Fox pleads guilty, gets 50 years

By LINDA HILL SCHAFFRINA

Jimmy Ray Fox today pleaded guilty to murder and was sentenced to 50 years in prison for the slaying of 23-year-old Janice Abernathy on June 14, 1977.

Fox, now 17, entered his plea in 142nd District Court. The sentence had been recommended by District Attorney Vern Martin.

Fox was 16 at the time of the slaying, but was certified an adult, and the case was transferred to district court. He had been indicted on a capital murder charge, but pleaded guilty only to murder.

According to the statements read in court today, with the agreement of the defendant and his attorney, here is what happened on the morning June 14 when Janice Abernathy, eight months pregnant, was stabbed more than 20 times.

Fox, in his statement given June 16, said he was a senior leader at the Alamo YMCA. He said he had asked a girl to lunch and had no money. "I decided to go rob somebody," Fox said.

He first went to another house, he said, that of Bonnie Ann Runyon on Godfrey Street, and asked to use the telephone. He told Mrs. Runyon his pickup truck had broken down. He went to the telephone and started dialing.

In her statement, Mrs. Runyon said after she had let a man in to use her telephone that morning she decided she might have made a mistake and went, with her children, into the garage of her home.

She said she saw the man get on a bicycle and ride away. He came back about 10 minutes later, but she did not let him into the house.

Fox said in his statement that he had "chickened out" of robbing the home on Godfrey Street because the children were there.

According to his confession, he then went to another house and was given permission to use the telephone. Fox called Mrs. Runyon's home, planning to go back to rob her if she answered the telephone. He said he did not think about robbing the second home.

After that, he said, he went to a house on Storey Avenue (the Abernathy home), where he had seen a woman working in the yard. He again asked to use the telephone and tried to call his grandmother, but the line was busy, he said.

At that point, according to the confession, he approached Mrs. Abernathy, who was sitting on the floor watching television, and stabbed her.

She fell on her back. "She just kept fighting, and I got nervous and kept stabbing," Fox said.

After he "realized what I had done," he went through her purse, which was in the kitchen; washed the ### Coming Sunday...

According to its director, the Museum of the Southwest in Midland may experience its "most important year" in 1978.

Staff writer Roger Southall has interviewed Museum Director Sam Grove in depth for an article for the West Texas Life section of Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

In that article, Grove explains why he considers this year critical in terms of the institution's growth and future. Photographs accompanying the interview tell something about what the museum's staff is doing right now.

Look for it in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Carter presses for settlement of coal strike

By DAVID ESPO

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter intensified pressure to end the 81-day coal strike today by summoning the industry's top executives to the White House amid reports that a settlement was near.

The White House meeting came as optimism was expressed in the administration and Congress that the industry was on the verge of agreeing to terms sought by the striking miners.

Summoned to the meeting were executives of U.S. Steel Corp., Continental Oil, Bethlehem Steel Corp., National Steel Co. and Pittsburg Coal. The oil and steel firms or their coal mining subsidiaries are major members of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the main industry bargaining arm.

Afterward, Edgar Speer, chairman of U.S. Steel, the country's sixth largest coal company, told reporters that Carter had asked for the meeting to "find out where negotiations were."

Asked if a settlement were likely by this weekend, Speer replied: "I would hope so."

George A. Stinson, chairman of National Steel, said: "The president asked us to do nothing except to do what we've been doing — which is press for a settlement."

Stinson said negotiations were "too fluid and sensitive" to say whether the two sides were getting closer.

However, he called it "a very constructive meeting with the president."

Asked whether there was any effort to split the industry, Stinson said: "There was no effort here whatsoever to press for the development."

The striking United Mine Workers, meanwhile, reached tentative agreements with two independent coal companies in eastern Kentucky. The names of the companies were not immediately available. The terms were reportedly identical to a tentative agreement reached earlier this week with Pittsburg & Midway Coal Mining Co.

Officials were hopeful the whole industry might be ready to give in to the union's "bottom line" contract demands.

"I think it's in the death rattle stage," said one official.

In the Senate, Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd and Jennings Randolph, both Democrats from coal-rich West Virginia, said they were hopeful that a settlement will be reached today or Saturday.

Bit by bit, the Carter administration has been sending the coal industry a message in recent days: Give in to UMW contract demands or be prepared for presidential intervention in the bitter strike.

Justice 'intervention' termed OK

By JIM STEINBERG

ODESSA — Acting City Attorney Terry Diveley said Thursday afternoon that preliminary research of federal statutes indicates there was nothing legally improper about the "intervention" by an official of the U.S. Justice Department in a request for a parade permit by Brown Berets here.

Diveley said that from his first reading, Title 42 of the U.S. Code would seem to authorize the request on Monday before the Odessa City Council by George Cerny to allow the Brown Berets a parade permit for Saturday.

Cerny is a conciliator with the Community Relations Service of the Justice Department in Dallas. The legality of his role in the permit application process was questioned by the two councilmen who voted against the majority decision granting the permit to the Brown Berets.

"The federal intervention was only one of the reasons I voted against the Brown Beret's getting that permit. I think that kind of intervention by the government is wrong. And I would vote that way if I had to do it again."

said Councilman Fred D. George on Thursday. George, along with Curtis Webster opposed the council's 3-2 vote Monday, following a recommendation for approval by Odessa Police Chief Jack Tomlin.

The majority okayed a parade permit and police escort for the Saturday morning motorcade which is expected to travel from St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Odessa to Interstate Highway 20 and then to Big Spring.

Cerny said Thursday afternoon that all he did by presenting the request to the City Council was act as "a third party neutralist" to see that the Brown Berets "abided by the Odessa law."

"What I did was arrange for them (local Brown Beret leaders) to meet with the (Odessa) chief of police and explain what their intentions with the parade were and have them mutually agree on the route," Cerny said.

Cerny said he became aware of the Brown Berets' intention to have the parade from a news service wire story last week. And that as a result of that story, he decided to inquire whether or not the Brown Berets had intended to obtain the necessary permit and if they had actually started the process necessary to obtain one.

Cerny said that although a Brown Beret leader told him on Feb. 16 that the group intended to obtain the permit, a subsequent telephone call to Chief Tomlin revealed that the Brown Berets had, on the deadline day of Feb. 16, not yet taken the necessary acquisition steps.

"We (in the Justice Department) have learned that minority groups frequently overlook local procedures for obtaining permission to have a demonstration for their cause. All I (Continued on Page 2A)"

Soil conservationists have work plowed out

The story has been told over and over. And still its message goes unheeded through much of this land. It's the story of the salvation of soil and water. The stock term is conservation.

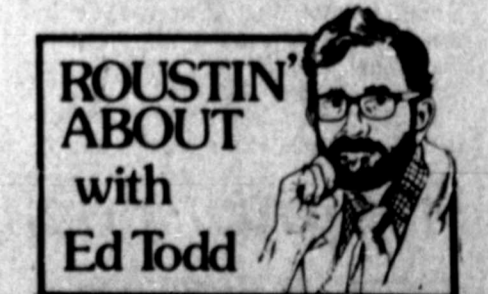

If you grew up on the farm or ranch, you knew about it long before you were caught up in 4-H, or, perhaps, later in FFA or FHA — the organizations for Future Farmers and Homemakers of America.

Or if you learned the ABCs of life in town or city, perhaps one of your first serious tune-ins with the subject of conservation was in writing a theme in an English composition class in junior high or high school.

Regardless, you got the message. It may have sunk in or run off the mind like water on a sloping plain.

And like the past, today there's a corps of people whose daily concern is "preaching" conservation to both tillers and non-tillers of the soil.

"Historically, Americans have exploited the soil and water resource," says Dick Hagelstein, a staunch member of that corps, which takes on many names and forms. Hagelstein is district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service (SCS) in Midland County. During the last century, the Manifest Destiny allowed for the conquering of the seemingly unlimited land of our forefathers. And too soon, our heritage of land and water has proven limited.

"Soil is a non-renewable resource," says conservationist Hagelstein. "That is the basic problem. Wind and water erosion have already ruined countless thousands of acres."

Much erosion is related directly to over-production and the wearing down of the soil. And marginal farm land, which might be more suitable for rangeland, is sped to ruin by the plow and cultivator.

Naturally, there are reasons for the (Continued on Page 2A) blood off his hands; changed into clothes he found in a closet, and took his bloody clothes out to the dumpster in the alley.

He found a checkbook in the bedroom. The body was discovered by Mrs. Abernathy's husband, Terry Abernathy, shortly after noon.

After Fox left the Abernathy home, he said in the confession, he went to a nearby supermarket to cash one of the stolen checks. Because he thought it would be easier to cash the check if he bought something, he purchased flowers — three carnations in a vase — for the girl he was taking to lunch.

He said he was so nervous he had to ask the checker to fill in the amount of the check. He signed the check "Terry Abernathy."

According to the statement of checker Dorothy Mae Duckworth, she asked for a driver's license and Fox told her he was too young to have a driver's license. He wrote the check for $37.78, $32 over the purchase price of the flowers.

Fox said he went home and changed clothes and then went back to the did was set the Brown Berets and Odessa city officials together," Cerny said.

Cerny admitted that the Community Relations Service had not been asked initially by the Brown Berets to intercede in the case.

"Half of the time people call us. The other part of the time we have to pick it up ourselves," Cerny said, adding that the enabling legislation for his agency stems from the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

"It's helpful for the police to know when and where these demonstrations will be. You can look at it (the agency's intervention) from that side of the coin too. It's not just one-sided. We were doing a real service for the (Odessa) police department," Cerny said.

Councilman Webster suggested Wednesday that the Justice Department pay the costs of the police escort since they wanted the permit.

"I'll be real interested to see who gets the permit Friday. I just want to see if it will be made out to Cerny, the Justice Department, the Brown Berets or who. Just out of curiosity, mostly," George said Thursday.

Alamo YMCA. He and three other people went to lunch, and he paid for the meals with the money from the check.

Fox was arrested the next day at his home, where police officers found the checkbook and some of the clothing taken from the Abernathy home.

After the hearing this morning, Martin explained why he had recommended the 50-year sentence.

Because state law specifically prohibits the death sentence for a crime committed while the offender is under 17, the only possible sentence for a capital murder conviction in this case would have been life in prison, Martin said.

And, under state parole laws, a life sentence is equivalent to 60 years because a person is eligible for parole after serving one-third of the sentence of 20 years, whichever is less.

The 50-year sentence would carry a minimum of 16 years and eight months in prison, Martin said.

Either sentence could be reduced further by "good time" credit granted by the Texas Department of Corrections, he said.

"When you get down to what the parole board will do, I can't tell. I don't know what a parole board will do in 15 years," he added.

"My thoughts are, he's going to do exploitation of the life-supporting top soil. The needs for food and fiber are on the increase. Accordingly, agricultural production also must show gains to keep up with the demands.

And healthy demands may be interpreted as good and profitable market prices for the farmers and ranchers, who may be enticed to put marginal land into production to take advantage of the relatively good market prices. If they over-produce, as has happened in the past, they may be beset with low prices.

Increasingly, too, more and more good land is being "taken up by urbanization," says Hagelstein. The conservative estimate is that at least one million acres of tillable land annually is covered by highways, airports, towns, new housing additions, shopping malls, industrial plants and the like. Ours is a growing and hungry nation.

"More undesirable land, then, is being used for crops," says Hagelstein.

... (and that) only creates more problems of erosion. This land is usually steeper, more shallow, and marginal for crop production.

One solution to that is "good management," which is many times easier to preach than to practice.

This part of West Texas is swept by the notorious windstorms, which are hardly manageable.

"In Midland County alone, a normal spring windstorm can result in a five-ton-per-acre loss on unprotected soil," says Hagelstein.

But if the whirling and blowing wind catches loose and tilled soil, sand and dirt are going to blow no matter how the rows are curved, the terraces laid or the hedgerows, if any, are running.

And many, like Dawson County cotton farmer Bennie Lybrand, just take the blowing in stride.

"It (the top soil) moves arounds, and somebody on the next farm catches it," says the let-it-happen farmer.

The basic lesson in soil and water conservation is "good management" to prevent the good soil "from blowing or washing away," says Hagelstein. It's no easy task.

Hagelstein likens the soil and water entrusted to us to a bank account: "When you continue to draw out of a bank account without making a deposit, you eventually run out of funds."

Unlike some of our land, conservation is not a worn-out subject. But all the sermonizing on it may be tiring to many.

between 15 and 20 years before he gets out on parole," the district attorney said.

"We agonized and studied the case over several months before deciding it was the proper thing to do," Martin said of the plea bargaining.

He said he believes the 50-year sentence has adequate deterrent effect. And, trial of the case would have taken three to six weeks, would have been expensive, and would have carried a risk of appeals which might have made it necessary to try the case again.

He said the emotional impact on the community of such a trial was a factor, as was the feelings of the Abernathy family.

"The family of this girl shouldn't have to relive this thing with a long drawn-out trial," Martin said, particularly "when all you really would be arguing about would be 10 years."

Fox was taken back to county jail, where he has been since the murder, to await transfer to the Texas Department of Corrections.

Court appointed defense attorney Tom Parker said Fox has a good attitude and plans to make use of the educational opportunities in prison.

Fox had finished his ninth-grade year at Austin Freshman School, where he was an athlete.

Webster takes FBI oath, makes vow to uphold law

By RONALD J. OSTROW
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Declaring that "the FBI exists to uphold the law," William H. Webster took the oath Thursday as its third director amid signs that the agency is recovering from a series of damaging disclosures.

Taking the oath from Chief Justice Warren E. Burger at a ceremony in FBI headquarters, and with President Carter looking on, Webster pledged that the bureau "will do the work the American people expect of us in a way the Constitution demands of us — so help us God."

Humor from Carter, Burger and Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell enlivened the ceremony in contrast to the 1973 scene in Kansas City when a beleaguered President Richard M. Nixon stood by as Clarence M. Kelley, Webster's predecessor, took the oath.

Carter, declaring that Webster's appointment was a matter of bipartisanship, said the new FBI chief is "a Republican, which proves his fallibility."

Carter said he could think of no other government position "that can have a more direct influence on the attitude of American people toward their own government."

The president, who was sharply critical of Kelley during the 1976 presidential campaign, turned to him on the speaker's platform Thursday and expressed "deep personal thanks to you for your tremendous contribution."

Burger, noting that Webster stepped down as a member of the U.S. 8th Circuit Court of Appeals to take the FBI post, chided Carter for raiding the ranks of the judiciary for some of his key appointments.

Carter drew laughs with his pledge not to "make any more incursions in the federal judiciary during my term of office for the director of the FBI" — a post with a 10-year term.

As Webster takes office, the FBI appears to have weathered major disclosures of investigative excesses and abuse of power by former officials. The Justice Department is in the final stages of a lengthy investigation into FBI break ins, committed during the early 1970s while agents were trying to apprehend Weatherman terrorists.

Bell, presenting Webster with a gold FBI badge, said: "It's a good thing I found this because you wouldn't be able to get in or out of the building," a reference to the tight security precautions at the FBI building.

"My pledge to all of you is that 10 years from now this badge will be just as bright and shiny as it is today," Webster said.

The invitation-only ceremony was so crowded with the elite of the national law enforcement, political and judicial establishments that Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee which oversees some elements of the FBI's work, could find only a last-row seat.

Carter Africa policy now more pragmatic

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is shifting the U.S. policy on Africa somewhat away from idealism toward a more practical approach with some "cold war" echoes. Carter seems to have come to the realization that the Soviet Union is playing hard ball in Africa.

Gradually the administration is moving toward accepting a transition to black rule in Africa it had seemed to be — but racism was.

"Don't get all paranoid about a few Communists, not even a few thousand Communists," Young advised.

As the conflict deepened between Ethiopia and Somalia, the United States adopted a hands-off policy. The administration hoped for a negotiated settlement through the Organization of African Unity and looked to Moscow to rein in Ethiopia, its new-found client.

Instead the Russians and the Cubans continued their buildup, providing Ethiopia with military might.

In Rhodesia, meanwhile, the administration is now hinting it is ready to join Britain in supporting an agreement reached by Prime Minister Ian Smith with Bishop Abel Muzorewa and other moderate black leaders, at least as a first step.

Negotiations with the radical Patriotic Front have not been productive and the Anglo-American plan to deal with the Front is in limbo.

While the administration still wants all black forces — including the Front — sharing in the settlement, the United States for the first time is publicly finding merit in the so called internal approach.

The new administration has seen the Cubans transport thousands of troops with Soviet arms to Ethiopia, giving the Marxist government a strength friendly Arabs could not provide Somalia.

Burned, the administration set the withdrawal of Cuban troops as the price for further progress on normalizing its relationship with Havana. The administration slowed down negotiations with the Russians over demilitarizing the Indian Ocean to make a political point.

An Analysis

Rhodesia worked out between the white-minority government and moderate black elements.

And the administration is little by little becoming convinced that in the troubled Horn of Africa the Russians intend to capitalize on the Ethiopia-Somalia conflict and cannot be counted on to support a peaceful settlement.

