U.S. observers in strategic area under fire

SOUK EL-GHARB, Lebanon (AP) — A team of U.S. Marine and Army forward observers came under shelling in this strategic mountain town today as the Lebanese army fought off another attack by Druse militiamen and their Palestinian allies.

U.S. Embassy officials and Lebanese army officers refused to comment on the presence of the Americans in the battle area. One Western military source said the Americans were forward artillery observers in Souk el-Gharb to direct the guns of the U.S. Navy task force off shore.

Pentagon sources in Washington said two U.S. Navy warships off Beirut resumed firing today at Druse positions near Souk el-Gharb. The sources, who declined to be identified, also said Syrian troops may have fired a ground-to-air missile at a Navy F-14 fighter but the missile apparently missed.

The U.S. jet was part of a reconnaissance mission. French jets also took part. The U.S. Navy on Monday for the first time opened fire in direct support of Lebanon's army, and the presence of forward observers in Souk el-Gharb apparently was part of the U.S. commitment to aid Lebanon's army in the event U.S. Marines are threatened.

AP Laserphoto Map

U.S. officials say capture of Souk el-Gharb, which overlooks Beirut airport, would leave the Marines in a highly exposed position. Loss of the town would be a severe blow to the Lebanese army and could threaten the government of President Amin Gemeyal.

The team of six or seven American observers, led by an Army colonel whose nametag identified him as Gatanas, was seen by Western reporters getting out of a Lebanese army armored personnel carrier in the center of Souk el-Gharb just an hour before the attack began.

The Americans refused to speak to reporters, and Lebanese army military intelligence officers ordered all the reporters into an armored personnel carrier and closed the door.

An hour later, an unknown number of insurgents tried to infiltrate Lebanese army lines about 1.2 miles from the Hotel Hajjar, the local army headquarters, where the Americans apparently were staying. The attempt touched off an hour-long battle in which hundreds of shells and rockets were exchanged around the town.

It could not be determined whether any shells fell very close to the Americans, although the Druse rockets and artillery pounded the town and Lebanese army tanks returned the fire.

The state radio said French Super Etendard fighter-bombers took off from the carrier Foch on reconnaissance flights around noon. U.S. F-14 Tomcat fighters from the carrier Eisenhower flew similar missions before dawn in what was believed the first nighttime mission by planes from the U.S. task force.

Beirut radio said Druse militiamen trying to move into Souk el-Gharb were beaten back this morning, with six of the attackers killed and several others wounded. The radio said fighting around the strategic town had raged through the night.

Meanwhile, the independent Kuwait newspaper Al-Qabas said Soviet officers headed by a Red Army general were in Damascus helping the Syrians monitor the war in Lebanon. Another Kuwait paper, Al Anbaa said the Soviets were prepared to fly 52,000 troops into Syria if Israel attacked Syria. There was no confirmation of the reports, which cited unidentified diplomatic sources.

Lebanese military officials said one of their reconnaissance planes crashed Monday near the Druse mountain town of Aley.

Protection of strategic towns stressed

WASHINGTON (AP) — With U.S. warships defending the Lebanese army in battle for the first time, the Reagan administration is emphasizing its determination to protect the strategic town of Souk el-Gharb from the Syrian-backed Druse militia.

One key administration official said army control of the town "is vital."

Souk el-Gharb overlooks key areas of Beirut, including the airport, where U.S. Marines are based, and capture of the town by hostile forces would leave the Marines in highly exposed positions.

"I think we have made clear our concerns about Souk el-Gharb and our intent to assist militarily to see that that does not fall into the hands of people who could shell our Marines," said John Hughes, the State Department spokesman.

A key battle has been raging for the last two weeks for control of the town, with members of the Syrian-backed Druse militia trying to dislodge government forces. U.S. warships fired on Druse artillery positions Monday, the first time warships have actively joined battle on the side of the Lebanese army.

The army beat back several fierce attacks by the Druse, but it wasn't clear whether shelling from the warships was decisive.

State's weather wet, windy as autumn approaches

Two youths drown in Houston flooding

HOUSTON (AP) — Rains that may have dropped more water on Houston than Hurricane Alicia produced flooding that left two youths drowned, stranded a fully loaded school bus and gave surfers a new playground — city streets.

Rescue teams found the bodies of Gustavo Meza, 9, and Terry Ardoin, 16, in Houston bayous Monday. Searchers were unable to find an unidentified 14-year-old who was swept off a raft in southwest Houston, a police spokesman said.

Seven inches of rain was measured in some parts of town Monday, a weather bureau official said.

"The whole Southeast Texas area has probably received more rain today than when Alicia went through," National Weather Service forecaster Gary Beeler said. That hurricane roared into Galveston, up the Ship Channel and into Houston Aug. 18, claiming 22 lives with 115-mph winds and causing more than $1 billion in damage.

"The areas that usually flood did and some of the areas that usually don't did too," Beeler said.

Firefighters used an air boat to rescue 30 middle school students from a school bus whose driver ignored bystanders' warnings and drove into an intersection submerged beneath five feet of water, fire department spokesman Kenneth Robinett said.

Officials said the rescue took about an hour. The driver refused to give her name or make any comment.

"The driver told us to sit there and not panic," said seventh-grader Laversa Owens, who said water poured through the vehicle's front door. "And we did, except one girl started crying."

Another rescue involved 26-year-old Jesse Owens, who clung to the underside of a bridge, breathing in an air pocket, for nearly an hour Monday morning after he was knocked from an inflatable raft.

He was rescued by Van A. Vick, a Harris County surveyor and an experienced diver, who plunged into the swift current of Brays Bayou and tied a rope around his waist. About 100 onlookers broke into cheers as Owens was pulled from the water.

He was treated at a local hospital, officials said. Firefighter Gary Bourgeois said Owens' body temperature had fallen to 94 degrees.

Basin area gets cool blast from Canada

From staff reports

"You could say we've had our first taste of autumn here a little earlier than usual," according to a spokesman for the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. "It's just one of those blasts of cold air that comes down from Canada."

But about the only thing that's falling is the temperature — and that's expected to climb back up by the official beginning of Fall on Friday.

A cold front from Canada that dropped unusual amounts of snow in northern states Monday hit the Midland area at 6:16 this morning, bringing only dirt and forcing the mercury to tumble. Temperatures dropped rapidly, going from 76 degrees at 5 a.m. to 64 at 6 a.m. By 9 a.m., it was down to 58. But the weatherman said it should start rising slowly after that.

Wind gusts hit 42 mph several times around 8 a.m. today. Average wind speed was 25 to 28 mph, said the weatherman.

Shipped to Midland from Florida, the weatherman joked he had learned a new meaning for "Eat my dust." In Florida, it refers to driving behind another car. Here, he said, it means "Stand outside and eat Lubbock's dust."

Strong winds and dust also hit the area towns. In Andrews, it set off one burglar alarm, said a Sheriff's Office spokesman who added this wasn't the day "to go painting or anything like that."

The front hit Lamesa about 4:30 a.m., said a woman in the police department, but the dust had started settling by 8:30 a.m.

According to the NWS, today's 20 percent chance of rain and thunderstorms should linger through Wednesday.

Temperatures will drop near 50 tonight with a high Wednesday expected in the lower 70s.

Tonight's winds, expected from the northeast at 15-20 mph and gusty, will diminish to 5-15 mph late tonight. Winds will be from the east at 5-15 mph Wednesday.

Monday's high of 100 was five degrees cooler than the record high of 105, set in 1930. The overnight low of 58 was 16 degrees warmer than 1971's record low of 42.

Nicaragua averts bid for rebel government

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A military commander says Nicaraguan troops have broken up a rebel plan to seize territory and establish a provisional government, but that fierce fighting and heavy casualties resulted.

In El Salvador, the government Peace Commission announced plans for a second meeting with leftist insurgents, to be held Sept. 29 in Colombia. But the commission warned there may be no further meetings unless the rebels send high-ranking officials.

Deputy Commander Roger Lanuza, head of counterinsurgency forces for Nicaragua's leftist government, said Monday that government troops were locked in combat with a large rebel force from Honduras that battled its way into Boaco, Chontales and Zelaya Sur provinces in eastern Nicaragua.

"Up to now, we have killed 75 of them and captured many more men, including 20 who surrendered," Lanuza said.

He did not reveal government casualties, but another military source, who refused to be identified for security reasons, said fighting continues "very heavy with many casualties on both sides."

Lanuza said the 450-strong rebel force began its push into Nicaragua in early September, planning to link up with Costa Rican-based exiles attacking from the south "and seize a large part of the national territory to set up a provisional government."

He said government troops halted the drive and scattered the insurgents but that heavy fighting continued.

The government had no immediate comment on a report that a light plane flew Monday over a military installation 21 miles south of Managua and dropped two bombs which failed to explode. Witnesses said the plane was driven off by anti-aircraft fire.

On Sept. 8 two small planes attacked Managua airport and other points in the city. One was shot down. The next day two more light planes attacked the Pacific port of Corinto, and one was shot down. Both attacks were claimed by the Costa Rican-based rebel group Nicaraguan Revolutionary Alliance.

Daniel Ortega, head of the three-man Sandinista junta, said last week that 1,180 guerrillas and 800 government soldiers had died in fighting since January.

U.S. encouraged by Contadora peace initiative

WASHINGTON (AP) — New signs of Nicaraguan flexibility on a Central America peace plan have convinced U.S. officials that their policy of applying heavy military pressure on the Sandinista government is beginning to pay off.

The administration's assessment is based largely on a little-noticed 21-point "document of objectives" approved 10 days ago by the five Central American countries and the Contadora mediation group, comprised of Mexico, Venezuela, Panama and Colombia.

The delegates reaffirmed the principle of non-intervention and agreed to curb the arms race in Central America, to ban foreign military advisers and to move toward free elections.

Each of these points addresses major U.S. concerns about Nicaragua, where officials claim the Sandinista leadership has been intent on subverting neighboring countries while establishing a Marxist-Leninist regime with the help of some 2,000 Cuban military advisers.

The document was approved at the foreign ministers' level and still is subject to ratification by the respective governments. While asserting that the process still has a long way to go, officials called the document an extraordinary achievement given the complexity of the issues.

Rockies 'dig into' early snow

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

Wintry weather dropped temperatures to the teens and snowed in mountain passes in the northern Rockies today, but the cold front promised to relieve the sweltering East as floods and up to 7 inches of rain swamped Texas, killing three people.

The mercury plunged to 13 degrees today at West Yellowstone, Mont., after a storm Monday dumped up to 17 inches of snow. Late-summer campers at Wyoming's Yellowstone National Park, just to the south, had to cope with snow-blocked roads and passes.

It was a different story back East as air conditioners switched on to cope with record-breaking highs, hitting 94 in New York City and Baltimore and 93 in Allentown, Pa.

The heat was expected to ease a bit today, with readings forecast in the 80s from the Gulf Coast to New England and dropping steeply toward the end of the week as a cold front moved east.

The front, stretching today from the Texas Panhandle to the Great Lakes, was being preceded by rain and thunderstorms, said Hugh Crowther of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, Mo.

"It's not moving that quickly, but it brings a sharp contrast in temperature behind it," Crowther said. On Monday, the reading in Denver dropped from 86 degrees in the afternoon to 35 just seven hours later, he notedd.

Behind the front a travelers' advisory was issued in northern and central Colorado as strong gusty winds in the sheer mountain passes produced drifting snow.

Hunters were warned to be alert for suddenly colder weather and ranchers were advised to protect young and weak animals overnight from cold rain and wind.

Backyard gardeners scrambled to cover their plants, stores broke out snow shovel displays and city street crews across the state checked snow-removal equipment in advance of another winter season.

In Houston, swamped Monday by 7 inches of rain, searchers found the bodies of Gustavo Meza, 9, and Terry Androin, 16, in bayous where they had been swept after falling into drainage ditches.

An unidentified 14-year-old who fell off a raft in southwest Houston was still missing, and a 17-year-old pregnant woman, Josephine Quintanilla, drowned Sunday night in San Antonio when her car was submerged in high water.

Houston firefighters used an air boat to rescue 30 students from a school bus whose driver ignored bystanders' warnings and drove into an intersection submerged in 5 feet of water, fire department spokesman Ken Robinett said.

Police cordon off a home in Fort Wayne, Ind., Monday after three bodies were found. Police said the triple homicide occured sometime over the weekend. A 2-year-old girl was found alive.

Toddler rescued from home where parents, brother died

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — After her father, mother and brother were bludgeoned to death, a 2-year-old girl wandered around the home for two days, playing with toys, bleeding from an assault and possibly trying to awaken her dead family, officials said.

The victims — a Fort Wayne journalist, his wife and an 11-year-old son — were discovered Monday at their home, dead from "severe head injuries from a blunt instrument such as a bat," said Allen County Coroner Roland Ahlbrand. He called the murders "bizarre" and "at best confusing."

Police said they recovered "a bloody baseball bat," believed to be a murder weapon, from the toddler's bedroom. They had no suspects or motive in the case.

Dan Osborne, 35, editorial page editor of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel since April; his wife, Jane; and their 11-year-old son, Ben, were killed Friday night as they slept, Ahlbrand said.

Osborne's daughter, 2-year-old Caroline, underwent surgery Monday at an unnamed Fort Wayne hospital to repair damage from a sexual assault and was in serious condition, said a police source who asked not to be identified. Calls today to all four Fort Wayne hospitals showed no patient listed as Caroline Osborne.

Caroline was found in her room playing with toys Monday morning after spending more than 48 hours with her dead parents and brother, Ahlbrand said. The victims apparently had been attacked in their sleep, he said.

The two-story home on the city's southwest side showed no signs of forced entry or robbery, police spokesman Thomas R. Engle said.

"We have every indication that there was nothing stolen," said Engle. Television sets, jewelry and money were visible.

"The motive here is what concerns me," Ahlbrand said. "I have three family members brutally slaughtered and a 2-year-old who was left to walk about the house for two days bleeding, with her dead family about her.... "What manner of man was this? Or what manner of men was this?"

The family was found when T. Craig Ladwig, an associate editor of the News-Sentinel, went to the house after Osborne failed to show up for work at 7 a.m.

"When he is an hour late and doesn't call, there was no doubt in my mind that something grave had happened," said Ladwig, who knew Osborne for six years and considered him a calm, steady editor. "He was kind of a man for all seasons.

"I saw both cars in the driveway. I went up and knocked on the door and heard no dog barking. That was enough for me to call police," Ladwig said.

Osborne, dressed in shorts and a T-shirt, was found lying in his blood-stained bed with his dog, who also was bludgeoned, police said.

Osborne's son, also in shorts and a T-shirt, was on the floor at the foot of the bed in a zipped-up sleeping bag, while Mrs. Osborne was found in a downstairs room, lying face down with her nightgown pulled up to her waist.

Ahlbrand said he did not know Monday whether she had been sexually assaulted, but would perform autopsies today on Mrs. Osborne and her son. He had performed an autopsy on Osborne Monday.

"It looked like she was injured and tried to get away. Blood was here and there around the house," according to Ahlbrand.

Engle said the toddler had been wandering around the house and may have disturbed the bodies trying to awaken family members.

Neighbors said the last time they saw the Osbornes was about 7 p.m. Friday, when Ben was mowing the yard. One neighbor, Connie Phillips, said she spoke to Mrs. Osborne about 9:30 a.m. Friday.

"Everything seemed fine then. She didn't mention anything was wrong," she said.

Stewart Spencer, executive editor of the News-Sentinel, said he said he was not aware of Osborne or the newspaper receiving any threats.

U.N. free to move, diplomat says

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly opens its 38th session today in the wake of a U.S.-Soviet dispute that prompted a U.S. diplomat to say the organization is free to move out if it believes the United States is a poor host.

U.S. Ambassador Charles M. Lichenstein, in response to Soviet complaints, said Monday that the United Nations was welcome to move its headquarters from the United States if it was unhappy with its hosts.

"We will put no impediment in your way," Lichenstein told the U.N. Host Country Relations Committee. "The members of the U.S. mission to the United Nations will be down at dockside waving you a fond farewell as you sail into the sunset."

U.S. mission spokesman Joel Blocker said later Lichenstein's comment "should be understood as a response to a deliberate provocation, not as any new departure in U.S. policy."

Soviet delegate Igor Yakovlev on Monday accused U.S. officials of "actions which have made it impossible for the head of the Soviet delegation to come take part" in the three-month assembly session. He questioned U.S. fitness to host the United Nations and said it had "grossly flouted" its obligation to allow unimpeded travel by diplomats to and from the U.N. headquarters in New York City.

The United States has been the United Nations' host country since 1945 and contributes a quarter of the annual U.N. budget of about $750 million.

The governors of New York and New Jersey last week forbade Soviet diplomatic flights from landing at their New York and Newark international airports to protest the Soviet downing of a South Korean airliner with 269 people aboard on Sept. 1. Moscow then canceled Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's trip to the United Nations.

Gromyko will be absent from the assembly for the first time since he became foreign minister in 1957.

A Soviet diplomatic source confirmed that a group of Soviet delegates sidestepped the ban on Soviet flights by arriving in New York aboard a Sabena Belgian World Airlines jet Monday afternoon. It was not known how may Soviets arrived.

