Friends, former political foes look back favorably at Ford

EDITOR'S NOTE: Former President Gerald Ford, who helped dedicate Midland's Petroleum Museum in September of 1975, celebrates his 88th birthday today. Veteran Washington correspondent Trude B. Feldman reflects on the man and his political career.

Twenty seven years ago, on Aug. 9, 1974, President Richard M. Nixon resigned from office, and Vice President Gerald R. Ford became the 38th president of the United States.

One month later, Ford granted a "full, free and absolute pardon" to Nixon "for all offenses against the United States which he has committed or may have committed or taken part in" while he was president.

For his actions, Ford, who celebrates his 88th birthday today, was honored in May with a John F. Kennedy Profile in Courage Award. Presented by the former president's daughter Caroline Kennedy Schloss-

Judges order state agency to pay, citing 'misconduct'

■ Texas Department of Human Services to pay $141,000-plus in Manor Park's attorney fees and court costs.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The "inappropriate conduct" by agents of the Texas Department of Human Services (TDHS) in a case involving Midland's Manor Park Inc. and its Mabee Health Care Center has resulted in historic sanctions by the State Office of Administrative Hearing (SOAH) against the state agency — TDHS.

The TDHS, which had sought to revoke Mabee's nursing-home license due to alleged discrepancies, has withdrawn its case against Manor Park and its Mabee facility.

Mabee's TDHS nursing-home license is intact.

And SOAH Administrative Law Judges Suzanne Formby Marshall and Cassandra Church, who found TDHS "misconduct" through fraud by its agents in prosecuting the lawsuit against Mabee, ordered TDHS to pay Manor Park's attorney fees and court costs that totaled $141,488.17.

"I think justice has been served," Alan Hale, Manor Park's executive director, said on Friday. "Unfortunately, it is sad for the great state of Texas to have its tax dollars wasted by improprieties of a state agency."

In their order, the judges noted the case is the first in SOAH's nine-year history that SOAH had been asked to and has awarded sanctions "in a contested case hearing for inappropriate conduct by an agency and its counsel."

"In the nine years of SOAH's existence, no other case has involved sanctions for conduct of this type," the judges noted.

The case, too, was the "first license revocation of a nursing home" by TDHS, the judges said in quoting parties to the lawsuit.

The TDHS, in making its case against the Mabee unit, had introduced into evidence an exhibit's testimony that "was not authentic but had been created prior to the hearing," according to the 33-page order signed by the judges.

As a result, the court "struck the pertinent pages" of the re-created exhibit, which featured the testimony of Tracy North, a TDHS manager, on Mabee's evaluation history.

That purge effectively killed TDHS' license-revocation case against Manor Park's Mabee unit.

TDHS lawyers, Dallas Hutton and William Taylor, had misplaced the original document and had asked Ms. North to re-create the evidence, noted TDHS spokesman Mike Jones. The re-created substitute document was represented in court as the original document, which, too late in the case, eventually was located.

The court expressed dismay over the deception.

Residents fight off invasion of grackles

By Kasey Kelly
MRT Correspondence

Talk about your trashy birds.

Birds such as sparrows and starlings may be considered nuisances, but there are few birds more likely to inspire homeowners to turn out their cats than the arrival of a flock of grackles.

They are big, shrieking, sinister-looking birds dressed in iridescent black. Few people have a kind word for them.

The real problem with grackles seems to be they are large, loud and messy, and in large social flocks, they're VERY messy.

"I don't like them," said Anita Norris, who has recently been "terrorized" by a flock of the birds. "They mess all over my deck and yard."

Ms. Norris said these birds are fearless and actually seem to enjoy a form of "emotional terrorism."

She explained:

"My husband goes out early in the morning to pick up our paper," she said. "They will actually dive bomb him."

Wild animals moving to city

By Kasey Kelly

They are here to stay.

Foxes, skunks, jack rabbits and other wildlife are flocking to town in search of water.

The drought conditions across the Permian Basin are causing wild animals to leave their homes in the field in search of water and cooler conditions.

"The dry conditions are drawing in much of the wildlife," said Coy Willis, director of Midland's Animal Control. "Everything has to have water."

Midland seniors leery of pharmacy discount cards proposed by Bush

By Kristine Aleman
MRT Correspondent

Senior citizens soon may see some effects of President Bush's promises to help ease the burden of paying high prescription drug costs. Under a White House proposal aimed at providing quick relief from those high costs, seniors would get a pharmacy discount card next year.

Midland seniors wait for Bush to announce the pharmacy discounts, but many share the opinion of seniors across the nation — they're doubtful.

Bush proposed during his candidacy to create a $158 billion plan covering prescription drugs for the elderly poor and subsidize choice in drug plans for other Medicare beneficiaries.

The administration is designing a national version of an approach adopted recently by some private insurers. The plan relies on companies that manage drug benefits to buy prescription drugs in bulk. These companies would sell cards to Medicare patients, who could use them at any pharmacy to purchase their medicine at a reduced rate.

Even those seniors who are more fortunate with their health and medication understand most efforts made by the government to help with prescription costs are just wishful thinking.

"I've never really had to put much thought into it. We're doing well," said senior Bob O'Hara, a former air traffic controller.

However, O'Hara called the relationship between seniors and government policies a "survival deal."

"As long as I am able to go to Big Spring to see the doctor, I think I'll be OK," said Tommy Taylor, a senior cit-

Flood victims blame coal companies for damage

By Vicki Smith
Associated Press

DOROTHY, W.Va. — When the rains came down, so did the rocks and dirt left bare by the Princess Beverly Coal Co. The mess came roaring down the mountain, down Booger Hollow, and slammed into dozens of homes below in the town Dorothy.

In the aftermath of the flooding that struck coal-country communities like Dorothy last weekend, some West Virginians are putting some of the blame for the disaster on mining companies' practice of cutting away mountaintops.

"If they stopped this land-topping and started mining like folks did in the old days, this wouldn't happen," said Jerry Webb, whose house in Dorothy is among the few undamaged by trees or buried in muck.

"God didn't have a thing to do with this," he added. "Man did."

Across southern West Virginia's coalfields, some 3,500 homes were damaged or swept away during last Sunday's record floods. Two people were killed.

Matthew Crum, director of the state Office of Mining and Reclamation, said it is a "legitimate question to ask whether the presence of mining in the area contributed to the storm damage." But he also noted that the rain was extraordinarily heavy — up to 10 inches in some places.

Similarly, the coal companies said they have drainage systems in place and cannot be blamed for damage from so much rain.

Tell that to the folks in Dorothy, where debris from nearby Kayford Mountain is sitting in their living rooms.

Studies show coal companies have received state permits to fill about 800 miles of streams with rock since they started blasting away mountaintops to get at more coal about a decade ago — a practice that is changing the region's topography. Critics also note that 250,000 acres of hardwood trees are logged in the state every year.

"The apologists for big coal and big timber are falling all over themselves to blame this latest disaster solely on God or natural causes," environmental activist Vivian Stockman said. "Granted, there was a lot of rain in a short time. But why are we seeing so-called 100-year floods every few months?"

This isn't the first time mountaintop removal has been the subject of debate. It is the subject of an unresolved federal lawsuit over the environmental damage done when the rock and soil from the cut-off mountaintops are dumped into streams and hollows.

Although a technical requirement to limit offsite damage has always existed, the state did not focus on the danger of runoff until the past year, said Roger Calhoun, state director for the federal Office of Surface Mining.

"How much the applicant had to submit proof of no offsite damage was not as specific as it is now," he said.

On Thursday, four days after the floods, eight coal operators and two land holding companies were sued by a man who believes they share responsibility for the disaster. The man, Carl Philip Arnold, said the mountain terrain has been so altered by industry that the results sent "incomprehensible amounts" of water coursing into the valleys below.

Since Sunday, the state Department of Environmental Protection has cited 10 coal companies for drainage and erosion problems. Post-flood inspections found that runoff from the mine sites damaged roads and houses, and filled streams with mud and debris.

First septuplets born in U.S. in more than 3 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weighing little more than two pounds each, America's first septuplets since 1997 lay in critical condition Friday, attended by teams of doctors and nurses watching their every breath and movement.

The five boys and two girls — known for now as Baby A to Baby G — were born 12 weeks prematurely to a woman who had taken hormones to treat infertility. Six were on ventilators to help them breathe. The smallest, a girl, breathed on her own.

"We are not out of the woods," Dr. Craig Winkel cautioned. But "it is a great start."

The babies weighed between 2.002 and 2.42 pounds each — a critically low weight that carries high risk — and each measured 13 to 14 inches long. They were delivered by Caesarean section in a three-minute period that began at 11:25 p.m. EDT Thursday at Georgetown University Hospital

Doctors would not identify the mother, except to say that she is Muslim. Because of her religion, she chose not to abort any fetuses even though that option was offered as a way to improve the chances for the remaining babies to live, doctors said.

There are only two other known sets of surviving septuplets in the world, one delivered in 1998 by a woman in Saudi Arabia and the other born in 1997 in Iowa.

The parents of the children had picked out names, but doctors for now used letters of the alphabet. The girls are babies B and D.

Twelve hours after the birth, the mother still had not seen her babies except in photographs she had clutched to her breast, nurse Dana Adamson said. She was expected to see them later Friday.

"She had the mindset to take the pregnancy as far as she could," said a second nurse, Lynette Philip, who described the mother as serene. She was awake during the birth, but had an epidural injection to numb her against pain.

The babies' low weight and complications posed by multiple births increased the risk for the newborns.

"We'll have to take one day at a time," Winkel said.

He said one of the babies was being treated for a blood pressure problem, but was being weaned from the medication.

The woman went into spontaneous labor at about 8 p.m. Thursday, with medical teams standing by. The delivery was attended by about 25 doctors and nurses, with a similar number ready in the neonatal intensive care room a few steps away.

Campaign finance bill's backers vow to resurrect legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — One day after a fiery blow-up in the House, supporters of legislation to reduce the role of money in politics vowed to resurrect their bill with or without the help of the Republican leadership.

"We're trying to let things cool off a little bit," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., adding he hoped Speaker Dennis Hastert would agree to reschedule the measure quickly. "If not, we have to explore all options."

McCain and other supporters of the bill said those options included an infrequently used parliamentary procedure to force legislation onto the floor, a tactic that requires the signatures of 218 House members on a petition and can take weeks to complete.

Hastert, R-Ill., in a brief telephone interview, said, "Right now, it's not on our schedule and we'll have to step back and take a look at it." As for the bill's sponsors trying to force the legislation to the floor, he said, "Obviously, that's an option that's open to them."

House Democratic Leader Dick Gephardt met with Reps. Christopher Shays, R-Conn., and Martin Meehan, D-Mass., as aides researched the requirements for preparing the petition.

Rep. Jim Turner said he discussed the possibility of forwarding a petition with McCain. "We both concurred we should first call on speaker Hastert to set the bill on the calendar for a fair rule," said the Texas Democrat, who participated in a similar effort in 1998 that prompted then-Speaker Newt Gingrich to schedule the issue for a vote.

The bill was pulled from the House floor on Wednesday after lawmakers, on a vote of 228-203, rejected GOP ground rules for debate that the measure's supporters had attacked as unfair. Hastert and other Republicans defended them, and pointed out that Democrats, along with 19 rebel GOP lawmakers, derailed debate on the measure.

The legislation would implement the most sweeping overhaul of campaign finance laws since the Watergate reforms of a more than a quarter-century ago. The centerpiece of the bill is a near-total ban on soft money, the unlimited contributions that unions, corporations and individuals make to political parties. The two parties raised roughly $500 million in such funds in the last campaign cycle, and spent much of it on television commercials that are often scathing, but stop just shy of advocating the election or defeat of a candidate.

In addition, the measure would ban certain types of political broadcast advertising in the 60 days before an election, a provision that would apply to many special interest groups.

President Bush has signaled he would sign the bill, despite frequent overtures from Republicans to veto it, including one on Thursday by Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Texas.

One source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that at a White House meeting during the day, DeLay cautioned that the GOP majority was at stake if the bill became law, adding that while the GOP hoped to win on the floor, he hoped Bush would "save us from ourselves" if they fail. Bush replied, "well, win today,"

The unexpected turn of events on the House floor on Thursday capped an intense 24 hours of maneuvering triggered by the decision of the Republican leadership to set rules that Shays, Meehan and others declared objectionable. It called for requiring separate votes on a package of more than a dozen mostly minor changes, rather than one vote.

Supporters of the bill tried to defeat the ground rules, a procedural vote on which party loyalty is customary. But McCain, a senator playing an unusually visible role in crafting strategy in the House, began making urging members of the Republican rank and file lawmakers to defy their leadership.

PAY: Judges found 'inappropriate conduct' by agents with TDHS

(From 1A)

"This failure to fully disclose the truth ... cuts deeply into the core mission of this tribunal ... to ascertain the truth," Judges Marshall and Church wrote.

The judges noted the TDHS "may have originally had a legitimate basis" to take enforcement action against Manor Park's Mabee unit. However, TDHS's introduction of the re-created document was "so serious that we find sanctions to be appropriate in order to deter future (misleading) conduct and to punish the existing conduct," the judges said.

At the sanctions hearing, Ms. North "invoked her Fifth Amendment privilege ... against self-incrimination ... under the U.S. Constitution," the judge said.

And TDHS Deputy Commissioner Jim Lerhman demonstrated "careless indifference" to his responsibilities as a TDHS witness, the judges said.

While Lerhman remains TDHS deputy commissioner for long-term care, Ms. North was demoted by the agency, TDHS counsel Hutton was fired, and TDHS co-counsel Taylor "resigned in lieu of being fired," Jones, the TDHS spokesman.

The threesome made a "series of mistakes," Jones said, and were "responsible for re-creating" the misplaced document.

"And that was a violation of our standards and, obviously, the court's standards, too," Jones said.

"Our position on this whole matter is that the Mabee (Health Care) Center was guilty of some serious failings that led to the (1998) brutal rape of one woman (an Alzheimer's disease patient who was assaulted by a housekeeper who had a then-undetected criminal record) and the (accidental) poisoning of another," Jones said. "Unfortunately, mistakes by a handful of our employees undermined our case.

"TDHS has dealt with the problem by firing one person, demoting a second, and accepting the resignation of a third," he noted.

Of the $141,688.17 in damages awarded by the court to Manor Park's Mabee, Jones said TDHS would pay court costs of $15,568.17 but is "still researching about whether we have the authority to pay" the $126,120 in fees to Manor Park's Austin attorneys Delta Sue Best and Allison Spruill "basically to fatten the wallets of trial lawyers."

After TDHS lodged allegations of discrepancies against Mabee Health Care Center in the late 1990s "and threatened to pull their license, they (Mabee officials) began making improvements" and corrected deficiencies, Jones said.

"Under the threat of loss of their license, they haven't had any major deficiencies in the past year," Jones said.

As an enforcement agency, the TDHS has "one job, and that's to protect the vulnerable men and women that live in these nursing homes," Jones said. "And we are going to continue to do the job as we have been instructed to do by the state's leadership."

However, from his vantage, Manor Park's Hale said "one of the great shames" of the TDHS agency is "that their case (against Mabee) never was worthy of being pursued.

"It appears to me that they went over backwards to create a case that might be worthy," Hale said. "It's really embarrassing for the state of Texas."

Earlier this year, then-TDHS Commissioner Eric Bost came to Midland "to offer an apology for mistakes that were made by the Department against Manor Park," the judges noted in their order.

TDHS spokeswoman Rosemary Patterson earlier this year admitted TDHS "made some errors when we were putting the case together.

"We made procedural errors in the case by misidentifying a document for which we apologized," Ms. Patterson said. "However, we will not apologize for seeking remedies for the poisoning of one resident and the rape of another."

Of the TDHS leadership, Hale said "I'm hoping that he (Bost) will be replaced by someone who has a progressive, constructive attitude about improving care for the elderly."

Bost has joined the President George W. Bush administration as undersecretary with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Hale cited as an injustice the "18 months to clear our name. Hopefully, you've got deep-enough pockets to get a good lawyer and prove your innocence."

Hale said it is "a matter of public record in Austin that many of the defects they (TDHS) accused us of were reversed."

"These (alleged) deficiencies were reversed in the process of appeal," Hale said.

Of the rape of the Alzheimer's patient, Hale said Manor Park had "already settled that (case) and paid for our sins there. The attorney general (of Texas) sued us. The Reporter-Telegram convicted us in the paper, I'm afraid. We settled our case with the attorney general. And here comes the Department of Human Services" in seeking other defects to revoke Mabee's nursing-home license.

Hale said he hopes the TDHS "can make corrections in leadership.

"They've had a pervasive attitude that all nursing homes are bad, and they are not. Many of them do a wonderful job in providing great care to residents," Hale said. "I'd nominate us to be in that pack."

One vacancy

The city of Midland currently is taking applications for one vacancy on the Midland Football-Soccer and Baseball Complex Development Corporation board of directors.

The vacancy is the result of the resignation of former Mayor Bobby Burns. The appointee will serve the remainder of the term that will expire in November 2001.

The seven-member board of directors manages the business of the corporation, which is subject at all times to City Council approval.

Meetings are held in City Hall on an as-needed basis, usually quarterly, and are subject to the requirements of the Texas Open Meetings Act.

Applications can be obtained through the city secretary's office, City Hall, 300 N. Loraine, third floor. Deadline is July 31.

For more information call Kaylah McCord at 685-7432.