A year ago, Carter and his men were imbued with an idealism that led them, for example, to take a stand against white minority rule because it was the morally right thing to do.

But continued Russian and Cuban meddling and a muddled black line-up in breakaway Rhodesia have made the administration aware that, on the world scene, it often isn't enough just to be right.

The initial, upbeat mood was best exemplified by United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young, to whom Carter gave special responsibility for Africa.

Communism, Young said, was not the threat to

Another federal grab

Congress and various departments and agencies of the federal government continually are coming up with planned programs to regulate and control individuals, industries, local governmental units, land areas, and what-have-you.

Some of them are about as wild and way-out as one could imagine. Right now, for instance, the House Subcommittee on National Parks and Recreation is considering which rivers, proposed by President Carter, to recommend for inclusion in the Wild and Scenic River System under Section 2(a) (1) of Public Law 90-542.

This matter reaches way down into West Texas. It concerns the proposed designation of 191.2 miles of the Rio Grande as part of the Wild and Scenic River System.

This would place the United States side of the river, 191.2 miles of it, under National Park Service management, beginning inside the Big Bend National Park and extending to the Terrell-Val Verde county line, near Langtry.

It has been pointed out that this designation would halt all future development along the river on the U.S. side. It would take away from landowners and local government entities all decision-making powers for this particular area — again a stretch of 191.2 miles.

It is a designation which isn't needed, outside the Big Bend National Park, in the first place. Much of the area involved will remain "wild" regardless, but it should remain that way under private ownership. Any development along the "not-so-wild" river front property should be left to the discretion of the landowner.

This certainly is a matter of serious concern not only for West Texans but for all residents of the Lone Star State.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce has voiced its opposition to the designation, which amounts to another federal land grab. It is hoped that many other individuals and groups will express their views promptly to their senators and representatives, asking that the Rio Grande not be included under the Wild and Scenic River designation.

'Practical philosophy'

Congratulations are in order for Mrs. E.A. Culbertson who recently was named the Midland Altrusa Club's 1978 recipient of the Lucy Mashburn Memorial Award for Community Service.

Mrs. Culbertson, who was nominated by the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, has been active in so many worthwhile causes and has done so many wonderful things for countless numbers of persons, that she was a natural for the honor. She was among six persons nominated for the award.

The association, in nominating Mrs. Culbertson, said, "Marion Culbertson is a Christian woman who has demonstrated that 'love thy neighbor as thyself' is a practical philosophy. For the last 40 or more years, she has given unselfishly of her time, talents, gifts and money to about 28 organizations, boards, committees, councils and schools."

And the most important part is that she yet is just as interested in community affairs as ever.

She presently is busy in the Opportunity Center Auxiliary, which in 1976 presented her with a special Bicentennial award for work with the center; the Midland Kappa Kappa Gamma Alumnae; the Texas Association for Retarded Citizens, the National Association for Retarded Citizens, and MARC.

Her past affiliations with Tall City organizations are too numerous to mention in this space, but needless to say Mrs. Culbertson long has been busy in serving others. And Midland is a better community as a result of her unselfish, untiring efforts.

She is the recipient of many other honors, but one of the most significant was the inscribing of her name in the "Book of Golden Deeds" by the Exchange Club of Midland in 1973, in recognition of her longtime involvement in community service.

The awards she has received certainly are well-merited.

CHARLEY REESE:

Communists manipulate American Left with ease

By CHARLEY REESE
 Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — The ability of the Communists to manipulate the dumb American Left continues to dazzle me. Take South Korea for an example.

Recently and predictably, the United Nations decided that South Korea was one of the top violators of human rights in all the world. That, of course, is pure Communist propaganda.

Yet, as Accuracy in Media pointed out, in 1976, the New York Times and the Washington Post published 85 stories about South Korea's human rights record but only one on North Korea's.

The fact is, from no less liberal a source than the "New Republic," there are in South Korea jails about 200 political prisoners out of a population of 35 million.

Would you care to compare that to the prison population of the Soviet Union, Red China, Cuba, Panama, Uganda, Tanzania, Vietnam or Cambodia. Obviously, anybody with brains can see that the emphasis on South Korea's human rights record is misplaced.

Now the situation is this. The Communists want the U.S. out of South Korea so North Korea can invade it and make this strategic peninsula entirely Communist. They would like to do this because not only does the example of prosperity and relative freedom embarrass them, but more importantly, a Communist Korea would put tremendous pressure on Japan. A look at a map will tell you why. The main outlet of the Sea of Japan is through the Korean Straits.

Ultimately, the goal is a Communist Japan or a Japan allied to one of the Communist giants. When that happens, the U.S. can kiss the Pacific goodbye.

The dumb American Left it seems is always happy to help the Communists achieve their strategic goals. Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., leftwing extremist if there ever was one, has called repeatedly for a total U.S. withdrawal from South Korea — Air Force as well as Army.

Rep. Don Fraser, D-Minn., another lefty, has played it very cute with the Tongson Park scandal. You will recall that Fraser got a lot of publicity by releasing a "plan" for South Korea's Central Intelligence Agency to "manipulate" U.S. officials.

Oddly enough all the attention was focused on Tongson Park. But the fact is the whole gist of the KCIA plan was that North Korean agents and friends were stepping up their lobbying efforts in the U.S. and that some steps had to be taken to counter them.

The KCIA report listed the names of U.S. congressmen already in contact with North Korean agents. Fraser refused to make those names public, though he says he turned them over to the Ethics Committee.

The point I wish to make is that the entire emphasis has been aimed at Park's clumsy attempts to influence congressmen while the reason for Park's activity has been ignored. If we're going to be objective instead of leftist, we should pursue as vigorously the North Korean lobbying efforts.

But why, after all, is South Korea so nervous about the Congress? The reason is simple: they would like to continue living and enjoying the freedom they have. However authoritarian the South Korean president is, he is nothing compared to Kim Il-Sung, the North Korean fanatic.

President Carter has foolishly ordered the withdrawal of American ground forces. He has promised to keep the Air Force units there and to make up the disparity between South and North's armies with new military aid.

The military aid, however, must be voted on by the Congress and it was the Congress which cut off aid to Vietnam and blocked American action in Angola. Both countries are now Communist.

North Korea has a long border with Red China and a short one with the Soviet Union. No matter how well armed and well trained, South Korea's army must be resupplied by sea, without a firm U.S. commitment, they are dead.

Of course, McGovern says let them die. I wonder how long McGovern and the other liberal isolationists think we will last when all our allies are dead or red?

Byington also charges that Civil Service was trying to harass him with unproven allegations. This prompted personnel chief Dunn, who resigned for personal reasons, to fire off a confidential letter to Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky. "Until now I've preferred to make no comment," he wrote. ## WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Hospital serves more as memorial

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — F. Edward Hebert, the Louisiana curmudgeon who once presided over the House Armed Services Committee, was retired by the voters in 1976. He is gone, but not forgotten.

A lavish monument, the F. Edward Hebert Naval Hospital, has been erected in his honor in New Orleans. It is a classic example of how the brass hats routinely cave in to powerful congressmen who want to immortalize themselves at the public's expense.

The medical complex was initially planned as a 100-bed facility that would cost $11.7 million. But, like a snowball rolling downhill, the project kept getting bigger and bigger.

In 1974, an additional $3.4 million was appropriated for the facility. Another $3.1 million was added a year later. By the time the Hebert hospital opened in 1977, its total cost had skyrocketed to over $27 million. And it costs the taxpayers $7.7 million to run it.

Rep. Bob Carr, D-Mich., and two investigators for Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., paid a surprise visit to the hospital in January. On the day before the Super Bowl game, they found the facility virtually empty.

A tiny percentage of the hospital's total capacity, they found, is currently being used. Less than five patients per day have been admitted since the medical center opened.

"It is beautiful, expensive and shamefully under-utilized medical facility," wrote Carr and Downey in a letter to Navy Secretary Graham

Clayton. "Those who toured Hebert were astounded by the silence and the open space; the unused floors and the untouched rooms; the acres of unfilled parking spaces and the pristine emptiness of the entire facility." It appears, wrote the congressmen, that the Navy was "incredibly inept in its planning projections."

The Hebert hospital, congressional sources told us, "represents both a flaw in the congressional authorization-appropriations process and an extreme lack of judgment by the Navy Department."

Footnote: The commanding officer of the Hebert complex, Capt. F. C. Gregg, acknowledged to us that many beds at his facility are empty. But he insisted the installation was "very busy" with its extensive "out-patient services." A Navy spokesman added that a projected transfer of naval personnel to New Orleans never came about; therefore, "the hospital is not now fully utilized."

BYINGTON BOWS OUT: John Byington, the Republican chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, has grudgingly agreed to resign, effective this June. In a Nixon-like swan song, he blamed liberals and the media for hounding him out of office.

Byington cited our columns as an example of the "political harassment" that drove him from office. Since we were the only journalists he cited by name, his charges deserve a response.

We reported last October that the gregarious Byington awarded $17,000

INSIDE REPORT:

President Carter, coal strike and the Panama Canal

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The confusion among the President's men when the national coal strike unexpectedly landed in their laps can be traced to neglect of a foresighted warning voiced over lunch in the White House 10 months earlier.

Presidential aide Landon Butler told a luncheon companion in April that severe labor troubles would face the nation's coalfields by early winter; therefore, we must have advance contingency planning to handle it. That was the last word about coal at the White House until the strike came Dec. 6. While in charge of labor problems at the White House, the hard-working Butler has been almost totally occupied trying to get the Panama Canal treaties ratified.

So intense was White House preoccupation with the canal that no thought of what a prolonged coal strike could do to the country penetrated the presidential consciousness. So concerned were the Carter men with the political catastrophe of losing the canal treaties in the Senate that they totally ignored the political opportunity offered by the coal strike.

While failing to make long-term contingency plans for the predictable coal emergency, the Carter White House also seemed crippled over moving quickly for short-term gains. Until Mr. Carter finally bared his teeth last week to force the coal mine owners to the Oval Office, his conduct betrayed a costly lack of appreciation of presidential power and an unseemly fear of failure.

Herein lies much of what ails Jimmy Carter's presidency.

Having provided no advance planning on coal, the White House had no ready answer for pleas from coal state members of Congress as the strike dragged on. Sen. Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, a courtly Senate veteran of two decades, tried in his polite but persistent way to convince the President of the necessity for intervention.

But Randolph and other coal state lawmakers found the White House focused on Panama, far from the coalfields. "Why not?" one presidential adviser asked us. "If we lose the treaty, we're down the drain — finished. We have been spending all our time on Panama, and rightly so. The whole administration is at stake."

Moreover, the White House was relying for advice primarily on Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall, a University of Texas professor just one year ago with no experience in big-time labor negotiations. Marshall not only urged the President to stay out but warned that coal miners probably would not obey a Taft-Hartley back-to-work order from Mr. Carter. The Carter team, after recent setbacks measurably less self-confident than a year ago, wanted no test of Marshall's prediction.

This was followed by an ostrich-like period of pretending the crisis was not brewing. Pressure escalated from Congress, including two formal letters to the President from the Ohio delegation begging for intervention.

On Feb. 10, as it became apparent that the bargaining council of the United Mine Workers (UMW) would reject the negotiated settlement, Marshall tried to justify his position to the Senate-House Economic Committee by contending "you have to demonstrate national emergency" to invoke Taft-Hartley. "Turning out the lights in Ohio..." asked Rep. Clarence J. Brown of Ohio. "That is not a national emergency," shot back Marshall. In response to Brown's question about Wright-Patterson Air Base in Dayton, Marshall said that too was "a local question."

But when the UMW's bargaining council overwhelmingly rejected the settlement Feb. 12, even Marshall conceded the President must act. Landon Butler and his boss, top presidential aide Hamilton Jordan, momentarily put Panama aside and devised a call from Mr. Carter for bargaining at the White House. So low had respect for the President's power slipped by now, however, that the coal operators responded with a rude rejection.

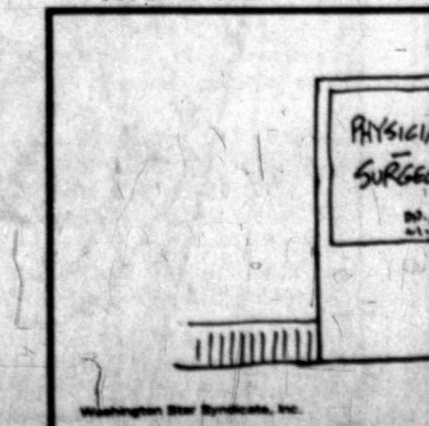

What came next was a tactical exercise of presidential power for the first time in the coal crisis. While Sen. Randolph was soft-soaping the coal operators to be reasonable, the White House threatened them with a tough presidential speech over national television that very night. They quickly capitulated.

But the dramatic impact of Mr. Carter's muscling was softened by the impression that he had been dragged into action kicking and screaming. In April 1964, with public confidence in his four-month-old presidency flagging, Lyndon Johnson revived it by exuberantly leaping into a railroad strike and settling it. In February 1978 Jimmy Carter failed to perceive a similar opportunity.

Mr. Carter's handling of the coal strike, therefore, illuminates internal complaints about the way his White House functions. At first failing to anticipate a national crisis, the President and his men next missed a chance to build public confidence. Since Mr. Carter himself feels the republic can ill afford another foiled President, this transcends even the economic hardship of not enough coal.

Proposed reactivation of base has English astir

By WILLIAM TUOHY
The Los Angeles Times

GREENHAM COMMON, Eng. — In the dark days of World War II, U.S. B-17 bombers from the airstrip here flew in the aerial armada that carried the war to Hitler's Fortress Europe.

American pilots were welcomed then by the local residents, who saw them as the first line of defense of embattled England.

Today, however, Greenham Common in the gentle Berkshire Downs is the focus of a fierce local dispute over proposed reactivation of the air base.

The U.S. Air Force has requested that Greenham Common, now a 10,000-foot jet strip, be used by 15 aerial tankers as a permanent base from which to refuel U.S. aircraft based at other English airfields. All are elements of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's defense shield in Western Europe.

The local citizenry are sympathetic to NATO's defensive requirement and the need for U.S. air bases in England. It is just that many of them do not want the aircraft right here in their quiet, rabbit-filled fields near Watership Down.

The opposition, which includes the two Conservative Party members of Parliament for the area, say that reactivating the base for KC-135 refueling tankers would result in unacceptably noisy and potentially dangerous aerial operations.

The noise of some seven to 15 takeoffs a day would far outweigh the advantages of the dollars spent by the estimated 600 airmen who would be based here, they say, as well as the 250 jobs provided for the locals.

"Nobody has anything against the Americans or NATO around here," one local resident said. "It boils down to how the presence of base would affect you."

"If you're a publican or shopkeeper you would probably welcome the additional business. If you're a homeowner whose values might be affected by the noise, you wouldn't want the base reopened. That's just human nature, and that's what the argument is all about."

The organized opponents to reactivating the base say that property values would decline as much as $2 million because of the noise and the crash potential of a fuel-laden tanker.

Proponents say that the reopened airfield would mean an infusion of some $2 million a year into the local economy.

"If this goes ahead," warned one member of Parliament, Michael McNair-Wilson, "There will be a tremendous disadvantage for the area. These takeoffs will be devastating in a high-population area."

The Ministry of Defense has forwarded the U.S. Air Force application to the government for a decision. But, finding that the issue has become a political hot potato, the government is not expected to decide very quickly.

Greenham Common, about 40 miles west of London, is one of about 160 airfields used by the American bombers and fighters during World War II.

The British Bomber Command operated at night but the U.S. 8th Air Force sent its planes against Germany on high-altitude daylight strikes.

The raids deep into Germany sometimes resulted in appalling losses to the crews, as fictionalized in such movies as "Twelve O'Clock High."

At the peak strength in late 1944 and early 1945, the U.S. 8th and 9th Air Forces in Britain totaled some 380,000 men and 7,400 aircraft.

"At a couple of thousand feet altitude," recalled one Air Force historian, "you could see an airfield in every direction."

After World War II, most of the bases were closed and the men and airplanes sent back to the United States or to the Pacific. But the Royal Air Force museum at one of the old B-17 Flying Fortresses preserved.

During the Berlin blockade, some of the World War II bases were reopened, and B-29 bombers of the Strategic Air Command were temporarily based in Britain.

Greenham Common, with one of the longest runways in Britain — more than 10,000 feet long — later became the base for B-47 jet bombers of the Strategic Air Command.

But when those jets were phased out in 1964, the base reverted to a "stand-by" field, used only intermittently during NATO exercises.

The need for an extra tanker air base stems from President Carter's decision last year to increase NATO's effectiveness by beefing up the number of fighter-bombers in Europe and cutting down the time needed to reinforce NATO with aircraft from the United States.

The United States is providing about 80 extra combat aircraft. The tankers are needed to refuel them for their operations over European skies as well as to provide replenishment over the North Atlantic to aircraft rotating back and forth.

The tankers would also give the Military Airlift Command's huge C-5As the capability to reach the Middle East from the United States without having to land for fuel en route.