A State Department spokesman, Joe Reap, said there would not be any comment on the arrival of the Soviets.

The assembly was scheduled to start this afternoon with a simple majority vote for a new president to replace Imre Hollai of Hungary. The two candidates to head this year's session are U.N. Ambassador David Hepburn of the Bahamas and Vice President Jorge Enrique Illueca of Panama.

Following the elections, the assembly's seven working committees of the whole were to meet to elect their chairmen, and after that the assembly itself was to elect 21 vice presidents.

President, vice presidents and working committee chairmen make up the steering committee which will meet later in the week to recommend an agenda from a list of 142 proposed subjects. The assembly will then adopt an agenda based on the list.

The proposed agenda includes disarmament, human rights, economic development, child welfare, protection of prisoners, prevention of international terrorism, Palestine refugee relief, and troubles over the Falkland Islands, the Middle East, Afghanistan and Cambodia.

Next Monday, President Reagan will open a three-week policy debate which also will include addresses by Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, head of the 101-nation nonaligned movement, and President Francois Mitterrand of France.

In place of Gromyko, the chief of the Soviet U.N. mission, Ambassador Oleg A. Troyanovsky , will head Moscow's assembly delegation and speak in the policy debate next Tuesday.

Before this week is out, the United Nations expects to get a new member — the Caribbean island state of St. Christopher and Nevis, which became independent of Britain at midnight Sunday.

Lichenstein made remarks in response to an 'attack'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Here are excerpts from remarks made by U.S. Ambassador Charles M. Lichenstein to a U.N. committee Monday after a Soviet delegate challenged U.S. fitness to be host of the world body:

"...The Soviet representative has made reference to the fact that my government is showing itself to be an unworthy host, obviously conspiring to violate its obligations. This is a palpable falsehood.

Lichenstein

"...If (in) a judicious determination of the members of the United Nations, they feel that they are not welcome and they are not being treated with the hostly consideration that is their due, then the United States strongly encourages such member states seriously to consider removing themselves and this organization from the soil of the United States. We will put no impediment in your way. The members of the U.S. mission to the United Nations will be down at dockside waving you a fond farewell as you sail into the sunset."

Later, the U.S. Mission issued the following statement:

"Ambassador Lichenstein's remarks this morning in the United Nations Host Country Relations Committee should be understood in the broader context in which they were made. He was responding to a hostile attack by the Soviet delegate who charged, among other things, that the United States was not a suitable host country for the United Nations because it was conspiring to violate its obligationsto the U.N. The same theme, it should be recalled, was touched on in the Tass statement last Saturday which announced that Foreign Minister (Andrei) Gromyko would not be attending the session of the U.N. General Assembly that begins tomorrow.

"Ambassador Lichenstein called these charges 'a palpable falsehood,' as indeed they are. The United States believes that, in making arrangements for Mr. Gromyko's safe and prompt arrival here, it is fully living up to both the letter and the spirit of our obligations as a host county.

Negotiators reach compromise on War Powers Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional and White House negotiators have hammered out a compromise proposal allowing President Reagan to invoke the 1973 War Powers Act to regulate how long U.S. Marines will remain in Lebanon, sources say.

The tentative agreement reached late Monday would quell a confrontation that had been building between Congress and Reagan over U.S. military involvement in the Lebanese government's battle with Syrian-backed Druse militia.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., who was not part of the negotiating team, was considering the compromise today. He has been intent on getting a war powers resolution passed, but sources warned that he already has killed one compromise effort.

The sources, who spoke on condition that they not be identified, said the president had agreed to a war powers resolution which would state that he should have invoked the act once two U.S. Marines were killed by fire from Lebanese religious factions on Aug. 29.

The Vietnam era War Powers Act sets a 90-day clock running after which U.S. troops in danger of being caught in hostilities on foreign soil must come home unless Congress has given its approval to their continued presence overseas.

Another key provision of the compromise calls for Congress to declare its approval of Reagan's decision to maintain a force of 1,200 Marines as part of the multinational peacekeeping force now in Beirut.

The tentative agreement gives Reagan 18 months before any additional congressional endorsement would be required, sources said.

That puts off any further controversy over the Marines' presence until after the 1984 presidential election.

Negotiating the agreement, according to the sources, were White House aides Kenneth Duberstein and Richard Darman, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr., R-Tenn., and Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Reagan originally balked at setting a deadline or triggering the act, saying the Marines are not the specific target of any of the religious factions fighting in Lebanon. four Marines have been killed and more than 25 wounded since the fighting in Beirut intensified late last month.

But Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, O'Neill and other Democrats said the act was automatically invoked when the first two Marines were killed by a Lebanese mortar explosion.

Byrd and other Democrats have introduced their own War Powers resolution, and Baker said he had prepared a draft resolution which he had been considering introducing today.

Canadian cold front hits state

By The Associated Press

Autumn arrived early in Texas today as a Canadian cold front blew into the state, dropping temperatures across the Panhandle and bringing the promise of scattered showers and thundershowers as it marched across the state.

The mercury dipped into the upper 40s in Amarillo before dawn as northerly winds gusted to near 45 mph across the Panhandle. The front was expected to drop temperatures to unseasonable lows as it moved southward.

A flash flood watch was posted for Southeast Texas as more rain was forecast for areas already saturated by downpours of up to seven inches over the past two days.

Light fog settled across sections of East Texas, while low-level clouds covered a large portion of North Central Texas. Clear skies were the rule across the rest of the state.

Temperatures at 5 a.m. ranged from 48 at Amarillo to 81 at Brownsville and McAllen.

Winds had shifted to the north across the Panhandle at speeds of 30 to 35 mph. The rest of the state noted southerly winds at 10 to 15 mph.

The forecast called for cloudy skies, gusty winds and unseasonably cool weather across North Texas. Temperatures were expected to drop tonight and Wednesday across South Texas.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected through Wednesday.

Committee: 'Schools exist for learning'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Extra-curricular activities in Texas schools are gouging into time that should be spent drilling academics in the classroom, members of the Select Committee on Public Education told a convention of educational leaders.

"Schools exist for academic learning — not for developing football players for colleges or taking the speech club or school band on trips," said Susan Hopkins, a board member of the Corpus Christi Independent School District.

"There should be an academic slot time with no interruptions," she said.

Mrs. Hopkins and other members of the committee, handpicked to make recommendations on education to the Legislature, participated in Monday's joint annual convention of the Texas Association of School Boards and Texas Association of School Administrators.

Committee members, headed by Dallas millionaire H. Ross Perot, have been the targets of some complaints for their sideswipes at the extra-curricular activities.

"Nobody is talking about doing away with extra-curricular activities, but we are hearing some testimony as to whether or not they should be reordered," said Will Davis, a member of the State Board of Education.

One solution, he said, would be to have all such activities pushed back to the end of the school day.

Ms. Hopkins said the state also must devise another method of awarding teacher pay raises, rather than using seniority and college degrees.

"The taxpayers will not support a system that rewards only longevity," she said.

Many teachers are against so-called "merit pay," saying there is no way to evaluate teacher effectiveness and that most evaluators aren't competent to pass judgment.

"The idea makes them very, very nervous," Mrs. Hopkins said. "The teachers believe that principals are not good evaluators — that they don't have the time or the talent for it."

About 82 cents of every education dollar in Texas goes to pay the salaries of teachers and school administrators, Mrs. Hopkins said.

"The state cannot afford the present system of automatic step increases (in salaries)," she said. "There has to be another method of evaluation.

"Principals probably also should be placed on a system that rewards for outstanding leadership," she said.

Lucas may raise county's taxes

MONTAGUE (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas may have achieved nationwide noteriety with his claims to have murdered 150 women, but to residents of this North Texas town where he sits in jail, his presence means a possible tax increase.

The costs of bringing the Virginia-born drifter to trial are adding up to 1 percent of this rural county budget.

"They ought to just kill him without a trial. After all, he confessed to all those killings," one woman told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "...We're already taxed too much in this county."

County Judge Tom Brown acknowledges that he has heard similar sentiments.

"A lot of people don't understand the system," he said. "They don't understand why, if somebody confessed in public to all these murders, we're here spending all the taxpayers' money to defend him. We have some people who have had a hard time adding all that up."

Brown and the county commissioners must decide within the next few weeks whether to raise county taxes to pay for Lucas' defense and other costs expected from his murder trial in the slaying of 80-year-old Kate Rich of nearby Ringgold. The case is one of six Texas slayings in which Lucas has been charged.

The commissioners had set aside $3,225 in their 1983 budget to pay legal fees of all indigent defendants.

But in the first two months after Lucas was arrested, the county paid about $7,600 in fees and expenses to Donald Maxfield, the Wichita Falls attorney appointed to represent Lucas.

Passerby saves man clinging to underside of Houston bridge

HOUSTON (AP) — A passerby who happened to be a certified diver plunged into cold floodwaters and persuaded a man clinging to the underside of a bridge to submerge himself so he could be pulled to safety.

Jesse Owens, 26, held his head in an air pocket for nearly an hour Monday after falling off an inflatable raft in Brays Bayou about 10:30 a.m.

The southwest Houston bayou, which usually flows 20 feet below the bridge, had risen to within inches of the structure as a downpour dumped as much as seven inches of rain on the city.

An off-duty policeman somehow noticed Owens' plight and clung to his hand through a drain in the bridge, firefighter Gary Bourgeois said. Bourgeois said several people ran to a nearby fire station and told officers of Owens' plight.

Bourgeois said he did not learn the policeman's name.

Firefighters were calling to Owens through the drain when Van A. Vick, a Harris County surveyor, saw a crowd gathering at the bridge and went to investigate.

Vick said he offered to help.

"There was another man there who had some scuba equipment," Vick said. "I said, 'Hey, I'm a certified diver. I've been diving for 12 years now.' I said, 'Hey, I'll go.'"

The idea, Vick said, was for him to dive into the water, swim a few feet through the thundering current, and tie a lifeline around Owens' waist. But firefighters said the job was as much psychological as physical — he would have to persuade a man who was out of the water and breathing to re-enter the torrent.

"If he panics, all he's going to do is swallow a whole lot of water and we may lose him," Bourgeios said he told Vick.

Vick took four tries and 15 minutes to cover the six feet from the side of the bridge to Owens.

Houston suffers through more rain

HOUSTON (AP) — Tornadoes in May, a hurricane in August and a torrential downpour this week have been among storms that have saturated Houston with 44.4 inches of rain this year, about a foot more than the average by this date, officials said.

Ron Stagno of the National Weather Service in Houston said Monday the three storms were spawned by different scientific phenomena.

He said Monday's thunderstorms, which dropped as much as seven inches of rain in some parts of Houston and caused flooding that killed at least three people, were formed south of San Antonio Sunday.

The storm was "just one of those systems that form in the midlevel atmosphere," Stagno said.

Hurricane Alicia, on the other hand, was born over the Gulf of Mexico, drawing its strength from the heat in the unusually warm waters there.

May's tornadoes spun off when an unseasonable burst of cool air moved into the area from the north, Stagno explained.

The storms of 1983 brought Houston's rain total to 44.4 inches as of Monday afternoon, about 12 inches above the average for this time of year.

The heaviest southeast Texas rainfall during Alicia was 9 or 10 inches, compared to 7 inches Monday, according to the National Weather Service.

Texan seeks to block countries' financing

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A South Texas congressman introduced a resolution in the House of Representatives Monday to block the Export-Import bank from giving more federal financing to Mexico and Brazil until the General Accounting Office can examine the legality of the proposal.

Rep. Bill Patman, D-Ganado, a second generation Texas congressman who serves on the House Banking committee, said the Export-Import bank informed Congress on Aug. 17 that it is planning to extend $500 millions in loan guarantees to the government o Mexico and $1.5 billion to the government of Brazil, as part of an international effort "to shore up finances of these two countries."

Patman said he is asking that the House adopt his resolution stating that it is the "sense of the House" that the plan should be subjected to regular checks and careful evaluation rather than being rushed through the Congress.

In recent days the matter has been studied by both the House and Sente Banking committees. Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., has introduced a somewhat similar resolution in the Senate but his is not as limiting as Patman's.

The House acted upon no resolutions Monday but is expected to do so later this week.

"Congress has only 10 days to review a transaction of this magnitude," said Patman. "The Bank has not listed the specific exports that would be financed by the loan guarantees as required by law."

Present law requires that any loan or financial guarantee or combination thereof which exceeds $100,000,000 include a detailed description of the purposes of the transaction, said Patman. "The Export-Import Bank says it needs the guarantees in conjunction with other creditor countries and multilateral institutions as well as commercial banks to provide a total of $9 to $10 billion financing."

Gramm to announce candidacy for Senate

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, will announce his candidacy for the U.S. Senate in College Station early Thursday morning and then will tour major Texas cities that day, concluding with a speech in San Antonio.

Gramm is running for the seat presently occupied by GOP Sen. John Tower, who recently announced that he would not run for re-election.

Tower, 62, who appears to be weary of the burdens of his office, is anxious to vacate his seat before he gets too old. He is considering carving out a new career as a teacher or as a consultant on military matters.

Gramm, an economist and budget expert who authored two budget bills in the House in the first two years of the Reagan administration, joined the Republican party when House Democrats ousted him from a budget committee post because of his collusion with Republicans on budget cuting issues.

Officers play war games to keep peace

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is no movie. High-ranking Army officers play computer games here — war games. They simulate real crisis conditions or learn from historic battles of the past. It's all "just in case."

By RICH KIRKPATRICK

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — In a stone mill by a rushing trout stream, the U.S. Army's brightest officers come to windowless rooms and practice for war.

They sit at sophisticated computers and fight intense, imaginary battles against the enemy.

The outside walls are layered with lead to prevent any eavesdropping or leakage of sensitive material from computer emissions.

"In military circles, this place is well known and agents are very aware of this place," says Col. Raymond Macedonia, head of war gaming. "We go on the basis there are agents in the area."

OFFICIALS TAKE seriously the possibility of a computer whiz tapping into the classified gaming system, as depicted in the popular movie, "WarGames."

Although the probability of that happening is low, "we don't sit back and say, 'This will never happen,'" Macedonia says. "We keep a vigilance all the time."

Opened in June, the Army's $1.5 million wargaming center is housed in a building erected in the 1760s by Charles Wilson, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. The center is part of the U.S. Army War College, a premier training ground for selected officers on their way to earning their general's stars.

"THIS IS THE HIGHEST level the Army has," says Macedonia, 50, a soft-spoken man with advanced degrees in economics and psychology. He served in Vietnam and taught at West Point.

The college and center, along with the Army's Military History Institute and its Strategic Studies Institute, make up most of Carlisle Barracks.

The Barracks, founded in 1757, is the Army's second oldest post, ranking behind West Point.

The center sits on the main road through Carlisle, separated from the rest of the base by a branch of the Le Tort Spring, renowned for its trout. To passersby, it could be just another well-maintained, historic home in a lush, country setting.

INSIDE, THOUGH, ARE four floors of wood-paneled conference rooms and modern offices. U-shaped game rooms take up the second and third floors and are the heart of the center. Along the walls and on tabletops are maps of Europe and the Middle East, stenciled over with hexagonal zones on which to chart troop movements. Computer printouts of a war game's progress hang on partitions, dividing the blue army from the red army.

Two tabletops are covered with computer maps of Iran. Using a pencil-like probe, an officer can electronically move troops to various locations on the board. On the edge of the table are an array of commands, including the nuclear option.

Although some don't like to consider nuclear weapons for tactical fighting, the Army has to be prepared if the order should ever come, Macedonia says.

The computers are set up so that officers can deal with specific problems. Simulated field reports on a battle's progress will flash on the screen and the officer must react. The computer even sounds a buzzer when important events are occurring.

AT THE END OF the game, the computer will produce a printed report showing territory, forces and equipment lost and won, and how efficiently equipment and personnel were deployed.

But the games are not so realistic that the rooms fill with the sound and sense of battle, Macedonia says.

"We don't want them to get too engrossed in the idea they are in a field environment," Macedonia says. "Because war games are not the way the battle is going to be fought. We're trying to analyze problems for flexibility of mind."

Although Europe remains the traditional focus, there are games for Central America, Korea, and the sea routes north of Norway.

TO HONE THEIR FIGHTING skills, officers can play historical games. One recent day, a game using German Gen. Erwin Rommell's North Africa campaign was on one of the screens. Maps of the area along with troop positions could be called up, as could text of Rommell's journal. Game players could follow the campaign as fought by Rommell in World War II or could pose "what if" questions to create different endings.

"There's a lot of emphasis on creativity," Macedonia says.

Over the years, war gaming has come in and out of vogue with U.S. military leaders. It fell from favor in the 1960s when leaders felt the country was moving toward unified military services and the focus shifted to political-military regional assessments. But gaming was restored in 1976 after the Vietnam War had persuaded leaders that operations were more important.

In the wake of the failed mission to rescue the hostages in Iran, the U.S. chief of staff, Gen. Edward C. Meyer, decided in 1980 it was time for a separate gaming center, both for commanders from the field and students on their way up.

HE WANTED A "MORE effective, rigorous, analytical, systematic response" to crises in the future, says Macedonia.

