Anti-drug hard-liner elected

■ Millions of Colombians "just say no" to the drug lords by electing Cesar Gaviria as president.

By Tom Wells

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Colombians resoundingly rejected drug terrorism Sunday by electing as president Cesar Gaviria, a hard-liner in the war on the country's cocaine cartels, according to official returns.

Millions of Colombians came to the polls in defiance of terrorist threats to vote in an election that will determine the course of the nation's war against the powerful cartels and their hired killers. The campaign has been the bloodiest in the country's history.

The national elections office reported partial election results late Sunday showing Gaviria building an apparently insurmountable lead. At 43, he will be the youngest man ever to lead Colombia.

With 85 percent of the 7,100 precincts reporting, Gaviria of the governing Liberal Party had won 47 percent of the votes counted. In second place was Alvaro Gomez of the National Salvation Movement with 24 percent.

In a nationally televised victory speech, Gaviria vowed to continue the fight against drug traffickers. He also called on developed countries to cut cocaine consumption.

"The industrialized countries are doing little to confront the problem of drug consumption," he said.

He said industrialized countries should work harder to control arms trafficking and money-laundering by cocaine traffickers and called on the U.S. to drop trade barriers against Colombian exports.

Gomez conceded defeat just three hours after polls closed.

"The high vote we obtained made us the second most powerful political force in the nation," he said in a live broadcast interview with the independent radio chain Caracol.

With 5,288,296 votes counted, Gaviria had captured 2,488,687 votes, and Gomez had won 1,285,260, the national elections office said in statement.

Clovis probe

CLOVIS, New Mexico (AP) — Police investigators were working through the Memorial Day weekend on possible leads in the death of a 6-year-old Clovis boy even though preliminary evidence suggests it was accidental, said Police Chief Caleb Chandler.

"We're just trying to cover every possibility, even though it's possible Matthew got into the compartment by himself. We have nothing now that indicates foul play, but we want to follow up on all the information we have."

He said investigators this weekend were interviewing people known to have committed crimes against children.

Matthew Roberts' partially decomposed body was found Wednesday inside a small compartment in the back of a station wagon parked outside the Roberts home in Clovis. He disappeared May 8.

Motels of liberty?

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — Some icons of American history are not what they claim, author Kurt Vonnegut Jr. told University of Rhode Island graduates Sunday.

Vonnegut

Vonnegut told about 2,700 graduates that while Boston and Philadelphia both claim to be the "birthplace of liberty," freedom was "only conceived there, so Boston and Philadelphia were only motels of liberty."

"The gestation period of American liberty has taken 200 years or more," said Vonnegut, whose satiric novels take darkly humorous looks at the past, present and future.

Bush vows to level with Gorbachev

■ The president will "speak from the heart" on arms agreements and troubling issues such as Lithuanian independence and whether a reunified Germany will remain in NATO.

By Matt Quinn
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

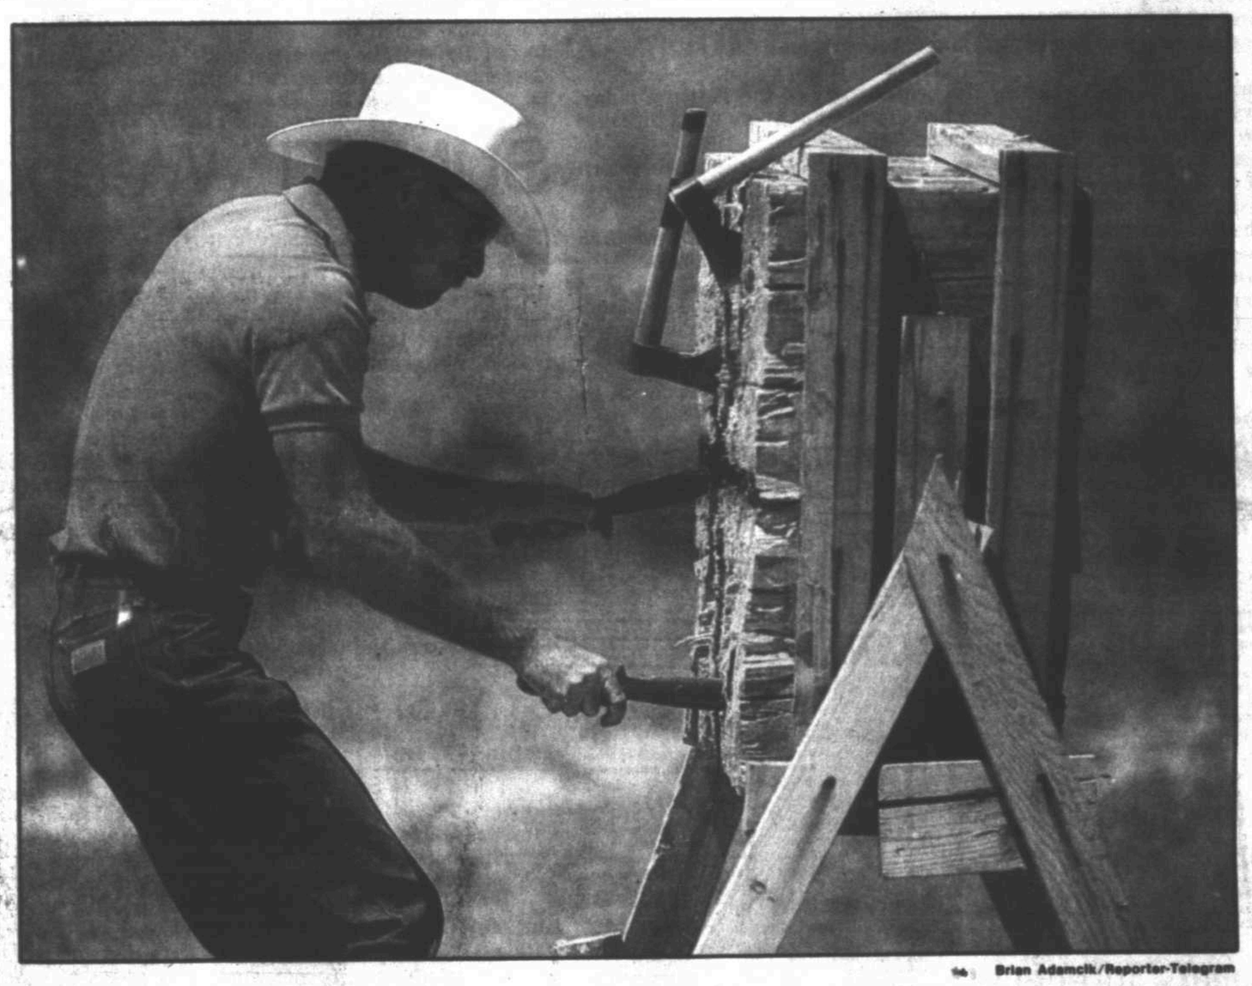

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush described Mikhail Gorbachev Sunday as a "tough guy" who "may be mad at me" about some issues. But Bush vowed to "level with him" about their differences at this week's superpower summit.

Bush, in an interview with a Soviet television correspondent, went out of his way to make it clear that he approaches the summit in a spirit of "respect" for the Soviet people and Gorbachev.

"We've got big differences on some of these questions," Bush said. "But we're reasonable. We don't seek anything other than peace and prosperity for the people of the Soviet Union. I've got to convince Mr. Gorbachev of that."

Looking toward his second summit with the Soviet leader, which will be held in Washington Thursday through Sunday, Bush said he hopes for progress

Stargazers like to be kept in the dark at this party

HOUSTON (AP) — A Wisconsin dentist and telescope maker said "the wonder of it all" was what attracted him to the mountains of far West Texas to join about 800 other amateur astronomers for the 1990 version of the "Texas Star Party."

Stargazers from across the nation began arriving as early as May 19 at a dude ranch in the Davis Mountains for the 12th annual "party" that got its start in 1979, when an astronomer at nearby McDonald Observatory held a smaller campout for a few dozen astronomers.

Sunday was the final day of the gathering.

"For me, it's the wonder of it all," said Dr. David Kriege, a Lake Mills, Wis., dentist and telescope manufacturer. "When I'm looking at a deep sky object — galaxies in collision, planetary nebulas — it's beyond description."

The Davis Mountain area is a preferred sky viewing site because there is almost no interference from city lights. The nearest urban areas are Odessa, about 160 miles to the northeast, and El Paso, about 190 miles to the northwest.

Since 1982, when the Texas Star Party was moved to the Prude Ranch, a guest facility known for hiking and horseback riding, it has continued to grow and has become one of the nation's three most popular observing sessions.

Sarpalius wants Park Service's role at Lake Meredith expanded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The thousands of visitors to Lake Meredith and nearby Alibates Flint National Monument this holiday weekend may be playing on Texas' next national recreation area.

Rep. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, has introduced a bill to permanently extend National Park Service supervision of Lake Meredith.

The reservoir was created 25 years ago by the Bureau of Reclamation to hold water for Panhandle communities. The bureau agreed to let the National Park Service operate a recreational area there.

Though the lake is popular — an estimated 75,000 are visiting this weekend — it has never been able to compete on an equal basis for National Park Service funds. That's because there has never been a guarantee that the agency would always run the facility, Sarpalius said.

"Because the National Park Service didn't have full authority over the lake,

Vets reflect on summit coincidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before it became a Monday holiday, Memorial Day was celebrated on May 30, the day Americans paid homage to those killed in the nation's wars.

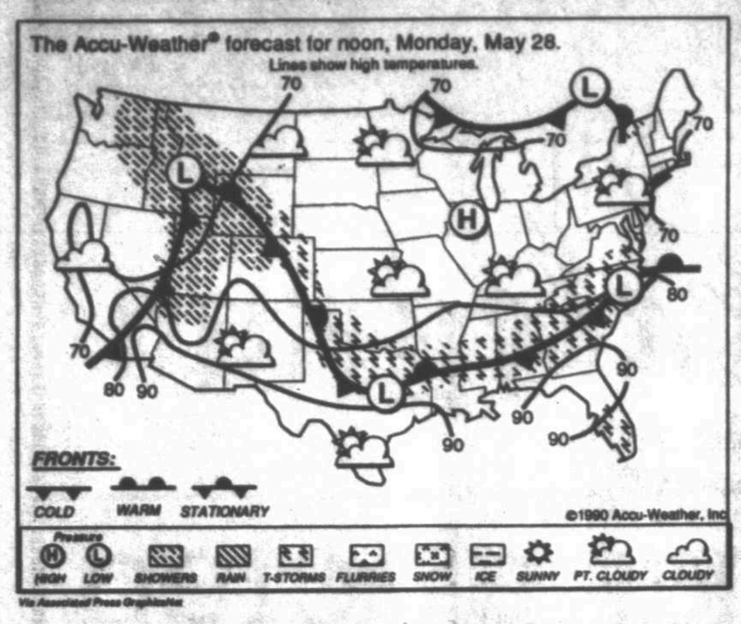

This year, May 30 also is the day Mikhail S. Gorbachev arrives in Washington. The following day, the leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union, the two great superpowers that have confronted each other through four decades of Cold War, will sit together to talk about peace.

Front brings some relief

Staff Report

A weak cold front dissipating over West Texas will bring slightly cooler temperatures to the region as the Memorial Day weekend wraps up.

Partly cloudy skies and a high in the mid-80s is on tap for today, according to forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Mostly cloudy skies with patchy fog are expected tonight, when the low is forecast in the mid-60s, NWS said.

A cloudy morning should give way to partly cloudy skies by afternoon, with a 20 percent chance of widely scattered thunderstorms Tuesday. The high should be in the upper 80s.

Sunday's high of 98 was just three degrees short of the record 101 set in 1985. The overnight low was 67. The record low for this day is 50, set in 1973.

STATE

Thunderstorms with wind gust up to 60 mph roared through North and East Texas Sunday, bringing heavy rains and downing trees and power lines.

Most of Southeast Texas and adjacent coastal waters were under a thunderstorm watch until late Sunday night.

NATION

Rain spread over much of the central part of the nation Sunday, heavy rain drenched parts of parched Florida, and there was a threat of snow in the mountains of northern California.

Near-continuous rain from a low-pressure area in the southeastern Gulf of Mexico mixed with remnants of this year's first tropical depression Sunday to drench much of southern Florida.

The heaviest rainfall during the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT was 2.88 inches at Miami; 2.14 inches at West Palm Beach, Fla.; and 2.09 inches at Columbus, Miss.

Standing water on freeways contributed to accidents, police said. And rain delayed a regional college baseball tournament at the University of Miami in Coral Gables. At game time Sunday afternoon, groundskeepers were playing on a raft in the flooded outfield.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Le Pen enjoys 'combat of ideas'

By Elaine Ganley

ST. CLOUD, France (AP) — Jean-Marie Le Pen has been accused of anti-Semitism and xenophobia in his crusade to keep France French. The press calls him a "devil," but Le Pen doesn't care.

"If I told you it gives me pleasure, would you be surprised?" he says with a grin.

After 30 years of battle in the public arena, Le Pen refuses to yield now.

"I'm a man with a mission," he said. Alluding to death threats, he added: "If I fall, I will have accomplished it."

Le Pen and his National Front fear "colonization" by foreigners. They want to expel immigrants and enact new anti-immigration laws.

To the accusations of racism, anti-Semitism and xenophobia, Le Pen replies that he is simply a patriot who says in public what other people think in private.

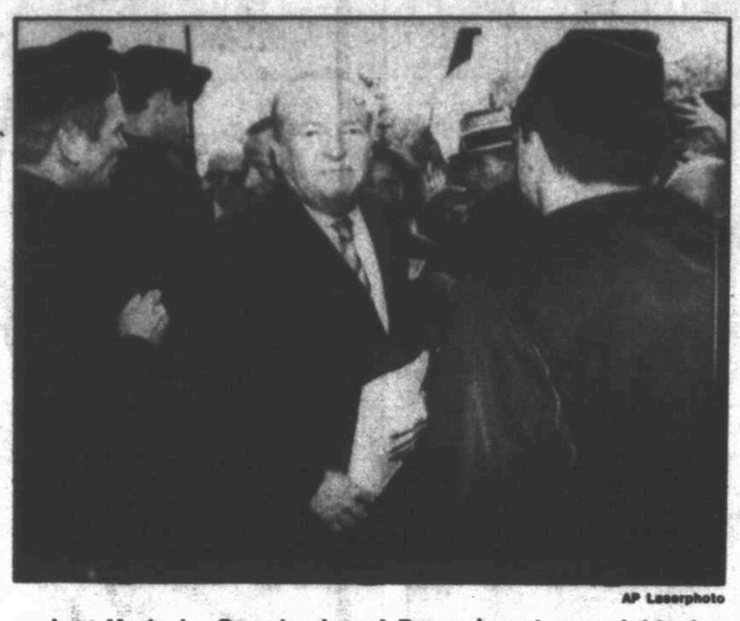

After the discovery May 10 of the desecration of the Jewish cemetery in Carpentras and mutilation of a corpse, Interior Minister Pierre Joxe accused Le Pen of fostering hate. Le Pen was present only in effigy at a huge protest march in Paris that attracted all the main political parties.

"I am Carpentras" read a sign on the effigy.

"It leaves me rather cold," Le Pen said, settling into a chair in the study of his home in St. Cloud, a suburb of Paris.

"I have the calm of an old soldier. I've often seen the whites of the enemy's eyes."

For him, the enemy is the political establishment supported by the media, which he claims echo its lies. He says the desecration at Carpentras was a plot carried out by professionals to discredit him.

Jean-Marie Le Pen, leader of France's extreme right-wing National Front Party, talks his way through riot police armed with assault rifles in order to address a prohibited political meeting Sunday in Saint-Franc, in the French Alps.

"There is one thing I'm sure of: It is that I'm not guilty and the National Front is not guilty," Le Pen said. "I don't know who did it, but I know who didn't do it."

Like a television preacher, Le Pen knows how to pump a crowd. He struts, cajoles and rages, tempering his street-smart edge with quotes from Pascal or Latin citations. He is silver-haired, physically imposing, and even detractors acknowledge he has charisma.

The 61-year-old Breton, whom the French press calls the "beast" or the "devil," thrives on controversy.

On a bookshelf sits a portrait of Le Pen wearing the black bandanna he once affected to cover the eye he lost in a street fight defending a parliamentary deputy.

A former paratrooper and Foreign Legionnaire who fought in Indochina and Algeria, he now fights many of his battles in court.

Le Pen, a deputy in the European Parliament, has been convicted three times and fined for making remarks about Jews or the Holocaust, but he denies being racist or anti-Semitic. He says he has won 30 slander suits against the press.

"Me? Racist? It's a gag, a gag," he boomed. "But I'm not for the melting pot. I'm for the defense of one's culture. I'd despair if I found the culture of Brooklyn in France."

Of Jews, he said: "If they are French, there's no problem; I'm not anti-Semitic."

Wednesday, a court fined Le Pen for saying in 1987 that the Nazi gas chambers were a "detail of World War II history."

The Justice Ministry has succeeded in getting Le Pen's parliamentary immunity lifted to prosecute him for two other remarks: a play on words in 1988 linking the name of a Cabinet minister to Nazi crematory ovens and his assertion last year that the "Jewish international" was partly responsible for the "anti-national spirit."

"Who is charged to say what one can and cannot say in a free country?" he said.

Le Pen founded the National Front in 1972 and remained obscure until the party broke through in 1984, getting 11 percent of the vote in European Parliament elections. He startled France in 1988 by winning 14 percent in the first round of presidential voting.

Politicians of all sorts have scrambled to either outmaneuver or accommodate him, or to woo his followers with tough talk on immigration.

By getting the law on voter representation changed, the government of former Premier Jacques Chirac managed to reduce the National Front's parliamentary seats from 33 to one.

"Everybody says, 'See that racist fire. It's fire chief Le Pen who is guilty. You can even see all the noise he makes with his big horn,' " he said. Racism is not increasing in France, Le Pen said, "but there is increasing fear tied to insecurity toward foreigners and nobody dares say so. Everyone is afraid to be called a racist."

toward a treaty that would slash strategic nuclear forces and for a way to jump-start the now deadlocked negotiations to reduce troops and non-nuclear arms in Europe.

He also called an agreement that he and Gorbachev are expected to sign on chemical weapons a "breakthrough."

Bush stressed that he will "speak from the heart" with Gorbachev about such contentious issues as the Soviet economic crackdown in Lithuania and whether a united Germany will be a member of the Western military alliance.

Bush called the Lithuanian crisis a "troubling" issue that "I don't want to sweep under this rug."

Bush and his top aides have pointedly told the Soviets that unless they loosen up on the breakaway Baltic republic and begin negotiations with the government there, the trade agreement that the Kremlin seeks with the United States will be blocked.

Bush also said in the Soviet TV interview that he would try to convince Gorbachev that a united Germany as a full member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization "is no threat to the Soviet Union."

Now, the United States and Soviet Union share responsibility with the two other victorious World War II powers — France and Britain — for military arrangements in the two Germanys.

In an interview with Time magazine published Sunday, Gorbachev reiterated his opposition to the idea of the new Germany in NATO. Asked if he anticipated a major disagreement with Bush on the subject, Gorbachev replied: "I wouldn't say I expect a major disagreement. I'd state for a fact that there will be one."

Bush was interviewed by Soviet television correspondent Valentin Zorin in the White House family dining room Thursday.

In his interview with Soviet television, Bush described Gorbachav as "a man that I can talk to" but also said disagreements will be inevitable.

"He may be mad at me over some things because we do have some differences," Bush said.

But he described the tack he will take with the Soviet leader this way: "I've got grandchildren and he's got family, and we can talk about it as human beings. Hey, what are we going to do to make things a little safer? If we argue, we'll do it pleasantly. He's a tough guy.

"Listen," Bush continued, "I've been around him enough to know that he drives his point home. Well, I can do the same thing. And I think it's important that I level with him — here's what's in my heart, here's our policy."

STARS: Annual crowd's a quiet one

(From 1A)

In a setting so remote that rattlesnakes and mountain lions outnumber house pets, the dude ranch has been turned into a high-tech enclave, with elaborate telescopes, a nationwide computer link and a satellite weather station.

Vermont and California star parties draw considerably larger crowds, but each is geared toward retailers and manufacturers, said Steve Goldberg, a Houston software designer and this year's star party chairman. The Texas gathering is for the observer.

