"Lifer" Hall Gambles His Freedom For Thrill And Loses

More Mud—
Muny Airport—
But No Air Lines—
Don't Be Surprised—

Wichita county's first primary campaign was a dull affair, well over, and now the voters may hope for something better in the second test to come this month. All the candidates closed with the proud boast they had engaged in no mud slinging, and had kept their drives for election on a "high moral plane." Which is a mistake, at least, in creating public interest, to this writer's way of thinking.

Mud slinging is nothing more nor less than criticism, personal and official, and we need more criticism. There is too great a tendency to pat each other on the back and say what a fine bunch of fellows we are. Why should two candidates be nice and polite and friendly with each other any more than two prize-fighters or two football teams? To do so may be good politics, but it doesn't make for any great interest in the outcome of the races.

Wichita Falls' municipal airport receives its new beacon light, installation of which will make the field here complete in every detail. Purchase of the airport by the city council was a wise move, not only because Wichita Falls' air program demands a municipal field in fact as well as to name, but because the city received a bargain. Other cities, which have voted bond issues to build airports, have expended many times the amount of money spent here without securing facilities.

An advertisement of the City National bank of Wednesday carries a pertinent comment in conection with the city's airport purchase. The bank quotes the Ford Motor company's advertisement in the Literary Digest: "It is of vital importance in American business to promote and maintain efficient municipal airports." The first demand of an air line is that a city have a municipal field—in other words, a field that will be permanent beyond doubt.

There is now no reason why business men and friends of aviation in Wichita Falls should not start demanding an air mail and passenger line to serve this city and territory. Probably a short line connecting with facilities at Fort Worth would be the most logical step. Once established, air lines will be difficult to change, and Wichita Falls should delay no longer in getting in step with other Texas cities.

T. R. Thornton of Wichita Falls goes to Dallas as assistant agent of the M-K-T railroad. He was known here as a plugger. He started 14 years ago in a rather minor capacity for the Katy. It is a surprising and gratifying thing how often the "plugger" is the man who plugs the vacancy in the bigger and better job.

Wichitans who spend the summer in other cities and climes will have a pleasant surprise when they return in the fall. Unless all signs are wrong, business conditions here should be the best this season in several years. Industrial plants are putting figures on the right side of the ledger. Farm crops are fair and so are prices. Oil writers see further advance in the price of crude and the refining business is in good shape. Wichitans should smile.

DARING PLOT REVEALED BY OFFICERS HERE

'Troubadour of Wichita Jail' Betrayed By Guitar Playing

FRIEND TOOK TERM

'Lifer' Traded Places With Man Serving Year's Sentence

Raymond Hall, debonair Wichita jail breaker and troubadour, using another man's name, would have walked from the prison walls a free man in five short months, although he was sentenced to life imprisonment here seven months ago, but—

The restraint of prison life overcame him. His love for the daring possessed him. A week ago Hall looked forward to the time five months later, when, as R. H. Tucker, he would be released from the pen.

Today he faces possible death, with the prospect that murder charges will be filed against him for he could not await his time.

These facts were revealed Wednesday after state prison officers had unraveled the plot by which Hall hoped to gain his freedom after serving a year's imprisonment.

Poses as "Lifer"

Raymond Hall and R. H. Tucker left Wichita Falls together, en route to the penitentiary, where Hall was sentenced to 99 years for assault to murder under the habitual criminal act and Tucker was sentenced to one year for liquor law violation.

To Tucker fell the lot to pose as the "lifer." He was lodged in a cell in the penitentiary and carefully watched, for ordinarily the life term men are not given many liberties.

Hall also went to the penitentiary, but he went as Tucker. A few months of good behavior and the man who posed as Tucker was transferred to the prison farm near Sugarland.

A few weeks after the transfer Hall and seven other prisoners made their escape from the prison farm after a fight in which one guard was killed and two others wounded. Hall still believed to be Tucker by prison authorities, was recaptured and as Tucker was charged with murder.

Officers believe that it was Tucker's intention to continue to answer to the name of Hall until after his friend had been released, and then to claim his true identity, with the demand that he be released.

Whatever the plans of the two men, Tucker's act in taking for a year the close restriction allotted to a "lifer" bespeaks a friendship unparalleled in Texas criminal his-

British Ace Over Atlantic On Way To North America

Capt. Frank T. Courtney Pilots Flying Boat in Non-Stop Attempt; Spanish Airman Forced Down

NEW YORK, Aug. 1. (US)—Frank T. Courtney, the British "ace," was somewhere over the Atlantic on his way to Newfoundland tonight. Captain Courtney, who is flying a Dornier-Wal flying boat, took off from Horta at about noon, New York daylight saving time. He should, barring accidents, arrive in Newfoundland, 1800 miles away, sometime tomorrow afternoon.

Courtney's hop started several hours after Commander Ramon Franco and three Spanish officers had taken off from Cadiz, on their way to Horta, first stop in a world tour. When the Spaniards became overdue at Horta, it was believed for a time that they had decided to fly directly to North America.

Extremely favorable weather conditions were reported for the flight, with clear skies over the Atlantic and moderately northerly winds.

Captain Courtney is believed to be accompanied by a crew of two. Fred Pierce, mechanic, and E. W. Gilmour, radio operator. E. B. Kosmer, Montreal banker, was at Horta, however, and may be a passenger.

SPANISH AIRMAN FORCED TO LAND

PORT OF HUELVA, Spain, Aug. 1. (UP)—Commander Ramon Franco, noted Spanish aviator who started his round-the-world flight from Cadiz, Spain, today at 7:15 a. m., made a forced landing at the town of La Ribida due to engine trouble.

Besides Franco, the plane carried Captain Ruiz de Alda, navigator; Emilio Gallarza, co-pilot and Pablo Rada, mechanic.

Commander Franco declared he detected slight trouble in the motors and decided to return to La Rabida convent, the convent where Columbus said his prayers before sailing for America in 1492. Franco said that he previously had promised to bid those at the convent farewell before starting.

He declared that as soon as repairs are made in the motors he would continue his world flight from La Rabida, the same spot from which he made his historic flight to South America in 1926.

LINDY'S CRITIC IN APOLOGY

Amarillo Editor Backs Down On 'Article'

AMARILLO, Aug. 1. (AP)—Peace has been made between the world's most famous aviator and a newspaper editor here who says "I'm only a country boy trying to get along, figuratively speaking."

When Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh paid a visit to Amarillo after his great flight a remark he made aroused Gene A. Howe, editor and publisher of the Amarillo News-Globe, and Howe published an editorial in which he said the colonel was "swell headed and discourteous."

Lindy Forgets It

Lindbergh landed here again today. Asked if he harbored ill will toward Howe, Lindbergh smiled and said he had almost forgotten about the matter. "If Mr. Howe has forgotten the incident, I have too," the flier said. "I may have brought it on myself by speaking too curtly to a group of men who went too close to the propeller of my ship."

The conversation was related to the editor by Lieut. Robert H. Gray, and Mr. Howe printed an apology.

"All I have to say in rebuttal is that Lindbergh certainly acted like a good fellow about it. It shows that he is wide and broad. If he were narrow and mean he could have acted real nasty.

"Lindbergh's explanation of how he came to circle Amarillo twice before he landed on that memorable morning rings true.

Howe Apologizes

"I'm only a country boy trying to get along, figuratively speaking, and Lindbergh is without question the best known and most sought after individual in the world. He certainly has acted magnanimously about me in his attitude and I certainly appreciate it and I would be a sorry person if I didn't admit it.

"So, folks, I apologize to Colonel Lindbergh and will say that I was hasty and wrong in what I said. He is a scholar and a gentleman and hasn't the big head."

Texas National Guard Units May Secure Armory in City Auditorium

Four Wichita Falls units of the Texas national guard may have armory quarters together in the basement of the Memorial auditorium if present negotiations mature, it was revealed Wednesday.

Col. Charles N. Nelman, commander of the 142nd infantry and Major Underwood of the adjutant general's department, commander of the third battalion of the 143rd infantry, arrived in Wichita Falls Wednesday morning and held a conference with Wichita Falls officers of the guard in regard to obtaining an adequate armory. At present battery D of the 131st field artillery is stationed in an old airplane hangar at Call field; and the headquarters company of the third battalion of the 143rd infantry, and companies L and M of the 142nd infantry are using a hall on Scott avenue.

The possibility of obtaining the large basement of the city auditorium was considered as were several other sites. It was pointed out that the auditorium basement would more than be large enough to accomodate the artillery and also other equipment of the battery and of the infantry units.

Major John H. Fletcher, commander of the third battalion of the 142nd infantry; Capt. O. E. Nelson of battery D of the 131st artillery; Lieut. J. E. Steinkrohe of the headquarters company of the third battalion of the 142nd; Jos. Huckins III and other officers worked on the problem for several hours and talked the matter of the auditorium over with George D. Fairtrace, city manager. No decision was reached.

G. O. P. CHIEFS FEAR AL WILL GET FARM AID

'REVOLT' STILL LOOMS

George Peek Expected To Show Needs Of Farmers

NEW YORK, Aug. 1. (US)—Rested and refreshed after a five days' vacation at Canoe Place Inn, Hampton Bays, where he swam, golfed and motored without giving attention to the presidential campaign, Governor Smith returned to New York City tonight.

The freedom he enjoyed during his holiday ended the moment he arrived at the Biltmore. A short time later he was dining with Chairman Raskob of the national Democratic executive committee, and was plunged into consideration of his speech of acceptance which he will make at the formal notification ceremonies to be held in Albany on Aug. 22.

Tomorrow morning the governor will have an important conference with George N. Peek, of Moline, Ill., chairman of the committee of 22, representing the central agricultural conference.

If Governor Smith considered the impending conference crucial in his political destiny, he failed to show it today when he left his vacation spot. He was sunburned and smiling, and emphatically declared he had enjoyed the "best vacation in years."

Peek on Way

Peek, who is chairman of the committee of 22, representing farmers of the North Central states and said today on his way to New York for the conference that he recently denounced the treatment of agriculturists at the Kansas City Republican convention, and is now looked upon as the spiritual leader, at least, of the "farm revolt."

It is expected that a vivid picture of the needs and yearnings of the tillers of the soil in the "nation's bread basket" will be given Governor Smith over his grapefruit and coffee. It is also common knowledge that tomorrow morning's scheduled meeting has long been uneasily anticipated in Republican circles.

Revolt Still Imminent

Pessimists in the Hoover camp have repeatedly insisted that the peril of a widespread revolt of the farmers as a result of the Kansas City unpleasantness is by no means past. The coming of Peek from Moline, Ill., to confer with their chief foeman, it is said, is now being frankly recognized as a grave danger by Republican leaders.

Governor Smith some weeks ago wired to William H. Settle, Indiana farm leader, saying that if elected president he would immediately call a conference of farm leaders. This meeting, the governor's message said, will seek to work out a concrete plan for farm relief to be submitted at the opening session of congress.

Peek, while resentful at the "broken pledges" which he said were renewed to the farmers at Kansas City, has expressed his pleasure at the treatment of farm representatives at Houston. Political wiseacres today predicted that the Biltmore breakfast table will see the cementing of an alliance that may prove puckery fruit for Republican palates.

Haskell Sheriff Jails Woman And Man in Shooting On Highway

Special to The Record News.

HASKELL, Texas, Aug. 1.—An Indian woman, Velma Foster of Seminole, Okla., who said her Indian name is Chief Foster, and Otto Knight, were placed in the county jail here today by Sheriff Cousins, in connection with the shooting of Edward Smith, San Benito, on the Weinert road near here last Saturday night. Knight was arrested in Abilene on a warrant issued by County Attorney Clyde Grissom. The woman was brought here by Sheriff Cousins.