"We need a new tanker base but German airspace is congested now to the point of saturation," explained a senior officer. "France has not let NATO aircraft use bases there since De Gaulle pulled out of the integrated NATO command. So Britain is the only answer."

Poll reveals public against strike

NEW YORK (AP) —

By better than a 2-to-1 margin, Americans support invoking the Taft-Hartley Act to put at least a temporary end to the strike in the nation's coalfields, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

Obtaining a court injunction ordering miners back to work is one option under consideration by President Carter to end the strike by 160,000 members of the United Mineworkers Union.

In telephone interviews Tuesday and Wednesday, 65 percent said Carter should seek the back-to-work injunction.

About 28 percent said Carter should not seek the remedies allowed by the law. Seven percent said they were not certain what Carter should do.

The back-to-work thrust of the Taft-Hartley Act was described briefly for authority to order the interviewed by telephone, miners back to work while an arbitration panel works out a contract and declaring an emergency. Carter said Thursday impasse in the negotiations, which would allow the union to negotiate further in coal strike at this time.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act, Carter can establish a fact-finding panel to determine if the strike more than 100 coal companies that make up the emergency. If the board Bituminous Coal Association.

More than 60 percent of the residents of each of the major regions of the country were in favor of invoking the act.

Congressional leaders about other possible Carter actions.

The survey found support for invocation of the law cut across party, income, education, racial and regional lines.

For example, Republicans, Democrats and independents were roughly equal in their support for a back-to-work order, as were those who described themselves as liberal, moderate and conservative.

More than 60 percent of the residents of each of the major regions of the country were in favor of invoking the act.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — "He was proud of what he was doing," 16-year-old Buster Doherty said of his Texas Ranger father, who was buried Thursday in a windswept, country cemetery, surrounded by his saddened colleagues.

Scores of law enforcement officers from across Texas and some from neighboring Oklahoma descended on an overflowing Baptist church here to pay their final respects to Ranger Bob Doherty, 41, slain Monday night during a drug raid.

Gregory Arthur Ott, 27, a North Texas State University graduate student, has been charged with capital murder after the shooting outside his house in the North Texas town of Argyle.

Doherty was the first member of the famed, elite group of officers since 1931 to be killed in the line of duty.

In July 1918 a Ranger was killed near San Augustine and in July 1931 another fell near Gladewater.

"He has given so much," the Rev. Jesse Leonard, the family pastor, told the Ranger's family and friends. "When he became a Ranger, he has lived, all of us leave here determined to do more."

From the church, a motorcycle escort and scores of state police cars and other official units caused horses to skitter in nearby pastures as they rolled through the woodlands northwest of town to a secluded country cemetery.

There, two Rangers removed the red-white-and-blue Texas flag from the coffin, folded it neatly and presented it to Doherty's wife, Carolyn. She appeared near tears.

At her side were Buster and the couple's daughter, Kelly, 18. Doherty's mother sat quietly staring at the closed coffin.

Among those attending were Texas Attorney General John Hill and Col. Wilson Speir, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Doherty had been with the DPS for 20 years, and was promoted to the Rangers about a year and a half ago.

Mrs. Doherty said her husband always wanted to be a Texas Ranger.

"When Bob first started in law enforcement, he figured the Rangers were top in the field," she said. "When he became a Ranger, he didn't change."

Mrs. Doherty said she told her, "I'll see there were many times you as soon as I can." she suspected her husband might be in danger but that she was reluctant to ask questions.

"Sometimes you didn't want to ask the question because you didn't want to know the answer," she said.

When her husband left home Monday night she decover agents had gone to Ott's home after receiving a tip that he and a roommate were selling marijuana.

The officers purchased a quantity of marijuana, George said, but Ott and the roommate attempted to flee through a back door. Ott allegedly fired a shot through the door, hitting Doherty.

Grand jury indicts El Paso sheriff, aide

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — El Paso County Sheriff Mike Sullivan and his chief aide face official misconduct indictments returned against them by an El Paso County grand jury.

The charges against Sullivan, who has been sheriff here for 13 years, and the charges against Chief Deputy Stuart Palos stemmed from a three-month grand jury investigation spurred by a series of articles in the El Paso Times concerning a federally funded job training program.

Both were named in two counts accusing them of official misconduct. A third sheriff's department official, Capt. Everett Riley was named in four counts accusing him of theft over $200.

Also indicted by the same grand jury were two corporations, one naming Industrial Hardware and Supply and another against Thomas Paints of El Paso. They are accused of theft over $200. Sheriff Sullivan, Palos and Riley were released by State District Court Judge Jerry Woodard after they posted $5,000 bond on each count.

The indictments against the corporations were not delivered Thursday, according to Capt. Mac Stout, chief of the sheriff's criminal division.

Although the specifics of the indictments against Sullivan and his employees were not immediately made public, the El Paso newspaper earlier alleged in a series of stories that trainees from a federally funded job training program performed work on homes owned by the law enforcement officers.

Butz keeps busy with lecture tours

By BARBARA HERRERA
Copley News Service

Earl Butz, stumping the country like the evangelist he once aspired to be, keeps almost as busy now as when he was secretary of agriculture.

He crisscrosses the nation lecturing on the evils of big government, reportedly pulling from $100 to $3,000 for each lecture.

He stars at Republican $500-a-plate fund-raisers, exhorting party faithful to throw the Democrats out of Washington.

He uses his own radio program — a syndicated show beamed nationally to about 60 stations — to preach the gospel of free enterprise.

All of this public interest continues to focus on Butz despite his resignation from President Ford's Cabinet 16 months ago because of public indignation over a racial slur he made during a private conversation.

The point is not lost on Butz. He explains his current popularity with the contention that his audiences, particularly the farmers who make up the bulk of them, agree with his basically conservative stance.

"I call for the need to keep the private sector strong and people basically believe that," And he adds:

The way the current crowd in Washington manages the current agricultural affairs makes the previous government look better by the week.

"Somehow, the farmers identify me with the best times they ever had."

He remembered with a smile a bumper sticker which, he said, a friend reported seeing in Kansas City, Mo. The bumper sticker reads: "We want our Butz back."

Now 68, Butz appears hearty, relaxed and as caustic as in the days when his blunt remarks on behalf of farmers were being counted on to bring in the farm vote for Ford's election campaign.

Indirectly referring to Watergate figure John Dean as a skunk, he said that he is not bitter over the controversy that arose after Dean's disclosure in a national magazine that Butz had made an off-color racial slur.

But he suggested that his major mistake was in making the comment in front of Dean. The comment had been made during a conversation with Dean and singer Pat Boone onboard a plane after the Republican National Convention.

"The great bulk of newspaper reporters in America are responsible, dedicated people," Butz said. "Once in awhile you run into a skunk. I ran into a skunk."

Besides making about 200 speaking appearances this year, the former agriculture secretary is also on the board of three corporations and is a commodities consultant for a New York brokerage firm.

His five-minute radio program, "Earl Butz' Commentaries," is syndicated out of Los Angeles by the same firm that produces the Ronald Reagan show, and is expected to soon reach 125 stations.

Butz and his wife, Mary, have moved back to their home in West Lafayette, Ind. He gives occasional classes at nearby Purdue University where he is dean emeritus of agriculture. That means, he said, "that I give the classes but don't have to grade the papers."

During a recent press conference, Butz rapped

Carter administration farm policies and politicians in general with enough sarcasm to resemble somebody running for office.

"People keep asking me what I'm running for," he acknowledged. "I say that I'm campaigning for good government."

He reserved particular sarcasm for the Congress. "By far the weakest branch of the government is the U.S. Congress," he said. "The congressmen have no sense of fiscal responsibility, no concept of national interest."

Dad should know Mom smokes pot

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Copley News Service

Dear Doctor: I came home from school early yesterday because I had a headache, and, of course, my mom was not expecting me.

When I entered the house, I heard mom run into her bedroom and lock the door. I thought this was odd but then I sniffed an odd smelling smoke and I realized mom was smoking. Not only was she smoking but she was smoking pot. I saw one of the butts in an ashtray and opened it up.

At this point, I am totally in a daze. Actually, my mom and dad are not smokers and I have never seen either smoking.

After this discovery, I went to my room and fell asleep crying.

I'm very confused and don't know what to do. Please help me with my problem. — Confused, Seattle, Wash.

Dear Confused: You don't have a problem, mother does. Confront mother immediately telling her what you saw. Offer your help. If she refuses, tell your father.

I know it is an uncomfortable dilemma for you, but it must be done. If she accepts your help, encourage her to share her problem with father.

Dear Doctor: To my horror, I found out my older brother who is 19 is selling LSD. I overheard him making a contact on the phone. When I told him about it, he said he only sold LSD, not other drugs and that it was not dangerous.

He swore me to secrecy with our parents.

I'm really troubled. Please, help me soon! — Jackie, San Mateo, Calif.

Dear Jackie: Federal law provides strict penalties for the sale of LSD. Anyone over 18 who sells the drug may be sentenced to six years in prison and fined up to $15,000.

There is evidence that LSD may cause temporary psychotic episodes and may damage human chromosomes, causing users to risk birth defects in their children.

Give these facts to your brother, and share this dilemma with your clergyman immediately.

Dear Doctor: I was really embarrassed by my father's actions yesterday in a restaurant. Our family went out for dinner in our favorite restaurant. The owners know us and always give us excellent service because we eat there about once a week.

While mother was saying hello to the owner, father walked up to an empty table and took a quarter that was left for a tip. He then replaced the quarter with one of his out of his pocket.

When we were seated I told daddy he was wrong in swapping quarters. He said, "Nonsense." That 25 cents was left for a tip and the waitress received 25 cents.

Who was right? — Julie, York, Pa.

Dear Julie: In this case you are right.

Earth had many long ice ages

By BOB CORBETT
Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Our solar system has probably passed through a series of dense galactic clouds that would have turned the Earth into a kind of giant frozen snowball.

Two University of Colorado scientists say studies indicate that the solar system may have had as many as 15 such encounters with large clouds of molecular hydrogen.

The researchers reported to the recent annual meeting of the American Geophysical Union here just what those encounters may have meant to the Earth's climate.

The result, they said, is that Earth would have plunged into a "super ice age" that might have lasted more than 100,000 years.

The report was made by Dr. Gary Thomas, an astrophysicist, and a predoctoral candidate, Christopher McKay.

Florine E. King

Florine E. King, 61, of 2306 Cimmaron Drive died this morning in a Lubbock hospital. She had been in failing health several years.

Services are pending at Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. King was born Nov. 26, 1916, in Floydada and grew up there. She attended Texas Tech University and was graduated in 1942 with a degree in home economics. She taught at schools in McAdoo, Eagle Pass and Hobbs, N.M. In 1952, she moved to Midland from Hobbs. While living here, she taught at schools in Stanton 20 years. She was a member of the Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Survivors include her husband, M. C. King; a daughter, Carole Cope of Carlsbad, N.M.; her mother, Nell E. May of El Paso; a brother, Leland May of El Paso, and a grandchild.

Elizabeth Bowles

HOUSTON — Services for Elizabeth Griffiths Bowles, 58, of Houston, mother of Mrs. Jack (Barbara) Nini of Midland, were held Sunday in St. Martin's Episcopal Church here with the Rev. J. Thomas Bagby officiating.

Mrs. Bowles died Feb. 17. A native of Austin, she was a longtime resident of Houston.

Other survivors include her husband, a daughter, a sister and five grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be made to Neurosensory Center, 6515 Bertner, Houston 77030.

Frank Bittle

HEBER SPRINGS, Ark. — Services for Frank Bittle of Greers Ferry, Ark., a former school teacher at Lamesa public schools, were held Monday in a funeral home here.

Bittle died Feb. 17 in a Heber Springs hospital.

Survivors include his wife, Lynn Bittle; three sons, Gordon Bittle, Walter Bittle and Lyndon Bittle, all of California, three sisters, a brother, two half brothers and five grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be made to the Gideons International Bible Fund.

Mrs. Alexander

HALE CENTER — Services for Georgia Ruth Alexander, 61, of Hale Center, sister of Bill Pagan of Ozona, were to be at 4 p.m. today in Hale Center First Baptist Church. The Rev. Carrol Green, pastor, and the Rev. M. V. Davis Jr. of Calvary Baptist Church in Plainview, were to officiate.

Burial was to be in Hale Center Cemetery directed by Freeman Funeral Home.

Mrs. Alexander died Wednesday in a Hale Center hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was a native of Scurry County and a member of First Baptist Church here. She married Woody Alexander Jan. 2, 1971, in San Antonio.

Other survivors include her husband, a son, three daughters, a brother, a sister, and 14 grandchildren.

Jack Howell

LUBBOCK — Services for Jack Howell, 59, father of James Howell of Midland, will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in the First Baptist Church of Lubbock with the Rev. J. T. Bolding, retired Baptist minister, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park directed by Sanders Funeral Home.

Howell died Wednesday in a Temple hospital following a lengthy illness.

He moved to Lubbock in 1951. He was a veteran of World War II.

Other survivors include his wife and two sisters.

Alfred Greany

Private services for Alfred G. Greany, 59, of 2007 W. Golf Course Road were Tuesday in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home with Father Andrew Marthaler, chaplain of the Veterans Administration Hospital in Big Spring, officiating. Burial was in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Greany died Sunday in a Big Spring hospital following a brief illness.

He was born April 18, 1918, in Atlanta, Ga. He was a graduate of Yale and Columbia School of Law. He served in the Army during World War II. After his discharge, he and his wife moved to New York City and to Midland in 1955.

Survivors include two daughters, Sammy Brunette of Crane and Dorothy Gaines of Midland; a sister, Hallie Child of Mesa, Ariz.; six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Burglary charge bond set

Bond was set Thursday by Peace Justice John Biggs at $10,000 each for Sammy Almager, 28, and Federico Benito Lopez, 22.

Almager and Lopez have been charged with burglary of a habitation.

They were arrested Wednesday afternoon at Tall City Apartments in connection with an alleged burglary Tuesday night of a residence in the 700 block of Dormard Avenue, according to police. Approximately $3,700 worth of household items was taken in the burglary.

Police said all of the missing items have been recovered.

Valuables stolen

ANDREWS — An employee of Andrews Lumber Co. discovered Thursday morning when he came to work that someone had broken into the building and stolen about $2,300 worth of tools, according to Andrews police.

Police said entry had been gained by kicking in a door.

Among the tools taken were several chain saws and drills.

No arrests have been made.

Pardoned men await recompense for 12 years spent in prison

MIAMI (AP) — Freddie Pitts and Wilbert Lee spent 12 years and 48 days in prison waiting to be proved innocent of murder. Pardoned 2½ years ago, they are again waiting — this time for legislation that would award them $75,000 apiece for their time behind bars.

"They can't pay me and Pitts for the time we spent in prison," says Lee, a child care worker at Dade County's detention center. "But they can give us something to get a start."

Sponsors of the legislation recall the racial tension created by the slayings in Port St. Joe, a small town in the Florida panhandle, and admit its prospects are uncertain. But there are signs opposition is softening.

"I've grown older and wiser," says Senate President Lew Brantley, who refused to let claims bills for Pitts and Lee reach the Senate floor when he served as rules chairman in 1976. Brantley says he will now accept the guidance of the hearing officer.

Lee, then 28, Pitts, then 19, and several other blacks argued with attendants at the MoJo service station who refused to let some black women use a rest room marked "White Ladies Only."

Hours later, the attendants, Jesse Burkett, 54, and Grover Floyd Jr., 28, were found shot to death. Pitts and Lee were arrested, and they told a jury they were guilty. They were sentenced to die.

They later recanted, saying they confessed because they were beaten. Two Army sergeants who visited Pitts — then a soldier — reported he looked as if he had been severely beaten.

Youth Centers' program topic of Rotary Club speakers

The Youth Center program is a good one, providing "supervised recreational facilities for high school students," members of the Downtown Rotary Club were told Thursday noon at their meeting in the Midland Hilton.

The principal speaker was John Ochsner, chairman of the adult board of directors of the Tall City's two Youth Centers — Midland High and Lee High.

Ochsner was joined by Ty Hughston, a Youth Center member, in reviewing briefly the overall purpose, program, services and operation of the centers.

A series of slides showing the two centers "in operation" was presented by Gregg Parr, another YC member.

Two other members — Susan Dakil and Victoria Igou — also were introduced.

It was announced that the two Youth Centers will join in presenting Larry Gatlin, nationally known Western singer, in concert in the Midland High School Auditorium on March 15, as a fund-raising event. Tickets now are on sale by Youth Center members.

Firemen ask pay increase

LAMESA — Firemen recently petitioned the city council to increase salaries with that of city policemen.

A letter furnished to councilmen said that firemen's salaries are considerably lower than those of policemen.

Royce Dyess, assistant fire marshal, said salaries in the two departments had been compared because they felt both departments were performing essentially the same function, protecting life and property.

Base salary for a police officer is $801 per month. Base pay for firemen is $680 per month.

CF Girls prepared Dad's favorite meal

It was that special time of the year again for 300 Camp Fire Girls and their fathers attending the annual father and daughter box supper held by the Midland Council of Camp Fire Girls, Inc.