Seal coating

The Texas Department of Transportation will be putting down a "seal coat" on about 10 miles of State Highway 158 southeast of Midland beginning Monday and should be concluded by Friday, barring weather delays. The section of highway to be resurfaced is from 4 miles south of Interstate 20 to the Glasscock County line. The purpose for the seal coat is to prevent moisture from damaging the road base.

Motorists along that stretch of highway will encounter brief lane closures, and an advised reduction in traffic speeds in those areas where seal coat work is being done.

Convicted drug dealer gets 32 1/2 years

From Staff Reports

A convicted Midland crack dealer, along with one of his conspirators, received his federal prison sentence Friday.

Benjamin "Benji" Wilson, 30, was sentenced to 32 1/2 years for his participation in a conspiracy to distribute more than 4.5 kilograms of crack cocaine and three charges of distribution of crack cocaine. His sister, Tiffany Rochelle Wilson, 26, was sentenced to 10 years in prison for her role in the conspiracy based on her conviction for conspiracy to distribute more than 51 grams of crack cocaine, according to Mark Roomberg of the U.S. Department of Justice.

Wilson and his sister were also each convicted of three counts of distribution of crack. Wilson was acquitted on one count of crack distribution.

The sentences were the culmination of an 18-month investigation of Wilson's crack cocaine distribution ring in Midland by the Midland Police Department and the DEA Task Force, Roomberg said. The ring allegedly began in late 1997 and led to a 26-count indictment in January 2000.

The investigation led to the guilty pleas and convictions of 13 other crack cocaine dealers.

FORD: Many cite former president's courage

(From 1A)

berg and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the award cited Ford's courage in making the decision to pardon Nixon.

During an interview in June, Ford told me despite the controversy his pardon engendered, he felt his decision "was right when I made it, and today I feel it is even more right."

Nonetheless, he said he did not expect such a "hostile" reaction. "That was one of the greatest disappointments of my presidency," he recalled. "Everyone focused on the individual instead of on the problems the nation faced. I thought people would consider Richard Nixon's resignation sufficient punishment, even shame. I expected more forgiveness."

He also said the pardon "probably had an impact" on the 1976 election, especially because the vote was so close.

In accepting his award at the JFK Library and Museum in Boston on May 21, Ford remarked: "No doubt arguments over the Nixon pardon will continue for as long as historians relive those tumultuous days. But I'd be less than human if I didn't tell you how profoundly grateful I am for this recognition. The award committee has displayed its own brand of courage. But here, courage is contagious.

"To know John Kennedy, as I did, was to understand the true meaning of the word. He understood that courage is not something to be gauged in a poll or located in a focus group. No adviser can spin it. No historian can back date it. For, in the age old contest between popularity and principle, only those willing to lose for their convictions are deserving of posterity's approval."

Sen. Kennedy said Ford had "withstood the heat of controversy and persevered in his beliefs about what was in our country's best interest. History has proved him right.

"I was one of those who spoke out against his action. But time has a way of clarifying things, and now we see that he was right."

Gen. Alexander M. Haig, who was Nixon's White House chief of staff, told me in an interview: "Despite the risks, President Ford performed a singular and selfless act of courage.

"Years later, the Nixon pardon must rank with the most courageous acts of a sitting president. President Ford, almost alone, notwithstanding the advice of some of his most intimate advisers, recognized that the nation simply could not risk further prolongation of the Watergate controversy and that the very effectiveness of his presidency was at stake."

During our interview at the Willard Inter-Continental Hotel in Washington, D.C., Ford was in an expansive mood while reviewing his life's journey. He evaluated his achievements and assessed the setbacks of his time in the Oval Office, and he reflected on the highs and lows of 53 years in political life.

N.Y. Times
Former President Gerald Ford and his wife Betty attending the Republican National Convention. Early the next morning, Ford was admitted to a local hospital for what turned out to be a 'minor' stroke.

Having recovered from a stroke last August, he said he is in excellent health and remains active and alert.

Asked how he feels about turning 88 years old, he says: "Age doesn't bother me. I'm not as mobile as I was 25 years ago, but I feel fortunate to still have my zest for life. I keep busy and I have more enthusiasm now because of the care I take of myself. I follow a good diet and don't drink or smoke."

Asked what he most regretted about his career, Ford allowed: "Well, I wish I were a better public speaker. I would have liked to be able to communicate more effectively. That is so very important."

He also regrets not having fulfilled his ambition of becoming speaker of the House of Representatives.

"I lost five times," he said. "There were not, then, enough Republicans in the House. I wanted to be speaker because the legislative process interested me, and was the kind of challenge I enjoyed. I was never as enthusiastic about being in the executive branch. I even turned down the chance to run for governor of Michigan."

In fact he was planning to retire from Congress in 1977. But in 1973, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's legal and campaign-finance problems surfaced, leading to his resignation. Ford was selected as Nixon's vice president.

Like Ford, George Herbert Walker Bush was a former congressman, vice president and president. Bush told me as soon as Ford moved to the White House, he restored its honor and integrity, "thus sending the world a reassuring signal about the American presidency itself."

Ford does not hide his disappointment at losing the 1976 election to Jimmy Carter. "As you well know," he said, "I tried very hard to win that election. That would have given me a chance to expand individual freedom from mass government, mass industry, mass labor and mass education."

Despite that election, Ford and Carter are close friends.

Asked for his reflections on Ford, Carter said: "He was a strong leader during a time of great challenge, and his just and noble decisions may well have cost him the election. In the years since then, he and I have worked together on a number of issues. Each time we do so, I am reminded anew of our country's good fortune to have been led by a man of such principled convictions."

Eight years ago, Ronald Reagan, who narrowly lost the 1976 presidential nomination to Ford, told me: "First, I can tell Gerry Ford that turning 80 doesn't hurt at all. Kidding aside, Gerry is an independent thinker and down to earth. He is not impressed with his own importance and that humility has stood him in good stead.

"He climbed to the top of his profession without wavering from his principles. When respect for government officials had begun to wane, he was, and still is, held in high regard."

In presenting Ford with the Presidential Medal of Freedom at the White House in August 1999, President Bill Clinton said from his earliest days as a student and athlete, Ford was destined for leadership.

Two months later, both Ford and his wife Betty were presented with the Congressional Gold Medal, the highest civilian honor Congress bestows. Among the speakers was Clinton, who turned to Ford and said: "When you made your healing decision, you made the Democrats and liberals angry one day, and then you made the conservatives angry the next day ...

"I was then trying to get elected to Congress. It was easy to criticize you because we were caught up in the moment. You didn't get caught up in the moment ... and you were right ... for the controversial decisions you made to keep the country together and I thank you for that."

Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld, who was a chief of staff in the Ford White House, said Ford's basic human decency "helped to replenish the reservoir of trust for our country — and I'm delighted that the enormous contributions he made are being recognized."

Asked how the presidency has evolved since he left the White House on Jan. 20, 1977, Ford said: "The office changes with each president. In my case, I tried to make a difference in my leadership."

He noted there is "a majesty" to the presidency that inhibits even close friends and heads of state from telling the president what is actually on their minds, especially in the Oval Office.

"You can ask for blunt truth, but the guarded response never varies," he said. "To keep perspective, any president needs to hear straight talk. And he should, at times, come down from the pedestal the office provides.

"I'm still convinced that truth is the glue that holds government together — not only our government, but civilization itself."

Born in 1913 in Omaha, Neb., to Dorothy Gardner and Leslie Lynch King Jr., Gerald Ford was christened Leslie L. King Jr. His parents divorced when he was 2 years old. He moved with his mother to Grand Rapids, Mich., where she married Gerald Rudolph Ford, who later adopted the child and renamed him Gerald Rudolph Ford Jr.

Asked what he would change about his life if he could, Ford replied: "I would make no significant changes. I've been lucky, both in my personal life and professionally. It has been a grand adventure. I've witnessed the defeat of Nazi tyranny and the destruction of hateful walls that once divided free men from those enslaved."

Turning to his philosophy of life, Ford said, "I've always been an optimist and still am. Yes, I suffered a few disappointments and defeats, but I tried to forget about those, and keep a positive attitude.

"When I was in sports and lost a game by error, or in the political arena, when I lost by a narrow margin, no amount of groaning would do any good. So I don't dwell on the past."

Much as he would have liked to have been elected president in his own right, Ford said he is confident history will record that in his 29 months as president he "healed America at a very difficult time."

BIRDS: Grackles fairly new to area

(From 1A)

Grackles are fairly new to this area, migrating here from the coastal swamps and they actually benefit from a suburban lifestyle.

"These birds have recently entered a new habitat and they find it particularly profitable," said Burr Williams, education director at the Sibley Learning Center.

A classic omnivore, grackles will eat just about anything if they are hungry. Human cities are a great big smorgasbord for the grackle, with an assortment of food thrown out in the garbage and found along the sidewalks and grass. Migrating flocks will stop in cities along the way and make a meal off all the insects and grubs they find on suburban lawns.

Dog and cat food are another favorite delicacy of the Grackle.

Unfortunately, they're not the sort of bird humans tend to love and their lack of musical talent doesn't do much for their image.

Coy Willis, Midland's director of Animal Control, doesn't have a high opinion of these birds, either.

"Those birds are a pain," Willis said.

But pain or not, they are protected by both state and federal regulations.

According to Texas Parks and Wildlife officials, the birds cannot be destroyed unless they are creating nuisance problems or damaging crops.

What exactly does the bird have to do for its behavior to be considered a nuisance?

The county game warden makes that decision.

For those people not crazy about grackles, there are a couple of recommended strategies for reducing their populations.

Do not leave pet food outside. It will only attract the pesky birds. Try changing the blend of bird food in feeders to something containing less sunflower seed. There are also nets that can be thrown over trees to prevent them from landing. If all else fails, some people have even tried placing plastic owls or scary balloons in their yards.

"They haven't been here that long, so we're really at a loss," Willis said. "We are trying to pinpoint what draws them in. Typically, it is a food supply or a water supply."

DISCOUNT: Many seniors aren't expecting much from plan

(From 1A)

izen and veteran who purchases his medication through the VA hospital, social security and pension. "I don't know what kind of help I can get. I'm more fortunate than a lot of others."

Jimmie Morris, a recently retired local senior citizen, lives off his monthly $832 social security check. He pays about $130 a month for supplemental insurance, and $65 on monthly prescription medicine, but he is doubtful about any future help from the government.

"I don't think any amount from the government will cover my medicine," Morris said. "If the discount cards give a 10 percent discount, then I'll save $6.50 a month, but any amount of additional help would help that much."

Saving that much would help many senior citizens who sometimes have to do without medication because they cannot pay for it.

Joann Carney is one senior who has to prioritize her medication each month. Ms. Carney spent 30 years at home raising her six children. She applied for Supplemental Security Income after the death of her husband, a former government employee, and currently lives in city housing.

"It's the story of a lot of people — I never thought I'd get to this place, but I did," Ms. Carney said. "I'm always a little dubious when the government comes up with new ideas. I've wasted a lot of hope and energy on plans I wasn't even eligible for."

Bradley

O'Hara

Taylor

The discount card plan is the second attempt by the administration to cut drug expenses for senior citizens. Bush first wanted to create a temporary block grant to help states subsidize drug costs for their senior residents, but Congress rejected the plan.

"Even though I am fortunate enough to have good health, I still worry about prices and things like that," said senior Bonnye Bradley. "I know there are needs out there."

The Bush administration believes the pharmacy discount plan does not require congressional approval, and can be implemented by the Department of Health and Human Services within several months.

Medicare HMO's provide some prescription benefits to their members, but about one-third of seniors with Medicare do not have any insurance to cover prescription drugs outside of hospitals.

"Sometimes I think we gave our whole lives to be civil servants, and now we're here," Ms. Carney said. "But I have a lot of hope and faith, and that makes it OK."

MOVE: Wild animals looking for water

(From 1A)

Midland County has received only 3.86 inches of rain this year, compared with 5.80 inches at this time last year.

Michael Young with the National Weather Service said the normal amount for this time of year should be around 6.55 inches, which puts the area 2.69 inches below average.

Animal Control has reported a number of fox sightings across the city.

"Foxes have been seen all over town," Willis said. "We're literally eaten up with them right now."

Willis added once the fox gets to town, he adapts very quickly and is capable of living right alongside the humans.

And officials are concerned about this overpopulation of wildlife in town.

"It is definitely something we at Animal Control are concerned about," Willis said. "Any time you have a high population of animals anywhere, Mother Nature usually takes care of it, usually by disease. Our big concern is rabies."

Rabies is passed through saliva and can be contracted by food that has saliva on it and by direct contact with the saliva through a bite.

Officials at Animal Control recommend all animals keep their rabies vaccinations up to date.

In an effort to keep track of this invasion, Animal Control officials are requesting all citizens who spot wild animals notify them immediately.

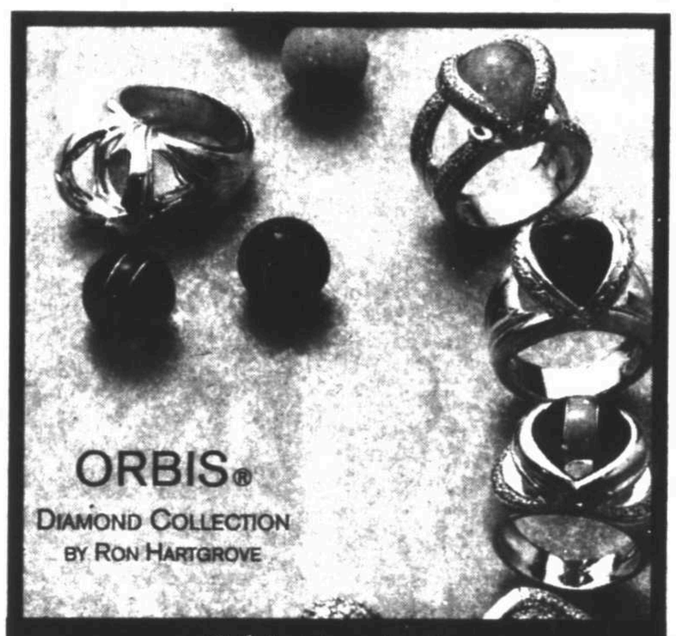

"If we get enough sightings, hopefully we can locate their habitats," Willis said.

"We can apprehend them if we can track them down."

Texas experienced its last fox rabies scare in 1995, during similar drought conditions.

Wildfire aftermath: Two of the dead firefighters were new on the job

By Linda Ashton
Associated Press

WINTHROP, Wash. — Two of the four firefighters killed in a forest-fire blow-up this week were in their first month on the job — one of several factors investigators are examining in trying to figure out what went wrong.

The Forest Service is expecting this hot, dry summer to be one of the worst wildfire seasons ever and has responded by hiring thousands of rookies — so many that one in three firefighters is new to the job.

Among them were two of the young people who died Tuesday when a blaze roared out of a canyon in the Cascade Range: Karen L. Fitzpatrick, 18, and Devin A. Weaver, 21.

Weaver and Fitzpatrick had just completed their fire training last month. And the blaze was Weaver's first wildfire.

Altogether, there were eight rookies on the 21-member crew caught when the blaze blew up.

So far, there has been no evidence to suggest it was the rookies' inexperience that got them killed. In fact, there has been no suggestion as yet that they did anything wrong.

But the victims' lack of experience is among the many factors that investigators are considering as they try to determine what went wrong, Forest Service spokesman Tom Knappenberger said.

The Forest Service said there was no reason to believe the rookies were unprepared for the task they expected to face: mop-up of a 25-acre blaze already controlled by more experienced firefighters. The rookies each had 40 hours of training and had passed rigorous physical tests and exams. They had experienced overseers.

"From what I know, nobody anticipated anything more than a good hard day's work," said Doug Ferguson, a spokesman with the national fire-management team handling the blaze Friday.

But the four died after their mission changed without notice: Instead of mop-up, they faced a raging monster fueled by tinder-dry forest, rising winds and tricky terrain.

"There are situations so extreme and so unpredictable that even the best training and the best equipment is not going to save a person," Ferguson said. "Training and experience can prepare one to react. It doesn't make you invulnerable."

The blaze covered 8,500 acres Friday, when 600 firefighters were at the scene.

Some critics said the ratio of experienced personnel to rookies on fire crews should be at least 4- or 5-to-1. But that ratio is for elite "hotshots" or aviation crews, said Joe Stutler, national incident commander for the blaze.

Andy Stahl with the Eugene, Ore.-based Forest Service Employees for Environmental Ethics faulted the Forest Service for aggressively fighting a blaze in a Research Natural Area, where he said the guidelines call for a hands-off approach.

"They shouldn't have been fighting it to begin with," Stahl said. Under Forest Service guidelines for such areas, he said, "you stand back ... and you watch it burn."

Stutler disagreed: "We don't have a let-it-burn policy." Instead, he said the firefighters on Tuesday were employing MIST — minimal suppression tactics. He said that this is the second-driest summer in 50 years, and letting the fire burn "would nuke the countryside."

Stepped-up recruiting and nearly $3 billion in funding have swelled the federal government's fire-crew ranks from 13,500 last year to about 21,400 this summer.

Ohio man's private writings raise questions about obscenity laws

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The stories Brian Dalton wrote in his journal about torturing and molesting children were so disturbing that grand jurors asked a detective to stop reading after about two pages.

The stories were also complete fiction. But he still was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

The case has alarmed lawyers specializing in First Amendment and obscenity law, who believe Dalton is the first person anywhere in the United States successfully prosecuted for child pornography that involved writings, not images.

They are disturbed, too, that the case involved porn that was intended for Dalton's private use and was not disseminated.

