Agents arrest rival's bodyguard, Phoenix man in attack on skater

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Figure skater Tonya Harding's bodyguard and another man were arrested Thursday and charged with conspiracy in the attack on Olympic rival Nancy Kerrigan. More arrests were expected, one official said.

The bodyguard, Shawn Eric Eckardt, 26, and Derrick Brian Smith, 29, were arrested in Portland, said Michael Schrunk, Multnomah County district attorney.

Smith, a former resident of Portland, moved to Phoenix about five months ago, Schrunk said.

Eckardt told authorities Harding's ex-husband asked him to arrange the attack, The Oregonian newspaper reported Thursday, citing unidentified law-enforcement sources.

ABC quoted unidentified law enforcement officials Thursday as saying Smith acted as the getaway driver in the attack. Lt. Jim Turney of the Multnomah County Sheriff's Department said he could not confirm that report.

One report says Eckardt claims that Jeff Gillooly, Harding's ex-husband, asked him to arrange the attack.

Authorities: There is no indication that Tonya Harding was involved in planning the attack.

MOSCOW — Joined in a historic quest to expand democracy, President Clinton and Boris Yeltsin pledged Thursday to press ahead with reforms that will "make life better" for restive Russians. The two also were ready to stop aiming nuclear missiles at each other's countries.

In hours of Kremlin talk and over a long, festive dinner at Yeltsin's elegant country dacha, the two leaders agreed that Russia could not afford to backpedal on painful economic reforms despite mounting public dissatisfaction.

The crowds loved Clinton in Moscow, surging to get close enough for a glimpse or even a handshake, cheering when he waved his fur hat in the chilly air.

"We'll work together," Clinton assured stolid Muscovites lined up for bread in a downtown bakery. "All these folks working hard need to know that in the end they will be rewarded."

Officials call on basin to pump up blood supply

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin Regional Blood Center is calling on the community this weekend to help relieve a record shortage in blood supplies.

"We are at a critical low," said Ricky Jorgensen, blood center donor resource specialist.

"We haven't been this low in the year and a half we have been open."

Jorgensen said the center normally has 400 units of blood in its inventory. This winter the supply has dropped to 50 to 75 units.

The center is the sole supplier of blood to 11 medical facilities, including Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, Odessa Medical Center, Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, Women's and Children's Hospital, Eyes of Texas clinics, the Rehabilitation Hospital of Midland-Odessa and hospitals in Andrews, Monahans and Stanton.

Jorgensen said the reason for the shortage is a high demand for blood and a bad cold-

U.S. enforces Vidor housing integration with armed escort

By Sam Howe Verhovek
N.Y. Times News Service

VIDOR — As federal marshals and the police kept watch, federal housing officials early Thursday moved four black families into an all-white housing project in this East Texas town, which has not had a permanent black resident in more than 60 years.

It was the first time since the mid-1960s that the federal government had enforced the integration of a housing project with such an armed escort.

The 74-unit housing complex had resisted all other efforts at integration. Earlier this year, four other black families quickly moved out after enduring what they described as unremitting hostility from some whites here.

PUC decision on rate increase short-circuits TU Electric plans

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

TU Electric Co. revenues will be more than $300 million less than anticipated this fiscal year, since commissioners with the Texas Public Utilities Commission voted to allow only an 8.7 percent rate increase to Texas' largest electric utility.

Although the increase will give TU an extra $435 million a year, TU officials say the company needs more to remain financially strong.

"A continued failure to consider the negative consequences of a financially weakened electric utility and the impact this could have on the future of electric service and economic development in this part of the state would clearly be shortsighted, because it would result in higher costs and less reliability over the long term," said

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Parents of students in Midland public schools take note: It's going to be a short summer.

School's out June 3, but starts up again Aug. 16 for the 1994-95 school year. Teachers will have an even shorter summer, since they have to begin preparing for school on Aug. 10.

As this year's first semester of school ends today, thoughts may turn to spring break and planning summer holidays.

And when planning summer holidays, be sure to end them by the second week of August.

Midland Independent School District trustees approved the new calendar Tuesday, after it emerged as the most popular among district employees.

About 1,184 MISD employees voted for the calendar in a run-off election with another calendar option.

Mexican peace envoy recognizes rebels as political, military force

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) — The government's peace envoy openly accepted an Indian guerrilla movement as a political and military force Thursday, taking another step toward meeting rebel demands for talks.

He also said he had received messages that might be an opening to negotiations, but it was not clear if he had heard directly from rebel leaders.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari took the first step toward meeting rebel demands when he announced a unilateral cease-fire in the southern state of Chiapas and said troops would fire on rebels only if attacked first. He also offered to pardon the guerrillas if they laid down their weapons.

The president's offer met the rebel demand to end military offensives, but a third demand remains — withdrawal of the 14,000 soldiers in Chiapas.

Infantrymen and tanks were continuing to advance slowly toward Guadalupe Tepeyac, a town near the Guatemalan border believed to be a rebel stronghold.

The Zapatista National Liberation Army shocked the nation with a New Year's Day uprising, saying they want to improve the lot of Indians in impoverished Chiapas state. Most Indians there lack decent housing, education or jobs.

The fighting, which largely subsided after a few days, left 107 people dead, official say. Church groups say the toll is higher.

More oil spills into San Juan waters

By Lisa M. Hamm
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Violent waves jostled a barge stuck for a week on a reef off San Juan, further damaging the hull and spilling another 168,000 gallons of oil into the ocean on Thursday.

The new spill — on top of nearly 750,000 gallons that poured into the Atlantic when the barge hit the reef Jan. 7 — was a setback to cleanup efforts. The initial spill soiled miles of beaches in front of some of the city's most popular hotels, at the height of the tourist season.

Meanwhile, a tugboat captain's mate testified he thought it was a mistake to forge ahead full throttle after patching a broken tow line linking the tug to the barge. But Victor Martinez, the mate on the tug Emily S., said he didn't feel it was his place to question the captain's decision.

Hours after an emergency cable was rigged up, the barge broke away and drifted onto a reef 300 yards off San Juan, spilling about half of its load of 1.5 million gallons of fuel oil.

Salvage workers started pumping the remaining oil out of the damaged barge Saturday, but stopped Tuesday night because of rough seas.

Early Thursday, strong waves pushed the barge three feet deeper onto the reef, tearing it open further and spilling another 168,000 gallons of oil, Cmdr. Jerzy Kichner, head of the Coast Guard's special oil salvage team, told The Associated Press.

"She lost a lot of her bottom," Kichner said after assessing the damage. "But she's still holding together."

About 210,000 gallons remain in the barge, he said.

Australian fires under control, crisis ends

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The forest fires that blazed across southeastern Australia for a week were mostly under control or contained today, ending the crisis that left four dead and 1.9 million acres burned.

"The immediate threat is over but the fires are not yet out," Bushfire Services Commissioner Phil Koperberg, the man in charge of the emergency, told reporters. "It has been hell."

Koperberg warned against complacency, saying a new crisis could erupt if the hot temperatures and gusty winds that fanned the infernos returned.

Most of the 100 fires still burning across New South Wales state were contained or under control, said the Bushfires Service Department.

Light rain has fallen in some areas but heavy rain is needed to extinguish the flames altogether.

Lightning ignited three fires near the Outback town of Cobar, 370 miles northwest of Sydney, late Thursday.

Still, as the summer crisis eased, hundreds of firefighters who came from other parts of the country to help have begun to return home.

The fires, which came within four miles of Sydney, killed four people, including two firefighters, and injured hundreds. More than 200 houses and other buildings were destroyed, and 1.9 million acres of forest and grassland burned.

All but 2 percent of the Royal National Park, the world's second oldest national park after Yellowstone in the United States, was razed. The park is on Sydney's southern outskirts.

Tens of thousands of animals and birds were feared incinerated. Hundreds of injured animals were captured and are being cared for in makeshift shelters.

Koperberg described the emergency as the biggest spread of fire recorded in Australia since European colonization 206 years ago.

Israelis expect Clinton to break impasse at U.S.-Syria summit

By Nicolas B. Tatro
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — Israel is waiting for Syria to say the magic word: normalization.

Hopes are high here that President Clinton will wring a pledge from Syrian President Hafez Assad at a Sunday summit in Geneva to set up embassies and open the Israeli-Syrian borders to tourism and trade.

"I do have high expectations," said Deputy Foreign Minister Yossi Beilin, one of the main architects of the Israel-PLO agreement last Sept. 13.

"I believe something like normalization or diplomatic relations should be mentioned during this meeting," Beilin said in an interview Wednesday with The Associated Press.

After plans for the Clinton-Assad meeting were announced last month, White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said the session would "provide the two leaders an opportunity to discuss the requirements for peace with security between Israel and Syria."

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was more guarded about the summit.

"I don't expect flexibility in the Syrian demand on the price for peace with Israel," he told Israeli army radio Thursday, in an apparent reference to Syrian demands for a total withdrawal from the disputed Golan Heights.

Rabin's government has been waiting for Syria to define what peace will mean before Israel spells out how much of the Golan Heights, captured by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war, it is willing to return to Syrian control.

"After Assad says what is the meaning of peace, we will say what is the meaning of withdrawal," said Ori Orr, head of Parliament's defense and foreign affairs committee.

Israeli already has seen some improvement in relations with Syria.

Syrian statements on the peace process are less hostile. It allowed a U.S. team to investigate the fate of Israeli MIAs, and Assad is once again committed to granting travel permits to Syrian Jews.

In one sign of the new, upbeat tone, the Syrian government daily Tishrin said Thursday that Syria would "spare no effort to put the peace process on the right track and to eliminate all mines planted before it."

Later this month, Israel and Syria are to resume formal talks in Washington. They were suspended last September, when Israel signed agreements with the PLO and Jordan.

What Israeli officials really want is a high-level meeting with Syria and a secret, third-party mediator like the late Johan Jorgen Holst, the Norwegian foreign minister who led secret talks that forged the Israel-PLO peace accord.

One possible conduit for secret talks could be Edward P. Djerejian, the new U.S. ambassador to Israel who previously served in Damascus and speaks Arabic.

Israel reportedly has proposed a phased pullback from the Golan and a long-term lease agreement that would leave Israeli settlements in place.

Serbs report near capture of strategic Muslim town

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serbs battered the strategic town of Olovo on Thursday in an attempt to squeeze nearby Tuzla, one of the last Muslim-controlled strongholds in the east.

Serbs hope that the fall of Olovo and the further isolation of Tuzla would help pressure the Muslim-led government to sign a peace agreement.

The Serb army claimed Thursday that its troops, backed by tanks and heavy artillery, sent government soldiers fleeing after breaching defense lines near Olovo, 25 miles north of the capital Sarajevo.

The Bosnian government denied the claim and said front lines were stable, while acknowledged Serb attacks had intensified over the last few days.

Government officials in Tuzla, the last large Muslim-controlled stronghold in the east, said their forces had killed 40 Serbs in the most recent upsurge of the 66-day assault on the town. They did not say how many Bosnian army soldiers died. Tuzla is 30 miles north of Olovo.

Bosnian radio said more than 1,000 shells hit the southern front line of Olovo Thursday and reported clashes on fronts further east.

Capturing Olovo would narrow the government-controlled land corridor running from Tuzla to the enclave of Zenica, 50 miles to the southwest.

That would make Tuzla, a city whose prewar population of 130,000 has more than tripled with refugees, more dependent on the Serbs.

Most U.N. aid comes in from the Serbian capital of Belgrade and access through northern Bosnia depends on Bosnian Serbs controlling the region.

The United Nations have for months pressed Serbs to open Tuzla's airport to allow more aid into the enclave, but the Serbs have refused. Opening the airport would permit an airlift similar to the one that has kept Sarajevo alive for much of the 21-month-old war.

ARREST: Agents charge rival's bodyguard

(From 1A)

Eckardt didn't answer questions shouted to him by about 25 reporters as he was escorted, handcuffed, into the booking area of the city-county Justice Center jail, where bail was set for $20,000.

Smith followed a half-hour later, also handcuffed. He also ignored reporters' shouted questions; His bail also was set at $20,000.

The charge of conspiracy to commit assault is a felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $100,000 fine.

Earlier Thursday, Multnomah County sheriff's spokesman Bart Whalen said more than two arrests were expected.

ABC News said a Portland man, whom it identified as Shane Stant, was the alleged hit man who carried out the attack at Cobo Hall in Detroit. The assailant escaped.

The arrests were announced after two days of confusion and speculation over the role of Harding and her ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, in the Jan. 6 attack that left Kerrigan unable to compete in last week's U.S. Figure Skating Championships.

Harding won the championships, qualifying for the Olympic team. Kerrigan was also named to the team even though her injury forced her to withdraw from the competition. But the injury raised doubts about her ability to compete in the Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway, Feb. 12-27.

The U.S. Olympic Committee said it would defer to skating officials who chose Harding for the team as long as she was not implicated in the assault.

"At the same time, in terms of dealing with this in the abstract, there are other issues that must be resolved before questions of sportsmanship and conduct can be answered," said USOC executive director Harvey T. Schiller.

Harding, 23, and Gillooly were divorced Aug. 28, but later reconciled and have lived together since October.

There was no indication that Harding was involved in planning the attack, authorities said, despite a report by Boston TV station WCVB that a sealed warrant contained her name.

NBC News on Wednesday quoted sources as saying that after the men met in Portland, the hit man went to Boston, where Kerrigan lives and trains. It was there the investigators believe he planned to attack Kerrigan, but bad weather somehow fouled the attempt, NBC said.

Detroit police said Thursday they had recovered a collapsible metal baton, believed to be the weapon. A Detroit resident found it in a trash can behind the arena, police said.

Monday, before specific allegations surfaced, Harding, Gillooly and Eckardt denied any involvement in the attack.

"You guys know me better than that," Harding said.

In Detroit earlier Thursday, deputy police chief Benny Napoleon said a woman from out of state called the police department Saturday and insisted on speaking with him.

"She indicated to me that she heard a conversation regarding the planned assault on Nancy Kerrigan" several months ago, Napoleon said. "She put it off as somebody talking. Once the assault occurred, she became frightened."

PUMP: Regional blood center calls for help

(From 1A)

and-flu season.

"First, we have seven patients in the 11 facilities that we serve that are really using the blood," he said. ' Open-heart-surgery patients, cancer and leukemia patients — people like that.

"Then, a lot of people were unable to donate because they are sick. Any kind of sickness or being on antibiotics can keep someone from donating blood. And, it's been a bad year for the flu."

Jorgensen said usually one out of 10 donors are deferred because of sickness. However, this year, the number jumped to about four or five out of 10.

"It's a nationwide epidemic," he said. "About 50 percent of residents nationwide have the flu or have had it this year."

Give blood

Permian Basin Regional Blood Center extended hours:

- Main donor room, 200 Airport Plaza — 8 a.m.-4 p.m. today.
- Midland donor room, Abell-Hanger Pavilion, 400 Andrews Highway — 8 a.m.-4 p.m. today; 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday.
- Odessa donor room, 4th Street and Golder, 8 a.m.-4 p.m. today.
- "Wheels of Life," Albertson's, 4950 E. 42nd St., Odessa, 11 a.m.-4 p.m. today and 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday.

The center needs O negative blood the most, because anyone, despite their own blood type, can receive O negative, Jorgensen said.

"It's universal," he said. "It's what's given to kids and babies in the hospitals."

An average blood donation takes about 20 to 30 minutes, with a majority of that time spent doing paper work and taking a mini-physical, he said.

