

White House ponders terrorism response

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration today pondered a response to the terrorist execution of two British hostages in Lebanon as Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government said it had good reason to believe the two "were in Libyan hands."

Attorney General Edwin Meese said the United States "will look at the evidence" behind the killings. "But I think we won't announce in advance what we're going to do," he added.

Meese, interviewed on CBS-TV's "Morning News" show, said President Reagan's resolve "continues to be as strong" as ever "to be sure that terrorists can't run. ... The fact is we have to take action against terrorism when we have the clear proof as to where the culprits are."

In London, Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe said without elaboration, "For some time, we have had firm evidence of direct Libyan involvement in the kidnapping of Mr. Douglas and Mr. Padfield, and we have good reason to believe they were in Libyan hands."

The bodies of Leigh Douglas, Philip Padfield and a third man were found Thursday near Beirut. A note with the bodies said the three had been slain in retaliation for Thatcher's decision to allow the U.S. bombers that attacked Libya to fly from British bases.

Reagan on Thursday called the slaying of the hostages "a tragedy" demonstrating that "terrorism is something that we have to deal with once and for all, of us together."

Ali Treiki, Libya's ambassador-designate to the United Nations, speaking this morning on NBC-TV's

"Today" show, denied that his country had played a role in the deaths of the Britons. "We had nothing to do with them. ... We don't know who kidnapped them. ... We have nobody in Lebanon — I think."

From Khartoum, Sudan, early to day, 175 Americans flew to Nairobi, Kenya, in the start of an evacuation of diplomats' families and non-essential personnel. The evacuation began three days after unidentified gunmen shot and seriously wounded an Embassy communications technician on a residential street near the Libyan embassy.

In New Delhi, India, Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said today that talks on U.S. soldiers missing in action had been called off until the U.S. military threat against Libya ends.

In France, officials said today four Libyans were being expelled as possible troublemakers.

The U.S. bombing incited protests around the world:

—A bomb exploded Thursday night in front of the U.S. Consulate in San Jose, Costa Rica, shattering windows and injuring four passers-by with flying glass.

Police said four people, including a Nicaraguan, were detained in connection with the explosion. They were not identified.

The nearby U.S. Embassy was not damaged. U.S. Ambassador Lewis A. Tams, who appeared at the site of the explosion, called it a terrorist act.

—In Athens, thousands of Greeks staged a 60-minute work stoppage to protest the action of the "American adventurers."

—In the Netherlands, riot police dispersed protesters who threw stones at the U.S. Consulate after a march through downtown Amster-

Airlines boosting security, asking for travelers to pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airlines are imposing new security measures to combat terrorism abroad, including around-the-clock guards at parked aircraft, but they say travelers should help pay for the expensive precautions.

Pan American World Airways said it plans to ask the government to approve a $5-per-passenger surcharge to defray added security expenses, and other airlines are likely to follow suit.

Meanwhile, the head of the airline pilots union called Thursday for better training and pay for airport security workers to get away from "the rent-a-cop" approach to combating terrorism.

Airlines hire security workers who screen passengers and bags at airports. Any pay increase or expansion of the work force probably would be passed on to travelers.

Carriers such as Pan Am and Trans World Airlines, which depend heavily on trans-Atlantic business, are trying to calm fears about security. Travel agents already are reporting many people are canceling trips to Europe because of worries about terrorism, sparked largely by the continuing U.S. confrontation with Libya.

Martin R. Shugrue Jr., vice chairman and chief operating officer of Pan Am, vowed Thursday to "do our damndest to minimize the risk" of terrorism.

"We are going to have to show the public this year that international travel is both rewarding and safe," he told the International Aviation Club. He acknowledged that bookings are down on flights to southern Europe and the Mediterranean area.

The Federal Aviation Administration earlier this week directed U.S. airlines flying abroad to impose new security procedures, but declined to name the specific measures imposed.

Shugrue hesitated to go into details, but said the airline has begun to use around-the-clock guards to watch parked aircraft at some airports and has increased screening of passengers and baggage.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen told reporters the agency and the airlines are "aggressively pursuing security on a number of fronts" and that the air carriers flying overseas "are indeed using security measures that are adequate."

Engen said he would not hesitate to take his family on a trip abroad, though conceding "every family has to make the decision himself."

Search for Briton futile

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police searched a shell-pocked seaside apartment building today for the body of a fourth British hostage, but said an anonymous telephone call claiming he had been killed apparently was a hoax.

The bodies of three captives were found Thursday in the mountains east of Beirut, and a note left nearby said the men had been slain in retaliation for British cooperation with a U.S. air strike on Libya early Tuesday.

