Sheriff's deputy killed

Sgt. Mike Naylor fatally shot while serving warrant

By Rachael Gleason & Joseph Basco

A Midland County Sheriff's deputy suffered a fatal gunshot wound Thursday while serving a warrant at a suspected child predator's home in northwest Midland.

Sheriff's deputies — including slain Sgt. Mike Naylor — arrived in the 3800 block of North County Road 1247 just before 2 p.m. to serve a warrant to alleged sex offender Dan William Higgins, 37, who is accused of shooting Naylor in the head while being served.

Higgins

Higgins, who had not been charged as of press time Thursday, then barricaded himself in his home for more than three hours.

Naylor, in critical condition, was airlifted to Midland Memorial Hospital, Deputy Sheriff Ed Krevit said.

MMH put the hospital's emergency department on lock down after taking in Naylor, a standard procedure for gunshot victims, according to MMH spokeswoman Marcy Madrid.

Another deputy on scene was also taken into MMH for stress-related breathing difficulties, Krevit said.

At the hospital, Naylor was pronounced dead at 4:19 p.m. by a justice of the peace.

Officials from the Midland County Sheriff's Office, Midland Police Department, Ector County Sheriff's Office, Odessa Police Department, Department of Public Safety, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Drug Enforcement Agency, U.S. Marshals Service and U.S. Department of Homeland Security responded to the scene at about 2 p.m. MPD took the lead during the standoff with Higgins, said Sara Bustilloz, city of Midland spokeswoman.

Bustilloz said it is "very rare" occurrence when different agencies in the area collaborate and share resources on an incident.

By 2:30 p.m., authorities had blocked off State Highway 158 at County Road 60. Roads including Cactus Trail, Tumbleweed Trail, North County Road 1247, North County Road 1248 and North County Road 1250 also had a heavy police presence.

Midland ISD initially reported the possibility of bus delays because the school district's bus depot is located on County Road 60 — near where the standoff occurred — according to Elizabeth York, spokeswoman for MISD.

Also circling the area was a DPS helicopter, which touched ground at least once, and a police BearCat. The armored personnel carrier helped authorities move safely around the area, Bustilloz said.

By 4:30 p.m., officials made contact — or saw — Higgins for the first time, in his home, Bustilloz said. Higgins then exited his home at about 5:20 p.m. and surrendered without incident after a more than three-hour standoff.

Texas Rangers are investigating Naylor's death, while MPD is investigating the standoff portion of the incident.

Reporter-Telegram records show Higgins was previously arrested on a possession of a controlled substance charge in August 2013.

Deaths of Midland law enforcement officials

Lt. Gordon Smith Jr., MPD, Nov. 28, 1961

Lt. Gordon Smith was shot and killed while chasing a suspect in a sexual assault and murder. The suspect jumped a fence and waited on the other side. As the officers used a barrel to climb over the fence the suspect shot Lieutenant Smith in the chest with a .357 caliber revolver he had taken from a deputy sheriff.

Although wounded, Smith was able to return fire with his Thompson submachine gun and killed the suspect.

Smith had been with the agency for 15 years and had previously served with the Sherman Police Department for seven years, as well as serving with the United States Marine Corps during World War II (twice wounded in the Pacific). He was survived by his wife, five children and father.

Officer Bryan Scoggins, MPD, April 14, 1961

Officer Bryan Scoggins was killed in a motorcycle accident at Main and Hamby streets while escorting a funeral procession.

He was thrown from his bike and struck a curb. Although he was wearing a helmet, he suffered a skull fracture and died from his injuries 10 days later.

Officer Scoggins had been employed with the Midland Police Department for four years and was survived by his wife, son and daughter.

Police Officer John Perry Wyrick, MPD, Nov. 10, 1935

Officer Wyrick was shot and killed when he and his partner responded to a disturbance call involving two men who were fighting. When they arrived at the scene, one of the men opened fire, striking Wyrick in the chest.

Despite being mortally wounded, Wyrick was able to return fire and killed the suspect.

Wyrick had served with the Midland Police Department for five years. He was survived by his wife, daughter, stepson and four stepdaughters.

Davis supporters denounce Abbott's role in TEF criticism

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

Opinion
Read our take on a recent press release sent out by Davis' campaign attacking Clayton Williams — with a 20-year-old quote. Page 6A

Local supporters of Democratic gubernatorial candidate Wendy Davis called out Republican gubernatorial candidate Greg Abbott on Thursday, blaming him for the critical findings state auditors discovered when examining the Texas Enterprise Fund, a statewide economic development fund handled by the governor's office.

Midland County Democratic Party Chairman David Rosen, Odessa Una Voz Unida President Art Leal and other Davis supporters spoke at a press conference, stating their case as to why they believe Abbott is an "insider." A Davis campaign sign was on the podium.

"The Texas Enterprise Fund was created to create jobs for Texans and bring out opportunity to Texas," Rosen said. "But with Greg Abbott overseeing it, it's been used instead as an ATM. That's the old 'insider' network at work."

The Davis supporters spoke about how Abbott lacked oversight on the enterprise fund, failed to notice missing paperwork for fund applicants and failed to fully recover the incentive dollars that companies were given if their agreements with the state were terminated.

Rosen used Bank of America as an example. Using a sortable table on the Texas Tribune website, he said that Bank of America was given $20 million to create 5,500 jobs but only created 3,876 by the time the contract was terminated. Rosen said that Bank of America owed the state $11.8 million, but gave back $8.5 million.

"So where did the missing $3.3 million go?" Rosen said. "Not to us. Attorney General Abbott's office failed to recover a single penny of that $3.3 million."

Rosen also pointed out that Bank of America donated $115,000 to the Abbott campaign.

Leal, also attacking Abbott as an "insider," said the Republican candidate committed a cover-up for fund recipients that did not submit formal applications. Texas Tribune reported that the State Auditor's Office found $223.3 million of the $505.8 million that was dispersed from the fund between September 2003 and September 2013. The funds were distributed to 11 companies that did not submit formal applications or did not promise a set number of jobs, according to the Tribune.

"Covering up a paper trail isn't transparent," Leal said. "And failing to give Texas a straight answer about nonexistent applications isn't more openness."

After the press conference, Texans for Greg Abbott spokeswoman Amelia Chasse had a statement on Davis and the enterprise fund.

"Sen. Davis is the only candidate who has personally profited off Texas Enterprise Fund money when she used her Fort Worth City Council position to push taxpayer incentives to Cabela's, a TEF grant recipient and client of title company," Chasse said. "This is yet another instance of Sen. Davis using taxpayer dollars to benefit her clients without disclosing her conflicts of interest and the profits she pocketed."

29 members of fraternity removed

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — The headquarters of a Texas Tech University fraternity has removed 29 men from membership following an off-campus party last month that included a vulgar banner and display.

Phi Delta Theta International Fraternity said this week after investigating the Sept. 19 event that the members who violated policy or were in leadership positions were removed. Also, the chapter's charter was placed in escrow until all sanctions are met, including performing 10,000 hours of service to rape crisis and sexual assault prevention organizations.

Pictures from the party showed a banner reading, "No means yes, yes means anal (sex)." Another image showed a sprinkler attached to a large cutout shaped like a woman's spread legs.

2 children injured in street racing incident

From staff reports

One child remained hospitalized in Lubbock on Thursday after being injured Wednesday evening in a street racing incident, according to a press release from the city. A second child was released from Midland Memorial Hospital on Thursday afternoon.

Aaron Lyles, 22, of Midland was arrested Wednesday on two charges — racing on highway, causing serious bodily injury and racing on highway, causing bodily injury.

Lyles and Richard Baeza Moya, 19, allegedly were racing westbound near the 4100 block of West Wall Street at about 7:23 p.m. Wednesday, according to the release. Lyles was racing in a gray Chevrolet Silverado, and Moya was driving a dark purple and black 2000 Ford F-150.

Lyles drove into the eastbound lanes where a gray Dodge pickup was stopped at the Bankhead Highway and Wall Street intersection. The Dodge driver did not see Lyles in the eastbound lanes and continued onto Wall Street.

Lyles spun out of control and hit the Dodge in which two children — 7 and 11 — were sitting in the backseat, according to the release.

Both children were taken to Midland Memorial Hospital in a private vehicle. The 7-year-old was airlifted to Lubbock with major head trauma and was in stable condition Thursday afternoon. The 11-year-old had minor head trauma and was released from the hospital Thursday afternoon, according to the release.

Moya was not at the scene when officers arrived Wednesday evening, but police located him and his vehicle Thursday. Charges are pending for Moya.

Alcohol is a factor in the incident, according to the release.

Rucker reappointed to judicial post by Perry

From staff reports

Gov. Rick Perry has appointed Midlander Dean Rucker to a fifth term as presiding judge of the 7th Administrative Judicial Region, according to the governor's office website. Rucker, presiding judge of the 318th Judicial District Court in Midland County, was first appointed in 1998 by then-Gov. George W. Bush, he said Thursday afternoon.

Rucker's professional memberships include of the College of the State Bar of Texas, National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges, Texas Academy of Family Law Specialists and Texas Board of Legal Specialization Family Law Section. He is president of the Midland Children's Rehabilitation Center and past president of the Midland Teen Court Board of Directors and Community and Senior Services of the Permian Basin Inc.

Rucker, an elder at First Christian Church, received a bachelor's degree from Trinity University and a law degree from St. Mary's University School of Law.

Court refuses to reconsider Texas abortion ruling

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A federal appeals court dealt Texas abortion providers another blow Thursday when it refused to reconsider its previous ruling that upheld one part of tough restrictions that altogether have closed most abortion facilities in the nation's second most-populous state.

Providers have been challenging Republican-backed efforts passed in 2013 to roll back access to abortion in Texas. They had asked the full 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to review a three-judge panel's March ruling that upheld requiring abortion doctors to have admitting privileges at nearby hospitals and restrictions on medically induced abortions.

The traditionally conservative court refused that request Thursday, allowing the previous decision to stand and drawing a sharp rebuke from abortion providers.

Federal judge blocks Texas voter ID law

By Will Weissert
Associated Press

AUSTIN — A federal judge on Thursday blocked Texas from enforcing voter ID requirements just weeks ahead of the November elections, knocking down a law that the U.S. Justice Department condemned in court as the state's latest means of suppressing minority turnout.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Nelva Gonzales Ramos of Corpus Christi is a defeat for Republican-backed photo ID measures that have swept across the U.S. in recent years and mostly been upheld in court. However, the U.S. Supreme Court on Thursday night blocked Wisconsin from implementing a law requiring voters to present photo IDs.

Gonzales Ramos, an appointee of President Barack Obama, never signaled during a two-week trial in September that she intended to rule on the Texas law — rebuked as the toughest of its kind in the U.S. — before Election Day. But the timing could spare an estimated 13.6 million registered Texas voters from needing one of seven kinds of photos identification to cast a ballot.

The Justice Department says more than 600,000 of those voters, mostly blacks and Hispanics, currently lack any eligible ID to vote.

Gonzales Ramos' ruling says the law "creates an unconstitutional burden on the right to vote, has an impermissible discriminatory effect against Hispanics and African-Americans, and was imposed with an unconstitutional discriminatory purpose." It added that the measure: "constitutes an unconstitutional poll tax."

Republican Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott's office said it would appeal.

"The State of Texas will immediately appeal and will urge the Fifth Circuit to resolve this matter quickly to avoid voter confusion in the upcoming election," said Lauren Bean, a spokeswoman for Abbott's office.

Early voting is scheduled to begin Oct. 20.

Sherrilyn Ifill, president and director-counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, said, "The Court today effectively ruled that racial discrimination simply cannot spread to the ballot box."

Nineteen states have laws requiring voters to show identification at the polls. Courts across the country have knocked down challenges — including at the U.S. Supreme Court — but the Texas case attracted unusual attention from U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder.

He brought the weight of his office into Texas after the Supreme Court last year struck down the heart of the Voting Rights Act, which had prohibited the state from enacting its voter ID law signed by Republican Gov. Rick Perry in 2011. Democrats and minority rights groups joined the Justice Department in the lawsuit.

The full Voting Rights Act had blocked Texas and eight other states with histories of discrimination from changing election laws without permission from the DOJ or a federal court. Holder vowed to wring whatever protections he could from the new and weakened version, and made Texas a first target.

But prevailing in court required proving intentional discrimination, and Texas maintained that opponents produced no evidence.

The office of Abbott, who is favored to win the race to replace Perry as governor, said minorities and whites alike supported the law in public opinion polls. It also pointed to other states, such as Georgia and Indiana, where the similar measures have been upheld.

But opponents slammed Texas' law as far more discriminatory. College students IDs aren't accepted by poll workers, but concealed handgun licenses are. Free voting IDs offered by the state require a birth certificate that costs little as $3, but the Justice Department argued that traveling to get those documents imposes an outsize burden on poor minorities.

As a result, opponents say, Texas has issued fewer than 300 free voter IDs since the law took effect. Georgia, meanwhile, has issued 2,200 voter IDs under a similar program with more robust outreach.

Texas has already conducted two smaller statewide elections under voter ID, in which no widespread issues were reported.

Railroad Commission candidate suggests water conservation

By Michael Brick
Houston Chronicle

Oil and gas companies should work together to conserve water in Texas, the Republican candidate for the state Railroad Commission said in a position paper on Wednesday. But he stopped short of suggesting any state action to compel them.

"In key areas, where water shortage is experienced and oil and gas operators have a relatively strong presence, there should be some consideration of the construction of pooled recycle/reuse facilities to handle produced water, (frac) water and brackish water, so that the industry can benefit from economies of scale and work together to conserve resources," wrote the candidate, Ryan Sitton. "With new technology in recycling/reuse such as constructed wetlands, this could be a competitive option within the regulatory framework for producers to dispose of water instead of utilizing only disposal wells. The industry could work collaboratively with municipalities to treat and reuse water."

Sitton, chief executive of the energy consulting firm PinnacleAIS, is emphasizing his credentials as an industry insider in his campaign for a position on the three-member commission, which oversees the oil and gas business in the state. In the Republican primary, he defeated a former state lawmaker aligned with the Tea Party. State records show Sitton's campaign has raised about $446,000. His Democratic opponent, Steve Brown, has raised about $18,000.

Researchers at the University of Texas have estimated hydraulic fracturing uses 25 billion gallons of water a year in a drought-stricken state. That accounts for a small fraction of water usage statewide, but a major drain on counties where drilling is heavy.

STATEBRIEFS

FROM WIRE REPORTS

HOUSTON

Prosecutors: Adrian Peterson smoked marijuana

Minnesota Vikings star Adrian Peterson should be arrested anew after admitting during his court appearance on a child abuse charge that he had "smoked a little weed" while out on bond, Texas prosecutors said Thursday.

In a court motion, the Montgomery County District Attorney's Office said Peterson allegedly told a worker conducting his urinalysis exam during a Wednesday court appearance that he had smoked marijuana. Bond terms typically include not taking any illegal drugs.

"In light of this statement, and the fact that it was made during the urinalysis testing process, and the term 'weed' is a common slang term for marijuana, the state argues that the defendant has smoked marijuana while on bond," the district attorney's office wrote.

Peterson is currently free on a $15,000 bond after he was indicted last month on a felony charge of injury to a child for using a wooden switch to discipline his 4-year-old son earlier this year in suburban Houston. Peterson has said he never intended to harm his son and was only disciplining him in the same way he had been as a child growing up in East Texas. He faces up to two years in prison and a $10,000 fine if convicted.

EL PASO

8 infants test positive for TB at hospital

Health screenings reveal that eight infants have tested positive for tuberculosis following the discovery that a nurse's assistant infected with TB worked at an El Paso hospital's nursery.

El Paso Public Health Director Robert Resendes said Thursday that of the eight, five babies had been vaccinated previously against TB and their results may be false positives. Preventive medical treatments have been offered for all eight.

None of the babies have active TB, the deadly and contagious form of the disease.

Health authorities also raised to 860 the number of infants possibly exposed at Providence Memorial Hospital.

DALLAS

State: Ebola test negative for North Texas deputy

State health officials say the Dallas County sheriff's deputy who exhibited symptoms of Ebola has tested negative for the disease.

Michael Monnig was released from a Texas hospital Thursday, one day after he went to a health clinic complaining of illness. Monnig was among a group of deputies who days earlier went inside the Dallas apartment where an Ebola patient from Liberia, Thomas Eric Duncan, was staying.

Monnig did not have contact with Duncan but did see some of Duncan's family members who are now in isolation. Duncan died Wednesday.

LUBBOCK

Police charge man in 2008 homicide

Lubbock police have charged a 43-year-old man with murder in the death of woman whose body was found in 2008.

Police said Thursday that investigators used DNA evidence to link Billy Jack Limbaugh Jr. to the slaying of Monica Adams. A police statement said the evidence also implicates Limbaugh in two sexual assaults.

Adams' body was found Aug. 20, 2008, in a field in eastern Lubbock.

Limbaugh was arrested and charged earlier this week with aggravated kidnapping and sexual assault in a May 11 attack. On Thursday, police served warrants on Limbaugh while he was jailed for the death of Adams and for aggravated sexual assault in a 2008 case.

How sick are you?

Midland Memorial Hospital has partnered with Medical Center Hospital in Odessa for the telephone nurse triage program "68-NURSE" to bring the service to the entire Permian Basin.

The program is designed to help people determine whether their health situation warrants a trip to the emergency room. Midland residents can call the line by dialing 686-8773.

The program is free and available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Local nurses are available to help you determine the best place to receive care for your situation. 68-NURSE can help you save time and money by directing you to the most appropriate healthcare option, whether it's a neighborhood clinic, urgent care center, emergency room or just at home.

SHOOTING

From 1A

14, 1961; and Officer John Wyrick, who died on Nov. 10, 1935, according to city records.

A triple-officer shooting shocked the Odessa community in 2007 when Larry Neil White, drunk and abusing his wife, shot and killed OPD Cpl. Abel Marquez, Cpl. Arlie Jones Jr., and Cpl. John Scott Gardner with a shotgun after they responded to a domestic disturbance call at White's home, according to the Dec. 30, 2007, Odessa American.

Naylor was the first Midland County Sheriff's deputy to die from on-duty violence in the 30-plus years Sheriff Gary Painter has been the head of the office, Painter said. There have been no other on-duty related Sheriff's deputy deaths on record.

Naylor joined the Midland County Sheriff's Office in April 2004 and worked his way up from a jailer to a sergeant, Painter said. Naylor went to law enforcement academy and became a certified peace officer.

Naylor also volunteered to start a mental health unit within the office and train others to be a part of it. Painter said Naylor has trained others for various other positions, as well, but focused a lot on mental health issues and people with mental crises all throughout Midland.

