Testimony again implicates North

WASHINGTON (AP) — A surprise witness testified today that Iran-Contra banker Albert Hakim's lawyer said he was "looking for a cover" to pay $70,000 to Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's wife as a reward to the former White House aide.

David M. Lewis, a Washington lawyer who volunteered to testify before the joint House-Senate investigating committees, said his advice was sought during a luncheon meeting last Oct. 10 in Geneva with lawyer Willard I. Zucker, who was Hakim's financial manager.

Zucker, Lewis said, was looking for a "mirror transaction" in which money intended for North would be channeled to his wife, Betsy, possibly in the form of a commission from a real estate broker. He said the broker would simultaneously be reimbursed by Hakim with a deposit in a bank anywhere in the world the broker chose. Lewis said nothing came of the conversation, and he did not pursue the matter.

After half an hour of testimony from Lewis, the House and Senate panels headed for separate meetings to discuss whether to grant North limited immunity from prosecution in exchange for his testimony on the Iran-Contra affair. The House panel's meeting broke up after an hour without any resolution of the North question, in part because some members were absent, House Chairman Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said. The House was to resume its discussion of North later today.

At a closed lunch meeting Wednesday, independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh, who is running a grand jury investigation of the affair, strongly urged the committees to reject or at least delay any immunity for North. But the Senate chairman and vice chairman, Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Warren Rudman, R-N.H., said Walsh has had plenty of time to develop any criminal case against North and promised to call the fired White House aide as a public witness in July.

Lewis' testimony served to corroborate Hakim's disclosure Wednesday that he used proceeds from U.S. arms sales to Iran to establish a $200,000 trust fund in Switzerland for North's family shortly before he undertook a risky secret mission to Tehran in May 1986.

Oil value down 56 percent since '84

The tax base for Scurry County is now estimated at some $1.1 billion--a figure that reflects a 56 percent drop since the county's highmark recorded in 1984.

In addition, for the first time since the mid-1960s, the county's real estate and industrial values declined overall from 1986 values.

The drop in real estate values was negligible countywide, primarily due to a rise in ag-related values. The estimated value of real estate within the City of Snyder declined almost 4 percent, however, going from some $249 million to $239 million.

In addition, the countywide figures for "industrial and utility" values decreased approximately 6 percent.

The relatively small drop for real estate throughout the county--only some $617,000 in a roll totaling near $339 million--helped raise the overall decline in the two categories to some 2 percent.

By comparison, the overall drop for oil values from 1986 was some 36 percent.

The figure for real estate and industrial combined is now set at some $508 million compared to approximately $519 million last year.

The oil value for the county is now set at some $615 million compared to near $968 million last year.

Real estate and industrial values comprise approximately 45 percent of the county's overall tax base with oil values entailing the other 54 percent.

This information came to light this week as the official tax roll was completed for the county's six taxing entities by the Scurry County Appraisal District.

Elected officials from each will now use these figures as part of budget planning sessions expected through the summer.

County property owners will be taxed based upon these values beginning in the fall.

Snyder entities hard hit

All four lose tax base totals

For Snyder-based taxing entities, the effects of a 36 percent drop in oil values for this coming tax year will be hardest felt at the county, college and school district.

The City of Snyder will not escape tax value losses for the coming tax year, however, as its real estate values have declined almost 4 percent, going from some $249 million to $239 million.

For 1987, the story regarding taxes is becoming a familiar one to local property owners as the major loss for Snyder-based entities will come from the continued decline in oil and gas mineral valuations.

The tax value for both Scurry County as a taxing entity and the district comprising Western Texas College will be $1.1 billion. In 1984, both enjoyed a tax base of $2.5 billion.

The following lists the projected tax base for each of the

Pair will attend Boy's State

Snyder High School juniors Craig Watkins and Loy McSpadden have been selected as Boy's State representatives from Snyder this year.

The pair was chosen by members of the Layne-Kite Post 181 of the American Legion. The local participants are also partially sponsored by the Snyder Kiwanis Club.

Watkins is the son of Bill Watkins and Cheryl Devoll and McSpadden is the son of Dr. and Mrs. W.B. McSpadden.

Boy's State is slated in Austin this weekend. The annual summer meeting teaches how the various bodies of state government work.

The youth will be involved in electing their own representatives to the mythical Boy's State.

They will also participate in mock legislative sessions designed to duplicate state government.

Their selection was announced this week by Post Commander Dave Haywood and Boy's State Chairman Hugh Harvel.

Business seminars scheduled in June

Two seminars aimed at assisting local businesses are scheduled during June by the business development committee of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

A seminar related to selling techniques and advertising ideas is slated next Tuesday, June 9, and a second session dealing with how to maintain good business records is planned June 23.

Both meetings will be from 7 until 10 p.m. and will be held at the Western Texas College planetarium building located on the north end of the campus.

They are being offered in conjunction with the Small Business Development Center (SBDC) based at Abilene Christian University.

Next Tuesday's meeting will outline merchandising skills to include selling techniques and advertising ideas. Two speakers are on the agenda to include:

—Bob Prock, regional manager for the Texas A&M extension center, who will discuss professional selling and customer service.

—Joe Stalls, chairman of the board for the National Association of Credit Management, who will discuss advertising ideas for the retailer.

Both speakers will be introduced by Don Altman, director for Jerri and Gary Davis who live at 4504 Galveston, have the cleanest and neatest house in Snyder. They aren't bragging, but simply telling the truth.

Tuesday night, husband Gary got up and headed for the bathroom. About three steps from the bed, Gary stepped on something he felt move.

Instantly, there was the dreaded sound of a rattle. Gary, who works in the water department at Chevron, had seen and killed many rattlesnakes during his years working for SACROC.

Davis, in the dark, literally hopped or jumped about four feet. He turned on a closet light, picked up a picture frame and killed the intruder.

The snake was on the edge of the bedspread, and it gives the couple cold chills just to think the snake might have crawled into bed with them.

