a recent assembly at Stanfield where he is in the second grade, Jordan and two family members played several polkas. Jordan's dad, Johnny Rodriguez, and brother Juan Jr., are also playing. They are members of Conjunto Mi Gusto, a band Jordan's dad founded several years ago. Jordan's love for the accordion began when he was very young. He has never had any lessons. New Ohio law bans secret filming up skirt, down shirt

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gina Bell was waiting for a carnival ride at a church festival with her baby daughter when she became spooked by the man behind her. When she shifted in line, he would move with her.

"As I crouched down to put the baby in my stroller, I saw a video camera sticking out of his bag, taping up my dress," the 34-year-old former kindergarten teacher recalled Monday.

"It rocked my whole sense of security."

Beginning Tuesday, Ohio law increases the penalties for secretly taking pictures up a woman's skirt or down her shirt, called "upskirting" and "downblousing."

Most states have laws that prohibit taking pictures of people in private places such as dressing rooms or restrooms, but only Ohio and California specifically ban the practice of secretly filming someone under their clothing in public places for sexual gratification, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures. Similar legislation is pending in New York.

The Internet has made the practice more common, with Web sites posting images, buying pictures from high-tech Peeping Toms and telling users where to buy hidden cameras, the law's supporters say.

"These Web sites basically promote the practice and encourage people to go out and try to do this to as many women as possible — kind of like a mission impossible challenge," said state Rep. Ed Jerse, who sponsored the Ohio legislation after hearing Bell's story.

The man who photographed Bell, David Bartolucci, pleaded no contest to voyeurism and possession of criminal tools and served 10 days in jail. He was also ordered to spend 30 days in home detention, serve 200 hours of community service and enroll in a therapy program.

Bartolucci had secretly photographed 13 women that day and had unknowingly filmed his own face, which police used to identify him, police said.

Bartolucci's attorney, John Luskin, says his client was under the influence of alcohol.

California lawmakers banned upskirting and downblousing after police discovered hidden cameras had filmed women at Disneyland, the Garden Grove Strawberry Festival and an Orange County, Calif., beach.

Woman's ex-husband kills her; voice chat room listens

DUNN, N.C. (AP) — A woman's ex-husband broke into her mobile home and shot her as friends on the other side of the state listened from an Internet voice chat room, authorities said.

Deanna Diane Gregory, 28, died Monday at a university hospital in Chapel Hill following the weekend shooting. Gregory told four friends through her computer's microphone that her ex-husband was breaking in, the Harnett County Sheriff's Office said.

The friends heard three gunshots and notified authorities, who found Gregory's front door open and the woman wounded on the couch, Maj. Steve West with the sheriff's office said.

Adam Bruce Moore, 29, was initially charged with attempted murder, but the charge was expected to change to murder, West said. He was also charged with first-degree burglary.

West said the couple's children were staying with Moore's parents when the shooting occurred. Earlier this year, Gregory accused Moore of making threats, but the case was dismissed, prosecutors said.

Guard to help enforce no-fly zones in Iraq

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas Air National Guard unit's first combat assignment in a half-century, as peacekeeper over the no-fly zones in southern Iraq, is designed to help prevent Saddam Hussein from attacking other nations in the region.

More than 80 members of the Air National Guard's 147th Fighter Wing were scheduled to depart Tuesday for the Persian Gulf, flying air-superiority missions as part of Operation Southern Watch. Although the effort has raged on for years and faded from public attention, it's still called a war zone by participants.

Despite using anti-aircraft artillery and surface-to-air missiles, Iraqi air defenses have failed to shoot down a single U.S. aircraft enforcing the no-fly zones.

"You know that Saddam Hussein would love to rub in the United States' face that he shot down an aircraft and he's captured or killed a pilot," Maj. Mike "Bones" McCoy of Houston told The Dallas Morning News in Tuesday's editions. "He's still trying, any way and every way he can."

McCoy will put his civilian job as a Delta Air Lines pilot on Boeing 737s on hold for about two weeks to fly Iraqi combat missions in F-16 fighters.

"There's very little public knowledge of what's going on over there, and it is in fact a war zone," said Maj. Ray Lynott of the California Air National Guard's 144th Fighter Wing. "There is live fire going on and shooting on a regular basis."

Many pilots with the 111th Fighter Squadron, the "flying" component of the Houston-based 147th Fighter Wing, have active-duty experience and some have flown previous combat missions, while others have never flown over hostile territory.

Tuesday's mission is the 111th's first combat assignment in 50 years. On Oct. 10, 1950, the unit was mustered into Korean War service.