Naylor also received an award in 2009 for his work in the Civil Warrants Division. Painter noted he was outstanding in that division.

"He was one of those guys that you don't have to worry about," Painter said in an emotional, somber tone. "I've never had to worry about him doing anything wrong. He was just so kind to people and worked with people. It's just a horrible, horrible day."

Deaths in Texas, US this year

According to the Officer Down Memorial Page, a database for law enforcement officials killed in the line of duty, seven law enforcement officers in Texas had been killed this year before Thursday.

Eighty-one law enforcement officials have been killed across the United States.

The following is a list of law enforcement officers killed in the line of duty in Texas this year:

■ Jessica Laura Hollis, senior deputy, Travis County Sheriff's Office, Sept. 18
■ Cleve Johnson, constable, Titus County Constable's Office, Aug. 28
■ Michael Pimentel, chief of Police, Elmendorf Police Department, Aug. 23
■ Lee Dixon, chief of Police, Little River-Academy Police Department, June 19
■ Paul Buckles, sergeant, Potter County Sheriff's Office, May 30
■ Charles Dinwiddie, detective, Killeen Police Department, May 11
■ Marc Uland Kelley, police officer, Trinity University Police Department, March 14

US troops change training for West Africa

Associated Press

FORT HOOD — Forgoing combat rifles and body armor, U.S. troops preparing to fight Ebola in Liberia were instead stepping gingerly Thursday into white germ-proof suits and pulling on thick, blue rubber gloves and gas masks.

About 500 soldiers were doing three days of infectious disease training inside a concrete-floored building on Texas' sprawling Fort Hood — getting ready to join as many as 3,900 troops nationwide authorized to go to areas affected by the virus.

Army medical personnel will treat patients who have Ebola while engineers plan to build temporary medical centers.

"It feels a bit like the ... tire man, or a marshmallow," trainer John McGuffin joked as a group of Army soldiers tottered about in suits resembling billowy hospital gowns.

Dispatched from the U.S. Army Medical Research Institute of Infectious Diseases in Maryland, McGuffin offered tips on spotting Ebola symptoms, then had troops work in pairs to correctly don protective gear.

"We're going to check each other," McGuffin said. "If we have a tear in the suit, we're going to first remain calm. We're going to remove ourselves from a potentially infectious area, and then we're going to hit everything with disinfectant."

The soldiers learned they should step forward, not backward, when removing suits, and clean masks and rubber gloves with alcohol wipes. Duct tape, they were told, works well to seal sleeves to gloves.

Outbreak fears weren't overt, but there was some nervousness. While Ebola-related training is similar to chemical warfare instruction many troops have had previously, it's a far cry from battlefield or counterterrorism missions.

"I think there's some apprehension here, of course," said Col. Heath Roscoe, commander of the 36th Engineer Brigade, one of three Liberia-bound units from Fort Hood.

To assuage fears, he held a meeting Monday with troops and their families where surgeons fielded questions not only about safety in Liberia but potential risks to relatives once their loved ones come home.

"We've seen some other folks, American doctors who got it, were flown back, and I'm pretty confident that our leaders will make sure that happens with our soldiers" if they are stricken with Ebola, Roscoe said.

Associated Press

Soldiers from the 36th Engineer Brigade try on protective clothing for sizing during a training session at Fort Hood on Thursday. The brigade is set to deploy to Liberia as part of Operation United Assistance where they will be building temporary medical facilities in helping the country fight the Ebola virus outbreak.

2013 laws cut number of student prosecutions

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Two Texas laws meant to prevent students from being prosecuted in adult court for minor infractions like disrupting a classroom are working as intended, court records show.

Since the statutes were passed last year, there's been an 83 percent decline in the number of students going to adult court, The laws, written to encourage schools to handle most behavior problems instead of relying on police or the courts, have kept almost 90,000 juvenile cases out of adult court, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

State lawmakers and criminal justice advocates say it's early evidence the laws are reducing the number of students saddled with criminal records for relatively minor school offenses.

Crude prices fall to lowest levels in years as markets converge

Robert Grattan
Houston Chronicle

Crude oil prices fell to the lowest levels since 2012 Thursday, as concerns about both oversupply and a weak global economy weighed on traders.

U.S. benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude fell $1.54 to $85.77 a barrel in Thursday trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Brent crude, the international benchmark, fell $1.62 in London trading to to $89.76, near its lowest levels since 2012.

Both crudes have slid about 20 percent since this summer, first as traders feared that rising production would flood the market and then that tepid global growth would weaken demand for crude oil.

Lackluster Demand

Growth for oil demand — which is tied closely to economic growth — has slipped recently as worries about the broader global economy have outweighed better news from the United States.

In early October, the International Monetary Fund revised downward its global growth projection for 2014 by 0.4 percent from its April figures. The Fund is now predicting 3.3 percent growth due to weaker-than-expected global activity in the first half of 2014. News that German exports slumped by 5.8 percent in August and reports that the continent's largest economy is flirting with a recession stoked fears that a European recovery could be sputtering.

More solid economic growth and continued signs of an improving labor market in the U.S. have so far not been able to make up for slackening elsewhere. Analyst firm IHS Inc. recently revised its annual global crude demand growth downward from 1.2 million barrels per day to 900,000 barrels per day.

Increasing Supplies

While demand has been weakening, the markets have also been struggling to find a place for new oil flowing from revived production in Libya as well as U.S. shale.

U.S. shale production has been increasing at a rate of about 1 million barrels per day for the past three years, but until recently that has been offset by Middle Eastern disruptions, according to Sandy Fielden, RBN Energy's director of energy analytics.

As Libyan production has come back online — rising from 200,000 barrels per day in the second quarter to 900,000 barrels per day recently — oil prices have fallen.

In the U.S., refineries have run at higher rates than normal and served as somewhat of a sink for extra supply. Total capacity used has been higher in 2014 than 2013 for each month except for one, according to the U.S. Energy Information Administration.

As a result, the differential between the U.S. benchmark of the West Texas Intermediate Blend and the international Brent price has recently narrowed as U.S. prices remained more stable, Fielden said in his report.

But even with the cheap feedstock spurring refiners along, U.S. oil continues to flow ever faster. On Wednesday, the U.S. Energy Information Administration reported that U.S. crude supplies rose more than expected, adding to the price slide.

Perhaps the biggest chance to cut supply and raise prices could come from the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries, which has acted to ensure stable prices in the past.

But right now, Fielden said, that seems unlikely. Saudi Arabia, the world's largest producer and often driving OPEC member, recently cut the price at which it was selling oil in Asia — indicating the Saudis may be more interested in keeping market share than stabilizing prices.

Producer's Concerns

In a number of second-quarter conference calls, crude producers worried that prices at various U.S. spot markets would fall relative to international benchmarks, imperiling the return on investment for new wells.

While those domestic concerns have been eased somewhat by new infrastructure and higher refinery run rates, the big question remains essentially the same: Will sliding oil prices impact investment in new wells?

The answer often varies depending on geography, said Jim Burkhard, director of global market research at IHS.

"In the Eagle Ford, in south Texas, there are some areas there that need $70 oil to justify investment," he said. "There are other parts of the Eagle Ford that need $50, or $40."

If prices fall to around $70 for several months, producers could cut back on investment in new wells, he said. Whether that would happen, though, remains tough to say. Right now, the market line is that there's too much oil and not enough demand.

"Markets overshoot and undershoot," he said. "Market sentiment, when it gets heading in one direction, it can either go much higher or lower than the fundamentals would justify."

Obama's lack of will for warfare is being felt

■ It's disturbing how little is being done to really fight for a region under attack

CHARLES KRAUTHAMMER
Washington Post Writers Group

During the 1944 Warsaw uprising, Stalin ordered the advancing Red Army to stop at the outskirts of the city while the Nazis, for 63 days, annihilated the non-Communist Polish partisans. Only then did Stalin take Warsaw.

No one can match Stalin for merciless cynicism, but President Recep Tayyip Erdogan of Turkey is offering a determined echo by ordering Turkish tanks massed on the Syrian border, within sight of the besieged Syrian town of Kobane, to sit and do nothing.

For almost a month, Kobane Kurds have been trying to hold off Islamic State fighters. Outgunned, outmanned and surrounded on three sides, the defending Kurds have begged Turkey to allow weapons and reinforcements through the border. Erdogan has refused even that, let alone intervening directly. Infuriated Kurds have launched demonstrations throughout Turkey protesting Erdogan's deadly callousness. At least 21 demonstrators have been killed.

Because Turkey has its own Kurdish problem — battling a Kurdish insurgency on and off for decades — Erdogan appears to prefer letting the Islamic State destroy the Kurdish enclave on the Syrian side of the border rather than lift a finger to save it. Perhaps later he will move in to occupy the rubble.

Moreover, Erdogan entertains a larger vision: making Turkey the hegemonic power over the Sunni Arabs, as in Ottoman times. The Islamic State is too radical and uncontrollable to be an ally in that mission. But it is Sunni. And it fights Shiites, Alawites and Kurds. Erdogan's main regional adversary is the Shiite-dominated rule of Syria's Bashar al-Assad. Erdogan demands that the U.S. take the fight to Assad before Turkey will join the fight against the Islamic State.

It took Vice President Biden to accidentally blurt out the truth when he accused our alleged allies in the region of playing a double game — supporting the jihadists in Syria and Iraq, then joining the U.S.-led coalition against them. His abject apologies to the United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia and Turkey notwithstanding, Biden was right.

The vaunted coalition that President Obama touts remains mostly fictional. Yes, it puts a Sunni face on the war. Which is important for show. But everyone knows that in real terms the operation remains almost exclusively American.

As designed, the outer limit of its objective is to roll back the Islamic State in Iraq and contain it in Syria. It is doing neither. Despite State Department happy talk about advances in Iraq, our side is suffering serious reverses near Baghdad and throughout Anbar province, which is reportedly near collapse. Baghdad itself is ripe for infiltration for a Tet-like offensive aimed at demoralizing both Iraq and the U.S.

As for Syria, what is Obama doing? First, he gives the enemy 12 days of warning about impending air attacks. We end up hitting empty buildings and evacuated training camps.

Next, we impose rules of engagement so rigid that we can't make tactical adjustments. Our most reliable, friendly, battled-hardened "boots on the ground" in the region are the Kurds. So what have we done to relieve Kobane? About 20 airstrikes in a little more than 10 days, says CENTCOM.

That's barely two a day. On the day after the Islamic State entered Kobane, we launched five airstrikes. Result? We hit three vehicles, one artillery piece and one military "unit." And damaged a tank. This, against perhaps 9,000 heavily armed Islamic State fighters. If this were not so tragic, it would be farcical.

No one is asking for U.S. ground troops. But even as an air campaign, this is astonishingly unserious. As former EU ambassador to Turkey Marc Pierini told The Wall Street Journal, "It [the siege] could have been meaningfully acted upon two weeks ago or so" — when Islamic State reinforcements were streaming in the open toward Kobane. "Now it is almost too late."

Obama has committed the U.S. to war on the Islamic State. To then allow within a month an allied enclave to be overrun — and perhaps annihilated — would be a major blow.

Guerrilla war is a test of wills. Obama's actual objectives — rollback in Iraq, containment in Syria — are not unreasonable. But they require commitment and determination. In other words, will. You can't just make one speech declaring war, then disappear and go fundraising.

The indecisiveness and ambivalence so devastatingly described by both of Obama's previous secretaries of defense, Leon Panetta and Bob Gates, are already beginning to characterize the Syria campaign.

The Iraqis can see it. The Kurds can feel it. The jihadists are counting on it.

OUR VIEW

Desperation causes Davis, Dems to attack Claytie Williams again

If you need proof of where the Wendy Davis campaign is weeks before Election Day, we provide a press release sent out by her campaign.

The headline was "Greg Abbott takes $120,000 from Clayton Williams, famous for mocking rape."

Yes. It's that same tired song from Democrats. Instead of talking about education, transportation or other worthwhile topics, they want to dig up a 20-year-old quote and represent it as real news. Why run it, you might ask? Because Davis' numbers aren't as good as they had hoped — Abbott leads by 9 points overall and by 2 points with women, according to a poll from the nonpartisan Texas Lyceum. Abbott's lead with women is devastating for the Davis campaign. So why not drudge up the archives for something that might scare women out of voting for Abbott. This is a political "Hail Mary."

When all is said and done we prefer to look at a man's actions. Midland's Clayton and Modesta Williams have donated significant amounts of resources, including money, to women's groups in Midland. It's hard for Democrats to mention that whenever they are scaring women into not voting for a Republican or calling for Republicans not to host events at Williams' home.

In no way should anyone mock rape, but is this really what the Davis campaign is about? We contacted the Davis campaign about using a comment from two decades ago and whether the Williams family's involvement in the community throughout the years even mattered.

Rebecca Acuña, with the campaign, responded with this:

"It's no surprise that Greg Abbott would take tens of thousands of dollars from a man who mocks rape given his record on the Texas Supreme Court siding against the victims of rape four out of five times and his opposition to abortion even in cases of rape and incest."

We are sorry for local Democrats who had high expectations for Davis. On Thursday, local party officials dutifully represented the campaign in a more responsible way concerning discoveries from state auditors who examined the Texas Enterprise Fund, a statewide economic development fund handled by the Office of the Governor.

Wendy Davis is trying to complete one of the greatest comebacks in the state's political history. If she does, we hope it is because voters think she is better on the issues and not because Davis, her campaign and her party raise a regrettable comment from 20 years ago.

Midlanders and Republicans in Texas have moved on. Why can't Wendy Davis? And more importantly, who else is she willing to throw under the bus to get what she wants?

Dems warn of party's 'spiral of doom'

■ The burden is on 'you' to prevent that, emails said

KEN HERMAN
Cox Newspapers

Rich or poor, a wise guy once said, it's good to have money. That goes for politicians as well as normal people.

It takes big money to produce the political ads that clutter up our big screens. The pitches for money to pay for those ads come in various forms. My current favorite is from the Democratic Governors Association, which is counting on desperation and guilt. The DGA is desperate and wants you to feel guilty if you don't send money, you cheapskate, you.

The association, which earlier this year didn't list Democrat Wendy Davis' Texas race as a particularly winnable one, is deep into a nationwide series of emails, including a Monday one that said: "We emailed you Friday, Saturday, Sunday" asking for money.

"And things have gone from bad to worse ... the money is JUST NOT THERE," the DGA screamed. "Democrats will lose if we don't have the resources to organize our voters, get our message on TV and stop voter suppression."

Then, this, highlighted in yellow: "Our math says we'll make budget and live to fight ONE MORE DAY only if 18 donors from 22201 give this minute. Tomorrow's too late to be one of them. We need you now."

Wow, that puts a lot of pressure on people in 22201 in Arlington, Virginia, where I lived for a while. Earlier DGA emails said "Democrats are on the brink of a disastrous tidal wave" and "OUR BANK ACCOUNT'S DEPLETED."

"We're not raising enough money to stop a Democratic spiral of doom," DGA predicted in bold letters.

Another DGA email said Davis "has clawed to within single digits, but if you don't give now, forget it. The race will be lost. You'll have missed your opportunity. ... (and) WE'LL NEVER TURN TEXAS AND ITS 38 ELECTORAL VOTES BLUE."

Never, experts say, is a long time. But that's when Texas will turn blue if Davis loses, according to the Democratic Governors Association, predicting Davis will lose and Texas will stay forever red "if you don't give in the next 14 hours."

Actually, and regardless of whether you send money now, there's a good chance Texas will turn bluer as it turns browner.

Davis, meeting Monday with the Austin American-Statesman Editorial Board, used an unlikely phrase in talking about her chances of beating Greg Abbott. That probably only happens, she said, if she turns out "unlikely voters."

"The great experiment will reveal itself on Election Day and we'll see how much we were able to increase our voter turnout," said Davis, whose campaign later Monday reported it has $5.7 million. Abbott's has $30.1 million.

Meanwhile, the DGA, of which Davis yearns to be a member, continues to send out desperate pleas for cash for its nationwide efforts. There are lots of "yous" in these pleas, as in "if you don't give now, forget it" and "if you donate today, we might avoid a total disaster."

That's quite a burden for you, not unlike the personal pressure I recall fielding when I was a 7-year-old in Brooklyn and Smokey Bear would come on TV and bellow, "Only you can prevent forest fires."

Me? Only me? I'm 7. I live in Brooklyn. I've never seen a forest.

Despite the pressure of the DGA emails, I've continued my lifelong streak of never having given a penny to a politician. Seems to me the proper amount to give a candidate is zero or $1 million. Anything in between probably doesn't get you much. A million could produce valuable return on investment.

"Our early October fund-raising numbers are calamitous," the DGA said in an email. "WE DON'T HAVE THE MONEY TO PAY FOR ADS, PHONE LINES OR TURNOUT."

No ads? No phone calls at home? How much do I have to give to make that happen?

Nobody's perfect: Even Supreme Court justices can goof

■ ANALYSIS

By Mark Sherman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's mishandling of big news this week about same-sex marriage was a reminder: Even the justices put their robes on one arm at a time.

Developments on an issue moving at warp speed through the legal system already were confusing. But twice in a week, the court added to the head-scratching by releasing information that was wrong or seriously incomplete. It affected both same-sex couples seeking to get married and state officials trying to preserve their bans on gay and lesbian unions.

These weren't the first mistakes made by the highest court in the land, and certainly they won't be the last. Errors at the court can be trivial, but they also can be life-changing. In 2003, for example, justices struck down state anti-sodomy laws and declared that an earlier Supreme Court decision upholding them was "not correct when it was decided, and it is not correct today."

"To err is human, and the justices and the clerks are human like the rest of us," said Aaron Bruhl, a law professor at the University of Houston.

On Monday, the justices surprised most people in the legal world when they acted without fanfare to reject gay marriage appeals from five states. Worse than the court's unexplained orders, at least from the perspective of reporters at the court and officials and affected Americans awaiting a decision elsewhere: The thick packet of orders handed out at 9:30 a.m. EDT was missing more than 30 pages, including those with the gay marriage cases.

A malfunctioning computerized printer failed to run off pages 18 to 50, and no human in the court clerk's office or public information office noticed the problem. It is said that reporters aren't very good at math, but several soon noticed that page 51 followed page 17. The Supreme Court's retooled website, which debuted Monday, was no help because it, too, was malfunctioning, court spokeswoman Kathy Arberg said.

That situation soon was sorted out with little consequence other than embarrassment for court officials.