A donor will first be asked to fill out a donor card listing basic information, including address and Social Security number. The donor is then given a quick physical, which includes taking their blood pressure, pulse, temperature and iron count. The donor is then asked a series of questions about their health.

"Once a donor is on the bed, it only takes about five to seven minutes to actually give the blood," he said. "It's a very simple, easy process."

Jorgensen said the center extended its hours all week and will continue through Saturday.

The main donor room at 200 Airport Plaza will be open from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. today.

The Midland donor room at Abell-Hanger Pavilion, 400 Andrews Highway, will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday. The Odessa donor room, located at 4th Street and Golder, will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. today.

The "Wheels of Life" donor coach will be in Odessa at Albertson's, 4950 E. 42nd St., from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

PRESS: Yeltsin, Clinton push reform quest

(From 1A)

"I wish you success," one woman replied.

Welcoming Clinton to the opulent Grand Palace at the Kremlin, Yeltsin predicted the three-day summit would produce "profound," "practical" and "sweeping" results. Privately, he assured Clinton "there is no turning back" from the drive for free-market reforms, U.S. officials reported.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the Americans came away reassured that Russian leaders were "redoubling their efforts to move forward with the reform process," undeterred by the strong showing of anti-reform forces in recent parliamentary elections.

Clinton brought no new gift basket of American aid for his third face-to-face meeting with Yeltsin in nine months, but he promised greater efforts to deliver fast and effective assistance already in the pipeline in an effort to cushion the economic pain for ordinary Russians.

"More attention has to be paid to easing some of the hardships that we've heard about," said Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen.

Asked if he wanted more U.S. aid, Yeltsin said, "Not more than was promised already."

During an impromptu side tour through downtown shops and kiosks, Clinton told Muscovites that he and Yeltsin were "talking about how we can work together to make life better for the working people of your country."

As part of his effort to mobilize broader support for free-market reforms, Clinton brought together influential Russians from a variety of fields and political backgrounds for an evening reception.

"As I look around this room at the faces of tomorrow's Russia, people from different political parties . . . people who are in private enterprises, I say to you: 'There is lots of room for difference of opinion,'" Clinton told the group.

RATE: Refund to be offset by fuel surcharge

(From 1A)

Tom Baker, TU executive vice president.

In making their decision, the PUC considered months' worth of testimony, vast numbers of documents, public comment from thousands of ratepayers, hundreds of attendants at regional meetings in three cities and even established interactive television links with three other cities, according to PUC spokeswoman Anne Roussos.

On Aug. 26, TU instituted a 15.3 percent rate increase, intended to raise revenues by $760 million annually. Part of this money will need to be refunded to TU ratepayers, according to PUC regulations.

The amount of refunds, however, will depend on further PUC decisions as they look over other TU expenses, such as fuel costs.

Last year, TU used more fuel than anticipated and extra costs for this fuel can be recovered from this year's billings, according to Midland TU spokeswoman Luann Morgan. This $144 million in "under-recovered" fuel costs is expected to offset a substantial portion of the refunds, according to PUC officials.

Earlier in the rate case, TU agreed not to seek to recover $333 million in expenses associated with construction of the Comanche Peak Unit II nuclear power plant. The PUC this month voted to reduce TU's residential customer charge from $7.50 to $6.

In a 2-1 vote, commissioners ordered TU to initiate a pilot project, providing a new rate to assist low-income customers. In this project, TU will study 3,000 bills to its low-income customers to decide how to reduce them significantly, according to Ms. Roussos.

All factors affecting TU rates will be released in the PUC's final report on Jan. 26. The PUC has agreed to look into TU claims of reduced financial integrity regarding the rate increase, according to Joan Hunter of TU's Dallas main office.

TU officials claim the utility is not properly compensated for its accounting and personnel expenses. A loss in sales revenues related to the loss of two large wholesale customers also is not considered in the PUC decision, according to TU officials.

"TU Electric is already in a weak financial position and the commissioner's proposed increase will clearly cause further deterioration. With an 8.8 percent increase, the company will not have a reasonable opportunity to earn even close to the 11.35 percent return that the commissioners recommended the company be allowed," Baker said.

A declining financial condition will further affect TU's ability to secure financing for its various projects, Ms. Morgan explained. "We're almost a junk bond now," she said.

TU likely will be put in a position to apply for another rate increase, Ms. Morgan said. The cost of filing and securing a rate increase is between $5 million and $7 million, she said.

VIDOR: Officials move four black families

(From 1A)

Development's assistant secretary for fair housing and equal opportunity, said Thursday's operation, carried out before dawn under the cover of darkness, reflected the Clinton administration's determination to achieve integration in scores of housing projects around the country where judicial integration orders had either failed or been ignored in recent years.

She said that federal officials planned to move several more black families to the Vidor project in coming weeks and that she expected more such operations to comply with similar orders elsewhere.

Ringed by a chain-link fence, the complex, Vidor Village, remained under 24-hour police guard on Thursday evening. Reporters were not allowed onto the complex, which consists of clusters of modest beige-vinyl and red-brick apartment units surrounded by oaks and loblolly pines.

Federal officials said that 18 of the white residents, unprodded, had held a welcoming party at noon for their new black neighbors — two single women with seven children between them, a single black man and a single black woman.

The new residents, who volunteered to move into Vidor Village after being asked by federal officials who picked their names from waiting lists for public housing in Beaumont, Orange and Port Arthur, nearby cities with large black populations, began arriving in three cars shortly after 5:30 a.m. They were accompanied by several moving vans and officials in HUD cars, along with a police escort.

The housing department has paid off-duty Vidor police officers to protect the complex intermittently during the last year, a practice described by housing officials as a routine way of providing security in many housing projects around the country.

Several white residents of Vidor Village said that they were tired of portrayals of Vidor as a bigoted town and that they wanted integration to work. Many residents here blame outside Ku Klux Klan agitators for previous frictions at the complex.

Ilene Pierce said she went over on Thursday morning to say hello to one of her new neighbors. "She said she was a little bit intimidated, but that they had the right to live anywhere they wanted," Mrs. Pierce said. "They all seemed like anybody else, trying to make a living and getting on with their lives and raising children."

A white man, who declined to give his name, said: "There isn't anything we can do about it anyway. This is the future. This is the way the government says it's going to be."

Some white residents complained that it was only now, with blacks being brought in, that the housing department had undertaken long-promised improvements to the project for low-income people. For instance, five washing machines were installed recently, the first ever at the complex.

But even as most people in Vidor Village insisted they wanted to get along, one man, Jerry Lopez, an unemployed maintenance worker, said he had heard that there may be problems for the black children, who would be the only blacks at Vidor Elementary School.

Four months ago, Housing Secretary Henry G. Cisneros came to Vidor and took control of the local housing authority, which he accused of dragging its feet on a longstanding judicial integration order.

"We don't in America in 1993 anywhere tell anyone they can't live anywhere because of the color of their skin," he said at the time.

BREAK: School opens Aug. 10

(From 1A)

The second calendar received 880 votes.

Educators, especially secondary teachers, previously noted that they preferred the approved calendar, which breaks with tradition by ending the first semester before the Christmas break. It means final exams will be given before the holidays.

"Test scores are higher when we don't have that two-week Christmas break, which is the main reason for the push," Donna Kelly, past president of Classroom Teachers Association of Midland, said at a previous school-board meeting.

"It will mean cutting back on Christmas concerts," MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said. "And there will be no performances during final exams."

Baressi said administrators had considered switching last year to a calendar in which the semester ended before the Christmas break, but construction of new schools prevented classes from starting earlier in the summer.

The last day of school according to the new calendar is May 26; students will be out before Memorial Day.

Christmas holidays will be Dec. 21 through Jan. 8.

Spring break is set for March 13-17, 1995, with a possible additional day, March 20, if it isn't used for a bad-weather makeup day.

Easter holidays are scheduled for April 13 and 14, with the possible addition of April 17, another bad-weather makeup day.

Circus train wreck kills 2, injures 14

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — A train carrying Ringling Bros. circus performers and animals derailed Thursday at a crossing, killing an elephant trainer and a clown. Fourteen people were injured.

As rescue crews worked on the wreck, a news helicopter covering the derailment crashed a half-mile away in a ballfield next to a junior high school, injuring the pilot and a photographer.

Sixteen cars jumped the tracks shortly after 9 a.m. as the train with 53 cars and three locomotivs traveled across Florida from St. Petersburg to Orlando, where the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey circus was to open tonight.

"The show always goes on. I suspect we will be late, but the show always goes on," said David Cohen, the circus manager and a passenger on the train.

Theodore Svertesky, 39, an elephant trainer, was killed in a housing car, Polk County sheriff's Maj. Grady Judd said.

A clown, Ceslee Conkling, 28, was found dead in another car.

Fourteen circus workers were treated at a hospital and released. None of the 25 children on board was hurt.

Cars that jumped the tracks carried staff, performers and equipment, said circus spokesman Rodney Huey from his office in Vienna, Va. There were 50 elephants, lions, bears and horses on board, none in the derailed cars.

"It was just people screaming; people hollering for help," said Freddie Johnson, who works at nearby motorcycle shop and raced to help. "I just started kicking doors in. I was able to get a few of them out."

The cause of the derailment in heavy fog wasn't immediately known. The National Transportation Safety Board sent an investigation team.

"We have absolutely no idea what caused the accident. We're not sure of anything right now," Judd said. "The animals are all secure and they've all been fed. They're all in good shape."

After the crash of the helicopter, pilot Mark Bartnick was airlifted to Tampa General Hospital where he was listed in critical condition.

Chiapas uprising may spell trouble

While to many it may have seemed only an item of local or potentially regional concern, the bloody New Year's Day uprising in the southern Mexican state of Chiapas could signal more trouble ahead for Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and his handpicked successor, Luis Donaldo Colosio.

Closer to home, it should also concern Gov. Ann Richards and President Bill Clinton.

The line espoused by the rebels leading the uprising is that it was planned for New Year's Day — the day that the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) took effect — to draw attention to the fact that the Mexican government is ignoring the needs and desires of a segment of that country's population. While it's well known that in the past corruption and neglect dominated Mexican politics, Salinas appeared during his presidency to bring Mexico at least toward the 21st century. Colosio is expected to continue the modernization of Mexican society, even improving the living standards of Mexicans through the free trade agreement.

Yet if only one part of that society benefits from the implementation of NAFTA, which is predicted to benefit Mexico most dramatically of the three involved nations, there's little question why the Zapatista Army of National Liberation staged the uprising. They're looking for a sign that the Salinas regime recognizes the desperation of some Mexicans.

The uprising can be viewed as a symbol of the opposition to Mexico's longstanding authoritarian rule, some analysts have said, and could be a prelude to disintegration of the Mexican state or the start of a second Mexican civil war. While those suggestions may be farfetched, neither one is beyond the realm of possibility.

Regardless, the uprising should not be passed over as meaningless. What it says clearly is that not all Mexicans are pleased with the Salinas regime or the changes he has introduced in Mexican society. That could mean trouble down the road for NAFTA and, potentially, a civil war at the United States' southern border.

OTHER VIEWS

Political reforms' results aren't always positive

Add to the cynic's encyclopedia of axioms the proposition that a political "reform" will have unforeseen negative consequences.

This applies to any reform, but particularly when the reform in question is one that seeks to establish a political advantage for politicians rather than one that seeks to actually improve the political process and government.

Thus the unintended consequences of the 1988 decision by Texas to move its political primaries from May to March.

The moving force behind going to earlier primaries was to give the state more swack in presidential election years. But whatever salutary effect it had in that direction, the change also made it that much harder to unseat incumbents and that much harder for politicians to get their messages out to the voters.

The campaign period was shortened, placing only 64 days between the filing deadline and the primaries. Also, the holidays interfere with fund-raising and divert voters' attention.

When it was decided to make $1,000 the limit a federal candidate can take from a single individual as a campaign contribution, the idea was electoral reform. But it effectively means that incumbents, instead of spending all their time on the job, are spending most of it in fund-raising.

Mattox's border idea merits consideration to help control

Texans — indeed, most Americans — are torn between compassion for immigrants fighting to come into and stay in this country, whether legally or illegally, and the knowledge that this nation cannot afford to harbor everyone who wants to be here.

Residents of southern border states such as Texas, Florida, Arizona and California, however, are even more keenly conscious of the staggering costs involved in educating immigrant children, seeing that they are fed and that they have health care.

The United States always will be a nation of immigrants, but the problem today is the lack of control we have over our own borders. . . .

Between 1980 and 1990 Congress passed immigration-reform laws three times, but these measures failed to stem the tide of illegal immigrants, primarily because lawmakers neglected to provide funds for more border patrol agents, more deportation agents and a computer system for stricter enforcement of immigration laws.

Texas' Jim Mattox, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, proposes using military personnel who are being phased out of the armed forces to supplement the border patrol in some areas.

It is an unconventional idea, but it merits consideration.

Military bases 'go green' for recreation

WASHINGTON — At a time when 16,000 military families are on food stamps, the Pentagon is pouring millions of dollars a year into golf courses, jogging trails and ski equipment.

Anderson

The recreation activities are being funded in the name of recycling. But "going green" at the Pentagon has more to do with manicuring the green grass of golf courses than raising environmental consciousness.

The Pentagon's recycling program, which began in 1982, encourages military base commanders to sell recyclable materials — such as cardboard and paper — instead of sending them off to landfills. The proceeds are supposed to pay the costs of the program and fund environmental and safety projects. If there's any money left over, it can be added to the base's Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund.

But a recent audit by the General Accounting Office reveals that base commanders are routinely selling items that are specifically excluded from the recycling program and do not reduce the waste stream. These materials include: crashed aircraft, jet engines, vehicles, aircraft and ship parts, electrical components and unopened containers of oil or solvent.

By pouring the proceeds from these sales into the recycling program, base commanders are beefing up their MWR funds to the tune of unaccounted millions. GAO has concluded that because of this "widespread abuse . . . millions of dollars are being used annually for MWR activities that should be used instead to offset the need for appropriated funds or be returned to the U.S. Treasury."

In fact, while the recycling program was designed to cut down on waste, GAO found that about 90 percent of the program's proceeds come from items that wouldn't otherwise go into the waste stream. The Norfolk Naval Base in Virginia, for example, sold $769,000 worth of F-14 aircraft brake parts. The Tooele Army Depot in Utah received almost $2 million from the sale of Army all-terrain vehicles that require mutilation prior to sale.

"These items were paid for by taxpayers in the first place," one GAO source told our associate Ed Henry. "Any proceeds from selling them should be sent back to the treasury to cut the deficit. It shouldn't be put into the recycling program, which ultimately funds recreation."

The recreation activities that are being funded include the construction and renovation of golf courses, jogging and running trails and fitness centers. Bases are also purchasing golf carts, four-wheel drive trucks, vans, station wagons, and recreational camping, boating and skiing equipment.

Official proceeds have climbed from a mere $1.5 million in fiscal year 1983 to a whopping $37 million in fiscal year 1992. But some bases are also holding their own sales instead of selling the material through the authorized disposal offices. This makes the exact amount of money that bases are raking in — and subsequently spending on MWR activities — nearly impossible to track.

Pentagon officials insist that there would be little verve for recycling without the allure of recreation. "The recycling program's contribution to installation life creates a powerful incentive for recycling program vitality and success and is one of the reasons the Department is a leader in recycling," explained one official. Meanwhile, the rest of us keep on recycling our own waste without the promise of golf courses or ski equipment to inspire us.

NATO's existence seems unnecessary

While President Clinton hobnobs in Europe, the basic question about the North Atlantic Treaty Organization remains not only unanswered, but unasked.

