Denton Officer Killed By Former Foe

MACHINE GUNS BRING DEFIANT MAN TO TERMS

Dallas Officers Called To Aid Officials at Slayer's Home

SHOT 11 TIMES

Meeting on Street Proves Fatal For Veteran Peace Officer

DENTON, Aug. 6.—After machine gun fire from three Browning automatic guns under command of Sheriff Schuyler Marshall of Dallas county had raked the house in which he and six companions, one a woman, were barricaded, W. A. Martin, for whose arrest on a charge of murder the officers held a warrant, surrendered to Sheriff W. S. Fry of Denton county at 10:45 o'clock tonight.

Martin, who was slightly wounded in the side by the machine gun fire, earlier in the night he refused to surrender except on his own terms.

DENTON, Texas, Aug. 6.—Deputy Sheriff R. B. Parsons, between 55 and 60 years of age and a veteran peace officer of Texas, was shot and instantly killed today on a street here. A charge of murder was filed two hours later against W. A. Martin of Denton. Martin had not been arrested late today but was known to be at his home and communicated with Sheriff W. S. Fry by telephone.

Martin told Sheriff Fry, it was understood, that he would surrender if the amount of his bond was set and he was permitted to make bond at once. Sheriff Fry replied that it was not in his jurisdiction to make bond.

Under Indictment.

Martin is under indictment charged in four cases with assault with intent to murder in connection with a gun duel he engaged in with Fort Worth police and Tarrant county officers and Sheriff Fry on the public square here early this year. Martin and a companion in that shooting barricaded themselves in the Martin home and did not surrender until the following afternoon and then on agreement that bond would be allowed at once. These cases were transferred to Wise county and have not come to trial.

Shot Eleven Times.

Witnesses in the shooting today said Parsons fell dead when the first two or three shots were fired. They said Martin stood over the body and emptied two pistols into it. Eleven shots took effect, officers said.

Witnesses said the two men met in the street, and the shooting followed immediately.

Martin was communicated with by newspaper men after the shooting but said he had no statement to make.

Parsons is survived by his widow.

Mother Admits Leading Attack On La. Woman

EROS, La., Aug. 6.—(AP)—Declaring that Mrs. May Nave, formerly Miss May Simms was responsible for the "breaking up" of her home, Mrs. Ada Ward, 37 years old, one of the nine defendants mentioned in affidavits recently filed at Jonesboro in a statement today to a representative of the Shreveport Journal expressed her intention of assuming full responsibility for the attack near here when paint and feathers were applied to Mrs. Nave.

Mrs. Ward denied that any of the men mentioned in the affidavits charging assault and battery, had anything to do with the attack. Other women, she said, held Mrs. Nave while she applied stove pipe paint and feathers to her.

Her Husband, Mrs. Ward declared, has deserted her and her three children on account of alleged attentions to the other woman. This woman, Mrs. Ward stated, went to Eldorado, Ark., about the time Ward went there from Eros. Mrs. Ward followed them, she said.

Later Mrs. Nave returned to Eros with Ward's automobile, she charged.

"Then women of my community, who had supported me and my children in the crisis after consulting me on the return of May Sims (Mrs. Nave) hatched up the scheme to rid the community of her," Mrs. Ward declared.

HOLLIDAY WINS IN FIGHT FOR INCORPORATION

Bitter Contest Ends In Light Vote Thursday, 50 to 32

HOLLIDAY, Aug. 6.—Holliday voted today by a 50 to 32 count to incorporate. In view of the bitterly fought contest the light vote was unusually surprising, according to officials.

The election today was the result of a long drawn out campaign in which one faction carried the issue through in spite of general belief that the move would fail.

The next move will be the drawing up of a city charter to be voted on at a later day. This will be started at once and presented to the voters in a short time. It is thought that as a corporation Holliday will be able to offer better aid to citizens in emergencies and better schools.

STILL PLENTY OF PETROLEUM REPORT SHOWS

Improved Methods of Oil Production Given As One Reason

EXPECT A SUBSTITUTE

Report Indicates That Science Should Take Up Matter

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Improved methods of production and a country-wide survey of natural resources indicate that there is no imminent danger of the exhaustion of the petroleum reserves of the United States, according to a report prepared by a committee of 11 directors of the American Petroleum institute after a prolonged study of their industry. The findings have been transmitted to the federal oil conservation board at Washington, by J. Edgar Pew, president of the institute.

The 300-page report declared it is reasonable to assume that the oil resources of the United States assure the country of a sufficient supply of motor fuel and lubricants for the national defense and for commercial use beyond the time when science will have found some natural substitute.

Open Revolt Comes In Fight For N. Y. Mayor

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Democratic opposition to Mayor Hylan as candidate for re-election became an open revolt today when the executive committee of Tammany hall and democratic county committee of the Bronx chose State Senator James J. Walker to fight the mayor in the primaries.

At the same time John H. McCooey, Brooklyn leader, said that it was "reasonably certain" that he, Maurice E. Connolly, of Queens, and David S. Rent of Richmond, will name Mr. Hylan for mayor on Monday. He would not announce the complete slate, explaining that the three leaders want to "spring some surprises."

In a statement the Tammany and Bronx leaders emphasized Senator Walker's advocacy of the state transportation act, "preserving the city a five-cent fare and giving the people of the city the right to construct and operate its rapid transit lines without interferences from state officials."

It was reported that Governor Smith, long a political foe of William Randolph Hearst, who is Mayor Hylan's backer, will "take off his coat and vest" and fight for Senator Walker.

LYRICS OF LIFE
By Douglas Malloch.

Sonny, Hang the Old Flag Out.

Sonny, hang the old flag out
Each day above the door,
For there are enemies about
In other times than war.
And there are some around today
Who scoff at law, and some who say
The God who brought your fathers through
The years is not the God for you.

Sonny, hang the old flag out
Each day above the street,
For there are sallow fools who doubt
If liberty is sweet.
Who think that we who fought a king
Should bow to some new foreign thing,
And give some Red, some crazy Russ,
Some dark dominion over us.

Sonny, hang the old flag out
Where all who pass can see,
A lawful land, a land devout,
Is good enough for me.
And they who see that red and white
And blue may recollect tonight
That they who fight, and freedom reap,
Will fight that liberty to keep!

JURY RETURNS VERDICT THAT CHEATS NOOSE

Three Hours And Forty Minutes Required To Reach Its Agreement

GOES TO ASYLUM

Sanity Result Would Have Meant Quick Death On Gallows

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Russell Scott today won his last fight to escape the gallows.

A jury in the court of Superior Judge Joseph B. Davai found him insane. He will be committed at once to a state hospital.

The jury reached its verdict afderliberating three hours and forty minutes. Its first ballot was reported to have been 7 to 5 for insanity and thereafter the vote gradually swung to the insanity verdict. Seven ballots were taken.

Sent to Asylum.

Scott immediately was committed to the Chester asylum for the insane.

The former Canadian financier has five times been within the gallows' shadow and twice within the last three weeks has been snatched from the noose almost at the hour of his death march.

Scott three weeks ago tonight was saved from death six hours before his execution by a week's reprieve from the governor.

Two weeks ago tonight, less than four hours before he was to walk on the death trap, he was again saved from the noose by a petition filed before Judge Joseph B. David at 2 o'clock in the morning declaring him to be insane.

The hearing which saved his life was the sanity trial concluded late today and which started Monday. The jury which decided that the slayer of a Chicago drug clerk has become insane since being incarcerated in the Cook county jail fifteen months ago took seven ballots to reach its verdict and deliberated for three hours and forty minutes.

7 to 5 at First.

The first ballot was 7 to 5 for insanity and from then on the trend gradually was for the insanity verdict. Had Scott been found sane, he would have been sentenced to death once more this time by the judge who presided at the sanity hearing.

Scott sat tensely in his chair while the jury filed into the box.

When the verdict was read his mouth twitched nervously and he shifted his position in the chair. He sat motionless at the side of his attorneys while the court entered the judgment on the verdict, and then was hurried out of the room as the bailiff adjourned the session.

Mrs. Catherine Scott the young wife of the prisoner whose dauntless fight saved Scott from the gallows, leaned forward in an attitude of prayer after the verdict was read. Scott's mother who was at his side wept and embraced Scott's wife while Thomas Scott, his aged and crippled father who observed his sixty-third birthday the day Scott was sentenced to hang received the verdict without show of emotion.

Scott while going to the asylum as insane still faces death on the gallows should he ever be found to have regained his sanity.

"We Have Stayed To Last Without Avail"—Mrs. Gray

AUSTIN, Aug. 6.—(AP).—In a pathetic message, Mrs. Clem Gray bade her husband, Clem Gray, sentenced to be electrocuted early Friday, goodbye late today when she was notified from the governor's office that no action to commute the sentence had been taken.

