Last week I wrote a little column on "How hay hauling has improved over the good old days".

That set me to thinking about a lot of other things that have improved in my life since Thomas and I married.

One of the first things that comes to mind is our bathing facilities. A bath tubs a bath tub, right? Wrong.

The first tub we had didn't have anything wrong with it...but the water supply came from a well that had a very definite tendency to go dry during the summer months.

There's nothing like being all lathered up with soap, having the faucet give a muddy gurgle, and being completely out of water. Now we have a county water supply, and a huge hot water heater capable of handling the longest, hottest soak imaginable.

Then there is the refrigerator. Oh, ours doesn't sport water spigots and ice spigots, or even an ice maker, but it IS frost free...and it DOES work!

The first fridge we owned cost us $15 and we got cheated. For the first three months of our marriage we had to listen to the thing muttering and growling to itself. Then, while we were gone for three days, it died! We had to pay $25 for the next one!

Air conditioning, central heating, weather stripping, a roof that doesn't leak...these are all things that slowly were achieved over a number of years.

Television has seen some real improvements in our marriage...I don't mean the programming, I mean the quality of tv and reception. We had been married nearly a year before we acquired a used black and white TV, courtesy of Thomas' dad. About four years later (when we got a phone, too) we acquired a used color TV. The case looked absolutely awful, but it worked. The antenna we used was set in an old wheel hub. To change directions, someone had to go outside and turn the whole pole until the inside person yelled that the picture was best.

The stove we have now has a working oven, something my stove didn't have for a four year period at one point in time!

One of the biggest improvements in our life has been in the washer and dryer. For fourteen years we got by with an old, battered washer from my brother's laundry. The thing even had the coin slot on the front! It broke with greater regularity than any piece of equipment I've ever seen.

The dryer was a $10 special. It worked well for years, but finally it got to the point where the drum would jump off it's track. Then it set up a screech that echoed through the neighborhood. One winter day, when it had rained for weeks, I had to go out, grab the drum and wrench it back into it's track sixteen times before one load of clothes was dry.

That's when I had enough of a fit that we bought a new dryer.

There are certainly worse hardships than chipping ice from an old refrigerator, or having to put a pan under a leak in the roof.

But, like hay hauling, life is so much more pleasant without having to deal with such things.

No, I don't feel very nostalgic about the "good ole days"...I like it now, and hope to enjoy the future too!

Fall Bounty Points To Harsh Winter

By Nanalee Nichols

If all the signs are right, the upcoming winter months should be cold and harsh.

There's always been a lot of old wives tales about predicting a harsh winter...but don't discount those tales completely...there's some truth in them.

Obviously the thickness of a wild animals coat in the fall couldn't have anything to do with how cold the winter is going to be...right? Wrong. Generations of both casual and scientific study reveal that when squirrels, rabbits, coyotes, raccoons and other wild creatures have heavy coats of fur nature intends for them to have that protection during a bitter season.

Accordingly, nature provides birds and animals with extra food during a bad winter.

Anyone can observe the crop of extra large, extra plentiful boys' d arc apples, a favorite food of squirrels and raccoons, this fall.

Berries, the multitude of bright red and deep purple ones that most people never notice, grow wild along roadsides and in thickets. This year's crop is exceptionally heavy, with clusters hanging down to the ground.

Rose hips and the fat, dried grains that grow underneath the brambles are heavy.

It all points to a long, cold winter in which nature's creatures will need lots of food.

An old wives tale predicts that thirty days after the first broomweed blooms, there will be a first frost. Again, if that's true, this area is due a frost within two weeks.

And what about the humans? Do our instincts take over more than we realise? Are we subconsciously purchasing heavy clothing, and stocking up on food?

It would take a massive survey to reveal the truth on that. But for now, a quick look at the size of wood piles tends to indicate that yes, we still retain some contact with a sense of the seasons, and yes, we too expect this winter to be bitter.

Keep track, take some notes, and when spring time comes, see if nature's predictions came true!

Dear Editor:

I recently closed my service station business on Highway 271 in Bogata after 50 years of service there. I know that I haven't pleased all of the people all of the time, but I hope that I've pleased most of the people most of the time.

I opened my service station in March, 50 years ago. I started with almost nothing but with the help of people in this area, I have enjoyed a very successful business. I've made many friends during these past years of service and met many nice people traveling through.

I want to take this opportunity to say to the many customers who have contributed to my success, "Thanks a million". I appreciate your patronage and your friendship. Joe Choate and Family

Old Days Of Lye Soap

By Jay's Grandpaw, "Shooter" Dabney

Maybe the old days are not what they seemed, or maybe I just don't remember as well as I used to. Anyway, I decided to go back to one of the things people used to do, out of necessity, not choice.

I decided I would make some homemade lye soap to shampoo my hair. I had noticed dandruff had invaded my scalp. Now I tried the three shampoos on the market that are supposed to rid your scalp of dandruff. It was like putting fertilizer on weeds. The dandruff flourished. My mother preached to me when I was a young boy to use lye soap and rainwater and wash my hair often.