In the late 1960s, GOP presidential candidate and Texas Gov. George W. Bush was a member of the fighter wing.

All Cadillac dealers need a good customer

CLINTON, Ky. (AP) — Every Cadillac dealer in the world would love a few customers like Marian Emerson.

The lady made her most recent purchase last week. It was her 44th Caddy in 44 years.

"I just like Cadillacs," said Emerson, who turned 88 on Tuesday.

She doesn't much remember her first one except that she got it in Memphis and it was yellow and gold. She racked up 19,059 miles on her last one — a 2000 Sedan Deville.

Chalk it up to bridge. Emerson drives to tournaments all over and holds the rank of Life Master. In November she goes for Gold Master in Birmingham, Ala.

'Be Nice to Bryce' benefit set for Oct. 22 at coliseum

The "Be Nice to Bryce" event has been set for Oct. 22 by volunteers sponsored by the chamber of commerce. The event is being held to raise money for Bryce Doty, a seven-year-old second grader at Stanfield Elementary, who is undergoing treatment for the effects of a stroke he suffered at birth.

The fund-raising event will be held from 11:30-5:30 p.m. and tickets are $10, available at the chamber office. Tickets for the lunch is $5 and will include briskets from a brisket cooking contest headed up by Stacy Browning.

In addition to the lunch, there will be a silent auction and entertainment by Fiddlin' Frenchie Burk, Emil Schatel and Billy Mata, who are donating their time.

Approximately $20,000 needs to be raised for Bryce's treatments because insurance does not cover them.

Bryce is the son of Darrel and Missy Doty. His mother said the treatments have helped him get oxygen to the oxygen deprived areas of his body caused by the stroke. After his first 40 treatments, his parents noticed a remarkable difference. Bryce and his mom must travel to Olney for additional treatments which are similar to treating divers for the bends. The treatments were rejected by the insurance company because they are considered experimental at this time, and they are not approved by the FDA.

Donations are still needed for briskets, chips, auction items and money to pay for expenses of band members who are otherwise volunteering their time for the event.

A fund has been set up at Snyder National Bank to help with the cost of Bryce's treatments.

Not so elementary, my dear reader

By Phillip Alder

There has been a burst of reprints recently. One of my favorites is "Sherlock Holmes, Bridge Detective Returns" (Devyn Press) by Frank Thomas, which originally appeared in 1975. Thomas has been a leading figure in the American Bridge Teachers' Association for years, and co-wrote the original "Sherlock Holmes, Bridge Detective" with George Gooden. My only gripes with this book are that the declarer isn't always South and that the type is small, both making life harder for the reader.

There are many instructive deals, of which this is one. How would you plan the play in six hearts after West leads the club eight?

Watson won with his club ace, drew trumps, played off dummy's top clubs, and ruffed the last club in hand. He played a diamond to dummy's ace and continued with the diamond queen. East won with the king but was endplayed. If he switched to a spade, it was away from the queen; if he returned a minor-suit card, Watson would receive a ruff-and-discard.

"Well played!" sportingly stated East. But when Holmes didn't comment, Watson knew something was wrong.

Holmes explained that if West had had the diamond king, the slam would have failed. The guaranteed line was not to ruff the fourth club, but to discard a low spade or diamond, leaving East endplayed for sure. His return would generate a 12th trick without any risk.

Holmes ended by pointing out — incorrectly after a heart lead — that he could make seven notrump.

The book is $17.95 postpaid from Baron Barclay Bridge Supplies. Call (800) 274-2221 to order.

FAITH IN JESUS' RESURRECTION
"Jesus said to her, 'Mary!' She turned and said to Him in Hebrew, 'Rabboni!' (which means, Teacher) (John 20:16). We are always happy to see an old friend, but think how surprised and overjoyed Mary Magdalene was when she heard and saw a friend she had seen die three days earlier! What a moving account of the events that stirred such wonder among His friends when they saw the vacant tomb! And now we share with them the realization that Jesus did not remain in the tomb. He lives!
The resurrection of Christ means that we can stand justified in God's sight, and because He destroyed the power of death, we are assured that we will conquer death through Him. Our risen Lord touches Christians' lives each day with His divine power which heals our wounds, places confidence on our path, and gives us the ability to do all things through His strength.

Rested Mariners draw tired Yanks in ALCS

NEW YORK (AP) — While the New York Yankees fought off the pesky Oakland Athletics, the Mariners sat on a runway in Seattle deciding where to go next for the AL championship series.

The Mariners enter the ALCS on Tuesday night rested following three days off. The Yankees are drained following back-to-back cross-country flights.