"His thoughts may be disturbing and repugnant, but he has got a right to have them and write them down for his own use," said Raymond Vasvari, legal director for the Ohio chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Dalton, who was on probation from a 1998 conviction involving pornographic photos of children, was charged after his probation officer found the journal during a routine search of his home.

Dalton, 22, pleaded guilty last week to pandering obscenity involving a minor. As part of the plea bargain, a second count was dropped for five years less in prison.

His case has since raised so many questions that he is considering trying to withdraw his guilty plea, defense attorney Isabella Dixon said Thursday.

Ron O'Brien, the Franklin County prosecutor who has hailed the case as a breakthrough in child-pornography prosecution, declined comment.

The 14-page journal contained stories about three children — ages 10 and 11 — being caged in a basement, molested and tortured. Prosecutors said the stories are pure fiction.

Dalton was charged under Ohio's 1989 child porn law, which bans possession of obscene material involving children. He was not charged under Ohio's obscenity law, which requires dissemination and not just possession.

Ohio's law is broad in describing child pornography as "material" and not simply "images," as in most other states, said Bruce Taylor, president of the National Law Center for Children and Families, which helps prosecutors in child porn cases.

Dalton's lawyer said her client "felt it was in his best interest" to plead guilty. She would not say what she advised him to do.

Dalton cannot challenge the constitutionality of the law unless he petitions the court to let him change his plea.

Some lawyers specializing in First Amendment cases said they believe he would win in court.

Robert O'Neil, director of the Thomas Jefferson Center for the Protection of Free Expression at the University of Virginia, said the case is "astounding" because it goes against U.S. Supreme Court rulings.

The high court has held that child pornography is limited to images. The court is set to hear arguments in a California case this fall about whether purely computer-generated images of children engaged in sex — not images of actual children — constitute child pornography.

The Supreme Court also has ruled that obscene material is illegal only if it is disseminated and not simply possessed, but that the mere possession of child porn can be prosecuted if there is an overriding societal interest in protecting children.

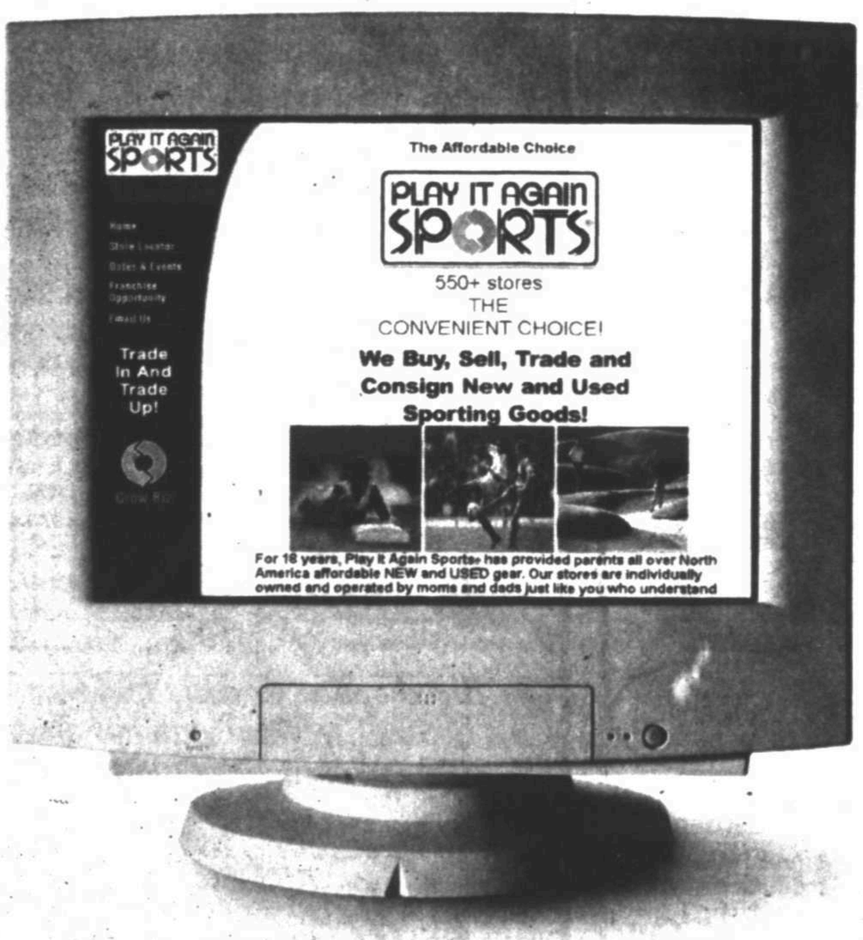

"Here, that whole rationale doesn't apply," said David Goldberger, an Ohio State University law professor who specializes in First Amendment issues. "There's no indication that any children were harmed in its production or that children would be harmed."

Janet LaRue, senior director of legal studies at the Washington-based Family Research Council, which fights child pornography, said Dalton's tales could be extremely dangerous because they could entice him to seduce children.

NATION IN BRIEF

■ Puppies die in shredder

TULARE, Calif. — A man has been arrested for allegedly dumping four puppies into an agricultural shredding machine because he was tired of them making a mess.

The puppies were eight to 10 weeks old and lived at the equipment yard of a contract harvesting company, Vieira Custom Chopping in Tulare, animal control officer Daniel Bailey said.

Officials acting a tip Wednesday found animal body parts in a pond, on the ground and in a shredder used to harvest corn for silage. They arrested employee Brandon Ferguson, 26, who could face animal cruelty counts.

Investigators said they believe Ferguson killed the strays because he didn't like the mess they were making at the equipment yard.

Another puppy and its mother were being kept at an animal hospital.

■ Man who threw dog gets 3 years

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A judge said he didn't believe the apology of a man convicted of throwing a small dog to its death in traffic and sentenced him Friday to a three-year prison term, the maximum.

"I'm really sorry for what happened," Andrew Burnett testified before the sentencing. "I'd like to say I'm sorry to the McBurnett family. If there's anything I could ever say or do to bring back Leo, I would."

The courtroom erupted in applause as Judge Kevin J. Murphy imposed the sentence after saying the 28-year-old man was a danger to the community.

Burnett sought leniency after his June 20 conviction animal cruelty. He threw a bichon frise named Leo to his death following a fender bender with Leo's owner, Sara McBurnett.

"What the defendant said is he was sorry. It was an accident," Murphy said. "It wasn't an accident."

The judge said Burnett lied about the events that occurred Feb. 11, 2000, when McBurnett's car tapped the bumper of Burnett's car near the San Jose airport.

■ Boy no longer in deep coma

PENSACOLA, Fla. — An 8-year-old boy recovering from a shark attack is no longer in a deep coma and is responding to stimulation, doctors said Friday.

Jessie Arbogast is making slow progress after his right arm was reattached following his attack by a bull shark a week ago. Doctors on Friday planned to try to slowly take him off a device used to help with his breathing.

"Jessie, neurologically, is our main focus right now. He is no longer in a deep coma," said Dr. Rob Patterson. He said the boy doesn't respond to light stimulation but "he is certainly responding to pain and deep stimulation, and we have every reason to be encouraged."

The Ocean Springs, Miss., boy was attacked at the Gulf Islands National Seashore last Friday, losing his right arm and sustaining a deep wound to his leg. He lost nearly all his blood, which damaged other organs.

His uncle and a beachgoer hauled the 7-foot shark ashore and a park ranger fired four bullets into the head of the bull shark and retrieved the arm from the shark's gullet.

Condit takes lie-detector test in Levy case

By Mark Sherman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Gary Condit took a lie-detector test arranged by his lawyer and it showed he "was not deceptive in any way" in denying knowledge of what happened to missing intern Chandra Levy, the lawyer said Friday. Police dismissed the test as "self-serving."

With Condit's relationship with Levy and other women under intense media scrutiny, lawyer Abbe Lowell said that his client had cooperated fully and that police and the press should turn their attention elsewhere.

"Congressman Condit has exhausted all the information he can provide, and the spotlight on him should be turned elsewhere," said Lowell, who noted the congressman has given three interviews to police, allowed a search of his apartment and submitted a DNA sample.

He berated the media for what he said was an obsession about his client's private life, which he said was diverting attention from the search for Levy. She was last seen April 30, when she canceled her membership at a Washington health club.

According to a police source, Condit, who is 53 and married, told investigators in his third interview last week that he was having an affair with Levy, a 24-year-old intern from the congressman's Modesto, Calif.-area home district.

Police, however, have repeatedly said Condit is not a suspect in Levy's disappearance, and that he is one of dozens of people who have been interviewed, some more than once.

Investigators are awaiting lab results on Condit's DNA sample and items they took from Condit's apartment during a search this week, said Assistant Police Chief Terrance Gainer.

Lowell declined to provide any more details about Condit's relationship with Levy. He would not identify all the questions that were asked during the test, but said Condit was deemed to have answered truthfully when he said "no" to the three most important questions:

■ Did the congressman have anything at all to do with Miss Levy's disappearance?

■ Did he harm her or cause anyone else to harm her in any way?

■ Does he know where she can be located?

Lowell said the test was administered by Barry D. Colvert, a polygraph expert who Lowell said teaches FBI officials how to administer the tests and has been used by the government in a number of high-profile espionage cases.

Gainer acknowledged Colvert has a good reputation. And he said there could be some value in the test.

But Gainer left no doubt that police were not satisfied with the test. "We wanted to ask the questions," Gainer told reporters. He said Lowell had not worked with police to come up with questions and agree on an expert to administer the test.

A criminal defense lawyer with experience in lawsuits over lie detectors also said that a test given by law enforcement would be more valuable. "A friendly polygraph is less reliable than an adversarial one because the polygrapher knows a bad result can end up in the garbage," said Andrew Schapiro of the law firm Mayer, Brown and Platt in New York.

Billy Martin, the lawyer for Levy's parents, also criticized Condit for not submitting to an FBI polygraph expert. "It seems that the congressman and his attorneys snuck off to a private polygraph examiner and took a polygraph on his terms," Martin said.

No sooner had Lowell admonished reporters about prying into Condit's private life than he was asked about allegations by flight attendant Anne Marie Smith that the congressman asked her to sign a statement denying a 10-month affair she says they had.

Officials block abortion for mentally handicapped child raped by her father

By Jo Tuckman
Associated Press

LOS MOCHIS, Mexico — Lucila's shy giggle petered out and her broad grin faded as the conversation turned away from her dolls and touched on her pregnancy.

"I'm getting fat because I'm eating a lot," said the 12-year-old with a mental age of 8.

She conceived four months ago after being raped by her father, and is now at the center of a debate over abortion in the northwestern city of Los Mochis in Sinaloa state.

"She doesn't really understand what is going on, and what she does understand she can't accept," said the child's mother, Lucia, who has been seeking a legal abortion for her daughter since finding out the devastating news six weeks ago.

Abortion in Mexico is regulated by state law, and the Sinaloa state penal code is typical of most. It prohibits abortion in all but cases of rape and serious danger to the mother's health.

Even though Lucila's case clearly fulfills these criteria, all efforts to go through official channels have been blocked by laws that are fuzzy on how to get a legal abortion and officials unwilling to risk breaking the law.

"Nobody wants to take responsibility for this, and the doors have closed everywhere as each authority passes the buck to the next," said Patricia Espinoza, a psychologist who works with Lucila in a weekly group for children with mental disabilities.

Sitting in her brick home decorated with pictures of the Virgin of Guadalupe and shaded by lime and papaya trees, the mother said she has visited and revisited the state prosecutor and the judge handling the rape case, as well as a stream of doctors and social assistance officials who have all told her they were powerless to help.

At the center of the problem is the law, which fails to establish who can authorize an abortion, or up until what month a legal abortion can be performed.

"Our obligation was to process the rape case, but the abortion issue is out of our hands," said state prosecutor Edna Aguilar who noted that the father had been detained and jailed.

She added that if a doctor was willing to give Lucila an abortion, her office would decide after the event if the action was legal.

The doctors Lucila's mother has approached said they would not operate without a judicial order that guaranteed them protection from prosecution.

According to Espinoza, the psychologist, the increasing risks associated with Lucila's advancing pregnancy have only heightened the doctors' reluctance to get involved. "If anything happened to the child during the abortion, they would be blamed, but if she dies in childbirth, nobody is responsible," Espinoza said.

The official unwillingness to tackle the problem also reflects a countrywide tendency to avoid the abortion issue.

Throughout Mexico, relatively strict laws reflect a Roman Catholic morality, but they also go hand-in-hand with the tendency to turn an official blind eye to clandestine abortions.

That uneasy situation was challenged last year when anti-abortion groups were emboldened by the presidential victory of the devoutly religious Vicente Fox. In one case, pressure from anti-abortion activists resulted in a 14-year-old rape victim being denied an abortion in Baja California state.

But with powerful forces also favoring increased rights to abortion, Fox has tried to avoid the issue, saying he favors leaving laws as they are.

"The situation is the same as ever," said Susana Vidales of the Information Group for Reproductive Choice. She said women with financial resources can usually find clinics willing to perform safe, if secret abortions, while the poor turn to often dangerous back-street methods.

Her group estimates some 850,000 abortions are performed in Mexico every year, only a small number legally.

Prosecutor Aguilar said nobody in Sinaloa had ever even tried to get a legal abortion before Lucila's mother applied.

Sitting in the tiny room where she sleeps with her three children, the mother berated herself for not doing more to protect Lucila. She had left the child with her husband while she was working as a domestic servant, making $7.70 a day.

She said her only concern now was to find a solution for her daughter. She said she felt no contradiction between her religious beliefs and her hunt for an abortion.

"I am a Catholic and I am going to stay one, and as far as I can see, in my daughter's case, abortion is not a sin," the mother said. "If it is, let God judge me on that one, nobody else."

AP Photo

Lucila holds a doll during an interview at her home in Los Mochis, located in the Mexican state of Sinaloa, Wednesday. The 12-year-old, who conceived four months ago after she was raped by her own father, is now at the center of an unprecedented controversy over abortion.

At the center of the problem is the law, which fails to establish who can authorize an abortion, or up until what month a legal abortion can be performed.

Northern Ireland's politicians resume the search for peace

WESTON-UNDER-LIZARD, England (AP) — Unwilling to concede defeat, the British and Irish governments renewed marathon efforts Friday to preserve Northern Ireland's peace accord and keep Catholics and Protestants together in government.

Britain chartered a jet to bring leaders of five Northern Irish parties from Belfast, where authorities were cleaning up after a night of intense clashes between militant Catholics and riot police. The violence, which followed divisive Protestant parades, left more than 100 officers and many Catholics wounded.

The resumed talks at Weston Park, a secluded mansion in this central England village, are designed to protect the Catholic-Protestant coalition now governing Northern Ireland under terms of the Good Friday peace accord of 1998. Protestants are threatening to collapse the government — which includes Sinn Fein, the Irish Republican Army-linked party — unless the IRA starts to disarm as the peace pact intended.

Seamus Mallon, deputy leader of the Catholic-supported Social Democratic and Labor Party, said an agreement was possible this weekend. "That's why we're here, and we hope that it's decision time," Mallon said as he arrived for Friday evening's session.

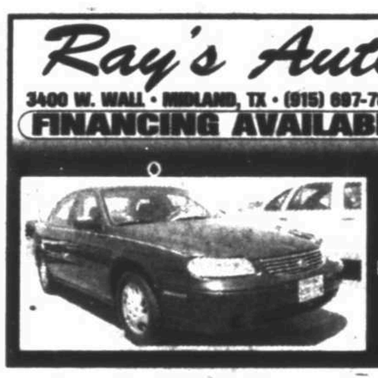

The prime ministers of Britain and Ireland, Tony Blair and Bertie Ahern, oversaw negotiations at Weston Park from Monday to Wednesday. They emphasized that to succeed this weekend, this effort must produce a commitment from the IRA to begin scrapping weapons in cooperation with a long-idle disarmament commission.

Sinn Fein offered no signal Friday that this would happen, and insisted blame for the crisis lay instead with the British government and the Ulster Unionists, the biggest Protestant member of Northern Ireland's four-party administration.

"These difficulties can only be resolved by Mr. Blair's government getting the context right," Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams said.

For Sinn Fein, "the context" for IRA disarmament is Britain agreeing to slash the power of its military forces in Northern Ireland and the Royal Ulster Constabulary — the mostly Protestant police force which Sinn Fein supporters bombarded with gasoline and acid bombs overnight in Ardoyne, a hard-line Catholic part of Belfast.

Wealthy businessman in jail in marriage scandal — was it 17 or 20 or 24 wives?

By Donna Abu-Nasr
Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — He doesn't remember if he's had 17 or 20 wives. Investigators claim the number reached 24, including 11 acquired in a marry-and-divorce spree over the last three years.

el-Suweirky

But a discrepancy over the number of Ragab el-Suweirky's wives is not why the wealthy, 56-year-old businessman is in jail and facing trial Sunday.

What el-Suweirky is accused of is withholding information about his marital status, a charge that has spawned other accusations: tricking a woman into having illicit sex — a complaint that's tantamount to rape — and on three occasions having one wife more than the four sanctioned by Islamic law.

One of el-Suweirky's five lawyers, Egyptian Bar Association head Sameh Ashour, says Egypt has never seen a case like it.

Some have dubbed el-Suweirky "Egypt's Shahrayar" — a reference to the fabled sultan who took a wife every night and killed her in the morning. Only Scheherezade was able to stop him from killing — by entertaining him with a tale a night for 1,001 nights.