Both told officers they were riding with two other passengers in a Hudson car last Saturday night, when Smith, riding with three other men in a Chevrolet, was struck by a bullet fired from the Hudson. They denied firing the shot which wounded Smith, however, implicating the other two passengers with whom they were riding. Smith is in a Stamford hospital.

The occupants of the Chevrolet, Loral Regan, Covington, Okla., Ferris Thompson, Vernon, Texas, and T. W. Hartley, of Howard, Neb., told officers that someone in the Hudson had fired after complaining that the Chevrolet was "hogging the road." The Hudson was en route from Wink, Texas, to Seminole, Okla.

The pair held here claim that the two men with whom they were riding last Saturday are ex-convicts. They have not been apprehended.

DENTIST SLAYS WIFE, CHILDREN

Financial Troubles Given Police as Reason

ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 1. (UP) Dr. Arthur M. Woolsey, a dentist, was held in jail tonight charged with murdering his wife, Marguerite, and their two children, Field, 6, and Mary Margaret, 3.

"Financial troubles," was the only explanation offered by the young dentist who calmly admitted shooting to death the three members of his family in their home at Roselle, an exclusive residential district.

A telephone call to police headquarters about 2 p. m., informed officers there had been a murder at the Woolsey home. The slayer made the call and met the police at the door, a half-burned cigar clamped between his teeth.

He led police to his wife's bedroom where they found her body, her hands crossed on her breast and all signs of violence removed. Only a tiny hole in the skull and two other wounds just over the heart revealed the cause of death.

Beside her lay the bodies of the boy and infant girl. Field had been shot in the cheek and Mary Margaret in the head. Physicians said Mrs. Woolsey had died instantly but the children might have lived several hours.

Woolsey, showing no signs of distress, said he had shot his wife first then Field, and then his daughter.

Neighbors said they had not heard the shots, but reported seeing Woolsey in a cigar store near his home an hour before noon.

Attorneys for Allison declared that their client would make his appearance here October 12, but probably would not be located prior to that time.

GIANT GATES CRUSH LIVES FROM WORKERS

100 Men Stunned in Confusion Following Accident

RESCUE DIFFICULT

Second Disaster in Same Point On Canal Being Built

THOROLD, Ont., Aug. 1. (UP)—More than 100 workmen were stunned with confusion and at least 10 of them were killed when a 500-ton steel gate—which was about to be swung into its permanent position in the big Welland canal locks—slipped and fell into the canal bed.

In addition to the 10 known to have been killed, five are missing and scores were seriously injured. Rescue squads late today were digging into the canal bed in the belief additional bodies would be found pinned under the giant gate.

Identification Difficult

Checking of the survivors was extremely difficult due to the fact the bodies recovered were so badly crushed they could not be identified.

The accident occurred when the steel gate was being set in place. A boom projecting from a crane on the high level of the westerly side of the lock slipped just as the gate was being swung towards its permanent position. A second crane placed on the opposite side of the lock held, and the operator made heroic efforts to prevent the gate from falling.

With the slipping of the cables and grapples, the gate plunged to the canal bed, dragging with it the cranes and the operators.

More than 100 men were at work in the depths below. They were caught beneath the gate as it fell.

Word of the disaster spread quickly throughout the city and every available doctor and nurse was summoned to the scene.

Little Hope for Victims

Every possible effort was made to rescue the living, but in many cases they were so badly crushed that little hope was held for their lives.

Many of the men working in the depths were able to escape death by the warning shouts of work-

$80,000 For His Discovery

Formula for Stomach Antiseptic Brings Large Sum

This is G. M. Gordon, widely known Dallas, Texas, pharmacist, who spent twenty years developing "Gordon's" (formerly Gordon's Antiseptic), an Internal Antiseptic for the stomach and bowels, for which he received $80,000 for the rights to the secret process of compounding.

"The greatest obstacle to the successful treatment of stomach troubles," said Mr. Gordon, "was fermentation (souring of food matter in the stomach and bowels), which inflames and irritates these organs and produces gas that causes much distress. Fermentation can be stopped only with an antiseptic."

"Gordon's" goes right to the seat of the trouble, because it exercises a distinctly antiseptic as well as a digestive effect. It stops and prevents fermentation, soothes and heals any irritated or inflamed condition and will bring quick relief in cases of indigestion, gas, dyspepsia, heartburn, bloating after meals, excess acid, bad breath, constipation, sick headache, and nervousness, when caused by faulty digestion. It will tone up the digestive organs and stimulate the stomach and bowels to their normal functions. A few doses will convince you.

"Gordon's" is made in liquid form. A large 8-ounce bottle, price $1.50—less than 3 cents a dose—at all druggists.

KATY SAVES HIM

Life Giving Breath For Man Buried In Excavation

HOUSTON, Aug. 1. (AP)—C. F. Greene owes his life to a battered straw hat.

He was working alone in an excavation here when a cave in covered him with five tons of earth. His co-workers, thinking he would be smothered to death, labored frantically for three hours to free him. Once, when they were about to get him free of the earth, a second slide buried him again.

Finally they brought him out. His straw hat, old and battered, but stiff, was jammed down over his face. He was still alive.

"My straw hat saved me," he said at the hospital where physicians said he was only bruised. "I was plain lucky."

DEJECTED GIRL ENDS HER LIFE

Porto Rican Writer Burns Self to Death

NEW YORK, Aug. 1. (UP)—Another artistic student, dejected by life in New York, has sought relief by suicide—this time a beautiful Porto Rican writer burned herself to death in the bath tub of her uptown apartment.

Miss Louise Amelia de Hostos left a note addressed to the chief of police in which she blamed the slanderous tongue of an unnamed man. Then she climbed in the tub, saturated her clothing with gasoline and ignited the cloth.

She was found, her clothing burned away and her torso badly seared, by other residents of the apartment hotel. Four hours later she was dead. The note she had left read:

"As there is no punishment for a man who takes a lady's name and disfigures it with all kinds of lies in a sneaky way, never giving a clue for his identification, so that the victim has no means of defending herself, I decided that he must answer before God for this taking of my life."

She was 38, beautiful, and the daughter of a wealthy Porto Rican who died two years ago. Her father was said to have been a well known educator for whom a statue has been erected in San Juan.

The woman came to Ne wYork several years ago to further her literary career. She had completed her work in the United States and detectives found six trunks packed in her apartment. They said she planned to leave for Porto Rico Thursday.

Just before she died she told police of having an unhappy affair with a man—but she refused to name the man.

Men's B. Y. C. Store To Open in Memphis

MEMPHIS, Texas, Aug. 1. (Sp.)—This town will have the honor of having the only B. Y. C. store in the world—a "Be Your Clerk" store for men—self serving and conducted along the same line as the popular self-serving grocery stores.

The idea was originated by J. C. Ross, who has conducted a men's furnishing store here for the past several years. The store will be ready for business by September 1, and will be located on the ground floor of the new Browder building on Fifth street.

Articles in men's apparel will be placed in special fixtures which will make selection an easy matter. The purchaser will select whatever he wants of goods displayed and will pay the cashier as he passes out of the door.

Robison Seeks Six New Employes in Estimate

AUSTIN, Aug. 1. (Sp.)—Six new employes are requested by J. T. Robison, land commissioner, for the general land office in his estimates filed and considered by the state board of control for the next biennium. He wants two draftsmen at a salary of $2,400 a year, two compiling clerks at $2,000 a year each, a mailing clerk and a photostatistic clerk at a salary of $1,800 a year each.

For the current biennium the legislature appropriated $108,500 annually, and his estimates for the next biennium is $127,800 for the first and $127,300 for the second year of the next biennium. A general increase in salaries for the other employes is requested which makes up the remainder of the increase requested.

Mexican Side of Texas Revolution Translated

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 1. (UP)—The writings of the five participants of the Mexican army during the Texas revolution of 1836 have recently been translated into English in a book which is fresh from the press, entitled, "The Mexican Side of the Texas Revolution by the Chief Participants."

The writings were translated with notes by C. E. Castaneda, Latin-American librarian of the University of Texas. The sources from which the translation was made are out of print and exceedingly rare in Spanish, according to Castaneda. They have never been translated into English with the exception of the Representations of General Filisola.

Judge McFarland Thanks the Voters

To the Voters of Wichita County:

I want to express my heartfelt thanks to each and all for the handsome plurality given me in the July primary. During the campaign I was unable to see many of you personally and at the same time attend to the duties of my office, and I chose the path of duty instead of the pleasure of mingling with you, and I appreciate all the more the wonderful vote given me, feeling that it is voluntary endorsement of my services on the bench. In the run-off, I shall endeavor to see all of you that time and physical limitations will permit, and will appreciate your active support and vote, and will repay the same by a continuation of my earnest, wholehearted effort to serve.

OLD TIBETAN BOOKS FOUND

Wisdom of Old India In Capitol Library

ALFRED P. RECK

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1. (UP)—Four "excellent truths" control the destiny of man, according to the ancient Tibetan classics recently received at the library of congress.

"The "truths" are "the pain," "the production," "the cessation," and "the path."

Man cannot separate his existence from pain, wrote the Tibetan scholars of Buddha. His existence is produced by passion and evil desires, they continued, and his existence is brought to an end by cessation of evil desires. "The path" is the "noble eightfold path" which leads man to everlasting life.

Old Indian Teachings

All the wisdom of the ancients is contained in the 316 musty volumes, packed like small bales of cloth on the shelves of the national library. The philosophy is the philosophy of old India, transcribed into Tibetan and printed by means of wood block on coarse, shrub fiber paper.

The ancient unbound volumes were found by Dr. Joseph F. Rock in a lamasery in Choni, western Kan-su, and forwarded after three years delay to Washington. The volumnes contain approximately 189,000 pages and each page is printed from a hand-carved wood block. The volumes are divided into two sets—the Kahgyur and the Tangyur—and comprise one of a few complete sets known to exist. The Kahgyur, of 1083 distinct works, contains the "faithful translations of the Buddha commandments" divided into three sections —1—Duluva, or the discipline; 2—Do—or the sermons of Buddhas; 3—The transcendental wisdom of Buddha scholars.

Difficult to Read

Only two men in the United States are known to library officials to be able to read the Tibetan classics. They are Dr. Berthold Laufer, of the Field museum, Chicago, and Dr. James R. Ware of the University of Washington.

The "noble eight-fold path" over which man must walk, is given by the Kahgyur as "right belief, right aims, right speech, right actions, right means of livelihood, right endeavors, right mindfulness and right meditation."

Unlike the Bible, the Kahgyur lays down only five moral commandments for the followers of Buddha; "kill not, steal not, commit not adultery, lie not and drink not strong drink."

For the Buddhist priests more commandments are added, forbidding them to dance, own money and cautioning them on the observance of fast days.

Moral Laws

The Kahgyur also admonishes true believers not to buy and trade goods in the temples, "cut themselves off from the vital principle" (commit suicide), or "amuse themselves with their daughters-in-law." Prayers should not be converted into popular songs nor should fraud be committed by weight or measure.

Warning is given that man should not "eat and drink and care but for his actual existence."

"What we are in this life is a result of our actions in a previous life," the Kahgyur preaches, "and according to our actions now, so shall we be in another life yet to come.

"We harvest in the present that we shall inevitably reap in the future."