"Once they hear 56,000 screaming fans at Yankee Stadium, that should get their adrenaline going," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said. "I'm not feeling sorry for them."

Piniella knows that feeling, having to endure a similar travel schedule in 1995 after eliminating the Yankees in a tense five-game series.

Seattle won the opener of the ALCS that year in Cleveland before falling to the Indians in six games.

"They've had to make that trip twice now," Piniella said. "We were caught in a similar situation in 1995. But they're not the world champions for nothing. They showed it. It's fitting to play the defending world champions to go to the World Series. We're going to go in nice and relaxed."

They'll also go in with their pitchers in rotation. Freddy Garcia (9-5) starts for the Mariners against Denny Neagle (15-9), who didn't even pitch in the first-round against Oakland.

Piniella will follow up Garcia with John Halama, Aaron Sele and Paul Abbott, while Yankees manager Joe Torre counters with Orlando Hernandez in Game 2, followed by Andy Pettitte and Roger Clemens.

There are few similarities between the teams that will meet in this year's ALCS and the ones who played that thrilling division series in 1995.

Ken Griffey Jr. and Randy Johnson left Seattle. Alex Rodriguez and Derek Jeter have become full-blown megastars. Tino Martinez, Jeff Nelson and Luis Sojo shed their Mariners' uniforms for Yankees pinstripes.

Perhaps most importantly is that the Yankees have the mystique of winning three World Series titles in four years and the Mariners have undergone an overhaul from a power-hitting team to a club that relies on pitching and situational baseball.

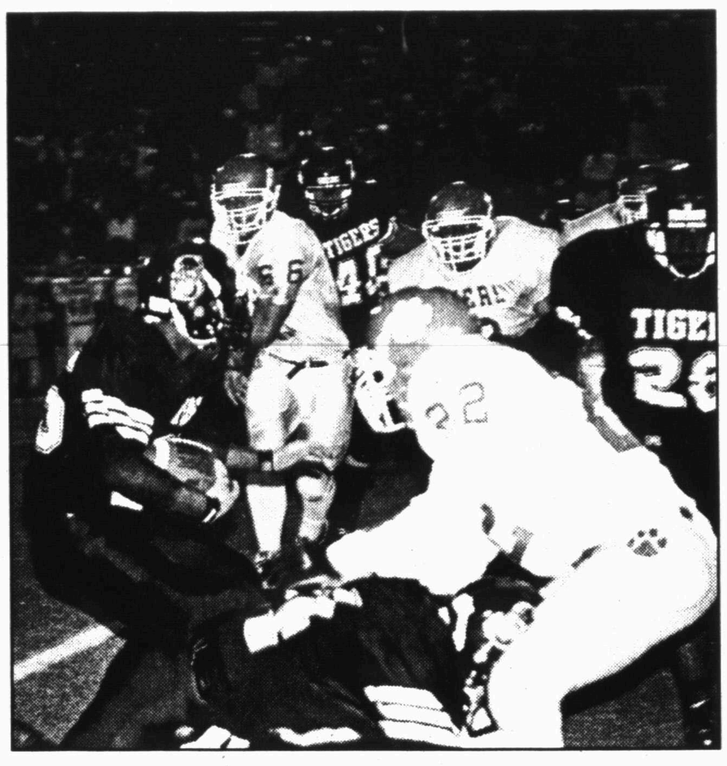

"It's a different Yankees club and certainly a different Seattle club," said Piniella, one of the few holdovers on either team. "I don't think you can go back to 1995 and draw any comparisons."

Many of the changes the teams have undergone stem from that memorable week in October 1995. The series featured two extra-inning games, including Jim Leyritz's game-winning homer in the 15th inning that gave the Yankees a 2-0 series lead.

Then Griffey, Johnson and Edgar Martinez took over, with the Big Unit winning two of the next three games — one in relief — and Griffey scoring the winning run on Martinez's double in the 11th inning of the deciding fifth game.

"It was so dramatic," Rodriguez said. "We were serious underdogs. Nobody expected us to do anything."

"Losing that series was such a huge disappointment for us," said Paul O'Neill, one of five Yankees still on the roster. "When you lose like that, it's something you never forget. But that experience has made this team better. We learned you don't take any year for granted because you know it can go so quickly."

LOOKING FOR A CREASE — Snyder tailback Josh Arizmendi looks for a place to run behind the blocking of Jesse Haines (14) and Tovares Brandon (28) during the Tigers 21-12 setback to Frenship last week. SHS squad hosts key 4-4A match

A repeat performance from their last meeting with Big Spring would suit the Snyder Lady Tigers just fine tonight.

