Hijack leader sought; Body washes ashore

WASHINGTON (AP) — The whereabouts of a Palestinian leader wanted by U.S. authorities in last week's hijacking of an Italian cruise ship remained a mystery today after Yugoslavia reportedly allowed him to leave the country in defiance of U.S. wishes.

The State Department said Monday it had not been informed officially by Yugoslavia that Mohammed Abbas, 38, had departed the country, but a Palestine Liberation Organization official and the Yugoslav news agency said Abbas had left the country for an undisclosed location.

In Syria, meanwhile, the body of an elderly man that washed ashore near the port city of Tartus was brought to Damascus to determine whether it is that of Leon Klinghoffer, 69, of New York City, who was killed during the hijacking.

One western diplomat in the Syrian capital said that "American and other western diplomats are busy trying to identify the body," a process he estimated would take several hours.

The hijacking of the Achille Lauro on Oct. 7 has left in its wake a series of bitter diplomatic disappointments for the Reagan administration with the apparent decision of Yugoslavia to join Italy and Egypt in rejecting American appeals for cooperation. All three countries are regarded as friendly to the United States.

The State Department said it would be "extremely upset and disappointed" if the reports of Abbas's departure from Yugoslavia were true. The United States had asked Yugoslavia to detain Abbas pending a formal request for his extradition.

"We've not had success in Yugoslavia at this moment, although discussions have continued," FBI Director William H. Webster said Monday.

Webster said the FBI has two teams of investigators in Italy. He said he did not know to what extent U.S. authorities will be able to join Italian authorities in investigating the ship hijacking. The four Palestinians are being held by Italy and face prosecution.

Abbas had flown to Yugoslavia on Saturday from Italy, where there were indications his abrupt departure has provoked a government crisis. The Italian decision has drawn a "firm and severe" protest from the United States.

Attorney General Edwin Meese said "there is no safe haven as far as we're concerned. We'll pursue Mr. Abbas as we would any other fugitive. He is an international criminal."

The Reagan administration's sense of triumph last Thursday over its success in capturing the four Palestinian hijackers has been dissipating in the face of the setbacks.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, ignoring U.S. attempts to put relations back on a friendly footing, said Monday he wanted an apology for President Reagan's decision to intercept with F-14 jetfighters the Egyptair airliner that was carrying the four Palestinians.

Implicitly criticizing Egypt, Italy and Yugoslavia for letting Abbas go free, Secretary of State George Shultz said Monday, "When we get our hands on terrorists, we have to prosecute them." Terrorists, he said, are "animals."

Fires threaten Malibu homes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At least a dozen wildfires, fanned by hot, dry winds blowing out of the mountains, raged across Southern California today, charring at least 8,000 acres and 10 houses, forcing evacuations of 2,400 people and killing a man who tried to defend his home, authorities say.

One thousand firefighters from Ventura County in the west to San Bernardino County in the east battled the fast-moving blazes.

Three fires burned at least 5,600 acres near Malibu, 40 miles west of downtown Los Angeles, one of them racing down brush-covered hills to the sea and forcing about 400 residents and 2,000 students at Pepperdine University to flee. The students were allowed to return to the campus, which overlooks the Pacific Ocean, about four hours later, said Mike Adam, a school spokesman.

"There are a lot of moving vans on the highway," said Kathy Brown at her Malibu Realty Co. office. "You usually see moving vans and horse trailers in the area when there is a fire."

Flames were fanned by hot, dry Santa Ana winds, heated over the Mojave Desert and pushed through mountain passes into populous areas by a high-pressure ridge over the southwestern states.

National Weather Service meteorologist Peter Wilensky said the winds were dying down "a little bit" Monday afternoon, but said advisories were expected to remain in effect throughout the night.

Residents along the Pacific Coast Highway, jammed with traffic from sightseers, cheered helicopters that came in low to drop loads of water on the leaping flames.

Thirty people were being sheltered at an American Red Cross evacuation center, Red Cross spokesman Herman Keyes said.

The possibility of arson was under investigation in Malibu, Los Angeles County Fire Department Capt. Gordon Pearson said.

Emotional moment

Midlander Larry Joe Ingram, center, is overcome with emotion after his truck, rear, collided with a 1982 Buick Monday, sending the car's two occupants to the hospital. The accident occurred about 12:15 p.m. when Ingram was heading east on Loop 250 and Julie Bollinger, Route 10, Box 10178, failed to yield the right-of-way as she drove the Buick south on County Road 1140, according to Department of Public Safety reports. Her 3-year-old daughter Kimberly was listed in critical condition this morning with head injuries, according to a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman, and Ms. Bollinger, 25, was listed in stable condition.

Five Midlanders among nation's 400 wealthiest

From Staff and Wire Reports

NEW YORK — There are du Ponts, Rockefellers and Gettys on the list of the 400 richest people in America, but there is also a former cowboy star, the publisher of a skin magazine and the creator of "All In The Family."

Five Midlanders made the list this year, down from six last year and eight in 1983. Topping the local list were Cyril Wagner and Jack Brown with holdings worth $450 million apiece, according to Forbes Magazine, which will publish its annual "Forbes 400" ranking of the richest Americans in its Oct. 28 issue.

Other Midlanders on the list were John Lee Cox and Carlton Beal, each credited with $300 million, and Clarence Scharbauer Jr., with $200 million. Falling off the list was Clayton Williams Jr., who last year was listed at $150 million. Oil was cited as the primary source of the Midlanders' wealth.

Who is the richest man in America? It is Sam Moore Walton of Bentonville, Ark., according to Forbes.

Walton, founder of the Wal-Mart discount stores, has a net worth $2.8 billion. He was second last year.

Gordon Getty, who topped last year's list with $4.1 billion, fell to 15th with $950 million — his share of the family's oil trust, which he recently agreed to share with other family members.

The second-richest man in America is H. Ross Perot of Dallas, who sold his holdings in Electronic Data Systems to General Motors Corp. last year and is worth $1.8 billion.

Ex-MC instructor 'lashed out' at class

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Former Midland College economics instructor Dr. Jay Dee Martin admitted in federal court on Monday that he had lashed out at a seemingly "surly" night class that was not "very desirous of working" and had hoped to motivate the class into taking his course seriously.

His word choice, such as the use of the words "sucks," "hell," "damn" and "bullshit," in that June 19, 1984, incident ultimately got him fired. A year earlier, he had been issued an administrative warning to refrain from using such "unprofessional" and "inappropriate" language — obscenities and profanities — in the classroom.

Martin, who is suing Midland College President Dr. Jess Parrish, MC Vice President Don Hunt, MC Dean Raymond Yell and the MC trustees, is seeking to vindicate his reputation, to gain unspecified actual and exemplary damages and to be assured of his U.S. Constitutional rights of free speech.

Midland College maintains that his conduct was unprofessional and was without the classroom dignity expected of faculty members.

Martin, 40, said he was frustrated with his economics class, that he had missed some class sessions due to the death of his father-in-law and that the class, not given benefit of his usual orientation, seemed averse to classroom industry.

"I came in behind. I didn't get to establish the environment that I usually establish," said Martin, who now is an assistant professor of economics at Longwood College in Virginia.

Jail plans 'on hold' for new study

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

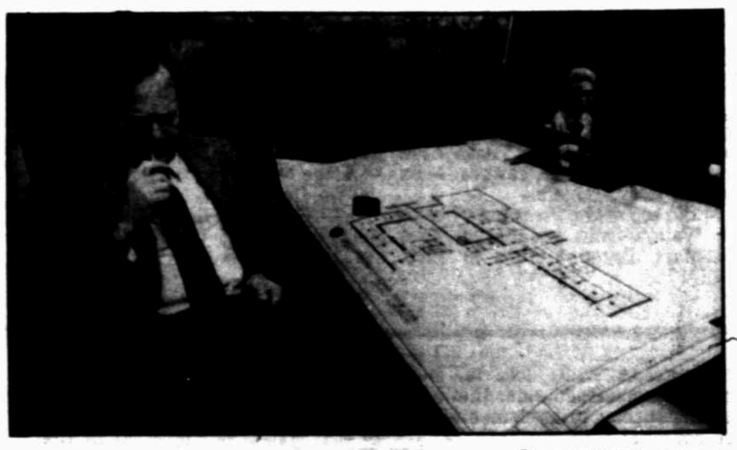

Midland County Commissioners voted to put a hold on further renovation efforts of the county jail while agreeing to consider a module jail system as a temporary back-up measure, at Monday's meeting of the commissioners' court.

After accepting the 21-sheet design development drawings of the $2.9 million renovation proposal from architect Walter Pate, the commissioners asked that further work be halted.

"We requested that all architectural work be stopped until the commissioners have time to 're-group' and digest all this," said Commissioner Durward Wright.

Pate's plans, which exceeded the original estimates by nearly a half-million dollars, would result in the addition of 48 more beds to the current jail. Also discussed were the plans for the $801,000 expansion of Culver Youth Home, which included $333,000 for the expansion and $168,000 for the Juvenile Probation area. Pate had pared the project to 5,262 square feet from earlier plans for a 6,447 square feet facility.

The jail and Culver projects totaled $3.4 million, which exceeded a $3 million bond issue allotment, approved by Midland county voters on May 11. His latest estimates do not include a study which was also part of the bond issue.

Ron Jeap/Reporter-Telegram

Midland County Commissioner Win Brown examines final design development drawings for the Midland County Jail renovation, which was temporarily halted at Monday's meeting.

Pate, in an effort to convince the commissioners of the project, added that "some of the work could be done by county forces, including cement work and fencing at quite a substantial savings."

The architect, who earlier had stated that the plans were "as realistic as we know how to make it," reminded the commissioners Monday afternoon that his firm had fulfilled its duties.

"We were charged with three things," he said. "With increasing the number of beds and rectifying the quality of the jail conditions at the least possible cost, in order to comply with requirements by the Commission on Jail Standards."

The meeting took a new turn, however, when the county commissioners expressed an interest in considering a "satellite" modular jail system, presented by Patrick Graham of Modular Jail Systems Inc. of Humble.

Graham persuaded the group to give him two weeks to evaluate the Midland County situation and make another presentation before them at which time they would further consider the project.

"I've been monitoring the Midland County dilemma for some time," said Graham. "At this point my company has a solution to that dilemma."

Graham was referring to the April 23 remedial order by the CJS which resulted in a capacity limit of 85 inmates in Midland County jail. Since that date, the county has spent more than $100,000 in transporting and housing prisoners in West Texas county jails in Crane, Snyder, Sweetwater, Garden City, Stanton, Muleshoe, Plainview and Colorado City. Estimates put the cost at $312,000 per year if the situation continues.

Graham suggested that the commissioners give him two weeks to come up with a "get acquainted" presentation or study with preliminary drawings for the court to review.

Higher education committee hears reports, focuses on future needs

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — With their eyes and ears firmly in the present, the 23 members of a blue-ribbon higher education task force Monday prepared to help catapult Texas into the 21st century.

Although they spent most of their four-hour meeting listening to briefings about the current state of Texas' public universities, junior colleges and professional schools, the members of the Select Committee on Higher Education knew they must focus their 15-month study on the future.

"We want you to tell us what kind of educational system a 21st century society will need — and then tell us what we have to do to achieve such a system," Gov. Mark White told the committee. "If this state has a future — of any consequence — we will march to that future with an educated populace."

Reagan reportedly pressured Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — Pressure from President Reagan induced Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to cancel talks at the last minute with two PLO representatives, newspapers on both ends of the political spectrum reported today.

Mrs. Thatcher's government said Monday that the meeting was canceled because the PLO representatives failed to fulfill a promise to renounce violence and recognize Israel.

But the London Daily Telegraph quoted U.S. congressional sources as saying Mrs. Thatcher's mind was changed by lobbying from Washington following the Palestinian hijacking of the Italian cruise liner Achille Lauro. One of the American passengers aboard the ship died during last week's ordeal on the Mediterranean.

"Strong lobbying by the Reagan administration was credited in Washington yesterday with changing Britain's mind on holding talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization officials," said the paper, which supports Mrs. Thatcher's government.

"Congressional sources said President Reagan had made his views known to Mrs. Thatcher 'in no uncertain terms' especially in the light of the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro," said the Daily Telegraph.

Another London paper, the Mirror, which backs the opposition Labor Party, reported: "A hot line phone call from President Reagan to Mrs. Thatcher torpedoed talks planned between Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe and PLO officials."

Denis Healey, Labor's foreign affairs spokesman, said in an interview Monday night with Independent Television News: "The Americans were getting very tough with the government. So were the Israelis and the Jewish voters in Britain."

Britain's surprise move delighted British Jews, outraged sympathizers of the Arab cause and dealt a blow to Mrs. Thatcher's hopes of unjamming the Middle East peace process and encouraging America to hold similar talks with the PLO.

The British Foreign Office said the meeting was canceled because the PLO members refused to sign a previously agreed-upon statement. It said the statement condemned terrorism and called for the recognition of Israel's right to exist.

The two PLO representatives — Mohammed Milhem, a former West Bank mayor, and Anglican Bishop Eliya Khoury — were to have met with Howe, along with Jordanian Deputy Prime Minister Abdul-Wahab Majali and Foreign Minister Taher el-Masri.

MIT professor to receive Nobel

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Franco Modigliani of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who is credited with pioneering theories of personal finance, including how people save for old age, today was awarded the 1985 Nobel Prize in Economics.

Modigliani's work "explains what we see and helps us understand the world," Prof. Assar Lindbeck, a member of the prize committee, said after the award was announced.

The Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences, which made the award, said Modigliani, 67, had developed a life-cycle hypothesis of household saving and formulated theorems used to determine the market values of firms and capital costs.

"I obviously am very pleased," Modigliani said this morning by telephone from his Belmont, Mass., home. "It's always nice to hear that the work I've done is appreciated and regarded as important."

Modigliani was born in Italy and is now an American citizen.

JAIL

Graham told the commissioners that the modular jail could be finished "in 120 days from deal to completion" and would be attractive.

"We can make the exterior look just like the county court house," he told the group. "It would not be a trailer-like atmosphere. It would not be an eyesore."

He stated that his firm could fabricate, certify and set up the project on a rental basis with option to buy, but added that he would consider buying back the jail, when commissioners inquired about how to dispose of it should a new jail be built in the future.

Although Graham did not provide a cost estimate, earlier estimates by Painter put the price at $675,000 to $700,000 for a 50-bed unit.

Graham said that he would agree to a five-year contract with the county.

"The average facility is taking most counties from 18 to 24 months clear on up to three years to build," he said. "It would probably be five years before the county's plans for a new jail would come to fruition anyway."

Graham also suggested that the modular jail system could be incorporated into part of a permanent facility in the future by the very nature of its design.

Commissioner C. Wallace Craig, however, balked at such a proposal.

"My concern is to make this as secure, as economical but as removeable in terms of money spent as we can," he told Graham. "Anything permanent would be in contrast to our master plan."

Painter also questioned the project.

"A satellite facility is something we need to consider since plans for the renovation are temporarily at a halt," he told the court. "But how are we going to pay for the staffing of it? And is it large enough to house 50 to 100 federal prisoners so we can pay for the facility?"

Painter added that he did not like the idea of having a satellite facility away from the courthouse.

"I'm not much in favor of moving away from the courthouse," he said. "I can live with it, but I'm not in favor of it."

Painter estimated that if the county decides to start housing federal prisoners in order to pay for the facility, it would require a minimum of 75 beds and "preferably 150."

Wright brought the discussion to a head.

"We're in a crisis," he told the group. "We've spent over $100,000 on transferring prisoners and that number is spiraling. It makes sense to me to transport prisoners two miles to our own backyard rather than to Muleshoe or who knows where else."

Wright added that the modular jail "would help buy time" and give the county time to explore other opportunities. He stated that monies for the jail would not come out of bond funds and would affect taxpayers "minimally, if at all."

Just as the commissioners were to vote on the proposal, a former prosecutor, Robert Freeman, objected to the project.

"It's hard enough to get prisoners to the courtroom when they are needed right now," said Freeman. "As a former prosecutor, I know. It will slow up the process and make it more difficult for attorneys to visit prisoners."

Wright suggested that the problem could be alleviated be keeping those prisoners needed in court in a holding area at the downtown facility.

"We see this as a temporary (four to six years) solution while Midland regroups and makes up its mind on what it wants to do," he said. "With all of the brick walls we've run up against, this is the first thing that makes sense."

The court then agreed to consider Graham's proposal in two weeks.

Also approved at Monday's meeting was the reappointment of Walter B. Holton Jr. to the 1986-87 Midland Central Appraisal District's Board of Directors.

MARTIN

He had taught at Midland College for eight years and had been cited as an excellent teacher by students and administration. "I was really playing catch-up ball, in the vernacular of sports," he said.

MARTIN SAID the class members seemed "really resentful" that they "were going to have to work."

"They were several disruptive elements in the class." He cited Midland County Deputy Sheriffs Richard Sexton and Tim Rogers, who both after the June 19 incident wrote letters to Dean Yell to complain more about about Martin's allegedly belittling of the class than of his use of obscene or profane language.

Martin said he told the class that its "attitude sucks."

"If you don't like the way the course is taught, there's the darn door," he said he told the class.

"I did think it was important that they get serious. I thought maybe I could turn the class around. I never did put a student down."

He described Sexton as "a marginal student at best." He said Sexton, who had a "veneer" of knowledge of economics, "argued long and hard." He said Rogers "missed a lot of class." Sexton earned a "C" in the course, and Rogers made a "D."

"I really felt Mr. Sexton and Mr. Rogers had an axe to grind," Martin said. "Mr. Sexton thought I had put him down.... I was in an authority position in the classroom."

Martin was issued an administrative warning in 1983 after a student, Mona Decker, had complained of his use of words which she found offensive.

Martin suggested that he might have been singled out by the administration in 1982 after he responded to an editorial in the college newspaper, "El Paisano." The article said that faculty members who used profanity "were doing the work of Satan."

Martin said that "for some stupid reason" he elected to respond in writing to that charge.

"I THOUGHT THAT was harsh, because I didn't think I was doing the work of Satan," he said.

Witnesses called by Martin's attorney, John Barnhill of Crosbyton, included Parrish, Hunt, Yell, Dr. William Morris, chairman of the MC Cultural Studies Division and Martin's supervisor, and several of Martin's former students.

After the 1983 incident, Hunt said Morris had recommended that Martin be given a "warning" to cease using obscene or profane language in the classroom and that he not be placed on formal probation. Hunt noted that the college has no policy on probation. "We had an instructor who came and asked to be placed on probation," he said.

Hunt said foul language used in the classroom would "inhibit classroom instruction."

"It's not professional or ethical," he said. "I don't think it is right to use profane language in the classroom at anytime.... We pay them (instructors) good salaries to be ethical — not to use profane language." He said the college does not have a written policy on use of profane or obscene language.

Hunt said he is offended by the use of profane words. "I hope I don't (use them). I try not to."

In his testimony, Morris noted that Martin had telephoned him after the June 19 incident and told him that he had "dressed down" the class.

"He was agitated and upset because the incident had happened," he said, but Martin did not think he had done anything wrong.

UNDER CROSS-examination by MC attorney Harrell Feldt, Morris said Martin admitted that he had used unsavory words in the classroom. Morris made the distinction between profane and obscene words. And Feldt noted that profanity dealt with blasphemy, waste and sexuality.

Morris said a word such as "bullshit" "is still obscene whether they find it objectionable or not." He said "common sense" guidelines are extant in language use at Midland College. "I don't know of any written guidelines." Morris said some sexually-explicit words and phrases, including slang, properly may be used in classes dealing with human sexuality. However, he suggested that such word usage would not be appropriate were it not germane to the subject matter.

Yell said use of profane or obscene language in classroom was "inappropriate." Parrish noted, for example, that the word "sucks" is "situational." He offered this. "A baby sucks his thumb."

Martin said he was unaware that "sucks" additionally had a "dirty, filthy" connotation. "It apparently isn't in my lexicon of profane words."

Nancy Smith, one of Martin's former students, had characterized the Martin summer class as "very lazy. We were all there to be spoon fed." She said she was an A-B student.

"He (Sexton) was really a belligerent person — difficult person," Ms. Smith said, would give an "irritable-type response," and didn't know the subject matter very well. "Dr. Martin was very knowledgeable."

Susie Tucker, another former student of Martin, said she was not offended by Martin's language.

"He was one of the highest-quality instructors that I came in contact with at Midland College," she said.

Jack McCullagh, another of Martin's students, said Rogers and Sexton were disruptive. "They wore beepers." He said Martin knows economics "front to back."

Others students said they were not offended by Martin's language.

Parrish, MC president, said he had cautioned Martin in 1983 not to use profanities or obscenties in the classroom.

Parrish said Martin asked him, "What if I slip?"

"'Jay Dee,'" Parrish said he told Martin, "'we're not going to be listening outside your classroom for a slip.'"

Yet, the MC president noted that Martin was on a "warning" that he could be terminated or suspended if he continued to use profane or obscene language in the classroom.

RICHEST

There were 14 billionaires on the list, up two from last year. The "poorest" of the richest are worth $150 million.

Gene Autry, the cowboy star and businessman, was listed at $150 million. Robert Guccione, publisher of Penthouse magazine, is worth $220 million. Norman Lear, who gave the nation "All In The Family," is worth $175 million.

Malcolm Forbes was rich enough to make his own list, but his net worth is a mystery. It is estimated by other publications at between $200 million and $500 million, but Forbes himself says, "I don't know."

Media holdings were hot, making billionaires of John Kluge and S.I. and Donald Newhouse and adding newcomer Rupert Murdoch, whose publishing empire has earned him $300 million.

Because oil prices fell, seven Texas oilmen who appeared last year failed to make it this year, including Williams. Four Rockefellers were dropped, although eight remain. Death and financial setbacks removed 53 other names, as well.

The list provides a fascinating picture of the country's richest people.

The average age is 62.5, and the average net worth is $335 million. Only 165 of the 400 built their fortunes without inheritances.

There are 14 immigrants, 78 women, and at least eight high school dropouts. Forty-one of the men and 37 of the women are unmarried, and 113 have been divorced.

The youngest is 28-year-old Abby Rockefeller Simpson of New York, worth an inherited $200 million. The oldest is 93-year-old Dorothy Bullitt of Seattle, who is worth $275 million from broadcasting.

Not all of the wealthy are well known.

Frozen pizza and canned Chinese food helped Luigino Francesco Paulucci, 67, make the list with $350 million. James Jaeger, 37, accumulated $175 million with automotive radar detectors. And William Norman Pennington of Reno, Nev., and William Gordon Bennet of Las Vegas have made $430 million in casinos — as owners, not gamblers.

At the top of the list is the 67-year-old Walton, who opened his first Wal-Mart discount store in 1962. Most of the 745 stores today are located in small Sunbelt towns.

"We believe in having fun in business," Walton says, and he lives up to his statement. He danced a hula on Wall Street last year when profit goals were met, and he has been known to lead cheers at company pep rallies.

But he still lives modestly in Arkansas, where he drives an old car, hunts quail and has his morning cup in a local coffee shop.

Perot, 55, of Dallas, was fourth on the list last year.

David Packard, the 73-year-old chairman of Hewlett-Packard, was third with $1.5 billion. Margaret Hunt Hill of Dallas, who inherited money from her father, H.L. Hunt, was fourth with $1.4 billion.

A second of H.L. Hunt's daughters, Caroline Rose Hunt Schoellkopf, 62, was fifth with $1.3 billion. Samuel I. Newhouse Jr., 57, and brother Donald Newhouse, 56, share a $2.2 billion fortune.

Seven others are worth at least $1 billion: David Rockefeller, 70, of New York City; Henry Lee Hillman, 66, of Pittsburgh; John Werner Kluge, 71, of Charlottesville, Va.; Harry Helmsley, 76, of New York City; Marvin Davis, 60, of Denver and Beverly Hills; Warren Edward Buffett, 55, of Omaha; and Leslie Herbert Wexner, 48, of Columbus, Ohio.

Six states have more than half the super rich. Eighty live in New York, 49 in California, 44 in Texas, 23 in Florida, and 21 in Delaware and in Illinois.

Among those who were on the list in 1984 but failed to make it this year were Apple Computer founder Steven Jobs, publisher and New York Mets owner Nelson Doubleday Jr. and John Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono.

James Haller Ottaway Sr. did not make it, either, despite a fortune of $147 million. The New York publisher was 401st.

EDUCATION

With rumors and recommendations to close or merge some schools flying, House Speaker Gib Lewis promised that the committee would not conduct a witch hunt. "At the same time, the intent of this committee is not to whitewash those universities that are not spending the taxpayers' money as wisely as they possibly could and not to whitewash those institutions that are duplicating programs and...implementing programs that should not be implemented," Lewis said.

White drew comparisons — both negative and positive — between this task force's objectives and the 1983-84 Select Committee on Public Education. "When you begin to get discouraged," White told the new panel's members, consider that committee's success in implementing its controversial reforms.

But the 1983-84 panel "met in an atmosphere of crisis," the governor said. "There is no similar crisis in higher education today," he said, but that also makes the job more difficult.

"Any good mechanic can repair a car that is about ready to break down. But it takes a special kind of mechanic to prepare a fairly well-tuned automobile for world-class competition."

Higher Education Commissioner Ken Ashworth and Legislative Budget Board Director Jim Oliver outlined for the committee the structural and financial details of the 97-institution, 700,000-student, $2.1 billion system of public colleges and universities in Texas. The enormity of that system left most committee members with the understanding that their job would not be an easy one.

"It's going to be a very large and challenging task," said Midland oilman William Blakemore II. "Our challenge is to put Texas in a position of higher education that the state merits. There's no reason that we shouldn't be tops in the nation."

The committee will meet again Oct. 31 in Austin to "find out where we think the state will be by the end of the century," chairman Larry Temple said. After that, Temple plans public hearings across the state.

UT honors Nobel geneticists

DALLAS (AP) — Respect that Nobel Prize winners Michael S. Brown and Joseph Goldstein shared for each other's opinions and intellect was the key to carrying out the research that won them the prestigious prize, Goldstein said.

The two University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas faculty members worked together as interns at Massachusetts General Hospital from 1966-68 and were reunited in 1972 at Southwestern Medical School.

"We get along well, and even though we argue about an experiment...those things turn out to be trivial," Goldstein said. "So in the long run I think we respect one another's opinion and intellect and we made this discovery simultaneously and together 12 or 13 years ago, and it was an exciting discovery."

Monday, Brown, 44, and Goldstein, 45, were announced as winners of the 1985 Nobel Prize in medicine for their discovery of cell receptors that affect the uptake of cholestorol-containing particles called low density lipo-proteins (LDL), which circulate in the bloodstream.

The Nobel Institute said the discoveries of the two could lead to new treatment of cholesterol-related atherosclerosis, which can lead to heart attacks and strokes that claim hundreds of thousands of lives each year.

"It may one day be possible for many people to have their steak and eat it too," the Nobel citation said.

The researchers were attending a conference in Cambridge, Mass. when they learned of their award, which carries a $225,000 cash prize that they will split.

Michael Brown, left, and Joseph Goldstein, molecular geneticists from the University of Texas, Monday in a news conference at the Whitehead Institute in Cambridge, Mass., discussed research that won them the 1985 Nobel Prize in medicine.

They returned to Dallas late Monday and were met with praise from about 100 colleagues, local officials and medical students at the Health Science Center.

"We hope this opens up further avenues for drugs to be developed that will keep cholesterol levels low," Brown said.

Donald Seldin, heralded by the doctors as the man responsible for bringing them to the medical school, said Brown and Goldstein accomplished three objectives with their research.

The research "contributes to knowledge and truth," said Seldin, chairman of the Department of Internal Medicine.

Secondly, Seldin said, both worked from "scratch in a context that was difficult" and achieved their discovery.

Finally, as "citizens" of Southwestern Medical School, the two continued to teach students as they researched.

"They structure this school as much as the buildings do," Seldin said.

Goldstein is a native of Sumter, S.C., who received his B.S. degree in 1962 from Washington and Lee University and his M.D. in 1966 from Southwestern Medical School.

Brown is a native of New York City who received his B.A. degree in 1962 and his M.D. degree in 1966 from the University of Pennsylvania.

Stormie Jones owes life to Nobel winners

DALLAS (AP) — The Nobel Prize-winning medical research by two doctors from Texas was instrumental in helping Stormie Jones, the first heart-liver transplant patient and the only one to survive such an operation.

The double transplant on Valentine's Day 1984 was heralded as a major step for science. Dr. Michael S. Brown of University of Texas Health Sciences Center said his research with Dr. Joseph Goldstein made the transplant possible.

On Monday, Brown, 44, and Goldstein, 45, were announced as winners of the 1985 Nobel Prize in medicine for their discovery of cell receptors that affect the uptake of cholestorol-containing particles called low density lipo-proteins (LDL), which circulate in the bloodstream.

Absence of these LDL receptors links the ills of Stormie to others, including the late jogging enthusiast James Fixx, who died of a heart attack.

Brown and Goldstein participated in the diagnosis of the condition of Stormie, a Cumby, Texas, girl who was 6 when the transplant operation was conducted at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh.

The child suffers from a genetic disorder that prevented her body from processing cholesterol, a disease that afflicts about one in a million people. Many of those who suffer from the illness die before the age of 10.

Stormie, now 8 and living in Dallas, had already had two heart attacks and two bypass operations at the time of the transplant.

The child and her mother, Susie, 29, on Monday were among those with the highest praise for the prize-winning research of the two physicians.

"Stormie is doing extremely well. Unless you knew who she was you wouldn't know anything was wrong with her," her mother said. "There are just normal little problems."

Dr. Cara East, a physician who works with Stormie, said that "clinically, she has a very good life."

"She goes to school. We have almost no restriction on her, except for contact sports. She has no limitations. She can run, play, do anything she wants."

The only setbacks, Ms. East said, are minor side effects the child suffered from drugs given to prevent rejection of the organs she received.

Betty Lou Beets was sentenced to death by injection by an Athens, Texas, jury Monday for killing her fifth husband.

Jury gives Beets death sentence

ATHENS (AP) — The courtroom drama of Betty Lou Beets' trial in this East Texas city closed with a dark, fateful conclusion.

Mrs. Beets, who had been hospitalized overnight on Friday after the jury returned from 6¼ hours of deliberations and convicted her of killing her fifth husband, showed no emotion when the jury recommended death by injection after 45 minutes of deliberation Monday morning.

The former barmaid had been "prepared for the death sentence," her attorney E. Ray Andrews said.

Prosecutors contended Mrs. Beets killed Dallas Fire Capt. Jimmy Don Beets and buried him under a wishing well in her yard so she could collect $100,000 in insurance and pension benefits. She will join two other women on Texas' death row.

"I feel real bad about it. I never had a client sentenced to die before. I hope and pray I did all I could," Andrews said.

District Attorney Billy Bandy said he was pleased by the verdict.

"It's the only just verdict. I was confident the jury would find the woman guilty," Bandy said.

Mrs. Beets also has been charged with the slaying of her fourth husband, Doyle Wayne Barker, a construction worker who disappeared in November 1981, 11 months after marrying her. No trial date has been scheduled on that charge.

Mrs. Beets married her fifth husband in 1982. In August 1983, Henderson County authorities conducted a search to locate Beets' body after reports he drowned in a boating accident.

Heart pills were found in his boat on the lake, but the firefighter's eyeglasses in the boat aroused investigators' suspicions.

Authorities said they dug up the yard at Mrs. Beets' home after getting a tip. They were looking for Beets' body, but also found Barker's body, buried beneath a tool shed in the back yard.

Mrs. Beets' 32-year-old daughter, Faye Lane, 32, of Balch Springs, said Monday, "I know my mother didn't do it. She never laid a finger on me when I was growing up, and I know down in my heart she is innocent."

Mrs. Beets' son, Robert Branson II, testified that he helped his mother bury Beets, but kept quiet to protect her. Mrs. Beets blamed the killing on her son, saying he shot Beets during an argument.

Telephone industry wants government to hang up

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It's time for the U.S. Justice Department to take its nose out of the telephone industry and let "marketers, managers and engineers design the nation's telecommunications system," the chairman of one of seven Bell holding companies says.

The Justice Department, said William Weiss, has "set itself up as the arbiter of what is best for the future of the industry."

"Legal skirmishing has plagued the industry far too long," he said Monday in a speech to about 3,000 delegates attending the United States Telephone Association convention.

The justice department, Weiss said, is operating from a "pre-divestiture, pre-competition mindset."

"Clearly, that stifles the very competition the now outdated MFJ (modified final judgment) was intended to encourage," Weiss said.

The telephone industry, he said, was restructured to eliminate dominance by any one player.

Now that task is complete, "the (justice department) has simply added one more layer of pervasive regulation."

"The divested Bell companies are being regulated more vigorously than ever," Weiss said.

STATE in brief

In Southeast Dallas, water 'unfit to drink'

SEAGOVILLE (AP) — As Dallas commercial activity increases, water quality at Sandbranch community in southeast Dallas has decreased, say residents of the impoverished neighborhood.

The once green pasture land has now become acres of gaping holes as sand and gravel used in Dallas construction projects is scooped from the area. The community is veiled in a fog of dust as hundreds of gravel haulers move through each day.

The only water available to residents is highly contaminated and unfit to drink, county officials say.

"I was appalled to see modern man surviving on this water," said David Lang, a bacteriologist for the Dallas County Health Department. "The types of bacteria there indicate the possibility of typhoid and dysentery."

Lang said samples from Sandbranch wells revealed the types of bacteria found in fecal matter. He said he believes surface water contaminated by the hog grazing is entering the wells.

As an unincorporated community, Sandbranch does not have zoning or health ordinances and county government does not have the authority to create such restrictions.

Rick Loessberg, Dallas County grants administrator, is trying to help Sandbranch residents create their own water district, which could apply for state grants to raise the estimated $315,000 needed to build a community well and filtration system.

Texas students crash

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Four Texas college students escaped injury when a single-engine plane lost power and crashed along railroad tracks Sunday night in surburban Detroit, authorities said.