John Rowan, first secretary of the Irish Embassy in Beirut, identified the three slain men as Philip Padfield, 40; Leigh Douglas, 34, and Alec Collett, 64. He said he knew all three Britons.

But in London, British Foreign Office spokeswoman Sue Jones said the body of one of the victims could be that of Brian Keenan, who holds dual British-Irish citizenship, rather than that of Collett.

The British Embassy in Beirut was trying to make positive identifications of the victims today when Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio reported that an anonymous telephone caller had claimed that another Briton, 29-year-old cameraman John McCarthy, had been slain.

Four gunmen seized McCarthy and his Lebanese driver Thursday on a highway that leads to the airport through west and south Beirut.

McCarthy, who arrived in the Lebanese capital March 16, works for the Worldwide Television News Agency and was booked on a flight to London from Beirut.

The radio station said the caller claimed that McCarthy's body would be found wrapped in a blanket on the second floor of a west Beirut apartment building. It said the caller claimed to speak for the Arab

Frishman says DOE hasty

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

VEGA - The Texas Nuclear Waste Programs Office director told a group of POWER (People Opposed to Wasted Energy Repositories) members Thursday that the recent findings released by a joint committee from area Chambers of Commerce were premature and that the opposition membership should not be intimidated by it.

Steve Frishman said the chamber's findings were not based on the facts provided to them. "Even the DOE (Department of Energy) felt the conclusions were premature," he said. "It appeared the chamber already had the report written before they did any investigation."

The chamber's report stated that a nuclear repository, to be located on a nine-square mile area north of Hereford, would economically benefit the communities near the proposed site.

Frishman added that the DOE has a hard time looking at scientific facts that they don't want to hear. "The chamber group was apparently the same way," he accused.

In the original draft, the DOE said it would presenting three potential sites for a nuclear waste repository to the president in early January. That date has been moved to some time in mid-May.

Following the recommendations, a site characterization would be done on all three sites. Upon completion of the characterization, one site would be chosen for the repository. The current sites the DOE plans to recommend are in Deaf Smith County, and in Washington and Nevada.

According to Frishman, the site characterization should not even take place at the Deaf Smith site because all the information he has found declares that the Deaf Smith site would be inadequate for a repository.

"We all believe that a repository is needed, but through our research, we find that this area would not be the best place for it," he said.

Frishman also told the group that soon some very heated debates will result from this issue.

"I ask you not to compete in a name-calling type of debate," Frishman requested. "POWER is an organization known as a responsible organization who knows their facts."

"We are convinced that the repository should not be located here. There are too many questions arriving from the issue at this site. Why should the DOE even proceed with any more research?" Frishman asked said. "Maybe we can find a judge in a federal court who will be willing to ask the same questions in his mind."

Small town quiet after violence

HOLLIDAY, Texas (AP) — The justice of the peace in this North Texas town of about 1,500 said she was not surprised by an outbreak of violence that included the firebombing of two businesses, slashing of tires, and obstruction of fire department vehicles.

There also were unconfirmed reports of shots being fired in downtown Holliday after dawn Thursday morning.

"That's just something we live with," said Bettye O. Tanner, whose store was gutted by a fire started when someone pried plywood from a window and tossed in two fire bombs.

The town spent Thursday night under a council-declared state of emergency after firebombings and other early-morning violence apparently aimed at law enforcement officials.

"It's just unreal what's happening to our little town," Mrs. Tanner said while her business burned. "This will probably ruin me."

Mrs. Tanner said that even though she and police officers have had their lives threatened several times in the last eight months, she said she does not believe the acts of violence were retaliation against her as a judge.

The threats have been coming since some drug arrests were made in Holliday last year, she said.

Education boosts Taiwan's trade

HOUSTON (AP) — The director of the Taiwan Government Information Office says the reason his country's trading has increased is because of the government's stress on education.

"Local governments spend a large portion of their budget on education," Chang King-yuh told a group of 100 gathered at a forum Thursday. He pointed out that every child between the ages of six and 15 attend school. About 22,000 Chinese students attend American colleges and universities, he said.

Chang also said the key to his country's economic and trade success has been the development of human resources. He said Taiwan is being considered an industrialized nation because more people are moving away from agriculture and more into industry.

"In terms of economy, a government is established to improve the welfare of the people," Chang said of his country. "Electricity is available everywhere and 80 percent have running water."

Chang also told the forum sponsored by the Gulf Coast World Affairs Council and the Houston World Trade Association, there is an imbalance in trade between Taiwan and the United States because of what each country is trading.

Machine gun inquiries on rise

HOUSTON (AP) — Interest in machine guns has increased since the U.S. House of Representatives passed and sent to the Senate a bill that would ban the automatic weapons, but some gun dealers say they doubt it will mean more sales.