Snyder hosts the Lady Steers in a key District 4-4A match at 7 this evening at the SHS gym.

The Lady Tigers mauled Big Spring, 15-1, 15-1, in their last meeting, and another win tonight would go a long way toward securing a playoff berth.

Heading into tonight's action, Snyder, Big Spring and Andrews are deadlocked in second place with records of 7-3. With Andrews facing undefeated district leader Lake View, a Snyder victory would likely give the Lady Tigers sole possession of the runner-up spot with three matches left on the schedule.

Including tonight's tilt, three of Snyder's last four matches are at home. The only road game is Oct. 21 at Andrews in the district finale.

The Lady Tigers host last-place Estacado on Saturday and Plainview next Tuesday.

Sports Whirl

By Eric Drennan SDN Sports Editor

This just in from Dallas, the Sooners have scored again.

Saturday's annual Red River shootout turned into a massacre as Oklahoma annihilated the Texas Longhorns, 63-24.

The humiliating loss led the Austin newspaper to label Mack Brown as "February's coach," meaning the Longhorn leader is a great recruiter, but can not turn UT talent into victories.

Rather than the normal week off following the OU game, the Longhorns will play at Colorado this week. "We took our bye on Saturday," Brown said at a Monday press conference.

Despite the rivalry between Oklahoma and Texas, the Cotton Bowl suffered no damage from celebrating fans. The same can't be said for Georgia's Sanford Stadium.

During a mob scene that followed the Bulldogs' 21-10 victory over Tennessee, fans damaged Georgia's hallowed hedges that have surrounded the field since 1929.

The Bulldogs' home games, which have always been referred to as "between the hedges," will now be "between the fences" for the remainder of the season. The hedges will be trimmed to mere sticks so they can grow back in time for next season, leaving only the chainlink fences to surreound the field.

The melee, which seriously injured one student, caused $70,000 worth of damage to the stadium. Fans also ripped out seats, vandalized alarm systems and destroyed wheelchair ramps.

Snyder fans at last week's freshman and junior high football games noticed that the referees were wearing coaching shorts and T-shirts, rather than stripes.

The shortage of officials caught Snyder in a crunch, and left SHS athletic director David Baugh scrambling for replacements. Several Snyder coaches, a Snyder Tiger parent and former WTC athletic director Milton Ham handled the duties.

"Last week, the Permian Basin chapter of officials had two varsity games on Thursday to cover, so that left them short," explained Baugh. "But they don't expect any more problems the rest of this year."

At the freshman game, even Baugh was pressed into action in the second half. However, the 13-year Tiger coach said he's more than happy to leave the officiating to the men in striped shirts.

"That's a tough job, and those guys are a lot better at it than I am," Baugh remarked. "I'm just glad every Thursday when those guys show up. It's always a big relief."

Mets happy to face Cards, not Braves

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets are providing a little bulletin board material for the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Mets aren't shy about expressing their preference for playing St. Louis instead of their nemesis, the Atlanta Braves, in the NL championship series.

"I was a little relieved," reliever Turk Wendell said of the Braves being eliminated. "That is a team that mentally puts a lot of pressure on other teams. It puts pressure on guys to think that they have to be perfect."

New York has been far from it against Atlanta. The Mets are 14-29 against the Braves the past three seasons, including a loss in last year's NLCS.

And while the champagne was spraying throughout the New York clubhouse Sunday after eliminating San Francisco in four games, the Mets were happy not to have to answer questions about why they are spooked by Atlanta.

"Nothing derogatory against them, but I'm glad to see them lose," first baseman Todd Zeile said. "This team has not had much success against them. But I don't think anybody really cares who we're playing, as long as we're there."

The Mets are 26-10 against the Cardinals, making it is easy to understand why the Mets are relieved they are opening the best-of-seven NLCS Wednesday night in St. Louis instead of in Atlanta.

Mike Hampton (15-11) is expected to get the start for New York against St. Louis' Darryl Kile (21-9).

"I'm glad we don't have to answer questions about why we can't win in Atlanta," left-hander Al Leiter said. "That became a nuisance."

Frosh, JV top Frenship

WOLFFORTH — Snyder's junior varsity and freshman squads set the tone for Saturday's volleyball matches against Frenship.

Prior to Snyder's varsity victory on Saturday, the SHS frosh captured a 15-0, 15-10 win, followed by the JV's 15-8, 15-7 decision over Frenship.

Erin Burleson paced the freshman squad from the service line with nine points, while Misha Wofford and Desiree Braziel added five apiece.

Sara Thornhill and Dominique Braziel tallied four points each, and Ashley Martinez, Beth Clements and Acee French chipped in one apiece.