So let's ask it: NATO was created to wage war against the Soviet Union. There is now no Soviet Union. So who is the enemy NATO will prepare to go to war against?

Reese

NATO is not a social, trade or economic alliance. It is a 100 percent military alliance. From its very beginning, it planned and trained for a war with the Soviet Union. It directed its intelligence resources toward that end, equipped and shaped its forces toward that end, and conducted regular military exercises toward that end.

So if, as the Establishment obviously wishes, we continue NATO in the absence of an enemy, then who will it spy upon? Who will train to fight? How will the member nations know how to configure the force structure? You cannot rationally plan to fight a war without knowing whom it is you are likely to fight. It's impossible.

All of these questions remain unasked by the people who should be asking them — Congress and the press — and unanswered by the proponents of NATO, who have taken the convenient rhetorical position of simply assuming that continuing NATO is a nondebatable issue.

The hell it is.

NATO used to cost the American taxpayers approximately $120 billion a year. If it is maintained in any form, it will continue to cost American taxpayers some yet undetermined number of billions.

Billions, one should always add, we don't have — being a nation $5 trillion in the red, with annual deficits of more than the cost of NATO at its height projected out to the end of this century.

Rather than dancing around the issue of admitting more nations into NATO, we should be disbanding the organization. The reason for its existence no longer exists.

Unless, of course, the United States and Europe plan to go to war with Russia and just aren't saying so. You can't blame the Russians for reaching that conclusion if we continue to keep NATO alive and even talk about expanding it.

There is nobody else in Europe to fight. Germany and France don't need NATO to go to war with Poland or Romania. So if we're planning to fight Russia, then why are we pretending not to? Why are we sending aid to Russia? Why are we maintaining NATO, which existed to fight the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact, when there is neither a Soviet Union nor a Warsaw Pact?

Whenever you consider a foreign policy issue, there are two factors to keep in mind. Organizations like NATO have the same inertia as any other bureaucracy. Those who have jobs want to keep them. Secondly, our government is secretive, often lies and is routinely evasive in its answers.

Liberal ideologues for a while scoffed that conservatives wouldn't be willing to accept the end of the Cold War, but the fact is it's the liberal elite who don't wish to let it go.

I love the end of the Cold War, and I think it's outrageous that we haven't disbanded NATO, brought our soldiers home and started applying those billions to peaceful purposes.

Government's condom ads avoid real issue

Cute little condoms scamper into bed with people, and passion is thwarted when one prospective partner — isn't that the phrase? — tells the other prospective partner, no way unless you come up with Protection. All this, courtesy of the federal government. On television, no less.

The government, to widespread delight, is touting condom use through TV commercials. The government wouldn't do this under Ronald Reagan and George Bush; but as everyone knows, the decade of greed and insensitivity is over, so here comes our cute little condom.

Murchison

As it happens, the new ads aren't perfectly in sync with the wishes of the coalition that tossed out Bush and gave us Clinton. Some homosexual activists lament the pitch to heterosexuals, relatively few of whom ever will contract AIDS (although heteros are the only ones who ever seem to get pregnant).

Moral traditionalists naturally have expressed outrage, but in Washington today, no one listens to their like. All that yammering about sexual abstinence! The condom campaigners start with the assumption that preaching about something no one's going to do anyway isn't very profitable. First, you figure out what people are willing to do, or at least to consider. Then, you urge them to do it. Bold, wouldn't you say? No doubt that's how the Renaissance and the Reformation started.

But you have to see the thing in context. Why do people who wouldn't sit still — supposedly — for a discussion of abstinence listen to pitches for condoms? Because if you're pitching condoms you're not questioning or, worse, denying modern people's right to self-expression come what may, and no telling what will. You're suggesting merely that the folks in question modulate the exercise of that right through prudence and caution. Who could object to caution? It's not as though you're telling people that wedded sex is wiser, better, righter than anything else! That would be preaching — a pastime we 20th-century folk reject absolutely.

So abstinence, in the sexuality debate, takes a back seat. But from where it sits, we can see better what's wrong with the modern world. What's wrong is the notion, generally believed or else just randomly assailed, that one human choice is like another human choice. The choosing, it seems, is the main thing. Different strokes for different folks. That one choice might be good and another bad — that sounds like something one's parents would have said, back when it was assumed there was a moral order.

Abstinence good? How could a form of denial ever be good? Well, because, on the medical level — at which the government's ads address us — abstinence prevents 1) unwanted pregnancies and 2) AIDS (unless contracted through a dirty needle or some such). Isn't this the point? Are not these the results the government wants?

Take it further, though. Abstinence — as understood by our culture until recently, and by the religions, Judaism and Christianity, that formed our cultural consciousness — shores up marriage and the family. As a pre-marital principle, abstinence reinforces the teaching that marital fidelity is of the utmost urgency. Do I hear someone say it's not? Maybe he'd tell me, then, why half of all modern marriages end. If there's not a fidelity deficit, what's the explanation? Physical infidelity, emotional infidelity — it's pretty much the same.

With the ripping apart of the family come heartache, a soaring crime rate, poverty for most single mothers and devastation for the child-victims. Lately, the sociologist Charles Murray has been warning that what happened to black families, once illegitimacy became rampant, may soon happen to white families, in which illegitimacy is burgeoning. (Twenty-two percent of white births in 1991 were illegitimate.)

Give me a break: Does one single sociologist anywhere see Condomism as the launching pad for family renewal? I'll buy him a beer if so. Or is Condomism just the safe, oh-so-politically correct way of addressing a problem that politically correct folk won't face up to, thanks to intestinal fortitude deficiency? I say the latter. And I'll buy another beer for the reader who can show me why I'm wrong.

Judge declares mistrial in one Menendez trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge in Erik Menendez's murder case declared a mistrial on Thursday after jurors reported a third time that they could not reach a verdict. His brother's jury kept deliberating.

Jurors considering charges against Erik first reported an impasse Monday and were told by Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg to keep trying. They reported Thursday that jurors' strong opinions had become even "more entrenched."

"The jury feels there is no possibility of reaching a verdict or verdicts without violence to our individual judgments," a note from the jury foreman said.

Erik, 23, and his brother, Lyle, 26, admit fatally shooting their wealthy parents, Jose and Kitty Menendez, in their Beverly Hills mansion Aug. 20, 1989, but claim it was self-defense after years of abuse.

The prosecution alleged they were coldblooded killers motivated by greed and hatred and sought the death penalty.

After receiving the note Thursday, Weisberg sent Erik's panel back to deliberate with a new set of verdict forms seeking more information on how the jury stood on the various counts. The panel returned again with no verdicts.

Erik was grim-faced and appeared to look straight ahead as the mistrial was announced. His lawyer, Leslie Abramson, said moments earlier outside the courtroom that he was "very upset" and would prefer a verdict to a mistrial.

The mistrial was declared in the 19th day of deliberations by Erik's jury.

"I'm disappointed. Erik's been in jail for four years and he'll be in jail for at least another one," Abramson said.

She said Erik would be willing to plead guilty to manslaughter.

Suzanne Childs, a spokeswoman for the district attorney's office, said prosecutors had no comment on the offer. Weisberg set a Feb. 28 hearing to schedule a new trial date.

If the jury had acquitted Erik of first-degree murder but were unable to agree on reducing charges, the prosecution would have been precluded from filing the heaviest charge again.

The defendants, who each testified for 10 days, said they were sexually tortured and mentally and physically abused by their parents and acted in self-defense.

Former students tell Senate panel of participation in radiation tests

WALTHAM, Mass. (NYT) — Two former students returned here to the Fernald School on Thursday and testified to a Senate committee about radiation experiments performed on them in the 1940s and 1950s by researchers who told them that they were joining a science club.

The hearing was the first of the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources in its investigation of human radiation experiments that were done after World War II. The chairman, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said that he planned to introduce legislation "for the protection of human subjects."

Officials from the Department of Energy, the Department of Defense, the National Institutes of Health and the Veterans Administration told the committee that to the best of their knowledge there are no experiments now being done at their agencies that do not meet federal guidelines for the protection of human subjects.

But a doctor who helped write the current guidelines said that it would be difficult to know what experiments are being conducted without a national board to see that guidelines are met.

Guidelines that have been adopted over the last three decades require scientists to seek the informed consent of their subjects and to tell them about the possible risks involved.

Charles L. Dyer, one of the former students at Fernald, a state school for the mentally retarded, said that he was never told that radiation was involved. "They said it would benefit us by taking vitamins and stuff, I remember that," said Dyer, who is now 53. "A lot of us did say, 'Sure, we'll go through with it.' It was a chance for us to get off the grounds. They took us places, here and there, and they said they were going to have a Christmas party for us. We were young kids, and they took advantage of us."

Dyer and the other former student who testified, Austin LaRocque, were part of a group of young boys at the Fernald School who were fed minute doses of radioactive minerals by scientists from Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The experiments were designed to see if chemicals used in breakfast cereal prevented the body from absorbing iron and calcium. They were sponsored by the Quaker Oats Co., the National Institutes of Health, and the Atomic Energy Commission, according to J. David Litster, the dean for research at MIT.

A consent form that the Fernald school sent to parents in 1949 made no mention of radiation.

Litster and Dr. A. Bertran Brill, the research director and professor of nuclear medecine at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center, both told the hearing that the amount of radiation used was very small.

Kennedy asked Brill: "Why don't they test it on MIT students?"

Brill said the students at Fernald were chosen because they were at a residential school where their intake could be closely monitored, and added that the tests should not have been done there.

Aspin lifts restriction, tries to open more combat jobs to women

■ More national news/1D

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Les Aspin moved to open more ground combat jobs for female soldiers Thursday by lifting a key restriction that barred women from certain military tasks simply because they were dangerous.

But how many more jobs women soldiers actually enter remained to be seen.

"We've made historic progress in opening up opportunities for women in all of the services. Expanding roles for women in the military is right, and it's smart," Aspin told a Pentagon briefing. "It allows us to assign the most qualified individual to each military job."

Last April, Aspin moved to open combat aviation jobs and warship assignments to females. But his latest decision will not put women in the military's most lethal ground forces such as infantry and tank units.

Aspin directed the services to report by May 1 which units could be opened and which they believe may remain closed to females. The services will be looking at jobs in such fields as engineering, chemical reconnaissance, intelligence and artillery.

But some female officers expressed fear that the services will balk, hoping to fend off change with Aspin expected to leave office at the end of the month.

But in a telephone interview, Aspin said he believed that his successor, retired Adm. Bobby Inman, will keep pressure on the services. "He's very forward-leaning on this," Aspin said.

At the briefing, Aspin said it is "unlikely" the Army and Marine Corps will drop their opposition to placing women in field artillery units equipped with the Multiple Launch Rocket System.

After Aspin spoke, Maj. Lillian Pfluke, a maintenance officer who repairs such systems, said she is "very, very happy the risk rule has been rescinded, but the interpretation of this is very, very disappointing."

Pfluke noted that the rocket system is normally placed 20 miles behind the front lines, "and there are thousands upon thousands of women within 20 miles of the enemy. It makes no sense to single out that one weapon system to close to women."

Maj. Carol Barkalow, who was in the first class of women to go through West Point and wrote a book about her experiences, called the new policy "a great start."

However, she criticized attempts to keep female soldiers from any portion of the battlefield. Today's high-tech weapons are so deadly "you cannot draw a line. ... Certainly every person who is out there on the battlefield can be hit by a direct-fire weapon or an indirect-fire weapon. The results are the same: They're gone; they're dead," Barkalow said.

"Doing away with the risk rule makes a tremendous difference" for many women serving in the military, Aspin told the briefing.

"This is an enormous step forward for women serving in the armed forces."

Formally, Aspin eliminated the so-called "risk rule," which had barred women from noncombat units where the risk was thought to be as great as that in combat units. But he also shrank the definition of what is a combat unit.

Aspin pointed out that since women now can serve in combat aircraft and on Navy combat ships, the old rule for ground combat "has been overtaken by events."

Under the new definition, women will not serve in units that engage the enemy on the ground with weapons, are exposed to hostile fire and have "a high probability of direct physical contact with the personnel of a hostile force."

All three factors must be present for women to be barred from any job, Aspin said.

Proponents of the changes have argued for years that prohibiting women from certain combat jobs keeps them from the most prestigious military work, which they argue is necessary for advancement and promotion.

Judge sentences skinhead leader to federal prison for bomb attacks

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — The admitted leader of a skinhead group and an accomplice have been sentenced to federal prison for using homemade bombs and plotting to spark a race war by attacking an African-American church.

By sentencing Christopher Fisher, 20, of Long Beach, Calif. to the maximum term of eight years and one month Thursday, U.S. District Court Judge William Matthew Byrne Jr. said he hopes to deter others from acting on such "crazy and distasteful ideas."

Carl Daniel Boese, 17, of Lake Arrowhead, Calif., was sentenced Thursday to the maximum four years and nine months for his role in the attempted fire bombing of a synagogue and conspiracy to attack the First African Methodist Episcopal Church in South Los Angeles.

A tearful Fisher, who was leader of a group called the Fourth Reich Skins, told the judge he regretted his actions, which included bombing a house in the Los Angeles area of Paramount.

He said he is now glad he was arrested because it derailed plans to attack the First AME church.

"I can write letters and say, 'I'm sorry,' but that's nothing. That's not proof. I don't know if I could have lived with myself if someone had been hurt or killed," Fisher said during a short statement that left his mother teary eyed.

"I guess the way things turned out is kind of good; it ensured nothing did happen," Fisher said.

Boese also apologized.

"I never meant to hurt anyone. I wanted to do good and build a better place than what I've known," he told the judge.

Fisher's attorney, Anna Ho, said she might file an appeal in the case.

Outside of court, Assistant U.S. Attorney Marc Greenberg said he is satisfied with the sentences, even though they fall short of the length specified in plea agreements — 10 years for Fisher and five years for Boese.

Deputy Public Defender Korey House, who represented Boese, told Byrne that she feared for the teen-ager's safety in prison. Boese is under the delusion that he and his fellow inmates will engage in philosophic discussions about race and ideology, she said.

Ho also voiced concern for Fisher's safety and the possibility that he fall in with other white supremacists.

CDC: Flu reaches epidemic levels

ATLANTA (AP) — The severe type of flu that hit epidemic levels last month is only going to get worse.

The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Thursday that Type A flu is expected to become even more widespread before the end of January.

Flu season normally begins in November and lasts until March.

So far, the strain has been reported in every state except Mississippi, Delaware, Hew Hampshire and Rhode Island.

The flu outbreak became a national epidemic the last two weeks of December, when deaths from flu and pneumonia rose in the 121 U.S. cities monitored by the CDC, said Dr. Larry Schoenberger.

"I am confident that mortality data will continue to rise," said Schoenberger, medical officer for the CDC's influenza branch.

The elderly and other people at high risk from the flu may still benefit from a flu shot, he said.

The vaccine is effective about 70 percent of the time, making it worth taking, Schoenberger said.

"You've got a virus that is very tricky," he said. "It's able to change on a regular basis."

Rep. gets indicted

SHERMAN — State Rep. Ben Campbell and his father have been named in new indictments alleging conspiracy and bank fraud in connection with a $90,000 loan he received from the Flower Mound Bank in 1986 while he was chairman of the board.

Grand jury cites 2

SHERMAN — A federal grand jury has returned 11 indictments against two Dallas men, former executives of Hallmark Savings Association, alleging conspiracy and misapplication of over $7 million used in several real estate transaction.

Jerry D. Stiles, 48, and John A. Bryant, 52, former owners and directors of Hallmark Savings in Plano, were indicted Thursday on one count of conspiracy, three counts of bank bribery, four counts of making false entries into bank records and three counts of misapplication of bank funds.