Davis is thankful that he escaped the bite, but it was impossible to sleep the rest of the night. From about 1 a.m. until morning, the couple went through everything in the house and moved furniture, especially in the bedroom.

The snake was described as a Mountain rattler, 18-inches long with two rattlers and a button. Davis estimated it to be about two years old.

Mrs. Davis suspects that the rattler came into the house through the door between the garage and utility room. She also suspects the cool house attracted the snake.

The heavy rains in recent days also have snakes looking for dry spots. Mrs. Davis suggested that parents be especially careful and aware that snakes can and do get into inhabited areas. That's good advice.

Ask Us

Q. — Why are the two translator stations (KJTV Channel 34 and KAMC Channel 28 in Lubbock) off the air?

A. — Owners of the translator equipment say lightning apparently shut down the transmission of the two stations, which are picked up locally over UHF and VHF antennas. They said repairs would put both back in operation shortly.

In Brief

Session ends

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas legislators have closed out a two-day special session Wednesday by approving civil justice reform and liability insurance measures that failed in the 140-day regular session.

It took the House less than 10 minutes to complete its work Wednesday and adjourn. The Senate adjourned a few minutes later.

"The quickness to which tort reform moved in the special session is an indication of what can be done when legislators work together," Gov. Bill Clements said.

Clements said he hoped the same spirit of cooperation would be present June 22 when he calls lawmakers back for a second special session on the state budget and tax revenues.

Two indicted

HOUSTON (AP) — Two former Saudi Arabian education officials were indicted on charges they defrauded their government of at least $35 million by allegedly siphoning the money from an educational mission, federal officials said.

A 25-count indictment says Sobhi Y. Al-Harthi, former Educational Attache of Saudi Arabia in the United States, and Abdulaziz I. Salamah, a Saudi citizen who served as his assistant, took the money from the Houston-based mission for their own use.

Stark was not in war zone

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Iraqi pilot who opened fire on the USS Stark in the Persian Gulf was convinced his target was inside a free-fire war zone, even though the United States has clear proof it wasn't, the Pentagon says.

"The essential difference in the U.S. and Iraqi versions of what occurred in the attack on USS Stark concerns the exact locations of both the Iraqi Mirage F-1 and USS Stark throughout the attack," the Pentagon said Wednesday in a report on the May 17 attack that claimed the lives of 37 U.S. seamen.

"The Iraqis maintain that their aircraft fired two missiles at a maritime target located in the Iranian-Declared Exclusion Zone. They consider maritime shipping in this zone to be legitimate targets. ...

"The United States remains certain that the wealth of position data ... confirm that the Iraqi F-1 struck USS Stark while she was approximately 12 nautical miles (13.8 statute miles) to the west of the Iranian-Declared Exclusion Zone" — up to 28¾ miles away from the position reported by the Iraqis.

The dispute over the ship's location was spelled out in a four-page report that compares the U.S. and Iraqi chronologies of the attack on the guided-missile frigate.

The Pentagon said the document was part of a much broader, classified report prepared by Rear Adm. David Rogers, who headed a team of U.S. officials that recently returned from Baghdad.

In related developments:

—Rep. Bill Nichols, D-Ala., chairman of the House armed services subcommittee investigating the Stark attack, said some of the ship's crew members eventually could face charges.

Based on five Pentagon briefings on the attack, "I would not be at all surprised if there might not be charges against one or more members of the crew," Nichols said.

Nichols said he and Rep. Les Aspn, D-Wis., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, may cancel a trip to Bahrain to interview Stark crewmen because four of the ship's officers, including the captain, have retained attorneys and refused to answer questions from committee staff members.

Nichols said that following a briefing from the committee staff and Rogers on Wednesday, he's convinced the Stark could have reacted to the Iraqi plane had the captain chosen to do so. He said he has heard nothing to suggest a serious equipment failure on the ship or to indicate the ship's orders prevented it from responding to an attack.

—National Security Adviser Frank Carlucci told reporters traveling with President Reagan to Venice, Italy, that the president will press the U.S. allies attending the economic summit "for greater coordination, cooperation and support in the Persian Gulf."

The Iranian exclusion zone cuts the Persian Gulf roughly in half, running diagonally from the gulf's top to its bottom, and includes the eastern sections of the waterway closest to the Iranian coast. Iran attacks commercial shipping outside the zone, while Iraq concentrates its attacks on ships inside the line.

Candidate found in plane wreckage

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Butch Baum, a self-made millionaire and candidate for governor, died Wednesday when the small plane he piloted crashed in Oklahoma, more than 500 miles from his intended destination, authorities said.

Searchers were directed to the crash area near Shattuck, Okla., by the FAA, which picked up a signal from a plane's emergency locator transmitter.

"There was a crash about noon but we did not find the plane until about 8:30 p.m.," Lt. Charles Rumble of the Oklahoma Highway Patrol said.

Rumble identified the lone occupant of the plane as Baum.

"As far as what happened, we don't know. We will have to wait until federal investigators get here in the morning," Rumble said.

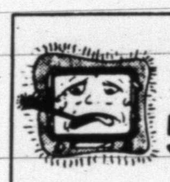

Vern Budig, chief of the Shattuck Police department said the crash occurred about five miles east of Shattuck, Okla., near the the Pdunk community in western Oklahoma near the Texas border.

Baum, 49, left Baton Rouge in southeast Louisiana Wednesday morning for a quick trip to the central Louisiana city of Alexandria. But he never landed there.

Dear Abby

Girl Hooked on Hockey Player Gives Others a Cold Shoulder

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old girl — fairly good-looking and I'm popular. A lot of neat guys ask me out but I almost always say no because I am so hung up on someone I don't even know personally. This guy is a professional hockey player for a city team (I'd rather not say which one). I feel that this problem would go away if I could just meet the guy, but there is no way for me to meet him.

I've tried to get an address so I can write to him, but so far, no luck. The guys who ask me out are getting pretty fed up with my excuses for not going out with them. What should I do?