More than 50 special Buddhist Gods are listed for separate prayers for violators of the moral code. As the least of these bears the name Budda Ganga'i-klunk-gi-bye-ma-enyed-bye-ba-phrag-brgya'a-grangs-dang-mnyam-par-des-pa, it is not difficult to imagine the penitent suffering of a "true follower."

NO HAY WANTED

Sen. Reed Also Opposed To 'Heflinizing' State Of Missouri

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 1. (UP) — Attacking Charles M. Hay, Democratic candidate for senator from Missouri, Senator James A. Reed tonight declared he was opposed to "Heflinizing" Missouri.

"I know Tom Heflin and I know Charles Hay," the senator said. "They are as much alike as two slices of beef from the same carcass, only the Hay slice comes from a little nearer the horns."

Placing of Hay on the Democratic ticket will mean Missouri is attempting to support two diametrically opposite views, declared Reed, who is supporting James A. Collett.

"The Democratic party, by nomination of Governor Smith, is committed to a policy of revision or repeal of the Volstead act. There is no use trying to dodge the question. It is here and will be one of the controlling elements in the battle against the Republican party."

Texaco Raises Tank Schedule

Special to The Record News.

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 1.—Hopes of stretching the St. Louis pool north of the big gusher wells in 17-9-5 Pottawatomie county, were dimmed when Magnolia Production company's No. 2 Bullock in 18-7-5 had a hole full of water in the Viola lime at 4200 feet and is to be abandoned. Magnolia is agitating its gusher well No. 1 Hembree in 19-5-5 and it made 8666 barrels. The St. Louis pool averaged 39,853 barrels from 32 wells.

The Texas company did not wait for the Magnolia Petroleum company to act Wednesday and advanced the gasoline-kerosene tank wagon one cent a gallon in Oklahoma, making the tank wagon price of 16 cents and the retail price of 19 cents including the state tax.

BIRCH OPENS NEW AGENCY

Graham-Paige Cars On Wichita Market

Announcement was made Wednesday by M. T. Birch of the Birch Motor company, former local Oldsmobile dealers, of the firm's appointment as Wichita Falls Graham-Paige distributors. According to Mr. Birch, manager of the company, a complete line of new Graham-Paige models will be shown here soon and a formal opening of the company's new salesrooms at 115-121 Indiana will be held next Tuesday.

"Our business has grown tremendously," Mr. Birch stated, "and we have found it advisable to handle a car which covers every price class. With our new building, one of the largest and most complete salesrooms in the city, we are now in position to represent a car offering a wide range of models. In selecting the Graham-Paige we did so only after thorough consideration of a number of makes of cars. For seven years we have built our business on a basis that when we sell a car we hope and expect to make a friend. Our confident feeling that we shall continue to do so with the Graham-Paige line was one of the powerful factors in influencing our decision. I have watched the business careers of the three Graham brothers with interest and have seen them attain a high place in the automotive industry. I have carefully studied the line and am deeply impressed by its beauty and substantial value offered. I have driven the car more than 500 miles during the past few days and can truthfully recommend it to my customers for real performance and endurance.

"During the past five years as Oldsmobile dealers we have delivered more than 3000 new and used cars in this territory. During the past year we have enjoyed one of the most prosperous and successful years in our history. We are looking for an even greater year with our new car and the wide sales possibilities it offers."

Associated with Mr. Birch as heads of various departments are: Erskine Leath, sales manager who has held a similar position with the Fox-Brown Chevrolet company during the past three years; L. A. Higgins, assistant sales manager and formerly connected with the Munger Automobile company here; H. P. Kirkpatrick, manager of the used car department; J. Leslie Nikkel, auditor, formerly with the L. & M. Auto Market.

H. H. Corn, traveling wholesale representative for Graham-Paige of Dallas, is in the city making final arrangements with Mr. Birch for the formal showing of the line next Tuesday, Aug. 7.

When Pain Comes

Two hours after eating

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips Milk of Magnesia. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.—Adv.

Dorothy Dix Gives Her Views On How to Handle Adolescent Girls

What to Do With the Adolescent Daughter—The Mother Whose Sacrifices Are Not Appreciated By Her Family—Problem of the Domestic Tyrant.

Dear Miss Dix—I am struggling with what appears to me a hopeless problem, a young daughter between 15 and 16. She has a sweet disposition, but is indiscreet, foolish, boy-crazy, unreliable in every way. She cannot hold her girl friends, rushing one a while, then dropping her for a stranger. Not at all popular with boys, though anxious to be. Hard to understand. Will not stand for even gentle advice. What is the right course for a mother and the best father in the world to pursue to guide such a vacillating, temperamental, unformed character in the right direction? —M. S. M.

Answer: All that you say about your daughter are the common symptoms of adolescence. There is nothing the matter with her except that she is 16, and she will get over this in time. Virtually all girls go through this same period of mental and physical unrest when their nerves are raw and their minds upset, when they are irritable and hard to get along with and unreasonable and moody and discontented because they don't know themselves what they want.

It is a hard time for them and a still harder time for their afflicted families, and the best thing for all concerned is for the girl to be sent off to some good boarding school during this period, because when she is among strangers she is forced to exercise a self-control that she does not feel called upon to do at home. And also because it prevents the daily conflict between the girl and her parents which often leaves wounds that never heal.

For the girl thinks she is grown up and has a conceit of her own opinion that she will never have again and a contempt for her parents' attainments and mentality that she will likewise never have again. Also she is determined to assert her own liberty at any cost and defy every effort to control her movements.

On their part, the parents still look upon her as a little child who should be under complete authority and who has no right to any individual thoughts and opinions or to liberty of action. Naturally, these two opposite points of view clash, with the result that during a girl's hobbledehoy stage she is in a perpetual quarrel with her mother and father. She regards them as tyrants and they accuse her of ingratitude, and often a situation arises the outcome of which is great unhappiness for both parties.

You save this disaster by sending the girl off to school, where she is free from mother's affectionate nagging; where she conforms to the school discipline because all the other girls are bound by the same rules, and by the time she returns home after graduation her parents have been accustomed to thinking of her as a grown-up woman instead of a child and are willing to accept her in her new status.

If you cannot send your daughter away to school, the only thing you can do is to possess your soul in patience and then more patience and still more patience in dealing with her. Handle her as diplomatically as you would a Near East country seeking self-determination if you were a delegate to the League of Nations conference.

Use the iron hand in the velvet glove in managing her and don't let her see that you are jollying her along the way she should go. Bite your tongue off rather than make any suggestion to her. Leave her free to do everything that isn't actually wrong and she won't be half as anxious to do them as she is to flaunt her independence in your face. Let her make some mistakes that you could save her from. She needs a few good hard bumps.

Above all, don't take her too seriously. Don't grieve over her faults. They will pass. Her waywardness is her youth expressing itself. Her vacillation, her change of attitude toward her friends, her fickleness are due to her being part woman, part child and torn between the two.

Be gentle and sweet and loving to her. And patient with her. It is a time when a girl needs a mother with the wisdom of the serpent and the gentleness of the dove and your daughter is lucky to have such a one. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I think you are wrong in saying that mothers sacrifice too much for their children, because how can they help it when they are poor? I raised seven children. Did all my baby-tending, cooking, washing, ironing and sat up at nights to sew to make them clothes to go to school in. I gave them all good educations, and now they are prosperous, have their own homes and cars, etc., but they never show me any attention. They take other people to ride, but never ask mother. I don't want my children to give me any money, but it breaks my heart that they never show me any little attentions. But I don't think that the way I sacrificed myself has anything to do with the way they treat me.

—MOTHER.

Answer: Well, if you don't, you don't believe in cause and effect, nor the good old Biblical doctrine that as you sow so will you reap.

Every mother who is a real mother has to sacrifice herself to her children. If she is a poor woman, she has to sacrifice herself to the part of martyrdom, as you have done. That is inevitable, but whether her sacrifices are appreciated by her children or not depends altogether upon herself.

Children are by nature little savages. They are greedy, selfish, grabbing what they want for themselves without any thought of any one else. They have to be civilized. They have to be taught unselfishness and to respect the rights of others. They have to be taught fair play and gratitude.

Evidently you didn't humanize your children. You didn't teach them to be grateful to you because you worked so hard to make them comfortable. You didn't teach them to appreciate the sacrifices you made for them. You didn't teach them that they must make some return to you for all you did for them. You didn't teach them to look up to you and respect you and admire you. You didn't teach them any reverence for motherhood.

If you had, they would not now neglect you. They wouldn't fail to show you the little attentions you crave. They would respect and admire you and couldn't do enough for mother.

Too long has mother monopolized the sacrificing business in the family. She must let the children go 50-50 with her if she wants them to appreciate what she has been through. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young woman 28 years of age, the youngest of eight children who are all married except my eldest brother and myself. I live at home with my mother and this brother and take care of my mother, who is in poor health; do all the housework and never leave home; but my brother will not let me have any masculine company at all or let me go anywhere with a boy. Many nice fellows have wanted to call, but he would not allow them in the house.

I have a sister living in the next block who could take care of my mother, and another sister in a distant city with whom I can stay and work, and she wants me to come to her, but my brother objects. What shall I do?

—LONESOME JANE.

Answer: Go at once, by all means. Your brother is a domestic tyrant, and there is no reason why you should submit to him and let him ruin your life. At 28 you are not so young, and if you want to marry or to learn some good business by which you can support yourself, it is high time you were on your way. A few more years and it will be too late.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Ramblin'

with Marie Theresa

THIS corner learned something else today. There are stills and stills. A local newspaper carried the words "still blast" in boldface type on the front page. Set me to wondering how a blast could be still, and I was about to page the lady who called my word on the expression "petite, tall blonde" when the city editor explained to me that I am somewhat narrow-minded and prejudiced on the meaning of the word "still." He also explained that stills may be used to distill things other than moonshine.

THINGS have come to a terrible place when we have to resort to talking about ourselves. That means that there is no stir anyplace that might mean news.

THE Association of American Cemetery superintendents is concerned with a new problem. Lovers will use a nice shady place in a cemetery for parking places and a place to plight their troths—or whatever the appropriate modern term for making lifetime promises may be, amid the grave stones of burial grounds. In some places cemeteries have been closed at 5 o'clock to avoid such desecration.

It's odd, but it would be difficult to imagine the dead feeling desecrated by lovemaking in their midst. Pledges of life made among tombstones may not exactly fit every mood, but I still believe that such pledges would hold fast when the same promises made in a dance hall or in a parked automobile, or whatever place youth is inclined to make these pledges, would not prove cementing.

THREE articles appear in this morning's paper concerning the duty and essential qualities in parents—three articles that romp all over parents because they have been weighed and found lacking in duty toward their offspring. That is a change from the old stand wherein children were always accused of lack of respect and lack of filial duty toward their elders.

The trend of the modern world seems to be that children are not to blame for the parents they draw, and comment is taking the modern side.

Not so bad at that.

THIS makes the 30th drink for me today and I don't feel any better than I did just previous to the first. Must use up the beneficial effects of the ice water in getting to and from the cooler which is fully 15 feet away. I am sold on the idea that those few of us that are not summering in Colorado, should be served individual coolers placed at the left elbow.

CHIC CHERIE

(Copyright 1928 King Features Synd., Inc.)

Latest Fashions

It is gosh-awful hot and Cherie is going to a dance. If she doesn't fade out into nothing, she is going to a dance. Her dressing has gone as far as a step-in pantie combination of pale green ninon and sheer ecru lace. Next she will have to put on this slip of radium silk with net bands at the hem and at the top. Because she intends to wear the dress on the hanger—a sheer and filmy affair of beige point d'esprit and she must wear a few underthings beneath it. It seems to be done. The dress is new and charming—having a short cape just in back and flounces on each side, but Cherie is wondering at this moment whether the dance is worth it. That reminds her—Emily has a dress!