A more significant error occurred Wednesday, when Justice Anthony Kennedy put the brakes on same-sex marriage in Idaho and Nevada following an appeals court ruling a day earlier striking down both states' anti-gay-marriage laws. Idaho officials requested the delay, which remained in effect Thursday.

But In Nevada, the state had given up its defense of the same-sex marriage ban, and county clerks got ready to begin issuing marriage licenses.

So there was confusion among Nevada officials and disappointment among couples who woke up planning to get married Wednesday.

After lawyers and reporters sought clarification of the order, Kennedy put out a new order a few hours later that began, "Upon further consideration. ..." He lifted his hold as it applied to Nevada but left it in place for Idaho. Despite the revised order, county clerks in Nevada refused to issue licenses Wednesday and offered no promise about when they would do so.

So how did Kennedy come to halt marriages before they began in a state that was ready to move ahead with them and didn't ask for intervention?

The court received Idaho's stay request around 8:30 a.m. on Wednesday, and Kennedy acted about 80 minutes later, 10 minutes before he and the other justices took the bench to hear arguments in unrelated cases.

Arberg said the mistake originated in the court clerk's office, which prepared the paperwork that Kennedy signed. The trouble arose because Idaho's request to the court included a document from the appeals court that listed case numbers for both it and Nevada. Kennedy acted quickly because Idaho officials said they otherwise would have to begin issuing marriage licenses, she said. Kennedy's corrected order followed soon afterward.

While not common, such goofs do happen.

In the court's last term Justice Antonin Scalia, or perhaps one of his law clerks, misread the justice's own opinion in an earlier environmental case, and he railed against the Environmental Protection Agency in a colorful dissent. Several environmental law professors pointed out the mistake, which prompted Scalia to issue a revised, and much drier, opinion.

A correction of a different sort was at the heart of Kennedy's opinion in Lawrence v. Texas, a major gay rights ruling that overturned Texas' anti-sodomy law in 2003. Kennedy said the court's decision 17 years earlier in Bowers v. Hardwick was wrong, both in 1986 and 2003.

People hang on every last word from the Supreme Court because it is the court of last review, even when that word is a curt rejection of gay marriage appeals without any justice explaining why.

An eloquent expression of the finality of the court's actions, as well as the humanity of its justices, came from Justice Robert Jackson in 1953.

"We are not final because we are infallible," Jackson wrote, "but we are infallible only because we are final."

Obama wants an election about the economy, not him

By Jim Kuhnhenn & Darlene Superville
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — President Barack Obama is all in with his economic pitch. The American public is not. Over the next 27 days, either the public or the president is going to get the message.

In a midterm campaign strategy fraught with risk, the White House is betting that Obama's tight embrace of the economic recovery and populist proposals for gender pay equity and a higher minimum wage will galvanize his core supporters and persuade fence-sitting independents to help Democrats retain narrow control of the Senate in November.

Addressing young entrepreneurs Thursday at a startup center in California, Obama highlighted his economic record for the third time in eight days.

"A lot of you entered into the workforce during the worst financial crisis and then the worst recession since the Great Depression," he told the gathering of mostly millennials, those born after 1980. "You are coming out of this recession with the best educated, most diverse, most digitally fluent generation in American history."

While noting that he's not on the ballot in this election, Obama has become fond of saying that his policies are at stake. The line has prompted a reflexive flinch from Democrats who are trying to fend off a concerted Republican campaign to link Democratic opponents to the president.

For Democrats, the problem is not Obama's message; it's the pitchman. "The messenger is not the most popular guy on the planet right now," said Democratic pollster Mark Mellman.

Public opinion polls show substantial support for Obama's proposals to raise the minimum wage, seek pay equity for women and close corporate tax loopholes. But on the economic issues he's most associated with — the fitful recovery from the Great Recession and his health care law — the American public is not with him.

A September AP-GfK poll found 40 percent approve and 58 percent disapprove of his handling of the economy, and that 41 percent approve and 58 percent disapprove of his handling of health care. Overall, Obama's national approval ratings are 44 percent, compared to 51 percent who disapprove, according to the latest numbers from Gallup.

Help wanted: Obama gets a job offer in California

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — He's still got two years left on his current contract, but President Barack Obama is already fantasizing about the day he can go to work in sweatpants.

Obama was answering questions Thursday from young entrepreneurs in California when one go-getter offered Obama a job. He said his startup aims to allow people to help other individuals using just their brain and smartphone and promised it would be "super rewarding."

Obama responded with a laugh and asked, "You're offering me a job?"

Obama says being president has been a privilege but that eight years is long enough. He says that being able to dabble in the issues of the day while wearing sweatpants and a baseball cap sounds attractive.

Lawmakers approve additional $700 million to fight Ebola

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Republican chairmen of House panels that oversee the Pentagon signed off Thursday on an additional $700 million to pay for the military mission to help fight Africa's deadly Ebola outbreak.

Thursday's action by Armed Services Committee Chairman Howard "Buck" McKeon and Appropriations Chairman Harold Rogers would permit a total of $750 million in funds leftover for fighting in Afghanistan to be used to provide logistical help for health care workers in West Africa. The first $50 million was released last month.

The administration originally requested $1 billion to send up to 4,000 troops to Africa. In briefings this week, McKeon said Pentagon officials estimate $750 million would cover a six-month mission that would include airlifting personnel, medical supplies, protective suits and equipment such as tents to house Ebola victims and isolate people exposed to the virus.

But an aide to Sen. James Inhofe, the top Republican on the Senate Armed Services panel, said the Oklahoman has not signed off on the money. It takes the OK of the top Republican and Democrat on the House and Senate Armed Services and Appropriations panels to "reprogram" Pentagon funds. Democrats and Sen. Thad Cochran of Mississippi, the ranking Republican on the Appropriations Committee, have already agreed.

Inhofe is continuing to hold up the funds as he presses the administration for more details about the operation.

Tours aim to redefine Juárez, revitalize tourism

By Julián Aguilar
Texas Tribune

CIUDAD JUÁREZ, Mexico — Just a few years ago, a tour bus traveling in this once-beleaguered city would have been more rare than a leap year. Some would argue that passengers on such a bus were playing Russian roulette with their lives.

But this week, tour buses began traveling from El Paso across the border to Juárez. Officials hope the effort will help erase the image of a war-torn city and bring tourism back to this part of the Mexican border.

The downtown-Juárez-bound buses began making their trips from El Paso Saddleblanket — a decades-old staple for shoppers seeking art, pottery, clothing and other goods associated with the culture of the Southwest — on Wednesday. The tours are coming about a year after Juárez officials opened a visitors bureau in the business to reach out to potential visitors.

"I think more people need to go to Juárez and need to experience it. I'd like to help Juárez come back up," said freelance writer and bus passenger Rich Wright, whose own side business of guiding tourists and visitors from El Paso to Mexico has suffered.

Wednesday's maiden voyage was part of a slow rollout that organizers said would help prove Ciudad Juárez is returning to its former status as a place for border residents and visitors to enjoy adventure and learn about the region's history.

The trip was attended mainly by members of the media and invited guests, but José Arturo Ramos, the director of Ciudad Juárez's special projects division, said the office has been fielding calls for days from curious border visitors who ask, among other things, how safe the trip is and what they need to take with them. Regular visitors will pay $12 for a round-trip bus ride, and they can opt to take a more detailed tour of downtown sites for an additional $5. The bus will make daily trips, and the tour will last about four hours. Guides will be on hand to point out places of interest, including the city's marketplace, the Museo de la Revolución en la Frontera and the famous Kentucky Club on the Juárez strip.

The effort comes as violence has ebbed in the area, which suffered through a war between the Juárez and Sinaloa drug cartels that killed about 11,000 people from 2007 to 2013. During that span, once-popular nightclubs and restaurants closed, and business owners fled to neighboring El Paso.

The U.S. State Department still includes Ciudad Juárez on its travel warnings, urging U.S. citizens to avoid unnecessary trips across the Rio Grande. And politicians arguing that transnational gangs and even Islamic terrorists may be using the Mexican city as a launching pad for nefarious deeds in Texas has continued to unsettle nerves in Austin and Washington.

While Wright said violence can still plague the gritty city, he added that could happen in any city the size of Juárez, which has a population of about 1.5 million.

"I think [the fear] is overblown. We're going to see thousands of people that live over there that deal with that every day," he said. "There are still people being murdered over there, but it's just a percentage of what it was." The murder rate has slowed to about 35 per month.

On Wednesday afternoon, the Plaza de Armas — home to one of the city's main downtown cathedrals — was stocked with retirees reading newspapers, school-age children in their requisite uniforms and vendors peddling pork rinds and Mexican sodas.

Mexico arrests alleged head of Juarez cartel

MEXICO CITY — The alleged leader of the Juarez drug cartel, Vicente Carrillo Fuentes, has been arrested in the northern city of Torreon, two Mexican officials said Thursday.

Carrillo Fuentes, 51, purportedly heads the cartel founded by his late brother, Amado Carrillo Fuentes, and both the U.S. and Mexico had million-dollar rewards for his arrest.

Carrillo Fuentes, better known as "The Viceroy" or "The General," took over control of the Juarez drug cartel after his brother Amado, nicknamed "The Lord of the Skies," died in 1997 in a botched cosmetic surgery. Amado got his nickname by flying planeloads of drugs into the United States.

It was the second capture of a major drug lord in as many weeks. Mexican authorities nabbed Hector Beltran Leyva as he ate fish tacos in a seafood restaurant in central Mexico on Oct. 1.

The two officials who revealed the information about Carrillo Fuentes' arrest insisted on speaking anonymously because they were not authorized to speak to the press. They did not provide details of the capture.

The back-to-back arrests come as Mexico's federal government is under international pressure over the forced disappearance of 43 students by police and a possible massacre of 22 suspected gang members by soldiers. Everyone from outraged Mexicans to the United Nations is demanding justice and accountability in the two cases.

"I think it's a little bit because of the pressure," Samuel Gonzalez, Mexico's former top anti-drug prosecutor, said of the sudden demise of long-time capos. "This is to say they're doing a lot of work."

The Rev. Tom Schmidt and the Universalist Unitarian Church are celebrating the church's 60th anniversary Saturday.

CELEBRATING 60 YEARS

Universalist Unitarian Church gets ready for milestone

By Steve Kuhlmann
skuhlmann@mrt.com

Midland's Universalist Unitarian Church will celebrate its 60th anniversary Saturday with an open house.

By opening the church's doors to the community, the Rev. Thomas Schmidt said he hopes to be able to dispel some of the misconceptions that may be held about the church, as well as show off some of recently completed renovations to the building's exterior.

"There's a little bit of showing off," Schmidt said. "We want to show off our grounds. We're very proud of what we've done here, but we also know that there are some misconceptions about us. We're doing at Q&A at 2 p.m. so that people can ask questions. We'll have lots of information out if people want to know more about our church. It's just an opportunity for those who are curious about who we are to find out a little bit about us."

Started in 1954 as a Unitarian church, Schmidt said the church began in the homes of just a few couples. After just a few years, the congregation had grown to more than 25 people who brought in a Unitarian minister and began construction on a church building.

"They were up and running pretty quick," Schmidt said. "They were committed to bringing Unitarianism to Midland and people are still surprised that we're here."

Following a fire in the original building on A Street in the late 1970s, the church moved to its current location on the corner of Midkiff Road and Neely Avenue. Over the years, the building has seen several renovations, most recently to the church's grounds, Schmidt said.

"The impetus was that we wanted our grounds and our church to reflect our values," said Schmidt, adding the landscaping was done with the goal of reducing the church's water usage.

In addition to making the space more environmentally friendly, the church also put up a concrete wall surrounding the campus as a way of reducing the noise from the busy road.

"The wall is really just a way to cut noise. It's not that we want to wall people out or anything," Schmidt said. "It was just a way that we could use the space and reduce the noise level. The wall, along with the fountain for a little white noise, was added just so that we could actually use this space."

Schmidt will welcome Midlanders inside that space during the open house to dispel misconceptions about the church and the congregation's spiritual structure.

"One of the biggest misconceptions is that people think that you can believe anything within the church, but that's not the complete story," Schmidt said. "You can't believe that there's no gravity; there's a rationality to what we do here. Freedom, reason and tolerance are the foundation of who we are."

Schmidt said while the congregation doesn't dictate common practices or belief in a higher power, it is the ability to allow

Conference to bring awareness about moral injury in veterans

By Steve Kuhlmann
skuhlmann@mrt.com

While post-traumatic stress disorder has garnered attention and research, some — including those at Texas Christian University's Soul Repair Center at the Brite Divinity School — believe there is another, separate piece to the trauma soldiers experience: moral injury.

Beginning Wednesday, the Soul Repair Center will host a conference at Midland's DoubleTree by Hilton about the role of community support in the process of recovery from moral injury. The three-day conference will include multiple speakers, workshops and a community discussion.

"I think that (moral injury) is an ancient problem with war that can be found in sacred literature (even if) the term moral injury is very recent," said Rita Brock, founding co-director of TCU's Soul Repair Center. "For a long time it was just thought that what we call now moral injury was just a part of PTSD, but the VA clinical community realized that they were not addressing some things that were causing an inner anguish for veterans."

Brock said she often explains moral injury as "the terrible thing that happened in war that can really destroy a person's moral foundation." For veterans, while the name seems foreign, the idea is instantly understood as soon as it is explained, she said.

"There are many things that afflict us and until we have a name for it, it's kind of hard to focus on it, to actually see it clearly," Brock said. "I think that we all kind of know what it is, we've just never had a name for it."

After seeing the film "Soldiers of Conscience," Brock became interested in the "moral reasoning process that people in the military use in the decision making around whether they will deploy or not deploy to war."

With the help of a friend, Brock began trying to organize a truth commission to explore the topic of conscience in war and to educate others on the moral thinking that military

Buckner Family Place event draws attention to domestic violence

By Steve Kuhlmann
skuhlmann@mrt.com

With recent high-profile cases of domestic violence in the news, such as the incident involving Baltimore Ravens player Ray Rice, the issue has once again come to the forefront of mainstream media attention.

According to the United States Bureau of Justice Statistics, between 2003-12, domestic violence accounted for 21 percent of all violent incidents in the nation with intimate partners ranking as the most frequent offenders. Among victims of domestic violence, 76 percent were women and 77 percent of the occurrences happened at or near the victim's home.

In honor of Domestic Violence Awareness Month, Buckner Family Place partnered with several other local organizations including the Midland Police Department and District Attorney's office, Safe Place of the Permian Basin and Midland Fair Haven to host the "It's No Secret" event Thursday to educate women and children on domestic violence and to make them aware of the

Creator of 'Hook 'em Horns' hand sign Harley Clark dies

AUSTIN — Harley Clark, the former Texas cheerleader credited with introducing the "Hook 'em Horns" hand signal used by tens of thousands of Longhorns faithful over the past six decades, died Thursday at his farm outside of Austin, school officials said. He was 78.

The school didn't release details or a cause of death for Clark, who watched his hand sign become one of the most recognizable and familiar signs of support in college athletics. Clark introduced the hand sign — the index and pinky fingers extended and the two middle fingers tucked under the thumb — at a 1955 pep rally. It quickly caught on and became a universal symbol for the school and its athletic teams.

Clark later became a lawyer and was appointed a state district judge in 1977. He issued a landmark decision in 1987 that declared the state's public school finance system unconstitutional because of disparities between wealthy and poor school districts, a ruling that was upheld by the Texas Supreme Court.

Clark "embodied the spirit of our beloved university," said former U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, a former Texas cheerleader and current president of the Texas Exes alumni group. She called the hand sign a "symbol of Longhorn pride that is recognized and shared around the globe. His love and dedication to UT-Austin will never be forgotten."

In a 2006 interview, Clark said he had wanted some kind of hand signal similar to that used by the Longhorns' rivals at Texas A&M, where the "Gig 'Em" sign dating to the 1930s is a closed fist with the thumb pointing straight up. Friend Henry Pitts showed him the Longhorn sign, which Pitts made up while shadow casting.

Clark shopped it around before a pep rally as Texas prepared to play TCU, and got mixed reactions. Undaunted, he was convinced it would catch on and it did.

"It's perfect," Clark said in 2006. "It just says Texas."

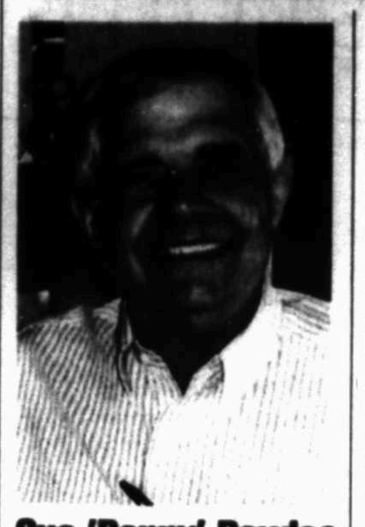
It also got him in some trouble. The dean of student life lectured Clark that the signal was considered a vulgarity in Sicily and might be misinterpreted in Texas. But it was too late to stop it.

Texas fans show it during the signing of the "Eyes of Texas" before and after games, and there's seldom a touchdown where a player doesn't flash it for the cameras. Longhorns opponents liked to use it just as often, turning the signal upside down in a mocking gesture.

The sign even reached the White House. It caused a Scandinavian scandal in 2005 when President George W. Bush and his daughter Jenna, a Texas graduate, flashed the sign during Bush's inauguration parade. A Norwegian newspaper interpreted it as a sign saluting Satan.

Clark is survived by his wife Patti, and four children. Funeral services were pending Thursday.

Obituaries



Gus 'Ronny' Bowles

Gus 'Ronny' Bowles, 75, was surrounded by his family when he went home to be with the Lord on October 6, 2014. A memorial service will be held on Saturday, October 11, 2014 at 3:00pm at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Chapel. Honorary pallbearers for the service will be Ronny's four grandchildren, Kayla, Ty, Shane, and Chad.

Ronny was born on June 29, 1939 in Pecos, Texas to Gus and Flora Bowles. After his father's death, his mother married Dee Culp and the two shared the rest of their lives together until their passing. On July 24, 1959, Ronny married his high school sweetheart, Patsy Jackson. Together, the couple raised three children, Jana, Don, and Rhonda.

Ronny was an incredibly hard worker and thrived at his job as manager and part owner of Balmorhea Feeders. He loved his job and going to work every day. The family lived in Pecos all of their lives until recently when they moved to Midland. Ronny lived his life in the light of the Lord and was a long-time member of First United Methodist Church of Pecos. He enjoyed travelling with his family, sharing his wisdom with his grandchildren, and was a strong believer that 'your children are always your children.'