HUNG UP

DEAR HUNG UP: You could write to the hockey player in care of his team's business office. (The sports editor of your newspaper can give you the address.) But get real, and don't pass up dates with neat guys you know to sit home and mope about one you've never met. Hockey players, baseball players, basketball players and football players are very much in demand by adoring young female fans, so don't get your hopes up. Also, most of them are married.

DEAR ABBY: Picture this: You go into the china section of a fine department store where brides register their china, crystal and flatware patterns. After painstakingly selecting your gift, you instruct the salesperson to have it gift-wrapped and delivered to the bride-to-be (a service provided by the store). After you have paid for the gift and left the china department, your gift is returned to the stockroom, and a card is mailed to the bride advising her that you have purchased a gift for her, and listing the amount of money you spent on the gift. Then, she may come to the store to get the cash, or use it to buy whatever she desires.

This has happened frequently in the store where I have been employed for four months. In each case, the bride-to-be, when registering, requested no gifts — only cards with money amounts. She also asked the salesperson to keep her request confidential.

I feel uncomfortable and deceitful going through the pretense of assisting a customer in selecting a wedding gift when I know in advance that the gift will not be sent.

Abby, what do you think? Is this a modern trend to which honest salespeople must adapt in order to work?

DUBIOUS IN DOTHAN, ALA.

DEAR DUBIOUS: The practice sounds devious to me. Are you sure you have your facts straight? In every reputable department store I've ever heard of, a gift may be exchanged for another item of equal value — but cash? Never!

DEAR ABBY: I am 20 and my boyfriend is 21. We've been going together for six months. Recently he gave me a beautiful necklace that cost around $100. I felt important and loved. But there is one problem. I found out from his sister that this necklace was meant for another girl he had been going out with, and they split up before he had it paid off, so he gave it to me. I asked him about this, and he admitted it was true, and also that he wasn't going to tell me.

Now that necklace means nothing to me and I am hurt. Abby, do you think it was right for him to give me a necklace that was meant for another girl?

CONFUSED IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR CONFUSED: Don't be so quick to judge him — accept instead the fact that he wanted you to have it when it was paid for and belonged to him. We all have a change of mind — and heart as well. Don't belittle his gift, enjoy it. (Question: What kind of sister would tell her brother's ladylove that the necklace she received was "meant for another"? Answer: a mean-spirited, malicious one.)

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Your Birthday

Friday, June 5, 1987

Unusual developments in the year ahead will be big factors in helping you realize your hopes and wishes. Opportunities will knock at the least expected times.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Consistency and follow-through are necessary for success today. Don't give up if something you're trying to finalize gets a bit tough. Major changes are ahead for Geminis in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Matters that need prompt attention must not be put off until the last minute today. You won't perform well with your eye on the clock and your foot on the accelerator.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Take extra care not to give away your gains in a business deal today. If you're impulsive, this might happen.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Instead of heeding the lessons you've learned from past experiences, you may ignore your better judgment today and repeat an old mistake.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A beneficial, confidential arrangement that you have with another could be withdrawn if you start talking about it to people who are not directly involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Have fun and enjoy yourself today, but also know when to call it quits. Too much of a good thing could also be bad.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't alter the course today of a career matter that is presently proceeding favorably. A miscalculation could run it aground.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In friendly, competitive activities today, you are likely to have an edge over the opposition. Even though you might win easily, do it with grace.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something profitable could start developing for you today. Don't treat it with indifference if it isn't everything for which you've been hoping.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Use your best judgment today, but don't be tediously analytical. If you weigh and balance too much, you may undo a sound decision.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're capable in career situations today, but you could also be subjected to strong self-doubts. Don't let the latter overpower the former.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Sometimes being in the middle can produce gains from two ends, but it's best to try to avoid this position today because you might lose on both sides.

Heads I win; tails you lose

How often we bridge players take a finesse and hold our breath to see if it's going to work. Think then what a pleasure it would be to take a finesse and not care whether it wins or loses.

South contented himself with only a small slam. On West's heart lead, declarer played the jack from dummy and ruffed when East put on the queen. A diamond was played to dummy and a second heart ruffed. Then another diamond to dummy and the last heart ruffed. Now what? If you wanted to take as many tricks as possible, you might play a spade to dummy and take the club finesse. If it worked, and the spade jack later came down as you played out the high spades, you would make seven. If the club finesse lost, you would still have the spades to fall back on. But wouldn't you prefer to guarantee the contract?

What could be better than to take a finesse and know for sure that you were going to make your contract no matter what. After ruffing dummy's last heart, declarer should simply play A-Q and another spade. When East follows low, declarer plays the 10. If that holds the trick, a club from dummy can then be discarded on the spade king, and the contract is made. And what if West has the spade jack and wins your 10? Then West is endplayed, forced to lead into the A-Q of clubs or to give declarer a sluff and a ruff. Either way — 12 tricks.

LA expects physical game

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - Game 1 of the NBA championship series was a showcase for speed. Don't expect the same for the next meeting of the Lakers and the Celtics.

"We know they're going to come out there bumping, shoving, pushing and scratching," Los Angeles guard Magic Johnson said of tonight's Game 2 matchup with Boston.

"It's going to be more physical and we've got to be ready for that."

"We're going to have to bang and push inside and put pressure on the Lakers," the Celtics' Larry Bird said. "It's up to us to stop them.

"I still like our chances, I really do. If we play our style of banging and pushing, we can do it."

But all of Bird's comments were not flattering.

"We have guys on this team that don't want to play on the road any more," said Bird, who spurred his team in 1984 by calling them "sissies."

"I can understand the shooting not being there, being better at home, but the defense, the rebounds and the assists aren't there either."

The Lakers, their flashy fast break virtually a blur Tuesday night, raced to a 126-113 victory over the Celtics in the opening game of the best-of-seven title showdown.

Johnson said he doesn't expect a replay of that game, when the Lakers shot out to a quick 9-0 lead and were clearly in command the rest of the way.

"That (runaway) was unexpected and I don't think the rest of the games will be blowouts," he said. "They'll probably be more like our usual games with Boston, go down to the last minute with somebody making a play that decides it."