"My precious darling, we have stayed to the last to no avail," Mrs. Gray's message to her husband read. "The governor has not yet commuted the sentence. We will leave for Dallas at 3:45 p. m. This will probably be the last goodbye. May your spirit be commended to the bosom of Jesus Christ and when I see you again, it will be in that world where trouble never comes for earth has no wounds that heaven cannot heal. Goodby, my darling. Good bless you. Mother and boys."

With the last hope for saving her husband's life gone, Mrs. Minnie Gray and her two sons, George Clem and Henry, boarded a train for their home in Dallas.

Gray was convicted in Mount Pleasant, Texas, for the killing of Otis Ballard, September 24, 1923.

GRAY SMILES AS EX-MATES OFFER CHEER

But Paces Floor When No Word Comes to Give Him Life

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Visits of two comrades who had occupied the death cell with him until a few days ago, late today brought the first smile of days to the face of Clem Gray, who awaited electrocution tonight for the murder of Otis Ballard. Arnulfo Vallas, who was pardoned last Thursday night after his head had been shaven four hours before he was to go to the electric chair; and Salvador Jacques who was pardoned July 22, about 24 hours before he was to die, were the two men.

With tears in their eyes they told Gray they hoped his commutation would come.

After the five o'clock whistle blew ending work for the day, the two Mexicans, both from El Paso, rushed to the outer iron bars of Gray's cell.

"Mr. Gray, you not go much more time," said Vallas in his broken English.

"No, my boy, the hours are slipping by," replied Gray.

"Mr. Gray, you think you are going out?" asked Jacques.

"In a few hours I'll go out one way or the other," the prisoner said with a plaintive smile.

"If you get out, ask them to bring you around to the foundry where we are working," said Jacques.

"I'll be willing to work any place, if they let me out of here," Gray answered.

The men backed away crying, holding their hats over their hearts.

Hoping for News.

No word having come from Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson, at 6:30 today, Gray was pacing his cell. He stopped at the sound of every foot step and peered through the bars, frantically hoping some messenger come his way bearing the news of commution.

"I'll go to my death tonight, if I must die, for the crime a negro committed," Gray told the Associated Press representative, after he had reviewed his version of the crime. He said that Burl Kemp, his negro employe, on his own initiative and without knowledge of Gray, had killed Otis Ballard.

"I know I did wrong in helping Kemp conceal the body of Ballard; but I was not myself. I had just risen from a two weeks' illness, and when the negro told me he had killed Ballard out of loyalty to me, I lost my head and helped him conceal the body," Gray said.

A few bites of a cantaloupe and a few swallows of soda water made up the last meal Gray will eat before the execution hour. Sympathetic trusties offered him dainties but he graciously refused all. A huge boquet of sweet peas, the gift of his fellow prisoners was one of Gray's most cherished possessions.

CUTS THROAT, GOES TO CHAIR RED WITH GORE

Desperate Attempt To Cheat Execution Frustrated With a Club

DEAD IN 4 MINUTES

Relatives Lose Long And Hard Fight to Save Him From Death

HUNTSVILLE, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Clem Gray, 40, former prohibition agent and deputy sheriff of Titus county, was electrocuted at the state penitentiary here at 12:05 this morning for the alleged murder of Otis Ballard, Mount Pleasant youth, in September, 1923.

Prison physicians declared Gray dead four minutes after the current was applied.

Gray made a desperate effort to cheat the chair shortly before the time of his execution by slashing his throat with one of two razor blades which he mysteriously possessed. Night Warden C. J. Howard fustrated the attempt, entering the cell and striking Gray with a club.

Throat Bleeding.

Gray was taken to the chair with blood streaming down from the wound in his neck. Prison officials are at a loss to account for the manner of his possession of the razor blades.

Gray's last avenue of hope was closed last night when intercessions of his wife, father and attorney with Governor Ferguson for several days had brought no action from the executive. Hundreds of telegrams for and against Gray poured into the woman governor's office.

The end of efforts for commutation was indicated late yesterday afternoon when former Governor James E. Ferguson, declared that his wife would make no further statement. Despairing of clemency, Gray's wife and two sons left Austin soon after for their home in Dallas.

At 11:55 p. m., the prison death watch saw Gray cutting at his throat. He rushed into the cell and took a razor blade from him. While he was away, summoning the prison physician Gray produced another blade and repeated the suicide attempt. T. J. Howard, night warden, then went into the death cell with a club and subdued Gray.

Protesting his innocence and bleeding profusely, the condemned man was dragged to the death chair. Warden Speer turned on the current at 12:05, and four minutes later Gray was pronounced dead. "Goodbye boys" was his last message.

HUNTSVILLE, Aug. 6.—(AP).—Welfare of his wife and two sons rather than any concern for himself was expressed today by Clem Gray at the state penitentiary here only a few hours before he was scheduled to be electrocuted for the murder of Otis Ballard, Mount Pleasant youth.

"For myself I do not care so much, but I know that if I di) in the chair my wife and two young boys, who have stood by me so loyally, will never live down the humiliation," Gray told the Associated Press tonight.

Gray sent a last desperate appeal to Governor Miriam A. Ferguson this afternoon.

Gray, once a sturdy man of 200 pounds, now weighs about 160. He appeared gaunt as he leaned against the bars of the death chamber.

As he talked, he chewed almost constantly on the stub of an unlighted cigar.

He has been in the death cell since July 1. He is watched day and night by the death guard. W. L. Gunter and Charles Yates compose the death watch. Gray talked willingly about his case, protesting his innocence and declaring that he was "tried by a mob."

Much interest was shown in Gray throughout the day. The trusties who work around the office of Warden N. L. Speer waited anxiously for a telegram or a telephone call, hoping against hope that the commutation would arrive. Many visitors inquired of Gray.

Barkley-Meadows Pool Shows Seven Wells Making 750 Barrels Now

STALEY-WYNNE LOOK FOR SAND SOUTH OF POOL

Barkley And Meadows Complete Two New Ones For Wells

F-H LOOK FOR SAND

Muse-Robertson Well West Of Field Reported Showing Good

One new well showing for a possible 40-barreler, and bringing the total number of producers in to seven was yesterday's addition to the new Barkley and Meadows area, northwest of Archer City, lying in block 88, ATNCL, and on its outskirts.

Barkley and Meadows No. 10, Wilson, in the southwest corner of the east half of the southwest quarter of the block had sand from 1,521-23 feet, which accounting for surface elevation is somewhat low. The well will be equipped for the pump, with the expectation of getting about forty barrels a day out of it. No. 9, Wilson, one location north, is also an oil well, showing about 135 barrels on the pump from sand with the bottom of the whole at 1,523 feet.

Lomax Lease.

On the Lomax lease, just west the Lomax No. 3, Wilson, offsetting Freeman and Hampton, is a 175-barrel well with sand around 1,512 feet. No. 2, south of the No. 1, is having trouble with a liner but is an oil well of some sort with the sand around 1,519 feet. Casing is set considerably above at about 1,500 feet in the lime. No. 4, south of No. 3, is setting up.

Still further west Freeman and Hampton were getting down yesterday on both their Nos. 2 and 3, Wilson, and expected to look for the sand late today. Offsetting them to the west Muse and Robertson were reported on a sand at 1,513 feet, and after setting casing were reported to have some sort of an oil well.

South of the Barkley and Meadows lease taley and Wynne were looking for the sand in their No. 1, Wilson, Slate yesterday. Kentucky has abandoned its hole further south without getting any sand at all. On the Barkley and Meadows lease, offsetting the No. 9 to the east No. 12 is rigging up rotary and spudding; offsetting the No. 10 to the east No. 11 is a location.

Summary of Pool.

As it now stands the pool shows seven wells with a possible production per day of about 750 barrels.

Barkley and Meadows have four with a potential of about 325 or 350 barrels. There are two drilling wells on their leases.

Lomax has two producers, with a third all but in, the two wells showing about 225 barrels. Freeman and Hampton have one well making about 165 barrels a day.

The wells are without water, and are such as to indicate a real pool in the district, with considerably greater sand body and flush production, without water worry, that is found in other nearby producing districts. The area is not yet two months old.

Oil Gossip

H. P. Rhees, assistant to John H. Wolfe, production superintendent of the Prairie Oil and Gas company, is critically ill at St. Luke's hospital in Denver, Colo. Relatives are at his bedside and the crisis is believed near. Mr. Rhees went to Wyoming early in July for his health and his condition became serious while there.

In July the Prairie Pipe Line company reports shipments of 4,822,608 barrels, or 155,568 barrels a day.