Sheriff charges wife

CONROE — A 29-year-old woman who initially told authorities she found her 78-year-old husband dead in the couple's home has been charged with killing him.

Montgomery County Sheriff's Sgt. Ted Pearce said Crystal Datray has admitted she lied about finding her husband, Virgil Lloyd Datray, dead when she returned home Tuesday.

She allegedly then told authorities she shot him after he hit her in the chest, Pearce said Wednesday. Datray was shot 10 times with two guns.

Mrs. Datray also claimed her husband had physically abused her for years.

Pearce said officers doubt the story about the abuse because she first lied to them about finding the body and because of the number of shots fired from two pistols.

It is unlikely that Virgil Datray, who suffered from emphysema and used a walker, was capable of physically abusing the woman, Pearce said.

"Considering his poor health, he may have been mentally abusing her as some people have said, but I think he'd have had to have hired somebody to physically abuse her," Pearce said.

Mrs. Datray married the retired truck driver at least five years ago and apparently had known him much longer.

Requests prompt city to approve new lights along Lamesa Road

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Things will soon be brighter on Lamesa Road at night — due to more street lights that the City Council recently approved.

"We're going to pretty much double the lighting on Lamesa Road. Essentially, the lighting now is only at the intersections," said Pat Ennis, an account manager for TU Electric.

"You'll be able to play football out there," he said figuratively.

The plan to add lights on Lamesa Road was the result of requests made to the City Council and a subsequent assessment of existing conditions by the city and TU Electric.

Gary Saunders, traffic engineering coordinator, said the council has asked his department to examine other main roadways that may need an upgrade in lighting.

As a result, the city and TU Electric will study the situation at Midkiff Road, Wadley Avenue, Midland Drive and the west portion of Illinois Avenue, and ad-

Telemarketing fraud trial ends with convictions

■ Defendants, in case where telemarketers preyed on seniors, are to be sentenced March 7.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A three-day trial ended after a jury deliberated for almost 10 hours and convicted four defendants of defrauding thousands of dollars from victims through a telemarketing scheme.

Norris Louis McGraw was found guilty of conspiracy to commit mail fraud, conpsiracy to commit money laundering, mail fraud and four counts of money laundering. He was remanded immediately into the custody of the U.S. marshals.

The jury also found Paula Sneed, Patrick Johnson and Sharon Ann Polley all guilty of conspiracy to commit mail fraud.

All four will be sentenced March 7.

According to a court official, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton told McGraw he was being placed in custody because of his behavior in the courtroom during the trial.

Throughout the trial he would voice his opinions on testimony, including saying things like "That's a lie." The judge warned him on several occasions regarding his behavior.

The Midland Police Department sparked the investigation June 30 after a citizen called to report a telemarketing company solicitating funds in order to receive a prize. A Midland police officer called the FBI to investigate.

FBI Special Agent Hans Martin said all of the accused were sales staff for four companies that allegedly had their employees call individuals across the country — usually elderly people — tell them they'd won large cash prizes and then instruct them to send in a payment for taxes or handling charges. The individuals never received their prizes, according to the document.

"The ... customers would be told a straight-out lie that they were guaranteed to win a car or a cash equivalent. In order to receive this car or money, the customer would have to send in an amount of money. In reality, CPA never planned on awarding any customer a car or a cash equivalent," Martin said.

The defendants allegedly worked for one of the following companies: Century Premier Associates (CPA), Bemer Enterprises, Gulf Coast Network and Premium Enterprises Inc.

These businesses operated out of Houston and Midland. Three sites were used in Houston and one site was used in Midland for checks to be mailed, the indictment states. One bank was used in each location.

Haas seeks Dem nomination for state high court

By Michael Kashgarian

Campaign contributions should be strictly limited to eliminate any suggestion of ethical impropriety — especially in the judiciary — said Rene Haas, candidate for the Democratic primary nomination for the Texas Supreme Court Place 1.

Haas

"The public obviously doesn't want its judges to seemingly hold a gavel in one hand and reach for a check with the other," Ms. Haas said Thursday at a news conference in Midland.

"The public wants and deserves a higher standard from its judges."

Ms. Haas, 46, said she has signed a Fair Campaign Practices Pledge — created by the League of Women Voters and other public interest groups — that limits contributions from law firms, political action committees (PACs) and individuals.

Ancient spirits, magnetic fields may spur earthlings

Todd

Why are things the way they are? Why do we do what we do?

Is it because the Earth is round, or because it is flat? Is gravity the root cause or is it the atmospheric pressure? Maybe this living planet, the Earth, is bored with traveling the same old path, the trajectory, around the sun and is playing games just to entertain itself and to confound its denizens.

Maybe it is all of those unseen radio waves and electromagnetic fields all around that are influencing our behavior.

Or, perhaps it is all of those additives, those chemicals, in our processed foods that are interacting with the brain's chemistry to make us do all sorts of things laudable, appalling and boring.

Then again, it might be that the spirits of our forefathers are acting up and enticing us to do their bidding.

Better yet, is it that we have absolutely no control? Is fate directing our lives so that what happens just happens?

Well, what is, is. That's for sure even if there is dispute over the "what is." Can truth be disputed? Or is it simply the perceptions of truth that are contested?

Why?

Well, who knows for sure? But this one thing we know: Where we are and what we are doing this very moment has much to do with choices and decisions — not excuses.

And why do we do what we do? Do we need to justify or rationalize?

GUILTY: Elderly victims cite phone calls

(From 1B)

According to the indictment, the sales staff in Houston would call victims from a list purchased from a California company. The lists were called lead forms and were compiled from people filling out contest or sweepstakes entry forms and sending them in.

The staff would represent themselves as calling from CPA or Bemer and tell the victim he or she had won a cash prize of $10,000 or $37,000, but the victim must first pay taxes or a handling charge, according to the indictment.

Special Agent Martin said the elderly victims who could remember the call they received told of solicitors saying they won a car or several thousand dollars.

The victim would be instructed to mail a check or money order — made out to CPA — to an address in Houston or Midland. Some of the checks were sent by Federal Express, United Parcel Service or other express companies.

Then the funds would be taken to the Midland bank and once they cleared, the money would be forwarded to Houston to either a Premium checking account, a Bemer checking account or the personal account of McGraw, according to the indictment.

In Houston, McGraw — the ringleader — would pick up the checks and forward them to the Midland address where all the checks came through, according to the document.

On July 30, FBI special agents in Houston executed search warrants at the telemarketing companies and seized phone records that were traced to the CPA victims' home and the dates of the calls coincide with dates checks were sent to the companies.

FBI Special Agent Terry Lane said he spoke with about 75 CPA victims and another 25 potential victims. He identified victims from their phone numbers and payments to CPA.

He said the potential victims were contacted because of telephone records that indicated lengthy phone calls with these individuals.

Other records that were seized identified telemarketers using false names, the indictment stated.

According to the indictment, telemarketers received about 20 to 25 percent of the handling fee with the rest split between the person handling the checks and the owners of the companies.

Special agents Martin and Lane discovered the checking accounts after one scam victim examined a canceled check and found where it had been deposited.

The agents then subpoenaed records for that particular account and tallied 77 checks totalling $85,000 in the account with several wire transfers to a Houston account for Premium Enterprises, Inc., which was doing business as Bemer Enterprise Inc.

This scheme occurred from April 26 to July 17.

During the trial, a number of victims and co-conspirators who have already pleaded guilty to the charges testified against the defendants. All four defendants testified on their own behalf that they didn't know any illegal activity was occurring.

JUDGE: Haas targets opposition candidate of impropriety," she said.

(From 1B)

"This is not a theoretical problem. It's a real problem that goes on all the time," she said.

Ms. Haas criticized her Democratic opponent, incumbent Raul Gonzalez, for not siding with the need for such reforms and accepting questionable contributions.

"He refuses to place any limit at all on contributions from law firms and PACs," Ms. Haas said.

Furthermore, Gonzalez has accepted legal contributions that have raised the question of whether the contributors influenced the judge, she said.

Ms. Haas provided an example: Last November, Gonzalez held a fund-raiser with one of the hosts being Charles Matthews, the general counsel of Exxon, she said. Three weeks later, the Texas Supreme Court issued a ruling in a case titled Tidwell vs. Exxon, she said. Gonzalez sided with the lower court's ruling, and voted for a law change more favorable to Exxon and voted to send the case back to the trial court for another decision under the new legal standard, she said.

When asked whether she had reviewed the case and decision for any actual influence or faulty ruling, Ms. Haas emphasized that it was the "appearance" of impropriety that was of concern.

Gray McBride, campaign manager for Gonzalez, said Ms. Haas wants to "create smoke and claim it's fire."

Gonzalez supports contribution limitations, he said.

"We have had in place since July, a $5,000 cap from each entity," McBride said. Gonzalez's promise is comparable to some provisions of the pledge Ms. Haas signed, he said.

McBride said Gonzalez commends the public-interest groups advocating contribution limitations but feels private-sector groups should not be in the position of enforcement.

As for Ms. Haas' Exxon case example, Gonzalez's campaign committee is not aware of everyone involved in the hundreds of cases pending before the Texas Supreme Court, and Gonzalez' legal staff isn't aware of people on the judge's campaign list, McBride said.

To scrutinize every possible link between campaign contributors and all elected officials would not be feasible, he said. Furthermore, someone with a case pending before the court is not suspended from their right to participate in the political process, he said.

Ms. Haas said, if elected, she will move to change the judicial canons of ethics to limit campaign contributions and ban contributions from anyone involved in a case pending before the court.

"It is time to return the Texas Supreme Court to a balanced, stable and moderate course," she said.

Ms. Haas, with the firm Perry & Haas since 1987, served as the 94th District Court judge in Nueces County from 1983 to 1986. From 1978 to 1980, she was an assistant district attorney in Nueces County.

Ms. Haas, of Corpus Christi, and her husband, David Perry, have two grown daughters.

TODD: People may follow their bliss

(From 1B)

tion this way:

"Here I stand! I cannot do otherwise. God help me! Amen! . . . My conscience is a captive to God's word, and it is neither safe nor right to go against conscience."

In today's mundane but changing world of dollars and economics and peace and war, high-minded principles may not be so apparent at the forefront. But principles and morality are constant. We can only honor them or forsake them. Rational man and woman may dance around them and argue the importance and relative worth of all things, including wagging tails and babbling tongues. But what is right is discernible, as is what is good.

The problem with thinking, feeling and spirit-moved human beings is the rational mind, which wants to justify itself and its actions.

Ultimately, we are answerable to our conscience and to the universal Conscience.

Meanwhile, we must listen to ourselves and, of course, live with ourselves even better than we think we can. After all, as best we know, each of us has one shot at life. And within that one shot are many scrimmages, conflicts, rewards, opportunities, challenges and awaiting peace or turmoil.

And the next question is this: What excuses or justifications must we have for doing what we do?

First of all, we want to bring no harm to another. Sadly, imperfect creatures do. Once done, however, we rectify as best we can, bury the damning "should-haves" and focus on the "next times" to begin anew and do right and do good.

We listen to our conscience, well-nourished, let's say, and seek counsel from the Conscience.

After that, we need not justify or rationalize.

Simply, we do what we do because we want to. American mythologist Jospeh Campbell exhorted his students to "follow your Bliss." Follow your heart. Listen well.

There is no Democratic Party candidate in the Precinct 4 commissioner's race. The general election is Nov. 8.

Brezina, who has lived in Midland since 1974, holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Texas.

Brezina said "county government must be frugal because its revenue is based on the taxes of hard-working property owners."

The candidate said he is offering the Midland citizenry his business, civic and leadership experience "to ensure fiscal responsibility in county government."

Brezina, a partner in Placer Limited Oil & Gas Investments and Evaluations, said he can speak "firsthand on what declining oil prices do to cash flow and the necessity for making adjustments in spending.

"Declining oil prices in the past several months will cut county revenues," he said.

As a result, Brezina said the "county's budget will have to adjust to the shortfall in revenue without raising taxes.

"In the oil business, I have to make adjustments in my personal and business spending due to declining oil prices.

"And county government should do the same," he said. "The county should cut expenses accordingly without raising taxes."

The five-member Commissioners' Court is the county's policy-making body, sets the county's tax rate and activates the county budget, which this year is $21.5 million.

Jurors see arsenal taken from Waco cult

By Kathy Fair
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Jurors in the Branch Davidian trial on Thursday got a look of the massive arsenal that had been stored at the Mount Carmel compound as government attorneys paraded scores of weapons — including two .50-caliber anti-tank guns — before them.

One by one, six Texas Rangers who had headed teams that combed the compound after it burned to the ground April 19 took the stand to identify the multitude of assault rifles, semi-automatic pistols, hand grenades, tracer rounds, crates of ammunition and other weapons recovered in their probe of the deadly Feb. 28 gunbattle between cult members and federal agents.

Agents of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms had gone to the compound near Waco to search for illegal weapons and to arrest cult leader David Koresh. The gunfight that ensued left four agents dead and prompted a 51-day standoff that ended April 19 when fire leveled the place.

In all, government prosecutors introduced 250 or more guns or parts of them, hand grenades and other weapons recovered from the rubble.

Lawyers defending the 11 Branch Davidians on charges of murder and conspiracy to murder the four federal agents who died in the Feb. 28 raid contend cult members purchased the weapons as an investment.

Attorneys said the religious sect expected the government to soon outlaw future sales of semiautomatic AR-15s — the civilian version of the military-issue, fully automatic M-16s — and that their stockpile of the rifles would triple or quadruple in value.

Outside the courtroom defense attorney Dan Cogdell was asked how often religious groups sell firearms to finance their ministries.

"I don't know of too many religions that do a lot of things like the Branch Davidians," said Cogdell, who represents Clive Doyle. "They were a strange bunch of people. We're not claiming they were Second Baptist church folks. They are a strange duck, but that doesn't mean they conspired to kill ATF agents."

Still, he and other defense attorneys admitted that the display of evidence was likely having an impact on jurors.

"Their eyes tended to glaze over and roll back," Cogdell said. "I think the key is not how many (weapons were found) but who had access and who was using them," he said. "We expect the evidence to show that that room was off-limits to all but Koresh's inner circle."

"If all those weapons had been fired, all the ATF agents would be dead," added defense lawyer Douglas Tinker, who represents Brad Branch.

Rangers recovered 133 of the weapons in the crumbling bunker where Koresh had stored his arsenal, according to testimony.

When investigators searched the 380-square-foot concrete-block room, they found a 4-foot-deep pile of rubble consisting of an estimated 400,000 rounds of ammunition that had "cooked off" during the fire, said Ranger Ray L. Coffman.

Also buried in the rubble of the concrete blocks were the charred bodies of 43 victims — more than half of those who died in the Mount Carmel fire — some of whom were covered in wet blankets and sleeping bags to shield them from the fire, Coffman testified on cross-examination.

In the remains of what had been the religious sect's machine shop, Ranger George Frasier testified, investigators found a silencer and six pieces of tubing being converted into silencers.

The government contends Koresh began a massive arms buildup in 1992 in preparation for a holy war he was declaring on the U.S. government and was converting legal semi-automatic weapons into fully automatic weapons.

Also found in the compound rubble were more than 100 pineapple grenades, though none of them were live, said Ranger Johnny Waldrip.

In opening statements earlier this week, the defense team repeatedly told jurors that a government army had assaulted the Branch Davidians' home and church.