The Piper plane, owned by LeTourneau College of Longview, Texas, left the Troy-Oakland Airport in Oakland County about 6:50 p.m. EDT and immediately lost power, said Birmingham Police Officer Larry Solomon.

The plane crashed a short time later on railroad tracks in the Detroit suburb of Birmingham, Solomon said. The occupants, all men ranging in age from 21 to 24, walked away from the accident.

"They were pretty lucky," the officer said. "They still don't know what caused the power failure."

Solomon said the plane was en route to Texas after picking up a passenger at the airport. A department statement didn't identify the plane's occupants and Solomon said he didn't know their names.

Gennusa state artist

AUSTIN (AP) — Regan Gennusa, former University of Texas football player, has been named Texas State Artist for 1985, Speaker Gib Lewis announced Monday.

Gennusa, who now lives at Dripping Springs southwest of Austin, was chosen by a panel of state representatatives and senators from a panel of 12 finalists.

Gennusa attended UT-Austin after being named all-state quarterback at Port Arthur High School. He was a split receiver for the UT Longhorns and led the team in receptions in 1966 and 1967.

Upon graduating from UT with an art degree, Gennusa became art director for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. He designed the first two white wing dove stamps issued by the department.

Since 1972 he has devoted his art primarily to wildlife indigenous to Texas.

Racing application filed

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Proponents of the proposed Cimarron Park in Creek County have joined the fray to become the first major pari-mutuel horse racing track to be established since wagering on horses was legalized in Oklahoma by a statewide vote in 1982.

An application for the proposed $52 million racing facility near Mannford in the Tulsa area was filed Monday with the Oklahoma Racing Commission. It was filed shortly before a deadline passed for filing applications.

Incorporators for the project include Ted Fisher, Sapulpa real estate investor; veteran horse trainer Walter Merrick of Sayre; and entertainer Roy L. Clark.

In a related development, principals in a proposed major race track venture on state school land in southwest Oklahoma City announced they were abandoning their efforts.

Balanced budget plan threatens tax overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — Renewed concern over federal red ink and the prospect of prolonged negotiations between the House and Senate on a balanced-budget plan have left President Reagan's tax overhaul proposals fading from the congressional agenda.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., sent the administration a reminder of that Monday when he issued a statement saying a lengthy bargaining session over the budget plan along with a crowded Senate agenda could well doom any chances for passing major tax legislation this year.

Dole also fired another shot at the administration for its handling of the situation.

The balanced budget plan passed by the Senate last week is attached to legislation raising the government's borrowing authority — the national debt limit — to more than $2 trillion. The government has reached its current borrowing ceiling of $1.824 trillion and Dole was using the threat of government checks bouncing to spur action on the budget plan.

However, with no cash on hand and Congress delaying the borrowing authority increase, the Treasury Department turned last week, for the first time, to the borrowing authority of the Federal Financing Bank to cover a $5 billion auction of notes.

The bank was created in 1973 to manage the government's debt. The auction last week temporarily eased the crisis, but raised Dole's ire.

He lashed out again Monday saying, "Like Christopher Columbus discovering the wrong continent, the Treasury Department may be just discovering an unwanted consequence of its unprecedented decision to tap into the Federal Financing Bank to finance the deficit."

Dole added, "By taking the pressure off the House to increase the debt ceiling, Treasury may well doom the tax bill."

Treasury Department officials had indicated that with Congress' failure to pass a new debt ceiling, the bank was the only alternative to a government default.

But there has been some grumbling among Republicans that the Reagan administration is so intent on gaining passage of the tax bill that they went ahead with the emergency auction despite the misgivings of Treasury officials.

Republicans say the emergency auction eased debt limit pressures on Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, which has jurisdiction for debt limit and tax legislation.

Negotiations on the budget plan begin at midweek with Rostenkowski leading a delegation of 48 House members. It is expected there will be nine senators participating in the conference, aimed at writing a compromise version of the legislation.

Rostenkowski, whose panel also has been occupied with trade legislation, canceled one tax drafting session last week so he could focus on the budget and debt issues.

In all, 14 senior members of the House's tax-writing panel will be directly involved in the budget bargaining, meaning that the longer the talks on the budget proposal, the longer will be the delay in returning to work on the tax package that Reagan has promised the public as a Christmas present.

Despite Reagan's self-proclaimed "fall offensive" to gain action on tax overhaul and his repeated calls for enactment this year, there are indications that administration officials recognize the budget plan may cause complications.

The Senate budget plan would set statutory ceilings on budget deficits — now running at about $200 billion a year — beginning with $180 billion in the current fiscal year.

Inmates release guards after 15 hours

LUCASVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Four inmates who held two guards hostage for 15 hours at a maximum-security prison released them unharmed and surrendered early today after the convicts' demands were read on radio, prison officials said.

The drama occurred in a cellblock housing some of Southern Ohio Correctional Facility's most dangerous inmates. It became apparent the incident had ended peacefully when members of a SWAT team that took up positions during negotiations with the prisoners left the compound.

At least three of the prisoners left the compound in two vans with a state police escort. One of the demands was that they be moved to another prison to escape what they feared would be harassment.

Five inmates originally were reported by to be "actively involved" in the hostage-taking, but prison spokesman Robert Prosser said after the ordeal ended that the fifth inmate was not a willing participant.

Three other inmates in the cellblock when the guards were seized also were unwilling participants and had been released earlier, he said. One was released at about 10:35 p.m.in exchange for sandwiches and soft drinks for the remaining inmates.

The inmates also demanded additional commissary privileges, more soap, radios for their cellblock, better medical treatment and a wider range of reading materials.

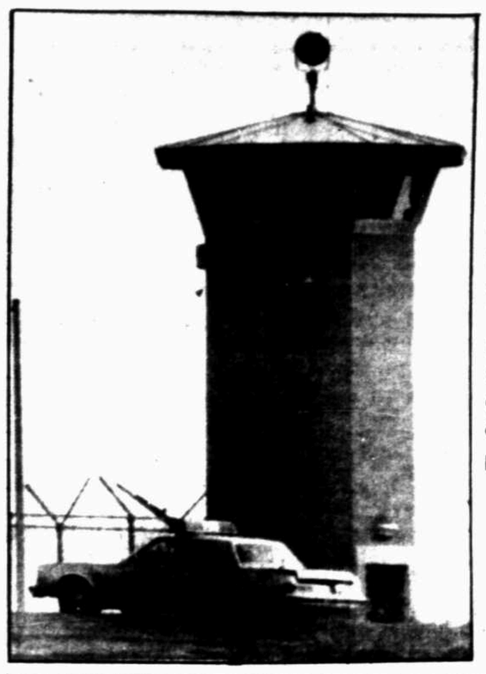

The demands were read on a Portsmouth radio station, WPAY, prior to the 4 a.m. release of guards Randy Mehaffey and Bill Dunn, who were taken hostage at 1 p.m. Monday along with the three inmates who were released.

One guard was cut in the face by flying glass and was treated at Scioto Valley Hospital in Portsmouth, said prison Sgt. James Buffington.

Otherwise, the guards were unharmed, said Superintendent Terry Morris.

"Naturally after being through something like this, they were somewhat exhausted and concerned," he said.

Fifteen officers from two Tactical Disturbance Control Teams, with shotguns and sniper rifles, had surrounded the block. About 2,400 inmates in the prison, designed to contain 1,600, were locked in their cells, officials said.

Two guards at the Southern Ohio Correctional Institute in Lucasville were released after a 15-hour ordeal this morning. An Ohio state trooper stands guard at a tower on the edge of the prison.

Professors give academic system poor grade

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — A Carnegie Foundation survey of college faculty found that almost two in five say they are thinking of leaving the profession.

And 21 percent said they would not choose teaching if they were starting their careers over.

Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, said Monday the survey indicated that many faculty "feel locked in and filled with doubt about their capacity to ascend the academic ladder."

He said the survey of 5,000 teachers found many anxious not only about their job security and salaries, but also about the quality of the students they are teaching.

Thirty-eight percent said they may quit teaching within five years, and 40 percent said morale is worse in their academic department now than it was five years ago.

The foundation, which has its headquarters on the campus of Princeton University, conducted the survey in 1984 for a study Boyer will publish next year on the quality of undergraduate education.

A third of the faculty said they believed abolishing tenure would improve higher education. Two-thirds said it is harder to get tenure on their campuses today than five years ago.

Boyer said, "A decade or two ago faculty could go from campus to campus, pushing for visibility and professional advancement." Now many no longer have that mobility.

Sixty percent believed their salaries are either fair or poor, and three-quarters believed their pay has not kept pace with inflation.

About 40 percent said their salaries were good or excellent.

Group to file brief against gag order in sanctuary case

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Arizona First Amendment Coalition Inc. plans to file a "friend of the court" brief today, seeking denial of a gag order requested in the federal trial of 12 sanctuary movement members on alien smuggling charges.

David J. Bodney, an attorney with the coalition, said the motion for the gag order is "constitutionally impermissible and fundamentally unsound."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Donald M. Reno filed a motion Oct. 1 asking U.S. District Court Judge Earl H. Carroll to impose a "gag order" based on what he called "fair trial guidelines."

The 12 defendants were scheduled to go to trial Oct. 22 in Tucson before Carroll.

Instead of imposing a gag order, Bodney said Carroll should make a "clear and emphatic admonition to the jurors to disregard extra-judicial statements."

"The judge must consider whether there are alternatives less drastic than prior restraint to guard against the perceived evil in having litigants communicate with the press in this lawsuit," he said.

Laxalt dispatched to warn Marcos, paper reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., has been dispatched to the Philippines by President Reagan, the White House said. His mission, according to published reports, was to warn President Ferdinand Marcos his government is in danger of being overthrown.

Laxalt carried "the bluntest presidential message ever delivered to a friend," The Washington Post today quoted one administration official as saying.

White House spokesman Michael Guest declined Monday to discuss what the senator would tell Marcos, saying Laxalt was acting as "a close personal friend" of Reagan.

"Sen. Laxalt it undertaking a visit to the Philippines, an ally of long standing, at the personal request of the president," Guest said. He said Laxalt left Washington Saturday.

The Post quoted the administration official as saying Marcos would be urged to take strong steps against a growing communist insurgency in the Philippines, site of two key U.S. military bases.

The newspaper also quoted a U.S. official as saying the Philippines could become "this administration's Iran" unless Marcos acts.

Order member testifies about man's murder

SEATTLE (AP) — A member of the neo-Nazi sect The Order was surprised when two blows from a hammer failed to kill an Idaho man considered a threat to the secretive group's security, a former member said.

James Sherman Dye, 37, of Philadelphia, told the grisly details Monday of the May 1984 slaying of Walter West, whose body has never been found.

Dye was scheduled to return to the stand today in the U.S. District Court racketeering trial of 10 alleged Order members.

The fifth former Order member to testify, Dye is one of 11 Order members who have pleaded guilty to racketeering charges but the only one of those who allegedly witnessed an Order slaying, prosecutors say.

The government maintains that Order members killed West and Denver radio host Alan Berg, staged robberies and counterfeited money as part of a plot to overthrow the government and set up a white homeland free of Jews and minorities.

Dye and five others from the group, including defendants Randolph Duey and Richard Kemp, are accused of killing West by hitting him with a hammer and shooting him through the head.

The witness pleaded guilty to racketeering and agreed to testify in exchange for a 20-year prison sentence.

Dye also testified Monday that he was present when Order members gave $100,000 in robbery proceeds to Louis Beam, a Ku Klux Klan leader from Texas. The money was given to Beam in August 1984 when Beam stopped by one of the Order's houses in Rathdrum, Idaho, Dye said.

Previous witnesses have said The Order planned to give Beam and other right-wing leaders around the country large contributions from robbery proceeds, but Dye's is the first direct testimony about such a delivery.

Beam could not be located for comment Monday. His whereabouts have been unknown publicly for several months.

West, a member of the right-wing Aryan Nations church to which many Order members also belonged, was singled out for execution because he had reportedly been talking about robberies and other Order-related matters, Dye said.

Double tragedy

With the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro fresh on the minds of Americans, this seems a particularly appropriate time to look at how terrorists get their bombs, guns and grenades. Sad to say, all too frequently the United States itself is the provider of the weapons.

The Pentagon has a stockpile of weapons and spare parts valued at $80 billion. Every year about $1 billion worth of these items gets lost, strayed or stolen.

On a percentage basis this is not a bad record. The average merchandiser, manufacturer or civilian consumer would regard a comparable rate of loss in his inventory as one that could be comfortably written off or absorbed.

But the articles disappearing from U.S. military bases, ships and warehouses are not toasters or hair dryers. They're advanced models of land mines, plastic explosives, missiles, bazookas, grenade launchers — even artillery units. They are lethal weapons amassed for the defense of the American people bearing the burden of their cost. That cost isn't slight, by any means.

Unfortunately they're not used as intended. These stolen weapons have turned up on the black markets from which unscrupulous arms smugglers are moving them to bands of terrorists and to such fanatically violent governments as Iran and Libya. It's obviously simple for them to end up in the hands of terrorists who use them against the very people they were designed to protect.

Evidently it has been a fairly easy matter to get these destructive devices off our installations. One Army man has testified he acquired weapons for this murderous traffic by simply signing them out of his post for "training purposes." It is a discredit to the Pentagon, moreover, that most of the weapons black market operations have been uncovered through civilian rather than military investigations.

The Pentagon should lose no time in tightening up its security everywhere and halting the outflow of these arms. It would be a double tragedy if any American's life is ever taken by a wild-eyed terrorist using a "property of the U.S." weapon — if that hasn't already happened.

Gil Kenney loved youths

In stature, Gil Kenney wasn't a large man — probably standing 5'6" or 5'7". But he was a man so many people respected and admired for he had a capacity for loving and giving of himself that made him a giant among men. Gil had a gift of reaching the young people of Midland — making them know that they had a friend who really cared about them. A day didn't go by that Gil was not working for the youth in this city.

He had a great part in developing the Greater Midland Football League after his own children were too old to participate in it — at a time when most parents say, "Great, I can quit now since my kids are through!" He was president of North Central Little League for many years as well as later being the president of the Midland Junior Baseball Association. He served as Youth Center board president, Lee High School Booster Club president and organized the baseball Tournament of Champions each year. These are just a few of the many things which kept him so active with our youth.

But what of the things that many people didn't see? There were times Gil would reach into his own pocket and pay the registration fee for some youth for Little League or Greater Midland Football League because the child didn't have the money. There were times when he would learn that some kid didn't have the money to get baseball shoes, track shoes, a baseball glove, or some other equipment — and somehow Gil would make sure the child received the equipment. Gil didn't do those things for recognition; most of the time the other people didn't even know it happened. Gil did them because he loved our young people and he wanted all of them to have a chance to compete in sports, if they wanted to. It didn't matter to Gil if they were black, brown or white — he cared.

We are going to miss you so much, Gil. You left so many friends behind. It was a privilege calling you friend and sharing memories with you. We know that no one can take your place or fill your shoes — for giants leave mighty big footprints. What you left us, though, is both a legacy and a burden. We, your friends, must continue to follow the example you set — to continue the work for the young people of this community, to accept the responsibilities and to make the time to take the jobs that you did so willingly. But most of all we must accept the burden of caring for all the children of Midland — not just our own and their friends. We must see that our young people of all races receive the opportunities and chances at success they would have had if you were still with us.

So long, Gil. We know we shall not see you again this side of eternity. But each time we hear the crack of a bat on a baseball, or hear the roar of a crowd at a football game, we'll know you are with us in spirit. The memories you gave us and your loving spirit will always be with us. Truly, "One life so soon does pass. Only what's done in love will last."

Let's look to the sun

I am writing in response to the letter you printed Oct. 6 from Paul L. Stuck of Big Spring. Dr. Stuck was comparing the Alaskan environmental issue to the Permian Basin depression which he felt was caused by "Big Government." I am taking a Natural Science class at UTPB (no, I am not a "wildlife" specimen). This class deals with nationwide environmental problems facing us if we do not curb our wasteful energy use and change our waste disposal systems.

Dr. Stuck misses the real issue behind building the Alaskan pipeline. He fails to see that the dependency of our nation on oil (a nonrenewable primary energy source) is at fault, not the Alaskan environmentalists for wishing to preserve the tundra that takes centuries to renew itself, when men could destroy it in moments with their waste products.

Dr. Stuck is right that "Big Government" has a responsibility for the lack of planning that encouraged the building of the pipeline. If our government had an energy strategy that dealt realistically with the inevitable depletion of oil reserves we might not have a depression in the Permian Basin.

An affordable and environmentally acceptable renewable energy source is direct solar energy. We are in a prime area to take advantage of this energy and would not have to pollute Alaska to do so and our area would reap the profits.

Army wants to repeat mistake

WASHINGTON — Last June we charged that a vital Army computer project was turning into another billion-dollar boondoggle, and reported that the Army's inspector general was investigating the mess.

Jack Anderson

The investigation is now complete, but the Army has refused to release the report. Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, who is becoming the nemesis of Pentagon wastrels, has asked for a copy but has been rebuffed. Internal Army documents, which we've reviewed, explain why.

In a nutshell, the Army plans to solve the problem by repeating its mistake. Generals, historically, prepare to fight the last war they won. In this case, the Army is preparing to re-fight a war it just lost — and to fight it on an even bigger scale.

The Army has spent at least $40 million on just the "brainstorming" stage of its CAMIS computer project — trying to decide what the computer system should be designed to do. While the money is being spent on schedule, the work is months behind. The delay, according to our Army sources, can be blamed, in part, on the sole-source contractor.

So now the Army plans to have CAMIS absorbed by the new, all-encompassing Starnet computer system. Why? Because, according to a July memo seen by our associate Donald Goldberg, "the Army didn't have a 'Chinaman's chance' of successfully defending CAMIS" to Pentagon superiors.

But here's the rub: The generals intend to have the Starnet system designed and built by yet another sole-source contractor, Electronic Data Systems Corp. of Texas. In effect, the Army is busily rebuilding the Maginot Line.

The Army is aware that the new plan is "still not without risk." So an August internal report warns: "The Competition-in-Contracting Act has created an environment and an expectation that sole-source contracting will no longer take place. It is possible that the sole-source contract ... may be protested."

In other words, it's strictly an image problem. And this, the report suggests, can be handled by a good public-relations campaign. "The Army should attempt to mitigate these risks through an effective liaison and information campaign" — aimed at Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, Congress and the media.

At least one Army official, Wayne Grant, acting assistant secretary for financial management, has warned that the "new approach being recommended" — that is, the sole-source contract to Electronic Data Systems — may not be in the Army's best interests.

For one thing, "there appears to be no rationale on a cost-effectiveness basis" for canceling other, competitively won contracts to be absorbed by Starnet, Grant wrote, adding: "Largely because of the perception that (Electronic Data Systems) had a lock" on these earlier contracts, "we had to take rather extraordinary measures" to persuade other companies that it was worth their while to bid on them.

"To cancel these (contracts) would at least appear to confirm that viewpoint and could readily lead to protests or legal actions ..." Grant wrote.

He also warned the generals that not only would a sole-source contract on Starnet "send a clear signal" that would discourage other contractors from future bids, but it would run head-on into opposition from Weinberger and his chief associates, who are now committed to the competitive-bid process.

UNDER THE DOME: Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., wants to know why the Securities and Exchange Commission has been losing so many big cases in federal court recently. The cases at issue involve the spate of gigantic corporate mergers, both friendly and hostile. The commission has argued against the mergers, claiming that they violate federal law by failing to protect the shareholders' interests. But the commission keeps coming up on the short end of the judicial decisions. Wirth has asked SEC Chairman John Shad for details on the lost cases, and for suggestions for legislation to protect stockholders.

POLITICAL POTPOURRI: Ex-Rep. Geraldine Ferraro is sounding out politicians around New York state to see if she has a chance to unseat Republican Sen. Alphonse D'Amato next year. One important thing she has to find out — perhaps the crucial factor in her decision — is whether campaign money will be forthcoming. A recent look revealed her campaign fund has exactly $89,308 in it. She had to transfer $20,575 last April to her 1978 campaign fund to pay the $21,239 she ran up in legal fees during the investigation of her 1978 finances by the Federal Election Commission.

MINI-EDITORIAL: If you saw any of Mikhail Gorbachev's televised appearances during his recent visit to France, then you know the new Kremlin leader is a first-rate performer. He appears to be the first Soviet politico to master a technique pioneered by U.S. politicians years ago — the ability to dissemble and prevaricate convincingly on camera, in the full knowledge that the truth rarely catches up. Given President Reagan's renowned expertise before the cameras, maybe we ought to lay aside the nuclear arsenals and have a Reagan-Gorbachev image duel.

JAMES RESTON

Hoping for best in age of terror

UNITED NATIONS — Here at the United Nations, as elsewhere, there was admiration for the U.S. political decision and technical skill that plucked the Palestinian terrorists from the sky over the Mediterranean. But the capture of a few demolition thugs obviously is no answer to the problem of international anarchy.

James Reston

The secretary general of the U.N., Javier Perez de Cuellar, came into his little hideaway in back of the Security Council chamber in the midst of this latest outrage looking very gray and sad. "We are living in another age of fanatics," he said, "and we don't know what to do about it."

He was expressing a general feeling even more frustrating than the endless conflicts here between nations — something deeper and in a way more troubling — namely, that not only helpless individuals but sovereign states were threatened by the tyranny of fanatical minorities.

Outside the secretary general's room, the delegates were arguing endlessly about the tangles of Angola, but at least they represented governments and were in charge of whatever nonsense their governments instructed them to say.

The trouble with fanatics who hijack planes and ships, blow up embassies, murder diplomats and toss hand-grenades like confetti into restaurants is that nobody knows who they are or who's in charge.

The clear lesson of this latest rash of terrorism is that nobody is secure. Even the Soviet diplomats are no longer immune to the fanatics. Four Russians were taken hostage the other day in Beirut and one of them was killed, forcing Mikhail Gorbachev in Moscow to order many of his diplomats back home.

The reaction of the Soviet government to President Reagan's decision to intercept the Palestinian hijackers is interesting. The official Tass news agency called it "understandable and just ..." "The crimes of terrorists, no matter where they are committed," Tass continued, "must be punished most severely, and such severity must be shown unfailingly to all perpetrators of such crimes."

This suggests to some observers here at the U.N., including the secretary general, that something useful might come out of this latest crisis, maybe not much but something.

It's unlikely that the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. can resolve at their summit meeting in Geneva next month all the conflicts over the control of nuclear weapons on earth, let alone in outer space.

But they have a few things in common, and one of them is the control of terrorism. If there is one thing the Soviet Union fears, with its different nationalities, its large Moslem population along its southern border and its other restless minorities, it is that regionalism or fanatical religious dissent might spread through its Eastern European empire, or even among its own peoples.

There is little hope here at the U.N. that Gorbachev would give up the policy of supporting what the Russians call "wars of national liberation"; but uncontrolled terror by goons armed not only with machine guns but with more sophisticated modern weapons is another thing.

Besides, looking to the future, it's not unreasonable to suppose that these wild fanatics, many of whom think death is a welcome sacrifice for their cause, could get hold of atomic wastes if not weapons, and dump them into harbors and hold not a few people but whole cities hostage to their demands.

Aside from the big questions of nuclear terror between states, on which Moscow and Washington disagree, the feeling among many thoughtful delegates here at the U.N. is that Reagan and Gorbachev might at least agree to study together this common problem of factional and fanatic warfare.

Something is happening here at the U.N. that, in my experience since its creation, is new. It is a numb, unformed, yet persistent sense that while the nations cannot agree on many things, they have one thing in common.

This is that as they approach the end of the 20th century, with its mindless violence, its faceless slaughters, its struggling new nations, its fabulous triumphs over space and time and matter, they face the danger, not so much of war between the atomic states, but of anarchy in the world beyond their borders, where live the majority of the human race in misery and violence.

The secretary general thought it might help if the nations merely kept their commitments to the principles of the United Nations Charter, but that, he feared, was beyond his dreams. He would not seek another term in office, he said, but would keep hoping for the best.

CHARLEY REESE

Don't tie business to government

James Baker, the secretary of the treasury, is hatching a new scheme to bail out the big banks.

He will probably get away with it. The Reagan administration got away with dumping $8 billion into the International Monetary Fund to help out the banks during its first term. The federal government seems as concerned about the welfare of big banks as the Lord is about the location of lost sheep.

Charley Reese

The excuse is always the same. If a big bank goes busted, the nation will suffer. In other words, what's good or bad for General Bull Moose is good or bad for the nation. That's hogwash.

The international oil companies sold the same package of baloney right after World War II to head off anti-trust actions. In fact, indentifying the nation's interests with the interests of big business is the sword which has gutted the anti-trust laws. The consequence is that about 3,500 people control one-half of all the industrial assets in the United States (for details, see Who Runs America by Prof. Roy Dye).

It is not the fault of the American people that the officers of Citicorp, just to cite one example, made loans equivalent to 47 percent of their stockholders' equity to Mexico. If the loans had been good ones, Citicorp would not have shared its profits with the American people. Why should the American people share Citicorp's losses?

All of these schemes work the same way. The money is taken from the taxpayers and put into a fund or international lending agency. It goes from there to foreign governments and from there into the vaults of the banks which engineered the schemes in the first place.

I have nothing against Citicorp or against any other big bank which made foolish loans to the Third World. But that is a problem for the stockholders, the officers and the debtors to work out as best they can. A lot of Americans these days are in a financial bind and I haven't noticed Baker holding any weekend conferences to figure out ways to help them.

The effect of undue unfluence by big money is to deprive the people of their government. It appears that the American people elect a president but the monied interests appoint his advisers and in between election days, the people have zip influence on their government.

In an earlier day, the abuses of the monied interests were made a public issue, but the old barons like J.P. Morgan were smart enough not to get stung by the same scorpion twice. The began to invest in communications media and the market for that kind of muckraking shrank considerably.

Nevertheless, it is not the business of the American government to grant and to preserve privileges to and for the few at the expense of the many. Andrew Jackson fought hard against that kind of abuse when he was president.

In fact, instead of cuddling up to the big banks, Jackson told a delegation of bankers lobbying for the Bank Renewal Bill of 1832, "You are a den of vipers and thieves. I intend to rout you out, and by the eternal God, I will rout you out." Old Hickory proceeded to do just that.

With 40 percent of the nation's farmers facing disaster, with 13 million Americans unemployed, with the federal budget and the federal debt out of control, it is a disgrace for Baker and the chairman of the Federal Reserve to be worrying about pulling the chestnuts of a few big banks out of a Latin American fire they built themselves.

The 50 banks which control nearly 60 percent of all U.S. banking assets do not own the United States. If they have mismanaged their affairs, let them fail. There are other, better-managed banks to take their places. Let's keep business and government separate for the same reason we keep church and government separate. Whenever the two intertwine, the common man gets it right in the ear.

Congressional leaders brace for protest over hike in Medicare fee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders on health care issues are bracing for an expected storm of protest early next year when a little-noticed 23 percent increase goes into effect in the fees Medicare beneficiaries pay to enter hospitals.

The out-of-pocket deductible payment will go up by $92 on Jan. 1, from its current $400, for each Medicare recipient admitted to a hospital. Fees for people hospitalized for more than 60 days and for people in skilled-nursing homes also will go up by 23 percent.

All told, an estimated 8 million people will pay $1.1 billion in higher fees next year. The American Association of Retired Persons says most people don't even know yet that the increase has been ordered.

"My guess is that for the bulk of the people, it's not until they get in the hospital and get socked with that first bill that we're going to hear the cries," said Jack Christy, a lobbyist for the group.

But lawmakers involved in health care already are beginning to brace for protests.

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., the chairman of the Senate Special Committee on Aging, has introduced legislation to change the formula under which the increase was ordered. Heinz says his bill would limit the increase to $4 or less.

"Why should older Americans be forced to pay a whopping increase out of their own pockets to hospitals when we are told that Medicare hospital costs are under control?" Heinz said in a statement.

The chairman of the Senate Finance subcommittee on health, Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., is said by his staff to be working on legislation. Karen Doyne, an aide, said Durenberger was "very concerned" about the increase. "He thinks it's very unfair to the Medicare recipient to be penalized for improvements in the system," she said.

And the chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., has cited the boost in urging action on his proposal for a cap on costs to the elderly.

But with the short time left in the congressional session, no action is expected in time to stop the Jan. 1 hike.

The protests are expected partly because more than half the increase, ordered by a law intended to adjust the payment level to reflect costs, is an unintentional result of Medicare payment reforms ordered by the Reagan administration.

The Health and Human Services Department, in a brief notice of the increase published in the Federal Register on Sept. 30, said it had "no discretion in computing" the amount of the fee, which is calculated under a formula written into law.

But it also conceded that more than half of the increase has nothing to do with rising hospital costs, but instead reflects shorter hospital stays fostered by government payment policies.

Reforms instituted by the administration now call for paying hospitals a set fee based on the diagnosis, rather than the government simply paying whatever bill the hospital submits.

The change was intended to hold down medical inflation by putting hospitals on a budget. But it also encourages hospitals to discharge patients more quickly, because they get paid the same amount for a short stay as a long stay.

It has had a dramatic effect. HHS reported earlier this year that the average length of hospital stay for people over age 65 dropped an average of 1.8 percent a year from 1975 to 1983. But in 1984, the department said, it dropped an average of 7.5 percent.

Thus, what used to be a $2,000, six-day hospital visit may now be a $2,000, four-day stay. In this example, the change would push the daily average from $333 to $500 while not changing the total cost. And the formula the government is required to follow is based on average daily costs, not overall costs.

Woman says media hounded her as she tried to clear Dotson

CHICAGO (AP) — Cathleen Crowell Webb says in a new book that she was hounded by reporters who portrayed her as an emotionally unstable cult member and made slanderous statements as she tried to clear Gary Dotson's name.

Mrs. Webb wrote about her efforts to free the man she had accused of rape to "demonstrate how destructive lies can be — to the innocent and also to the liar," she says in the book, "Forgive Me," which goes on sale today.

Mrs. Webb told authorities earlier this year that she lied in 1977 when she told police she was raped, and again in the 1979 trial, when her testimony helped send Dotson to prison on a 25- to 50-year term.

In the weeks immediately after she came forward, one newspaper "printed false information ...calling me a member of a cult, emotionally unstable, etc.," Mrs. Webb said in the book co-written with Marie Chapian.

"We felt there was a need to answer these scandalous statements about my credibility," she said in explaining why she agreed to discuss the case further with reporters.

But during a trip to New York for appearances on national television, "It seemed as if reporters were pouring out of every crack in the sidewalk.

"What I had hoped would be a quiet, low-profile procedure to free Gary Dotson had become a media extravaganza."

Mrs. Webb's book, with an initial press run of more than 65,000 copies, is published by Fleming H. Revell Co., a New Jersey publisher specializing in religious and inspirational publications.

Gary Sledge, editor-in-chief, said Monday he understood money from the book was "going into some kind of a fund for Gary Dotson."

In May, Gov. James Thompson and the state Prisoner Review Board held a three-day hearing on the case.

"The hearings were televised for all the world to see," Mrs. Webb said. "Why, I still can't understand."

Dotson's sentence was commuted to time served by Thompson, who said he did not believe Mrs. Webb's recantation, but felt he had been adequately punished.

Cathleen Crowell Webb, shown holding a photo of Gary Dotson at an Illinois Prisoner Review Board hearing in Chicago last May, says that unsympathetic media foiled her efforts to clear him.

NATION IN BRIEF

Court to decide if groups can meet at public schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year-old attempt by Congress to pressure public high schools into allowing student groups to meet for prayer and worship is at stake in the Supreme Court.

Although the Equal Access Act of 1984 is not directly involved, what the justices decide in a case from Williamsport, Pa., likely will seal the fate of that federal law.

The court begins hearing arguments today on a ruling that banned such meetings at Williamsport Area High School even though the school allows students to conduct virtually all types of none-religious meetings during the same school-hours activity periods.

The dispute, the latest outgrowth of the Supreme Court's 1962 decision outlawing organized prayer sessions in public schools, arose when a religious group sought permission in 1981 to meet at the high school.

The students, who called their religious group Petros, wanted to meet twice a week during the school's 30-minute activity periods.

During those periods, about 25 different student groups as varied as the Future Homemakers of America, the Spanish Club and the student newspaper meet under faculty supervision.

Prisoners 'color coded'

DENVER (AP) — Prisoners in the Denver County Jail wear green if they're awaiting trial on felony charges and blue if they're accused of misdemeanors. Homosexuals, in a policy assailed by gay activists as "repulsive," wear gray.

The gray uniforms also are issued to prisoners who have histories of violence or psychological problems, officials say, adding that the color coding allows guards to identify inmates in the wrong place.

In addition, according to inmate service program director Ted Peak, the uniforms help guards protect homosexuals, who, he said, should be separate from other prisoners to prevent assaults.

Normally, about 5 percent of the 1,000 prisoners wear gray, officials said.

Gay rights groups have assailed the policy, which has been in effect more than a year, saying it unfairly singles out inmates and could create more tension in an already rough environment.

"It's a repulsive policy," said Britt Alkire, a member of the board of directors for the Gay Rights National Lobby. "Anyone with a sense of history would be reminded of a period under a fascist government."

Shultz: Progress possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, vowing the United States would make no arms control deals with the Soviet Union "at Europe's expense," still held out hope for "real progress" at Geneva superpower negotiations.

Shultz, in a speech Monday, attacked Soviet arms proposals as "deeply flawed and self-serving," but said if the Kremlin is serious about wanting significant arms cutbacks, there is reason for hope.

He criticized recent Soviet arms proposals as failing to meet basic criteria of strengthened stability, equality, strategically significant reductions and increased verifiability.

"But we approach this positively," he said. "We are now in a new phase of the negotiations in which, if the Soviets are serious, real progress can be made."