He was an incredibly loving husband, father, and grandfather. Ronny will be forever remembered for being caring, loving, and supportive- if he agreed on the matter. He was always the first one to do anything for someone in need and he always had a plan right up until his last few weeks. He was a very good man and will be deeply missed by all that knew him.

Ronny is survived by his loving wife of 55 years, Patsy Bowles; daughter, Jana Bowles; son, Don Bowles and his wife, Karla; daughter, Rhonda Golliher and her husband, Paul; sister, Deeana Rushing; grandchildren, Kayla Golliher, Ty Golliher, Shane Bowles, and Chad Bowles; sister-in-law, Jeanne Erwin; and numerous friends.

He was preceded in death by his father, Gus Bowles; mother, Flora Culp; step-father, Dee Culp; and sister, Judy Barnickel.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that donations be made to St. Jude's Children Hospital, www.stjude.org, MD Anderson Center, www.mdanderson.org, or a charity of choice.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home & Crematory of Midland. Online condolences may be made at www.npwelch.com.

Sheeda Teresa Balkum

Sheeda Teresa Balkum of Tow, Texas, passed into her Savior's arms on September 23, 2014.

Sheeda was born on February 26, 1956, in Shreveport, Louisiana, to Wilbur and Nellie Daniel. Sheeda lived most of her adult life in Midland, Texas, where she met and married her soulmate, Wiley Balkum.

Sheeda was a very kind and caring person who had no enemies. She loved her Lord Jesus Christ, her family and friends, and her dog 'Sassy'. Sheeda was always working in her garden, tending her plants or feeding the birds.

Sheeda and Wiley moved to Tow, Texas, in 2010, and built their dream home on the shores of Lake Buchanan. Sheeda loved the beautiful sunrises and sunsets at her home on the lake, and the peaceful serenity of the rural area.

Sheeda is survived by her best friend and husband, Wiley Balkum; her mother and dad, Nellie and Tom Murin of Lubbock Texas; her sons, Chris Kuzmich of Atlanta, Georgia, Patrick Kuzmich of San Antonio, Texas, Kevin Kuzmich of Austin, Texas, and Matthew Kuzmich and his wife Daniella of Grand Prairie, Texas; one daughter, Jennifer Aleni Barker of Carlsbad, New Mexico; her brother, Jeff Daniel of Lubbock, Texas; her sister and brother in law, Lisa and Donnie Lawler of Lubbock; three grandchildren; and two nieces.

A memorial service will be held on Friday, October 17, at 11:00 a.m. at First Baptist Church in Tow, Texas, located at 16529 Ranch Road 2241 with a grave side burial service to follow at the Tow cemetery.

The Reverend Mark Nygard will be officiating. The family requests that any donations be made to the church of your choice.

Funeral arrangements made under the direction of Waldrope-Hatfield-Hawthorne Funeral Homes, Inc. Llano, Texas. E-mail condolences may be sent to whhfuneral1@verizon.net.

Entrepreneur who brought Jheri curl to masses dies

Comer Cottrell, a black hair-care entrepreneur who made millions with a cheap kit that brought the glossy celebrity Jheri curl into the homes of average African Americans, has died. He was 82.

Cottrell died Oct. 3 at his home in Plano family spokeswoman Taryn Brown said Thursday.

Cottrell recalled there was a lack of hair-care products for black servicemen while he was managing an Air Force base exchange in Okinawa, Japan, in the 1950s.

With $600, Cottrell founded Pro-Line Corp. in downtown Los Angeles in 1970. Military bases were his first customers.

Sales ballooned after Pro-Line introduced the Curly Kit in 1980 and later the Kiddie Kit for youngsters. An at-home product, Curly Kit allowed people to reproduce the loose, shiny Jheri curl hairstyle invented by Jheri Redding and popularized by Michael Jackson, Rick James and other performers.

The Curly Kit sold for around $8 at barbershops, beauty parlors and drugstores while the salon price for a Jheri curl might run to $300.

Cottrell "democratized the Jheri curl," said Lori L. Tharps, co-author of "Hair Story: Untangling the Roots of Black Hair in America."

"You couldn't find a black person in America in their 30s or 40s who didn't have a Curly Kit or Kiddie Kit at some time in their childhood or adulthood," and its popularity helped drive company sales up from $1 million to $10 million, Tharps told the Los Angeles Times.

The Jheri curl's ubiquity in black communities was lampooned in pop culture. The 1988 comedy "Coming to America" featured a fictional product called "Soul Glo," which gave users a shiny hairstyle and left a greasy stain on furniture.

With his brother, James, Cottrell turned Pro-Line into one of the most successful black-owned companies in the United States. The company moved to Dallas and had grown to include multinational sales before it was sold to Alberto Culver for $80 million in 2000.

An influential businessman, Cottrell backed black civil rights, education and political causes. He was the first African American member of the powerful Dallas Citizens Council and helped pave the way for the election of the city's first black mayor, Ron Kirk, in 1995.

A Republican, he and George W. Bush were part-owners of the Texas Rangers. Cottrell was the first African American to own a stake in a Major League Baseball team, which he held from 1989 to 1998.

Cottrell also contributed more than $3 million to Paul Quinn College, a financially troubled, historically black school in Texas. "If it weren't for him, there probably wouldn't be a college," college President Michael J. Sorrell said.

NEW YORK

Jan Hooks of 'Saturday Night Live' fame dies at 57

Jan Hooks, an actress whose flair for comedy and ability to inhabit a character was showcased during her five years on "Saturday Night Live," died Thursday. She was 57.

Her death was confirmed by her agent, Lisa Lieberman, who did not provide any other details. Some news reports said she died in New York of an undisclosed illness. A spokeswoman for "SNL" declined to comment.

Hooks joined "SNL" in 1986 and was part of a cast that is widely regarded as one of the best in the show's history, alongside the likes of Phil Hartman, Dana Carvey, Jon Lovitz, Nora Dunn and later Mike Myers.

Among the prominent women she impersonated were Donald Trump's wife, Ivana, and the television evangelist Tammy Faye Bakker, whom she had seen on cable in Atlanta before Bakker and her husband, Jim, became nationally known. After leaving the show in 1991, Hooks returned several times to portray Hillary Rodham Clinton — the first "SNL" cast member to tackle that assignment.

She was probably best known for her frequent appearances with Dunn as the Sweeney Sisters, an excruciatingly enthusiastic but minimally talented lounge act. Recalling the original "SNL" stars Dan Aykroyd and John Belushi, Allan Johnson of The Chicago Tribune wrote in 1999, "If Aykroyd and Belushi were the perfect comedy partnership on 'SNL,' then Hooks and Dunn were close behind."

Hooks' first job after "SNL" was a role on "Designing Women," the long-running sitcom about women who run a design business in Atlanta. She replaced Jean Smart, playing the sister of Smart's character.

She had not been planning to leave "SNL," she told The Associated Press in 1991: "Although my five-year contract was up, I was fully intending to return. But I wanted to investigate other possibilities." The "Designing Women" offer came, she said, "out of nowhere."

Hooks later had recurring roles on "3rd Rock From the Sun" and "The Simpsons." Most recently she played the mother of Jenna Maroney, the flaky and self-centered TV star played by Jane Krakowski, on "30 Rock," the Tina Fey sitcom about life behind the scenes at a late-night sketch show not unlike "SNL" (Fey had been a writer and regular performer on "SNL" after Hooks left the show.)

Hooks' movie roles included a memorable turn as a tour guide at the Alamo in "Pee-wee's Big Adventure" (1985). She was also in "Batman Returns" (1992) and "Simon Birch" (1998). In 1995 she replaced Sarah Jessica Parker as an anthropomorphic dog in "Sylvia," an off-Broadway comedy by A.R. Gurney.

NEW YORK

Peter Peyser, legislator who defied the GOP, dies at 93

Peter A. Peyser, who rose from mayor of a Westchester County village to Congress, then defied the leadership of his Republican Party by quixotically challenging Sen. James Buckley in a 1976 primary, died Thursday at his home in Irvington, New York. He was 93.

The cause was complications of Parkinson's disease, his son Peter said.

As expected, Buckley swamped Peyser, who switched to the Democratic Party and again won election to the House of Representatives. He served three terms as a Republican from 1971 to 1977, and two as a Democrat from 1979 to 1983. Districts he represented included parts of Westchester and Rockland counties and the Bronx.

He had previously been mayor of Irvington, which had a population of around 5,000. First elected in 1962, he was paid $100 a month and kept his job as an insurance executive in New York.

But Peyser spent three-quarters of his time being mayor, he told The Hudson Independent, a monthly newspaper, in a 2009 interview. He raised taxes each of his eight years in office, and built a new firehouse, enlarged a park and started a recreation program.

In 1969 he decided to run for Congress. Entering the 1970 primary, Peyser defeated three Republicans and then beat William Dretzin, a Democrat, in the general election.

In Congress, he worked to broaden the student loan program, modernize pension plans and increase aid to education. He was one of the last members of the New York congressional delegation to call for President Richard M. Nixon's impeachment. In his 1970 campaign, he had cast himself as a Nixon loyalist.

Buckley had been elected in 1970 as a Conservative Party candidate but had also drawn the support of the Republican Party when Peyser decided to challenge his bid for re-election.

In the primary campaign he made an issue of Buckley's hard line against federal aid for New York City during its fiscal crisis, and he criticized the senator as a carpetbagger from Connecticut, where Buckley, the older brother of the conservative commentator William F. Buckley Jr., had a home in addition to an apartment in New York. He also said that James Buckley had regularly voted to help oil companies, one of which his family owned. Peyser, who cast himself as a moderate running against an arch conservative, could not persuade 25 percent of the Republican State Committee to support his candidacy, so he had to collect 20,000 signatures to get on the ballot. His family and largely unpaid volunteers gathered 27,602, of which 24,649 were ruled valid.

He still trailed badly in funds and the polls, but hoped he might get the support of Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, the former governor of New York. While he was mayor of Irvington in 1968, he had written letters in praise of Rockefeller, then a presidential candidate, and sent them to every delegate at the Republican National Convention in Miami Beach. Rockefeller and his family, in turn, contributed to Peyser's campaigns.

"Peyser is a damn good man," The New York Times quoted Rockefeller as saying in what it termed "a further elbow in the Buckley ribs."

But Rockefeller gave his tacit support to Buckley in exchange for the senator's promise not to endorse Ronald Reagan's challenge to President Gerald R. Ford, whom the Republicans ended up nominating.

Buckley won by a 3-to-1 ratio but was defeated by Daniel Patrick Moynihan in the general election.

In early 1977, Peyser announced that he was switching to the Democratic Party. Gov. Hugh L. Carey, a Democrat, nominated him to be chairman of the New York State Public Service Commission, which regulates the state's electric, gas, water and telecommunications industries. But the Republican-controlled state Senate rejected him, saying he had no experience in the field. He countered that he was a proven manager who could supervise technicians. He attributed the defeat to partisan politics.

CONFERENCE

personnel must regularly go through.

It was during the process of organizing the commission that Brock received an essay on moral injury by VA clinicians, setting her on a course to help found the Soul Repair Center.

"It was extremely helpful," she said. "I read the essay and thought, 'Oh my gosh, we've got to do public education on this.'"

After the creation of the Soul Repair Center in 2012, Brock and her colleagues began hosting conferences around the United States where they have worked to educate veterans, their families and the people who work with them — particularly those in the religious community — about moral injury as a way of aiding the recovery process.

"We need people who have boots on the ground," Brock said. "All of our events are focused on local work, that's where the veterans are, they're not out wandering around the nation."

Paramount to helping the veterans deal with moral afflictions is having someone who can not only listen to their story, but can also handle what they are hearing, Brock said.

"When you have a terrible burden, sharing it with someone else makes it lighter, but to really share somebody's burden means that you really have to take it in to make yourself vulnerable to what they're saying, and not everyone is prepared to do that," Brock said. "I think that you have to be able to know your own limits because you may not be able to handle what you're hearing. It can be pretty awful."

One veteran told her whenever he chooses to talk to someone about some of the moral burdens he carries, he always starts with the "easy stuff" to see how they will react.

"It takes some preparation, you can't just go around asking people to share their story," Brock said. "None of us like to talk about anguishing things, but for this, you have to be ready to hear anguishing things. We try to prepare people for listening that way."

Brock said the conference focuses primarily on equipping the religious community because the understanding of "what it means to fail your own moral values" is often found there.

"A person who's struggling with moral injury really needs to be able to talk with somebody who understands the moral questions and struggles that they're having," Brock said. "We call that talking to a benevolent moral authority. It doesn't have to be clergy, but it has to be someone who when a veteran says, 'I think God hates me for what I did over there,' can talk to them about what that means to them and why they feel so judged."

While the center's method of addressing this issue does involve some form of religious approach, Brock said it doesn't require the veterans to hold any particular religious beliefs.

"We find that even vets who aren't really religious still find what we do helpful," Brock said. "PTSD isn't religious and moral injury isn't religious. Someone could be atheist and completely not interested in religion and have a moral conscience."

One thing Brock stressed, however, is moral injury is not a disorder or condition to be cured, but rather a completely normal response to war.

"People have different responses to war so they also have different responses to moral issues, but it's not an uncommon thing to be devastated by something like that," Brock said. "I think that it's hard, especially for military and veteran folks, because you're supposed to be strong and are taught to fake it until (they) make it. To make yourself vulnerable and talk about your own anguish is a really hard thing."

While she is not a veteran, Brock grew up in a military family and believes her father suffered from moral injury from his time in Vietnam.

"I do this work because I think it's a responsibility of all of us," Brock said. "They got sent on our behalf and we owe it to them to take on this responsibility. Not just the military, not just the VA, I think that we should all do this work."

Catholic pastor removed in financial probe

Associated Press

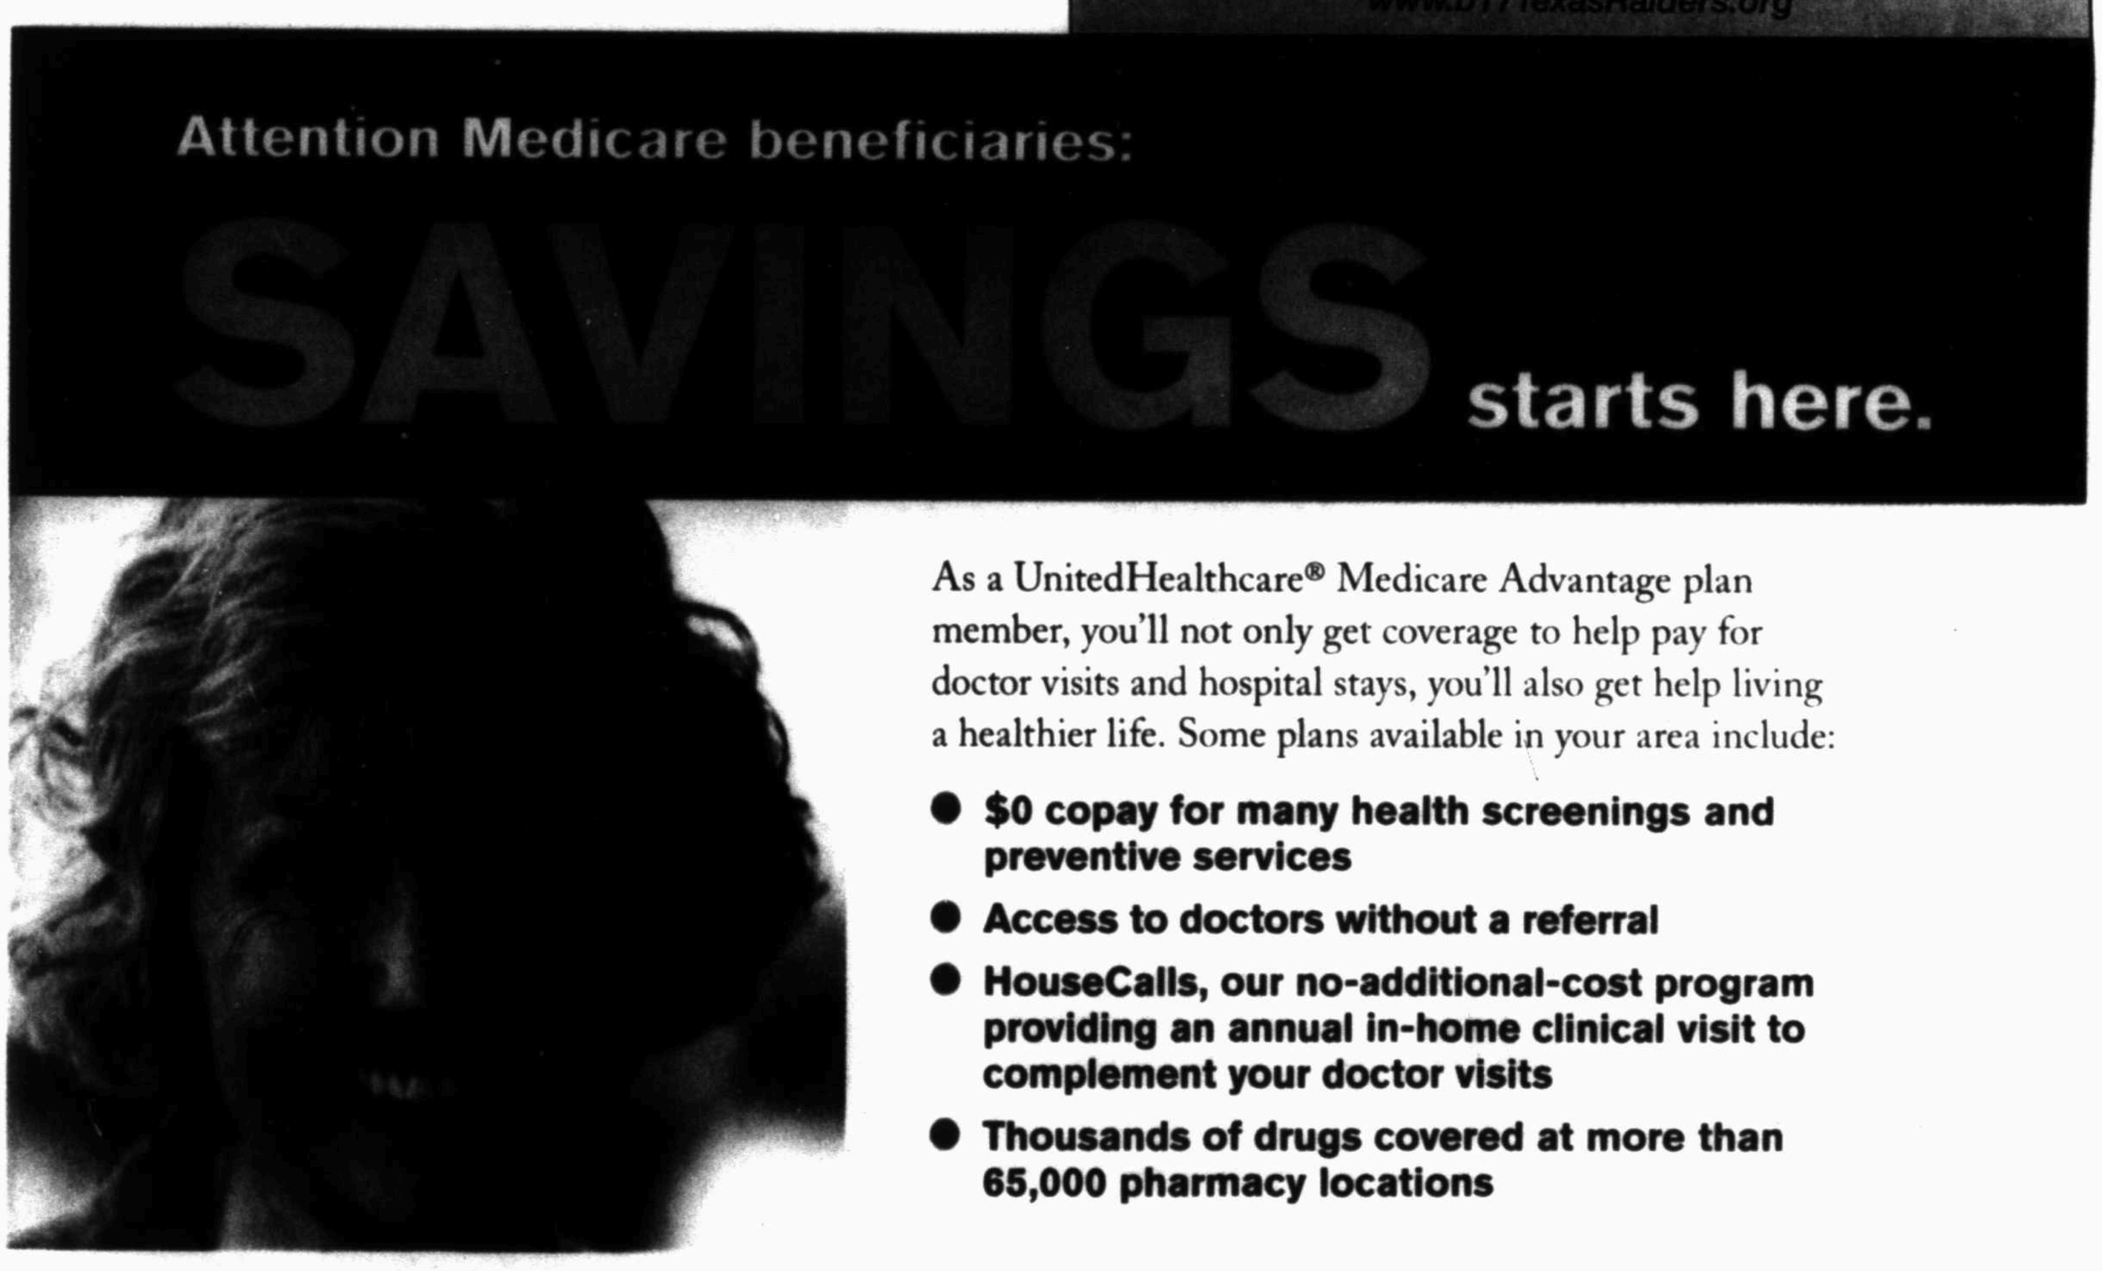
PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP, Mich. — The pastor of a Catholic church in suburban Detroit has been ordered to step aside in an investigation of church finances.