"They'll try to get more rebounds, and they'll try to get us to walk the ball back down the court," Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said.

It's doubtful that the Celtics, who need to slow down the tempo of the game if they're to beat Los Angeles, can keep the Lakers from running.

The Celtics, who had just two days off before the finals while the Lakers had an eight-day layoff, looked sluggish in the opening game. Nagging injuries to forward Kevin McHale, center Robert Parish and guard Danny Ainge probably contributed to that.

"Seventy-six of their points were in the running game," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "If we can't slow them down, it's an uphill battle for us."

With McHale and Parish limping, the Lakers also were dominant on the boards, outrebounding the Celtics 51-40.

MacLeod may be next Mavericks head coach

DALLAS (AP) - Dallas Mavericks' owner Don Carter flew to Phoenix to talk to an unemployed coach who says he's committed to the NBA club.

And Carter's approval was the only thing standing in the way of John MacLeod's becoming coach of the Dallas team, Mavericks General Manager Norm Sonju said.

"It's Don's decision to make. It's his call," Sonju said. "I don't want to predict anything, but we feel John is our top candidate.

"It's just a unique situation that MacLeod is available," Sonju said. "He impressed us with his positive attitude in Monday's interview. We feel very strongly about John.

"John wants to come here, and we want him to come here. He has such a positive attitude. We owe it to our fans to get this thing done."

Carter was out of town when MacLeod, the former Phoenix Suns' coach, was interviewed by Sonju and Player Personnel Director Rick Sund in the Mavericks' hunt for Dick Motta's successor.

Carter held a closed door meeting with Sonju on Wednesday after Richie Adubato, an assistant under Motta, submitted his resume.

"Mr. Carter and Rick Sund are flying out tonight to meet him (MacLeod), and then flying back," said Allen Stone, director of communications.

MacLeod, who was fired at mid-season in his 14th year with Phoenix, canceled a scheduled interview with the New York Knicks, who are also looking for a head coach.

"I'm committed to the Mavericks," MacLeod said. "I'm basing my decision on the integrity of the Mavericks and Don Carter."

Adubato, who has a year left on his contract, said he would stay as first assistant if MacLeod was hired.

"I have no problems with that because I want to stay with the Mavericks," Adubato said.

MacLeod has a 579-543 NBA record and is the ninth-winningest coach in NBA history.

Committee proposing coaches be allowed to hold summer camp

AUSTIN (AP) - Allowing coaches to work with players from their own team during the summer in a camp situation will be one proposal submitted by the University Interscholastic League athletic committee to the UIL's Legislative Council.

If approved by the 20-member council in October, that proposal and others will go on a referendum ballot vote next winter.

If a proposal is approved, it will probably take affect in August of 1988.

In a major proposition, the committee ruled Wednesday that basketball, volleyball and soccer coaches can hold a camp for their own players for six consecutive days and that it could include incoming sixth, seventh and eighth grade students.

"I think this proposition is very important," said UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney. "If it passes, for the first time ever, a coach will be allowed to work with his own kids during the summertime and that will mean a lot down the line."

In a related matter, the committee voted to study whether or not a baseball, soccer or volleyball coach should be allowed to actually coach a team, such as American Legion baseball, during the offseason summer months.

The committee shot down additional basketball proposals that would have allowed a team to play two regular season games in lieu of a tournament and also avoid playing two games in one day in a regional tournament.

In dealing with football, one proposition passed was to allow a school's offseason program to use seven-man mechanics, up from the usual five.

Also, UIL Director Bailey Marshall said that he was currently working out a deal with ESPN through an Austin television group to have the class 5A state football championship televised on a delayed broadcast as part of a national showcase.

The UIL would receive $25,000 for the broadcast.

The committee voted 3-2 against a proposition that would have moved all five state championship football games to one site.

"I think it's a good idea," said UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney, who endorsed the proposal. "The committee thought it would take away from some of the school's leeway. Your first reaction to an unknown is negative. They like control of their football program. It means a lot of money to them."

Farney said that Missouri had adopted the common site championships and had favorable results.

A proposal made Tuesday that would end the state football playoffs at the regional level was rejected 4-1. It would have called for eight champions in each classification with an all-star game to follow in each region.

The committee took no action on three changes that would affect the state baseball playoffs.

The first would have allowed a maximum of one day per week travel time between Monday and Friday if loss of classroom time was involved.

Baseball coaches also asked for the return of a mandatory best-of-three series for the state playoffs in both class 5A and 4A unless both coaches agreed to a single game. Currently only one playoff game is played unless both coaches agree to play two out of three.

The average time of a nine inning game in the National League in 1986 was 2 hours, 41 minutes.

Aid club to 14-3 romp...

Newcomers spark Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Two Texas Rangers newcomers, whose arrivals had been awaited with great anticipation, made their appearances Wednesday night and had a telling impact on the Rangers.

Shortstop Scott Fletcher became a father for the first time three hours before the Rangers' game with the Chicago White Sox and he celebrated the event with four hits and three runs batted in as Texas beat Chicago 14-3.

And Mickey Stanley, who was tearing up the American Association, made his 1987 debut and also had four hits, including a home run and three RBI as the Rangers totaled a season-high 20 hits.

"I came to the park directly from the delivery room," said Fletcher, who arrived 40 minutes before gametime and missed batting practice. "I hated to leave the hospital and it was hard getting my mind on the game."

His wife, Angie, gave birth to a girl at 4:30 Wednesday afternoon.

"I couldn't have asked for a better start," said Stanley, who was batting .335 with 13 homers and 54 RBI in 46 games at Oklahoma City before getting the call Tuesday night. "Of course, I can't expect to get four hits in a game very often. But it's just great to be here."

Stanley made an out in his first at-bat in the first inning, in which the Rangers scored four runs to take a 4-1 lead against Chicago starter and loser Floyd Bannister, 3-4.

"It's kind of ironic," said Stanley, "because after I made an out in my first time up, someone said, "So what, go 4-for-5." And I did."

