Killing Frost Falls With Temperature Of 26

CLEAR WEATHER IS SEEN AHEAD BY FORECASTER

FREEZE EXTENDS SOUTH TO ABILENE WITH 22 SHOWN AT AMARILLO

The South Plains Monday night shivered in the coldest spell of the winter season to date when the mercury dropped 50 degrees during the 24 hour period, from 76, the maximum to 26, the lowest point recorded during the night, with a heavy coating of ice in evidence here Tuesday morning.

The sudden drop in temperature also was accompanied by the first killing frost of the season, according to reports at the weather bureau, and the weather man offers some consolation in the statement that now frost has fallen in sufficient quantity to check vegetation, hopes are held for some clear weather ahead, so that farmers may go about harvesting their remaining crops unhampered by inclement weather.

Mercury Rises

Steadily rising temperatures, however, met the rising sun, and the mercury continued its climb upward during the morning, halting around noon at about 45 degrees. As a result a clear sky Monday night, and absence of the bluster winds that swept the Plains during Monday, a heavy frost fell during the night, practically killing all remaining vegetation.

Damages to crops and livestock will be negligible, however, County Agent David F. Eaton said Tuesday, in expressing the opinion that the freeze will add more than defer the work of gathering the cotton crop, and the little food remaining in the fields.

Associated Press dispatches reaching here today said that the entire Southwest was held in the grip of the cold wave, with a heavy snow as far east as Kansas, and as far south as western Oklahoma and the northern part of the Panhandle. The fall was heavy enough in many places to materially hamper railroad traffic, and snow plows were resorted to.

Freeze In Widespread

DALLAS, Nov. 9 (AP)—Freezing temperatures last night extended as far south as Abilene and colder weather is forecast for practically the entire region.

South Withstands Cotton Shock And Co-Op Marketing Plan Seen

Lowden Puts Faith In Co-Op Selling And Praises Relief

By FRANK O. LOWDEN
Former Governor of Illinois and a "Dirt Farmer," as Told to Roy J. Gibbons

(Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

The cotton situation in the south is serious in the extreme. The large crop has depressed prices to about two-thirds of the cost of production. And yet we are producing in the United States this year only about 15 per cent more of cotton than will be consumed during the year.

It is obvious that if the cotton growers had been thoroughly organized this surplus would have been produced in such disastrous result, for, if organized, the year's surplus could have been withheld from the market and prices maintained at something near the cost of production.

FRANK O. LOWDEN

25 Per cent Acreage Cut

The convention of delegates appointed by the governors of the cotton states, realized that some way must be found to withhold this surplus. They evolved a plan under which they propose to pool a quarter of this year's crop and to withdraw that portion of the crop from the market.

They propose at the same time to inaugurate an organized campaign, by state, county and precinct, throughout the cotton belt, for the reduction of acreage another year of 25 per cent. I have just come from my own plantation in Arkansas, where we have arranged for this reduction of acreage.

Committee Named

A committee composed of Tait Butler of Tennessee, Dr. H. W. Kilgore of North Carolina and J. W. Fox of Mississippi was appointed at the convention to carry out this program. The committee was authorized to select its members, and has added Oscar Johnson and Alfred H. Stone, head of the Mississippi Staple Cotton Growers' association.

In my opinion, this is the best committee that could possibly have been formed for carrying out this program. That committee is at work with vigor and I believe will accomplish results. I think it the duty of all interested in cotton to support whole heartedly the work of this committee.

I believe there will grow out of this cotton crisis in the south and out of the program formulated by the cotton convention at Memphis a better and organized method of handling the cotton crop in the future.

Reply to Simple

I hope that the cotton growers will take the marketing of their cotton in their own hands through their own organization and acquire the same influence in determining the price of their product which other great organizations have.

If the cotton co-operatives, one of which I am a member, which have been functioning well in the south, instead of handling about 10 per cent of the entire production were handling 50 per cent or more of the product, with power to distribute the cost of handling the surplus over all producers, whether members of the co-operatives or not, this situation would not exist today.

The organized industry, facing a temporary surplus, would do what every other organized industry does: withhold the surplus, reduce production if necessary, and maintain a fair price for the 85 per cent of this year's large crop which the world needs and will consume.

Heavy Coating Of Ice Seen Tuesday

Lubbock people saw the first ice of the season today, though the mercury stood slightly below freezing. Monday was one of the most blustery days of the year, and many people felt that the temperature was at a freezing point most of the day. However, this was not the case. The thermometer stood at above 40 degrees all day and even on into the night. The wind was cold and disagreeable and it seemed much colder than it really was.

During the night the mercury fell to 30 degrees and this morning there was plenty of ice in evidence.

Personal Telegrapher Of Sherman Is Dead

CHICAGO, Nov. 9 (AP)—Clarence Gordon Sholes, who as a lad of 16, was General Sherman's personal telegraph operator on the famous march to the sea, is dead at his home here at the age of 81.

His father was Christopher Lathan Sholes, inventor of the typewriter.

NEW YORK—Praise for night work by women comes from Mrs. Ella M. Sherman, printer, if it affects the health at all it improves it and as for the moral risks the male worker is much more decent than he is credited with being. She gave her views to the state industrial survey commission.

Survey Shows Escape From Collapse Of Business

(Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

Loss of half a billion dollars as a result of the plummet-like drop in cotton prices confronts the southern states. But the south is withstanding the shock.

This is the consensus of authentic reports gathered for the Journal by NEA Service.

Marked increase of crop diversification in recent years, growing importance of industry in the south, and ready response to the cotton crisis by banking and commercial interests explain the absence of pessimism from these reports. Money is being made available throughout the cotton belt to enable farmers to hold their cotton off the market the plan under which this money is being used is explained in the report from Birmingham, below.

Former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, himself a "dirt farmer," commenting on the situation, says: "I believe there will grow out of this cotton crisis in the south and out of the program formulated by the cotton convention at Memphis a better and organized method of handling the cotton crop in the future."

Ten Years of Cotton Growing

How the cotton acreage and yield in the United States has fluctuated through a ten-year period, including 1926, is shown in the accompanying table. A decrease from the 1925 acreage is recorded for 1926, but heavier average yield of lint cotton per acre for harvest brings the total 1926 production to the highest figure in the series, according to the U. S. estimate.

Year	Acreage	Bales
1917	33,841,000	11,502,000
1918	33,890,000	12,041,000
1919	33,566,000	11,423,768
1920	33,575,000	12,429,803
1921	33,500,000	12,854,000
1922	33,025,000	9,761,817
1923	32,123,000	10,149,000
1924	40,115,000	12,153,000
1925	48,100,000	16,100,000
1926	47,207,000	17,918,000

Texas Governor Talks

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 9.—Though Texas is the greatest cotton-producing state in the union, there is no evidence of widespread "hard times" as a result of the cotton price slump.

Carroll of the state has shown that some farmers are abandoning their cotton crop in the future.

Mussolini Regrets Clash At Consulate

PARIS, Nov. 9 (AP)—Premier Mussolini of Italy has presented his regrets to the French ambassador in Rome for the recent incident at Ventimiglia, in which the French consulate was reported by fascists to be the foreign office, let it be known today.

Mussolini told Ambassador Benard that he had ordered the authorities at Ventimiglia to set judicial machinery in motion and speed up the trial of the men who might be responsible for the attack.

Regarding the incident at Benchari, Tripoli, Mussolini told M. Deandrea that he had dispatched the colonel of Carabinieri, who according to reports, forced the French consul to hoist an Italian flag alongside the French colors on the consulate.

The premier added that rigorous orders had been issued to prevent repetition of the two affairs.

Bandits Attack American Property

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9 (AP)—Another Mexican bandit raid on an American owned ranch was reported today to the state department.

The property, located at Coyame, near Chihuahua City and owned by two Americans named Fields and Kilpatrick, was attacked Saturday and Sunday by thirteen armed raiders who took horses and equipment.

Mexican troops are in pursuit.

Woman Is Selected As Broom Inspector

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9 (AP)—Woman is about making the sweep as long the emblem of her way over the household.

The first woman licensed to inspect and grade broom products is Mrs. J. L. Lendron, Oklahoma City, who will become a federal broom corn inspector. She has been employed by the Oklahoma state market commission and her duties will include issuance of joint federal state inspection certificates.

12 Prisoners Escape From Kentucky Jail

CATLETTSBURG, Ky., Nov. 9 (AP)—Twelve prisoners, one under life sentence for murder, escaped from the Boyd county jail here early today by using a chair to pull bars of a window on the second floor. All still are at large.

13 OTHERS SERIOUSLY INJURED WHEN TRAIN IN SWITCH YARD AT HOUSTON CRASHES INTO TRAILER

SIX COMPRESS WORKERS CRUSHED TO DEATH; VIEW OF TRUCK DRIVER SAID OBSCURED BY LARGE COTTON WAREHOUSE NEAR TRACKS

HOUSTON, Nov. 9.—Seven cotton compress laborers were killed and 13 others seriously injured near here today when a Southern Pacific accommodation train crashed into a truck hauling a large passenger trailer.

The dead and injured were negroes and Mexicans.

The truck driver's view of the tracks, survivors said, was obscured by a cotton warehouse. He, however, they also said, attempted to beat the train to the crossing when he discovered it bearing down upon him.

Struck at Coupling

The train struck the coupling between the truck and the trailer, throwing one on either side of the track.

The dead: D. Johnson, negro; G. L. Lupe, Mexican; Walter Jones, negro; Two unidentified Mexicans.

Ground Struck With Men

H. Berdige, brakeman on the train, was the first to reach the dead, dying and injured. He found, he said, the ground strewn with Mexican and negro workers. Jim Boye negro, who was just behind the truck-trailer combination at the time of the crash, said that the train struck squarely between the two, hurling both into the air and scattering the passengers in all directions.