Shultz made the remarks to a San Francisco gathering of the North Atlantic Assembly, a pro-NATO group, before his planned trip to Brussels for consultations with NATO allies on next month's summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Chemical leak derails plans to ship waste

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — Plans to ship a corrosive waste product to a New Jersey disposal site are being temporarily abandoned by Du Pont chemical officials because a cylinder used in the first shipment leaked, the company said today.

Eleven people sought treatment Monday for exposure to the chemical, antimony pentachloride, but all the injuries were minor, hospital officials said. About 500 people were evacuated from their homes, emergency officials said.

At Valley Township, Pa., meanwhile, a noxious cloud continued spewing from a hazardous waste treatment plant early today after sending at least 18 people to a hospital for treatment and 650 to shelters, authorities said.

Du Pont had planned to send 2,000 pounds of the chemical from Louisville, Ky., to Deepwater, N.J., for disposal at a company hazardous waste site.

The first shipment of the chemical left Louisville Monday afternoon and began leaking by the time it got to Parkersburg — less than 225 miles away.

The cylinder was being carried inside a truck trailer and was to be moved to Du Pont's plant at Washington, six miles west of Parkersburg.

The chemical is a corrosive that burns eyes and skin. Flammable and poison gases can collect in enclosed areas.

"There will be no more on the road until we fully examine what happened," said Louisville plant manager Harold Dey.

The chemical, used as a catalyst in fluorocarbon production, formerly had been disposed of on-site or picked up by private hazardous waste handlers, Dey said.

He said the vapor released from the cylinder was "almost exclusively hydrochloric acid" and that other components of antimony pentachloride probably settled inside or near the tank. He said it was too early to tell how much of the chemical compound leaked or the true nature of the emission.

About 500 people left their homes, but only about 75 spent the night at a Red Cross shelter, said Randy Kinsolving, Wood County's Emergency Broadcast System director.

Seven area residents went to the hospital for treatment of minor eye and throat irritations, Camden-Clark nursing supervisor Linda Richards said. Four sought treatment at St. Joseph's Hospital, officials there said.

Thunderstorms are anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Thunderstorms are expected to continue to darken Midland skies into Wednesday.

The National Weather Service reports a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight with a low in the mid 50s. Winds will become easterly at 5 to 10 mph.

Wednesday will have a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms with a high of 70 degrees. Winds will be southeasterly at 5 to 10 mph.

Monday's high of 69 degrees was 22 degrees short of the 91 degree record high set in 1970. Monday's low missed the record point by 19 degrees. The record low for this date is 36 degrees set in 1966.

STATE

A tornado funnel dipped from a heavy thunderstorm southwest of Houston early today, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a tornado warning for persons in Harris and Fort Bend counties.

The twister was sighted by police at Stafford, southwest of Houston, at 3:20 a.m. The tornado did not touch the ground and did not cause any damage, according to Stafford Police dispatcher Leslie Clark.

The tornado warning expired at 4:30 a.m.

The tornado sighting came out of some heavy thunderstorms being reported early today along a cold front that moved through North Central Texas Monday, triggering heavy rains.

The front was located at dawn today from just south of Lufkin southwestward along the coastal plains to just south of Laredo.

Rainfall, some described as locally heavy, covered the frontal boundary and most of Texas southeast of a line from Texarkana to Del Rio.

Some of the heaviest rainfall during the night was at Lufkin where about 3.75 inches fell. Austin had about three inches, College Station had two inches and Hondo had 1.69 inches.

NATION

Rain was scattered over broad sections of the nation today and high winds lashed the Southern California mountains and northern Rockies.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from central and eastern Texas across Mississippi to the Tennessee and Ohio valleys.

Rain was scattered from New England to the Great Lakes, over the northwest Plains and along the northern Pacific Coast.

Strong winds prompted a travelers' advisory for the southern California mountains and hit the east slopes of the northern Rockies. Westerly winds reached 60 mph at Cody, Wyo., and 35 mph at Billings, Mont.

Midland statistics

FORECAST

Tonight: cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. Low expected to reach the mid 60s. Winds will become easterly at 5-10 mph. Wednesday's high in the 70s.

Jets running back Freeman McNeil is hauled down by Miami's Micke Charles and Sanders Shriver (96) after another long gain.

Inspired Jets flip Dolphins, 23-7

Marino, offense stifled in rout

By BARRY WILNER

Monday Night

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Bewitched, bothered and bewildered. And thoroughly beaten.

That was how the Miami Dolphins felt Monday night after being throttled by a stern New York Jets defense and a mistake-free offense. The Jets held the vaunted Miami attack to 200 total yards in a 23-7 National Football League victory that catapulted New York into first place in the AFC East. Freeman McNeil keyed the attack with 173 rushing yards, giving him the league lead at 645, and quarterback Ken O'Brien connected on 18 of 28 passes for 239 yards and a 15-yard touchdown to Kurt Sohn.

The 5-1 Jets are unbeaten since an opening-week loss to the Los Angeles Raiders, and their defense has allowed only 53 points in those five games.

"WE MIXED up a lot of things, with different coverages and different blitzes, a lot of looks for (Miami quarterback Dan) Marino," said cornerback Russell Carter. "At times he may have been confused.

"We were holding them up at the line and getting penetration and rushing him into doing things before he wanted to."

Marino — who burned the Jets for six TDs last season — had his worst game as a starter, accounting for only 136 yards through the air. Except for a third-quarter drive of 73 yards capped by a 3-yard score by rookie Ron Davenport, the Dolphins offense was invisible.

"They just beat us in every aspect of the game out there," said Marino, who was sacked only once but constantly was pressured. "They were the best team out there tonight."

THE JETS were so dominant in breaking a seven-game slide against the Dolphins that they controlled the ball for 23 minutes in the second half, moving out from a 6-0 lead.

"I had to make sure the chains kept moving down the field because we couldn't give the ball back to Marino," said McNeil, who averaged 6.2 yards a carry. He is the only runner ever to collect four 100-yard games against Miami.

"They key was Freeman," added O'Brien. "As he goes, we go. The teams are keying on him and not stopping him."

"He's the pulse of our offense," said Jets Coach Joe Walton. "He's become a great leader for us."

The Jets led throughout. After a scoreless first period, the Jets marched to field goals of 22 and 18 yards by Pat Leahy for a 6-0 halftime edge. The first drive, of 68 yards, stalled at the Miami 5 and the second, of 66 yards, stopped at the 1 in the final seconds of the half.

FOLLOWING A halftime ceremony in which former Jets quarterback Joe Namath had his No. 12 jersey retired and received his ring for being inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame this summer, the Jets were unstoppable. They took the kickoff and went 80 yards in 11 plays, led by McNeil's 33 yards on two pass receptions. O'Brien hit Sohn slanting into the end zone ahead of cornerback Paul Lankford for the score.

The Dolphins closed to 13-7 but New York came right back, driving 79 yards to another 18-yard field goal by Leahy. McNeil gained 36 yards on the drive.

ONCE AGAIN Marino could not move the Dolphins and the Jets clinched it with a 62-yard march. McNeil had 36 more yards rushing before Tony Paige burst in from the 1.

"They did a complete job," noted Dolphins Coach Don Shula. "It was a thorough whipping and they deserve to be right where they are."

And was this Marino's most frustrating game?

"The Super Bowl was," he said, "but this was pretty tough."

The victory was a rare one for the Jets over a strong team. Only two of their 14 victories in the two previous seasons came over teams that ended those seasons with winning records. The Dolphins are the first team the Jets have beaten this season with a winning mark.

"We're in first place, finally," said the center Joe Fields, who joined the Jets in 1975. "For the first time since I've been here, people are chasing us, and that's a good feeling."

NL Playoffs

ST LOUIS — Ozzie Smith hit one of the most improbable home runs in major league history Monday.

The five-foot-nine, 155-pound switchhitter shattered a ninth-inning tie with his first homer in 2,976 left-handed at bats as the Cardinals electrified the National League playoffs with their third straight home-field victory over the Dodgers 3-2.

It gave the Eastern Division winners a 3-2 advantage in the best-of-seven competition to determine the NL's World Series representative.

Smith was David slaying Goliath when he uncoiled with all his might on a one-ball, two-strike fastball from six-foot-five-inch, 225-pound Tom Niedenfuer.

THE DRIVE cleared the right field wall by less than a foot, struck a concrete pillar and rebounded straight to right fielder Mike Marshall, who whirled and made a meaningless throw to shortstop Mariano Duncan.

"I was running hard for second, going for a double," Smith said, "then I saw the umpire give the home run sign."

St. Louis players rushed to the plate and mobbed the $2 million-a-year shortstop as a sellout Busch Stadium crowd of 53,708 cheered in utter disbelief.

Smith began the day with a mere 13 big league homers, all of them right-handed, in an eight-year career spanning 1,184 games (including playoffs, the 1982 World Series and All-Star games.)

"I'M DUMBSTRUCK," said Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda.

The playoffs return now to Los Angeles, where his Western Division champions must win Wednesday afternoon if they're to force the playoff to a seventh and deciding game there Thursday night.

"If Ozzie had 25 or 30 home runs, you could understand it, but this is what makes baseball so great," Lasorda said between profanities.

The Cardinals, inept in 4-1 and 8-2 losses at Los Angeles last week, are flying high after 4-2, 12-2 and 3-2 victories on their home turf.

"We have two 20-game winners ready to pitch," said manager Whitey Herzog, who'll start Joaquin Andujar (21-12) Wednesay and have 21-game winner John Tudor ready in the event of a seventh game.

"If we didn't win today, I didn't think we would have a chance. We'd have needed to win two straight on the West Coast."

THE DODGERS could muster no more than two runs in any of the three games here and mounted only one serious threat Monday after Bill Madlock tied the score with his second homer in two days. It drove in Ken Landreaux, whose two singles were part of the Cardinals' second straight five-hitter.

Dodger left-hander Fernando Valenzuela, a winner in the playoff opener, righted himself after Tom Herr's two-run double in the first inning and lasted through the eighth, when he set a playoff record with his eighth walk.

Lasorda has been reluctant to go to his bullpen, because of its late-season ineffectiveness. His fears were justified in the ninth, when Niedenfuer failed to match the job Herzog received from Ken Dayley, Todd Worrell and Jeff Lahti after starter Bob Forsch let a 2-0 lead slip from his grasp in the fourth.

Smith and Willie McGee set up the first two St. Louis runs by drawing walks before Herr hit a sharp grounder that went just inside third base, eluding Madlock's dive.

SMITH'S HOMER was his eighth hit of these playoffs, the most on either team, and erased memories of his failure to field a Madlock grounder that led to the Dodgers' three decisive runs in game one.

The years Smith has spent lifting weights, trying to improve his upper body strength, paid off this season when he achieved career highs in batting average (.276), homers (6) and runs-batted-in (54). The winner of five straight Gold Glove awards also stole 31 bases.

"I don't have the physical strength to be a home run hitter, that's not what I was trying to do," said the Los Angeles native.

"I knew Niedenfuer would throw me nothing but fastballs and I was trying to pull a ball for an extra-base hit. He couldn't have thought I might hit a ball out of the park."

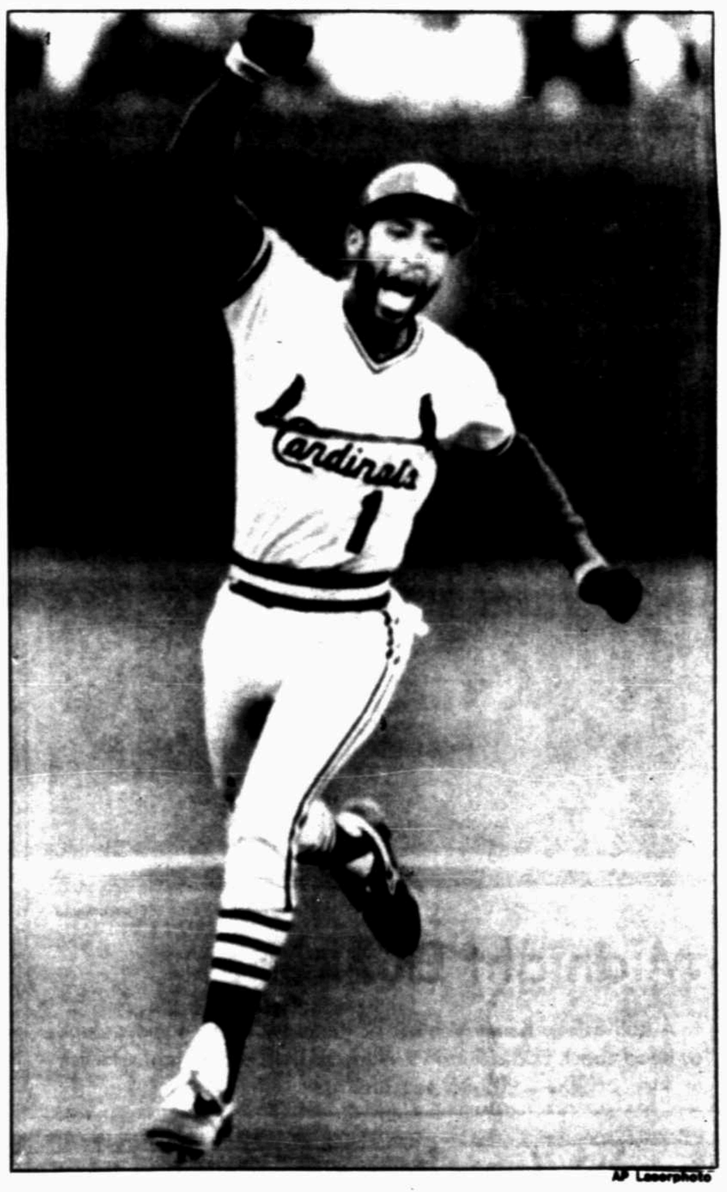

Niedenfuer agreed.

The loss was tough for the Dodgers to accept because of Valenzuela's courageous performance and the opportunity they had to take a lead in the seventh inning.

Mike Scioscia walked and Enos Cabell singled, putting runners at first and second with none out. Worrell, who relieved Dayley, went to a 3-and-0 count on Steve Sax, the eighth batter in the lineup.

Logic called for Sax to bunt, but Lasorda had him take two strikes before he swung at a bad pitch, striking out.

LASORDA ELECTED not to pinchhit for Valenzuela, who grounded out, or for rookie Duncan, who is 1-for-13 in these proceedings after hitting a popup to end the last Los Angeles threat.

USTA Texas Segment arrives in Tall City

From Staff Reports

Action got underway today in the United States Tennis Association tournament at the Midland Racquet Club and will continue through Saturday.

Midland is the fifth stop on the five-week Texas Segment in which 150 top amateurs and rising professionals are competing for ATP computer ranking points. And Midland is also the Masters stop, the tournament at which points will be awarded.

In addition to the points, $10,000 in prize money will be at stake.

Coming into Midland, Val Wilder is the circuit leader by a substantial margin in singles. The two top doubles teams are Chris Kennedy and Tom Witsken and Joey Rive and Todd Witsken.

Wilder, Springfield, Mass., is followed in the singles by Craig Carden, Tomm Warneke, Henry Dewet, Rodney Harmon, Seth Bowen, Andrew Sznajden, Todd Witsken, Joey Rive, John Sorbo, John Sevely, Kelvin Belcher, Laid Dunlop, Paul Lobban, Jeff Kalpard and Mark Wisken, seeded in that order.

Others competing are Charleton Eagle, Chris Kennedy, Grant Connell, Monty Oppenheim, Greg Hill, Mark Groetsch, Dexter McBride, Mike Lee, Peter Kolaric, Mike Smith Lior Rusinek, Carlos Gomez, Howard Herr, Rocky Royer, Hector Ortiz and Simon Bartram.

Rive, West Palm Beach, Fla., won the opening Segment of the Texas tour in Corpus Christi, by Wilder, a veteran pro from Massachusetts, took second and has been consistent through Waco, Tyler and Fort Worth. Wilder is coming off a Masters triumph Segment Four, which ended in August.

The doubles team of Kennedy-Tom Witsken played together at Trinity University in San Antonio.

In last year's Midland finals, Christo Steyn, South Africa, defeated Jeff Turpin, Dallas, 6-2, 6-4, and neither will be in this year's field. In doubles, Tres Cushing, Hinsdale, Ill., and Richard Akel, Little Rock, Ark., beat Charles Honey-Christo Steyn, both South Africa, to win the doubles title.

Of course, the tour goal is to accummulate enough points to earn a spot on the ATP tour where the large rewards await.

Area races brace for 'no pass, no play'

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Area Football

Right smack in the middle of district football races around the Permian Basin, area coaches have a new nemesis to worry about this week. The celebrated "no pass, no play" rule hits home with the first crop of ineligibles sitting out Friday's games.

By this evening or early Wednesday, most coaches in the area will know which star players will have to sit out the next six-week grading period because they didn't make a passing grade in one or more classes.

Sadly, district races could suffer, though popular opinion is that most area coaches have been able to avoid major losses in this first grading period. But throughout West Texas, nail-biting and migraines will be a common malady this week until the cuts are made.

"Most of our top kids seem to be in good shape," says Dale Ruth, head coach at Stanton. "But you just never know until the final lists come out. I think where it will hurt us is in the lower grades."

RUTH IS hoping his team can avoid such losses, particularly after getting back on track last week with a 14-6 district opening win over Eldorado after a 37-0 whitewashing by Seagraves the week before. The Buffalos are enjoying their stay atop the District 8-2A race, but they'll have to prove they belong in a hurry with co-leader Greenwood coming to town Friday.

The Rangers are also 1-0 after slipping by the Wall Hawks, 22-14, and share the top spot with Stanton and McCamey. Greenwood is 5-1 overall and looking like a strong challenger for a playoff spot.

And as Rangers coach Joe Longley says, "one of us will be 2-0 after this week," and to the winner at least a tie for the district lead.

The Buffaloes' offense got a shot in the arm with the return of quarterback Kevin Glaspie against Eldorado. The senior didn't seem to miss a beat after sitting out two games with a knee injury. He threw 27 times against the Eagles, completing 15 passes for 229 yards and a pair of touchdowns. Also making a big splash in his return to the lineup was split end Mark Gonzalez who caught five passes for 115 yards.

GONZALEZ WAS also the key man in the game-winning flea-flicker, lateraling a short completion from Glaspie to Timmy Rose coming out of the backfield. The fourth-quarter play went 33 yards for a score and was the difference in the ballgame.

Now Stanton faces the regional challenge of Greenwood, its neighbor to the west.

"They're a well-coached team and they execute real well on offense and defense, though they are not as big as they were last year," Ruth said. "To beat them we'll have to do a better job of run-blocking on our line. We'll also have to open up the passing game and eliminate our mental mistakes."

One area that Ruth was pleased with last week was shutting down the Eldorado offense, bending to allow 274 yards but allowing just one touchdown. The Buffs stopped the Eagles four times on crucial fourth down situations in their own end, including a last ditch attempt as time ran out on the clock.

The swarming Buffalo defense has Greenwood coach Joe Longley worrying about creating mistakes and turnovers on his offensive squad. The Rangers haven't had much trouble committing errors on their own the past two weekends.

GREENWOOD HURT its own cause against Wall with 10 penalties for 80 yards, including one infraction that brought back a 98-yard kickoff return. The week before in a loss to Rankin, a pair of botched punts resulted in a pair of Red Devil touchdowns that dug a hole the Rangers couldn't get out of.

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms. Lows mid 60s. Wind becoming east 5 to 10 mph. Wednesday a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms with highs near 70 and southeast wind 10 to 15 mph.

Thunderstorms are anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Thunderstorms are expected to continue to darken Midland skies into Wednesday.

The National Weather Service reports a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight with a low in the mid 50s. Winds will become easterly at 5 to 10 mph.

Wednesday will have a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms with a high of 70 degrees. Winds will be southeasterly at 5 to 10 mph.

Monday's high of 69 degrees was 22 degrees short of the 91 degree record high set in 1970. Monday's low missed the record point by 19 degrees. The record low for this date is 36 degrees set in 1966.

STATE

A tornado funnel dipped from a heavy thunderstorm southwest of Houston early today, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a tornado warning for persons in Harris and Fort Bend counties.

The twister was sighted by police at Stafford, southwest of Houston, at 3:20 a.m. The tornado did not touch the ground and did not cause any damage, according to Stafford Police dispatcher Leslie Clark.

The tornado warning expired at 4:30 a.m.

The tornado sighting came out of some heavy thunderstorms being reported early today along a cold front that moved through North Central Texas Monday, triggering heavy rains.

The front was located at dawn today from just south of Lufkin southwestward along the coastal plains to just south of Laredo.

Rainfall, some described as locally heavy, covered the frontal boundary and most of Texas southeast of a line from Texarkana to Del Rio.

Some of the heaviest rainfall during the night was at lufkin where about 3.75 inches fell. Austin had about three inches, College Station had two inches and Hondo had 1.69 inches.

NATION

Rain was scattered over broad sections of the nation today and high winds lashed the Southern California mountains and northern Rockies.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from central and eastern Texas across Mississippi to the Tennessee and Ohio valleys.

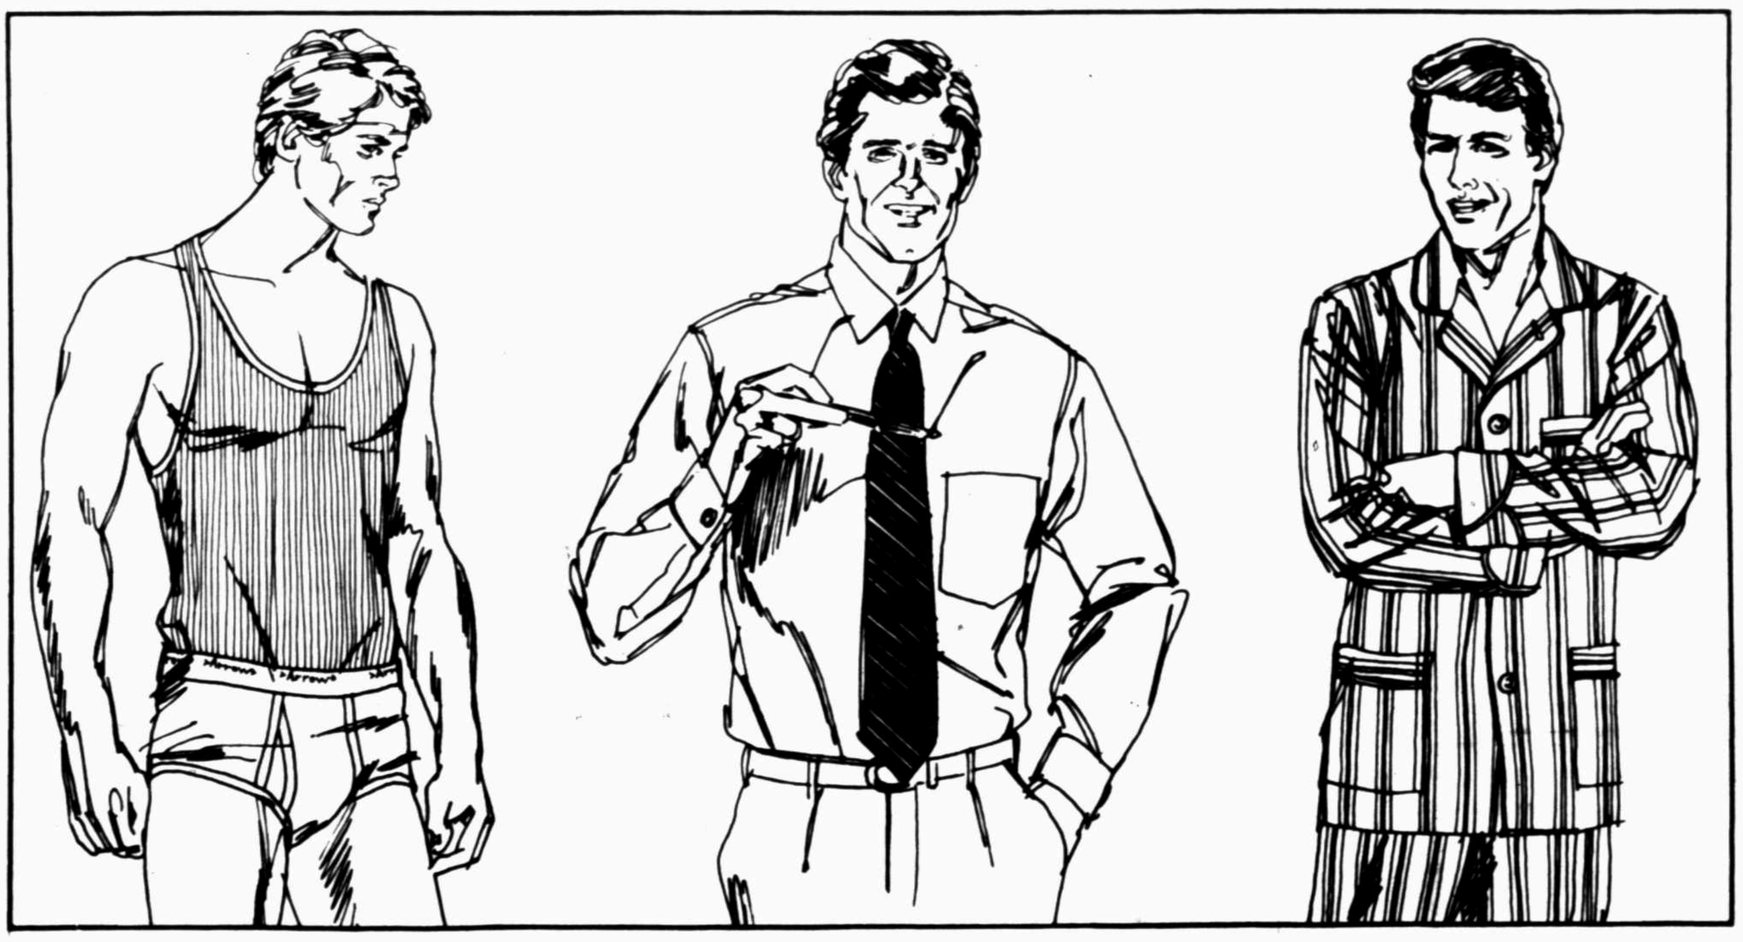

Rain was scattered from New England to the Great Lakes, over the northwest Plains and along the northern Pacific Coast.

Strong winds prompted a travelers' advisory for the southern California mountains and hit the east slopes of the northern Rockies. Westerly winds reached 60 mph at Cody, Wyo., and 35 mph at Billings, Mont.

Jets running back Freeman McNeil is hauled down by Miami's Micke Charles and Sanders Shriver (96) after another long gain.

Inspired Jets flip Dolphins, 23-7

Marino, offense stifled in rout

Monday Night

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Bewitched, bothered and bewildered. And thoroughly beaten.

That was how the Miami Dolphins felt Monday night after being throttled by a stern New York Jets defense and a mistake-free offense. The Jets held the vaunted Miami attack to 200 total yards in a 23-7 National Football League victory that catapulted New York into first place in the AFC East. Freeman McNeil keyed the attack with 173 rushing yards, giving him the league lead at 645, and quarterback Ken O'Brien connected on 18 of 28 passes for 239 yards and a 15-yard touchdown to Kurt Sohn.

The 5-1 Jets are unbeaten since an opening-week loss to the Los Angeles Raiders, and their defense has allowed only 53 points in those five games.

"WE MIXED up a lot of things, with different coverages and different blitzes, a lot of looks for (Miami quarterback Dan) Marino," said cornerback Russell Carter. "At times he may have been confused.

"We were holding them up at the line and getting penetration and rushing him into doing things before he wanted to."

Marino — who burned the Jets for six TDs last season — had his worst game as a starter, accounting for only 136 yards through the air. Except for a third-quarter drive of 73 yards capped by a 3-yard score by rookie Ron Davenport, the Dolphins offense was invisible.

"They just beat us in every aspect of the game out there," said Marino, who was sacked only once but constantly was pressured. "They were the best team out there tonight."

THE JETS were so dominant in breaking a seven-game slide against the Dolphins that they controlled the ball for 23 minutes in the second half, moving out from a 6-0 lead.

"I had to make sure the chains kept moving down the field because we couldn't give the ball back to Marino," said McNeil, who averaged 6.2 yards a carry. He is the only runner ever to collect four 100-yard games against Miami.

"They key was Freeman," added O'Brien. "As he goes, we go. The teams are keying on him and not stopping him."

"He's the pulse of our offense," said Jets Coach Joe Walton. "He's become a great leader for us."

The Jets led throughout. After a scoreless first period, the Jets marched to field goals of 22 and 18 yards by Pat Leahy for a 6-0 halftime edge. The first drive, of 68 yards, stalled at the Miami 5 and the second, of 66 yards, stopped at the 1 in the final seconds of the half.

FOLLOWING A halftime ceremony in which former Jets quarterback Joe Namath had his No. 12 jersey retired and received his ring for being inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame this summer, the Jets were unstoppable. They took the kickoff and went 80 yards in 11 plays, led by McNeil's 33 yards on two pass receptions. O'Brien hit Sohn slanting into the end zone ahead of cornerback Paul Lankford for the score.

The Dolphins closed to 13-7 but New York came right back, driving 79 yards to another 18-yard field goal by Leahy. McNeil gained 36 yards on the drive.

ONCE AGAIN Marino could not move the Dolphins and the Jets clinched it with a 62-yard march. McNeil had 36 more yards rushing before Tony Paige burst in from the 1.

"They did a complete job," noted Dolphins Coach Don Shula. "It was a thorough whipping and they deserve to be right where they are."

And was this Marino's most frustrating game?

"The Super Bowl was," he said, "but this was pretty tough."

The victory was a rare one for the Jets over a strong team. Only two of their 14 victories in the two previous seasons came over teams that ended those seasons with winning records. The Dolphins are the first team the Jets have beaten this season with a winning mark.

"We're in first place, finally," said the center Joe Fields, who joined the Jets in 1975. "For the first time since I've been here, people are chasing us, and that's a good feeling."

NL Playoffs

ST LOUIS — Ozzie Smith hit one of the most improbable home runs in major league history Monday.

The five-foot-nine, 155-pound switchhitter shattered a ninth-inning tie with his first homer in 2,976 left-handed at bats as the Cardinals electrified the National League playoffs with their third straight home-field victory over the Dodgers 3-2.

It gave the Eastern Division winners a 3-2 advantage in the best-of-seven competition to determine the NL's World Series representative.

Smith was David slaying Goliath when he uncoiled with all his might on a one-ball, two-strike fastball from six-foot-five-inch, 225-pound Tom Niedenfuer.

THE DRIVE cleared the right field wall by less than a foot, struck a concrete pillar and rebounded straight to right fielder Mike Marshall, who whirled and made a meaningless throw to shortstop Mariano Duncan.

"I was running hard for second, going for a double," Smith said, "then I saw the umpire give the home run sign."

St. Louis players rushed to the plate and mobbed the $2 million-a-year shortstop as a sellout Busch Stadium crowd of 53,708 cheered in utter disbelief.

Smith began the day with a mere 13 big league homers, all of them right-handed, in an eight-year career spanning 1,184 games (including playoffs, the 1982 World Series and All-Star games.)

"I'M DUMBSTRUCK," said Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda.

The playoffs return now to Los Angeles, where his Western Division champions must win Wednesday afternoon if they're to force the playoff to a seventh and deciding game there Thursday night.

"If Ozzie had 25 or 30 home runs, you could understand it, but this is what makes baseball so great," Lasorda said between profanities.

The Cardinals, inept in 4-1 and 8-2 losses at Los Angeles last week, are flying high after 4-2, 12-2 and 3-2 victories on their home turf.

"We have two 20-game winners ready to pitch," said manager Whitey Herzog, who'll start Joaquin Andujar (21-12) Wednesay and have 21-game winner John Tudor ready in the event of a seventh game.

"If we didn't win today, I didn't think we would have a chance. We'd have needed to win two straight on the West Coast."

THE DODGERS could muster no more than two runs in any of the three games here and mounted only one serious threat Monday after Bill Madlock tied the score with his second homer in two days. It drove in Ken Landreaux, whose two singles were part of the Cardinals' second straight five-hitter.

Dodger left-hander Fernando Valenzuela, a winner in the playoff opener, righted himself after Tom Herr's two-run double in the first inning and lasted through the eighth, when he set a playoff record with his eighth walk.

Lasorda has been reluctant to go to his bullpen, because of its late-season ineffectiveness. His fears were justified in the ninth, when Niedenfuer failed to match the job Herzog received from Ken Dayley, Todd Worrell and Jeff Lahti after starter Bob Forsch let a 2-0 lead slip from his grasp in the fourth.

Smith and Willie McGee set up the first two St. Louis runs by drawing walks before Herr hit a sharp grounder that went just inside third base, eluding Madlock's dive.

SMITH'S HOMER was his eighth hit of these playoffs, the most on either team, and erased memories of his failure to field a Madlock grounder that led to the Dodgers' three decisive runs in game one.

The years Smith has spent lifting weights, trying to improve his upper body strength, paid off this season when he achieved career highs in batting average (.276), homers (6) and runs-batted-in (54). The winner of five straight Gold Glove awards also stole 31 bases.

"I don't have the physical strength to be a home run hitter, that's not what I was trying to do," said the Los Angeles native.

"I knew Niedenfuer would throw me nothing but fastballs and I was trying to pull a ball for an extra-base hit. He couldn't have thought I might hit a ball out of the park."