"There is more interest. I have had more phone calls, but sales of machine guns do not boom because of the complications involved in selling them," said Houston gun dealer Wallace Gorman.

The high cost, lengthy application process and extensive paperwork is enough to put off most of the curious callers interested in buying machine guns, said Houston gun dealer Wallace Gorman.

The proposal now before the Senate calls for the ban of future sales of machine guns, but would allow people already owning registered machine guns to keep their weapons.

"Prices are going up 200 to 400 percent because of this," said Arthur May, a gun dealer.

Newest data from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in Washington indicates 8,316 machine guns were registered in Texas in 1981. A 1981 report showed Texas leading the nation in machine gun dealers with 210.

Federal law requires the signature of the local U.S. attorney, district attorney, sheriff, police chief, U.S. marshal or director of the Texas Department of Public Safety on an application for a machine gun.

Farm Aid II may be in Texas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Although some details remain to be worked out, officials say singer Willie Nelson's Farm Aid II benefit concert probably will be at Memorial Stadium on the University of Texas campus.

The concert, a benefit for family farmers in economic trouble, will be July 4 in combination with Nelson's annual Fourth of July Picnic.

A spokesman for the Texas Department of Agriculture, which will sponsor the event, said Thursday that a proposal submitted to UT System regents by Nelson and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower was approved last week.

Andy Welch, Agriculture Department information officer, said no contract has been signed with UT because such details as security, ticket sales, concessions and insurance have not been resolved.

Shannon Ratliff, a UT regent, confirmed that regents gave tentative approval to allow Nelson to use Memorial Stadium.

Welch said Nelson and Hightower plan to announce the agreement with UT and to provide further details about the concert in about two weeks. Both were out of town Thursday and could not be reached for comment.

Soviet leader proposes cuts

BERLIN (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev today proposed reductions in conventional military forces and tactical nuclear weapons across the entire European continent from the Atlantic to the Urals.

Speaking to the East German Communist Party Congress in East Berlin, Gorbachev said he was taking a new initiative for an East-West agreement on meaningful cuts in the ground and tactical air forces of European countries, as well as in U.S. and Canadian forces deployed in the continent.

The Kremlin leader, however, provided few details of his proposal. A brief report from the official Soviet news agency Tass, filed from East Berlin, did not elaborate.

In his address to the East German Communists, which was simultaneously translated from Russian, Gorbachev said troop units would be disbanded and their arms either destroyed or stockpiled in their home countries.

In the past, the United States has rejected such a proposal, which would require it to liquidate its arms in Europe, or ship them back across the Atlantic.

Gorbachev said his proposal would affect both conventional and tactical, or battlefield, nuclear weapons, and would apply to Soviet forces as far east as the Ural Mountains, the dividing line between Soviet Europe and Asia.

Without elaborating, the Soviet Communist Party general secretary said the agreement could be verified through "technical means" as well as through inspections.

GOP candidates meet in final TV debate

DALLAS (AP) — Kent Hance says he has the courage to stand up to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice and challenge the judge's controversial rulings against the Texas prison system.

The former congressman, speaking at the second and final televised debate among the three GOP candidates Thursday night, said "we can't let Judge Justice cram things down our throats."

He promised to go back to court to challenge some of Justice's orders that have forced the Texas Department of Corrections to lower its inmate-population ceiling and embark on an early release program.

But U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler of Hunt, who like Hance claimed to win Thursday's debate telecast by KERA-TV, said Hance's suggestion of using inmates to help build the new prisons Texas needs would lead to "costly mistakes."

Former Gov. Bill Clements, who said he was in no position to say who was the debate's victor, renewed his call for a special legislative session to deal with prison reform and the budget crunch.

All three candidates running in the May 3 primary criticized Gov. Mark White's handling of the state budget and education reform, and Hance maintained that White "didn't plan for a rainy day."

Clements noted that White promised no tax increases during his term but later supported the largest tax hike in Texas history.

"The issue is credibility and integrity," said Clements, a 69-year-old Dallas businessman who lost to White in the last governor's race.

Each candidate said he would target spending cuts and not resort to raising taxes.

"I am the only candidate to have a proven record of spending restraint," declared Loeffler, 39, who said he would set up a commission to review state spending and suggest cuts.

Clements took issue with Loeffler's claim, however, saying he had never voted for a tax increase in his life and that during his administration, he tried to abolish property taxes.

Hance, meanwhile, said it's too early to say exactly where budget cuts should come because of the volatile oil-revenue situation, "but I plan substantial cuts in the governor's office."

Hance, who switched parties in 1985, and Loeffler both promised to "sell Texas" to other states in a bid to diversify the state's economy and draw more job-producing industries here.