Newspapers have been full of reports about his marriages — including one that ended on the wedding night before consummation because the new wife refused el-Suweirky a kiss.

More seriously, the case has sparked debates on whether el-Suweirky abused his rights as a Muslim to live a life of debauchery.

Social psychologist Jawad Fatayer said many Muslim men misuse religion to simply enjoy themselves or take revenge on some other woman. "This means they are taking advantage of women," he said.

Sheik Al-Sayyed Abu Aggoura — secretary-general of the Islamic Research Center, which issues religious edicts in Egypt — said there are many benefits to a man's having more than one wife.

"If a man hates his wife, or if she is infertile or if she cannot fulfill his (sexual) desires, then he can take another wife," Abu Aggoura said, adding the man should treat them all equally when it comes to things he can control: clothing, housing and food.

What about love?

"Ah, a man can't control his heart," said Abu Aggoura.

Asked how religion looks on a serial polygamist, Abu Aggoura said: "When a man is a slave to his desires, that is a sign of weakness."

El-Suweirky's story came to light in March when Rania Izzat, 19, filed a complaint saying he lied to her when he told her before their marriage he had no other wives. Izzat's three-month marriage to el-Suweirky ended after she found he was married to two other women.

According to Egyptian law, a man who fails to declare his other wives before a new marriage is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by six months in jail or a fine of $51.

Izzat's complaint triggered an investigation of el-Suweirky, who owns a chain of clothing stores. Prosecutors have since accused him of tricking a woman into having illicit sex, a charge punishable by up to 15 years in jail.

There is also the question of when he divorced each wife. A Muslim Egyptian man divorces a woman by telling her: "You're divorced." If he repeats the phrase three times, the divorce is "bayen," or effective immediately. If he says it only once, then it takes effect after a certain period of time — called "iddah."

The prosecution says that on three occasions, el-Suweirky married a fifth wife before the "iddah" of the fourth ended. But defense lawyers say el-Suweirky's divorces have all been "bayen."

Police officials say the balding, bushy-bearded el-Suweirky defended himself by saying he married so often to avoid committing adultery. His many divorces resulted, he said, because he is conservative who likes his women never to leave home and to cover from head-to-toe if they must go out.

Time and again, he said, his wives balked at the restrictions — so he divorced them.

Kenyan president shy to talk about condoms as hundreds die

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Seven hundred people die every day from AIDS in Kenya, where President Daniel Arap Moi says he is embarrassed to talk about condoms and advises people to just avoid sex. But some of his constituents are eager to learn more about the little latex things that could save their lives.

"I think the president is embarrassed because it has come to such a point that the government has to allocate billions of shillings to import condoms, and it is no longer an issue of morals but a matter of life and death," said Sylvia Maina, a 22-year-old university student.

Maina was referring to the government's plans to import 300 million condoms, part of a campaign to control the rapid increase in AIDS-related deaths.

Speaking Wednesday before the country's Pharmaceutical Society, the 76-year-old Moi said he felt "shy" to have to speak publicly about condoms and AIDS, about the need to have to import condoms at all. He urged Kenyans to go without sex for two years.

Unlike neighboring Uganda, which runs an aggressive, successful AIDS awareness program that includes a lot of frank talk about condoms and sex, Kenya has been slow to face up to the reality of the disease.

Faced with more than 2 million HIV-positive Kenyans and half the beds in government hospitals occupied by AIDS patients, Moi two years ago finally declared AIDS a national emergency.

But despite the Kiswahili condom jingle that urges Kenyans to "Sema Nami" or "Let's Talk" about AIDS, most of the pages upon pages of death notices in the daily newspapers refer only to a 'short,' a 'long,' or a 'mysterious' illness as the cause of the many AIDS-related deaths.

Meanwhile, the Roman Catholic church and some opposition leaders denounced the condom proposal.

The cash-strapped Kenyan government, crippled by a long economic decline, will not be footing the bill right away. The World Bank is giving Kenya 'soft' loans, or loans with low interest that don't have to be paid back for decades. The loans, totaling $100 million, will pay for some 300 million condoms over a four-year period, according to Dr. Kenneth Chebet, head of the AIDS control unit in the Ministry of Health.

"It is a good thing, it's probably the only way out now," said Bernard Muthaka, who works for Population Services International, a Washington, D.C.-based non-governmental organization that imports and distributes subsidized "Trust" condoms.

The organization has recorded a 10 percent annual increase in condom imports to Kenya over the past five years to 13.2 million this year, he said. A package of three costs 8 cents. More than half the people in Kenya live on less than 50 cents a day.

Caroline Njuguna, a 22-year-old secretary, expressed concern that most of the AIDS awareness programs in Kenya are concentrated in Nairobi and need to focus on rural areas where the majority of the nation's 29 million people live.

A year ago, Condomi AG, a German-based condom manufacturer, announced plans to build a factory in Kenya that could have produced millions of condoms. But discouraged by government red tape and lack of responsiveness, the company moved its project to South Africa.

In Pakistan's wild frontier, guns are way of life

By Anwar Faruqi
Associated Press

DARRA ADAM KHEIL, Pakistan — Gun-toting tribesmen jostle with goats and donkeys at a dust-blown bazaar on Pakistan's lawless northwest frontier, where slabs of hashish dangle above dirty roadside shacks and every third shop is a small armory of handguns, rifles and machine guns.

In this wild no-man's-land of 15,000 people, where druglords rule from hilltop forts and fugitives come to escape the law, gun-making is a tradition that goes back generations.

No one seems to care when a salesman cracks open the shop door, aims above the turbaned heads outside and fires off a deafening round, testing a handgun for a customer.

"We can copy any gun just by looking at the manual," boasts Arif Gul, owner of the grandly named but small and dingy Gul Engineering Works. "I started making guns when I was about 15, and I've made thousands since then, even machine guns," said the 36-year-old Gul.

Business is down these days in Darra Adam Kheil, since the government launched a recent anti-weapons drive. But its guns remain part of a greater global problem: the illicit trade in light weapons.

Because guns, shoulder-fired missiles and light mortars are easy to make and hard to track, no one knows how many small arms and light weapons there are in the world, the United Nations says. It guesses there are more than 500 million worldwide — up to 60 percent illicit.

But arms experts say large quantities of weapons, many sent by the United States for the Afghan war of the 1980s, are in use by insurgents throughout the Indian subcontinent.

Small arms are "the weapons of choice" in many of the small regional insurgencies in Pakistan, Kashmir, Sri Lanka or rebel movements in northeastern India, said Faruq Faisel, spokesman for the South Asia Partnership that analyzes regional security.

"The weapons are cheap and easy to operate even by children as young as 10," he said at a U.N. conference going from July 9 through July 20 in New York. More than 180 nations attending are trying to agree on a plan to curb the illegal trafficking in small arms and light weapons.

From 1979-89, the United States channeled at least $2 billion in weapons aid through Pakistan to Afghan mujahedeen who fought successfully to oust the Soviet army, according to the Small Arms Survey 2001 by the Geneva-based Graduate Institute of International Studies.

Their fates linked by the flood of arms, both countries have witnessed the scourges of proliferation first hand.

In Afghanistan, a surfeit of arms fueled a civil war that followed Soviet withdrawal in 1989, and Pakistan has witnessed the rise of a "gun culture," where ethnic and religious differences have erupted into militancy and armed conflict.

The warring among the mujahedeen fighters brought more death and destruction than the war against Red Army troops. Most of Afghanistan is now in the hands of the Taliban religious militia, but there are still pockets of resistance where fighting continues.

Over the past two decades, Pakistan has witnessed the rise of ethnic and religious violence by heavily-armed groups.

In the largest city, Karachi, the militant Mohajir Qami Movement, which represents Muslims who migrated from India and their descendants, has waged a virtual insurgency and terrorist campaign.

Religious violence also has surged since the Afghan war between armed Sunni Muslim and Shiite Muslim groups.

Mobile technology unveils debate on divorce via phone

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Around the world, mobile phone users are making and breaking dates every day by typing a simple message into their handsets. But getting a divorce?

In mostly Muslim Malaysia, an Islamic cleric triggered a national debate by saying that a mobile phone message sent from a husband to his wife to declare their divorce is a valid first step to legal recognition of the split.

Under Islamic law, a husband must declare the divorce to his wife, although different countries give such statements different legal weight. In Malaysia, the husband's declaration must be made first to his wife, then repeated in court before a judge of Shariah, or Islamic law, who must then ratify the divorce.

Hashim Yahya, the mufti for Kuala Lumpur, outraged women's groups and worried government officials when he said that a husband's phone message, called SMS, is valid notice of divorce.

"Under Shariah law, he can use any means," Hashim told The Associated Press on Friday. "Saying it directly, on the telephone, through a letter — this can also mean using SMS."

Sending a message does not mean that the divorce is final, he said. If a husband did not follow through on the process, the divorce would be illegal and he could face up to six months in prison and a $263 fine.

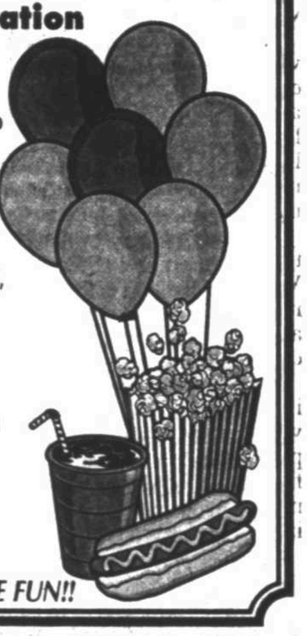

Other interpreters of Islamic law say Hashim is technically correct, but few are willing to back the idea.

Women and Family Development Minister Sharizat Abdul Jalil said the idea taints the sanctity of marriage and is demeaning to women.

Thirty-nine safely escape offshore rig blast; one worker missing

FREEPORT (AP) — A supervisor on an offshore oil and natural gas rig in the Gulf of Mexico remained missing Friday after an early morning blast aboard the platform forced its evacuation.

A U.S. Coast Guard patrol boat and helicopter searched for the missing man while his 39 coworkers escaped serious injury and were returned to land.

"We don't know for sure he was in the water," said Coast Guard Lt. Steve Lake. "He could still be on the rig."

The name of the missing man was not immediately released.

The other employees were safely evacuated in emergency escape pods from the platform 26 miles south of Freeport after the 4:15 a.m. blast, the Coast Guard said.

About three hours later, a Coast Guard rescue boat retrieved 18 people from the floating rescue crafts while an offshore supply ship picked up the other 21 workers, Lake said.

The 39 returned them to Freeport aboard the supply boat.

"They looked pretty happy to get onboard the boat," said Heath Taylor, captain of the supply ship.

He said the missing supervisor stayed on the platform and tried to get everyone off safely.

"They don't know what happened to him," Taylor said. "They lost sight of him."

The rig is owned by Marine Drilling Companies Inc., based in the Houston suburb of Sugar Land. The platform was being leased by Applied Drilling Technology Inc., a subsidiary of Houston-based Global Marine Inc.

The incident aboard the Marine 4 natural-gas drilling platform initially was described by Coast Guard officials as an explosion. However, Dale Wilhelm, Marine's vice president-controller, described it as a blowout, when a well leaks gas uncontrollably.

"There has not been any ignition," Wilhelm said.

Lake said there was no fiery blast on the rig but a big boom when the blowout happened. The platform was leaking natural gas and a plume of it was flowing about 250 feet into the air, he said.

The Coast Guard Marine Safety Office in Galveston will investigate the cause of the incident.

Company officials were not able to get aboard the rig immediately, Lake said. Three company boats were at the scene and officials were conducting air quality surveys.

"Steps are presently under way with well control specialists to gain control of the well," the company said in a statement.

The gas leak wasn't a serious threat, Lake said.

The company owns 18 drilling rigs in the Gulf of Mexico and around the world.

Researchers developing milder habanero for salsa

HARLINGEN (AP) — From the plant science that's sized onions for burger buns and made watermelon pits an option, a new development: mild habaneros.

It's an oxymoron, and bound to sell big. Salsa makers dream of bringing the aroma and taste of these fiery orange peppers to middle America. And they've found they can't market enough, er — wimpy — hot sauce.

"Mild. That's always the key word," said Ben Villalon, the veteran pepper researcher who had a mild jalapeno out in the 1970s, long before salsa became a billion-dollar industry. "Forget that it was resistant to six viruses...it's mild."

Villalon's lab at the University of Texas Pan-American in Weslaco had been fielding requests from salsa makers big and small who hoped the same could be done with habaneros.

Researcher Kevin Crosby, who inherited the habanero project when Villalon retired, says his plants are only a few generations from perfection, which means the milder pepper could hit the jars in two years.

That's good news to marketers, bad news to "chile-heads" who fear the fire is being bred right out, and that the future of peppers is uniformly bland.

"I know every time something like this comes out, your hardcore chile-heads get all up in arms," said David Gibson, editor of the Fort Worth-based Chile Pepper Magazine. "I have to say I've begun to suspect that myself...It might be crossbreeding. Or I might be getting older."

Still, Gibson and other aficionados see the logic in trying to tame the flavors and aromas of a pepper that's six times hotter than a jalapeno, so blisteringly hot a smattering can render a pot of food inedible. Handlers wear gloves against the sting of the juice.

Fans of the habaneros say the unique, fruity, flavor is worth the tears.

"If they're crossbreeding with bell peppers and it comes out tasting like a mix, I'm not going to be too excited," Gibson said. "If they can keep the flavor of the habanero but get it down to around 10,000 or 5,000 scovilles so I can cut it into little pieces and eat it raw, that would be beautiful."

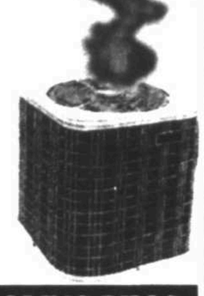

Scovilles are the measuring unit for pepper heat. The average habanero rates 300,000 scovilles. A jalapeno measures 50,000 scovilles.

Crosby has been crossing Mexican habanero species with wild habanero species from Bolivia and Colombia. His research started as a search for a hardy plant that would adapt to the South Texas soils, which lack the tropical moisture found in Central and South American soils.

Kelly Air Force Base officially closes

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Kelly Air Force Base became history Friday, closing 85 years after it opened in the height of World War I.

Military officials formally posted the base closing order, and the Kelly flag was lowered for the last time during a sentimental ceremony. A 21-gun cannon salute rang out.

Brig. Gen. Robert M. Murdock, the final commander of the Air Logistics Center at Kelly, praised base employees, saying the quality of their work remained high until the end.

"We showed the world what dedication, effort, hard work and, most of all, Kelly pride is all about. Kelly pride is our distinction, a theme for all our people," Murdock said.

The shutdown has been coming on gradually since 1995, when the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission voted to close Kelly. The decision jolted San Antonio, where the historic, bustling base was the city's biggest employer.

The San Antonio Air Logistics Center was the main operation at the base. Through the years, it provided maintenance and support for such aircraft as the B-52 and the giant C-5 cargo plane.

Former Kelly workers and Texas political and civic leaders gathered Friday at the formal deactivation ceremony.

Throughout the event were flyovers by F-16 and T-38 formations and by a single C-5, all aircraft maintained in whole or part at Kelly.

Belinda Lopez, whose husband Felix Lopez III worked at Kelly before transferring to Tinker Air Force Base in Midwest City, Okla., last year, said seeing the C-5 overhead brought back lots of memories for her family.

"His first baby was the C-5," she . Lopez said. The couple, along with 7-year-old daughter Genevie, traveled to San Antonio this week to witness the end of Kelly.

"It kind of gives you closure. You know how you always hear that word 'closure'? Now I really know what it means," Belinda Lopez said.

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison lauded the effort of Kelly workers and city leaders to lure private-sector work to the base property.

The San Antonio City Council formed the Greater Kelly Development Authority to try to attract businesses. Thirty-seven companies and nearly 5,000 jobs now occupy the center. Among the big-name residents are the Boeing Co. and Lockheed Martin.

The sign in front of the base now reads KellyUSA, the name of the new aviation and industrial park on the grounds.

Kelly facts

Highlights from the 85-year history of Kelly Air Force Base:

- With World War I raging in Europe, the Army's Aviation Section was ordered to find a suitable location for a training facility. In November 1916, approval came for a new facility in San Antonio, to be named for Lt. George E.M. Kelly, the first military pilot killed in a crash of a military aircraft.
- During World War I, Kelly was the largest aviation training, classification and reception center in United States, training 1,500 pilots, 300 instructor pilots, and enlisted mechanics and organizing 250,000 men into aero squadrons.
- For most of the 1920s, all flying training was conducted at Brooks Field and Kelly, which served as the only Air Corps Advanced Flying School from 1922 to 1941.
- Almost every Army aviator who earned his wings during this time finished his pilot training at Kelly, including Charles Lindbergh, Ira Eaker, Hoyt Vandenberg, Pete Quesada, and Curtis LeMay.
- In 1925, Kelly separated into Duncan Field, which conducted depot maintenance and supply, and Kelly Field, which continued the flight training mission.
- Duncan and Kelly Fields were reunited under the name Kelly Field in 1943 when flight training left Kelly.
- Provided depot maintenance and/or management for B-29, P-51, B-36, B-47, B-58, B-52, F-102, F-106, C-130, T-37, T-38, and C-5 between 1948 and 1998.
- Responsible for management and repair of more than half of Air Force engine inventory, including F100, TF39, T56 engines. Managed aerospace fuels, nuclear weapons and related items and more than 185,000 items ranging from gas turbine engines to automatic test equipment.
- 1995 Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission voted to close Kelly.
- Final shutdown of Kelly is completed July 13, 2001.