The Rev. Thomas Belczak had been pastor at St. Kenneth Church for 10 1/2 years. His brother, the Rev. Ed Belczak, is under indictment in an alleged scheme to steal nearly $700,000 from a different church in suburban Detroit.

Archdiocese of Detroit spokesman Ned McGrath said the cases aren't related.

In a statement, the Archdiocese said investigators are looking into possible "improper use" of money at St. Kenneth in Plymouth Township. McGrath declined to elaborate, although the parish is not in any financial distress.

Thomas Belczak officiated at a funeral Mass Thursday before being removed as pastor. He couldn't be reached for comment.



BUCKNER

services available locally.

"It might sound like it's dramatic, but it is, it's violence," said Anna Rodriguez, program coordinator for Buckner Family Place. "The statistics tell us that every nine second in the U.S. a woman is assaulted or beaten. I don't think people realize how serious this is. Domestic violence is the leading cause of injury to women outside of car accidents and muggings and the sad part about it is that it's often by an intimate partner."

Rodriguez said a majority of the families who come to Buckner Family Place have been through a domestic violence situation.

"We want them to be silent no more and to let them know that they can report (domestic violence) and that there is assistance in the community to receive some help," said Rodriguez. "There's money available to be able to escape, but people just don't know what resources are available."

While Rodriguez said she is pleased with the recent media attention, she also said it served as a reminder to her that not everyone is as aware of domestic violence as they are.

"We hear and see (the impact of domestic violence) all the time, but other people might not see it like we do," Rodriguez said. "We get contacted daily by women seeking help."

In addition to addressing the needs of the victim, Rodriguez said it is also important to consider the negative influence that exposure to domestic violence has on children.

"It's said that children — especially males — that witness domestic violence as they're growing up tend to become abusers themselves," Rodriguez said. "We want to break that cycle and expose it. We want people to know that men who witness their parents in a domestic violence lifestyle are twice as likely to abuse their wives as those with non-violent parents."

Rodriquez recalled one girl who came to Buckner with her mother was "slapping her mother, spitting on her and attacking her." After counseling and getting involved with a swim team, Rodriguez said the girl was no longer "the same kid that once came through our doors."

"We want to give the kids (access) to other resources that will expose them to positive behaviors and role models," Rodriguez said.

However, when it comes to "breaking the cycle," said Rodriguez, her experience has been that education is the quickest way to put the family back into a healthy dynamic.

"One of our biggest objectives is to get the mothers educated," Rodriguez said. "We want to get the mothers into a higher learning institution and once the mothers get educated, the cycle starts to break. Then the children end up going to school and that's the goal. It just puts that seed into the kid's mind."

Buckner Family Place in Midland offers transitional housing, education and services — including health care, counseling, childcare and life skills training — for single mothers and their children. According to a press release, over the last decade Buckner has served nearly 150 families.

CHURCH

each person's beliefs to be valued — even if they may be challenged — that is the church's greatest strength.

"We can challenge each other and question each other in a friendly, cooperative way to understand what each other believes," Schmidt said. "Through that mingling, we're forced to really think about what we believe and why we believe it."

The common bond that holds the congregation together, however, is the belief in community and the power of love.

"Our first principle is the inherent worth and dignity of all people, that is our first and foremost message," Schmidt said. "Everybody is important, no exceptions. That's our bottom line (and) we're inclusive of everybody. Young, old, gay, straight, white, black, we're everyone."

Moving forward, Schmidt said he hopes that the community will come to take greater advantage of the church's space.

"I'm really looking forward to having the community come out and see who we are," Schmidt said. "We want this space to be used. It's one of the ways that we want to give back to the community is through our space. We've got a great location and we want to serve the community through our space, through our actions and everything we do."

The open house will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday with a tour of the church and its grounds. For more information, visit uumidland.org.

Meditation can help anyone relax, focus

Meditation is a method to relax and center the mind that can be used by people of all religions and philosophies by adapting the meditation object so it is suitable to their particular religion. For example, Christians might focus on being held in the heart of Christ, while other religions would hold a different image.

Meditation is a simple and generic way to calm and focus our mind. Because emotions follow the mind, meditation also calms emotions.

A simple meditation is to become aware of our breath. As soon as we do this, our mind slows down, stops racing and we begin to feel calmer. Breath and consciousness are very closely tied together. Slow the breath, and we slow our minds.

Because we are always breathing, it is very easy to pay attention to our breath and make use of it for our benefit. We can do this to relax when a situation is starting to get tense.

Anyone can meditate. It is not some difficult and mystical thing only yogis or Christian saints do, it is something we can all do with some practice. The main thing is to get some instruction and practice. Then month after month, year after year, we are more peaceful and more happy.

Meditation is the quintessential method to evolve ourselves, and we can do it in the privacy of our homes. With meditation we still our minds and then focus on a positive thought, such as love or compassion. We feel it deeply in meditation, and then when we are out of meditation, we practice that same positive thought in our daily life — meditation in action.

A meditation course is planned 10 a.m.-12:30 p.m. Saturday at the Unitarian Universalist Church. Cost is $25.

Human rights activist charged

Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — A top Bahraini human rights activist was formally charged on Thursday with insulting the ministries of defense and interior.

Nabeel Rajab, who heads the Bahrain Center for Human Rights, was detained Oct. 1 over his tweets alleging that Bahrain's security institutions were incubators for extremist ideology. His lawyer, Jalila al-Sayed, said Rajab was also accused of "intimidating" security forces.

A court date was set for Oct. 19. Al-Sayed said the charges carry a possible prison sentence of up to three years. Rajab insists he was practicing his right to free speech.

State prosecutors also ordered Rajab held another week starting Thursday. A statement by the prosecutor's office carried by the official Bahrain News Agency said, without identifying Rajab by name, that the person who had posted "insults" on his personal social media account is being charged for "defamatory allegations" against both security ministries.

Rajab wrote Sept. 28 on Twitter that security institutions are "the first ideological incubator" for Bahrainis who joined the Islamic State group fighting in Iraq and Syria.

A video recently released purportedly shows four Bahrainis who joined the Islamic State group calling on other Bahrainis to take up arms against the tiny island country's Sunni monarchy and majority Shiites. They also call for a Sunni boycott of upcoming Nov. 22 parliamentary elections.

Methodist clergy escape sanctions over gay wedding

A complaint against 36 United Methodist ministers who blessed a same-sex wedding in Philadelphia in defiance of church law has been resolved.

The clergy will face no discipline, but released a statement acknowledging they could be punished if they do it again.

The pastors blessed the Nov. 9 ceremony at Philadelphia's Arch Street United Methodist Church to show support for the Rev. Frank Schaefer, a colleague who faced church discipline for presiding at his gay son's wedding. That case is before the Methodist church's highest court.

The rebellious clergy and the Methodists who filed a complaint against them have agreed to meet to discuss their differences over gay marriage.

The denomination accepts gay members but bans "self-avowed practicing homosexuals" from becoming clergy and forbid ministers from performing same-sex marriages. The issue has caused a split within the church.

Hillsong United the big winner at Christian music Dove Awards

NASHVILLE — Hillsong United has been named Artist of the Year at the Christian music Dove Awards.

The Australian worship band also won four top song honors at the Gospel Music Association awards ceremony Tuesday night in Nashville.

"Oceans (Where Feet May Fail)" received Dove Awards for Song of the Year, Worship Song of the Year and Pop/Contemporary Recorded Song of the Year. Hillsong United's recording of "Oceans" also was named the Contemporary Christian Performance of the Year.

Hillsong United worship leader Jonathon Douglass, known as J.D., said the song was written to help non-Christians "connect with Jesus," and to give assurance to Christians coping with life's "ups and downs."

The Dove Awards show will be broadcast Sunday on the Trinity Broadcasting Network.

Supreme Court gay marriage punt draws mixed Baptist reaction

NASHVILLE — Baptists have mixed reactions to the Supreme Court's refusal to stop the legalization of gay marriage.

The Rev. Russell Moore, who heads the Southern Baptist Convention's Ethics and Religious Liberty Commission, says courts can't change what the Bible teaches.

He says Christians who oppose gay marriage, instead of retreating in anger, should love their gay and lesbian neighbors and demonstrate the unique value of traditional marriage in their homes and churches.

But the Rev. Nancy Petty, whose Baptist church belongs to a more liberal denomination, says she and her same-sex partner now look forward to getting married in North Carolina. Petty had refused to sign any marriage licenses until gay and lesbian couples could marry in her state.

Pope and prelates get crash course in joys of sex

Pope Francis, cardinals and bishops from around the world have received an unexpected lecture on the joy of sex from a Catholic couple brought in to talk about what makes a marriage last.

Ron and Mavis Pirola, parents of four from Sydney, Australia, told a Vatican gathering of some 200 prelates that sexual attraction brought them together and that sex has helped keep them married for 55 years.

The Pirolas were applauded when they told the bishops about the son of a Catholic couple who was welcomed into a family Christmas gathering with his gay partner.

In an indication, though, that opposition to such a welcoming position remains high, conservative Catholic groups blasted the Pirola's example as "damaging" to the church.

WASHINGTON

DC rabbi tells congregation 'I am a gay man'

The rabbi of a prominent synagogue in Washington D.C. is telling his congregants that he's gay, and that he and his wife of 20 years are divorcing.

The Washington Post reports Rabbi Gil Steinlauf sent an email Monday to the 1,400 households of Adas Israel Congregation, saying he could no longer deny his homosexuality. He wrote that the dissonance between his inside and outside became intolerable.

Steinlauf says he and his wife, who is also a rabbi, spent three years trying to hold on to their marriage. The father of three teenagers concluded that he's gay, and that it isn't going to change.

Steinlauf has led Conservative Judaism in embracing same-sex couples. He made news in 2012 when he officiated at the synagogue's first same-sex wedding.

Utah appeals ruling in 'Sister Wives' case

A federal appeals court will review a ruling that struck down parts of Utah's anti-polygamy law and was hailed as a landmark decision removing the threat of arrest for plural families in Utah.

The Utah attorney general's office filed an appeal Thursday with the Denver-based 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, two weeks after it ended speculation by announcing it would challenge the ruling. The lawsuit was brought by the family on the TLC reality TV show "Sister Wives."

In December, U.S. District Judge Clark Waddoups ruled in favor of reality show star Kody Brown and his four wives, saying a provision of the law forbidding cohabitation violated the family's freedom of religion.

Midland High's Kahlyl Winn runs the ball in for a touchdown against Amarillo High on Sept. 26 at Grande Communications Stadium.

Now the games matter

The battle for the playoffs start as district games begin

From staff reports

It seems a little late to be starting district play in West Texas big school football in October, considering the nine-team District 2-5A became such a part of the football landscape the last two years.

But that's the hand the University Interscholastic League dealt Class 6A schools in West Texas in February, and all the coaches in the district are smiling.

Yes, there are only five district games – the contests that really count toward a state playoff berth — but the three extra non-district games gave coaches more time to evaluate talent.

The next five weeks will show if that talent evaluation was correct and if all the non-district games have paid off.

On Page 3C, Reporter-Telegram District 3-6A beat writers Len Hayward and Chris Hummer take a look at what you might see over the next five weeks in District 3-6A play.

We take a look at who we think the district's impact players will be, breakdown the league's points tiebreaker system, examine the non-district season and see if both Chris and Len stick to their preseason picks for the four playoff teams.

Tonight it all begins as West Texas' largest high schools battle it out on the gridiron between now and Nov. 7 for a chance at a coveted playoff berth.

Sanford's work paying big dividends for Mustangs

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

Midland Christian head coach Greg McClendon said the biggest progression he's seen in Will Sanford over three years is how much more consistent he's become as a linebacker.

McClendon said Sanford will have moments where he makes a mistake, but on the next play he will make up for it by causing a fumble or sacking the quarterback.

Sanford

But what McClendon hasn't seen change is how hard Sanford plays. McClendon said he never takes a snap off, and that's a major reason Sanford has been a three-year starter at linebacker for the Mustangs.

"It's hard to get kids not to take a rest during plays and stuff," McClendon said. "He's one of those guys where his motor is running on every play. He makes a lot of big plays. He may make a mistake, but he comes back and it's usually big plays that he comes back with."

Sanford, who moved to Midland from Sundown before his sophomore year, already has 42 tackles this season, which is second on the team behind defensive end Reid Talley. Sanford also has three sacks, a team-high seven tackles for loss, one caused fumble and a fumble recovery.

Dickie doing it all for Rangers this season

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

Cole Dickie came into this season at Greenwood thinking he would get a shot at playing quarterback for the Rangers. Little did he know, he would be counted on to be a Jack of all trades this year.

Dickie

Not only has Dickie gotten in a few snaps at quarterback behind starter Zach Redwine, but the 6-foot-2, 180-pound junior, has also been asked to play running back, safety and linebacker, all positions that were fairly new to him.

Tonight in the District 2-4A Division II opener at Lamesa (1-4), expect Dickie to primarily be at running back for the Rangers (2-3 overall), but don't be surprised if you see him elsewhere during a game.

"He's a kid that's had to step in and do multiple things for us because he's a an athlete," Greenwood coach

FROM STAFF REPORTS

MIDLAND HIGH TO TRAVEL TO ODESSA HIGH

The Lady Bulldogs return to action tonight at 5 p.m. to face the Lady Bronchos, with Midland High looking to jump over the .500 mark in district play for the first time this season.

Midland High (25-6, 2-2 in 3-6A) has a very good shot of doing so against Odessa High (10-21, 0-4 in 3-6A), the only winless team in 3-6A. The Lady Bronchos have actually yet to win a set this season in 3-6A play.

The Lady Bulldogs have won two straight games after losing their first two district games to San Angelo Central and Abilene High.

LEE HOSTS PERMIAN IN BATTLE FOR 4TH PLACE

Lee and Odessa Permian are tied for fourth place in the District 3-6A standings, and it's those two teams that are scheduled to meet tonight at Lee's gym at 5 p.m..

District 3-6A volleyball

Odessa High	0	4	10	21

Tuesday's Scores
Midland High def. Odessa Permian, 25-14, 25-13, 25-23
Abilene High def. Lee, 25-16, 25-14, 25-11
San Angelo Central def. Odessa High, 25-9, 25-12, 25-11
Today's Matches
Odessa Permian at Lee
Midland High at Odessa High
Abilene High at San Angelo Central
All matches at 5 p.m.

The Lady Rebels (16-18, 1-3 in 3-6A) and Lady Panthers (21-12, 1-3) have both knocked off Odessa High this season, but lost games to the other three members of the district. With this in mind, this game will be big in terms of the two schools jostling for the district's fourth and final playoff spot down the line.

LADY CHARGERS SWEEP MIDESSA

The Trinity volleyball team took a break from district play Thursday night to take on Midessa, in what turned out to be a quick straight-set, 25-10, 25-11, 25-15 win for the Lady Chargers.

Ashley Stroup led Trinity (15-12) with 12 kills and eight blocks, to go along with three aces and eight digs. Hilary Lanier had a team-high 23 assists while also contributing four digs.

The team also piled up the aces in the contest with 27 total. Avery Watson led the way for the Lady Chargers with seven.