In the junior varsity match, Shelley Fisk served up 10 points to lead the Lady Tigers' effort.

Lori Chesser registered nine points, while Chaelyn Robinson posted eight. Loryn Brown accounted for two points, and Amber Alexander finished with one.

Both Snyder squads will be in action again at 6 this evening when they host Big Spring. The freshman match will be held at the junior high, with the junior varsity at the SHS gym.

At least five die in fire

LAKE JACKSON (AP) — At least five people, including three children, were killed in a fire at a Lake Jackson apartment complex early Tuesday, authorities said.

"Four communities are responding and in the morning we started to find people burned up in the fire," Mark Hanna, spokesman for the state fire marshal's office in Austin, said. "We think there will be more."

Officials said the blaze, first reported at 3:48 a.m. at the Woodhollow Apartments, wasn't completely extinguished for some five hours.

About 20 units were destroyed, apartment manager Olga Hernandez Duron said.

"We haven't assessed the whole thing," Duron said. "Everybody is pulling together. Several restaurants, a couple of apartment complexes and several churches are working to find people food and places to stay."

The Red Cross and volunteers with food and clothes gathered at the apartment complex Tuesday morning.

Texan among scientists to share physics Nobel

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A Russian and two U.S.-based researchers won the Nobel Prize in physics Tuesday for work that helped create modern information technology, leading to everyday devices like the pocket calculator and cellular phones.

Zhores I. Alferov of the A.F. Ioffe Physico-Technical Institute in St. Petersburg, Russia, and Herbert Kroemer, a German-born researcher at the University of California at Santa Barbara, will share half the prize for work in developing technology used in satellite communications and cell phones.

Jack Kilby of Texas Instruments will get the other half for his part in the invention and development of the integrated circuits and as a co-inventor of the pocket calculator.

The Dallas inventor did not return a telephone call early Tuesday from The Associated Press.

The prize this year is worth $915,000.

Hermann Grimmeiss, member of the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences, said the work of the three men had been invaluable in the development of modern information technology.

"Without Kilby it would not have been possible to build the personal computers we have today, and without Alferov it would not be possible to transfer all the information from satellites down to the earth or to have so many telephone lines between cities," Grimmeiss said.

Kroemer was cited as one of the early leaders in semiconductor research.

The academy in this year's selections cited scientists for their work in a practical realm instead of more esoteric branches of physics such as subatomic particles and quantum physics like winners in the previous two years.

The awards started Monday with the naming of Arvid Carlsson of Sweden, Paul Greengard and Eric Kandel of the United States, as the winners of this year's medicine prize for discoveries about how messages are transmitted between brain cells, leading to treatments of Parkinson's disease and depression.

Carlsson, 77, a professor emiritus of the University of Goteborg in Sweden, Greengard, 74, of Rockefeller University in New York and Kandel, 70, an Austrian-born U.S. citizen with Columbia University in New York shared the prize.

The winners in the categories of physics and chemistry were being announced Tuesday, economics on Wednesday and literature on Thursday in Stockholm. This week's prizes culminate Friday with the coveted peace prize — the only one awarded in Oslo, Norway.

Alfred Nobel, the wealthy Swedish industrialist and inventor of dynamite, endowed the physics, chemistry, literature, medicine and peace prizes in his will but left only vague guidelines for the selection committees.

The economics prize was established and endowed by the Swedish national bank in 1968 and first awarded in 1969.

The physics prize should go to those who "shall have made the most important discovery or invention within the field of physics" and "shall have conferred the greatest benefit on mankind," according to Nobel's will.

FCC chief wants to speed digital TV transition

WASHINGTON (AP) — TV stations should be forced to pay for their existing channels beginning in 2003 as they switch over to new and hugely lucrative digital channels, the head of the Federal Communications Commission says.

FCC Chairman William Kennard says the nation needs the soon-to-be-abandoned channels now used for analog TV signals in order to provide room for ever-expanding new wireless technologies.

Citing billions of dollars in free digital channels that the industry is getting from the government, Kennard, in a speech scheduled for delivery Tuesday, challenged broadcasters to pay back the public by televising every presidential debate, airing more public service announcements and providing free air time to candidates.

"There is an increasing discomfort with the fact that broadcasters were given $70 billion in free spectrum," Kennard said in an interview with The Associated Press.

That same valuable air space could have brought even more money to the Treasury, with wireless Internet companies and others bidding for the channels, he noted.

Digital television allows broadcasters to offer sharper pictures and more channels. They could even use the airwaves to deliver stock quotes or other data to both home computers and TV sets, akin to an Internet service.