Each group made their own table decorations, decorated boxes for "Dad's favorite meal," and prepared a skit as part of the entertainment.

Carl Pirkle acted as master of ceremonies. Mrs. Claudine Greer's Adventure group sang the blessing. After the meal, the fathers and girls viewed a slide presentation by Joe Wyatt, resident camp director for Camp Monakiwa.

Dewey Baucum was selected "Big Chief Daddy," who served as honorary Camp Fire Dad for the night.

The skits were based on the theme "Children's Stories."

"Big Chief Daddy" Dewey Baucum is with Camp Fire Girl Kathryn Wade.

UT professor researches dual-career families

AUSTIN, Texas — Dr. Isabella Cunningham is a textbook example of the sort of woman she has been concerned about in her research—the career-oriented professional who as a wife and mother also manages a household.

She is interested not only in such a woman's ability to cope with the various demands of career and home, but also the sort of input she has into family decision making.

An associate professor of advertising at the University of Texas, Dr. Cunningham is also a lawyer, the wife of Dr. William Cunningham, associate professor of marketing, and the mother of a son.

She has been conducting research on dual-career families—much like her own—with Dr. Robert Green, associate professor of marketing.

Currently they are applying through the Austin Women's Center to the U.S. Department of Labor for a grant which would enable them to expand their research to a nationwide project.

"We are looking at the differences in input in family decision making between women who view work as a career versus women who work because of the need for money or whatever other reason," she explains.

Dr. Cunningham points out that although increasing numbers of women are joining the work force, the relative increase in numbers of women who are entering professions has been even greater.

The results of their research will have not only economic importance, they believe, but also special importance, with implications for family life. Research such as theirs can help people where they need it—in coping.

"Most people can't cope with the pressure coming from all sides," says Dr. Cunningham. "The reason they can't cope is there has not been enough study done to identify all the problems."

The people of Mandapakala are in desperate need of compassion: The village lost 2,000 of its 3,000 residents. A 18-foot-high tidal wave swept up mudwalled houses, drowned livestock and carried the living and the dead several miles farther inland.

Many survivors wandered aimless-

VIJAYAWADA, India (AP) — "Thank God they are coming back."

The voice, soft but assertive, belongs to Mother Teresa, the Yugoslav-born nun who has been called a living saint, Calcutta's saint of the gutters.

All around her the frail and wretched survivors of India's November cyclone and tidal wave disaster trickle back to Mandapakala, one of the hardest hit villages in the low-lying delta of southeast India. They carry materials to rebuild their homes.

"It shows they've got the right spirit," Mother Teresa says gently. "The task of rebuilding after destruction, despite their immense grief, is a healthy sign."

The 67-year-old founder of the Missionaries of Charity order adopted the once prosperous farming community which had been all but flattened by the storm. The village was piled with corpses the day Mother Teresa arrived to supervise relief operations.

She came, she says, "only to distribute the Lord's compassion."

"It's hard to say no to a living saint," says one official in Vijayawada, a local government center and the base for cyclone relief operations. "Few are left unaffected by Mother Teresa's charisma," adds a priest.

"Where there is tragedy, there is salvation. Even when the mother cries, the child finds happiness. That is the circle of life. It is eternal."

Mother Teresa

ly about the village or picked through rubble in search of a pot to hold water or boil rice.

A short woman with boundless determination, she counts on daily miracles to see her work succeed.

There were, for instance, the airline tickets made available without cost to fly her and seven sisters part of the way from her headquarters in Calcutta.

There was the "miracle" on the road to Vijayawada. Mother Teresa found a group of doctors, stranded when their car broke down. They decided on the spot to join her relief operations in the storm-ravaged villages of Andhra Pradesh state.

Perhaps "God's gifts," as she calls them, do play a part in her work here or with lepers, the maimed and the destitute in numerous Indian cities and 14 other countries. But if they are miracles, their catalyst is found in the personal magnetism of her now Indian-accented speech and the gaze of her pale blue eyes.

In Mandapakala, about 55 miles south of Vijayawada, sat a woman in a shattered hut calling to Mother Teresa, who was surveying the storm damage. The woman had lost her husband and all but one of their children in the tidal wave.

She pointed to her surviving child, a 6-year-old deaf mute, and asked, "What will I do with him? Is he worth anything?"

The boy approached the Roman Catholic nun in her blue-bordered, home-spun sari-like habit and played with her wooden rosary. Mother Teresa gathered him up in her arms and, unable to speak, he gurgled with joy.

"See, the child is happy," she told the distraught woman, calming her.

Turning to those accompanying her, Mother Teresa went on, "Where there is tragedy, there is salvation. Even when the mother cries, the child finds happiness. That is the circle of life. It is eternal."

Mother Teresa is loath to speak of herself, but the general facts of her life are well known in India.

She was born Aug. 27, 1910 in Skopje, Yugoslavia, to Albanian shopkeepers who named her Agnes Gonxha Bejaxhiu. At age 12, she decided to become a nun and six years later joined the Sisters of Loreto, an Irish order, which sent her to India in 1928 to teach.

On Sept. 10, 1946, she was riding a train to the northeast Indian hill retreat of Darjeeling when she heard a call to "serve Him among the poorest of the poor."

Moved by the plight of Calcutta's unnumbered destitute, she requested and received permission to live outside the comfortable Loreto convent. In 1947, Mother Teresa moved into the city's slums and set up her first school. The following year, she took Indian citizenship and was given permission by Rome to start the Missionaries of Charity.

The city of Calcutta, after prodding by Mother Teresa, gave her a house next to a Hindu temple where derelicts "could die in peace, in human dignity and touched for once by the love of God."

It was called "The Home of the Dying Destitute." It created an uproar when it opened in 1952 and presented Mother Teresa with her first big challenge.

Welfare drives couple to consider divorce

By LEIGH FENLY
Copley News Service

Q. When is a divorce the solution to a happy marriage?

A. When people get caught in the cold, inflexible world of welfare regulations.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — Howard and Linda Reed are considering a divorce. They have been happily married for two years.

During an interview, he periodically reaches for her hand in a rare, gentle way. She seems to instill courage in him.

But in order to live life above the poverty level, they feel their only option is to divorce one another. It's a classic Catch 22 case involving the bureaucratic entanglement of insurance companies, the Welfare Department, Medi-Cal, Medicare and Social Security.

Howard Reed, 33, a man of lumberjack stature, depends on a dialysis machine for survival. He was born with only one kidney, which began to malfunction in his 20s. In 1969 he had a transplant — a kidney donated by his father. But after two miserable years with bouts of hepatitis and cataracts, that kidney also failed.

Dialysis began again. Three times a week. Four hours a treatment.

Reed says he has become philosophical in the last years, and that his life is as normal as he can expect. "I spent five years beating my head against a wall, trying to avoid the fact that this had happened. Now I take one thing at a time, and I try to understand one thing at a time. But it's at times like this that you have to call out for help."

Reed's dialysis treatment costs about $25,000 a year. The Reeds relied on health coverage from a private insurance company until it went bankrupt in November, leaving them with $1,400 in unpaid medical expenses. They turned to Medicare for 80 percent of the dialysis cost.

Linda, 27, who makes $500 a month as a bookkeeper, draws too much money for the couple to gain any benefit from Medi-Cal, which often covers the remaining 20 percent. In effect, they have a $400 deductible insurance policy with Medi-Cal — they must pay the first $400 per month. Their medical costs are now averaging $360 a month and there is no agency to help them with it.

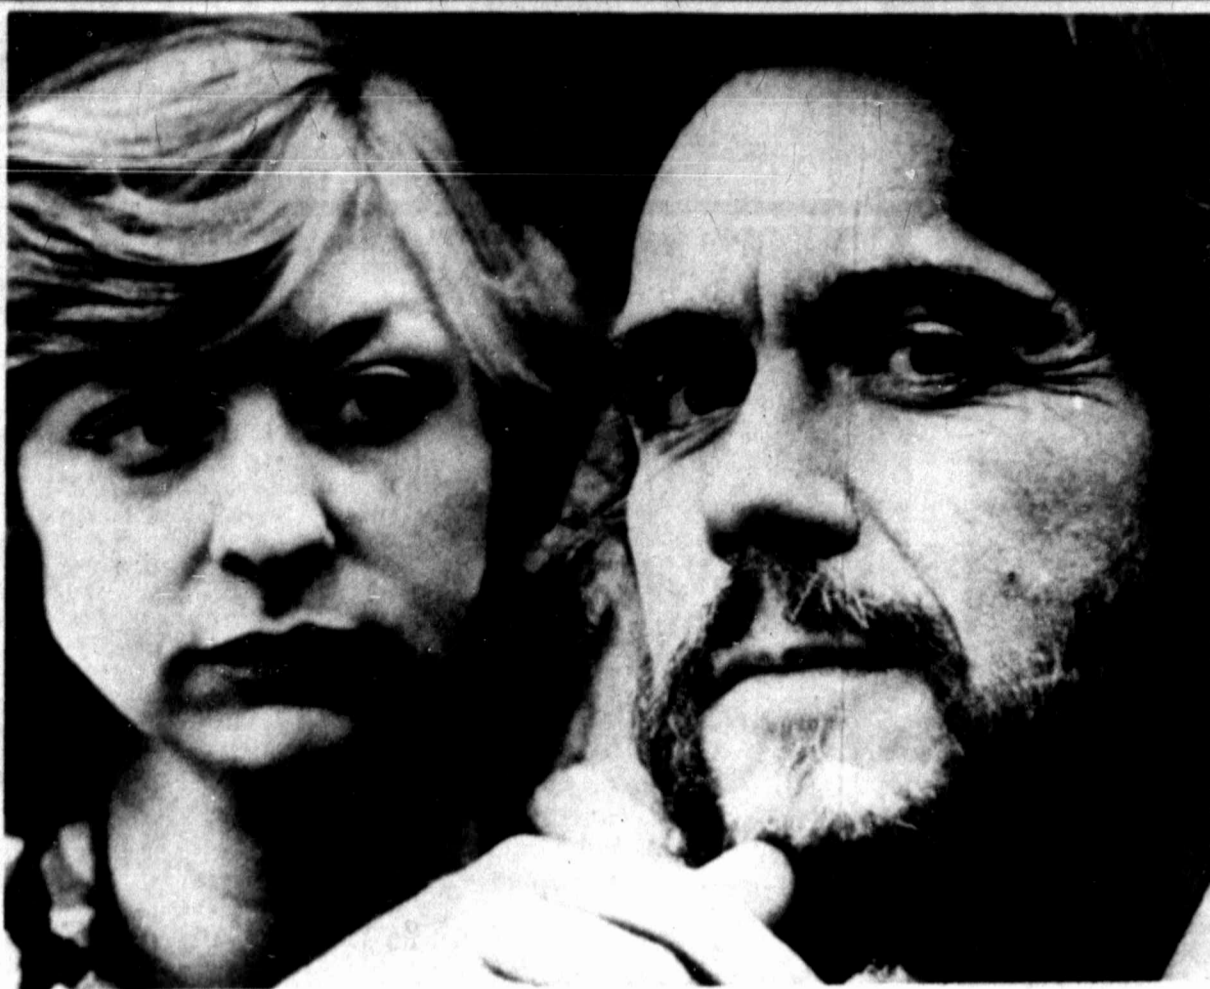

"I can buy the groceries and pay the rent," Linda fumes. "but I can't pay $360 a month in medical bills. And I don't think anyone who signed that bill into effect could, either."

In a softer voice, Howard echoes her: "We don't want anything for nothing. We want to work and pay as much as we can. We want to make a decent living. But we need some help, that's all." A former construction worker, Howard is unemployed because, he says "it's hard to find anybody who'll take risk with me."

The Reeds have two solutions. Linda can quit her job, at which time Howard would receive full medical coverage. They would receive $383 a month from Social Security disability for the two of them to live on. They don't think they can make it on that.

The other solution is to divorce.

A divorce would mean that Howard could draw about $280 a month in disability and be covered for total medical costs. Linda could keep her salary, even if the pair lived together.

Feminists bring discrimination fight to media advertising

By BETTY LIDDICK
the Los Angeles Times

Feminists have challenged discrimination against women in the voting booth and board room, on the athletic field and assembly line. In one of their latest and perhaps most difficult fights, they are moving in on the media to protest what they believe to be degrading, possibly harmful images of women.

Though their campaign has brought some changes in advertisers' thinking, it predictably has generated controversy and, for hte women, a continuing struggle to raise public consciousness.

—Members of the New York Chapter of Women Against Violence Against Women (WAWAW) a national organization of 1,000-members, recently demonstrated outside the Finnair Ticket office on Fifth Ave. The women, who are working to end "the gratuitous use of images and of physical and sexual abuse in mass media," protested the airline's ad in the Jan. 30 issue of New York magazine. It read, "How Vilho Vatanen, the Finn, created the world's first suana when he locked his wife in the smokehouse, set it on fire, beat her soundly with birch leaves, and discovered she loved it."

—Members of the Los Angeles Chapter of WAWAW last month picketed Barron's Hair Studio City, Calif., denouncing the shop's ad in the January issue of Los Angeles magazine. The ad showed a male model with one gloved hand around a female model's throat.

Various feminists groups last fall wrote Max Factor and Co. Cosmetics in Hollywood. They opposed billboards promoting a Factor moisturizer called Self Defense. "A pretty face is not safe in this city," the ads said.

Meanwhile, WAWAW in Los Angeles continued its community presentations of a slide show of record album covers, billboards and magazines ads that members say are offensive to women.

Among the albums they exhibit are those depicting a female kidnapping victim stuffed into a wheelbarrow; a woman with a shaved head and chained hands; a woman with a chain binding her mouth; a woman with the seal "Choice Cuts" stamped on her buttocks, and a woman, victim of an assault, lying unconscious, the contents of her handbag scattered.

CLUB NEWS ROUNDUP

Midland Rose Society schedules spring show

James Whitley, a guest, and Barbara Nicholson, new member, were introduced at a meeting of the Midland Rose Society.

It was announced at the meeting the Spring Rose-A-Rama will be held March 4 at the Midland Hydroponic Farms. At this time, members of the Rose Society will be on hand to answer questions on planting and care of roses.

The program, "Table Workshop," consisted of three table-clinics. Mrs. J. A. Van Auken discussed the planting of roses. Gene Spires talked on soil and Mrs. John Butts gave instruction on pruning.

Spires also gave a brief history of the popular floribunda, "Euro-peana".

Mrs. R. E. Price gave a biographical sketch of Eugene S. Boerner, often called the dean of American rose hybridizers. Boerner won many horticulture awards and his floribunda, "Fashion," won many international awards. He also hybridized and patented many perennials.

The annual garage sale of the society will be March 11 and 12 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Waterman of 2515 Princeton Ave.

The next meeting of the society will be March 16.

MIDLAND WOMAN'S CLUB

Programs on the Midland County Heart Association and Cardio Pulmonary Resuscitation and first aid were presented at a luncheon meeting of the Midland Woman's Club in the Hogan Park clubhouse.

Linda Powell brought the program on MCHA.

James Roberts with the Midland Fire Department reminded the women to use the emergency number, 911. He explained by using this number you can obtain instant help.

Roberts also explained that in using first aid, artificial respiration is the most effective means of helping someone who has stopped breathing.

He explained the basic CPR to the group and urged the women to take a Red Cross or American Heart Association U course in CPR, which, he said "could save their lives as well as someone else." The course takes from 4-8 hours to complete.

Proposed compost project to make Bronx green

By LEE LESCAZE
Washington Post

NEW YORK — "Where do you live?"
"The South Bronx."
"What do you do?"
"I'm a farmer."
That seemingly absurd dialogue about the area that has come to symbolize urban destruction and despair will be spoken seriously not too many years from now if Irma Fleck and Jack Flanagan succeed.
Fleck and Flanagan propose to make compost, spread it around the South Bronx and create vegetable and flower gardens on up to 200 acres. They are even thinking of tree farming. Christmas trees from the South Bronx could be in some New Yorkers' futures.
"We've been called crazies," admits Flanagan, a police detective who took a leave of absence to work on the greening of South Bronx.
It will cost $223,000 to get their composting and gardening operation going this spring, and enough foundations have taken Fleck and Flanagan seriously so that Fleck says "six months ago the big problem was money. Now, it's time. We've got to be ready for spring planting." As she speaks, her car bounces over mounds of ice and litter on uncleared South Bronx streets.
The greening is a many-cushion shot. If it works, it will somewhat ease the city's solid waste disposal problems, solve suburban New Rochelle's leaf disposal problem, absorb horse manure from city riding academies, get rid of a huge pile of gypsum waste, provide jobs and a better diet for some South Bronx residents and create earth where there is only rubble.
The earth the South Bronx is built on is unbreachable now under six to eight feet of bricks and rubble from demolished buildings. Bulldozers have leveled lots, filling basements with the debris.
But the rubble can be pulverized to sand and mixed with compost to make soil.
"We're in the recycling business. We're recycling land," Fleck said.
In the first year of compost production, Fleck and Flanagan hope to produce 14,000 cubic yards, enough to cover about 17 acres to a depth of six inches.
They had hoped to do more, but they were unable to get city permission to use a 14-acre site for their compost operation and instead will make do with 3.6 acres on the bank of the East River with a superb view of the Manhattan skyline, a long subway ride away.