Trinity will return to action today against Amarillo San Jacinto at home. First serve is scheduled for 6 p.m.

MHS girls, Lee boys open swim season with wins

From staff reports

ODESSA — The Midland High girls and Lee boys won a swimming tri-meet on Thursday at Ector Junior High to open the swimming season.

The Midland High girls won with 457 points, while Odessa High scored 353 and Lee had 249.

Top performances for the Midland High girls were freshman Mollie Wright, winning the 200 freestyle and the 100 butterfly, sophomore Kile Carriger won the 200 individual medley and the 500 freestyle.

Freshman Dailey Parker won the 100 freestyle, senior Blythe Lary won the 100 backstroke, and freshman Maya Anderson won the 100 breaststroke. The relay team of Lary, Carriger, Wright and junior Cassidy Hale won the 200 medley relay and the 400 freestyle relay. Midland High's Dailey Parker was named the swimmer of the meet by the meet's coaches.

For the Lee girls, senior Keely Martin finished second in the 500 freestyle, junior Jennifer Sites was runner-up in the 200 IM and 100 backstroke, and freshman Brittany Jones took second in the 50 free. The 200 freestyle relay team of Sites, Martin, junior Cassie Matsinger, and sophomore Hannah Tompkins also took second in that event. Brittany Jones was selected by the coaching staff as the outstanding swimmer of the meet.

The Lee boys scored 373 points with Odessa High scoring 271 and Mildand High 210.

Picking up wins for the Lee boys were junior River Atwood in the 100 freestyle, sophomore Nicholas De La Rosa in the 500 freestyle, junior Shelby Hawkins in the 100 backstroke, and the 400 freestyle relay team of Hawkins, Atwood, junior Zack Gray, and sophomore Austin Gibson. Bryce Peacock was selected swimmer of the meet.

Winning for the Midland High boys team were freshman Braden Vines in the 200 individual medley and 100 butterfly, junior Zach Breeding in the 50 freestyle and 100 breaststroke and junior Josh James in the 200 freestyle. The 200 medley relay and 200 freestyle relay teams of Vines, Breeding, James, and freshman Cole Austin also picked up victories. Austin was selected swimmer of the meet.

The Midland ISD swimming and diving teams will next compete at the San Angelo Invitational on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 in San Angelo.

Indianapolis holds on for win over Houston

Colts	33
Texans	28

HOUSTON — Andrew Luck and the Indianapolis Colts had a great first quarter and did just enough the rest of the way to hold off the Houston Texans 33-28 on Thursday night.

The Colts (4-2) raced to a 24-0 lead after one quarter, but allowed Houston to cut it to 33-28 early in the fourth quarter on J.J. Watt's fumble return for a touchdown.

The Texans (3-3) had two opportunities to take the lead late, but the Colts recovered fumbles by Andre Johnson and Ryan Fitzpatrick in the last five minutes.

Luck finished with 370 yards passing and a three touchdowns and T.Y. Hilton had a career-high 223 yards receiving with a touchdown to give Indy first place in the AFC South.

The Texans were driving with less than five minutes remaining when Johnson, who had been called for pass interference two plays earlier, caught a 13-yard pass and fumbled.

Watt knocked down Luck's pass on third down on Indy's next drive to give Houston one last chance. But Bjoern Werner sacked Fitzpatrick and stripped the ball and D'Qwell Jackson recovered.

Fitzpatrick threw for 212 yards and a touchdown and Arian Foster had 109 yards rushing with two scores for Houston.

Indianapolis led by 12 when Luck fumbled and Watt recovered it and returned it 45 yards for a touchdown. It was Watt's third touchdown this season. He also has scored on an interception return and a reception.

Foster had a 34-yard run before Johnson grabbed a 26-yard reception to get Houston down to the 2 in the third quarter. Foster ran wide before cutting back inside and into the end zone untouched on the next play to get the Texans to 27-21.

The Texans were within six points in the third quarter when Luck, who was under heavy pressure, threw a 33-yard touchdown pass to Hilton. The 2-point conversion failed, leaving Indianapolis up 33-21.

After a dreadful first quarter where Houston managed just 2 yards, the Texans' offense finally got going in the second quarter. They kicked a field goal on fourth-and-5, but the Colts got a penalty to give Houston a new set of downs.

They took advantage of the opportunity when Fitzpatrick found Johnson in the corner of the end zone and he managed to get both feet in bounds for a 4-yard touchdown two plays later to cut the lead to 24-7. It was the first touchdown of the season for Johnson.

All you need to know about District 3-6A

THE FAB FIVE

With only five games in the district season, the pressure is on to get the two or three wins needed to be one of the four playoff teams. It's hard to pick key games out of the 15 that will be played over the next five weeks, but we will pick one for each week.

Here are those games that could help determine the playoff picture this year.

TODAY
Abilene High at San Angelo Central

This is a long-standing rivalry that dates back to 1922, and this year's version could be for the district title. Whoever wins this game will have plenty of momentum for the rest of the season, and they also have a real chance to go undefeated in district play.

OCT. 17
Lee at Odessa High

It might only be the second week of the season, but this could be an elimination game for either team depending on its Week 1 result. Plus, this game is one of the rivalries that for years has more history to it than many people think. This was the traditional district opener for a number of seasons, and even during Lee's glory years in the late '90s, the Bronchos were a thorn in the Rebels' side.

OCT. 24
Midland High at Odessa Permian

By this time, both teams should know what they need to do to make the playoffs. This annual game almost always has had playoff implications, and it will be no different this season.

OCT. 31
Odessa Permian vs. Odessa High

Since 1997, when a Randy Quisenberry-coached Bronchos team broke a 30-plus year winning streak for Permian, this series has been closer than expected. Last season's 31-27 OHS win helped put the Bronchos in the playoffs and keep Permian out. By this time of year, both teams could be playing for their playoff lives.

NOV. 7
Midland High vs. Lee

This year's crosstown rivalry has a chance to be very important for teams because they each face either Abilene High or San Angelo Central the week before. This game might be for a playoff spot for one of both of the teams.

GET OUT THE CALCULATOR

There's a reason there is a positive and negative points tiebreaker in District 3-6A, and that's because nobody wants a repeat of the coin flips to determine playoff teams. It's been the standard in the district for more than 20 years.

But that doesn't mean it makes it any easier to figure out once the standings start becoming jumbled.

So here's a brief explainer of how the system works.

If there are three or more teams tied for a spot, the first tiebreaker is their head-to-head games. This means, if one of the three teams beat the other two then that team gets the playoff spot or one of the spots.

If they are all tied on record, then each team would receive 15 points maximum for a win and 15 points maximum for a loss in a tiebreaker situation. Any margin of victory or loss more than that number will still stay at 15. For example, if a team wins by six they get six positive points and the opponent receives six negative points.

So, if you see a team kicking an extra point with no time remaining, don't be, because every point counts.

And if you are confused, don't worry, everyone else is too.

Midland High linebacker Emilio Solis celebrates after sacking Smithson Valley quarterback Josh Adkins on Aug. 29 at Grande Communications Stadium.

IMPACT PLAYERS

LEE
RB, Aron Dobbins, Sr.

Dobbins has been a workhorse for the Rebels this year, and will continue to be that workhorse in district play. He has a chance to move up the Lee rushing ladder; and that's a pretty good list.

MIDLAND HIGH
LB, Emilio Solis, Sr.

This list will be dominated by offensive players, but Solis deserves a spot. The senior linebacker leads the Bulldogs with 61 tackles and eight sacks. He's also had an interception return for a touchdown and recovered a fumble. Solis is the soul of the Midland High defense, one of the best in the district.

ABILENE HIGH
QB, Derek Scott, Sr.

The senior quarterback has thrown 145 passes thus far this season and completed 72 percent of them. Those passes have gone for 11.7 yards on average to go along with his 246 yards and two touchdowns per game. Those numbers are huge in high school, and if Scott can continue this play, the Eagles will roll.

ODESSA HIGH
LB, Edgar Contreras, Sr.

Contreras is the big key to Odessa High's defense, which had eight starters return this season. If Contreras and his teammates can get the stops needed to take some pressure off their offense, then OHS could have a shot at postseason play again.

ODESSA PERMIAN
RB, Brandon Bailey, Sr.

He's part of a long line of Mojo rushers. If he can continue to average 6.5 yards a carry during district play, he might lead the Panthers back to the postseason.

San Angelo Central
QB, Braden Hucks, Sr.

Hucks took over under center for Central this year, and has grabbed the starting mantle and run with it — literally. Hucks has rushed for a team-high 460 yards and 10 TDs to go with his 919 passing yards and eight touchdowns through the air. If he can continue his high level of play, the Bobcats will contend for a second straight district championship.

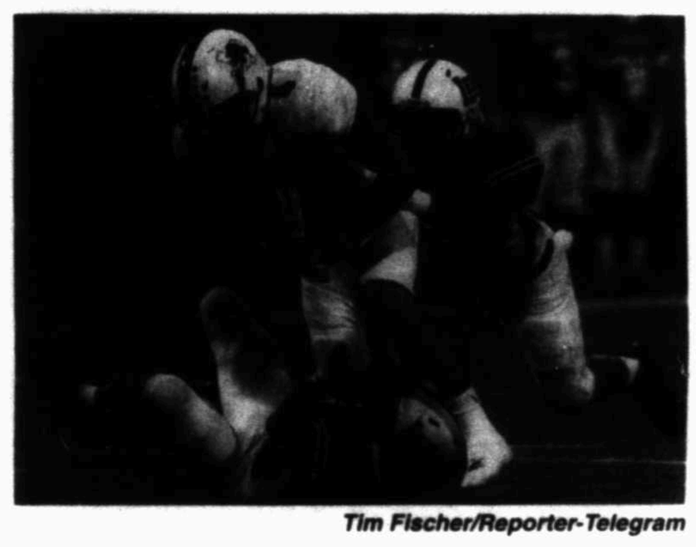
NON-DISTRICT REWIND

A fast start: Things could not have started better for the six teams of 3-6A, as the district went 6-0 during the opening week. This included wins over two Metroplex schools (Lee beat Keller and Abilene High knocked off Colleyville Heritage) and a victory over a traditional state power (Midland High in 2OT against Smithson Valley.)

Permian has its Mojo back: Well, at least it looks like it. The Panthers went 4-1 in the non-district portion of the schedule, and it would be 5-0 if not for a last-second field goal from Lubbock Coronado in Permian's fifth game. Still, the Panthers did not exactly beat up on giants. The real test of the Panthers' legitimacy will come in district.

The Eagles' 3-7 2013 was an aberration: The Eagles have already won more games in 2014 than they did all of last year, and they've been impressive in all of those games. Abilene High's wins over Colleyville Heritage and San Antonio Warren were against very solid opponents, and their only loss was a blowout to state power Southlake Carroll. But even then, they played the Dragons even for most of the first half.

Odessa High's trip through 2-6A: Perhaps this title should include the Bronchos' injury issue, which was a big cause of their three-game slide to end the non-district schedule. But the fact that the Bronchos will play, what is in extent, two full district schedules is too good to pass up. Odessa High notched wins over Lubbock Monterey and Coronado, but fell to the more quality teams in 2-6A, Amarillo Tascosa, Amarillo High and Frenship in its last three games. Though, at that time, the team was ravaged by injuries.



Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Lee's Garrett Chalker and Tyler Thames combine to stop Southlake Carroll's Parker Fentriss Friday night at Grande Communications Stadium.

Lee's quarterback change: The Rebels had trouble creating offense early in the season as starter Jon Schwalbach struggled. After a season-opening win over Keller, the Rebels lost two straight. This, in part, prompted Lee head coach James Morton to go with junior Wesley Hall for large chunks of the El Paso El Dorado game, which Lee lost in double overtime. After a solid performance, Hall got the starting nod the next week against Abilene Cooper. Now, heading into district, Hall is entrenched as the starter under center. He'll need to play well, because the Rebels really need a solid passing game to complement the team's strength on the ground.

Turnovers plague Midland High: To be fair, this only applies to the Bulldogs' last two games. But if it weren't for their four turnovers in each, Midland High would likely be 5-0 instead of 3-2. The Bulldogs have turned the ball over 14 times this year, nearly three times per game. They're a talented team, but MHS must cut down on the giveaways moving forward.

Carroll tears through 3-6A: Southlake Carroll is one of the best programs in the state, and it proved it against district 3-6A opponents this year. The Dragons beat Lee 56-6, and then, three weeks later in an undefeated showdown, the Dragons knocked off Abilene 63-28. Since 2010, Carroll has faced a member of 3-6A on six occasions, in those games, the Dragons have a 6-0 record and have won by a combined point spread of 340-82.

THEY SAID IT

Here are quotes from some of the district's coaches about the upcoming District 3-6A season.

Midland High head coach Craig Yenzer: "Everybody is tough, it seems like we're all bunched in there pretty closely.... Probably this year more than most, this district can drive you crazy worrying about the other teams. You know, there is good athletes and great coaching. Each week you have to prepare your kids really well or they're going to get beat. It looks to be more that way than ever before."

Lee coach James Morton: "The benefit for us is that it allows you a little longer leeway to get ready for district to learn some of those lessons, but you still have to beat the same people, large district or small district. That can be perceived as being ugly toward the neighbors to the north, but you got to beat the same people. You've got to beat the Midlands, Odessas, Abilenes and Central."

Abilene High head coach Steve Warren: "It's a tossup just like everyone thought it would be to start with. No one has put a foot forward and said 'it goes through my town.'"

San Angelo Central head coach Brent Davis: "This district is going to be a tough game every game. There is nobody in the district that's not very good. They're going to be knock-down drag out. They are all going to be tough, everyone."

Odessa Permian head coach Blake Feldt: "I think its going to be unbelievably competitive. Any team can beat anybody else on a Friday night. With most districts you hear people say that but that's not always the truth. In our district that is the truth. I think everybody has a good football team, and it's going to be a dog fight no matter what the matchup is."

WHO WILL BE 3-6A PLAYER OF THE YEAR?

MRT 3-6A beat writers Chris Hummer and Len Hayward make their pick who they think will be the 3-6A Player of the Year when the season is over.

LEN HAYWARD
Derek Scott, QB, Abilene High

There probably isn't a player on the Eagles that has a bigger chip on his shoulder this season than Scott. He's already shown his skill this season, and will continue to do it during district play.

CHRIS HUMMER
Braden Hucks, QB, San Angelo Central

The first-year start was the target of a lot of questions entering the season, and he's answered almost all of them. Hucks is the most important piece to the success for the Bobcats, my pick to win the district title. If that happens, Hucks takes the award going away.

THE "EXPERTS" REDO THEIR DISTRICT PICKS

LEN HAYWARD
Aug. 24

1. Abilene High; 2. San Angelo Central; 3. Midland High; 4. Lee; 5. Odessa High; 6. Odessa Permian

Oct. 10

1. Abilene High; 2. San Angelo Central; 3. Odessa Permian; 4. Midland High; 5. Lee; 6. Odessa High

Why Len changed: "My top two finishers didn't change, but the two other playoff participants changed. Permian has shown some consistency, while MHS can be explosive if they don't turn the ball over."

CHRIS HUMMER
Aug. 24

1. San Angelo Central; 2. Abilene High; 3. Midland High; 4. Lee; 5. Odessa Permian; 6. Odessa High

Oct. 10

1. San Angelo Central; 2. Abilene High; 3. Midland High; 4. Lee; 5. Odessa Permian; 6. Odessa High

Why Chris changed: "I may have understated the Eagles' ability to bounce back from a rough campaign last season a little — OK, a lot — and I may have overestimated the Rebels talent quite a bit. But I still believe Lee can bounce back and make the playoffs. I'll stick with my Central pick for now, though I may ask for a redo after its game with Abilene High tonight."

LESS MARGIN FOR ERROR

The last two years, the six schools in District 3-6A were part of the nine-team District 2-5A. Those three extra teams also meant three extra district games, and in some cases, that gave some teams some leeway to lose two or three games and still make the playoffs.

This season that will all change. There are only five chances to win, and three losses could keep a team out of the playoffs, and no one wants to really think about losing four district games. But stranger things have happened, and it makes the shortened district season something interesting to watch.

THIS WEEK'S GAMES

ODESSA PERMIAN AT LEE

When/where: 7:30 p.m. Grande Communications Stadium

On the air: KNFM 92.3 FM; KMCM 96.9 FM

Records: Lee 1-4, 0-0 in District 3-6A; Odessa Permian 4-1, 0-0

Last game: Abilene Cooper 27, Lee 23; Lubbock Coronado 15, Odessa Permian 14

Last meeting/series: Lee won 42-21 in 2013; Permian holds a 34-21-1 record in the series

Weather forecast: Sunny with a temperature of 80 degrees expected at kickoff with no chance of precipitation

Five things you need to know

■ Today's game marks the 57th meeting between the schools, but the first since 2005 where Lee is coming off a victory. The Panthers won seven straight against the rival Rebels from 2006-2012.

■ Junior Wesley Hall will get his second start this season at quarterback, but will be doing it with the benefit of a bye week. Hall took over signal calling duties against El Paso El Dorado, and was named the starter for the game against Abilene Cooper a week later. Hall has thrown for 382 yards and four touchdowns in the games he has played under center.

Amarillo High 21, Midland High 10
Southlake Carroll 63, Abilene 28
Wolfforth Frenship 28, Odessa High 13
Lubbock Coronado 15, Odessa Permian 14

Today's Games
Odessa Permian at Lee, 7:30 p.m.
Midland High at Odessa High, 7:30 p.m.
Abilene High at San Angelo Central, 7:30 p.m.

■ The Panthers will get quarterback Heath Wood back after he suffered a shoulder injury three weeks ago. Wood has thrown for 552 yards with seven touchdowns and two interceptions this season. Permian coach Blake Feldt said that Wood could have played against Lubbock Coronado, but they held him out against the Mustangs as a precaution.

■ Today's game features two of the best running backs in District 3-6A; Lee running back Aron Dobbins has rushed for 875 yards and 10 touchdowns in five games, while Brandon Bailey has 564 yards with eight touchdowns this season.

■ Lee coach James Morton said Permian's offense features an option look and his team will have to play assignment football. Morton said on defense that the Panthers are "very aggressive, and it starts with their defensive line."

MIDLAND HIGH AT ODESSA HIGH

When/Where: 7:30 p.m., Ratliff Stadium, Odessa

On the air: KCRS (550 AM) Midland; KICKS (99.1 FM) Odessa

Records: Midland High 3-2, 0-0 in 3-6A; Odessa High 2-3, 0-0

Last game: Amarillo High 21, Midland High 10; Frenship 38, Odessa High 13

Last meeting/series: Odessa High 35, Midland High 30 in 2013; Odessa High leads the all-time series 49-44.