As part of the transition, broadcast stations will have two channels— one in digital and the other in analog format — so people can still watch broadcast shows on their existing analog TVs.

Broadcasters are supposed to return their analog channels by 2006 or when digital television reaches 85 percent of the market — whichever is later. But Kennard says this could allow broadcasters to be "spectrum squatters," holding on to analog channels for decades longer. He wants Congress to set a fixed date.

"We have to have it back," he said, saying the resource is vital to the U.S. keeping ahead in wireless services

Kennard said broadcasters should be charged for the analog channel beginning in 2006 and recommended that Congress order the agency to adopt a 2003 deadline by which all new TV sets can receive digital signals. He said this would drive down the price of the new sets.

In the wake of a decision by NBC and Fox not to show the first presidential debate last week, Kennard said more attention needs to be focused on what obligations broadcasters have to the nation.

Fox showed the premiere of its drama, "Dark Angel," in place of Tuesday's debate. NBC gave its local stations the option of showing politics or the first game of the Major League Baseball playoffs.

Dr. Gott

Doctor needs a new approach

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please comment on my doctor's approach to patients. He has one of the nurses take a medical history (on a four-page checklist) and look me over. Then he briefly enters the room, speaks to the nurse, tells her what is wrong with me, describes to her what my treatment is to be, and leaves. In some instances, the nurse actually selects the medication and writes the prescription. I feel neglected because I'm paying for the doctor's education and expertise, but the most I get from him is a handshake and a couple of questions.

DEAR READER: I hope that the "nurse" you refer to is actually a licensed physician's assistant, a trained professional whom the doctor has hired (and supervises) to help him with routine medical matters. If she isn't a PA, she is overstepping her boundaries.

In either case, I believe that the scenario you described is not altogether appropriate. It seems to me to be a manifestation of an increasingly common perception: Doctors can save time (therefore, see more patients and increase income) by distancing themselves from these very patients and abdicating the traditional hands-on approach to non-M.D. subordinates.

In such a relation, I think that both the patient and the doctor suffer — the patient because, as you pointed out, he or she is not getting the physician's skills; the doctor, because the satisfaction of medical practice depends largely on a one-on-one doctor/patient relation.

In all fairness, I should emphasize that many modern physicians delegate certain responsibilities to nurses and PAs. For example, such para-professionals can certainly obtain valid medical histories and related information (which the doctor subsequently reviews) and can carry out a basic medical examination in a healthy person. Other appropriate duties include Pap tests, giving injections, monitoring vital signs (such as pulse and blood pressure), removing sutures, sewing up lacerations and so forth. These services are, in a sense, an extension of the doctor's skills, not a substitute for them.

Your physician appears to be more interested in minimizing contact with his patients than in playing a real role in the diagnosis and treatment of their complaints. The good doctor doesn't practice by being a medical executive. I may well receive an avalanche of mail from disgruntled practitioners and PAs who believe that my views are quaint and outdated. Nonetheless, I'm convinced that the situation you described is, fortunately, far from being the norm, even in busy and efficient medical offices. Perhaps the doctor as a delegator — the trained scientist who relies exclusively on ancillary impersonal lab tests and computer printouts — will become the practitioner of the 21st century. I hope not. If that unhappy reality arrives in my lifetime, I'll dig in my heels and change professions.

I suggest that you share your concerns with your physician. Perhaps he will see the value in becoming more — not less — involved with people in need.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Choosing a Physician." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Man will step up to the plate in his new role as grandpa

DEAR ABBY: My stepdaughter is planning to be married next spring. Her fiance has two children from a previous marriage. Will they become my grandchildren, my stepgrandchildren, the stepchildren of my stepdaughter, or simply the children of the man who married my stepdaughter?

My wife is teasing me about becoming an instant grandfather. I'm not so sure this marriage makes me one officially. I will, of course, treat them as my grandchildren, but I am curious nonetheless. Please advise. — WONDERING IN INDIANAPOLIS

DEAR WONDERING: If you are married to "Grandma," that makes you "Grandpa." Stop splitting "heirs" and accept the honor graciously, or you may wind up being called a name that's far less complimentary than "Grandpa."

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing regarding "Just Julie in California," who was upset that her husband carried two pictures of his late wife in his billfold.

I married a widower who not only had pictures of her in his billfold, he also one on the coffee table. He didn't constantly verbalize his love for me, but he showed it in countless ways every day, and I was happy to display a picture of his late wife in our living room. She was part of his life before me, and because I loved him so, I was grateful that he had a happy life before we met. Had it not been for their happy marriage, he might have been a different man than he was then, perhaps one who wouldn't have been so good to me.