Even so, their compost operation will be one of the largest in the country. Flanagan and Fleck foresee the day when they will be turning out so much compost that they will sell their product to Long Island farmers or the park service or in bags to the home gardener. Compost brings upwards of $12 a cubic yard, they said. No one can accuse them of setting their sights too low.
In about four weeks, compost production is scheduled to start under supervision of Curtis Suertth, who will monitor the recipe.
The key ingredient, without which the Bronx Frontier Development Corp., as Fleck and Flanagan have named their group, couldn't get off the ground is fruit and vegetable waste from the giant Hunt's Point Market adjacent to the compost site.
The market spawns as much as 75 cubic yards of such waste daily and has to pay to have it carted away and dumped. Now it can give a small portion to the composters, who will rake it with a huge $50,000 Scarab Compost Turner and mix it with New Rochelle's leaves to make it drier. Horse Manure and gypsum waste, which is almost all calcium sulfate, will be added if needed.
Every five or six weeks a new bed of compost will be ready for delivery to South Bronx farmers.
Initially, Flanagan said, housing people worried that farming wouldn't leave enough room for the reconstruction projects they hope to carry out. But there appears to be room for both.
"Vacant land is very plentiful," Fleck said wryly. "There's more of it everyday as buildings burn or are demolished."
The South Bronx has about 500 acres vacant now. In the 41st Police Precinct, which is known as Fort Apache, about 50 percent of the buildings are down or beyond saving. Flanagan estimated, and 50 percent of the people are gone.
Fleck and Flanagan have their office in the precinct.
Last summer, there were 40 vegetable gardens in the South Bronx supported by the Cornell University Extension Service's gardening program. None was vandalized, Fleck said, but two were trampled because they were on lots heavily used as shortcuts.

"That's not vandalism, that's bad planning," Flanagan said.
This year, Cornell is unable to provide topsoil, which can cost as much as $12 a cubic yard, so the soil manufactured of compost and pulverized rubble will be the only South Bronx source of supply. Cornell, however, is providing expert advice and will do technical testing for the project — including checks on levels of heavy metals. Where there are dangerous concentrations of heavy metals, flowers will be grown.

The Bronx Frontier Development Corp. dryly remarks in one of its reports that the precise value of South Bronx vegetable production is difficult to predict, "because of the lack of experience with vegetable farming in an urban area." However, it calculates that each acre farmed should provide the annual vegetable needs of 40 to 68 people. A one-year vegetable supply in 1976 was worth about $75 per person, the report says.

"The South Bronx needs a lot more things than just vegetable gardens and composting, but there's so little else that can be done right now," said Anita Miller of the Ford Foundation, which helps support the project.

"We're usually more hard-nosed," Miller said of the foundation's decision to grant money to Fleck's and Flanagan's operation, "but if it contributes to a better self-image for some people and makes a more livable environment, then it's a fine thing."

"Even though Jimmy Carter was here," Flanagan said, putting it another way, "that doesn't mean that we're going to build a whole new city."

As an accompaniment to the gardening operation, the Bronx Frontier Development Corp. has converted a library bookmobile into a "chuck wagon" with a kitchen.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

(Fri. Mar. 3)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is fine for you to go directly to higher-ups and discuss your finest and most productive ideas. It is necessary to use more care in motion later in the day.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Make plans to start a new venture, but take care not to irk one in high position. Handle civic matters later and get good results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Know what is expected of you by your mate and then get busy and try to please. Take time to engage in favorite hobby.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Iron out any differences you have with associates early in the day and much can be accomplished. Take no chances with your reputation.

MOON CHILDREN (June 2 to July 21): Be enthusiastic about getting the work done that is awaiting your attention and much can be accomplished.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Plan the recreation you want to have later in the day and then use care where money is concerned. Later please your mate in some way.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Some special service to kin can bring fine results at this time. A new project needs more study before putting it in operation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Express yourself clearly in the morning and forget all those angles that only complicates matters. Engage in creative activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): First handle financial affairs intelligently and then engage in new interests that beckon you. Make up a better budget.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Take care of personal matters first and then get down to important business matters at hand. Improve your appearance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Come to a more harmonious understanding with your mate by being more reasonable. Plan the future wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 18): Study your friendships well and know which to weed out for a happier existence. Relax at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Make long-range plans that will give you greater abundance in the future. Take steps to improve your appearance.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

PUNTA GORDA, Fla. (AP) — Towns and villages at their wits' end over where to find more revenues might consider a cliché tax on retirement cottages named "Wits End" or "Dun Roaming" and holiday homes called "Lost Weekend" and "Second Mortgage."

People who assault the public patience with cutsize sign posts should be made to pay for their insipidity. The town assessor might levy a $20-a-year tax bite for a moderately unclerical house sign like "Hell's Quarter Acre" and up to $50 for a clinker like "Paradise Refinanced."

The yachting crowd is ripe for plucking by the tax man empowered to make them cough up for their nautical clichés. A visit to any boatyard at this time of year will turn up endless $50 possibilities like "Sea Daze," "Stormy Petrol" (sic), "Miss Fortune," "Star Boarder," "Rumme Runner" and "Laz-E-Daze." Lawyers who have "Legal Eagle" or "Bar Sinister" scrawled on the stern of their sloops should receive a special assessment, along with physicians who sail under the ensign of "Cut Up" and "Sid the Knife."

Restaurant owners who insist on identifying their toilet facilities with precious titles are both a menace to public morals and an affront to the sensibilities of their patrons. A $100 minimum might be in order here.

In a country inn or hunting lodge, I am often at a loss to determine in a jiffy whether I am a "Pointer" or a "Setter," a "Doe" or a "Roe," or a

"Hind" or a "Hart." At a seafood place, one is confronted with the doorknob decision of "Gulls" or "Buoys," while nightclubs take delight in disguising their plumbing arrangements behind such frivolities as "Guys" and "Dolls," "Laddies" and "Lassies," "Daphnis" and "Chloe" and "Romeo" and "Juliet."

There was a joint down in Greenwich Village that had "Damon" and "Pythias" marked on the alternate doors, and I'm still not sure what that was all about. Eateries that identify their rest rooms with caricature figures differentiating the sexes can be the cause of embarrassing choices like the Greek restaurant in Nicosia, Cyprus, where the male figure is adorned in a skirt. I understand one could have the same problem in Edinburgh.

If I were making out a tax schedule for cliché sign boards that cry out for public vengeance, I'd go the limit on road houses called "Dew Drop Inn" or "Snack Shack" or "Gnosh and Gnibble" or "Steak Out." Or any cloying combinations like "Keg and Kutlet," "Brew and Brisket" or "Beef 'n' Bottle." There was a roast beef emporium in London called "Rump and Roister" that went bankrupt but made a comeback as "Saddle and Sirloin," which should have put the proprietor in double jeopardy of the tax man.

In the depression days, according to John Steinbeck, the rule of the road used to be never eat at a place called "Mom's," buy a used car from a guy named "Doc" or frequent a pawn shop called "Trader Sam's" or "Honest Looie's."

In these inflationary times, I'd call down a pox, or at least a nuisance tax, on all houses promising "Kwick Kredit," "EZ-Terms" and a "Price Panic," as well as shopping center retail establishments doing business under the sign of "Discount-o-rama" or "Cut Rate Jamboree."

Shops that insist on calling themselves shoppes and any variant of ye olde (as in "Ye Olde Crumpe Shoppee" and "Ye Olde Grog House") would be penalized to the fullest extent of the tax man's powers, and no mercy would be shown to merchants caught in a flagrant mugging of Middle English, as in "Ye Antique and Junque Shoppee."

Milk companies advertising from "Moo to You" would have to pay for their bad cases of the cutes, along with diaper services that make any reference to the eternal triangle or take out Chinese restaurants that play around with the likes of "Chop Suey Chop Chop" and "Quikie Takee Outee." The tax assessor might consider a rebate or at least a lowered assessment for the Japanese restaurant on the outskirts of Miami that calls itself "Colonel Samurai's Fried Shrimp" in gratitude for its put down of a competitor. And maybe some exception to the cutsize tax should be granted to the Reno bar that calls itself "Los Alimones," on the grounds of aptness and originality.

Slick radical magazine traces roots to 'Mother Jones,' an early agitator

By A. KENT MacDOUGAL
The Los Angeles Times

The conservative mood that public opinion polls and the press detect running through the country isn't noticeable at Mother Jones.

The slick radical magazine "for the rest of us" seems to be striking a responsive chord among Americans suspicious of and even hostile to big business and government.

Thanks in part to 150,000 subscriptions, $500,000 in contributions from such wealthy supporters as Hollywood producer Jennings Lang and actor Burt Lancaster, its nonprofit tax-exempt status, and a little help from such advertisers as R.J. Reynolds Co., the anti-capitalist Mother Jones is more than just getting by. It's getting noticed.

In barely two years of existence, Mother Jones has managed to cause considerable distress in corporate suites and waves in Washington.

It has accused Nestle Co. of contributing to malnourishment of babies in poor countries. It has referred to the deal Volkswagen got from the state of Pennsylvania in establishing a plant there as a corporate rip-off. It has charged Ford Motor Co. with knowingly manufacturing cars that are firetraps.

The magazine's charges against Ford have prompted a full-scale government investigation of the Ford Pinto. (Just this month a jury in Orange County, Calif., awarded families of two Pinto victims a record $128.5 million in damages, claiming Ford had deliberately fitted Pintos with poorly designed gas tanks that ruptured upon light impact. Ford is expected to appeal.)

Like other journals of the left and right, the magazine isn't above loading the argument on occasion. It has been known to leave out responses by the people it attacks and it declines to accept some corporate advertising it is afraid might mislead its readers.

Mother Jones' analyses of corporate malfeasance, environmental degradation, unemployment and other chronic ills of capitalist America suggest leftist solutions at a time when some magazines are asking, as Newsweek did in a recent cover story, "Is America Turning Right?" while others, such as the once liberal Harper's, veer off in that direction themselves.

Mother Jones is easily the largest in circulation of the nation's several dozen radical periodicals (not counting Rolling Stone which, despite occasional articles criticizing the establishment, remains basically a rock music magazine). Avoiding the journals of the Left strictly for the already-convinced, Mother Jones goes after a broader audience with flashy, attention-getting covers, inviting graphics, wry humor and colorful writing.

One piece, a memoir written by Li-li Chen of China just before the 1949 Communist takeover, won Mother Jones a National Magazine award. Considered the magazine industry's equivalent of the Pulitzer Prize, the prestigious award had gone only once before to a magazine as young as Mother Jones.

Having made its mark quickly, Mother Jones aims to do for the late 1970s what another San Francisco monthly, Ramparts, did for the late 1960s — popularize radical critiques of capitalist America and expose corporate and government abuses. Several key staffers at Mother Jones worked at one time or another for Ramparts before its death in 1975 and consider it a progenitor.

Mother Jones hopes to be as pesky and as durable as the labor agitator after whom it is named. Mary Harris Jones (1830-1930) swore like a trooper, had a hard time staying out of jail, hour.

and was still marching on picket lines at the age of 90. Identifying with her is the magazine's whimsical way of placing itself in a radical tradition with native roots.

Mother Jones has excavated these radical roots in a number of articles recounting episodes of history seldom taught in school. One article told how in 1917 in Bisbee, Ariz., Sheriff Harry Wheeler and a posse of hundreds rounded up 1,200 striking copper miners and "Wobbly" organizers for the Industrial Workers of the World and deported them in railroad box cars to New Mexico.

Mother Jones views its investigative journalism as in the best tradition of such pioneering leftist muckrakers as Upton Sinclair and Lincoln Steffens. Leaving the exposure of corrupt politicians, fast-buck businessmen and other individual miscreants to the conventional news media, Mother Jones concentrates on the biggest and most respectable businesses and the alleged harm their drive to maximize profits can cause.

One article charges that American agribusinesses exacerbated hunger in Latin America and other underdeveloped countries by diverting farmland from the growing of food crops for local consumption to production of cash crops for export. The switch enriches landowners and a few others, but tends to further impoverish the rural poor, the article concluded.

Of the magazine's dozen exposes, the investigation of the Ford Pinto has had the most impact and brought Mother Jones the most attention. The article centered on the subcompact's allegedly fragile and badly positioned gasoline tank, which the article said tends to rupture and create a fire hazard when the Pinto is rear-ended at more than 30 miles an hour.

Author Mark Dowie got onto the story through a friend who reconstructs auto accidents and who told Dowie of investigating a low-impact, rear-end crash in which a Pinto owner had burned to death. Dowie secured confidential Ford documents — some on file at the Department of Transportation, some leaked by Ford employees, and some, Dowie suspects, that had been stolen.

The documents convinced him that Ford officials knew of the gas tank flaw but left it uncorrected for seven years because the cost of correcting the defect exceeded the company's estimated legal liability from burn injuries and deaths. As a result, his article charged, an estimated 500 Pinto occupants have needlessly burned to death.

However, the article failed to note that this "conservative" 500 burn-death estimate was author Dowie's own, and that he based it on the undocumented assumption that 1970 to 1976 Pintos were twice as likely as the average car to burn following rear-end collisions. Dowie regrets he didn't specify how he arrived at the estimate, which was disputed by Ford.

In a lengthy rebuttal, Ford denounced the Mother Jones article as full of "half-truths and distortions." "It is true, for example, that early model Pintos did not pass rear-impact tests at 20 m.p.h.," Ford said.

Ambassador claims drug charges 'political ploy'

By MIGUEL ACOCA
Special to The Washington Post

MADRID — Moises Torrijos, Panama's ambassador to Madrid and brother of Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos, emphatically declared his innocence Wednesday of U.S. charges that he was involved in the illegal narcotics trade.

"I swear to you, I had nothing to do with drugs ever in my life," Torrijos declared in an interview in his spacious 14th-floor penthouse apartment.

Torrijos contended that the "revival of the six-year-old false charges" was part of a last-ditch campaign by the "most reactionary group in the U.S. Senate" to block ratification of the Panama Canal treaties.

The Senate Intelligence Committee Tuesday confirmed previously published reports that Moises was secretly indicted by a U.S. grand jury in 1971 for allegedly participating in a drug smuggling operation.

The Justice Department subsequently opened that indictment, which accused Moises Torrijos of facilitating transshipment through Panama of narcotics that one of his associates tried to bring into the United States.

The 62-year-old ambassador said that if there was any proof against him, he would go to the United States to answer charge and stand trial.

"This is what my brother, the general, has proposed, and I am perfectly willing to do it," Torrijos said.

But the charges, he contended, were "all political" — an effort to "discredit my brother."

"I don't go to the U.S. because I don't want to be framed," Torrijos said. "I avoid going to the U.S. not for fear of being arrested, but for fear that something incriminating will be planted in my luggage."

Moises Torrijos, who until this point had declined to be interviewed by American correspondents, said he "did not want to defend myself against the allegations in the U.S. Senate and U.S. press, but I must speak because they are not against me but against my country and my brother, the general."

Seated at his breakfast table, he answered all questions — even though he said he had been ordered by the Panamanian Foreign Office to refrain from discussing the drug charges until the canal treaties are ratified.

Torrijos said the first word he had of the allegations against him were U.S. news stories published in 1972.

"It was all political. It was the time when treaty negotiations were just beginning and it was all designed to discredit my brother."

"That was when I was stunned to read that I was in drugs and had been indicted secretly by a federal grand jury in New York," he said. "It was all political. It was the time when treaty negotiations were just beginning and it was all designed to discredit my brother."

While his wife, Flor de Maria, sighed, "It's all like a novel," Torrijos flatly denied the allegations against him, which stem from the 1971 arrest of three Panamanians in John F. Kennedy Airport in New York for trying to smuggle 154 pounds of heroin into the United States.

"I knew one of them, Guillermo Gonzalez, who helped me in the 1968 legislative electoral campaign," said Torrijos. "But the fact that I knew him doesn't mean I was involved. I don't know how I was dragged into the mess."

He claimed that U.S. narcotics agents questioned Gonzalez sharply in an "attempt to get him to name me," but said that Gonzalez, who is now out of prison and back in Panama, insisted "I was in no way involved."

The other two arrested were Rafael Richards, son of then Panamanian ambassador to Taiwan, and Nicolas Polanco, about whom Torrijos claimed to know little.

Torrijos said that he was a perfect target of U.S. treaty foes because he had opposed "American colonialism in the Canal Zone all my life."

"I'm a nationalist, not a drug smuggler," Torrijos said. Moises Torrijos said he was denied a visa to the United States in 1955 because he had traveled to the Soviet Union and had many leftist connections in Panama and elsewhere.

The ambassador said his brother had never told him that in 1972, John Ingersoll, then head of the U.S. drug bureau, visited Gen. Torrijos in Panama and warned him that a secret indictment had been handed down against Moises.