FAMILY MATTERS

Mental, emotional abuse is still abuse

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I have read your column in the paper every time I have picked it up and I never thought that it would be me writing you asking you for help on solving some problems that my husband and I are having.

May

Let me start by saying that we have been married for three years, courted for a little over a year, and we have a 3-year-old child. When dating, we did talk about getting married later on in the future, but I became pregnant so we married a lot sooner than we had planned. I am a stay-at-home mother and wife, but I am currently looking for work so I will have something a little extra to occupy my time.

I honestly do not know where the problems began, but this is the situation: My husband was and always has been very jealous and insecure from the moment we started dating. I have never been able to go and do anything without having to pass the 20 question quiz: "Where have you been? Did you see anybody you knew? Anybody I knew? What took you so long?" The list goes on. I have explained to him that I do not enjoy answering all of his questions every time I want to go somewhere. And yes, it does make me very angry. He thinks I am not supposed to have any time to myself, and if I do, it is supposed to be spent with him. Wherever I go, he is also supposed to go to babysit.

On numerous occasions he has gone through my purse, telling me that I am hiding things from him. He has always accused me of having so many affairs that I have finally lost count. I could never be unfaithful to my husband because I love him. I would never do anything to intentionally hurt him or our relationship.

There is a lot of mental and verbal abuse but not physical abuse. One example of his abuse would be when we were having a heated argument and he started calling me a slut. There were also other terrible names. We were having an argument and he told me that he is extremely good looking and that I could be easily replaced. He is very hot tempered and does not have any patience whatsoever for our child. All in one breath he tells me that he loves me and that he doesn't want this marriage to end, then he cusses me out and then apologizes.

Anytime I talk about going to school — which is very important to me — or trying to get a job, he gets really jealous. I am not supposed to have any friends, so basically the only friends I have and do anything with are his parents. We do not have any friends or couples who we do anything with because he always manages to find something he doesn't like about them. My family lives about six hours away, so I don't see them real often.

There is not any communication in this marriage, and our intimate life is very rocky, so that is a big issue with him. We have never been to counseling. At first it was because we didn't need any help, and then it was because he didn't want other people to know about our problems. I am at the point where my hands are up in the air and I am ready to throw in the towel, but I do not want to make any decisions without thinking them through clearly.

I know that I am not the only one going through something like this, so I hope that your suggestions and advice can help a lot of other people in the same situation. IN DESPERATE NEED OF HELP

DEAR DESPERATE: I want to give you several ideas regarding your situation. Since you want to work on the marriage, I want to first prepare you for some of that process. I encourage you to contact the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women (683-1300). Your husband is abusing you and you need to be educated and supported in your efforts to deal with his verbal and emotional assaults. His jealous and obsessive patterns need to be addressed for the sake of you and your child.

I also encourage you to seek professional help for yourself first. Your minister may be a good person to start it with. The objective is to help you establish appropriate relationship boundaries. The individual counseling would be followed by marriage counseling with your husband. I would be concerned if you suddenly began to interrupt his abuse without counseling beforehand.

You have every right to expect your husband to treat you with respect and to honor your being. I strongly encourage you to get help — you deserve better treatment than this.

THE FOLLOWING IDEAS ON "VERBALLY STROKING OUR CHILDREN" ARE OFFERED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

These strokes produce "I am loveable" feelings:

- "I love you."
- "I like you."
- "You're special."
- "I'm glad you are you."

DEAR ABBY

Wife's disappearing act gets bad reviews from husband

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, a woman complained that her husband always charges ahead of her in crowds without bothering to determine whether she is following him.

Van Buren

I have a somewhat different problem. My wife and I will be walking down an aisle in a department store when — poof — she disappears in thin air! My children tell me they used to be terrified when they were little and she did that to them.

On a recent trip to Europe, she disappeared in a mob scene at a New York airport. I nearly went crazy trying to find her. She finally showed up and casually explained that she had stopped to talk with someone for a minute or two!

Abby, your suggestion that a man and his wife walk arm in arm through crowds misses the mark. It's much easier to burrow through a crowd single file than two abreast, but if I insist that she walk ahead of me so I can keep an eye on her, she gets insulted. Any solution? — MILWAUKEE

DEAR MILWAUKEE: Insist that she walk ahead anyway. She'll survive the insult with far less trauma than losing each other in a crowded airport or department store.

DEAR ABBY: When are people going to wake up to the fact that if a person asks people about their background or heritage, he is not necessarily racist, prejudiced or insensitive?

Recently I was buying pork chops from a Chinese butcher who asked me in broken English, "Where you from?"

I replied, "I'm from Pasadena, Calif., but I am of Polish descent — third generation. Why did you ask?"

He said, "You sure talk funny."

I suppose to be politically correct, I should have been insulted. Sorry, I thought it was great. I've developed friendships and had some interesting conversations with people I would have never known anything about if I hadn't asked, "Where are you from?"

That's how I got to know my Chinese hairdresser was raised in Japan, and my garage mechanic came from Armenia and was interned in a concentration camp in Siberia. I've learned a lot about Jewish religious customs, polished my Spanish with a lady from El Salvador, found out about the Buddhist religion from a man on a bus, and got some great recipes from Mormons in Utah and Scandinavians in North Dakota.

How are we going to learn about people whose cultures are different from our own if we're afraid to talk to each other? — MARILYN HUDSON IN PASADENA

DEAR MARILYN: You make an excellent point. However, not all people are open and willing to answer questions asked by strangers; they feel it's an invasion of their privacy.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning books that one loans out and are never returned: I personally never loan a book to anyone unless I don't care whether I get it back or not.

I own a bookstore that handles out-of-print hardback books. In looking through a secondhand book, I found the following statement on the flyleaf:

" — AND PLEASE RETURN IT.

"This may seem a strange request, but I find that while most of my friends are poor mathematicians, they are all damn good bookkeepers. — Ralph J. Stubbs"

The Problem: Small red blood vessels on the nose & cheeks

The Solution: Laser Surgery

Laser surgery can be an effective way to remove small varicosities (veins) on the nose & cheeks. These veins occur as a result of sun damage and other factors. Laser surgery offers a superior way to remove these with little to no evidence of surgery. No down time, fast healing, and excellent results are common.

Program: Seniors helping seniors

By James H. Rubin

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 20 years as a school crossing guard, Fannie Norman has a new line of work. At age 72, she's a companion to other senior citizens who have become frail and have trouble getting around.

"I thought I could help someone," she said. "I just try to lift up their spirits."

Mrs. Norman is part of a little-known government program called Senior Companions. It pays token wages and expenses to some 13,000 low-income senior citizens who spend 20 hours a week with other seniors whose greatest need may be companionship.

In the holiday season, Mrs. Norman helps her shut-in "clients" make Christmas wreaths. At other times they might use Popsicle sticks to create wooden flowers.

"Or I tell them we're going to get pretty today, doing their nails, fixing their hair, just talking," said Mrs. Norman, who moved to Indianapolis after she retired six years ago as a public school crossing guard in Chicago. "It lifts them up."

The volunteers do not provide any nursing, but volunteers have called for emergency help after finding one of their clients in a bad way.

The volunteers' services usually are less dramatic. Program officials cite the case of one woman, crippled by strokes, who was persuaded to play the piano again after she became friends with her companion. Or there is the case of an elderly man, a double amputee, who ended up teaching his volunteer helper how to read.

The motto for the 20-year-old program is "doing what friends do for friends," and federal officials say that while little noticed, it has been very successful.

The yearly federal budget is around $30 million, with another $15 million or so from states, corporations and private foundations.

The program has been run by ACTION, the agency that oversees federal volunteer programs and which was merged by President Clinton into the new Corporation for National and Community Service.

"Our volunteers provide a vital service in helping to alleviate the overwhelming financial burden of health care and human services both for our participants and the community," said Tom Endres, acting assistant director of the corporation's National Senior Volunteer Corps.

"Both the volunteers and the clients maintain their self-esteem. No one is diminished."

Federal officials say it costs about $3,700 a year to provide one volunteer, a little more than one-tenth the average cost of nursing home care. The companions serve more than 32,000 people, providing activities that may include fixing meals.

Volunteers must be at least 60 years old and meet federal poverty standards — $8,715 a year in income for single people or $11,790 for couples.

The volunteers get paid about $50 a week tax-free, plus travel and meal money, accident and liability insurance and an annual free physical examination.

It's helping others — and the sense of usefulness — that attracts them to the work, they say.

"You become very fond of them," said Dee Guy-El, 72, who has been working in the companion program since 1988.

Mrs. Guy-El, who retired as a clerk from Loyola University in Chicago, said she has been doing volunteer work practically all her life.

One of her clients "wanted to convince me I was old," she said. "But it's a state of mind. I know people 25 who are old."

Prevention long-known health care plan

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

So you think that prevention, our new and much-needed attitude toward health, is new? Then hear what Decimus Junius Juvenalis stated around 100 A.D.: "Mens sana in corpore sano" (Pray for a sound mind in a sound body). Now, due to the miracle of modern enlightenment, we can do more than pray — we can incorporate "wellness" into our lifestyle. Wellness is so new that the word has yet to appear in the average dictionary. In it lies a partial but important answer to the ever-increasing, overweening and potentially catastrophic cost of health care. Wellness indicates not only freedom from disease, but also the preventative activities conducive to a healthy, happy state, both mentally and physically. This in turn will significantly reduce the cost of that care, both nationally and individually, while simultaneously making life worth living.

Page

All this applies particularly to the senior citizen segment of the population, but wellness activity must actually cover the entire span of life, from conception to resurrection. Such endeavors should include education into early recognition of disease and abnormal conditions; prevention by means of vaccines; recognition of environmental detriments; authoritative nutritional advice; corporal and mental hygiene with emphasis on stress, depression and obesity; and finally guidance on proper care of chronic ailments such as diabetes, heart conditions, etc. The burden for most of this must be carried on the shoulders of public health departments, both national and community, plus by senior citizen organizations and retirement centers. For instance, here in Midland active programs are under way at Trinity Towers-Manor Park for residents and employees.

So now we have a means of turning the tide of surging health costs while becoming healthy, wealthy and wise. In short, the fact is that we don't need more doctors, but rather that we just need fewer patients. Outward appearances can be misleading. Don't be like Sam's grieving widow, who, at his viewing, when told by a sympathetic mourner "doesn't Sam look well," responded "of course he does, we just had two weeks in Miami!"

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Midland Presbyterian Homes.

Medicare issues one-cent check

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The U.S. government is no penny-pincher, as Medicare recipient Joanna Gurn can tell you. After all, she got a check in the mail recently for one cent.

Ms. Gurn, 72, laughed when she first opened the letter. However, now she thinks the check is a "ridiculous waste."

A few weeks ago, after a doctor's appointment, she wrote a check for $17.36. Medicare later determined that she only owed $17.35 and sent her a check for the difference.

The more she thought about it, the less humor she found in the government spending money on making the check and sending it to her — just for a measly penny refund.

But health insurance specialist Jim Thornton in Jacksonville said reprogramming the system to stop cutting checks for such tiny amounts would be too costly.

So for now, the government will keep on sending checks — even for one cent — that cost 18 cents each to mail.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JANUARY 14, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Productivity will be your middle name. Others are staggered by all the things you are able to accomplish! Spring brings greater job stability. A permanent romantic commitment is favored. Large-scale business developments in mid-summer mean new material rewards. Wider public recognition will be yours in August. Go that extra mile to provide loved ones with what they need.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Faye Dunaway, actor Carl Weathers, rapper LL Cool J, "60 minutes" commentator Andy Rooney.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may wish that you could avoid a difficult supervisor or task today. Keep your temper in check no matter the provocation. Romance could intensify tonight. Be clear about what you want.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Opening a dialogue with someone close to you will restore this person's confidence in your relationship. Although travel may be tiring, it will bring the desired results. Play the role of hermit tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be more conservative in the way you manage your money. A disagreement is not as serious as you may think. Take advantage of your popularity to expand your business contacts. Seek introductions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New alliances are a source of good luck. Communicate directly with the public for dynamic interaction. You can forge lasting bonds with both your peers and VIPs. Give a loved one more attention.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may find yourself strongly attracted to a new co-worker. Resist the urge to mix business with pleasure. Keep building up your financial reserves. An exciting investment opportunity could arise very soon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your partner may hold the power in your relationship. Something positive happens to put a smile back on your face. Keep your exercise resolutions. Your confidence is unshakable when you feel good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Assistance comes from an unexpected quarter. Making a new friend will lift your spirits. You know how to make newcomers feel right at home. Trust your excellent business judgment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have earned the public recognition that comes your way now. Keep your behavior on the predictable side. Your adaptability is a tremendous asset. Greet any changes at work with an open mind.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Welcome an opportunity to expand your sphere of influence at work. Although expenses are probably higher now, you can find a way to trim them. Make your own home repairs if qualified.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You handle a tense situation extremely well. Do not despair if someone reneges on a promise; it could work in your favor. A business associate rises to the occasion, offering valuable support.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Build on recent momentum but stick to tried-and-true financial tactics. You appear to be firmly committed to a group or organization. Look forward to making exciting new business or romantic link-ups.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Family ties are vital but can be frustrating. Be firm if someone makes excessive demands on your time. Deal with practical matters before calling it a day. Business activities could extend into the evening.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

The wonders of bridge never cease to amaze us. On this deal, declarer made a clever play for one reason and fulfilled the contract when the compensation far exceeded expectations.

With 25 points and a balanced hand, South's textbook three-no-trump opening bid finds no argument from this department. Nobody had anything further to contribute to the auction.

West led the top of the heart sequence and declarer could count eight tricks, once the ace of clubs was forced out. The ninth would have to come from diamonds one way or another, either by finding a fortunate lie of the cards and guessing the position, or by guile.

Declarer decided to opt for the latter. After winning the first trick in hand, South promptly led the king of diamonds in the hope that the defender with the ace would hold up to prevent declarer from setting up and running dummy's long suit. That idea went up in smoke when West wasted no time in grabbing the ace, but help arrived from an unexpected source—East dropped the queen!

Declarer won the heart continuation and forced out the ace of clubs and the rest of the tricks were there for the taking. Declarer could bring in the whole diamond suit by simply finessing, as cheaply as possible, each time diamonds were led toward dummy.

As so often happens, good technique was rewarded. Not only was the contract made, but two unexpected overtricks rolled in as well.

Former Rolling Stones' guitarist Bill Wyman, 57, wife expect baby

LONDON — Papa was a rolling stone.

Bill Wyman and his third wife, former model Suzanne Accosta, are expecting a baby late next summer.

"They have only just found out she is pregnant and they are both very happy," Wyman's spokesman said Thursday. "Suzanne is particularly delighted because this is her first baby."

Wyman, 57, former guitarist for the Rolling Stones, and Accosta, 34, were married last spring in the south of France.

Wyman has a 31-year-old son, Stephen, from his first marriage to Diane McCollum. Stephen was engaged to marry the mother of Wyman's second wife, Mandy Smith, but some press reports have indicated they split up.

HONG KONG — The Duchess of York joked about teen romance and her waistline Thursday and told runaway youngsters to "get on with life and really go with it."

Looking tan and relaxed during a brief visit to this British colony, the former Sarah Ferguson toured a home for runaways and got squeals of laughter from some girls by asking, "What do you think of the boys?"

One girl said she liked them, to which the duchess remarked, "Me, too."

The duchess sipped tea but refused biscuits. "No thanks," she said, patting her hips. "Too big already."

The estranged wife of Prince Andrew urged the youngsters to get the most out of life. "Just remember that there's great hope and it's a great world."

She was to fly home Friday.

