Plane crashes; Rescue reports still in dispute

BILBAO, Spain (AP) — An Iberia Air Lines Boeing 727 crashed today in northern Spain, civil aviation authorities said. Airport officials said rescue parties reported survivors among the 144 passengers and seven crew members.

AP Laserphoto Map

But police on the scene said they found no one alive.

Civil aviation authorities said Flight 610 from Madrid, the Spanish capital, crashed into 3,340-foot-high Oiz Hill just before it was to land in this Basque industrial city.

Air traffic controllers said the aircraft disappeared from their monitors at 9:35 a.m. (3:35 a.m. EST), some 15 minutes before it was due to land at Sondica airport.

Civil aviation authorities, who refused to be identified by name, said the crash occurred 18 miles southeast of Bilbao near the town of Durango as the plane was making its approach.

The authorities said the weather was cloudy in Bilbao at the time of the crash, but airport officials said flights to and from Bilbao in similar weather conditions were common.

Initially, it was reported that 141 passengers and six crew members had perished. Iberia later said a total of 144 passengers and seven crew members were aboard.

Airport officials who refused to give their names told The Associated Press by telephone that rescue parties were reporting there were "at least 20 survivors." But they said rural police radioed from the scene that they had not been able to find any survivors in the burning wreckage scattered over 2,000 yards.

The Bolivian ambassador in Madrid, Luis Adolfo Siles, said Bolivia's labor minister, Gonzalo Guzman, and three Bolivian engineers were on the plane and on their way to Bilbao to negotiate an electric train construction project.