The crowd is a quiet one. Folks in Fort Davis enjoy the star party because it means money for stores and no trouble for police, said town resident Bob Dillard.

Vendors sell their wares — star charts, books and telescope equipment and accessories. And there are speeches by experts in the field.

Even with the elbow-to-elbow electronics, the big thrills come from the heavens.

Monday morning, when a fireball was spotted shooting across the West Texas sky, the crowd cheered.

"That's what TSP is all about," Goldberg said. "We're here to observe."

White lights affect the eyes by constricting the pupils, making viewing the dark impossible, Goldberg said. Instead, only lights with red filters are allowed. The frequency of red light, Goldberg said, doesn't affect the eyes.

To ensure best viewing conditions during this session, ranch windows were covered with foil paper so inside light wouldn't escape. Outdoor light switches were taped or their regular bulbs were replaced with red ones.

Observers set their own agendas. Some just look for fun. Others try to find objects set forth in established sighting programs, like the Herschel 400 or the Messier 110, to earn astronomy's equivalent of merit badges.

Using a personal computer and a phone tie-in with CompuServe, a national computer communications network, amateur astronomers from around the country who could not make it here were able to learn about what went on.

DAY: Summit at appropriate time

(From 1A)

"Perhaps in meeting just after Memorial Day, both of the heads of our governments will think about what war means, and what the legacy of war is, and that's primarily the loss of human life," said Mary Stout, president of the Vietnam Veterans of America. "In fact, it may be a very appropriate time for them to meet."

"We would wish our president and the world itself to come to a successful summit, as we have stood from our inception for peace in the world," Kraja said last week.

In Westwood, Mass., a town of 13,000 where 83 veterans of the American Revolutionary War are buried, Jim Sullivan, the city director of veterans' service, said "During World War II, both American and Russian soldiers fought for the same cause. Now after, gosh, almost 50 years, we are finally getting back to the point where, hopefully, we can all be friends again."

Local ceremonies scheduled

Staff Report

Ceremonies honoring America's war dead are scheduled for 6:30 p.m. today at Fairview Cemetery, 1400 N. Pecos.

John Hyde, judge of the 238th District Court, will deliver the keynote address.

The ceremonies are jointly sponsored by local veterans' groups.

its development has been neglected," he said.

"The only real development that has taken place on the lake ... was the initial development 25 years ago: six boat ramps and three comfort stations," said Pat McCrary, superintendent of the lake and adjacent Alibates National Monument.

Sarpalius has asked for $1 million in the 1991 budget for Lake Meredith, most of which would be used to make a geographical study and five-year development plan.

The plan would include new roads, a beach area, a visitors center for Alibates National Monument and possibly a new marina, Sarpalius said.

The lake and monument are visited by about 1.5 million people annually, McCrary said, most from within a 250-mile radius.

He said Sarpalius' measure recognizes "that there's a resource in the Panhandle that needs to be protected and developed for the future."

For 11,000 years, pre-Columbian Indians dug flint from the Alibates quarries to make projectile points, knives, scrapers and other tools.

"It is something to see when you stop and think that was the center point of trading centuries ago," Sarpalius said. "It's a real historical site, the only national monument we have in Texas."

McCrary said he hopes the national monument will one day have a walking trail and visitors center.

Deer 'breaks into' radio

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Deer have become such frequent visitors to this city that they inspire jokes. A broadcaster was making fun of the creatures on a morning talk show when one came crashing through the studio window.

The bleeding doe thrashed around the office and destroyed some computer equipment at station WXLP before collapsing Thursday. It was carried out on a stretcher for veterinary care.

News Director Katy Cole said announcers Ian Case and Jeff Roberts were discussing the antics of deer on their daily humor program, "Bulletins from the Boondocks," when the deer made its unfortunate entry.

"When the announcer mentioned the word deer, I heard a big crash," Ms. Cole said. "The deer just came from nowhere. I thought someone was breaking into the station."

Police and animal control officials heard the broadcast and rushed to the studio.

"It saw its reflection in the window and jumped through the window," said Phil Vroman of the Scott County Humane Society. "Once it got in, it couldn't find its way out."

The deer should recover from its wounds, Vroman said.

Bob Curtis of the Lee County (Fla.) Cooperative Extension Service inoculates a Jamaican coconut palm against lethal yellowing disease. The disease, which turns a tree's fronds a bright yellow, has been killing palms along Florida's Gulf coast since 1971.

Palm-killing disease battled along coast

By Brian Murphy

He knows the stalker's methods by heart.

"First the coconuts fall, then the fronds turn a bright yellow and soon the tree is dead," said Yingst, who has spent more than three years battling lethal yellowing disease for the Lee County Extension Service.

After wiping out thousands of palms in the Caribbean and southeastern Florida, the infestation is spreading into one of the last untouched regions for the majestic Jamaican Tall palm and other susceptible exotic species.

The insect-carried disease — moving inland from beaches — has agriculture experts fearing a recurrence of the palm die-offs in southern Florida in the 1970s. Tourism officials worry about a change in the tropical appeal of southeastern Florida.

"Lethal yellowing is sort of like a fire," said Yingst. "If left unchecked it will spread farther and farther. It could really rob this area of its special beauty."

Although lethal yellowing has been studied for nearly 100 years, there is no known cure. But recently tree inoculations and plantings of resistant palms have helped somewhat to contain the disease, caused by a cellular organism called mycoplasmas that live on the palm fronds' soft core.

Trees usually die within three to six months of showing the first symptoms of lethal yellowing.

The earliest known reference to a coconut tree disorder was made in 1834 on Grand Cayman Island. By the late 19th century, scientists were examining lethal yellowing in Jamaica, where the coconut crop was a valuable export.

Lethal yellowing jumped over to the Florida Keys in the 1950s and moved onto the mainland near Miami in 1971. Presently, the disease has claimed about 200,000 coconut palms and nearly 100,000 other species in Florida as far north as Jupiter, about 80 miles from Miami, according to the University of Florida.

In Texas, lethal yellowing has spread to date palms, creating concern in the date-growing regions of Arizona and California. Overseas, the disease ranges from West Africa across the Caribbean to Mexico's Yucatan peninsula.

As head of the Lee County lethal yellowing control effort, Yingst has organized groups of residents and landscapers to monitor its progress and inject healthy trees with a tetracycline-based antibiotic.

Arthritis sufferers can hurt less, keep active with right exercise

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arthritis hurts. Exercise can hurt, too. However, experts say, exercise can help many arthritics to hurt less and keep more active.

Most of the estimated 37 million Americans with some form of arthritis don't realize what a well-designed program could do for them, said Dr. Arthur I. Grayzel, senior vice president for medical affairs of the Arthritis Foundation in Atlanta.

"My own personal experience is that most people with arthritis would benefit from some exercise," he said. Only about 200,000 people take part in programs affiliated with the foundation.

Exercise, he said, can help an arthritis sufferer retain a maximum range of motion in his joints, so that he moves less stiffly and with less pain.

"The physician has to take the time to explain what's safe to do and what isn't safe to do," Grayzel said. "I'm not sure most people with arthritis really have the opportunity to get that sort of education."

Exercise, experts say, can keep an arthritis sufferer from a vicious downward cycle of pain that restricts motion, which keeps the victim from moving, which leads to the joint locking into position.

There are several types of potentially beneficial exercise, according to the foundation.

Range of motion exercises, such as stretching, help the body stay limber. Muscle-building, such as resistance work with light weights, develops strength around the arthritic joint, to control the joint's movement.

Activities of daily living — anything from walking to opening jars — also are forms of exercise.

And aerobic exercises help you to stay generally fit. The foundation recommends aquatics — workouts in the water. Floating will let you take the stress of gravity off your joints, and the effort of moving through the water can provide a whole-body resistance workout.

Grayzel recommends that a doctor or a therapist devise an exercise program, with an eye to keeping stress from damaging an already fragile joint.

Getting started is not necessarily easy for healthy people, and it can be even harder for arthritics. If you haven't exercised before, start slowly, the Arthritis Foundation recommends.

"Some I've worked with start with three minutes," said Kathleen Haralson, associate director of the Washington University Regional Arthritis Center in St. Louis.

By Mary MacVean

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are getting only a third to half the calcium they need, despite the "calcium craze" that sent people running to drugstores for pills to supplement their diets.

Much has been made of calcium in recent years because of osteoporosis, the weakening of the bones, generally with age, due to loss of calcium, declining levels of sex hormones, hereditary factors and other things.

Women generally become susceptible at menopause, men at a later age. The disease is estimated to be responsible for more than 1 million hip fractures each year.

A National Institutes of Health panel in 1984 recommended women consume a gram to 1½ grams a day of calcium. Now, there are dozens of supplements on the market, and manufacterers have enriched a variety of foods with calcium.

Still, there is no clear proof that calcium will prevent the debilitating disease.

"It remains a very controversial subject," said Bess Dawson-Hughes, an endocrinologist at the Calcium and Bone Metabolism Laboratory at Tufts University's Human Nutrition Research Center.

The NIH panel said calcium won't hurt and there is "a reasonable chance it will help. That message got twisted to, 'If you take a gram to a gram and half you won't get osteoporosis,'" she said.

Several long-term studies are under way, she said. But until the data is in, there are several variables, including whether calcium affects people differently at different ages and whether it affects different bones differently.

"Calcium appears to have a bright and exciting future in preventive medicine," and is being studied for connections to several diseases, Sheldon Saul Hendler wrote in "The Doctors' Vitamin and Mineral Encyclopedia."

But Americans get only a third to half the calcium they need for good health, according to Hendler.

Researchers from the University of Michigan last month presented a study showing that eating calcium-rich foods does not prevent osteoporosis. The researchers compared hand X-rays of men and women taken in 1963-65 and again in 1985.

"Do not eat dairy products to prevent osteoporosis. Their protein content can accelerate the loss of calcium from bones," Dr. Andrew Weil said in his book, "Natural Health, Natural Medicine." A better way to promote bone density is weight-resistance exercises, he said.

Calcium is needed to build strong bones and teeth and helps regulate nerve and muscle function, among other things. Severe deficiency can lead to abnormal heartbeat, dementia, muscle spasms and convulsions, Hendler writes.

Dairy products are the main source of calcium in the diet. For those who are lactose intolerant or for other reasons don't eat dairy products, calcium can be had from kale or collard greens, molasses, sesame seeds, salmon, broccoli, yogurt and tofu.

A cup of milk has 290 milligrams of calcium; four ounces of tofu contain 154 milligrams.

Young women on weight-reducing diets often stop eating dairy products, though skim milk is as good a provider of calcium as whole milk. Bone mass development is at its peak from ages 18 to 25, yet surveys show that at least a quarter of the women in this age group consume less than 300 milligrams a day of calcium.

While there appears to be no major risk in following the NIH panel's 1984 advice, Dawson-Hughes noted that if calcium is not effective, research time and money should be used another way.

Breasts can be rebuilt using thigh tissue

ATLANTA (AP) — Doctors are starting to use thigh tissue to rebuild breasts for women who underwent mastectomy due to breast cancer.

Silicone implants now are the most common form of breast reconstruction, followed by the transplant of skin, fat and muscle taken from the abdomen and buttocks.

But three Atlanta plastic surgeons say "thigh flaps" — or tissue taken from the thighs — also can be used.

Some women would prefer to have excess tissue removed from their thighs than from their abdomen or buttocks. Others might need to use the thigh tissue method, said L. Franklyn Elliott, one of the surgeons who reported on the new method earlier this year.

Some women may be unable to have their abdominal tissue used either because they don't have enough or because they have abdominal scars from previous surgery, Elliott said.

Colorado Democrat Josie Heath hopes to shake up U.S. Senate

By Steven K. Paulson

DENVER (AP) — Josie Heath says former President Reagan helped make her the woman she is today.

Those are strange words coming from a pro-choice Democrat who is running for the U.S. Senate with broad support from women's groups, a strong emphasis on the environment and a call for slashing the defense budget.

But Heath, whose only previous political experience was as a Boulder County commissioner, has been surprising a lot of people with her bid to replace conservative GOP Sen. William Armstrong, who is retiring.

"It's time for a different kind of politics" is a constant refrain from Heath. And, so far, her kind of politics seems to be having an impact.

AP Laserphoto

AT THE DEMOCRATIC precinct caucuses in April, Heath knocked out former state Democratic Party chairman Buie Seawell, who initially had been considered the favorite for the nomination.

Seawell dropped out after Heath finished first with 32 percent of the delegates, followed by Alamosa lawyer Carlos Lucero with 22 percent and his own 18 percent.

Heath did it again when she took 57 percent of the delegates in the Colorado Democratic county assemblies and now she's preparing for the party's June 8 state assembly and Aug. 14 primary. Lucero is fighting to halt her momentum and aiming for an upset victory in the primary.

Heath is attracting a lot of national attention, but even her supporters concede she will have a tough time in the general election.

Paul Talmey of Talmey-Drake Research & Strategy, a Colorado polling firm, said Rep. Hank Brown, the lone Republican running for Armstrong's seat, will be difficult to beat because he's a moderate Republican in a Republican state.

HEATH, 52, SAID her friends joke that she was "an overnight success 20 years in the making."

She said that as a Boulder County commissioner, she was on the receiving end of Reagan's budget cuts and it taught her to be resourceful. It also set the stage for a return to politics at the local level, she said. In fact, the only problem with Reaganism is that it didn't go far enough, she said.

"He said he wanted state and local government to take over some of the duties of the federal government, but he didn't give us the cash," Heath said. "He gave us half a loaf. He gave us the responsibility without the ability to pay for it."

Heath's candidacy has been especially attractive to women's groups. She has received $5,000 from the National Organization for Women and $40,000 from EMILY's List, an organization that believes "Early Money Is Like Yeast" — it makes the dough rise.

Sharon Rodine, president of the National Women's Political Caucus in Washington, said the group was thrilled to have someone of Heath's caliber running for national office.

"She's certainly a rising star as far as women on the national scene," Rodine said.

Rodine said Heath's appeal with voters comes partly because issues that matter to her and that once were seen as women's issues now are national issues. These include child care, family medical leave, reproductive freedom, pay equity and the plight of the homeless, Rodine said.

ANOTHER THING Heath has going for her is a lot of moxie, her supporters say.

"When she gets an idea, the only question is how to do it," said Ron Stewart, who served with Heath on the Boulder County Commission. "She's already decided it's going to get done."

Heath has called for shutting down the government's Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant near Denver and converting it into a toxic waste research facility. She says Congress has ignored the environment and that needs to be changed. But closing Rocky Flats involves a facility that employs 5,800 people.

Heath says she would support cutting the defense budget in half over the next decade, starting with a 10 percent cut in 1991. She would earmark half the savings for deficit reduction and the rest for health care and education.

She wants a limit on congressional terms, saying senators have gotten too cozy on the banks of the Potomac and forgotten why people sent them there. She says congressional races have gotten too expensive and wants limits on campaign spending.

Graduation sets adult challenges

Within the next few days, the stirring notes of "Pomp and Circumstance" will be wafting across campuses in Midland County and elsewhere as graduating seniors, clad in flowing gowns and mortarboards, participate in that traditional right of passage from the rigors of secondary education to the adult world.

While the graduation ceremony has long been construed to signify the end of an era in the lives of young people, there is unavoidable poignancy to the fact that the act of bestowing diplomas on the young men and women is called "commencement" — a beginning. Graduation is an end in one regard, but in the closing of one door, another is opened.

There is understandable pride on the part of both students and parents, but there also is a degree of uncertainty on the part of both.

For 13 long years in most instances, when one adds a year of kindergarten to the educational pathway, the young people have operated in the confines of a structured environment. They have been introduced to the many wonders available to them through education and, hopefully, many of them have been inspired to seek further knowledge. As the seniors end this phase of their education, they must recognize that this end truly marks a fascinating but demanding beginning.

Immediately after graduation they will be making most of their own decisions independent of their parents, and there is understandable concern on the part of the adults proudly watching the commencement exercise — teachers as well as parents — that the young people are adequately prepared for life out from under the wing of their parents. Most will be watching commencement for subtle indications that they truly are ready to take on the responsibility for their own actions.

Graduation is an important step, but the challenges of life that will confront the young people for the rest of their lives actually begin during the ceremony. It really is commencement.

Memorial Day time to recall sacrifices

Today's Memorial Day observance comes at a time when the United States and the Soviet Union are beginning to talk about even deeper arms reductions and nations in Eastern Europe are demanding even more liberty from their governments. Democracy is blooming and the outlook for peace is good.

Yet the road to this moment in time — however false or fleeting the peace may be — was bought and paid for dearly by thousands of Americans who answered the call to defend liberty's name, and spilled their blood so this great nation might "long endure."

The sacrifice of all those who have fought the battles and suffered the pain should not be forgotten on this day of leisure which gives Americans a three-day weekend. That extra day of rest and fun was expensive, yet those who were called gave of themselves unselfishly.

Those of us in the United States have inherited a great trust that we, too, must be willing to defend in the future.

As Ashley Montagu once noted of liberty, "To be free of bondage or restraint, to live under a government based on the consent of the citizens, these are basic among all freedoms ... and this is the reason why a democracy is from every possible humane point of view the best form of government ... What so many human beings in the modern world have failed to understand is that freedom is the greatest of all trusts."

ANOTHER VIEW

Bush understands Nicaraguan crisis

While Nicaragua "burns," Congress and the administration haggle over aid desperately needed to stave off an unraveling of the U.S.-backed Violeta Chomorro government.

Organization of American States efforts at peaceful resettlement of 14,000 contras are stalled for lack of fuel, communications and a dwindling food supply. This is blamed on a general strike, now winding down after Chomorro promised massive pay increases.

Bush asked Congress for $300 million for Nicaragua, but Democrats and conservative Republicans attached so many domestic spending amendments to the bill that Bush threatens a veto. He also denied a Chomorro request for a $40 million loan because Nicaragua has no visible way of paying it back.

Bush now has ordered that $1 million to $1.5 million be taken from aid programs for other countries and sent immediately to provide food for the contra camps.

This type of "fulfilling" is not satisfactory. Bush appears to understand the critical situation in Nicaragua better than the Congress.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, May 28, the 148th day of 1990. There are 217 days left in the year. This is Memorial Day.

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on May 28, 1940, during World War II, the Belgian army surrendered to invading German forces.

On this date:

In 1533, England's Archbishop of Canterbury declared the marriage of King Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn valid.

In 1863, the first black regiment from the North left Boston to fight in the Civil War.

In 1934, the Dionne Quintuplets — Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne — were born to Elzire Dionne in Callender, Ontario, Canada.

In 1957, the National League gave its approval for the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants baseball teams to move to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Vestiges of Noriega remain in Panama

WASHINGTON — Jorge H. Correa was the kind of guy who rose to the top under the regime of Panama's Manuel Noriega. As the officer in charge of Noriega's Modelo jail, he reportedly freed drug traffickers for a price. Correa got caught (a faux pas even in the most corrupt of countries) and was exiled briefly to Bolivia.

Anderson

But unlike Noriega, Correa is a free man today. In fact, he is a ranking major in Panama's new police force, the "public force." He and other Noriega cronies in that police force survived the U.S. invasion and are rising to the top again.

Sources in Panama tell us that the public force is dominated by members of Noriega's notoriously corrupt Panama Defense Force and that the new government of Guillermo Endara is making little effort to screen out the bad apples.

We investigated several cases and found that Endara isn't picky enough about who gets a gun and a badge these days.

Within the highest ranks of the new public force sit some of the most powerful elements of Noriega's PDF. Noriega's former chief of police, chief of special operations and chief of U.S.-Panamanian joint military operations are all ranking colonels in the new force. In all, some 14,000 PDF members are now gainfully employed as security police for the Endara government.

After the U.S. invasion in December 1989, Col. Roberto Armijo was promptly installed as the head of the new public force. He is believed to be the officer who tipped off Noriega to a coup attempt last October and allowed Noriega to escape the clutches of the mutineers. A huge public outcry followed Armijo's appointment to head the public force and he was dismissed.

In another case, 13 former PDF members involved in the holding of American hostages at the Marriott hotel during the invasion later turned up in the ranks of the new public force. The 13 were eventually weeded out, but evidence we came across shows that they represent only the tip of the iceberg.