Reform in the Texas insurance industry were endorsed by all three, with Clements noting that, "I think there's enough fault here to go around" for skyrocketing liability insurance rates.

Hance, 43, said consumers should not have to pick up the cost of insurance companies' bad investments but like Loeffler, promised to look at the whole issue.

Texan saw missiles flying

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A Coast Guardsman said he watched in amazement as missiles fired from a Libyan gunboat sailed over the Mediterranean island of Lampedusa, plunged into the sea, and exploded.

"If we had been hit, we would've been totally wiped out," said Scott Giarratano of Beaumont, a member of the U.S. Coast Guard's signal crew on the one-mile-wide island, which came under attack Tuesday after U.S. planes bombed strategic Libyan locations.

In a telephone interview Thursday with the Beaumont Enterprise, Giarratano said U.S. personnel quickly left the island by helicopter under cover of darkness and flew to Italy.

A U.S. Coast Guard official at the Department of Transportation in Washington Thursday confirmed the evacuation of the crew, the newspaper said.

Giarratano, 18, a 1985 graduate of Beaumont Kelly High School, joined the Coast Guard last July.

In the telephone interview from Italy, Giarratano said he and other crew members were preparing for dinner at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday when the station commander ordered the crew to leave the building and take cover among the rocks on the tiny island, 175 miles from the Libyan capital of Tripoli.

"Four people were walking perimeter (guard) and they came charging into the building. We scrambled for the rocks outside and we could see two missiles going right over the station," Giarratano said.

"We're 455 feet above sea level, and they fired from that (high) side of the island. We could see the water splash on the opposite side. There was no warning," he said.

The Libyans, retaliating against the United States for the air attack against terrorist installations in Tripoli and Benghazi, fired Soviet-made Scud missiles, Italian and U.S. officials reported Thursday.

Giarratano called his hometown newspaper on Thursday after Capt. James Walker, commander of U.S. Coast Guard units in Europe, relayed a message to him from the newspaper, the Enterprise said.

Revolutionary Cells, which took responsibility for the slaying of three other kidnap victims.

Police rushed to the eight-story apartment building, searched it thoroughly, and found nothing, police and witnesses said. Authorities later said the telephone call was an apparent hoax.

The Arab Revolutionary Cells are believed to be linked to Palestinian terrorist Abu Nidal. On Wednesday, Abu Nidal's Fatah Revolutionary Council faction threatened to avenge the U.S. raids with "heavy blows."

The statement found near the corpses Thursday claimed the victims were an agent of the CIA and two British intelligence officers. It did not identify them.

Collett, based in New York and on a writing assignment for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian refugees, was seized in southern Lebanon on March 25, 1985. Padfield, director of an international language center, and Douglas, a political science professor at the American University in Beirut, were abducted March 28 of this year in Moslem west Beirut.

Keenan, who also worked at the American University, was kidnapped on April 11.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