Lubbock officer killed during standoff

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Lubbock police officer was shot in the head and killed Friday afternoon following a shootout with a 47-year-old man, police said.

The shooting happened at 3:20 p.m. as police responded to domestic dispute call made a few hours earlier, Lubbock Police Department spokesman Bill Morgan said.

The unidentified 38-year-old officer was pronounced dead upon arrival to University Medical Center in Lubbock.

The shooting occurred as a SWAT team attempted to enter the home of Richard Robinson, Morgan said.

Morgan said Robinson fired as many as 30 rounds through a wall of his house during the two minute shootout.

"The fire was so rapid it may have been a fully automatic (weapon)," Morgan said.

Police fired tear gas into the house and took Robinson into custody shortly after the shooting.

Police arrived at Robinson's home after getting a call about a domestic disturbance at 11:11 a.m. Morgan said after Robinson's wife left their house, he began taking furniture into the front yard and setting it on fire.

It was the second time a Lubbock officer died in the line of duty in this week.

Rodney Kendricks, 33, a Lubbock motorcycle patrolman, died Sunday after being involved in a traffic collision while escorting a funeral procession two weeks ago.

Nix expected to sign contract with Rockies

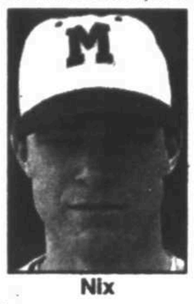

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

All Jayson Nix has to do is put his signature on a piece of paper today and he will realize his dream of becoming a professional baseball player.

Nix, who helped lead Midland High to a state championship a little over a month ago, is expected to sign a professional cxontract with the Colorado Rockies today. A day earlier, Nix, a shortstop who was the 44th overall selection in the Major League Baseball draft by the Rockies last month, was recently named to the Rawlings/American Baseball Coaches Association All-America team and also was an All-USA Today second team selection last month.

Laynce Nix Sr., Jayson's father, said that his son hadn't yet signed a contract but was expected to do so today. Jayson was on a trip to Ruidoso, N.M., and was unavailable for comment.

A few details are expected to be worked out, but that likely won't prevent Nix from signing with the Rockies.

Nix

"We've actually agreed on terms, it's just a matter of getting the particular points in order," said Don Mitchell of Scottsdale, Ariz., the agent who is representing Nix. "There are some issues relative to bonus dollars and the instructional leagues."

While Laynce Nix Sr. said Jayson is expected to earn a $925,000 signing bonus, Mitchell wouldn't confirm the number, but said that it was very close.

Mitchell said that the Rockies originally offered Nix an $800,000 bonus. The Rockies official web site reported that Nix, who also earned a scholarship to play for Texas A&M, had been offered an $850,000 bonus.

"They made a good initial offer which was a little higher than I thought it would be," Nix said two weeks ago.

As the 44th pick in the draft, Nix was selected in what is known as the "sandwich" round between the first and second rounds. After the 30 selections were made in the first round, a compensation round was held for teams which couldn't sign their first round picks from the year before, and Nix was the final pick of the sandwich round.

Regardless of the numbers, Mitchell said he was pleased with how the negotiations went for both sides and that he was confident all along that progress was being made toward an agreement.

"The talks between myself and the Rockies and the Nixes have been very professional," said Mitchell. "The one thing that the draft will show you is that while the commissioner's office has strived to keep bonuses down, it also cuts down on development time. That contract might not put (Nix) in the first round, but the Rockies like his ability."

Many first round selections are offered bonuses in the $1 million range, and Nix was perhaps picked just outside that area. However, Mitchell claims that several players selected just below Nix weren't made offers as generous as what Rockies made to Nix.

"I know Jayson is going to be happy being a Rockie," said Mitchell.

A NEW ERA FOR CHINA

Beijing awarded 2008 Olympic Games

IOC overlooks past in giving China games

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

MOSCOW — By awarding the 2008 Games to Beijing, the IOC sent a resounding message to the rest of the world: The Olympics should be about opening doors, not closing them.

The International Olympic Committee put aside human rights concerns in making their historic decision, hoping to foster further change in the world's most populous country. In a gesture that has global, political and economic repercussions, China won the games for the first time in a landslide vote over Toronto, Paris, Istanbul, Turkey, and Osaka, Japan.

"Possibly today this opens a new era for China," IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch said after opening a blue envelope and declaring Beijing the winner.

The Chinese capital, which lost by two votes to Sydney for the 2000 Olympics, had been the front-runner all along but the margin of victory was still surprising. It prevailed on the second round of a secret ballot by receiving 56 votes, three more than the required majority.

Toronto, which had insisted it was neck and neck with Beijing, got only 22 votes in the final round, with Paris getting 18 and Istanbul nine. Osaka was eliminated in the first round with six votes.

In the first round, Beijing got 44 votes, Toronto 20, Istanbul 17 and Paris 15. Beijing picked up votes from Istanbul and Osaka to swing the election in the next round.

The announcement set off an official celebration of fireworks, songs and flag-waving by thousands of people in Beijing's Millennium Square. Traditional lion dancers joined a group of ballerinas as spotlights and green lasers swept the sky.

Chinese youths carrying banners and cheering as they march towards Tiananmen Square to celebrate the city's successful bid for the 2008 Olympic Games Saturday. Despite controversy over China's human rights record, Beijing won the right to host the summer games over a number of other cities.

"Comrades! We express our deep thanks to all our friends around the world and to the IOC for helping to make Beijing successful in its Olympic bid," President Jiang Zemin shouted to the crowd.

"This is a very important step in the evolution of China's relationship with the world," said former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who helped open relations between Beijing and Washington in the 1970s. "It will have a positive impact."

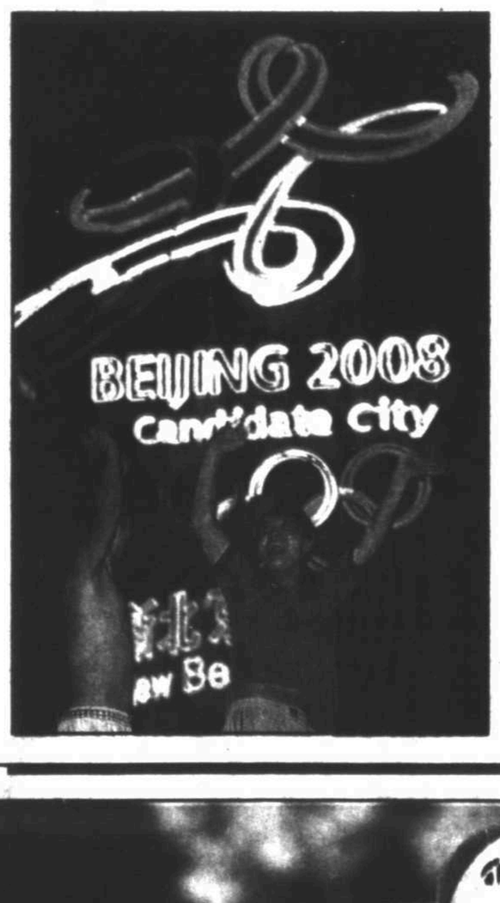

The reaction from members of Congress and human rights activists was vastly different.

"It truly boggles the mind," said Rep. Tom Lantos, the House International Relations Committee's top Democrat, whose resolution urging the IOC not to choose Beijing was blocked by Republican leaders. "This decision will allow the Chinese police state to bask in the reflected glory of the Olympic Games despite having one of the most abominable human rights records in the world."

In Dharmsala, India, Tibetan activists said they would push for an international boycott of the games. China has ruled Tibet since 1950.

Senior Canadian IOC member Dick Pound said taking the games to Beijing was a gamble with

Winning bid leads to national celebration

By William Foreman
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING — Men stripped off their shirts and danced deliriously on cars mobbed by flag-waving crowds. Fireworks exploded above leaping lion dancers.

Millions of people partied in Beijing's streets Friday night, celebrating the city's winning bid for the 2008 Olympics, seen by many as a milestone in China's emergence as a leading nation.

Fireworks boomed in the sky and showered down fluttering flakes of paper and ash that covered the masses — possibly the largest spontaneous gathering in the Chinese capital since pro-democracy protests 12 years ago that ended in a bloody crackdown.

By midnight, crowds had shut down the city's center, and partiers — many waving red Chinese flags — jammed Tiananmen Square, the nation's most famous gathering place. Outside the square, men did victory dances on the roofs of vehicles, while passengers hung out of car windows high-fiving passersby. One woman wet the crowd with a water gun.

Hundreds of police descended on Tiananmen about 2 a.m. Saturday and began hurrying people out of the square.

"This will be the best Olympics because the Chinese love sports more than anyone else in the world," said Lu Kexin, a 19-year-old waiter who ran out of his restaurant to join the celebration after the International Olympic Committee announced its decision in Moscow.

Liu Ying, a shopkeeper in his 40s, marveled at the crowds. "I've never ever seen anything like this in Beijing," he said.

Winning the Olympic bid marked a great comeback for Beijing, which lost the competition for the 2000 Olympics to Sydney by two votes. Concerns about human rights hurt China's bid then and the issue continued to haunt Beijing's intense lobbying this year.

But the IOC members agreed with the many Chinese who were celebrating: It was time for the most populous nation on Earth to have the Olympics.

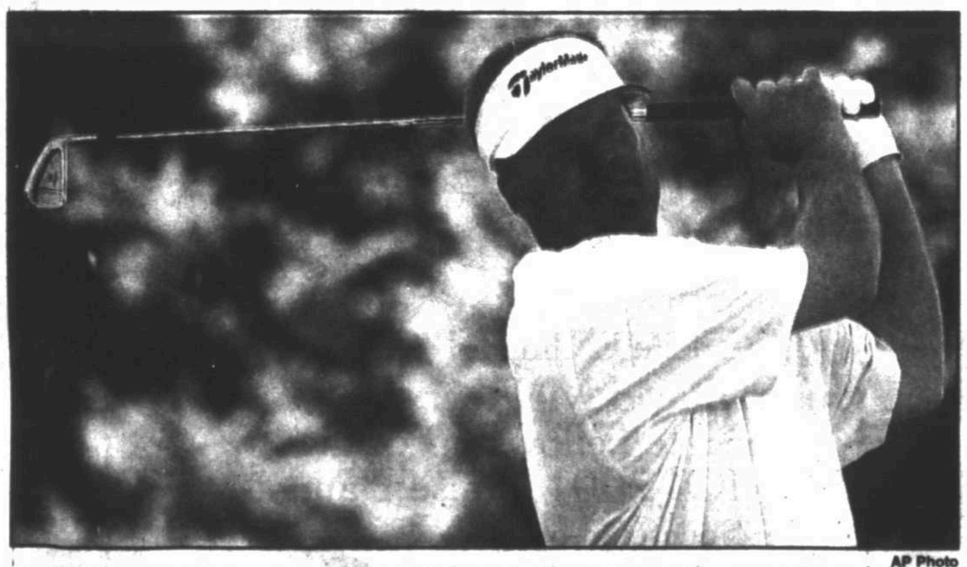

Taiwan's government quickly congratulated China and urged Chinese leaders to uphold the Olympic spirit of pursuing world peace and "renounce the use of force in the Taiwan Strait." The two sides split amid civil war in 1949 and relations are still tense.

About an hour before the IOC voted, a hand-picked crowd of thousands gathered at an official outdoor ceremony in western Beijing. Crooning celebrities warmed up the audience watching the selection process on giant television screens near a huge altar bathed in laser lights.

The crowd erupted in cheers and chants of "Beijing, Beijing!" when IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch declared the city won. Many began singing the Chinese national anthem as fireworks exploded and traditional lion dancers and ballerinas began performing.

President Jiang Zemin and other members of the cabinet and Communist Party politburo appeared briefly on stage as thousands of unin-

Kenny Perry hits his tee shot on the ninth hole during the second round of the Greater Milwaukee Open on Friday in Milwaukee. Perry shot an 8-under-par 63 and leads the tournament at 13 under.

Perry hoping some Milwaukee history repeats itself with lead

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE — Kenny Perry wants to know what it's like to run away with a tournament the way Loren Roberts did at last year's Greater Milwaukee Open.

He might just get that chance.

Perry tied for third at the 2000 GMO when Roberts dominated Brown Deer Park with record-breaking 24-under 260 total. On Friday, Perry shot an 8-under-par 63 for a 13-under 129 that gave him a three-stroke lead.

Chris Smith was second after his second straight 66 on a mildly breezy day at the 6,759-yard municipal course.

Perry, of Franklin, Ky., hasn't won on the PGA Tour since the 1995 Bob Hope Chrysler Classic. He shared the first-round lead at the GMO last year before finishing nine strokes behind Roberts.

"Loren ran away with the field," Perry said. "I'd like to do like Loren did, I'd like to shoot another low round tomorrow and have a nice cushion for Sunday."

Brent Geiberger (68), Craig Spence (65) and Shigeki Maruyama (65) were all four strokes back. First-round leader Jay Haas followed his 64 with a 71 and was tied for 11th, six shots back.

Perry was the only player to go bogey-free for the first 36 holes, and his three-stroke lead tied the GMO mark for biggest after the second round. Still, he realizes chances are slim that he can copy Roberts' runaway of a year ago.

Not only will the greens firm up over the weekend, but never before has the 40-year-old golfer dominat-

ESPN making movie about IU's year on the brink under Knight

By Beth Harris
AP Sports Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — Bob Knight can be dramatic enough in real life. Now ESPN is producing its first made-for-TV movie on the fiery college basketball coach.

"A Season on the Brink: A Year with Bob Knight and the Indiana Hoosiers" is based on the best-selling book by John Feinstein. It will air March 10.

"We don't have any expectation that he's going to be thrilled with this," producer Stan Brooks said Friday at the Television Critics Association summer gathering.

Especially since Knight no longer coaches the Hoosiers. He was fired in September for violating a zero-tolerance behavior policy. He'll make his debut as coach at Texas Tech this fall.

The movie will chronicle Indiana's 1985-86 season, when Knight granted Feinstein unprecedented access to the team and its practices, meetings, and huddles. Knight later denounced the book.

"It'll give our viewers a glimpse of where it all started going wrong for Bobby," said Mark Shapiro, senior vice president and general manager for ESPN programming.

Knight's character has yet to be cast, and writer and co-producer David Rintels figures the pool of actors is small.

"Knight is distinctive, he's a big man, a presence," Rintels said. "I've got a thought in mind, but I haven't spoken to him yet. It's not Mickey Rooney."

Rintels is still working on the script. Shooting will begin in November, but there are no plans to film in Bloomington, Ind.

Brooks said it's possible basketball players may be cast in the roles of team members.

The movie is ESPN's first foray into original TV movies, and is one of several additions to the sports cable network's programming. ESPN is getting into the reality game show genre with an eight-episode series called "Beg, Borrow and B.S.," which will air Sunday nights beginning Feb. 3.

Two four-member teams will spend 45 days traveling from New York to San Francisco with no money and performing 12 sports-related challenges, including catching a pass from an NFL quarterback, serving as ring announcer at a boxing match or riding a bike on the velodrome at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo. Winners will receive two tickets each to four major sports championship events of their choosing.

"Sports mirrors reality," Shapiro said. "It's going to be very edgy and competitive."

Potential contestants can apply on ESPN.com or through ESPN The Magazine beginning July 15. Applicants must sell themselves by submitting a three-minute videotape and photograph.

Other ESPN news:

■ ESPNEWS, a re-launch of its 24-hour sports news network. A new feature will be a continuous ticker of scores, updates and news stories that will run even during national commercial breaks. Also planned are in-progress game scores, statistics and updates. Debuts Sept. 7.

'Hounds lose again by one run

Staff Report

EL PASO — If the Midland RockHounds don't watch out, the El Paso Diablos might overtake them for third place in the Texas League West Division.

In a rare pitching duel at Cohen Stadium, Derrick Gibson's RBIs double in the seventh inning proved to be enough for the Diablos in a 1-0 win, their second straight victory over Midland. Midland is now 8-14 in the second half, six games back of division leader San Antonio, while El Paso is 7-15.

Gibson played the bad guy or the hero (depending on your point of view) for the second night in a row. On Thursday, Gibson singled to right field in the ninth inning off Kevin Gregg to drive home the game-winning run in a 6-5 victory over the RockHounds.

On Friday, the Diablos got back-to-back singles from Chris Lemonis and Lyle Overbay in the seventh inning, then Gibson stroked a double to right for the game's only run. The loss spoiled a solid pitching performance from Midland starter Justin Lehr (10-7), who went 6 1/3 innings, allowing only five hits.

After getting five hits in the first six innings of the game off El Paso starter Oscar Villarreal, the 'Hounds were held hitless by reliever Jason Martines (1-1) and Mike Kolove, who picked up his fourth save of the season.

Midland got a scare in the sixth when first baseman Todd Mensik tripped and hit his head chasing after a foul ball. From radio reports, Mensik lost track of where he was and tripped on the rolled tarp. Mensik received medical attention from Midland trainer Brian Thorson and stayed in the game.

ROCKHOUND BITES: Midland is now 1-2 in 1-0 games this season and 12-14 in one-run games... Leadoff man Esteban German was kept off the base paths for just the second time in the last 53 games.

Armstrong maintains status quo

By Michael McDonough
Associated Press Writer

STRASBOURG, France — Lance Armstrong remained in 15th place in the Tour de France on Friday but still in good shape with the demanding mountain stages ahead.