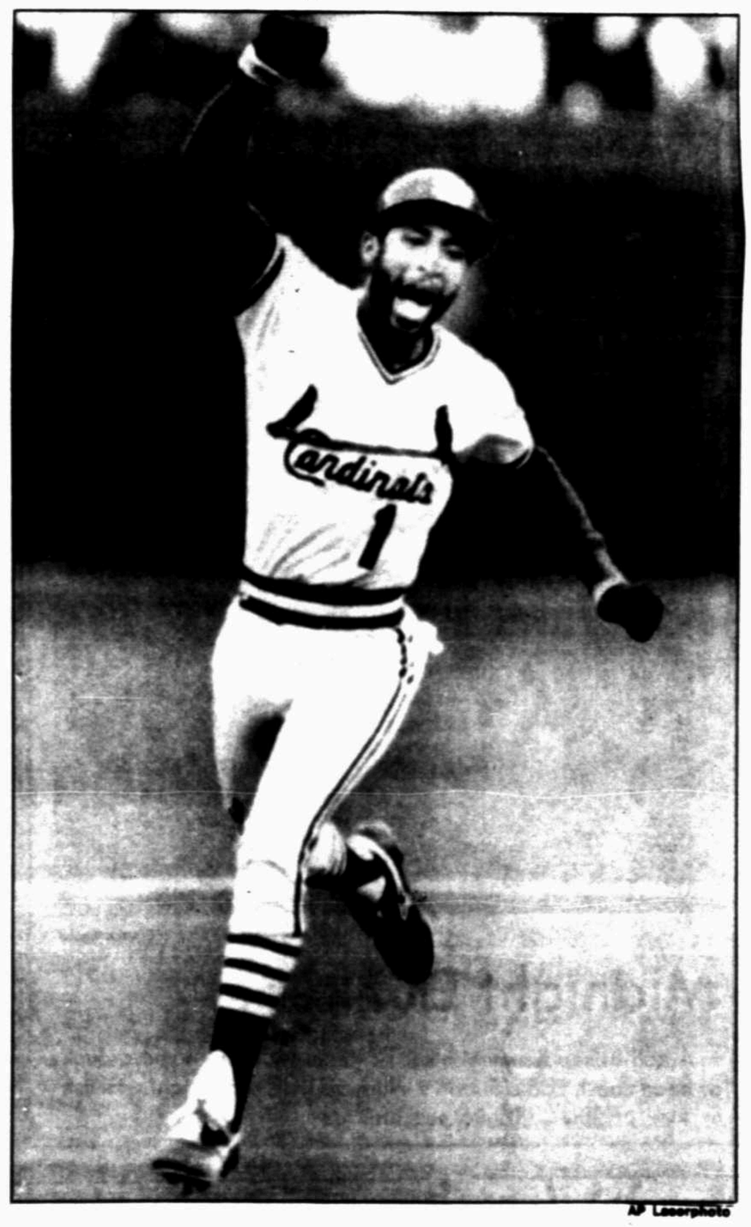

Niedenfuer agreed.

The loss was tough for the Dodgers to accept because of Valenzuela's courageous performance and the opportunity they had to take a lead in the seventh inning.

Mike Scioscia walked and Enos Cabell singled, putting runners at first and second with none out. Worrell, who relieved Dayley, went to a 3-and-0 count on Steve Sax, the eighth batter in the lineup.

Logic called for Sax to bunt, but Lasorda had him take two strikes before he swung at a bad pitch, striking out.

LASORDA ELECTED not to pinchhit for Valenzuela, who grounded out, or for rookie Duncan, who is 1-for-13 in these proceedings after hitting a popup to end the last Los Angeles threat.

USTA Texas Segment arrives in Tall City

From Staff Reports

Action got underway today in the United States Tennis Association tournament at the Midland Racquet Club and will continue through Saturday.

Midland is the fifth stop on the five-week Texas Segment in which 150 top amateurs and rising professionals are competing for ATP computer ranking points. And Midland is also the Masters stop, the tournament at which points will be awarded.

In addition to the points, $10,000 in prize money will be at stake.

Coming into Midland, Val Wilder is the circuit leader by a substantial margin in singles. The two top doubles teams are Chris Kennedy and Tom Witsken and Joey Rive and Todd Witsken.

Wilder, Springfield, Mass., is followed in the singles by Craig Carden, Tomm Warneke, Henry Dewet, Rodney Harmon, Seth Bowen, Andrew Sznajden, Todd Witsken, Joey Rive, John Sorbo, John Sevely, Kelvin Belcher, Laid Dunlop, Paul Lobban, Jeff Kalpard and Mark Wisken, seeded in that order.

Others competing are Charleton Eagle, Chris Kennedy, Grant Connell, Monty Oppenheim, Greg Hill, Mark Groetsch, Dexter McBride, Mike Lee, Peter Kolaric, Mike Smith Lior Rusinek, Carlos Gomez, Howard Herr, Rocky Royer, Hector Ortiz and Simon Bartram.

Rive, West Palm Beach, Fla., won the opening Segment of the Texas tour in Corpus Christi, by Wilder, a veteran pro from Massachusetts, took second and has been consistent through Waco, Tyler and Fort Worth. Wilder is coming off a Masters triumph Segment Four, which ended in August.

The doubles team of Kennedy-Tom Witsken played together at Trinity University in San Antonio.

In last year's Midland finals, Christo Steyn, South Africa, defeated Jeff Turpin, Dallas, 6-2, 6-4, and neither will be in this year's field. In doubles, Tres Cushing, Hinsdale, Ill., and Richard Akel, Little Rock, Ark., beat Charles Honey-Christo Steyn, both South Africa, to win the doubles title.

Of course, the tour goal is to accummulate enough points to earn a spot on the ATP tour where the large rewards await.

Area races brace for 'no pass, no play'

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Area Football

Right smack in the middle of district football races around the Permian Basin, area coaches have a new nemesis to worry about this week. The celebrated "no pass, no play" rule hits home with the first crop of ineligibles sitting out Friday's games.

By this evening or early Wednesday, most coaches in the area will know which star players will have to sit out the next six-week grading period because they didn't make a passing grade in one or more classes.

Sadly, district races could suffer, though popular opinion is that most area coaches have been able to avoid major losses in this first grading period. But throughout West Texas, nail-biting and migraines will be a common malady this week until the cuts are made.

"Most of our top kids seem to be in good shape," says Dale Ruth, head coach at Stanton. "But you just never know until the final lists come out. I think where it will hurt us is in the lower grades."

RUTH IS hoping his team can avoid such losses, particularly after getting back on track last week with a 14-6 district opening win over Eldorado after a 37-0 whitewashing by Seagraves the week before. The Buffalos are enjoying their stay atop the District 8-2A race, but they'll have to prove they belong in a hurry with co-leader Greenwood coming to town Friday.

The Rangers are also 1-0 after slipping by the Wall Hawks, 22-14, and share the top spot with Stanton and McCamey. Greenwood is 5-1 overall and looking like a strong challenger for a playoff spot.

And as Rangers coach Joe Longley says, "one of us will be 2-0 after this week," and to the winner at least a tie for the district lead.

The Buffaloes' offense got a shot in the arm with the return of quarterback Kevin Glaspie against Eldorado. The senior didn't seem to miss a beat after sitting out two games with a knee injury. He threw 27 times against the Eagles, completing 15 passes for 229 yards and a pair of touchdowns. Also making a big splash in his return to the lineup was split end Mark Gonzalez who caught five passes for 115 yards.

GONZALEZ WAS also the key man in the game-winning flea-flicker, lateraling a short completion from Glaspie to Timmy Rose coming out of the backfield. The fourth-quarter play went 33 yards for a score and was the difference in the ballgame.

Now Stanton faces the regional challenge of Greenwood, its neighbor to the west.

"They're a well-coached team and they execute real well on offense and defense, though they are not as big as they were last year," Ruth said. "To beat them we'll have to do a better job of run-blocking on our line. We'll also have to open up the passing game and eliminate our mental mistakes."

One area that Ruth was pleased with last week was shutting down the Eldorado offense, bending to allow 274 yards but allowing just one touchdown. The Buffs stopped the Eagles four times on crucial fourth down situations in their own end, including a last ditch attempt as time ran out on the clock.

The swarming Buffalo defense has Greenwood coach Joe Longley worrying about creating mistakes and turnovers on his offensive squad. The Rangers haven't had much trouble committing errors on their own the past two weekends.

GREENWOOD HURT its own cause against Wall with 10 penalties for 80 yards, including one infraction that brought back a 98-yard kickoff return. The week before in a loss to Rankin, a pair of botched punts resulted in a pair of Red Devil touchdowns that dug a hole the Rangers couldn't get out of.

'Take only advice,' ex-Tech recruit warns current prep stars

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — One-time Texas Tech football recruit Chris Pryor, courted by college recruiters from four institutions, says the temptations and pressures sidelined his life.

Pryor, who is at the center of a recruitment inquiry at Tech, has advice for other high school seniors who could be lured with promises of cars, money and other benefits.

"If I could tell those kids something, I'd tell them to take nothing but advice," Pryor told The Dallas Morning News. "I'd tell them to listen to the warnings and not let the money and the good times get to you."

Pryor, 19, now works for $4 an hour loading soft-drink trucks.

THE FORMER standout running back at Converse Judson High School claimed that Rodney Allison, as an assistant coach at Texas Tech in Lubbock, fought his way to the inside track. Pryor, then 17, also got contacts from Baylor, University of Houston and the University of Texas.

Allison, now an assistant coach at Duke University, refused to discuss his recruitment of Pryor. Texas Tech officials have asked the NCAA to investigate the events surrounding Pryor's signing.

"I really blame myself," said Pryor. "People warned me, but I wouldn't listen. I never told any adult about the money or the cars because I didn't want to get Tech or Allison in trouble. Besides, you get used to the fun."

Pryor said he first met Allison in early 1984 after Christmas break.

"HE MET me in the coach's office at Judson," said Pryor. "He said he wanted to talk to me about Tech and that if we wanted anything, just come find him at the hotel."

He said that he and his best friend, Chip Lambert, another Judson running back, visited Allison in his hotel room in San Antonio.

"We didn't ask for anything, he just gave us some money," said Pryor. "It was about $100 each."

Pryor claimed that, during the next few weeks, Allison gave both men cash, free use of a rental car, food, drinks and the use of his hotel room for parties.

Pryor and Lambert signed letters of intent in February 1984 to play with Tech. Pryor lost his Tech scholarship after failing to graduate with his high school class. He played briefly last fall for Texas A&I, but dropped out.

NCAA considers 'death penalty' repeal

By AUSTIN WILSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS — The NCAA Council, working on proposals to submit to the general membership three months from now, has decided to recommend postponing the effective date of tough new penalties against repeat cheaters on rules such as recruiting.

"We just didn't want to jeopardize anyone with previous violations," said Jack R. Davis or Oregon State, NCAA president, after the council agreed Monday to propose that the new cheating punishment take effect Sept. 1 this year.

At a special New Orleans convention in June, the NCAA passed a package of new rules that could force a school to shut down its basketball or football program for up to two years if found guilty of a second major violation in a five-year period.

When passed, the so-called "Capital Punishment" rule was made effective as of Sept. 1, 1980, exposing to the NCAA's most severe penalty more than two dozen schools already under sanctions or investigation.

If the council's proposal is passed by the entire membership at its meeting Jan. 14-16 meeting in New Orleans, those schools will have started this year with a clean slate, as far as the new rule is concerned.

DAVIS SAID he has heard no sentiment expressed for amending or softening the anti-cheating rules themselves.

There are, however, some proposals that could ease the impact of Rule 48, the controversial rule that requires certain minimum scholastic achievements for any high school student signed to a college scholarship this year — minimum grade-point averages, minimum scores on entrance exams, completion of a core curriculum of academic subjects and the like.

Since the NCAA signing date is in February, college coaches may not know until after the NCAA meeting in January just which high school prospects will be eligible for scholarships.

"They're going to have to gamble that the kids they are recuiting will be eligible," Davis said.

He said that an effort will be made to let colleges know next month what any proposed legislation will be on Rule 48. That could serve as a guideline, he said, even though nothing is final until after the full membership votes in January.

IN JUNE, the NCAA's Committee for National Drug Testing Policy recommended that every football team in a bowl game, as well as individuals in championship events in other sports, be tested for drugs and steroids as early as next school year.

Davis said the council voted Monday to send that recommendation to a steering commitee to be drafted into a proposal for consideration at the January convention.

Spurs pick up Iavaroni

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs Monday signed free agent holdout Marc Iavaroni and recruited a new point guard, team spokesman Wayne Witt said.

The Spurs, sorely in need of a point guard because of two other free agent holdouts, signed five-year NBA veteran Wes Matthews.

The 6-foot-1 Matthews played last season at Chicago and was a free agent. Witt said Matthews will sign a contract Tuesday and likely will play with the Spurs when they take on New Jersey in a pre-season game Tuesday night in Hershey, Pa.

Matthews, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, was a first-round draft pick by Washington in 1980.

Top ranked powers set for 1-2 punch

Associated Press

An Iowa offense featuring the pinpoint passing of quarterback Chuck Long and a Michigan defense that has given up a paltry 4.2 points a game clash head-on Saturday in a dream matchup of the nation's two top-rated teams.

"Their offense generates a lot of yardage and a lot of points," Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler said of the Hawkeyes, who remained No. 1 Monday in The Associated Press weekly college football poll. "It's going to be a great battle."

"They've got as fine a college defense as I've ever seen," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said of the Wolverines, who moved up a notch in the voting to No. 2.

THE BIG Ten Conference rivals put their respective 5-0 records on the line in Iowa City in a classic test of Iowa's explosive offense and a Michigan defense that's given up but one touchdown this season.

"Maybe the game will be decided by our offense and their defense," Schembechler said. "When it's all said and done, experience has told me that the best defense, if it's got a decent offense, is going to wind up in Pasadena (at the Rose Bowl)."

Michigan's trip into Iowa this year promises to be different than the last visit.

"We're confident. It's not like going into Iowa City last year," Schembechler said. The Hawkeyes handed Michigan a 26-0 defeat last season, when the Wolverines finished 6-6, Schembechler's worst year. The Hawkeyes wound up 8-4-1.

THE LATEST voting reflects the results of last weekend's action. The Wolverines beat intra-state rival Michigan State 31-0 on Saturday while Iowa defeated Wisconsin 23-13. In their conference openers the previous week, Michigan beat Wisconsin 33-6 and Iowa held off Michigan State 35-31.

"We were eager to put the Michigan State game in the can and get to the Iowa game," Schembechler said. "We came out of the Michigan State game without any injuries. We're ready to go."

Iowa moved to the top of the rankings with easy early-season victories over Drake, Northern Illinois and Iowa State. At the same time, Michigan posted triumphs over Notre Dame, South Carolina and Maryland.

Schembechler said there's little chance of stopping Iowa's potent offense, which features Long and running back Ronnie Harmon.

"YOU KNOW you're not going to stop them. But the big point is keeping them out of the end zone," Schembechler said.

"He's in command of what goes on out there," Schembechler said of Long. "He's got a great arm and a great touch. He throws very few bad passes."

Despite his team's strong showing thus far, Fry remains wary of the Wolverines and their overall talent.

"Nobody has moved the ball with any consistency against Michigan," Fry said. "They're the best-balanced football team in America. I don't think there's any question about that.

"You consider their offense, their running game, their passing game, their defense, their ball control, their tremendous number of turnovers ... they're for real."

MICHIGAN'S strong showing pushed the Oklahoma Sooners from second to third in the rankings despite a 14-7 victory over Texas that knocked the Longhorns out of the Top Twenty along with Southern Methodist, a 21-14 loser to Baylor.

Florida State, which had been No. 4, lost to Auburn 59-27 and fell to 13th place. Oklahoma State dropped from fifth to 12th after losing to Nebraska 34-24.

Meanwhile, Arkansas climbed two notches to fourth following a 30-7 triumph over Texas Tech and Florida rose from seventh to fifth after defeating Tennessee 17-10. Penn State, which edged Alabama 19-17, advanced to No. 6 as the Crimson Tide slipped from 10th to 15th.

Nebraska moved up from ninth to seventh and Auburn's bombing of Florida State enabled the Tigers to jump from 12th to eighth.

ROUNDING OUT the Top Ten are defending national champion Brigham Young, which trounced San Diego State 28-0 and vaulted from 11th to ninth, and Air Force, which trimmed Navy 24-7 and shot from 13th to 10th.

The Second Ten, in order, consists of Ohio State, Oklahoma State, Florida State, Baylor, Alabama, Georgia, LSU, UCLA, Army and Tennessee.

Accident won't deter cyclist

PETOSKEY, Mich. (AP) — An Irish cyclist whose ride across America was dashed by a traffic accident vowed to complete the journey after returning home to recuperate from his grave injuries.

"I have to finish, even it it's in a wheelchair," James Twomey, 22, said during a telephone interview from his hospital bed. "I wanted to cycle coast-to-coast, and halfway isn't enough."

Twomey's left leg and right arm were broken in several places and his spleen was ruptured Sept. 20, when the bicycle he was riding was struck by a car near Sault Ste. Marie. He was 24 days into his trek from Seattle to Boston when the accident occurred.

Twomey, a Dungardan, Ireland native, said he was unconscious for about four days after the accident and remembered few details. He said he was told that the car tossed him 30 feet into the air, over a truck and into a ditch about 70 feet away.

Joe Namath, retired quarterback of the 1969 Super Bowl Champion New York Jets, is hailed by an emotional New York crowd after having his No. 12 jersey retired Monday night. Namath now does Monday Night Football broadcasts for ABC-TV.

Jets' Namath honored with standing ovation

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Joe Namath had his No. 12 jersey retired by the New York Jets at halftime of the team's National Football League game with the Miami Dolphins Monday night as a capacity crowd at Giants Stadium gave him a long, boisterous standing ovation.

Namath, who was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame this summer, also received his Hall of Fame ring during the ceremony.

Dr. James Nicholas, the Jets' orthopedic surgeon who performed several operations on Namath's knees, gave the quarterback a sculptured crystal with the number 12 and the dates 1965-76 etched on it. It was the first time the Jets had retired a uniform number.

FOLLOWING THAT presentation, Weeb Ewbank, who coached the Jets when Namath led them to the Super Bowl championship in 1969, then presented Namath with his jersey.

"I promise you this is not an individual honor," said a teary-eyed Namath. "A lot of hard work by my teammates, Boozer, Snell, Mathis ... They're the reason I'm here tonight.

"Remember No. 12, I'll always be in spirit with the New York Jets."

The number 12 took on greater meaning for Namath, currently a football analyst for ABC, over the weekend when his wife Deborah gave birth on Saturday, Oct. 12, to Jessica Grace.

"A few days ago," Namath said that Deborah "told everybody five months ago that she would have the baby on the 12th in honor of the number."

During his career Namath, a standout at Alabama, threw for 27,663 yards and was the first quarterback to throw for 4,000 yards in a season.

Gubicza gets call in Royals' last chance

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

TORONTO — Mark Gubicza was a starter. Then he was a reliever. And then he was a starter again.

Tonight, the Kansas City Royals hope that last switch can shift their luck at Exhibition Stadium and keep them alive in the American League playoffs.

The Royals, a team that seems to thrive on adversity, trail the Toronto Blue Jays three games to two going into Game 6 tonight. One more victory in the best-of-seven series will give the Blue Jays their first pennant and bring the first World Series to Canada.

"Maybe it's the experience of losing so many playoff games and the one World Series we were in. It could help," Kansas City's George Brett said. "No one's uptight."

That goes for Gubicza, a 23-year-old who made his last start on Oct. 4.

"I'm confident," he said, speaking the way all of the young and talented Royals pitchers speak. "If we get a couple of runs, I think we have a pretty good chance of winning."

TORONTO WON the previous two games at its home park, and tonight the Blue Jays will start Doyle Alexander.

"We want to win it bad in our home town," said Jesse Barfield, who has six hits and four RBI in the series for Toronto. "Plus, we play better at home."

AL Playoffs

Alexander and the Blue Jays held a 5-2 lead midway through Game 3 in Kansas City before the Royals rallied to victory behind the performance of Brett, who went 4-for-4 with two home runs.

Gubicza, 14-10 during the regular season, was the odd man out in Kansas City Manager Dick Howser's pitching plans for the playoffs. Howser, hoping his left-handers could neutralize the Blue Jays, set up a starting rotation with three of them — Charlie Leibrandt, Bud Black and Danny Jackson — along with righty Bret Saberhagen.

Howser had said Gubicza would be used as a long reliever, and the right-hander pitched three scoreless innings in Game 1.

BLACK WAS scheduled to start Game 6, but that changed. While Jackson started the fifth game and recorded a 2-0 shutout that staved off elimination, Black got ready in the bullpen.

First place Pokes want lead at end of season

IRVING (AP) — Dallas, picked to finish fourth in its division, may be on top of the National Conference East but Cowboys Coach Tom Landry notes there are still 10 games to play.

"Right now I'm not as concerned about the two-game lead as I am the final stats at the end of the season, whether it be 10-6 or 12-4," said Landry.

Dallas' 27-13 victory over Pittsburgh Sunday was the Cowboys' first triumph over the Steelers since 1972, snapping a five-game losing streak.

The Cowboys were generally picked to finish behind division rivals Washington, St. Louis and the New York Giants. Now Dallas has a two-game lead over all three of those teams and a three-game lead over Philadelphia going into Sunday's game with the Eagles.

"It always feels good to beat Pittsburgh," said Landry. "We're still dominating teams defensively."

TONY DORSETT also finally had a 100-yard day against the Steelers, his first in five tries, as he reached the elite 10,000-yard rushing milestone.

"This was one of the biggest highlights," said Dorsett. "I was the skinny little kid from Aliquippa, Pa., who they said would never make a running back."

Dorsett, who won the Heisman at the University of Pittsburgh, caught a 56-yard touchdown pass from Danny White and scored on a 35-yard run.

HIS GOLDEN moment came on a 19-yard run in the third period.

"I had my doubts whether I was going to get the 31 yards I needed today," said Dorsett, who only had three yards at halftime. "But anything good is worth waiting for."

He now has 10,082 career yards. Dorsett handed the ball to Landry after the historic run that put Dorsett in the same club with Walter Payton, Jim Brown, Franco Harris, O.J. Simpson, and John Riggins.

"I knew Tom Landry wasn't going to throw this ball away," Dorsett quipped.

TCU probe into hoop violations finds nothing

FORT WORTH (AP) — Chancellor William E. Tucker says a three-week internal investigation of the Texas Christian University basketball program has failed to turn up any type of violations of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules.

Tucker confirmed the existence of a probe, which began on or about Sept. 26. He said the school had consulted with the NCAA, concerning procedural matters at the beginning of the investigation — but that the NCAA was not involved in the process.

"We are not on a witch-hunt," Tucker told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Monday. "But we are interested in making certain that all of our intercollegiate athletic programs reflect the university at its best.

"IF WE find substance to any rumor involving any improprieties in any program, we will do exactly as we did before (with the football program) and contact the NCAA immediately.

"At this point we have not found anything," Tucker said.

TCU Football Coach Jim Wacker suspended seven players after some of the players admitting receiving payments from school boosters.

The Star-Telegram reported Sept. 27 that rumors concerning the basketball program had become rampant following the Sept. 19 divulgence of illegal inducements and monthly cash payments to members of the TCU football team.

TCU BASKETBALL Coach Jim Killingsworth said the rumors did not surprise him.

"I don't believe any of that. There is nothing suspicious going on at all as far as I'm concerned. If there is anything going on (in connection with the program) I would be totally in shock," Killingsworth said.

Killingsworth said Monday, "I don't know what more I can say. We don't have anything to hide.

"My only concern is that we have a chance to have a pretty good basketball team. I just hope something like this doesn't ruin that chance."

Cooney readying for fight with new champion Spinks?

NEW YORK (AP) — Gerry Cooney is working in a garage.

No, the one-time heavyweight contender, who announced his retirement July 30, is not pumping gas or fixing cars. He's working out on speed and heavy bags in the two-car garage of a friend on Long Island.

Gerry Cooney says he's getting ready to fight again.

Not just a comeback fight, but a championship fight against Michael Spinks, who upset Larry Holmes for the International Boxing Federation heavyweight title. Holmes is the man who not only beat Cooney, but drove him to distraction.

"This fight is the opportunity I have been waiting for," Cooney said.

And he had a warning for Spinks.

"I'm not going to wait around until Michael Spinks fights somebody else."

GERRY COONEY, who has fought less than 18 minutes since he was stopped by Holmes June 11, 1982, feels he's ready to go after the title again — on his terms.

"I just think it's a good fight for Michael Spinks, a good fight for me and a good fight for the fans," Cooney said.

Butch Lewis, the promoter who guides Spinks' career, is interested in a Cooney-Spinks fight because he sees it as a big-money match.

"Dennis is talking to Butch Lewis," Cooney said.

Off his track record, Dennis Rappaport, Cooney's manager, could well demand purse parity for his fighter and end up talking Cooney right out of the match.

Lewis also is interested in a Spinks-Holmes rematch, and if Lewis follows the dictates of the IBF, that will likely be Spinks' first defense of the title.

BOB LEE, IBF president, has said Spinks must sign within 90 days for a defense with the top available contender. That would be Holmes until at least November, unless Holmes retires. Holmes has said he is interested in a rematch.

Lee also said the IBF would not sanction a title fight if the challenger is not ranked.

Cooney isn't ranked and has no intention of fighting to achieve a ranking.

"I think what I will do is fight an eight-round exhibition or a six-round exhibition and an eight-round exhibition," Cooney said.

Cooney's only actual fighting since being stopped by Holmes in the 13th round was a fourth-round knockout of Phillip Brown Sept. 29, 1984, and a second-round knockout of George Chaplin Dec. 8 of that year.

THOSE TWO victories gave him a 27-1 record, with 24 knockouts.

Should the IBF withdraw title recognition from Spinks, Cooney said he would still like to fight him because "as far as I'm concerned, Spinks is the heavyweight champion."

Dollar gains

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar made slight gains early today against all key currencies in quiet European trading despite fears that central banks would continue to intervene on foreign exchange markets to keep the American currency in check.

On Monday, the West German Bundesbank sold between $5 and $10 million on the open market to quell a mild dollar rally. It was part of a concerted action by the big five Western industrialized nations to drive down the dollar in an attempt to reduce the U.S. trade deficit.

In London, the dollar gained against the British pound. It cost $1.4125 to buy one pound sterling, cheaper than $1.4137 late Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $327.10 a troy ounce, up from $326.50 late Monday. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $326.85.

In Zurich, the early bid price was $327.10, up from $326.60 bid late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of 35 cents to close at a bid $327.62.

In New York Monday, gold fell 75 cents to a late bid price of $326.25.

Bull's not dead yet: Analysts

NEW YORK (AP) — Though pessimism has increased noticeably on Wall Street lately, there remains a stubborn band of analysts who contend that the bull market of the past few years has further to go.

The traditional signs of a market top simply aren't in evidence right now, they argue, and the wary mood that has developed lately is actually very healthy for the market outlook.

"We believe that the reports of the death of the bull are greatly exaggerated," say Joseph Barthel and Richard Yashewski, technical analysts at Butcher & Singer Inc., in their latest commentary on the market.

As of early this month, Investors Intelligence of Larchmont, N.Y., found more "bears" than "bulls" among the 130 market advisory services it monitors. That marked the first time the bears were in the majority since August of 1984.

Investors Intelligence operates on the premise that "since most advisory services are trend followers, they are most bearish at market bottoms and least bearish at market tops."

"The summer of 1984 was the starting point for a rally of nearly 200 points in the Dow Jones industrials," observed Charles LaLoggia, who writes a market letter based in Rochester, N.Y.

"Clearly, the sentiment figures suggest that we are closer to a major stock market bottom than we are to a major stock market top."

LaLoggia also asserts that bull markets end "when the Federal Reserve Board and the political establishment decide to curtail economic growth through the use of tight money and high interest rates.

"Generally, such a policy decision by the Fed is preceded by a prolonged period of persistently rising inflation. Rising inflation and a dramatic shift towards tight money and a no-growth policy are what causes major market tops — and we are not even close to such an environment today."

Some investors apparently were thinking similar thoughts in the past week. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials managed to post an 11.20-point gain to 1,339.94.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose .61 to 106.56, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up .01 at 222.81.

Big Board volume averaged 95.83 million shares a day, down from 121.98 million the week before.

For most of the week, the markets were caught up in a frenzy of takeover speculation — not the sort of activity, in many analysts' view, that fosters sustained market advances.

Long-time followers of the investment scene also worry about the popularity of "quick-buck" ventures such as program trading of stocks and index futures and options.

Nevertheless, other evidence of speculative excesses is lacking. Indexes of the Amex and over-the-counter markets are well below their previous highs.

Nor is there much of the complacency about the economy that usually precedes a market drop.

Midland, Odessa top towns for fast foods

Beat Dallas, Los Angeles

From Staff Reports

Midland and Odessa have been ranked nationwide as two of the top towns in the nation in per capita spending on fast foods, along with Abilene and Bryan College Station.

According to Restaurant Growth Index, published by Restaurant Business Magazine, Odessa, Midland, Bryan-College Station and Abilene, all with populations under 150,000, outperformed the more developed and highly populated metro areas of Los Angeles, New York, Chicago, Houston and Washington, DC, which comprise the top five markets in fast food sales for all of last year.

Odessa, a metro area market with 137,500 people and a 239th ranking in population among the nation's 316 metro area markets, spent $384 per person on fast food last year, which is 100.5 percent above the national per capita average of $191.47. This places Odessa second only to Anchorage, Alaska, which spent $389 per capita last year.

Midland, a metro area market with 104,800 residents in 288th place in population among the nation's 316 metro area markets, ranked sixth nationwide in per capita spending on fast food with $338. This is 76.5 percent above the national average.

In ninth place is Bryan-College Station with $323 in per capita spending for fast food, which is 68.7 percent above the national average of $191.47. Bryan-College Station ranks 281st in population with 111,300 area residents.

Abilene represents Texas' fourth top ten market for fast food. The city's per capita spending reached $319, which is 66.6 percent above the national average. With a population of 120,700, Abilene ranks 262nd in population out of 316 metro area markets.

For the first time in its eighteen year history, RGI has published per capita spending in our nation's 316 MSA's (Metropolitan Statistical Area) for both the fast food and restaurant categories, revealing highly unexpected patterns. For example, the top per capita market for fast food in the U.S. is Anchorage, Alaska at $389, which is 103 percent above the national average. On the restaurant side, Anchorage ranks fifth in per capita spending with $489, which is 107 percent above the national average. Nearly all of fast food's top ten markets in per capita spending are in the Sunbelt and a fair representation occurs again in the restaurant ranking.

For the nation as a whole, the 1984 RGI reports total U.S. sales for limited-menu establishments of $45.6 billion, which equals approximately a 40 percent share of total market. For full-menu establishments, sales reached $56.3 billion, which represents a 49 percent share of total market.

Looking ahead, RGI forecasts real compound annual growth in the limited-menu segment of 4.2 percent through 1989, and 2.7 percent for full-menu restaurants and lunchrooms. Industrywide, RGI predicts total foodservice sales of $231.2 billion by 1989 or a 41.5 percent increase over last year's $163.5 billion.

According to RGI, the nation's top ten metropolitan area markets for per capita spending on fast food are:

TOPS FOR FAST FOOD

- Anchorage $389
- Odessa $384
- Oklahoma City $375
- Honolulu $354
- Wilmington $347
- Lafayette $338
- Midland $338
- Houma-Thibodaux $329
- Bryan-College Station $323
- Abilene $319

Saudis consider new global market strategy

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

MANAMA (DPA) — Saudi Arabian oil strategists are seriously considering a global market-sharing formula involving mainly the major oil producers inside and outside the Organization of Petroleum Exporting countries, an authoritative oil publication said monday.

"There is, in fact, a growing Saudi conviction that the key to future stability of the oil market lies in this, rather than in the extent of prevailing solidarity among OPEC members themselves as has been the case in the past," said the Nicosia, Cyprus-based Middle East Economic Survey.

Survey executive editor Ian Seymour, who is noted for his strong sources in Saudi Arabia, stressed what he described as a "new relationship" that could be evolving between the Saudis and the North Sea producers in Britain and Norway.

He said that the Saudis were disillusioned with prospects for OPEC solidarity, despite a seasonal improvement in the oil market situation, and that they expected a price war by next February.

Iranian oil minister Mohammed Gharazi, who was interviewed by the survey, meanwhile, urged Saudi Arabia to "be patient for one year at least" so that it could revitalize its oil exports without damaging OPEC.

Gharazi said that Saudi Arabia should rescind certain deals that it recently concluded at discounts of up to $3 a barrel. He said that his country had nullified similar deals involving 300,000 barrels per day because prices have firmed up on the free market.

He accused the Saudis of having "reduced the price of oil after we tripled it with the blood of our revolution."

In Jeddah, the authoritative Saudi newspaper Asharq al-Awsat said that Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati would be visiting Saudi Arabia soon for discussions centring on OPEC and the oil market situation.

In other oil-related developments:

—Iran's oil exports from the gulf have picked up to 1.2 million barrels daily despite Iraq's attacks on the Iranian Kharg Island terminal, the survey said.

During the first week of October, seven tankers loaded a total of 8.45 million barrels from Sirri and Lavan islands, the southernmost points in Iran's tanker shuttle service in the gulf.

Smoking-on-the job becoming national controversy

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

DENVER — Americans smoked some 600 billion cigarettes last year, and they puffed a good many of those at work.

Back in what smokers refer to as the good old days, smoking at work was never given a second thought by employers. But companies now find themselves caught up in the national controversy over smoking in public places. Non-smokers, annoyed at the noxious fumes from their co-workers' cigarettes, are demanding a smoke-free environment.

And even smokers themselves, some of whom say they are members of a beleaguered minority group, are asking managers to lay down guidelines about smoking — if only to establish a place where they can retreat from the growing militancy of non-smokers.

Companies have responded in many ways to the emotionally charged issue, ranging from benign neglect to outright bans on smoking in work areas. But the trend toward more restrictions is gathering steam as growing evidence suggests that smokers actually cost their employers money.

"It gets down to a bottom line, dollars and cents figure," said Robert Northrop, vice president of marketing at In Control, a San Diego consulting company that sells a stop-smoking program to companies across the nation.

Northrop contends that it costs a company an additional $4,600 annually to have a smoker on the payroll. The average smoker spends about 35 minutes a day smoking instead of working. That amounts to 18.2 days a year, or almost four weeks of unproductive time, Northrop said.