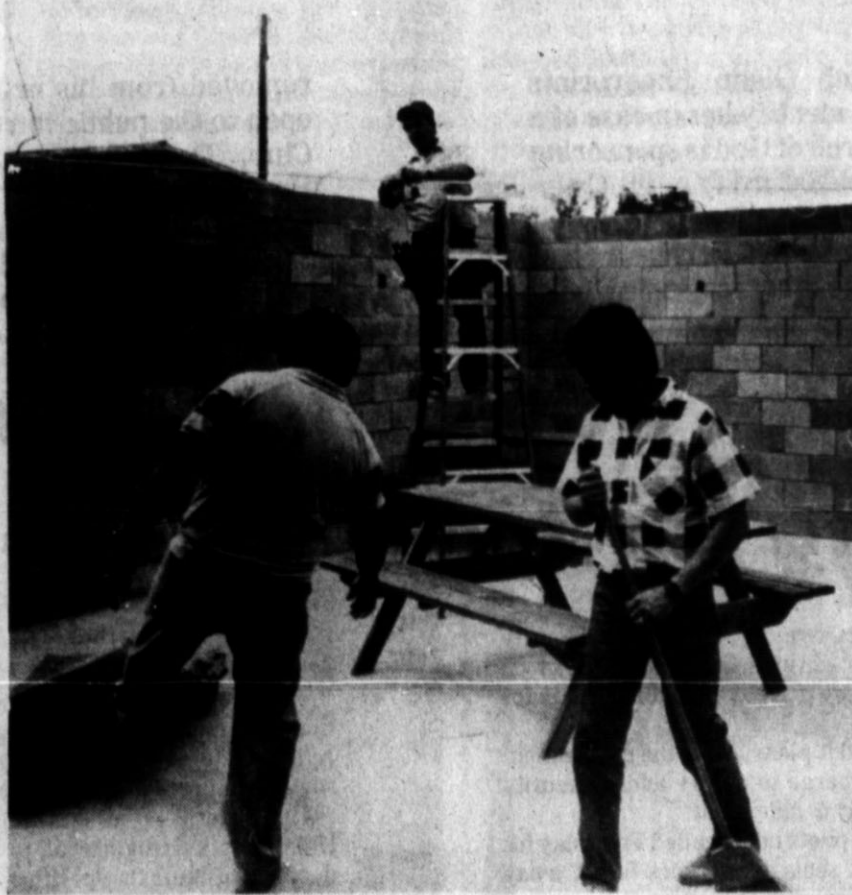

I went through the Tuesday issue of the Brand, looking at pictures of Mexican Americans. It's a good study, in a nutshell, of problems and progress in Hereford.

The front page hits us with the tragedy of a young man blown away by a shotgun, and the tragedy of a little boy being taught to "demonstrate" against law and order.

But on the next few pages are the well-cared-for little girls who won in the Little Miss Hereford pageant; the involved and achieving players and coaches in the YMCA program, the bright and beautiful young ladies in Hereford High School's National Honor Society.

My question: Did protesters help the second group to recognition and success? Will they help the others to rise out of crime and failure?

Texas women is topic of program

Willie Wimberly presented an informative program entitled "Voices of Frontier Women" when members of Pioneer Study Club met recently at the Caison House.

Eunice Petersen served as hostess and decorated tables using a Texas patriotic motif.

Wimberly reviewed the book "Texas Tears and Texas Sunshine" by Jo Ella Powell Exley, a fifth generation Texan and a descendant of pioneers of the state.

The title is familiar names of quilts the women of the Lone Star State have made through the years. She said that Texas women have created more than quilts for their families, more even than homes, they have helped piece together the state of Texas itself.

Wimberly explained that 16 of these women in the book tell their own stories. Together they have provided a gripping history of the state from its first Anglo settlement through the naming of its last frontier.

Gladys Miller presided over the business meeting. Bessie Hill, finance chairman, reminded the group that it was time to think about ordering bulbs. Also, a contribution was made to the food pantry.

Miller, Billee Johnson and Fern Sigle gave reports of the Top of Texas District Federation of Womens Clubs Convention held recently at the Sheraton in Amarillo with the Canyon Clubs as hosts. The theme of the convention was "Pioneer Women of Today." There were 153 delegates registered. In the district, there are 34 adult clubs with 500 members, 82 of which are new members.

In the club report and awards, Pioneer Club received 12 first place certificates, two second places and one third place. Among the top awards, first places were in club report, president's report and two for the yearbook.

The club adjourned by reading the club collect.

Present were Helen Bishop, Fern Ford, Mabel Heard, Bessie Hill, Bea Hutson, Billee Johnson, Etoile Manning, Gladys Miller, Mary Panciera, Eunice Petersen, Fern Sigle, Elizabeth Wilson and Willie Wimberly.

Ann Landers

Poem explains

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I first read this poem in your column it hit me hard. I saw myself in every line. And now I see my daughter-in-law making the same mistakes with her young son. I would never risk our relationship by speaking to her about this touchy subject, but I am begging you to run the poem again. It's practically in pieces because I've had it so long, but I hope you can make it out.—A MILLION REGRETS IN BEATRICE, NEB.

DEAR B.: With tape and a magnifying glass I was able to read this poem.

I agree it's worth repeating. Thanks for asking.

TO MY GROWN-UP SON
My hands were busy through the day

I didn't have much time to play
The little games you asked me to
I didn't have much time for you.

I'd wash your clothes, I'd sew and cook,
But when you'd bring your picture book

And ask me please to share your fun,
I'd say: "A little later, son."

I'd tuck you in all safe at night
And hear your prayers, turn out the light,
Then tiptoe softly to the door..

I wish I'd stayed a minute more.

BROWN SUGAR

Brown sugar won't harden if you store it in the freezer.

For life is short, the years rush past...

A little boy grows up so fast.
No longer is he at your side,
His precious secrets to confide.

The picture books are put away,
There are no longer games to play,
No good-night kiss, no prayers to hear...

That all belongs to yesteryear.

My hands, once busy, now are still.
The days are long and hard to fill.
I wish I could go back and do
The little things you asked me to.—Author Unknown

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Since you seem to be up on the latest in medicine I wonder why you haven't suggested to your readers with birthmarks that they avail themselves of laser surgery. It is especially effective for port-wine stains.

I know one of your principal motivations is to make life easier for people with problems, and this certainly could help.—BLOOMSBURG, PA.