Emily had a dress, we mean. Cherie has it now. The bodice has a low V in back, another not quite so low in front. The skirt is made of two flounces that droop gracefully down to the floor on one side. The fashion feature of the creation, however, is the pouf and drape of fabric on one hip. The whole thing is made—not of chiffon or tulle or net—but of moire. And that is the reason why Cherie annexed it. It isn't sheer. It isn't transparent and three fourths of the usual amount of underwear for her net frock became immediately unnecessary. She feels quite comfortably cool as she walks off with Andy (right) in a Reboux evening shawl of metallic brocade pulled short and tight, about her.

My Bleach for Tan and Freckles

"I continue my photographic posing all through the summer," says Miss Emily Boyle, noted New York camera model, "and being inclined to tan and freckle, I have to have a bleach that will keep my skin white and flawless and at the same time is harmless.

"For my bleach I use no ready-made preparation, but simply get three ounces of Orchard White at the drug store and mix it with the juice of two lemons. This makes a quarter pint of a perfectly marvelous bleach for a few cents. Rubbed into the face, neck and arms, it bleaches away tan and freckles and makes any dark, sallow or discolored skin beautifully clear and white. This is the bleach all the studio models learn about soon after they begin posing. No ready-to-use preparation can equal it, because, for one reason, you use it while it is still fresh."—Adv.

Small Town No Longer To Hear Stage Stars

NEW YORK, Aug. 1. (INS)—Broadway shows for the smaller cities and towns of the country, with the original casts is the latest plan of theatrical producers. In the flesh and blood? Hardly. Its to be by the talking motion picture and virtually means the end of the theatrical touring compa. ies.

Plans practically completed by A. H. Woods, the Shuberts, William A. Brady and Arthur Hammerstein will confine the activities of the stars of the theatrical world to cities like New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and Detroit but a reproduction of their performances by the "talkies" will be available to cities, large and small, everywhere.

HAD TO WORK TOO HARD

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave Her Strength

Mt. Carmel, Pa.—"After my second baby was born I had to work too hard and be on my feet too soon because my husband was ill. After his death I was in such a weakened and run-down condition that nothing seemed to help me. I am starting the fourth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel a great deal better. I am much stronger and don't get so tired out when I wash or work hard. I do housekeeping and dressmaking and I highly recommend the Vegetable Compound. I am willing to answer letters."—Mrs. Gertrude Butts, 414 S. Market St., Mt. Carmel, Pa.

San Antonio Non-Coms Outshine Superiors in Aviation Records

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 1. (AP)—Although commissioned officers enjoy greater standing in the army than their noncommissioned subordinates, some of the noncommissioned officers, especially in the air corps, have records of accomplishment that outshine the records of many of their superiors.

Master Sergeant E. H. Nichols, instructor in parachutes at Brooks field, for instance, has "jumped" 944 men since he took up this work and a broken leg is the most serious casualty any of them have suffered.

Many of the master sergeants fly hundreds of hours more each year than a majority of the flying officers themselves. Master Sergeant B. F. Nendel at Kelly field, in fact, has taught a great many of the present officers of the air corps what they know about flying.

Master Sergeant Nichols has learned a lot about parachute jumping. One thing that worried him at first was that some of his students would forget to pull the rip cord and open their chute. He has found, however, that they all grasp for it as naturally as a drowning man grasps at everything in sight.

Sergeant Nichols also scoffs at the old theory that it was safer if the jumper counted three before pulling the rip cord. He has found that the safest practice is to pull the rip cord as soon as the jumpers' feet leave the plane.

BANDIT CHASER

Dallas Police to Have Car Equal to Gang Speedsters

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 1. (AP)—Bandits who in the past have liked nothing better than the sport of out-running the antiquated flivvers of the Dallas police department while escaping from the scene of their crimes are due to receive the surprise of their lives within a few weeks.

A bandit-chasing racer, especially fitted for fighting gangsters, soon will be added to local police equipment. It will be the gift of an automobile concern here, which, it is said, has suffered at the hands of payroll bandits and is anxious to gain revenge.

New Model Ocean Plane Successful in Tests

NEW YORK, Aug. 1. (UP)—America's challenge for leadership in commercial transatlantic air travel will be a huge seaplane, capable of carrying 60 passengers and with a greatly extended flying radius, according to John P. O'Connor of New York.

COOLIDGE ENDS FIFTH YEAR

Chief Executive Pleased With His Record

CEDAR ISLAND LODGE, Wis., Aug. 1. (UP)—President Coolidge sat fishing from his canoe on the quiet Brule river today and contemplated with pleasure the twilight of his long political career. The day marked the end of his fifth and last year as chief executive.

Calvin Coolidge's political rise had been steady, but devoid of furore and stir, when he as inaugurated president of the United States on August 2, 1923.

Oath by Lamp Light

His oats of office was administered in one of those simple and dramatic scenes which are the boast of American democracy. His father, the late Col. John Coolidge, a justice of the peace, awakened the vice president who was visiting his boyhood home, to tell him President Warren G. Harding was dead.

By the light of a kerosene lamp on the Coolidge New England farm home, Calvin kissed a Bible that had been in the family for years, spoke his oath, and was president. The father who administered the oath did not live to witness his son's retirement from the presidency.

Today, those close to Mr. Coolidge insist he is pleased with the thought of his exit from political prominence. Secluded in his Wisconsin retreat, he is said to have found a suggestion of what play and relief from official life will bring.

Coolidge Weary

When the president arrived here June 15, he was virtually exhausted from his five years of official cares. He told Dr. Hubert Work, who visited him a month ago, that he had never been wearier than when he reached the Brule.

Mr. Coolidge feels he can rest on the record of his administration. He made it known to press representatives yesterday, that his term in office was his contribution to Hoover's campaign.

No indication of the president's plans for the future had been given. Rumor that he might become chairman of the board of the United Stated Steel corporation, or that he might become president of Amherst college, his alma mater, all have found little substantiation here.

Chemist Sees Warriors Put Asleep By Chloroform in Next World War

CHICAGO, Aug. 1. (UP)—The next war may not be fought with shot and shell, but with chloroform.

The spectacle of a dozen airplanes swooping down over a front line trench and dropping enough of the anaesthetic to lull a whole sector to sleep was described here today as an example of how science is striving to "civilize" future warfare.

Dr. Gustav Egloff, Chicago research chemist and lecturer at the American Chemical society's institute, believes that instead of killing men, it may be possible merely to put them out of action and allow them to recover after they are captured.

"The use of tear gas is a start in this direction," he said. "Perhaps an anaesthetic can be developed of such power that it may be distributed over entire battlefields and cities, enveloping the defenders in quiet slumber—even with pleasant dreams."

A thousand planes, carrying 5,000 pounds of chloroform each, could put all New York or Chicago to sleep, Dr. Egloff said, adding that distribution of the anaesthetic in such large doses would render gas masks useless.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK.—Drivers of motor cars are superstitious. Almost every driver, it is said by those in the trade, clings to at least one superstition concerning his automobile and the few without such ideas are more than counter balanced by those who see an omen at every turn of the road. Thus a body of sign lore has grown up about the automobile that would do credit to a vehicle of much longer history.

Some are old superstitions which the car has merely appropriated to itself, but others are brand new ones it has developed as peculiarly its own. Some motorists are followers of Lady Luck. To drive under the best auspices they believe is to drive under the protection of all the license plates they have used in times past. They may carry these in the car or they may nail them on the garage door. Others demand from their tire repairers all the old nails taken from punctures in the hope that each will be the last.

Many drivers will not park their cars in front of a house that bears the number 13. If you are an observer you will often see a parking space where vacancies are few in front of such a number. If the driver happens to be thinking of something else when he takes the space he frequently abandons it in search of another that does not have the omen of ill luck.

The magic of number 3 is heartily believed in by many motorists. They sigh with relief when the third blowout in succession has been repaired, confident there will be no more trouble for a spell. One frequently hears the driver exclaim at the third blowout, "There, didn't I tell you?"

The venerable horseshoe has its place in the superstitions of the motorist. It causes many a piece of equine footwear to be removed from the road and out of the way of tires. In the Philippines the native driver never thinks of passing a horseshoe by. If the points are turned toward him he pauses in his approach and picks it up, but if the points are turned away he passes it, turns around and comes back so that its luck will flow his way. He may then take it home and nail it over the door or throw it away over his left shoulder.

A great many years ago a crowd of New York sportsmen conceived the idea of running horse races at night under the illumination of electric lights. They went out near Maspeth to do this. It was an experiment and courses filled to a surprising degree. The whole scheme was novel with a good patronage from New York. But it was not long before there was woe among the betters.

Things could happen on the back stretch that could not easily be seen from the grandstand and the patrol judges, it was suspected, were none too careful to check up what some persons thought might be unfair riding or crookedness of a jockey. At any rate the scheme fell through and one of the owners of the plant has since said it was due entirely to faulty lighting of the course.

Since these days, however, the electrical engineers have continued their studies to bring day out of night. The air mail flyers have their steady beacons; searchlights are used at sea and likewise are used for advertising and kindred purposes on land.

Now comes along a clever idea to give the tennis player a chance. He now plays by electric light. The Westinghouse company engineers have erected a set of lights at Elmwood Oval in East Orange. Besides the play by illumination it is pointed out that the cool of the evening does not retard one's play. On this particular court there is a row of five 1,000-watt lamps suspended at a height of 30 feet along the center line of each court. Reflectors distribute the light uniformly and prevent glare in the eyes of the players.

Constitution Needs a Little Study

THE Constitutional Educational association points out that Sept. 17, next, will mark the 141st anniversary of the adoption of the constitution of the United States. In connection with this glad event it urges "a real, genuine 'Study the Constitution Week'."

There is a proposition which we're glad to endorse.

The constitution of the United States is praised more and read less than any similar document in the world, probably. No stump speaker, no perspiring political spellbinder, no rotund convention headliner, would dream of finishing a speech without some reference to it. But this is mostly lip service. Among those who would be pained, shocked and horrified if every provision of the grand old document were actually enforced to the hilt are many of those who are loudest in its praise.

Some of the men who made the constitution and framed its subsequent amendments may not have had a very deep and abiding trust in the ability of the average man to govern himself. The views of Alexander Hamilton, for instance, are fairly well known. But these men had an even deeper distrust of governing classes. No one can read the constitution and its amendments without concluding that the framers were haunted by a fear that the country's rulers might, now and again, try to make democracy a shadow.

Read, if you doubt it, a few excerpts from the constitution:

Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble."

"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause."

"No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

Those declarations are fairly definite and clear. Yet, during the last decade, every one of them has been infringed upon, repeatedly, to the tune of hurrahs from certain defenders of law and order. There has been a tendency to regard the constitution solely as an instrument set up to protect the status quo from sudden and unwise changes. It is, in reality, an instrument to protect the people from an excess of government.

Let's have a "study the constitution week," by all means. And, while we're about it, let's really study it—and see if there aren't places, here and there, where we have forgotten its letter or spirit, or both. We have given it lip service long enough.

Restoring Old Color

THE word "color" is a word that is used very often and understood very little. It is applied to prize fighters, ball players, aviators, and politicians, to historical periods, unusual professions and bygone customs. We say that such and such a man, or such and such a time, was "colorful," even we are not always certain exactly what we mean by it.

The recent race between two Ohio river packet boats is a case in point.