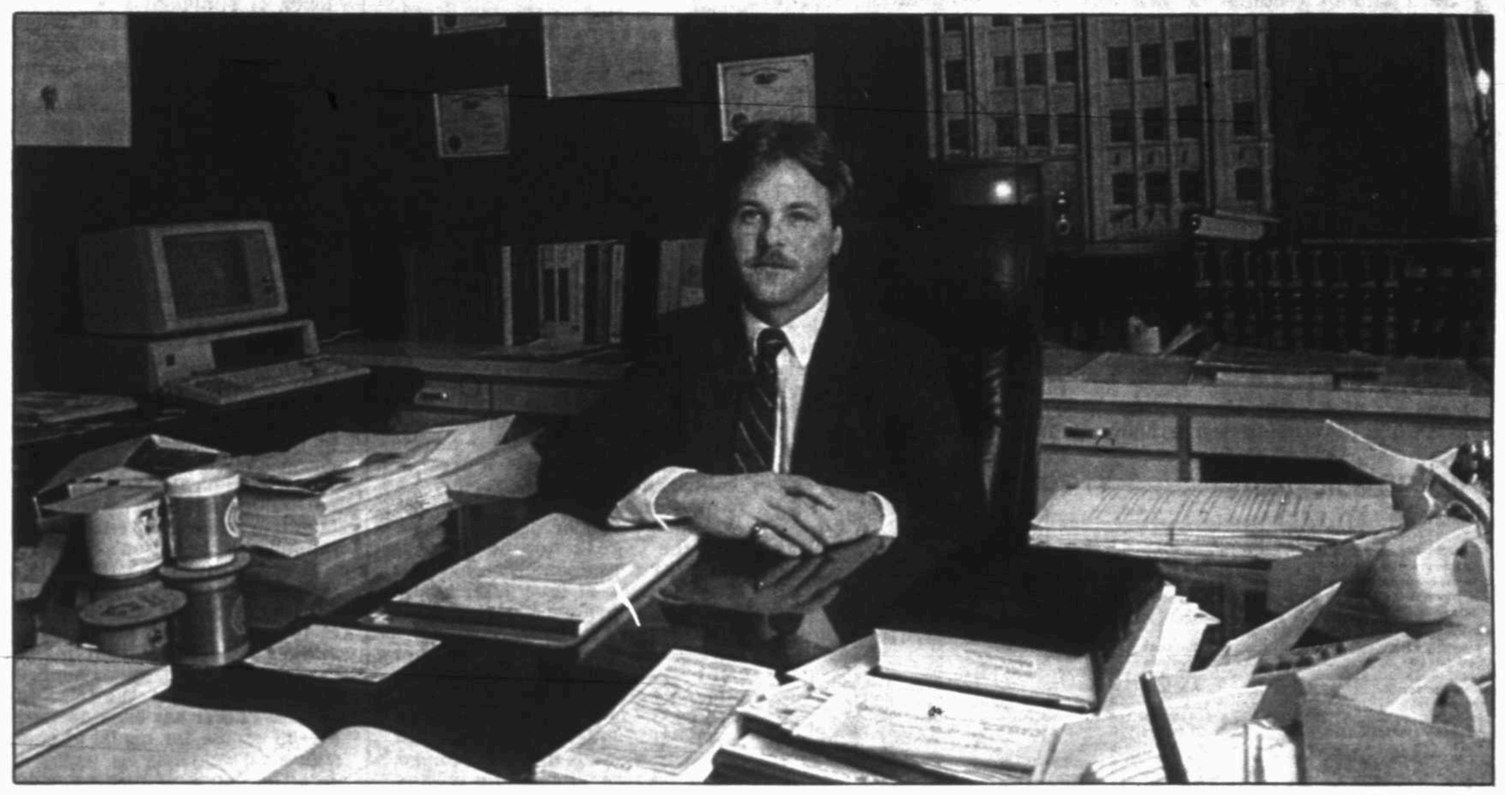

Iberia sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, reported that the former Spanish foreign affairs minister, Gregorio Lopez Bravo, was also aboard, but that could not be confirmed. A person named Lopez Bravo was listed on the flight manifest released by Iberia.

There were no immediate reports on the nationalities of the other passengers, although most of them were believed to be Spaniards.

Two commercial plane crashes in Spain in late 1983 killed 274 people.

On Nov. 27, 1983, a Boeing 747 of the Colombian airline Avianca crashed and exploded in flames a few miles outside Madrid, killing 181.

On Dec. 7, 1983, an Iberia Air Lines Boeing 727 and a DC-9 belonging to a domestic carrier, Aviaco, collided on a fog-shrouded runway at Madrid's Barrajas airport, killing all 42 people aboard the DC-9 and 51 aboard the 727.

Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman says the Jail Commission recently has closed jails because they didn't meet state requirements.

State still could close jail

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a six-part series on the Midland County Jail issue. This article will deal with problems as seen by state officials. In a separate story, County Attorney Mark Dettman traces the evolution of prisoners' rights.

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The jail, like its captives, has problems. But Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter is trying to solve those ills before others plague him.

His immediate goal is to correct the eight deficiencies cited by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards before that nine-member panel in Austin on March 27 deals with the jail, the sheriff and the Midland County Commissioners' Court. The state body may:

— Shut down the 11-year-old jail.

— Place it under a "remedial order" to further restrict its population and set other restrictions.

— Suggest that more defendants be placed on personal recognizance bonds to keep them out of jail and to reduce the jail's population or put them on work-release programs.

On Jan. 23, the Jail Commission ordered the sheriff to provide it with a plan on how Midland County expects to correct flaws in the jail and how the inmates would be housed if the jail were closed.

"I think they are very serious," Painter said. "At least, they acted like it." Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman noted the Jail Commission has closed jails in recent years for failing to meet minimum jail standards.

The Midland County commissioners and sheriff told the Jail Commission of the "good-faith efforts" to remedy the deficiencies and the lack of funds to build a new jail.

However, Commission member Pat F. O'Rourke, El Paso County Judge, said he would have voted to close the jail — and still may — were it not newly elected Sheriff Gary Painter's first year in office. Apparently he wants to give Painter a chance to correct the jail's deficiencies.

" 'If you don't have a (workable) plan (by March 27)' " O'Rourke told the Midland County officials, Dettman recalled, " 'I may recommend it be closed.' "

Dettman said he doubted the Commission would close the jail, but "that's possible," he said. "They've done it before in other counties."