KIOWA, Colo., Aug. 6.—(AP)—Water in Kiowa creek was receding early today after having flooded 60 of the 70 residences and business buildings here last night. The damage is estimated at $10,000.

The flood followed a cloudburst. An hour after the downpour the lower portion of the town was under four feet of water, but the stream soon began to recede as rapidly as it had risen, and early today was again within its banks. Several small buildings were moved by the water and some livestock was lost.

Association Executive Looks For Strong Gas Market During August

Predicts Stabilized Crude Market For Producers Over Mid-Continent

Although August gasoline buying is starting off rather slowly, H. G. James, secretary of the American Oil Men's association, and formerly executive director of the Western Petroleum Refiners' association, is looking for a stronger market.

"Tank car prices on gasoline probably will stiffen this month," so Mr. James writes. "This is the belief of many refiners, based on the records which show gasoline stocks to be declining, with refiners running less crude to stills and with jobbers buying only when compelled to do so. Extensive irregularities are likely to cause tank wagon cuts.

"As to other refined products kerosene probably will remain firm, while furnace oils will continue in heavy demand and possibly a little stronger price is foreseen for fuel oil.

Stable Crude Market.

"A stabilized crude market for consumers is predicted. This is based on the probability of a balanced stock resulting from a continued decline in production for all of the United States with consumption continuing unprecedented and with an increase in prospect. While a general price advance is not indicated, it is held that an increase might eventuate should the crude output slump quickly. Local advances are held quite possible. No oil shortage is really threatened."

August Forecast.

The August forecast for oil follows:

Eastern fields — Slightly declining output over the month.

Mid-Continent — Continued decline in both light and heavy oils.

Gulf Coast—Holding steady, with tendency to decline.

Southwest Texas—Receding output.

Rocky Mountains—Some increases in Colorado and Montana.

California—Slow increase probable in August.

DALLAS YOUTH CAUGHT WITH DOPE IN CAP

Police Believe That a New Rendezvous Has Been Located

DALLAS, Aug. 6.—(AP).—Dallas officers believe they have discovered another rendezvous for narcotic addicts, in the arrest today of a youth as he emerged from a physician's office at Garland, near here, with several grains of narcotics in his cap. A special investigator had been informed that recently numerous strangers had been seen at the doctor's office. The youth was arrested as the investigator lay in wait.

The addict resisted arrest. En route to Dallas in an automobile he snatched the switch keys from the car and attempted to jump out. The officer in holding the youth, let his car crash into a large commercial truck.

Federal agents are investigating the case.

CYPHER CLUB ENTERTAINS WITH DANCE AT LAKE

The Cypher club entertained by what was termed by many attendants as the best dance of the summer at Lake Wichita Wednesday evening. Judging from the taste of the dancers most of them must have been college students because by request of the Original Blue Devils, the orchestra playing, were obliging by playing "Collegiate" one of the latest dance number out, many times. Those attending were Misses Lucille Benson, Elizabeth Woods Abbrie, Helen Bullitt, Elouise Perkins, Neva Black, Fay Sapp, Grace Harrison, Anna France Fain, Margaret Blum, Mary Brown, Faye Cameron, Ina Merle Robinson, Alma Willis, Betty Raye Gildwell, Cloris Cross, Adeline Pinson, Pauline Ulsh, Winnie Zell Sewell, Elizabeth Brown, Mary Allison, and Katherine Alice Pennington, and Messrs. As a grand finale lights were extinguished and the spotlight used. This lent much spice to the incessant tagging that had been going on, and caused much confusion in the stag line-up.

The next dance by the Cypher club will be at the Kemp hotel next Thursday with "The Bell Hops" of Oklahoma playing. Another will be at Lake Wichita the following Wednesday.

Life Path of Girl Who Was Poor, But Now Rich Adopted Daughter, Not So Thorny, Neighbors Claim

Say Her Age Not 16 But About 21, And That Her Parents Have Just Enough Money to Make Them Comfortable Anyway

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—The wonderland into which Mary Louise Spas, daughter of Bohemian immigrants, stepped yesterday when she was adopted by Edward A. Browning, millionaire realtor, today became a dazzling reality with its main highway Fifth avenue and its chief diversion an Arabian knight's shopping tour.

Neighbors of the Spas, in talks with reporters today, insisted that the girl was nearer 21 than 16 as announced by Mr. Browning, had worked in the movies and prior to her adoption was engaged to marry a dentist.

The Spas family, they asserted, far from being in poor circumstances enjoyed the income from a $60,000 apartment house in addition to the father's salary as the superintendent of another house.

Mr. Browning, however, appeared undisturbed by these developments. Originally he had announced that the winner of his cinderella race for a companion for his foster child, nine-year-old Dorothy Sunshine, would have to be an orphan who had never known anything but poverty and misery. He also specified that she must be about 12 years old. Today Mr. Browning insisted that Mary was just 16 years old while she added that she was "just over 16."

Happy in their new relationship, Mr. Browning and his adopted daughter spent the day touring sumptuous shops. The tour ended after the purchase of 40 dresses, 20 pairs of delicate hosiery, 10 pairs of specially designed shoes and dozens of other bits of feminine apparel.

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 6.—(AP)—Behind the walls of a sick room where she is suffering from tuberculosis Mildred Spas, 23, self styled sister of Mary Spas, who has been adopted by Edward A. Browning, tonight concealed her identity beyond the bare assertion that she is the fortunate girl's sister.

Interns at the sanitarium where she is fighting against the ravages of the "white plague" said the girl was too ill to see visitors. They also declared she called the officers of the institution early today, immediately after reading Associated Press dispatches telling of her sister's formal adoption and issued orders that no information concerning herself be given out.

Missing Aviators Cause of Concern

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—(AP).—The whereabouts of three aviators, World war veterans and instructors in a flying club here, is the object of concern since they vanished ten days ago after leaving on an air trip for Detroit.

The three, Earl P. Baker, formerly stationed at elfridge Field, Mount Clemons, Mich., and Twin Cities, Minn.; Eugene T. Coutellier and Norris M. Gathercoal, formerly of Kelly Field, Texas, and Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill., expected to fly around Lake Michigan.

Relatives have not heard from them. It is thought unlikely that they would have attempted a flight over the lake and may have instead stopped at some count fair en route.

THE PROBLEM OF TAXATION.

For several years many states and many cities have been faced with the problem of being unable adequately to support their institutions and activities through the customary methods of taxation. Cities, who have faced this problem ever since the passage of the prohibition amendment and the consequent elimination of the enormous revenue from the saloon, have in some cases floated large bond issues, and future generations will have to pay for the improvements and debts of today. The states have been forced to curtail the appropriations made to their universities, schools, hospitals, and other institutions within the last few years.

President Calvin Coolidge, in his address at Arlington cemetery on Memorial day, said: "Despite the enormous increase of federal taxes from prewar years, state and local taxes far exceed the federal requirements. Moreover, the national burder is being continually reduced, while that of the local units is growing and likely to continue to grow."

One of the great reasons for this is to be found in that fact that taxes did not increase in the states and cities in the same ratio as the buying power of money decreased during the world war. Debts were incurred, and the revenue was not and is not sufficient to cover the expenses of running the government.

Taxes differ from most other payments that are required from individuals and corporations in two respects: First, they are compulsory, and second, they are not payments made to the government for services rendered. The man who rides a thousand miles on the railroad train pays twice as much money as the man who rides five hundred miles, but he also gets twice as much benefit from his money; but the man who pays $1,000 in taxes does not receive twice as much benefit from the money has has paid to the government as the man who has paid $500 in taxes. Taxes, as a result, have come to be considered by some citizens of the country as a polite form of highway robbery.

Because of this popular belief, it has become the custom of the tax assessors to greatly undervalue the tangible property. Also it is considered no crime for one to conceal his intangible property from the tax assessor, because the taxed one believes, and in some respects rightly, that it is unfair as a tax on intangible property at the same rate as on tangible property, means the taking of one-third to one-half of the income which is derived from it. Rather than pay such a tax, he will conceal the stocks and bonds or remove them from the tax jurisdiction of the city in which he does business. Thus, many prominent and wealthy business men in the large cities live in small communities several miles away, and keep their intangible property in the small community, as the tax rate is usually lower.

The expenses of the states and cities are increasing at a faster rate than their available revenue. A raising of the tax rates has been found necessary in many sections, but this has not altogether solved the problem. When the rate has been raised it has been found that the assessors oftentimes undervalued property more, and thus, in practice, the payments were little higher.

Many states have adopted the classified property tax as a solution. The purpose if this form is to enable the levying of a lower rate on intangible property than on other forms. Such a plan has been found to be successful in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Connecticut, and other states. A proposal has been made to carry the classification farther and make a differentiation between lands and buildings, but in some states there is a legal difficulty in that the state constitution requires the levy of all taxes to be at a uniform rate on both real and personal property.