NEW YORK — Fashion designer Bill Blass gave $10 million to the New York Public Library, one of the largest gifts it has ever received.

In recognition of the gift announced Wednesday, a large catalog room at the main library was renamed for Blass. He has been a library trustee since 1986 and has given the system lesser sums over the years.

Half the money is designated for the library's unrestricted endowment, which supports activities that include acquisitions and the processing and conserving of books. The other $5 million will go for helping patrons use the Internet computer network and the library's collections.

TOKYO — Evangelist Billy Graham began a four-day crusade in Japan on Thursday with a basic explanation of Christianity.

Graham, who has Parkinson's disease, said he chose Japan for his only foreign crusade this year because of its growing international role.

Despite Japan's prosperity, "people are finding a void in the center of their being, an emptiness in their hearts," Graham, 75, told reporters earlier this week.

About 20,000 people gathered in the 40,000-seat Tokyo Dome to hear Graham explain the basics of Christianity, introduced here in the 16th century. Fewer than 1 percent of Japan's 124 million people are active Christians.

For Toni Morrison, winning the 1993 Nobel prize for literature was the easy part. Picking it up in Stockholm last month was the real challenge.

On Tuesday night, at a dinner at La Grenouille, on East 52nd Street in Manhattan, she told friends that her entrance at the awards ceremony was one of the most terrifying moments of her life: she thought she was going to have an accident royal as she descended the long, marble staircase in the Grand Hall in Stockholm's Old City on the arm of the King of Sweden.

Ms. Morrison told her story of the "Writer Descending the Staircase" at a party given by Sonny Mehta, the head of Alfred A. Knopf.

"I'm not talking about six stairs," she said. "There must have been 90."

The author said she had hoped to look graceful as she walked down the stairs in her long black gown, raspberry satin stole and Manolo Blahnik high heels. Instead, she could only look down at the stairs and whisper to the king that she thought she was going to fall — and take him down with her.

"The king was very reassuring," Ms. Morrison said. "He told me: 'We'll take care of each other. You hold on to me, and I'll hold on to you.'"

George Burns will celebrate his 100th birthday at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev., and the event already is sold out — well before its time. On Jan. 20, the comedian will be only 98.

Burns, who has made a routine of marking birthdays at Caesars Palace, has a contract for three centennial shows, on Jan. 19, 20 and 21, 1996.

CANCER: Physician urges people to quit smoking or else

(From 1B)

M.D. Anderson and supporters of the center.

M.D. Anderson has treated more than 300,000 cancer patients since it was established in 1941, LeMaistre said.

LeMaistre

About one-third of those patients were admitted since 1979, he said.

"It is accelerating all of the time," LeMaistre said.

He said cancer cases in Texas are doubling about every 14 years.

"And the reason for that is we are aging. Texas is getting older. That is one of the factors. Cancer is more common in older people, although it occurs at any age."

M.D. Anderson — which treated 43,000 patients in the past year — and Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York have been rated by U.S. News & World Report as the top cancer-treatment hospitals in the United States.

While M.D. Anderson patients are admitted only upon physician referrals, LeMaistre said "a patient who can be treated locally should be."

Midland has "a great cancer center" in the Allison Cancer Center operated by Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

"And you have got very good, well-trained professionally admired oncologists who do as much as they can with the resources that are available to them."

M.D. Anderson, which emphasizes its "research-driven quality care," is both "outstanding" and "unique," LeMaistre said.

"It is the only free-standing, comprehensive cancer center in this country that is part of a great university system," he said.

"And the Anderson is academically driven in its research, teaching and prevention missions. All of those influence the patient-care program better because that mind-set drives the improvement of care for cancer patients.

" It has clearly driven the Anderson into the lead in understanding how to prevent cancer.

"By preventing cancer, we will find out how to eliminate it," LeMaistre said. "We will never eliminate it by merely treating it."

LeMaistre said lung cancer — which is the most preventable cancer — was rare in 1900, when only 234 cases were "ever known."

But tobacco became popular during and shortly after World War I.

"The commercial manufacturing of cigarettes was just getting under way and our very thoughtful and well-intended gesture of having the American Red Cross distribute cigarettes to the doughboys in the trenches of World War I was what got so many American men addicted," he said.

Tobacco is the "most addicting and lethal substance that is unregulated in our country today," he said.

"Women ... took up the cigarette habit quite a bit later in the boredom of the Depression and then in the freedoms of the '40s and the '50s."

Eighteen million American men gave up cigarette smoking in 1964 when the first surgeon general's report on the hazards of smoking came out, he said.

"We are seeing a fall in the lung-cancer cases among men, but not in women."

Among women, lung cancer has surpassed breast cancer as "the most common cancer and lethal cancer in women."

Each year, more than 500,000 Americans die from tobacco use, he said.

Their deaths are related to cancer, heart disease, emphysema and accidents while smoking — including fires in beds, at home and at hospitals.

Since 1989, smoking has been prohibited on the M.D. Anderson grounds, LeMaistre said, unless a physician writes a prescription that permits a patient to smoke, and then only if the patient is isolated.

"This is been very successful," he said.

He said despite the increase in smoking-related deaths and increase in people who have quit smoking, the tobacco industry is advertising for new smokers and increased sales — at least 1 million new smokers a year just to keep cigarette sales static.

More than 500,000 "Americans are sacrificed to tobacco every year," LeMaistre said.

Another 500,000 quit the habit every year, he said.

"I am not talking about the Holocaust," he said. "I am talking about a modern version of a tragedy and travesties occurring right here" in the United States.

He said the tobacco industry is targeting young people, particularly the "young, least-educated women (who) believe the deceitful lies" in advertisements that you will be better-looking or more successful if you smoke.

Each year, the industry invests $3 billion a year in advertising tobacco products and promoting sporting events. The industry is promoting sales in foreign countries, including Third World nations where the dangers of tobacco smoking are not widely known.

While smoking is a major cause of cancer, LeMaistre said "30 percent of cancer is influenced in its beginning by diet and nutrition.

"Cancer is more common in those areas that call themselves 'civilized,' (and) have a high-fat content to their diet," LeMaistre said.

In referring to cancer as an environmental disease, LeMaistre said offspring of Japanese who immigrated to the United States "develop American cancers: breast cancer, colon cancer, and those that took up the cigarette habit because it was socially acceptably — even though stupid — ... lung cancer."

He said the progeny of American and European Jews who settled in Israel after World War II developed cancer common to Jews and Arabs in that area.

LeMaistre said the "cure rate" among cancer patients at M.D. Anderson is higher than the national average of 50 percent.

While LeMaistre believes cancer can "absolutely" and "unequivocally" be cured, he said "a person who gets one cancer has no special immunity to another cancer."

Janice Thomas, a Midlander who survived leukemia through treatment at M.D. Anderson, said she was "sure glad to get to have a birthday" — her 42nd — by surviving cancer.

"It will sure alter your perspective in a hurry."

Mrs. Thomas described M.D. Anderson as "an extraordinary resource for the people of Texas and the world."

The physicians and other medical workers are "world-class" health-care providers "who are performing world-class medicine," Mrs. Thomas said.

"They do it with kindness and caring, which comes through on every level of their staff."

Hutchison's trial to begin February 7

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge Thursday set Feb. 7 as the date for the ethics trial of U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison.

The date was chosen by Judge John F. Onion Jr., who earlier agreed to move the trial to Fort Worth.

Mrs. Hutchison has been indicted on charges that she used state funds, state employees and state computers for personal and political purposes while she was Texas treasurer and had records altered as part of a coverup.

She faces four felony counts, including two charges of official misconduct, and tampering with a government record and tampering with evidence. She has also been indicted on a misdemeanor charge of official misconduct.

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, has denied any wrongdoing, and alleges the charges stem from a Democratic effort to hurt her campaign. She won a June 5 special election for Senate and is seeking re-election to a full, six-year term in November. She has drawn token opposition in the GOP primary.

Yikes! Another Johnson

■ Odessa College's second Larry Johnson sinks No. 3 Midland College, 90-78.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

Larry Johnson's name is still ringing through the ears of Midland College fans from the mid-1980 s and now a new generation of L.J. has left his mark on the Chaps.

This Johnson is smaller, but just as deadly, as he connected on five three-pointers for a game-high 26 points to lead sixth-ranked Odessa College to a 90-78 win over third-ranked Midland College in a packed Chap Center Thursday night.

Odessa College improves to 17-1 overall and 1-0 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play while Midland drops to 18-1 and 1-1 in league play. The Wranglers have beaten Midland 14 of the past 16 games and three straight.

To borrow a phrase from Dick Vitale, it was "rock and roll city, baby" at the Chap as 4,200 crowded in to watch two teams, like a pair of heavyweights, battle toe-to-toe through 19 lead changes in the first 33 minutes of the game before Odessa College delivered the knockout blow.

Following a Midland College timeout with 7:28 to play, OC reeled off seven straight points, including a three-pointer by Johnson, on three consecutive steals off in-bounds passes, to take a 71-65 lead that the Wranglers would not surrender.

"(The steals) That's what we look for," said Johnson. "We look for the opposition to get tired and then they make bad decisions.

An Irish Davie

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Two weeks after coaching against Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl, Texas A&M defensive coordinator Bob Davie is the newest Fighting Irish assistant coach.

Davie, whose "Wrecking Crew" defense at A&M was among the national leaders in several categories last season, replaces Rick Minter as Notre Dame's defensive coordinator.

Davie, 39, had been at Texas A&M since 1985. He coached outside linebackers for four seasons, before taking over inside linebackers and the coordinator's role in 1989.

The Aggies, who last week were put on NCAA probation, led the nation in total defense in 1991 and were third last season on their way to a 10-2 record.

Oilers keeping promises

■ Buddy Ryan promises a Super Bowl while Wilber Marshall promises to just do his best.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Buddy Ryan promised a Super Bowl. Wilber Marshall promised to do his best.

Ryan's prediction is still a possibility for the Houston Oilers. And Marshall has done the best he could this season considering he's had to miss six games because of knee surgery.

Ryan thought Marshall would be the on-field enforcer for his blitz-crazed 46 defense. That's what Marshall expected too. Instead, he's become a role player on defense and an inspirational leader in the locker room.

He's far down on the tackle chart with 28 for the season and only two sacks for 16 yards in losses, the lowest total in either category since he was a rookie under Ryan in 1984 with the Chicago Bears.

"I didn't get caught up with that Super Bowl talk when I first came in," Marshall said. "I told them I'm just another player. I'm going to do the best I can, and when he (Ryan) gives me the call, I'll go for the blitz."

But most of the blitzes have gone to other players.

"This year, I haven't really blitzed that much except for a couple of games," Marshall said. "They've used me the way they think is right for this team."

While Marshall hasn't been the force on the field, he's No. 1 on the team with two Super Bowl rings and that gets respect.

"I'm not much of a follower, but I definitely want Wilber's help if he can show me how to get to the Super Bowl," defensive end Sean Jones said. "It's not a physical thing. We've always had good players.

"We've just never had a player

OHS, MHS war looms

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

Don't expect to see a replay of this year's non-district girls basketball game between Midland High and Odessa High.

The two teams meet for the second time this season and for the first time in District 4-5A play today at 6:15 p.m. at Chaparral Center and both coaches said their teams, and maybe the outcome, will be different than the first time they met when Midland took a 60-43 win in the Concho River Classic in December.

The Midland boys will follow the girls in the second of four Odessa-Midland boy-girl doubleheaders when the Bulldogs meet Odessa High at 8 p.m. at the Chap.

■ District 4-5A Basketball

"We're two completely different teams," Midland coach Jim Raughton said. "Both teams are playing completely different ball right now and I'm sure they're (Odessa players) going to come in pretty focused."

The Odessa players have probably been waiting for this game since December 3, when then undefeated Midland handed the Lady Bronchos only their third and most recent loss of the season. The Lady Bronchos have won 15 straight since then.

Odessa enters the game with a 22-3 mark and is 5-0 in district play while Midland is one step back at 21-3 and 5-0.

"Our confidence is really high right now," Odessa coach Harry Masch said. "I'm very pleased with the way we are playing because, even if we don't have a great night, we're finding a way to win."

Hall of Fame's Steve Carlton ...winning numbers game

Carlton wins Fame numbers battle

■ Pitcher Steve Carlton yields last strikeout to slugger Orlando Cepeda, who is now off the Hall of Fame ballot.

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — Steve Carlton is off to Cooperstown and Orlando Cepeda is off the ballot.

Carlton, the only pitcher to win four Cy Young Awards, was easily elected to the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility, receiving 436 of 455 votes Wednesday.

"Baseball, or sports in general, is about numbers," Carlton said today at a news confernece. "It's competing against the past and your peers. That's why you want to continue to play, to put more numbers up."

Cepeda, however, fell just seven votes short in his 15th and final chance. A strong letter-writing campaign by the San Francisco Giants and members of Congress almost got him in; three years from now, he can be considered by the Veterans Committee.

"It is heartbreaking because if only seven votes could've gone the other way, it would've been enough," Cepeda said. "It's like losing a ballgame 1-0 when you had so many opportunities to win."

It takes 75 percent to be elected — 342 votes this year — in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. While Carlton got 95.8 percent, the fifth-highest in history, Cepeda got 335 votes and was stuck at 73.6 percent.

"While I've never been one to place a great emphasis on individual awards, I'm touched to be elected to the Hall of Fame," Carlton said. "To be included among the game's greatest players is truly a great honor."

Among the others who missed this year were 300-game winners Phil Niekro (273 votes) and Don Sutton (259), and Tony Perez (263). Cepeda and Perez each hit 379 home runs.

Carlton was 329-244 with a 3.22 ERA in a career from 1965-88, most of it with the Philadelphia Phillies. He is ninth on baseball's win list — second among left-handers to Warren Spahn's 363 victories — and second in strikeouts with 4,136. "Lefty" shares the NL record of 19 strikeouts in a game.

"Pitching consistently was my objective," he said.

Carlton won the Cy Young Award with the Phillies in 1972, 1977, 1980 and 1982. He helped pitch Philadelphia to its only World Series victory in 1980. His greatest season was 1972, when he went 27-10 with a 1.98 ERA for a team that won a total of 59 games.

CHAPS: Record 4,200 watch ranked teams

From 1C

"In the beginning, I was nervous. I don't know why. We were struggling in the first half. The three-pointer by (Desmond) Greer at the end of the first half gave us a spark."

Odessa has survived an early flurry of turnovers caused by the Chaps frontcourt. Midland, trailing 20-19 with 9:41 to play in the first half, went on a 14-0 run to ease out to a 33-20 lead with 4:05 to play in the half after two Kirk Ford free throws. With Midland leading 37-24, OC reserve guard William Fourche hit a three-pointer with 1:09 in the half. Fourche connected on another trey with 26 seconds to play and then Greer hit a fall-away three with no time on the clock at half to cut the Chap lead to 37-33.

"Key point in the game was that we were still in the game at half," said Odessa coach Dennis Helms. "It wasn't looking good. We had used three timeouts.

"Those threes were a tremendous lift. I don't think that anyone will deny Midland outplayed us in the first half, but we went into half in the game."

"The threes happened so fast," said Midland coach Steve Green. "We made a couple of mental mistakes that we hadn't been doing all night and it swung the game."

OC came out in the second half scoring five quick points on a three by Johnson and a basket by Bobby Davis to take a 38-37 lead with 18:52. The Wranglers then went to work on the boards, outrebounding the Chaps 26-13 in the second half, getting third and fourth shots at the basket and then making eight of nine free throws in the final 1:41.