Except for 1981, the jail has been cited for non-compliance with jail standards since 1977, when the Jail Commission began its inspections.

"That was the first and last time (the jail was certified)," said Jail Lt. Richard Sexton. County Commissioner Win Brown said the Jail Commission had been patient with Midland in part because Dallas Smith, who was the Midland County sheriff from 1977 through 1984, was a governor-appointed member of the commission. Smith was defeated by Painter in the May 1984 Republican Party primary election and in the November general election when Smith waged a write-in campaign.

In the Jail Commission's inspection on April 24, 1984, Supervising Inspector Joe Slater cited eight violations and suggested corrective measures. "We're doing our very best to comply with those now," Painter said.

But Slater didn't just fault the jail. "Jail has good sanitation and is well maintained," he said.

Slater's criticisms and the sheriff's remedies and comments follow:

— PROBLEM NO. 1. "Sufficient facilities are not provided to segregate inmates according to classifications." — Joe Slater

Prisoner practices grew with civil, human rights

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Prisoners, inmates and pre-trial detainees all have their rights.

But they haven't always been so privileged.

"They (once) forfeited their rights," noted Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, who specializes in defending the county in civil-rights lawsuits. Unlike today, the federal judiciary didn't intervene in how state and local governments operated their prisons and jails.

"The hands-off doctrine was really the rule," noted Dettman. Prisoners were viewed as if they were slaves, devoid of rights, prior to Reconstruction. "There really wasn't any difference."

Their rights began to emerge in the 1950s and 1960s when civil rights for blacks and other minorities came to the fore in the United States.

Today, courts are protective of human rights, including rights of those locked behind bars.

"It's not an issue of what rights prisoners have," Dettman said. "It's an issue of what rights they haven't forfeited. Everybody who comes into this country is blessed with our constitutional privileges. And when that person is incarcerated, he retains some of his constitutional rights and forfeits others."

Those inmates — pre-trial detainees — who are held under "involuntary restraint" while they are awaiting trial have more discernible rights than convicted prisoners. But the gap is closing.

"YOU CAN'T DEPRIVE someone of life or liberty without due process of law," said Dettman.

The U.S. prison system is a fairly recent development. In colonial days, jails primarily were used to hold defendants awaiting trial. Rarely was a convicted person imprisoned.

Deliberation continuing in Odessans' arson trial

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

Jurors remained in deliberation at press time today in the O'Michael Building arson trial of Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond Jr. and former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel.

Jurors had deliberated for more than eight hours in the past two days but had not reached a verdict.

If the 12 are unable to reach a consensus, the judge would eventually have to declare a mistrial — ending the eight-day trial without a decision.

Indecision by the 12 jurors chosen to reach a verdict in the trial caused Federal Judge Lucius Bunton to send them home Monday night without having reached a decision.

After almost five hours of jury deliberations, Bunton called the attorneys back to his federal courtroom here at 7:15 p.m. Monday and read them a note from the jury explaining they had been unable to reach a unanimous decision on any of the six charges before them.

MIDLAND CENTENNIAL 1885·1985

Jury's dismissal formally ends Westmoreland suit

NEW YORK (AP) — The judge dismissed the jury today to formally end retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit against CBS, as the two sides continued their dispute over whether the settlement constituted an apology from the network.

Westmoreland said he got the apology he had been seeking all along. CBS officials said that the network had not apologized and that the 1982 documentary about Vietnam War troop estimates, which prompted Westmoreland's suit, had withstood the test of 2½ years of scrutiny, both in and out of court.

Van Gordon Sauter, executive vice president of the CBS Broadcast Group, said that Westmoreland declared a "victory" so that he could withdraw from a losing case. He said Westmoreland "may read into the (CBS) statement what he wishes to read into (it)."