Weather Forecast: High of 86 with a 30 percent chance of rain.

Five things you need to know

■ Odessa High running back Sebastian Galindo will start against Midland High this week, per the Odessa American. The senior missed the Bronchos' last three games with a shoulder injury. In two games, Galindo had rushed for 571 yards and seven touchdowns.

■ Midland High has lost twice this season, and in both of those games, the Bulldogs turned the ball over eight times. In Midland High's three wins, it had a 2-to-5 turnover ratio compared to its opponents. In the Bulldogs' losses, the ratio ballooned to 4-to-1.

■ Three Midland High players are out for tonight's game with the Bronchos. Both senior wide receivers, Eric Haverstock (hip) and Brandon Sanchez (hamstring), will miss the contest. Also, senior safety Braden Rushton (ankle) will miss the game, though he's expected to miss the majority of the regular season while the two wide outs are day-to-day.

■ After starting the season 2-0, Odessa High lost its next three games. This included two straight shutouts against Amarillo Tascosa and Amarillo High. The Bronchos were ravished by injuries during this stretch, however, and Midland High head coach Craig Yenzer fully expects the Bronchos to be healthy after the bye week.

"They've been hot and cold because of injuries," Yenzer said. "Obviously, I'm sure they'll be 100 percent for us on Friday night, which presents quite a challenge for us. When you catch them like we are when they're probably going to be 100 percent strength, they're a formidable opponent."

■ Midland High and Odessa High actually have the longest standing game between any two district opponents in 3-6A. The Bulldogs and Bronchos first played in 1921, with Midland High winning 21-12.

Next: Midland High vs. San Angelo Central, 7:30 p.m., Oct. 17; Odessa High vs. Lee, 7:30 p.m., Oct. 17

ABILENE HIGH AT SAN ANGELO CENTRAL

When/Where: 7:30 p.m., San Angelo Stadium, San Angelo

On the air: KZQQ (1560 AM) Abilene; KIXY (94.7 FM) San Angelo

Records: Abilene High 4-1, 0-0 in District 3-6A; San Angelo Central 4-1, 0-0

Last game: Southlake Carroll 63, Abilene High 28; San Angelo Central 42, Laredo Alexander 28.

Last meeting/series: San Angelo Central 32, Abilene High 10 in 2013; The Eagles lead the all-time series 43-35-5.

Weather Forecast: High of 90 with a 20 percent chance of rain.

Three things you need to know

■ San Angelo Central has played great this season outside of just one game; it's only loss of the year to El Paso Franklin. In the contest, a 31-21 loss, the Bobcats turned the ball over five times - the same amount they've committed in their other four games total. If Central holds onto the ball, they're tough to beat at home.

■ The Eagles' offense is built around three separate pillars: quarterback Derek Scott, running back Abram Smith and wide receiver Reese Childress. Scott and Childress, both seniors, have combined for exactly half of Scott's completions on the season and 559 of his 1,116 yards. Smith, a sophomore, has already rushed for 788 yards and 10 touchdowns on the year.

■ It may not get the hype of the two crosstown rivalry games, but this game between Abilene High and Central is actually the longest standing traditional rivalry in the district. The two teams first played during the Warren G. Harding administration in 1922; a game the Eagles won 17-0.

Next: Abilene High vs. Odessa Permian, 7:30 p.m., Oct. 17; San Angelo Central at Midland High, 7:30 p.m., Oct. 17.

AREA FOOTBALL CAPSULES

FROM STAFF REPORTS

ANTHONY AT FORSAN

When/where: 7:30 p.m. Buffalo Stadium, Forsan

Records: Forsan 4-1, 0-0 in District 3-2A Division I; Anthony 0-5, 0-0

Last game: Forsan 28, Wink 20; San Elizario 55, Anthony 0

Last meeting: This is the first meeting between the two schools

Weather forecast: Sunny with a temperature of 80 degrees expected at kickoff with no chance of precipitation

Three things you need to know

■ Forsan begins district play riding a four game winning streak. The Buffaloes continued that streak with a come-from-behind victory at home against Wink last week.

■ Anthony, which is located north of El Paso, has had its share of struggles this season as the Wildcats have been shutout twice this season, including last week's loss to San Elizario.

■ Forsan coach Jason Phillips said that despite Anthony's winless record, he said he saw some good things on film and said that everybody is "0-0" since district play is beginning.

WATAUGA HARVEST AT TRINITY

When/where: 7:30 p.m. Coombes Field

Records: Trinity 4-1, 0-0 in TAPPS Six-man Division I, District 1; Watauga Harvest 4-0, 0-0

Last game: Trinity 51, Sanderson 0; Watauga Harvest 54, Westlake Academy 8

Last meeting: First meeting between the two teams

Weather forecast: Sunny with a temperature of 80 degrees expected at kickoff with no chance of precipitation

Three things you need to know

■ Tonight is Trinity's homecoming.

■ The Chargers took last week's bye to work on fundamentals, and coach Antwan Alexander said it was a chance for his team to get some rest. "We've been going from two-a-days on Aug. 4 straight," Alexander said. "Anybody who had small bumps or bruises, we got them seen by the trainer and got them healthy." Alexander said his squad will be healthy for today's game.

■ The Saints have scored an average of 58 points a game this season, and have given up a total of 64 in the four games. Alexander said Harvest Christian has a good quarterback in Chandon Wright, along with a good spread back in Bradley Ruiz. "We have to do a great job this week of breaking down and covering the receivers," Alexander said. "They are lot like us in that they are trying to get the ball to receivers in space."

GRADY AT GARDEN CITY

When/where: 7:30 p.m. Bearkat Stadium, Garden City

Records: Grady 3-2, Garden City 3-2

Last game: Robert Lee 50, Garden City 40; Grady 76, New Home 30

Last meeting: Garden City beat Grady 62-13 in 2013 and the Bearkats hold a 3-1 advantage in the series

Weather forecast: Sunny with a temperature of 80 degrees expected at kickoff with no chance of precipitation

Three things you need to know

■ The Wildcats rebounded last week with a big victory against New Home where coach Chris Kuykendall said his squad had a slow start. But he said once they were able to find some consistency it played well. Running back E.J. Rodriquez accounted for nearly 400 yards of offense on the night.

■ Garden City won this game relatively easy in 2013, and Kuykendall said that "was an eye-opening experience. We didn't prepare as well as I thought we did last year."

■ The Bearkats are looking to rebound after a 10-point loss to Robert Lee where they were shut out in the second half. Garden City coach Matt Odom said Grady is a "really good" team, and added that they have a large senior class that has the Wildcats playing confident. "They've been playing on Friday nights for the past three years, and this is a big year," Odom said. "Everyone has been waiting for this as far as football goes."

RANKIN AT STERLING CITY

When/where: 7:30 p.m. Eagle Stadium, Sterling City

Records: Rankin 3-2; Sterling City 5-1

Last game: Rankin 66, Grandfalls-Royalty 48 on Sept. 26; Highland 56, Sterling City 42

Last meeting: Rankin beat Sterling City 78-30 in 2012, and the Red Devils hold a 14-6 lead in the series

Weather forecast: Sunny with a temperature of 80 degrees expected at kickoff with no chance of precipitation

Three things you need to know

■ The Red Devils did some fundamental work last week on the bye, and will now begin the stretch run of their season. Rankin will face three teams ranked in the top 20 in sixmanfootball.com's Division I poll over the next five weeks of the season.

■ These two programs have met off and on since 1947, but only three times since the two schools both dropped to the six-man ranks. Rankin has won all three of those six-man meetings.

■ The Eagles had a five-game winning streak to start the season broken with a loss last week to Highland. The Eagles have beaten Blackwell, Zephyr, Garden City, Paint Rock and Sands so far this season.

BIG SPRING VS. SNYDER

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Tiger Stadium, Snyder

On the air: KBEST FM (95.7), KBYG FM (106.3), Big Spring

Records: Big Spring 4-1, 0-0 in District 3-4A Division I; Snyder 2-4, 0-0

Last game: Andrews 43, Big Spring 42; Snyder 34, Shallowater 27, 2OT

Last meeting: Big Spring defeated Snyder 42-14 last year and leads the all-time series 31-25-1

Weather forecast: Temperatures in the mid-70s and a 50 percent chance of rain at kickoff, getting down to the lower 60s at the end of the game

Three things you need to know

■ Senior QB Tobyn Tannehill had another standout game for the Steers last week as he passed for 273 yards and four touchdowns and rushed for 185 yards.

■ Snyder is coming off a big win against Shallowater. Senior QB Kodi Maxfield passed for 168 yards and two touchdowns to go with 131 yards rushing and a TD on 31 carries.

■ Big Spring coach Phillip Ritchey said that Snyder beating a previously undefeated Shallowater team is proof that the Tigers can beat anybody if their opponent doesn't play well.

"They're a better team than their record shows," Ritchey said. "They get after it, they run the ball extremely hard and they're bigger than we are, and that is a concern. It's going to be a test on both sides of the ball."

CLINT MOUNTAIN VIEW VS. ANDREWS

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Mustang Bowl, Andrews

On the air: KACT FM (105.5), KACT AM (1360), Andrews

Records: Andrews 5-1, 0-0 in District 2-4A Division I; Clint Mountain View 1-4, 0-0

Last game: Andrews 43, Big Spring 42; Fort Stockton 28, Mountain View 7

Last meeting: Andrews defeated Mountain View 52-14 in 2010, the teams' only previous meeting

Weather forecast: Clear with temperatures in the mid-70s at kickoff, getting down to the mid-60s at the end of the game.

Three things you need to know

■ Andrews is coming off a big win over Big Spring as the Mustangs came back from a 14-point deficit early in the fourth quarter with 15 unanswered points. Senior QB Jase Hammack is coming off a huge performance as he was 27-of-32 passing for 418 yards with five touchdowns and no interceptions. He earned the Built Ford Tough Texas Player of the Week award in Class 4A for his big game.

■ Mountain View is coming off a loss in which it was held to 194 total yards by Fort Stockton. Junior RB Joe Castillo led the Lobos with 112 yards rushing on 16 carries.

■ Andrews coach Ralph Mason said while his team is unfamiliar with the Lobos and doesn't know much about them, his team needs to concentrate on getting better.

COLORADO CITY VS. STANTON

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Buffalo Stadium, Stanton

On the air: The Fuse (94.3 FM), Big Spring

Records: Stanton 2-3, 0-0 in District 3-3A Division II; Colorado City 3-2, 0-0

Last game: Seagraves 32, Stanton 10 (Sept. 26); Hawley 68, Colorado City 66, OT

Last meeting: Colorado City defeated Stanton 34-20 in 2009 and leads the all-time series 16-8-1

Weather forecast: Sunny and clear with temperatures in the upper-70s at kickoff, getting down to the lower-60s at the end of the game.

Three things you need to know

■ Stanton had a bye week, and needed it after going through some injuries and facing state-ranked Class 2A teams Abernathy and Seagraves on back-to-back weeks.

■ Stanton coach John Peterson said the Buffaloes will get back RB/DB Alex Martinez and WR/DB Jonathon Tomlinson back after both suffered concussions in previous weeks.

■ Colorado City is coming off a crazy, high-scoring game against Hawley, which ended on a two-point conversion in overtime. Wolves senior QB Dillon Gainey was 19-of-35 passing for 374 yards, five touchdowns and one interception.

"They have the most team speed we've seen," Peterson said of the Wolves. "They throw the ball like crazy and Gainey is an outstanding football player. Our secondary has surprisingly been one of our bright spots, but this could turn into a track meet."

BALLINGER VS. COAHOMA

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Bulldog Stadium, Coahoma

On the air: KBST (1490 AM), Big Spring

Records: Coahoma 4-1, 0-0 in District 3-3A Division II; Ballinger 1-4, 0-0

Last game: Iraan 13, Coahoma 0 (Sept. 26); Crane 35, Ballinger 34 (Sept. 26)

Last meeting: Coahoma defeated Ballinger 22-13 last year but Ballinger leads the all-time series 15-8

Weather forecast: Mostly sunny with temperatures in the mid-70s and a 20 percent chance of rain at kickoff with temperatures getting down to the mid-60s

Three things you need to know

■ Coahoma had a bye last week, following its first loss of the season at Iraan, a Class 2A opponent which is ranked just outside the Associated Press top 10.

■ Gardner said his team worked on technique and healed up some bumps and bruises during the bye week. He added that FB Joseph Melendez should be ready to go today after turning an ankle against Iraan.

■ Ballinger also had a bye last week, but its last game came in a tough one-point loss to Crane. QB Colton Little passed for 183 yards and three touchdowns, while RB Clayton Crabb rushed for 146 yards and two TDs on 14 carries.

Coahoma coach Trey Gardner said the Bearcats have some size and they're offensively similar to Iraan. He said they're going to run the ball a bit from the shotgun, so it's going to be important for the Bulldogs to play assignment football.

DICKIE

From 1C

Shad Hanna said. "He tried out for the quarterback position, but because of his speed we had to move him to running back. Then on defense, he was trying to learn safety and then we moved him to linebacker, so this kid has had a lot on his plate. He has done a great job of working through all of that and learning."

Dickie, who transferred from Midland High last school year, doesn't seem to mind going through the process of learning the positions. He's the kind of player who has an upbeat attitude and does whatever is best for the team.

"It's a challenge but it's nothing I can't handle," said Dickie, who has 200 yards rushing and has recorded two total tackles this year. "The coaches have really helped me a lot and have stayed with me after practices, they have helped me during practices and have pulled me off to the side to make sure I would be ready for the game."

While quarterback is his primary position, Dickie understands that he's just got to wait until it's his time.

"I wanted to try and play a little quarterback but Redwine is doing a great job this year and that's his spot right now," he said. "If they need me to play that position, they'll tell me, but if not I'll do whatever is best for the team."

He added that playing running back is less stressful and not as taxing as playing quarterback.

"Being a quarterback, you have to know the plays, you have to know routes, you have to know everybody's position," Dickie said. "Being a running back is a little different because you only have to know your assignment, but I have been taking on the challenge and enjoying it so far. I've done really good. I'm confident with the way I've played and I'm hoping to get better as the weeks go by."

Ironically, Dickie was playing quarterback in place of Redwine in a loss at San Angelo Lake View when he broke his nose and had to sit out the win over Snyder two weeks ago. Dickie said he was tackled from behind, his chin strap came loose and he fell "like a tree" hitting his nose on the turf.

But even after going through that, Dickie didn't seem fazed by it. He remains as upbeat as ever.

He also remains upbeat and positive about his team's chances to do well in district play. He said that the win over Snyder to snap a three-game losing streak sure helped his team's overall confidence.

"You're always going to need confidence playing a football game," he said. "If you come into a football game not confident, not knowing what you're doing, chances are you're going to get beat. You have to have that confidence knowing that you're going to do the best you can and hopefully come out with a win. If not, you're going to work hard the next week and do your best the next Friday."

Dickie added, "I strongly believe that we have a chance to do something great, and ultimately our goal here is to win district. Through hard work I think we can achieve that."

GREENWOOD VS. LAMESA

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Tornado Stadium, Lamesa

On the web: www.audio-sportsonline.net/2014fall/greenwood

Records: Greenwood 2-3, 0-0 in District 2-4A Division II; Lamesa 1-4, 0-0

Last game: Greenwood 26, Snyder 20 (Sept. 26); Lamesa 40, Dimmitt 12 (Sept. 26)

Last meeting/series: Greenwood defeated Lamesa 48-27 last year and leads the all-time series 11-3

Weather forecast: Partly cloudy with temperatures in the mid 70s and a 10 percent chance of rain at kickoff, getting down to the lower 60s at the end of the game.

Five things you need to know

■ This is the first meeting between Greenwood and Lamesa as district opponents since 2009. Greenwood was in District 4-3A the previous two years, while Lamesa was in 2-2A Division I.

■ Greenwood coach Shad Hanna said the Rangers should have WR/DB Austin Ulcak and WR/DB J.P. Contreras at full speed this week, but C Jesus Rodriguez (knee) is out for an indefinite period of time.

■ Greenwood snapped a three-game losing streak with its win over Snyder. The Rangers used a 17-point second quarter, a good performance from QB Zach Redwine, who passed for 108 yards, rushed for 83 and scored three rushing touchdowns, and two field goals from Stace Bell.

■ Lamesa is led by junior QB Heath Derington, who has passed for 872 yards, seven touchdowns and nine interceptions, while four other players have rushed for more than 100 yards this season.

■ Hanna said the Golden Tornadoes are sound defensively and have some good athletes that his team needs to be aware of.

"They're going to force us to play assignment football," Hanna said. "We didn't do it very well against Lake View but we did a much better job of playing assignment football against Snyder, and it paid off for us. We've got to continue that part of it and trust each other to do their job. Offensively we've got to do a good job with our run game and also do a good job of protecting the quarterback to give Zach plenty of time to go through his progressions and reads."

■ Hanna added that it's going to be important for his team to keep its momentum, considering some of the tough games ahead.

"This game is a huge confidence builder for the program," he said. "We've got to execute well and not make mistakes. We can't turn the ball over, not fumble, we can't allow many yards, not many points and we need to create turnovers."

SANFORD

From 1C

It's that kind of play that Sanford has put together over three years, and also will be expected when the Mustangs (4-1, 2-0 in TAPPS Division I, District 1) take on Argyle Liberty Christian (4-1, 2-0) at 7:30 p.m. today at Mustang Field.

Three years ago, Sanford was adjusting to not only playing for a new team and a new school, but learning a new defensive system. Now, all the learning is behind him and he can concentrate on a game plan each week.

"When I first got here I was learning and going through a bunch of instructions," Sanford said. "Now I've got it all down, and each week I just listen to the different scouting reports and it's a whole lot easier. I kind of know what the coaches expect."

Sanford is part of an experienced linebacker corps. He is one of two three-year starters along with Justin Fender, along with two-year starter at middle linebacker in Kaleb Warren.

Warren has been out with an injury the last few weeks, but other linebackers such as Sanford and Fender have been near-dominant against the run. The Mustangs have allowed just under 100 yards a game in five games this season.

Midland Christian will face a Warrior team that relies on the pass to gain yards, but Sanford said being able to stop the run has been big to force teams into becoming one dimensional.

"We've got a heck of a defensive end up there, and there are quick guys playing tackle that get the linemen off the linebackers," Sanford said. "You get them to only pass the ball and they can't run, they can't really manage the clock."

McClendon said Sanford is not vocal leader, but his work ethic and play on the field is constant.