Armstrong recorded the same time as sixth-stage winner Jaan Kirsipuu of Estonia. The Texan finished in 48th place and held a 27-second advantage over his main rival, Germany's Jan Ullrich, in the overall standings.

Australia's Stuart O'Grady finished with the main pack in fifth place and held the leader's yellow jersey for a fourth day. Armstrong is 1:53 behind the Aussie.

Armstrong is still favored to retain his title but is not expected to bid for the lead until next week. The Tour arrives in the Alps on Tuesday and two days later moves to the Pyrenees near the Spanish border.

"Lance is really well positioned going into the mountains," said Mark Gorski, general manager of the U.S. Postal Service team.

Armstrong and Ullrich, in 19th place overall, can easily strengthen themselves in the mountains, an arduous stretch that forces many riders to abandon the race.

Kirsipuu, who rides for AG2R, won Friday's stage in a mass sprint. He completed the 131.34-mile stretch from Commercy to this town near the German border in 4 hours, 50 minutes, 39 seconds. It was the second time in his career he won a Tour de France stage.

Damien Nazon of France finished second and Jan Svorada of the Czech Republic was third, both in the same time as Kirsipuu. Belgium's Tom Steels was dropped from fourth to 160th place in the stage for irregular riding in the final sprint.

By being dropped, Steels did not lose time but missed a chance to improve his ranking in the competition to determine the best sprinter of the Tour. The route took riders on their first mountain pass, the Col du Donon in the densely wooded Vosges mountains, in which they climbed some 990 feet over 2.4 miles.

GAMES: Presentation impresses IOC

a huge payoff.

"If you take Toronto, it has virtually no risk and a high reward," he said. "This has a higher risk, but potentially a much higher reward."

Olympic historian John McAloon said giving the games to China marked a watershed.

"In some ways, the Olympic movement might have been reborn in this vote," he said. "They gave political and historical significance to what's best for the games instead of what's best for the sports industry.

"Beijing got the games not in spite of, but because of, the human rights issue."

Chinese leaders and IOC officials repeated their view that the Olympics will accelerate the reform process.

"On the human rights question we have achieved a tremendous progress," said Yuan Weimin, China's minister of sports. "In the next stage of our national development we will continue to open ourselves wider to the outside world and carry out more reforms."

Olympic officials said the games could have the same effect on China as the 1988 Olympics did in helping South Korea transform from military dictatorship to democracy.

Beijing also benefited from a strong sympathy factor. IOC members felt China deserved the games after the narrow defeat in 1993.

"There was recognition that they had a tough loss and they came back and were rewarded for it," Pound said. "In the Olympic context, China is a perfectly good citizen."

Beijing shored up its support in a 45-minute presentation to the IOC general assembly, dealing with the human rights issue head-on and emphasizing the huge impact the games would have on China and the world.

"When I saw that presentation, I turned to my wife and said, 'My God, that was powerful,'" Toronto bid chief John Bitove said. "It was 10 out of 10."

Toronto, which portrayed itself as a "bid of certainty" driven by athletes, was hurt by the remarks of its mayor, Mel Lastman. He told a reporter recently that he feared attending an Olympic meeting in Africa because of visions of "myself in a pot of boiling water with all these natives dancing around me."

The issue was raised during Toronto's presentation Friday, with Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien apologizing for the mayor's remarks. Paul Henderson, a Canadian IOC member who led Toronto's unsuccessful bid for the 1996 Games, said Beijing's political might made the difference.

"The power of the IOC wanted Beijing — now they have to live with it," he said.

The result was humiliating for Paris, which suffered from sympathy votes going to Turkey. Also, members were reluctant to hold the Olympics in Europe for a third straight time since the 2004 Summer Games will be in Athens and the 2006 Winter Games in Turin, Italy.

Beijing's victory could have a big influence on Monday's election of a successor to Samaranch, who is stepping down after 21 years as IOC president. The result won't help South Korea's Kim Un-yong — considered one of the top two contenders — because IOC members could be reluctant to give both prizes to Asia.

New names succeed on new track

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

JOLIET, Ill. — It's only fitting that a new race track spawned a very unfamiliar front row for the inaugural Tropicana 400.

The Fords of Haas-Carter Motorsports teammates Todd Bodine and Jimmy Spencer swept the top two spots for Sunday's race at the new Chicagoland Speedway.

"Our cars are very different," polesitter Bodine said. "Jimmy and I have the setups just the way we like the car to feel. But there happens to be a common denominator under the hood.

"With those Robert Yates engines, we've got a lot of horsepower, and you're in the throttle 90 percent of the time on this race track."

Bodine, whose only previous Winston Cup pole came on the road course in Watkins Glen, N.Y., in August of 1997, led the way Friday with a lap of 183.717 mph. Spencer, who won a pole on the short track at North Wilkesboro in 1994 and hadn't qualified better than fifth this season, was right behind at 183.411.

The time difference between the two fast laps on the 1 1/2-mile, D-shaped tri-oval was just 0.049-seconds. In fact, the 36 drivers who made it into the 43-car field based on qualifying speeds were separated by just 0.692 seconds.

"Jimmy tested here, and I think that helped get us a jump start over our competitors," Bodine said.

NIX: Ex-MHS shortstop to sign today

(From 1B)

Nix, a three-year starter at MHS, certainly put up the type of numbers that drew attention during his team's run to the state title. He hit .451 with a .951 slugging percentage and led the team with 13 home runs along with driving in 46 runs.

While Nix is being selected as a shortstop, he was a key pitcher for Midland High at the state tournament in Round Rock. He picked up a save in the semifinals against Klein, and threw a complete game victory against Austin High in the championship.

Mitchell, who was the director of scouting for the Arizona Diamondbacks for four years, believes that Nix has a definite professional future.

"After scouting for 14 years I can see he's an up the middle player with offensive ability," said Mitchell.

Jayson Nix will be the second member of his family to sign with a pro organization in the last year. Last summer, his older brother Laynce, an outfielder who played with Jayson for two years at MHS, signed a contract with the Texas Rangers, who selected him in the fourth round.

CHINA: Citizens display enthusiasm

(From 1B)

vited residents began flooding into the venue.

"Comrades!" Jiang shouted to the crowd. "We express our deep thanks to all our friends around the world and to the IOC for helping to make Beijing successful in its Olympic bid."

At McDonald's restaurants across Beijing, free hamburgers were given out to customers from 10 p.m. to 2:08 a.m.

In an eastern Beijing neighborhood, government clerk Liu Jiguan, 45, joined his neighbors in his apartment's courtyard, where they feasted on shish kebab and snap peas while watching the Olympic vote on a battered television perched on a box. A little girl wrapped herself in the red Chinese flag as she sat on her mother's lap and waited for the news.

When the final vote was announced, the party let out a whoop, clapped their hands and began toasting each other with warm beer served in chipped white ceramic rice bowls.

"By getting the Olympics, the status of the Chinese people in the world will be raised," Liu said.

His neighbor, Xu Jianji, a 52-year-old clerk, said, "We have one-fifth the world's population. We're a powerful country now. We should have the Olympics."

Newspapers distributed late editions announcing the victory with banner headlines in red, a color reserved for the most important news.

"Beijing Finally Succeeds," declared the People's Daily, the main Communist Party newspaper.

The New York-based Human Rights in China group urged Beijing not to resort to brutal tactics used in the past to clean up the city before international events.

"Past practice has included large-scale roundups of street children, unemployed migrants, beggars and the mentally ill, who are then subjected to abusive conditions," the group said.

Houston's bats bail out Oswalt in victory

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Roy Oswalt knew he wasn't sharp and needed some help from his offense. He got plenty.

Jeff Bagwell and Vinny Castilla each hit two of Houston's five home runs and Oswalt won his sixth straight decision as the Astros beat the San Diego Padres 11-3 Friday night. Oswalt (8-1) is 6-0 since moving into the starting rotation and the Astros are 7-0 in the rookie right-hander's starts.

"Actually today, I battled with my control, I wasn't hitting my spots, but I had good results," Oswalt said. "A lot of times, (catcher Brad Ausmus) would set up inside and I'd go outside.

"But every day you go out there, and they get runs for you and play defense, you have confidence."

He allowed six hits over seven innings but tied his career high with eight strikeouts.

Castilla drove in five runs and Bagwell four. All of the Astros' homers came off Woody Williams (6-7), who set a franchise record for homers allowed in a game and has now served up an NL-high 27.

Bagwell, who homered for the fourth straight game, hit a two-run shot in the first inning and a solo homer in the fifth to raise his season total to 24 homers. He also hit an RBI single in the sixth to help the Astros beat San Diego at Enron Field for the first time in eight games.

"I know I'm not going to stay on this kind of spurt, but what's happened in the past is I'll hit consistently for two months or more," Bagwell said. "I'm happy the way things are going now. I just want to keep it going."

Castilla hit a two-run homer in the second and a solo shot in the sixth, giving him nine on the season. Castilla added a two-run double in the seventh inning.

"I felt great the last couple of weeks, I'm seeing the ball better," Castilla said. "I'm starting to feel like the way it was before."

Ausmus hit a solo homer in the fourth inning for Houston. Williams, who left after Castilla's second homer, allowed 11 hits, seven earned runs and struck out two over five-plus innings.

Phil Nevin hit a two-run homer for San Diego in the sixth inning, and pinch-hitter Dave Magadan hit a solo shot in the eighth.

Bagwell hit a two-run shot in the first inning after Julio Lugo doubled to center. It was the 200th Astros home run at Enron Field, which opened last season.

Tony Gwynn played an inning of defense for the first time since May 9, going into right field for the sixth. He singled in the seventh and left the game for a pinch runner.

Gwynn, 4-for-6 since coming off the disabled list (strained right hamstring) July 3, got a standing ovation.

"It's still a surprise to me," said Gwynn, who is retiring at the end of the season. "Just in the sense that when I play the game, I just play and pretty much don't think of anything else. It's always nice to be appreciated. I didn't pay attention that other people were paying attention to what I did.

"This was overwhelming to go play defense after not playing for over a month and then to get that type of reception was special."

Rangers 10, Rockies 2

ARLINGTON — Rafael Palmeiro and Andres Galarraga hit two-run homers in support of Rick Helling's three-hit pitching over seven innings as Texas dealt Colorado its fifth straight loss.

Michael Young went 3-for-5 with two homers and had a career-high four RBIs for the Rangers, who have won five of seven. Young had two homers in 129 at-bats all season before Friday.

Galarraga's homer, in the second inning, was his ninth of the season and 369th of his career, matching Ralph Kiner for 51st in major league history. Palmeiro raised his season total to 26 and career total to 426 in the fourth inning, tying Billy Williams for 28th on the career list.

Helling (6-8) shut out the Rockies on two hits over the first six innings before Todd Walker's homer leading off the seventh. Helling, who struck out six and walked three, has won five of his last seven decisions.

Rockies starter Mike Hampton (9-6) lost his fourth straight decision, allowing seven runs and 10 hits over four innings, his second shortest outing of the season.

Colorado, which has dropped 10 of 11 games, was without All-Star first baseman Todd Helton. He strained his right hamstring while running the bases Thursday didn't play Friday, ending his consecutive games streak at 216.

Tigers 4, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Steve Sparks threw a six-hitter, and Bobby Higginson homered and had three RBIs for Detroit.

Defending NL Central champion St. Louis has lost 10 of 13 and fell two games below .500, at 43-45, for the first time since they were 7-9 on April 20. Jose Macias, a late lineup insertion in the leadoff slot, had three hits and Javier Cardona added his first homer for the Tigers.

Red Sox 3, Mets 1

NEW YORK — David Cone made a triumphant return to Shea Stadium, winning in his first start in nine years at his former home, to lead the Red Sox past the Mets.

Backed by Manny Ramirez's 27th homer, Cone (5-1) allowed three hits in 5 2/3 scoreless innings to win at Shea for the first time since Aug. 2, 1992.

Marlins 11, Yankees 1

MIAMI — Chuck Smith pitched seven shutout innings and Alex Gonzalez homered twice to help Florida win before a crowd of 44,313, the largest in three seasons at Pro Player Stadium.

All-Star Cliff Floyd capped the rout with a three-run homer in the eighth, his 22nd.

Indians 5, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Rookie C.C. Sabathia struck out a career-high 11, and Robbie Alomar hit a three-run homer for Cleveland.

Alomar drew a long ovation from a pro-Indians crowd of 38,790 that reveled in a second straight Cleveland win at Cinergy Field.

Phillies 5, Blue Jays 2

PHILADELPHIA — Doug Glanville's go-ahead RBI single in the seventh inning and Scott Rolen's homer led Philadelphia's rally.

The Phillies had just one hit before getting five singles in a three-run seventh.

Braves 7, Orioles 1

ATLANTA — Tom Glavine allowed only two hits in seven innings, and Andruw Jones drove in three runs for Atlanta, which remained tied for first in the NL East with Philadelphia.

Pirates 1, Royals 0

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh's Todd Ritchie lost a no-hitter on Luis Alicea's one-out single in the ninth, but got the victory thanks to Aramis Ramirez's single in the bottom of the inning.

Expos 6, Devil Rays 2

MONTREAL — Jose Vidro and Vladimir Guerrero hit back-to-back homers in the first inning, and Mark Smith also homered to lead Montreal.

White Sox 7, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Mark Buehrle pitched eight strong innings and the White Sox homered twice while taking advantage of Kerry Wood's wildness to beat the Cubs.

Brewers 6, Twins 3

MILWAUKEE — Richie Sexson drove in three runs with a homer and a single as Milwaukee dealt Minnesota just its second loss in 12 games.

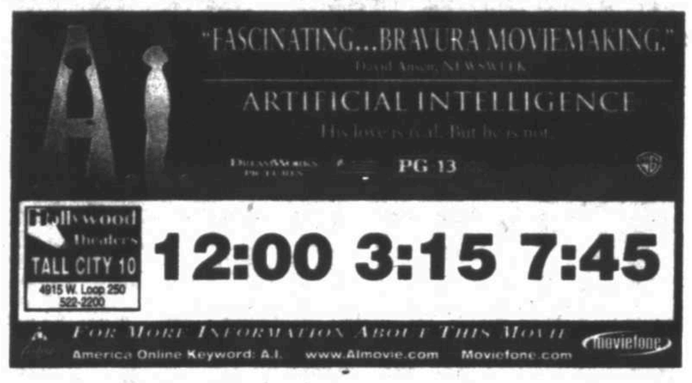

Giants 5, Mariners 3

SEATTLE — Russ Ortiz pitched 7 2/3 strong innings, and Barry Bonds hit an RBI single in the first inning as the Giants beat the Mariners.

Diamondbacks 6, Angels 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Curt Schilling became the majors' first 13-game winner, and Luis Gonzalez and Mark Grace homered as the Diamondbacks beat the Angels.

Irwin, Watson knotted in Seniors

By Larry Lage
AP Sports Writer

DEARBORN, Mich. — Hale Irwin wasn't about to let the wine-and-cheese crowd near the 17th fairway ruin his round.

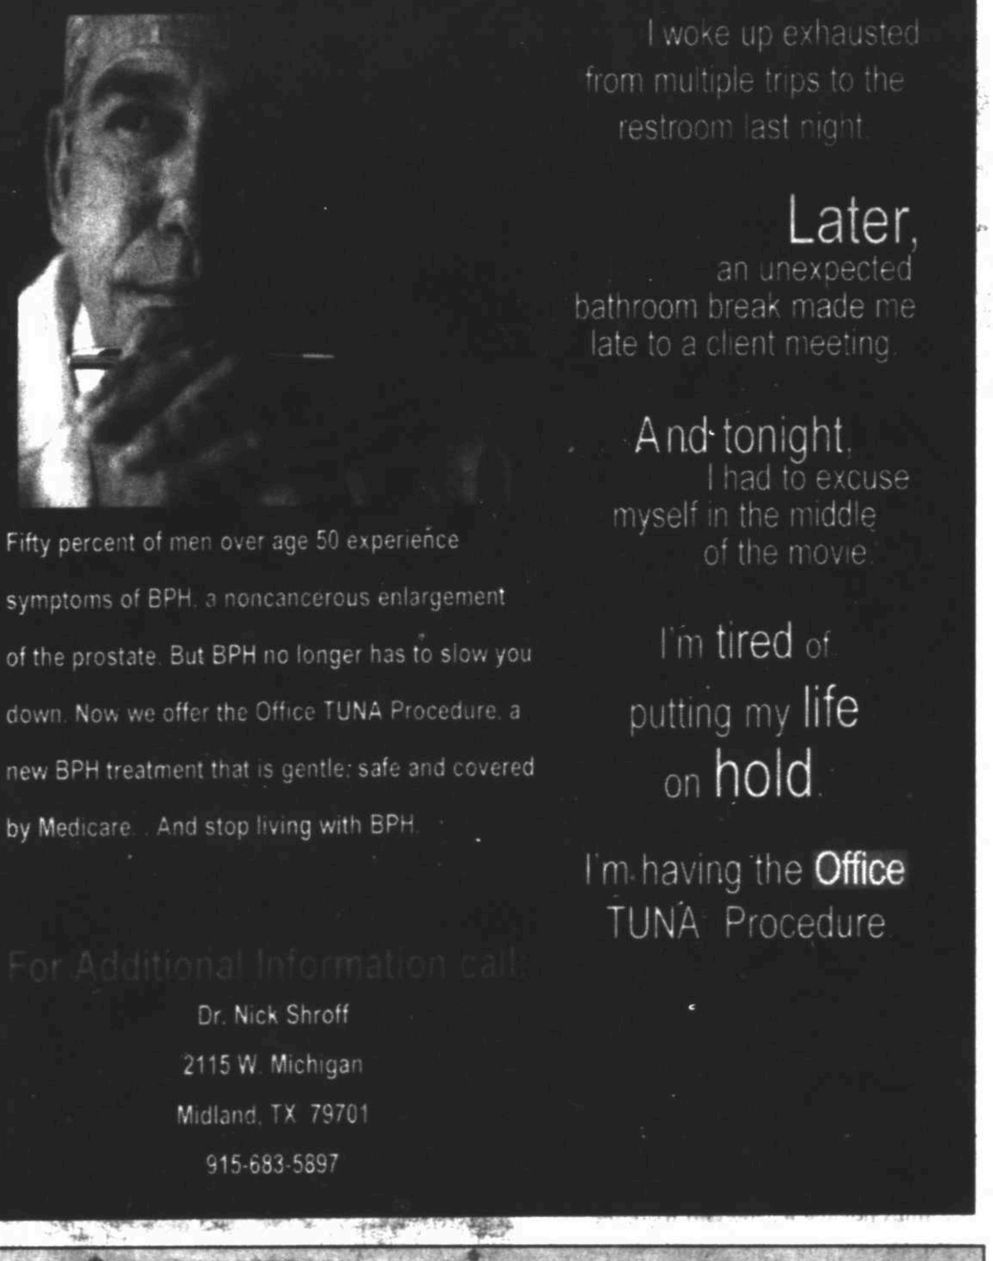

As fans in corporate tents created a steady buzz of noise, apparently oblivious to fourth and final Senior PGA Tour major being played around them, Irwin was bothered enough to only par the par-5 17th, a hole 26 others birdied on Friday.