Like the war in Southeast Asia that was the heart of the trial's testimony, Westmoreland's abrupt withdrawal from the 18-week legal battle in New York left matters on an ambiguous note, emotions simmering and many questions unanswered.

The final act of the lengthy drama was played out today in court, when U.S. District Judge Pierre Leval dismissed the 12 jurors and five alternates, telling them "it may have been for the best that the verdict be left to history."

"I think it is safe to say no verdict you or I would have been able to render in this case could have escaped widespread disagreement," Leval said.

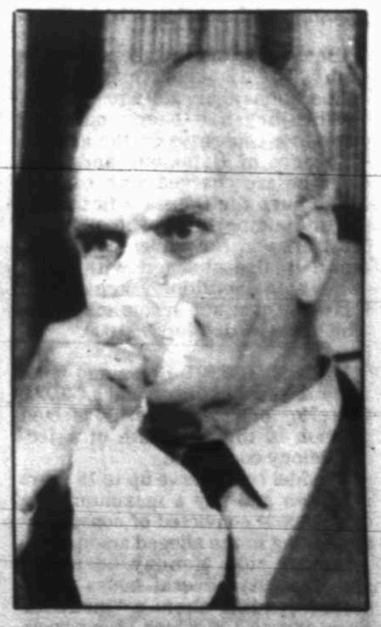

"We have resolved this law suit in a way that serves not only the interested parties but also the people of the country," CBS attorney David Boies said.

Richard Benveniste, jury foreman, said Monday he was "still stunned" by the settlement. "I'd have liked to have gone the whole route," he told The New York Times.

While Benveniste declined to discuss his opinions in the case, one unidentified juror told the newspaper that his "gut opinion" was that the panel was "leaning toward CBS more than 50 percent."

"Not everyone in there was sold on either side," the juror said. "It would have been a long deliberation."

The documentary "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception" had accused Westmoreland of deliberately understating estimates of communist troop strength in Vietnam by at least 200,000 people.

Gen. William Westmoreland announces his withdrawal from a libel suit against CBS.

Some wonder why withdrawal couldn't wait

NEW YORK (AP) — After the sudden end to the Westmoreland-CBS libel suit, some journalists wondered why the retired general didn't wait another week until the case went to the jury.

WCBS-TV in New York said in its Monday night telecast that "in a sense, (Westmoreland's) lawsuit has ended in much the same way as the Vietnam War did: after a long and bitter struggle, with many wondering why he didn't go all out to win."

On Cable News Network's "Freeman Reports," host Steve Nevas said he found it interesting that Vietnam was the first war seen on television every night in America and that more than 10 years later, the Westmoreland-CBS trial was the first trial about what was said about the Vietnam War on TV.

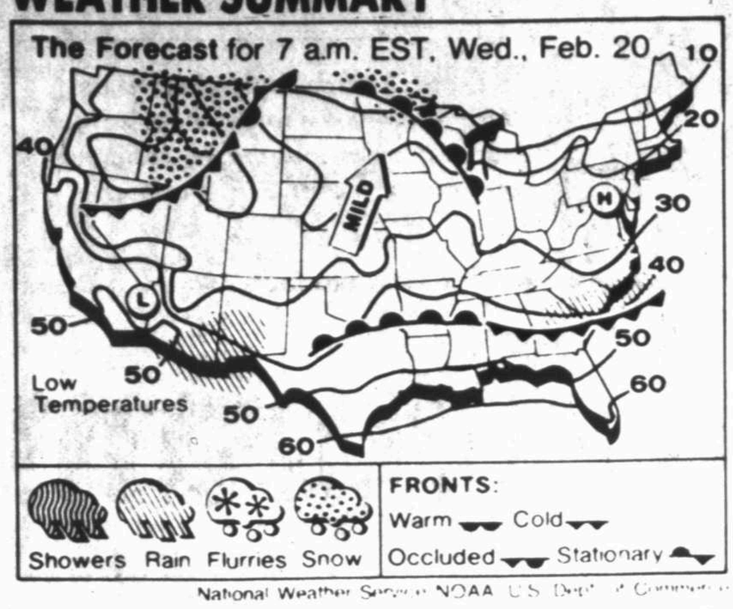

And in today's edition of The New York Times, an editorial said Westmoreland's "quest for respect should never have been brought to court and his libel suit ...is wisely abandoned."