As a result, for the first time, the Army has created an elite corps of military strategic planners. After graduation, 10 colonels spend two years assigned to the War College, but are sent around the world to work with senior field commanders. Afterward, the colonels spend their careers in planning and report directly to the deputy Army secretary for operations.

The 10-month War College curriculum, which includes extensive exposure to war games, is offered to 250 colonels and lieutenant colonels chosen each year by a special military board. In addition, each year 400 students take correspondence courses and come to the college for two weeks during the summer.

Playing with the machines will not automatically produce brilliant officers, Macedonia says.

"NOTHING GREAT AND wonderful jumps out at you. You can't push a button and have great wisdom befall you. It's nothing more and nothing less than a tool for use in a lab. It helps a professional do his job."

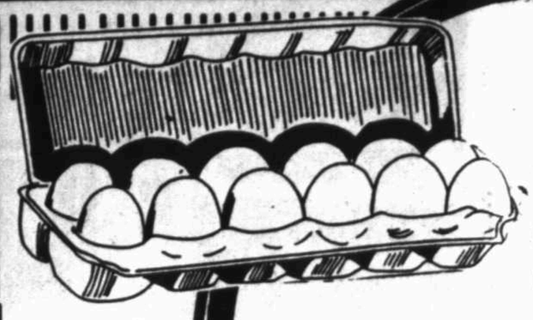

One lesson drilled here is that war games are not the real world, Macedonia says. "When you play these things, they begin to seem like reality."

But he notes that real war has too many variables and officers who develop the creativity to respond to the vagaries will have learned the point of their studies here.

Toxoplasmosis treatable, preventable

Neil Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: I visited a friend of mine recently and I found that she had gotten rid of her cat. When I asked her why, she said she is planning to start a family and cats can cause a disease called toxoplasmosis, which can be harmful to pregnant women. I'm confused about this and wonder if you could straighten me out. — Dorothy, New London, Conn.

Dear Dorothy: Toxoplasmosis is caused by a parasite that may be transmitted from cat feces. According to Dr. Jack S. Remington, of Stanford University Medical Center, women who contract the disease during pregnancy are at risk of having a child with birth defects. Some of the children born to infected mothers may even appear normal at birth; within a few years, however, a significant number may develop symptoms of toxoplasmosis.

Dr. Remington emphasizes that the infection is both preventable and treatable; the problem is to identify the newborn infants in whom the disease is latent so that appropriate treatment may be started. There is no vaccine available that can protect a woman from the disease.

If a family does have a cat in the home, someone other than the pregnant woman should be responsible for changing the cat litter. Other precautions include avoiding stray cats and wearing gloves while working in the garden.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that homosexual men have a greater chance of getting AIDS than most other people. Is there any way they can be screened to see who is most likely to get AIDS? — Peter, New York City

Dear Peter: Dr. Thomas C. Quinn, of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore, says that thorough, regularly performed physical examinations are the best screening procedure for the acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS). This would permit early diagnosis and aggressive treatment of any condition associated with AIDS.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have heard that people who commit suicide usually don't do so when they are at the lowest point in their feelings. This puzzles me. It would seem to me that people would be most likely to commit suicide when they feel at their worst. — Don, Newport, R.I.

Dear Don: Dr. Gary D. Wynbrandt, of the San Francisco General Hospital, says that suicide often occurs after a patient has hit the lowest point. It is when things begin to improve a little that the patient has the energy to carry out a plan he could only contemplate before.

For Mrs. B.Z., Jackson, Miss.: If I interpret your letter correctly, I would make two recommendations: First, go easy on giving aspirin to a child; it is not a completely innocuous product. Chronic use of aspirin can result in the same kinds of problems as does the acute ingestion of aspirin.

Second, arrange to have your youngster seen by your pediatrician. No child should be taking aspirin as regularly as yours has been doing without being carefully checked by a physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can very young children who have kidney disease get dialysis or even a kidney transplant to help them? — Jerry, Morgantown, W. Va.

Dear Jerry: Both dialysis and transplantation are possible in young children, although some physicians question its advisability. The choice depends in part on whether an organ is available from a living relative rather than from a cadaver.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 65 years old and whenever I get together with my friends, we wind up comparing notes on our arthritis. Why do older people get arthritis so much more often than younger ones? — Dan, Tulsa, Okla.

Dear Dan: According to Dr. Frederick M. Wigley, chief of rheumatology at Baltimore City Hospitals, age itself seems to lead to failure of the musculoskeletal system.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you explain what a doctor means by aspiration when he is talking about a breast lump and why aspiration is done? — Naomi, Akron, Ohio

Dear Naomi: Aspiration enables a doctor to tell whether a breast lump is filled with fluid or is solid. A needle is inserted into the lump. If it is filled with fluid, the fluid is withdrawn, can be analysed and the cyst is collapsed; if it is solid, an attempt is made to obtain a sample of cells so that a laboratory analysis may be made.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard of prostate cancer being treated by radiation that is different from the usual kind of radiation we hear about. Instead something is inserted into the prostate and gives off radiation. If this makes any sense to you, I would appreciate an explanation of what is involved and whether a man could expect to have normal sex after the treatment, which I understand may not be possible if he has the usual kind of operation. — Russell, San Francisco

Dear Russell: You are probably referring to a procedure called interstitial therapy that is being used to treat cancer of the prostate. The treatment consists of implanting tiny radioactive seeds directly into the tumor. This results in more concentrated doses of radiation than would be possible if the radiation came from an external source.

The seeds remain there permanently but do not give off any radiation after one year. Dr. Julian Rosenman, of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, says the treatment does not affect other parts of the body and does not pose a risk to other people.

The procedure appears to be as effective as radical surgery and preserves sexual function. However, you should realize that interstitial therapy itself involves major surgery.

For Lewis, Philadelphia, Penn.: Some of the factors implicated in the development of an ulcer include heredity, stress, certain medications (including aspirin), smoking and drinking. With appropriate treatment, an ulcer can heal in from two to six weeks; however, it often tends to recur unless the patient changes his or her lifestyle so as to reduce the risk.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Incense ritual attracts tourists

Soradaki, the art of incense appreciation, has been practiced in Japan since the 8th century, but only now is it becoming a tourist attraction, with public performances in Tokyo by experts.

In the ritual, the subtle scents of aloe woods are used to test participants sense of smell as they try to discern patterns from the many possible combinations.

We'll remember

Bertrand Russell once said, on the topic of friendship, "If we were all given by magic the power to read each other's thoughts, I suppose the first effect would be to dissolve all friendships."

We were reminded of Russell's wisdom by the recent refusal of France to join other major Western powers in enacting a NATO agreement banning flights by Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, for two weeks as a symbol of protest and repugnance for the shooting down of Korean Airlines Flight 007.

Bringing about a meaningful response to the massacre has been difficult at best. President Reagan has concentrated his efforts on building worldwide outrage to the incident, but in the absence of punitive measures about all that has built has been frustration.

Orchestrating a legitimate world response in the one body that is the notable world forum — the United Nations — was out of the question from the outset because of the Soviet Union's Security Council veto, which meant no condemnation resolution could be passed, and the tendency of Third World countries to follow the Soviet Union lead, or to bow to the Kremlin's every command.

Granted, the U.N. rule that allows Security Council member-nations to veto condemnations against themselves is a bit ludicrous. But that doesn't change the fact that France could exercise more prudence in choosing when to exhibit that it has backbone. Does not the word "ally" exist in the French vocabulary?

Perhaps President Mitterrand could learn something from a countryman of his. Baron de Montesquieue, a French philosopher, is quoted as having said: "Friendship is an arrangement by which we undertake to exchange small favors for big ones."

When the French next ask the United States for a favor, we will remember.

Web of poverty

Some encouraging news about efforts to fight poverty among America's blacks came out of Los Angeles last week. A group of black professionals there have made a serious commitment to assist less fortunate members of their own race.

This is a felicitous development that ought to be emulated elsewhere. It may be just what's needed to help break the cycle of black poverty. Despite years of government welfare programs, unemployment and poverty still afflict too many blacks.

By now, we all should have learned that ensnaring members of any race or ethnic group in the web of welfare only perpetuates dependency, destroys families, and eliminates work incentives.

Unfortunately, this lesson has been ignored by those who seek to continue flawed welfare programs in the name of helping the disadvantaged. But the black professionals responsible for organizing the "Adopt-A-Family Endowment" obviously recognize the welfare system has failed.

One of the founders made a special point of saying the new, people-to-people assistance program is not welfare. Instead, its primary goal is to motivate young people to achieve success. Under the program, the black professionals will serve as role models for poor children. The children's families will receive free medical, dental, legal, and other services, as well as $200-a-month for a year.

We hope programs similar to the "Adopt-A-Family Endowment" will be initiated in other cities. It's a promising way to move blacks from the poverty cycle to the opportunity cycle.

Another View: Presidential hardball

As Congress returned to Washington from its summer recess, the Reagan administration didn't waste minutes in taking the offensive in the battle over U.S. policy in Central America. In a speech containing some of the toughest language yet used in this debate, Under secretary of Defense Fred Ikle attacked congressional reluctance to underwrite administration policy and made it clear that Congress is to be the scapegoat for any leftist gains in the region.

The timing of the administration attack, made in a speech to a Baltimore foreign affairs group on the day Congress reconvened, couldn't have been more obvious. High on the congressional agenda is consideration of administration requests for $50 million to finance anti-Sandinista rebels in Nicaragua for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, and for supplemental military assistance for the governments of Honduras and El Salvador. Continued congressional balking, Ikle said, will lead to the permanent partition of Central America, leading to "a hostile confrontation of large military forces ... that could last for decades." And so far, Ikle said, "the blocking votes in Congress have denied the president the means to succeed."

In the face of such pressure from an administration obviously emboldened by the justifiable anger in this country over the Soviet downing of a civilian airliner, it won't be easy for the moderate center in Congress to hold to its sensible advocacy of negotiations, not greater military confrontation. But hold it must, for Congress is the only bulwark against the administration's headlong flight toward greater military confrontation in Central America.

This new administration broadside against those who seek a negotiated settlement comes, ironically, just as nine nations of the region have reached agreement on the basic principles for a settlement. A peace plan based on regionwide negotiations, disarmament and a thinning-out of foreign advisers on all sides has been announced by the so-called Contadora mediation group — Columbia, Panama, Venezuela and Mexico — and has been endorsed by the foreign ministers.

That agreement is an important step forward which the Reagan administration should embrace. Instead, it continues to pay the faintest lip service to the concept of a negotiated peace while increasing its military presence in the area and unleashing hard-liners like Ikle with words calculated to intimidate moderates fearful of being labeled appeasers. It's a divisive tactic that moves away from the diplomatic approach that is so necessary to avoid the military "solution" that is no solution at all.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Downing of Flight 007 expected

WASHINGTON — Locked in government files is some startling information that deepens the mystery of ill-fated Flight 007 — the South Korean passenger plane that was blasted out of the skies by the Soviets.

Jack Anderson

My associates Dale Van Atta and Michael Binstein have had access to secret and top-secret CIA, State Department and Defense Intelligence Agency material that provides important information on the incident. Here are the highlights:

— The Russians routinely try to lure U.S. military and intelligence aircraft into Soviet airspace so they can "legally" shoot them down. This is done by a jamming technique, called "meaconning," which confuses pilots trying to follow radio signals from the ground.

The Soviets frequently scramble the navigational signals along their borders, and several planes have been shot at after being "meaconned" into Soviet skies. The technique is so widely used that pilots who fly near Soviet borders are issued navigational maps with special warnings. They are told that they can't trust radio signals along the borders and "would be fired on" if they strayed over Soviet territory.

— Though President Reagan insisted from the beginning that the Soviets knew they were firing at a civilian airliner, the State Department doubted this at first. A highly confidential memo of Sept. 2 says that the State Department's special task force was "convinced the Soviets were sure they were firing on an American military plane."

— The State Department, in a secret cable to Seoul the day after the tragedy, said it didn't believe the presence of fervently anti-communist Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., on the doomed flight had inspired the shoot-down. The CIA reported that the Soviets could easily have intercepted telex communications indicating that other tempting targets might have been on the KAL flight, including Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

But the State Department cable to Seoul said: "We have no repeat no evidence that the presence of Rep. McDonald aboard KAL 007 (or the planned travel of Sen. Helms and others aboard that flight) was a factor in the Soviet attack on the aircraft."

— The Soviets may have had an agent among the crew of the KAL airliner that strayed deep into the U.S.S.R. in 1978. It was fired at and forced down near Murmansk. The Korean co-pilot, S.D. Cha explained at the time that the crew somehow became disoriented while flying. Their instruments indicated they were in a safe flight path outside Soviet airspace. A top-secret CIA report suggests that a Soviet agent in the crew may have been involved in the disorientation.

— An unreported attempt to shoot down without warning an unarmed Japanese P2-V reconnaissance plane on April 2, 1976, in the same area where KAL Flight 007 went down "reflects the traditional Soviet determination to protect their borders and air space against intrusions, whether real or perceived," declares a DIA report classified "Secret Spoke."

So it came as no surprise to the U.S. intelligence community when the Soviets sent a missile hurtling at a civilian airliner packed with 269 helpless passengers.

POVERTY PASHAS: The Agency for International Development was created to help the poor in underdeveloped countries to help themselves. But in Egypt, which is one of the top recipients of AID's largesse, the American taxpayers' money is being spent to give U.S. and Egyptian officials the luxurious lifestyle of desert potentates.

A recent audit by the AID inspector general details some shocking abuses in the allocation of U.S.-supplied automobiles. The investigation checked on 889 cars purchased for 36 separate AID projects in Egypt at a total cost of $8.4 million. Some examples of misuse:

— On one project involving Alexandria's sewage system, the investigators found that an Egyptian government official had commandeered an AID sedan for his personal use. Furthermore, U.S. consultants and their families "routinely utilized AID-financed vehicles for personal use, such as chauffeured shopping trips during business hours, school, home and other personal transportation," according to the audit.

— On the Urban Electric Distribution Equipment project, 17 station wagons were given to senior executives of the Egyptian Electric Authority, who had little to do with the AID-financed project. The main contractor had nine employees, "each of whom was assigned a project vehicle for his personal use, and retained custody of the vehicle after working hours."

— As many as 112 cars were completely idle, and had rarely if ever been used. Many damaged vehicles remained unrepaired, rotting away under the desert sun.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan aides split on Lebanon

WASHINGTON — White House chief of staff James A. Baker III wants President Reagan to stop fencing with Congress and instead concede that U.S. Marines are actually engaged in "hostilities" in Lebanon, but Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger is resisting it.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

That sets up another Baker-vs.-Weinberger dispute on top of their ongoing struggle over defense spending. Inside the White House, Baker argues that Marine casualties have removed any plausible argument that no "hostilities" exist, which means that U.S. troops in Lebanon fall under the War Powers Act. Although Baker contends Congress will not try to pull out the Marines, Weinberger wants no interference from Capitol Hill.

Deputy chief of staff Michael Deaver, as usual, supports Baker. But national security adviser William Clark has backed Weinberger.

NOT TOO TOUGH

William P. Clark, President Reagan's national security adviser, flatly but sorrowfully rejected a direct appeal from conservative Republican senators last week for help in their effort to toughen a Senate resolution designed as punishment for the Soviet Union's attack on Korean Airline Flight 007.

Clark told one conservative senator he wished he could help. What he did not say was that the pending Senate resolution was actually drafted in the White House — presumably under his direction.

Sens. Jesse Helms and Steve Symms led the effort to put teeth in the relatively mild resolution drafted by Senate leaders of both parties. One toughener: Call the Soviets on apparent repeated violations of nuclear arms treaties.

REAGAN'S TEAMSTER

Contrary to published reports that embattled Teamsters President Jackie Presser is persona non grata at the White House, he is expected to be there soon for a visit with Counselor Edwin Meese III during which he may talk to President Reagan on the telephone.

That runs counter to advice from two senior presidential aides: Counsel Fred Fielding and Communications Director David Gergen. Fielding predicts Presser will be indicted, which leads Gergen to plead against any Reagan contact with him.

But the presence of White House political aides Faith Whittelsey and Ed Rollins last week at a Washington reception for Presser signified another point of view: that the president should not abandon his staunchest supporter in the labor movement.

MONDALE'S LABOR CLOUT

Just how beneficial AFL-CIO support for Walter F. Mondale can be was shown at last week's New Jersey Democratic Convention when labor leaders applied muscle to state party leaders to make sure the former vice president did not lose out to "No Preference."

A day before the balloting at the Atlantic City convention, Mondale support was so sparse outside labor ranks that he figured to finish third behind Sen. John Glenn and "No Preference." It was then that state AFL-CIO officials passed the word that labor's promised $100,000 in contributions for state legislative races might not be forthcoming if its presidential candidate was embarrassed in New Jersey.

That picked up enough Mondale votes to finish a poor second behind Glenn, but embarrassingly close to the "No Preference" delegates. The gap widened a bit when "No Preference" delegates who specified a write-in choice were counted separately.

MAINE & WOMEN

The appointment of a 37-year-old New Jersey man as state education commissioner of Maine has strengthened belief that Gov. Joseph Brennan will not run for the U.S. Senate but will endorse Walter F. Mondale for president.