My husband died suddenly after only 8 1/2 short years together. I am thankful that I didn't waste one moment of our wonderful life together by being jealous of the woman from his past. Julie should treasure what she has today, and stop worrying about a couple of photos from the past. — SOMEONE WHO CARES

DEAR SOMEONE WHO CARES: Your signature says it all. I compliment you on your capacity to love and your common sense. New wives of widowers, please heed her message — it contains a valuable lesson. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Just Julie in California," who complained that her husband carried pictures of his late wife in his wallet.

I married a widower who had lost his wife to cancer six years earlier. This is my first marriage.

I know how overwhelming it can be to feel you are competing with a ghost. I solved the problem by remembering that I have a wonderful husband and that it was that dear departed lady who taught him about women. I also know that my husband gained strength and compassion by caring for his first wife during her illness. I count myself fortunate that my husband knows how devastating it is to lose a spouse, so he cherishes me.

Abby, I have placed some of his late wife's things on display and keep a small photo of her on the mantle over the fireplace. Whenever I walk past it, I always remember to thank her.

"Just Julie" should take heart and consider that if her husband loved his first wife so much that he carries her photo in his wallet 11 years after her death, how much he can love the wife he is able to hold in his arms. Sign me ... JOHN'S SECOND WIFE, NEW JERSEY

DEAR JOHN'S SECOND WIFE: Your husband picked not one but two "winners" to marry. You are a very perceptive woman. Take a bow — you deserve it. John is a lucky man to have had two such wonderful, loving wives.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Strong wind threatens another delay

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — For the second day in a row, strong wind threatened Tuesday to delay space shuttle Discovery's flight to the international space station.

It is NASA's third attempt in less than a week to launch Discovery on the 100th space shuttle flight, an ambitious space station construction mission.

Gusty wind forced launch managers to call off Monday's attempt. Last Thursday's postponement was caused by a sluggish valve and suspect bolts.

On Monday, gusts of more than 50 mph prevented technicians from moving a vent hood into position over the external fuel tank, part of the preparation for filling the tank.

The hood, which NASA refers to as the "beanie cap," is used during and after fueling to remove gaseous oxygen venting from the tip of the fuel tank. It is swung back two minutes before liftoff.

If the gas were allowed to hover, frost would form on the tank and could turn into dangerous chunks of ice.

The crew's six Americans and one Japanese have been training for this mission for three years, much longer than usual. Russia's delays in building and then launching the space station's living quarters kept postponing Discovery's flight.

During the 11-day mission, the astronauts will attach two new segments to the international space station. Until that is completed, the first permanent crew cannot move in.

The launch of the first residents — a three-man crew led by American astronaut Bill Shepherd — is set for Oct. 30 from Kazakstan.

Clinton seeks to end Mid East violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Through a flurry of phone calls and the promise of a possible summit in Egypt, President Clinton sought to keep violence in Israel from unraveling the Middle East peace effort he has nurtured throughout his presidency.

Clinton spent more than five hours Monday huddling with his advisers and speaking by phone with Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. He offered an array of options for ending the violent confrontations between Israelis and Palestinians that have raged for nearly two weeks, leaving more than 80 people dead.

The White House continued Tuesday to pin its hopes on a summit this week, even though Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa indicated such a meeting would not happen this week or next.

"We remain focused on what we can do in the shorter term to break the cycle of violence," said White House spokesman Jake Siewert. He said the president would speak Tuesday with Arafat, Barak and United Nations Secretary-General Kofi Annan.

A senior White House official, briefing reporters on condition of anonymity, said that in each of his calls Monday, Clinton gave the leaders several options for cooling off tensions and reviving Israeli-Palestinian negotiations, including a summit to be attended by either him or Secretary of State Madeleine Albright.

While all agreed that emotions in the region are running dangerously high for a face-to-face session, "no one has said no to a possible meeting," the official said, and travel by the president or secretary of state this week remains a possibility.

The official added that Arafat and Barak have not been totally receptive to Clinton's attempts to encourage "a discussion of steps toward restraint," and there is doubt as to whether a high-level visit to Egypt would be productive.

Clinton huddled for several hours with Albright, his national security adviser, Sandy Berger, and other advisers but reached no firm decisions on whether to attend any potential summit.

Elected in Yugoslavia...

Europe eager to assist new president

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Assistance to Yugoslavia's new leadership is Europe's "top priority," France's foreign minister said Tuesday — a boost to President Vojislav Kostunica as he seeks to consolidate power after years of Slobodan Milosevic's rule.