"He gets his job done," McClendon said. "He's not a big take-the-lead guy, he leads by example in playing hard."

ARGYLE LIBERTY AT MIDLAND CHRISTIAN

When/where: 7:30 p.m. today, Mustang Field

On the web: bit.ly/watchmcs

Records: Midland Christian 4-1, 2-0 in TAPPS Division I, District 1; Argyle Liberty Christian 4-1, 2-0

Last game: Midland Christian 38, Addison Trinity Christian 20; Argyle Liberty Christian 37, Dallas Bishop Lynch 24

Last meeting/series: Argyle Christian beat Midland Christian 62-42 in 2009

Weather forecast: Sunny with a temperature of 80 degrees expected at kickoff with no chance of precipitation

Five things you need to know

■ Today's game marks the first meeting between these two teams since 2009 when both schools were in the same district. Argyle Liberty Christian has been in TAPPS Division I, District 1 since 2010.

■ The Warriors are coached by Barton Hundley, who is in his first year as head coach at the school. He was an assistant at the school for three years previous to him being hired as head coach in the summer. Also on Hundley's staff is former Odessa Permian head coach Randy Mayes, who is coaching the offensive line.

"He's really excited, most of all, and he's really excited about coaching again," Hundley said. "He was the (athletic director) at Lewisville ISD for seven or eight years and he was dealing with budgets sitting behind a desk and he still had a lot of coaching left in him."

Mayes was the head coach at Permian from 1994-1999, compiling a 45-25-1 record.

■ Midland Christian coach Greg McClendon said that Argyle Liberty Christian is a team that throws the ball well, and the team's secondary will have its work cut out for them. Quarterback Nick Starkel has thrown for 1,274 yards in five games this season with 17 touchdowns to two interceptions. His top target is Justus Lee, who has 17 catches for 446 yards and five touchdowns.

"They do a good job of throwing the football, and they are still trying to find their way in the run game still," McClendon said.

■ Hundley said facing a tough Midland Christian team is the biggest obstacle his team faces in its first extended road trip of the season. "There are so many distractions with the long trip there and making all the arrangements and everything," Hundley said. "The biggest challenge is we face a really good football team. They are one of the best, if not these best I've seen on tape this year."

■ Friday's game is part of a four-game football festival between the two schools. The two program's junior varsity teams played Thursday night, and beginning at 3 p.m. today, the two junior high teams will face off against each other.

Royals, Orioles: A study in contrasting offenses

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Speed versus Power.

The surprising Kansas City Royals and unflappable Baltimore Orioles are extremely similar with one significant exception: the fashion in which they score runs. The team that best uses its standard method of offense will likely win the best-of-seven AL Championship Series, which begins tonight.

Get ready for small ball versus long ball.

Back in April, few could have predicted these two teams would be the last standing in the American League. But the fashion in which they got here — with stunningly easy sweeps in the Division Series — makes this matchup intriguing.

Even more interesting is their contrasting styles.

The Royals love to take an extra base, whether it's turning a single into a double or stealing their way into scoring position. Kansas City led the majors with 153 stolen bases during the regular season then, with blazing-fast rookie Terrance Gore, added seven in a wild-card win over Oakland and five more in a three-game wipeout of the top-seeded Los Angeles Angels.

"Speed. That's what we do," designated hitter Billy Butler said. "Obviously you have to be smart about it, but we're a very aggressive team. When our speed guys get on they like to go. That's what got us to this point — that, and pitching and defense."

The Orioles, like the Royals, feature a solid starting rotation, an effective bullpen and strong defense. But Baltimore prefers to take a more leisurely trip around the bases.

Although Baltimore finished dead last in the majors with 44 stolen bases, it led the majors with 211 home runs. Nelson Cruz had 40 of them, only 55 fewer than the Royals hit while finishing last in the big leagues as the only team that didn't hit 100.

And so, the lines are drawn. Whichever pitching staff can stifle the opposition's preferred method of offense will likely be working in the World Series.

"Obviously, we'll be asked to keep the Orioles in check in terms of their power and the big inning," said Royals right-hander Jeremy Guthrie, who pitched for Baltimore from 2007-11. "On the flip side, the Orioles pitchers will be asked to try and keep our guys off base and not allow us to string together a couple of hits to get us runs."

It's really that simple.

"The best way to keep them from stealing is to keep them off the bases. That's our first goal," Baltimore reliever Tommy Hunter said. "I'm not too worried about it. You know they're fast, you know they run. Hopefully they run into outs."

That doesn't mean Kansas City can't go deep, or the Orioles are unable to run. It's just that each team has adopted the style best suited for its own stadium.

"The Royals can hit home runs. They just play in a big ballpark," Baltimore center fielder Adam Jones said. "They've got guys who can drive the ball, and we've also got guys who can run. In our ballpark it brings a different dynamic because it's smaller, in their ballpark, it brings a different dynamic because it's bigger. But we've got some hairy guys on our team. If we're hitting in the Grand Canyon, we can still put 'em out."

Cruz homered in the Orioles' clinching win over Detroit on Sunday, and just a few hours later Eric Hosmer and Mike Moustakas each contributed a two-run shot in the Royals' 8-3 win over L.A.

"Home runs are definitely a difference-maker in the game," Butler said. "That's what we've done in the playoffs. We've had home runs win games, but that hasn't been the way we won games throughout the season. Still, they're good to have when you get them."

Expect a 20 percent chance of precipitation today and 40 percent chance tonight. Cooler temperatures are expected on Saturday, but expect a high of 90 on Sunday.

The record high for Oct. 9 is 92 set in 1972, 1965 and 1947. The record low is 36 set in 1970.

Weather Why

Q: What specific areas of water are warmer?

A: The Atlantic Ocean, is scientifically proven to be warmer than normal, said John Nielsen-Gammon, professor of atmospheric sciences at Texas A&M University who also serves as State Climatologist. "Large areas of the Atlantic are at least 1 degree warmer than in years past, and this goes back to 1995," he said. "So we have had a decade of warmer water there, and that's where hurricanes form. The long-range outlook tells us that this warming trend could continue another 5 to 20 years. Since warmer water means stronger storms, it could mean stronger storms in the future."

Weather Whys is a service of the Department of Atmospheric Sciences at Texas A&M University.

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am an adult heterosexual male who has discovered that I like wearing nail polish. I feel it should not be a matter of gender, but of taste and fashion.

I wore a reasonably bold color in public for the first time a week before last. It was a light, metallic blue that changes to green in the sunlight. I got a few raised eyebrows and a few compliments in my conservative, small town. I was told, however, to leave the color red to the ladies.

I know some companies are already marketing nail color for men, and I hope nail decor for both genders will one day become mainstream. I want to help that process along. What do you think, Abby? — SHOWIN' MY TRUE COLORS IN TEXAS

DEAR SHOWIN': Although over the last few years I have seen males wear nail polish, it was usually a very dark color, and the wearer was a rock star or a Goth. Frankly, I think that for an adult heterosexual male to wear light blue nail polish in public in the great state of Texas shows he is not only a trendsetter, but also has a lot of guts.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 48-year-old woman who divorced four years ago. I'm educated, attractive and have a successful career. My 18-year-old son lives with me and attends a junior college.

I am having a hard time finding romance because most of the men want to survive on my income or are put off that I have a son at home.

I recently met a guy who seems to be head over heels in love with me. He has had little education and abused drugs and alcohol for a long time, but he has changed now. He has three children, but because he is unemployed, he's exempt from paying alimony, and he is fine with the idea. He'd like to have them on weekends, but the mother won't allow it.

Should I go ahead and date him? He doesn't seem to mind that I have a child, but my intuition tells me he may be another fortune hunter. How can I find a suitable partner without appearing desperate? — LONELY LADY IN AMSTERDAM, NETHERLANDS

DEAR LONELY LADY: Listen to your intuition and end this relationship now unless you want to support this man in perpetuity. The longer you're involved, the harder it will be to end it, so don't procrastinate.

It's time to widen your circle of acquaintances. Meet colleagues in your field through conferences and seminars. Develop new interests and you will meet more people. Volunteer with charities that interest you and you will meet worthwhile members of both sexes who may introduce you to an unattached friend or relative.

Above all, don't succumb to desperation. You have much to offer and a lot of life ahead of you. Follow my suggestions and your chances of finding what you're looking for will improve.

The bidding:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
Pass	Pass	4♠	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♦

Today's deal is from a duplicate game, where every trick is precious. South took a risk when he opened four spades — he might have missed an easy slam. Partner was a passed hand and he wanted to ward off potential competition, so he took the chance. Just as well — partner was broke! Could he even make four?

West started with three rounds of hearts, South ruffing the third. Declarer continued with the ace of diamonds followed by the queen of diamonds. This was not the best play, but it presented East with a fascinating bridge problem. East suspected this layout of the cards and could have given partner a diamond ruff to defeat the contract. But what if partner started with queen third of spades? West would be ruffing with a natural trump trick. East decided that they might defeat the contract two tricks if he played a trump instead.

West didn't quite have the trump holding that East was hoping for, and East had to endure a barrage of spades from declarer. The defender had to find four discards, and he backed his card-reading with his courage and discarded the 10, jack, king and ace of clubs to keep his precious 10 of diamonds guarded. He was rewarded when he scored that 10 at the last trick. Whew!

South should have run all but one trump right away, without touching diamonds. Only a clairvoyant East would have shed three clubs and kept all his diamonds.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Oct. 10, 2014:

This year you open doors because of your willingness to socialize and understand different mindsets. Your friendships pave your way to success in many ways, some of them being less obvious. Zero in on what you want. If you are single, you might want to remain uncommitted, even though you will have many potential suitors. If you are attached, the two of you naturally interact well this year. Remember that your relationship is your first priority. TAURUS is quite caring.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Someone might be quite gabby, but still won't spill the beans, at least not about what you wanted to hear. Your ingenuity will allow many possibilities to come forward. How will you decide which way to go? Feedback could be important. Tonight: Go with others' suggestions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You might want to hear more about what is going on. A friend who disrupts your daily life could share an earful. It is with amusement that you listen to this person. A matter involving real estate or your home life will grab your attention. Tonight: Kick back, then decide.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You are full of ideas, and you want to share them. Others could be overly optimistic, which might make you doubt their veracity. Work with someone directly in order to get a better grasp of what is going on. There are some topics you won't want to touch! Tonight: Hang out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Emphasize what you want to happen. Be careful with your spending, and maintain some discipline; you will be happier with the results. A discussion regarding your family life could spark some innovative ideas. Tonight: Find your friends for a fun happening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ A situation in your daily life appears to be transforming right in front of you. You cannot avoid a discussion under any circumstances. The words you choose could define the outcome. You will get better results if you rely on diplomacy. Tonight: Out till the wee hours.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ You like your routine, and you dislike being thrown into new experiences. However, you might opt to do something very different right now. Realize that this is your choice — it isn't being forced upon you. You might enjoy the change of pace. Tonight: Share a secret.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Reach out to someone you really care about. You could discover that you still can relate on an individual level with this person. Do not treat this bond lightly, as it has meaning to both of you. This friendship can make all the difference in your life. Tonight: Be a duo.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Join a friend in making the most of the moment. You might be worried about a situation that you're not sure how to read. Express your thoughts, and you will get strong feedback. You could be amazed by how differently people view this situation. Tonight: Out and about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Your organization and ability to prioritize will be reflected in how your day flows. An unexpected conversation will help illuminate an issue. Understand the power in numbers. A meeting is likely to open up many options. Tonight: Read between the lines.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Understand your limits with a child or loved one. You could be overwhelmed by all the attention someone demands. Relate to this person directly in order to gain a better sense of what is motivating him or her. Don't make assumptions. Tonight: Now for some good times.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ Resist getting too stuck or rigid. You might be surprised by how easily you could fall into a stubborn stance. Others seem upbeat, so why not join them rather than insisting on having your own way? Deal with a domestic matter at a later point. Tonight: At home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ A meeting or get-together might need to be rescheduled. Do yourself a favor, and reach out to someone whom you seem to be avoiding. Make the most of each conversation that you have today, and make it a point to say more than just "hello" to a neighbor. Tonight: Hang out.

As market sinks, investors brace for turbulence

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market had its worst day of the year Thursday, just 24 hours after recording its best.

The Dow Jones industrial average plunged 334 points as falling energy stocks and worries about the global economy sent investors fleeing out of the market. The blue-chip index rose 275 points the day before.

For three years, U.S. investors have enjoyed a stock market that has, for the most part, quietly and steadily moved higher. The pleasure cruise appears to be over.

Market volatility is back and in a big way, market observers say. The stock market hasn't seen day-to-day movements like this since August 2011, when Standard & Poor's downgraded the United States' credit rating. The S&P downgrade subsequently pushed the U.S. stock market into its last "correction," a technical term for when stocks fall 10 percent or more from a recent peak.

"Investors are not conditioned for this type of market after three good years," said Dean Junkans, chief investment officer for Wells Fargo Private Bank. "We've been long overdue for a correction."

Words like "correction," "fear" and "volatility" might scare the average investor just trying to save for retirement. But investors who might be worried should remain calm, said Jurrien Timmer, director of global macro at Fidelity Investments. The S&P 500 index is still up 4.3 percent this year. And that follows the market's 30 percent surge last year.

"Just stick to your long-term (retirement) plan," Timmer said.

Thursday's drop was the third straight day investors have been taken on a wild roller coaster ride. On Tuesday the Dow fell 272 points, only to jump by nearly the same amount Wednesday. While 100-plus moves in the Dow have become more common as stocks have risen to record highs, 200-plus point moves had been rare until this week. More than half of this year's 200-point moves have happened in the last two weeks.

The VIX, a measure of volatility that is sometimes called Wall Street's "fear index," jumped 26 percent to its highest level since February. Investors moved into gold, a refuge in times of uncertainty.

"The violent gyrations are causing havoc for fund managers and active investors (who were) hoping for a smooth fourth quarter," said Todd Schoenberger of J. Streicher Asset Management.

Stocks fell at the opening of trading Thursday, and the selling accelerated once European markets closed at midday Eastern time.

By the end of the day, the Dow had lost 334.97 points, or 2 percent, to 16,659.25. The Standard & Poor's 500 index lost 40.68 points, or 2.1 percent, to 1,928.21 and the Nasdaq composite fell 90.26 points, or 2 percent, to 4,378.34.

Few companies were spared from the selling Thursday. All 30 members of the blue chip Dow index fell and 482 of the 500 companies in the S&P 500 index ended the day lower.

A large part of Thursday's selling happened in energy stocks, particularly oil and coal companies. The price of oil fell sharply again Thursday, continuing its multi-week decline. Investors are concerned that global oil production remains high despite signs that global demand is slowing.

Worries about the global economy, particularly in Europe and Asia, fueled the fears of a slowdown were once again center stage.

A report showed Germany exports sank 5.8 percent in August; the biggest monthly drop in five years. The figure raises concerns that Europe's largest economy may fall into recession. Earlier in the week, the IMF cut its outlook for this year and next for the global economy, citing weakness in Japan, Latin America and particularly Europe.

"Europe is struggling. Asia is struggling. Japan is struggling. The United States is the best house on the block at the moment," Fidelity's Timmer said.

Traders say the market's volatility may ease once corporate earnings season gets fully underway. Aluminum company Alcoa reported its results Wednesday, which beat analysts' expectations, but the bulk of S&P 500 companies will not report for another week or so.

"Everyone seems to be waiting for earnings season at this point," said Neil Massa, senior equity trader at John Hancock Asset Management.

In company news, Gap dropped $5.23, or 13 percent, to $36.67. The clothing chain's CEO Glenn Murphy announced he would step down in February. The news came as a surprise to investors, since Murphy is only 52 and was expected to continue in his role for several more years. Murphy was credited for helping Gap navigate through the Great Recession and restoring the company's appeal to younger customers.

Advanced Micro Devices, better known as AMD, fell 33 cents, or 10 percent, to $2.95. The chipmaker also announced a change in leadership, saying CEO and president Rory Read was stepping down. AMD has long struggled to keep its market share of the PC chip market against its main competitor Intel.

Coal stocks also took a beating after Morgan Stanley analysts downgraded the entire industry. Walter Energy slumped 11 percent and Peabody Energy fell 9 percent.

Benchmark U.S. crude fell $1.54 to $85.77 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, a third straight decline of more than 1.5 percent. Oil is now 20 percent below its 2014 peak of $107.26 a barrel, reached in late June, technically pushing oil into a bear market.

Dairy Queen data breach

Ice cream and fast food chain Dairy Queen is the latest retailer to reveal a hack of its customer data.

The company said Thursday that hackers may have gained access to customer names, credit and debit card numbers and expiration dates at 395 stores between August and October. The company said it has fixed the malware problem.

International Dairy Queen Inc. has about 4,500 franchised stores in the U.S. It's also the parent of the Orange Julius chain, and one stand-alone Orange Julius store was breached.

Dairy Queen said there's no evidence Social Security numbers, card PIN numbers or email addresses were stolen.

Symantec to split

Security software maker Symantec is the latest company to announce plans to split itself into two.

The maker of Norton antivirus software said Thursday that it will separate into one business focused on security and the other on information management.

Symantec said that separating its businesses will create greater growth opportunities and more value for its shareholders. The announcement comes about six months after Symantec fired its chief executive Steve Bennett and named Michael Brown as his replacement. Brown is the current CEO.

GENERAL INFO

To ensure the integrity of our newspaper, for the benefit of our readers and advertisers, the Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to revise, reclassify, edit or refuse any advertising. We also reserve the right to convert all advertising into digital and/or print formats within our other products and services.

Please check your ad the first day it appears, and, if you find a mistake, please call our office at 682-6222 so we can correct the error immediately. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. If an error does occur, you can choose to rerun your ad once for free, or we'll gladly refund the cost of the portion of the ad affected by the error. If an ad is inadvertently omitted, we will assume liability up to the cost of the ad itself – consequently, we will publish your ad in our next available edition or refund the price you have paid.

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classifications require payment in advance. Credit applications are required for business accounts.

We welcome suggestions or comments. Please call: Jeri Houston, Advertising Sales Manager, 687-8894.

HAPPY ADS

Surprise your child, parent, or special friend with a Happy Ad!

We'll help you design something unique and publish it in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classifieds...whatever the occasion!

Publish a special memorial to mark the passing of a loved one with an "In Memory Of" ad. Include a poem, prayer, and/or the names of all who care. Also, express your appreciation to everyone who brought food, sent flowers, or was there for you when you needed them most with a "Card of Thanks." We'll help you design a respectful, thoughtful ad.

Ads containing art or photos need to be in our office 2 working days before the ad is to be published and we ask that you pay in advance.