Prominent Democrats, including National Chairman Charles T. Manatt, have been pressing the governor to run an uphill race against Republican Sen. William Cohen as part of the drive to recapture Senate control. But if Brennan were serious, Maine political insiders expected him to take the opportunity to name a woman to the school job. Brennan could stand some fence-mending among women voters, where Cohen is strong.

The Senate's loss may be Mondale's gain. The possibility of the Senate race has stood in the way of Brennan succumbing to pleas from the Mondale camp to endorse him before the Oct. 1 straw poll at the state Democratic convention.

CHARLEY REESE

Corporate mentality destructive

100 corporations own about 57 percent of all industrial assets in America. These huge bureaucracies have swallowed up the Protestant work ethic, caused a decline in American productivity and innovation, and contributed to or perhaps become a victim of the decline in morality.

Charley Reese

Robert Jackall, a sociologist, interviewed over 100 managers in these large corporate bureaucracies and presented his findings in an article in the September-October issue of the Harvard Business Review. The findings are neither pretty nor encouraging but they do explain a lot about what's wrong with American big business.

The Protestant work ethic is founded on the assumption of individual responsibility. The old formula for success was: hard work plus right decisions equals rewards. Inherent in the philosophy was the same fidelity to truth — to correctly identifying reality — that is the foundation of science.

That is no longer the philosophical framework of the modern giant corporation. Here's what the managers told Jackall are the ingredients of corporate success: appearance and dress, self-control, being perceived as a team player, having "style," and having a patron in the corporate hierarchy.

Rather than scientific in their outlook, these managers have an almost superstitious belief in luck — that one's success or failure may hinge on factors beyond your control like some blip in the market or whether or not your patron succeeds or gets ambushed by a rival.

The core of managing — making decisions — was described this way: "Never make a decision if at all possible and if a decision has to be made, involve as many people as you can so that, if things go sour, you're able to point in as many directions as possible."

In other words, rather than being responsible, the key is to avoid responsibility. Jackall found that even chief executive officers play this game by making their instructions to subordinates deliberately ambiguous. If the subordinates succeed, the CEO takes the credit; if they botch it, they get the blame.

The gist of this bureaucratic code of conduct is to place as one's highest priority personal survival, even at the cost of truth, integrity, efficiency or the long-term financial health of the corporation.

The portrait painted by these managers and reported by Jackall is one of selfishness, materialism, and amorality. Quality of product is never mentioned. Everything — even employee and public safety — is subordinate to the goal of playing the game successfully by looking good, getting credit for successes and avoiding personal responsibility for mistakes.

He cited some examples. A large component which was in need of replacement was not replaced because the managers feared the CEO. When it failed and produced pollution, fines, and a government order to replace it, the decision was then "safe" because there was no choice.

Another CEO had a company in the conglomerate that was stuck with a long-term contract to supply natural gas at what became below-market rates. He sold the company. To induce someone to buy it and honor the contract, he agreed that another division would purchase gas from the company at above-market rates. Of course this division became unprofitable because of the agreement. To avoid responsibility for that, he fired the division president, thus blaming the president for something the CEO had forced on him.

If this is indeed the philosophy in big business, then it is easy to understand why so many products are shoddy, why there is so much emphasis on marketing and wizard finance, and why big business is so often eager to do business with enemies of the country.

It is a portrait of people who have only one God: success as measured by income, position and perks. It is a portrait of an economy in decline.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 20, the 263rd day of 1983. There are 102 days left in the year.

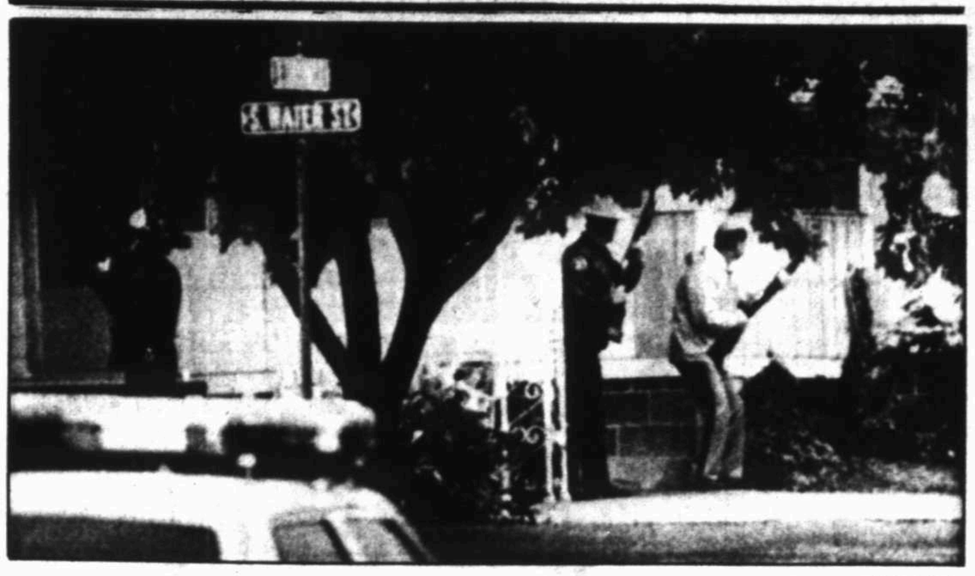

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 20, 1881, Chester A. Arthur was sworn in as the 21st president of the United States, succeeding the assassinated James A. Garfield.

On this date:

In 1519, Ferdinand Magellan, the Portuguese navigator, set out from Spain on a voyage to find a western passage to the Indies. One of his ships eventually circled the world.

Law officers stand ready Monday outside the Monona, Iowa, home of Les and Laura Ihde, who were taken hostage Sunday by two Wisconsin prison escapees. The 24-hour siege ended Monday afternoon when one of the prisoners released his final hostage, Laura Ihde, and surrendered to authorities.

Fugitive convict surrenders after confidential talk with official

MONONA, Iowa (AP) — A prison official's confidential talk with a gun-toting escapee about the inmate's "personal future" ended a 24-hour hostage drama that left a middle-aged couple "quite shaken up" but uninjured, authorities say.

Fugitive convict Leonard Specht Jr., 33, surrendered Monday after talking with Jim Mathews, superintendent of Wisconsin's penal camp system. Another escapee, Mark Bell, 21, had surrendered earlier.

"We talked about an awful lot of things," said Mathews, who had exchanged places with the woman held hostage and then talked with Specht for 30 minutes. "Some of them are very personal, and some were about Specht's personal future."

At about 5 p.m. Monday, Specht and Mathews left the home of Les Ihde, 49, and his wife, Laura, 48, where the couple had been taken hostage the evening before.

Ihde had been released earlier in the day after his captors apparently became concerned about a breathing problem. Shortly after that, Bell gave himself up.

Specht was armed with a rifle and shotgun which had been stolen Sunday from a couple near Bagley, Wis., authorities said, but Mathews said he never felt threatened.

"Specht was very tired and somewhat physically devastated," Mathews said. "These guys just wore him out."

Mathews said he has known Specht for two years.

"When they're in institutions and you're in institutions, you get to know them very well. There's a confidence that's built up," he said.

The two escapees walked away from the Oregon minimum security prison camp near Madison, Wis., on Sept. 11, and took the Ihdes hostage around 4:30 p.m. Sunday. Specht and Bell stopped their car on a dead-end street during a police chase and took the couple hostage in their own home.

The Idhes were "quite shaken up" but did not appear to be physically harmed, authorities said.

'Angel' rescues woman from mob

MIAMI (AP) — A modest "guardian angel" who rescued a woman when a mob of men surrounded her car says he's far from a hero — even though the incident left him so severely beaten that he needed surgery.

"I didn't do much," said John Ayer, 34, before surgery Monday.

"I just stopped and drove her away. I fall pretty far short of a hero."

Angela Vivier, 19, disagrees.

"I probably would have been killed; I know I would have been raped," said Miss Vivier. "No one else I ever knew would have done what he did. It was like having a guardian angel."

Ayer was recovering today at Baptist Hospital after a 1½-hour operation to repair his jaw, fractured in two places in the melee.

"He's going to be wired shut for about six to seven weeks," said Dr. Carl Melzer, an oral surgeon. "He was pretty badly smacked. They really pounded the poor guy."

Miss Vivier was driving home from work Saturday night when her car collided with a vehicle that pulled out in front of her on a dark road near a bar. Her small car skidded off the road and stalled.

Several men surrounded the vehicle, but when she asked them to call her father for help, one of the men tore off her bracelet, another took her purse and a third tried to climb into the car, she said.

"It was the most frightening thing that ever happened to me in my life," she said.

Ayer was driving by, noticed the commotion and stopped.

Reagan willing to alter U.S. position in talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the chill in U.S.-Soviet relations, President Reagan is telling allied leaders he is prepared to make limited changes in the American negotiating position in an effort to reach agreement with the Soviet Union to curb nuclear missiles in Europe.

"The changes under consideration are by no means earthshaking. They are mostly at the edges," an administration official said Monday in disclosing Reagan's offer to make modifications in letters to the heads of all the NATO governments.

The fact that Reagan is willing to alter the U.S. stand in the stalled arms control talks in Geneva is considered significant since relations with the Soviet Union are nearly frozen on most other fronts over the downing of a South Korean jetliner Sept. 1.

Officials declined to provide any details, saying the consultations with the allies had not been concluded. But they said there would be no yielding by the United States on its basic position in the talks.

That position is to set equal levels on Soviet missiles targeted on Western Europe and the new American missiles to be aimed at Soviet territory beginning in December. Also, officials said, the administration will keep insisting that 162 British and French missiles be excluded from any agreement.

In Bonn, a spokesman for the West German government said Reagan had written Chancellor Helmut Kohl outlining a modified U.S. position. The spokesman, Peter Boenisch, refused to provide any details, saying the German government had agreed to keep them secret.

In Budapest, Vice President George Bush told Hungarian leaders that the United States would continue the negotiations with Hungary's Soviet allies "in good faith" and as long as it takes to reach an accord.

And British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said even if NATO begins deploying new American missiles in December, the negotiations should be continued. In an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp., the British leader, who is visiting the Netherlands, said the deployment could be halted later if progress was made at Geneva.

The allies, eager to have an agreement reducing the risk of nuclear war in Europe, have been urging the United States to modify Reagan's stand. Last spring, the administration responded by backing off his "zero-zero" plan.

That would have required the Soviets to dismantle the more than 600 missiles they have targeted on Western Europe. In exchange, NATO would have shelved the planned deployment of 572 U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles beginning in December.

Still, the talks resumed Sept. 6 in Geneva with no indication of a breakthrough. The United States has vowed to proceed with the deployment unless there is an agreement.

A White House official said "flexibility" was the point of Reagan's letter to Kohl and the other allied leaders. Officials at the State Department said the consultation was undertaken partly at the behest of the NATO countries and that it was still going on.

U.S.-Soviet relations, uncertain at best, went into a tailspin when a South Korean jetliner was shot down over Soviet territory with 269 people, including 62 Americans, aboard.

Reagan denounced the Soviet action and demanded an apology and compensation for the victims' families. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko was barred from flying to the U.N. General Assembly session in a Soviet commercial plane. He responded by calling off the trip, which means he and Secretary of State George P. Shultz will not be meeting in New York.

Former officer charged with killing four people

SAN MATEO, Calif. (AP) — A former police officer was charged Monday with four murders, including those of three people found in Golden Gate Park in sealed steel drums.

San Mateo County District Attorney Jim Fox filed the complaint against Anthony "Jack" Sully, 39, a Burlingame electric shop owner.

Arraignment was scheduled for Oct. 4.

Fox said he would seek the death penalty against Sully, who authorities have said was involved in drugs and prostitution.

Sully already has been arraigned for the murder of Barbara Lea Searcy, 22, of Oakland, who was shot in the back of the head and then dragged from a vehicle for two miles, police said.

Her mutiliated body, from which most of the skin had been torn, was unrecognizable but authorities traced her identify from what was left of her fingerprints. The body was discovered Aug. 8 near Woodside, and Sully, a former Millbrae police officer, was arrested Aug. 25.

In the latest charges filed Monday, Sully is accused of killing Kathryn Barrett, 24, also of Oakland, and three people whose remains were found May 2 stuffed in two 55-gallon cement-sealed drums.

The three, Michael Thomas, 24, his common-law wife, Phyllis Melendez, 20, and Brenda Oakden, 19, of Huntington Beach, were shot in the head.

Reagan names task force on family violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has named a task force to study family violence, which he described as "the darker side to family life in America."

"The terrible cost of this violence in emotional grief, shattered lives and more crimes in the future must be squarely faced," the president said Monday.

The panel will be headed by Detroit Police Chief William Hart.

Reagan announced the task force during a ceremony in tribute to Executive Women in Government, a group founded 10 years ago by 38 women to bring more women into government positions of authority and influence.

"I am exceptionally proud of the women who are making great contributions to achieving our goals," Reagan said. "Women are in top policy and decision-making positions throughout the executive branch, and yet they are by and large ignored by those who are claiming our record is not up to par.

"We have appointed more women to significant positions than any other administration," Reagan added.

Meanwhile, Attorney General William French Smith, at a news conference, said "family violence in America is a serious and complex crime problem."

Girl waits for results of tests to see if cancer can be treated

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A 12-year-old girl who is prepared to die "when the Lord gets ready for me" was in serious condition today as doctors waited for test results to show whether medical treatment for a football-sized tumor would save her life.

The tests — a CAT scan and a bone scan — were performed Monday at East Tennessee Children's Hospital to see if Pamela Hamilton's tumor has spread, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The Tennessee Court of Appeals will listen Wednesday to the family's objections, on the grounds of religious freedom, to treatments ordered Saturday by a juvenile court judge in Jacksboro.

The appeals court has blocked treatment until Wednesday, but has allowed doctors to run tests and give the girl pain-killers.

Larry Hamilton, pastor of the fundamentalist Church of God of the Union Assembly in LaFollette, says that only God, not doctors, can heal his daughter.

"I believe it's my right under the constitution to believe and live the way I want to," Hamilton said Monday.

Gang of thieves hit the jackpot

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A gang of thieves may have spent five years working on a way to rig a slot machine that paid out a record $1.7 million jackpot at Harrah's in Lake Tahoe, the machine's maker says.

Ray Pike, an attorney for International Game Technology, said Monday the gang opened two locked doors on the machine to get at a microprocessor board, possibly substituting the board or some computer chips just long enough to trigger the winning play.

The company's own chips were in place when the machine was inspected after the Aug. 19 jackpot.

Harrah's has recovered all but $200,000 of the jackpot. No charges have been filed and an investigation continues, state officials said.

Bridge built to carry less traffic

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — An Interstate 95 bridge that collapsed June 28, killing three people, was meant to carry one-third of the traffic that now uses it, says an engineer with the firm that designed the span 25 years ago.

Leonard Gersten also told the National Transportation Safety Board on Monday that corrosion was visible on the bridge and should have prompted further checks by state inspectors.

NTSB member Patrick Bursley said there was no evidence yet that traffic contributed to the fall of a 100-foot section of the bridge, which was designed for 30,800 vehicles daily. Preliminary reports say a weakened pin-and-hanger assembly could have caused the collapse.

Adoptive parent wants leave

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A federal mediator is to decide whether maternity leave must be granted to a clerk in a suburban tax office who adopted an infant last spring.

Carol Fezar has been staying home with her 8-month-old adopted daughter since May 31, when the Ambridge Borough Council rejected her bid for six months of unpaid leave and offered a 90-day leave instead. Council members said they didn't want to set a precedent.

Leopard captured in suburb

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A leopard was spotted in a washroon and then roamed through a Johannesburg suburb for more than three hours until police and zoo experts shot it with a tranquilizing dart.

Benoni, the suburb where the cat was found, is about 12 miles east of Johannesburg, and authorities said wild animals have not roamed so close to the city in almost a century.

A housemaid discovered the leopard in a servant's washroom, hid in her employer's car, and called for help until a neighbor's gardener approached with an ax. As he and two police officers peered into the washroom, the leopard leaped at them and dashed into some bushes.

The leopard led police on a three-hour chase that ended when pursuers cornered it in a yard. After being hit by one dart, the leopard ran in and out of a nearby house and then crept under a parked car.A second dart put the animal to sleep and it was taken to Johannesburg Zoo.

Satellite burns upon re-entry

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet satellite burned up in the atmosphere, more than a month after leaving the Salyut 7 space station, the official news agency Tass reported Monday.

It said the Cosmos 1443 satellite burned Monday after releasing a transport capsule with data from the space station which landed safely on Earth.

The satellite was launched March 2 and docked with the space station March 10.

The satellite was jettisoned from the Salyut 7 on Aug. 14 in a maneuver carried out by cosmonauts Vladimir Lyakhov and Alexander Alexandrov, who hooked up with the Salyut 7 on June 28, a day after being blasted into space aboard Soyuz T-9.

Soviet media have not said how long the two men will remain in space.

31 more die in Indian floods

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — At least 31 more flood-related deaths have been reported in three Indian states, and army and civilian teams have evacuated thousands of stranded people.