The train which runs from Houston to Galena each morning, to carry workers to the oil refinery there, consists of an engine and two coaches.

One of the injured men died this evening, bringing the death list to seven—three Mexicans and four negroes.

Lawrence To Plead Insanity In Trial On Bigamy Charges

Louise Lawrence who was indicted on October 19 by a Lubbock county grand jury on a charge of bigamy, will not be tried during this term of court, but in January. This decision was made by Judge Mulliken after his attorney, W. G. Garrett of Marham, Oklahoma, filed a motion for continuance.

Lawrence, it seems, has been married three times and was living with wife No. 3 at the time of his arrest. His first wife divorced him, but he married again in Collinsworth county, Texas, before final separation from his wife had been made. The indictment charges (The Oklahoma law requires all divorced people to live single for at least six months after a divorce is granted, and Lawrence did not wait this long.) Wife No. 2 lived with him for a considerable length of time, bore him two children, and all was well until August of this year when he came to the South Plains.

Marries Again on Plains

Shortly after his arrival here he married again, and is charged in the indictment that he had no divorce from wife No. 2. Lawrence does not deny this, but insists that he was not legally married to the woman who is mother of his two children. So far as the Oklahoma edict is concerned, this may be true, but the Texas state law says No. 2 is a legal wife, and that he married No. 3 knowing this to be true.

At the time of his arrest he pleaded illness, though the county health officer said he was not ill enough for the county to keep him in a hospital. Only after he agreed to pay his own hospital bill was he allowed to go to Dallas.

Chicago To Dallas Flight Is Postponed

CHICAGO, Nov. 9 (AP)—A snow storm attended by wintry weather in the Northern Mississippi valley caused postponement today of the first passenger flight of the National Air Transport, Inc., from Chicago to Dallas.

The multi-motored ship will start when the storm abates, possibly tomorrow, carrying officers of the air transport on an inspection tour after which regular passenger, mail and express flights will be made on regular schedule.

Druggist Convicted On Poison Charge

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 9 (AP)—Alva W. Estabrook, Druggist, today was sentenced to 15 years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas, on a charge of having sent poison through the mails to the home of Judge E. E. Porterfield of the circuit court. Estabrook was tried and convicted on the charge last week.

Soul Surgeon Defeated In Attempt To Gain Favor of Queen Marie

BY VIRGINIA SWAIN
NEA Service Writer.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The Connecticut Yankee at Queen Marie's court is fighting with his back to the wall. Frank N. D. Buchman, "soul surgeon," "life changer" and courtier has seen his star of royal favor dimmed at its ascendancy. At the moment when Buchman was ready to complete his triumph with a great tea party for Queen Marie, President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University hounded an accusation that Buchman had spread undesirable religious practices among the student body at Princeton and began trying to expel Buchmanism from the university.

Dancer Is Rival
Frank N. D. Buchman, shrewd American evangelist, emerges from a mysterious and romantic past as the founder of the cult which has so excited educators both in America and in Europe. He is the originator of the hysterical confession meetings, the soul-cleansing houseparties, the shame method of conversion which according to his disciples has been driving college students into mental turmoil and causing hysteria and epileptic attacks.

He also is the right hand courtier and confidant of Her Majesty, the queen of Rumania, and as such, the rival of Lois Fuller, dancer and queen's protegee for the place nearest the queen's ear.

What happens when a serpent dancer comes to grips with a surgeon of souls?

Retiring has been even among the more innocent bystanders ever since Queen Marie landed in America with Buchman in her train.

Thus far, Lois Fuller has come out victor in skirmishes with Rumanian officials, and all others who presumed to differ with her as to the queen's program.

Buchman planned to celebrate the queen's conversion to Buchmanism by a great tea party to be given at the luxurious house in which he has established himself, and which has been magnificently furnished by the wealthy Mrs. Margaret T. Tjader, convert to the cause.

Queen Marie was to meet the Buchmanites speak of her faith in the cult and address a group of Princeton, Yale and Harvard men interested in Buchmanism. But the day before, the newspapers carried the story of the Princeton investigation.

A great crowd of New York society people gathered to meet the queen at Buchman's tea. In the damask and ebony drawing room, a banquet great and cold, while the guests waited. Through the telephone, Buchman had to listen to Lois Fuller's message that Marie was indisposed. The disappointed guests fell to and ate without the royal presence.

Lois Fuller has had her inning. But Buchman is not at the end of his rope. He says the hosts of heaven are on his side.

Perhaps they are. He gained his influence with the queen by consoling her when Prince Carol abdicated, and is said to have brought about the recent reconciliation between Marie and Carol in Paris. That indicates power. But the hosts of Dr. Hibben's investigators are against him. The Buchman cult is based on the panacea of confession of secret sin. Since his work is mainly among adolescents, the confessions chiefly are of sex peccadilloes.

Trying to Uproot Cult
Because of the unsavory quality of the public confessions, and the emotional havoc they wreak, the Princeton authorities are trying to root out the cult.

One of the investigators, J. C. McMenamin, of the New York Y. M. C. A., says, "I consider Buchman as the 'Preud of Religion.' His theory seems to be that there is only one sin and that is sex. My feeling has been that Buchman wouldn't bother seeing any one who wasn't worth a million dollars."

Buchman himself says only that he is the apostle of primitive Christianity, and his faith will prevail.

Of his early life, he does not talk. Varying rumors are current, to the effect that he had been a Communist, that he once was a Lutheran preacher in Allentown, Pa. He has gradled the world more, than once and set up his cult in Oxford, Cambridge, Eton, where he met the young Prince Nicholas, and in many American universities.

The Woman's Daily Editorial

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

IF KINDNESS WARPS CHARACTER IS ONLY CHEAP SENTIMENT

I wonder if we are not too sentimental about our children. No mothers this is not a "spare-the-rod-and-spoil-the-child" exhortation. Pre always classical corporal punishment with the only twist left when the mischief is done and too late for anything else.

Sentimentalism isn't love—it is not even its shallow imitation. It is the genuine emotion which the will-o'-the-wisp is to sunlight—and is misleading. We do many things for our offspring that common sense excuses on the ground of devotion. We should assure ourselves that it is genuine devotion which influences us to commit a folly, and not cheap sentiment.

Take the matter of clothes. Sentiment says, "I wish my daughter to be the best dressed girl in school. It would make her happy." Honest love says, "If you do that you will make a vain little prig out of her, and a thoroughly detestable woman when she grows up."

Sentiment says, "I don't wish my daughter to help with the housework. I had it to do and no daughter of mine shall do it as long as I am here to do it for her." Kindness and honest maternalism says, "The best thing I can do for my girl is to teach her how to get a meal and keep house. Music and French and singing lessons alone can't make her to be."

There are other things this sentimentalism does to us in regard to our children. That the silk-stocked, movie-crazy, money-spending joy-riding youngsters who have won for themselves the sobriquet of the "new generation" is a product of the mistaken counterfeit of love is not to be doubted. They are victims of warped kindness in parent—also give their figurative guns with which to shoot themselves, because they cry for them.

One of the things we hear most often is, "That is the way he repaid his parents after all their kindness to him." Any kindness of a parent that warps character is not kindness. It is cheap sentiment.

Miss Anna Bruckner And Rev Norcross Are Married

Miss Anna Bruckner and Rev. C. A. Norcross were married at 10 o'clock this morning at the First Methodist church in partnership with Rev. E. E. White reading the first ceremony. They left immediately in their car for Childress where they will attend the annual Northwest Texas conference of the Methodist church and where Rev. Norcross will receive his appointment for the coming year. Mrs. Bertha Bruckner, mother of the bride, and two of her brothers were present at the wedding.

Mrs. Norcross, whose mother lives in the Woodrow community, was the first permanent public health nurse in Lubbock county, coming here about 18 months ago to take up the work that had been established about a month before. She served in this capacity until recently when she resigned and went to Amarillo where she has been doing private nursing. She was a nurse in the West Texas hospital before returning here as a public health nurse.

Reverend Norcross has been a preacher on the Lubbock circuit of the Methodist church for the last two years.

Menu For Today

By SISTER MARY

BREAKFAST: Halves of grape fruit, ham omelet, fried cornmeal mush, syrup, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Casserole of cauliflower and cheese, graham bread, head lettuce, grape sponge, vanilla cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER: Veal stew with dumplings, mashed turnips, endive salad, lemon sponge pie, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.

Unless a man is engaged in active outdoor labor he does not need more than once a day. In this particular day's menu a small amount of meat is used in the dinner menu since an omelet is the main dish in the breakfast menu.

Casserole of Cauliflower and Cheese
One medium sized head cauliflower, 1 cup milk, 1 cup water, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 egg, 1-2 cup fine cracker crumbs, 1-2 cup grated cheese, 1 teaspoon paprika, 2 tablespoons coarse minced crumbs.

Divide cauliflower into flowerettes and let stand in cold water 30 minutes. Combine milk and water and bring to the boiling point. Add cauliflower and cook 15 minutes. Add salt after first ten minutes. Drain liquid from cauliflower. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add liquid in which cauliflower was cooked. Stir constantly until thick and smooth and mixture boils. Mix cracker crumbs and grated cheese. Beat egg slightly. Dip cauliflower first in egg and then in cheese mixture seasoned with paprika. Coat each flowerette thoroughly and evenly and arrange in a well buttered casserole. Sprinkle over all of the cheese mixture that may be left. Pour over hot sauce, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake 15 minutes in a hot oven.

Brief Social Items

Mason's Pep group, the Intermediate B. Y. P. U. of the First Baptist church, is to meet at 7 o'clock Thursday evening at the church for a "backward" social.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Y. Price, of Sinton, are spending the week with W. B. Price while Mrs. Price is attending the State meeting of the Texas Federation of Women's clubs.