He singled and scored in the third, singled home a run in the fourth, hit a solo home run in the sixth and singled home a run in the eighth.

"I had a good night, but so did everyone else," said Stanley, who appeared in 15 games for the Rangers late last season. "I didn't win the game. It was a team effort."

Beneficiary of the 20-hit attack was Jose Guzman, 3-5, who won in relief of starter Mike Loynd. Guzman went 4 2-3, allowed two hits and struck out four.

"With all the hitting, Guzman was the bright spot of the night," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine. "He should have his confidence back now."

Four different players each drove in three runs for the Rangers, who hit seven homers and scored 30 runs in the 3-game series with the White Sox.

Pete Incaviglia hit a 3-run homer - his 12th of the season - in the first inning, and Steve Buechele drove in three with a solo homer - his fifth - and a 2-run double.

'Horns survive FSU, 6-4

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - Two ironman pitching performances; three comebacks by Florida State and the 10th-inning heroics of Scott Coolbaugh made an impression on Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson, a veteran of 14 College World Series.

"We've been involved in some great games here and I've seen a lot of great games here," Gustafson said following his team's 6-4 victory Wednesday night. "But for sheer drama and thrill after thrill, I don't think it'd be very easy to top this one."

In Wednesday's other elimination game, Louisiana State beat Arkansas 5-2.

Oklahoma State and Stanford, the only teams without a loss in the double-elimination tournament, play tonight.

On Friday, Louisiana State plays Stanford and Oklahoma State faces Texas.

The top-rated Longhorns' Curt Krippner, who pitched nine innings Tuesday in a 6-1 loss to Stanford, threw three innings of shutout relief against Florida State to raise his record to 14-1.

Krippner replaced starter Mark Petkovsek with nobody out in the eighth inning and the tying run on third. That run scored on a passed ball, but Krippner checked the Seminoles on one hit and one walk the rest of the way.

The Longhorns, 60-10, overcame a 13-strikeout performance by Richie Lewis, 15-4. Coolbaugh doubled home the lead run in the top of the 10th and scored on a double by Mike Patrick. In the bottom of the inning, Coolbaugh made a nice pickup at third base to start a double play that ended Florida State's last comeback attempt.

The Seminoles ended their season at 55-18.

Louisiana State's Gregg Patterson earned his second College World Series victory and Jack Voigt hit a tie-breaking two-run homer in the seventh inning to eliminate Arkansas.

High achievers struggling with pressure problem

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the San Fernando Valley, the biggest worry for a high school student is not whether there'll be a parking space. Along with the shopping mall and the dependable Southern California sun, a fact of life for children of well-heeled, well-educated Valley families is the pressure to meet expectations, to be the best.

By Lisa Levitt Ryckman
Associated Press Writer

VAN NUYS, Calif. (AP) — Ever since they were knee-high to a BMW, David Lipsey and Judy Williams have known they were born winners, expected to achieve and lead in a world where upwardly mobile teenagers drive their own cars and carry appointment books to keep track of their commitments.

But a closer reading of these success stories in the making, 17 years' worth of chapters packed with honors and awards and scholarships, reveals another story, one lost between the lines.

It's about coping daily with the strain of meeting parents' expectations, about competing with equally driven peers, about the difficulties of handling the stress of success.

"I've always been taught to strive for a certain level," said Judy, whose words tumble out as if they cannot keep up with her thoughts. She gestures frequently for emphasis, hot-pink fingernail polish catching the fluorescent light at Ulysses S. Grant High, the San Fernando Valley school where she and David spend many of their waking hours.

"I guess I'm a perfectionist," she said. "I think a lot of us have that attitude, and because of that, we put tremendous pressure on ourselves."

Both she and David do college-level work in advanced-placement classes and maintain B-plus or better averages. David works as managing editor of the school newspaper and takes a management class at UCLA; Judy juggles an avalanche of homework with cheerleading and a part-time job scooping ice cream.

Last semester, another task took precedence: completing college applications. On Dec. 15, Grant High's senior honors classes were decimated because that was Stanford's deadline, and many students stayed home to finish their applications.

"It's more difficult than it's ever been to get into the University of California system or other prestigious schools," said Ruth Shaw, an assistant principal at Grant, whose 3,200 students can tap the largest advanced placement program in the Los Angeles school district. "There's a tremendous competition to have the GPA and the SAT scores and the advanced placement scores so they're admitted to the university they want to go to."

Both Judy and David applied to Stanford, as well as nine other schools known for their academic excellence and exorbitant tuitions. Judy decided on Harvard, where she plans to pursue a science degree, with graduate work in law or business; David picked Southern California, where he wants to study journalism.

For smart, ambitious children from affluent, well-educated families, academic stress is taken as a fact of life, like the Southern California sunshine or a parent-financed car when you turn 16.

"When it comes down to it, if I have to do something and I know it has to be done, I won't eat, I won't sleep, but I'll get it done, because that's more important," said Judy, whose immense self-confidence flashes in her brown eyes. "The way I deal with stressful situations is I work to get over it. When it's over, I'll just collapse, because that's all I can do."

David agreed. "There's no way to vent all this stress at once. I just kind of take it," he said. "I just do everything I can, and if it prevents me from sleeping, I just sleep less every night."

They worry about problems confronting society, including AIDS, believe nuclear war is probable but not imminent and think the destruction of the environment will reach crisis proportions if left unchecked. They talk candidly about the problems with the public education system, how they chose Grant for the academic excellence that sets it apart and may help set them apart when they begin their careers.

"Other things are fleeting, but my future is my main concern. It's what I've had to worry about for all these years so far," said David.

"I think worrying about your future is necessary, even though it's very stressful, because if you don't worry, God only know where you're going to wind up."

"I think I will be able to get a job, a good job. And I'll make money, lots of money," Judy said matter-of-factly. "I'm not really anxious about the future. I'm looking forward to September, to going away to school.

"I want to be able to say I have to rely on myself. I have a certain crutch in my family, because anytime I need something, anything at all, I can fall back on to that. I've never really had to stand alone."