The flooding Ganges River inundated railroads and highways in four districts of Bihar state Monday, cutting off the areas from the rest of the country, the United News of India reported. The floodwaters also knocked down power and communication lines in some places, the report said.

In neighboring Uttar Pradesh state, authorities ordered evacuation of thousands of residents when an irrigation dam appeared near collapse, UNI reported.

Several parts of Assam state in northeastern India remained isolated, officials said, and the Brahmaputra River swamped scores of villages.

Mexico City banks guarded

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Police officials have assigned 600 sharpshooters to guard 77 banks in the metropolitan area to combat almost daily robberies in which corrupt former police are believed involved.

Carlos Armendariz, commander of the specially trained Judicial Police, said Monday that videotapes made during the robbery of $90,000 from two Mexico City banks last week showed two former agents of the police department's crime prevention division taking part.

Photographs and other information on the two men and thousands of other former police fired for corruption have been distributed to police throughout the country, to prevent their being hired by some other police force and for use in identifying criminals, Armendariz said.

Khomeini threatens oil flow

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is threatening to block shipments of crude oil from the Persian Gulf if major powers continue aiding Iraq in its war with Iran, the official Iranian news media reports.

"It should be announced to the world and stressed that if they help (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein more than they have done, their hands will be cut off from oil resources. If they help Saddam to attack our economic resources they will not see oil any longer. I hope that this will not be the case," Tehran radio quoted Khomeini as saying Monday.

Khomeini spoke to a commission headed by Kamal Kharrazi, head of the Iranian war information office, which is arranging a week-long celebration starting Thursday to mark the third anniversary of the war with Iraq.

There was no specific threat of how Iran would try to halt the flow of oil. Iran controls the eastern shore of the 12-mile-wide Hormuz Strait in the southeastern tip of the Persian Gulf, through which most of the Western world's oil imports from the gulf area pass.

Khomeini said the United States, France and the Soviet Union feared that consolidation of his Islamic republic in Iran would cut them off from the gulf region.

On Monday, France confirmed that it would proceed with plans to sell five Super-Etendard fighter jets to Iraq. Iran reportedly fears Iraq will use the bombers to block Iranian oil export routes through Hormuz.

Storms curtail 'frenetic' search for KAL's 'black box'

WAKKANAI, Japan (AP) — Stormy weather curtailed search operations today as the Soviet Union added an intelligence gathering ship to its fleet probing for wreckage from a South Korean airliner shot down over Soviet territory Sept. 1.

U.S., Japanese and South Korean vessels also are taking part in what appears to be an increasingly frenetic search, focusing on the "black box," or flight data recorder, of the 747 jumbo jet shot down by a Soviet fighter plane. The 269 people aboard were killed.

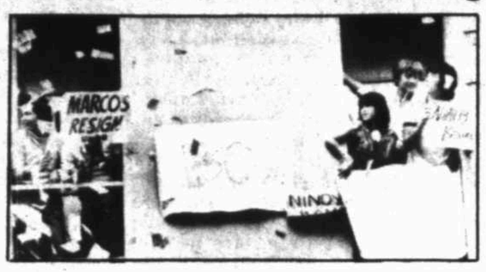

Officials hope the flight recorder would shed light on the incident, perhaps explaining why Flight 007, on a flight from Anchorage, Alaska, to Seoul, flew into restricted Soviet territory. The jetliner was hit by air-to-air missiles and crashed in the Sea of Japan near tiny Moneron Island, off the Soviets' Sakhalin Island.

Moscow claims the plane was on a U.S.-initiated spy mission, a charge denied by the United States. A Soviet air marshal was quoted today by the Communist party newspaper Pravda as saying the Korean pilot was coordinating his movements with a U.S. spy satellite to test Soviet air defense reactions.

Japan's Maritime Safety Agency said a storm moved in overnight from the southeast, with strong winds and rain that reduced visibility today from 12 miles to a maximum of three miles, sharply curtailing the movements of search vessels.

Anti-Marcos movement growing

Office workers displays signs calling for Marcos' resignation.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Stirred by the violent death of a man they might not have followed were he alive, thousands of Filipinos are joining a growing movement to end President Ferdinand E. Marcos' 18-year rule.

Many are middle- and upper-class people, traditionally pro-Marcos and pro-American, who have never before publicly expressed political sentiments. Now, they are joining students, clergymen, laborers and long-time opposition figures in passing out anti-Marcos leaflets and marching in street demonstrations.

Last Friday, thousands of office workers and businessmen demonstrated in the country's main financial district in a Manila suburb.

The activities are to culminate Wednesday with nationwide rallies marking a "national day of sorrow" over the death of opposition leader Benigno Aquino, assassinated Aug. 21 as he stepped from an airplane on his return from three years of voluntary U.S. exile. Security guards immediately killed a man the government claims was the assassin.

Wednesday is the 11th anniversary of Marcos imposition of martial law, which continued for eight years.

The Aquino family has opposed President Reagan's planned November visit because it would demonstrate support for Marcos, whom they blame for Aquino's death.

Marcos, in an interview with Cable News Network, said that if Reagan cancels his visit "it would be a slap in the face and it would affect Phillipine-American relations."

The assassination and the government's faltering investigation of the crime have given Marcos his greatest — some say final — political challenge.

"I don't think Mr. Marcos can ever recover completely from the events of August," said Randolf David, director of the University of the Philippines Center for Third World Studies. "Even if he remains in power for the next year or two years, I don't think things will ever be the same. I think we've started to live a post-Marcos period." Marcos' term ends in 1987.

Other Filipinos do not dismiss the president so quickly. Marcos retains and has often used broad powers to arrest those he believes are subverting the government, and he has been able to organize pro-government rallies which in the past have overshadowed opposition gatherings.

But Marcos, 66, has so far reacted to the assassination and the outpouring of public grief by secluding himself in his heavily guarded palace.

Adams pays dues

Midlander pursues that rainbow

Sports Special

By Bob Brundage

For the average professional golfer, it takes time to pay his dues before he reaches the money-making status of the Arnold Palmers, Jack Nicklauses or Tom Kites. It is a rarity for him to just step on the course and start winning. Some never do.

Midland has a golfer who is nearing the successful status, 1972 Midland Lee graduate John Adams, a fifth-year touring pro who is still looking for his first victory.

Though he has yet to win a tour event, Adams is finding it easier to compete in the Professional Golfers Association. His finishes are getting better each year and the payoffs are getting higher.

"It was difficult breaking in," said Adams after completing the one round of play in the first annual Green Tree Country Club Pro-Am. "I had some trouble the first couple of years and made only about $20,000."

Adams' biggest payday came last year when he finished in a tie for the Pine Hurst Hall of Fame title.

"I lost the playoff to Jay Haas on the second hole," he said, "and I've finished third and fifth the last two weeks, not counting Vegas."

The third place finish was a tie in the B.C. Open with Wayne Levi and a check for 17,400. He wasn't too thrilled about his Las Vegas Golf Classic performance, 30th for only $3,628.

THERE ARE a couple of reasons which make breaking into the PGA so tough: cost and unfamiliar courses.

Without a sponsor, the average beginner on the tour has trouble makings expenses. He has to come up with air fare, hotel bill, food, equipment, etc., and it can make for a pretty rough time.

Even with a sponsor, there is still the big bill to pay: home living expenses. Adams' expenses are growing with his income. He and his wife Jane have a 10-week old bady, "Benjamin Craig. We named him after my dad and brother," he said.

"I've pretty much had the same group of Midland sponsors (who prefer to remain anonymous)," said Adams. "They've stayed with me since I've been a pro, paying my travel expenses."

Since every golf course has its own special quirks, getting to know how to play them is another time-consuming factor that can make for long stretches of practice and play.

"When I was new, I didn't know the courses and now I do so I don't have to prepare as much each week. I can take a couple of days off. It's very difficult. You have to go through a lot of learning. It's tough to get on the tour and tough to stay on."

WITH A few high finishes under his belt, Adams is now starting to reap some of the profits and benefits of the professional sports world.

"It's getting a little better," he said. "If you can get a good contract with a golf company, you can make some good money. I've got a contract with Ping for my golf clubs and one for clothes with Izod."

Tournaments like the GTCC Pro-Am help supply the golfer with an extra income. Though the purses aren't as extravagant as those on the major PGA tour stops — only $5,000 to the winner at Green Tree — they have guaranteed purses for the golfers to make it worth their while.

"I play about 10 to 15 of these Pro-Ams a year," said Adams.

And, he can afford more vacation time. Since a professional golfer isn't likely to use his sport as a form of relaxation, other forms of fun need to be found.

"I like to fish and hunt birds (not the sub-par variety) said Adams. "I like to fish in Florida, fresh water bass."

WHEN ADAMS was in high school he was the district golf champion as a senior and "won four or five intersectional tournaments," he said. And, he knew he would like a shot at the tour back then. "Every kid who picks up a golf club wants to turn pro," he said, "go out and compete."

From high school, Adams went on to Arizona State University. "I wasn't that good in college," said Adams. "I never really did that much. I played for the team but never did that well individually. I did win the state amateur title though."

Now all he needs is that first win on the tour. Maybe this year and, who knows, a Green Jacket before too long. Only time will tell.

Hinkle, Morgan, Fergus shoot 66s to tie

Green Tree inaugural Pro-Am proves a hit

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

When things finally concluded almost 10 hours after they had begun, the oldest champion wandered to the scoreboard.

Dave Marr was the last finisher in what became a marathon day of golf, but a fruitful one, as three Professional Golf Association golfers tied for the first ever Green Tree Invitational Pro-Am.

The tie was between Lon Hinkle, Dr. Gil Morgan and Keith Fergus who all carded five under par 66's. Morgan, who led at the break with a 31, bogeyed the 17th hole to set up the sister-kissing finish.

It was by all standards a success, as Green Tree accomplished exactly what it intended - bringing quality pro competition to the Midland area.

For Green Tree pro Warren Chancellor, the Invitational represented the culmination of a rather hectic eight weeks of preparation. "We're off and running now," said Chancellor. "All that is left is to add up the scores. The course is in good shape, the weather was perfect. I'm more worried about the future than the present."

THE FUTURE of the Pro-Am seems secure. The pros had no complaints about the tourney, and the gallery exceeded the hopes of GTCC management. An accurate count was not available, but at least 4000 people must have trod down the lush fairways for this new experiment.

"They (the management) feel really good about it," said Chancellor. "Everything has gone smoothly."

GTCC Scores

Keith Fergus 31-35—66
Lon Hinkle 34-32—66
Gil Morgan 31-35—66
Chip Beck 33-34—67
Mrk O'Meara 33-34—67
Tom Kite 34-34—68
Joe Inman 35-33—68
Ron Streck 36-33—69
Dan Pohl 32-37—69
Tom Purtzer 33-36—69
John Adams 33-37—70
Rex Caldwell 35-35—70
Dny Edwrds 34-36—70
Dvd Edwards 35-35—70
Mark Hayes 35-35—70
Tom Jenkins 34-36—70
Dave Marr 34-36—70
Len Thmpsn 34-36—70
Chris Coody 33-38—71
Jim Simons 36-35—71
Larry Mize 37-35—72

As for the competition itself, the battle was surprisingly hard-fought considering the obvious fatigue many golfers must have felt after a late-night journey to the Tall City. Equally draining was the temperature, which soared into the high 90's and probably helped Green Tree recoup financial losses with concession sales.

It was a hot day and a hot race for the money, which will be divided three ways between Fergus, Morgan and Hinkle.

In the amateur competition, which was a two-man best ball format, the team playing with pro Dan Pohl fired an incredible but handicap-aided 111 total, 31 under par. That team consisted of Pohl, Scott Peterson, Charles Smith, Jim Sale and Darrell McDonald. Pohl pocketed an additional $2,500 for that feat.

Finishing a stroke behind the leaders were Chip Beck and Mark O'Meara, two young golfers that appeared to be the best bets behind Morgan. O'Meara sank birdie putts on 17 and 18 to move up to tie Beck. Beck had a pair of deuces on the front nine to pace his game.

Green Tree tour representative Tom Kite got back on track after tendinitis had sidelined the vet for three weeks. Kite eagled on 18 to finish two strokes back at 68, tied with Joe Inman. Inman ripped the back nine for a three-under 33 to move past the lump of players clustered at 69 and 70.

MIDLAND'S JOHN Adams, an early leader with a 33 on the front nine, had an average back nine to finish with a one-under 70. Adams owns the Green Tree course record of 62.

Charles Coody, the veteran pro responsible for much of the LaJet Classic's success (LaJet, in Abilene, is the next tour stop this week), was impressed. "It was real nice and a lot of fun," said Coody, 46. "It seemed well organized. I'm sure if they do this again this will be a valuable learning tool for them."

Coody had a 33 on the front nine and was in the thick of the competition, but faded on the back nine to finish with an even par 71. "I came apart like a $2 suitcase in the rain," joked Coody. Coody's team of Franz Weis, O.C. Elliot, Jack Hunnicutt and Art Schmidt took second place in the team competition with a 116.

Dawgs' 'Tower' controls traffic

During this long week of preparation for Odessa Permian, you fully expect to see the Midland High football team jogging down Cuthbert Street in formation and chanting, "I'm an Airborne Ranger."

Of course, General James Welborn will be leading the formation and calling cadence. MHS should be called Cadets instead of Bulldogs.

They should practice on a runway instead of a football field and Coach Pat Culpepper needs to hire two additional air traffic controllers to his staff. If Midland High had been passing a year ago, air controllers would have had no problems in finding jobs. It's no wonder Pat installed "The Tower" last year at the Bulldog training site. He knew what was coming.

AS PROMISED, it rained following MHS' 14-13 upset over Lubbock Estacado last Thursday. Welborn missles must have punctured a cloud.

West Texas football fans haven't seen a passing attack like this since Wahoo McDaniel tried to get a date with the homecoming queen. Now that was a pass attack.

Welborn has thrown for over 700 yards in three games. He could quit football today and win the District 4-5A passing title. If he could run, he would be All-State. But by his own admission, he couldn't run out of sight in a day. "I'm the pregnant turtle," he says.

But he can sling that pigskin and the results are usually devastating for Bulldog opponents. They can score from anywhere on the field. Welborn has already topped last year's total passing effort of 572 yards.

And those receivers. Ohhh — those receivers! Allan Foret could catch a football in the middle of an earthquake. Four times this year he has caught passes after the defensive back touched the ball first. He should be a basketball center. He loves jump balls.

Todd Shiplet makes defensive backs want to take up "streaking." After all, they get caught enough with their pants down. And tight end Darrell Davis thinks the game should be played with a cape on. He thinks he's stronger than a speeding locomotive.

THE BULLDOGS are a decided underdog this Friday when they face Odessa Permian, another Mojo team ranked high in the state. But the Panthers better bring their pass defense with them this time and work clothes.

Defensive backs in District 4-5A usually act like Fridays are for West Texas picnics. Few teams throw the ball. Preparing for Midland High has to be like a one week mini-camp. You don't see any other teams do what MHS does best.

Still, the key for MHS will come from its defensive team. As goes the defense, so will go MHS this year — despite all that Airborne Ranger jazz.

I'm just not ready to write anything good about the MHS defense yet. I jumped on the defense last week, but not as hard as Culpepper. They responded with a fine showing against Estacado, a highly ranked Class 4A team.

TURN IN one more showing this week, and then we'll talk defense. MHS needs another fanatical performance on defense.

But Culpepper was excited following the response of his team to the Estacado challenge. In response to a question about this week's Permian game, Culpepper said, "It CAN happen. I just know it CAN happen."

If it DOES happen, it will be time to bring in the clone-making doctors. But every clone must be equipped with "I'm an Airborne Ranger" recording. It seems only right.

Different, perhaps, but very, very good.

If the Miami Dolphins didn't know how good, they do now.

The Raiders blanked Miami until the issue was no longer in doubt Monday night as Los Angeles joined the Dallas Cowboys as the National Football League's only unbeaten teams with a decisive 27-14 victory over the Dolphins.

"Each of the guys on the defense is a little off-center and there's a great deal of pride," said Alzado, a 34-year-old defensive end. "Your teammates beat you up trying to get to the ball. It's a very overpowering defense."

Indeed, it is. The Raiders have given up only three touchdowns and just 30 points overall in beating Cincinnati, Houston and Miami. All three of those TDs came after Los Angeles had assured itself of victory.

THE DOLPHINS, who had only nine first downs until the final few minutes Monday night, got their touchdowns on a 6-yard pass from rookie quarterback Dan Marino to tight end Joe Rose with 2:29 remaining and a 2-yard pass from Marino to Mark Duper with 20 seconds left.

Before that, nothing. As a result, the defending American Football Conference champion Dolphins fell to 2-1 and the Raiders improved their incredible Monday night record to 20-2-1 since prime-time football came into being in 1970.

"Whenever you see the highlights to a game or anything written, it's usually what we do offensively," said Alzado. "They say offense sells tickets and defense wins championships, and that's basically true.

"How much excitement is there in seeing someone knock the stuffing out of a ballcarrier? For violent people, it might be exciting, but for the average person, it's not."

Probably the key play of the game occurred late in the third quarter. Naturally, it was provided by the Los Angeles defense.