Irwin regained his composure enough to make a 30-foot birdie putt on 18 to complete his 7-under-par 65, which tied him with Tom Watson at 9 under after two rounds in the Senior Players Championship at the TPC of Michigan.

"They need some control up there," said Irwin, who showed his anger on the 17th by tossing his wedge on his bag, shaking his head and staring down the people in the white tents on a few occasions.

Irwin made seven birdies — five on the back nine — without a bogey. Six of his birdie putts were from 15 feet or longer.

Irwin said he did not hit the ball well off tees or fairways, but enjoyed a great day on the greens where he putted just 25 times.

ed a PGA Tour event. His three career victories — he also won the 1991 Memorial Tournament and the New England Classic in '94 — have come either via a playoff or last-hole heroics.

"I don't care how, I just want to win," he said. "It's been a long time."

Roberts was in danger of missing the cut, much less defending his title, after a miserable round on Thursday. But he followed his 74 with a 67 thanks to birdies on the final two holes that left him at 1 under.

Eighty-eight golfers made the cut at 1 under — the most at a PGA Tour event this year — including Fuzzy Zoeller for the first time in 10 tournaments. Zoeller, who's at 2 under, turns 50 in November and said he's just waiting to join the Senior PGA Tour in 2002.

"That's the reason I'm still playing," he said. "I can't wait to get over to the cart golf and see what it feels like."

Skip Kendall, playing on his home course to fulfill his father's dying wish, shot a 67 and also made the cut at 2 under. Ralph Kendall, 77, died Wednesday from complications of a stroke.

"You know, he didn't want me playing in this tournament missing the cut," Kendall said. "I want to play the weekend and I want to play well."

African Children's Choir to sing in Odessa, Big Spring

■ The concerts are free but love offerings will be taken for relief in southern Sudan, where civil war has been raging since 1984 and famine is widespread.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

What do you do when the only world you know is crashing down around you?

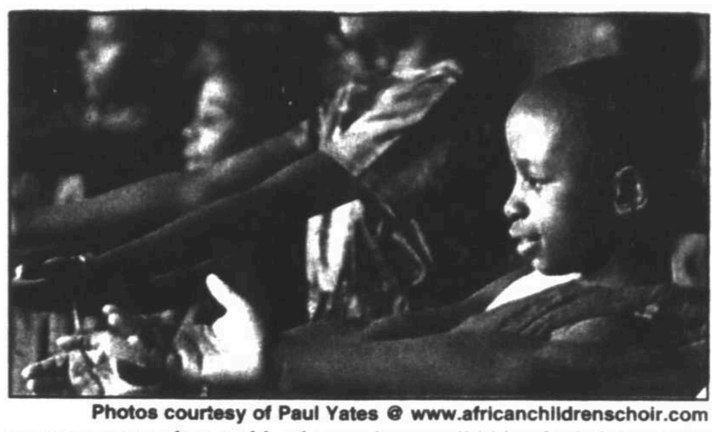

You sing.

And when God touches the hearts of those who hear the songs, miracles can happen.

While traveling through Africa in the early 1980s, a Christian minister, Ray Barnett, offered a child a ride from one city to another, and the boy sang the entire duration of the journey. Barnett, struck by the beauty of the boy's voice, could not get it out of his mind.

A short while later, Barnett happened to be listening to a BBC news report describing the plight of thousands of Ugandan children, orphaned during the oppression and civil war years of dictator Idi Amin. Barnett, an orphan himself, could not stand idly by.

He remembered the young African boy who had sung all the way from

The result was the formation of the African Children's Choir, found-

Monastery offers serenity — not just to Catholics

Editor's Note: Mary Hardin, a Reporter-Telegram retail advertising account executive, recently spent a week at the Christ in the Desert monastery.

ABIQUIU, N.M. — From the homeless to astrophysicists, and from virtually all parts of the globe they come, seeking peace and serenity that cannot be found in the everyday world.

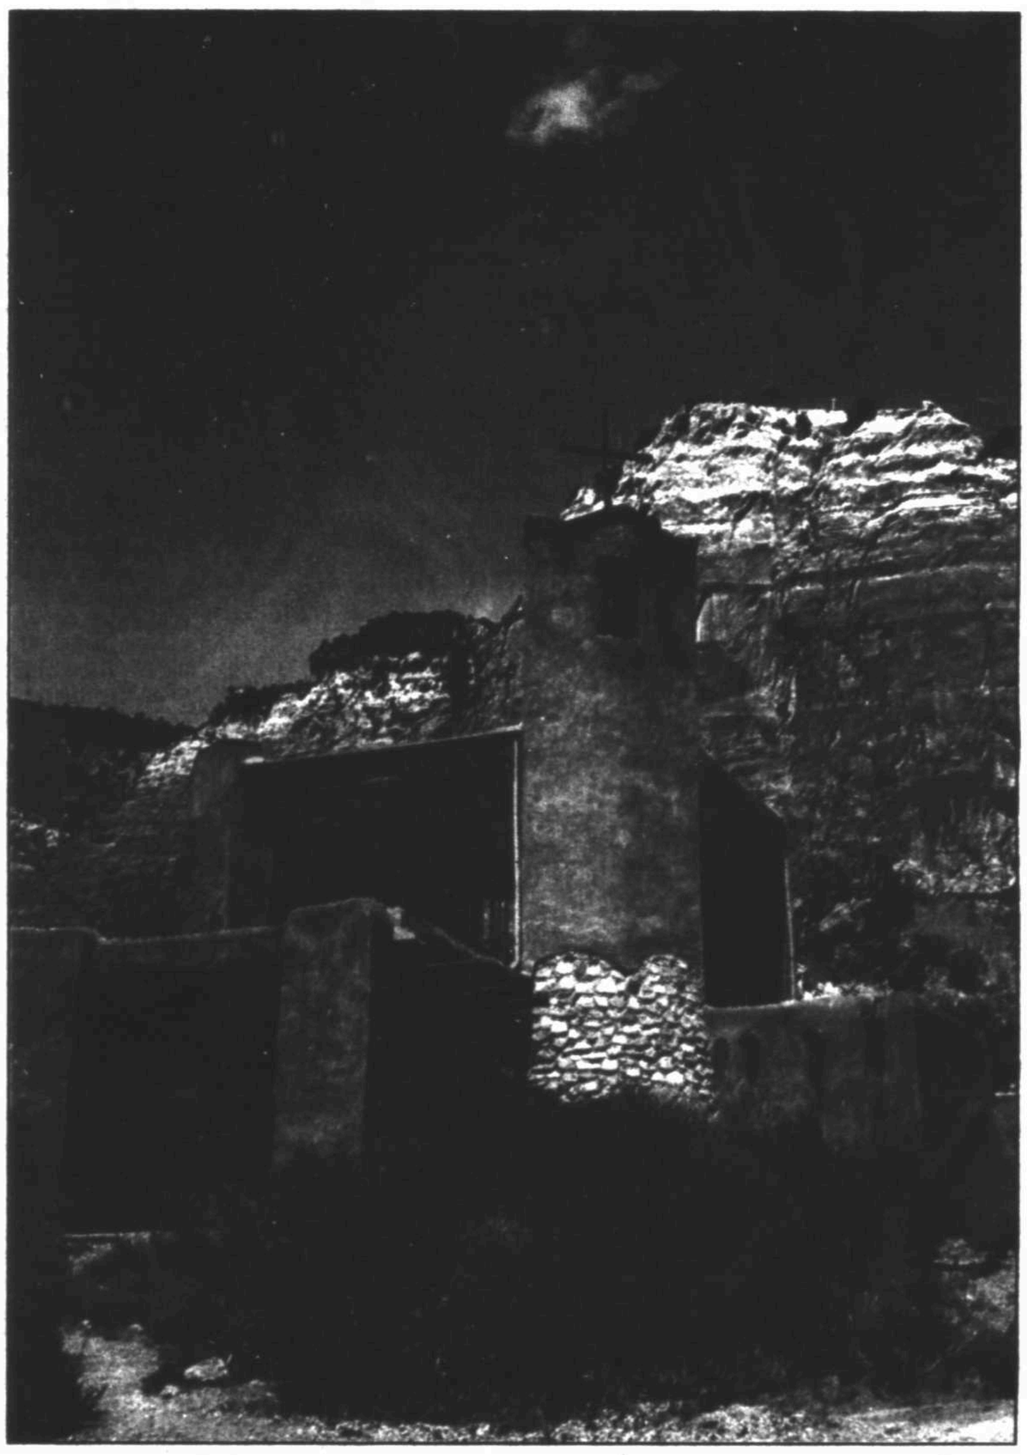

Christ in the Desert monastery — located outside of Abiquiu, N.M., approximately 75 miles north of Santa Fe, and 6,500 feet above sea level — sings of solitude, offering both view and privacy. Located 13 miles down a narrow dirt road, the monastery is nestled in a beautiful canyon, surrounded by miles of government-protected wilderness.

The road is difficult to traverse, and can be unnavigable when wet. There is a three-mile stretch where the road is reduced to one narrow lane as it winds itself around the canyon walls.

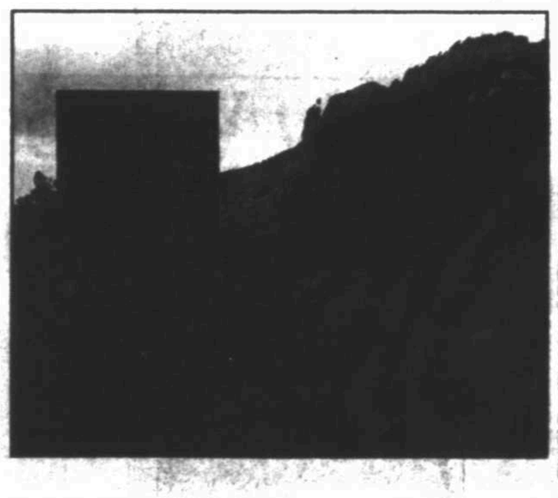

The difficulty in negotiating the road pays off, though, in that traffic is reduced only to those people wanting to get to the monastery. It is rare to meet anyone else on the road.

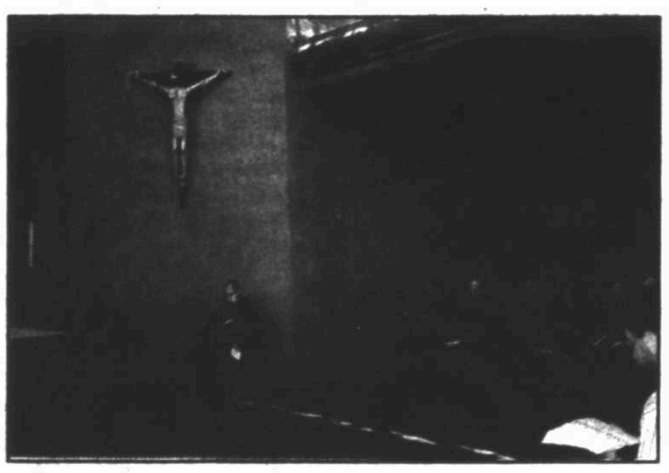

About halfway down the road is the Chama River, which snakes its way through the canyon and becomes a constant companion through the last leg of the journey. It's a beautiful river with swift currents and occasional rapids. The canyon walls are sandstone, offering hues that range from brick red to gold to creamy white. A variety of pines connect the river to the canyon walls, and a turquoise sky forms a pristine canopy over the entire canyon.

Church gathers necessities for families in need

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

In an effort to take their outreach to a more personal level, the parishioners of Midland Lutheran Church are gathering good clothing and household necessities for distribution to families in need.

Matt Espenshade, spokesman for Midland Lutheran's evangelism and outreach committee, said the church has for years helped people in need, but that in the past, the help has been largely in the form of checks.

"We wanted to get the whole church involved, by asking them to bring things in that we can distribute to people who need them," said Espenshade.

He said Midland Lutheran is a small church — about 100 attend Sunday services — but that the congregation feels it can fill significant needs in the community.

"We felt the best way to do that is to have an 'un-sale.' That's what we're calling it, because everything will be given away.

"The Gospels say give, and that's what we're focusing on," he added.

In order to ensure that the items are distributed to those in need, the committee is distributing tickets to benevolent agencies throughout the city to be given to their clients who may then present them at the un-sale.

Espenshade said the church is inviting other churches to participate in the giving, and recipients of tickets may take clothing and household items without restriction.

"We talked about placing limits on the amount of clothing people could take, but decided that to do that would be against the spirit of what we're trying to accomplish. We will ask that people be respectful of the needs of others, but beyond that, we won't make any rules."

He said the idea for the un-sale didn't originate with Midland Lutheran.

"We read about it in the Lutheran Magazine. A church in Wisconsin first tried it several years ago, and the event has grown to be one of the largest philanthropies in the area.

"After we decided to do this, we began contacting aid agencies, and it sounds as if there's a real need for clothing and appliances," he said.

The Midland Lutheran Church Un-Sale will be 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. July 21 in the church's parking lot at 2705 W. Michigan. Ave.

Espenshade said when the outreach committee set the date, they were unaware this was the day of the community-wide Midland Garage Sale, but in retrospect, it was providential timing, making it possible for people who don't have the funds to buy clothing and other items at the garage sales to afford what they need.

Greater St. Luke's to host play 'Or So I've Heard', week of lunches

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

For most of the year, the ushers of Greater St. Luke's African Methodist Episcopal Church are a quiet bunch, who smile and hand you pew bulletins, shake your hand, and if you're lost, direct you to wherever in the church you're trying to go.

Sunday afternoon, however, will be a different story.

Sunday at 3:30 p.m., the nine members of the board of ushers (and a couple of choir members) will be wearing different hats, assuming roles to get the point across that there will be a day of judgment, but our God is a loving God.

The play will be the kickoff of a summer celebration that will last the entire week, and is designed to lift the spirits as well as to give both viewers and performers a chance to look at their faith in a little different light.

This will be the second of such ecclesiastical performances for the board. The first play was done about 18 months ago, according to Greater St. Luke's associate and youth director, Calvin Jackson.

"This play is called "Or So I've Heard," said Jackson, and some of the roles we'll be playing will be a judge, a drug addict, an alcoholic, a preacher's wife, a prostitute, a missionary and a little boy and some others."

Jackson that the play will call on all the creative resources the players can muster, because there have been no rehearsals and no script to go by.

"We'll all be playing as we feel the parts should be played," he explained, adding the virtues and vices portrayed are taken from universal human traits that have been around since the time Christ walked on earth.

"We did the play that way when we did it before, and we all had such a good time with it that we decided not to change." After the play, there will be a reception for the players and the audience in the church's fellowship hall, with refreshments.

Everyone is invited, and there is no charge, either for the play or the refreshments.

Then starting Monday, as a means to raise funds for its operating budget, Greater St. Luke's will serve lunch for the entire week from 11:30 a.m. each day until the food runs out, or until everyone has been served, whichever comes first.

Jackson said the menu will be varied, with items priced separately.

"We'll serve fried catfish, fries, hot dogs, hamburgers, Po-Boys and shakes, just to name a few," he said.

"We hope that we'll run out of food each day, and that we'll do well enough not only to meet our operating budget, but possibly be able to add to our building fund as well.

Jackson said there are tentative plans to present a sequel to "Or So I've Heard" in the fall, depending on the reception of Sunday's play. The sequel will be "The Train to Glory."

Greater St. Luke's is one of the churches in the seven AME conferences throughout Texas that make up the Tenth Episcopal District, under the leadership of Bishop McKinley Young.

Greater St. Luke's AME Church is located at 401 S. Adams. The play starts at 3:30 p.m. Sunday and the public is invited. Lunches will be served beginning at 11:30 a.m. Monday through July 21.