Mrs. O. D. Hargis, who is visiting in Fort Worth and Mineral Wells, probably will be gone two more weeks according to word received from her.

The Junior Twentieth Century club is sponsoring a benefit party at 7 o'clock Friday afternoon at Hotel Lubbock.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hornsby, 516 Avenue O, are leaving Thursday for Kerrville on a hunting trip.

Mrs. B. E. Tyler has returned to her home in Amarillo after visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Ellis.

Gleaners' S. S. Class Gathers In Monthly Session

Members of the Gleaners' class of the First Baptist church gathered in monthly social and business session Monday afternoon in their class room at the church with Mesdames F. B. Caylor, Lula Watson, Charles Trout, R. S. Adams, J. A. Phillips, W. McMillan and Lee White as hostesses. Mrs. P. D. Coleman played a piano solo during the program and Mrs. I. F. Holland sang two solos. A contest was held and business was transacted after which date nut pie a la mode was served with coffee. There were about 30 members and the following visitors present: Mesdames Marie Wilson, Walter Tyler, Dyke Cullum, Byron Brown, Johnson and Ollie V. Wray.

Presbyterian Circle Is Hostess To Auxiliary Groups

Circle 4 of the First Presbyterian Women's auxiliary was hostess to other members of the society Monday afternoon at the church. A lesson on "Mountain Missions" was studied after which a committee was appointed to take a collection for a library in one of the missions. Mrs. R. D. Defense Attacks Evidence Given In Hall-Mills Case

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 9 (AP)—The defense today continued its effort to tear down the finger print evidence introduced by the prosecution in the Hall-Mills murder trial in their attempt to link Willie Stevens, one of the three defendants, with the slaying of the Rev. Edward Hall, New Brunswick church pastor, and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, choir singer, more than four years ago.

Robert McCarter, senior defense counsel, continuing his cross-examination of Edward Schwartz, fingerprint expert of the Jersey City police department, in a few questions drew from the witness the statement that detectives in seeking to apprehend criminals by finger prints always tried to get to the scene of crimes as soon as possible to get finger prints while they were fresh. Yesterday the defense attorney had brought out, through Schwartz and another fingerprint expert, that the alleged prints of Willie Stevens' finger on a calling card found at the scene of the slaying had been kept several months in a desk, later taken to a newspaper office in New York city, and finally turned over to the investigators whose work resulted in the present trial.

"When you get finger prints, do you hurry them to the office and place them under glass?" asked McCarter.

"No," said Schwartz. "A man usually goes to the scene of the crime and makes a copy of the finger prints there."

"Because that impression may be eradicated by time and weather?" "Yes," answered the witness.

Fear For Safety Of Secretary Is Held

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 9 (AP)—A heavy thunder storm along this section of the coast today caused apprehension regarding a seaplane in which Assistant Secretary Warner of the navy was flying from Washington to Norfolk. The plane had not arrived at the time expected, and it was believed it might have been forced down by the storm, which was accompanied by a high wind.

MANNER OF TAX REFUNDS HOLDS CAPITAL AGOG

SUGGESTIONS OF CREDIT ON NEXT PAYMENT IS DISAPPROVED

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 9 (AP)—President Coolidge today asked for non-partisan consideration of his tax refund proposal.

He made known through the white house spokesman his desire that party lines be forgotten in consideration of the proposal by congress.

It also was disclosed that the income tax credit plan announced yesterday by Secretary Mellon was not the final proposal of the administration.

To Hold Conference
The president will confer with members of the house and with ways and means committee before recommending how the surplus should be returned to the tax payers.

The white house pronouncement did not refer directly to Democratic charges that the president's move was a political one, but it was said that Mr. Coolidge felt politics must be avoided at all hazards.

If the tax credit proposal becomes involved in a political controversy at the short session it will be difficult in the president's opinion to work out any relief for the tax payers at this time.

The president thinks the best means of action by congress would be that pursued in the last congress, when a non-partisan agreement was worked out for passage of the revenue act.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The political whittling of the capital revenue proposal for individual and corporation tax refunds from the government fiscal surplus. Secretary Mellon, after a white house conference, suggested that the pro-

Biddle Resignation Is Said Accepted

LEAVENWORTH, Kans., Nov. 9 (AP). Warden W. I. Biddle, of the Federal penitentiary here had received no official confirmation today at noon that his resignation had been accepted. However, he said he was not surprised to learn that such a step had been taken.

Press dispatches stated his resignation had been accepted, effective November 1, and when the warden was informed he added he had been "expecting such a development."

Disapproval Voiced
No sooner had this plan become public than rumblings of disapproval were heard from the capital at the other end of Pennsylvania avenue. Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, chairman of the Finance committee which would handle any tax bill, indicated that he did not approve the general proposition, but explicitly refrained from commenting on a more complete study.

Accusing both republicans and Democrats with playing politics with the tax question, Senator Norris, Nebraska, republican insurgent leader, declared that any treasury surplus should be devoted to the retiring of the public debt.

The comment of Senator Blease, democrat, South Carolina, on the president's plan was limited to the word—"bull."

Stocks And Money

WALL STREET TRADING
NEW YORK, Nov. 9 (AP)—Representative rail and industrial shares were in demand at the opening of today's stock market but with one or two exceptions initial gains were limited to fractions.

The correction by the New York stock exchange of its brokerage loan figures at the end of October, making the shrinkage for the month more than $16,000,000 instead of $7,600,000 as at first reported, probably influenced some of the early buying but its effects were partially counteracted by the federal reserve figures showing an increase of $28,182,000 for the week ended November 3, the first in more than a month.

Railway equipment, copper and mercantile issues led in popularity in response to indications of larger earnings and higher dividends. Air reduction, National Tea, Woodworth, R. H. Macy, United Drug, Greene-Chapman, Copper and American Zinc preferred were among the stocks which advanced 1 to 2 points in the first half hour.

Atchison, however, turned heavy on president's statement on early change in dividend policy was contemplated and Warner pictures lost ground on profit taking.

Foreign exchanges were irregular, with French francs and Italian lire opening slightly lower.

NEGRO IS GIVEN TWO YEARS FOR BOOZE MAKING
JESS AMOS FOUND GUILTY BY JURY IN CRIMINAL DISTRICT COURT

Jess Amos, negro, jointly charged with manufacture of intoxicating liquor with two other negro men following indictment of the trio by the Lubbock county grand jury recently, was found guilty and his penalty assessed at two years in the penitentiary in criminal district court here today.

The sentence was read by District Judge Clark M. Mullaney following the report of the jury which deliberated about ten minutes.

Arrested July 15
Amos, in company with Richard Knox and Richard Stone, was arrested at Stone's home seven miles north-west of Lubbock on July 15th. Following their arrest the three were lodged in the county jail.

Several witnesses testified during the trial though the testimony of Stone did more to damage the defendant than that of any other witness. Stone implicated Amos, though he did not say that he owned any part of the liquor or the still.

Ford Testifies
Deputy Sheriff Ford stated that he was present when the arrest was made and that the three negroes were in a small room making whiskey. A five gallon coal oil can was used for the boiler and an oil stove was used for the cooking of the mash. The still and 2 1/2 gallons of whiskey were brought into the court room. Deputy Sheriff Williams' testimony was the same as that of Mr. Ford.

Stone testified that the whiskey was made in his house, and that Knox was to have given him a gallon of whiskey or $15 for the use of his home. He remonstrated the fact that he got neither, but a trip to the jail. Amos said present. Evidence showed that Amos was present at the time whiskey was being made, though no one stated that he owned the whiskey or still or had any part in the making other than helping Stone get a load of water. District Attorney Howard was assisted by County Attorney McWhorter while J. M. Marshall and Hill Stewart represented the defense.

Mrs. R. R. Eakin has gone to Amarillo to visit her son and his family.

Arrested July 15
Amos, in company with Richard Knox and Richard Stone, was arrested at Stone's home seven miles north-west of Lubbock on July 15th. Following their arrest the three were lodged in the county jail.

Several witnesses testified during the trial though the testimony of Stone did more to damage the defendant than that of any other witness. Stone implicated Amos, though he did not say that he owned any part of the liquor or the still.

Ford Testifies
Deputy Sheriff Ford stated that he was present when the arrest was made and that the three negroes were in a small room making whiskey. A five gallon coal oil can was used for the boiler and an oil stove was used for the cooking of the mash. The still and 2 1/2 gallons of whiskey were brought into the court room. Deputy Sheriff Williams' testimony was the same as that of Mr. Ford.

Stone testified that the whiskey was made in his house, and that Knox was to have given him a gallon of whiskey or $15 for the use of his home. He remonstrated the fact that he got neither, but a trip to the jail. Amos said present. Evidence showed that Amos was present at the time whiskey was being made, though no one stated that he owned the whiskey or still or had any part in the making other than helping Stone get a load of water. District Attorney Howard was assisted by County Attorney McWhorter while J. M. Marshall and Hill Stewart represented the defense.

CAMPUS REBELS

BY VIRGINIA SWAIN COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
 JUDITH MARTIN, young college teacher, is admired by DR. PETER DORN, astronomy professor, and ERIC WATERS, rebel senior.
 Judith defends Eric against the accusation of DEAN TIMOTHY BROWN that Eric has been involved with "KITTY" SHEA, bootlegger, in selling liquor from which two students have died.
 Judith discovers a secret love affair of the dean's wife and sympathizes with the woman.
 MYRA ALDRICH, in love with Eric, and favored by his mother, is jealous of Judith.
 Judith receives a telephone call from Mrs. Timothy Brown and meets her at a tea shop. There Mrs. Brown says that the dean believes Judith spent a week-end in the city with Eric and means to ask the board to dismiss her.
 If Mrs. Brown dared to say that she also was in the city and knew that Judith was alone at the hotel it would clear Judith but give away her own clandestine meeting with her lover.
 Judith refuses to accept the sacrifice.
 "Kitty" Shea learns at Judith when she steps to the cashier's desk to pay the bill.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIII
 "Gimme," said somebody, taking the bill out of her hand, and Judith looked up into the bland, mouse-colored eyes of Will Wetherel.
 She saw Shea watching him as he paid the bill and turned her back on the little peering eyes and the black jowl. Wetherel grasped her arm and walked with her out of the cafe.
 "I see you've already had food," he said, as they turned toward college. "Therefore I shall ask you to lunch with me. And I shall take you to the Prairie Schooner, where you can't possibly eat up more than a dollar, even if you're hungry."