THE RAIDERS led 13-0, but the Dolphins were in a third-and-six situation at the Los Angeles 21-yard line. Miami quarterback David Woodley went back to pass, but was separated from the ball by blitzing linebacker Rod Martin.

Rookie Los Angeles defensive end Greg Townsend scooped the ball up at the Raiders' 34-yard line and dashed 66 yards for a touchdown, making it 20-0 and all but sealing the outcome.

"I saw all these black jerseys (his teammates) and the ball and somebody yelled 'Pick it up,'" recalled Townsend, a fourth-round draft choice of the Raiders who attended Texas Christian University. "And I did.

"I guess they gave it to me because I run a 4.62 40. All I saw then were the goalposts and I just ran. I want people to know that Townsend is here to stay. This was a cherished moment. I'm still very excited about the whole thing."

The Raiders had taken their 13-0 lead on a 2-yard run by Frank Hawkins with 2:53 remaining in the first quarter and a 14-yard pass from quarterback Jim Plunkett to tight end Todd Christensen with just nine seconds left before halftime.

Greg Pruitt's 5-yard scoring run with 5:15 left in the game made it 27-0.

"We couldn't generate anything offensively and our defense couldn't stop them," said Miami Coach Don Shula. "That's about as thorough as you can get beat. The Raiders were a much better team than we were tonight."

DESPITE BEING sacked five times, Plunkett completed 11 of 15 passes for 162 yards and wasn't intercepted. He attempted only one pass in the second half. Los Angeles running back Marcus Allen was the game's leading ground gainer with 105 yards on 22 carries.

"It's been a good night," said Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores. "I wish we could get the Commissioner to let us play all of our games on Monday nights.

"We knew coming into this game that there were two undefeated teams and one wasn't going to be after the game. They are an excellent team, a class team, but we played a tough football game."

Donley emerges as newest star

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING (AP) — A new star may have emerged for the talent-rich Dallas Cowboys in their 28-13 National Football League victory over the New York Giants Sunday.

The name on the lights of the Texas Stadium scoreboard was Doug Donley, a second round draft pick from Ohio State in his third year as a Dallas wide receiver.

Subbing for injured Tony Hill, Donley caught six passes for 88 yards and displayed the speed that earned him his nickname: "White Lightning."

"It was no surprise how well Doug played because he has been doing that all summer," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

What was a surprise is that Landry used Donley instead of Butch Johnson to substitute for Hill, who had a sprained arch.

Donley said "I've played in the Rose Bowl and been in a lot of big games but this one tops it all. I think I proved I'm not the No. 4 receiver."

Donley, the fastest of the Cowboys, only had five receptions in two years playing in the shadow of Drew Pearson, Hill and Johnson.

Johnson had no comment on his "demotion." He caught one pass during the victory which was fashioned by a strong effort from the Dallas defense particularly Dextor Clinkscale.

Clinkscale had no visions of touchdown when he intercepted a Scott Brunner pass in the fourth period.

"I knew I was gone, I didn't know how far but I knew I was gone," said Clinkscale.

It turned out an exhausted Clinkscale lasted 68 yards for a touchdown which kept the Cowboys the only unbeaten team in the National Conference.

"If it had been 10 more yards he wouldn't have made it," said cornerback Everson Walls.

On the ensuing kickoff, the Giants fumbled and Michael Downs picked up the ball and strolled 10 yards into the end zone.

The Cowboys scored two touchdowns in 12 seconds.

"We were in a full blitz and I read the play, caught the ball and struggled ahead," Clinkscale said.

Dallas is now 3-0, having come-from-behind in each victory.

Texas embarrasses ambitious Auburn

Football Notebook

After what Texas did to Auburn, the War Eagles may grow beards and change the school name back to Alabama Poly. The Longhorns went into the game a two-point underdog, smarting from injuries to key players (Jeff Leiding and Todd Dodge) and indecision in regard to the quarterback.

Auburn, one of the preseason choices to finish No. 1, had no such worry. That, as it turned out, may have been the difference. It was the fourth quarter before Pat Dye decided that Randy Campbell wasn't going to get the job done. If he had gone with Pat Washington earlier, it might have been a different game.

Texas, it turned out, had two quarterbacks that could get the job done and another (Dodge) in sick bay, who is supposed to be better than either Rob Moerschell or Rick McIvor...

CBS MIGHT not have been anti-Texas in its TV commentary, but the point was made repeatedly that just because Auburn lost its first game, it didn't mean the the Tigers (How can they be both War Eagles and Tigers?) couldn't win the national championship. Penn State, 1982 edition, was pointed out as a case in point. Testimony from one coach suggested that a team could lose up until the fifth game and still be voted No. 1.

No mention was made of the Longhorns, although late in the game, probably after many phone calls, CBS did admit that beating Auburn would be a big win for the Longhorns....

Speaking of No. 1s, it has been a bad start for the pretenders. Tennessee, Penn State, Oklahoma, Michigan and Notre Dame, all No. 1s on somebody's preseason poll, have lost...

Nebraska remains No. 1, which perhaps proves it's not only when you lose that counts, but when you win, as well. Nebraska rode to No. 1 by beating Penn State. But how much impact would a win over damaged goods like Penn State have today?... —TED BATTLES

Oilers may change quarterback

Houston Oiler Coach Ed Biles talked about changing quarterbacks Monday and General Manager Ladd Herzeg declined to talk about changing coaches in the wake of Sunday's 40-28 loss to Pittsburgh. Biles is in the final year of a three-year contract but his job could be coming under closer scrutiny after Sunday's 10th straight regular season loss...

Home finally turned out to be sweet home in the third weekend of NFL play.

In 13 games, including last Thursday night's game but excluding Monday night's, eight of the home teams were winners. In the preceding two weekends, involving 24 games, only six home teams won.

Baseball

A Texas baseball player will advance to national tryouts for next summer's Olympic Games in Los Angeles. In regional tryouts over the weekend, Bill Bates of the University of Texas was selected for the national tryout camp at Louisville, Ky. The tryouts were at Baylor University here.

Golf

Fuzzy Zoeller said he will not change his projected schedule in order to protect his narrow lead in golf's money-winning race. "I've got my program down pretty good," Zoeller said. "Play two or three, take some time off. It's worked pretty well for me this year. So, I won't change it here at the end of the year."

Boxing

Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini will defend his WBA lightweight championship against Bobby Chacon in late November or early December.

Mancini, who knocked out Orlando Romero in the ninth round his second defense of the crown Thursday, carries a 27-1 record with 21 knockouts into the fight against Chacon, 52-6-1 with 42 knockouts. Chacon formerly held the WBC's featherweight and superfeatherweight titles.

Rangers mix it up on flight

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Rangers Mickey Rivers and Mike Richardt exchanged punches on a commercial flight that carried the American League club from Los Angeles to the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport on Sunday night, team officials said.

Several punches were thrown, but the fight was broken up quickly by Manager Doug Rader, according to The Dallas Morning News.

Richardt called the brief battle a misunderstanding.

Funck remains at QB

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — University of New Mexico football Coach Joe Lee Dunn says Buddy Funck will remain the Lobo quarterback despite the team's loss of its last two games.

"I'm disappointed in our offense, but I'm certainly not disappointed enough to give up. We don't plan to make any changes," he said.

Cook's Pantry offers good home cooking at reasonable prices

If you have an appetite for a good, home-cooked meal, there are several things that you can do. One would be to take the time and effort to decide what sounds good, go to the grocery store if you do not already have that food at home, amd then you can begin to prepare your meal. By the time you do all of that, you're just not hungry anymore. A second alternative would be to either use your influences to get an invitation, or else just hope someone asks you over. But that is usually just a blind shot in the dark. Or you could make the intelligent choice and take a short drive to Cook's Pantry, 2001 N. Big Spring in Midland.

Cook's Pantry is now open under the original owners, Chester and Ysleta Stone. Cook's Pantry offers you good, home cooked meals at a reasonable price. Meals are served buffet style, and you are always welcome to come back for seconds. Most foods are made from scratch right in our kitchen, and our foods are so delicious, you would not expect to find them anywhere but in your own kitchen.

For example, most of our soups are made fresh from scratch. There are always at least three meat items on the lunch menu, one of which is alwayspressure-fried chicken. Our mashed potatos are not instant, they are made from real potatos. You will also find an excellent country style gravy every day at Cook's. And our lunch menu changes daily, so you can eat at Cook's Pantry every day without having to worry about eating the same old food day after day. The salad bar is not large, but it is adequate and probably very similar to the salads you make at home. Lunch at Cook's Pantry is served from 11:00 to 2:00, Monday through Friday.

Breakfast at Cook's Pantry is something you definitely won't want to miss. Breakfast includes fresh buttermilk biscuits, hash browns, grits, bacon, and both link and patty sausage. Country gravy is available at breakfast also, along with scrambled eggs, eggs fried to order, and evenpancakes are included with breakfast. Once again at breakfast, as always, second are welcome. And next time you come in, try our fresh home-made cinnamon rolls.Breakfast is served from 6:00 to 10:00, Monday through Friday, and 6:00 to 11:00 on Saturday.Cook's Pantry is closed on Sunday.

Cook's Pantry is conveniently located only a short drive from downtown. The quick buffet service makes it perfect for the businessman. It is extremely easy for you to get from downtown to Cook's Pantry, relax and eat, and make it back to work in less than an hour. Imagine, you can get a break from the fast food syndrome and eat a good, delicious, wholesome home-cooked meal for lunch and not be late getting back to work! They even have a convenient drive-in window for orders called in to go. You just can't beat the service, food, convenience, or price at Cook's Pantry.

Skiing season will be here soon, and those of you who snow ski will likely be heading up to Ruidoso this fall or winter. It is good to know that even when you are far away from home, you can still get a good home-cooked meal. The Whispering Pines Restaurant in Ruidoso is also owned and operated by the Stone family. Chet Stone, Richard Stone and his wife Ann, and Brian Stone, all take the same care in preparing your meals as Chester and Ysleta do in Midland. The quality and taste of the food is delicious in Ruidoso just as it is here. If you like Cook's Pantry in Midland, you'll love the Whispering Pines! And being able to enjoy a delicious home-cooked meal when you are that far away from home just makes it that much better. Relax and enjoy your vacation, and let Whispering Pines do the cooking for you. Tell all of your friends about Whispering Pines and remember us when you go to Ruidoso.

So next time you feel like a home-cooked meal, but don't feel like taking the time or effort to cook, come to Cook's Pantry. Cook's offers delicious home-cooked meals at a reasonable price. Louie Hernandez is the chef at Cook's Pantry, and many of you may already know the quality of food Louie prepares. Louie has worked at some of the better restaurants in Midland, and offers you only the best cooking available.

How could you get a home-cooked meal if you go somewhere that is not home-owned and operated? Of course, Cook's Pantry is home-owned and operated by Chester and Ysleta Stone. Save yourself the time and trouble of cooking, and let us worry about the cooking. We are open for breakfast from 6:00 to 10:00, Monday through Friday, and 6:00 to 11:00 on Saturday. Lunch is served from 11:00 to 2:00, Monday through Friday. Cook's Panty is closed on Sunday. Call-in orders may be made at 683-1463. Snow skiers, remember also the Whispering Pines Restaurant this fall or winter when you visit Ruidoso. Either place, you get a delicious, wholesome, home-cooked meal at a reasonable price.

The staff at Cook's Pantry is eagerly waiting to serve you a delicious, wholesome, home-cooked meal at a price you can afford. Why bother to cook your meals when Cook's Pantry can do it for you? Cook's Pantry is located at 2001 N. Big Spring in Midland. They are open 6am to 10am, and 11 am to 2pm, Monday through Friday, and 6am to 11am Saturdays. Call-in orders may be made at 683-1463.

Going quackers

Will it be a birdie or an eagle? It didn't matter to the duck, who seemed to go quackers over Darrell McDonald's chip on the fourth hole during Green Tree Country Club's Pro-Am tourney Monday.

Broker asks court to block lawsuit

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midland stockbroker who left Merrill Lynch, copied that firm's documents and account material and swung over to EF Hutton & Co. is asking federal court to block any suit Merrill Lynch might file against him. Instead, he wants the controversy to be placed before the New York Stock Exchange for arbitration.

Mark Doom, the former Merrill Lynch account executive now with EF Hutton in Odessa, says he is "soliciting customers he serviced while employed at Merrill Lynch."

Prior to resigning, he photocopied "information relating to his own customers for use after he left Merrill Lynch." The documents, says the petition, contain "trading information relating to the customers he had serviced...and is in the process of using (the) copies to continue servicing his customers."

Doom's petition notes that Merrill Lynch contends he has violated his employment covenants with the brokerage company and continues to do so. Doom maintains that the employment agreement is "void and unenforceable."

Doom surmises that Merrill Lynch contends he is liable to the company for "all profits which he may earn during the next 12 months by servicing customers he had while at Merrill Lynch." Those profits are estimated "to be not less than $25,000."

Further, Doom says Merrill Lynch will hold that he should be prohibited by court order from soliciting or servicing those clients and from using the customers' account information "which he now has and is in the process of using..."

Doom suspects that Merrill Lynch "is about to commence legal action" against him.

Instead of that, Doom is asking the federal court to compel Merrill Lynch to take the matter before the NYSE for arbitration. He notes the NYSE constitution and rules call for "any controversy" between a registered representative and NYSE organization to be settled by arbitration.

A similar situation in Midland was settled by arbitration almost two years ago.

In June 1981, eight Merrill Lynch account executives resigned from the company and went to a bullish competitor, EF Hutton. The next month, Merrill Lynch filed suit in federal court against the eight stockbrokers, claimed they breached contractual agreements and contended that it was damaged by $500,000. The eight former Merrill Lynch brokers were Gerald Nobles Jr., Stanley Rogers, William Wise, Craig Campbell, Steve Hambrick, M.W. Minces, Frank Maggio and Gloria Williams.

Merrill Lynch had sought a court injunction to enjoin the brokers from contacting their former Merrill Lynch customers, from trying to transfer the accounts to EF Hutton and from using Merrill Lynch trade secrets. In addition, Merrill Lynch sought a return of the documents.

Physician continues in tradition of old country doctor

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

In this age of high technology and medical innovations, Dr. Allen Fisher views himself as the closest to the old country doctor one could get.

Although his days of taking out tonsils in his office and delivering babies at home have ended, Fisher, 72, said the philosophy of his practice remains the same.

He is a doctor of osteopathic medicine, a D.O. — different than and traditionally looked down upon by doctors of allopathic medicine, or M.D.s.

D.O.s are more rare.

Fisher is the only D.O. in town. His wife, Sue, is a doctor of osteopathic medicine in Stanton. Their patients call them Dr. Mike and Dr. Sue.

They are among a handful of D.O.s in the area.

"We're the minority group of the medical profession," Fisher said. "When I graduated from college, we were an odd breed."

Times have changed since the day he graduated from the Des Moines School of Osteopathic Surgery in 1951. His breed is more respected now — at least by law in Texas.

When he moved to Midland in 1966, he was met with expected rejection.

"When I first came out, all hospitals discriminated against D.O.s because we were a minority. What are there, 70 or 80 M.D.s against one D.O. here?

"I FILLED out an application (to be accepted to the medical staff at Midland Memorial Hospital)," he said. "They called me and very politely told me I couldn't join the staff. They didn't give me any reason other than the one I knew:

"With someone that was a minority as I was, you're going to have trouble with the majority — like them threatenin' to quit.

"Medicine, like all business, is dog eat dog. Not just for me as a D.O., but any new physician is going to be thought of as a threat."

Current law in Texas states no hospital, public or private, may discriminate against a physician based on his academic medical degree, according to the American Osteopathic Association (AOA), which celebrates National Osteopathic Medicine Week this week.

"I could get in, now if I wanted," Fisher said. "But what do I want with more business? I've got more than I can handle right now."

During the last few years, Fisher has tried to limit his practice so he could retire. He no longer works in the emergency room of Martin County Hospital District in Stanton; he no longer takes checks or insurance at his office — he sees patients on a cash basis only.

STILL, HIS waiting room in an old home on West Wall Avenue is constantly alive.

"I really thought making myself so darn independent would stop some of the patients from coming — but it hasn't," Fisher said, with a chuckle.

According to the AOA, there are more than 1,600 D.O.s licensed to practice medicine in Texas. AOA statistics indicated more than 10 percent of the American population turn to osteopathic physicians for health care.

"With tongue in cheek, from my point of view, all good physicians, M.D.s or otherwise, practice osteopathic medicine because all good M.D.s will seek to find the cause and that's not what their theory of practice is," Fisher said. "Their theory of practice is to treat the symptom. Treat the cause and all symptoms disappear."

Dr. Allen Fisher, D.O., uses traditional medical treatments practiced by M.D.s, as well as osteopathic medicine.

Many training aspects of M.D.s and D.O.s are similar, Fisher said. In simple terms, the difference is a D.O. would treat a patient with lumbago, or inflammation and pain of the lower back, with a manipulative treatment. "An M.D. would give them a muscle relaxant or Tylenol or something," said Fisher.

Osteopathic manipulative treatment (OMT) is a method of correcting individual segments of the spine, body muscles, bones and joints in relationship to other parts of the body, Fisher explained.