"There is time lost when tools go down and smokes go up," he said.

Additionally, smokers tend to get sick more often, resulting in higher absenteeism rates and higher health insurance premiums.

An increasing number of studies are finding that smoking endangers the health of non-smokers who breathe the polluted air, said Donald Shopland, director of the U.S. Department of Health's Office on Smoking and Health. Some companies are restricting smoking just to avoid the possibility of being sued by non-smokers.

For those reasons, many companies are altering their hiring policies to favor non-smokers, Shopland said.

"You can probably increase your productivity just by hiring non-smokers," he said. "A lot of corporations are beginning to look at this as a personnel matter."

Companies that choose to hire non-smokers are on safe legal ground, Shopland said, because smokers are not a protected minority group. Consequently, it is legal to discriminate against them, he said.

But such actions are still rare.

According to The Tobacco Institute, an industry trade group that represents cigarette manufacturers, a nationwide survey of 1,100 companies conducted in May found that only 2.5 percent of the companies surveyed had declared an outright ban on smoking on company property.

Only 2.9 percent of those surveyed prohibited smoking on the job, while 63 percent had no official smoking policy.

Walker Merryman, a spokesman for the trade group, said that 85 percent of the companies surveyed reported that they do not consider whether job applicants smoke when making hiring decisions.

At least one Colorado company is phasing in a complete smoking ban on its premises.

Kaiser Permanente, the health-care organization, has started a campaign to get all of its employees to stop smoking.

The company plans to participate in the Great American Smoke-Out on Nov. 21 by serving cold turkey sandwiches to its employees.

Workers who smoke will be encouraged to participate in smoking cessation clinics in coming months in preparation for the company's smoke-free era, which will be instituted July 4.

Most employees — even the smokers — are enthusiastic about the changes. But not all.

"We do have some hard-core smokers for whom it will be a rather traumatic change," said spokesman Carol Tiegs said.

Some companies have had to change their smoking policies in response to municipal ordinances.

International Business Machines Corp. in Boulder, Colo., changed its smoking policy in February along with other company plants across the nation. The company banned smoking in meeting rooms and classrooms and declared any office with two or more employees to be a non-smoking zone.

With the passage of a Boulder ordinance restricting smoking in the workplace, smoking also was banned in restrooms, lobbies and hallways.

One of the most restrictive smoking policies in Colorado can be found at the Adolph Coors Co. in Golden. Mark Wright, director of health services at Coors, said smoking in most parts of the brewery always has been prohibited because of federal regulations regarding food processing.

But Coors has introduced more restrictive policies of its own.

About three years ago the company declared conference rooms non-smoking areas. And a year ago it banned smoking except in designated lunch rooms and areas outside the company's buildings.

Coors has given employees a number of financial incentives to give up the smoking habit, Wright said.

"You either have a smoking culture or you don't," he said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

T notes can be bought from most financial institutions

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Several years ago, while living in a different part of the country, I purchased a U.S. Treasury note through my bank there. Bank personnel had a list of notes available and assisted me in selecting one suitable for me. At that time, $10,000 was the minimum purchase amount.

Is this service still available at banks? If so, what commission do they charge? Is the same service available at brokerage firms and what is their charge?

Doyle

A. You can buy Treasury notes through virtually all commercial banks and securities brokerage firms, as well as through savings banks and savings and loan associations with brokerage affiliations.

Your recollection of minimum amounts may be a bit hazy. Treasury notes with maturities of less than four years usually come in $5,000 minimum denominations, those with maturities of four to 10 years in $1,000 minimums.

When you buy an already issued Treasury note, as you evidently did in your previous purchase, the bank or brokerage might buy the note for its own account in the market and sell it to you at a marked-up price. Or, it might sell you a note it already owns, at a marked-up price. In either case, you would pay a markup and, most likely, a commission — often called a "service fee."

When a bank or brokerage buys a new note for you at a Treasury Department auction, you pay the issue price, plus a commission.

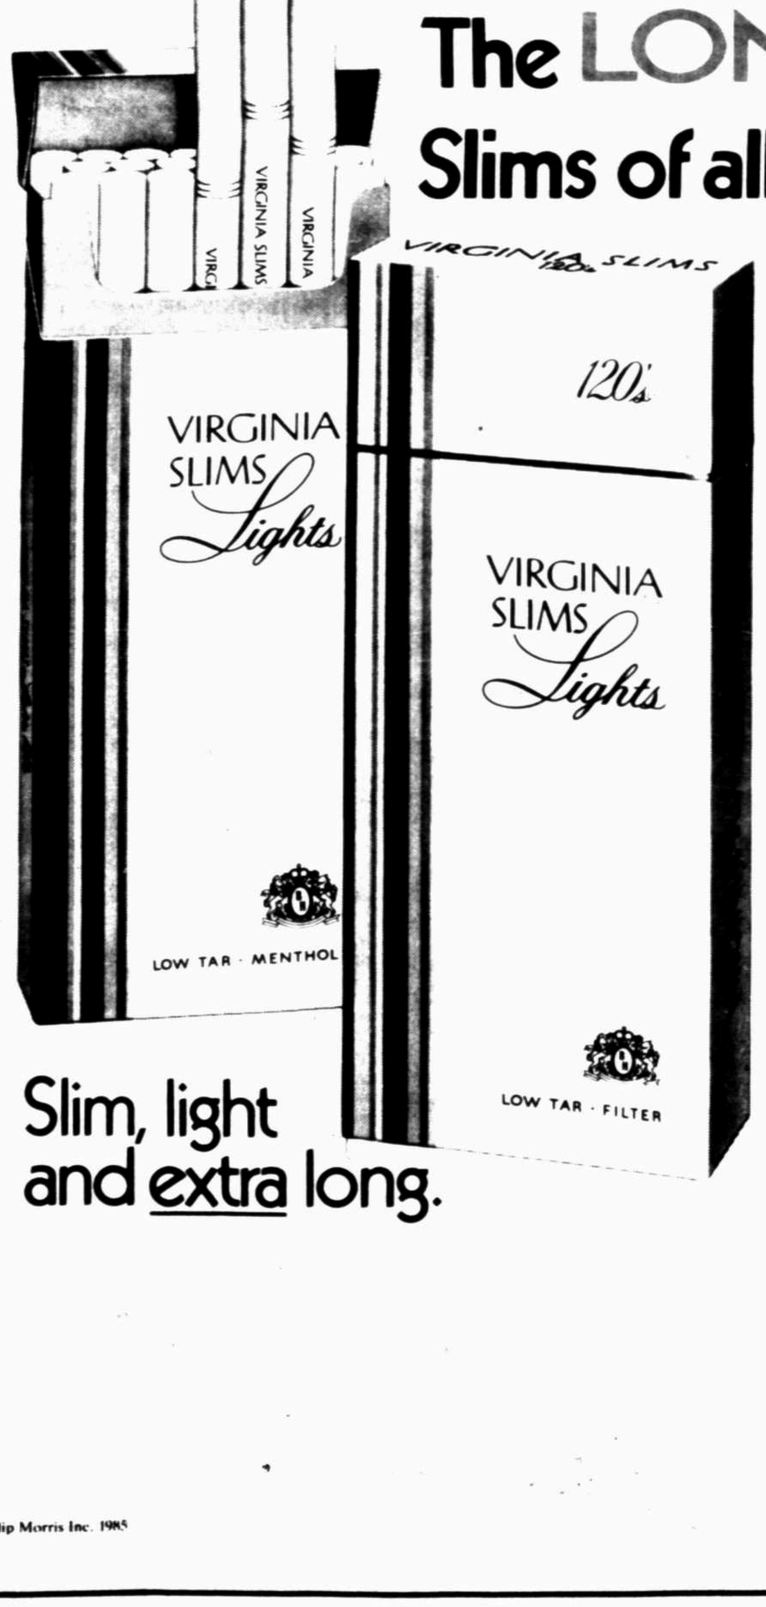

Markups vary from one bank or brokerage to another and can be as high as 2 percent — $20 per $1,000 face amount of note. Furthermore, you may never know the amount of the markup, because it is added to the note's purchase price.

Two companies set to refinance municipal bonds

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The city got one step closer to saving about $1 million, after the council chose two firms Monday to oversee the refinancing of about $48 million in bonds.

The council unanimously choose two firms, Shearson Lehman Brothers with Midland's RepublicBank First National and Rauscher, Pierce Refsnes, Inc., to put together its refinancing package. The other investment firms vying for the city contract were Kirchner Moore & Co. with Houston's First City National Bank and E.F. Hutton and Rotan-Mosle.

The firms will help the city issue about $25,800,000 in general obligation bonds and about $21,700,000 in contract revenue bonds, said Finance Director Troy Gifford. These bonds represent about 40 percent of the city's $110 million debt.

The city is taking advantage of present low interest rates to refinance bonds that were originally sold at higher interest rates, Gifford said. The refinancing should save the city about $1 million, he said. On the average, Gifford said the city is saving about 2 percent over past interest rates.

"It's like refinancing your house. If you got a mortgage you can pay off without a penalty, with an old rate of 13 percent, and rates today are at 10, then it would make sense for you to refinance your mortgage," said Joe Liberty, senior vice president with Rauscher, Pierce Refsnes, Inc.

It's been five years since the city has refinanced any bonds, Gifford said. The last time the city refinanced their debt was in 1979. Since then, interest rates have continued to rise, until the last 18 months, Gifford said.

Liberty said the city might be able to refinance its bonds at interest rates as low as 8.8 percent.

The council will vote on a refinancing package around the end of November, Mayor Thane Akins said.

Akins said fluctuating interest rates make bond refinancing a "very delicate" procedure. He said interest rates could rise again before the November meeting, reducing the advantage of refinancing the bond debt.

The city is rushing to approve of this package before Jan. 1, in case Congress passes its tax bill. Under the proposed federal tax bill, Liberty said, formerly tax-free refinancing bonds will be taxed. New bond issues will continue to remain tax-free, he said.

Both investment firms have offices in Dallas where the city's investment advisor, First Southwest Company, is located.

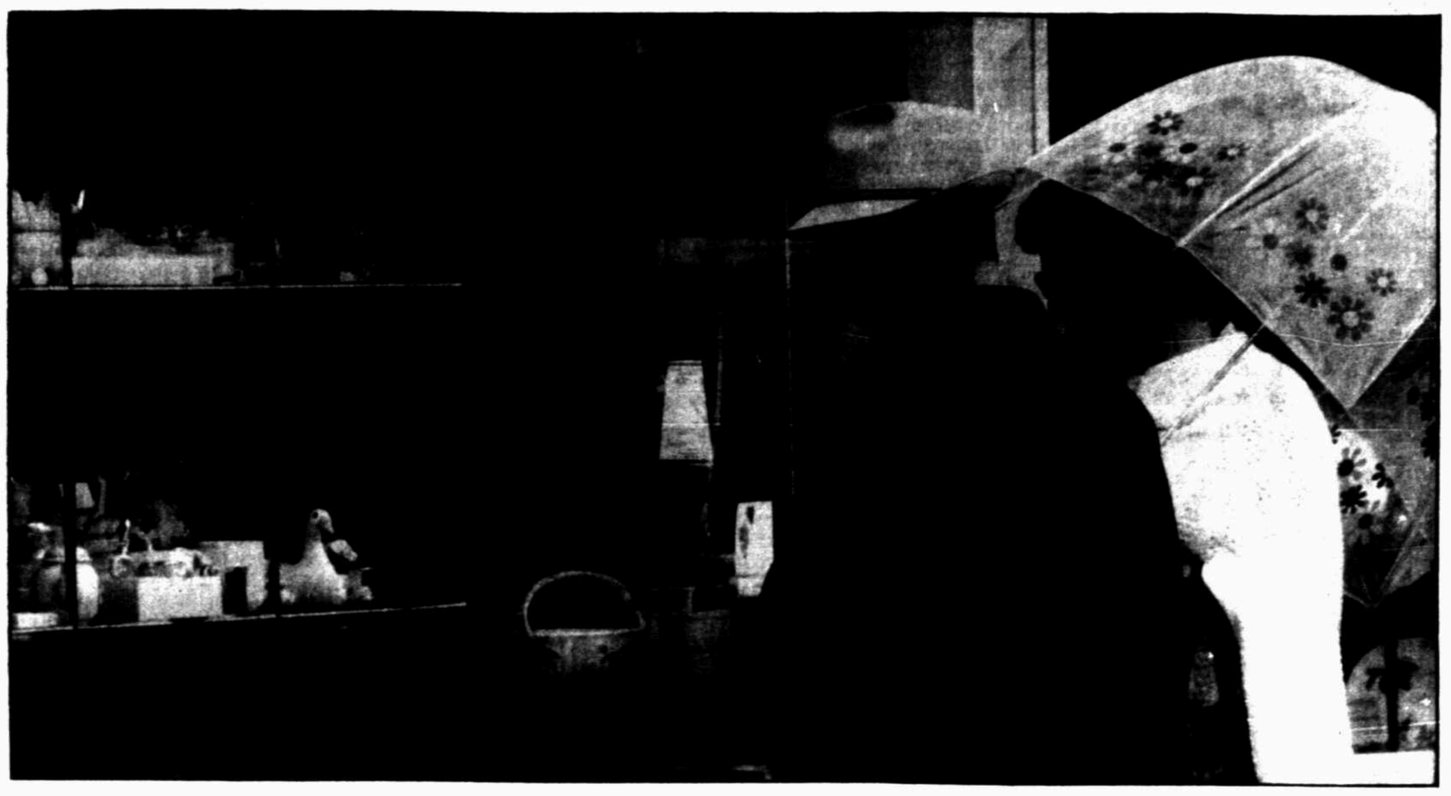

Akins said several factors influenced the council's decision on its choice of investment firms.

"One, was having all the people located together, that we would be dealing with. The people actually doing the numbers on it were in Dallas. The attorneys were in Dallas. And First Southwest, who advises us, is in Dallas," Akins said.

He also said the city worked well with Shearson Lehman Brothers on a deadline in issuing airport bonds last fall.

A local tie, with the Midland offices Rauscher, Pierce Refsnes, Inc. and RepublicBank First National, was another determining factor, he said.

"When you add them together, it probably helped make the choice. But I'm sure any of the firms could have done a good job," Akins said.

MCHD authorizes refinancing of bonds

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors on Monday authorized a $21.5 million bond program to refinance existing 1983 revenue bonds. Directors claim the move could reduce Midland Memorial Hospital's debt service by up to $2 million.

The series 1985 AAA bonds, will not be secured by taxing revenues, the issue states. Instead, the bonds will be secured by MMH's other revenues. Maturation dates vary from 1986 to 1999.

Ron Peterson, vice president of finance and chief financial officer, has said the refinancing will not create money for new projects, but will refund existing bonds to reduce interest expense.

The refinancing is "strictly" a "money-saving" effort for the hospital and the measure could "reduce the hospital's debt service by $1 to $2 million," Peterson said.

In June 1983, hospital directors issued $19 million in MCHD revenue bonds, the proceeds of which were used, in part, to construct a 77-bed addition to the hospital, renovate the existing hospital and purchase various equipment.

The following October, MCHD issued another $2 million in MCHD revenue bonds to purchase and install a tomography scanner and construct a parking garage.

The board in September moved toward the present refinancing when it voted to transfer $1.9 million from the construction fund to the operations account.

Peterson said at the time that the funds must be transferred out of the construction fund to "allow the trustee to make a higher profit."

"This will save us $200,000 over the life of the issue of the bonds," he added. The series 1985 bonds have a 14-year issuance and interest rates vary from 6.25 percent to 9.4 percent.

According to Peterson, MCHD was required by law to transfer the $1.9 million (the amount of excess funds in the construction account) at the time of defeasance.

Proceeds from the sale of the bonds will be used to defease refunded bonds, pay accrued interest, and pay costs on certain items of capital equipment, premiums on the municipal bond insurance policy and other expenses.

MCHD contracted Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc. to refund the existing 1983 junior and senior revenue bond indebtedness.

Rauscher Pierce is the fifth largest provider of hospital financing.

Public hearing tonight on city's growth

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The first of five public hearings on improvements to existing neighborhoods and plans for the city's growth will begin at 7 p.m. tonight at Lee High School.

The City Planning Commission will discuss its plans for the northwest section of the city at this hearing. These suggestions are outlined in the proposed comprehensive plan to help guide the City Council on how the city should develop new areas and what should be done to improve existing neighborhoods through the year 2000. The areas discussed tonight include A, 1 and 3.

Planning Area A - This area covering about 4,700 acres or 7.3 square miles is bordered by State Highways 191 and 158 on the south and Loop 250 and Holiday Hill road on the east.

With the exception of several scattered large home sites on half-acre lots or more, this area is undeveloped. Only about 320 acres at the northwest corner of State Highway 191 and Loop 250 are within city limits.

An elementary school is being built in the Grassland Estates subdivision and the Midland Independent School District has bought a site in the area to build a junior high school. A neighborhood park is also being located next to the elementary school.

The comprehensive plan recommends that this area mainly be used for low density residential dwellings or single family homes. Between 4 to 4.5 dwelling units per acre are recommended.

A regional shopping mall and several community wide shopping centers, when needed, should be located along State Highway 158 and Greentree Boulevard, State Highway 158 and 191 and State Highway 158 and Loop 250, the plan says.

The plan also warns against large-scale non-residential uses, such as businesses and public buildings, along the State Highways.

Community Area 1 - This area, covering about 4.6 square miles, is bounded by Loop 250 on the north and west, Garfield Street on the east, Wadley Avenue, Midkiff Road and Andrews Highway on the south.

Area 1 is considered a new, primarily residential area, with about 26 percent of the land vacant.

No more apartment developments, except along the Loop, are recommended for this area. The comprehensive plan says the area has more apartments, especially along Midland Drive, than is advocated by city policy. More than 45 percent of the housing units in this area are classified as multi-family or apartments.

The plan recommends that the city monitor possible deterioration of housing conditions around Lee High School, while the rest of the housing is considered to be new and in good condition. Most of the houses have been built since 1970.

No more public facilities are needed, except for one elementary school, west of Midland Drive, as the area grows, the plan says. About 5,000 more people are expected to move into Area 1, with 550 of elementary school age.

The area now contains three elementary schools, Emerson, Parker and Rusk. Goddard Junior High and Lee High School also serve the area.

No more non-residential land uses, such as businesses and offices, should be allowed along Andrews Highway, the plan says. Sinclair Avenue should also be extended south to Andrews Highway.

Community Area 3 - This area containing about 10.5 square miles is bordered by Loop 250 on the south, Holiday Hill Road on the west and Big Spring on the east.

Most of Area 3 is undeveloped. Almost 64 percent or 4,394 acres are vacant. The Midland Country Club, the city's water treatment plant, Green Tree Country Club and the Midland Polo Club are within this area.

The plan recommends that area 3 continue to be used for single-family residences, not to exceed five dwelling units per acre. The plans warns the council, "...decisions regarding zoning on smaller tracts for higher densities should be approached carefully."

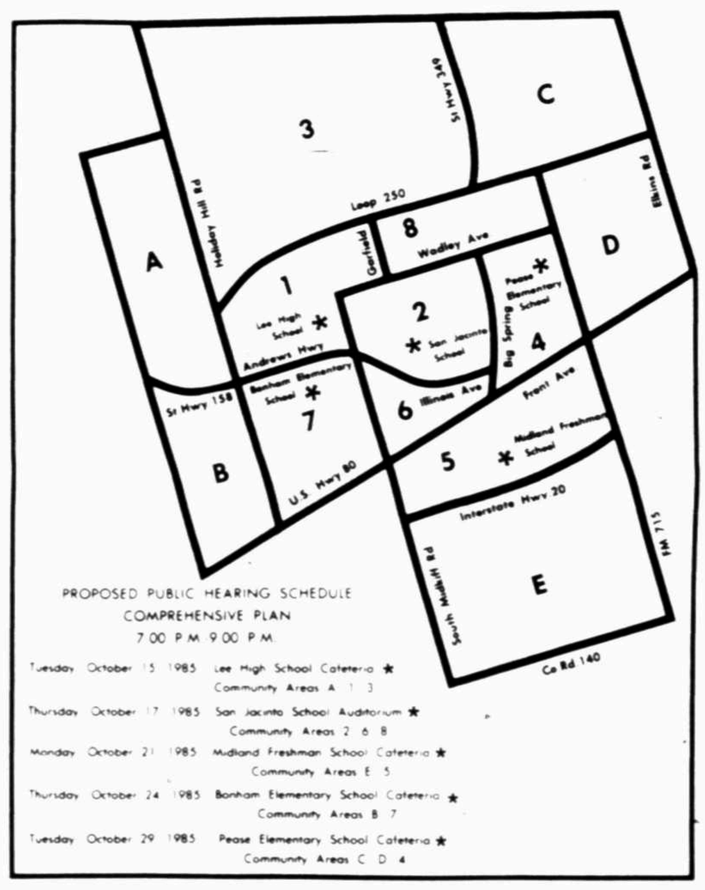

Almost 32,000 more people are expected to populate Area 3. About 3,100 of these people are expected to be elementary-age children. The plan estimates that five elementary schools located west of Holiday Hill Road may have to be built to serve this population. The area now contains one elementary school, Santa Rita. Older students attend Goddard Junior High, Midland Freshman and Midland High, south of Loop 250.

The plan also says that an unspecified number of neighborhood parks and one community park will be needed. A neighborhood park consists four to eight acres and a community park can encompass up to 100 acres.

Additional water and sewer lines are also recommended for this area, as development occurs.

The plan suggest that "A" Street eventually be extended north of Loop 250 with an overpass.

The second public hearing is at 7 p.m. Thursday at San Jacinto School Auditorium, 1400 North "N" St. City officials will discuss future plans for central Midland Areas 2, 6 and 8 (please see map).

Hammond, Weddel sentenced in arson

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton said he hoped he meted out "righteous judgment" Monday, as he sentenced Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond and former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel on arson-related convictions.

The judge sentenced Hammond to six months in a jail-like facility on his perjury conviction, fined him $10,000 and placed him on probation for five years in concurrent probated sentences for arson, conspiracy and another perjury count. He could have been sentenced up to 25 years in prison.

Weddel was placed on probation for five years on two probated sentences for arson and conspiracy and was fined $20,000. He faced up to 15 years in prison.

"The crime of arson is a very despicable offense," Judge Bunton said. "It endangers human lives. It destroys property (and) is committed to either cover up another crime or is done for greed with intent to defraud."

The judge said the case had "political overtones."

Both men stood firm in denial of the crimes and maintained their innocence.

"I've told this court I was innocence; I am innocent," said Hammond, 44. "You had a job to do. I appreciate your courtesy and hospitality you have extended me," he said.

Weddel, 53, said, "I have maintained my innocence from the start," he said. "I continue to do so today."

BUT A JURY in El Paso last month found both guilty of conspiracy to commit arson and guilty of arson in arranging to burn the O'Michael Building, in which the two had joint interest, in Odessa in September 1981, to collect insurance funds. In addition, Hammond was found guilty on two counts of perjury.

Both seemed relieved at the sentences, but indicated they would appeal.

"I'm really grateful for it," Weddel said afterward. "I certainly had rather be on probation than in jail."

Still, he claimed to be guiltless of the charges and verbally assaulted the El Paso jury which convicted him and Hammond.

Ector County lacks funds for policy management

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA - Ector County Commissioners Monday recognized the appointment of the county's new auditor, approved the reorganization of the auditor's office, including the hiring of a secretary-receptionist.

The action, however, prevented Commissioners Court members from funding the newly-created policy management office, which was supposed to have been accomplished through elimination of the internal audit function from the auditor's office and transfer of funds from the auditor's budget.

A resolution submitted by Fiscal Services Director Tom Pace failed to gain approval when Commissioners Bryan Henderson, Bill Tolbert and Gerrid Bowen decided that no funds were available to provide a salary for a policy management officer.

District Judge Joe Connally, with concurrence of new auditor Don Potter, approved minor changes in the amended budget for the auditor's office.

The budget amendment submitted by the county's four district judges, who appoint and oversee the auditor's office, called for Potter's salary to be set at $42,870.48. By state law, the auditor's salary is tied to that of the county judge.

Precinct 2 Commissioner Henderson, presiding over the court in Judge Jan Fisher's absence Monday, observed that the judge's salary includes $1,200 for presiding as a juvenile judge. Connally, speaking on behalf of himself and the three other judges, agreed to the reduction of Potter's salary by $1,200.

Connally and Potter jointly agreed to a suggestion from Henderson to reduce the salary classification for the auditor's new secretary-receptionist from a six to a seven, which will save the county from $689 to $798 annually.

Potter also agreed to minor alteration of the auditor's office equipment maintenance allowance. Former Auditor Dan Ramirez had allowed $395, but Fiscal Service Director Pace noted that the county has a contract with an outside firm for maintenance of all county office equipment.

Under state law, county commissioners have no control over the auditor's budget except to question expenditures that might be considered excessive, but even excess expenditures may not be changed by Commissioners Court without agreement of the auditor and the district judges who appoint him.

State law also provides that the auditor, with approval of district judges, may name whatever number of assistants he deems necessary to operate his office and commissioners are required to pay whatever salaries district judges set for such assistants. Potter, whose two-year appointment became effective Oct. 10, said Monday afternoon he was not disappointed with the minor changes made in his budget for the 1985-86 fiscal year. He said his primary concern at this point is to establish a strong auditor's office, which his bosses, the county's four district judges, have indicated they want to see operating in Ector County.

Gallegher sentenced in indecency, kidnapping attempts

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Joseph Gallegher pleaded no contest Monday to attempted indecency with a child and attempted aggravated kidnapping, and was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Gallegher, a former Boy Scout Master, substitute teacher and Big Brother volunteer, received a five-year sentence for attempting to handcuff Trinity School headmistress Margaret Simmons on Sept. 5, and four years for a June incident involving an 11-year-old boy. Judge Vann Culp of the 238th District Court set the sentences to run concurrently, according to Assistant District Attorney Tom Morgan.

The 38-year-old Midland man was sentenced to 13 years for child molesting in February, but is appealing that sentence. His appeal bond was revoked by 142nd District Court Judge Pat Baskin Sept. 18 at Morgan's request after the incident with Ms. Simmons.

Gallegher had previously told reporters he tried to handcuff Ms. Simmons to take her down to the police station because Trinity School owed him money. At the Sept. 18 hearing, Ms. Simmons testified the school owed Gallegher nothing.

The 11-year-old boy whom Gallegher attempted to molest in June testified against him Monday because Gallegher pleaded no contest instead of guilty, according to Morgan.

"His family is very relieved to have this behind them," Morgan said.

Gallegher remained in county jail this morning, and Morgan was unsure whether he would be sent to the TDC to begin his five-year sentence, or would remain in county jail until his appeal on the 13-year sentence was decided.

The maximum sentence for attempted indecency with a child, a third-degree felony, is 10 years in prison, while attempted aggravated kidnapping is a second-degree felony with a maximum sentence of 20 years, Morgan said.

Bullock announces re-election bid for comptroller

By DAVID ELLIOT
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock, the purveyor of gloomy economic forecasts the past two legislative sessions, kicked off his 1986 re-election campaign Monday.

"Over the next four years Texas will confront financial challenges in its government like never before in its history," Bullock said in a prepared statement. "It will be more difficult than ever to keep state services up and taxes down. But I know Texans are up to the challenge, and I want to be there with them as I have in the past."

From 1973 — one year before Bullock took office as the state's chief tax collector and financial officer — to 1981, state revenues grew at an annual rate of more than 14 percent as energy prices rose.

Then the boom went bust. From 1981 through 1984, the rate of growth slowed to 5.42 percent a year. And shortly before legislators convened in January, Bullock warned lawmakers that they would have to generate $1 billion in additional revenue or reduce costs to draft a balanced state budget.

A Bullock spokesman predicted Monday that the comptroller would draw little or no opposition in his re-election bid, despite the dreary economic news he periodicly delivers.

> "Over the next four years...it will be more difficult than ever to keep state services up and taxes down. But I know Texans are up to the challenge, and I want to be there with them..."
>
> — Comptroller Bob Bullock

"They don't want to shoot the messenger," said Glen Castlebury, deputy comptroller. "Texas is basically a conservative state and we applaud the guy that gets up and sounds the warning. It's a credit to the sophistication of the Texas public."

Castlebury said Bullock never considered not running for re-election. "Bullock's a fighter, he likes this type of challenge. He's not satisfied with doing the same thing every day and just drawing a paycheck."

George Strake, chairman of the state Republican Party, foresees no opposition for Bullock. "I haven't heard one person express an interest in running," he said. "If he's unopposed, he's less apt to work to support (Democratic Gov.) Mark White."

One week before White's 1983 inauguration, Bullock announced he would seek the Governors Mansion in 1986. On July 23, 1984, he dropped out, saying, "There has been no great public clamor for my services as governor."

So far, Bullock is the only announced candidate for state comptroller. Matthew Dowd, political director for the state Democratic Party, predicte Bullock's presence on the ballot would strengthen the entire Democratic ticket.

"I think it will help," said. "He's a very popular officeholder. Any of the top Democratic incumbents being on the ballot will help us."

In 1982, Bullock spent $1 million in defeating Robert Calvert of Fort Worth in the Democratic primary and former state Sen. Mike Richards, R-Sugarland, in the general election.

Castlebury said the last poll assessing Bullock's popularity was conducted in 1983. "His name identification was awesome," he said. "And his job approval ranked upwards of 70, 75 percent."

While in office, Bullock, 66, has staved off a heart attack in 1979 and a bout with alcoholism, which was treated in 1982 at a California center.

Midland-area highways called safest in state

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A new law requiring state agencies to submit to the Legislature detailed information about on-the-job injuries will help reduce accidents, an assistant attorney general says.

Lou McCreary Monday said the law will focus attention for the first time on the problems associated with occupational injuries.

"We're breaking new ground here," McCreary said at a job safety seminar for state agency administrators. "It will make state agencies more accountable to the Legislature."

McCreary presented Department of Public Safety Lt. Jimmie Rhoads an individual safety award for a particularly effective job safety program in Midland. Rhoads accepted the honor on behalf of Major Ira W. Dees, who retired Aug. 31.

Midland was the only region in the state to attain the department's goal of 2.5 accidents per 1 million miles traveled.

"It's really for the region," Rhoads said of the award, "because every driver helped make the record."

The new law requires all state agencies and commissions to submit quarterly reports on the number of on-the-job injuries and the amount of workers' compensation and medical benefits paid to injured employees. Agencies must also submit an account of any efforts made to reduce job injuries, including the participation of their staff in job safety training programs.

McCreary said Attorney General Jim Mattox is pushing hard to reduce occupational accidents in Texas. A division of Mattox's office is charged with conducting periodic reviews of agencies' safety programs to achieve that end.

Employers and insurers must begin to stress safety — instead of profits — for injuries to decrease, McCreary said. "Management doesn't give workers enough training," he said. "Dollars take a back seat to safety."

Some recent court decisions indicate the judiciary is beginning to hold employers more accountable for on-the-job injuries, he said. A judge recently ruled that a New Jersey firm had to provide a smoke-free environment for a worker who was sensitive to cigerettes.

In another case, involving an Illinois film processing firm, two corporate executives were convicted of criminal homicide when an employee died following exposure to cyanide. A judge sentenced the executives to 25 years in prison and fined them $10,000 each.

"The courts are not going to put up with this," McCreary said.

In other action Monday, commissioners approved an agreement with Andrews County under which Andrews County juveniles detained for various criminal offenses will be housed in the Ector County Youth Center.

The agreement was necessitated by changes in the Texas Family Code, which requires juveniles being detained as delinquents be held in a state-certified juvenile facility pending disposition of their cases.

Under the agreement, Andrews County will pay Ector County $50 per day for each juvenile housed in the county youth center. The agreement also calls for Andrews County to reimburse Ector County for any medical treatment required while a juvenile is in custody.

Commissioners also accepted responsibility for maintenance of about seven-tenths of a mile of road in Knox Village in West Ector County, which Marshall Fields General Manager R. Wayne Bateman stated had been completed in compliance with county specifications.

Commissioners deferred action on a similar request from landowners in the Webber subdivision. Road and Bridge spokesman Bud Bush said that, though the roads have been in use for about five years, the roads have never met county minimum standards.

Commissioners also adopted an order authorizing the issuance of $9.6 million in revenue bonds for improvement and expansion of facilities at Medical Center Hospital.

The funds will provide for a $600,000 for a new telephone system, a $1.8 million computer system, $1.7 million for renovation and expansion of the MCH obstetrics unit and $2.2 million for a parking garage.

ARSON

Weddel accused the Federal Bureau of Investigation of lying, falsifying records and using "trick photography" to win a conviction."

"I had rather be associated with Machine-Gun Kelly than them," he said.

Hammond was less vocal.

"Some you win; some you lose," he told friends in the courtroom. "Hell," he said, "I'm too old to do six months (in jail.)

EIGHT MONTHS AGO, in February, in federal court in Midland, Hammond and Weddel were initially tried in the case but the jury was "hung" on a verdict. The jury had voted 8-to-4 for acquittal for Hammond and 10-to-2 for acquittal for Weddel.

Afterward, the judge ordered a new trial and set it in El Paso. Hammond's attorney, Warren Burnett of Odessa, called the judge's action "impetuous," decried the sentencing, and suggested that the government had no real case against the defendants.

"Any sentence in this case would be an outrage," he charged.

Further, Burnett said he would "not like to do anything to take away from the rumor" that FBI agent Bill Kirkwood, who headed the initial investigation into the Hammond-Weddel case, was forced out of the FBI shortly after the first trial. He noted that the San Antonio prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ellen Byers, who prosecuted Hammond and Weddel in the first trial, resigned her position.

Burnett noted that Hammond's record is "quite remarkable," and Weddel's attorney, Travis Shelton of Lubbock, said his client was both disappointed in and frustrated by the conviction. He said Weddel has been a "good and useful citizen" in Odessa.

Prior to meting out the sentence, Bunton said that arson "must not be condoned or encouraged," and any person who participates in the crime "deserves to be punished severely."