He also disclaimed any knowledge of any secret agreement between Ingersoll and the Panamanian leader that Moises would stay out of the drug business and never set foot in the United States or the Canal Zone.

"The story is a fabrication," said Torrijos. "I go to the Canal Zone whenever I'm in Panama. I act as a guide for Spanish visitors who want to see the canal all the time. I was in the Canal Zone many times between last November and last January when I was home, and before that I crossed the zone hundreds of times to go to my country home."

Torrijos vehemently denied published stories suggesting that he disembark in Venezuela while sailing from Spain on a ship scheduled to dock in the Canal Zone because he was tipped by his brother that U.S. narcotics agents were waiting there to arrest him.

"That's a preposterous story," he said. "I've never gone home by ship from Spain. I can prove it. I always fly — via Santo Domingo. I went via Puerto Rico when my mother died, and I wasn't arrested."

The bespectacled ambassador, who looks like a smaller, heavier, version of Gen. Torrijos, spoke softly and deliberately throughout the wide-ranging interview.

"You must understand that this is a delicate moment," he said. "There are strong forces trying to perpetuate American colonialism in the heart of Panama."

He charged that the "calumnies against me and my family are an attempt to sabotage the treaty, which was negotiated between the two countries as equals."

"I guess that drugs were dragged up because of accusations of communism no longer work," he added with a smile.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Self-sufficient people react well to placebos

Dear Dr. Solomon: I keep reading about "placebos" in articles on health. Could you explain exactly what a placebo is and how it works?—Joyce M.

Dear Joyce: A placebo is any preparation that appears to be a drug but has no medicinal content, and is given to a patient only for its psychological effect—a sugar pill, for instance. If the patient insists on having medicine even though none is needed, the doctor might give him a placebo to make him feel better.

Placebos are used in tests, too. One group of volunteers gets a real drug that is being tried out, another group gets a placebo, and the results from the two groups are compared. Both groups are on the same psychological footing, so any difference in the outcome can be attributed exclusively to what is in the real drug.

You might think that only gullible people would respond to a placebo, but that does not seem to be the case. According to a report from Dr. Charles G. Moertel and others just published in the Mayo Clinic Proceedings, self-sufficient people used to heavy responsibilities react very well to placebos—well educated people, farmers, professional men and women. On the other hand, persons with less education, less skilled workers, people with seemingly lighter responsibilities—respond much less.

Incidentally, the word "placebo" comes from the Latin verb placere, to please, and means literally "I will be pleasing."

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been wondering if our little boy shouldn't really have his tonsils removed. He has been having an awful lot of colds this year and the winter isn't even half over. Our pediatrician doesn't think it is necessary. What's your opinion?—Regina F.

Dear Regina: There has been a big shift in medical opinion about removing tonsils and adenoids. They used to be taken out almost as a matter of course a good deal of the time. Now, however, I advise my patients to be operated on only if there is a very definite reason—such as chronic infection or an enlargement that interferes with swallowing, breathing or talking. The operation, although simple, does carry a slight risk. Another reason for caution is that we now know tonsils and adenoids help protect against infection if they are working properly. And then, too, the tissues generally do start to shrink by the time the child is eight or nine.

So, if your son's doctor doesn't think an operation is necessary, I would follow his advice.

German missionaries remain religious force in remote Pacific Ocean islands

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

TRUK, Eastern Caroline Islands—One of the many surprises of the Pacific Islands is the German missionaries.

Germany hasn't been a colonial power in this part of the world for 64 years.

When the Germans in 1914 gave up their rule of hundreds of islands between Hawaii and the Philippines, Japan took over. And when Japan was defeated by the United States in 1945, the islands became U.N. Trust Territories administered by the United States.

But the German missionaries are still here.

"The fact that German missionaries are a religious force in the middle of the Pacific Ocean after all these years surprises many people," said Edmund Kalau, 53, a messerschmitt pilot for the German air force in World War II. Kalau became a liebenzell Mission pastor after the war ended.

When Germany took the islands from Spain in 1898, the Germans expelled Spanish priests and American Protestant missionaries who had brought Christianity to the islands.

Catholic priests and Protestant Liebenzell missionaries came out from Germany as replacements.

When Japan gained control of the islands in 1914 the shoe was on the other foot and the German missionaries were given the boot.

The Japanese Evangelical Christian Society called nanyo Dendo Dan took care of the needs of the Christian community. But Trukese islanders pleaded for years with the Japanese authorities to let the Liebenzell missionaries come back. The Germans operated excellent schools in Truk and were highly respected by the Trukese people.

Finally, after 12 years, the Japanese relented. Letters were written in 1926 to Bad Liebenzell, the famous health resort in the Black Forest of Germany, headquarters of the mission group, asking the Germans to come back to Truk.

The German missionaries returned that year to Truk Lagoon, 3,450 miles southwest of Honolulu.

"All went well until World War II, noted the Rev. Siegfried Neumaier, 41, who came out from Germany with his wife, Gudrun, 31, eight years ago.

"Times were terrible for the German missionaries during World War II. Liebenzell churches were destroyed by the Japanese. Even though Germany was an ally of Japan, the Liebenzell missionaries were looked upon as spies by the Japanese.

"My uncle was a pastor here then. He and several other German missionaries were relocated by the Japanese to an isolated area of the island of Udot in the Truk Lagoon the last year of the war and left alone.

"The Trukese people were told not to have anything to do with the missionaries. They were ordered not to talk to the missionaries, not to go see them and not to bring them any food.

"One of the missionary women, Elizabeth Zuber, starved to death."

When the war ended, the U.S. Navy administered Truk until 1962. The Navy issued an edict in 1957 ordering all the German missionaries to leave the island because they were foreigners.

It was a repeat of the same old story.

But the Americans permitted the missionaries to continue their work on one condition—that they go to the United States and enroll there two years in a special program to become U.S. citizens.

Many of the German missionaries became U.S. citizens in order to continue the work of the Liebenzell Mission on Truk.

In 1963 the law was changed and missionaries of german citizenship were welcomed once again to the Pacific islands. Today the Liebenzell missionaries here are all German citizens.

There are 32 Liebenzell Mission churches on Truk—all quaint landmarks found in practically every village on the atoll.

Native ministers are pastors of all the congregations. Services are in Trukese. Missionaries have translated the Bible, songbooks, catechisms and other religious books into the native Trukese language.

The German missionaries staff the Liebenzell Mission station, headquarters for the group, on the main Truk island of Moen.

The German mission operates a 65-foot motor sailing vessel called the Chen which sails from island to island in the lagoon and to other islands in the Truk group within a 150-mile radius of Moen.

The boat transports food and supplies to the outlying parishes and carries missionaries who help with community and religious work.

"We love it here in this faraway place," said Gertrud Fredrich, who has been here with her husband, Werner, for 10 years. "It is not at all like Germany. No snow here. No pine forests. Coconut trees and temperatures year round in the 80s and 90s."

The Liebenzell Mission is widely known throughout Germany and receives generous support from the German people.

Liebenzell also conducts missions in Taiwan, Japan, Indonesia and the pacific islands of Yap, Palau and the Admiralty Islands.

Bruins sack up 15th Pac-8 title in last 16

By The Associated Press

In the Pacific-8 Conference, nobody does it better than the UCLA Bruins.

Since the early 1960s, the Bruins have been the evergreens of that Far West league and Thursday night, another Pac-8 basketball race came to the end of the trail with the inevitable conclusion.

A 96-58 rout of flu-stricken Oregon State provided the mighty Bruins with their 12th straight conference title and their 15th in the last 16 years. The only time they have missed was in the 1965-66 season.

"I'm very, very elated to win the Pac-8 title," said UCLA's Gary Cunningham, a protege of the legendary John Wooden and a winner in his first season as head coach. "We played an excellent game and had a lot of respect for OSU. I'm sure the flu hurt them."

David Greenwood's 23 points and a blinding fast break were obvious pluses for the Bruins, but Cunningham underscored defense as the key for his team.

"I felt our defense was outstanding, the major reason for our winning," said Cunningham. "Our fast break was keyed by our defense and built up the lead for us."

Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller said of his Beavers: "I don't think we played this badly since we left the Carolinas the first week of the season. We gave them the gift of the long pass. We certainly weren't up physically."

Miller used 10 players and substituted 23 times in the first half, attempting to check the Bruins and offset the effects of a flu epidemic that hit most of his team recently.

Three upsets marked Thursday night's play as Utah edged fifth-ranked New Mexico 95-92; North Carolina State defeated eighth-ranked North Carolina 72-67 and Ohio State whipped No. 19 Minnesota 94-87 in overtime.

Elsewhere, No. 10 Michigan State trimmed Northwestern 66-56 and No. 20 Louisville battered Ball State 104-84.

Jeff Judkins and Buster Matheny combined for 53 points as Utah handed New Mexico its first Western Athletic Conference loss this season and stopped a 14-game winning streak for the Lobos. New Mexico still leads the WAC with a 10-1 record, while second-place Utah improved its mark to 10-2.

While Judkins' 28 points and Matheny's 25 were the tall figures for Utah, teammate Michael Gray clinched the game with a free throw with seven seconds remaining. New Mexico's Marvin Johnson led all scorers with 29 points.

Clyde Austin scored 14 points, including a driving layup with 20 seconds, to boost North Carolina State past North Carolina. Austin's basket gave the Wolfpack a 68-67 lead and its eventual winning points.

The injury-riddled Tar Heels, playing without regulars Phil Ford, Mike O'Koren and Rich Yonakor, dropped into a tie with Duke for first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Tar Heels and Blue Devils, both with 8-3 conference records, will meet in Chapel Hill Saturday to decide the regular-season league title.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said he held Ford out of Thursday night's game in hopes that he would start Saturday. North Carolina's backcourt star injured his wrist in last week's Virginia game.

"We made a good run tonight," said Smith. "I thought we held our poise, except for two minutes in the first half when N.C. State scored 12 straight points. Other than that, we played good basketball."

Kevin Ransey scored seven straight points in the first two minutes of overtime to spark Ohio State over Minnesota. Ransey, a 6-1 sophomore guard, finished with 26 points to help the Buckeyes avenge their worst loss of the season, a 25-point beating at Minnesota.

Earvin Johnson and Greg Kelsner teamed for 30 points to lead Michigan State's conquest of Northwestern, the Big Ten's last-place team. Johnson, the Spartans' sensational freshman, scored 16 points and had eight rebounds while Kelsner contributed 14 points and nine rebounds.

"It was one of those games where if you don't win by 20 points everyone thinks you played poorly," said Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote. "At this point of the season, the players are mature enough to accept any win, whether it's by five or 20 points."

Darrell Griffith scored 25 points and Rick Wildon added 18 as Louisville defeated Ball State. Louisville scored the first 12 points, including four by Griffith, and Ball State was never in the game.

"I thought our shot selection was good," noted Louisville Coach Denny Crum, whose team made 40 of 66 field goal shots. "We took good shots over their zone. Ball State is not a good defensive team, but the subs came in and hit well."

Elsewhere, Dave Baxter's 33 points led Michigan to a 107-96 decision over Illinois; Ray Tolbert's layup with 29 seconds remaining boosted Indiana over Wisconsin 58-54; Purdue beat Iowa 82-69 as Eugene Parker had 19 points; Southern Illinois defeated Bradley 93-82 with the help of a 75 percent shooting average in the first half and Lynbert "Cheese" Johnson collected 26 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead Wichita State past Drake 68-59.

Also, St. Louis defeated Memphis State 82-80 behind Ricky Frazier's 25 points; Reggie Carter's 14 points paced St. John's to a 79-57 victory over St. Joseph's, Pa.; Kevin Heenan's 25 points helped Cal State Fullerton score an 83-75 decision over UC Irvine; Brigham Young whipped Texas-El Paso 73-64 as Alan Taylor contributed 25 points and Nesta Cora scored 26 to trigger St. Francis over Catholic University 87-80.

Finley pins trial hopes on Kuhn's vendetta

By HOWARD ULMAN

CHICAGO (AP) — Charles O. Finley is hoping his string of disputes with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn will give him another shot at winning a $3.5 million lawsuit against the baseball czar.

Neil Papiano, attorney for the Oakland A's owner, used the well-publicized conflicts between the two men Thursday as a cornerstone of his bid to win a new trial on the suit.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr dismissed the suit March 17 challenging Kuhn's authority to block Finley's sale of three star players. Oral arguments on Finley's appeal were heard Thursday by a three-judge panel of the U.S. Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals.

Papiano argued that McGarr should have allowed testimony about friction between Finley and Kuhn.

HE TOLD the judges that McGarr was wrong in ruling that "any sort of feud going on is not relevant to the issues of this case."

"It is well known through newspapers and otherwise that Mr. Kuhn and Mr. Finley had been enemies for some time," said Papiano. But, "again and again, in each instance, the trial court would not allow the plaintiff to introduce evidence of malice or bad faith."

Finley did testify Dec. 22, 1976, that he clashed with Kuhn in the spring of 1971 when Kuhn barred him from sending Reggie Jackson to the minors for 10 weeks and again in 1972 when Kuhn intervened in Finley's efforts to sign pitcher Vida Blue to a new contract.

"The plaintiff was not limited in any way on the question of malice," Peter K. Bleakley, attorney for Kuhn, argued Thursday. "The judge simply reached a point in the trial where he felt plaintiff failed to make a case for the question of malice."

Since Kuhn overturned the sales of Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to Boston for $1 million each on June 15, 1976, he has held hearings on two more Finley deals.

Muhammad Ali is one man on the public stage, another in the ring and still another when he closes the door and enters his own privacy, insists one of the deposed champion's closest aides. "It's the private Ali I know best," says Gene Kilroy, who has been an advisor in the Ali camp since 1970. "It's the Ali few really know — shy, humble, sincere, a person who loves all people, black or white, rich or poor, especially the little people, the

'down-and-out' and the 'have-nots.'"

"He has so much dignity. A man like this is not made; he is born." Kilroy said he has been disturbed by recurring rumors after Ali's recent loss to Leon Spinks that Ali was financially broke, had lost all his skills and never would dare fight again.

"HE WILL fight again," Kilroy predicted. "He will fight Spinks, become the first heavyweight to win the title three times and then will retire. It is his destiny to retire as champion."

At the suggestion that Ali had lost $25 to $40 million slip through his fingers and didn't know where his next nickel was coming from Kilroy scoffed:

"Broke? How ridiculous! How could he be broke? He's the only man I know who can pick up $5 million just like that by signing a piece of paper. He has made more millionaires than anybody who ever lived — promoters, fighters, managers. Every time he fights he stirs the country's economy."

Kilroy, a bushy-haired 35-year-old bachelor out of Mahanoy, Pa., once the marketing "boy genius" of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, met Ali in New York's Stage Deli when Ali was appearing on Broadway in "Good Time Buck White." Ali asked Gene to join him. Since then he has been sort of the ex-champion's choreographer—traveling the world with him, setting up public appearances and counseling on some ventures.

KILROY IS white. "People say Ali dislikes the white man," Kilroy says. "What about me?"

Kilroy quoted Shakespeare to say that, to Muhammad, "all the world is a stage and all the men and women merely players."

"When he attacks an opponent before a big fight, when he gets loud and bombastic, he is selling tickets," Kilroy said. "There's never been a better promoter."

"But notice how different he is after the fight. He is always humble. He always praises the other guy, win or lose."

Hollis Stacy braves cold to lead by one

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Hollis Stacy of Savannah, Ga. braved frigid temperatures to take the lead going into today's second round in the $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Bent Tree Golf Classic.

Stacy fired a 69 in Thursday's opening round to pull ahead of Betsy King of Limekiln, Pa., who shot a 70. In a three-way tie for third at 71 were Laura Baugh of Cocoa, Fla.; Nancy Lopez of Roswell, N.M., and Sandra Post of Canada.

The conditions on the Bent Tree Golf & Racquet club course were brisk, and Stacy said she carried a hand-warmer.

Players generally agreed that play in the event will continue to be tough because of the weather. Recent temperatures in the low 40s have affected the greens.

"You have to play horseshoes with the putts — get the long putts close," Stacy said. "There's not going to be a lot of long putts made here."

Stacy opened with a bogey on hole 10, birdied holes 13, 16, and 18 to turn in 34 and birdied 8 for her leading 69.

The winner will collect $15,000.

Corso wants coaching cheaters eliminated

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The surest way to eliminate cheating in major college football is to eliminate the cheating coaches, Indiana's Lee Corso said Thursday.

"Habitual criminals ought to be run out of the coaching profession," Corso said during a college football seminar sponsored by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Corso defined "habitual criminals" as "guys who get put on probation one time or schools that continue to violate the rules.

"If we get a guy who habitually breaks the rules, we've got to get rid of him," Corso said. "That is not the NCAA's responsibility. It's the coaches' responsibility. Some institutions just keep cheating."

Corso said, however, he does not feel there is widespread abuse of NCAA recruiting rules and he declined to specify which institutions or individuals he had in mind.

Jones leads Gleason golf

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Grier Jones says he's just beginning to find the winning touch at the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic. Unfortunately for Jones, Jack Nicklaus says the same thing.