"Why the prodigious generosity?" laughed Judith.
 Wetherel kicked the ashes from his six-inch cigarette. "Well, Judith, pay day doesn't come till next week. And I vowed last Tuesday I'd not spend another cent this term stuffing little gold diggers with chocolate creams and chicken salad."

"Is this a declaration of independence?" asked Judith.
 "Just exactly that," said Will. "I'm tired of belonging to the Flapper Fraternity. Happen to know that in certain select sorority circles I am known as a Good Provider."

"Still," said Judith, "you've never wasted much of your hard-earned gold on me."
 "None," Wetherel nodded, "you're a good fellow. One doesn't have to."

They passed the administration building and followed the little gravelled path that led to the Schooner. "Sliced tomatoes with caviar," ordered Judith, "rolls and a mousse Madeleine."
 She looked defiantly at Will. He grinned. "All right," he said. "I guess you've got it coming to you. Do your worst." He leaned back and looked at Judith through lazy lids. "Look here, Judith, what ever made you take up teaching?"
 Judith considered. "General depravity, I suppose. You I belong to the race of monsters that really get a kick of Latin verse."

Wetherel shrugged. "Can't see how you get that way, with Whitman and Sandburg and Masters in the verse market. But we'll let that pass. A love for Latin isn't a laughing offense—though it will hamper your social successes. But what I can't understand is how you put up with the limitations placed on teachers. I suppose you know you may get kicked out of school for siding with Waters in the dean's meeting yesterday."

Judith looked at him anxiously. "Do you really think the dean could dismiss me simply for expressing a personal belief in Eric's story?"
 Wetherel shook his head. "Not for that. But if he wants your scalp he'll get it, one way or another. By the way, what did your friend Dorn do about it? Did he back you up?"

"Well," said Judith, "he followed me out of the meeting. He doesn't approve of what I do, but I guess he approves of me." She dimpled.
 Wetherel nodded. "Well, he may be able to save you. He's Dorn's right-hand man. Never could understand it myself. Dorn's a good scout underneath."

The Schooner was filling with students. Wetherel surveyed the crowd gloomily. "Damn mosquitoes," he said. "All alike. Mob rule. No chance for individuality. No feeling for the picturesque. Look at those drab, colorless figures, all out of a mold."

Judith looked up from her mousse Madeleine. "Has someone been kidding your riding suit again, Will?"
 He stared at his plate. Suddenly he uttered an exclamation. "Look over there," he said. Judith followed his gaze.

Dr. Dorn was sitting at a table across the room in eager conversation with a girl. When the girl turned her head Judith saw that she was Myra Aldrich.
 "Evidently Dorn approves of several of you women," said Wetherel teasingly. "Didn't know Aldrich was in his line."

Judith laughed. "You're a hopeless gossip," she said as Judith rose. "I want to tell you that I admired your stand in meeting yesterday. It was a brave—a rash thing to do. But we older ones sometimes like to see the young foolhardy. It brings back our own youth."

Her face became more serious. "I also want to warn you that trouble may come of it. I hear Dean Brown was highly incensed. However, I believe, with you, that young Waters is innocent and in a showdown you may count on me."

"Thank you," said Judith, grasping Miss Snow's hand. There was no time to say more for Wetherel came swaggering back, and, seeing him, Miss Snow passed on to her table.
 When they stepped out into the pathway Dr. Dorn and Myra were just behind them. They heard Myra say "Good-by," and saw her turn off toward the biology building. Dr. Dorn walked slowly down the path alone.
 Wetherel turned to Judith. "Look! I forgot that French quiz. I must run along and learn three pages of translation by heart before one o'clock!"

They went on down the path until they overtook Dr. Dorn. "Run along, Will," said Judith. "I'll walk toward home with Dr. Dorn. I think he goes my way."

The professor turned and met her smile with a sober face. He raised his hat and spoke stiffly. "I'm sorry, Miss Martin, but I shall have to walk very fast. I have an appointment." He struck into a vigorous pace and was off.
 "Whew!" whistled Will. "So the professor 'approves of you,' does he? Wonder how he'd act if he disapproved! For a man making an appointment, he was walking blamed slowly before we caught up with him."

Judith turned on him. "Will, you are the worst specimen of blunder and tactless that I ever encountered in my checkered career." She turned on her heel and walked away.

In the middle of the afternoon Myra came into Judith's room, her arms full of chrysanthemums. Judith lifted her head from the interminable freshman themes with a frown at the interruption.

"Don't scowl, Jude," cried the girl. "I've brought you half of my flowers. You can have all the bronze ones to match your hair." She began to pull them apart so that the leaves scattered over the table. Judith bit her lips and said nothing.

Cotton Situation
Said No Handicap
To Southern States

fields and that the brokerage business and in a few instances rural banking have suffered, but business generally is holding up well. Banking and commercial interests are exercising caution, however. A considerable amount of cotton of poorer grades will not be picked this year.

Only pure effects have been made so far to aid farmers in withdrawing their cotton from the market. The state's great expense makes it difficult to allow farmers to sell under any cooperative relief plan. Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson has declared she will not ask cotton growers to hold their staple.

With many cotton fields being abandoned and stalks left standing, fresh boll weevil ravages next year have been forecast.

New Loan Plan Works
BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 5.—With 10,000 bales of the 1932 cotton crop already in storage for 12 months, Alabama bankers are busy perfecting arrangements for the withdrawal of 20,000 additional bales from the market. Alabama is following the same procedure as in other southern states. This is the organization of a holding corporation capitalized at $1,000,000, which in turn will borrow $10,000,000, if necessary, from the Intermediate Credit Banks and lend farmers from 8 to 10 cents a pound on their cotton if they will sign a pledge to leave it in the pool for 18 months.

The holding corporation will work in this state through the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, a highly organized co-operative association, which has an agent in every county and also through the county agents of the Federal Department of Agriculture.

The Alabama Bankers' Association has named an advisory committee of 20 bankers to handle credits for the farmers. Oscar Wells is chairman. The chief difficulty is perfecting credit arrangements in time to stop the dumping of cotton on the market by the farmers, who fear the price is going even lower than at present.

General business in Alabama as yet has not felt the cotton situation keenly. Much progress has been made in diversification in the state. According to fertilizer companies, farmers are in better condition to face the cotton crash this year than at any time since the war.

Banks Bring Pressure
NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 8.—Louisiana and Mississippi cotton growers are thinking harder about co-operation and crop diversification than ever before.

During "cotton acreage reduction week" beginning November 8, the message of co-operation and acreage control will be taken even to the remotest hamlets and cross-roads. In both states cotton picking almost has stopped. Much late cotton will be left in the fields to rot. The cost of picking would be more than the current market price on poorer grades.

Organizations of farmers are getting the backing of merchants and bankers and their aid in enforcing acreage reduction and diversification. Financial interests will restrict loans and credits to cotton growers who refuse to subscribe to these policies.

A single co-operative in Greenwood, Miss., where the famous long staple fiber is produced, obtained $100,000 from the New Orleans bank to hold a big percentage of the current yield off the market.

Outside the disheartening situation confronting the cotton planter, agriculture is in fair condition in the two states. Inasmuch as Louisiana and Mississippi have extensive interests of other kinds, such as lumber, rice, sugar cane and corn, general business has not suffered seriously.

Georgians Are Tranquil
ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 7.—Diversified crops and the assistance of bankers and business men are doing much to offset the effect of the low price of cotton in Georgia. Where this situation might have created a condition bordering on panic a few years ago it is being met calmly.

While cotton has not become Georgia's surplus money crop, the tendency in that direction has been sufficient since the overproduction of 1929 to find the state with many agricultural resources other than cotton on which to depend in the present emergency. For instance, Georgia marketed over $1,000,000 worth of tobacco this year. The peanut crop was larger than ever before, and brought a better price.

Never before in any similar situation have business men and bankers worked so effectively to aid the farmer. The Georgia Cotton Finance and Holding Company, just organized to retire 100,000 bales of cotton from the market, includes officials of nearly all the leading banks and business houses in the state in its membership.

Tobacco "Co-op" Aids
CHARLOTTE, N.C., Nov. 9.—Diversified farming and manufacturing interests have proved a boon to North Carolina as the crisis in cotton becomes more acute.

While the slump in the price of cotton has been acutely felt in some localities, there has not been a general depression. Warehouse facilities of the tobacco co-operative marketing association in this state have been made available for use in holding cotton off the market.

Last week's bank closings in Charlotte were the largest in history. Reports from Winston-Salem, Durham, Raleigh, Greensboro, Asheville and other cities indicate business is holding up well.

Mrs. Ormiston To Testify In Aimee Case
LOS ANGELES, Nov. 9.—District Attorney Asa Keyes stated today he was laying plans to confront Aimee Stemple McPherson with testimony of Mrs. Ruth Ormiston, wife of the fugitive radio man, Kenneth G. Ormiston, when the evangelist goes before a jury in superior court charged with three counts of felonious conspiracy.

Keyes learned today that the wife of the long sought Ormiston expected to arrive here from Australia about January 10.