These two steamers held a 25-mile race out of Cincinnati. The race was an unusual feature for the year 1928; but 50 years ago is was one of the regular features of river life. Rival steamship companies used to pit their best boats against one another on special runs, in which windows would be knocked out so that air could steam freely through the cabins, and safety-valves would be tied down for the sake of extra steam pressure—often with disastrous results. And we say that such races, such times, were "colorful," and we lament that they are no more.

We often hear that our inland rivers do not carry nearly as much traffic as they did in the old days. We are mistaken. The barge lines, federal and private, do a huge amount of business. Tugboats hauling big barges loaded to the gunwales with freight are constantly on the move, all the way from Pittsburgh to New Orleans. But the famous old packet boats are scarce. The levee at St. Louis used to be lined with them for blocks; now you can hardly find a half dozen there. It is the color that has gone; we carry our freight now more prosaically than we used to.

This is a net loss, in one way. It has its advantages, of course; the goods that we ship get to their destination quicker than they used to, and with less waste and expense. But a string of black barges does not give the thrill at a hurrying white packet boat gave. Life is less exciting than it used to be.

There isn't any particular use crying over spilt milk. We can't bring the old days back. They are gone forever. Efficiency is our watchword nowadays; and you can't have efficiency and romance together.

The loss of color is one of the penalties we pay for progress. We miss the old canals with their shaded tow paths, the moss-grown old grist mills, the puffing river steamers, the snake rail fences around the old farms, the sailing ships, the stage coaches. Life has grown smoother and less colorful. We have to make the best of it. Now and then, when something like this Ohio river race reminds us of the old days, we can sigh for the vanished past. But that is all we can do.

Bolivia Bans Bull Fights

BOLIVIA has put a ban on bull fights. A government decree says that all public spectacles must be educational. Since bull fights aren't that, whatever else they may be, they must be stopped.

It would be interesting to see how a law would work out in this country. Would a heavyweight championship prize fight, for instance, be classed as educational? It ought to be. An earnest, inquiring young man can learn a great deal about what kind of country this is by the fact that two 200-pound bruisers can go into a ring, tap each other for an hour, and come out with something like a million dollars to divide between them.

The prize fight points its own moral. It is, really, highly educational.

Chuchnovsky Welcome

CHUCHNOVSKY, the Russian aviator who performed so well in rescuing survivors of the Nobile fiasco in the Arctic, has accepted an invitation to visit New York, according to press dispatches.

Here is a pilot whom it will be a pleasure to greet. In his exploits in the northland he displayed heroism beyond that of most men; even among the courageous race of airmen he stands out.

Of course, timid souls will probably fear that to shake the hand of a Bolshevik aviator will cause the foundations of the republic to tremble, and some nitwit or other undoubtedly will try to have his visit called off; but it can be anticipated that America will give him a royal welcome. Bravery knows no international boundary lines.

When A Girl Loves

© 1928 by NEA Service — by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Virginia Brewster is in love with an artist, Nathaniel Dann, but she is tricked into promising to marry Frederick Dean in one year if she fails to earn $100,000 that he alleges her father cheated him out of.

Brewster had lost his fortune in speculation before his death and Virginia is left destitute. She pawns some of her jewelry and Oliver Cutter promises to invest the money for her.

She seeks work, but without success. She discovers that she is being shadowed and suspects that Dean had bribed the agencies not to help her. Oliver gains her confidence and shows her attentions which Niel resents, but then Virginia does not like the familiarity with which his model, Chiri, treats him.

Dean sends Virginia an evening wrap which she returns, telling him how contemptible she thinks his sying tactics are. His threat to ruin Cutter frightens Virginia and she warns Oliver. Then she is lucky enough to get a position which she likes.

The summer passes and in early Septembmer she is amazed when charged by Cutter's wife with trying to alienate his affections. She appeals to Oliver to explain, and demands a settling of her account. Then she learns that he has not made any money for her, and that she is no nearer her hundred thousand goal.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XXXVII

Oliver waved her to a seat. "If we've got to go into all that, please sit down," he said after a few seconds of close inspection of Virginia's features. She had somehow learned enough of his duplicity to require an explanation on his part, he reasoned.

Any attempt at further concealment would be futile, he knew. And he did not regret that things had come to an impasse . . . the affair had dragged itself out beyond the time he had thought would be necessary for the fulfillment of his plans.

In the hours he had spent with Virginia alone in his office he had hoped to find an opportunity to tell her of his infatuation and make her listen to him. But no such opportunity had presented itself. Virginia had remained definitely business-like and aloof.

At times he had been driven to the verge of declaring his passion regardless of her distant manner—a manner her sense of impropriety in the meetings had inspired in her. He had tried little things, such as lingering handclasps, revealing glances, hints of domestic unhappiness, and other formulas for breaking the ice.

Virginia had ignored them on the occasions they had penetrated her consciousness. She did not wish to repeat the mistake she believed she had made about him in the beginning, and so she told herself that Oliver was merely lonely and looking for a sympathy she had no intention of giving him.

Generally she failed to notice his thinly-veiled efforts to inject a wedge of personal interest into their meetings for the reason that she was absorbed in her own problems. Her mind was obsessed with the idea of freeing herself from Frederick Dean's clutches. She had given little thought to anything else when with Oliver.

She had not dared let herself dwell on the cost of failure when in Nathaniel's company, because he read trouble in her face and asked questions. At the office she resolutely put it out of her mind to devote herself to work. But with Oliver she was frankly consumed with anxiety about the outcome of his efforts to help her.

It was just this burning desire each time they met to know if he had made any gain that impressed him with the importance of the money to her. She had not told him what it meant to her, but he knew it concerned Frederick Dean and concluded that the man had some hold on her.

Often he had seen a flash of fear and hatred in her eyes when Dean's name was mentioned, and his wish to possess her was father to the thought that she might listen to him in a last despairing effort to frustrate Dean.

Cleverly and without a pang of remorse, he had let her believe that he was succeeding in his speculations for her and would have the sum needed at the end of the year she had given him to accumulate it. Failing to win before that time, it had been his intention to overwhelm her at the last moment with his bombshell of disaster, by telling her he had lost the entire sum in one gamble.

Then—well, he was prepared to part with $100,000 if she wanted it badly enough.

But Frederick Dean's disclosure of his knowledge of their secret meetings had changed his plans, making it necessary to tell Virginia this lie prematurely.

Just how she had discovered that it was a lie Oliver could not at the moment guess, but he quickly made up his mind that this would probably be the last chance he would have to regain any of his lost ground and he determined to take advantage of it.

Virginia took the chair, steeling herself to hear almost anything from a man who had tricked her so miserably. She wondered at herself for coming back when she was sure she knew why he had done it. But there was a chance that she was wrong about his motive, and if she were she felt she had a right to demand that he tell her his real reason for deceiving her.

Oliver did not leave her long in uncertainty.

"Did you truly believe that I could make $100,000 from $300 in a year's time?" he asked, as though it were the most inconceivable thing in the world.

But Virginia was not nonplussed as he had hoped she would be. "Please remember that I have doubted it many times," she replied calmly, "and you always assured me you could do it."

Oliver looked straight at her, sat down in his chair, placed his elbows on the arms, and leaned forward and said very coolly: "And so I can—on my own terms as a broker. Can't you guess why I've been pulling the wool over your eyes, Virginia? I'd have done worse than that if it would have put you in my power. I wanted to get you in a hole so deep you couldn't climb out without any help.

"I'm madly in love with you. If Jeanie would give me a divorce I'd marry you, but she told me before we were married that she never would be a divorced woman, and she told me so again last night. She'd tear your reputation to shreds if I tried to divorce her."

He stopped for breath and Virginia stared at him, speechlessly fascinated by his complete revelation of his true feelings.

"It's true that I haven't made a red cent for you," he went on, speaking in a voice that vibrated through its efforts to supress its inflections. "You need that hundred thousand badly, don't you? Give half your life for it, wouldn't you? Well, you'll never make it on Wall street—not on the market, I mean, but you can have it.

"I told you not to worry. I'd have let you know in a few days—when you'd have had time to realize that more than half your year is gone and you're broke. But since you've found out now that I never made any money for you there's no reason why you shouldn't hear the rest of it.

"I'm going up to the Adirondacks next week when Jeanie closes the place on Long Island. A hundred thousand dollars is a lot of money, Virginia; I guess you know that. Quite a lot to make in a week, anyway. But if you're ready to go with me next Tuesday I'll give you a check for that amount as soon as we're on the train."

He spoke hurriedly as though in fear she would interrupt him, but Virgina was too stunned to say a word. She had half expected him to confirm her worst suspicions, but she had not dreamed he would still believe that she could have anything but utter loathing and contempt for him. She could not believe he would dare say such things to her.

He waited for her answer and for several long, torturing seconds Virginia sat silent in the grip of shock. Oliver, watching, saw her dilated eyes contract back to normal and her stiffly held body relax slowly. He was not quick enough to grasp the fact that this was the breaking of the spell that held her.

When she jumped to her feet and blazed away at him with white hot words of anger he was taken by surprise. Having failed to realize that she was shocked into silence, he had entertained a growing hope that she was giving consideration to his offer of a fortune.

He shrank back from her fury in alarm while she continued to pour out her wrath upon him. Virginia was mad with despair and disgust, caught in the trap of a man so unscrupulous she could not think of words sufficiently scathing to denounce him as she felt he deserved to be denounced.

"If you only knew what you've done!" she cried at last when words of condemnation failed her. Her fierce anger was abating, giving way to panic. Her hands fluttered up to her throat and clutched it nervously while she swayed dizzily and fell against Oliver's desk for support.

Failure, stark and hopeless, stared her in the face. She knew there was little chance on the market now.

What had she to start with? Three hundred dollars. A little more than she had saved from her salary and perhaps a thousand or two that Mr. Gardner had told her recently she might reasonably expect from the estate, which was still in process of being settled.

But who would help her, with Mr. Dean, and perhaps Oliver now, standing by to persecute her? And would she ever dare trust anyone again?

And, now that he had destroyed her fool's paradise here, would not her enemy attack her from another quarter? These thoughts trailed through Virginia's mind like searing wires drawn across her brain. Her position with the Blue Capella might be the next thing to be torn from her.

But all that was very, very little compared to the final great fear that edged through the others and served definitely to crush her.

Frederick Dean could carry his information to Nathaniel! He could inject the same poison there that he had used to convince Jeanie of an affair between her and Oliver.

Oliver saw Virginia's head drop forward and her face go deathly white. He thought she was falling and sprang to catch her.

As his arms closed round her she lifted her face and stared at him. Oliver saw surrender in her eyes.

McLemore Shifts His Support to Mayfield

AUSTIN, Aug. 1. (Sp.)—Jeff McLemore, who trailed the field in the United States senatorial contest in Saturday's primary election, has avowed his intention of supporting Senator Earle B. Mayfield, incumbent. The Hebronville man made his intention known in a telegram to Mayfield here Monday.

McLemore polled slightly over 6,500 votes.

Mayfield announced he would shortly open his run-off campaign for re-election, and expects to visit the several sections of the state he did not visit during the first primary campaign.

HUSKIES MAIN HOPE OF BYRD

Explorer to Use Dogs In Antarctic Trip

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1. (UP)—Commander Richard Byrd is going to the South Pole with the latest form of transportation—the airplane—but he is placing his final hopes in the oldest form of polar transportation, the huskie dog, it was learned today when Dr. David E. Buckingham, Washington veterinarian, was instructed to select the dogs for the expedition.