"WE CLAIM any pain or disease shows itself in relation to the spine," he said. "People could think OMT is a cure-all — but it is not. It's just one means of making your patient feel better. After I've given my patient a treatment, inevitably they'll say 'Gosh, I feel better already.' It's only one means of therapy that we use to treat various pathological diseases.

"Very often, and I'm not exaggerating, very often a patient that can barely make it down the hall, in the next few days, he'll be walking perfectly."

According to the AOA, similarities between the two schools of medicine in Texas include the following: both are licensed to practice medicine by the Texas State Board of Medical Examiners; both have required premedical education at an accredited college or university; both have had a full four years of medical school training; both take the same qualifying exam, FLEX, before they are granted a license to practice medicine; and both use traditional methods of treating and diagnosis.

The State Board of Medical Examiners is composed of three public members, three D.O.s and nine M.D.s, according to the AOA.

"PEOPLE GET confused, it's been a source of confusion for a long time, because of the word 'osteopathic.' That means 'sickness of the bone,'" Fisher, who began his practice in small towns in East Texas, said. "We use, or most of the young people who come out of osteopathic college, practice medicine just like M.D.s. There is very little osteopathic medicine done."

According to some M.D.s, many enter schools of osteopathic medicine when they are denied acceptance into medical schools. Fisher said he had a choice of entering either.

The Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine in Fort Worth reported 569 graduates since 1974. Fifty percent of those practice in communities of less than 25,000; 10 percent practice in towns with populations of less than 5,000.

According to Fisher, that, too, reflects the feeling of the country doctor with whom he identifies.

"You have to learn to do your own diagnosing when you don't have lab facilities," Fisher said. "You don't have any kind of lab to use as a back-up for telling you what you have to do when you're out in the country. But country places need physicians, too."

HIS NURSE is not registered nor is she licensed. He trained her himself.

Eliminating malpractice insurance wasn't a difficult decision for Fisher, he said.

"We doctors have been sued so much for things that when I came out of college were considered acts of God. We're fathers, husbands and prone to make mistakes just like any other human. If you were to take out insurance, you would have to be an expert in the field.

"Patients don't sue as much in a small country town — I think it's because they have more respect for the physician. They really know him."

Besides, cutting out insurance means lower fees for his patients, he said.

"When I was young, we could get pretty flip and say things like 'How many lives did you save today?'

"The point is, you save some —and that's what makes it so satisfactory. It makes it worthwhile to find your niche in life. Money is just a part of it. Doing what you always wanted to and finding it so worthwhile is what it's all about.

"It took me a long time to prove myself," Fisher said with a mischievous wink. "But I feel, generally speaking, that the average M.D.s — although they may not admit it — I think I've earned their respect."

Brouhaha over destination of 'border aid' continues

EL PASO (AP) — The Reagan Administration has stood by its claim that a $95 million loan guarantee given to a Houston company is "border aid," even though Global Marine Inc. only may spend $14 million along the impoverished border.

"We are satisfied that the money is applicable to the border...the entire amount," Vice President George Bush's press aide, Meredith Armstrong, said Monday.

The federal Maritime Administration's guarantee will cover 75 percent of $126 million in bonds that Global Marine plans to sell to private investors, said Wilbur Martin, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Transportation. The Maritime Administration is part of that department.

Global sought the guarantee in 1979 for bonds to finance construction of three rigs in Pascagoula, Miss.

Last week, Armstrong included the $94.8 million guarantee in an announcement that the administration had expedited $101 million in aid applications for border communities in four states.

She said the money will pay for building a heavy-weather drilling rig at the Marathon-LeTourneau shipyard in Brownsville, and will employ 500 workers.

But executives with Global said the company only has a 20 percent, or $14 million, share of the $70 million rig that Marathon-LeTourneau is building.

Global budget and analysis manager Noel DeWinter said Friday that his company "probably won't" spend any bond money in Brownsville, the El Paso Times reported Sunday.

The company "can put it in our general coffers because that's where it came from in the first place," he said.

The money will help finance Global's overall operation, including construction of six deep-water rigs in France, Finland and Singapore, DeWinter said Friday.

Global has no other major construction projects underway or planned, he said.

However, Global vice president Dick Vermeer said Monday that the "bond money will not be used for construction outside the U.S.

"That financing has already been arranged," Vermeer said, referring to the six overseas rigs that will cost Global more than $300 million.

The Brownsville project "is not part of the government (financing) program," but Global's 20 percent share in that $70 million rig largely depended upon the Maritime Administration's guarantee on the bonds, he said.

"I doubt the company would have gone forward with the rig in Brownsville without that funding," Vermeer said.

That assessment contradicts DeWinter, who said Global "would probably build that rig anyway."

Ms. Armstrong said she understood Global would spend all of the money in Brownsville when she made the border aid announcement last week. She said she based her announcement on information from Martin at the transportation department.

Have heroes really ridden into the sunset?

When nature removes a great man, people explore the horizon for a successor; but none comes, and none will. His class is extinguished with him. In some other and quite diffferent field, the next man will appear.

— Ralph Waldo Emerson

A friend once related part of a conversation he overheard in a movie theater. As a couple dragged their child down the aisle to watch a science fiction movie, the youth wailed, "Why can't we see a Western, Dad?" His father replied, "Cuz John Wayne's dead, son."

For years people have lamented the disappearance of the old-fashioned hero. At one time, during any given prime time hour, the television screen was filled with cowboys, cops, doctors or private investigators. Now it seems viewers have to choose between sitcoms or nighttime soap operas.

Superman has been replaced by Pacman, Matt Dillon by John Ritter. Where once the familiar faces of Adam, Hoss and Little Joe Cartwright graced the covers of school tablets, now lunch boxes bear pictures of Smurfs. Where have all the heroes gone?

The hero of old — tough, streetwise, independent — has been replaced. Maybe it is due to the rise of feminism, maybe because the peace-seeking flower children of the 60s are now the middle-aged decision makers at the networks. Whatever the reason, the old-time hero who could solve any situation with a Colt or a well-placed punch no longer exists.

Today's heroes are a different breed. They don't have the muscles and strong builds that were a prerequisite in previous years. They don't have rugged looks and calloused hands. The heroes of our children realize violence accomplishes nothing, even if it does assuage our sense of what is fair and just. They solve problems with logic and persistance — believing a left hook is not as valuable in today's society as intelligence and reason.

Neither is today's hero a loner. He prefers a life of friendship and shared love to one of righteous solitude. His trusted companion is no longer a horse, but someone with whom he can share his life, someone he can talk to, someone who understands.

Today's hero is sensitive, compassionate, gentle, understanding and not afraid to express emotion. And unlike that hero of old, he is fun-loving. He doesn't take himself too seriously and even allows himself to make, and admit, mistakes.

Today's heroes can be found everywhere. Rather than being unreachable and unrealistic stereotypes, today's heroes are the best of all of us. They set the examples our children should follow. They are honest, caring human beings. They are us.

Heroes aren't extinct. They've simply taken on the guise of ordinary people. They bring out in each of us the desire to be the most we can be, to admit mistakes and go on, to strive for our goals, to respect our fellow man. Our heroes have adjusted to a society where understanding and cooperation, not frontier justice, are necessary for survival.

Our children are fortunate to have heroes that can be their friends, not their superiors. Our children can become heroes, not simply admire them.

The heroes haven't died. They've come down from the clouds to mingle with the mortals.

Stockbroker asks court to block potential suit

In July 1981, U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton ordered Merrill Lynch and the eight brokers to "promptly" arbitrate their differences and to turn the documents and lists of clients over to the registry of the court.

In January 1982, a NYSE panel in New York arbitrated the controversy. The following February, Bunton ordered the documents returned to the eight stockbrokers. The case was dismissed in September 1982.

In the Doom-Merrill Lynch case, Bunton is to consider motions from both parties at noon Sept. 29 in federal court at Waco.

In recent similar cases, Merrill Lynch "has vigorously opposed applications to compel arbitration," notes the petition.

Merrill Lynch's account executive agreement states that "none" of the company's records are to be removed from Merrill Lynch's offices and that any former Merrill Lynch stockbroker "will not solicit any of the (Merrill Lynch) clients" served by that broker for one year from the date of termination.

The petition noted that Merrill Lynch's revenues exceeded $5 billion and that it employs almost 10,000 account executives, according to that company's 1982 annual report.

Woman files suit against hospital

A Carlsbad, N.M., woman who claims a physician prescribed sulfa drugs to treat her bladder problems after she said she told Ector County Medical Center Hospital personnel that she was allergic to the drugs has filed suit in federal court in Midland against the doctor and the Odessa hospital.

The woman, Freda Lucas, is complaining that Dr. Phillip McElvaine prescribed the drugs Azogantrisin and Gantrisin after she had reported to the hospital's emergency room in December 1982. She was then complaining of bladder problems and frequency of urination, the suit's petition says.

As a result of taking the medication, Ms. Lucas says she developed an allergic reaction and was hospitalized from Dec. 10 to Dec. 15.

She is seeking an unspecified amount of actual and exemplary damages from the hospital and the physician. She is accusing both of negligence.

Money missing from deposit bag

In a theft complaint to city police, Earl Keller, an employee of the O.G. Wilson store in Midland Park Mall, said $900 was missing from a bank deposit bag. It is not known when the money disappeared.

In a burglary complaint, 54 cartons of cigarettes were reported taken during a break-in at Westgate Grocery, 4904 W. Interstate 20. A front window had been broken to gain entry.

In another burglary complaint, Chris Rodriguez of 311 E. Elm Ave. told police he returned home Monday night to find a door open and $530 in jewelry and stereo equipment gone.

Highway department will accept bids for projects

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation will accept bids until mid-October on projects in Midland and Pecos counties.

The Midland County project involves an estimated $2,472,651 worth of grading and structure work along 5.633 miles of Loop 250 in Midland. The work is near the east urban limits of the city, the department states.

Project engineer is Bill Burnett of Midland and the work is expected to take 220 working days to complete. Bids will be accepted until 9 a.m. Oct. 12.

The Pecos County project involves an estimated $961,318 worth of reconstruction work along 7.050 miles of FM 1776 in Pecos County, between the Ward County line and FM 1450. Project engineer is Bill Glenn of Fort Stockton.

Woman remains jailed in death

A 33-year-old eastside woman remains jailed under $50,000 bond in connection with the Monday morning shooting death of Donald Ray Johnson, 805 S. Baird St.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set the bond on Ernestine Marion of 1107 E. Magnolia Ave. Johnson, 24, was found shot in the head with a small caliber weapon at Airline Mobile Home Park on West Highway 80 shortly after 1 a.m. Monday.

He was pronounced dead an hour later at Midland Memorial Hospital. Sheriff's deputies believe the shooting stemmed from a domestic argument. A .22-caliber pistol was taken into evidence at the scene.

Fat facts detailed in study

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Most American women who responded to a survey said they're not enthusiastic about sex when they are overweight, but they also say those extra pounds don't seem to quash their partners' desire.

The survey outlined at the American Dietetic Association's annual convention recently also showed the average married woman gains 23 pounds by her 13th wedding anniversary. Her husband expands by 18 pounds over the same period.

Reva T. Frankle, a dietician and nutrition director for Weight Watchers International, detailed results of a questionnaire published in April's edition of the weight-loss group's monthly magazine.

About 15,000 readers — 97 percent of them female — responded by mail to questions drawn up by Richard B. Stuart, Weight Watchers' director of motivational research. Stuart concluded bulges are more of an obstacle to wives' libido than to husbands' desire.

Asked to rate the quality of their marriages, respondents who said they are unhappy were on average 50 pounds overweight.

Those who rated their marriages "perfect" carried 24 excess pounds; those who were "content" were 37 pounds too heavy.

Stuart couldn't determine whether marital bliss causes weight gain or whether the pounds pile up when the marriage gets rocky, Ms. Frankle said.

Seventeen percent of the respondents said their partners were no help when they launched a new diet.

"Another woman said, 'I'm ugly when I'm fat, but when I'm fat there's peace in the family. When I slim down my attractiveness makes him jealous, so it's easier to stay fat.'"

DEAR ABBY

Marriage that lacks fire ignites reader's response

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You are very perceptive, and your responses show a wonderful understanding of the human condition. However, your response to "Doing Nicely Without," the lady who had no interest in sex but had a good marriage anyway and wondered why, was unfair in my opinion.

Your response, "Maybe he gives at the office," was flip. It neglected to take into account that not all men are sex-starved, and her husband may have been perfectly content without sex.

She didn't say she denied him, only that she's not interested. If she participates out of love, while not physically inspired, what greater act of love can there be? And to place even a shadow of suspicion where none existed is unkind.

While the lady may not know what she's missing, my advice would be, "If it works, don't fix it."

Please, Abby, don't let one wet noodle outweigh the many bouquets you deserve for the great work you do. — TRUDY HUNT

DEAR TRUDY: Thanks, I needed that. Regrettably I assessed that letter as a put-on, and I responded in kind, which came off as very unkind to many irate readers who took it seriously. Mea culpa. Mea maxima culpa!

DEAR ABBY: First let me assure you that I am not some kind of nut or weirdo. I am an umarried male college professor in need of some information that, believe it or not, I cannot find anywhere else.

From my earliest recollections I have felt that my body did not match my psyche or emotional responses. In other words, I have all the feelings, instincts and desires of a woman. I hate to use that old cliche, "I feel like a woman trapped in a man's body," but nevertheless it expresses exactly how I feel.

I have never had any homosexual tendencies and the sexual experiences I have had with women have been very unrewarding. Living as I am in the wrong sex has become increasingly tormenting, and now I want to have a sex-change operation, but I do not know where to begin. Where is this operation performed? How much does it cost?

Because I do not want to have such information coming to my residence or office, I hope you will help me through your column. It may help others who also want to know. Thank you. — ANONYMOUS AND GRATEFUL

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Write to: Janus Information Facility, 1952 Union St., San Francisco, Calif. 94123.

Because this is a non-profit facility, please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20 cents) envelope.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

AT WIT'S END

New incentives needed for weight loss

By ERMA BOMBECK

I've probably bought more diet books than any other person alive.

In one year alone, I ate the bindings on five of them. Looking through my extensive library, it occurred to me they have always had one thing in common . . . well, two if you count starvation. They have always been big on incentive.

If you lose weight you can look like the chippie on the cover. You can fit into all your old clothes. You can feel better. You can make your mother happy. You can cross your legs in hot weather. You can be more popular. You can have more energy. You can attract the opposite sex. You can raise your self-esteem. You can get rid of guilt. You can attract more than flies at the beach. You can live longer. (Or without whipped cream, it just seems longer.)

One out of every three people in this country is overweight according to someone's chart. Obviously, we need new incentives.

A man in England promised his wife a new Mercedes, fur coat and $23,000 worth of new clothes if she would diet down to what she weighed on her wedding day 14 years ago. She's working on it, but a couple of years ago the same man offered her a $1500 holiday at a health spa if she would do the same thing. She didn't make it.

Earlier this year, there was a third baseman in Atlanta who carried a few extra pounds and was promised $7,692.13 for each of the 13 Fridays they played at home that he maintained his weight. If he pulled it off, it would have amounted to something like a $100,000 bonus. The verdict is still out.

The point is no one can give a dieter an incentive except himself. I attended a series of weight-loss sessions in which the instructor tried to motivate me to lose the ten pounds that I had been working on for 17 years.

"Wouldn't you like to step on the scales and weigh ten pounds less?"

Didn't she realize all I had to do was to put the scale on the shag carpet and tilt one side against the commode?

"How about hearing panting and heavy breathing when you walk into a room?"

Nonsense, all I had to do was to start jogging.

"Suppose someone told you you'd be fired from your job as a housewife/mother?"

She hit a nerve. I'm thinking about that one. And that was 12 years ago.

LET THEM HAVE A DRY BED

The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and the rest of the family, too, is an end to this serious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause complicated psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Send for our free brochure, "Bedwetting — What It's All About and How To End It", a report by two medical doctors. No obligation.

Midlanders Find New Weight Loss Program Exciting

There are many ways and methods these days for losing and managing weight which can range anywhere from being unhealthy to very expensive or both. Many people we have seen at the Midland Y.M.C.A. weight management program are among those who have become disillusioned with trying the "quick" or "easy" weight loss methods. Lots of dollars and time are spent on the million dollar weight loss industry. Basically there are three very important requirements for permanent weight loss that are available in Midland/Odessa; Nutritional Counseling, Exercise programs and psychological approaches such as behavior modification or hypnosis. Anyone of these approaches done separately, without the other will most likely not result in permanent weight management. Many people have in fact tried all of these at one time or another. The total cost over time can range from $300 to $1,500 or more very easily.

In Midland, a program emphasizing only diet can run from approximately $150 to $300 for one month. Exercise programs alone can cost from $300 to $700 or more a year. Private counseling with a psychologist for behavior modification or hypnosis can also be very costly. The Y.M.C.A. offers a new dynamic program of weight management which includes a comprehensive package: an on staff dietition, a full exercise program and staff and an on staff professional counselor for behavior modification and hypnosis.