Apparently all a recruit must do to get into the force is express anti-Noriega sentiments. But sources close to the U.S. Southern Command in Panama told our associate Dean Boyd that while the recruits may now be conveniently anti-Noriega, "most are still committed to his cause — corruption."

It other words, it doesn't matter who is at the top as long as the same minions are still getting a piece of the action.

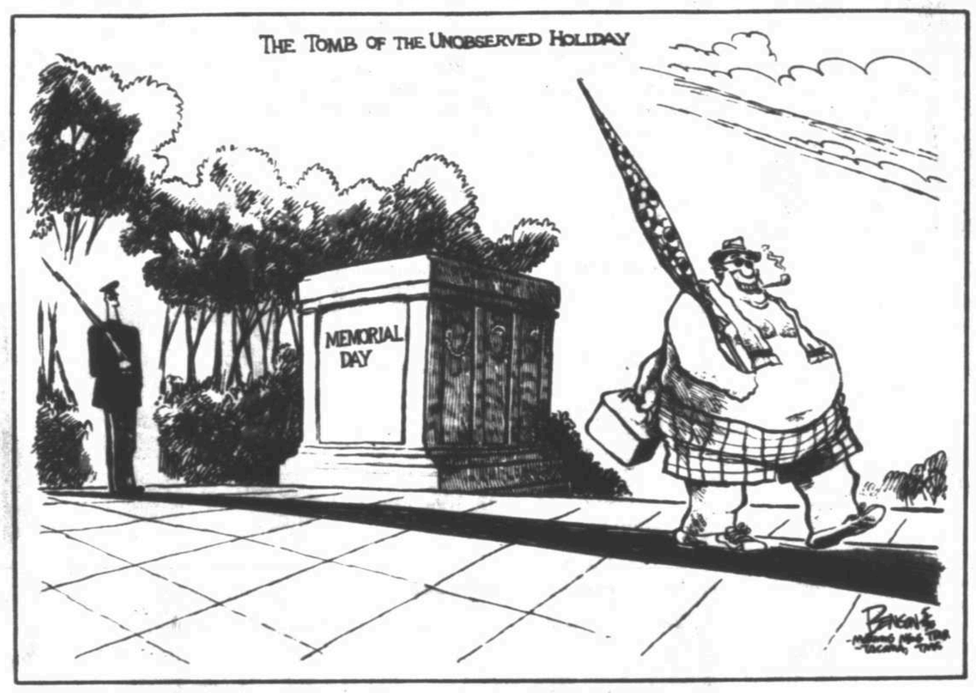

Recent incidents in Panama reveal how unsettled the country is in spite of U.S. claims that the invasion has set Panama on a new track.

Panamanian special prosecutor Rodrigo Miranda was fired when he implied that high-ranking members of the public force were involved in the kidnapping and death of a 3-year-old boy — the grandson of a former PDF colonel who was thought to have looted banks on the day of the invasion.

Miranda claims he got his information from sources in the U.S. Southern Command, but Southern Command officials are now keeping a tight lip about the case.

This scandal, and partisan rivalry, help to keep Endara off balance and keep rumors of a coup constantly in circulation. The rumors climaxed May 1 while Endara was in the United States and his presidential guard got involved in a skirmish at the palace. The government later claimed there was no coup attempt — just a training exercise for the guards. But so far no one has adequately explained why Endara's beloved godson was killed in that exercise.

CHARLEY REESE

Exercising judgment is not censorship

There's a hullabaloo going on these days about censorship. In today's America, that's the equivalent of Arkansas farmers, standing neck deep in the flood, fretting about a drought. The legal limits of expression are today stretched to the far extremes. Virtually anything is legally sayable or showable or printable no matter how sexually or scatologically explicit. Family newspapers today print what I used to have to order in a plain brown wrapper.

Reese

In short, outfits like Waldenbooks and People for the American Way, who would have you believe a great veil of censorship is about to fall on America, are raising a false issue and since these people are not stupid, they must have a reason. I don't know what their motive is and won't speculate.

It will help clear the air, however, if we look at what censorship is and what censorship is not. Censorship is the ability to prevent publication or to punish after publication. The only institution in our country which has that power is government.

Obscenity, which isn't protected speech, has been so narrowly defined by the Supreme Court that stuff has to be bad enough to embarrass a Bangkok pimp to fit the definition. Thus government action is minimal.

Exercising judgment is not censorship. If my boss doesn't wish for a particular column to appear in his newspaper, it won't but that isn't censorship. It's his newspaper and my work product, produced on his time, his equipment and at his expense, belongs to him and must meet his standards.

It's not censorship because he has no power and makes no attempt to control what I might write or say on my own time at my own expense. Similarly the absence of a book on a library or bookstore shelf is not censorship. Everyone has shelf space and budget limits. Obviously, choices have to be made and these choices fall into the category of judgment, not censorship.

Let's suppose that I object to Waldenbooks selling Playboy magazines. Well, Waldenbooks has the right to sell Playboy and I have an equal right to object. I have a right to express my objection. I have a right to withhold my patronage. And I have a right to organize a boycott.

The boycott is a time-honored, constitutionally protected method of democratic expression. At any given time, boycotts are being promoted and directed at a variety of businesses and products for a variety of reasons. It's bizarre to argue, as People for the American Way appear to be doing, that boycotting Exxon for spilling oil is OK but boycotting a business for selling a publication you consider obnoxious is somehow an attack against the First Amendment.

The First Amendment guarantees freedom of expression. It does not guarantee public acceptance of expression. Nor does it guarantee commercial success of any particular form of expression. Playboy is a commercial enterprise, and whether I boycott a particular retail outlet or not, I havelo support any publication they don't like nor does it prevent them from trying to undermine its commercial success so long as they do it legally. That's the idea of a boycott. To hurt a business financially and thus induce its owners or managers to make changes. There is no difference, constitutionally, in boycotting grape farmers for not using union pickers and boycotting Waldenbooks for selling girlie mags or any other product you don't like.

Finally, it's not censorship if parents try, through their elected school officials, to influence choices made about books used in public education classes. That's called democracy. The First Amendment does not require citizens to accept the judgment of hired public servants even if they are teachers, librarians, or bureaucrats with a God complex.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Eyes of Texan's friends are upon him

There's something I've noticed about Texans who move away from their home state. They never lose their allegiance to their roots.

Grizzard

He was born in Texas. He got into the golf business as a club professional and wound up in Atlanta.

But Tommy had another interest besides golf.

"I'd been wanting to have my own little barbecue joint for years," he told me once.

So he got out of golf and found a rundown building in one of Atlanta's fashionable neighborhoods, renovated it, and opened Texas State Line Barbecue. He raised the Texas flag on the roof of the place he always referred to as "my little barbecue joint."

Texans and Southerners often argue about barbecue. Barbecue to Texans is beef. Barbecue to Southerners is pork.

Tommy had the good sense to serve it both ways. What I liked most about Texas State Line was the ribs, both beef and pork, the cold Lone Star longnecks and Tommy's juke box that had Ernest Tubb's immortal "Waltz Across Texas" on it.

Tommy had a rule: you couldn't wear a tie after 6 o'clock in the evening. If you did, Tommy would sneak up behind you with a pair of scissors and cut your tie in half.

He even did that to former Mayor Andy Young once. He did it to another customer who threatened to sue him.

"I just laughed at him," said Tommy. "I don't want nobody without a sense of humor in my little barbecue joint anyway."

From the first day he opened, Texas State Line brought them in by the droves. That was the reason that when Tommy's lease ran out, the owner of the building wanted to triple the price for renewal.

Tommy told the guy to stuff it up his snout and moved out. And opened up a new place a mile or so away, Texas Line Shack Barbecue.

Something happened to his flagpole and he couldn't raise his Texas flag on the roof. To Tommy, this was a serious problem.

He tried to find somebody to come over and repair the flagpole, but where do you find a flagpole repairman?

Tommy finally decided to try to do the job himself. He got a ladder and climbed onto the roof of Texas Line Shack Barbecue.

He slipped, fell off the roof and landed on his head in the parking lot. His injuries were severe.

He had to undergo emergency brain surgery to remove a blood clot. He nearly died.

But ol' ex-Texans don't go quietly. He's still in the hospital where he continues to undergo further treatment and rehabilitation.

The eyes of your friends are upon you, Goose. Get well and get out of there.

We'll have the Lone Star flag flying when you return, if I have to climb up there and do it myself.

I've been to Texas.

Ex-hostage Reed escapes to Cape

MALDEN, Mass. (AP) — Freed hostage Frank Reed's joyous reunion Sunday with his 91-year-old mother was tempered with an urgent plea for the speedy release of the six Americans still held captive.

"They aren't well," he implored after arriving at Boston's Logan International Airport. "They are sick. I promise you they are sick. Let us not forget them."

Reed, who has been undergoing medical tests at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, saw his mother for the first time in eight years in a tearful airport reunion before meeting reporters.

"He said to me, 'You're a great mother.' We shed tears of joy," said Leota Sprague, who was too weak to join her son earlier. "I say rejoice, give thanks."

The Reed family, including his wife, Fahima, and 9-year-old son, Tarek, traveled by motorcade to his daughter's house in this suburb just north of Boston, where cheering neighbors and 100 yellow ribbons awaited the hometown celebrity. The suburb of 56,000 planned a parade for Reed on Tuesday.

Reed, 57, was released April 30 after 44 months in captivity in Lebanon. He was home for a brief Memorial Day break but was scheduled to return Wednesday to the Malcolm Grow Medical Center at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland.

Reed said doctors were trying to do some "medical sleuthing" to find out why he is so anemic.

"We're trying to do some things to verify the contusions and results of the beatings I had for trying to escape twice, not really being left alone until a few months ago," Reed said. "Despite it all, they say my heart's fine, my lungs are fine, my liver's fine."

Reed also spoke out on behalf of the other hostages he said were in ill health. His comments contradicted those he made at a Washington news conference May 6, when he told reporters the American hostages "look physically wonderful."

"Terry Anderson is not well," he said of the longest held of the hostages. Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, is in his sixth year of captivity.

"Thomas Sutherland is not well," added Reed, who last saw the hostages more than a year ago. "And I told the people in Washington that they are not well. We must do something. We must get the other hostages free somehow."

"This weekend we are memorializing the dead that fought for our country," said Reed, who was flanked by family members at the airport news conference. "Let us hope that one day we don't have to have a day to memorialize the hostages that are dead or will die."

The other Americans still held hostage are Joseph James Cicippio, 59, who was acting comptroller at the American University in Beirut; Edward Austin Tracy, 59, a west Beirut resident; Alann Steen, 51, a communications instructor at Beirut University College, and Jesse Jonathan Turner, 42, a professor of mathematics and computer science at Beirut University College.

'Bozo' shoots, injures woman

WELLINGTON, Fla. (AP) — A person wearing a Bozo costume and bearing flowers and balloons shot a woman in the face Saturday when she opened her front door.

The suspect — with a costume that included red hair, an orange nose and white gloves — sped out of the exclusive Palm Beach County development in a white car without a license plate, police said.

The victim, 40-year-old Marlene Warren, was in critical condition on a respirator at Palms West Hospital Saturday night.

Investigators said they had some leads, but none solid enough to determine a motive or suspects. They said it appeared that Mrs. Warren was the target. Her son and some friends were home and saw the shooting about 11 a.m.

Mrs. Warren opened the door for the clown, investigators said, and took the flowers and balloons without saying anything.

'One big party' cruise ship runs aground

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A luxury liner with 1,300 people aboard lost power and ran aground Sunday, but instead of triggering panic, it was a chance to "party hardy a little longer," passengers said.

Nobody was in danger, the Coast Guard reported, and passengers on the 642-foot Regent Star said they were enjoying free champagne cocktails supplied by the crew.

Initial attempts to free the ship with tugboats failed and the Coast Guard said another attempt would have to wait until high tide, about 2 p.m. Monday.

The tugs were going to try at high tide after midnight Sunday, but Lt. James Weakley said the Coast Guard felt "it would be better to try it in daylight" for safety reasons.

The shipping company, Regency Shipping, must pay for the operation, but the Coast Guard will supervise, he said.

A small electrical fire in a switchboard apparently caused the power failure around 1 a.m. on what was to be the last day of a seven-day trip from Montego Bay, Jamaica, to Philadelphia. The Regent Star drifted into a sandbar 22 miles north of Cape May in the Delaware Bay separating Delaware and New Jersey, according to Petty Officer John Brazell, a Coast Guard spokesman.

"The lights went out in the disco, everybody was singing 'Hot, hot hot,'" Kathleen Hopkins, a reporter at the Elizabeth Daily Journal who was on board, said by phone.

Later, they sang Christmas carols and played an improvised version of "The Newlywed Game."

"People started chanting 'Drinks, drinks drinks,'" and free mimosas started flowing, Hopkins said. "Nobody's really scared, everybody is having a good time."

"I think it's fun, one big party," said Brian Forman, a computer consultant from Philadelphia. "The party is never going to end."

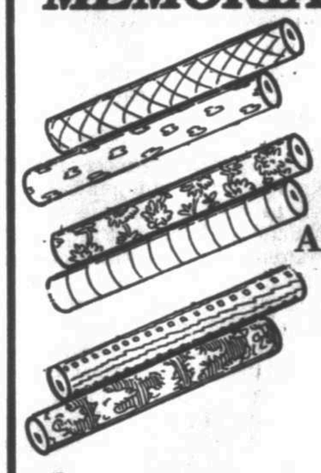

Chemically laden soil fuels grass fire

ROSAMOND, Calif. (AP) — Soil saturated with flammable and toxic chemicals caught fire around an abandoned chemical plant, prompting firefighters to evacuate residents of a sparsely populated desert area.

No injuries were reported during the emergency that began Saturday night and ended early Sunday, said Kern County Fire Capt. Kenneth Frasca.

Firefighters said the blaze started with a grass fire that swept toward the abandoned chemical plant, which contained barrels of cyanide, flammable chemicals, mercury and oxidizers.

Theater troupe denied visas

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven members of a Hong Kong theater troupe have been denied visas to enter the United States to stage a production marking the Tiananmen Square massacre.

The seven are stranded in England, where they recently completed five performances, according to Eleanor Yung, executive director of the Asian American Art Center.

A pro-Democracy movement in the People's Republic of China was crushed last June 4 when hundreds of demonstrators were killed in Beijing's Tiananmen Square by government troops.

"The reason they are giving for the denial is they are afraid all the members would not return to Hong Kong and would stay in United States," said Ms. Yung.

She noted that President Bush, who last week extended most-favored nation trading status to China over the objections of human rights activists, "seems to be very cautious in terms of how to deal with this democracy issue. For us to have a memorial performance commemorating Tiananmen is contrary to their agenda."

Medium revival fails

CITY OF INDUSTRY, Calif. (AP) — A man apparently died while visiting a spiritual medium, who then spent a week trying to revive him, authorities said.

Horn Kim Chhim, 50, suffered from a stomach ailment but did not believe in doctors, authorities said Saturday. His body was to undergo an autopsy Monday or Tuesday.

Although authorities were uncertain of the date of Chhim's death, it appeared that he was with the medium when he died, officials said. The medium then asked the family to allow him to keep the corpse in an attempt to restore the dead man's spirit.

N.Y. protest peaceful

ST. REGIS INDIAN RESERVATION, N.Y. (AP) — About 250 Mohawks staged a peaceful protest Sunday against the continued presence of police on this reservation.

The demonstration took place on the U.S. side of the 28,000-acre reservation, which covers parts of New York and the Canadian provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

U.S. and Canadian police moved onto the reservation May 1 after two Mohawk men were shot dead in a feud between pro- and anti-gambling factions.

Guard seizes vessel

HALF MOON BAY, Calif. (AP) — The Coast Guard seized a 90-foot fishing vessel Saturday, searched it for drugs and arrested 12 people after a group was spotted throwing something off a nearby bridge, authorities said.

No illegal drugs were found on the trawler, but the Coast Guard said in a statement it seized the vessel and towed it 50 miles north to San Francisco Bay.

Twelve men, seven on shore and five on the boat, were arrested.

'Rolling thunder' rally targets Laos, Soviets for MIA inaction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of motorcycle enthusiasts staged a "rolling thunder" rally Sunday past the White House and the Soviet and Laotian embassies to protest the handling of America's missing in action from the Vietnam War.

"The effort is to keep alive before the public and the media an issue the White House is trying to lay to rest," said Ted Sampley of Kinston, N.C., one of the organizers.

National Park Police estimated that 15,000 people took part in the rally and an associated "Rock for Freedom" concert and demonstration held near the Lincoln and Vietnam Memorials.

Thousands of cyclists gathered shortly before noon at the Pentagon before motoring past the White House along a police-approved route.

Police rejected a request for a permit for the cyclists to motor en masse past the Soviet and Laotian embassies, claiming it would tie up traffic, according to the event's organizers.

Nonetheless, groups of five to 20 cyclists at a time rumbled in ad hoc "thunder alley runs" throughout the afternoon in front of the embassies, where organizers handed out patches with skulls and crossbones to riders as they passed.

"The authorities have done everything in their power to interfere with this thing," said Sampley, who chairs a group called the National Steering Committee for American War Veterans. "The State Department did not want us over at the Laotian Embassy."

Town's saints must accept 'Baldo's ways

By Kelly P. Kissel

JESSUP, Pa. (AP) — The only thing certain about the annual Memorial Day weekend Race of the Saints is that the 800-pound statue of St. Ubaldo crosses the finish line first.

Beyond that, there are debates about the rules, about which team really is the fastest and about why St. Ubaldo is celebrated every May.

"Symbolically, whenever we have the race, it's always 'Baldo first," said Ron Tomko of the Society of St. Anthony.

This northeastern Pennsylvania town of 5,000 people was settled by natives of Gubbio, Italy, which claims Ubaldo as its patron saint. In most years since 1911, teams from the societies of Saints George and Anthony challenged members of St. Ubaldo to a Race of the Saints, with each team carrying an 800-pound statue of their saint atop a platform through the 1½-mile course.

To honor him, St. Ubaldo always goes first and the rules make it easy for him to stay out front: each team starts 63 feet apart and there is no passing.

The truth, according to Tomko, is that St. Anthony would be the best in an un-rigged race, but across town, another group claims superiority.

"St. George has always had the strongest team in the race, at least for the last 10 years," said Mario Mariani, a captain of the St. George's team. "If you watch the race, you'll see the distance St. Anthony is behind."

The only team not claiming to be the fastest during Saturday's race was St. Ubaldo's, which was shorthanded and had to stray from the rules and borrow men from the other teams to help carry its statue.

The race is similar to one held the last 799 years in Gubbio on May 15, the eve of the real St. Ubaldo's Day, with teams carrying 1,200-pound statues over a longer, steeper course.

The feast is celebrated in Jessup every Memorial Day weekend.

There are several theories on why St. Ubaldo is honored. Most say Ubaldo rescued Gubbio by negotiating with a barbarian who was ravaging the Italian countryside or that Ubaldo was a philanthropist who spread his wealth among townspeople while accepting a life of poverty for himself.

Delbert Brew

Frontier Festival

Sallie Bush, right, takes careful aim at an axe-blade target with her one-shot musket.

ANDREWS — Take some buckskin breeches, a calico shirt, rough-soled shoes, a wide-brimmed hat, a black-powder muzzle-loader rifle, and you've got the makings for a modern-day backwoodsman to feel at home.

Chances are, whether he lives in town or country, he's got most all of the conveniences designed to spoil even the most sissified. Outwardly, in the work arena and at home, he's just another bloke. He's got an electric can-opener, refrigerator, microwave oven, color television set, car, telephone, electric or disposable razor and probably some sort of computer at home or at work.

But he goes far deeper — and further back — than that.

Today's mountain man — or in West Texas, plainsman — is part of a band of men and women who shed their daily cares and drop into the distant past — the late 1700s and early 1800s.

They pour measured grains of black powder down the barrel of their large-bore flintlock or percussion rifles, ram a seated ball down the barrel, lick a finger to gauge the wind, figure the windage, aim and fire.

"You shoot two bears to the right for the windage to carry your ball into the target" on windy days, said Henry "Two-Toe" Grinslade, an Andrews buckskinner, as he considered firing a lead ball into the distant silhouette of a bear at the primitive Wolf Camp Rendezvous.

The wind wasn't just whistling. It was blowing tree-bending hard.

Grinslade figured the Kentucky windage, fired, and looked for the dust to settle. He missed the bear.