17-year-olds dreams are marred by war

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The dark-haired, slender 17-year-old spoke enthusiastically about his plans and dreams but said the chances of realizing them are marred by the civil war that has been raging since he was 9.

"It is so very difficult here," said Milton Aristides Jovel, a student at a high school in the capital. "There's a lot of unemployment and the war goes on and on. But I want to be an electrical engineer."

He is typical of Salvadorans from the lower classes living in or around the capital. He is one of nine children being raised by only his mother in a working class neighborhood of mostly adobe houses.

He's luckier than the boys and girls his age from the farming countryside, where as often as not teen-agers tote rifles, either with the army or the leftist guerrillas waging war against the U.S.-supported government.

Both sides have been known to press youths into service.

But Milton is not as fortunate as the sons and daughters of the wealthy living in walled mansions in San Salvador, safely guarded from most of the realities of the war.

"We all want to escape," said Milton, who is studying electrical engineering at a technical school. "But I stay happy. I recognize it's not easy and I have to work extra hard. But I'll do it."

Julio Cesar Rivas Trujillo, director of the state-run school, said the lack of opportunities for the youths causes resentment and frustration.

"Many figure they'll get their (high school) degrees and go to the United States," Rivas said, "or some will go into the army or 'with the others,'" a reference to the guerrillas.

For economic survival, some youths have taken desperate steps.

"We've had cases of prostitution," the director said, "but it's not a case of morals, it's survival. Here they'll fight to the death to get by."

More than half the nation's population of 5.2 million is 15 or younger, he said. The teens face a combined underemployment and unemployment rate of more than 50 percent.

Most of the more than 4,000 students will not go to college.

In the countryside the majority don't finish the compulsory ninth grade, working instead in the fields to plant coffee, corn and beans.

Will Sampson dead at age 53

HOUSTON (AP) — Will Sampson, the 6-foot-7 actor who played the silent Indian in the film "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest," died of complications 41 days after undergoing a heart-lung transplant. He was 53.

Sampson suffered from scleroderma, a chronic degenerative condition that affected his heart, lungs and skin. During his lengthy illness, his weight fell from 260 pounds to 140 pounds, causing a malnutrition problem, said Methodist Hospital spokeswoman Brenda Blake.

He died Wednesday morning with his former wife, Jill, and eldest son, Tim, at his bedside, Ms. Blake said. Sampson underwent the transplant April 23.

Sampson's body was to be returned for burial in his childhood hometown of Okmulgee, Okla., Ms. Blake said.

Dr. E. Clinton Lawrence, who treated the actor, said Sampson's wife and son took the death well.

"They had been prepared that we could lose him at any time over the past 10 days," Lawrence said. "I think they are relieved it is all over."

He said the family planned to hold a private Indian ceremony, in which an all night wake would be followed by burial the next day.

A Creek Indian, he was best known for his portrayal of Jack Nicholson's mute friend in the film version of Ken Kesey's acclaimed novel.

"I will miss a great friend," Nicholson said Wednesday through his agent, Sandy Bresler in Los Angeles.

Sampson's agent, Dan Wolff of Artists Agency in Los Angeles, said the actor was a long-time supporter of Indian causes. "He was always giving of his time and money when any Indian group called," Wolff said.

Besides "Cuckoo's Nest" in 1975, Sampson appeared in "The White Buffalo" in 1977, "Orca" in 1977 and "Alcatraz: the Whole Shocking Story" in 1978. More recently, he appeared as the demon-battling Indian in "Poltergeist II: The Other Side."

"While the transplant was successful with the heart and lung functioning well, Mr. Sampson succumbed due to a combination of problems," Ms. Blake said — among them malnutrition, kidney failure and a post-operative infection.

Sampson lapsed into a coma 10 days ago, and the cause of the kidney failure was not known, she said. An autopsy was to be performed.

Thunderstorms still threaten Hill Co.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A slow-moving thunderstorm system blamed for two deaths after it ravaged a rain-soaked area continued to threaten the Hill Country today, officials said.

About 150 people evacuated from their homes in D'Hanis remained overnight at the National Guard Armory in Hondo, said Donna Keiner, a Medina County Sheriff's dispatcher.

Larry Eblen, a forecaster with the National Weather Service in San Antonio, said another 5 inches of rain was possible today west of San Antonio.

"There's an upper-level disturbance sitting over the Hill Country, just rotating around," Eblen said. "It's not moving. That's what has us so concerned. We don'at feel the situation is over yet."

Sandra Rodriguez, 20, died about 10:30 a.m. Wednesday when high waters swept her car into a drainage ditch northwest of downtown San Antonio, fire department spokesman Tom Garcia said. The submerged car traveled about 100 yards through the canal before smashing to a stop.

"She couldn't get out of the car and rescuers couldn't get to her," Garcia said.

Patrick Alan Roddy, 32, was killed about 9 a.m. when he stepped off a city bus and attempted to cross a rain-slick street in front of the bus, police spokeswoman Romana Lopez said.

A motorcyclist tried to avoid Roddy as he was trying to cross the street but lost control of the vehicle and hit him, Ms. Lopez said. The motorcyclist, whose vehicle was hit by oncoming traffic, was taken to Wilford Hall Medical Center at Lackland Air Force Base, Ms. Lopez said.

San Antonio, which received about 1 inch of rain Wednesday, has received 23.7 inches of rain since January, including 12.87 inches in May, weather service officials said.

Wednesday's torrential rains swelled creeks beyond their banks in San Antonio, parts of South Texas and the Hill Country, where some areas reported more than 8 inches of rain.

"We've had so much rain that my memory is not that good any more about how many days it has rained," said weather service meteorologist Bill Hare in San Antonio.

In D'Hanis, people living near the Seco Creek were evacuated after the creek began to overflow its banks Wednesday morning, said Medina County Sheriff's spokesman John Franklin.

"We got all the people out that needed to get out, and now we're just waiting to see what the water is going to do," Franklin said.