Jones shot a 5-under-par 67 Thursday in the opening round of the $250,000 Gleason Classic to take a 2-stroke lead over a group of eight including Fuzzy Zoel; Bob Smeacer, Danny Edwards, Andy Bean, Kermit Zarley, Hale Irwin, Gibby.

NICKLAUS, who won the $50,000 first prize here last year, heads a group of 11 that were 3 strokes behind at 71. The others were Barry Jaekel, Lynn Litt, Dave Eichelberger, Don January, Pat McGowan, Bob Gilder, Tom Jenkins, and Gary Wintz.

Jones, who makes his home in Wichita, Kan., spent December with his wife, Jane and five children who range in age from 9 down to 2.

"The last few years, I haven't gotten out of Kansas soon enough," he said. "When my children were real young, they traveled with us and I used to play real well in California. Now, Christmas time is tough for me to leave. The tournaments start the 4th or 5th of January and I've been a month and a half without playing at all."

"I just don't have much touch around the green," he continued. "I'm scoring well, like making a 72 but it should have been a 68. Or you shoot a 75 and it should have been a 72."

NICKLAUS, who also won here in 1976 when Inverrary hosted the Tournament Players Championship, said he believes he now has become "tournement ready" after playing two tournaments in California — the Bing Crosby and the Los Angeles Open.

Nicklaus shot a 36-34-70 round and called it awful. "I never seemed to get the ball very close to the hole," he said. "I seemed to struggle most of the way. I played too many bad shots. I was fortunate to hole a couple of long putts to stay in the ballgame, you might say."

Nicklaus said, "The way I hit it, I think I am quite fortunate to be out in 70."

However, he added: "I'll be all right tomorrow. I'll be much better tomorrow. I should be in pretty good shape by the end of the week."

"I was able to take a round today where I didn't play all that well and get it around in a decent score," said Nicklaus.

Hot bass lake? Try Big Lake

BY JON CHASE

Where's the hottest new bass lake around? Big Lake, that's where, or at least it was about 18 months ago.

Big Lake is one of the strangest fishing holes that I know of anywhere in the U.S. This sometimes body of water, located about 75 miles southeast of Midland out of Big Lake, appropriately enough, is the original feast and famine fishing spot, because a lot of the time Big Lake is nothing more than a dried mud flat. I haven't driven through Big Lake for over six months now, but I hear that the lake is temporarily gone. Don't despair though, one good rain and Big Lake will be reincarnated.

FOR AS long as I can remember, Big Lake has appeared and disappeared, depending upon the annual rainfall. Whenever the rains come, the lake is born anew and the cane pole fishermen take to the bank along Highway 137. The old standby, Mrs. Bullhead (Mud cat, pollywog or whatever), gives the bank fishermen all the action that they want.

How these much maligned catfish can appear in a lake that has been bone dry for months on end is a mystery to me, but appear they do.

The bullhead must be a tough customer, because whenever Big Lake holds water, it also holds these hardy fish. They may not be the best eating or the sportiest fish around, but bullheads are guaranteed to keep the young fishermen occupied. They are always hungry and feeding and with youngsters, action is what counts.

THE PRESENCE of bullheads and "punkinseed" perch in Big Lake has been well-documented for years, but not too many months ago my brother-in-law, Corky Allen, got into some excellent crappie and largemouth bass fishing on none other than Big Lake.

He and a couple of fishing buddies had heard that there were some good stringers of fish coming out of the then full lake and decided to check out the rumors.

When they got back to Midland they had over 150 crappie and bass on ice. I saw the filets after the fish had been cleaned and judging from the size of the filets, some of the crappie had to weigh close to a pound, and the bass up to three pounds, more.

I DON'T know if Big Lake has ever been officially stocked, or where the bass and crappie came from. I didn't think that the lake had ever held water long enough for a bass to achieve a weight of anywhere close to three pounds.

The only explanation I have heard is that a tank truck loaded with fingerling bass and crappie broke down near the Big Lake bridge and dumped its load in the lake to keep the fish from dying.

This is the only reason I can imagine for stocking a lake that will inevitably go dry at frequent intervals over the years.

IF Big Lake exists as of this writing, then you should be able to catch a stringer of fish. Don't race down there though, until you make a phone call to the Big Lake Chamber of Commerce. You will probably find out that the only lake in Big Lake is a dried up mud flat full of hibernating bullheads.

THE SPAWNING season is a lot shorter than most people realize and they often miss it completely by waiting for the bluebird weather in April before hitting the lakes.

The bass can move into the shallows and onto their nests anytime from now until the end of March given enough consecutive days of warm weather to raise the water temperature.

More often than not, the main part of the spawning season is over by the time you hear about it, and most of the really large bass will have already unloaded their eggs.

That five-pound bass that you catch after the spawn could have weighed 6 1/2 pounds on the next. Your odds of catching a trophy bass are 10-1 better during the spawning season, because fish are in the shallows and are heavier and much more aggressive than at any other time of the year.

Bicycle races slated

Bicycle motocross racing will be held each Saturday at the Midland-Odessa MotoCross Track, one mile east of Air Terminal on the north side of Highway 80.

Riders may sign up at 11 a.m. and races begin at 12:30 p.m. The races are sanctioned by the National Bicycle Association and NBA points will be awarded to all riders. Dues are $7.

Competition will be held in Expert and Novice divisions in over, 14-15, 12-13, 10-11 and 8-9 classes. There also is a 7-under novice class.

BOWLING BEAT

Williams finds groove with 245-641

Arthur Williams seems to finally be getting in the groove as he blasted his way to a 641 series, paced by a 245 game, while bowling in the Midland Teachers League. Francis Gronow also had a good week firing a 245 game and 587 series in the City Classic League. She also had a 235 game while bowling in the Sugar & Spice League.

The Air Park Classic Scratch League turned on the juice Sunday as Guy Conley produced a 222-220-630 round. Other good showings were Jim Hawthorne, 614; Jerry Myers, 604; and Rieder Moore, 600.

ALSO TURNING in 600 series during the week among leagues reporting scores were Ronnie Hopkins, 606; Sonny Poole, 616; and Vernon Williams, 618.

Darrell Hopkins, bowling in the Saturday Jrs. and Srs., rolled a 245 game after coming off last week's 617 series. Joe Jackson went 94 pins over his average with a 244 game while bowling in the Petroleum National loop, and George Patchell celebrated his birthday with a 256 game.

Several key bowling tournaments will be held in March and April 1. The Ladies City Tournament is the first two weekends in March at the Super Bowl while the Men's City Tournament is the first two weekends in April. The team event is at Air Park Lanes while the doubles and singles will be at Super Bowl. The Midland College Jaycees Tournament, open to all bowlers, is March 11 at Air Park Lanes.

MC net teams play JC rivals at Waco

WACO — After convincing victories over two four-year Universities the last weekend at Las Cruces, N.M., the Midland College tennis teams face junior college competition here today and Saturday. The Chaps defeated New Mexico State University and the University of New Mexico men's and women's teams in dual meets last weekend and topped it off by winning a rare mixed doubles meet against NMSU. Coach Brian Giley was pleased with his team's play, particularly since it has been practicing inside since the start of the spring semester.

"RON CETRONE, a sophomore from Houston, really played well last weekend," Giley said. "It was one of his best tournaments of the year. I was also delighted with the first outside competition for our two new women players. Gerry Sayers and Cat Bovell had excellent backgrounds and had looked good in practice, but it's always pleasing to see them perform well in competitive circumstances."

Miss Sayers and Miss Bovell joined MC in January after being highly ranked in Australian junior tennis. Both are freshmen from Perth, Australia. "We really didn't have any letdowns in our matches, sophomores rounding out the women's squad."

Change helps Eric Wilson

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Eric Wilson is a refugee from the U.S. men's alpine program. After three years of downhill skiing, two of them on the old Can-Am circuit, he has given it up for slalom and giant slalom.

The change in his results has been dramatic. After a mediocre to poor campaign in the downhill, Wilson, a 20-year-old from Montpelier, Vt., came in second in the men's giant slalom Thursday in the opening day of the U.S. National Alpine Championships.

Only Phil Mahre, 30, White Pass, Wash., one of the top three skiers in the world, could better his time. With a good result in this weekend's slalom, Wilson could make a strong bid for the overall national title.

Wilson said he raced downhill for two years on the Can-Am circuit and enjoyed it, but didn't have the same good feeling about competing in Europe.

He admitted he was under some pressure, however, to race in an event in which the American men have done dimly. An American man has never won a World Cup downhill race, and Mike Lafferty's second in 1972 at Crystal Mountain, Wash., has not been equaled since.

"I felt some pressure, said Wilson, because I was strong in an event, and it was the weakest event on the team. Yes, there was some push. But you can't let that bother you too much."

Racquetball tournament to begin

The Media Racquetball Tournament sponsored by Midland's Central YMCA will get under way at 6 p.m. today with 14 persons entered in the two-day event.

Open only to members of the local media, the tournament will feature matches at 6, 7, 8 and 9 p.m. today on Central YMCA courts, and will conclude with action throughout the day Saturday.

In first-round play today, Jack Pallick of Frontier Advertising will play Chris Bradford of the Midland Reporter-Telegram at 6 p.m., Jeff Jackson of KMD will face Jesse Grimes of KNFN at 7 p.m. and Tom Nickell of The Reporter-Telegram will play Cleve Hardman of KMD at 8 p.m.

JIM MURRAY Best baseball team? Try '35 NY Cubs

By JIM MURRAY The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

The greatest baseball team ever assembled was (choose one): (1) the 1927 Yankees (2) the 1929 Philadelphia Athletics (3) the 1934 Cardinals (4) the 1919 Black Sox (5) none of the above.

The correct answer may be No. 5. The greatest baseball team ever assembled was probably the 1938 Pittsburgh Crawfords or the 1935 Kansas City Monarchs or the 1935 New York Cubs or the 1939 Newark Eagles.

Look at it this way: Players from those teams got to the major leagues at the age of 40 or thereabouts and more than held their own with established younger major leaguers.

And, if you doubt these teams were the equal of the Ruth-Gehrig Yankees or the Cochran-Simmons-and-Fox Athletics or the Gashouse Gang, how would you like to have a lineup that consisted of Satchel Paige and Theolic Smith, pitchers, and backed up by Josh Gibson, Cool Papa Bell, Buck Leonard, Mule Suttie, Bizz Mackey, Judy Johnson, Vic Harris, Quincy Trouppe, "Devil" Wells and Chet Brewer?

BLACK HISTORY IS largely ignored in this country, but society as a whole has an excuse. History is written around generals and presidents, and few came out of slave quarters. But sports is something else again. Hardly a schoolboy in the country who followed baseball didn't know Satchel Paige was probably the No. 1 pitcher in the country in the '30s and '40s. Satchel proved it when he got in the big leagues. Even in his dotage, past 40, he posted a 2.48 earned run average in his first year, and he won 12 games for a last-place team in 1952 when he was either 46 or 51 years old, depending on whether you believe Satchel or his mother.

Once admitted, black players overran the game. Babe Ruth's record fell. The three-base hit disappeared when outfielders with Willie Mays, Roberto Clemente and Larry Bobby appeared. Ty Cobb's base-stealing record, which had stood for almost 50 years, was broken twice in 10 years, once by 22 bases. Batting championships, home-run records, pitching awards were won by black players who composed 10 percent of the total population but 50 percent of the major league population.

Now, were these players any better than the population of the Negro Leagues of the '20s, '30s and '40s? Well, the white players of this era aren't. Why should the black players be?

QUINCY TROUPPE, 65, is the author of a serious book about those lost years, the years baseball history forgot. Quincy's title "20 Years Too Soon" tells it all — the 29-hour bus rides, the cockroach-infested, bed bug-crawling hotel rooms, the redneck sheriffs, the carry-out dinners in fly-blown Southern diners.

Quincy was "the black Gaby Hartnett" to Northern sportswriters. Hartnett should have been flattered.

Quincy saw it all, a big south-of-the-border chili. He caught Satchel Paige for two years in, of all places, Bismarck, N.D., and has the callouses to prove it. He played ball under the lights in St. Louis seven years before the white major leagues had lights. He played under troop protection in the Caribbean. He called the pitches that struck out Bill Terry, Paul Waner and Kiki Cuyler in the barnstorming winter games where the black players got their only chance to measure their talents against highly paid World Series heroes.

Quincy got his shot in the big leagues — if you can call it that. He was 40 years old at the time. That's like being invited to try out for the Miss America contest at 60.

BASEBALL CLUMSILY tried to make it up to these neglected players by having a special committee nominate players for the Hall of Fame a year ago. So doing, the committee then disbanded. I don't know of a manager alive — or dead — who wouldn't take those eight players and challenge any nine in the history of the game.

If NFL serious, '78 may see instant replay, 7th official

By GEORGE USHER

NEW YORK — Officials checking disputed calls with instant replay monitors; a seventh official on the field; fulltime officials; an officials' headquarters; practice fields for officials, and other such innovations could be introduced next season if the National Football League is as serious as it says it is about upgrading its officiating.

Some time before March 13, when the owners of the 28 NFL clubs begin their annual organizational meeting in Palm Springs, Calif., the search will begin for the better way. The NFL no longer wants to bear the wrath of coaches, players and fans over disputed calls that can change the outcome of a game and a season.

Two officials' calls were hotly disputed late last season. Baltimore's Bert Jones appeared to have fumbled against New England the final Sunday, but it was not called. Denver's Rob Lyle appeared to fumble in the AFC title game against Oakland, but it, too, was not called.

COMMISSIONER Pete Rozelle announced prior to Super Bow XII that the original explanations by the officials, who claimed they were not fumbles, were incorrect. The problem, he said, was that the officials simply did not see the fumbles because their vision was blocked.

The unseen fumbles may have cost the Miami Dolphins an AFC playoff berth, and almost certainly cost the Oakland Raiders a trip to the Super Bowl. They also made for an embarrassed group of NFL officials and prompted renewed efforts to improve officiating.

"We have a competition committee that will meet prior to the annual meeting in Palm Springs," said Don Weiss, assistant to NFL commissioner Peter Rozelle. "The competition committee and member of our staff including Art McNally (supervisor of officials), the commissioner and I, and Jan Van Duser (director of personnel) will be meeting with that committee at various times. The decision is theirs but they'll have our input as to certain studies that have been made."

Weiss said that among those studies will be one on the feasibility of using videotaped instant replay. "We have pretty well determined that what we would consider the perfect system — or at least the highly sophisticated system that would be necessary — would be difficult (to implement)."

Weiss said. "For instance, we feel it would require at least a minimum of 12 camera positions. That sort of thing we think is impractical. The cost would be prohibitive, in the neighborhood of $50 million. The alternative is that we would look at some other areas. Maybe there is a way of using existing coverage on certain things. We're keeping an open mind on it."

THOSE ON the competition committee, which has been making a study of officiating and ways to improve it, are Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys; Paul Brown, general manager of the Cincinnati Bengals; Don Shula, head coach of the Miami Dolphins; Pat Starr, head coach of the Green Bay Packers, and Peter Hadzazy, executive vice president and general manager of the Cleveland Browns.

A year ago, Al Davis, the general manager of the Oakland Raiders, was also a member of this committee. Davis presented a plan for upgrading officiating, a plan that was shelved at the annual owners meeting last March. Not long after, Davis was removed from the committee by Rozelle, who has long been at odds with Davis over NFL policy.

O.J. makes 'Live' TV debut

By HOWARD SMITH

NEW YORK (AP) — "Well, we've got a few ideas kicking around," says Al Franken. "We might do a bit on O.J. watching Walter Payton trying to break his record. Then we might do a Babe Ruth sketch. We'll have the Babe promising some kid who's sick in the hospital that he'll hit a home run for him. And every time the Babe comes up he strikes out and the kid keeps getting sicker and sicker ... there's a surprise ending to that one."

"And we might do a thing based on a man-dog football league. Each team has to have four men and four dogs and the other three players can be a combination of the men and dogs. Some teams will be going with a seven-dog combination, dobermans will be the wide receivers ... it's kind of wild."

THESE ARE not the fevered ravings of a sports fanatic gone bonkers. They are the thoughts of a comedy writer gearing up for this week's edition of "NBC's Saturday Night Live," the network's irreverent latenight comedy show. This week the guest host is O.J. Simpson and Franken & Co. have been busy hatching sports-related sketches in their feverish minds.

Franken, who sometimes appears on camera with his partner, Tom Davis, is one of a fluctuating band of about 15 writers for the show. Each week the show is tailored to the host. Hosts are selected, in most cases, by producer Lorne Michaels and associate producer Jean Doumanian.

Why O.J.? "He's an appealing guy," says Franken, "he's come to the show before so we know he likes it and ... well ... he did gain 2,000 yards didn't he?"

The writers prepare about two shows' worth of material each week, then discard half of it along the way. Among the other ideas that may or may not turn up this week are sketches based on "Mandingo" and "Roots," a piece about the Ali-Spinks fight and a takeoff on the National Football League's United Way commercials — "Hi, my name is O.J. Simpson and this is my town" — called "O.J.'s Buffalo." Residents of Buffalo are advised to expect the worst if the latter piece is used.