"What I like about muzzle-loaders versus modern weapons," he said, "is this is how we came West. This is it."

All around him were men and women, some as big as bears and some as small as little old willow trees, many decked out in plainsman garb.

Their aim was to camp, cook out of pitched tents, do some shooting and knife- and tomahawk-throwing, and, generally "shoot the bull" while roughing it — sort of. Some drove to the camp in their air-conditioned motorized campers.

They talked a good tale.

"This is what the trappers and the early pioneers carried with them," Grinslade said of his muzzle-loader firearm, powder horn, and other stuff to make him feel like a backwoodsman out in West Texas.

"You go out there in black-powder hunting: You and the game and one bullet," said Grinslade. The buckskinners have mountain-man names, and he grinned when he told his name but didn't take off his shoes and socks to demonstrate his "Two-toe" name.

"It's not you and the game and a dozen bullets. You don't have a scope. You have a primitive open sight. Just one shot. It's you and the game. It's the 'best man wins,' and sometimes the game does."

Delbert "Dead-Eye" Brewster, who is about as big as a bear, is an art teacher who relishes the plainsman life — muzzle-loading, shooting, and knife- and hatchet-throwing. He takes in the whole works.

Brewster combines that lore with dreams of the volunteer army of the Republic of Texas. He's an honorary colonel in the "new" old Texas Army.

"The original Texas Army of 1835 was never disbanded when the Republic of Texas joined the United States" in 1846, Brewster reckoned. Today, the Army is mostly an educational group that focuses on history and heritage.

"To me, it's important to know where we came from, and it's impor-

Rattan

He died Saturday at a local hospital after a sudden illness.

Rattan was born Feb. 10, 1919, in Matador. He grew up in Matador and Lamesa. He served as a lieutenant in World War II with the 7th Cavalry in the South Pacific.

He married Mary Cook in Matador on June 20, 1947. The couple moved to Midland in 1958 and he joined Sears, Roebuck & Co. He worked in the jewelry depaartment until his retirement in 1982.

He was a member of the St. Paul's United Methodist Church, the Westside Lions Club, the Midland Gem and Mineral Club and Faceters Club.

Survivors include his wife Mary K. Rattan of Midland; two sons, Tom Rattan of Midland and Richard Rattan of Gardendale; one daughter Suzzan Nutting of Globe, Ariz.; six grandchildren, eight nieces and four nephews.

Juanita Levins

ANDREWS — Services for Juanita Levins, 61, mother of Midlander Keith Levins, are set for 10:30 a.m. Tuesday in the Singleton Funeral Home Chapel of the Chimes with the Revs. Jim Bennix of Klondike and Burt Hungerford of Andrews officiating. Burial will follow in Andrews Cemetery under the direction of Singleton Funeral Home.

Mrs. Levins died Sunday at a local hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was born Oct. 4, 1928, in Corsicana, where she married Hollis Levins on June 12, 1948.

She worked at Kirby West before retiring. An Andrews resident for 34 years, she moved from Levelland.

She was a member of Second Baptist Church.

Survivors include: her husband of Andrews; two sons, Randale H. Levins of Enterprise, Ala., and Keith A. Levins of Midland; her mother, Mrs. B.W. Long of Andrews; two brothers, Bill W. Long Jr. of Dawson and Charley R. Long of Wichita Falls; and four grandchildren.

Memorials should be directed to the Second Baptist Church building fund or the American Cancer Society.

Bonnie F. Lacy

Funeral services for Bonnie F. Lacy, 72, are set for 1 p.m. Wednesday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Glen McNerlin of the Assembly of Christ Church officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Lacy died Saturday in Humble.

Born Jan. 27, 1918, in Oklahoma City, she moved with her family to West Texas at an early age. She married Carroll Keaton in Roscoe in September 1933.

The couple lived in Big Spring, Monahans and several other West Texas communities before his death in 1951.

She married Jack Clayton Lacy in San Angelo in April 1953. Lacy was stationed at Goodfellow Air Force Base. The couple moved to Germany, then to Big Spring in 1955.

They moved to Midland in 1963. Lacy died in 1973.

Mrs. Lacy remained in Midland until 1988, when she moved to Lewisville. She attended the Assembly in Christ and Day Spring Church.

Survivors include: three sons, O.C. Keaton of El Paso, Buster Keaton of Bastrop and Jack Clayton Lacy Jr. of Lewisville; four daughters, Jeanett Good of Ephrata, Pa., Carrollene Lutz of Akron, Ohio, Joe Ann Murphy of Midland, and Cindy Binns of Lewisville; one brother, F.A. Barnes of Carlsbad, N.M.; one sister, Betty Jo Voight of Knox City; 23 grandchildren, 38 great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

tant to know where we are going," said Brewster, who enjoys talking about the pioneer life — from starting a fire from scratch to firing a black-powder rifle.

Butch "White Feather" Foreman not only likes to "rough it" out in the wild but makes muzzle-loader rifles in the spirit of the buckskinner.

"I've always liked history and old things," said Foreman, who obligingly removed his hat to show just why he got tabbed with the "White Feather" nickname.

By whatever name — mountain man, plainsman, buckskinner or Texas Army volunteer — the pioneer American backwoodsmen all camped out about the same.

"All the rendezvous, the primitive camps and stuff in the West, are basically the same," Foreman figured. "The costumes are different in the East, but the camps and the methods are all the same.'

Jerry Bob Taylor is a Baptist preacher, and a buckskinner, whose mountain-man name is "Circuit Rider."

"I like the mountain-man era — the old free trapper," said Taylor. "He wasn't tied to anybody. He just went and did on his own and sold his hides as he could."

Taylor, who dresses the part, savors the spirit of the days of the plainsmen, the fur-trappers, the days of the Lewis-and-Clark expedition, the development of the Western part of the United States.

And when Taylor is around at camp, especially on a Sunday morning, the mountain men and their women will do a bit of gospel singing, and Circuit Rider will do some preaching.

Taylor enjoys the camaraderie, the fellowship and the trust, of other black-powder aficionados.

"Everybody is really honest and friendly," Taylor said, "and you just enjoy that. It's just a good time for grown-up people to play with their toys."

Klan rallies for ex-policeman

CENTURY, Fla. (AP) — Taunts and jeers were traded between spectators and a small group of Ku Klux Klan members protesting the firing of a Century police officer but Sunday's demonstration remained peaceful.

"We don't pay it any attention," said Cary Watkins, a black preacher who has lived in this quiet town of some 2,500 people all his life. "We get along very well — both black and white. ... They (Klan) came here for publicity. Well, they got it, now they can go. And good riddance."

Klan members picketed in 90-degree heat in front of the town hall for two hours in support of Tim Hall, who was fired from the Century Police Department two months ago after it became known he once belonged to the Klan in Texas.

No physical confrontations or arrests were reported at the demonstration about a half-mile south of the Alabama-Florida border, police said. More than 100 people showed up to watch the 15 Klan members.

"They fired Tim Hall on the grounds he was a member of the Klan at one time," James W. Farrands, Imperial Wizard of the KKK of Sanford, N.C., told reporters. "That (Klan membership) shouldn't matter. They made it a black-white issue."

Farrands said a police applicant's politics should not be a factor in whether he is hired.

"If he can fill out the form, pass the test, he should be hired," he said. "If he does something wrong, he should be fired."

Hall, 24, who was also fired from a volunteer job as a reserve deputy with the Tarrant County Sheriff's Department in Fort Worth, Texas, because of his KKK connection, did not appear at Sunday's rally.

Police Chief Lonnie Lashley said Hall, who served only a week on the force before he was fired, failed to mention his Klan connection when he was hired.

Galveston leader last in election

GALVESTON (AP) — Mayor Pro Tem Pat Hartnett ran last in a field of four, losing a bid for a second term on the Galveston City Council, but said his unpopularity with black voters had little to do with the results.

Hartnett, whose statements advocating a police crackdown in a predominantly black section of the city landed him in hot water with black leaders, said he thought the controversy had little effect on Saturday's election.

William "Bill" Clayton, 62, former president of Texas A&M University-Galveston, and Mel Rourke, 50, a private investigator, won the two at-large, 3-year council terms up for grabs.

Trinity River begins to drop, in places

HOUSTON (AP) — The rain-swollen Trinity River has crested downstream and authorities Sunday continued to reduce releases from Lake Livingston Dam, but officials say it could be another month before the flood waters recede from low-lying rural areas.

"I think most of them probably have seen the worst of it," said Don Stovall, assistant manager for the Lake Livingston Project for the Trinity River Authority. "The Liberty gauge seems like it has crested out and it's dropped a little."

But Liberty Mayor Scott Parker said residents realize the flooding is far from over.

"We believe the water will be staying high in the backwater areas for more than a month," Parker said.

Farther north, some residents were able to return to their homes over the weekend, while others waited for waters to recede.

"Everything is getting to be in reasonably good shape here," said Livingston Fire Chief Corky Cochran. "The waters are receding and a high percentage of people are starting to get back in their homes."

"Our command post is now disbanded," said Cindy Cardwell, dispatcher at the Polk County Sheriff's office. "The conditions are improving and the waters are coming off the closed roads and some people have been able to get back into their homes."

Residents of Camilla Twin Harbors were able to survey damages at their homes near Lake Livingston Dam, but power has yet to be restored to the area.

"They started letting them back in Thursday afternoon," said a woman who would identify herself only as Jane at the 3278 Grocery & Marina in Camilla. "They've had mixed emotions: Yes, you're happy to go back home, but then you're saddened by all the damages."

Many of the residents return to the marina campgrounds each night where they have been staying in tents and trailers with as many pieces of furniture and appliances they could salvage before waters began to rise more than two weeks ago.

"One woman said a water moccasin tried to get in their trailer and was hanging in the door dead when they arrived," Jane said. "It's unusual. But this is Texas. What do you expect?"

To the south at Trinity, Dean Chapman, owner of Chapman's Grocery, said water is still high in Deep River Plantation.

"It's still 3-foot deep," said Chapman, who has been living at his store where some six families are camping outside.

Since 8 a.m. Saturday, the TRA had dropped the releases to 59,500 cubic feet per second — down significantly from the May 17 record-setting 100,800 cfs.

Texas officials estimate that about 10,000 people statewide were forced from their homes by spring storms and flooding, and 46 counties were declared eligible for federal disaster assistance.

'There's a little less water showing in some areas than it was. But there are still quite a few places where there's high water.'

Ship captains face fines, imprisonment

HOUSTON (AP) — The captain and two crew members of the Panamanian freighter Seta, which exploded May 11 in the Houston Ship Channel, may have caused the blast by illegally dumping hazardous chemicals, federal authorities said.

Goran Bacic, the ship's captain, and Klause Eheler, the port captain, were charged with felony violation of the Clean Water Act, which carries up to a $50,000 fine and 3 years in prison, officials said.

Federal authorities think residue from chemicals illegally dumped into the ship channel may have been ignited by a spark from a welding torch on an adjacent Galveston ferry in dry dock.

Richards' consultants defend her 'Settlers Day' remarks

STATE

DALLAS (AP) — Consultants for Ann Richards' gubernatorial campaign on Sunday defended the Democratic candidate's issue-oriented speech at a county celebration, although one county official said she had agreed not to talk politics on stage.

Floyd County Chamber of Commerce President Kyle Smith said Ms. Richards reneged on an agreement to avoid making public political statements during the Old Settlers Day celebration Saturday in the Panhandle county seat of Floydada.

Republican candidate Clayton Williams told a story about buffalo herding more than a century ago in West Texas and described what a lousy football player he was in high school in Fort Stockton.

Ms. Richards, the state treasurer, took the stage after Williams in their first joint public appearance. "I worked hard on this speech. I didn't come here just to tell you all a bunch of stories," she said.

She then spoke to about 800 people on issues including education, rural health and prison overcrowding.

"Ann Richards kind of broke the rules on us," Kyle Smith said. "Her campaign had made it clear to us her speech wasn't going to be political. Her camp wanted to make sure Clayton understood that so they would have the same type of speech."

At a news conference after the two candidates' appearances, Williams said he had abided by the organizers' request.

'For all that we have been through, to be criticized on talking about the issues — I think that's ridiculous.'

— Glenn Smith, Richards' campaign consultant

"I came here with the understanding that we were to talk about pioneers today," he said. "A press conference is the proper time to ask questions above the roar of the crowd."

Glenn Smith, a consultant to the Richards campaign, denied Ms. Richards had broken any ground rules.

"They didn't tell us about any of that," he said. "They asked us not to make some wildly partisan attacks. For all that we have been through, to be criticized on talking about the issues — I think that's ridiculous."

Another of Ms. Richards' consultants, Monte Williams, also defended the Democratic candidate. He said that because the state's education crisis is "foremost on people's minds," he didn't think the speech was inappropriate. He also said he didn't think Ms. Richards had violated any rules.

"I can't really speak to what (Kyle Smith's) individual concerns are," Monte Williams said. "But I don't think it's inappropriate for a gubernatorial candidate to discuss education or the future of Texas."

Glenn Smith suggested Kyle Smith was bringing up the issue for political reasons.

"I would suggest that the chamber of commerce president has already made up his mind (in the race)," Glenn Smith said.

Lake Murvaul site of intense search for 2 missing Texas game wardens

CLAYTON (AP) — Two Texas Parks and Wildlife Department game wardens are believed to have drowned after their boat struck a stump in Lake Murvaul, authorities said.

More than 50 divers, including some from Louisiana and Lufkin, were searching in the Panola County lake late Sunday. The lake is located nearly 40 miles south of Longview.

Another game warden, Jerry McRae, said authorities are not holding much hope of finding the men alive because their boat was found in the lake along with one of the men's caps.

"Right now, we are thinking the worst," McRae told the Henderson Daily News. "We feel like they did not survive."

The two wardens were reported missing about 3 a.m. Sunday after they did not come home. The search began early Sunday morning and officials planned to continue searching throughout Sunday night.

The missing wardens' boat was found just after dawn Sunday, and it had a large dent on its side.

McRae said searchers found a tree stump with fresh paint on it, leading authorities to believe the boat may have hit a stump, throwing the men into the water.

Two life jackets were found in the boat, officials said.

The water is from 10 to 18 feet deep in the spot where the boat was found.

One woman told authorities she heard what sounded like a collision about 10 p.m. Saturday night. Then at 4:15 a.m. Sunday, four gunshots were heard.

A local law enforcement officer, who asked not to be identified, said he believes the shots were a call for help as the two men held onto a stump.

The search had to be suspended early Sunday afternoon when a tornado passed by the lake. The storm also knocked out power and phone lines in the area, hampering search efforts.

Rangers from around the state are helping with the search.

Traffic deaths stand at 20

AUSTIN (AP) — Four people died Saturday in two separate accidents in Comal County, as the Memorial Day weekend death toll in Texas rose to at least 20, the Department of Public Safety said Sunday.

In another Texas fatality, Fred D. Hernandez, 37, of Lubbock died after his vehicle overturned at 11 p.m. Saturday in Crosby County on an unnamed county road 1.8 miles northwest of Crosbyton.

The Associated Press began its count of holiday traffic fatalities at 6 p.m. Friday. The count will continue through midnight Monday.

A&M OK's drug policy

HOUSTON (AP) — The board of regents for the Texas A&M System has approved a policy that subjects students, faculty and staff members to drug testing if their performance leads others to suspect they are using or dealing drugs.

The plan covers all 63,000 students and 17,000 faculty and staff members at Texas A&M, Prairie View A&M, Texas A&M at Galveston, Texas A&I, Tarleton State, Laredo State and Corpus Christi State, plus research centers across the state.

Crash stuns crowd

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — A Texas stunt pilot died in the crash of his small jet as about 1,000 spectators at an air show watched the plane hit the ground during a "rollover" maneuver and burst into flames.

Macon County Coroner Hal Bentley said Albert Butler, 28, of Houston was killed in the crash at 6:13 p.m. Saturday. There were no other injuries, but Bentley said spectators at the annual Memorial Day air show were stunned by the fiery crash about 300 yards away.

Opposition takes lead in Burma

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — A pro-democracy opposition party whose leaders are being held by the military government took an early lead Sunday in Burma's first multiparty elections in 30 years.

Supporters of the National League for Democracy cheered and danced in the streets as the first official results were announced on state radio, giving the party victories in three of the 492 races for seats in the national legislature.

The election was called by the military government, which seized power in September 1988 after brutally crushing a nationwide pro-democracy uprising.

The military rulers have said they will hand over power to a civilian government. But during the past 20 months the government has imprisoned and intimidated political opponents.

Sunday's election proceeded without any reports of violence or military shows of force. However, the government imposed a curfew on the capital after 10 hours of voting and four hours of hand-counting ballots.

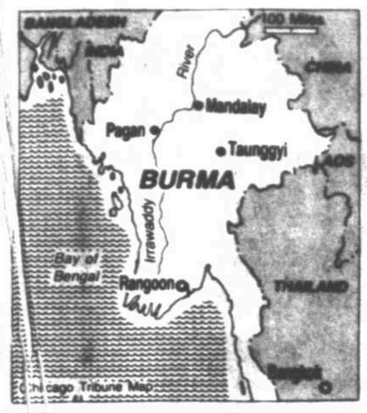

The early returns indicated the opposition League was winning by wide margins. In the capital's Seikan constituency, it took 60 percent of the vote to 35 percent for the pro-military National Unity Party, official Rangoon Radio said.

The League said it was certain it had won 16 victories in Rangoon's 61 constituencies. Preliminary indications from other major cities also suggested voters had rejected the pro-military party, it said.

Results from the countryside, home to about 70 percent of Burma's 41 million people, were less predictable. Some analysts said the pro-military party could make a strong showing there.

A final tally could take up to three weeks, officials said.

Initial reports from polling officials indicated the turnout in major cities ranged from 60 percent to 70 percent.

In interviews in the capital, older Burmese generally declined to say how they had voted, but younger voters uniformly said they had cast ballots for one of the pro-democracy opposition parties.

The military government has detained two leaders of the National League for Democracy. Aung San Suu Kyi, the highly popular daughter of independence hero Aung San, is under house arrest, and Tin Oo is in prison.

Former civilian Prime Minister Nu also is under house arrest.

Although the government rejected requests for foreign official observers at the polls, there was no sign of interference or intimidation at Rangoon voting stations visited by foreign correspondents.

Sources in other major cities also said there were no problems.

"The voting went smoothly and well all over the country," Rangoon Radio said.

"As far as I can see, it's very fair," said a young woman teacher as she emerged from a polling area.

6 die in shootout at Armenian train station

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet soldiers killed at least six people in a clash Sunday at a train station in Yerevan, the capital of the restive republic of Armenia. Ten government troopers and two other people were reported wounded.

The official Tass news agency said the violence broke out when militants opened fire on a group of soldiers returning from a patrol.

However, a spokesman for an Armenian group said the soldiers had started the clash by opening fire. He said 15 people were killed.

The attack was the latest violence in the tense Caucasus republic, but the first time the clashes spread to a public place in Yerevan.

Ten Interior Ministry soldiers were wounded in the shooting, three critically, and one civilian bystander was hospitalized with bullet wounds, Tass said.

The soldiers were attacked by about 15 armed men when they returned from escorting a passenger train to Kafan, 120 miles southeast of Yerevan, Tass said.

The southeastern corner of Armenia near Kafan has become one of the tensest areas in the dispute between Armenians and Azerbaijanis over control of the Nagorno-Karabakh region.

"The personnel, exercising their right to repulse an attack, returned fire," Tass said. "Five militants were killed and two were injured in the shootout. One of the injured soon died."

Tass provided no other details. Officials of the Interior Ministry in Yerevan said they were not authorized to release information.

Unrest continued throughout the day in Yerevan, as crowds of up to 50,000 people roamed the streets after the shooting incident, according to a duty officer at the Armenian National Movement in Yerevan who was contacted by telephone.

The spokesman, who declined to give his name, blamed soldiers for starting the incident by firing on a group of Armenians.