The families' belongings were stored at the Holy Cross Catholic Church parish hall in D'Hanis, Franklin said.

Bandera County Sheriff Guy Pickett said people living near the Medina River and Medina Lake were moving their belongings to higher ground.

"They've been told that the water is going to rise. It's up to their own judgment to decide if they want to leave," Pickett said.

M.R. LeStourgen, who lives near the northern Medina River, said he measured 9 inches of rain at his home between 6 a.m. and noon Wednesday.

"This rain is getting to be a little more than necessary. Taken all the way around, it's bad for everybody," he said.

Tim Green, a volunteer firefighter in Medina, said he had recorded about 7 inches of rain Wednesday morning.

"We're boxed in right now, but we're not in any danger," he said. "We don't need this much rain."

Congressmen, 6 others indicted

NEW YORK (AP) — Wedtech Corp. transformed itself from a machine shop into an acclaimed, multimillion-dollar defense contractor through fraud and bribery, according to a racketeering indictment naming a congressman and six others.

Wednesday's 58-count federal indictment accused Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., his eldest son and five other people of turning Wedtech into "a vehicle for making illegal payments to public officials" to win government contracts.

Wedtech has been the focus of five federal, state and local criminal investigations into how it grew practically overnight into a $100 million-a-year defense contractor, largely through no-bid government contracts.

"Wedtech was presented to the public as the proverbial American success story," said U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani. "This indictment now alleges that much of Wedtech's success was based on its being run as a racketeering enterprise."

In Washington, special prosecutor James C. McKay is investigating links between Wedtech and Attorney General Edwin Meese III and Lyn Nofziger, a former top political aide to President Reagan.

Giuliani said he has forwarded to McKay all evidence pertaining to Meese and Nofziger.

Federal investigators, meanwhile, are exploring whether Wedtech money bought the silence of Jessica Hahn about her 1980 sexual encounter with Jim Bakker that led to the PTL founder's downfall, the Daily News reported today.

Law enforcement sources the newspaper did not identify said part of a $265,000 fund set up for Ms. Hahn may have come from Wedtech money donated by founder John Mariotta, a born-again Christian, to the Rev. Aimee Cortese, a PTL board member and sister of Rep. Robert Garcia, a target in the Wedtech case.

monthly meeting of the West Texas Chapter here. This chapter was formed last year.

Saturday's session will begin at 11:30 a.m. at the Golden Corral Steakhouse and will conclude at 4 p.m.

Lee Kitchens of Lubbock, former president of the national organization, will offer the main address. County Judge Bobby Goodwin will lead the invocation and welcome.

Local coordinator Frances Billingsley noted that meetings will rotate among West Texas cities where members live.

County tax base totals reported

four municipalities in Snyder which may levy taxes.

Scurry County

For the three major areas of tax values, the figures for Scurry County include:

—Some $615 million in mineral values.

—Almost $339 million in real estate.

—Near $170 million in industrial and utility.

According to the latest figures, the county lost some $352 million in oil values during 1986, shrinking the total value for oil and gas to the $615 million figure.

This decline combined with a $10.5 million loss in industrial and utility valuations and more than a $617,000 decline in real estate values. The total loss is estimated at some $370 million.

Western Texas College

Regarding the Western Texas College district, which has the same boundaries as Scurry County, the overall tax base loss will be about $362 million.

In addition to the loss in minerals, the college district will lose some $10.1 million in industrial and utility and approximately $241,000 in real estate.

The district's tax base is estimated at:

—Some $615 million in mineral values.

—Almost $402 million in real estate.

—Near $170 million in industrial and utility.

Snyder ISD

Snyder ISD will also lose funds in each category to include more than $332 million in mineral values; $9.7 million in industrial and utility taxes; and $6.3 million in real estate values.

The total loss to Snyder ISD will be some $348 million.

The tax base will total:

—Some $524 million in mineral values.

—Approximately $327 million in real estate.

—Some $147 million in industrial and utility.

The school district tax base will dip below the $1 billion mark. In 1984, it was estimated at $2.3 billion, a loss of some 56 percent.

The current figure for the school district tax base is $999,116,667.

City of Snyder

The City of Snyder will see a decrease in its tax base of some $12 million. This includes a $9.4 million drop in real estate values. In addition, minerals values were said down some $2.3 million plus a $818,000 decline in industrial and utility values.

The city's total tax roll is figured at just over $269 million. This is comprised of:

—Approximately $239 million in real estate.

—Some $25.8 million in industrial and utility.

—Some $3.7 million in mineral values.

Business seminars planned in Snyder

SBDC.

The June 23 seminar will profile why adequate business records are needed for a variety of reasons to include tax payments to the government as well as for information provided lending agencies and creditors.

Jerry Anderson, a CPA based in Abilene, will discuss:

—Why do you need financial data.

—What financial data is needed.

—What records meet the needs.

Both the June 9 and the June 23 seminars require a $15 registration fee. These may be mailed ahead of time to the local chamber. The number to call for registration is 573-3558.

Bicycle theft, arrests noted

Police are investigating a bicycle theft report filed at noon Wednesday.

Steve Campbell of 301 34th St. reported the theft of a Sears brand 20-inch bicycle from outside his residence.

The missing bike, valued at $90, is thought to have been taken sometime between 10 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Also Wednesday, police jailed a 19-year-old man at 10:06 p.m. on a misdemeanor theft charge.

That arrest resulted from a call from employees of Furr's Supermarket who reported having a shoplifter in custody.

Other Wednesday arrests included two juveniles picked up for public intoxication at the Town and Country Convenience Store on College Ave. and two subjects arrested on warrants for failure to pay Department of Public Safety-issued traffic citations.

One of those individuals was also charged with misdemeanor possession of marijuana in a quantity less than two ounces.

Spanish painter Francisco Goya y Lucientes was born in 1746.

City closes stand down

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The long arm of the law is putting the squeeze on the Merrick brothers lemonade stand.

The brothers, Chip, 14, J.J., 7, and 5-year-old Ty have been told that they are violating city zoning rules by operating a lemonade stand based in their front yard in a residential area of the city.