JULY 14 2001

SERENITY: Monks' day begins at 3:40 a.m., filled with prayer

(From 1C)

Finally there is the sign welcoming you to the Monastery of Christ in the Desert. As you round the final turn in the road, the church steeple appears. Thomas Merton, Trappist monk, poet and one of the foremost spiritual thinkers of the 20th century, visited the monastery in the spring of 1968, shortly before his death. He wrote of the sight:

"Stark, lonely, stately in its simplicity, it gazes out over the sparse fields into the widening valley. The tower is like a watchman looking for something or someone of whom it does not speak."

Upon leaving your car you are first struck by the silence. The only sounds to be heard are the gentle harmonizing of the rapids with the droning of insects and the songs of the birds. There are absolutely no sounds of civilization, not even of human speech. Because the electricity is generated by solar power, there is no hum of electrical lines, no ringing of telephones (there is only one cellular telephone in the monastery, and when I tried my own I found service was not provided to that area). The quiet is deafening to those coming from the outside world.

Founded in 1964 by the Rev. Aelred Wall, along with monks of Mount Saviour Monastery in New York state, the Monastery of Christ in the Desert became an autonomous abbey in 1996. The chief architect of the monastic church was George Nakashima, a Japanese-American woodworker and architect.

During my two visits to Monastery of Christ in the Desert, I have met guests with a variety of backgrounds — a financial consultant from Hong Kong, an Anglican priest and his wife from London, a psychologist from Los Angeles, a Church of Christ youth minister from Ohio, a homicide detective from Miami, a creative writing professor from Dallas and a woman from Germany looking to join the Monastery of Our Lady of the Desert. (Founded in 1997, it is a separate Benedictine monastery sharing the canyon with Christ in the Desert).

What all of these people have in common is the desire to distance themselves from the modern world, at least for a little while. I can think of no better place to do so.

The monks of Christ in the Desert are part of the 1,500-year tradition of Benedictine monasticism. They lead a way of life that is characterized by asceticism and self-denial. They live under vows, secluded from the world according to the rules of St. Benedict, in order to praise God through the Eucharist, communal and solitary prayer, study and work. Benedictine monasteries are meant to be places to meet God in silence, in common prayer, in the Scriptures and in the sacraments of the Roman Catholic Church.

However, this is not a place meant for Catholics alone.

"It remains a sanctuary where both monks and retreatants, Christians, believers in other faiths and those with no religious belief at all may experience something of that peace which the world cannot give," Merton wrote.

Those guests who desire to may participate in the everyday life of the monks, by meeting in prayer and participating in work.

The life of the monks revolve around communal and solitary prayer. The monks' day begins at 3:40 a.m., when they awaken to prepare for Vigils, which begins at 4 a.m. Lasting about an hour, Vigils consists of reading psalms, a long Scripture lesson and a reading from the church fathers. On Sundays, Vigils lasts about 1 1/2 hours. All of the office is sung, either in English or in Latin, using Gregorian chant. (Office — from the Latin word "officium," which means duty — is the daily prayers that are a necessary part of monks' religious life.)

After Vigils, the monks may remain in church or return to their cells (room) for solitary prayer or sacred reading. They may eat breakfast then or with the guests after Mass.

At 5:45 a.m. the community gathers in church for the chanting of Lauds — the prayer of the church as light returns to earth. The windows encircling the top of the church reveal the majesty of the sandstone cliffs and God's creation is revealed in all of its majesty. Lauds lasts a half hour and is followed by Mass and the celebration of the Eucharist.

After Mass, the monks have about an hour to use for personal time, further reading, relaxation or breakfast with the guests. Speech is not allowed during meal time. Breakfast usually consists of cereal, hard-boiled eggs, fruit and bread. Guests fix their own, and they are expected to clean up afterward.

At 7:50 a.m., the brothers (what monks are called) meet for daily work assignments, which may include cooking, laundry, correspondence with guests, gardening, computer work, maintenance, cleaning the guest house, bookkeeping, beekeeping and crafts.

From 8:05 a.m. to 8:40 a.m. novices and postulants (the newest brothers not yet in vows) attend classes in Scripture, the Rule of St. Benedict, monastic history, chant and the vows, while the professed monks pursue a private course of study. Guests are free to pursue their own activities.

Terce, one of the three "little hours," (so named because there are fewer prayers than at other times) is chanted at 8:45 a.m. and lasts about 10 minutes. Then everyone pursues their daily work assignments until 12:40 p.m.

Guests who are participating in the work receive their assignments after Terce. They may be asked to do anything from gardening, to office work, to working in the library, cleaning the vacated rooms in the guest house, working in the gift shop, or helping to prepare the main meal. While everyone is encouraged to participate in the work day, it is not required. Those not participating can use the time to hike, study or catch up on sleep.

The prayer session known as Sext, the second "little hour," ends at 1 p.m., when the monks and guests partake of the main meal. They eat in silence, listening to a reading from the Bible and from a book or article chosen for the purpose of "feeding the mind."

The monks take turns preparing and serving the main meal and cleaning up. Guests may also be appointed to help out.

After the main meal, the monks rest or read until 3:30 p.m. when None — the third "little hour" — is chanted together in church. This office ends with the ancient Latin chant "Sub tuum," sung to the Blessed Virgin Mary for help in the material needs of the monastery.

After None, an hour is devoted to lectio divina, sacred reading and reflection on Scripture texts. Postulants (those taking the first step in religious life) and novices (those who are preparing for religious profession) meet together for this, while the professed monks pursue lectio divina in their cells.

After lectio there are about 20 minutes of free time, followed by a common period of silent prayer in the church from 5:20 p.m. until 5:50 p.m. when Vespers is chanted. Vespers includes a half hour of praying, psalms, a hymn and a prolonged prayer of intercession for the needs and intentions of the Catholic Church.

Supper is eaten after Vespers. This meal usually consists of a hearty soup, leftovers from the main meal, salad and bread. Again, silence is observed, although classical music is usually played. Guests are expected to both serve and clean up after themselves.

At 7:10 p.m. the monks gather to listen to a chapter or part of a chapter from the Rule of St. Benedict and a commentary by the abbot. This part of the day is not open to guests.

Then all proceed to the church at 7:30 p.m. for the final office, Compline, which consists of a penitential rite, three psalms, a hymn and an antiphon sung to the Blessed Virgin, which varies according to the Liturgical season.

The day officially ends at about 7:50 p.m. when the monks are free to retire for the night, read or study.

Between Compline until Mass the following day, the monks observe the "great silence."

There are currently 29 monks at the Monastery of Christ in the Desert; fewer than half are from the United States. The others are from India, Vietnam, Mexico, England, Poland and Peru. Five of them are ordained priests; however they are still referred to as "brother" rather than "father." The monks range in age from their mid-20s to mid-80s.

ed in 1984 and directed by Ray Barnett. The choir has performed for audiences all over the world, including the United Nations General Council and Billy Graham's Amsterdam 2000 last year.

Over the years, the choir has raised enough funds to establish literacy schools throughout Uganda and Kenya.

The choir will be performing 7 p.m. Friday at Belmont Baptist Church, 1200 W. Eighth St. in Odessa, and 7:30 p.m. July 21 at the city auditorium, 310 E. Third St. in Big Spring. The latter concert is sponsored by First Church of the Nazarene in Big Spring.

The concerts are free but love offerings will be taken for relief in southern Sudan, where civil war has been raging since 1984 and famine is widespread. More than 1.5 million people have died as a result.

So far, the African Children's Choir has raised enough money to establish seven literacy schools in southern Sudan, where the orphaned and needy children can receive food, medical attention and love, along with an education. Monies are also used to buy trucks for transporting food and medical supplies into the war-torn area.

The ultimate goal is to establish 100 literacy schools throughout southern Sudan.

"Our goal is to save as many lives as possible and to offer hope to people who otherwise have no chance to make it," said Barnett.

The choir consists of 26 children, ages 5 to 12, selected from some of Africa's neediest regions.

The Rev. Rex Clayton, pastor of Belmont Baptist, said the children will stay overnight with members of the Belmont congregation, who will also provide meals for them.

He said the children have few requirements, other that some rather strict "don'ts."

"They sent us a page with a list, asking us not to give them candy, carbonated drinks or money. They don't want us to let them watch TV.

"They said the children would be perfectly comfortable sleeping on the floor," said Clayton.

"When you think of how our children are raised, this might seem hard, but then we've all complained about the effects of junk food and junk TV."

Clayton said although he hadn't been in personal contact with the children or any of their sponsors, he had obtained some of their CDs, one of which has been nominated for a Grammy award.

"Their voices are just beautiful," he said. "We've been needing to do something like this for some time. I think this concert will be a tremendous blessing for our church and for the community, and I know it will raise our awareness of the situation in Africa."

The Belmont Church auditorium's capacity is about 450 and Clayton hopes to fill it up.

"I hope we fill it up," said Clayton.

NEED: Church to host 'unsale'

(From 1C)

"I know it doesn't sound like much money to pay $1 or $1.50 an item, but if you have a big family, and your income is minimal, that can still be too much."

He said the church welcomes good clothing and household items from members of the community, although because of space limitations, large appliances should not be brought until the day of the sale.

"Agencies can contact us at 694-1373 for tickets to distribute to their clients. The tickets are free, but anyone wanting to shop at the un-sale must have a ticket.

"Anything that is not given away, we'll take to an aid agency," he added.

Texas Supreme Court rules jail's religious program unconstitutional

AUSTIN (AP) — A Christian-studies jail unit dubbed the "God Pod," violates the constitutional separation of church and state, the Texas Supreme Court has ruled.

"The county cannot ... convey a message that endorses the personal religious beliefs of county officials in attempting to rehabilitate criminal offenders," Justice Deborah Hankinson wrote, in the unanimous ruling June 28.

"Such an endorsement of religion is, by any test of which we are aware, unconstitutional."

The court said some religious programs may be allowed, such as hiring a chaplain to help inmates study their own religion. The Tarrant County program, however, went too far, Hankinson wrote.

The Christian Education Unit opened in 1992. The program was voluntary and inmates would participate for up to 120 days.

"Let your light so shine before men..." Matt. 5:16

This is the soul purpose of the entire congregation of the Beacon Light Outreach Ministry. To let the life of Christ be shown in all phases of our life that others might be drawn into the knowledge of and ultimately accept Christ into their lives. With our temporary location at 3100 W. Wall, Room "A" in the Best Inn & Suites, we are trusting that the Lord will bless us to be fruitful & multiply and leave to be established in a new permanent location.

Building on the solid foundation with the love of Christ felt throughout the entire congregation, at God's own appointed time, it won't be long for this "Faith Walk in Christ" to become a reality. This is another Pentecostal Outreach Ministry reaching out to the community area, inviting any and everyone who is looking for a new church home to come and fellowship with us. Our Sunday Services are 10:30am & 7pm. Musicians are welcome and needed.

Jennifer Lopez calls suggestions she's a racist 'hateful'

NEW YORK — Jennifer Lopez said it's "hateful" to suggest she's a racist because of an epithet she sings in a remix of her new song "I'm Real."

Lopez performed the original version of the song in the middle of Rockefeller Plaza on NBC's "Today" show Friday morning. She's drawn criticism for the remix by rapper Ja Rule, which includes the "n-word."

"For anyone to think or suggest that I'm racist is really absurd and hateful to me. The use of the word in the song — it was actually written by Ja Rule — it was not meant to be hurtful to anybody," she said during an interview between songs.

"I don't want to give it too much energy. I'm here to perform for the fans and that's what I'm going to do."

The 30-year-old singer and actress said despite the rumors, she's not pregnant. And when asked whether she's marrying her boyfriend, dancer Cris Judd, she smiled and said, "I guess you'll just have to wait and see."

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Brad Renfro, who tried to steal a yacht in August, missed the premiere of his new movie to return to court on allegations he violated his probation.

The star of the 1994 film "The Client" appeared before a judge in a brief hearing Thursday, the judge's office said. The hearing will resume Tuesday after Renfro has undergone drug and alcohol testing, the office said.

The 18-year-old actor was arrested in May in his hometown of Knoxville, Tenn., and charged with underage drinking.

"It's about time for me to grow up and these people gave me more than enough of a chance to grow up," said Renfro, who missed the Thursday premiere of "Bully" in California.

In January, Renfro was sentenced to two years' probation and ordered to pay more than $4,000 for repairs to the yacht.

Authorities said Renfro and a friend tried to steal the 45-foot yacht from Holiday Harbor in Fort Lauderdale before dawn. As they motored away, they forgot to untie all the docking lines, which snagged the $175,000 vessel, damaging its stern.

BOSTON — Jay Leno says if he had known a developer planned to tear down his Massachusetts boyhood home, he wouldn't have sold it.

"I remember when I sold it, the Realtor said, 'It's not really the kind of house people want,' and I remember I was slightly insulted," Leno told The Associated Press on Thursday.

The 1950s blue-shuttered gray Cape in Andover, Mass., is scheduled to be torn down in a few weeks to make way for a $2.6 million, five-bedroom house under construction a few feet away, said developer Todd Wacome, owner of Wynwood Associates, which purchased the property about five years ago.

Leno said he realizes that newer, fancier homes have changed the face of the neighborhood.

"Since they built the mansions next to it, my house looks like a trailer parked behind it. It's like my neighborhood went into the witness protection program," he said.

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — Metallica and rapper Dr. Dre have settled their copyright lawsuits against Napster.

Financial terms were not disclosed, but as part of the agreement, Metallica will allow some of the band's songs to be traded on Napster's song-swap system once a legal business model has been launched later this summer, both sides said Thursday.

"I think we've resolved this in a way that works for fans, recording artists and songwriters alike," said Lars Ulrich, Metallica's drummer.

The lawsuits were filed last year at the height of Napster's popularity.

The company has since been dogged by lawsuits, artists and the recording industry, which won an injunction against the company ordering it to block access to all copyright music.

Napster's efforts have produced mild results. The service has been off-line since July 2 as the company tries to retool its software technology to comply with the court order.

Napster has been buying time until it can launch its much anticipated paid subscription service, due this summer.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Former South African President Nelson Mandela and Arnold Schwarzenegger have teamed up to promote the Special Olympics.

On Thursday, they took a ferry from Cape Town harbor to Robben Island, where Mandela spent 18 of his 27 years as a prisoner of the apartheid regime, to light a Special Olympics torch. Robben Island prison since has been turned into a museum.

"With the lighting of this flame of hope, we hope that we can tear down the walls of prejudice, the walls of ignorance, that we can include ... people of intellectual disability and make them part of our society," Schwarzenegger told schoolchildren and athletes.

The Special Olympics is hoping to recruit an additional 100,000 African athletes by 2005.

Mandela, who is now trying to broker an end to Burundi's civil war, said the project was "helping to remove the stigma which is attached very wrongly to people who are disabled."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, July 14, 2001:
Aim high, and you'll succeed. Friends pave your way, and you gain through groups. Sometimes you don't see partnerships as clearly as you could. Be especially careful in financial dealings. Sharing your ideas brings suggestions that will only make your projects tighter. If you are single, you will develop a major relationship by next year at this time. Curb a tendency to go to excess. If you are attached, you and your mate fall into an unusually happy period. Include your sweetie in some of your projects. Share. You can count on TAURUS.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Build on existing alliances. Discuss what is on your mind with a partner or dear friend. Efforts and interests revolve around financial gain. An older family member or friend only adds confusion to the mix, even though this person means well. Take time with neighbors and close associates. Tonight: Your treat.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ The moon in your sign delivers extra energy and sparkle. Swap information with someone, gaining a better understanding of what is going on around you. Where there is smoke, there is fire. A neighbor or sibling is full of useful information, but you must sort through the distortion. Tonight: At your favorite spot.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Reach out for someone at a distance, and help this person see a situation more clearly. Share your abilities to understand and deal with financial matters. Take time off for yourself. Tonight: Do your own thing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Join a friend by passing the time doing something you both love, be it browsing bookstores, taking in a movie or perhaps going to a museum. Catch up on news at the same time. Do what you do best: Enjoy those close to you. Tonight: Wherever you are, the party is.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Others seek you out. Though you might have other plans, you wind up taking charge for someone who might be waffling. Your instincts lead you in the right direction. Someone you meet soon could be more important than you realize. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Spread your wings and take off. Some of you might only be able to make a call to visit with another. Friends support you in any project you decide to take on. Recognize that you might be tired or pushing too hard. Schedule a nap or some time to yourself. Tonight: Relax at a movie.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Deal with others one on one. Your success stems from an ability to make a strong presentation. Share this art with a friend who will appreciate the coaching. Don't take unnecessary risks. Stay even and level with a child or loved one. Tonight: Give a hug. Get a hug.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Let others in the door and share more of yourself. You often inspire others with new views and different options. Invite someone to go away for a day trip or a minivacation. Discussions reveal another perspective. Pull away from routine. Confusion surrounds your home. Tonight: Follow the music.

SAGJTTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Get into a project, and enlist another's help. Carefully handle a situation that involves another. One-on-one relating brings another perspective. Confusion surrounds plans and key communication. Stay mellow and follow procedures. Tonight: Get a good night's rest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Others seek you out. Your popularity soars, even though someone else might have a heavier agenda than you do. Clear out any vagueness so you and another have an understanding. You'll both enjoy yourselves more this way. Let the kid in you out. Tonight: Do something you love.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Family increases in importance. You know what you want, and those close to you support your getting there. Discussions help enlist others. Consider a home office, if you don't already have one. Add a plant or two to your home. Tonight: Rent movies. Munch on popcorn.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Though you often become shy when sharing your more romantic or dreamlike side, do it. Someone enjoys getting to know you better. Some of your ideas surely will trigger this person's imagination. You also might decide to take off on an adventure together. Tonight: An intimate chat.