"By no stretch of law or logic...did CBS's conduct or the general's hurt merit a $120 million libel action, costing the parties up to $10 million," The Times said.

Barret Brunsman, speaking for the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, said, "we are disappointed the parties did not reach agreement months ago before spending more than $7 million in court costs."

First Amendment lawyer Floyd Abrams called the settlement "a major victory for CBS."

JAIL

The Commission's minimum Jail Standards mandate that separation of inmates shall be according to sex, age, criminal sophistication, seriousness of the crime charges, assaultive and passive tendencies, history of mental illness and suicidal tendencies. The standards also call for sight-and-sound separation of males and female inmates. Rules order the separation of juveniles from adults, first offenders awaiting trial from repeat offenders and those convicted of crimes, inmates with communicable or contagious diseases from other inmates, and the separation of trusties and inmates on work release programs from other inmates. Separate housing is mandated for persons suspected of insanity or who had been adjudged insane and those who have homicidal tendencies.

Solution: "We separate as best we can according to classifications," Painter said. Re-arranging inmates would solve the problem, said Painter, as long as the jail doesn't run out of space. When the inspection was made in April 1984, the jail's population was 105, although the average daily population was 85. "The trend of inmate population is upward," Slater noted. Population, however, later dropped to the 60s, 70s and 80s but recently increased to 95. The Jail Commission says jail population should be no more than 80 percent of capacity — number of beds — due to the classification system. The jail has 101 bunks but is considered to have a full house with 80 to 85 inmates.

—PROBLEM NO. 2. "A secure exercise area is not provided in the jail." — Joe Slater

The jail standards say the exercise area "may be a roof-top exercise area, an outside exercise area, or one included inside the facility." A roof-top area should be covered with expended metal or netting to prevent the introduction of weapons and other contraband. The exercise area, covering at least 1,500 square feet, should include a water closet and a drinking fountain.

Solution: "I'm working on that right now," said the sheriff. He is proposing a secure roof-top exercise area or one in the so-called bull-pen — the jail's undeveloped northwest quadrant which is used for storage, weight-lifting equipment for trusties and deputies, and as a library. "I'm trying to clear out the bull pen, build a storage area there and get the exercise going. It's already secure; it's already fenced."

However, should the sheriff and the Commissioners' Court opt to build cell space in that area to increase the jail capacity, then the exercise area might be built on the roof.

—PROBLEM NO. 3. "A dayroom is not provided for female inmates to include all classifications." — Joe Slater

Slater said women inmates had only one six-bunk tank connected to a dayroom but that other females were housed in single cells without dayrooms.

The Jail Commission's regulations say "All inmate living areas except special-purpose cells shall be provided with dayrooms." Dayrooms are to contain at least 40 square feet of floor space for one inmate and 18 square feet for each additional person. They are to have tables, seating, a water closet, lavatory and shower for each group of 12 inmates.

Solution: "Here again, it comes down to not enough room," Painter said. "If all the women are the same classification, there's no problem." Otherwise, said the sheriff, "It gets very difficult."

—PROBLEM NO. 4: "Reliable remote means is not provided to unlock all cell doors." —Joe Slater

Slater noted that "21 locations must be manually operated with key" and are not also electrically operated. The jail's single cells are locked by key, while the cells in the tanks are locked manually and electrically.

Jail Commission regulations require the emergency operation of doors for the "quick and orderly release of inmates" in the event of fire, smoke or other emergencies or the interruption of primary and emergency power sources.

Solution: If the county wants "to pass inspection," said Painter, it must install remote locking mechanisms in those single cells. The cost was $100,000 a few years ago, he said.