Although it has been found that the lowering of tax rates sometimes increases the proportional yield from taxes, no sane student of finance would recommend a general reduction of taxes as a solution of the problem which the states and cities face at the present time.

VACATION HABITS.

About this time of year the majority of those people who are granted vacations are earnestly discussing where and how to spend it. There are time-honored ideas on the subject, such as the necessity of "going somewhere," of seeing something new, and of having "a change." It is contrary to human nature to stand still on vacation, even allowing for those who by temperament or age demand a "loaf" or a complete rest.

This is a restless age, and it is generally felt that movement is preferable to stagnation, that labor is better than rust. The all but universal devotion to dancing is an illustration of the desire for action. The dramatic forms of recreation at resorts, the dips, the jerks, the "dodge 'ems," all tell the story of the time, and mirror the tastes of the age. Even the golfers of today, mild as is their amusement, would in an earlier day have taken a more leisurely vacation. Fishing has its appeal to the right temperament, but few people are prepared to "sit and fish, and fish and sit," through the long day.

A motoring vacation has captured the imagination of many people. It is not the best of holidays for the driver, who must be ever on the alert for dangers, but the movement, the constant change of scene, the lure of the unexpected, all bring pleasures not quite so accessible by the railways, which so often miss the beauties of the countryside. Motor camping takes the place of living at expensive hotels, or at least brings a new colony of travelers who perhaps could not afford the hotel life.

The hammock used to be the ideal of many people for a holiday. A reclining position under spreading trees, cooled by summer breezes, and the company of a "summer novel"—that was the change and rest of even young people not so long ago. But the age of gasoline, of jazz, of movement in all directions, has come, and the hammock has lost its popularity. The world is remaking its amusements in summer as at other times of the year.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

Idle Thoughts.

We cannot shut off our minds as we can the motor of a gasoline engine.

As long as we are alive and awake they continue to operate—if it is only to note dully their surroundings.

The stupidest dolt in the world will think, stupidly of course, but he will still think.

The mind of a lunatic, which leaps from one thing to another with lightning like rapidity is still thinking.

But thinking, unless it is intelligent and consecutive and laborious thinking, is unprofitable.

It is easy enough to tell people to think.

It is no trouble at all for editorial writers to say "think and you will learn," but the words are as idle as the thoughts they inspire.

For unless one knows how to think, his thinking will be wholly vauleless to him.

As long as his thoughts are mere idle thoughts, as unreasoning as those of a wild animal, they will not advance his happiness, his prosperity, or his education.

One of the chief functions of all education is to teach men how to think, and to think productively.

The education may not be acquired in a school.

It may be picked up by bright boys and girls from intelligent people around them.

It may at first be merely imitative, as is learning to walk or to talk.

But the minute the mind has begun to reason things out, to look at all sides of a problem, and then to make an endeavor to solve it, useful thinking has begun.

Naturally the thinking ability varies with the individual.

The insides of our heads are as different as the outsides, not in appearance perhaps but in actual character.

But given two people of the same average intelligence, teach one of them to think straight and clearly, and leave the other alone to take up idle thoughts that come into his mind, and there will soon be a startling difference.

All great men have learned to think, and it is their ability to think that makes them great.

It may be said that some are greatly gifted like artists and musicians and writers who have certain faculties that are unusually well developed.

But without thinking these faculties could never be well used.

And unless the minds are disciplined they will never be made to amount to anything of real value.

Most of us are prone to fall into idle thought now and then. A little idle thought does no harm, any more than it harms the man who is running a long race to fall into a walk occasionally.

But the idle thoughts will not get us anywhere. We must use our minds systematically and methodically, and laboriously a great deal of the time if we want to get out of them all their possibilities.

And there are more possibilities, even in an average human mind, than most people ever dream.

POLITICS COMING.

The office of state treasurer, to which W. Gregory Hatcher was given the hand-picked nomination by James E. Ferguson last year, is proving most attractive to all in the early scramble for places in the 1926 races. This office bids to have nearly as many aspirants as did the governor's race last year.

Why the office whose holder handles $50,000,000 a year, is bonded for $75,000 and is paid $4,000 a year, should draw so many candidates has not been disclosed, unless it is the belief of tentative aspirants that a reputed break between Hatcher and Private Citizen James E. Ferguson may take it out of the second term administration group.

Hatcher has announced for re-election on the platform of independence from any ties, but declares he is "loyal to the administration." His platform includes continued use of the reserve depository system in large cities of the state and equal distribution of funds on deposit throughout these reserve centers; continued use of the state depository system, and the continued retention of the state guaranty fund cash reserve in the treasury vaults.

W. B. Cross of Brownwood, who retired as chief clerk of the department August 1 after serving through from the Neff administration, has authorized newspapermen at the capitol to speculate that he will run; and has told this writer he believes he can win the office.

J. R. Ball, now of Austin, for several years connected with financial departments of the state, has entered the race for treasurer.

With Kerr of Fort Worth, former candidate, reported to be again in the running, it is also considered not illogical that the Ferguson administration, in view of Hatcher's announcement, may have someone to offer for this elective officer more closely committed to administration policies. So that altogether, there now stand to be not less than four, and probably five or more entrants in the race.

The circumstances under which Hatcher, who was the Ferguson North Texas campaign manager, came to be nominated are perhaps readily recalled. It was one time when a majority of the democratic executive committee was called on to select the party nominee. Dr. Walter Splawn had been nominated for railroad commissioner, but resigned before the general election to take the university presidency. C. V. Terrell was nominated for treasurer, but took Splawn's place on the rail board. The executive committee renominated Terrell for the railhoad commission, but then chose Hatcher for the place he made vacant, Terrell not resigning the treasurer's nomination until given that on the rail board. As in the past nomination, by the committee as well as in a primary election, was equivalent to election.

An interesting development of the treasurer's department was that Hatcher has made an appointment on the request of former U. S. Senator Joseph W. Bailey, of an individual who was not "taken care of" by the Fergusons in departmental reorganization early this year.

"HELLO" IN AMERICA

Americans have taken the advice of an American politician who passed on some years ago. This was the thing he gave a friend, "Don't write; use the phone." There is one telephone for every seven men, women and children in America and the wires transmit 19 billion calls in the United States in a single year.

And there are men who would return to the ox-cart period of history before the coming of the telephone, the electric light, the radio, the concrete highway, the motor vehicle and a thousand additional inventions for the convenience or comfort or pleasure of mankind. No, Brother Jones, this earth isn't flat.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE.

Leo.

Today's planetary aspects are somewhat conflicting, for while it is a propitious occasion for those in the employment of others, presaging recognition and unexpected reward, yet other evidences point to complicated situations and distressing experiences. It also would appear that health may be affected, and there is a slight possibility of accident. It is not advisable to embark today on any untried enterprise. Litigations and quarrels may terminate adversely, and changes, removal or travel are not encouraged. In the evening, the conditions are distinctly unfavorable, and a great amount of self-restraint must be exercised, if undesired consequences are to be avoided.

A child born today will enjoy normal health, although it will not be free from some slight ailments—of more or less gravity during its infancy. Its recuperative powers will, however, enable it to overcome these without diffficulty or danger. Its disposition is likely to be restless, changeable, stubborn and unruly. Unless these defects are eradicated—and this can only be done by stern disciplinary measures—they will unfortunately militate against its success. This child will be naturally headstrong, and it will do better in the service of others, than if it works on "it own."

If today is your birthday, you are proud, and somewhat imperative, but, at the same time, winsome, magnetic and lovable. You are very fond of having your own way, and generally succeed in getting it, not by force of character, but by your compelling personality, which, by its natural charm, disarms all criticism and compels admiration. You also possess a very keen sense of humor, and this enables you to enjoy a joke even when you yourself are the victim. You are full of energy, always wanting to do something, and you possess considerable originality.

Your affections are very deep rooted, and you are capable of a great love. You, however, very rarely demonstrate or display your affection. As an unwonted reserve or an unaccountable shyness seems to hold you back. If you could only let yourself go, love would provide you with a wonderful reward.

Successful people born on this date are:

Thomas W. Silloway, architest and author.

Robert B. Roosevelt, statesman and author.

Powell Clayton, soldier and statesman.

John F. Dryden, soldier and statesman.

Charles U. Stoddard, author and poet.

Billie Burke, actress.

BROUGHT BACK FOR MURDER

Man Held in Kansas Is Returned to Oklahoma

The officer said a woman had confessed she and three men, including Harmon, had killed Harry Stevens, a miner, and thrown his body down a mine shaft at Picher.