Idalou Woman Dies Sunday At Age Of 89
Mrs. Fannie Perkins, 89, died Sunday at the home of her son-in-law, O. T. Easter, of Idalou. The remains were prepared for burial by the Big Furniture and Undertaking company of Lubbock, and were brought to Lubbock Monday and shipped Monday night to Franklin, Robinson county, her old home, where she will be buried today. The remains were accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. O. T. Easter, and son, Louis Perkins, of Idalou. Mrs. Perkins was distant relative to Mrs. J. J. Easter, 812 Avenue K, and Mrs. C. Abney, 2112 Main street, manager of the millinery department of the A. B. Conley Jr. store.

While complaints are general of business depression in Japan, the theater apparently are unimpaired. More than 400,000 persons attended theatrical performances in Tokyo during September, or about 20 percent of the population.

entire state tonight. Warmer weather, however, is proving Texasward over the Pacific states.

The local weather bureau today showed the mercury last night to have ranged from 24 degrees minimum at Amarillo to 32 at Brownsville.

The thermometer at Abilene today hovered at the freezing point, a drop of 2 degrees overnight. Austin awoke today with the mercury at 48. Houston, Galveston and Del Rio report temperature was 36 at 8 a. m. and still falling. The weather is clear and calm following a night of high gales. Many portions of the state report that the cold wave was borne in on a gale that registered as high as 57 miles an hour.

Snow In Kansas
KANSAS CITY, Nov. 9.—A cold wave accompanied by rain, sleet and snow flurries today moved into the Central Mississippi valley region from the southwest states where generally clear skies prevailed after two days of unsettled weather.

Originating in Canada, the storm Sunday swept Western Montana and the Dakotas and settled over Nebraska and Kansas where shifting winds yesterday sent low clouds over Missouri, Oklahoma and Northern Texas. Temperatures were dropping early today in Eastern Missouri and Northern Arkansas, changing a drizzling rain to sleet at some points.

Three Inch Snow In Kansas
Although the storm caused only slight damage in Kansas and Oklahoma a three-inch snow fall in western and Southern Kansas yesterday delayed trains. Snow plows were sent to Minnesota, Kansas, to release two trans-continental trains on the Rock Island line which were reported stalled. The Santa Fe and Union Pacific Lines also had trouble in Southern Kansas, but all railroads reported normal schedules this morning.

Northwest farmers welcomed the snow as an aid to winter wheat, while cotton growers in Texas feared damage to the crop if temperatures continued to fall. North and West Texas points reported temperatures of from 35 to 45 degrees, while the mercury hovered, at or below freezing at many Kansas points. Oklahoma thermometers generally stood in the thirties. Eldorado being low with 30 degrees. In West Texas the cotton crop also was imperiled by stiff northerly winds. San Antonio reported the mercury at 50 degrees with no wind this morning.

Generally fair weather with slowly rising temperatures was forecast for today in Northwest, Upper Mississippi valley and Southwest states.

Lowrance To Plead Insanity In Trial On Bigamy Charges

that institution instead of jail. He immediately got in touch with Oklahoma lawyers and W. G. Garrett, who has been in Lubbock this week, will represent him at his trial in January.

Pleads Insanity
Lowrance, through his attorney has entered a plea of insanity, and stated that if he married the alleged wife No. 2 he was not mentally able to contract and therefore the marriage is null and void. She is the mother of his two babies and he lived with her longer than with either of the other women. He also claims that he could not be married, lawfully, so far as Oklahoma laws are concerned, and will plead his case on that ground. In Texas he is legally married to wife No. 2, and 50 for as marriage licenses and ceremony are concerned to No. 2 as well, though he had never been divorced from his second wife.

Weddings No. 2 and No. 2 were in Texas, he was arrested by Texas officers and indicted by a Texas grand jury, and will be tried in a Texas court, and the fact that his first wedding and the divorce from his first wife were in Oklahoma will not change the case, it is thought. He will be tried as though the Oklahoma law did not exist.

Only 3,100 Bales Of Cotton Weighed Here

Only a small portion of cotton ginned in Lubbock this season has passed through the hands of W. E. Grice, public weigher. While the exact amount is unknown, only 3,100 bales have been weighed. This does not include 825 round bales and cotton sent direct to the compress. The bales weigh on the average of 525 pounds.

A government agent is in the city at this time gathering samples which will be used for grade study to determine the time when cotton is at its best. Very little first class cotton is now coming in as farmers are finding it more profitable to snap rather than pick cotton.

FIND DISMEMBERED BODY

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The discovery today of a woman's dismembered and headless body in a coal bin in the basement of a fashionable apartment house led to the arrest of Patrick McClafferty, assistant superintendent of the building, on a charge of murder. The woman was Miss Ruth Little, about fifty. She was a nurse employed at times by residents in the house.

McClafferty depicts the range of the dismembered body because the authorities believe people get enough of it in music at other times.

SAINT AND SINNER

COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

The letter which Cherry dropped upon the sewing machine was on plain white, unmarked commercial bond paper, and its three paragraphs had been neatly written, without typographical error, upon a typewriter.

There was no date, no address or name of the writer. It began without salutation other than the words: "Miss Cherry Lane: You are young and beautiful. Life holds many good things in store for you, if you will reconsider your recent decision to mate with a man who has one foot in the grave. A friend who must remain anonymous urges you to publish at once a denial of yesterday's printed report of your engagement to Mr. Ralph Cluny. No good can come to you or to him if you persist in your determination to wed old age and millions.

If you act quickly and with dignity, to end your unfortunate engagement, you will not be sorry, will not go unrequited in a material way.

If you do not, certain facts about your past will undoubtedly be called to Mr. Cluny's attention. Have you told him of your little romance, culminating so suddenly at Darrow, with a certain Mr. Albert Etitleson? Perhaps you have not had time to tell him all the interesting details of your very interesting past, details of which are fully known to many, including the unknown friend who is giving you this kindly advice.

The shameful insinuating bit of blackmail ended there, abruptly without a signature. Faith stared for a long minute at the neatly blocked paragraphs, but her eyes, rigid with horror, could not separate one letter from another after that first reading which had turned her blood cold.

The blackmailers! The nerve of 'em—thinking they can scare me off with cheap tricks like this! Cherry snatched at the letter, but Faith laid a hand, palm down, upon it. "No, don't tear it up!" she roused herself from her trance of horror. "Let me keep it. I can't believe that any of Mr. Cluny's relatives would have stooped so low as to send you an anonymous blackmailing letter."

Some slyster lawyer did it! Cherry's voice was venomous with anger. "A stenographer—a darned good stenographer—at that wrote that letter. See how it's blocked out. In the latest style in business correspondence? And not a single mistake or erasure. I'll bet anything that hollat, Alice Allbright, went to see a lawyer yesterday and gave him a free hand in frightening me off."

But how did a lawyer know about—about Etitleson? Faith's distress and bewilderment were painful to see. "Good Lord, I don't know! Those slyster lawyers have tie-ups with some private detectives who rove around and find out things you'd never dream of. A dozen people saw us in Darrow. Etitleson himself might have babbled. Oh, well, I'm not going to worry about it. That's exactly what the cowards want me to do. If they fool with me, I'll marry the old bug today, and then they can howl their heads off, for all I care."

"Don't do that!" Faith begged, between tears and terror. "They think I don't dare show the letter to Mr. Cluny!" Cherry raged. "But I'll show 'em! I'll take this letter to him and tell him the whole story of Albert Etitleson! Nothing really happened. You can back me up on that—you and Bob Hathaway. I didn't intend for a minute to have anything to do with Etitleson, and I can make Ralph believe me. Why, it will convince him of my innocence if I show him this letter—something they never dreamed I'd do—and he'll be the crazier to protect me, marry me."

Faith rose and put her arms around her angry, trembling sister. "I believe that the best thing to do, honey—if you won't call it off. And Cherry, honey, tell him everything else that—that might come up to cause you trouble. About all your foolish little affairs—Chester Hart, Bill Warren, Bob Hathaway, Albert Etitleson, Chris Wilby—"

Color flooded Cherry's face. "I can't tell him about Chris, Faith. I—d'd give myself away sure, if I talked to him about Chris. I—I'm afraid of Chris, Faith. He can wrap me around his finger. He's the only person in the world I'm afraid of. If I don't marry old Mr. Cluny, Chris will get me. And if I marry Chris, he'll break me up into little bits and fling me out in the gutter. I'm afraid of Chris, Faith!"

There was a beautiful tenderness and sympathy in Faith's face as she bent to kiss the quivering mouth of her little sister. "I'll do anything I can to help you, Cherry. And I won't nag you any more about Mr. Cluny. Are you going to have a big wedding?"

"I didn't intend to," Cherry flung back her head and her eyes glittered with anger and pride. "But I will now! Trying to blackmail me! I'll throw the sweetest wedding this town ever saw! Mr. Cluny's a member of St. Peter's—all the swells are Episcopalians, it seems—and I'll have a church ceremony, with bridesmaids and flower girls and a reception at the Randolph hotel. You'd be maid of honor, Faith, and we'll knock their eyes out!" She was gay again, skipping like a light hearted child, as she ran away to dress for the shopping expedition.

Before dressing, Faith telephoned to Aunt Hattie, to ask her to stay with Mrs. Lane. "Guess I better move my trunk over if I've got to be at your beck and call." Aunt Hattie retorted spiritedly. "Well, long's as it's you, I don't mind. I'll bring my sewing, and if you'll write me out what you're goin' to have for supper, I'll get things started for you."

"Thank you, Aunt Hattie. You're an angel." Faith's voice was cheering in its gratitude. Cherry heard Faith's end of the conversation through her opened bed room door. "You certainly can manage Aunt Hattie," she laughed. "Oh, by the way, I'm going to get Muggy a perfectly gorgeous dress for the wedding. Is she awake now? I want to tell her all about it and cheer her up, the poor sick old darling. You don't think she's awfully unhappy about—about me, do you, Faith? I'm really doing it largely for her sake. It would kill her if I married Chris."