Dr. Buckingham, former dean of George Washington university veterinary school, will leave soon for the North Shore region of Canada to purchase 80 picked huskies.

The huskies will be selected for strength and ability to travel fast and far on short rations. The dogs will be assembled and placed aboard the whaling ship Larsen at San Pedro, Cal., about October 1.

Five of the best dogs will probably precede Byrd's airplane over the South Pole to be available in case of a forced landing or if the plane is unable to take the air again because of the rarified atmosphere, it was said.

The other dogs will be held at the base camp on the great ice pack to be used for emergency work in rescues or the establishment of advanced bases.

All the dogs will be between two and four years of age and weigh approximately 75 pounds.

Special dog biscuits, composed of meat and fish, are being prepared under Dr. Buckingham's direction for the polar expedition dogs. Forty tons of the biscuits together with several tons of canned fish will be taken on the Larsen. Each dog will receive two and one-half pounds of biscuits a day. The huskies eat snow instead of drinking water so the biscuits will contain, but little water content.

Packing the dog food will require special treatment as the constant low temperature of the south polar regions—approximately 40 degrees below zero—will cause ordinary sealing solder to decompose.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE (361) A WHEELBARROW

This wheelbarrow is designed to give as little trouble as possible in making. The wood used in sides, bottom and front is three-fourths inch thick, and is ordinary pine. In the center of the wheel, which is ten inches in diameter, place two two-inch bosses. Their purpose is to keep the wheel from rubbing against the axle-bearers.

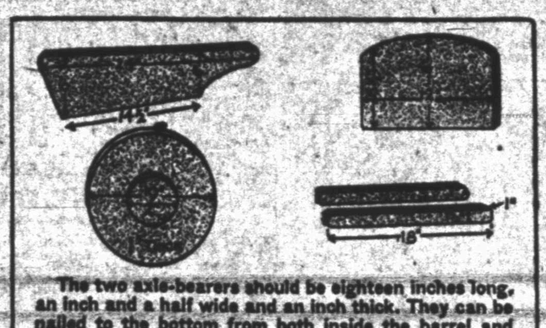

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge. Copyright, 1928-29.

The axle can be made either of quarter-inch wire or a three-fourths inch birch dowel rod. Bore the hole through the wheel half way from one side, then from the other.

Your axle must fit tightly. The wheel is almost sure to be wobbly if you bore the axle-hole straight through, instead of alternating sides.

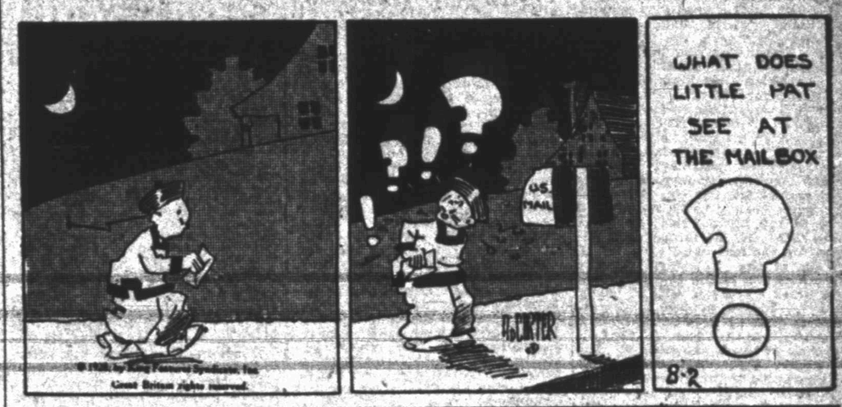

The two axle-bearers should be eighteen inches long, an inch and a half wide and an inch thick. They can be nailed to the bottom from both inside the barrel and out. They would be stronger if screwed on. Wheel should be fit to axle-bearers before the bearers are screwed to the body. Put a little grease on the axle and your wheelbarrow is ready to work. 8-1

Favorite Jokes of Famous People

As Told by Them to

FRANK ERNEST NICHOLSON

By CLAIRE WINDSOR

When Claire Windsor was born in Cawker City, Kan., she was named Olga Krunk. After studying voice for many years, planning an operatic career, she ended in the silent drama, where she twinkles among the stars.

She's fully divorced and thinks a husband is about as useful as another neck. Here's her favorite laugh-provoker:

"I find a lot of humor in an incident that happened out here in Hollywood a short time ago," Miss Windsor told me. "A certain director invited three friends for dinner one evening and the three guests met en route.

"All of them are fairly well-known actors, and one is a Scotchman by birth. I shall disguise him under the alias of Mr. MacPherson.

"Just before they reached the director's home Mr. MacPherson warned the other two: 'Beware of our host's cocktails!'

"Accordingly at dinner the two refused the bubbly liquid offered them, but to their astonishment, MacPherson drank several glasses of it.

"Somewhat mystified, the two tackled the Scot about his action when they were on their way home.

"'What was wrong with his fun water, Mac?' asked one. 'The way you gunned it down it seemed to have been pretty good stuff!'

"'Oh, yes,' said the Scot, 'it was excellent. It wasn't the quality I was warnin' ye against, it was the quantity—I feared there wouldna be 'nough to go around more than once.'"

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

Sneezing and Yawning

Breathing is so essential to life that whenever there is an interference with the air supply, the body takes violent means of remedying the situation. If some particle enters the nose, we sneeze. If it enters the bronchial tubes, we cough. A person who feels himself strangling will go through the most violent contortions in order to secure a good supply of air.

The nose is not only an organ for smelling; it is the guardian of the lungs. If some irritating substance such as small particles of dust or many types of gasses are present in the air that might cause an injury to the lungs, sensitive nerves in the nose report the situation to the brain, which issues an order to sneeze—a process of expelling the air so forcibly as to dislodge and discharge the irritant. The smaller particles of dust in the air we breathe are caught in the filter system of the nose which consists of small hairs and a sticky mucous lining.

Sneezing also protects the body against irritating light. As you have probably noticed when looking at the sun, you will react by sneezing. This is a reflex which covers the eyeball with tears.

Just before catching a cold one usually has a fit of sneezing. This is because of acid exudations which are thrown out through the mucous membranes of the nose, and produce an irritation on the nerve endings.

While many people have probably tried it, no one has yet been able to commit suicide by holding his breath. This is because there is a very sensitive spot in the brain that watches over the amount of carbon dioxide which is present in the blood. If the small percentage of carbon dioxide contained in the blood increases, the sensitive brain cells send an impulse to the lungs which forces them to start working again, and we immediately begin to inhale unusually deeply so that we can expel the carbon dioxide that is irritating the brain cell.

Many of us develop lazy habits of breathing so that our body requires an extra supply of fresh air. Perhaps the air which we are inhaling is not as pure as it should be, or we are tired and do not fill our system with a fresh supply of oxygen. The brain then issues a command for us to stretch and yawn so that by inhaling we will absorb more oxygen, and by stretching we will stimulate our sluggish circulation.

All of us have had the experience of yawning because we see somebody else doing so. We do this because while we should have more oxygen, we do without it because of laziness. The eyes, upon seeing someone else taking in a fresh supply of air, report this to the brain, which, having its attention called to the incident, sends a command to the lungs to absorb more oxygen. This is on the same principal that when we see someone eating delicious food we find our appetites aroused. It is invigorating to go through the form of stretching and yawning whenever you feel tired.

An obstruction in the bronchial tubes produces coughing which tends to dislodge an obstruction in much the same manner that the explosion of gun powder will dislodge and push forward a bullet. The most frequent obstructions of the breathing apparatus are of a mucus or catarrhal nature. These troubles can almost always be remedied by the proper dietetic measures.

Questions and Answers

Question: Mrs. W. H. asks: "Will you please write an article giving your ideas about childbirth (first child) at the age of 39 as compared with the woman of 29? Is it exceedingly risky for a woman to bear her first child after the age of 35? Please also state if you think a woman who has led a sedentary life is taking a greater chance than the woman who has led a more active life."

Answer: Theoretically, it should be more difficult to bear a child at the age of 39 than at 29, but by actual observation I have found that the woman at the older age can have almost a painless childbirth if she will diet and exercise properly during pregnancy. Some of the easiest births I have observed have been with women around 40 who have trained properly for this important event in their lives.

Question: Constant Reader asks: "Would eating too much albuminous foods such as eggs cause one to have eczema? What foods are to be avoided by one suffering from this trouble?"

Answer: The use of an excess amount of any kind of food, such as proteins or starches, may be a contributing cause in the development of eczema or any other skin disorder. The trouble comes mostly, however, from using wrong combinations of all kinds of food. Study my weekly menus, and you will have a weekly lesson in food combinations. Also, send a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope for the article on "Eczema."

HERBIE COBB BLANKS STEERS TO BEST ROBERTSON, 4 TO 0

SPUDS SCORE RUNS IN 4TH

Timely Clouting and Fast Fielding Take Opener

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 1.—Herbert Cobb, whom the scouts have been giving the look-see this summer, would have opened the eyes of any ivory hunters who might have seen today's pastime here. The slender North Carolina righthander chucked superlative ball to shutout the Steers in the opener of the two-day series.

The score was 4 to 0 and the Spudders won in the fourth by tallying all their runs in that round off Charley Robertson, the no-hit notable. Except for that inning Robertson also hurled scintillating ball.

O'Brien Gets Four Hits

Except for O'Brien, who maced four hits, including two doubles in as many times at bat and two singles, [illegible] Hack Miller when pinch-h[illegible]n the ninth, Cobb baffled the Steer batsmen. He possessed superb control, passing only one, and struck out six. His shutout game was greatly endangered only in the ninth when the bases were filled, but he fanned Bert Ellison for the last out.

Four of the Spudders' knocks were bunched in the fourth inning. Fitzgerald started it with a single to left. Eldred popped to Morse. Jenkins doubled to center, his long smash hitting the fence. Fitzgerald stopping at third. Swenson singled to center, Fitzgerald scoring and Jenkins going to third. Stanton singled to to right, Jenkins tallying, and when Rosenthal threw the ball into the dugout Swenson scored and Stanton went to third. Smith flied to Gingiardi, Stanton scoring.

Stanton Steals Third

Fast fielding, particularly by Turgeon, Fitzgerald and Jenkins helped Cobb blank the hostiles.

One of the features of the game was a steal of third base by Stanton.

By winning today the Spudders kept pace with the league-leading Buffs, who defeated San Antonio, and still are two games behind Houston.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

THE HEAVYWEIGHT championship is without an incumbent for the first time in a quarter century. Gene Tunney has retired for good, the "for good" being construed as you may see fit. Tunney has hung up the golden gloves forever, he says, and it may be that he has. Gene Tunney is a strange young man. He has done many strange things in his career in pugilism, particularly after winning the championship of the world. Knowing Tunney, his aversion to many obnoxious features of boxing, some of them real and others of his own fancy, I would not be surprised if Gene has quite the ring forever.

There will be no great regret over Tunney's retirement. He was not a popular champion. He was cold toward the public and the public was cold toward him. The game will not suffer for his absence. Indeed, the new interest that is certain to ensue in the hunt for a new titleholder, should add impetus to the sport. But the man must be accorded certain honors. He was clean. Fistiana never saw his equal in the example he set for right living. He is intelligent. And while he caused no great public interest in the sport, he did arouse in many hitherto indifferent to boxing at least a passing fancy toward the game. He did much to elevate boxing and I have an idea that his influence in that respect is, in the future, to balance the indifference manifested toward boxing during his two-year reign as champion.