Chicago Judge Says Low Bail Aids Crime

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Judge John H. Lyle of the municipal court, noted for fixing high bonds in cases of dangerous criminals, attributes Chicago crime conditions to low bonds, professional bondsmen, fixers, unscrupulous lawyers, repeated continuances and legal technicalities.

Writing in the Chicago Herald and Examiner Judge Lyle placed much of the blame on the judges, police officers and prosecuters.

Legal flaws he termed responsible for evasion of convictions and escape from sentences by parole or probation.

"We have plenty of law if it is vigorously enforced," he said.

HOW IT STARTED

The Menagerie

The menagerie, in the strict sense of the word, is as old as civlization itself. As soon as man became separated from the animals came his desire to know something of them, which resulted in collections of the wild inhabitants of the forests and the plains, first for private and then for public amusement.

The Romans had their lions and other wild beasts, and Julius Ceasar made a note of the fact that the rich British chieftains kept hares, geese and domestic animals for their amusement. When the conqueror went to England he kept bears, and Henry I. had a collection of lynxes, lions and leopards.

The first real menagerie in the modern sense was founded in England in the thirteenth century, when the king of England received as a gift from hs kinsman, Louis IX, of France an elephant, the first ever seen in England. This was exhibited and kept at the expense of the city of London, and before long was joined by other unfamiliar specimens which became known as the Menagerie of the Tower, where they were housed.

The development of the zoological parks which we find in large cities today had its origin in a movement started in Paris in 1904 in the Jardin des Plantes, resulting in the establishment of menageries in the principal cities of Europe. The first important zoological institution in this country was that founded in Philadelphia in 1871.

RADIO STATION TO REOPEN

Municipally Owned Dallas Plant Has Been Modernized.

DALLAS, Aug. 6.—(AP)—The Dallas municipally owned radio station, which claims the distinction of being the second broadcasting radio station in the United States, will reopen as a 500 watt plant October 1, with new and modern equipment. It has been closed for several weeks, having been ordered to cease broadcasting because its equipment was obsolete. Popular subscription provided some of the money for the new plant, which is to be located in the tower of the auditorium in the state fair grounds. The main studio will be in a downtown hotel, however.

DANGEROUS PLAYTHING

Negro Fatally Shoots Self in San Antonio.

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 6.—A .38 caliber pistol Wednesday night proved to be a fatal plaything.

Hawthorne Henderson, negro, received a bullet from the pistol in the left side of his abdomen when it was discharged accidentally as he toyed with the weapon.

He was taken to a hospital where he died.

IRRIGATION

PROVISION MADE FOR SURVEYING THE BIG LAKES.

In a recent article we told how the contract between the irrigation district a nd Mr. Waggoner provided for further payment for lands which might be submerged upon the completion of the dams forming the two lakes.

The provision was that all lands over 20,000 acres which might be flooded when the lakes were filled to spillway level would be paid for at the rate of $15.00 per acre.

It was evidently anticipated that Lake Kemp might not fill up for several years after the completion of the dam. Of course its waters could was inserted in the contract allowing not define the area covered until it had filled. Therefore a provision was inserted in the contract allowing for a survey to be made.

The paragraph covering this reads about as follows:

"(b) The area of land which will be submerged by the waters impounded by the said two dams may be ascertained at any time after the completion of the said two dams, and by a survey made by the party of the first part (Mr. Waggoner), upon ten days notice to the party of the second part, and the second party shall have the right, if it so desires to do so to have its agents or representatives present to assist in making such surveys and seeing that the same is correctly made, and the expense of such survey shall be borne by the party of the first part."

Lake Kemp has bee completed for a long time and still not enough water ha scome down the river to any where near fill it. It will be a big lake indeed when filled full.

CAPTURED DOCTOR LIVING

Reports State That Bandits Still Holding Captive.

PEKIN, Aug. 6.—(AP).—Dr. Harvey J. Howard of the Peking Union Medical college, who was captured by Manchurian bandits on July 20 when Morgan Palmer, an American was killed, is held by the bandits at a place about 20 miles from Fuchow-Hsien, which is the nearest station to Palmer's ranch on the Sungari river. This information was contained in a telegram sent to Harbin by Samuel Sokobin, the America consul at Harbin, who is attempting to obtain Howard's release.

SEEK INTERURBAN BANDIT

Port Arthur And Beaumont Police Hunting Two Men.

PORT ARTHUR, Aug. 6.—(AP) Jefferson county authorities with Port Arthur and Beaumont police cobined continue a hunt today for two men who robbed a conductor on a Beaumont interurban car last night of about $100.

Reports were received also that a man with a truck robbed a Port Neches store of merchandise valued at about $1,000.

When she came back the French valet was arranging the tiny tea tray with the deft neatness that was peculiarly his own. White-head now, but still alert and vigorous looking, he was the same faithful servant and friend that he had always been.

He greeted her with his usual quick, pleasant smile, and placed the tray on a stool close to the divan.

And lying back amongst the heaped-up cushions, Diana watched him pour out her tea, and guessed the unspoken sympathy that kept him hovering solicitously near her.

She smiled at him a trifle wistfully.

"Another day, Gaston."

Anxious himself as she was, he knew what was passing in her mind, and though he winced at the weariness in her tone he maintained the cheerfully, "but perhaps the last," he added, with more confidence than he really felt.

She shrugged slightly as she took the cup he held out to her. "In cha Allah!" she murmured, in the language that had become as familiar to her as her mother-tongue. He accepted her qualification with a slight inclination of the head. "Truly, as Madame says, if God wills," he answered, and abruptly turned the conversation.

"Madame spoke of a letter — for Monsieur le Comte."

Envying his real or assumed optimism, Diana smothered a sigh and pointed to the writing table. "It is ready, Gaston. Send it to Touggourt, tonight, and two men with it in case of accidents. The escort need not start yet. I have told Monsieur le Comte where to expect them. And, Gaston, the horses in ten minutes, please."

With a quiet "Bien, Madame," he took the sealed packet and started to cross the room. But as he reached the door she called to him. "Gaston—"then stopped, biting her quivering lip. "Madame?" He came back slowly and stood waiting, looking down at her with grave, compassionate eyes. And when at last she spoke he had to stoop to catch the faint whisper.

"Gaston, do you think—?"

Did he think? Bon Dieu, had he not been thinking this month past, thinking and fearing even as she was thinking and fearing. But wild horses should not drag the truth from him.

He answered her almost fiercely.

"No, Madame, I do not think," he lied firmly, "and it will be long before I think—what Madame is thinking."

But his very vehemence only served to confirm her fears, and she made a queer little hopeless gesture with her hands.

"I can't—help thinking," she faltered, "Monseigneur has been gone so long, and I'm afraid—afraid—" her voice trailed into a whisper, "I'm a coward, Gaston, a miserable coward —" For a moment it seemed as if she must break down, then with an effort she controlled herself. But the shaky laugh that followed was perilously near a sob.

The devoted little Frenchman's eyes glistened suddenly, and his composure momentarily forsook him.

"A coward, you, Madame? May the good God make many such cowards," he choked, and fairly fled from the tent. Nor did he recover his accustomed serenity until he had dispatched the two riders whom he had already warned to be in readiness to carry the letter to Touggourt; had sought out and interviewed Yusef, whose anxiety was growing in proportion with his own; and had thoroughly inspected the horses that were being saddled for the afternoon ride.

His unwonted emotion reacted on his usually placid temper and he cursed the grooms in voluble Arabic as he tightened buckles and readjusted girths with a wealth of sarcasm that abashed his subordinates, and delighted a ginning and appreciative audience. He would not have admitted, even to himself, that his zeal was largely unnecessary—for there was not slackness in Ahmed ben Hasan's camp—but that, in point of fact, he was delaying the moment when he must face his distracted and worried mistress again.

But it was only before Gaston that Diana allowed herself to give way. She was calm, even smiling, when she came out of the tent and, greeting Yusef who was waiting for her, stood for a few moments drawing on her gloves while she watched the diabolical behavior of the big black stallion she was to ride.

It was the Sheik's favorite horse, which she had exercised regularly during his absence. A fiend incarnate, he was savage and intractable with all who approached him except Ahmed ben Hassan, who had tamed him by fear, and Diana who had won his love. Utterly fearless and devoted to animals she had a way of her own with horses, and Eblis was only one amongst other "incorrigibles" that had yielded to her peculiar methods.

Today his temper seemed even worse than usual, and as Diana went to him he sent one of the two grooms spinning to the ground with a sidelong heave of his great body, while, rearing high in the air, he almost dragged the other off his feet. The man let out a yelp of terror and clutched frantically at the bridle.