Faith was not surprised to see tears blur the golden glory of Cherry's old eyes. The sweetest thing about narcissistic selfish, gay, senseless little Cherry was her love for her mother.

Contempt Charge In Probe Is Threatened

OS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 9 (AP)—Senator William H. King, concluded hearings here today in the Arizona slush fund charges he was appointed to investigate with a threat to bring contempt proceedings against F. W. Lowry, business man of Prescott, Arizona, for refusal to answer questions as what became of money contributed to Ellingswood, for governor.

Pro Officers Talk Problems At Meeting

GALVESTON, Texas, Nov. 9 (AP)—Prohibition enforcement officers, customs collectors and coast guard officials here today discussing enforcement problems. O. D. Jackson, supervisor at New Orleans was presiding. The officials assembled in executive session. Seventeen were in attendance. A statement was promised this afternoon.

More Charges Fly In Committee Probe

AUSTIN, Nov. 9 (AP)—E. H. Houchins of Hollettsville, Monday told the house investigating committee that Late Robinson of LaGrange paid him $2,270 to maintain Lavaca county high ways, and that Robinson received $8,100 from the state highway department for the maintenance. Houchins said the sub-contractor cleared approximately $2,500. The inquiry dragged. Scheduled to begin its hearing at 10 o'clock, the committee did not start to take testimony until after 11 o'clock.

Roumanian Queen To Meet Wyoming Woman Governor

QUEEN MARIE'S TRAIN EN ROUTE TO DENVER, Colo., Nov. 9 (AP)—Perhaps the most important event on Queen Marie's program today was the planned meeting of the queen of Roumania and the United States' first woman governor, Nellie Taylor Ross, of Wyoming. Governor Ross, chief executive of a state nearly as large as Roumania, has accepted Marie's personal invitation to join her party and be her guest from Casper to Denver. She was to board the train shortly after noon.

Harmony Sought

Renewed efforts toward peace and harmony at the demand of Marie herself were made aboard her train today. Although she has declined steadfastly to take any public part in controversies and bickerings on the train, it was understood that it is with her consent that remaining members of the party of Senator Hill millionaire, who was host to Marie on her far western trip are to quit the train during the next few days.

Three To Be Removed

They are Miss Lode Fuller, war time friend of Marie, her press agent, Miss Mary Birkhead, and her secretary, Miss Fabrice Hosh. Miss Birkhead, who became ill yesterday after a series of conferences with Colonel John H. Carroll, concerning her activities on the train, probably will be placed in a Denver hospital.

Miss Fuller and her secretary are expected by Roumanian members of the party to leave at Chicago, although Colonel Carroll, in announcing that Miss Fuller was now his guest instead of the guest of Queen Marie, said she could stay on the train as long as she desired.

Minister Is Given Ten Year Sentence

HATTIESBURG, Miss., Nov. 9 (AP)—Dr. C. S. Harmon, erstwhile newspaper publisher and minister, was sentenced to ten years in prison after he had entered pleas of guilty on each of seven indictments charging forgery of notes totalling $25,000. The sentences are to run concurrently. He had admitted forging the notes to buy a newspaper.

SIXTEEN HURT IN WRECK

HAGERSTOWN, N. D., Nov. 9 (AP)—Sixteen persons were slightly injured when a passenger train of the Western Maryland Railroad crashed into a freight on a siding near Thurmont, early today. Investigators for the road said the signals had been set for a clear track for the passenger train but a brakeman, becoming confused, deflected it into a stalled freight. All the injured were on the passenger train.

AMERICA FREEDOM

News dispatches of yesterday tell of another fevered outbreak in Bloody Williamson county, with supremacy in the bootlegging business the paramount issue at stake. Two more lives were snuffed out—the toll of what might be termed barbaric proceedings that make right.

America has long been known as the land of the free and the home of the brave. The first is probably true to a certain extent, but when bravery is mentioned, the Journal can see little semblance of the phrase with the carryings on. Anybody, though yellow to the core, can walk out into the street and shoot down a fellow-man when he has the advantage of him, and in cases like this, it is said that the one who pays with his life is the one who has little chance to protect himself, although he might be fully armed.

It is true that freedom in its literal sense, is available to every man in the United States, either citizen or foreigner, and undoubtedly this phrase of the American constitution is present in the minds of the people. But to the extreme legibility of the law and the law machinery, with the thousands of technicalities to which the court system is subject, foreigners have learned that they can "get by" with more criminal tactics in America than any other place on the Universe. These men therefore will go the limit to make their way into this country, and under leadership of native born Americans, carry on their traffic in human life.

It is this to be termed freedom, and it is in keeping with the spirit of America to permit such to go on apparently unhampered. Where are the officers of the law, duly sworn to protect life and property, while threats and counter-threats are being hurled back and forth by the contending factions? Evidently they have authority to take hold of the situation, and if local officers cannot handle the affair, citizens have the right to demand help from either the state or national authorities, to the extent of a regiment from the regular army if necessary.

As long as such is allowed to go on, it would appear that America has little in the way of freedom to offer her people. If the underworld characters were all who suffered under such proceedings, some consolation could be taken, even though the law prohibits even this, but as a rule, one or more innocent human beings suffer either the loss of life or limb or a life under constant dread of disaster.

MOTHER-LOVE AND CRIME

We have read a great deal lately of criminals who, in their moments of capture, have spoken very feelingly of their mothers. Pat McDermott, hunted for several months as the "key man" in the murder of Don Mellet, Canton (O.) editor finally was surrendered to the law by his relatives. McDermott, who had been hiding in Cleveland, went home, according to the details of the capture, so he might see his mother, who was ill and very old.

BULLY FOR 'EM!

It is an objectionable a gesture to tip the barber who shaves you as to tip the coloratura soprano who sings for you. So decrees the Barber Supply Dealers' Association in high and solemn convention. Neither beauty workers nor barbers should be tipped for their work elaborated the convention, because they are artists with a creative touch. Tipping has grown to continental proportions in America. We tip the waitress, the shoe shiner, the paper boy, the porter, the taxi, the head waiter, until our tipping is a sizeable part of our budget—and a nuisance. "Bully for the barber dealers! Long may their propaganda spread!" A lot of folks still shout.

LINES FROM THE Old Masters

Blow, blow, thou winter wind, Thou art not so unkind as man's ingratitude; Thy tooth is not so keen, because thou art not seen, although thy breath be rude. Heigh ho! sing Heigh ho! unto the green holly; Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly; Then, Heigh ho! the holly! This life is most jolly.

IN NEW YORK SEE-SAWING and DOWN BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The predatory Broadway wisecracker lies in wait to pounce upon any passing event. This is his "game," his "gag," and often his means of livelihood. Does a prominent woman get a divorce, does a national scandal break, does a queen come to town, does a sensational court suit get into the papers—and down he swoops upon it, fitting puns to suit the occasion, getting comedy lines in readiness to sell to a vaudeville or music hall act.

Overnight the gag goes to the rounds of the night clubs. Within a fortnight they are carried on the road by traveling troupers. They are heard in the tank towns and the cities and, by that time, the wisecracker has something new to pounce upon.

Such is the inception of most of the national slang. True, do jokes travel the country round and become as familiar in Butte, Mo., as in New Rochelle, N. Y. Not a "patter" man on the Broadway stage but likes to "crack" a new one first. This is butter and eggs to the curbstone gag, and scenes have often, where they turn out gag for acts which you wait.

Wit flowers have become an international figure because he coins his own gags out of the day's papers. There are any number of lesser comies who wisecrack as they go, and whose bit depends on taking a job at some local event in the town where they appear. Practically all of these got their schooling on the sidewalks of New York. Lessons of them are passed in the taverns, clubs and newspaper men often give them clues.

Don't forget the song writers, either. They're a ripe market for the gag boys. A fortune awaits those who can put just the proper sort of kick into the title of a new song. Admire and ridiculous as these titles sound to sophisticated ears, the "gag" is passed from mouth to mouth and the song catches on. Youngsters think these titles are funny, particularly if combined with some trick in the lines.

Wisecracking, in fact, has become a Broadway industry. While on the subjects of gags—when Reginald Meller, the senator with the large eyes and remarkable song repertoire, returned to New York recently she announced that she wished no longer to be referred to as "the great Spanish disease." When asked for a reason she said she couldn't trust the propagandists of the western press.

"You know, I picked up a paper in the west one day and found myself referred to as the great Spanish disease," she explained.

Another goes the round about the royal party. Princess Ileana and her brother were out in Central park trying to get a new jazz car. They were "stopped" on it a little and they went humming past a traffic officer. He blew his whistle and they stopped. The traffic cop ran up, red-faced and angry. "Say," he shouted, "Who dy's think you are—the queen of Roumania or sumpin'?" "No," answered Ileana, "I'm merely the princess, who's in at the hotel." GILBERT SWAN. Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

WHY COTTON PRICES ARE LOW

BY CHARLES P. STEWART NEA Service Writer WASHINGTON, 9.—Here's what's wrong with the cotton situation today. 1.—The supply is greater than ever before. Acreage has increased, yield per acre has risen, despite the ravages of the boll-weevil, and exports haven't gone up evenly with production.

2.—Demand is proportionately lower. There's less need of cotton for explosives. Men as well as women are wearing more silk or silk substitutes, the tire industry wants cotton but not the American variety. The remedy is diversification of crops, regulation to prevent over-production and less haphazard marketing.

That's the attitude of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. South Disagree But southern cotton growers and their representatives contradict it. They say the government department is exaggerating the yield. It is a slump to depress prices and help speculators and spinners make an enormous cleanup, they complain. To answer them, the department says its estimates are based on reports from the planters themselves who, it is assumed, will consider their self-interest in furnishing accurate figures.