Midland did make a brief run at OC, cutting the lead to four, 74-70, on a free throw by John Brown with four minutes to play, but the Chaps scored just four field goals and hit 4-of-10 free throws over the last 8:35 of the game.

"The difference in the game was that they hit their free throws and we didn't, and they got so many tips on the offensive boards. We didn't go get the ball," said Green.

"I think all this game means is that one team is going to chase and one is going to be chased. We're going to try and track them down. We'll have to do it ourselves because it doesn't look like anyone is going to help us."

CHAP NOTES: The announced attendance of 4,200 was the largest crowd to watch a college basketball game at Chap Center, according to school officials...Odessa College remains undefeated against Midland College when there is a Larry Johnson on the roster for the Wranglers...The 78 points is the second lowest offensive output by the Chaps this season. The low came in a 75-66 win over Lamar Community College on Nov. 26.

Bullets shoot down Rockets

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

LANDOVER, Md. — Don MacLean's 30 points and Rex Chapman's 27 more than offset Hakeem Olajuwon's season-high 45 Thursday night as the Washington Bullets surprised the Houston Rockets 120-102.

The loss deprived Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich of his 100th career victory, which would have made Tomjanovich the ninth-fastest coach to reach 100 wins. He has coached 150 NBA games.

Michael Adams had 17 points and 12 assists, and Tom Gugliotta added 16 points, as Washington won its second straight game, the first time since Nov. 20 and 23 the Bullets have posted back-to-back victories. Washington won for just the seventh time in 16 start.

Olajuwon also pulled down 10 rebounds for the Midwest Division-leading Rockets, who are 6-5 since a 22-1 start. Teammate Otis Thorpe had 16 points and 11 rebounds.

Washington controlled the defensive boards early, exploiting Houston's 10-for-25 shooting.

Spurs 107, Suns 88

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had 27 points and 16 rebounds as the San Antonio Spurs beat Phoenix 107-88 Thursday night for their ninth victory in 10 games, giving the Suns their first two-game losing streak of the season.

The Spurs outscored the Suns 23-4 in the final 4:49. Robinson, who hit only 9 of 25 shots from the field, scored 12 points in the fourth period to help San Antonio record its first victory against any of the four front-running Western Conference teams.

The Spurs were 0-5 against Houston, Seattle, Phoenix and Utah.

The Suns, playing without injured All-Stars Charles Barkley (torn knee tendon) and Kevin Johnson (ankle sprain), were led by A.C. Green and Oliver Miller with 20 points each. But Phoenix was 0-for-12 on 3-point attempts.

San Antonio took control after Danny Ainge tied the game 84-84 on a driving, one-handed bank shot with 4:49 left.

Phoenix, now 9-5 on the road, was coming off a 95-83 home loss Wednesday night to a Charlotte team playing without injured stars Larry Johnson and Alonzo Mourning.

The game drew a crowd of 34,027 to the Alamodome, the second-largest in the NBA this season. San Antonio's season-opener against Golden State drew 36,523.

Jazz 101, Bucks 83

MILWAUKEE — Reserve Jay Humphries scored 12 of his 14 points in the first half as Utah snapped a season-high three-game losing streak by routing Milwaukee.

Rookie Vin Baker led all scorers with 17 points and added a career-high 13 rebounds for the Bucks, who shot just 33 percent from the floor on 30-for-90 shooting. And their chances for a comeback were stunted several times by errant shooting at the free-throw line, where they missed 18 of 40 shots.

The Jazz, on the other hand, were 40-for-74 from the field for 54 percent and 18-for-26 from the line for 69 percent.

Knicks 94, Pistons 80

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Patrick Ewing had 42 points and 16 rebounds to lead the New York Knicks over Detroit, the Pistons' 11th straight loss.

It was the fourth straight game in which Ewing scored at least 30 points. He's averaging almost 35 points per game over that span.

Detroit is just three losses short of the franchise-record 14-game losing streak set in March 1980.

New York led 49-41 at the half, but Ewing scored 10 points in the first 3:25 of the third quarter and the Knicks eventually by as many as 18 in the period. But three straight 3-pointers by Isiah Thomas started a 13-point run that got the Pistons within 67-63.

Cavaliers 104, Nets 93

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Brad Daugherty scored 12 of his 26 points on free throws, and Cleveland turned up its defense after a poor start to beat New Jersey.

The Nets have lost four of five games overall and 16 of 17 in Richfield, while the Cavaliers have won six of seven home games and eight of 12 overall.

New Jersey shot 71 percent and scored 38 points in the first quarter, but Cleveland turned it around with a trapping defense that limited the Nets to 55 points on 35 percent shooting the rest of the way. Daugherty kept the Cavs in it by sinking seven foul shots in the first period.

Seven Cavaliers reached double figures in scoring. Gerald Wilkins had 17, following a 38-point performance in a win at Orlando the previous night. Larry Nance grabbed 13 rebounds.

Deshaies, Lefferts find new homes

■ Baseball Roundup

NEW YORK — Pitchers Jim Deshaies and Craig Lefferts and outfielder Daryl Boston found new teams Thursday, while outfielder Bernard Gilkey got an eight-fold salary increase from the St. Louis Cardinals to $1,645,000.

Deshaies, 11-13 with a 4.41 ERA for Minnesota before he was dealt to San Francisco on Aug. 28 for three minor league prospects, returned to the Twins for a $575,000, one-year contract. He can earn another $175,000 in performance bonuses.

Lefferts, a 36-year-old lefthander who was 3-9 with a 6.05 ERA for Texas, agreed to a $400,000, one-year contract with the California Angels. The former Midland Angel can make up to $900,000 more in performance bonuses if he pitches in 68 games.

Boston, who hit .261 for Colorado last season with 14 homers and 40 RBIs, agreed to a minor league contract with the New York Yankees. Boston, 31, would get a $400,000 contract if he makes the major league team and have the chance to earn an extra $200,000 in performance bonuses.

The three signings meant more than half the free agents have agreed to new contracts. Of 97 free agents, 51 have signed.

Six players eligible for arbitration agreed to new contracts Thursday, leaving 95 eligible to file on Friday, the final day.

Gilkey, who made $200,000 last season, got the largest raise. The 27-year-old hit .305 last season with 16 homers and 70 RBIs. He led St. Louis with 99 runs and 40 doubles.

First baseman Hal Morris and Cincinnati agreed at $2.1 million, a raise of $825,000, while lefthander Chuck McElroy and the Reds agreed at $525,000, a raise of $212,500. Morris hit .317 with seven homers and 49 RBIs; McElroy was 2-2 with a 4.86 ERA.

Second baseman Joey Cora and the Chicago White Sox agreed at $625,000 with a $1.1 million club option for 1995 that becomes guaranteed if he plays in 135 games or makes 550 plate appearances this year. Cora, who also can earn $345,000 in performance bonuses in each of the next two seasons, made $465,000 in 1993, when he hit .268 with two homers, 51 RBIs and 20 stolen bases.

Reliever Gene Harris got a fourfold salary increase when the San Diego Padres agreed at $750,000, raise of $595,000. Harris was 6-6 with a 3.03 ERA and a team-high 23 saves last season.

Pitcher Roger Mason and the Philadelphia Phillies agreed at $500,000, a raise of $200,000. The right-hander was 5-5 with a 4.89 ERA in 34 games in 1993.

In a minor deal involving two pitchers, Milwaukee acquired Jeff Bronkey from Texas for minor leaguer David Pike.

Trout stocked in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 136,000 rainbow trout have been stocked in Texas streams and lakes so far this winter, and another 154,000 are will be placed through March, the Department of Parks and Wildlife says.

The department said Thursday it expects to stock a total of 290,178 eight-inch to 10-inch trout at 8 sites.

Pat Hutson, head of the department's freshwater trout program in San Marcos, said the final number will depend on how many fish are available from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"We're right on schedule. There have been no major problems. I think we'll make it," he said.

The program is run with funds from the sale of freshwater trout stamps. The $7 trout stamps are required in addition to a valid fishing license.

Midland Bowling

By Karen Jordan

On Jan. 7, Midland Park Lanes was the host at the wedding of Robb Helt and Ana Alferez. The bride and her five attendants strolled down the aisle lined with bowling pins and promised to love, honor and bowl twice a week for as long as they both shall live. The Midland Bowling Association would like to wish them the very best that life has to offer.

Midland Park Lanes Highlights: Arthur Williams of the Teacher's Mixed League was the leader at this house last week. He shot a 277-651. Tammy Windham paced the ladies with her 234-612.

Cactus Lanes Highlights: Ty Bowling continued his torrid streak in the Petroleum American League with his perfect "300", 242, 205-747. Also in that league, Curtis Alford gave it his best shot with his 299, 246-736. In the Keglers League, Rusty Stewart was storng and steady with 255-231-243-729 and Ken Robey pounded out a 215-222-278-715. Tammy Windham was all over the town shooting big scores. In the City Classic League, she rolled a 237-258-235-730, and in the Keglers, she shot 232-266-209-707. In the High Sky Ladies League, kudos go to Joyce Rankin, who shot a 226 game, which was 98 pins over her 128 average.

Deacons upset No. 2 Devils

Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Randolph Childress' 3-pointer with 11 seconds left gave Wake Forest a 69-68 victory over No. 2 Duke on Thursday night.

The shot by Childress, who finished with 24 points, was clearly a 3-pointer, but the Cameron Indoor Stadium scoreboard didn't record it that way and the closest official did not signal it was a 3-pointer.

■ Top 25 Roundup

Grant Hill, Duke's star down the stretch with 23 points, drove the length of the floor and put up a 15-foot jumper in the closing seconds, but the ball bounced off the rim, off the hands of teammate Chris Collins and out of bounds as the clock ran out.

The Wake Forest players stormed the court in jubilation as the Duke players seemed confused about the ending and coach Mike Krzyzewski went to the scorer's table looking for an explanation.

It was the second straight season the Demon Deacons (11-3, 2-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) upset the Blue Devils (10-1, 2-1) at home.

The 6-foot Childress, who leads the ACC in scoring, missed a layup and 3-pointer that could have given Wake Forest the lead in the closing moments. He made the winning shot over Hill, who is six inches taller.

No. 19 California 98, No. 6 Ariz. 93

TUCSON, Ariz. — Lamond Murray scored 33 points, including a 3-pointer to force overtime and three free throws in the final minute of the extra period, as No. 19 California beat No. 6 Arizona.

Jason Kidd, the nation's assist leader, dished out 11 in addition to scoring 17 points and grabbing 11 rebounds, along with four steals.

No. 7 Mass. 70, No. 23 W. Va. 56

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Dana Dingle scored 17 points and No. 7 Massachusetts took advantage of sloppy offense by No. 23 West Virginia for first place in the Atlantic 10.

More Sports/8C

Massachusetts (12-1, 4-0) led the entire game after a 6-6 tie and never saw its lead fall below 10 in the second half after holding a 35-22 halftime lead.

It was the Minutemen's ninth straight victory and ended a nine-game winning streak for the Mountaineers.

West Virginia (9-2, 3-1) played poorly in the first half, shooting just 27 percent from the field and turning the ball over nine times. The Mountaineers could do little more than exchange baskets with the Minutemen in the second half.

No. 10 Michigan 86, Ohio St. 75, OT

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Jalen Rose scored 28 points and No. 10 Michigan went on a 9-0 run to start overtime for a victory over Ohio State.

Michigan (11-2, 3-0 Big Ten) rallied from a 10-point deficit in the final 15½ minutes of regulation. In their previous game, the Wolverines overcame a 19-point margin at Iowa.

Ohio State (8-6, 1-2) tied it at 71 on Charles Macon's jumper with nine seconds remaining in regulation. Rose then hit a runner in the lane with ninth-tenths of a seconds left, but was called for traveling.

It was all Michigan in overtime. Ohio State went scoreless and fell behind by nine before Greg Simpson hit two free throws with 1:26 left.

No. 15 Louisville 95, Va. Tech 76

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — DeJuan Wheat scored 22 points and had a 3-pointer in both of Louisville's big runs as the 15th-ranked Cardinals beat Virginia Tech, snapping the Hokies' six-game winning streak.

Freeman's late eagle yields 3-stroke lead

■ Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU (AP) — Robin Freeman, making the most of his new life on the tour, capped a 9-under-par 63 with a last-hole eagle for a three-shot lead Thursday in the opening round of the United Airlines Hawaiian Open.

Freeman's bogey-free round over the Waialae Country Club course was the best of his four years on the PGA Tour. He is the only golfer to have led the tour's qualifying school twice — in 1988 and last year.

"Usually you don't get two shots at it," he said. "Usually, when a guy wins the tour school, he stays out here and doesn't have to do it again. That didn't happen in my case."

Freeman opened his 1994 season by playing the par-5 holes in 5-under. A 215-yard 3-iron shot on the ninth hole, his last of the day, set up a 20-foot putt that stretched his lead to three shots over a pair of Australians.

Brett Ogle and Craig Parry shared second at 66 in the near-ideal playing conditions: temperatures in the mid-80's with relatively light trade winds.

Three-time U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin hit a 3-wood to within 6 feet of the flag for an 18th hole eagle-3 to complete a 67 and gain a share of fourth place.

He was tied with Canada's Dave Barr, Nike tour graduates Sean Murphy and Steve Jurgensen, Tom Garner, Paul Goydos and Morris Hatalsky.

Boycott has SWC coaches in corner

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Conference Commissioner Steve Hatchell said Thursday he was unsure how many, if any, conference coaches would participate in a possible weekend boycott of basketball games.

"It's a tough thing," Hatchell said. "There's a lot of sympathy, but I'm not sure how many will participate in a boycott. We have three black coaches and we know what kind of pressure they're under."

Talk of a boycott has circulated since Monday, when the NCAA refused to restore a 14th basketball scholarship two years after it voted to cut scholarships from 15 to 13.

The Black Coaches Association says minorities are particularly hurt by the decision. The BCA has spearheaded the possible boycott and says a walkout is likely, but officials won't say when it might happen.

Saturday has been cited as a possible target day, to coincide with the birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. and knock a number of featured matchups off television, depriving the NCAA of revenue from those telecasts.

Of the three SWC teams with minority coaches, two play Saturday — John Shumate's Southern Methodist team plays at Texas and Alvin Brooks' Houston team is at Texas Tech. Rice, coached by Willis Wilson, plays Texas A&M in Houston Sunday.

Only Brooks, a first-year coach at Houston, has decided one way or the other on the boycott issue. He said Wednesday he would not participate.

"I ... support the legislation to give potential student-athletes the opportunity to attend college, particularly those student athletes who could not attend college without this financial assistance," Brooks said in a statement.

"However, I also feel that it would not be fair to my team, our fans and the University of Houston to boycott our basketball game against Texas Tech this Saturday."

Shumate had not decided Thursday whether to join in a protest.

"At this point, he's not sure there even is going to be a boycott," said SMU assistant athletic director Ed Wisneski. "I think everyone's trying to gather more information before making a definitive decision one way or the other."

Wilson also had not decided as of Thursday afternoon.

Hatchell was to take part in a conference call Thursday afternoon among all 33 Division I conference commissioners to discuss strategy. He said a conference among SWC athletic directors would follow.

Hatchell said he did not foresee that any disciplinary action would be taken against coaches or players if they decide to boycott.

Other SWC teams appear to be steering clear of the boycott issue.

The University of Texas basketball team, following a one-hour meeting Wednesday night, voted against participating in any boycott, said coach Tom Penders.

Hurley better

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Bobby Hurley, gaunt and weak but vowing to play basketball next season, Thursday returned to Arco Arena for the first time since his nearly fatal car crash a month ago.