This program is for 12 weeks at a price of $120. We now have close to 100 participants who are learning the real meaning of changing lifestyle and self to manage weight. All of these important elements for permanent weight management exist under one roof, with on hand professional staff and at a very affordable price. You can not beat it!!!

The next dates to begin this program are Wednesday, September 21 from 9-11 a.m. or Thursday, September 22 from 6:30-8:30 p.m. at the Central Y.M.C.A., 800 N. Big Spring. Each date will be limited to 20 people. Depending on which of these dates you begin, the 12 weekly 1 hour classes that follow will occur on Wednesdays from 9-10 or Thursdays from 6:30-7:30. Exercise and Hypnosis sessions are scheduled separately at convenient times.

If you wish to learn to permanently manage weight don't pass up this opportunity, before you spend another dollar.

For more information call the Central Y.M.C.A. at 682-2551, or come by 800 N. Big Spring.

THE BETTER HALF

"I'm parting my hair in the middle now. Do you think it makes me look younger?"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, Sept. 21, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Bill Murray, the wonderful crazy star of "Saturday Night Live" and the movie "Night Shift," celebrates a birthday today. Also born on this date: English historian-novelist H. G. Wells, actor Larry Hagman and comedians Fannie Flagg and Henry Gibson. You may have to spend more money than you would like now, but it will be a valuable career investment. Your creativity flourishes when you are under pressure. Work must take precedence over getting together with friends. Romance influences your financial decisions. Be careful not to put all of your eggs in one basket. Travel proves very worthwhile. Take loved one along.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your efforts at work will bring a promotion or new monetary rewards. Put your best foot forward to win over an opponent. Your attitude plays an important role in your romantic success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Proceed slowly if handling a property deal. A new chapter is shaping up in your career. Be flexible and higher-ups will endorse your projects. You need to get down to basics.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may not see eye-to-eye with someone about a financial matter. Listen to an older or more experienced friend. The evening could bring a happy new romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will have your hands full, dealing with a business or personal matter today. Disregard any morning upsets. Certain duties can be a delight. News from afar sparks your creativity.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Curb an urge to take financial risks. You need to be imaginative about a new job assignment. Learn a popular sport or game. Do everything possible to correct a bad habit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Dust off a long-forgotten creative idea and present it to higher-ups. The time is finally right. Emotional confusion is debilitating. Forget about the past and concentrate on the future!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A project will progress nicely without you exerting yourself too much. Teamwork boosts profits. Protect your original ideas by putting them in writing. You will reap financial rewards later on.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A meeting with someone influential will prove highly productive. The boss' thinking is similar to your own. Romance looks more settled. Spend a happy evening with close friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A business deal goes smoothly. Avoid becoming involved in a friend or relative's get-rich-quick scheme. A recent quarrel with loved one can be patched up. Singles give serious thought to marriage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Rearrange your work schedule to deal with a personal matter. You can probably get a deadline postponed if you have a legitimate excuse. Romance is nearly idyllic. Whip an artistic project into shape.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can now lay the groundwork for a special project. Influential person is impressed with your creative flair. Romance is more rewarding than before. Do not press for a commitment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Now is the time to plan for the future. You cannot afford to leave anything to chance. Correct even small errors in paperwork. Loved one may be overly demanding. Take a stand.

Selleck likes role on 'Magnum'

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — While many TV series stars have quit their series to go for a chance on the big screen, Tom Selleck, who has become one of the most popular actors in America, thanks to CBS's "Magnum, P.I.," has no intentions of quitting.

Selleck has just finished filming "Lassiter," in London, his second feature after "High Road to China" following his rise to fame (he co-starred in "Coma" while he was still basically unknown). And, he says he will honor the two more years he has go to on his "Magnum" contract.

"Nobody made me sign," he remarked. "Some actors, when they're successful, they get a lot of people around them who start telling them what to do — and what not to do. Me, I believe in fulfilling my commitments."

An added plus for Selleck is that he is genuinely proud of "Magnum," which he says, "covers a broad spectrum from silly situations to hard-hitting."

Further, he does not believe there is such a thing as a "TV actor" anymore, and he plans to choose from both features and TV in the future.

As for "Lassiter," Selleck even got to do some of his own stunts, swimming within eight feet of a houseboat that was blown up at one point. And to keep his "Magnum" commitments, it was necessary to film 11 days straight at one point, working weekends. Now he's back in Hawaii doing "Magnum" which was nominated for an Emmy this year.

One actor who did quit a series, John Travolta, formerly of "Welcome Back Kotter," says he is not sorry. Travolta has had his ups and downs, but "Stayin' Alive" has him on magazine covers again, and he's just finished a film with Olivia Newton-John, "Two of a Kind," their first film together in 6½ years. That was "Grease."

His next film will be "Fire," in which he will play a rock star. He'll probably tour with a group to do research.

And, despite the fact that he turned down two movies that helped make Richard Gere a star, "American Gigolo" and "An Officer and a Gentleman," Travolta is not perturbed. He remarked that if he had done "Officer," "I never would have been able to do 'Stayin' Alive'."

A strong Canadian team won the Epson Invitational Team Championship held recently in Japan. As usual, their effort was spearheaded by Sammy Kehela, one of the world's superstars.

Kehela and his partner reached three no trump after a standard auction. North judged that his good five card spade suit made his hand too strong for a one no trump opening bid. The same contract was reached in the other room of the Canada England match, and a club was led in both rooms.

The British declarer went down quickly. He decided to bank on a 4-4 club division, so he led a diamond at trick two. The defenders quickly reeled off four club tricks in addition to the ace of diamonds.

Kehela decided to run his five spade tricks first. He discarded a heart and three diamonds from his own hand. West let go of three diamonds. (He might have done better to discard a heart, then the four and ten of diamonds in the hope that declarer would misread the position.)

Declarer next cashed the ace of hearts, then, after much thought, he exited with a club. West was end played. He could take his four club tricks, but then he was forced to yield the fulfilling trick by leading away from the queen of hearts into declarer's combined ace-jack tenace.

A pretty play. But over the years we have come to expect that sort of thing from Kehela.

Princess Diana: Is she or isn't she?

LONDON (AP) — It's the most popular guessing game in Britain: is Princess Diana expecting her second baby or isn't she?

One London newspaper says she is, another says she isn't and the one person who knows for sure isn't saying.

On Monday, The Sun, Britain's best-selling newspaper, assured its 4 million readers that the whole thing is a mistake. "Princess Di Is Not Pregnant, Says Aide," ran a headline.

The story underneath it read:"Reports that she is expecting her second baby in April were dismissed as 'rubbish' and 'pure speculation' by her personal press secretary, Victor Chapman."

This follows an "exclusive report" Saturday in the Daily Mirror, The Sun's biggest rival with 3.4 million readers. It said Diana revealed she was pregnant during a royal dinner party at Balmoral after returning from a visit with Dr. George Pinker, the London gynecologist who delivered William on June 21, 1982.

"The royal family was delighted and called for champagne to celebrate," the Mirror quoted "palace sources" as saying.

• • •

LONDON (AP) — Don and Phil Everly, back together and giving two concerts for fans in Britain this week, say that despite their long separation they can still "hit the high notes."

At a news conference Monday, the 1950s rock 'n' roll legends who had such top 10 hits as "Wake Up Little Susie" and "Bye Bye Love" said they've set their differences aside

The Everly Brothers

because they've both "mellowed," as the 44-year-old Phil put it. Don, 46, said "Now I see no reason to argue any more."

The brothers, who perform Thursday and Friday at Royal Albert Hall, got together in Nashville four months ago and found they could still harmonize.

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Johnny Cash, Loretta Lynn and Barbara Mandrell — bright lights on the country music scene — will have bronze stars in their honor outside the Capitol Music Hall in Jamboree U.S.A.'s new Walkway of the Stars.

Fifty musicians are to be permanently honored with stars embedded in the walkway, said J. Ross Felton, vice president and general manager of Wheeling Broadcasting Co., sponsor of the walkway.

The first 50 were limited to performers associated with the Jamboree U.S.A. concert series, celebrating its 50th anniversary Oct. 15, Felton said Monday. The concerts are broadcast live once a week by radio station WWVA, located in the music hall.

Other stars picked from hundreds of nominees were Buck Owens, Merle Haggard, Charley Pride, Tammy Wynette, Conway Twitty and Mel Tillis, Felton said. Space has been left for 50 more performers to be chosen in years to come, he added.

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — Charles Schulz, creator of the Peanuts comics strip, concedes educators might have had a point when they became irked by a poster depicting a pizza-eating Snoopy saying he'd rather party than study.

But Schulz added that "it's always a mystery to me" why people complain so much. "We live in an age of complaining," he said.

William Johnson, spokesman for the poster producer, Hallmark Cards, said Monday in Kansas City, Mo., that Hallmark "is not in the business of making people unhappy," and so the message will be changed.

Donald Virtue, a high school principal in Hanover, Mass., had complained about the poster's message. "Maybe this is just one time that Hallmark didn't send the very best," he said.

PUBLIC NOTICE

BRIEF EXPLANATORY STATEMENTS OF PROPOSED

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

SPECIAL ELECTION NOVEMBER 8, 1983

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 91 proposes a constitutional amendment which requires a county with a population of 30,000 or more to be divided into not less than four nor more than eight justice of the peace precincts. A county with a population of 18,000 or more but less than than 30,000 shall be divided into not less than two nor more than five justice of the peace precincts. A county with a population of less than 18,000 shall be designated as a single justice of the peace precinct or, upon a finding of necessity by the commissioners court, shall be divided into more than one justice of the peace precinct but not more than four. The amendment provides further, that in any precinct in which there is a city with a population of 18,000 or more, two justices of the peace shall be elected. The amendment allows a justice of the peace, constable or commissioner to continue in office until the expiration of his term, although a change in precinct boundaries results in the officer no longer being a resident of the precinct for which he was elected or appointed and allows a justice of the peace or constable to continue in office until the expiration of his term even though a change in precinct boundaries results in the abolishment of the precinct or more than one justice of the peace or constable serving the precinct. Vacancies in the office of justice of the peace or constable that result from a precinct boundary change shall be filled by the commissioners court until the next general election. The amendment would take effect on January 1, 1984, and counties with populations of less than 30,000 and with more than four justice of the peace and constable precincts would have until January 1, 1987 to comply with the amendment.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment authorizing fewer justice of the peace and constable precincts in counties with a population of less than 30,000 and providing for continuous service by justices of the peace, constables, and county commissioners when precinct boundaries are changed."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 105 proposes a constitutional amendment which would limit a homestead in a city, town or village to a lot or lots amounting to not more than one acre of land, together with any improvements on the land. The constitutional requirement that, at the time of designation, an urban homestead not exceed ten thousand dollars in value without reference to the value of any improvements on the land would be eliminated.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment replacing the limitation on the value of an urban homestead with a limitation based on size."

PROPOSITION NO. 3 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 1 proposes a constitutional amendment that authorizes the Legislature to enact legislation that permits representative associations of agricultural producers to collect refundable assessments on their product sales to be used solely to finance programs of marketing, promotion, research and education relating to those products. It provides, further, that adoption of the proposed constitutional amendment will bring into effect Senate Bill 607, Acts of the 68th Legislature, Regular Session, 1983, with rejection of the amendment resulting in Senate Bill 607 having no effect.

The proposed constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment providing for the advancement of food and fiber production and marketing in this state through research, education, and promotion financed by the producers of agricultural products."

PROPOSITION NO. 4 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 30 proposes a constitutional amendment which authorizes the Legislature to enact laws to provide for the succession of members of the Legislature in the event of enemy attack and allows the suspension of procedural rules imposed by the Constitution in the event of, or immediate threat of, enemy attack. The amendment empowers the Governor, after consultation with the Speaker of the House and the Lieutenant Governor, to suspend the constitutional requirement that the Legislature hold its sessions in Austin and allows the suspension of procedural rules by the Governor issuing a proclamation in which the House of Representatives and Senate concur by resolution approved by a majority of the members present. Suspension of the constitutional rules may not exceed a period of two years under a single proclamation; however, the Governor may renew the suspension by issuing a new proclamation concurred in by the House of Representatives and the Senate through a resolution approved by a majority of the members present.

The amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment authorizing statutory provisions for succession of public office during disasters caused by enemy attack, and authorizing the suspension of certain constitutional rules relating to legislative procedure during those disasters or during immediate threat of enemy attack."

PROPOSITION NO. 5 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 12 proposes a constitutional amendment that authorizes the Legislature to enact legislation providing for the use of the permanent school fund and income from the permanent school fund to guarantee bonds issued by school districts. The amendment provides, further, that the Legislature may appropriate part of the available school fund for administration of the permanent school fund or of a bond guarantee program established pursuant to the amendment.

The constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment authorizing use of the permanent school fund to guarantee bonds issued by school districts."

PROPOSITION NO. 6 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 1 proposes a constitutional amendment which would permit the Legislature to provide for the garnishment of wages to enforce court-ordered child support payments. The garnishment remedy would not be available for other purposes.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment allowing the Legislature to provide for additional remedies to enforce court-ordered child support payments."

PROPOSITION NO. 7 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 14 proposes a constitutional amendment that authorizes the Veterans' Land Board to provide for, issue, and sell general obligation bonds of the State of Texas in an amount not to exceed $800 million to provide financing to veterans of the state. The amendment requires that three hundred million dollars of the state bonds be dedicated to the Veterans' Land Fund. The Fund is to be used to purchase land to be sold to veterans under such terms, rules and regulations as may be authorized by law. The amendment creates the Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund and requires that $500 million of the state bonds authorized by the amendment be dedicated to the Fund. The Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund will be utilized by the Veterans' Land Board for the purpose of making home mortgage loans to veterans for housing within the state and for the administrative costs of administering the fund and issuing the bonds. The amendment provides, further, that if there is not money in either the Veterans' Land Fund or the Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund available for payment of principal and interest on the general obligation bonds issued pursuant to the amendment, then money coming into the Treasury in each fiscal year is appropriated in an amount sufficient for payment of principal and interest due in that fiscal year.

The proposed constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment for financial assistance to veterans and to authorize the issuance of $800 million in bonds of the state to finance the Veterans' Land Program and the Veterans' Housing Assistance Program."

PROPOSITION NO. 8 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 1 proposes a constitutional amendment that authorizes political subdivisions to exempt veterans' organizations from ad valorem taxation on their property. The amendment requires that the veterans' organizations be chartered by the United States Congress, be composed of members or former members of the United States Armed Forces, and be organized for patriotic and public service purposes. The amendment provides, further, that political subdivisions may exempt fraternal organizations from ad valorem taxation on their property. The amendment requires that the fraternal organizations be organized to perform and be primarily engaged in charitable or benevolent functions. The Legislature would be authorized to enact laws that prescribe eligibility requirements for fraternal organizations to benefit from the exemption and to pass legislation limiting the types or amount of property owned by a fraternal organization which may be exempted from ad valorem taxation.

The proposed constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to authorize taxing units to exempt from taxation property of certain veterans' and fraternal organizations."

PROPOSITION NO. 9 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 70 proposes a constitutional amendment to authorize the Legislature to provide, by local or general law, a method by which judges of statutory courts with probate jurisdiction may be assigned to any other statutory court with probate jurisdiction and to any constitutional county court in any county in the state.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment providing for assignment of judges of statutory probate courts to other statutory county courts with probate jurisdiction and to county courts."

PROPOSITION NO. 10 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 17 proposes a constitutional amendment that authorizes the Legislature to enact laws which would allow a city or town to expend public funds to relocate or replace sanitation sewage laterals on private property if done in conjunction with the replacement or relocation of sanitation sewer mains serving the property. The amendment requires that the law authorize the city or town to affix a lien on the private property, with the consent of the owner, to cover the costs of the replacement or relocation of the sewer laterals on the property. The lien may not be enforced until five years have expired since the date the lien was affixed. The amendment provides, further, that the law require that the costs of the replacement or relocation of the sewer laterals on the private property be assessed against the property with repayment to be amortized over a period not to exceed five years and at an interest rate provided by law.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to permit a city or town to expend public funds and levy assessments for the relocation or replacement of sanitation sewer laterals on private property."

PROPOSITION NO. 11 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 13 proposes a constitutional amendment that would change the Board of Pardons and Paroles from a constitutional agency to a statutory agency and would eliminate the Governor's power to revoke paroles. The Legislature would be authorized to establish the Board of Pardons and Paroles and to require it to maintain records of its actions and the reasons for its actions. The amendment would empower the Legislature to enact parole laws. Constitutional language specifying the qualifications and terms of office for members of the Board of Pardons and Paroles is eliminated. The constitutional language governing the composition of the Board of Pardons and Paroles and the manner of filling vacancies on the Board is eliminated.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to change the Board of Pardons and Paroles from a constitutional agency to a statutory agency and to give the board power to revoke paroles."

Estos son los informes explanatorios sobre las enmiendas propuestas a la constitución que aparecerán en la boleta el día 8 de noviembre de 1983. Si usted no ha recibido una copia de los informes en español, podrá obtener una gratis por llamar al 1/800/252/9602 o por escribir al Secretario de Estado, P.O. Box 12887, Austin, Texas 78711.