TUNNEY QUITS as champion of the world even with the game. Boxing made him a millionaire and a man of international importance. But Tunney, it is reiterated, gave to boxing a new and higher standing as a sport. He has a perfect right to retire. In fact, if he persists in his declaration to never fight again, he will be justifying the belief that he is a man of more than average intelligence as far as boxers go. Tunney was in boxing to make important money quickly. He had no love for the game and his attitude toward it and its people was not a pose. He was sincere in his purpose. He will not miss boxing and the adulation of its followers. And boxing will be as well off without him.

THE SCRAMBLE for a successor to Tunney will be similar to that feverish hunt for a "white hope" that followed Johnson's victory over Jeffries. Every young man of good health weighing around 200 pounds and of sufficient intelligence to know the difference between his left and right hands will be regarded as a potential champion. And it would not be surprising, for that matter, if the next champion of the world isn't some chap now unknown, who will arise with meteorlike rapidity and fight his way to the top as did Jack Dempsey.

There isn't a heavyweight fighter today apparently fit to wear the mantle as champion of the world. Dempsey? Jack, too, persists in his declaration that he never will fight again but rumor has it that he will emerge next spring to again seek the title. But Dempsey is "through," at least as a fighter worthy of wearing the crown. Heeney showed his unfitness as a challenger, and the Rock of Down Under was as good as the other so-called contenders, Sharkey, Risko, Scott, Mays and Loughran.

POSSIBLY, FOR LACK of better, one of those fellows will win the title. But the next worthy champion of the world is unknown today, or at least is not considered for Rickard's elimination tournament. Possibly he is a Texas cowboy, a northwestern lumberjack, an eastern collegian, a mid-western clerk. But whoever and wherever he is, he is somewhere, and fame and fortune awaits him and his discoverer.

IMBUED by all the interest over the Olympic games this writer is training to enter the three-em dash.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—While the Hooverizing was going on in Kansas City we took a day off and went out to see the greyhound races across the Missouri.

A greyhound is an animal that hasn't made up his mind to be a dog and is too proud to be a frankfurter's nephew.

Greyhounds are very fast dogs. They could catch up to wolves but they're too smart to do that.

It was the first time we ever saw greyhounds race. In fact, it was the first intimation we had that the town dog catcher was now a prominent figure on the metropolitan turf.

There are eight dogs to a race. The track is a quarter-mile oval.

A mechanical rabbit is sprung and the hounds chase it around the track snapping at it in an effort to break their teeth.

We saw a dog catch the rabbit and get a free electrical massage. The first dog to finish the lap is the winner provided that there are no dogs ahead of it.

There were dogs racing down in Miami several winters ago. But their owners ate them after that real estate boom.

Ever since greyhound racing started the fleas are wearing spurs and calling themselves dog jockeys.

There is no betting on dog races. You can buy a two-dollar share in a greyhound and become a co-operative owner. If the dog wins you go to a window and sell your share back to the man for 10 or 12 dollars.

You cannot call this gambling. Yes, you could. You could call it gambling if your dog won.

There is a way to beat the game. Bet on the rabbit.

All the dogs look alike which means a race just as exciting as a swimming contest between beans in a bowl of soup.

Still, it's a lot of sport and we're glad the greyhounds are here for it gives a poor man a chance to keep a racing stable under the porch steps.

U. S. WINS VAULT AND DISCUS

PADDOCK LOSES HIS LAST RACE

American Defeats Continue In Other Runs

By ROBERT J. PREW
Universal Service Special Cable

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1. (US)—Three American flags fluttered on the victory pole at the Olympic stadium today for the first time, heralding a one-two-three victory for the United States in the pole vault. Just previously the Stars and Stripes flew on the center and third poles in celebration of the discus throwing result in which Bud Houser was first and James Corson was third.

This, from the American viewpoint, was the only consolation afforded in another bad day. The reverses were the elimination of Paddock in the 200 meter and the defeat of Anderson in the high hurdles. Paddock went completely off color in the last race of his fine career and after he had been put out in the semi-final and had dressed, he received hundreds of sympathetic handshakes from his European admirers.

The University of Washington's great hope in the high hurdles was just beaten on the tape by Sidney Atkinson of South Africa in one of the finest hurdle races ever seen. The six finalists seemed to sweep most of the 110 meters in a straight line which was only broken when the last hurdle was reached and an extra bit of class began to tell.

Hahn Fails to Finish

As it was, only the judges on the tape could tell the order of the next four after Atkinson.

Other outstanding incidents of the day were Lloyd Hahn's failure to finish in the 1,500 meter flat, and Paavo Nurmi's first big steeple chase.

The famous Finn is not likely to forget his experience. At the very first hazard he tripped on the fence and fell flat on his back in the water amid a roar of laughter from the crowd. He scrambled out and soon took the lead, holding it all the way to the tape.

The only women's event today was the 800 meters in which Florence MacDonald qualified for the final where she will encounter strong runners from Germany and Canada.

Alibis for Runners

The succession of failures of the American team in track events remains unbroken and the victories in the field events provide no consolation for the party aboard the President Roosevelt. All kinds of reasons are given in the American camp for these disasters which are unparalleled in American Olympic history. Among the alibis are these:

The climate has a stifling and enervating effect.

The runners are not properly housed in the cramped quarters of the liner.

The smell from the canals is bad.

The teams were picked by the machine method and the right men are not here although General MacArthur in a message on the opening day described the team as the finest body of athletes ever sent to the Olympics.

The spirit of the runners have fallen so low that there is absolutely no confidence in the ability of the American competitors to win the remaining track events which include 400 meters, 1,500 meters, and 5,000 meters flat and the 400 meters and 1,600 meters relay.

A victory by Jois Ray in the Marathon next Sunday is needed to make the President Roosevelt anything like a happy ship for the homeward trip.

Fake Tickets Uncovered For McLarnin-Loayza Go

DETROIT, Aug. 1. (AP)—With more than $50,000 worth of tickets for the Jimmy McLarnin-Stanislaus Loayza boxing contest here Thursday already sold, officials of the Olympia arena, promoters of the bout, tonight were informed by federal agents that counterfeiters have been distributing tickets for the show on a wholesale scale.

Her Husband Is No Golf Widower Although She Betters Men's Par

MRS. MELVIN JONES

CHICAGO, Aug. 1. (AP)—An hour after Mrs. Melvin Jones, of Olympia Fields Country club, turned in a 73—one over men's par—in the medal round of the Chicago championship golf tournament she was busy in her home shelling peas and stringing beans for her husband's dinner.

The vegetables she had gathered from her own garden, largely cultivated by her.

Matrimony is her vocation; golf, an avocation.

Three other women have duplicated 73; none has done better. Mrs. Jones' 73 over Olympia number 1, with its 6,682 yards of tantalizing terrain, is considered a more outstanding accomplishment than the 73's of Mrs. Miriam Burns, Glenna Collett and Virginia Van Wie.

Olympia 1 is a more difficult course than the Pebble Beach, Calif., links on which Mrs. Burns shot her 73, of St. Augustine, Fla., and Ormond Beach, Fla., where Miss Collett and Miss Van Wie scored 73's.

Mrs. Jones on her second round was one under men's par of 36 for the first nine. She ended up with two eagles and five birdies, as women reckon it, or four birdies for men's par. She used 36 strokes on the greens, sinking two putts of 15 feet and one of 20. Once she chipped 30 yards into the cup.

The pretty golden haired, shy Chicago woman has been a tournament figure for more than 10 years. Last year she won the Florida state title and later was runner-up to Marion Turpie of New Orleans in the Southern tournament. She is much better as a medal than as a match player. Her friends say it is because she is too feminine—too tender hearted and sympathetic when an opponent is in difficulty.

Mrs. Jones is the wife of the executive secretary of the Lions International. During the winter they live at Valparaiso, Fla.

Mays, Lauded by Gene, Is Defeated by Schaaf

BOSTON, Aug. 1. (UP)—Ernie Schaaf, promising young Boston heavyweight, stepped up another notch in the boxing world tonight when he won a decision over Harold Mays of Bayonne, N. J., sparring partner for Gene Tunney. Tunney had picked Mays as one of the best coming heavyweights in the game.

Both fought a clean, hard fight. Mays started out with a spurt taking the first two rounds with ease, but then the Boston boy walked in and kept the battle in his own hands the remaining eight rounds.

Is Your Account Appreciated or Tolerated?

Credit Is the Badge of Honesty

Credit came in with civilization—when man began to have faith in his fellowman. To revert to a no-credit plan would be equivalent to reversion to savagery. Germany lost the faith of humanity when she abused the faith all nations held in The Hague and other treaties.

The entire financial system is based on the faith men have in each other's honesty. YOU are a more or less important cog in the financial system of the country.

If you pay your bills promptly the whole set of machinery works right—if you don't pay promptly the machinery is disrupted and a certain cog may have to be removed.

Credit is for your convenience.

It is the easiest thing in the world to get—if you play square—the hardest if you shirk your responsibilities.

Credit is based solely and absolutely on past performances.

If you have always paid your bills promptly you can obtain credit easily anywhere in Wichita Falls or the United States.

It will make you feel better—it will strengthen your credit—and the financial machinery will function properly.

If you have evaded payment, even though your intentions are ever so good, you will be listed far and wide as "bad pay" and your credit is gone.

The Credit Men's Association keeps a record of the way you pay your bills.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 1. (AP)—The recent tendency to increase estimates of the crop, combined with favorable weather reports and a bearish view of end-season statistics, appeared responsible for a further decline of $2.50 a bale in the cotton market today. December contracts sold off to 19.44, or 53 points net lower. Closing at 19.43. The general market closed easy, at net declines of 51 to 56 points. After showing net losses of about 27 to 33 points in early trading, the market steadied and covering became more active after publication of the weekly review of the weather bureau, which was commented upon as rather less favorable than expected. Demand tapered off on the bulge, and the market weakened again under a flurry of more or less general selling which followed publication of the end-season figures from New Orleans.

The statement placed the world's carryover of American at 5,298,000 bales and the world's consumption for the season at only 15,838,000 bales, including linters. This last figure was considerably under estimates recently discussed in the trade here and evidently disappointed early or recent buyers.

Port receipts today 240 bales. U. S. port stocks 563,631. Exports for the day and season so far 14,746.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 1. (AP)—Trading was extremely active on the cotton market here today although unfavorable cables, favorable weather and a generally favorable weekly weather and crop summary combined to keep price trends lower.

The decline was materially aided by the appearance of Secretary H. G. Hester's annual report which placed consumption for the year at 15,838,000 bales and the carry over at 5,298,000 bales. The carry over was considerably in excess of expectations by the trade.

There was one sharp spurt of 21 points following receipt of reports of the settlement of labor disputes in the Lancashire district. Reports that weevil damage was more widespread than has been indicated contributed to the upgrade movement. October, after opening 10 points down at 19.50 declined to 19.09 or 51 points down, rebounded 21 points and closed at 19.08, the low point showing a net loss of 52 points for the day. The general market closed barely steady at net decline of 42 to 52 points.

The opening was at a decline of from 10 to 17 points on the strength of Liverpool cables that were 5 to 8 points worse than due. October touched a new low at 19.08, Dec. 19.04 and Jan. 18.98. The close was at or near the lowest.

Port receipts 240. Exports, 14,746; port stocks, 353,150; year ago 910,532. Stock on shipboard, 32,248; year ago 85,865. Sales 5,512; year ago, 12,757.