"WE'VE TALKED with O.J. before and we know he's real easy to get along with," says Franken. "He's got a great sense of humor. He's different than Fran Tarkenton was. Tarkenton was very 'up,' real enthusiastic. O.J. is more laid back."

Midland defeats Permian

ODESSA — The Midland High boys gymnastics team lost a close 110-108 decision here Thursday to defending regional champion Odessa Permian.

The Pack was led by sophomore Tom Hurl, who finished second all-around. Midland outscored the Panthers in three of the six individual events, including the parallel and horizontal bars and the vaulting horse, but Mojo gained enough ground on the floor exercise, pommel horse and the rings.

Midland is now 4-2 on the year and will travel to El Paso on March 10-11 for a meet with Eastwood, Ysleta, Riverside and Bel Air high schools.

Midland College women's golf team travels for tourney

COLLEGE STATION — The Midland College women's golf team swings into action this weekend in the Texas A&M University Invitational Tournament Sunday and Monday.

Since there is no women's golf competition in the Western Junior College Conference, the Chapparrals play most of their matches against four year schools. This year, MC will host the Judy Rankin Invitational April 5-6. The National Junior College Athletic Association's women's golf tournament also will be held in Midland May 29-June 1.

"Bad weather the past two months has really hampered our practice sessions," noted Coach Susan Brodzick Holland, assistant pro at Hogan Park Golf Course.

"WE HAVE two sophomores with experience, a transfer, and two freshmen. Right now we need to get in a lot of practice and a lot of competition in order to get ready for the NJCAA nationals," she went on. Midland College finished second in the NJCAA women's tournament in 1976 and took third last year.

Members of the squad include: Suzanne Chabak, a sophomore transfer who played at San Antonio John Jay; Claire McFarland, a letter-winning sophomore from Farwell; Tammy Tyer, a letter sophomore from Floydada; Tammy Wilkerson, a freshman from Rankin, and Leigh Elizondo, a freshman from Midland Lee who joined the team at mid-term.

Mariners' hurlers work out TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The Seattle Mariners' pitching staff held its first official workout of the 1978 spring training season Thursday in preparation for the club's second season in the American League.

All pitchers except Enrique Romo participated in the workout. Also on hand were catcher Bob Stinson and first baseman Bob Robertson.

Peggy Lee fights to retain her 'purity' of illusion

By LEONARD FEATHER
The Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO—In her room between shows at the Fairmont Hotel, Peggy Lee is in the mood to talk. Resting on her bed, her feet elevated by pillows, she feels relaxed but resentful as she considers some of the acts that are being perpetrated in the name of entertainment, and many of the sounds that are being passed off as music.

As one of the most durable survivors of what has now come to be known in some circles as the good music generation, she remains secure in her career and her artistic beliefs. When she speaks out, she is motivated neither by bitterness nor envy, but by a passionate concern for the future of a profession to which she has devoted herself as a singer and songwriter of incontestable talent.

Speaking of her upcoming concert Wednesday at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion in Los Angeles, she says: "We like to do our part in preserving music as more of an entertainment and less of a sideshow. We're going for all out elegance and glamour. I'm using some lovely new material, and we have 32 great musicians to play for me.

"I still have a strong conviction that beauty is important in life, whether it's in singing, writing, literature, paintings. We'll never lose those values. I do feel that people in the arts have a duty to maintain certain standards of excellence, to counteract..." She paused for a moment, as if uncertain whether to point the dagger, then plunged in:

"Take this rock group Kiss. Did you see them in that program 'The Hype and the Glory' with Edwin Newman on NBC? They're in their late 20s or 30s, they're never seen without makeup, and the young kids have this illusion that they are romantic idols or something, when in fact it's just a total put-on. Grotesque.

"The Sex Pistols — when I was in London I was so embarrassed, because at first I was under the impression they were an American group, and they did this dreadful offensive song about the Queen. I was quite shocked to hear that A & M had signed them to a recording contract, but then later I learned that they had been dropped and paid off with quite a sizable sum of money.

"Remember the days of the carnival, when they had the men they called geeks? They made them eat live chickens and lizards of whatever they were told to do. The geeks were poor fellows who hardly knew where they were; they were winos or mentally ill, and the only way they could survive was by doing these weird things. I just hate to think of show business slipping back to a stage that isn't too far removed from that."

One can well empathize with Peggy, whose whole thrust has always been toward perfectionism, toward the concept of creating a gracious illusion for her audience. When she reads the great debates on such topics as whether or not this or that pop group spat blood or vomited on stage, she may well say to herself, is that all there is to show biz?

Her concern extends to her recording activity, an area for which she has lately found a more congenial base in England (as did Bing Crosby in the last year of his life).

"Right now I just don't find conditions conducive to recording in this country. I'm thinking of the great power wielded by producers; in particular I have in mind a team of producers I worked with who spent a great deal of what was supposed to be our working time just lying around in the sun in the South of France — and all the expense involved had to be charged against my royalties. It wound up being nothing but a very costly demo, which in effect I paid for.

"I like to go in and sing with the orchestra, live, not overdubbed, and it doesn't call for a whole lot of production. In fact, it shouldn't necessitate more than two or three takes if you know what you're doing. But then producers will put on limiters that erase all the overtones in the voice, so that you don't even sound like yourself any more, and all the life is taken out of the performance. The producers spend so much time doing this sort of thing, and time is money, so it all comes out of the artist's royalties. Therefore I object strongly to that kind of thing in the recording industry.

"I guess I'm being controversial for the first time. Are you surprised to hear me talk like this? No names, but if the shoe fits, either wear it or throw it away — or rather, if it fits, I hope it's too tight."

On the other hand, says Ms. Lee, in England you are treated as though you are an artist. "I made two albums in London; one was live at the Palladium; and it was literally live — brilliant engineers — and the other was a studio session. The musicians were very well prepared and they didn't waste time fooling around. They played marvelously in tune — they have a sense of discipline that is to be admired.

"I know a lot of fine musicians in America who would love to be working in England and wonder why they aren't. Well, one of the reasons is that the costs have gone sky high here. It's gotten to the point where even the copyists make almost as much as the arrangers, or in some cases more — which is unfair, because an arranger is a creative person. By the time you pay the copying costs nowadays you feel like retiring."

Partly because of her concern about the high cost of touring, Peggy is very selective in accepting bookings. She has only recently been back in action after an accident stepping out of an elevator in New York kept her off the scene for almost all of 1977. Now she looks forward to such prestigious dates as a pair of April appearances with symphony orchestras in Amarillo and Lubbock, Texas.

"And I'm excited about my week in Detroit, April 25-30, where I'll finally be appearing with Count Basie's orchestra. After all these years of wanting to do that, it should really be fun."

She is not one to allow her mind to idle — or her hands. During the inactivity that followed the accident, she busied herself making a king sized afghan for her daughter, but what had started out as a time-killer soon became a business as she began designing for a large chain of fabric stores in Japan.

Songwriting, her second love after singing, has returned to her schedule in the form of a commission to work on a motion picture score.

"Maurice Jarre is going to be doing the music. I already have a number of lyrics finished — they're quite an integral part of the movie — but I'm waiting for Maurice to write the melodies, then I'll rewrite the words to fit them."

For all her reservations about her profession as she sees it, Peggy Lee retains a lively interest in every genre of music she considers valid.

"What do I listen to? That's hard to answer. There's always Leontyne Price. At home I listen to a lot of instrumentals, a lot of classical music.

"I love Billy Joel, love his writing; I like Carol Bayer Sager, Carly Simon, Miles Davis with Gil Evans, Satie. Depending on my mood, I can go from Hurricane Smith to Carmen McRae. I enjoy listening to that album Paul Horn recorded in the Taj Mahal. Of course, there are all the foregone-conclusion people whom I shouldn't even need to mention — Ella, Sarah, Frank, Tony.

Finally working together are Helen Hayes and Fred Astair, who will star in a love story entitled "A Family Upside Down." (CNS Photo)

Narrator not concerned with image he presents

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD—Tony Bill, narrator for NBC's new series, "What Really Happened to the Class of '65," candidly says he accepted the job only because he was offered a lot of money which he could use to continue his work as a producer.

"I act to provide money to produce," Tony declares.

He's so disinterested in the image he presents as an actor that he's never seen "Washington Behind Closed Doors," in which he had a major role.

Further, he bought his first television set only a couple of weeks ago.

And why did he finally buy? "I was bored," he answers.

Ross Hunter jubilantly calls "A Family Upside Down," a drama for NBC television and for overseas theatrical release, "a love story," though its principals are well past the Romeo and Juliet age.

They are Helen Hayes and Fred Astair, working together for the very first time.

Ross was able to get Hayes for the production, because she's a dear friend who's worked for him often, while Astair couldn't resist the opportunity to work with Hayes.

"Fifty years ago when they were on Broadway," Hunter tells, "they were friends. And, when she was summoned by the movies, Fred asked her to try to find a part for him in one of her pictures.

"Now, at long last, they've worked together."

"A Family Upside Down" relates the tragedy of an elderly couple, very much in love, who must be separated because of the husband's poor health.

"I got the idea for it from reading the papers," Ross says. "I wanted to make an honest love story, but one all ages could relate to. The story is about old people, but young people will be able to relate, for age is something they, too, will have to experience. Not one of us can escape aging."

Yet, he says, it's not something to fear.

"I never even think of getting old," Ross declares. "Age is only a number. I wish I had half the pep of Helen Hayes."

Henry Mancini will score the top-drawer production which will be aired in the spring.

Julie Andrews has wound up taping "Julie Andrews... One Step Into Spring," a special produced by Bob Banner for CBS. You'll see the show next spring, natch.

Checks aren't worth much

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State officials have 2.7 million blank checks they can't use because they are signed by a dead man.

The warrants, signed by the late treasurer Jesse James, cost $24,500 to print, and it is estimated they would fill two semitrailer trucks.

The warrants are similar to regular checks and are used to pay state employees and other state bills.

Officials are considering using the Department of Public Safety's marijuana incinerator to burn the warrants. If it can't be readjusted to burn paper, however, the warrants may be sawed in half or shredded.

Flood assured of funds to group

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., sought assurances in 1973 that the Agency for International Development would continue funding a foundation whose director later allegedly gave Flood $59,000 for his assistance.

Flood's concern for the welfare of the foundation was communicated to AID by another powerful member of the House, former Rep. Otto Passman, D-La., according to one of several documents released by the government Thursday.

The documents also show that some AID officials criticized various aspects of the relationship between the agency and the Airline Foundation of Warrenton, Va. One suggested that Airline was "exorbitantly expensive." Elsewhere it was noted that while the Airline film-making contracts were let on a non-competitive basis, "any of two dozen commercial filmmakers" could have rendered equal or better service.

Despite the criticism, AID continued awarding contracts to Airline including one for $2 million as recently as last week.

Flood is one of the subjects in a spreading federal investigation into congressional influence peddling. The FBI this week began looking into at least $16.6 million in AID contracts awarded to Airline Foundation and a George Washington University Medical Center group associated with Airline.

The AID documents released Thursday indicate that former Passman, acting at the urging of Flood, sought AID of hat the Airline contracts would be continued. Former AID administrator John A. Hannah, in a letter to Passman on June 25, 1973, wrote Passman: "You can assure Congressman Flood that all of these projects will be funded through to their conclusion."

Passman was the chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations at the time. The subcommittee had control over the AID budget.

According to an affidavit filed Dec. 6 in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, Stephen Elko, a former Flood aide, said Airline Foundation's director, Dr. Murdock Head, was the source of 187,000 in payments between 1971 and 1973 to Flood, Passman and Elko.

Flood, Passman and Head have all denied that any such payments were made.

In other developments Thursday:
—The Department of Health, Education and Welfare released a 1971 internal audit on another set of Airline contracts for that department. The audit was sharply critical of the foundation and said that bookwork for the contracts was "either never maintained, missing, incomplete or mathematically incorrect."

—A former senior AID official asserted that Passman delayed approving funds for Harvard University to increase pressure on AID to approve the Airline-Geroge Washington University contracts.

—The Philadelphia Inquirer said in a copyrighted story that Flood pressured the Army an Air Force to heat West German installations with anthracite coal supplied by a Pennsylvania company in Flood's district. The company's president recently paid $15,000 in legal fees for Flood's former administrative aide.

The former aide Elko turned state's evidence after he was sentenced to three years in prison for taking payoffs. He is a key witness in the investigation of Flood and another Pennsylvania Democrat Rep. Joshua Eilberg.

The AID documents, which were released Thursday under a freedom of information request, show that Harold A. Kieffer, a former senior AID official, repeatedly complained to his superiors about the way the Airline contracts had been handled.

A 1974 memo from Kieffer to AID assistant administrator John A. Murphy stated that Murphy himself had outlined congressional pressures that were being brought to bear on the agency in behalf of the contract.

"As you have related to me," Kieffer wrote, "a powerful congressman has directly and secretly demanded that you arrange for AID to make a large grant from this year's scarce funds to finance the GWU-Airline proposal."

Kieffer said the demands were couched "in coercive terms that relate directly to his potential and strategic role in arranging possible increases or decreases" in AID programs.

Kieffer urged his superiors not to bend to the pressure. "There may be retaliation," he wrote, "but it does not matter who the congressman is or what his power over us may be. Some things are just wrong and his coercion and demands in this case are wrong."

Kieffer, who resigned in 1975, said in a telephone interview he was referring to Passman in the documents. Despite his objections, the project was ordered funded by Murphy.

In the HEW audit, which covers a separate but similar set of contracts which were awarded to Airline, the foundation was criticized by HEW auditors on a number of grounds. Airline, they said, turned in poorly documented claims for salary, travel and consulting charges. The foundation also had duplicate claims for air fare costs and made arithmetic errors in its own favor.

In the AID case, Kieffer asserted in a telephone interview from Los Angeles yesterday that in 1974 Passman had become so "piqued" with the agency's slowness in approving a $5 million population study grant to Airline that he retaliated by delaying funds to Harvard University's population center. At the time that Airline and George Washington University sought to start a population information center, Harvard already was operating an AID-financed six-year program on population economics, sociology and policy.

When, in 1974, AID advised Passman's office that the Harvard program would be extended, the powerful subcommittee chairman "made menacing comments that he'd hold hearings," according to Kieffer, and wanted to know why AID was approving funds to Harvard but delaying the Airline-GWU proposal. For several months the funds to Harvard were held up, he said.

The suspension of funding was confirmed Thursday by sources familiar with the Harvard program who said that Harvard had been "socked" by Passman.

Thursday, the Philadelphia Inquirer printed new allegations about Flood's activities in Congress.

The paper said that the Army and Air Force may have spent tens of millions of dollars more than necessary over the last 17 years to heat bases in West Germany largely because of Flood's pressure on the armed forces to buy anthracite coal from a company in the congressman's district. Flood is a senior member of the powerful House Appropriations Committee.

The largest single supplier of this anthracite is Jeddo-Highland Coal Co., of Pittston. The company is headed by James J. Tedesco, who is awaiting sentencing on a conviction for fixing coal prices.

The paper said that Tedesco paid $15,000 for the legal defense of Flood's top aide Elko on a federal bribery case. Elko, according to a sworn affidavit, told investigators that $100,000 had been channeled to Flood for congressional favors.

EPA says Ector County fails to meet pollution standards

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau
By LARRY SPRINGER

AUSTIN — The regional office of the Environmental Protection Agency has recommended that EPA administrator Douglas Costle designate Ector County as failing to meet national air pollution standards for photochemical oxidants.

If that designation is made final by Costle, the county will be subject to the controversial "emissions offset policy" which would require new or expanding industry to arrange for a reduction in pollution by existing pollutant sources so the level of overall pollution would be reduced even after the new facility becomes operational.

While the Dallas EPA office officially has remained mum on its recommendations as to which locations should be designated as "non-attainment" areas, a Feb. 8 letter from EPA regional administrator Adrienne Harrison to Gov. Dolph Briscoe identifies Ector County and others as those areas which the EPA Washington office likely will propose for the non-attainment status.

The EPA regional office had considered listing more than 50 counties as violating the standard for photochemical oxidants (smog), it was reported.

But, in an apparent effort to bring the Texas regional recommendation in line with those proposals from the other EPA regional offices, the Dallas office restricted its oxidant non-attainment list to 15 counties where violations of the standard actually have been monitored.

The Texas Air Control Board earlier had recommended to the EPA that 11 counties — Jefferson, Orange, El Paso, Travis, Dallas, Tarrant, Brazoria, Galveston, Harris, Bexar and portions of Nueces County — be designated as non-attainment areas for oxidants.

EPA accepted that recommendation, but added Gregg, McLennan, Victoria and Ector counties to the list.

The "rationale" for these designations, Mrs. Harrison's letter explains, is that the counties "have recorded violations of the National Ambient Air Quality Standard for oxidants...."

In all of the affected counties, except Victoria, violations were recorded by state air pollution monitoring equipment.