In 1929 acreage planted was 34,000,000 acres. In 1932 there was a slump to 28,000,000 acres with a yield of 8,800,000 bales, as compared with an average of 12,500,000 bales for the immediately preceding years. In 1932, however, the industry was so stimulated by high prices that the acreage was 46,000,000 and the yield 15,500,000 bales.

Since 1923 prices have continued to decline, while production went up. The average for 1934 to 1936 was 6,285,500 bales. In 1936, the latest year for which complete figures are available, the volume had reached 8,400,000 bales. For the foreign market's weakness the department blames large cotton crops throughout the world, hard times in Europe and the development of a textile industry in India which has crippled English mills presenting them from buying as much here as formerly. Consumption has not literally fallen off, but its increase has not kept pace with increased production. The consensus of opinion among experts is that the planter must receive at least 18 cents a pound to pay production costs and that he needs 22 to make a reasonable profit. In fact, the price hovers a little above 16.

Remedies Suggested

The greater diversification of crops is one of the remedies suggested by the agriculture department. Another proposal is police regulation to prevent overproduction. Neither of these methods, however, meets the present emergency. Secretary of Commerce Hoover is urging spinners to lay in as large stocks of raw material as possible, as a means of bolstering up the current year's market. President Coolidge also is receiving strong appeals for an extra session of Congress for the enactment of emergency legislation to relieve both the cotton and corn belts.

Sole Leather

If you remember how the hot pavement used to scorch your tender feet, try this on your phonograph. In a primitive cabin in the Ozarks a family of "hillbillies" was gathered about a roaring wood fire. The father and mother wore heavy, ill-shaped shoes, but to their numerous progeny foot covering was an unknown luxury. A blazing ember popped out of the fire onto the floor and a peculiar odor became noticeable. The father sniffed the air, glanced around, then shouted excitedly to an 18-year-old daughter, "Sal, you're standing on a live coal!" "That so?" drawled the girl lazily. "Which foot, paw?"—Everybody's Magazine.

Practically Arrived

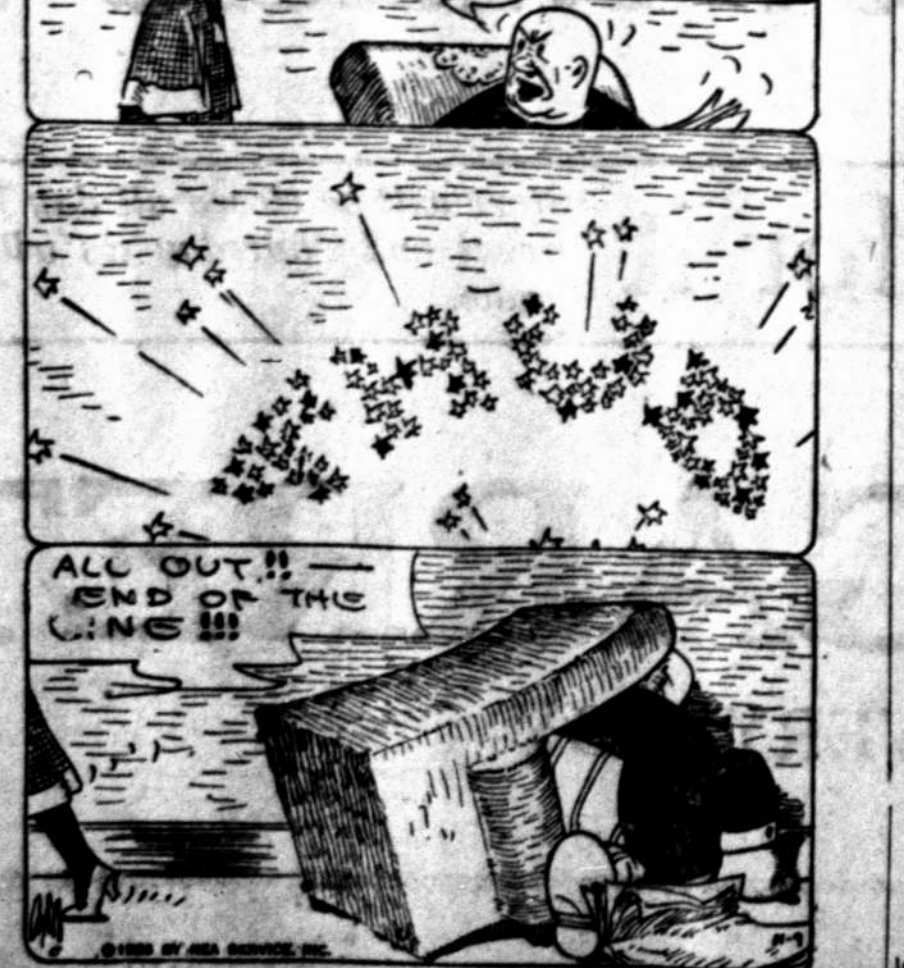

Hiram had walked four miles over the Great Smokies to call on his lady fair. For a time they sat silent on a bench by the side of her log cabin, but soon the moon, as moons do, had its effect and Hiram slid closer to her and patted her hand. "Mary," he began, "I know I got a cleavin' over that and a team at wagon on 'some haves an' coves, an' I 'low to build me a house 'this fall an'—"

Here he was interrupted by Mary's mother who had awakened. "Mary," she called in a loud voice, "is that young man that yeh?" "Back came the answer, "No maw, but he's gittin' shar."—Everybody's Magazine.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

HE'S PREPARING FOR SPRING ALREADY

Locust Borer By ARTHUR N. PACK President American Nature Ass'n Do you know that millions of insects are now getting ready for their war of devastation next spring. One of the busiest workers is the locust borer. This insect pest deposits eggs in crevices in the bark of locust trees in the fall. The larvae hatch and burrow into the outer layers of the inner bark lining and there spend the winter. So you see they are right at the base of operations when the spring campaign of devastation opens. Besides causing worm holes, the borer often kills the trees or renders the wood useless except for firewood. The first sign of attack is a brownish dust and wet spots on the bark. When the larvae enters the sapwood it is known by a yellowish dust mixed with liquids and gum-like matter. In the middle of May the tree thus attacked will die. Of course, much of the loss in our forests is due to fire and in methods of handling but the loss due to insects is astonishing. If you want to know more about these things and the importance of our forests resources to everyday life write to me at Washington for a "Forestry Primer" and I will be glad to send a copy free.

Helpful Health Hints

INHERITED TRAITS SHOW WHEN COUSINS ARE WED

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine One of the most common questions that disturbs the minds of many people is whether the marriage of first cousins is desirable. There is a sort of superstition that the offspring of such a union are bound to be defective either mentally or physically. First cousins who have married watch with the greatest anxiety to find out whether the children who are apparently healthy and intelligent will begin to deteriorate as they increase in age. Accentuating Types The actual facts are that close relationship of persons who are married is likely to accentuate dominant characteristics in the offspring, whether good or evil. Any traits manifested by the children are a reflection of the traits of their ancestors. If certain defects are prominent, these will be developed with results that are disastrous. Every person carries in his body not only evident characteristics, but innumerable latent features which he himself has inherited from ancestors, but which have not become manifest. When two such concealed tendencies are brought together, as is more likely to occur in cousin marriages than in the mating between unrelated persons, these latent characteristics are more likely to become fully expressed in the children. Among the characteristics which sometimes remain dormant in a sound stock are epilepsy, various insanities and types of body structure associated with such diseases as tuberculosis. Revealing Traits As long as these tendencies are dominated by more normal tendencies, they may do no harm, but the marriage of cousins may bring them to light. There are few families that do not possess some undesirable hereditary traits. If cousins decide to marry, they should do so with the knowledge of extra dangers that they impose on their prospective children. If each of the parents is sound physically and mentally and if the ancestry is apparently equally sound, there are no more likely to be defective children from marriage of cousins than from any other marriage. Desirable traits will be manifested to the same extent as the undesirable.

With Our Contemporaries

PAY AND PRODUCTION

A young university student recently landed a job which would pay him well for night work. He wanted the job. He needed it. He applied himself and although the work he was doing was new to him he soon mastered it. At first his production was gauged by the man working for him. He finished the job by one additional operation as each piece was passed on to him. Extra work offered itself to him. He accepted the opportunity. This particular work was of such nature that the amount of it he produced was dependent solely upon himself. Glad to have the job, anxious to make good he "hit the ball." When the superintendent stepped from the work room three different workers approached the student and told him "You're working too fast. Slow down or you can't work." The university student didn't slow down. He enjoyed the work and as the slang expression goes "poured it on." Two weeks after the incident referred to he was the boss on the section on which he worked. Production is the basis on which one collects from the world what is coming to him. He may occasionally produce more than he is paid for, but not often. The world is too eager for men and women who will produce in all lines for their service to fall of remuneration proportionate to production. That's why salaries of executives vary so widely as well as salaries of industrial workers. One man may be cheap at $500 a month while another is dear at $50.—Pittsburgh Herald.

WHERE?

Hell may be abolished in Great Britain by the Church of England, according to recent newspaper reports. The Bishop of Liverpool is quoted as saying that the concept of hell is an outmoded symbol, an evil heresy, stultifying opinions of the church. Whether the arbitrary opinion of any cleric can produce an ipsi dixit regarding any theological subject that is tantamount to the spiritual satisfaction of many people is somewhat of a mooted question, as there are some who are so constituted that certain beliefs are essential to them. All of which reminds us of the two Jews who were discussing the dullness of business. One remarked that business had gone to hell. The other promptly reminded him that there was no such place, "But," retorted the other, "if there ain't, where has hell gone to?"—Lamb County Leader.