This was also the same remedy used to cure dogs of mange. I found a recipe for homemade lye soap by a lady that had won prizes for soap and potted plants. Here's the recipe: 7 pounds hog lard, three gallons of water. Dissolve lye in water, add grease before water boils, boil 1-15 minutes. This sounded simple enough and I tackled the job with gusto. I took off to the store, bought lye, then looked for hog lard. Suddenly a thought struck me. "Women don't know everything, so why not buy six pounds of Crisco instead of lard? It's healthier, won't give my scalp trouble with cholesterol." None of that plain stuff for me. Butter flavor. My bill was $9.30. I could hardly wait to get home and get started.

Grabbing a huge pot my wife called a preserving kettle, set the pot on a hot plate which was on the deep freeze in the garage. I poured water in the pot, put in the Crisco, let the water heat, then added the lye.

You ain't witnessed anything like what happened. No one, not even the recipe told me not to use an aluminum pot in soap making.

A huge puff of white foam shot into the air. The pot began to dance on the hot plate. Ka-BLAM! it just melted.

Methodist Ladies Attend Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the United Methodist Women of the Paris-Sulphur Springs District was held at the Wesley United Methodist Church in Greenville on October 22.

Guest speaker, Leta Gorman, made an interesting and inspirational talk on the theme of the meeting "Bind Us Together In Love". Officer workshops were held and everyone came away with renewed commitment, enthusiasm and lots of resource material for use in their local units in 1989.

Those attending from the Bogata United Methodist Church were Eleanor McCluer, Betty Puckett, Judy Marshall and Bob Bush.

You can have a ladder accident and never leave the ground

Ladder safety is more than avoiding falls. Ladders conduct electricity, so they can also cause accidents around the power lines — before you ever leave the ground.

To prevent such accidents, make sure you don't snag a power line when you're carrying a ladder around the yard. Before you climb the ladder, place it away from power lines.

Aluminum and other metal ladders are especially good conductors of electricity, but you can be injured by power lines with a wooden one too.

For more information on power line safety, call or visit your local TNP office.

The bride is the daughter of Lynn and Roy Spencer of Sulphur Springs. The bridegroom is the son of Gerald and Kay Martin of Talco.

The gold flower stands held arrangements of royal blue, dark purple, white and lavender roses and carnations with baby's breath scattered throughout.

Wedding music was provided by Janice Jones, aunt of the groom. Vocalist was Lynn Spencer, mother of the bride.

The bride was escorted to the altar by Roy Spence. She was given away by her dad.

The bride wore a gown made by her mother-in-law, Kay Martin. The bodice was white satin covered with rose lace and skirt was white satin, the gown was the Princess Hi-low look. The bodice was covered with silver glass beads and seeded pearls. The angel wing sleeves were covered in glass beads and pearls. The bride carried a nosegay of roses and carnations of blue, purple and lavender miniature roses, accented with baby's breath and ribbons.

Jennifer Bell of Sulphur Springs, sister of the bride, wore a walking length princess style lavender dress. She carried a long stemmed green leaf with wedding colors spread throughout and ribbons.

Charley Martin of Mt. Pleasant stood by his brother as best man.

The bride's parents hosted a reception in Fellowship Hall, following the ceremony. Members of the houseparty were Nadine Burke of Talco, Amy Webb of Mesquite, Lisa Carroll of Talco and Tricia Martin of Mt. Pleasant. After a short wedding trip, the couple will reside in Bridges Chapel.

Author Gunnison Steele Was Local Native

A recent item in the Times about Barry Gardner reminded a reader of Barry's father, who wrote western and adventure stories under the name of Gunnison Steele. His widow, the former Mercedes Reece, reminisced for us:

He was born February 4, 1906 in the Martin community south of Deport to James R. and Marietta Evans Gardner, the last of four children. They named him Benjamin Wilson and he was inevitably called "Bennie", which he hated.

"Bennie" didn't mingle much about other boys, not even with his brothers, Earl and Jimmie. He was most often to be found in his room with tablet and pencil for by the time he was eight years old he knew that he meant to write. He was being published in the Lone Scout magazine when he was not much older. (The Lone Scout magazine existed for the benefit of country boys who had no access to the regular Boy Scouts in the towns.) By the time he was in his twenties, he was selling regularly to the pulp western and adventure magazines at first under his own name.

As with most writers a time occurred when he wasn't selling so he decided to change his name and start over altogether. The name he chose, Gunnison Steele, seemed to him to have a look and sound to be appropriate to appear in a western magazine. That seemed to be the answer—the first story sent out under that name brought back a check. Years later he regretted that he hadn't kept his own name which he did use occasionally when he had two pieces in the same issue.

Gardner was never much interested in school and left at the end of his junior year. He wanted to get on with his writing. He always regretted it. He called himself a hack writer, but he was listed as among the top ten western and adventure writers in his field.

Most western magazines were printed on news print and writers who sold to them were called pulp writers. Their highest ambition was to sell to the "slicks", the Saturday Evening Post; Collier's Liberty, etc. the last two are long defunct. Gunnison Steele submitted his work to them frequently and editors were asking to see more of his work. But it was not to be, he died January 8, 1948 in Eureka Springs, AR of a heart attack. He would have been 42 years old February 4.