French Foreign Minister Hubert Vedrine is the first official from a NATO country that bombed Yugoslavia last year to visit Belgrade since last week's uprising against Milosevic.

"I have come here to express my admiration to Mr. Kostunica and the Serbian people," Vedrine said after meeting the new Yugoslav leader. "Together they have written a huge page in the democratic history of Europe."

France is also the current head of the European Union, which lifted sanctions against Yugoslavia on Monday and promised $2 billion in aid.

"We have made this decision to help strengthen a democratic Yugoslavia," Vedrine said. "That was Europe's response to the bravery of the Serb people. Our top priority is to help Yugoslavia consolidate."

Vedrine said Kostunica will attend a EU summit meeting Friday and Saturday in the French resort of Biarritz.

Kostunica and his allies still face an uphill race in their efforts to fully rid the state of all remnants of Milosevic's regime. A key Kostunica aide, Zoran Djindjic, said Tuesday that Milosevic's aides are trying to retain control over the police.

"The police are a backbone," Djinjic told reporters, adding that Milosevic's aides "would like to retain the police under their control."

Anxious to shore up his power base, Kostunica is putting his supporters in charge of the country's most important institutions, including the police, judiciary, banks and state-run companies.

Milosevic remains out of public view, holed up at one of the president's official residences in a Belgrade suburb. But his officials still wield influence in the government of Serbia — Yugoslavia's larger republic and Milosevic's former power base.

Several Serbian government ministers have resigned in the past two days.

Candidates returning to campaign trail

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Al Gore and George W. Bush were returning to the campaign trail Tuesday as the sniping between them intensifies on the eve of their second debate.

Bush was tweaking his rival at a rally in Gore's home state of Tennessee, where polls suggest a close race. Gore was touting his college aid proposals in Florida, another competitive state.

Both men took Monday off to prepare for Wednesday's debate in North Carolina but hoped to frame the issues for the 90-minute face-off while back on the trail.

"We need middle-class tax cuts to make college more affordable," Gore said in remarks prepared for delivery Tuesday at Manatee Community College.

At the same time, Gore's camp took to branding Bush as a bumbler who can't defend his proposals coherently. Bush's team continued the theme that Gore can't be believed.

"This strategy is one of a campaign that is running out of options and is grasping at straws," said Bush spokesman Dan Bartlett.

"Governor Bush seems incapable of talking about the important issues in this campaign in a coherent way," said Gore deputy campaign manager Mark Fabiani.

At a Florida press conference, Democratic National Committee chairman Joe Andrew announced an intensified campaign of television commercials, a "Bush light" Web site and "truth squad" to hammer at Bush. Gore running mate Joseph Lieberman also was being sent to Texas after the debate for a "failed leadership tour" bashing Bush's record there as governor.

Andrew and Gore campaign officials insist the assault is "fair game" because it's on Bush policy proposals and misstatements, though the language harshly refers to Bush as a "bumbler."

The assault also comes as the latest CNN-USA Today-Gallup tracking poll showed Bush 8 points ahead of Gore, 50 percent to 42 percent, with an error margin of 4 percentage points.

"We're not talking about personal attacks on individual character," said Andrew. "We're talking about his record. We're going to continue to talk about his record and talk about it loud and clear."

Bartlett turned that around, saying the announcement raises additional questions about Gore's credibility because he only last week pledged not to launch personal attacks.

"He's violated that pledge today by unleashing his top aides to attack Governor Bush in a very personal way," Bartlett said.

Bush running mate Dick Cheney said Lieberman's tour would be a waste of time.

"The fact is, of course, the people of Texas re-elected Governor Bush overwhelmingly. He's been one of the most successful governors that we've ever had in Texas," he said Monday on CNN.

He added that Texans "will probably not take kindly to Joe Lieberman coming down to mess with Texas, so to speak."

For their part, the Bush camp labeled Gore "a serial exaggerator ... a man who has difficulty telling the truth" as a results of statements Gore made.

Burned man still in Lubbock UMC

Felipe Amarillas of 1105 26th Street remains in Lubbock's University Medical Center Hospital for treatment of burns he suffered in early September. The burns covered 25 percent of his body.

A UMC spokesman said this morning that Amarillas is now listed in satisfactory condition and is making progress to be released. However, she did not know when Amarillas might be dismissed from the hospital.

Amarillas was burned while fueling a company van belonging to Bryant's Carpet Cleaning.

"We suspect static discharge ignited the gas fumes," Fire Marshal Cy Posey said the day of the accident. "Basically, it was just a flash fire."

Snyder EMS arrived on the scene to give medical attention and later transferred Amarillas to Lubbock. The vehicle sustained a small amount of fire damage.