"O devil—and father of devils," he wailed, "be still, thou cursed beast," and jerked his head to avoid the cruel teeth that, aimed at his face, fastened on his shoulder, wrenching from him a wide strip of his burnous. Gaston and Yusef made a simulfaneous leap. But it was Diana who reached him first and pushed him on one side, catching the plunging animal and coaxing him into calmness while she forced the cluttering rag from his foam-flecked jaws. Trembling and snorting, but obedient to her voice, he let her handle and mount him without opposition, though his bloodshot eyes rolled kickedly in the direction of Yusef who stood to hold her stirrup.

Diana smiled down at the big, portly Arab, and returned his salute with a laughing jest that made him start back a pace or two and then double up with unrestrained mirth.

What children they were, these desert men, she mused as she rode slowly out of the camp with Gaston behind her. Children to be humored and amused, and corrected, too, when occasion arose. Passionate and hasty, quick to take offense or revenge an injury, but lovable—and loyal where they loved.

How thoroughly she had grown to know and understand them, how deeply she valued the affection she had won.

A little more than human in their estimation, an angel who dwelt among them and ministered to their needs, she was worshiped by all the tribe.

And the knowledge of it had made her very humble. What could she do but love them who shared her love for the leader who was their god!

Beyond the outskirts of the camp, Diana set her horse to climb the low hill that sheltered it. It was a stiff pull up, but it saved the long ride round its base, and the view from the summit was worth the momentary discomfort of getting there.

Sidling and, catching at his bit, the black stallion pranced joyously to the foot of the incline and then, as he felt the reins slacken, rushed the hill eagerly, snorting with excitement and spurning the stones with his feet. Between her knees, Diana could feel his nervous body trembling with life and vigor, could feel the strong muscles roll and ripple with the upward surge of his great shoulders, and she leaned forward in the saddle to aid him in his climb, her hand resting lightly on his satiny neck, her cheeks flushing with pleasure, forgetting for a moment the doubts and fears that had assailed her. One last wild scramble that sent a shower of pebbles flying in the face of Gaston's less impetuous mount, one last heave of the powerful hind limbs, and Eblis launched himself on to the top of the hill to stand with widespread nostrils snuffing the cool breeze that came from the north.

Diana looked about her with shining eyes at the view that met her gaze.

Accustomed though she was to it, she never grew tired of the wonderful panorama that lay spread out before her. On this side of the hill the undulations of the desert were slight and the view stretched for miles, a limitless waste of golden sand that seemed to fade imperceptibly into the clear blue of the afternoon sky.

Away to the west sprawled the dark, irregular smudge of the distant hills, cloudlike and intangible-looking, for the sun was still too high in the heavens to sharpen and materialize their outline.

For a moment Diana turned and looked down on the camp beneath her, but the northern, wider outlook soon claimed her attention again.

A fullness came into her throat as she gazed at the marvelous beauty of it. This was the desert indeed, the desert that was her home. Here was all that made life worth living to her, here lay all her interests, her duty, her love. Despite its savagery and danger, despite its limitations and its loneliness, she loved it—loved it for its very contrariness, its peace, its fury, its strange compelling charm. Long years ago she had submitted to its fascination, the passage of time had only served to strengthen its hold. The desert had "caught" her, and now it would never let her go.

Awful in its immensity, mysterious and alluring, it drew her as many another is drawn, enfolding her with its curious restfulness, soothing her with its unchanging permanence. As it had been in the beginning so was it now, so would it be through all the length of time.

She called sgerly to the valet, who had ranged alongside of her. "Look Gaston, isn't it wonderful? The space of it! Just miles and miles of emptiness and—" she broke off suddenly with a little gasp, clutching at the field glasses that were strapped to her saddle. What was that black speck that, far away in the distance, seemed all at once to have detached itself from the monotonous uniformity of the shining yellow plain? She raised the glasses quickly, searching for the object she had seen or thought she had seen.

Two specks, not one. Two specks that grew momentarily larger and took on definite shape.

Her hands began to tremble, and a mist rose before her eyes, blurring her sight.

She thrust the glasses at Gaston. "Over there," she muttered, pointing. "I can't see. What are they?"

For a few moments he did not answer and she waited in a fever of impatience, her heart beating heavily.

When he turned to her it was with a little gesture of regret. "Spahis, Madame," he said, almost reluctantly. Only Spahis!

A sharp sigh escaped her, and when she spoke her voice was flat and tired. "We can go and meet them. It will be too late for a ride if we wait until they come in." And, gathering up the reins, she urged Eblis down the northern slope of the hill. Slithering and sliding, the great beast reached the level and broke immediately into the swift, tireless gallop for which the Sheik's horses were famed.

And for a while she gave him his head, letting him go his own pace while she struggled against the disappointment that had brought back all her anxiety, all her apprehension.

And gradually a certain measure of calmness came to her.

Unconsciously soothed by the wild, exhilarating rush through the air that was fast dissipating her headache; too good a horsewoman to deny the pleasure she experienced in the hard physical exercise she loved, she determined to get from it what enjoyment she could and try and conquer the mental distress that seemed to be taking all strength from her. Today she had given way to despicable weakness. Tired out with a sleepless night she had neglected the many duties that usually occupied her, and had shut herself up in the tent to brood morbidly. She must not let it happen again. She must invent new duties, new tasks to fill the lonely days that dragged so wearily. She must not let her people have any inkling of the fears that consumed her. Outwardly, at any rate, she must preserve the air of confidence that would keep them from seeing anything sinister in the prolonged absence of their chief.

Meanwhile it was time she brought her madly racing mount into something approaching order. Left to his own devices, scarcely feeling the light weight on his back, Eblis had got the bit between his teeth and was making a very good pretense of running away.

Gaston was far behind and she had no wish to meet the Spahis alone.

More Truth Than Poetry

THE IMPOSSIBLE

Henry Ford is launching a campaign to stop the jazz craze by reintroducing the old-fashioned waltz and polka and square dances.

Though to date we cannot even set a limit
To the miracles that Henry Ford can do,
Though each year a million flivvers
Course across the plains and rivers
And congest the asphalt urban avenue—
Though we own that he's a marvel and a wonder,
He displays a trifle too much nonchalance
When he seeks the reformation
Of the jazzy syncopation
That the modern Yankee youngsters call a dance.

He has learned to run a railroad and make money—
Which a lot of railroad men have never done,
He can sned a flying freighter
'Round the world like the equator,
He can buy a U. S. ship, and make it run.
But if he attempts to teach the modern youngster
That the old style dance is better than the new,
Though he may not realize it,
He will find out when he tries it—
He has started something which he can't put through.

Mr. Ford has always had our admiration;
By employing that untiring brain of his
In dispensing locomotion
Here, and far across the ocean,
He's amassed 'most all the money that there is.
But his effort to restore Victorian dances
Will result in nothing much except a shock,
Henry really is a wonder,
But he makes a dreadful blunder—
If he fancies that he's going to stop the clock!

Fitzgerald Stars in Field; Metzler Poles Two Safeties

HOUSTON, Aug. 6.—Young Frank Barnes after a prolonged period of ineffectiveness returned to his early season form to defeat the Spudders 5 to 2 here today. The Buffs were aided by Wichita Falls errors. Fitzgerald played a great game for the visitors.

The Spudders scored the first run in the fourth inning. Fitzgerald doubled to left. Bodie hit to the box and both runners were safe when Fitzgerald. Turgeon flied to center and Fitzgerald scored after the catch.

Lose in Fourth.

Houston put the game on ice in the last of the fourth by chasing over three markers. Gainer singled to left, and scored on Compton's double to the same field. Peel flied to Callaghan, and McCurdy walked. Compton took third when Boggess forced McCurdy at second. Jonnard attempted to nip Compton off third, but threw wild. Compton scored and Boggess went to second. Boggess took third when Osborn threw wide to second in an attempt to catch the runner off the base. Barnes singled to left, scoring Boggess.

The Spudders made their second score in the fifth. Dorman walked, and stole second as Jonnard fanned. Osborn fanned. Metzler walked. Distel singled past second, scoring Dorman and sending Metzler to third. Distel was caught off first, pitcher to first to short.

Score on Errors.

The Buffs scored one in both the seventh and eighth innings. In the seventh Kane rolled out to Bodie, and Fuller flied to Fitzgerald. Powell singled to center and scored when Metzler let Gainer's single get by him. Gainer went to third. Turgeon tossed out Compton.

In the eighth the Buffs shoved over their final score. Peel sent a double to left, took third on McCurdy's single to the same pasture. Boggess bit to Turgeon who threw Peel out at the plate, McCurdy taking second and Boggess first. Barnes grounded to Turgeon who threw to Distel. The latter dropped the ball, filling the bases. McCurdy scored when Kane forced Barnes at second, Distel unassisted.