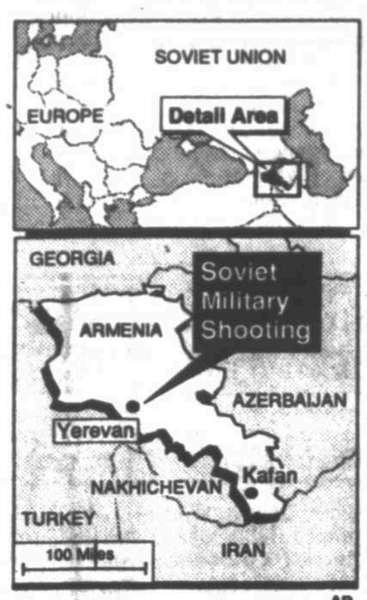

The Armenian spokesman put the death toll at 15, including one young woman. It was impossible to determine which version of events was correct.

Armenia has been locked in a bitter dispute for more than two years with Azerbaijan over control of Nagorno-Karabakh. That region is predominantly ethnic Armenian, but legally belongs to Azerbaijan.

Several hundred people have been killed and hundreds of thousands have been forced to flee their homes in more than two years of ethnic attacks and clashes between civilians and soldiers.

Soviet soldiers are stationed in both republics to quell violence, but militants on both sides see the troops as an occupying force.

The shootout came three days after militants fired on soldiers at military checkpoints and on a patrol in Nagorno-Karabakh.

Niagara Falls jet boat capsizes

QUEENSTON, Ontario (AP) — A controversial tour boat capsized Sunday in rapids a few hundred yards below Niagara Falls, throwing seven people into the cold waters of the Niagara River.

No one aboard the 23-foot jet boat was seriously hurt, according to Niagara Parks Police Constable Steve Kelly. Two people, including a Yugoslavian tourist, were treated at Greater Niagara General Hospital for hypothermia and released, a nursing supervisor said.

Three passengers on the Jet Boat International tour swam to safety on the U.S. side of the river below the bridge connecting Queenston and Lewiston, N.Y.

"We hit the (rapids) and we then came back again to have another go at it and that's when we went over," passenger John Swan said.

The company started its Niagara River tours two weeks ago despite warnings from U.S. and Canadian authorities it would not be safe.

Swan, president of a winery in nearby Niagara-on-the-Lake, said he didn't know what caused the accident.

Canadian and U.S. rescue teams and a tourist helicopter company helped rescue the seven people.

Romanian sets himself on fire near U.S. Mission

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — A Romanian set himself on fire Sunday in front of the U.S. Embassy, and doctors battled to save his life.

Hospital sources said the 31-year-old man, Miroi Dimitru, was in a critical condition with second- and third-degree burns over 35 percent of his body.

The official news agency MTI said the man's motives were not known.

But hospital sources said Dumitru told hospital staff members that he arrived Saturday.

The sources said he claimed that a Romanian-speaking man in a car kidnapped him earlier Sunday and tried to return him to Romania. Dimitru said he escaped when the car stopped at a gas station.

Liberian rebels move on capital

HARBEL, Liberia (AP) — Rebel troops Sunday fought artillery and mortar battles with government soldiers at a checkpoint that controls a main road to the capital only 35 miles away, witnesses said.

Residents said they heard artillery shells, mortars and machine-gun fire as rebels attacked the army checkpoint at the northern end of the world's largest rubber plantation, southeast of the town of Kakata.

The outcome of the fighting was unclear.

Capture of the checkpoint would leave the rebels in control of a main road that controls access to many parts of the country, including the capital of Monrovia to the southwest. It is also the only road leading to the Bong iron ore mine, one of the last major economic enterprises remaining in government hands.

Hundreds of civilians fled the weekend fighting and took refuge in and around the nearby town of Harbel. The town is located on the rubber plantation, which is owned by Bridgestone-Firestone Inc., a U.S. subsidiary of the Japanese Bridgestone company.

Plantation sources said 10,000 people have taken refugee here in the last two weeks. The plantation is Liberia's largest employer and 75,000 people, including employees and their dependents, live here.

The plantation is the world's largest and was expected to produce 103 million pounds of rubber this year.

A taxi driver from Kakata said soldiers were firing into the air, apparently to scare residents into fleeing.

The driver said rebels appeared to have decided to bypass the town and none were seen in Kakata Sunday morning.

There also were unconfirmed reports of shooting at a checkpoint at the plantation's western gate, 30 miles east of Monrovia. The gate is about 10 miles from a Voice of America transmission station.

The United States has considerable business interests in this West African nation founded by freed American slaves in 1847.

Rebels of the National Patriotic Front have been fighting for five months to topple President Samuel Doe, whom they accuse of corruption, nepotism, tribalism and gross violations of human rights.

International organizations and the U.S. Congress earlier condemned government forces, saying they had killed hundreds of civilians in their efforts to defeat the rebels.

Saturday, about 500 members of two tribes that have largely supported the rebels crowded into the local U.N. headquarters in Monrovia pleading for protection from attacks by government forces.

Last week, the rebels scored their largest victory capturing Buchanan, the country's main port.

Israeli gets 3 years for desecrating Jewish graves

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — A court Sunday sentenced a messianic Jew to three years in prison after he confessed to desecrating more than 300 Jewish graves in hopes Arabs would be blamed.

The spray-painting of the Jewish gravestones with anti-Israeli slogans received widespread publicity, coming just after the discovery of the desecration of a Jewish cemetery in Carpentras, France, on May 10.

In the Carpentras incident, a recently buried body was dug up and impaled on the pole of an umbrella. It provoked outrage in France.

The sentenced Israeli, 41-year-old David Goldner, said he regretted his action. He declared that at the time, he had hoped it would unite Jews against Arabs.

Also charged in the incident in this coastal city was Gershon Tannenbaum, 32, who also confessed. His sentencing has been put off pending a psychiatric examination.

Both men belong to a group that practices a mystical form of Judaism and hopes to hasten the arrival of the Messiah.

Judge Amirav Rand of Haifa Magistrates Court imposed the maximum sentence and told Goldner if he had wanted to wake up the Israeli people to perceived dangers from Arabs, 30 graves would have been enough.

Goldner refused to discuss his sentence when he left court, but told reporters: "A war is expected soon, and the Prophet Elijah will come."

According to the Scriptures, the prophet will signal the arrival of the Messiah.

Goldner was to be transferred today from jail to a permanent prison facility.

Arab leaders call summit to discuss Soviet Jewry

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Arab leaders who want to stop the emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel gathered Sunday to forge a united front on the issue, but divisions and rivalries were at work even before the emergency summit began.

The 21-member Arab league was also expected to criticize the United States for its support of Israel.

In a move certain to draw anger at the Arab gathering, Israel said Sunday it expected the number of Soviet immigrants to increase to 20,000 per month this summer. About 40,000 Soviet Jews have arrived so far this year.

The Arabs see the new wave of Jewish emigration, coupled with Israel's rejection of recent peace proposals, as a threat. They fear many Soviet Jews will settle in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, which the Palestinians proclaimed their homeland.

Israeli officials deny there are plans to settle the Soviet Jews in the occupied areas and force out the Palestinian inhabitants.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's aide, Avi Pazner, quoted Shamir as saying he hoped the summit meeting will "not pour fuel on to the fire, but to the contrary will also contribute to improving the atmosphere, maybe by agreeing to negotiations with Israel."

Shamir has repeatedly called for Arab nations to enter into direct talks with Israel.

The Baghdad summit will underscore old disputes that have blocked efforts to forge Arab unity.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Poles vote for councils

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poles voted Sunday for community councils nationwide and were expected to push forward the country's democratic revolution by ousting Communists from their last bastions of power.

The vote was the first fully free ballot since World War II and aims to reinstitute local governments that are entirely autonomous of Warsaw. That system was not allowed under four decades of Communist Party rule.

Unofficial results of the 52,000 individual races were expected today, but official results were not expected until Wednesday.

Solidarity Citizens Committees are expected to dominate local governments, but the vote will be a test of the country's budding independent political parties.

Hostages tied to Rushdie

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Shiite Moslem leader said Sunday at least one of four British hostages in Lebanon could be released if British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher deports writer Salman Rushdie for allegedly defaming Islam.

Hussein Musawi also said the May 19 massacre of seven Palestinian laborers by an Israeli gunman will hurt efforts to free the six American hostages in Lebanon.

Rushdie, an Indian-born naturalized Briton, was sentenced to death by Iran's revolutionary leader, the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, in February 1989 for allegedly blaspheming Islam in his novel, "The Satanic Verses."

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk Sunday launched a harsh attack on pro-apartheid whites, saying the country's leading right-wing movement had become "irresponsible, undemocratic and dangerous."

De Klerk's denunciation of the Conservative Party came after 50,000 right-wing whites rallied Saturday and vowed to resist de Klerk's plans to dismantle the nation's system of racial segregation.

The rally in the capital of Pretoria was the largest pro-apartheid demonstration since de Klerk came to power in August and began a series of reforms.

At the rally Saturday, the leader of the Conservatives, Andries Treurnicht, told his supporters that whites would fight moves to bring about a black government.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, MAY 28, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Concentrate on consolidating recent gains instead of trying to break new ground. Build better alliances in both your professional and personal circles. Although employment problems may still exist in October, your income should rise. In December, seek suggestions on money management from experts. A strong financial foundation is essential. A romance will provide many happy moments during the winter, but may not become permanent.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Olympic legend Jim Thorpe, slugger Kirk Gibson, biologist Barry Commoner, actress Sondra Locke.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A family problem could interfere with progress at work. Try to resolve things quickly and get on with the job at hand. Avoid borrowing or lending money. Read agreements carefully before signing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Watch your step financially. A practical approach is essential. Relatives will assist, but strings are attached. Permit someone close to you to take more initiative.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good time for journeys, education and long-range planning. Make an intelligent concession to someone you love. The key is to be sensitive to others' needs. Restrain an urge to gamble.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Show more affection to your loved ones. You have energy, initiative and stamina. Make your presence felt! An authority figure will be impressed. Use moderation around food and drink.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sort out fact from fiction. An unbiased opinion will shed new light on a personal dilemma. Short trips are useful to increase profits. Romance is featured later today. Plan a glamorous outing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take care of bookkeeping chores and pay the bills. A relative or neighbor confides a problem. Avoid making judgments, but exchange ideas. Distant places beckon. Travel is not the cure for your restlessness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A burst of creativity could produce immediate profits. Exploration in uncharted areas is indicated. Be specific when describing your plans to higher-ups. Imprint your own personal style.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may have too many irons in the fire. See what you can do to get better organized. Friendship and money may not mix; use caution. What you want is available; reach for it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Avoid rushing. Practical matters take precedence over strictly fun pursuits. Consult someone who recently confided in you. A favor could be repaid. Relax at home this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Adopt a conservative approach to handling finances. Keep your savings in the bank. Follow the orders of disciplined people. A personal relationship will improve if you employ more tact.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tend to any health problems. Good nutrition is vital. Your relatives are willing to assist with big jobs. Take them up on their offer. Teamwork accomplishes great things!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Past efforts bring new rewards. A member of the opposite sex with romantic notions may also have extravagant tastes. Be honest about your financial situation. See people as they really are.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡AQJ762 ◇J7 ♣AJ9
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Obviously, the choice lies between rebidding your six-card major or supporting partner's suit. We don't believe in suppressing a good six-card major even when holding fine support for partner's suit, so our vote goes to two hearts.

Q.2—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ76 ♡A965 ◇AJ63 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♡	?

What do you bid now?

A.—This hand has all the hallmarks of slam: superb trump support, all primes and no two fast losers in any suit. Flash partner the signal right away by cue-bidding three hearts.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K1095 ♡7 ◇K953 ♣QJ63
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Despite your low high-card count, it's a close decision between a pass or a game try of three diamonds. We can construct hands where game would be cold even though partner has a minimum, but most of them depend on a perfect fit. We would be conservative and pass, especially since we are not assured of an eight-card fit.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ63 ♡KQJ107 ◇8 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—You have too much playing strength not to insist on game. Jump to three hearts to see what reaction that gets from partner.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ63 ♡KQJ107 ◇8 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 NT	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—To make three no trump, you will have to find partner either with the ace of hearts or with two stoppers in each minor. Since partner could easily have three-card heart support on this auction, we would opt for four hearts, realizing that we might end up playing a 5-2 fit in one of the majors.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ ♡J32 ◇AQJ10873 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	2 ♠*	?

* — weak

What do you bid now?

A.—You are in slam territory even if partner does not have a diamond fit. To allow you to investigate sensibly, you must try to set the trump suit as soon as possible. Bid three diamonds and see how the auction develops.

Wagner, St. John tie knot after 8-year relationship

PACIFIC PALISADES, Calif. (AP) — Actress Jill St. John and actor Robert Wagner have been married after a lengthy relationship.

Miss St. John, whose films include "Diamonds are Forever," was previously married and divorced three times.

Wagner was married twice to the late actress Natalie Wood. On Nov. 29, 1981, Miss Wood accidentally slipped from the couple's yacht and drowned off Santa Catalina Island at the age of 43.

Wagner, 60, and Miss St. John, 49, have been together for eight years, said publicist Alan Nierob. They were married Saturday in a private ceremony at Wagner's home.

Katherine Wagner, 26, Wagner's daughter from his marriage to Marian Marshall, served as maid-of-honor. Natasha Gregson, 19, Miss Wood's daughter from her marriage to Richard Gregson, and Courtney Brooke Wagner, 16, daughter of Miss Wood and Wagner, were bridesmaids. Also attending were Wagner's mother and sister and Miss St. John's mother, Nierob said.

MONTECITO, Calif. (AP) — Priscilla Presley has put on the market her country French-style house in this southern California retreat northwest of Los Angeles. Asking price: $2.6 million.

The house, on a wooded 2-acre plot, was built in 1964 in Montecito's "Golden Quadrangle," one of the community's most exclusive neighborhoods. It has three bedrooms and three baths in about 2,600 square feet and a barn has been converted into a guest cottage.

Presley

Ms. Presley bought the property in 1981, eight years after her divorce from Elvis Presley and four years after his death, but has rarely spent time there, said Linda Fareed, who has the listing through Alexander Velto Real Estate.

"She's been so busy on 'Dallas' and doing other things," said Ms. Fareed.

Besides launching her own perfume line in March and serving as co-executive producer of the now canceled "Elvis" series on ABC-TV, she starred as Jenna Wade during the 1987-88 season of television's "Dallas."

ANNANDALE-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Chevy Chase has come a long way since his pratfall days at "Saturday Night Live" — he's received an honorary degree from his alma mater and given a commencement address.

Chase, a 1968 graduate of Bard College, was honored Saturday at the 700-student college 90 miles north of New York City.

Chase recalled that he appeared in his first movie at Bard, "and believe it or not, it began with me pratfalling over a suitcase."

He gave some parting words of tongue-in-cheek wisdom to the class of 1990:

"Avoid fatty foods. Avoid smoking, drugs, Bensonhurst, the Gaza Strip, bungi jumping, humorless people, bad music, fashion, weight training and hair care products.

"Oh, and one more thing," Chase added. "Never tell the truth. Embellish, patronize, pander, use hyperbole, braggadocio, mollify, but never actually tell the truth. ... Your job is to act. Keep the dream alive. Also, never call me."

Robert Wagner and Jill St. John were married Saturday in a private ceremony at his home in Pacific Palisades. The two have been romantically involved for more than eight years.

BOSTON (AP) — White House Chief of Staff John Sununu has received a commitment to education award and seven students won scholarships in honor of Christa C. McAuliffe, the teacher who died on the space shuttle Challenger.

Sununu was given the "I Touched the Future" award Saturday for his contributions and commitment to education in society, said Paul S. Weller, president of Framingham State College.

Lifetime Stolen Base Leaders

(Since 1898, when stolen bases began being scored the way they are today.)

Through May 26, 1990:

PLAYER, LEAGUE	TOTAL
Lou Brock NL	938
Rickey Henderson AL	892
Ty Cobb AL	892
Eddie Collins NL	743
Max Carey NL	738
Honus Wagner NL	703
Joe Morgan NL	689
Bert Campaneris AL	649
Maury Wills NL	586
Davey Lopes NL	557

Notes: Henderson is the only active player on the list. All players listed played their entire career in the league shown except Davey Lopes, who played 13 1/2 seasons in the NL and 2 1/2 seasons in the AL. Before 1898 no distinction was made between bases advanced on another player's hit or out and bases stolen in the modern sense. Billy Hamilton, who played from 1888 to 1901, scored 811 such bases before 1898 and had 126 modern stolen bases thereafter, for a total of 937 lifetime.

Senna wins GP

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Brazil's Ayrton Senna held off a late charge from Frenchman Jean Alesi on Sunday to win his third Monaco Grand Prix in record fashion.

Senna, driving a McLaren-Honda, finished 1.087 seconds ahead of Alesi's Tyrrell-Ford after building a margin of 26 seconds through 60 of the first 78 laps. Austrian Gerhard Berger, Senna's teammate, was third.

Senna, who started from the pole, averaged a record 85.83 mph for the race, which covered 161.3 miles. He was timed in 1 hour, 52 minutes, 46.982 seconds.

Dutchman flies to Indy victory

■ Arie Luyendyk blows past Bobby Rahal in the finals laps to take his first-ever Indy car race at the biggest event of the racing year, the Indianapolis 500.

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Arie Luyendyk, the man who didn't seem to belong up front, finished in front of everyone Sunday in the fastest Indianapolis 500 ever.

The 36-year-old Dutchman, on the threshold of stardom in Indy-car racing the past few years, overpowered former winner Bobby Rahal over the final 33 laps, pulling away at the end in a dazzling display of speed and consistency.

His average speed of 185.984 mph not only broke Rahal's record of 170.722 in 1986, it was also the fastest 500-mile Indy-car race ever, breaking the mark of 180.654 by Danny Sullivan at Michigan in 1988.

It was the first race at Indy run in less than three hours, Luyendyk needing just 2 hours, 41 minutes, 18.248 seconds to complete the 200 laps.

"I don't care if we were doing 60 miles per hour, we got first place and that's what counts," Luyendyk said.

Defending champion Emerson Fittipaldi, who dominated the first half of the race, finished third behind Rahal, 41.7 seconds behind the winner, after being slowed by two blistered tires. Al Unser Jr. was fourth, a lap down, followed another lap behind three-time winner Rick Mears and four-time winner A.J. Foyt, five laps down.

Luyendyk's first Indy-car victory of any kind came in his 76th race dating to 1984, making him the first to do that in the Indy 500 since Formula One star Graham Hill of England in 1966.

It was also the first time since Jimmy Clark of Scotland in 1965 and Hill the next year that foreign drivers have won America's greatest race in consecutive years.

Luyendyk, the 1985 rookie of the year when he finished seventh for his only previous top 10 Indy finish, was second in a road race at Portland, Ore., in 1988 in his best previous effort.

"I can't believe this is happening," the slim, long-haired Luyendyk said in Victory Lane.

It was the first front-row start in an oval race for Luyendyk, who outshone both record-setting pole-winner Fittipaldi and Mears, the other two front-row starters, as well as the rest of the 33-car field.

"The car was just working beautifully," Luyendyk said. "With 35, 30 laps to go, I turned it up and there was just nobody who could keep up with us. For me it wasn't a very hard race at all.

"I said if I had to win my first race,

Unheralded Angel keys 6-3 victory

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Alas, a win.

And after the ugly way things got started Sunday night, Midland's 6-3 victory over the Arkansas Travelers is worth preserving and cherishing for awhile.

The first official at bat didn't even come until the game was some 20 minutes old and two Travelers were out. Angel starter Kyle Abbott, who has struggled with his control recently, walked five men and hit another one in the tedious first. The first two who received free passes — lead-off hitter Charlie White and Joe Hall — were picked off first by Abbott.