Further, the judge said perjury, "telling lies in a court proceeding," can result in miscarriages of justice.

"And a public official who stoops this low should not only be chastised but also punished to warn others" that perjury will be not tolerated in the judicial system.

BUNTON NOTED that the arson case was "built solely" on the testimony of three persons, including ex-convict John Peterson and his brother, who admitted their complicity in the arson case and who were granted immunity from prosecution in the O'Michael Building fire. They have been "convicted of despicable crimes," Bunton said. And each "made a deal" with the government, and those deals were "extremely beneficial to them and very, very expensive for the government."

The government has or will spend about $1 million to effect guilty verdicts in the case, he said.

"Corners were cut — actions were taken — representations were made or incidents (were) concealed that the court feels were wrong and reprehensive," Bunton said.

Bunton said his complaints were not directed at Assistant U.S. Attorneys Tom McHugh or James "Jim" Blankinship, "who for the most part did a very commendable job" in prosecuting the case in El Paso.

"This case always had political overtones," Bunton said. "It has tended to disrupt the Odessa City Hall, the Odessa Fire Department and the Odessa Police Department."

The judge said he expects the government and defendants both to "adhere" to fair-play rules. He said the power of the U.S. Department of Justice, the FBI, and federal prosecutorial offices is "almost unlimited and indeed awesome." Such power should be used with discretion and in following the U.S. Constitution and laws.

Moments before sentencing, the judge said that sentencing brings him "no joy," and cited John 7:24: "Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment."

Board postpones decision on auto insurance hike again

By DAVID ELLIOT
Reporter-Telegram
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The State Board of Insurance has once again delayed a decision on whether to raise automobile insurance premiums.

The Texas automobile industry has asked for an average 10.6 percent hike statewide. Industry spokesmen say this is the lowest recommended rate increase in 10 years.

But the insurance board's staff is recommending an average 2.2 percent statewide reduction in insurance premiums.

Monday, board member Carole Keeton Rylander moved to reopen deliberations on the rate hike, saying she wants more time to study the effect on automobile injuries of a new mandatory seatbelt law.

The insurance industry estimates that 40 percent of the Texas public will wear safety belts once strict enforcement of the new law begins Dec. 1. While staff members say 50 percent of all Texans will buckle up, Rylander thinks usage could be even higher.

"I happen to believe that we are realizing and can sustain a higher usage than any of those levels," she said.

In an effort to bolster her claim, Rylander has invited Col. Jim Adams, director of the Department of Public Safety, to testify before the board Oct. 25. During the 1985 Legislature, Adams frequently appeared before committees to testify in favor of a mandatory seat belt law.

While she said she thinks most Texans will comply with the seat belt law, Rylander won't say why. "The reason I want Col. Adams to come in and testify is to bring in his numbers," she said. "I will not speak for Col. Adams. I believe you've had a lot of compliance already, even before the mandatory penalties go into effect."

Midland woman remains critical after weekend one-car accident

From Staff Reports

A 21-year-old Midland woman injured Thursday in a one-car accident remained listed in critical condition this morning, according to a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman.

Amber Sawyers, 4410 N. Lanham, was injured about 2:30 a.m. Thursday when a 1976 Chevrolet Monte Carlo driven by Terry Weddle hit a utility pole at Midland Drive and Cuthbert Avenue, according to police reports. Ms. Sawyers was a passenger in the car. Weddle, 24, 4622 Leisure, has been released from the hospital, the MMH spokeswoman said.

In other reports from law-enforcement agencies, a stolen 1980 Chevrolet pickup was found in a field at the intersection of county roads 1180 and 123 Sunday.

According to Sheriff's Office reports, the $5,000 pickup had been stolen earlier that day from the home of Guadalupe G. Perez, 124 Cody Lane. A witness saw a teen-age boy standing near the vehicle, which had apparently rolled over. There was extensive damage to the driver's side of the pickup, reports said.

An $800 television and a $250 cable-converter box were reported stolen in a Monday burglary by Essie Moore, 502 S. Tyler, according to police reports.

Jeffrey Dale Jones, 2439 Whitmire, reported the loss of a $750 stereo and a $90 clock-radio in a Monday burglary of his apartment, reports said.

Husband gets 40 years for murder

From Staff Reports

A 28-year-old Breckenridge man was sentenced to 40 years in the Texas Department of Corrections by 142nd District Judge Pat Baskin Monday after pleading guilty to the July 1 murder of his estranged wife.

Marion Allen Warren admitted shooting 24-year-old Judi Kay Warren outside the Cimarron apartment complex, 5244 N. Loop 250, according to Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre.

Warren was also accused of shooting Ms. Warren's companion, 21-year-old Robert Jeannotte of Rankin, but the attempted-murder charge was dropped in return for a guilty plea on the murder charge, Schorre said.

According to police reports, Jeannotte was shot in the stomach at about 4 a.m., when he and Ms. Warren went outside to see who was prowling around her vehicle. The prowler was Warren, who shot Jeannote and then turned the gun on his wife, reports said. He was arrested at the scene shortly thereafer.

Warren and his wife had reportedly been divorced once, had remarried and then separated, with Ms. Warren moving to Midland to stay with her sister.

Bill's Fireplace Center has quality fireplace equipment, local service

Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace, corner of Loop 250 and Princeton, has been serving the Midland area since 1977. Owner Bill Rodriguez says that they specialize in fireplace and firescreen needs during the winter months, because it is difficult to find quality fireplace accessories in the Permian Basin. In fact, Bill says, many people have been going out of town for fireplace accessories because they don't realize quality products and service are available right here in Midland at Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace.

Bill specializes in helping everyone enjoy their fireplaces more.

He even has a solution for those who love a flickering fire, but simply can not stand the hassle of firewood and ashes- log sets. Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace offers Peterson log sets, one of the best lines made. Available in sizes ranging from 16" to 60" long, these sets look like real logs. You'll have to see the displays at Loop 250 and Princeton, to believe how real these sets appear.

If you already have a log set which is not functioning properly, Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace can service it. Amber glo and volcanic rock are in stock.

Bill also caters to those who like a real fire. Everything you could possibly need- custom made wood racks, tool sets, fireplace matches, tongs, log carriers, ash buckets, popcorn poppers, heavy grates and apartment size grates are all in stock.

Bill realizes people's fireplace needs vary, but quality is always important. That's why he carries a wide variety of quality accessories, in varying sizes and prices.

For example, an apartment dweller or renter can find an appropriately sized grate designed and a quality screen which will protect the carpet and furniture, without having to spend a lot on something he may not need at his next home. A Boston Spark Guard screen, available for around $55, is ideal in this situation.

On the other hand, Bill says, "We can accomodate just about any fireplace with a firescreen (even zero clearance fireplaces such as Majestic, Heatilator, Superior, True Heat and other brands). The fireplace business is unusual. No two fireplaces are alike; therefore, we special order each screen. Yet, we normally get 24 hour delivery on firescreens and accessories."

Bill is always careful to point out that when you make an investment in a firescreen you need to consider quality as well as beauty. He is particularly proud of the Portland, Thermo-Rite, and Pacific firescreens which he offers to his customers.

Bill says he and assistant Tom Bloemendaal believe they offer the best glass screens on the market. "Even though there are some cheaper screens available elsewhere, we feel what we sell is best. We service and guarantee our screens for one year - we couldn't guarantee a cheap screen, so we carry quality, top-of-the-line screens," Bill says. Moreover, he continues, "all of our glass doors are American made screens."

In addition to these glass screens, this shop has a wide selection of folding screens which are exceptionally popular with decorators. Bill announces that the newest style available is free standing glass screens.

These high quality, tempered glass screens can be enhanced with etching. Family initials, flowers, doves- your imagination is the limit. Bill points out that these guaranteed units allow the full benefit of a clear few of the fire along with the protection of a screen.

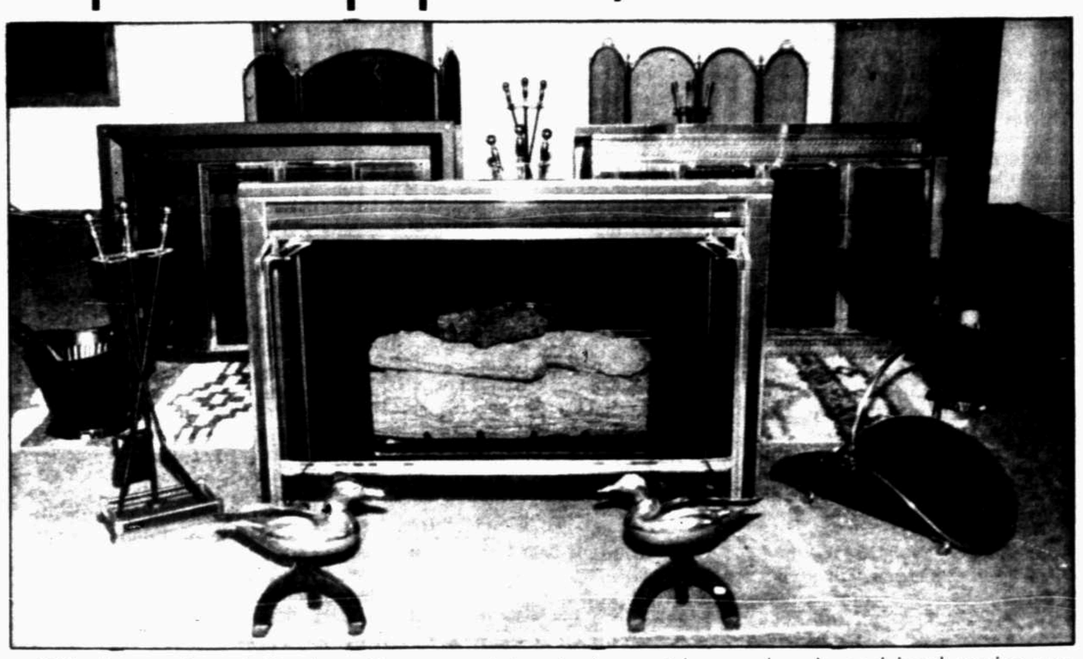

Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace also stocks a wide variety of wire mesh screens and can custom make screens for rock fireplaces. They can even repair other screens.

Bill or his assistant Tom Bloemendaal will come measure your fireplace for a screen and then guaranteed the work and size.

It's getting cool now, and the weather is just about perfect for a nice fire in the fireplace. However, before you build a fire in your fireplace this winter you need to check for routine maintenance needs, to insure safety. If your log lighter is clogged with ashes or otherwise worn, call Bill to have it cleaned or replaced. These professionals can also repair cracks and damper handles. They can even install rain caps and clean your chimney. If you've misplace a key, they can take care of that, too.

If you've just been dreaming of having a fireplace. Now is the time to call Tom or Bill and find out how reasonable it can be to have a zero clearance fireplace installed.

Call Bill or Tom at 697-4712 or 697-2652 for all your fireplace needs. Or go by their showroom at Loop 250 and Princeton and select some special accessories for your fireplace or for someone on your Christmas list.

Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace Center specializes in fireplace equipment. Quality log sets, grates for any size fireplace, firescreens, fireplace tools, mantels, wood racks and local service are just a few of the things that Bill has to offer at the corner of Loop 250 and Princeton.

Sewing Machine Supply has Singer 6268 - perfect for holiday crafts

Catherine Claggett, owner of Sewing Machine Supply in the Village Shopping Center, says "With the holidays coming, you need to check out our Singer 6268 that can sew beautiful holiday designs as well as monogram up to 2¼ inches high."

Perhaps, you've begun making all your holiday decorations for 1985, but feel limited by your sewing machine and the time-consuming task of hand work.

"With the holidays coming, you need to check out our Singer 6268 that can sew beautiful holiday designs as well as monogram up to 2¼ inches high. This machine is going to continue to have more cassettes to add stitches to this already feature-packed machine," says Sewing Machine Supply owner Catherine Claggett.

This top-of-the-line Singer machine, which has three button hole patterns and can sew sideways to make patching easier, is now priced at just $1199.95. That includes the standard letter and monogramming cassettes plus three more cassettes: holiday design, floral patterns and menagerie.

Best of all, with new cassettes continually becoming available - you can get a complete new set of designs for just $39.95.

That's just one of the tremendous deals you will find at Sewing Machine Supply, where all repairs are done in shop. There are many machines on sale, just in time for Christmas lay-a-way.

For example, right now, the Singer 8234 Magic machine is greatly reduced. Regularly priced at $699.95, this machine is now, half price at $349.95. The 8234 has two cams that enable it to make 32 stitches. This would make a terrific Christmas gift!

Sewing Machine Supply is proud to offer Singer machines along with Husqvarna Viking and New Home machines. All these lines have a long history of quality, Singer beginning in the 1860's, Husqvarna Viking starting in 1872 and New Home beginning in 1860.

Mrs. Claggett points to a particular Viking machine as a real jewel. The Viking 980 has a sewing guide which will "teach you more in three seconds than you can otherwise learn in a month," Mrs. Claggett says. According to the fabric being used, the machine will automatically set the tension and suggest a number of appropriate stitches.

Watch for more exciting news from Husqvarna Viking, because a new top of the line machine will arrive soon.

Sewing Machine Supply also has many reconditioned used machines which are warrantied for 90 days.

Sewing Machine Supply offers a number of other accessories, which make great gifts. The "Grab It" magnetic pin cushion, a sewing organizer, portable cases and Singer mending machines are just a few of the possibilities.

Even if you select a sewing machine or a cabinet for that special person on your Christmas list, Sewing Machine Supply will gift wrap it FREE. And, you have many options available when it comes to paying for your purchase. Financing, Visa, Master Card and lay-a-way are all acceptable.

Chicken fried steak is still king in Texas, especially at Cattleman's

"Chicken fried steak is still king in West Texas," and especially at Cattleman's Steak House, says owner Bill Henkel. Cattleman's Steak House, located at 3300 N. Big Spring, is known for the "Best Steaks in the West." And the big, tasty chicken fried steaks with delicious cream gravy and french fries or baked potato are only the beginning of an extraordinarily good, Texas-style menu.

It starts with a huge salad bar where you can pile on the crisp lettuce, cherry tomatoes, carrots, sprouts and more toppings than you can imagine. Finish it off with the dressing of your choice and add a dab of potato or pea salad or strawberries. Cattleman's knows the meaning of fresh salad and selection.

Appetizers range from mountains of golden onion rings to fried zucchini and sauteed or fried mushrooms. This is only the beginning for those Texas-size appetites.

Your choice of fine steak, seafood, veal or even prime rib will arrive, cooked to your order of perfection. Dinner steak, ribeye and club steak are some of your choices. Sirloins come in many sizes and the T-Bone steak, an old favorite, will satisfy even the biggest appetite. And, of course, Cattleman's always has the best chicken fried steak to be found anywhere around. That's because the make their own, instead of using pre-battered steaks like many places do.

Bill and Pat are proud to announce that their selection now includes lasagna and spaghetti. And, it ranks right up there with the other fine dishes, Midlanders have enjoyed at Cattleman's for years.

Cattleman's chicken strips, steak fingers, hamburgers, barbecue sandwiches and club sandwiches are always favorites.

Perhaps, you're hungry for seafood. Cattleman's serves delicious fried shrimp, oysters, catfish, frog legs and scallops. Their flounder, lobster, sole, trout, salmon, and red snapper are equally tasty.

Whatever you select will be great with fries or a big baked potato with butter, sour cream, cheese and bacon bits.

Children love the "Kiddie Corner" on the menu. The same great food is served to satisfy their appetites.

A glass of delicious ice tea, a soft drink or cup of coffee will be perfect with your meal. Cattleman's also has a good selection of wines, champagnes and premium beers.

Blueberry cheese cake, pecan pie, ice cream, cherry cheese cake or apple pie at Cattleman's will make your lunch or dinner even better.

Bill and Pat point out that Cattleman's Steak House is famous not only for delicious food, but also for an efficient, friendly staff. That's what makes Cattleman's come to mind on those special occasions.

In the middle of a busy day at the office, you deserve to have a relaxing lunch at Cattleman's Steak House, and after a long day the whole family needs to experience Cattleman's food and friendly atmosphere.

Enjoy lunch or dinner at Cattleman's, Monday-Friday. On Saturday you can have the best dinner of your week at this fine steak house. If the parking lot is full, don't worry. It's nearly always full and the wait is never too long at 3300 N. Big Spring, where chicken fried steak and customers are king!

Cattleman's Steak House, located at 3300 N. Big Spring, is famous for its delicious steaks, fresh salad bar and friendly staff. It's the place for those special occasions and big appetites.

Images Hair Design is a cut above the rest

Images Hair Design, 1601 N. Big Spring, breaks out of the average image of salons. This full service salon has an interesting, contemporary decor which sets the stage for these professionals to help you achieve the image you want.

Now, with Manager Lea Richardson and Assistant Manager Barbara Bryant, Images as a new motto: "Images - a cut above the rest." This contemporary salon is certainly living up to it's motto. Open Tuesday-Saturday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and earlier by appointment, Midland's leading hair design salon has stylists who are interested in more than just giving you a quick cut and sending you on your way. These professionals offer 'now' styles and take time to help you build an image.

A lawyer or banker, striving for a professional look, can get just that at Images. An orchestra conductor is concerned that every hair on the back of his head look just perfect, and Images stylists are ready to assist. Many teens think a punk rock cut and color at Images is just the perfect touch. Secretaries have requested cuts that let them wear a conservative style during the work day, but look 'wild' at night. Images has the cut, the perm, the style that fits your image!

Images stylists include: Hope Hernandez, Peggy Hale, Robin Vincent, Lisa Eaton, Vicki Cunningham, Teena Karman, Barbara Bryant, Ubelia Tucker, Shara Spaw, Lea Richardson and Glee Gallagher. To make an appointment with a particular stylist call 684-0074. If you don't need to see a particular stylist, no appointment is necessary.

To keep up with the latest styles, Images stylists attend hair shows. To make it easy for you to decide what look you want, they keep a number of hair style magazines. They also publish a hair style of the month in the Reporter-Telegram, so be sure to watch for that.

Cancer patients will be particularly glad to know that Images has a hair piece specialist, Twila Liles. Twila is in every other Monday (including 10/21) while the rest of the shop is closed. She uses hair pieces with a clear cap, giving a more natural appearance. These pieces are blended in with your natural hair and designed to be worn 24 hours a day, so that they only come off when Twila takes them off.

The stylists at Images don't stop with the excellent hair care. At your request they will also give helpful hints on applying your make up. Lea says they will soon have make up and skin care products to offer.

Manicures are also an important part of Images services. Acrylic and sculpture nails, tips and overlays are all part of the services of Images.

Images also offers special hair care products you can take home. Nexxus products are often described as "nature and earth united with science." KMS products, which Images has offered since they opened, make hair pliable and functional.

The distinctive element of Images is best described by Lea when she says, "We are here for our customers." That's why they are taking the time to plan a hair style show for November. Be sure to watch for further details.

If you need more than just a cut - if you want to achieve a particular image - Images Hair Design is your kind of place.

Images stylists include (left to right, front to back): Hope Hernandez, Peggy Hale, Robin Vincent, Lisa Eaton, Vicki Cunningham, Teena Karman, Manager Lea Richardson (far left back row), Shara Spaw, Ubelia Tucker and Assistant Managar Barbara Bryant. Not pictured is Glee Gallagher. These stylists at 1601 N. Big Spring offer you a contemporary atmosphere and image building styles.

Ed Stewart of Midland Building Specialties says it's time to have storm windows installed if you want to avoid high heating bills. Go by 2400 West Front and find out how these energy-efficient windows can save you money.

Midland Building Specialties: Winter's coming, consider storm windows, doors

It's time for winter winds to howl out of the north right around your windows and doors. With openings for cold air to get inside your home, the extra energy needed to keep your house comfortably warm could be substantial and expensive. Midland Building Specialties, 2400 West Front, offers a solution that can save you money — storm windows and doors.

Even if there are no openings around your windows, they can be conducting heat from inside your home to the outside. Storm windows, properly installed by Midland Building Specialties, can fill the cracks and openings around old windows and provide a second window glazing to repel the coldest winter weather.

Because of the energy they conserve, storm windows qualify for the Energy Tax Credit which is available only through the end of this year. If you have storm windows installed before the end of the year, you will be entitled to a federal income tax credit of 15 percent of the purchase price up to a maximum of $300.

One of the major advantages of storm windows is the beauty they add to your home. The clean, well-maintained look of newly installed windows, which are available in a number of frame and glass colors, will last for years and years.

In addition to improving the appearance of your house, storm windows will reduce the level of exterior noise entering the house and give added security.

Midland Building Specialties gives you your choice of solid glass or operable storm windows with screens.

To meet your storm door needs, Midland Building Specialties just added Metal Vent security system storm doors, which have a five year warranty. They feature tempered glass, brass hardware and ornamental iron decorations. Each door has a built in heavy-duty lock set.

Midland Building Specialties also offers Peerless heavy-duty storm doors, vented or full glass. A key lock set with dead bolt is a standard feature, as is, tempered safety glass. One option is a French storm door for those double entry doorways. These doors carry a five year warranty.

Perhaps your old doors and windows need to be replaced. Midland Building Specialties can handle that, too.

Peach Tree metal insulated replacement doors in a number of styles and sizes are available at Midland Building Specialties.

Also these professionals are proud to offer Custom Seal vinyl replacement windows, which are more energy efficient than aluminum windows which conduct heat and cold. These windows feature ¾" insulated glass, brown or white finish, tilt-in feature for cleaning and a 10 year non-prorated warranty.

This local company offers a variety of colors of steel siding with a 50 year warranty to help insulate your home and make the exterior maintenance free.

Ken VanHoozer, manager of Midland Building Specialties, invites you to shop locally for your home maintenance needs. As a local company, they can offer free estimates, a long list of job references and displays in their showroom at 2400 W. Front.

In addition, Ken says, "I feel like we have some of the best prices around so check with us before deciding."

Give them a call at 683-2184 on any remodeling, window or door work or go by Midland Building Specialties at 2400 W. Front. Their hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday-Friday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday.

Please stop in or call 915-563-9135 or 362-4777 for more information or a personal demonstration of Petro-Phone, the newest innovation in mobile phone 2/way, or any other 2-way radio equipment.

'Petro-Phone' now reaches Big Spring

From the oilfield to the professionals, to a single user, Basin 2-Way Radio, Inc., located at 1135 West 42nd in Odessa, Texas, "saw a severe need for a private direct dial mobile telephone in the Permian Basin area and this is why we brought to you 'Petro-Phone,'" stated Kenneth D. Cook, president of Basin 2-Way Radio, Inc.

Basin 2-Way Radio wishes to announce the expansion of its Petro-Phone coverage into the Big Spring, Texas area and also into the Abilene and Garden City, Texas area on a reciprocation arrangement.

This means that now you may extend your 2-way radio Petro-Phone coverage into these other areas simply by setting an appointment with Basin 2-Way's service department for programming the other area of your choice.

"If you have to answer yes to any of the questions below about your mobile telephone, Petro-Phone is the answer to your existing problems," states Joe H. Casas, general sales manager.

Do you lack "voice privacy" on all calls?

Do you lack a locus (563) car phone number to eliminate long distance?

Have your competitors monitored your calls?

Is your mobile phone obsolete?

Is your phone airtime costly?

Are you hassled and constantly put on hold by phone operators?

Are you able to drive to location before getting a channel?

Are you paying for a nationwide service when a local service is available?

Is it impossible on your current system to call forward your office or home phone to your car?

Does your current phone lack the capability of operating as a 2-way radio?

Constant complaints from mobile phone users prompted those at Basin 2-Way Radio to introduce the newest innovation in mobile phone 2-way radio in one, stated Casas.

Petro-Phone operates on the 800 MHZ frequency and features 563 exchange on all mobile phones. It features last number re-dial, speed dialing, ten number storage for frequently called numbers, call forwarding, direct dial, full duplex or common carrier long distance and credit card calling. 1-800 calls and directory assistance calls are permissible. The phone features an out of range indicator and will ring when you get a call if you are in the dispatch or 2-way mode.

"We have an excellent service department and you will receive service from the one who sells it — we won't sell you, then forget you," said Casas.

Please feel free to call Basin 2-Way Radio Inc. at 915-563-9135 or 915-362-4777 or stop by 1135 West 42nd in Odessa for a personal demonstration on the new Petro-Phone or other 2-way radio equipment.

Basin 2-Way is manufacturer's representative for Uniden/Force Corp., Standard and E.F. Johnson.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, October 16, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Listen to your partners and your own intuition, and you will emerge from a business struggle stronger than ever. New monetary gains are part of the picture. Someone could send out mixed signals in January. Be cautious: play a waiting game. Although strangers may think you shy, you are really just reserved. When ready to marry, choose a mate who shares your intellectual interests. A meeting of the minds is essential. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: superstar Angela Lansbury of "Murder, She Wrote," actress Suzanne Somers, the San Diego Padres' Kevin McReynolds, U.S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, playwright Eugene O'Neill, lexicographer-author Noah Webster.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New business and social contacts are part of the picture. Accept more invitations. Travel and romance go hand-in-hand. Ask an influential friend for a special introduction.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Today is the ideal time to arrange a peaceful settlement. Domestic or office tensions disappear. A talk with higher-ups improves your mood. Look forward to making new financial gains.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Success will come quicker if you stop relying so much on others. Show greater confidence in your ideas and abilities. You have the talent and resources to do a beautiful job.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The way you handle yourself determines how far you will go. Your powers of persuasion are at an all-time high. Integrity sets you apart from the pack. Others trust your word.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A safety lesson could come in handy today. Your chances for career or business success improve when you spruce up your appearance. Remember that you always have a choice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You find someone with a real need for your services. Build a nest egg for the future. A short vacation will revitalize you. Call a friend and arrange a visit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are lucky today and can earn a few extra dollars if you are prudent. Avoid all forms of gambling, however. A friend or business associate offers excellent advice. Follow it!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep your long-term goals in mind. Financial planning will provide for your family's future. Be willing to make a temporary sacrifice. Your loved ones are counting on you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lay your cards on the table so that your family can help you reach your goals. A sense of humor strengthens a love relationship. Learn to laugh at your own foibles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Misusing certain inside information could backfire. Keep all dealings strictly aboveboard. If you can get someone to admit he/she has a drinking or drug problem, you will have performed a great service.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A confidential chat puts you in the driver's seat when you meet with a customer or employer. Relax at lunch and you will be more productive when you return to work. Cash checks promptly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Give serious thought to a domestic or business problem and you will soon find a solution. Helping children with their studies is an excellent investment. Pay bills promptly to protect your credit rating.

Our readers are all familiar with the shell game, where a fast-talking con man uses quick hands and even quicker patter to conceal under which of three shells he has hidden a pea. Here's a bridge version of such deception, from the recent European Pairs Championship.

South is obviously one of those players who feels that a partner is extraneous to a game of bridge. His hand is unsuited to a no trump opening bid, not because of his six-card suit, but because he has no tenaces. Thus, if the hand belongs in no trump, partner should declare. However, the resulting three no trump contract did produce grist for the columnists' mills.

West led his fourth-best spade, probably because no other lead looked inviting—from the auction, it was quite likely that South had diamond length. Declarer won in hand and did not think much of his chances. There was no way to come to nine tricks without setting up clubs, but as soon as he conceded a club, the defenders would surely find the diamond switch to sink his contract.

That thought provided the inspiration for a delicious swindle. If the opponents would shift to diamonds if he went after clubs, would not the reverse also be true? In the hope that that would be the case, South led a low diamond at trick two!

Sure enough, East won the ten and shifted to the jack of clubs. South was careful to contribute the six, so that West's four looked to East like an encouraging card. East dutifully continued with a club and the world came to an end.

West was squeezed on the run of the clubs. He parted with his diamonds and one heart, but it was a simple matter for declarer to throw him in with the fourth spade and force a lead away from the king of hearts into declarer's tenace. That resulted in an overtrick.

'Country Boy Skaggs' takes top prize, dethrones Alabama at music awards

Ricky Skaggs

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "Country Boy" Ricky Skaggs, who dethroned Alabama as Country Music Association entertainer of the year, choked back sobs and said, "it's everything I've ever worked for all my life."

Skaggs, 31, won the coveted entertainer of the year award and a second honor as No. 1 instrumental group during the ceremony televised from the Grand Ole Opry House on Monday, two nights after it celebrated its 60th anniversary.

George Strait and the Judds joined Skaggs as double winners, but Alabama, the group that has dominated the top entertainer spot for an unprecedented three straight years, didn't pick up an award despite five nominations.

"It's everything I've ever worked for all my life," said Skaggs, who dropped out of high school his senior year and left his home in Louisa, Ky., to pursue his music career. "I began playing the mandolin at 5 and began singing at 3; I've worked for this and given up so many things to have my career."

He pulled a list out of his pocket as he accepted the award and read off a roll of people who had helped him get his start in country music, his voice cracking as he thanked his wife, children and parents.

Skaggs, a recording artist for only about four years, won with a boost from his acclaimed single, album and video "Country Boy." He also made a concert tour of Great Britain to perform the nine No. 1 hits he's piled up.

"The day I quit promotin' Ricky Skaggs, they'll have to put me in a padded cell somewhere," he said after the show.

Strait, an ex-foreman of a Texas cattle ranch, won male vocalist of the year and album of the year for "Does Fort Worth Ever Cross Your Mind."

"I'll never forget this night as long as I live," he said.

The Judds, a mother-daughter duo who have been singing professionally for two years, won single of the year for "Why Not Me" and No. 1 vocal group.

"I've never been so happy in my whole life," mother Naomi said.

Reba McEntire was voted female vocalist of the year for the second straight time and guitarist Chet Atkins won top instrumentalist for the eighth time and fifth straight year.

"I like to sing better than eat," Ms. McEntire said, then added, "No, that's not right."

Banjoist Earl Scruggs and the late guitarist Lester Flatt became the 43rd and 44th members of the Country Music Hall of Fame. They teamed from 1945 until 1969, recording such famous songs as "Foggy Mountain Breakdown" and the theme for the long-running television show, "The Beverly Hillbillies."

Other awards included Anne Murray and Dave Loggins, duo of the year; Hank Williams Jr., video of the year for "All My Rowdy Friends Are Coming Over Tonight," Lee Greenwood, song of the year for "God Bless the USA," and Sawyer Brown, Horizon Award for career development.

Miss Murray and Kris Kristofferson were hosts of the show, which featured a segment honoring Willie Nelson for his songwriting career and efforts to help the nation's farmers.

Nelson received a plaque from Steve Meredith, national president of the Future Farmers of America, for arranging September's FarmAid concert in Illinois that raised money for financially ailing farmers.

The winners were chosen by the 7,500 singers, musicians, songwriters, disc jockeys and others who are professionals in the country music industry.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marlin Perkins, host of the "Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom" television show for 23 years until he retired this year, will host a daily 60-second radio program produced by the National Wildlife Federation.

The program, "Nature Newsbreak," will be heard on the Mutual Radio Network beginning Jan. 6 under the sponsorship of the Omaha-based insurance company, the federation and the company said today.

Perkins, 80, announced his retirement in March from the syndicated TV show after a bout with cancer.

• • •

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Actor Gene Hackman says his latest role — a high school basketball coach — won't catch him off guard.

The 54-year-old actor will begin shooting "Hoosiers," a $6 million movie about the fictional 1950s Hickory High School team Saturday.

Hackman said he played "a little bit" of basketball in high school, but admitted, "Actually, I got cut and went into the Marine Corps."

Diana Ross

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Diana Ross got a proposal from the TV series "Dallas," but she turned it down to play wife to the man who is playing a starring role in her life, according to a published report.

Miss Ross said she plans to marry Norwegian shipping tycoon Arne Naess, a divorced father of three who recently led an expedition to the summit of Mount Everest, the New York Post reported Monday.

"If I have to choose, then I choose to be happy with Arne," Miss Ross, 41, was quoted as saying. Married once before, she met Naess, 47, in May.

Gail Roberts, a spokeswoman for Miss Ross, said from Rotterdam, Netherlands, where the singer is performing, that she could not comment on the report.

• • •

OURAY, Colo. (AP) — The man who wrote and recorded truckers' songs like "Convoy" has turned onto another of life's avenues.

C.W. McCall, known locally as William D. Fries Sr., is the only candidate for mayor in the Nov. 5 city election, said Ouray City Clerk Lucile Zellar.

"A couple of people asked me to do it and I fell for it," Fries said in a recent telephone interview. "Being mayor of Ouray is not too complicated; you preside over the city council meetings and answer telephone calls about stray dogs and that's about it.

"You just keep your ear to the people and carry through on their wishes."

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Prince Naruhito of Japan was treated to an autumn blaze of colors in West Virginia's mountains when he joined friends at a bluegrass music party during his first visit to the United States.

Prince Hiro, as he is nicknamed by friends, donned sneakers for a hike through Cooper's Rock State Park on Monday, visited a coal transfer site on the Monongahela River and capped the day at a pig roast and bluegrass party hosted by a friend he met at Oxford University in England.

Zandra Rhodes creates designs from real images

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — The discreet brass plaque on 56th Street lists the names of four tenants. Last on the list: "Zandra Rhodes."

It seems strange to see a name synonymous with fanciful fashion, psychedelic hair and bejeweled faces stated so simply. This is a visit to her New York office, the American headquarters for this English designer who crosses the Atlantic at least once a month to take care of her thriving business in this country.

After proper identification, the buzzer sounds to unlock the beveled glass door. At the top of the stairs is another locked door, this one opening onto a small suite of rooms. At one side is a chrome rack of delicate evening gowns sparkling with sequins and crystals, asymmetrical hems outlined in beading. The colors are of ancient pink and cream marble or the rich blues and greens of peacock feathers.

Next to the gowns, a television set with a videocassette recorder on top is decorated by a gold Emmy award that Zandra won for her costume design for an ice show. On the other side of the set is a triangular corner table with chunky Indian amber jewelry and pillows inset with tiny mirrors from India.