"I think it will take maybe two or three months before I'll be able to shoot a basketball," he said. "After that, maybe four months before I actually start playing."

Hurley walked unassisted from the parking lot to the arena, stopping to autograph a basketball for a fan.

"He's a thinner, skinnier version, but he's up and around," said Kings interim general manager Jerry Reynolds. "That's tremendous and exciting to see this and to know in a six-month period we'll see Bobby Hurley playing basketball at some level."

GTE Corp. to cut 17,000 jobs

■ Cuts to result in $1.8 billion charge in fourth quarter.

Associated Press

DALLAS — GTE Corp. said Thursday it will cut 17,000 jobs in its telephone operations business during the next three years, resulting in a $1.8 billion charge in its fourth quarter, to cope with the technological changes and new competitive pressures that have hit other local phone companies.

The company said it will reduce customer service and regional network centers around the country from 195 to 13.

GTE, the nation's largest local phone company, said it expects the cuts will save $1 billion annually. It now employs 130,000 and has annual revenues of about $20 billion.

"The actions announced Thursday are the logical next steps in the strategic program we have undertaken to focus GTE solely on telecommunications and continue to improve our competitive position," Charles R. Lee, chairman and chief executive officer, said in a statement.

"While we recognize the pain and disruption this program will cause our people, implementation is critical to the future of our company."

GTE in 1991 said it would focus on telecommunications and has since left communications and lighting equipment manufacturing.

The company's stock was trading down 12½ cents at $34.75 by midday on the New York Stock Exchange.

GTE is based in Stamford, Conn. Its telephone operations subsidiary, which provide about 75 percent of its revenue, is based in the Dallas suburb of Irving.

The charge includes $680 million to upgrade or replace customer service and administrative systems and enhance network software, $410 million to cover employee-separation costs and $50 million for employee retraining. Consolidation of facilities are expected to cost $160 million.

The moves are similar to but larger than those made at several regional Bell operating companies, all of whom are facing the prospect of competition as advancements in communications wipe out traditional regulatory barriers including their monopolies on local service. Last week, Pacific Telesis announced it would eliminate 10,000 jobs in its local telephone operations, which serves customers in Nevada and California.

As they face more competition, local telephone companies have been attempting to branch out into other businesses that are evolving with technological changes.

For instance, Bell Atlantic Corp., the regional phone company serving mid-Atlantic states, is buying cable television company Tele-Communications Inc.

U S West Inc., which serves 14 Western states, invested in the cable operations of entertainment conglomerate Time Warner Inc.

As other phone companies have said in announcing a restructuring, GTE said technological advances would allow it to change how it deals with customers.

Sky is the limit for DFW airport on its birthday

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The world's second busiest airport, which covers more than 27 square miles, is expected to get even bigger with a total of eight runways.

But 20 years ago, Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport opened after the first runway was completed.

Today, DFW is poised to surpass Chicago's O'Hare Airport as the busiest in the world. The airport midway between Dallas and Fort Worth is also celebrating the anniversary of its first commercial airline flight.

Today, DFW is poised to surpass Chicago's O'Hare Airport as the busiest in the world. The airport midway between Dallas and Fort Worth is also celebrating the anniversary of its first commercial airline flight.

American Airlines Flight 341 landed at 12:07 a.m. on Jan. 13, 1974, five months after 200,000 people had attended the airport's dedication.

Work had just finished the year before on paving the first runway and building the first control tower, officials said.

Current expansion plans call for adding two new runways to the current six, along with redesigning passenger terminals and making other improvements.

The Federal Aviation Administration predicts that, by the year 2000, DFW will surpass O'Hare Airport's 844,000 operations — takeoffs and landings — with 963,000, according to Bert Williams, the airport board's chairman.

"Our forecasts show DFW Airport will handle more than 100 million passengers by the year 2010, nearly double the total today," said Williams.

By that year, operations at DFW are projected to almost double — from more than 764,000 currently to 1.2 million.

"Considering that just two decades ago, DFW was little more than a dream and raw prairie land, it staggers the imagination to realize how rapidly the airport has become a major player in national and international aviation and also has become the primary economic generator here in North Texas,"

California newspaper, phone company team up for home shopping network

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — California's largest newspaper will team up with the state's premier phone company to create a home shopping service that should be in business in the greater Los Angeles area in time for the 1994 Christmas season.

Times Mirror, corporate parent of the Los Angeles Times, announced the joint venture with Pacific Telesis Group of San Francisco.

"This partnership will create a powerful new electronic marketplace," said Richard Schlosberg III, (CQ) CEO of Times Mirror.

Lee Camp, a PacTel vice president, said his company's technical expertise, combined with the Times' advertising reach, would "create this exciting home-shopping lane on the communications superhighway."

No details were provided about how much the two companies would invest in the new home shopping service, what it would be called or how much it would charge consumers.

The service is scheduled to debut in November.

Officials report lowest inflation in seven years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of living rose a modest 2.7 percent in 1993 as falling energy and tobacco prices gave the country the lowest inflation rate in seven years.

The Labor Department reported Thursday that even medical costs were more moderate last year, turning in their best performance in 20 years although they still rose twice as fast as the overall inflation rate.

In other economic news, the government reported that retail sales, propelled by heavy spending on big-ticket items such as cars, were up a surprisingly strong 0.8 percent in December and 6.2 percent for the year, the best showing since 1989.

Analysts said the two reports showed the economy at present is enjoying the best of possible worlds.

"We can have our cake and eat it too, strong growth and no inflation," said Robert D. Barr, an economist at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

It marked the third straight year of modest price increases, the best stretch of inflation news in three decades. Prices were up 3.1 percent in 1990 and 2.9 percent in 1992. Last year's increase was the smallest since a 1.1 percent rise in 1986 that reflected a huge plunge in oil prices.

In a third report, the Labor Department said the number of Americans filing new claims for unemployment benefits edged down by 1,000 last week to 354,000. While the improvement was less than expected, analysts said it showed that employment growth was at least holding steady.

Economists said they looked for consumer prices to remain docile in 1994 as well, even with a significant pickup in economic activity in the final three months that was sparked by the lowest interest rates in a generation.

Slack U.S. labor markets, tumbling world oil prices and a global economy still struggling with recession were all cited as reasons inflation should remain under control this year.

While the Federal Reserve was expected to nudge short-term interest rates up slightly in coming months because of the stronger economic growth, analysts said the increases should still leave such key rates as 30-year bonds and home mortgages basically unchanged through most of the year.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Money market mutuals have virtually no risk

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

A: Yes, indeed! In theory, there is risk in all mutual funds. But in practice, there is virtually no risk in money market mutual funds, particularly the U.S. Treasury variety.

All money market mutual funds invest only in short-term debt obligations. They use accounting procedures that keep the funds' per-share asset value constant — at $1.

When you put money into a money market mutual fund, you buy fund shares — each valued at $1. When you take money out of that type of fund, you redeem some or all of your $1 shares.

Most money market mutual funds invest in a broad range of short-term debt securities, such as commercial paper, repurchase agreements, certificates of deposit, bankers' acceptances, U.S. Treasury bills and other U.S. government securities.

As long as none of those securities goes into default, there is no worry about the asset value of money market mutual funds falling below $1 per share — "busting the buck," as it is called in the trade.

U.S. Treasury money market mutual funds invest only in U.S. Treasury bills and other federal government obligations with short maturities. There is absolutely no fear about any of those securities going into default and causing U.S. Treasury money market mutual funds to bust the buck.

Q: Isn't it true that some money market mutual funds held large amounts of commercial paper that defaulted a few years ago? How badly were the shareholders of those funds hurt?

A: It is true, but fund shareholders were not hurt.

You refer to two commercial paper defaults in 1990 — $75 million by Mortgage & Realty Trust and $23 million by Integrated Resources.

The 11 money market mutual funds holding those debt obligations would have been financially clobbered and fund shareholders would have sustained losses were it not for the fact that the management companies of those funds stepped into the breach.

When the bad news of default broke, those management companies purchased the commercial paper from the funds at face value. That made the funds whole and preserved shareholders' asset values.

The move by the management companies kept the reputation of money market mutual funds intact. But it was not entirely altruistic. Fund managers realized that their business would have suffered if the funds were not bailed out. Managing money market mutual funds can be very lucrative.

Q: As far as I can determine, no money market mutual fund charges a commission "load" on the purchase of its shares. How do the people running the fund make any money?

A: Those folks get their compensation from the fund's management fee, which is also called an "advisory" fee. It is collected by the fund's management company and, at most funds, is the biggest part of operating expenses.

Typically, the annual management fee amounts to one-half of 1 percent of a fund's assets. So, for a fund with $500 million in assets, the fee would be $2.5 million per year.

There is nothing unusual about this arrangement. All types of mutual funds have management fees, which are quite different than the commission charged when you purchase shares of a mutual fund with such a load.

That load charge, which can be as high as 8.5 percent, is a one-time thing. It goes to pay brokers and others involved in the sale of fund shares.

MHS sets football banquet Jan. 24

The Midland High Football Banquet will be held at the Midland Center on Jan. 24 with a reception at 6:30 p.m. and the banquet at 7 p.m.

A football signed by the 1993 Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys will be on sale in a silent auction.

Davis wins run across states

The route was traced on a map of the U.S. and went from San Francisco to Boston. Distance was calculated by the amount of time each participant spent working out in the fitness area at The Midlander, receiving one mile for each minute.

Others finishing the race were Rickey Barnett, George Baer, Melissa Cartwright, Candi Cowden, John Darnell, Maggie Means, Judy Norwood, Tiffany Owen, David Rogers, Bobette Sandy and David Watson.

Valdez certified

The Midlander Fitness Center has announced that tennis pro Luiz Valdez has become a certified member of the United States Professional Tennis Association (USPTA).

Valdez' USPTA certification came after an extensive examination of tennis teacher skills, including a four-hour written exam and on-court demonstrations of teaching group and private lessons, stroke execution and diagnosis.

Mavs face record for consecutive home losses

DALLAS (AP) — Fans are wearing paper bags, players are wearing frowns — and some are swearing — as the Dallas Mavericks' coach frets over the cellar dwelling team's plight.

The Mavericks, who lost 103-85 Wednesday to the only team they had previously beaten this season, have now lost 16 straight games. They get an opportunity at an unenviable NBA record Saturday.

The San Antonio Spurs come to Reunion Arena, gunning to break Dallas' tie with Orlando for consecutive home losses.

Mavericks spokesman Kevin Sullivan said the plan for Saturday night is the same.

"We're going to go out and try to win a game — just like all the rest of them," he said Thursday.

Mashburn, the Mavericks' $32 million man, left the locker room through the back door after the game.

Cowboys' 'Big Cat' has eyes for White

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Not too many players can say they've made a living being able to block Reggie White. Erik "Big Cat" Williams can.

Williams was an unknown until he made a a name for himself by being able to handle annual Pro Bowler White, the NFL's highest paid defensive lineman.

The Dallas Cowboys massive 6-foot-6, 320-pound offensive tackle from the Central Ohio Marauders was recently named first team All-Pro by The Associated Press. He received a lucrative four-year contract from owner Jerry Jones who didn't want Williams to become a free agent. It also beat the salary cap deadline.

Williams' contract went unnoticed because it was announced the same day Troy Aikman got $50 million. Still making well over $1 million per year isn't bad for a former collegian at a tiny NAIA school.

Williams and White meet again on Sunday in the NFC divisional playoff clash between the Dallas Cowboys and the Green Bay Packers.

Williams, a third round pick in 1991, has gone face-mask to face-mask with White five times in the last two seasons.

He earned NFC offensive Player of the Week honors at White's expense against the Philadelphia Eagles in November, 1993. Williams also had a solid day against White last January in the divisional playoffs against the Eagles.

In October, White made only four tackles in the Packers 36-14 loss to the Cowboys and wasn't a factor as Williams helped neutralize him.

Williams said trying to stop White is a difficult way to make a living.

"He's very tough, a heckuva player," Williams said.

CBS faced losing $800 million

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — CBS faced the dilemma of losing up to $800 million on NFL broadcasts or allowing itself to be outbid by Fox Broadcasting Co., CBS president Howard Stringer said Thursday.

Last month, the four-decade CBS hold on NFC games was broken by Fox's agreement to pay nearly $1.6 billion for a four-year deal covering the 1994-97 seasons.

"It was never a question that we were going to pay that kind of money," Stringer told a Television Critics Association gathering. CBS would have lost between $160 million and $200 million a year under those terms, he said.

Under the current contract, CBS was losing on average $100 million a year, he said.

The tradeoff is considered to be increased viewership and identity for a network, a strong plus for still-young Fox. But CBS knew how painful an expensive sports contract could be because of its money-losing baseball deal.

He denied that CBS, the No. 1 network last year, was at risk of losing its dominance without football.

Study: Pre-surgery chemo saves cancer victims' breasts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgery sandwiched between two rugged, six-month courses of chemotherapy not only dramatically improves survival for women with advanced breast cancer, but also allows some to save their breasts, researchers reported Thursday.

Women with locally advanced breast cancer — large tumors that may have spread to the lymph nodes — typically have only a 20 percent chance of living two years.

Doctors at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia, beginning in 1979, treated 158 of these women by giving them intensive chemotherapy for up to six months before surgery.

The chemotherapy shrank the tumors dramatically, making it easier for surgeons to remove all the malignant cells, said lead researcher Dr. Gordon Schwartz.

After surgery, the women underwent radiation and another six months of chemotherapy. Eighty percent remained alive and disease-free after two years, 61 percent after five years and 55 percent after 10 years, said the study, to be published Saturday in the journal Cancer.

Several other cancer centers have reported similar success, but the Jefferson ly went a step further. It found women with advanced breast cancer don't have to lose their breasts.

Mastectomy is the standard treatment for such advanced cancer. But 40 percent of the Jefferson patients had their tumors shrink enough to undergo a lumpectomy, removal of just the tumor and affected lymph nodes. Mastectomy and lumpectomy patients had the same survival rate, Schwartz said.

"The significance is this offers an alternative," said Dr. Sandra Swain, a breast cancer specialist at Georgetown University. "Breast conservation is not routinely done, even at major cancer centers, for small cancers. Now we see it worked for this advanced cancer."

Doctors at M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston are beginning to see similar results with lumpectomy, said Anderson oncologist Dr. Aman Buzdar.

"This is very exciting," he said. The challenge will be changing "surgeons' idea that the more you cut, the more you're going to cure."

"We haven't found the holy grail," Schwartz cautioned. "These women had their backs against a wall and we were looking for a way to save their lives. Breast conservation was an unexpected plus ... but every woman isn't going to be able to have a lumpectomy."

Breast cancer is the second-leading cancer killer among women, after lung cancer. It takes 46,000 lives a year. Locally advanced breast cancer accounts for 10 to 20 percent of the breast cancer diagnosed each year, totaling about 25,000 cases.

Schwartz stopped the pre-induction chemotherapy as soon as each patient's tumor stopped shrinking, but said most took six months. Other centers haven't reported giving the potent drugs for that long, and two of Schwartz's patients said living with a large tumor for six months was as hard as handling the chemotherapy's side effects.

"It's a very tough decision to have to make," said Bobbi Kissinger, 48, of Washington Township, N.J., who underwent a lumpectomy two years ago. "But if I hadn't, I probably would be dead."

Schwartz, speaking to reporters in Washington Thursday, advocated such chemotherapy for women with less advanced cancer as well.

M.D. Anderson is preparing to study that, Buzdar said.

"We are hoping that eventually what will happen is that is that lesser and lesser surgery will be needed and fewer and fewer women will lose their breasts," he said.