Montgomery Ward Forges Ahead As Tight Money Unsettles N. Y. Stocks

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service Financial Expert

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Montgomery Ward was the outstanding feature of a more active, unsettled, stock market today. It rose steadily into new high grounds as most other issues slipped off under the influence of tight money. The renewal rate of 7½ per cent attracted out-of-town funds and the session had not progressed long before money was loaned outside of regular channels at 7 per cent so that the official rate went to that level before the noon hour. Professionals kept pounding at industrial leaders, however, concentrating their attention on steel and General Motors. Motors lost 3 points for the day and steel over a point. Corn Products was one of the small group of individual stocks to move forward rapidly as buying was influenced by announcement of merger. Rails remained extremely dull and slipped off somewhat while the oil shares held fairly steady in quiet trading.

Montgomery Ward's further rise was accomplished coincident with announcement of sales showing gain for July of 16 per cent as compared with a year ago. The improvement in the company's business has fulfilled all expectations. However, it will remember that the stock was more than 100 points lower when the good accumulation was told of several months ago That buying was for interests most responsible for recent advance. They have tremendous profits and are not the kind to try for the "last eight" or even for the last several points before taking profits. Sears gained less than Montgomery Ward, although its report was more favorable, showing gain of 25 per cent as compared with 1927. Woolworth and others were favorably influenced by the strength of Montgomery Ward.

Kroger moved a little higher as it became known that important announcement may be made in the near future. It is expected to concern the addition of several stores to the company's chain, which should mean further increase in earnings. Postum dropped off, however, due to pool operations against an option. American radio was extremely quiet, although the special dividend action which was first told of here some time ago should be announced before very long. Victor added to recent gains. Brunswick Balke appeared under quiet accumulation as belief was expressed that it would go into the Victor organization eventually.

Continued pounding at steel unsettled the entire group and was caused by disappointment that earnings for the six months had not run over $5 a share. Those expecting such showing had forgot the poor business of April. The mid-week steel reviews strengthened belief that the current quarter will bring larger profits than either of the first two periods for they told of tendency to demand to expand and of indications of higher prices for certain products soon. The automobile group was held back by the pressure on General Motors, accompanying which was widespread report that directors are in disagreement as to such action and actual decision will depend on what the finance committee advises.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Aug. 1. (UB)—After all deliveries of wheat slid off today to sell at new low prices on the crop, strength in corn induced a covering movement and most of the losses were regained. Wheat finished 1¼@1¼c lower, with the September at $1.19⅝, and December at $1.23⅝. Private crop estimates were construed as bearish by the trade.

Notwithstanding the removal of the July future, corn continued active. Prices declined slightly in the early trade, but ensuing short covering advanced quotations sharply. September showed the most strength, reaching the dollar mark. Corn closed ⅝@3¼c higher. Oats finished ⅛@¼c lower to ⅛c higher and rye was up 1¼c.

Estimates by private crop experts placed the winter wheat crop at 540,000,000 bushels to 595,000,000 bushels and the spring wheat crop at 272,000,000 bushels to 303,000,000 bushels. To this bearish factor was added the pressure caused by weak cables. Liverpool was due unchanged but closed ⅛@1¼c lower, and Buenos Aires was 1@2c lower at midday.

Two estimates of the spring wheat crop in the three western provinces of Canada were also released. H. C. Donovan of Logan & Bryan placed the crop at 510,000,000 bushels, and George C. Bryant of Jackson Bros., Boesel & Co., makes the total 411,559,000.

Demand was fair in the cash wheat market.

Oats prices were a little easier, but on the whole showed little change. Private reports averaged 1,433,000,000 bushels for the new crop. In rye an easier opening was followed by a firm market with most of the strength due to export interest. Crop estimates suggest a yield of 43,000,000 bushels.

HALL GAMBLES HIS FREEDOM

'Lifer' Loses When He Chooses Thrill

tory. It tells also of the charm which Hall possessed.

Hall, tried here on a charge of assault to murder, refused the counsel the law provides, electing to defend himself. He was convicted of the charge. Previously he had been convicted on robbery charges in Oklahoma. Ben P. Allred, district attorney, learning this, called in the habitual criminal act and obtained a sentence of 99 years.

tained a sentence of 99 years. It was the first conviction under the new state law which makes mandatory a sentence of 99 years upon conviction of a third felony offense.

The identity of the man held by authorities for the shooting of the prison guard was established Wednesday by W. E. Mead as Hall, and not Tucker, as at first thought.

Further identification was made by Harvey Williams, lodged in the city jail here, following his recapture Tuesday. Williams was captured as the last of the eight men who escaped at the time the guard was killed.

Confronted with a picture of Hall Wednesday, Williams declared, "That's the fellow Tucker, who was in the fight with the guard."

"Tucker," Williams said, "had been at the farm only a short time. He was a nice looking fellow and played a guitar. He could sing well, too. Although he had been there but a little while, he made a lot of friends. He was a cheerful fellow and everybody liked him.

"And say," Williams continued, "that boy Tucker certainly could draw pictures and write poetry. He was a whole show by himself."

Hall, known as Tucker, was in squad one at the convict camp, Williams said, explaining that only those with comparatively short sentences were assigned to this squad.

Tells of Break

Williams, who told a Record News reporter the story of the prison break, said he did not think the escape was planned but was made up on the spur of the moment.

"I was standing off to one side when the guards and a few of the prisoners started shooting," Williams declared, "and after the guard was shot everybody got excited and I slipped away.

"But you can't blame a man for that. I was sent up for five years. Anyone else would have done what I did. I didn't take part in the fight."

The description of Tucker given by Williams recalled to officers the strange accomplishments of Hall. While in the city and county jails here for several months after his capture by Ellis Summers and Homer Bentley after a running gunfight on the Seymour road, Hall decorated all available space on his cell wall with pictures.

He was chief entertainer among the prisoners because he could sing well and could play a guitar, Sheriff Bralley said.

Will Allen, finger print expert at the city police station, sent finger prints and pictures of Hall to authorities at Huntsville Wednesday, so that identity of the man held for the guard's death might be definitely established.

Hall was caught early on the morning of Nov. 13, 1927, after a running gun battle with Summers and Bentley, in which a man later identified as John Keyes, former Oklahoma convict, was killed.

The two officers had passed the Panhandle filling station at Hays street and Seymour road shortly after midnight when they saw the two men at the station door. When the officers, who were on motorcycles, turned around and started back toward the station two men leaped into an automobile and started away. Summers and Bentley pursued them.

Battle With Officers

After a chase of more than half a mile the two men were captured.

The two officers ordered them to "put 'em up."

"We've got 'em up," came the response from the shadows, and as the officers advanced one of the men opened fire. One of the bullets struck Bentley's belt buckle. The other man attempted to use a gun also, but his pistol, according to the officers, snapped six times.

When Summers and Bentley returned the fire, both of the men fell to the ground. Keyes was dead, but Hall, who gave his name as Ray Smith, was not injured.

The two men later were identified by C. C. Kiersey as former convicts in Oklahoma, where Kiersey had been guard.

Prior to the shooting of Keyes a series of depredations had been made upon motorists by an unidentified man who robbed escorts of their money and their girl friends.

Items found among Keyes' luggage were identified as things taken on a number of these hold-ups.

Trouble for Jailer

Following his arrest and confinement in the county jail Hall figured in a number of breaks and attempted breaks. On one occasion he flooded the jail with water. At another time he attacked the entire sheriff's force in the sheriff's office, slugging Sheriff Bralley over the head, eluding one deputy after attacking another and almost escaped before a well aimed pistol butt crumpled his hand. On a third occasion he assisted in a "party" in the jail which resulted in the almost complete destruction of all portable articles.

In his moments of good behavior, according to officers, he wrote poetry, played the guitar, sang and made plans for further breaks from the jail.

When Hall left Wichita Falls for the pentitentiary he sent The Record News a poem of about 12 verses, in which he blamed "evil companions" for his plight. He also promised Sheriff Bralley he would "see you later."

"Let's make WHOOPEE" is the rage in Hollywood, L. A., the Loop, and 42nd and Broadway. All of which simply means that the good time centers of America have a new meaning for "whoopee," and that is a big time, a wild partee, a big celebration, or any kind of a celebration such as folks indulge in on the spur of the moment.

Then, there is the age of innocence, which Hollywood is broadcasting to the entire world. The movie producers are pointing to their new wampus baby stars, to Sally Plipps, Sally Eilers, to Alice and Marceline Day, to Janet Gaynor, June Collyer, Nancy Drexel and some others. They are saying that Hollywood is truly the place of innocence, and that the popular pastime is "you chase me, and I'll chase you," and that such sophisticated games as "post office" are beyond the pale—as yet—to the new crop.

The truth of it is that you can't burn the candle at both ends and get away with it. The news stories of the past few years have been true stories when one remembers the Wallace Reids, the Virginia Rappes, the 1,001 divorces, and other bright red sensations. A change was bound to come, and the only way it could come was for the generation to pass.

Youth, freshness and innocence will come and be the rage, for a time at least. Pola Negri is heading for Europe with her Paramount contract ended. Where is Theda Bara?

Public taste has changed and there will be a reaction in two or three months that will reflect it tremendously.

Catch 'em young; keep 'em cute, and give 'em nothing if you can get away with it, will be method followed by the producers for the next few years. That always keeps 'em sweet and fresh. Not too fresh if they are given contracts that allow them a certain good standard of living but contracts that don't allow too wild a standard.

Talkies are the rage of the day. Foreigners, investigating American film conditions, say it is simply a passing fancy. They are inaccurate as usual when summing up "American conditions" after a "deep and intensive" survey of some 5 and 7-8 minutes. The movies with sound are here to stay, and they won't supplant the silent movies any more than the movies supplanted the legitimate stage or the vaudeville. The public likes variety, and the talkies, being the newest, hold the spotlight. It is all amusement, and each has its own place, even though there are certain conditions which are constantly changing.

Don't pass up the opening of "Glorious Betsy," the most complete of the talkies which is opening Friday at the Strand.

Trees of City in Good Shape, Say Experts

Trees in the city are in better shape than they have been for a long time, according to C. C. Bunnenberg, superintendent of parks.

Last year the park department sprayed 30,000 trees between the sidewalks and the street. The result was that bag worms and other pests which destroy trees were practically eliminated. This year only a few complaints have been received.

RALLY CALLED TO HALT BOLT

Quick Action Is Planned Against Dissention

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 1.—Foundations will be laid in a statewide Democratic rally here August 11 for the party's fight to keep the voters in line for its nominees in the November general election.

Governor Dan Moody will attend, he said, and take part in the statewide rally, which was called by Jed Adams, national committeeman.

The entire fight to prevent Texas voters from scratching the name of Gov. Alfred E. Smith as nominee for president will grow out of this meeting. It probably includes an extensive speaking campaign, in which it is known that Gov. Dan Moody will take an active part.

With results of last Saturday's primary indicating that over 200,000 voters in the 1926 primary stayed out of this year's balloting, and that an additional 170,000 votes had been cast for Thomas D. Love, avowed bolter of Governor Smith's nomination, Democrats were considering the extent to which this vote would be cast for Hoover in November. It was further conceded that some of those who gave Gov. Dan Moody his plurality over three other candidates may refrain from supporting Governor Smith in the general election.

The statewide conference here will likely adopt the slogan which kept Democrats in line when Governor Miriam A. Ferguson was nominated. That slogan was "Support the ticket—from president to constable," and in the prospect of campaign work being needed again this year the slogan has already echoed from the camp of the "regulars."

Committeeman Adams' call of the conference for August 11 indicated the party leaders will not even wait for the second primary to get out of the way before beginning the Democratic fight to keep the state overwhelmingly behind the party's nominees now as in the past.