Two Girls to Start Swim of Channel

BOULGNE, France, Aug. 6.—(AP)—A combined attack upon the turbulent waters of the English channel will be made tomorrow night when women champions from North and South America, Gertrude Ederle of New York and Lillian Harrison of Buenos Aires, start stroking from Cape Griz-Nez for the English shore at Dover. The two swimmers will enter the water at 10:30 o'clock.

Today Miss Ederle, who has been training in the channel waters for longer than a month, took a final workout accompanied by Miss Janner, member of the English swimming team at the 1924 Olympic games at Paris. Those who watched the two women slipping through the water at Griz-Nez were amazed at the American girl's speed and stamina.

The PASSING HOUR

by Wm. B. Ruggles

THE GAME

I've heard them say, "The best man won!"
When through the thunder of the night
Some Youth, amazed, to triumph spun
With luck to aid him in the fight.

And I have watched the cautious way
The victor picked his after path
And dodged the man he licked that day
As if he were the Lord of Wrath.

The callous ringside fans may see
A new star on his orbit tossed—
But on the facts, two men agree—
The one who won, the one who lost:
And both are sure—as business men—
'Twill be long before they meet again.

ELIZABETH RYAN'S victory over Helen Wills at Seabright reverses our old standby of the fair Molla, who was a Yank when she won and a Norseman when she lost. For a matter of six years Elizabeth's court forays abroad have always found her tagged "Elizabeth Ryan of California." The day she beat the metaphorical socks off the champion she was the "Anglicized American."

But whatever tag they hung on her, she beat Little Miss Poker Face in straight sets.

The Wonder.

THE wonder is not that Lewis White, doubtless the most brilliant tennis player in the southwest today from the standpoint of sustained ability, speed and style, defeated Tiste Adoue, over 40, 15 years beyond the mark at which most tennis players of the rank and file throw in their rackets to take up other and less strenuous games—is still a finalist in southwestern competition.

Tennis is the game of youth in more than one particular. One is that constant play at it keeps you young. The man probably does no live who could take up tennis at 35 or even 40 and make much of a show at it. But the man like Adoue who has played and loved the game from boyhood on, can keep in constant condition—and take ten years off his own physical age.

The veteran Tom Holland used to be the marvel of Texas courts. He was playing when he was over fifty years old.

A safe guess is that the veteran Adoue will keep plugging on as long or longer. And there is every reason to believe that for a matter of five or six more years you will find him in the vicinity of finals and semi-finals. His pace never seemed to have flagged.

DOC STEWART of the Longhorns is sponsor for the belief that the success of a football team depends upon the winning spirit psychology of the student body. What if both student bodies have it?

POSSIBLY that was the reason SMU tied four games last season. They ran into the old student body psychology all hunched up at the same key.

THE DOCTOR is not a wagering man, but as between a highly psycho-analyzed student body and an alert end on a loose football, here's a hunch how he would bet.

Beneath this rock lies Silas Bright—
He said the umpire's guess was right.

No Peace At All.

WHEN Pancho Villa took the last count from a loose tooth that spread infection and wheeled the flyweight champion to the sanitarium where his heart failed to stand the shock of anaesthesia, you could step aside and say, "Well, here is one vacated title that there will be no great trouble in allocating."

Probably there are not twenty professional battlers in the business who can make the flyweight limit. Of these, not more than five are formidable gentlemen where class is concerned. Looks as if it ought to be easy to get those few together and settle the issue. But has it worked out that way? It has not.

One of the New York commissioners was in favor of fixing the title by recognizing an eminent flyweight as the champion. The New York commissioner has not even yet perceived the humor of his suggestion, although he would doubtless rise on his hind legs and howl if "Ma" Ferguson called Kid Pancho over at San Antonio the flyweight champion by gubernatorial decree. The two other commissioners, however, squelched his bright idea and told him that a tournament is the thing.

So a tournament it will be, although instead of the five logical contenders present indications are that the list will include twenty to forty gentlemen, all of whom say they are flyweights and some of whom claim to be champions.

Fistiana is a fearful and wonderful thing.

Brains figure prominently in all sport lines, says James J. Corbett. But chiefly by their absence.

Grid stars once earned their meed of praise
By lengthy runs that won the game,
But now by toiling through the days,
They make the headline's daily fame.

Harry O'Boyle, Notre Dame star is keeping in condition by digging ditches. The question becomes is he also keeping the ditches in condition?

Few Changes.

THE Southwestern conference will not see a single change in head grid coaches next fall. All of the seven teams left in the organization and the Oklahoma Aggies, who have withdrawn to play with the rough Missouri Valley boys, start the season with the same mentors that went through 1925—Stewart at Texas, Bible at A&M, Schmidt at Arkansas, Bell at TCU, Heisman at Rice, Bridges at Baylor and Morrison at SMU. Maulbetsch is still at Oklahoma A&M.

Centenary, not a conference member but in on a year's probation, has a new head coach since Bo McMillan resigned last June. SMU has the only major change in the loss of Freeland. Morrison's co-coach, to Texas Tech. There are a good many shifts in assistant coaches, but this is natural as the understudy jobs do not pay well and the men usually move on to more lucrative places, sometimes as head coaches. James, who was at TCU, comes to Texas to help Stewart. Waite has left Texas, Crangle has quit at Arkansas, Kubale gets James' old job. Heisman and Bedenk at Rice, and Bridges and Crow at Baylor, will again do business together at the old stands. Morrison has two SMU grads as assistants in Stewart and McIntosh.

The conference is pretty well fixed for coaches. Certainly there are no changes needed except as promotion offers.

FORT WORTH 7; BEAUMONT 5.

Dempsey Signs With Fitzsimmons For 1926 Fight With Wills

CHAMP WILL MEET NEGRO IN INDIANA

Challenger's Manager Ready To Sign Agreements, Says Promoter

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 6.—(AP) — Announcement that Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, had affixed his signature to articles calling for a title bout with Harry Wills, negro challenger, at Michigan City, Ind., on a date yet to be selected "in the season of 1926" was made here tonight by Floyd Fitzsimmons, middle western promoter.

Fitzsimmons also announced the receipt of a telegram from Paddy Mullins, manager for Wills, suggesting that Fitzsimmons meet him in New York to arrange details of the match.

"Mullins said that he would sign if I brought with me a contract bearing the signature of Jack Dempsey," Fitzsimmons added.

"The champion signed today, and I am leaving for New York tomorrow with the contract."

The Indiana promoter said he would reveal the financial features of the fight agreement after he had obtained Mullins' OK. Meantime he expressed gratification over the success of "my trip to the coast."

MACKS 6-6; INDIANS 9-1.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—(AP)—The Athletics split today's twin bill with Cleveland, winning the second game, 6 to 1 after dropping the first, 9 to 6. The Indians clubbed Harris off the hill in the third inning of the first game when they scored five runs. Bube Walberg was completely master in the after piece and though Miller started strong for the Indians he wilted in the sixth.

BLANKENSHIP BLANKS BOSTON.

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Blankenship held the Boston hitters to five safeties while Chicago romped away with a 10 to 0 decision today. It was his sixth straight victory. The hitting of Schalk and Sheely's home run over the left field fence together with the fielding of Todt were features. Dick Kerr, former black listed pitcher of the White Sox and recently reinstated to major league ball, was in uniform and Manager Collins announced that he probably would be used in one of the two games Saturday.

Prospects Loom For Tilt Between Tunney and Wills

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—The prospects that Harry Wills and Gene Tunney, leading challengers for Jack Dempsey's heavyweight title, will fight it out in New York this September were increased today with a new flurry of bidding for the match.

On top of it came an announcement by the Polo Grounds Athletic club that it had placed a definite offer before Paddy Mullins, Wills' manager, Tex Rickard and Manager Billy Gibson in an effort to close the bout for the Yankee stadium.

Rickard previously had submitted his bid to Mullins and announced before his departure that he hoped to clinch the contest within a few days.

To offset Rickard's move to the polo grounds A. C. intimated it already had reached and understanding Tunney and Gibson, although it was admitted no contracts had been signed. Mullins said he hoped to hear from Wills and give a definite answer my Monday.

The Polo Grounds A. C. desires to stage a Tunney-Wills bout September 23 or 25. Rickard prefers a little earlier date, some time the week of September 14.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—(AP)—The cotton market was extremely dull today with narrow price ranges and trading practically limited to evening up of commitments in advance of the government report due on Saturday. Following a small net decline in the early trading of seven points October the market gradually advanced until that month reached a level 31 points above the lows around mid-season.

In the late trading prices fluctuated narrowly within the earlier range and finally closed near the highs showing net gains for the day of five to nine points.