Framed posters of Zandra Rhodes in various incarnations of vivid colors and wild designs smile down like Big Brother from the walls. From the small anteroom there are other rooms where Rhodes's assistants are busily at work.

Today she's running late, so the rooms are fairly quiet. When Rhodes enters, it's as though a light had been turned on, and the suite is illuminated by her bright presence.

She ends most of her remarks with, "Dja know what I mean?" and considers herself "the real Zandra Rhodes under the Zandra Rhodes image."

Rhodes is wearing her own "dress for success" suit, a Zandra Rhodes-designed gray and white cotton two-piece squiggle print, high-heeled white sandals with hot-pink toenail polish beneath sheer gray hose with a squiggle design at the back of the ankle — she's doing a new stocking collection — green eyes rimmed by dark eyeshadow and hair three shades of red — orange, fuchsia and pink sprouting from a dark base. She also wears a small red velvet circle with half a dozen tiny seed pearls in the center of her forehead like an Indian marriage symbol.

She does not consider her designs fantasy, and she wonders why women might hesitate before dressing as fancifully for their jobs as she does for hers.

"Working women go out of their way to make themselves less female. I get the impression that women are trying to look like men, rather than females. I find that difficult. It's rather sad if we have to go out of our way to be totally disguised.

"I don't believe in the unisex look. ... make two different animals look alike?"

Rhodes is at ease in her office, an elegant bird settling briefly in a tiny cage, pausing in flight to perch on the edge of a green chair and talk about what makes her tick, and where she gets her ideas for design. She looks like an artist's drawing of a designer — wild, yet controlled; imaginative, yet businesslike; highly successful, yet friendly and unassuming.

In fact, she's so mild-mannered it's difficult to believe she's a triple-threat designer — she creates artworks, textiles and fashions to wear.

Born in 1940 in England, Rhodes is profiled in the book "The Art of Zandra Rhodes" published earlier this year by Houghton Mifflin Co. The book shows the progression from her observations and sketches during traveling to finished textiles and fashions.

Her favorite designs, which she uses over and over, are of squiggles, words and butterflies.

"The fretsaw shapes of jigsaw puzzles must have been the first wiggles to become imprinted in my mind's eye," she wrote in her book. "Even now these wiggles nearly always appear somewhere, even if only as fillers in the background of my new designs. I love the way words look graphically, so writing has always been a pleasure for me ... I write the name Zandra into my patterns, my labels, my shop bags and almost everything I do — just like the wiggles."

In England, she lives in a five-story brownstone house decorated in fabrics she has designed. She loves to garden and says her garden is "wonderful with camellias and a broken-mirror walk. It's not very traditional but I love flowers and love to garden."

"I live an inside-out existence, dja know? I have a houseboy and housekeeper. I'm looked after so I can be free to do my work. There is quite a bit of strain to doing a collection every season, and you're only as good as the collection you bring out. It never lets up."

Among her new projects are designer stockings, belts and beaded cushions reminiscent of the colorful cushions with tiny embedded mirrors that come from India. There are Zandra Rhodes stockings and tights, and daytime and evening "Zandra Rhodes Designs on Legs."

Fashion experts give tips to update fall wardrobe

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

If you could buy only one item to update your wardrobe, what would it be?

We put this question to three fashion experts and each had a different opinion.

"A piece of leather is really a must," said Salley De Nicholas of Neiman-Marcus department stores. "A leather skirt if you can afford it and also a velvet skirt. Go for a solid color, a black or chocolate brown leather and a wonderful royal blue with everything."

velvet skirt. You could utilize those

"A challis skirt to break up last year's suits," said Mickey Gault of Bullock's department stores. "A print in the paisley family would be nice. But accessories are the focal point. The best way to update flat shoes, opaque, textured hose. Scarves are making a comeback."

Purchasing a turtleneck sweater, said Gail Sekiguchi of the Nordstrom chain of department stores, would provide a fairly inexpensive update for fall.

"We saw so much of this on the runways this year, and I suppose it's the most affordable update," she said. "If I had a second choice, I'd go with a stirrup pant that can be used with sweaters and big shirts."

The experts also commented on what to expect in coming fashion trends.

Sekiguchi says that touches of gold and metallic in fabrics, such as a traditional gray flannel with a thread of metallic through it, will be big.

De Nicholas looks for "wonderful new soft suedes and more of a pastel look" for spring.

DEAR ABBY

Tell truth or risk consequences

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 16-year-old girl. Recently I went into the hospital for some minor surgery. When I got there, I was asked a lot of personal questions — routine things, such as, "Do you smoke? Do you drink? Do you do any kind of drugs? Are you on the pill?" Most of the questions I would have truthfully answered no to, but my parents were in the room at the time, so I just said "no" to all those questions so as not to be grounded for the rest of my life. Then I worried all the way up to the time of my operation, hoping I wouldn't go into a coma or something from the drugs or whatever they used to "put me under." Luckily, everything went well.

Abby, can't they ask you these questions in private? I can see how not being honest could cause a dangerous situation. I know this has been a problem with a lot of kids my age, including my brother. Sign me ... LIED AND SCARED

DEAR LIED: You are wise to realize that lying about using drugs or being on the pill could have created a dangerous situation, but fortunately for you everything went well.

Knowing you lied, you should have called the nurse after your parents left and revealed the truth.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter in your column for someone signed "The Real Victim." It seems "Victim" had witnessed a minor crime and was subpoenaed three times to appear in court to testify. He complained that it had cost him $487 for time off work, parking, etc.

The court should have informed this individual that if witnesses inform the clerk of the court, either verbally or by letter, of their expenses, they shall be reimbursed. This includes mileage, meals and lodging. Travel can be by any means: bus, air, personal auto, train. Each state has its limits on how much it will pay per mile if a personal car is driven.

Part of my duties for the Supreme Court of Virginia is to reimburse Commonwealth witnesses, and even witnesses for indigent defendants.

"Victim" should contact the clerk of the court he provided a service for, and the clerk will notify the state treasury to reimburse him. Courts realize that witnesses are the keynote to a trial and have state statutes strictly relating to their reimbursement. — LOGAN PERKINS, COLONIAL HEIGHTS, VA.

DEAR LOGAN PERKINS: Compensation for witnesses who are subpoenaed to testify varies from state to state, but if I ever witness a crime (minor or major), I hope it's in Colonial Heights, Va. — or in some other community that rewards its witnesses with full compensation.

DEAR ABBY: You have had several letters in your column lately about how to handle unannounced visitors who show up at an inconvenient time.

Years ago, I read a delightful book, "Hat on the Hall Table." The lady of the house always kept a hat on the hall table near the front door. When the doorbell rang, she'd put the hat on her head before she opened the door. And if the visitor was someone she wanted to see, she'd say, "Oh, I'm glad you caught me — I just got home. Come in."

If it was someone she didn't want to see, she'd say, "Oh, I'm so sorry, I was just leaving. I have an appointment."

Since we don't wear hats much these days, a purse and car keys on the hall table would work just as well. — H.B. IN AURORA, COLO.

AT WIT'S END

Church confusing

By ERMA BOMBECK

The inside of a house of worship must be the most confusing place ever to a child.

There's water that you can't play in, books without pictures and mysterious doors that no one ever opens. You're never allowed to see what's behind you, and the only thing you have to play with is your tongue and that's punishable by severe pinching.

One of the problems is we never really tell kids what services are all about. All they're told is to be quiet and not talk for an hour. They have no idea what we're doing. When my son was 5 years old, I dragged him to confession one Saturday. Every time I inched toward the closed closet door, my son would start to say something and I would clap my hand over his mouth. Finally, the line started with me. I was next up when he said, "I don't have to go to the bathroom. I went before I left home," and bolted toward the parking lot.

There's the plight of the 4-year-old who was in church on Sunday when the wine and wafers were passed out. His mother leaned over and told him that he was not old enough to comprehend the transubstantiation and that he was not allowed to partake in the Communion. Later, the collection plate came by and stopped dead in front of him. His mother again leaned over and tried to coax the nickel out of his clenched fist. He held firm and shouted, "If I can't eat, I won't pay."

"Faith" is just a word to children. They don't know what it means, how to get it, how to keep it or what to do with it. They just pick up bits and pieces of conversation and try to sound like an adult. A Sunday school teacher asked her class if anyone knew where God is. One little girl said, "He's in the bathroom in the back of the church." When the teacher pressed her for her rationale, she said, "My Mother is always knocking on the door saying, 'God, are you still in there?'"

Adults become different people in church. A few years ago, our son served his first Mass as an altar boy.

He knew he was supposed to ring the bells at a certain time in the Mass, but he wasn't sure when, so he rang them every time he passed them. After the service, the priest leaned over and said to me, "It was like serving Mass with Quasimodo." Ordinarily, I would have roared and sent the story off to Reader's Digest. I sat there like a mask of tragedy.

Church to a child is low-noise-level punishment like holding your body in a vise and pretending to arrange your hair when they're really pulling it. Church is lips that sing "Love the little children" at the same time eyes are saying, "You will never get another Oreo cookie for as long as you live." Church is where everyone talks about joy and love and happiness, but when someone rings bells at the wrong time we're afraid to laugh. Why?

Libya leads young into revolution

By JENNIFER PARMELEE

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — They call them "buds of the revolution," young campers clad in the green of the Libyan flag who are expected to flower into skilled revolutionaries.

As young as eight or nine years old, they can sing their condemnation of American or Israeli imperialism.

"They are learning these skills for the future," explained one teacher of the Baraymam al-Fatah, the Libyan equivalent of the scout movement. He gestured toward a display of scale model bombs and rockets in tin he said were made by the youngsters.

At a recent evening performance at a model summer camp along Tripoli harbor, group after group of children in green uniforms — the prophet Mohammed's battle color as well as Libya's national hue — took to a wooden stage decorated by a painting of Uncle Sam taking a kick in the rear from a green boot.

For five hours, they sang of the accomplishments of Col. Moammar Khadafy's 1969 coup, their defiance of the United States and the "Zionist death wagon," Libya's normal mode of referring to Israel.

"We will not submit to America or its weapons," ran one line in Arabic. "We are ready to do whatever our leader bids us."

Eight-year-old Hania was brought up to a reporter to sing solo.

"She is singing about her hopes that the Arab world will soon be united, without borders," said a camp supervisor, who would identify herself only as Maha. Khadafy has long sought to unify Arab nations, recently vowing to apply force to achieve the goal.

Officials said every child between age eight and 16 attends some 15 days of camp each year — taking classes in music, art, language and elementary military skills — and performs similar activities in school. Several weeks of military training are the high school curriculum.

Another summer option for youngsters is training as traffic police, part of Khadafy's efforts to move away from a traditional police force to "people's security." The streets of Tripoli are filled with determined-looking children in starched blue-and-white uniforms blowing whistles at traffic offenders and handing out tickets.

"They used to laugh at them," said Libyan guide Nouri Bushallah. "Now they take them seriously."

At the camp, models of rockets and bombs are displayed along with more traditional camp handiwork such as hand-silk-screened T-shirts and handmade afghans. Over a neat row of campbeds hang the slogans from Khadafy's revolutionary manifesto, The Green Book, that appear everywhere in Libya from supermarket to sports stadium.

Most Mexican art can be repaired

By CONCEPCION BADILLO

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Many of the murals painted by such world famous artists as Diego Rivera and David Alfaro Siqueiros that decorate public buildings in Mexico City were severely damaged in September's earthquakes, but most can be repaired, city officials say.

"The murals that were damaged by the earthquake are of incalculable value for Mexican culture and are an artistic legacy, not only for the country but also for the world," Tomas Surian, director of the Center of Conservation of Artistic Works said Monday.

"That is why the best way to rescue them currently is being prepared and sought so that they might not suffer greater damage," he said.

He said a committee had been formed to evaluate the damage done to each mural.

The murals, as much a part of the city's cultural heritage as its Spanish colonial architecture, began appearing after the 1910-1921 revolution and mostly carry social and political themes.

Some are painted directly on exterior or interior walls, while others were painted on panels and then fixed to the walls of banks, schools, hospitals and other government buildings.

At least 94 of the 594 murals were damaged, some of them beyond repair.

But the arts center said damage to most of the murals was "minor, considering the magnitude of the earthquake" which struck Sept. 19. That quake registered 8.1 on the Richter scale. A second tremblor the following evening registered 7.5 on the Richter scale.

The arts conservation center, a branch of the National Institute of Fine Arts, said most of the damage consists of cracks, air bubbles and separation between the murals and the surfaces to which they are fixed.

Craftsmen already have filled in hairline cracks in a gigantic mural by Diego Rivera in the National Palace. Rivera, perhaps Mexico's best-known muralist, painted the work from 1929 through 1935.

The mural depicts the history of Mexico from pre-Hispanic days to after the revolution. The cracks appeared in a panel showing Mexico's Indian heritage.

AP Laserphoto

A mural by famed painter Diego Rivera at Mexico City's National Palace was cracked in several places by earthquakes which shook the city Sept. 19 and 20.

Among the works deemed irreparable are the giant murals that covered 9,000 square yards of the exterior walls of the federal Communications and Transportation Department building, which was severely damaged in the quake.

About 600 square yards of the works were destroyed, including those painted in 1954 by the renowned artists Juan O'Gorman and Jose Chavez Morado. The paintings were done on concrete panels and later fixed to the building's walls.

A major work called "Legends of Mexico," by the late Guatemalan painter Carlos Merida, was lost when sections of the Benito Juarez apartment complex crumbled, trapping hundreds of people inside.

Authorities hope they can save other works at the same site, but said it would be difficult because the murals were painted directly onto the walls.

A metal relief by contemporary artists Francisco Zuniga and Alberto Beltran decorates the towers of the Respiratory Hospital of the heavily damaged National Medical Center. Workmen will dismantle the reliefs and reassemble them elsewhere.

An 84-square-yard mural painted in 1958 by David Alfaro Siqueiros, who ranks with Rivera in national renown, was recovered last week.

Beatriz Alfaro, spokeswoman for the National Institute of Fine Arts, told The Associated Press on Monday that it took six days to remove the mural, called "Depiction of the Future Victory of Medical Science over Cancer," from the hospital.

"Finally, the mural was recovered and is safe," she said.

She said the mural was created on a wood base that made its recovery possible. It now is located in the Medical Center's convention center which escaped the quake without major damage.

A second Rivera series, created from 1923 to 1926 and located in the federal Public Education Department building, will need restoration work, the arts center said.

Perhaps the best known murals to foreign tourists are those that decorate the exterior of buildings at the National Autonomous University of Mexico. The buildings in University City on the southern outskirts of the capital were well outside the areas affected by the quake and suffered no damage.

Famine relief workers prepare for second year in Ethiopia

By DAVID CRARY

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The architects of the largest one-year famine relief effort in history are bracing for Year II, hoping to overcome political rivalries and donor fatigue so Ethiopians will have enough to eat in 1986.

Almost 12 months have passed since Ethiopia's drought and famine had its full impact on the outside world.

Hundreds of thousands of Ethiopians — no one has precise figures — have died since then, and experts are not ready to rule out a recurrence. But Ethiopian and Western officials describe the relief campaign, mounted by an array of governments and agencies, as an unprecedented achievement.

"If there had been no relief effort, millions would have died," said Kurt Jansson, the United Nations assistant secretary-general in charge of emergency operations in Ethiopia. "The death rate was high anyway. It's unthinkable what would have happened without this tremendous effort."

The total emergency assistance to Ethiopia for 1985 will exceed $1 billion, and some Western relief officials fear potential donors will view second-year fund-raising appeals with less urgency — something they call donor fatigue.

One American agency, Catholic Relief Services, is publicly criticizing what it discerns as a U.S. government reduction in food aid for Ethiopia in 1986. Another U.S.-based organization, World Vision, plans a fund-raising telethon broadcast to the United States on Oct. 26 from a small town in the drought-stricken Wollo region.

"Progress has been made, but we need continued aid, or two years down the line these people will be back where they were," said World Vision spokeswoman Pat Banks. "It would be a total waste of all this money."

Ethiopia has projected its 1986 food shortfall at about 1.1 million metric tons, while Jansson projects it to be as low as 800,000 tons, depending on the success of the next harvest.

Berhane Deressa, Ethiopia's deputy relief commissioner, said about 5.8 million of the country's 42 million people will require food aid in 1986, compared with 7.9 million this year.

"Maybe the situation does not seem as dramatic now.... But there is enough good will in the world to sustain a genuine effort," Deressa said.

The long-term prospects for preventing another famine disaster are complicated by Ethiopia's liabilities. It is one of the world's poorest countries, with an annual per capita income of $120, and the Marxist-led government spends substantial sums on military campaigns against regional insurgencies.

Precipitous terrain restricts access to many areas and inhibits large-scale development projects.

As a consequence, development and drought-prevention work proceeds on a village-by-village basis. Agronomists teach farmers to grow fruits and vegetables, engineers dig wells and design small dams, medical teams preach the basics of health and sanitation.

One of the most challenging problems linked to the drought is deforestation. Experts say 3.5 percent of Ethiopia's land is now forested, compared with 40 percent in 1900.

Erosion increases as the trees disappear to the axes of people in need of firewood. The result in some areas is that rain washes away what little topsoil exists.

Efforts are under way to develop inexpensive stoves that do not use firewood and to teach peasants to build homes from mud-based bricks rather than wood.

Ethiopia's largest long-term development project, supported by the U.N. World Food Program, involves construction of stone terracing on which grass and drought-resistant tree seedlings are planted. U.N. officials say more than 105 billion seedlings have been planted since 1980, with 70 percent surviving the drought.

One major source of relief funds is the Band Aid Trust, which has raised an estimated $70 million from July's transatlantic live aid concert and the earlier British Band Aid record.

The trust says it is sending up to 100 food transport trucks to Ethiopia and neighboring Sudan at a cost of $11 million and plans to spend roughly $42 million on long-term projects, including an immunization program for 500,000 famine-affected African children.

Zandra Rhodes creates designs from real images

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — The discreet brass plaque on 56th Street lists the names of four tenants. Last on the list: "Zandra Rhodes."

It seems strange to see a name synonymous with fanciful fashion, psychedelic hair and bejeweled faces stated so simply. This is a visit to her New York office, the American headquarters for this English designer who crosses the Atlantic at least once a month to take care of her thriving business in this country.

After proper identification, the buzzer sounds to unlock the beveled glass door. At the top of the stairs is another locked door, this one opening onto a small suite of rooms. At one side is a chrome rack of delicate evening gowns sparkling with sequins and crystals, asymmetrical hems outlined in beading. The colors are of ancient pink and cream marble or the rich blues and greens of peacock feathers.

Next to the gowns, a television set with a videocassette recorder on top is decorated by a gold Emmy award that Zandra won for her costume design for an ice show. On the other side of the set is a triangular corner table with chunky Indian amber jewelry and pillows inset with tiny mirrors from India.

Framed posters of Zandra Rhodes in various incarnations of vivid colors and wild designs smile down like Big Brother from the walls. From the small anteroom there are other rooms where Rhodes's assistants are busily at work.

Today she's running late, so the rooms are fairly quiet. When Rhodes enters, it's as though a light had been turned on, and the suite is illuminated by her bright presence.

She ends most of her remarks with, "Dja know what I mean?" and considers herself "the real Zandra Rhodes under the Zandra Rhodes image."

Rhodes is wearing her own "dress for success" suit, a Zandra Rhodes-designed gray and white cotton two-piece squiggle print, high-heeled white sandals with hot-pink toenail polish beneath sheer gray hose with a squiggle design at the back of the ankle — she's doing a new stocking collection — green eyes rimmed by dark eyeshadow and hair three shades of red — orange, fuchsia and pink sprouting from a dark base. She also wears a small red velvet circle with half a dozen tiny seed pearls in the center of her forehead like an Indian marriage symbol.

She does not consider her designs fantasy, and she wonders why women might hesitate before dressing as fancifully for their jobs as she does for hers.

"Working women go out of their way to make themselves less female. I get the impression that women are trying to look like men, rather than females. I find that difficult. It's rather sad if we have to go out of our way to be totally disguised.

"I don't believe in the unisex look. Why make two different animals look alike?"

Rhodes is at ease in her office, an elegant bird settling briefly in a tiny cage, pausing in flight to perch on the edge of a green chair and talk about what makes her tick, and where she gets her ideas for design. She looks like an artist's drawing of a designer — wild, yet controlled; imaginative, yet businesslike; highly successful, yet friendly and unassuming.

In fact, she's so mild-mannered it's difficult to believe she's a triple-threat designer — she creates artworks, textiles and fashions to wear.

Born in 1940 in England, Rhodes is profiled in the book "The Art of Zandra Rhodes" published earlier this year by Houghton Mifflin Co. The book shows the progression from her observations and sketches during traveling to finished textiles and fashions.

Her favorite designs, which she uses over and over, are of squiggles, words and butterflies.

"The fretsaw shapes of jigsaw puzzles must have been the first wiggles to become imprinted in my mind's eye," she wrote in her book. "Even now these wiggles nearly always appear somewhere, even if only as fillers in the background of my new designs. I love the way words look graphically, so writing has always been a pleasure for me ... I write the name Zandra into my patterns, my labels, my shop bags and almost everything I do — just like the wiggles."

In England, she lives in a five-story brownstone house decorated in fabrics she has designed. She loves to garden and says her garden is "wonderful with camellias and a broken-mirror walk. It's not very traditional but I love flowers and love to garden."

"I live an inside-out existence, dja know? I have a houseboy and housekeeper. I'm looked after so I can be free to do my work. There is quite a bit of strain to doing a collection every season, and you're only as good as the collection you bring out. It never lets up."

Among her new projects are designer stockings, belts and beaded cushions reminiscent of the colorful cushions with tiny embedded mirrors that come from India. There are Zandra Rhodes stockings and tights, and daytime and evening "Zandra Rhodes Designs on Legs."

DEAR ABBY

Tell truth or risk consequences

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 16-year-old girl. Recently I went into the hospital for some minor surgery. When I got there, I was asked a lot of personal questions — routine things, such as, "Do you smoke? Do you drink? Do you do any kind of drugs? Are you on the pill?" Most of the questions I would have truthfully answered no to, but my parents were in the room at the time, so I just said "no" to all those questions so as not to be grounded for the rest of my life. Then I worried all the way up to the time of my operation, hoping I wouldn't go into a coma or something from the drugs or whatever they used to "put me under." Luckily, everything went well.

Abby, can't they ask you these questions in private? I can see how not being honest could cause a dangerous situation. I know this has been a problem with a lot of kids my age, including my brother. Sign me ... LIED AND SCARED

DEAR LIED: You are wise to realize that lying about using drugs or being on the pill could have created a dangerous situation, but fortunately for you everything went well.

Knowing you lied, you should have called the nurse after your parents left and revealed the truth.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter in your column for someone signed "The Real Victim." It seems "Victim" had witnessed a minor crime and was subpoenaed three times to appear in court to testify. He complained that it had cost him $487 for time off work, parking, etc.

The court should have informed this individual that if witnesses inform the clerk of the court, either verbally or by letter, of their expenses, they shall be reimbursed. This includes mileage, meals and lodging. Travel can be by any means: bus, air, personal auto, train. Each state has its limits on how much it will pay per mile if a personal car is driven.

Part of my duties for the Supreme Court of Virginia is to reimburse Commonwealth witnesses, and even witnesses for indigent defendants.

"Victim" should contact the clerk of the court he provided a service for, and the clerk will notify the state treasury to reimburse him. Courts realize that witnesses are the keynote to a trial and have state statutes strictly relating to their reimbursement. — LOGAN PERKINS, COLONIAL HEIGHTS, VA.

DEAR LOGAN PERKINS: Compensation for witnesses who are subpoenaed to testify varies from state to state, but if I ever witness a crime (minor or major), I hope it's in Colonial Heights, Va. — or in some other community that rewards its witnesses with full compensation.

DEAR ABBY: You have had several letters in your column lately about how to handle unannounced visitors who show up at an inconvenient time.

Years ago, I read a delightful book, "Hat on the Hall Table." The lady of the house always kept a hat on the hall table near the front door. When the doorbell rang, she'd put the hat on her head before she opened the door. And if the visitor was someone she wanted to see, she'd say, "Oh, I'm glad you caught me — I just got home. Come in."

If it was someone she didn't want to see, she'd say, "Oh, I'm so sorry, I was just leaving. I have an appointment."

Since we don't wear hats much these days, a purse and car keys on the hall table would work just as well. — H.B. IN AURORA, COLO.

AT WIT'S END

Church confusing

By ERMA BOMBECK

The inside of a house of worship must be the most confusing place ever to a child.

There's water that you can't play in, books without pictures and mysterious doors that no one ever opens. You're never allowed to see what's behind you, and the only thing you have to play with is your tongue and that's punishable by severe pinching.

One of the problems is we never really tell kids what services are all about. All they're told is to be quiet and not talk for an hour. They have no idea what we're doing. When my son was 5 years old, I dragged him to confession one Saturday. Every time I inched toward the closed closet door, my son would start to say something and I would clap my hand over his mouth. Finally, the line started with me. I was next up when he said, "I don't have to go to the bathroom. I went before I left home," and bolted toward the parking lot.

There's the plight of the 4-year-old who was in church on Sunday when the wine and wafers were passed out. His mother leaned over and told him that he was not old enough to comprehend the transubstantiation and that he was not allowed to partake in the Communion. Later, the collection plate came by and stopped dead in front of him. His mother again leaned over and tried to coax the nickel out of his clenched fist. He held firm and shouted, "If I can't eat, I won't pay."

"Faith" is just a word to children. They don't know what it means, how to get it, how to keep it or what to do with it. They just pick up bits and pieces of conversation and try to sound like an adult. A Sunday school teacher asked her class if anyone knew where God is. One little girl said, "He's in the bathroom in the back of the church." When the teacher pressed her for her rationale, she said, "My Mother is always knocking on the door saying, 'God, are you still in there?'"

Adults become different people in church. A few years ago, our son served his first Mass as an altar boy.

He knew he was supposed to ring the bells at a certain time in the Mass, but he wasn't sure when, so he rang them every time he passed them. After the service, the priest leaned over and said to me, "It was like serving Mass with Quasimodo." Ordinarily, I would have roared and sent the story off to Reader's Digest. I sat there like a mask of tragedy.

Church to a child is low-noise-level punishment like holding your body in a vise and pretending to arrange your hair when they're really pulling it. Church is lips that sing "Love the little children" at the same time eyes are saying, "You will never get another Oreo cookie for as long as you live." Church is where everyone talks about joy and love and happiness, but when someone rings bells at the wrong time we're afraid to laugh. Why?

Fashion experts give tips to update fall wardrobe

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

If you could buy only one item to update your wardrobe, what would it be?

We put this question to three fashion experts and each had a different opinion.

"A piece of leather is really a must," said Salley De Nicholas of Neiman-Marcus department stores. "A leather skirt if you can afford it and also a velvet skirt. Go for a solid color, a black or chocolate brown leather and a wonderful royal blue with everything."

velvet skirt. You could utilize those.

"A challis skirt to break up last year's suits," said Mickey Gault of Bullock's department stores. "A print in the paisley family would be nice. But accessories are the focal point. The best way to update flat shoes, opaque, textured hose. Scarves are making a comeback."

Purchasing a turtleneck sweater, said Gail Sekiguchi of the Nordstrom chain of department stores, would provide a fairly inexpensive update for fall.

"We saw so much of this on the runways this year, and I suppose it's the most affordable update," she said. "If I had a second choice, I'd go with a stirrup pant that can be used with sweaters and big shirts."

The experts also commented on what to expect in coming fashion trends.

Sekiguchi says that touches of gold and metallic in fabrics, such as a traditional gray flannel with a thread of metallic through it, will be big.

De Nicholas looks for "wonderful new soft suedes and more of a pastel look" for spring.

Libya leads young into revolution

By JENNIFER PARMELEE

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — They call them "buds of the revolution," young campers clad in the green of the Libyan flag who are expected to flower into skilled revolutionaries.

As young as eight or nine years old, they can sing their condemnation of American or Israeli imperialism.

"They are learning these skills for the future," explained one teacher of the Baraymam al-Fatah, the Libyan equivalent of the scout movement. He gestured toward a display of scale model bombs and rockets in tin he said were made by the youngsters.

At a recent evening performance at a model summer camp along Tripoli harbor, group after group of children in green uniforms — the prophet Mohammed's battle color as well as Libya's national hue — took to a wooden stage decorated by a painting of Uncle Sam taking a kick in the rear from a green boot.

For five hours, they sang of the accomplishments of Col. Moammar Khadafy's 1969 coup, their defiance of the United States and the "Zionist death wagon," Libya's normal mode of referring to Israel.

"We will not submit to America or its weapons," ran one line in Arabic. "We are ready to do whatever our leader bids us."

Eight-year-old Hania was brought up to a reporter to sing solo.

"She is singing about her hopes that the Arab world will soon be united, without borders," said a camp supervisor, who would identify herself only as Maha. Khadafy has long sought to unify Arab nations, recently vowing to apply force to achieve the goal.

Officials said every child between age eight and 16 attends some 15 days of camp each year — taking classes in music, art, language and elementary military skills — and performs similar activities in school. Several weeks of military training are the high school curriculum.

Another summer option for youngsters is training as traffic police, part of Khadafy's efforts to move away from a traditional police force to "people's security." The streets of Tripoli are filled with determined-looking children in starched blue-and-white uniforms blowing whistles at traffic offenders and handing out tickets.

"They used to laugh at them," said Libyan guide Nouri Bushallah. "Now they take them seriously."

At the camp, models of rockets and bombs are displayed along with more traditional camp handiwork such as hand-silk-screened T-shirts and handmade afghans. Over a neat row of campbeds hang the slogans from Khadafy's revolutionary manifesto, The Green Book, that appear everywhere in Libya from supermarket to sports stadium.

One oil painting shows female Libyan soldiers peering down the sights of machine guns, while across the enclosure is an enlarged photograph of a small boy cradling a Kalishnikov rifle.

Most Mexican art can be repaired

By CONCEPCION BADILLO

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Many of the murals painted by such world famous artists as Diego Rivera and David Alfaro Siqueiros that decorate public buildings in Mexico City were severely damaged in September's earthquakes, but most can be repaired, city officials say.

"The murals that were damaged by the earthquake are of incalculable value for Mexican culture and are an artistic legacy, not only for the country but also for the world," Tomas Surian, director of the Center of Conservation of Artistic Works said Monday.

"That is why the best way to rescue them currently is being prepared and sought so that they might not suffer greater damage," he said.

He said a committee had been formed to evaluate the damage done to each mural.

The murals, as much a part of the city's cultural heritage as its Spanish colonial architecture, began appearing after the 1910-1921 revolution and mostly carry social and political themes.

Some are painted directly on exterior or interior walls, while others were painted on panels and then fixed to the walls of banks, schools, hospitals and other government buildings.

At least 94 of the 584 murals were damaged, some of them beyond repair.

But the arts center said damage to most of the murals was "minor, considering the magnitude of the earthquake" which struck Sept. 19. That quake registered 8.1 on the Richter scale. A second tremblor the following evening registered 7.5 on the Richter scale.

The arts conservation center, a branch of the National Institute of Fine Arts, said most of the damage consists of cracks, air bubbles and separation between the murals and the surfaces to which they are fixed.

Craftsmen already have filled in hairline cracks in a gigantic mural by Diego Rivera in the National Palace. Rivera, perhaps Mexico's best-known muralist, painted the work from 1929 through 1935.

The mural depicts the history of Mexico from pre-Hispanic days to after the revolution. The cracks appeared in a panel showing Mexico's Indian heritage.

AP Laserphoto

A mural by famed painter Diego Rivera at Mexico City's National Palace was cracked in several places by earthquakes which shook the city Sept. 19 and 20.

Among the works deemed irreparable are the giant murals that covered 9,000 square yards of the exterior walls of the federal Communications and Transportation Department building, which was severely damaged in the quake.

About 600 square yards of the works were destroyed, including those painted in 1954 by the renowned artists Juan O'Gorman and Jose Chavez Morado. The paintings were done on concrete panels and later fixed to the building's walls.

A major work called "Legends of Mexico," by the late Guatemalan painter Carlos Merida, was lost when sections of the Benito Juarez apartment complex crumbled, trapping hundreds of people inside.

Authorities hope they can save other works at the same site, but said it would be difficult because the murals were painted directly onto the walls.

A metal relief by contemporary artists Francisco Zuniga and Alberto Beltran decorates the towers of the Respiratory Hospital of the heavily damaged National Medical Center. Workmen will dismantle the reliefs and reassemble them elsewhere.

An 84-square-yard mural painted in 1958 by David Alfaro Siqueiros, who ranks with Rivera in national renown, was recovered last week.

Beatriz Alfaro, spokeswoman for the National Institute of Fine Arts, told The Associated Press on Monday that it took six days to remove the mural, called "Depiction of the Future Victory of Medical Science over Cancer," from the hospital.

"Finally, the mural was recovered and is safe," she said.

She said the mural was created on a wood base that made its recovery possible. It now is located in the Medical Center's convention center which escaped the quake without major damage.

A second Rivera series, created from 1923 to 1926 and located in the federal Public Education Department building, will need restoration work, the arts center said.

Perhaps the best known murals to foreign tourists are those that decorate the exterior of buildings at the National Autonomous University of Mexico. The buildings in University City on the southern outskirts of the capital were well outside the areas affected by the quake and suffered no damage.

Famine relief workers prepare for second year in Ethiopia

By DAVID CRARY

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The architects of the largest one-year famine relief effort in history are bracing for Year II, hoping to overcome political rivalries and donor fatigue so Ethiopians will have enough to eat in 1986.

Almost 12 months have passed since Ethiopia's drought and famine had its full impact on the outside world.

Hundreds of thousands of Ethiopians — no one has precise figures — have died since then, and experts are not ready to rule out a recurrence. But Ethiopian and Western officials describe the relief campaign, mounted by an array of governments and agencies, as an unprecedented achievement.