—PROBLEM NO. 5. "A bunk is not always provided for each inmate housed over 72 hours." — Joe Slater

Regulations require that each inmate jailed for more than 72 hours "shall be provided" a fire-resistant bunk not less than two feet, three inches wide and six feet, three inches long. "Bunks shall be securely anchored and should have clothes hooks and shelves located nearby."

Solution: "We can carry that out," said Painter. "That's no problem" as long as the population does not exceed the available bunks. "That's your overcrowding."

—PROBLEM NO. 6. "Lighting in the jail is improved. However, many inmate-living areas are inadequately lighted." — Joe Slater

Jail standards require adequate lighting to permit "reading, shaving and normal activities within the inmate living area." Light controls and conduits are to be beyond the reach of inmates, but lights used for reading and shaving may be controlled by inmates.

Solution: "We are trying to locate lights now to cope with this," Painter said.

—PROBLEM NO. 7. "Inmates are not allowed one hour of supervised physical exercise at least three times weekly. It is not possible to provide all inmates housed over 30 days access to sunlight once each week." — Joe Slater

Jail standards call for outdoor exercise "if weather and facilities permit." Each inmate is to be afforded a minimum of one hour of exercise thrice weekly. Inmates confined longer than 30 days "shall be allowed access to sunlight no less than once weekly."

Solution: The building of a sunlight exercise area would solve that problem. "This (deficiency) falls within not having an exercise area," Painter said.

—PROBLEM NO. 8. "During day shifts, supervision in the jail is inadequate. All the functions required as well as procedures and programs cause hourly observation of inmates not to be accomplished on regular basis. The booking, intake, classification, property handling, release processing as well as daily routine housekeeping duties require additional manpower during day shifts. Jail furnishes bailiffs, guards, hospital emergency trips, also dental visits and other transporting of inmates. Many duties require jailers to be away from the jail." — Joe Slater.

Jail standards require hourly observation of all inmates and more frequent checking of inmates "in high-risk area and in areas where inmates who are known to be assaultive, potentially suicidal, mentally ill, or who have demonstrated bizarre behavior are confined." The jail is equipped with closed-circuit television (CCTV) to monitor inmates.

Solution: The assignment of additional manpower to the jail would solve that problem. "That's another area where there's not enough personnel to work it," Painter said. His law-enforcement budget is $2.2 million, while the jail's $197,600 budget is for supplies, food, clothing, maintenance and repairs. But he is strapped for funds to hire more deputies. Seventeen deputies are assigned to the jail.

Wednesday: Sheriff Gary Painter discusses a plan to house inmates should the Texas Commission on Jail Standards close the Midland County Jail.

RIGHTS

"Instead, they were fined, whipped, placed in the stockade, banished, or hanged, depending on the seriousness of the offense," according to "Rights of Prisoners," a book authored by law professors James J. Gobert and Neil P. Cohen.

In those days, sentences reflected the Calvinist philosophy that people were "inherently evil" and that attempts to reform them were futile.

"All that could be done when a crime occurred was to punish the wrongdoer."

But as the Calvinist influence waned, harsh punishments came into disfavor, more "moderate sanctions" evolved, and "imprisonment replaced death as the penalty for the most serious offenses."

By the Jacksonian period of the 1820s, criminologists were persuaded that the "roots of crime were traceable to the family and community" rather than to the inherent evil nature of man.

Prisons were for rehabilitating the offenders, who were put to work during the day, not allowed to talk among themselves and given Bibles to read. Rigid discipline was enforced.

DESPITE ATTEMPTS to remove prisoners from the "corruption of the community" and to impose the discipline of prison life, crime did not lessen. Thereafter, the concept of prisons gradually evolved from that of reformatory to custodial roles.

Cohen and Gobert wrote, "in truth the modern prison is primarily a place of confinement for society's criminals....Some limited but questionable effectual rehabilitative programs remain as a reminder of the prison's roots."