At the start Liverpool was better than due, the English market having been favorably affected by the lowering of the Bank of England money rates from 5 to 4½ per cent. The market disregarded Liverpool, however, and first trades showed a one-point net loss to five points gain.

Zack Wheat Did Not Please Club Owners

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Pressure from National league club owners brought about the decision of Wilbert Robinson to relieve Zack Wheat of his temporary command of the Brooklyn Nationals, developments today indicated.

Belief that the absence of Robinson from the players' bench would seriously affect the gate receipts at the various ball parks was responsible for an undercurrent of protests which had been taking form for the past few weeks.

President Robinson always was a popular drawing card with the fans and as manager he was recognized as one of the big assets in the National league.

Davis Cup Team Is Finally Announced

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Price movements in today's stock market disclosed considerable irregularities, final quotations as a rule showing slight recession. Oils ad motors were heavily sold by professional traders on unfavorable trade rumors and much of the selling in other quarters was inspired by cautionary commission house advices.

There was a fair sized accumulation of overnight buying orders the execution of which lifted nearly a score issues to new peak prices for the year in the first hour of trading. The rapidity of the advance, particularly in such issues as Montana Power which soared over five points to a new record top at 99¼, invited considerable realizing, that issue settling back to 95 at the close.

The chief news development of the day was the reduction in the re-discount rate o fthe Bank of England, from 5 to 4½ per cent. This was generally construed here as an indication of improved credit condition abroad and a vindication of Chancellor Churchill's gold policy.

Bryuancy again developed in several high priced issues. General Railway Signal which is reported to have received large orders for automatic train control devices soared 12½ points to a record high at 237½, as against a price of 144 when it was touted on the "big board" a few months ago. Havana Electric jumped nearly 10 points to a new peak at 196⅝, closing about one and half points below the top. Mack Trucks, Westinghouse Airbrake, Virginia Railway and Power and Midland Steel products preferred closed four to eight one-half points higher. Coca Cola was run up over four points to a new top at 140 and International Telephone climbed three points to 137.

Fresh weakness developed in the oil shares on reports of another increase in crude oil production last week. Independent Oil and Gas broke nearly four points to 25⅝ and then rallied to 27 and Atlantic Refining, Colorado Fuel, General Asphalt, Mid-Continent petroleum and Pierce Oil preferred dropped one to two points. Pan American B received better support, closing 1⅜ higher at 68⅝.

STILL

"when prices warrant." Improved methods of drilling wells and refining the crude product in addition to possible new sources in great regions still unexplored all combine to point to a reassuring supply of oil for the nation's use, the report concludes.

The petroleum recovable by present production methods in proven fields is put at 5,300,000,00 barrels of crude oil with about 26,000,000,000 barrels of crude oil obtainable by known processes when proces justify.

Asserting that the limit of deep drilling has not been reached, the report says that improved methods of reaching deposits at great depths will disclose oil supplies tantamount to the discovery of new fields.

The major oil reserves of the United States are described as lying in 1,100,000,000 acres of land underlain by sedimentary rocks, not fully explored and where geology indicates oil is possible. With extended search it is believed new supplies will be discovered. In addition, the report says the nation has another reserve in vast deposits of oil shale, coal and ignites from which liquid fuel and lubricants may be extracted. These deposits are so huge it was reported that they promise under conservative estimates, an almost unlimited supply.

Greater Efficiency

The present supply of petroleum can be further conserved by its more efficient utilization especially in the form of gasoline, the report says, while improved mechanics will result in smaller consumption of lubricants. It is estimated that when prices justify the change, structural development of gas engines will double the mileage now possible.

Scientific study of the process of cracking crude oil has resulted in increasing the supply of gasoline, the report states, while it is described that improved methods of "cracking" residue fuel oil, will so diminish the supply of the latter product that eventually it will be removed from competition with coal.

As incentive for the more efficient development of the nation's oil supplies the report suggests that operators be assured security in the ownershi pof oil lands and the right to lease, encouragement in exploration and development of little known fields, and adequate prices commensurate with the rise of capital investment.

Oats Tangle Gear In Plane, Causing Fall

BLOOMBURG, Pa., Aug. 6.—(AP)—Harry A. Chandler, air mail pilot whose plane fell into the Susquehanna river here last night, will recover from his injuries, physicians said today.

Chandler's skull was fractured when his plane, its running gear tangled by uncut oats in a field from which he attempted to hop off, struck a tree top and plunged into shallow water.

The injured airman said he had lost his way on the westward flight, the last guiding beacon he had observed being at Phillipsburg, N. J. Flying low, he alighted in the oats field near here and dropped a magnesium flare which attracted a number of persons from whom he obtained directions. The accident followed his attempt to resume his flight.

Steck Still Trailing Brookhart in Check

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(AP)—With 37 counties complete in the recount of ballots in the Iowa senatorial contest, Steck has 140,907 and Brookhart 142,061 in uncontested votes. Steck has challenged 2,368 Brookhart votes while Brookhart's challenges total 665. The counties recounted constitute about half of those in which paper ballots were used.

SANITATION IN CITY TO CAUSE MANY ARRESTS

Patton Takes Action On People Not Connecting With Sewers

Echoe sof the "better sanitation" campaign launched here several weeks ago were heard Thursday in announcement from Commissioner J. H. Patton that he had ordered filing of complaint against some 30 or more property owners here who have failed to connect their residences to the sanitary sewer system. No complaints have as yet been filed but 28 have been drafted by City Attorney W. E. George and turned over to Mr. Patton for his signature. They will be docketed in corporation court Friday and awarrants issued for the arrest of the defendants.

May Be Fined.

Conviction will allow imposition of a fine of any sum not greater than $100.

Mr. Patton said yesterday that his patience had been exhausted with those against whom the complaints are to be made. He said they had been given personal warnings at least twice and had also received notification through the papers and mail. They have constantly ignored these notices, however, and his only recourse is to start legal action. More suits are in prospect, he indicated.

Property affected by the orders is widely scattered, it is said, although it is roughly confined to four general localities. Scotland addition, Sibley-Taylor addition, North Wichita and the western edge of Floral Heights are mainly involved.

W. S. Langford Sued In Oil Well Affair

Damages of $2,078.97 are asked in a suit filed Thursday in the 89th district court by Frank J. Darr, complaining of W. S. Langford.

The plaintiff's petition alleges violation by the defendant of a verbal contract entered into between the two parties relative to drilling of an oil well on property owned by the defendant on the Ferguson lands in the Freeman-Hampton pool, Archer county.

Darr, a driller by occupation, sets forth that the defendant, Langford, after agreeing with him on terms for drilling a well later declined to permit the work to be done.

The police department, acting on orders from the city clerk, has started a series of notifications and will follow with arrests if the warnings are not heeded.

Season Has a Wide Range Of Styles, Claims Claude Miller, Back From Buying

Claude Miller of the Miller-Ferguson company and his wife returned Thursday from an extensive buying trip to New York. The trip to New York was made by rail but the return was made on the S. H. Mallory which left New York July 29 and arrived at Galveston August 4. Mr. Miller reports that many Texas merchants were on board.

General Resume.

As a general resume of his buying and the result of Mr. Miller's observation he reports many new and popular styles and colors. In all of his twenty-eight years of buying experience he stated that this season had the widest range of fall styles he has ever seen. He reports that the buyers and sellers over the country are enthusiastic over the brilliant prospects. The market is in a better condition than he has ever know it, confirmed Mr. Miller, and has more life and pep.

Miller.

Favorites in colors will be black, first, followed closely in favor by purple, plum, zenia red and pencil blue. These colors are popular in dresses, hats and coats. A new line in hats that is at large demand are the rodeo and broncho hats which are shown in all shades and are adorned by hand-painting, stenciling, embroidery, and other ornaments. The best combinations are black and gold, and black and purple in hats and dresses. Two other shades that are being shown in the dress line are bokara, and golden rust. Circular and flare skirts are good in both dresses and coats.

Fur Trimmed Coats.

Ninety per cent of the coats on displayal are fur trimmed, and many all fur coats are shown and in favor. Gray squirrel, muskrats, mink marmots, hudson seal and sealines trimmed with red fox are elite. The most popular shades in coats are the same as the general run of favorites in colors.

In bags, unusually large sizes are popular in the bead line, with a large flowered design prevalent in various shades. Leather is also good, also with attractive designs.

As a personal opinion gleaned from observation and knowledge Mr. Miller told of his idea concerning the color, purple. He stated that a hat of that color, or hose, a handkerchief ,or bag, was much more elite than purple dresses. The combination of purple and black in a dress, however, was advisable, but more desirable, a black dress trimmed in purple. A touch of purple, therefore, was his idea for a smart outfit.