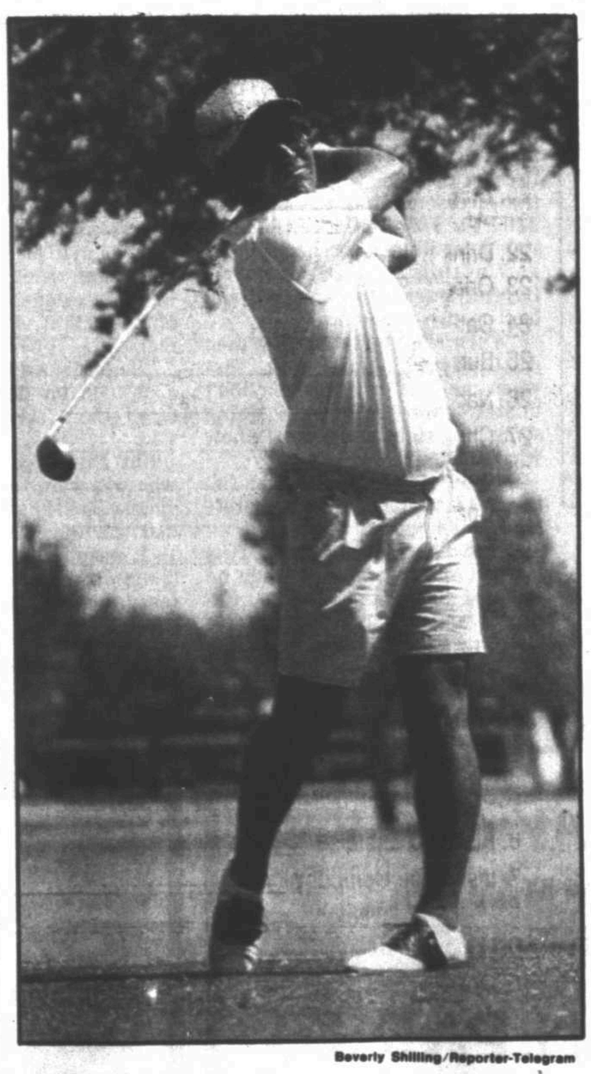

One run scored in the inning on no hits, no errors and three left on. Talk about a weird inning. Fortunately, things got better from that point.

Light-hitting Kevin Flora — hitting .204 entering the game as the No. 9 batter — smashed a two-run double in the seventh to allow the Angels to go ahead 5-3 and take the lead for good. Flora later scored to give the Angels their final run of the night.

With the score tied at three, Midland's Eddie Alfonso singled and Jeff Barns reached on a fielder's choice. With the count 3-1 on Flora, Angel manager Eddie Rodriguez called for a run-and-hit. Flora swung and missed, and both runners advanced, setting up the run-scoring two-bagger for Flora, the key point of the game.

Suns burst Blazer bubble

■ The Phoenix Suns cruised to a 12-point win over Portland Sunday to tie the NBA Western Conference finals series at 2-2.

Associated Press

PHOENIX — The Phoenix Suns are still mad and they're also even.

Kevin Johnson had 28 points and 17 assists and Phoenix's bench outscored Portland's 31-10 as the Suns beat the Trail Blazers 119-107 Sunday, tying their Western Conference championship series at 2-2.

The Suns lost the first two games of the best-of-7 series, 100-98 and 108-107, and they blew a 22-point lead in the second game.

"We're still mad at ourselves for the way we played in the first two games up in Portland," Johnson said. "The reason we lost those two was because we were not aggressive in the third quarter. We won big Friday night (123-89 in Game 3) because we kept the pressure on them the whole game. That's what we have to keep doing if we want to win this thing."

Phoenix is trying to become only the fifth team in NBA history to come back from a 2-0 deficit and win a seven-game playoff series. The last team to do it was the Trail Blazers, who beat Philadelphia in 1977 for their only title.

Game 5 is Tuesday night at Portland's Memorial Coliseum, where the Suns have lost 19 in a row since April 26, 1984.

Phoenix broke a 21-game losing skid at The Forum en route to beating the Los Angeles Lakers 4-1 in the previous round and won twice at Utah's Salt Palace to eliminate the Jazz 3-2 in the first round.

"We've proven we can win on the road in those tough places," Johnson said. "I really think we can go back to Portland and play well and win there. We didn't have the right attitude and demeanor the first two games. This time, I think we'll hold our ground. We need to play 48 minutes of good, aggressive basketball."

"We just have to keep after them," Suns coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "We're glad it's 2-2. It's a three-game series now and we got to take it one at a time."

Portland has lost both of its previous playoff series against

Shootin' Stars call 'playground' home

Permian Basin Shootin' Stars' head coach Doug Mello and general manager Joe Kuchinski hardly seemed to care that their semi-professional soccer team lost its home outdoor opener Sunday afternoon, 5-1 to the Lubbock Lazers.

Patterson

They were too embarassed. Too shamed. But then again, anyone who called Hogan Park their home soccer field would hide their head in shame.

The field just south of Angels Stadium — which, oddly enough, has also been receiving a bad rap for its poor playing condition of late — is a tangled, mangled mess of weeds, stickers, dirt and chuckholes which makes it a joke on which to play soccer.

To ask a semi-professional soccer team to host franchises from as far away as Tucson, Arizona and Albuquerque, N.M., at what amounts to no more than a rundown playground is an even bigger joke.

"I understand they had a problem finding a facility," Bowen said. "It's a shame the cities of Midland and Odessa won't support them. Lubbock backs us 100 percent. At least Midland is trying by giving them this."

"We're at least getting to use a field, thank you very much," Mello said with more than a touch of sarcasm. The Shootin' Stars officials don't feel as generous in handing out compliments as Bowen does.

"You're not going to get very many good comments out of me," Mello said. "What's the real shame is this could be a better facility if they'd just take care of it. We have to represent both Midland and Odessa and this is the field we get?"

Both Mello and Kuchinski are fully aware that football is Papa in West Texas, and they are fast becoming acquainted with the fact that soccer is the wicked neighborhood pit bull.

"They have excellent facilities in the school district," Kuchinski said. "But Little League football is more important."

Read a little sarcasm in that statement, too.

The Shootin' Stars entered into a tentative agreement with the Permian Basin Soccer Association last week which allowed the Stars to use the PBSA fields. After being turned down by school districts in both cities to have access to school fields, the club faced possible forfeiture of home games or disbanding the franchise.

"All we asked for was seven home games," Kuchinski said. "When push came to shove the PBSA really came through for us."

Neither Kuchinski or Mello could come up with a reason why officials for both the cities and school districts failed to work with them. Except maybe paranoia.

"They're paranoid of soccer," Kuchinski said.

Mello agreed, suggesting fear of the sport may be the problem.

One of the most difficult things to understand about the field is the presence of foot-tall weeds in the corners, making it difficult to see the soccer ball

Pistons try to stop Air show

Associated Press

NBA Playoffs

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan's one-man show must go on if Chicago hopes to even its Eastern Conference final series against Detroit at two games apiece.

But Bulls coach Phil Jackson is unsure whether Jordan can keep up the hectic pace.

"I'm sure they won't allow Michael to have as much freedom as he had," Jackson said Sunday, a day after Jordan scored 47 points in the Bulls' 107-102 victory over the Pistons. "They're going to make some changes and it'll be up to us now to adjust to whatever they try to do. I imagine we'll find double-team coverage on Michael."

During the regular season, Jordan averaged only 26 points against the Pistons, 33.6 against everybody else in the NBA. Jordan was held to 54 points as the Pistons won the first two games of the best-of-7 series.

Game 4 is set for Monday at Chicago Stadium before the series shifts to Detroit for Game 5 on Wednesday.

"We have to win this game, no doubt about it," Jackson said. "It's an even-up situation for us. We want to get this down to a three-game series."

Jordan's performance in the third game seemed to wake up some of his teammates. Scottie Pippen scored 29 points and had 11 rebounds as the Bulls finished with a 46-36 advantage on the boards, 21-12 at the offensive end. That's six more offensive rebounds than the Bulls had in the first two games.

Despite the victory, Jackson is still worried about the defending champions.

"That's going to be a problem, now," Jackson said. "The Pistons will come out fired up, filled with intensity. Detroit's a club that doesn't like to lose two in a row."

Jordan's success on Saturday came after the Bulls shelved their usual offense and moved Jordan to point guard.

Detroit coach Chuck Daly said the move, putting Jordan at the top of the key on the dribble, stretched out the Pistons' defense.

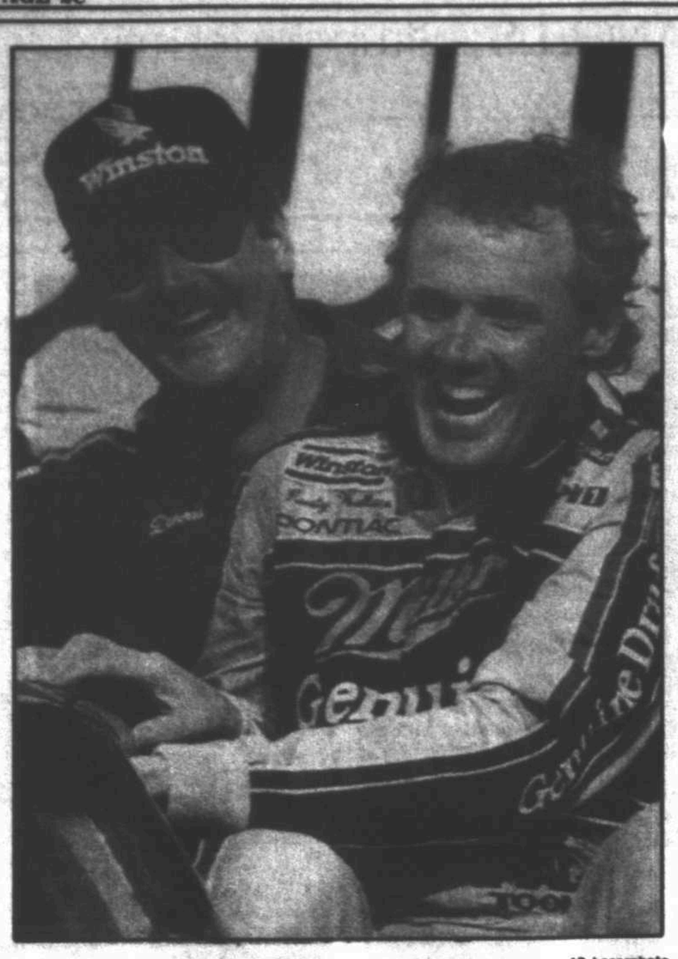

"It's a triangle offense," Daly said. "We'll have to evaluate it, then make some decision on what to do about it. But, we have to execute. That's the key. We made some mistakes yesterday."

Daly said there isn't too much the Pistons can do about Jordan. The Pistons will just try to shut down Jordan's teammates.

"If you watched the game closely, offensive rebounds were the key," Daly said. "If you give up 21 offensive rebounds, you're going to have a helluva time winning anywhere, home or away. We didn't do a good job on defensive rebounds, either. There's a fine line there."

Portland was the last team to come back from a 2-0 deficit and win a best-of-7 series, beating the Philadelphia 76ers in six games in the 1977 NBA Finals.

"This game is crucial for us. Crucial but not critical," Detroit's Isiah Thomas said. "If we don't win the game, it's 2-2. Then, it's a three-game series and two games are at our place. It's not a do or die game for us. It's is a go or die game for them."

NASCAR

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Rusty Wallace, breaking out of a season-long slump, beat Bill Elliott to the finish line by less than a second to win Sunday's Coca-Cola 600 stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Wallace, the defending Winston Cup points champion, won for the first time since last September, when he captured the Miller 400 at Richmond.

It didn't come easily for the St. Louis native, even though his No. 27 Pontiac led 306 of the race's 400 laps.

With five laps to go in stock car racing's longest race, the engine in Rick Wilson's Oldsmobile blew and dropped oil onto the track.

Wallace, who was about two car-lengths ahead of Elliott's Ford, nearly crashed into the wall between the third and fourth turns.

After the 11th and final caution period, Wallace outran Elliott to the checkered flag by .17 seconds. Elliott tried to take the inside line into the final turn but Wallace cut him off to claim the $151,000 winner's purse.

Wallace averaged 137.650 mph for the grueling 600-mile race, which took nearly 4½ hours to complete. He started the race in ninth position.

Pole winner Ken Schrader finished 11th after running into trouble with 50 laps to go. Until that point, he was challenging Wallace and Elliott for the lead.

Dale Earnhardt, the current Winston Cup points leader continued to experience bad luck in the Coca-Cola 600. He cut a rear tire on the 104th lap and hit the wall on Turn 2.

After major repairs to his Chevy Lumina, Earnhardt returned and ended up 30th, his lead in the points race reduced to 21 over Morgan Shepherd, who finished eighth. Earnhardt has 1,533 points, Shepherd 1,512.

Wallace, who led on five occasions, went to the front for good with 90 laps to go. Elliott, also shooting for his first victory of the season, stayed with Wallace as the leaders moved away from the trailing pack until the final caution reduced the race to a one-lap sprint.

French Open men's field unpredictable

PARIS (AP) — Will the real men please step forward?

When the French Open begins Monday, the women's battle lines will already be clearly defined — can Steffi Graf hold off Monica Seles?

But the men can't seem to produce a strong favorite, making it one of the most unpredictable French Opens in years.

"There are about 10 very good clay-court players right now," top-seed Stefan Edberg, who lost in the 1989 final to Michael Chang, said. "It's very open."

Edberg, a serve-and-volleyer who excels on fast surfaces, has not been impressive on clay this year. In the World Team Cup in Dusseldorf on Saturday, the Swede lost 6-1, 6-3, to unheralded Goran Prpic of Yugoslavia.

Boris Becker, the second seed, is another case in point. The three-time Wimbledon champion with the booming serve lost in Dusseldorf to Spain's Jordi Arrese.

"I think he'll go far at Roland Garros, but I don't see him winning," Edberg said of Becker. "He'll have a lot of trouble when he runs into the real clay-court specialists."

Those include third-seeded Andre Agassi, No. 4 Andres Gomez of Ecuador, No. 6 Emilio Sanchez of Spain, No. 7 Thomas Muster of Austria and No. 8 Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union.

But none of them has been able to dominate the clay-court circuit this spring.

Muster looked strong in winning the Italian Open, the main warmup before the French, but he has been bothered by an arm injury that could hamper his topspin groundstrokes.

"Everbody's been beating everbody," Gomez said. "Anybody could win this year."

The favorite would have been top-ranked Ivan Lendl, a three-time French Open champion. But he's skipping the tournament to train for Wimbledon. Mats Wilander, another three-time champion, is taking a break from tennis. And John McEnroe is injured.

The big question is the 18-year-old Chang, who won the title last year and became the youngest male winner of a Gand Slam tournament. Last December, he suffered a hip injury and has won just two of seven matches all year.

Agassi will be the top men's seed in action Monday, facing Canada's Martin Wostenholme on Court 2. Sanchez plays Swedish qualifier Niclas Kulti.

Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — This Indy 500 turned on tires.

The losers blamed them for blistering, bubbling and falling apart. The winners thought they worked just fine.

Tire troubles stalked third- and fourth-place finishers Emerson Fittipaldi and Al Unser Jr., but they had differing opinions about the problem.

Fittipaldi blamed Goodyear, the manufacturer which provides all tires for the race, while Unser said the race setup was the problem. After the race, Goodyear issued a statement addressing the problem, and noting that winner Arie Luyendyk set a track record and had no tire problems.

"When everybody blisters, then it's Goodyear," Unser said. "But when the first two finishers don't blister, then they were doing something right and I don't know what that was."

Luyendyk and second-place finisher Bobby Rahal had no problems at all.

Rahal, a former champion, first learned of tire concerns when he was told during a pit stop that Fittipaldi was having a problem. He later saw a line of blisters running down the right rear tire of Unser, his teammate.

"I radioed ahead," Rahal said. "I didn't want them to pop on him."

Michael Andretti had no problems, and said the race setup may have been a factor for some drivers.

"Just overworking the right rear because of your setup," he said. "There could be any number of reasons why inside your setup."

Luyendyk picked up a bubble late in the race, but there was no question what caused it, said Neil Micklewright, Luyendyk's team manager.

"He just stood on it trying to get a cushion on Rahal and he blistered them then," Micklewright said.

But Fittipaldi, the pole-sitter who was trying to defend his 1989 victory, said the only problem he had was the tires.

"The first was blisters," Fittipaldi said. "The second was the whole tread."

Luyendyk had no such problems and that may have been one of the keys to his victory.

Leo Mehl, director of racing for Goodyear, agreed.

"First of all, it's the warmest day of the month," he said. "Second, they've been running at record speeds."

May, practice month at Indy, was mostly cool, damp and overcast, with a temperature range of 54 to 77 degrees. Race day, however, was 71 degrees and the sun heated up the 2½-mile track.

Mehl said that throughout May, tire temperatures never exceeded 240 degrees. On Sunday, he said, drivers pushed their tires to the limit and temperatures cracked the 300-degree mark.

Quartet wins Camp Fire benefit tourney

Staff Report

Second place went to Joel McEndree, Jay Stanfield, Robert Plank and Kurt Brannon while third place went to James Haest, Thomas Smith, Marty Wallace, Bob Sidlowe and John Lackey.

SOCCER: Nowhere to play games

Only about 50 people showed up for what was not only the home and season opener but also the franchise's outdoor debut.

There is but one shade tree in the vicinity of the field. Mello — only half kidding — said whichever team is quickest to get under it at halftime can claim it as their locker room.

Associated Press

Run-scoring singles by Craig Worthington and Phil Bradley in the sixth inning helped Jeff Ballard, an 18-game winner last year, win for the first time this season as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Texas Rangers 9-2 Sunday.

Ballard (1-5) yielded two runs and five hits over six innings and the Orioles swept a road series for the first time since last June 19-21 in Seattle. It was Ballard's ninth start of the season and first victory since he beat Detroit last Sept. 20.

Ballard was 8-1 after nine starts a year ago when the Orioles scored 55 runs for him. This season, Baltimore has backed him with just 26 runs.

Julio Franco's first-inning homer gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead but the Orioles took a 2-1 lead against Bobby Witt (2-6) in the fourth Bob Melvin's single. Texas tied the game in the fifth, 2-2 on Gary Pettis' two-out double.

AL

The Orioles broke it open with five runs in the eighth against Jamie Moyer and Gary Mielke. Moyer walked two of the first three batters and Rene Gonzales greeted Mielke with an RBI single.

A single by Bradley loaded the bases and Steve Finley's grounder made it 6-2. Cal Ripken followed with an RBI double and Joe Orsulak's two-run single capped the inning.

Twins 3, Red Sox 1

Gladden's homer, his fourth of the season, came just after Tapani (6-3) escaped serious trouble in the top of the inning. Wade Boggs walked and Jody Reed doubled but Tapani struck out Mike Greenwell, Tom Brunansky and Danny Heep.

Gladden then hit the second pitch from Boston rookie Dana Kiecker (0-2) 407 feet into the left-field stands. Gladden also scored in the third when he singled with two out, stole second and came home on a single by Al Newman.

White Sox 2, Tigers 1

Ron Kittle singled home the tie-breaking run with two out in the seventh inning following an intentional walk to Carlton Fisk and the Chicago White Sox beat the Detroit Tigers.

Loser Jack Morris (2-7) had allowed just one hit going into the seventh — Fisk's fifth-inning homer — but Robin Ventura singled to lead off the inning. Pinch-runner Rodney McCray stole second with one out and Dan Pasqua struck out but Fisk was walked intentionally before Kittle spoiled the strategy.

Royals 6, Yankees 2

Kevin Appier, in his second start of the season, pitched seven strong innings and Kevin Seitzer hit a home run and two doubles in leading the Kansas City Royals to a victory over the New York Yankees.

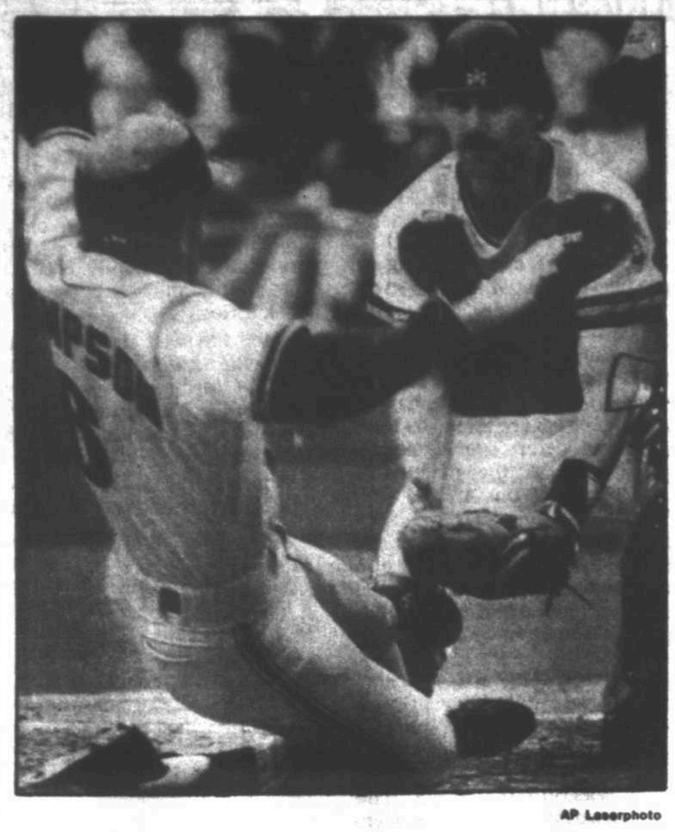

Appier (1-0), given a start because of Richard Dotson's ineffectiveness, took a four-hit shutout into the sixth. He lasted seven innings plus three batters in the eighth and gave up two runs and seven hits.