DEAR BLOOM: According to my consultants in this field—all excellent dermatologists), laser surgery may, in some instances, reduce the intensity of color and also the size of the birthmark, but it will not remove it. But thanks for writing on behalf of those who may be interested in trying it.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers' guide to "Necking and Petting—What Are the Limits? Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

MET HAS NEW WING

NEW YORK (AP)—Mayor Edward I. Koch and Museum Director Philippe de Montebello recently unveiled the Metropolitan Museum of Art's new, 110,000-square-foot southwest wing that will house the museum's extensive collection of 20th-century art.

The wing is to be known as the Lila Acheson Wallace Wing in honor of the $11 million gift of the late Mrs. Wallace to the $26 million project and the endowment she created to ensure the wing's operation.

The new wing was designed by the architectural firm of Kevin Roche John Dinkeloo and Associates. The basic construction has been completed, and the wing will open to the public in February 1987. It has large, day-lit galleries on the top level; storerooms, study room and offices on the mezzanine, and small galleries on the first floor. A roof sculpture garden will open in spring 1987.

The museum's 20th-century collection includes about 1,180 paintings, 3,104 works on paper, 373 sculptures and a design and architecture collection comprising 3,564 objects.

FINANCIAL PLANNING

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — For many of the salaried employees at NCR Corp., the firm's own personal computers have become a novel employment perk that helps them make financial planning decisions.

A company-designed software program allows the workers to calculate what selection to make among the optional company benefits available. The program keys decisions to family needs and income projections and allows changes as individual needs and goals change. The company has set aside 256 PCs for employee use only.

OTTOMAN TURKISH ART ACQUIRED
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles County Museum of Art says it has acquired "one of the premier collections of Ottoman Turkish art with the recent gift of 128 rare works from the renowned collection of Edwin Binney III."

The gift includes paintings, calligraphies, manuscripts, bookbindings, textiles, ceramics and metalwork, along with several significant Persian works. Considered one of the most comprehensive groupings outside the imperial collections of Istanbul, the acquisition affords an opportunity to trace the development of Ottoman art from the 15th through the early 20th century, the museum says.

DR. GOTT 'Quarantine' family smokers

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — In 1970 I quit smoking when I had a case of the flu that made me nauseated at the smell of cigarette smoke. Some members of my family smoke; when I'm around them I get sick, can't eat, break out in hives and have to lie down. I love my family and want to be with them, but I cannot go through this. What advice can you give?

DEAR READER — Your problem is not unusual. Obviously, the most satisfactory and healthful solution would be for the family members to stop smoking altogether. If that is not a popular option, I suggest that the smokers reserve one or two rooms in the house where they can smoke. The garage and cellar ought to do fine. Then they will stop contaminating the whole house. At the very least, smoking should be banned in your bedroom and any other room you frequent.

My wife has insisted that I not smoke in the house, so I am confined to a little second-floor garret where I puff on my pipe as I write. It's an inconvenient arrangement, but prevents me from stinking up the house. The marital accord is worth it.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My 10-year-old stepson is extremely pigeon-toed and knock-kneed. When he was an infant, his parents were told that he would outgrow it. What can be done for him at this age?

DEAR READER — Some degree of pigeon-toeing and knock-kneeing is normal for youngsters and will be outgrown when they reach their growth spurt in adolescence. Have the doctor check your stepson to make sure that he is, in general, developing normally. If not, the doctor may suggest treatment while the boy's bones are still in the process of developing.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have been taking perphenazine and Thioridazine for 10 years, since I had a nervous breakdown. I am getting a convulsive jerk in my jaw, where it opens and closes rapidly a fraction of an inch. Could the drugs be causing this?

DEAR READER — Indeed, they could. Check with your doctor.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have little warts around the base of my fingernail, in the cuticle, and can't get rid of them. Any suggestions?

DEAR READER — Short of having them removed by a surgeon or a dermatologist, Verru — an over-the-counter cream — may help; use it as directed.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a 51-year-old man and cannot get an erection. I take zinc and hormone shots. The doctor couldn't find anything wrong. What can I do?

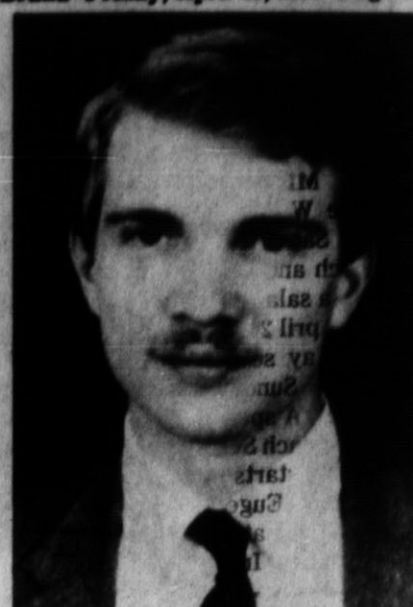

DEAR READER — The causes of this type of sexual dysfunction are legion and extend from diabetes and hormone deficiency to stress and alcohol abuse. Many men lose erectile ability because they take prescribed medicine for a variety of conditions, particularly for hypertension.