The boys may not understand why their profitable business was shut down, but even the youngest one understands what happened.

"A man came by and told us to shut down," the 5-year-old said. "It means we can't sell lmeonade anymore."

The boys have operated the lemonade stand for the past two summers, working up to seven hours a day, five days a week, serving lemonade, canned soft drinks and homemade chocolate-chip cookies.

They averaged $150 to $200 a week in business and piled up enough change to pay for a home computer and help finance their family's vacation to Disney World in Florida last year.

But the stand was closed down last week after an anonymous complaint was made to the City Hall. An aplogetic city inspector informed the boys' mother that the lemonade stand violated city zoning laws against commercial enterprises in a residential neighborhood.

The city is sticking to its rules despite overwhelming public opinion in support of the Merrick boys.

To pull out of S. Africa...

U.S. companies resist call

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business leaders and the Reagan administration say they do not agree with the Rev. Leon Sullivan's dramatic call for all U.S. companies to pull out of South Africa within nine months.

Sullivan, a General Motors board member whose 10-year-old principals of racial equality for U.S. businesses operating in South Africa have been adopted by 125 companies, said Wednesday that it is time for stronger action.

"In spite of appeals and protests and cries for change and justice within South Africa, repression against blacks grows," said the Baptist minister from Philadelphia.

His impassioned plea was hardly embraced by a council of businesses operating in South Africa, which said their continued presence remains the best hope for social change.

"We owe a great debt to Leon Sullivan, but we will now have to carry out the Sullivan principles without Sullivan," said Allan Murray, chief executive officer of Mobil Corp. and co-chairman of the U.S. Corporate Council on South Africa.

At the State Department, spokesman Charles Redman said that while the United States has "enormous respect for Rev. Sullivan and the work he has done," the administration opposes his call for U.S. companies to pull out of South Africa.

Sullivan said it is time to go beyond the principles he laid down, which included integration of company facilities, equal employment practices, equal pay, training for nonwhites, an increase in black managers and improved living conditions for employees.

He said the U.S. government should impose an economic embargo against South Africa.

In a telegram to President Reagan, he asked the United States to sever diplomatic relations "until statutory apartheid is ended and blacks have a clear commitment for equal political rights."

More than 100 American companies have sold their South African subsidiaries over the last 18 months.

The business council, composed of 104 chief executive officers of companies that signed the Sullivan principles, expressed "profound regret" that Sullivan had proposed complete disinvestment.

However, the group issued a steering committee statement that said member companies would continue to comply with his principles.

Foster parents meeting slated

Persons who are interested in becoming licensed foster parents for the Texas Department of Human Services are urged to attend an orientation session to begin at 7 p.m. Thursday at the First United Methodist Church, 2700 College Avenue.

The TDHS places children in foster care who have been severely abused or neglected and must be removed from their families for protective care. These children range in age from birth to 17 years.

Foster parents can choose what age or type of children they prefer to have in their home. Foster parents are reimbursed at the rate of $8 a day for birth through age 9 and $9 a day for 10-17. All medical expenses are paid.

The need in the Snyder area for additional foster parents is critical. Single persons, retired folks, working mothers are all considered. Minority families are needed.

Untreated anemia causes headaches

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Would pernicious anemia have any connection with severe headaches? I have had them for years, and have to take a strong over-the-counter remedy to ease the pain. I also have two vitamin B-12 shots a month. Can you recommend a diet for the anemia?

DEAR READER — Untreated anemia of any kind can cause headaches. The reason for this is not known, but it may have something to do with the fact that anemia (insufficient number of red blood cells) is associated with a decrease in the amount of oxygen carried in the bloodstream. Nerve tissue, such as the brain, is very sensitive to low oxygen levels. Therefore, headache may accompany anemia.

Pernicious anemia is a form of red-blood-cell disorder in which the absence of a substance called "intrinsic factor" in the stomach prevents the absorption of vitamin B-12 from the diet. In many patients, this deficiency can be overcome by taking large oral doses of vitamin B-12. However, for most people, monthly B-12 injections are a simple, effective and inexpensive treatment. Injected B-12 bypasses the stomach and is readily available for the body to use, even if a person lacks intrinsic factor.

You seem to be receiving adequate amounts of B-12. This should have corrected your anemia. Therefore, I doubt that your headaches are caused by your treated anemia. To my knowledge, there are no foods that overcome the lack of intrinsic factor in your system. Ask your doctor to investigate the cause of your headaches.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a 6-year-old child and would like to have another. My problem is my husband's excessive drinking. My doctor says that he can give me something to help me get pregnant, but I don't want to take anything if there is nothing wrong with me. Maybe my husband should have his sperm count checked, since we keep trying and nothing happens. What can you suggest?

DEAR READER — I agree that your primary problem is your husband's drinking. This issue has to be addressed before you investigate the infertility. Alcohol produces many unwanted effects in the body. By interfering with male hormone levels, alcohol can disrupt normal sexual functioning. Loss of libido (sexual interest), poor performance and abnormal sperm counts are consequences of heavy drinking.

I suggest that you see an alcohol counselor or go to Al-Anon. Through professional help — and the support of other people who share your problem — you can learn ways to cope with a husband who seems to have a drinking problem. You need to learn — and change — ways in which you may be inadvertently contributing to the problem by what is called "enabling" (unknowingly encouraging your husband's drinking). You also need guidance in ways to take care of yourself and your child so that your lives will not be disrupted by your husband's drinking.

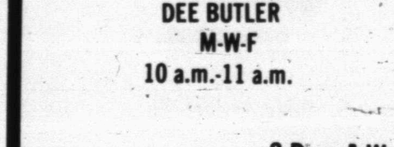

I believe that your husband has to be confronted with the reality of his heavy drinking and the effects it is having on the family. You will need professional advice and support for this type of intervention, because your husband's mask of denial will have to be peeled away. He, too, may eventually agree to counseling or a program such as Alcoholics Anonymous. I'd wait until then before complicating matters by having another child.