Angels 7, Brewers 3

Johnny Ray's solo home run in the fifth inning broke a 2-2 tie and Wally Joyner added a grand slam in the seventh as the California Angels ran their winning streak to seven games with a victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Blue Jays 5, Mariners 1

Smoltz' no-hit bid derailed by Dykstra

Associated Press

John Smoltz was two outs away from Atlanta's first no-hitter in 17 years when Len Dykstra doubled to right field as the Braves beat the Philadelphia Phillies 6-1 Sunday.

After striking out Ricky Jordan leading off the ninth, Dykstra ripped a 1-0 pitch down the line. One out later, Von Hayes singled to right to spoil the shutout bid. Smoltz got Rod Booker on a grounder to short to end the game and finished with a two-hitter.

There has never been a complete-game no-hitter at Veterans Stadium. Montreal's Pascual Perez pitched a five-inning no-hitter at Philadelphia on Sept. 24, 1988.

Dykstra, batting .404, led off the first inning hit a sharp grounder to the right of second base that appeared headed for the outfield. But second baseman Jeff Treadway, who hit three homers Saturday, made a diving stop and threw Dykstra out by a step.

Smoltz (3-4) struck out eight and walked three, including Von Hayes twice. After walking Hayes in the seventh, Smoltz picked him off.

Last season, Smoltz was 12-11 with a 2.94 ERA. He was 11-6 in July and was a member of the National League All-Star team. Smoltz was acquired by Atlanta from Detroit on Aug. 12, 1987 for veteran pitcher Doyle Alexander.

Cubs 11, Astros 6

Ryne Sandberg had four hits, including a pair of homers, and drove in four runs as the Chicago Cubs defeated the Houston Astros to snap a four-game losing streak.

NL

Sandberg hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning and hit his ninth in the sixth inning to help make a winner of Mike Bielecki (3-3).

It was the 14th time in his career that Sandberg had two homers in one game, the last coming Sept. 8, 1989 against St. Louis.

Pirates 5, Giants 2

Don Slaught and Barry Bonds homered in Pittsburgh's three-run fifth inning, and Neal Heaton improved to 8-1 as the Pirates beat the San Francisco Giants.

Andy Van Slyke went 3-for-4 and hit a solo homer in the seventh inning for Pittsburgh's fourth run as former Pirate Rick Reuschel (2-6) remained winless against Pittsburgh since August 1980.

Expos 5, Reds 3

The Reds, who blew a 3-0 lead, were attempting to sweep a four-game series in Montreal for the first time since the Expos entered the league in 1969.

Padres 8, Mets 4

Joe Carter ended a slump with a homer and four RBIs and Phil Stephenson hit a three-run triple in San Diego's six-run eighth inning, boosting the Padres to a brawl-marred victory over the New York Mets.

Carter, who entered the game with only one hit in his previous 19 at-bats, also had two singles as the Padres dropped Dwight Gooden to 3-4.

Ed Whitson (4-3) worked seven innings for San Diego, giving up six hits and two runs.

Dodgers 14, Cardinals 7

The Los Angeles Dodgers scored nine runs in the first inning, highlighted by two hits each by Stan Javier, Lenny Harris and Chris Gwynn, in a rout of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Longhorns fall to Cal State-Fullerton, 5-2

Associated Press

Steve Hinton's sacrifice fly in the top of the ninth inning scored Bobby Langer with the winning run as Creighton eliminated Clemson 4-3 in the NCAA Central Regional Sunday afternoon.

Creighton (48-21) and top-seeded Texas (50-16) played Sunday night for the right to face unbeaten Cal State-Fullerton in Monday's championship round.

Clemson, which also lost to Creighton 9-6 earlier in the tournament, finished its season at 43-23.

Randy Tolle (4-1) scattered six hits over 8 2-3 innings while walking four and striking out seven. Bobby Kennedy got the final out for his third save.

Scott Stahoviak led Creighton with four hits and an RBI, spoiling Jimmy Crowley's two solo homers for Clemson.

With the score tied 3-3 in the top of the ninth inning, Bobby Langer and Stahoviak hit consecutive singles off losing pitcher Aaron Jersild (5-3).

Crowley's first homer gave Clemson a 1-0 lead after five, but Creighton struck back for three runs in the sixth.

Langer and Stahoviak had back-to-back doubles to tie the score. Hinton singled home Stahoviak and later scored on an error by shortstop Tim Rigsby.

Crowley hit his 14th homer in the seventh and Clemson tied the score in the eighth on singles by Brian Kowitz and Rigsby and a sacrifice fly by Joe DeBerry.

Earlier Sunday, Sam Colarusso (7-3) scattered seven hits through seven innings and Matt Hattabaugh and Paul Bunch homered as Cal State-Fullerton upset top-seeded Texas 5-2.

Longhorns two-time All-America starter Kirk Dressendorfer (12-4) gave up six hits and four runs in 5 1-3 innings, although only two of the runs were earned.

Jamie Winkel would've been proud.

The way David Burgen came through in the end to win the championship flight of the 25th Annual Ranchland Hills Country Club Stampede Sunday was the kind of golf winners appreciate thoroughly.

The birdie putt also meant the avoidance of a three-way playoff, as the second and third place teams finished with identical 207s in the three-day, 54-hole two-man best-ball partnership.

Birdie slips Douglass past Player for win

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Dale Douglass sank a 6-foot putt for par on the second playoff hole Sunday to defeat Gary Player and win the $500,000 Bell Atlantic Classic for his sixth Senior Tour victory.

Douglas and Player were tied at 4-under-par 206 after 54 holes on the 6,406-yard, par-70 Chester Valley Golf Club course. They had been tied since the 11th hole, when Douglass lost his lead with a bogey by putting his second shot under a tree and pitching short of the green.

After halving the first playoff hole, the 15th, Player drove into the trees, failed to reach the green on his approach and missed a difficult putt for a double bogey.

Douglass, who last won two years ago, took a one-stroke lead into the final round. He offset birdies putts of 12, 20 and 20 feet with three bogeys.

'I played pretty well today but after the ninth hole I was struggling,' said Douglass, who earned $75,000. "I could only make pars but that was the best the rest of the field could do."

Player had one birdie — a 5-foot putt on No. 2 — during his bogey-free round. But he hit a poor drive on the second playoff hole that bounced off a tree and went further into the rough.

Afterward, he declined to face reporters, saying he had a plane to catch. Through a spokesman, he said he caught the tree in his backswing attempting to get out of the rough.

Bob Charles and Charles Coody finished at 207. George Archer shot a 68 for 208, one stroke ahead of Lee Trevino, the tour's leading money-winner, who had a 37 on the front nine before finishing with a 71.

Charles, the tour's leading money-winner the last two years, fell out of a three-way tie for the lead when he missed a 2½-foot putt for bogey on No 17.

"I had the tournament in my grasp but I let it go at the end," said Charles, who started the day four strokes behind Douglass. He had five birdies — including chip-ins of 55 and 50 feet — and two bogeys en route to a 67.

Coody, who went into the final round one stroke behind Douglass, had a 70. He lost any chance to catch the leaders when he missed birdie putts of 8 and 6 feet and hit a 30-foot birdie putt about a foot past the hole on 18.

Defending champion Dave Hill, who had a 75 on Saturday, rebounded with a 68 on Sunday to finish tied with Ken Still, Jim Dent and Orville Moody at par, 210. Still was within three strokes of the lead at three under after No. 8 but then bogeyed three straight holes and finished with a 72.

Aoki wins tourney

NISHIWAKI, Japan (AP) — Third-round leader Isao Aoki of Japan shot a par 72 Sunday and won the $466,000 Mitsubishi Galant Golf Tournament by three strokes.

Aoki received $84,000 and a Japanese-made car for his first triumph of the season and 57th of his career.

Levi nabs PGA Atlanta victory

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Wayne Levi had a feeling all week that his six-year victory drought would end just where it began.

It did.

Levi sank a 4-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole Sunday to complete a 3-under-par 69 for a one-shot victory over three others in the weather-plagued final round of the Atlanta Golf Classic.

"I didn't think we'd ever get back out there," Levi said of a rain-delay that lasted six hours and forced the entire field of 85 back on the course at 6:05 p.m. EDT.

"I didn't think we'd get done," he said, adding that PGA officials asked the trio in the final threesome twice if they wanted to wait until Monday to finish.

It was apparent that the event would go over until Monday if a playoff was required, but Levi avoided it with a great approach shot.

"I laid it up and had 103 yards to the hole," he said of the par-5 finishing hole.

"I used a sand wedge and put a lot of spin on it," he said. "I had been practicing that shot all week. I hadn't been hitting them very well.

"I hit it perfect. I couldn't see it, but when I heard the crowd start to yell, I knew it had to be pretty close."

The birdie gave Levi a 13-under-par 275 total for the 72 holes over the hilly, 7,018-yard Atlanta Country Club course and the victory over three others at 276 — Larry Mize, Keith Clearwater and South African Nick Price.

Mize, the 1987 Masters champion, closed with a 70; Clearwater, the third-round leader, had a 72 and Price birdied the last two holes on putts of 15 and 20 feet for a 70.

The victory, the ninth of Levi's career, was worth $180,000.

"The money's fine, but winning's what it's all about," he said. "It means the Masters and a trip to La Costa (Tournament of Champions)."

Mize, the 1987 Masters champion, had a one-shot lead with four holes to play, but bogeyed the 15th when he caught the back bunker. He had birdied four of five holes to take the lead with a 10-foot birdie putt on 14.

"I leave with a good feeling with my play after the rain delay," Mize said. "I played really solid on the back nine. It just wasn't good enough."

"I don't think I could play the last four holes any better, even in daylight," Price said.

Tom Kite, who could have pushed his career earnings over $6 million with a victory, birdied four holes in a six-hole stretch starting on No. 5 and was within one shot of the lead before faltering.

Texas' Bryan takes NCAA singles tennis crown

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Steve Bryan of Texas swept Jason Netter of UCLA 6-3, 6-4 Sunday to become the first sophomore in seven years to win the singles crown at the NCAA tennis championships.

In doubles, California's top-seeded duo of Doug Eisenman and Matt Lucena prevented a Texas sweep by beating Mitch Michulka and Michael Penman 6-3, 6-2. No school has won both the singles and doubles crowns since Stanford in 1974.

Eisenman and Lucena, meanwhile, became the eighth Golden Bear pair to win the crown, and the first since 1952. It also marked the seventh straight year and the 33rd time in the last 41 years that the doubles champions have come from a California school.

Bryan, ranked No. 3 in the nation and seeded in the 5-8 group alphabetically, played a steady game and relied on baseline shots. Netter, ranked No. 30 nationally but unseeded here, had more than twice as many unforced errors, 33-16.

"I played well," said Bryan, the 1990 Southwest Conference player of the year. "I probably didn't play as well as I have in some matches this week, though. Jason missed some shots he normally makes, which helped. I had to change it up out there, so he couldn't get into a groove. I didn't let up at all today. I never got tight."

Bryan became the fourth Longhorn player to win the singles crown and the first since Kevin Curren in 1979. The last sophomore to win the title was Utah's Greg Holmes in 1983.

"Steve picked up the pace I got a little too impatient," said Netter, a junior who won the Pacific-10 Conference singles title this year. "I didn't play that bad. I just missed some big points. In the first set whenever I was in a position to break him, he served well. In the second set, I was never able to capitalize. He's so quick he seemed to get to a lot of everything."

Futures lower

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil and heating oil futures prices fell while gasoline futures were mixed Friday as traders squared their accounts in advance of the three-day Memorial Day weekend.

The July contract for West Texas Intermediate slipped 3 cents to $17.80 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange following a 31-cent decline Thursday. Later contract months also showed small losses.

Gasoline futures were mixed. The June contract for wholesale unleaded gasoline rose 0.18 cent to 63.48 cents a gallon on top of Thursday's 0.72 cent advance.

Market tumbles

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took a spill Friday, giving up some of the gains that carried the market to record highs earlier in the week.

Technology issues bore the brunt of the selling in a session marked by sharply reduced activity on the eve of the long Memorial Day weekend.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 7 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 543 up, 947 down and 507 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 120.25 million shares, down from 155.14 million in the previous session, as a good many traders got an early start on the three-day holiday weekend. The markets will be closed on Monday for Memorial Day.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell sharply against the yen but otherwise was little changed in foreign exchange Friday as investors regained confidence in the Japanese currency.

Gold prices generally were higher.

The recovery of stock prices in Tokyo helped boost confidence in the yen. The Nikkei Stock Average, the Japanese market's best-known indicator, rose more than 1,300 points this week.

The dollar skidded to 149.40 yen in New York from 151.15 late Thursday. In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 150.05 yen from 151.55 yen.

The dollar was narrowly mixed against the British pound. Sterling fell to $1.6006 in New York. In London earlier, the pound rose to $1.6085.

■ Alleged Saudi investment in U.S. bonds raise questions about prospects for rising oil prices.

By Floyd Norris
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Do the Saudis know something that American oil traders are only beginning to suspect?

That question arose last week as the Saudis were reported to be dumping gold, which plunged in price in response to the sales.

A widespread rumor had it that they sold the gold to pay for American Treasury bonds, of all things.

The conventional wisdom in the brokerage community this year has been that oil prices are headed up, at least in the long term.

The world is again running short of oil, goes the argument, and the oil exporters have learned their lesson and will restrict production enough to push up prices.

As it happens, on the same day that the Saudis sold gold, oil prices fell in reaction to reports that showed rapidly rising inventories of crude.

But the prevalent Wall Street view sees that as temporary, which is why crude prices for delivery next year fell only a bit, even as prices for nearby delivery were plunging.

The available evidence now is that if any oil producer is cheating on production limits imposed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, it is probably Kuwait.

"We know Saudi Arabia is adhering to its new quota," said William Randol, an oil analyst at the First Boston Corp. who thinks the long-term bullish case for crude is still intact.

But if the Saudis are loading up on Treasury bonds, one has to suspect that they have an opinion on bond prices — that they will rise as yields fall — that is unlikely to be accurate if oil prices zoom higher.

Historically, rising oil prices have usually meant bad news for both the stock and bond markets.

Big well

Brooks Heitz, 31, checks a valve on a prolific Austin Chalk well that came in for more than 5,000 barrels daily. The ground trembles around the well, says news reports, because of the surging pressure of the oil in the pipeline. The well is a recently completely horizontal well. The horizontal drilling boom is more active than ever in South Texas.

Tough and ready roughnecks flock to boom

■ Hard working roughnecks and boom times go together as one writer covering the horizontal drilling boom has learned.

STEVEN LONG

CARRIZO SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — Rusty Murphy is tough by any standard. His face is old beyond his 43 years. That happens when you work a lifetime in the oil patch.

Most of his life has been spent drilling oil wells, fighting other men and drinking Pearl beer. This year he is doing all three in South Texas, working on a big oil play brought on by new technology called horizontal drilling.

"Since I was 17 years old, I've had lots of fights," he said. "No one man has ever put me out."

Rusty Murphy is part of an American tradition, a traveling band of would-be gypsies who proudly call themselves "oilfield trash." He knows no other way of life, and with only an eighth grade education, he probably couldn't do much else in today's world.

"I work seven days a week. That's where the money is," he said. "I don't want it any other way, seven days a week, that's what I love."

Murphy has lived a hard life from a very early age. When he was 13, his mother remarried and Murphy had a stepfather.

"One day I came home and he said, 'We have a little problem. This house isn't big enough for both of us,' " Murphy said.

"I said, 'You're right about that.'

Even the Cambodians couldn't handle him. He was held captive in Cambodia for six months during the Vietnam War. Murphy and four others escaped in 1965 and eventually were rescued by some passing Australians.

"I've got scars all over my body where they (the Cambodians) cut me," he said. "Hell, it just makes you tough."

The experience made Murphy so tough that he extended his tour of duty.

"I wanted some revenge, and I got some revenge," he said.

Murphy's body is covered with 25 tattoos he has picked up in his travels around the world, following one oil play after another. He will proudly take off his shirt in a bar to display the art. Murphy says he even has tattoos covered by his underwear.

"You want to see more? I'll take my britches off," he said to the few patrons of Virginia's Place, a roadhouse on U.S. 83 between Carrizo Springs and Crystal City. Murphy spends a part of every day at Virginia's.

It is his kind of place, simple, undecorated and practical. In the men's room, a Folger's coffee can is nailed to the wall, chin-high and over the urinal. Folks in the oil patch still dip Skoal and need a place to spit.

Murphy's day begins before sunrise. He is on the rig at 7 a.m. working for $10.38 an hour.

"You make a living at it," he said.

Unlike most Texas oil-field workers, Murphy was never out of work during the long Texas slump in oil exploration.

"I've stayed busier than any other person in this damned place for the past three years," he said.

Luling wasn't fast enough for Murphy.

"There were the same men sitting at the same domino table in the same chairs as when I left. I told them that they were only there because they didn't want to be home with their wives. They got at me in Luling," he said.

But Luling is where he met a Carrizo Springs woman. Murphy followed her here, and although they split up, they see each other every day. She works behind the bar at Virginia's Place, where she sells him Pearl for 75 cents a can.

"The older I get, the younger they look, and the better I like them," he said of the women who work around the men of the oil fields.

"Beer and women. That's what all this work's all about anyway," he said.

"You take a lot of these old boys in the oil field, 250 to 300 miles away from home. They'll do things they wouldn't do any closer (to home)," he said.

But to Murphy, the wild life he leads in the beer joints is in stark contrast to the sober life he leads on the oil rig.

The beer he drank the night before and the people he drank with are only a fuzzy memory on the rig, which towers above a hard-luck South Texas ranch. The routine seldom changes.

Murphy gets off the rig at 3 p.m., unless somebody doesn't show up. Many times he has had to work 24 hours

How to find an affordable Unix computer

By Dennis Sever

Sever

Q. I am majoring in computer science at a small university in Illinois. The entire campus is networked between several Unix systems. The school is really growing and getting CPU time is a problem. I would really like to buy my own Unix computer, but the prices I have seen for even a low end computer are well eyond my means. Do you know of any student help programs that are available?

A. Other than the regular school financing programs, and student discount programs available for the asking, I know of nothing.

I would like to encourage you to contact the management of some of the computer manufacturers, the DPMA (Data Processing Management Association) and the ACM (Association for Computing Machinery.) It may surprise you at how interested in you that they are.

If this route is not successful, I would shop around for a used computer, maybe even advertise in the journals. Contact the local Unix system vendors and find out if they have any trade-ins or dead-stock items that you might could afford. Good luck.

Q. I recently flew from Dallas to Los Angeles with some data for my company's California division on 3.5 inch diskettes. When I got to the LA office the information was gone and the diskettes were unreadable. One of the technicians in our office said that I shouldn't have allowed the security people to X-ray the diskettes. Could X-rays have destroyed the data?

A. All the physicists agree that it is impossible for X-rays to modify magnetic information.

There are literally hundreds of possible disasters that could have befallen your diskettes. Were they ever in the proximity of an electric motor, or a ringing telephone?

Were they subjected to rapid temperature changes or temperature extremes? I take all possible precautions with my diskettes including preventing their being X-rayed.

Q. I recently tried to add some memory to my computer. My manual says I need 120ns memory. The only memory that I could find locally is 100ns or 150ns memory. Can I use the different speed memory?

A. You can use the 100ns (100 nano second access/storage time) memory but not the 150ns memory. The 150ns memory will cause you some timing problems with the processor.

If your requirement is for 120ns you need memory that is at least that fast. You may mix different speeds of memory in your computer as long as all the chips are at least 120ns chips.

Q. I recently moved across town and as I set up my computer in my new office I discovered that my hard disk was no longer working.