I assume from your question that you have had a medical checkup, but I wonder if the doctor prescribed hormone shots because you needed them or because they produce a transient, placebo effect. In any case, there is more investigation that must be done to identify the cause (or causes) of your problem. See a urologist for a thorough evaluation of your reproductive tract.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My daughter was born at 36 weeks' gestation. She had successful surgery that day for a twisted intestine. I have always had watery bowels since I was born, and so did she. The doctors didn't believe me and kept her for 5 months. At 6 months, she was hospitalized for thrush mouth; she weighed 5 pounds, 12 ounces. The next day we went to see her. Because of her IV, her weight had increased to 8 pounds overnight. She is now a brain-damaged 8-year-old child with cerebral palsy. There was no sign of this at birth. Could the IV have caused this damage?

DEAR READER — Although the cause of cerebral palsy is poorly understood, the condition can be seen in children who are born prematurely, suffer severe neonatal illnesses, or become water-intoxicated. According to my pediatric consultant, aggressive intravenous-fluid replacement could have contributed to your child's neurological condition. I do not specialize in diseases of infants, so I suggest you ask a pediatrician to clarify the situation for you.

When Adrian Dantley is out of lineup

Mavericks are wary of Utah Jazz

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks are wary of the Utah Jazz without their ailing star Adrian Dantley, and well they should be. The Jazz posted a 4-2 record without him this season, including three victories on the road. The Mavericks defeated the Jazz five out of six games during the regular season. The lone exception was a 139-112 crushing in Salt Lake City in January. Utah and Dallas meet in Reunion Arena tonight to open the best-of-five series. The second game is set at the same site on Sunday night. Dantley could miss both games although the Jazz hope he can play Sunday. Dantley, the NBA's third leading scorer, missed the final game with back spasms and hasn't practiced since. "I shouldn't have tried to play at all last week and the best cure is rest," Dantley said. Dantley will fly to Dallas for the second game if his condition improves. He's using swimming exercises to try to clear up the problem.

The Mavs said Dantley's absence could make Utah tougher. Dallas coach Dick Motta said "I don't for one minute think Utah will fold up just because Dantley isn't in there. We've had problems with teams who were missing their key players. I don't like it." Dallas center James Donaldson said "We have a tough time with teams missing their stars." Motta said he expects the series to be tight one although the rowdy Reunion Arena crowd will be a big boost.

Cowboys' Fellows to undergo knee surgery

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys starting cornerback Ron Fellows will resume off-season conditioning work in four to six weeks after undergoing knee surgery, a team spokesman said. Fellows, who will be resting two weeks, had cartilage shaved off the back of his left knee cap Thursday, said spokesman David Pelletier.

"It seems the fourth and fifth place teams always play interesting series," said Motta. "We've had games decided on last-second shots and overtimes the last two years. I'd imagine it will be that way again." Dallas, the second-highest scoring team in the NBA, will have a new look in the playoffs this year because of the addition of the 7-foot-2 Donaldson. Donaldson, acquired two weeks deep into the season from the Los Angeles Clippers, has averaged 10 rebounds per game and blocked over 100 shots during the regular season. "We're a better team because of James," said Motta. "Teams don't get second and third shots against us and we rebound better."

McCracken pitches one-hitter

Herd JV beats Plainview

Rodney McCracken pitched a one-hitter Thursday to help lead the Hereford High School junior varsity baseball team to a 14-1 victory at Plainview. McCracken had a no-hitter going into the fifth inning before Plainview recorded its only hit of the game. The win gives the Hereford junior varsity team a 6-4 season record. Hereford plays at home Saturday at 10 a.m. against Canyon. The last two games of the season for Hereford will be on the road—at Palo Duro at 4:15 p.m. Monday, and at Amarillo High at 4:15 p.m. Tuesday.

In pitching his one-hitter, McCracken struck out 10 batters and walked five. The Plainview run was scored in the first inning when Hereford committed an error while attempting to throw out a Plainview baserunner at third who stole third base. Plainview's pitchers walked 10 Hereford batters in the game, and the Plainview defense committed 10 errors.

Hereford had six hits in the game, including a triple and single by Michael Phibbs. Phibbs batted in three runs.