"If there had been no relief effort, millions would have died," said Kurt Jansson, the United Nations assistant secretary-general in charge of emergency operations in Ethiopia. "The death rate was high anyway. It's unthinkable what would have happened without this tremendous effort."

The total emergency assistance to Ethiopia for 1985 will exceed $1 billion, and some Western relief officials fear potential donors will view second-year fund-raising appeals with less urgency — something they call donor fatigue.

One American agency, Catholic Relief Services, is publicly criticizing what it discerns as a U.S. government reduction in food aid for Ethiopia in 1986. Another U.S.-based organization, World Vision, plans a fund-raising telethon broadcast to the United States on Oct. 26 from a small town in the drought-stricken Wollo region.

"Progress has been made, but we need continued aid, or two years down the line these people will be back where they were," said World Vision spokeswoman Pat Banks. "It would be a total waste of all this money."

Ethiopia has projected its 1986 food shortfall at about 1.1 million metric tons, while Jansson projects it to be as low as 800,000 tons, depending on the success of the next harvest.

Berhane Deressa, Ethiopia's deputy relief commissioner, said about 5.8 million of the country's 42 million people will require food aid in 1986, compared with 7.9 million this year.

"Maybe the situation does not seem as dramatic now ... But there is enough good will in the world to sustain a genuine effort," Deressa said.

The long-term prospects for preventing another famine disaster are complicated by Ethiopia's liabilities. It is one of the world's poorest countries, with an annual per capita income of $120, and the Marxist-led government spends substantial sums on military campaigns against regional insurgencies.

Precipitous terrain restricts access to many areas and inhibits large-scale development projects.

As a consequence, development and drought-prevention work proceeds on a village-by-village basis. Agronomists teach farmers to grow fruits and vegetables, engineers dig wells and design small dams, medical teams preach the basics of health and sanitation.

One of the most challenging problems linked to the drought is deforestation. Experts say 3.5 percent of Ethiopia's land is now forested, compared with 40 percent in 1900.

Erosion increases as the trees disappear to the axes of people in need of firewood. The result in some areas is that rain washes away what little topsoil exists.

Efforts are under way to develop inexpensive stoves that do not use firewood and to teach peasants to build homes from mud-based bricks rather than wood.

Ethiopia's largest long-term development project, supported by the U.N. World Food Program, involves construction of stone terracing on which grass and drought-resistant tree seedlings are planted. U.N. officials say more than 105 billion seedlings have been planted since 1980, with 70 percent surviving the drought.

One major source of relief funds is the Band Aid Trust, which has raised an estimated $70 million from July's transatlantic live aid concert and the earlier British Band Aid record.

The trust says it is sending up to 100 food transport trucks to Ethiopia and neighboring Sudan at a cost of $11 million and plans to spend roughly $42 million on long-term projects, including an immunization program for 500,000 famine-affected African children.

Mother of 10 leads attack on birth-control pill for teens

EDITOR'S NOTE: In Britain, where contraceptives are free and sex education has long been taught in the schools, the rate of pregnancies among teen-age girls is about half that of the United States. But a crusade to halt the dispensing of birth control pills to young girls is a topic of national debate and has wound up in Britain's highest court.

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press

LONDON — When she's not doing the laundry, baking bread or buying groceries for her husband and 10 children, Victoria Gillick taunts the British medical establishment.

She and her supporters have been campaigning for more than a decade to stop doctors from prescribing birth control pills for girls under 16 without their parents' consent.

The British Medical Association, the Department of Health and Social Security, family-planning clinics, the big drug companies, the education system and the feminist movement are all on Mrs. Gillick's list of enemies.

And for now, the 38-year-old Roman Catholic housewife has them all pinned down with an Appeals Court ruling in her favor. The case reached the House of Lords' Law Lords, Britain's Supreme Court, in June, but the court put off judgment until the fall legal term.

In the meantime, doctors are banned from giving contraceptive or abortion advice or treatment to girls under 16, the legal age of consent in Britain, without their parents' permission.

Mrs. Gillick's grass roots crusade has stirred a highly charged debate over medical ethics, teen-age promiscuity, the permissive society and parents' rights.

Mrs. Gillick, whose five daughters are all under 16, says it comes down to one question: "Who is responsible for children, parents or the state?"

But her opponents warn of an explosion in teen-age pregnancies and abortions if there are obstacles to making birth control devices and information available to sexually active young girls.

The Brook Advisory Center, which operates 19 family-planning clinics in Britain, reports a 50 percent drop in the number of girls under 16 coming in for help since the Appeals Court ruled in Mrs. Gillick's favor in December 1984.

> "They think lots of sex is OK, but lots of children is disgusting."
> Victoria Gillick

In Britain, where contraceptives are free under the National Health Service and sex education has long been taught in the schools, the rate of pregnancies among teen-age girls is about half that of the United States.

According to a study by the Alan Guttmacher Institute, a New York research organization, pregnancies occur in 96 per 1,000 girls between the ages of 15 and 19 in the United States, compared with 45 in England and Wales. The study also found teen-age pregnancy rates running about half or less than half the U.S. rate in Canada, France, Sweden and the Netherlands — all of which place greater emphasis on sex education and contraceptive services.

Dr. Pramilla Senanayake, medical director of the London-based International Planned Parenthood Federation, which has affiliates in 120 countries, says it would be "disastrous" if the appeals decision is allowed to stand.

"The Gillick case provides a barrier between a young person and health personnel to whom they might turn for advice, including advice on how to prevent pregnancy," she says.

"If young people know the medical profession has to get prior consent before prescribing contraception, then they won't turn to the doctor. They will carry on with sexual activity and risk pregnancy."

Mrs. Gillick has support from conservative groups and the leaders of all of Britain's main religions. A Gallup Poll published by the Daily Telegraph, a conservative London newspaper, found 55 percent in favor of her stand on the pill and 38 percent opposed, with the remainder undecided.

But opposition has been equally widespread, and at times vociferous. She says she gets obscene telephone calls and letters, and her twin 13-year-old boys are being educated at home because they were bullied so much at school.

During a birth control debate at the University of Manchester in March, about 10 left-wing feminists shouted abuses and pelted Mrs. Gillick with contraceptives. Some of the women were dressed as rabbits to mock the size of her family.

Mrs. Gillick says feminists can't understand why a couple would choose to have 10 children. "They think lots of sex is OK, but lots of children is disgusting."

Mrs. Gillick runs her campaign from her rambling Georgian home in Wisbech, near Cambridge, between household chores and caring for her children, who range in age from 3 to 17. Her husband, Gordon, a 45-year-old free-lance designer and part-time teacher, strongly supports what she is doing.

The Gillicks are Roman Catholics, but Mrs. Gillick says the church's prohibition on artificial birth control and abortion has nothing to do with her campaign.

"I've never argued the case on religious grounds," she says. "What adults do is their own affair...because we believe the choice they make is an informed one."

The 74,000-member British Medical Association, which serves as a political lobby for doctors, has spearheaded opposition to the Gillick campaign. The BMA contends that doctors always try to persuade underage girls to involve their parents in decisions about birth control, but that teen-agers, like adults, have a right to doctor-patient confidentiality.

Delegates to the BMA's annual convention in June voted 375-16 in favor of reiterating the policy.

Dr. Sandy Macara, chairman of the BMA's Central Medical Ethics Committee, says: "It is a sad fact that not every young girl has responsible parents, or parents however responsible, in whom they can confide. Denied the responsible and compassionate help of her doctor, she may have nowhere to turn."

But Mrs. Gillick argues that it is up to parents, not doctors, to decide what is best for their children. If there is a conflict between a girl and her parents, doctors can ask a court to intervene, she says.

"The old idea that doctors know best dies hard," Mrs. Gillick says. "They do tend to think of themselves as something rather special, as though they had mystical powers and great wisdom. But they are not above the law."

The debate parallels the so-called Squeal Rule controversy over an attempt by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in 1983 to force federally funded family planning clinics to inform parents of treatment given to anyone under 18. Two federal judges blocked the rule on grounds it subverted the intent of Congress to prevent teen-age pregnancies.

Similarly, Britain's Department of Health and Social Security issued new birth control guidelines in 1974 in response to a rising rate of teen-age pregnancies and abortions. A departmental circular pointed out the need to give teen-agers contraceptive advice and said parents did not have to be contacted.

Enter Mrs. Gillick, who at that time had four girls (now there are five) under the age of 16. She formed a protest group that succeeded in getting the department to revise its guidelines in 1980.

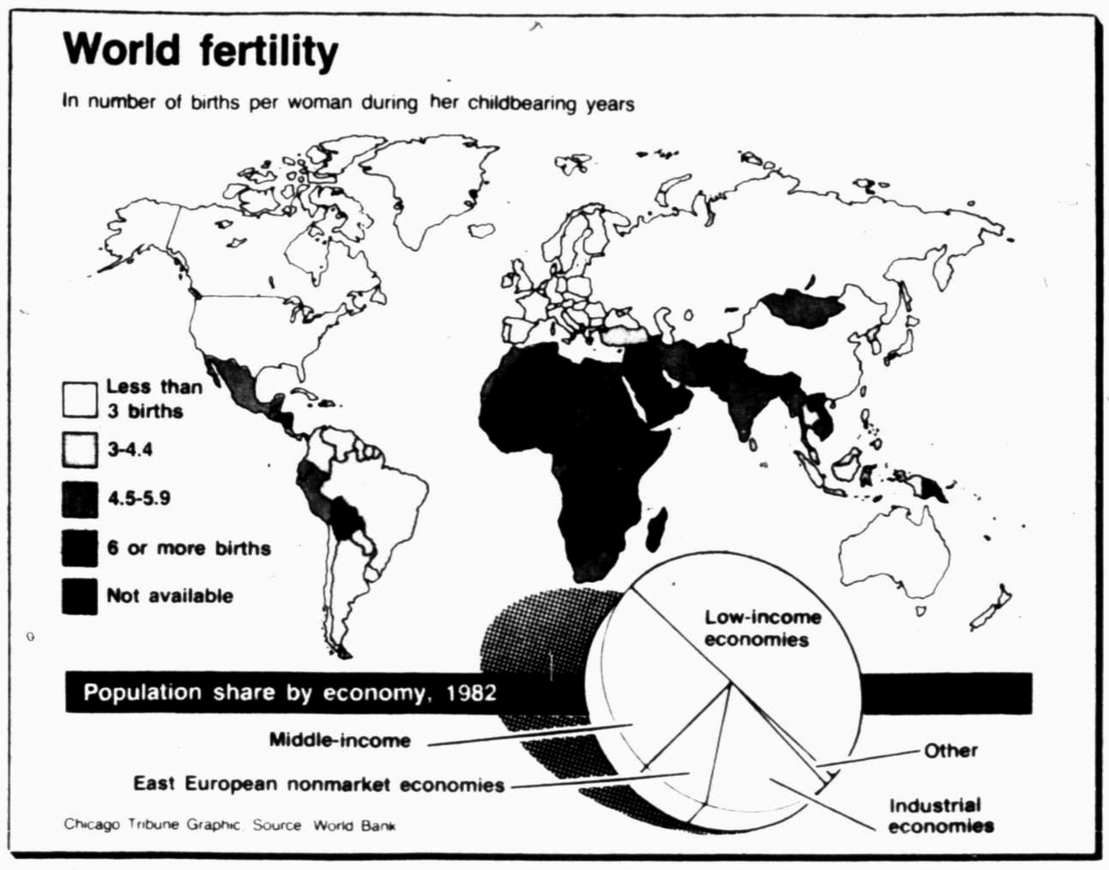

The new guidelines emphasized that doctors and family planning clinics should try to persuade under-16s to consult their parents, but said that in exceptional circumstances parental consent was unnecessary.

Not satisfied, Mrs. Gillick wrote to her local health authority seeking assurance that her underage children would never be given contraceptive or abortion advice without her consent.

The authority refused, and Mrs. Gillick filed suit against both the local health authority and the Department of Health and Social Security. A High Court dismissed the case in 1983, but Mrs. Gillick appealed and the Appeals Court ruled in her favor.

Speaking for the Appeals Court, Judge Edward Everleigh said the 1980 guidelines infringed upon the parents' legal right to control how and where their children spend their time.

The department has withdrawn the guidelines pending outcome of its appeal to the Law Lords. The five-judge panel is not expected to issue its judgment before October at the earliest.

Educators wonder, is it 'never too early' to start education?

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

According to the parents of Jason Selva, the 3-year-old can spell about 250 words, can recognize simple signs like "Stop" and "Police," and can count with amazing accuracy.

"They're just like little sponges at this age. They are so receptive that you just want to take advantage of it," his mother, Laura Selva, said.

Jason's eagerness for learning, however, has sparked a debate within his Los Angeles family.

Some relatives have encouraged the Selvas to enroll Jason in a special preschool that stresses "academic preparation." But Arturo Selva wants his son to acquire those skills naturally, without any formal instruction, until he is older.

"Parents who push miss out on the fun of having children," said Jason's father, a 17-year teaching veteran of the Los Angeles School District. "The child becomes an object, a goal, instead of a person."

The Selvas are not the only parents struggling to decide the proper age to begin a child's formal schooling. Early childhood educators, who once generally agreed that it was never too early to start a child's education, now are deeply divided over the age when children should start school and how much academic work those young students should receive.

And the division has grown even wider with the entry of politicians who — in an attempt to win the favor of upperwardly mobile parents with high aspirations for their children — have started advocating mandatory pre-kindergarten classes for 4-year-olds and all-day, academically oriented kindergartens for 5-year-olds.

New York City Mayor Ed Koch, for instance, has promised that by the fall of 1986 every 4-year-old in the city will be enrolled in some kind of pre-kindergarten program. And in states throughout the country, some kindergartens now feature entrance tests, report cards and graduation requirements.

While academic preschools and kindergartens may be popular with parents, many critics say that those programs may push children too far, too fast.

"No one is saying that parents shouldn't teach their children the alphabet, encourage them to count and explore the world," said Louise Bates Ames, associate director of the Gesell Institute of Human Development, a New Haven, Conn., early childhood education research organization.

"But it's all this super-baby nonsense — pushing children to do things and be things that they aren't ready for. What many parents don't understand is 4-year-olds aren't ready for academic work, and the average 5-year-old isn't ready for all-day school."

For decades most American educators viewed preschool and kindergarten as a low-pressure, non-academic experience where children would acquire school-room skills, such as sitting quietly and answering questions in complete sentences.

By 1983, slightly more than 38 percent of the nation's preschoolers were enrolled in some kind of early childhood education program, according to a study by the Carnegie Corp. of New York. This was almost double the number of toddlers enrolled in preschools in 1970.

A good pre-kindergarten program, according to early childhood educators, has several goals. First, it should help the child with simple tasks, such as holding a pencil or crayon correctly and drawing a recognizable figure. The classes should help reduce fears of speaking in a group and encourage expression in complete sentences. Math games should teach a child to count, and reading programs should help the child recognize his own name, the letters of the alphabet and the sounds of letters.

Ironically, researchers say, preschool attendance is often lowest among those students who would benefit the most. According to the National Center for Education Statistics, children from families with incomes of less than $10,000 a year have the lowest rates of attendance and children from families earning more than $20,000 a year have the highest.

Because of that discrepancy, several states have considered making pre-kindergarten attendance mandatory. "We see universal pre-kindergarten as an equity issue," said Ann Eldridge, assistant to the New York commissioner of education. "Access to good programs is a problem for children who need this extra boost for a good academic start."

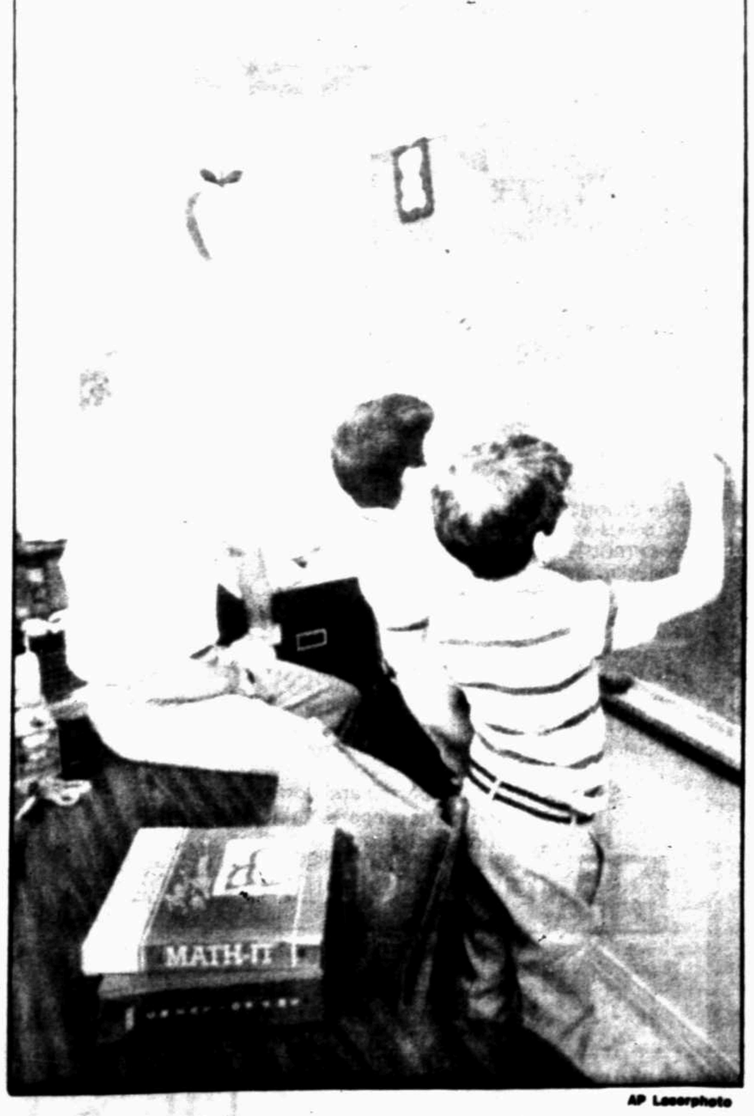

The debate over changes in kindergarten programs has been equally intense. Preschoolers now are likely to face a battery of challenges when they turn 5 and approach kindergarten. Those new challenges can include entrance tests, longer school days and, in some cases, a variety of graduation requirements.

From Diamond Bar, Calif., to Fairfield, Conn., potential kindergarteners must pass screening tests to demonstrate abilities in reading and math before they are allowed to enter kindergarten. This fall, Santa Monica, Calif., kindergarteners will join their young New Jersey counterparts attending school from 8:45 a.m. to 3 p.m., and they will concentrate on such subjects as math, reading readiness, science and social studies. The young students also will receive homework.

Defenders of the more rigorous approach say that the screening tests are not a juvenile equivalent of college entrance exams.

"The screening process is not used as a gatekeeper. It is a way to find the appropriate program for the student," said Larry Dougherty, assistant superintendent of the Greenwich, Conn., school district. "Screening also gives teachers a sense of how kids cope with school environment."

Move toward 'home school' grows with Tennessee decision

AP Laserphoto

Home school is a daily fact of life for Larry Walker, a teacher at the University of West Florida, and his twin sons, Will and John, at their home in Pensacola.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Nine-year-old Austin Whitver sits bent over a wooden desk, surrounded by his unmade bed, a fish tank and model airplanes as his mother talks him through several math problems.

But this is not just a case of mother helping son with homework.

Austin is attending "home school," where bedrooms and kitchens become classrooms and parents become tutors.

Forty-eight states now allow learning at home as an alternative to public or private school classrooms. In May, Tennessee joined their ranks. Only Kansas and Texas have not addressed the issue, according to a study by the Education Commission of the States.

The practice has caused some consternation in the educational community. Home-school curricula may be too narrow and children miss out on a valuable social setting, the concept's critics say.

Estimates vary widely on how many youngsters are getting home instruction. The commission's study estimates that about 50,000 children are instructed at home — a dramatic increase from a decade ago when experts estimated the figure at about 10,000. But home education proponents claim the number may be a million or more.

Tennessee estimates only 1,000 children, or three-tenths of 1 percent of those in public schools, will try home schools.

Tennessee's law legalizes what many parents have been doing for years, some openly and others in secret, and establishes guidelines requiring children to pass state tests periodically to monitor progress. Parents must have high school diplomas to teach up to the eighth grade and college degrees to teach high school students.

For Colleen and Harry Whitver, home school offered a chance to spend more time with their son after his hectic first year in a public school.

"It's not that the school was bad," said Mrs. Whitver, a former teacher. "It's just that there was never any family time left at the end of the school day. Our child was basically no longer a part of our family because of a school schedule that was being imposed on us."

Mrs. Whitver, like many home educators, chose to go that route because of deep religious convictions. But she said the choice to educate Austin themselves was not an "indictment of public education. It's just that we can offer him a personalized curriculum and can do academically in two hours what the school was taking seven hours to do. And I can give him instant feedback."

The Whitvers have found ways to keep Austin from being isolated from other children.

They joined a support group that includes four other home school families. He plays on a soccer team, attends church activities and plays in a neighborhood filled with children who attend public schools.

Still, Austin said he missed some aspects of Granbery Elementary School. "They got better hamburgers at Granbery," he said with a smile.

But critics say Austin and others like him are missing out on more than cafeteria burgers. Organized school, they say, offers an irreplaceable slice of Americana — the pep rallies, the high school prom, show-and-tell, the excitement of reuniting with classmates after a long summer vacation.

They also say the home-educated children become isolated from youngsters of other races and socio-economic classes.

The National Education Association, the nation's largest teacher union, neither supports nor condemns home education.

"We still believe a child's educational and social needs are best met in a social setting. But we recognize there's a need for home schools in certain circumstances," said Nancy Kochuk, an NEA spokeswoman.

Ms. Kochuk said the NEA didn't see home schools as a serious threat since 90 percent of school-age children still attend public schools, with the rest going to private, parochial or home schools.

She said one of NEA's major concerns was that parents may not share the public schools' "mission" to teach children to become productive citizens.

"Their children may be uneducated or miseducated and turn into problems that society will have to deal with," Ms. Kochuk said.

Some educators fear parents will use home school laws to avoid desegregation orders, teach too narrow a curriculum or shield youngsters from experiences that would help them mature.

But home school advocates say there's another side to that argument.

"Everybody misses out on something somewhere along the line," said Jeanfie Ruth, who teaches her three school-age children, aged 7 to 13.

Through home school, she said, her children can pursue excellence in ways that other children can't. For instance, one son is a competitive ice skater and her daughter is a budding gymnast. She and her husband, John, question the validity of many experiences some consider vital to growing up.

Dad teaches twins in Florida

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Most parents who teach their children at home do so out of religious conviction or dissatisfaction with public schools. For the children of Larry Walker of Pensacola, home schooling was a life-and-death necessity.

His 8-year-old twins have an immunological deficiency that prevents them from going to public schools. They are unable to fight off diseases like the common cold or influenza.

Walker and his wife, Gail, both of whom hold doctoral degrees, started their home school because they were forced to, but Walker said he wouldn't have it any other way now.

"If John's and Will's medical problems cleared up right now we would continue to home school," said Walker, who teaches at the University of West Florida.

A newly enacted state law will make life easier for Walker and the estimated 1,300 other home schoolers in Florida. Before the law passed, about a dozen Florida parents were being prosecuted for refusing to obey the state's compulsory attendance law.

Under the law, parents don't have to be certified educators to teach their children at home. They are required to notify local school superintendents of their intentions and keep a portfolio of each child's work. Superintendents can inspect the materials after giving parents 15 days written notice.

But Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington is unhappy because, he said, "In effect, it makes the compulsory attendance law unenforceable."

The law will expire in two years unless legislators decide to extend it.

Walker, chairman of the Florida Parent Educators Association, said home school programs seemed to be gaining more acceptance.

He related the story of a 7-year-old who started second grade last week.

When the boy's parents asked what he'd learned the first day in public school, he said he colored a picture of an apple and studied the letter "A."

That same day, Walker said his twins were led through their required four hours of instruction in six subjects, including reading, mathematics, science, spelling, history, religious studies and a half hour of aerobic exercise.

"There are some home schoolers who don't have a religious bone in their bodies," said Walker. "They just think home schooling is better education."

St. Lawrence Seaway traffic blocked by mishap in canal

THOROLD, Ontario (AP) — An accident in the Welland Canal, which links Lakes Erie and Ontario and bypasses Niagara Falls, has blocked traffic through the St. Lawrence Seaway, causing what officials say could be a major blow to shipping.

"It's especially a problem now because people are trying to finish up their shipping season," John Hanieski, chairman of the Detroit-Wayne County Port Authority, said in Detroit Monday.

Ice on the St. Lawrence Seaway — the shipping route from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic — normally stops traffic by January, he said. "You've got people laying in inventories in anticipation of the seaway being closed in winter.

"You've got the harvest season on the wheat pretty much concluded in the northern Great Lakes area, so you've got the elevators wanting to move the product out to their customers. It's going to slow down the movement of a lot of steel into Detroit."

C. Thomas Burke, director of the Cleveland-Cuyahoga County Port Authority, agreed: "We were expecting 40 ships in before the close of the shipping season on Dec. 15, and now they are bottled up."

The Welland Canal was blocked Monday when a 125-foot section of a lock wall caved in onto a grain freigher that was passing through, pinning the ship to the side of the lock.

The Liberian-registered Furia, which was eastbound, was moved from the damaged 80-foot-deep lock Monday night after Seaway officials slowly refilled it.

"We've got to look at the problem and, with our engineers, see what we can do," said Malcolm Campbell, vice-president of the western region of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority.

Lock No. 7, where the cave-in occurred, was built in 1932, he said, adding, "the concrete has aged considerably."

"I talked with the captain, and he said it was as if the vessel had run aground hard," said Campbell.

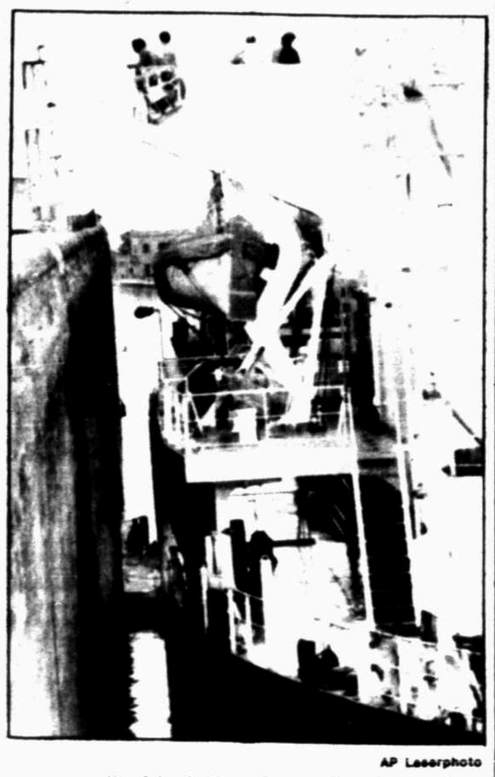

He said he could not estimate how long the seaway would be closed, but added, "It's a major problem, and it's going to take time."

Campbell said that it was a particularly bad time for the accident to happen.

"We haven't had a very good year, and then demand for grain" increased, he said. "We've noticed a buildup of traffic in the last few weeks."

Hanieski said delays would be expensive.

"It costs $30,000 an hour to have a ship inactive, and that really motivates you to do things," he said

A wall of lock 7 in the Welland Canal at Welland, Ontario, collapsed Monday, trapping a grain freighter.

No injuries were reported in the accident.

Seven westbound and two eastbound ships were already in the canal, their movement blocked by the Furia, and six ships were anchored in Lake Ontario awaiting passage, Campbell said.

"With this canal being stopped, no vessels are going to get up into the Upper (Great) Lakes," he said.

The cave-in comes almost a year after a bridge shaft across the seaway broke at Valleyfield, Quebec, trapping 165 ships in the waterway and stopping traffic for 18 days.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Papal plot defendant dies

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Bekir Celenk, an absentee defendant in the trial of seven men accused of conspiring to kill the pope, suffering a heart attack in a Turkish military prison and died, the Anatolia news agency reported.

A court in Rome was planning to move to Turkey this month to question the reputed Turkish mobster about the alleged 1981 plot to kill Pope John Paul II.

A dispatch by the semiofficial news agency said Celenk suffered a heart attack Monday afternoon at the Mamak military prison in Ankara and died on the way to Gulhane military hospital.

Celenk, 51, was standing trial in Ankara on charges of arms and drugs smuggling. He faced the death penalty if convicted.

Gorbachev addresses party

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist Party leaders heard a major speech from Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev today on economic and social policy, and changes in a 24-year-old party program that promised to surpass U.S. living standards by 1970, the official news agency said.

The news agency Tass said the Communist Party Central Committee would address a draft new edition of the party program, changes in party manuals, and draft economic and social guidelines for the next five years, and to the year 2000.

Gorbachev addressed the Central Committee on those topics, it said. Tass gave no further details of the Central Committee meeting.

Peres begins three state visits

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres left today for a 12-day three-nation trip, claiming that the hijacking of an Italian cruise ship in the Mediterranean Sea vindicated Israel's warnings against international terrorism.

"Israel has won — I wouldn't say achievements — but at least the truth it expressed has become an international truth," Peres said in a brief statement before leaving for Austria, the United States and France.

In his talks with President Reagan and other U.S. administration officials, Peres intends to cash in on U.S. anger over the killing of an American passenger during the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro, his aides have said.

His objective is to eliminate the Palestine Liberation Organization from any role in the Middle East peace efforts, despite an agreement last February between Jordan and the PLO to form a joint negotiating position.

Tunisia: Damage 'irreparable'

TUNIS, Tunisia (LAT) — Despite intensive efforts by the Reagan administration to mend its relations with Tunisia, government officials and diplomats here say that irreparable damage has been done because of President Reagan's initial support of the Israeli raid on the Tunis headquarters of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"I don't think that relations will ever be the same," a Western diplomat said, speaking on condition that he not be identified. "In my estimation, irreparable harm has been done."

Senior Tunisian officials confirmed that Tunisia was prepared to sever diplomatic relations with Washington and would have done so if the United States had vetoed a U.N. Security Council resolution condemning the Oct. 1 Israeli raid in which 72 people, including 12 Tunisians, were killed.

Mahmoud Mestiri, minister of state for foreign affairs, said in an interview: "I guess it's not a secret any more. We had decided to break diplomatic relations. We would have done so if the United States had not abstained in the Security Council vote."

The U.N. resolution, adopted Oct. 5 by a vote of 14-0, with the United States casting the lone abstention, condemned Israel's "act of armed aggression" and said Tunisia was entitled to seek appropriate reparations.

Mixed-race youngsters riot

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Dozens of mixed-race youths went on a window-breaking rampage in a white suburb of Cape Town after police broke up a meeting of about 1,000 students at a nearby school, witnesses said.

Police used tear gas Monday to break up the students' meeting in a mixed-race neighborhood near Cape Town, but about 60 youths moved into a shopping area in the suburb of Wynberg, the witnesses said.

The mob broke car windows and at least four store windows before police arrived, but the youths scattered before police could detain them, said reporters who witnessed the incident.

The anti-apartheid violence in which more than 750 people have died during the past 14 months has been confined mostly to black and mixed-race townships, but it recently has spread.

Pakistan leader cancels trip

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq canceled a scheduled visit to West Germany because of pressing internal matters in Pakistan, the government said.

Zia, who was to have arrived in Bonn on Wednesday for a four-day visit, was unable to leave Pakistan because of his "commitment to the country," a government statement said Monday. The visit will be rescheduled, it said.

The statement did not give further information, but apparently referred to debate in the National Assembly on legislation ending eight years of martial law by the end of the year.

The assembly is debating measures that include legalizing political parties. Zia, an army general, is to remain in power as civilian president when martial law ends.

Flash flooding hits Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Heavy rains in central Thailand caused flash floods that killed 15 people, left thousands homeless, and collapsed bridges, Interior Ministry and provincial officials said today.

A flash flood Sunday in Suan Phung district of Ratchaburi province, about 50 miles southwest of Bangkok, killed 12 people and destroyed 50 homes, officials said. Seven bridges collapsed and many roads were cut, they said.

In nearby Damnoen Saduak district on Saturday, three people died and three others were injured. Floods there also damaged 415 houses, officials said.

Thousands of villagers were reported homeless in the two areas.

Bamrung Saragagananda, director of the Weather Forecast Division said a weather system that passed over the province Saturday caused strong winds and heavy rains. The flood waters have mostly receded.

Vehicles pile up in English fog

CRICK, England (AP) — One hundred twenty vehicles smashed into each other Monday on a fog-bound stretch of a superhighway in Northamptonshire, injuring 19 motorists, police said.

Police said two of the 19 injured were seriously hurt in the massive pileup on the M1 highway near the village of Crick. Ambulances and fire engines from three counties north of London rushed to the scene.

A senior police commander on the scene said motorists failed to slow down when fog closed in on the heavily traveled highway and called it "yet another episode of motorway madness."

Truck driver Michael O'Keefe said he didn't think people were driving particularly fast "but they were certainly much too close. When cars and lorries (trucks) started smashing into each other, I saw a couple of drivers jump out and run up the embankment to get clear."

Timber afloat in ship lanes

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — More than 600 tons of timber were floating in shipping lanes off the New South Wales coast Monday night following the sinking of a Singapore-registered freighter.

Authorities said that the timber beams were wired together in bundles that could knock a hole in a vessel, and warned that the floating wood posed a major hazard to small boats and ships.

The Hoe-Lien sank about 23 miles off Newcastle, 74 miles north of Sydney, while it was being towed to safety on Monday. The badly listing vessel was evacuated on Sunday in a daring sea rescue after its deck cargo shifted in mountainous waves.

An Australian destroyer was diverted from exercises in the Coral Sea to answer the cargo vessel's distress call. Water police and two Royal Australian Air Force helicopters also joined in the rescue of the Hoe-Lien's 25 crew members.

The 3,200-ton freighter was on its way to Sydney from Malaysia when it capsized.