In fact, when I try to access it, I get an "Invalid Drive Specification Error". I was very careful to park the heads before moving and I was very gentile in the actual moving of the computer. What can you suggest?

A. The first thing that I would do is open the case and reseat the hard disk controller and all the cables.

This will normally cure problems of this nature. With this kind of error there is no indication that the data on the disk is damaged, only that you can't get to it.

Q. I've heard about artificial intelligence and that there are computer systems designed expressly to develop expert systems.

I think I have a problem that would lend itself to an expert system type solution, but I can't seem to locate any one that admits to knowing anything about artificial intelligence. Who can help me?

A. As far as equipment manufacturers are concerned, I think Texas Instruments is further into Artificial Intelligence (with the Explorer system) than anyone else, although Digital Equipment Corp. has made some significant efforts and so has IBM and AT&T.

Were I you, I would contact marketing managers at each of these companies and ask about their Artificial Intelligence applications and machines. Then ask those managers about Artificial Intelligence software developers. They will be anxious to assist you in every way they can.

The mark of Ted fades at TBS

■ Ted Turner has mellowed and so has his operations, producing a different Ted and a different TBS.

N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — Gone are the golden days when Captain Outrageous — equipped with equal doses of genius and bravado — single-handedly conquered oceans and built an international television kingdom.

Ted Turner hasn't sailed competitively in more than a decade, and his global television network is running as successfully and smoothly as Johnny Carson's show. The once-explosive company has matured into a conventional bottom-line-driven corporation that answers to a board of directors with real authority and a stack of red pencils.

His name's on the door; his memento-laden office has the best view in the house; he still holds all the executive titles.

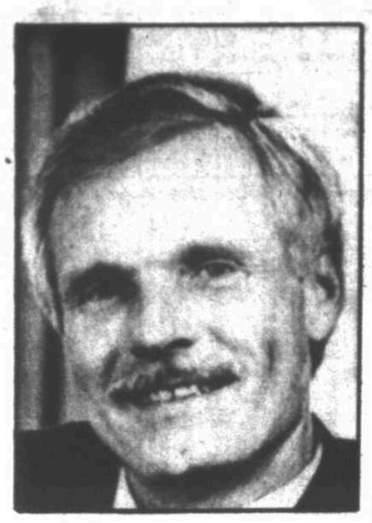

But Ted Turner is no longer running the day-to-day business of Turner Broadcasting System Inc. As he's said more than once in the recent past, "It's not my company anymore."

No one at Turner Broadcasting denies that Turner has drifted away from the day-to-day operations. But some are wondering aloud how long it will be before he tires of coming into the office at all and decides to abandon the billion-dollar communications empire he built from a billboard company.

Ask him how long he plans to stay aboard, and he snaps, "As long as I live!" That response is vintage Ted Turner, full of bluster. "There are a lot of people who would like to own this company. But I haven't decided to retire."

Indeed, Turner may never retire, but his role these days appears more like that of an elder statesman than an engaged CEO of a global corporation.

That corporation is the cornerstone of the cable universe, and will continue to be in '90s.

Turner

It records annual revenues of $1.07 billion, owns assets worth $4.5 billion and has 3,466 employees worldwide. Its networks are the staples of nearly every cable system in the country.

Ted Turner, who's accumulated a $1.4 billion fortune in his company's stock, created the blueprint for that organization. And now, "I think he feels as though he's done it," offers a close confidant.

He's in Atlanta only a handful of days each month, choosing instead to spend most of his time on the luncheon and dinner circuit accepting honorariums and delivering speeches.

His flight schedule is dizzying. In April, he was in Washington to accept the Georgetown University diplomatic journalism award for Cable News Network, in Spokane and Seattle for Goodwill Games publicity, in Orlando to accept an Humanist of the Year award, and in New York to speak to the Brown (University) Club of New York. And that wasn't half his itinerary.

A competent six-man executive committee runs the company, and they communicate with him mostly by memo. He has a lot of time to read in airplanes, offers Terence F. McGuirk, vice president in charge of cable sales and sports.

When he's in front of the microphone, he lectures — not about TV — but about serious stuff like world hunger, nuclear disarmament and the destruction of the Amazon rain forest.

But while the cable industry cowers at the foot of Capitol Hill, in need of a Teddy Roosevelt to lead the charge against a Congress out for blood, Turner chooses to hunt quail on his Florida plantation.

This is the prophet who bought a low-power joke of a UHF station in Atlanta and turned it into the country's first superstation. This is the man who decided the country needed a 24-hour news channel, and now 10-year-old CNN is beamed to 54 million homes in America, and 89 countries around the world.

This is the man with the courage — maybe audacity is a better word — to take a run at CBS, a network that he once had characterized as "a cheap whorehouse," and actually buy himself a movie company, MGM/UA. Sure, he had to sell the studio back, but he still had all those golden-oldie films.

And this is the guy who loudly told anyone who would listen that network television was "crap," "garbage" and "trash." And who boasted that he would create a fourth network that would put those vile broadcasters to shame. Turner Network Television, the most successful launch in cable history, is on its way to becoming part of a global entertainment network.

But now it's been four years since Ted Turner dreamed up TNT. That's a lifetime to an industry that expected revolution from their own cable Quixote every time he opened his mouth.

And now, when asked if he still wants to buy a broadcast network, he shrugs. "Not particularly."

Good thing, because his button-down board of directors probably wouldn't let him. And that's why Turner spends more time with Jane Fonda than his company managers these days.

It's been three years since he almost sunk the company over his yearning for MGM/UA and the country's top cable operators swooped in to rescue him. In return for a $562 million life vest, he turned over 37 percent of his company and seven seats on his board. He also turned over his freedom.

Divorce, dividend payments and an expensive Montana spread have further reduced his stake in the company. He now owns 38 percent of the equity and 61 percent of voting control.

And the big ideas coming out of Turner Broadcasting today are pretty conventional. It bought rights to the National Football League and the Winter Olympics, for example. While big, the deals were standard for the broadcast television industry.

"Captain Planet, that's a new idea," Turner offered. The animated environmental series is indeed a new idea, but hardly on the scale of his previous ventures. "Opportunities for bold leaps don't occur every year," he noted caustically.

"The company is a cooperative now," conceded McGuirk, 38, president of Turner Cable Network Sales and Turner Sports, and a key player on the company's executive committee. "It's a shared leadership with the board. It causes a more business approach to big ideas and less of a gut reaction. Everything gets held to the light of day and gets passed to finance people and maybe that waters down some of the ideas."

The board let Turner go ahead with TNT, as well as the money-losing Goodwill Games in 1990, but it has passed on several big acquisitions he coveted. It nixed the $100 million purchase of a chunk of Financial News Network, and, more recently, a buyout of the rest of MGM/UA.

Several company executives suggest that this just isn't the time for big new ideas. The cable television dial is full; there's no room for major new networks like a CNN or a TNT. Besides that, Congress is considering measures that could slash revenues available for expanding systems and buying programming.

"All over the landscape there are companies making false starts with things that don't work, ideas that are half baked," said McGuirk. "Since TNT, nothing has worked in this industry. We drew together a huge consensus in the industry then, but I'm not sure that even we could execute that at this point in time. Ted senses that.

"The experience when the board wouldn't let him buy FNN was a sobering one for him," explains Arthur R. Sando, a Turner vice president who resigned last month after nine years. "He had to come to terms that things had changed, that he was no longer in charge of the company the way he once was. That probably was a factor in changing the way he viewed his life."

That change, of course, is his personal crusade to reduce the U.S. military budget, end industrial pollution and improve East-West relations.

"It's what Ted has moved into," said Gerald F. Hogan, president of Turner Entertainment Networks. "The blueprint for the company is done. Now he worries about the blueprint for the rest of the world."

It's doubtful Turner will save the world. But everybody's going to watch him try. As long as he remains chairman of Turner Broadcasting, he has a broad platform to preach world reform. He can order his networks to run environmental and social issues programs.

"He always was always big on world peace," said Bill Daniels, the second-largest individual shareholder in Turner Broadcasting and considered by many the founder of cable television. Indeed, Turner founded the Better World Society, the non-profit group designed to increase awareness about the environment, back in 1985.

"It's just that now he's got a good organization, the time, the money and name, so he can talk about these things."

"I'm the hardest working hand in Texas," he said. Murphy's father was a driller and tool pusher, and his uncle was a driller who helped bring in the famed Spindletop No. 1 well in Beaumont.

"I was born and raised in it," he said.

Murphy has been drinking Pearl and smoking Pall Mall cigarettes for 30 years.

"I'll drink'em till they die, or I go out first," he said. "But one thing you don't do is drink while you are going to work, or when you are at work. You drink after work."

During his 31 years in the oil fields, Murphy has never been injured on the rig, but he does have one job-related injury.

"There was this boy who just wasn't worth a damn, so I fired him," he said. Later in the day, Murphy followed his usual routine, a stop by a convenience store to pick up a beer, a quick shower, and then on to the roadhouse.

"There I was, sitting in the beer joint," he said. "He walked up behind me and whomped me with a cue stick. By the time I got through with him, he won't play pool anymore.

"In those old beer joints, if you aren't man enough to handle yourself, you had better not go in there," he said.

When things get boring out in the wilderness of the Texas brush country, the driller goes hunting, but not for deer or birds like most of the city slickers who come south with a gun. Murphy hunts rattlesnakes.

If somebody doesn't kill him in a beer joint, or a snake doesn't take his life, Rusty Murphy plans to be around the oil patch a lot longer.

"I can't draw Social Security until I'm 65," he said. "That is another 22 years, unless my health gives out first."

Importance of animals fills Joan Embery's life

By Arthur Salm
Copley News Service

Joan Embery was a pre-veterinary major at San Diego State University when she got a job working in the San Diego Children's Zoo in 1968. Two years later she applied for a newly created public-relations position at the zoo, and, she says, out of about 500 applicants — "They hired a model."

Eventually, of course, Joan got the job, and she ran with it, becoming the San Diego Zoo's "Goodwill Ambassador." Her appearances on "The Tonight Show" with various furry, scaly and feathered friends in tow led to other television shows ("Every show that has guests," she laughs) and a national identity.

She and her husband, Duane Pillsbury, live in San Diego's East County, out where State Highway 67 ends and the manure in the air is fresh and sweet. As you pull into the driveway, it occurs to you that a more typical ranch could not be found anywhere. See the horse corral? See the friendly dogs? See the pretty ... zebra?

With a country-music station on the stereo and sawdust on her boots and jeans, Joan Embery sits in her living room — done, it seems, by Ben Cartwright's decorator — and answers questions about a lifestyle that, you have to believe, she couldn't find more comfortable.

Q. What's your idea of a perfect vacation destination and activity?

A. Based on past experience, Africa and in the bush. I go almost every year, and never get enough. There's nothing like being out in the Serengeti.

Q. What is your favorite city and country, excluding San Diego and the United States.

A. If I had to be absolutely honest, I wouldn't choose a city — I spend so much time in hotels, airports, etc. My choice is to get away from metropolitan areas. My interests are so varied .... Let's see ... I'd say Kenya. And I just came back from Rio de Janeiro and the Amazon. It's amazing to think that something so magnificent (as the rain forest) could be destroyed by man, you think that it's bigger than man — but it's not. It gives you a real feel for the destructive nature of mankind.

And I like the Hawaiian Islands — my one non-animal destination.

Q. What are your favorite movies?

A. "Out of Africa," "Gorillas in the Mist," "The Gods Must Be Crazy," "Driving Miss Daisy" (!). I see maybe two movies a year, mostly in hotel rooms.

Q. How do you relax on weekends, after work? (We have the sneaking suspicion that the answer will be somewhat less than a complete surprise.)

A. My passion is horses. That's what I do every extra minute that I have — jumping, driving, cutting. Last weekend I spent three days on cutting, where the horse is judged on its ability to cut a cow out of a herd, and control it.

Every time I get to thinking I'm a big star, I go out and get my butt beat by people who are pros. I get on a cutting horse and I'm just Joan Pillsbury.

Q. What's your favorite food, drink?

A. Chocolate ice cream. Chocolate everything. I took bags of M&Ms to India and China. I called Duane — "Bring 20 pounds of M&Ms!" Drinking, I'm a lightweight — vodka collins, anything that tastes like fruit. We eat Mexican food about three days out of seven.

> 'Goodwill Ambassador'
> San Diego zoo

Q. If you weren't in the profession you were in, what might you choose?

A. Maybe I'd be a horse trainer, or do field work like (wildlife biologist) George Schaller ("Year of the Mountain Gorilla").

Q. Who is the most impressive person you've ever met?

A. George Schaller. He's had a tremendous impact on the environment, particularly on gorillas, pandas and snow leopards.

He did the most extensive field work ever, and he understands people and wildlife and the environment. That's important, because you can get too close to your work; you have to look at indigenous people, see their perspective as well as the zoo perspective.

That's why I follow the field work so closely. I have to know what's happening outside of the U.S. and the zoo. I have to understand the people's politics, economics and social problems; even their religion affects what happens to wildlife. I have to keep up with the world picture, then take all that information and put it into a half-hour program — or even a few minutes, on national television.

Q. Is that the most difficult part of your job?

A. That, and the pressure of trying to please everybody, while getting my message across and trying to reach a common goal without getting into controversial, no-win situations, which some of them are. The fact that people are motivated and that they care (about wildlife) means that they are coming to an awareness. Unfortunately, some people who are very interested are people who have no background or knowledge, and that's why it's so important to me that I keep up with everything and understand everybody's point of view, so that I can always give consideration.

And when there's controversy, people call me — and I don't always have total control of the situation.

Q. If you were isolated for a period of time, what five books would you take with you? Who is your favorite author? What's your most unforgettable book?

A. Oh, gosh, I don't know — I don't have time to read that many books. Periodicals, I'd pick USA Today because it's concise and to the point. The Christian Science Monitor is excellent, and objective with the environment. I read publications from the National Wildlife Federation and the World Wildlife Fund, and National Geographic. I guess I read mostly journals and animal books — not much fiction.

Q. If you could trade places with any living person, who would it be?

A. I don't think I would.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you printed that letter from "Mad at the Mail," who complained because the postage stamps didn't stick. I thought maybe I was losing my mind because lately I've had letters returned to me marked "Postage Due" when I knew for a fact I had put stamps on them. I never had that kind of trouble with stamps before.

Van Buren

Now I keep a pot of glue on my desk. It takes a little longer to get a letter off, but at least I know it's going to get there. — GREG H., ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: In 1945, during World War II, I was working for a dentist and I used to stamp all the outgoing mail. The stamps didn't stick, due to inferior glue, so a postal employee suggested that I T on the envelopes for a while. (He said it had something to do with body heat.) Well, I did as he suggested — I still do — and I haven't had any trouble with stamps falling off since. — PROBLEM SOLVED

DEAR ABBY: You and "Mad at the Mail" are going at things backward; the fault lies not in the stamps, Dear Abby, but in yourself.

You should try moistening the ENVELOPE, not the stamp. When you moisten the stamp, by whatever method, you remove some of the glue — sometimes all of it. That's why the stamps don't stick. — ABBY FAN

DEAR ABBY: In reference to stamps that don't stick: Recently I had a rather elaborate card to mail that required three 25-cent postage stamps, so I very carefully put a small strip of Scotch tape along the edge of each postage stamp in order to secure it. (It was a sympathy card to a dear friend, and I wanted to make sure it arrived.)

Well, seven days later, the card was returned to me, marked "Against Regulations to Obscure Stamps." Abby, I am a 77-year-old great-grandmother, and I'm sick and tired of poor quality and government greed. — NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR READERS: And now a word from the postmaster general:

DEAR ABBY: The Postal Service is concerned that stamp adhesive sticks and has asked its suppliers to take additional quality assurance measures.

To obtain an even better solution, we funded an extensive research effort in 1988 to find a "superior" adhesive that will firmly adhere stamps to any material used in envelopes, while at the same time not prematurely sticking stamps to each other. Such an adhesive must be effective under broad environmental conditions of heat and cold, high humidity and low humidity. This effort has narrowed our search to several adhesives that meet these criteria, and we are testing them now.

When these tests are completed, we will require our suppliers to use these new, improved adhesives; then our stamps, once stuck, will stay stuck. — ANTHONY M. FRANK, POSTMASTER GENERAL, U.S. POSTAL SERVICE

DEAR POSTMASTER FRANK: Frankly, it's high time. Meanwhile, we are stuck with a lot of stamps that won't stick.

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

At the Sage Memorial Hospital, in the middle of the Navajo reservation, most of the staff resigned because they believed that a lightning strike near the hospital would cause health problems. The staff agreed to stay, but only after a medicine man performed a cleansing ceremony at the hospital.

In New York City's Chinatown Health Services, the Asian health-care workers devote much time to educating patients about harmful customs. For example, many new mothers didn't realize that the mothballs normally used to store traditional "lucky" clothes for newborns can make a jaundiced baby sicker because of an enzyme deficiency common among Asians.

At the Cedars Medical Center in Miami, about 60 percent of the patients are Hispanic, who equate leaving a sick person alone with abandonment. The hospital now provides open visitation with no restrictions on number or age of visitors or when they can visit.

Lower fat consumption can cause irritability

Copley News Service

Imagine a bunch of screaming monkeys bouncing off the walls and you'll have a good idea of what heart researchers are doing to the American public.

Dr. Jay Kaplan of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine recently fed 15 macaque monkeys a diet with 30 percent less fat, and found they exhibited aggressive attitudes 50 percent more often than normal monkeys do.

Writing in the medical research journal Physician's Weekly, Kaplan suggests lower fat consumption may explain why so many humans who take part in cholesterol-lowering diets become irritable and even violent.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Soviet Union's popularity has soared in the United States since the last superpower summit, and Americans increasingly support U.S. military cuts to reflect the lessened tensions, a survey found.

As President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev prepare to meet in Washington this week, the national Media General-Associated Press poll found both leaders continuing to command great popularity among Americans.

Gorbachev slipped only slightly from his overall rating in a similar poll before the last summit in December, even though a third of the respondents now think less highly of him because of his crackdown on Lithuania.

Most striking in the new survey were growing expressions of good will toward America's old Cold War foe. Forty-one percent of the respondents said they held favorable views of the Soviet Union, well up from 24 percent last November and 15 percent in a 1987 survey.

In another measure of growing trust, a relatively low 29 percent believed the Soviets seek to dominate the world. That fear factor stood at 35 percent last November and 50 percent in a CBS News-New York Times poll a year ago.

The new Media General-AP survey was conducted by telephone May 11-20 among a random sample of 1,143 adults across the country. It had a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The summit starts Wednesday amid continuing upheaval in the communist world. Gorbachev is pushing reforms of the Soviet system while struggling to contain independence movements in some of the Soviet republics. His Eastern European allies, once viewed as puppets, largely have abandoned communism.

Possibly because of Gorbachev's difficulties, the survey found some sense that the initiative in superpower relations has shifted to Bush.

'Freedom is indivisible,' Tutu says to Africa

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Rev. Desmond Tutu said he was more surprised by the recent changes in South Africa than the fact that tens of thousands of pro-apartheid demonstrators turned out in Pretoria on Saturday to protest them.

"They've been supporting apartheid for so long," Tutu, South Africa's Anglican archbishop, told a news conference. "What is surprising is that we should see a government that is willing to risk that."

Since coming to power last year, South African President F.W. de Klerk has freed African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela from prison, promised apartheid would end within five years and taken other measures to end discriminatory policies.

Tutu said it's not surprising that whites who enjoyed privileges under apartheid would object to losing some of them.

"The surprising thing is that the government should in fact have broken loose from that kind of thinking," he said.

Tutu, in Cincinnati for a four-day visit, said if he had been able to address the demonstrators, he would have told them they cannot prevail.

"I'd say to them, 'You do have the right to hold that rally, but ultimately it is self-defeating,'" he said. "What in fact are you seeking to do? You are seeking to carve out for yourself a separate freedom. Now the world has discovered that freedom is indivisible."

"There's a spirit that cannot be quenched," he said, referring to recent changes in, for example, Eastern Europe. "A repressive government, an unjust system, are based on a foundation that is fundamentally unstable."

Tutu is spending the weekend meeting with religious leaders and representatives of the black community, and making numerous public appearances.

The cleric, on a six-city trip through the United States, said he's enjoying the chance to visit a country with freedom and opportunities.