They had more earthquake shocks in California the other day. The recent storms have just about ruined Florida. Why should not Texas become the playgrounds of the nation? We have beautiful Corpus Christi by the sea, the lower Rio Grande valley rich in tropical fruits, the Davis mountains with their fine summer climate and wonderful scenery; the Carlsbad cavern at our western border, the largest and most wonderful cavern in all the world, the Palo Duro canyons of the plains, and the beautiful scenery in many parts of Texas. A PRODUCTIVE THOUGHT

The conversation ran something like this: Cotton prices are very much lower than usual, and I wonder how conditions will be next year. The railroads are not doing as much business as they were at this time last year. Then someone mentioned the fact that their "rooms were vacant," some had "apartments," others "houses" some had "furniture" to sell. They were wondering what they could do to overcome these conditions, when a friend dropped in and suggested using the Avalanche-Journal classified ads. They are real business getters. He knew, because he had used them. They filled his vacant rooms, apartments, houses, sold his old furniture. You may use the classified ads, and obtain the required results. Ads taken over the phone until 9 p. m. every night.

Durkin Facing 50 Year Prison Sentence CHICAGO, Nov. 9 (AP)—Fifty years in prison confronted Martin Durkin, dapper, desperate and automobile thief, today. Federal Judge Cliffe sentenced him to the Atlanta federal prison when he pleaded guilty today to interstate transportation of stolen automobiles. Previously, he had been convicted of murder in the state courts and sentenced to prison for 25 years. The sentence came 24 hours after a plot by Durkin to escape was discovered. Steel saws were found concealed in his cell in the county jail.

Beaumont Woman Dies Of Injuries In Fire BEAUMONT, Nov. 9 (AP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Pickrell, 31, wife of J. M. Pickrell, an oil operator at Saratoga, died Monday from burns sustained Sunday when she attempted to start a fire in a stove at her home. She had picked up a can of gasoline instead of kerosene, and poured it on the flames. The blast of fire from the exploding caused severe burns, and she was rushed to a hospital here, where she died today.

EX-SERVICE MAN ASK MEANING OF ARMISTICE DAY

RECALLS SCENES OF WILD CELEBRATION IN FRANCE WHEN WAR HALTED

(The following article prepared by an ex-service man who saw many months of service in France during the war, and who now is living in Lubbock, is considered by the Journal to be very timely as Armistice Day approaches, and it is given herewith for the information that it contains—Editor's Note.)

Were you in the service during the war? Yes, were you in France? I was and this day brings the memory to me—I can see the "Town Corner" standing on the street corner beating his drum, with intense excitement calling the civilians near him and telling them that the Armistice would be signed at 11 o'clock and firing would cease—I can see the jubilant faces of the French—I can see the American dough boys when it dawned on him just what the town crier was telling. I can see him turn to his buddies and I can hear him say, "Oh, that is some more 'Lorraine News' but no it was not for soon we see a message carrier enter our Company P. C. with the same message.

It is then that the show begins, you can see the American Doughboys that were wounded and had their crutches, but you no longer for I saw some of them through their crutches over the hospital and run all the way to town. I can see another start for his favorite cafe where he fills up on Vin Blanc (could you imagine him for it was the happiest moment of his life, I can still see the French civilians and joining for hour before the Armistice was signed (due to advanced information) for myself I was only five miles from the front line, with orders to go in immediately, and I must say that the Germans were given us one of the warmest receptions with their big G.I. caps that I had ever been in, and they continued to do so until 11 o'clock.

At that moment up and down the lines for miles the firing ceased almost to a second, then I can again see the jubilant faces of the Doughboys. One of the most difficult problems that we had then was to keep our boys over on their own side, and some did go across and mixed in a friendly manner with the Germans. Things were soon standardized and the next day the Germans withdrew from the district and our boys went over and visited the field that they had worked so hard to take only a few hours before.

But the thing that looks hardest and brings your memory back so near to this time is the dead that you could see on "No Man Land" at the time the Armistice was signed. This makes your heart bleed. These boys had faced the ordeals of the battle front for probably days and days and at the last hours of the war had to make the Supreme Sacrifice. We rejoiced on Armistice day, yet our hearts were sad for our buddies who had to make the Supreme Sacrifice. Altho our hearts were sad for the boys who made the Supreme Sacrifice, we realize that unless the war had ended when it did it would have seen only a small part of what would have soon happened.

Now we feel that it is the duty of every man that was a soldier at this time to take part in Armistice day programs. We know that the boys who were over there and came back made a great sacrifice, however, in many cases the boys who stayed home as soldiers sacrificed as much, and more than the ones who went across. Yet the boys over there realized the disappointment of the boys who did not have the chance of going over, as they wanted to. But they obey over there can only feel that he was lucky to have the privilege.

Therefore we feel it a duty whether you were over there or not to take part in Armistice day, since your duty was as well performed as though you were across during the war. You may be a mother or father who lost a son, you may be a wife who lost a husband, you may be a sister or brother of a soldier who made the sacrifice, or you may have only had these relatives in the service who look to you. Even then Armistice day should be a happy day for you. You may be one of the many that helped financially, if so this is your day also.

COUNTY CONTINUES HOME DEM. AGENT

Revisiting their action to discontinue the services of a home demonstration agent, members of the Lubbock county commissioners' court at a meeting Monday voted to continue the work in this county. The action came after scores of women and girls from rural districts had voiced their disapproval.

Miss Myrtle Murray, district agent, headed a body of women who appeared before the court. It was pointed out that the county only pays $1,000 of the salary, and the amount is not to be considered in comparison with the work done.

Owing to the lateness of the hour, the commissioners did not make a complete tabulation of the votes cast at the general election, though it is thought this work will be done today.

HOUSTON, Nov. 9 (AP)—A dry norther arrived in Houston Monday morning bringing a ten degree temperature drop to 66. The lowest temperature predicted the next 24 hours was 55 degrees, expected by Tuesday.

GROSS RETURNS FROM FARMS TO BE NEAR NORMAL

WHEAT AND COTTON ARE DARK SPOTS, REPORT OF BOARD SHOWS

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The gross financial returns to agriculture probably will not be far from last year's figures, the Department of Agriculture sums up the agricultural situation in its monthly report issued today.

"Spring wheat and cotton are the dark spots in the picture this fall, and the apple industry may also be noted as sharply depressed by low prices," the report says. "Except for some depression in the territory of those crops, however, the season winds up with about average crop yields, and a probability for gross financial returns not far from last year's figures."

Discussing the cotton situation, the department says: "The fall in cotton prices now fills the headlines. Predictions of the same last spring were given scant notice. For four years the growers of cotton have been doing just what other producers do when business is profitable—increasing production.

"In the last four years the south has turned out approximately 50,000,000 bales of cotton. During forty consecutive months beginning July, 1922, the average farm price of cotton never went below 20 cents a pound and much of that time it exceeded 3 cents. Four good cotton crops sold well enough so that growers increased their acreage from 30,000,000 in 1921 to 47,000,000 acres this year.

"The south is not without resources for meeting the present situation and rarely have the farm and business leaders of any large region met an emergency in so united and comprehensive a fashion. Cotton is good property. The consuming world can and will use a lot of it this year."

Up in the spring wheat country there is a strip of territory extending from central North Dakota through South Dakota to central Nebraska, the report says, where drought and bad weather cut the crops and for which a lean winter looms ahead. South Dakota showed the lowest general crop condition in the country last month, only 55 per cent of average. Other local areas of flood, drought or frost damage claim some attention but they are less extensive.

"Hog cholera, which is showing up with rather serious losses in some counties of Illinois and Iowa, is giving producers considerable concern, although, it is pointed out, 'general underlying conditions in the Corn Belt are better than last year.'

"Corn prices are slightly higher but still low enough to encourage feeders. Hog prices stay relatively high and reports indicate a materially larger crop of pigs in prospect this fall. The small 1923 crop of hogs, now in pack, cost the packers nearly $1,200,000,000. It brought producers more money than in any year excepting the wartime inflation years and measured in terms of corn prices during the marketing season was probably the most profitable ever marketed.

The departments general index of purchasing power of farm products, in terms of non-agricultural commodities remained at 33 for September, the same as in August, the five pre-war years being considered as 100.

FIGHT OPENS IN EFFORT TO KEEP VARE FROM SEAT

LINES BEING DRAWN BY SENATORS FOLLOWING CAMPAIGN CHARGE

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Senatorial lines were forming today for a potential contest over the seating in the seventieth congress of Senator-elect William S. Vare, Republican, Pennsylvania, whose primary election expenditures have been investigated by the senate campaign fund committee. A personal inquiry into the Pennsylvania situation is under way by Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, who campaigned prior to the election on behalf of William B. Wilson, the Democratic candidate.

To Fight For Seats

Meanwhile Senator Blaise, Democrat, South Carolina, announced that he would vote to seat both Senators-elect Vare and Smith, Republican Illinois, unless it could be shown that their election had been effected by fraud or corruption, and Senator David Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, reiterated his intention to vote to seat his colleague on the ground that Republican expenditures in the keystone state had been legal, honest and necessary.

In Philadelphia the entire election board of one division and the Democratic inspector of another where no votes had been credited to Mr. Wilson in the unofficial returns were ordered to appear today in the election court to explain discrepancies.

Reed's Statement

On the heels of the opinion of Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, that the 17th constitutional amendment empowered congress to control congressional primaries as well as general elections to "purge" him of "corruption," came an announcement from the Missouri home of Senator James A. Reed, Democrat, chairman of the senate campaign funds committee that his committee can be called, under the senate resolution which resulted in its appointment, to investigate the Pennsylvania general elections "if it can be shown that because of monies contributed or promises made, the ballots were miscounted or fraudulent ballots were permitted to be cast, or that votes were bought."

In announcing his personal inquiry into the Pennsylvania elections, Senator Norris said that he would not hesitate to request the Reed committee to investigate the elections if facts were found to warrant such action. He reiterated his charge that the returns in Philadelphia disclosed that machine-control methods had been used there and that the record disclosed that no honest election had been held or that the honest results had been withheld.