The HHS defense committed three errors.

"Considering the conditions, we played a real good ball game. The players did what they had to," Coach T.R. Sartor said, noting that the wind was blowing about 50 miles an hour straight into home plate.

New York, New Jersey in dispute

Where did baseball start?

By TOM CANAVAN
Associated Press Writer
HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — New York and New Jersey have battled over the Statue of Liberty, a major New York City highway project, the moving of businesses, defections by sports teams, and now, the birthplace of baseball.

On Thursday, Hoboken Mayor Thomas Vezzetti asked New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and two New York lawmakers to withdraw legislation that seeks to have New York license plates in 1989 bear the slogan "Birthplace of Baseball."

The measure was introduced earlier this month by Sen. Thomas Bartosiewicz of Brooklyn and Assemblyman Alexander Grannis of Manhattan.

Vezzetti disputes the long-accepted belief that baseball was first played in Cooperstown, N.Y., contending the game was played June 19, 1846, in Hoboken.

Vezzetti said historical evidence backs up his claim.

A plaque rests in a field near a Maxwell House coffee plant, marking the site of the game at Elysian Fields, where the Knickerbocker Baseball Club lost to the New York Club 23-1 in a four-inning game.

"Apparently you have been misinformed," Vezzetti wrote to Cuomo. "The city of Hoboken, N.J., was the site of the first baseball game..."

The mayor concluded his letter, mailed Thursday, with the request that the license plate idea be scrapped because of historical inaccuracy.

Bruce Nash and Allan Zullo, authors of "The Baseball Hall of Shame 2," agree that Hoboken was the site of the first game.

The authors, who were at a news conference called by Vezzetti, also contend the game was invented by Alexander Cartwright Jr., a charter member of the Knickerbocker club, not Abner Doubleday.

The mayor also called for a letter-writing campaign to Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth so Hoboken could gain some recognition.

Grannis says he has no intention of withdrawing the legislation while Bartosiewicz called Vezzetti's claim "baloney" and offered to settle the matter on the field of honor.

"I hereby challenge the mayor of Hoboken to a stickball game in Brooklyn," Bartosiewicz said. "He can pick any street he wants. Then after we beat the pants off Hoboken, I'll gladly take him to Nathan's in Coney Island and buy him some hot dogs, my treat."

Grannis said baseball was played in New Jersey at an early date.

"My understanding is that baseball was first played in Cooperstown in 1839," he said in a telephone interview from his Albany, N.Y., office. "It's our understanding that a very important game was played in Hoboken in 1846, but that was after the Cooperstown game."

"We'll field our team of historians against theirs and see who wins."

Disputes between the two states have been common in recent years.

New York City has been upset by the defections of the Giants and Jets football teams to the Garden State, businesses moving to New Jersey to benefit from tax breaks and the failure of influential New Jersey congressmen to help secure passage of the Westway superhighway project on Manhattan's west side.

More recently, New Jersey lawmakers tried to claim the Statue of Liberty was part of the state, but a state judge said he had no jurisdiction to settle a state boundary dispute.

POLLY'S POINTERS Peanut truffles are sweet treat

DEAR POLLY — Do you have a recipe for making those wonderful chocolate-covered peanut butter cups? They're my favorite! — ALLISON

DEAR ALLISON — Not an exact duplicate, but deliciously reminiscent of the popular peanut butter and chocolate candy are these luscious Peanut Truffles.

Process eight ounces unsalted cocktail peanuts in a food processor or blender until they form a smooth peanut butter. Add one-third cup heavy cream, three tablespoons powdered sugar, three-eighths teaspoon salt and four tablespoons butter. Continue processing until mixture is smooth and well blended. Stop machine, scrape down the sides and continue to process one additional minute. Refrigerate the mixture 12 hours or until mixture is firm.

Roll chilled mixture into one-inch balls, or scoop out balls with a melon baller. Place balls on a platter or baking sheet covered with waxed paper and chill 30 minutes. Dip peanut butter balls in 12 ounces melted and tempered milk chocolate. Store in the refrigerator in a covered container. This recipe makes about 1½ pounds candy.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Handmade Chocolates," which has this and other recipes for homemade candy, including chocolate truffles (three different flavors!), chocolate-covered marshmallows and chocolate-covered caramels (with homemade marshmallows and caramels!). Others who would like this issue should send $1.00 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Add a little vanilla to your homemade peach jam, or even to commercial peach jam! It will taste sensational! — MRS. B.L.

DEAR POLLY — The next time you make an apple, custard- or spice-flavored pie (such as pumpkin), add a pinch of cinnamon to the crust dough. This added extra makes the pie something special. — MARLENE

Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.