Steele had married Mercedes Reece, also of Deport in 1930 and their only child, Barry Wilson, was born May 13, 1939, who is now a Deputy Chief with almost 30 years in the Dallas Fire Department. Barry's father always planned for him to be a writer but until recently his only writing has been as a part of his duties in the Fire Department. Now in his "spare time" he is publishing a monthly newsletter, Uncommon Lodgings, a project of which his father would have definitely approved.

Nowadays unless a writer has published a book he has no status. Steele has only one book to his credit, "Passport to Perdition", published first as the lead novel in a western magazine. "Lead" novels were just that—book length stories the wordage of which comprised almost all of the magazine and featured the story title and the author's name on the cover which depicted a scene from the novel.

As a typist, Gunnison Steele used the old two-finger hunt and peck

MURDER CANYON

BY GUNNISON STEELE

GUNNISON STEELE—Former Deport resident, Barry Gardner, was a well-known western short story and novel writer. This is the cover to a short story published some years ago.

system but he was a fast and accurate typist and seldom re-typed a page. He knew just what he wanted to say and how to say it before he put a sheet of paper in the typewriter. His typewriter was a rebuilt Remington purchased from Sears Roebuck & Co. for $150.00. It was a heavy one, no plastic parts on it.

Always an individualist, "Bennie" had his desk made to order, low enough for him to use a comfortable rocking chair instead of the usual desk chair. It was in that chair that he thought out most of his plots and composed the story. His notes are unreadable now, even his widow can't read them although she could at that time. She uses his desk now.

He tried to keep copies of each magazine that had one of his stories, but friends would borrow an issue to read them oftentimes.

Western magazines as they were then are no more although there are a very few being published. And Gunnison Steele, also known as Bennie Gardner, is just a memory.

Slow down, James. Slow down, James. Hurry, get out of the truck. Please, get out. Hurry. Those were the last words I remember. Oh, God, why didn't I listen to my Mom and Dad. My Grandparents. Nancy said to be careful as we walked out the door, not more than five minutes ago. I'll be 18 in one week from today if I live. What about all of my cousins lives that I've taken in my hands. My responsibility, I'm responsible, responsible for their lives, my actions and my truck. These are the things going on in my mind as we were going around the curve as I was trying to find the brake.

We were on a typical Saturday afternoon run through town. James 13, Tina 14, Robert 12, Bradley 8 and myself, one week away from being 18.

James wanted to drive. I told him "no way man" but he kept on begging and finally I said "OK". The first thing I told him was "If you wreck my truck, you had better run for your life."

Well, we took off headed in the direction of town. Everyone laughing about James' driving. No big deal. Daddy lets me drive sometimes and so does my Grandpa. James was saying, "Yea, man, my Mom and Dad used to let me drive all over Bogata when I was your age. I thought it was OK to let him drive. All of the parents in the small towns around here let their kids drive around town. That's just part of country life."

When we get close to the curve by the fire station, James was going too fast to make the curve. This is a dream, oh God, please let me wake up, don't let this be happening. I reach over in a panic to put my foot on the brake, to try and take control of the truck, but as I reached over with my foot, my leg pushed his foot, making his foot hit the throttle. Then it was all slow motion. Slowly going across the road, hitting the telephone pole, screams oh! The screams of those kids echoing in my head, my responsibility! In my care! What have I done now?

Then the contact to the pole. I look over and everyone is crying, screaming, trying to get out, but the door won't open. I look around trying to check each one of them and there's Bradley, blood pouring down his face. I reach over, hit the door with all of my strength. It came open and kids fall out on the ground. I pick up Brad screaming "Help me, someone please, please help us. Call an ambulance, please help. Call my Nanny, call my Mom, oh please, forgive me God." The help comes, Nanny gets there, the kids mom is there by now. The police are questioning us, I'm scared to death. They ask who's driving, well I do what I've heard everyone else say they would do, I lied. I said I was. They questioned me for a long time, then they talked to James. Well, James was scared, but he did the right thing, he told the truth. Now my truck is totaled, my cousins have cuts, bruises and Brad has a broken nose and they are taking me to jail. Me, the responsible person. I was telling the Sheriff I worked all summer long to buy that old truck, my pride and joy. Now look, I'm on my way to jail for lying and allowing a minor to drive.

I don't understand. My Dad let me and my brother and sister drive before we were old enough. All of my friends were out cruising the boulevard before they had licenses. Well they let me go after I paid a $65.00 fine for letting a minor drive. My Mom was standing outside, worried to death. She took me home. The kids are all OK, my truck is totaled. But I guess that I've learned the most important lesson of my life. I've learned something many adults have never learned. We are all responsible for our own actions. If I ever get another truck, no one will ever drive it but me, especially not a minor.

Jamie D. Wright brought this letter over on Sunday afternoon, the day after his accident. He has tried to express his feelings the best way he knows how, in the hopes that it might help others to learn from his experience.