It wasn't until the 1960s that federal courts departed from their hands-off philosophy regarding prisoners' right. Judges recognized that many complaints filed by prisoners were frivolous. Yet, the frivolity of cases "never has been deemed a valid excuse for denial of constitutional rights...

"...The hands-off doctine ends where the abridgement of constituitional rights begin."

The federal courts' involvement in constitutional rights of prisoners came about after the courts found deplorable conditions in a state prison in Arkansas and other prisons in the South.

"Prisons were run basically by inmate-guards," Dettman said. "There was no medical treatment to speak of. The prisons that the courts reviewed were vermin-infested. Arbitrary and unusual punishment flourished. Inmates were brutalized and molested by other inmates...There was filth, no sanitation."

"AS A WHOLE, the prison system shocked the courts' conscience," Dettman said.

The prison-jail court cases "primarily came out of the South, just as most civil rights cases did," he said. "But it (inmate abuse) was prevalent throughout the country."

The federal courts became limitedly involved in state prisons and city and county jails when the civil rights of inmates were threatened or denied. The federal courts are concerned with the rights of inmates and not in the day-to-day prison or jail operation, Dettman noted.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton noted the court's "inquiry in a case" involving a jail inmate who complains of civil-rights violations is whether jailers — the county — "violated any prohibition of the Constitution...

"Broadly stated, the court will not become enmeshed in the minutiae of prison operations," Bunton said. "...The court would only be second guessing the administrators of the Midland County Jail on the matters on which they are better informed."

For instance, Bunton dismissed inmate complaints about lack of Saturday mail delivery and the denial of coffee and tobacco to inmates. Those "did not amount to cognizable constitutional claims."

THE COURT MAKES probes into situations which might adversely affect an inmate's health and well-being. These situations might include lack of adequate sunlight and exercise, poor nutrition, unsanitary conditions, and indifference to inmates' medical needs. Dettman said the County Jail provides excellent food and medical care for inmates whose basic needs, such as nutrition, bathing, clothing and bedding, are met. The sheriff is working on an exercise program for inmates and ways to expose them to more sunlight. Educational programs are to be offered inmates.

Most — about 75 percent — of the Midland County Jail inmates are pre-trial detainees. Others are serving time for misdemeansor offenses, such as driving while intoxicated (DWI), or are convicts waiting to be transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections.

Unlike convicts, pre-trial detainees are not jailed for punishment; they are incarcerated to ensure their appearance in court. They have either been denied bail by a judge or are financially unable to post bond.

"A convicted person can be punished," Dettman noted. "But you cannot punish a pre-trial detainee. You can make him (the convict) hoe cotton...in the penitentiary, but you can't make a pre-trial detainee (work) unless he wants to."

Pre-trial detainees have more constitutional rights than do convicts.

"THEY HAVE THE right to maintain their basic health," Dettman said. "They have the right of adequate nutrition, medical attention, exercise and related rights." They have the right to practice religion.

"It's more stringent with pre-trial detainees. You have to treat them with a kid-glove approach. If a convict complains of a toothache, you can ignore it," Dettman said.

"If a pre-trial detainee has a toothache, you'd better get a dentist to see him."

Unlike the convict, the pre-trial detainee has the right to consult with his lawyer and the right to unlimited correspondence. He may be visited by his family and clergy.

However, Dettman noted that it's "not a constitutional requirement" that pre-trial detainees be allowed to make personal contact with outsiders "because of the danger of their passing contraband. There are too many security problems."

Dettman said the Midland County Jail is "probably one of the best-run jails" in Texas. It affords inmates well-balanced meals, books, showers, medical care, television sets and radios to relieve them of idleness and to reduce the chances of inmate unrest, optional religious services, visitations and an in-planning but optional exercise program, he said.

"It has a professional operation," Dettman said. "For its time, it was topnotch."

Midland County inmates do have their constitutional rights. But they also have much idle time, some spent just looking through the bars.

ARSON

Bunton decided to recess for the night. The 12 jurors began their deliberations again at 9 a.m. today.

The jury had been unable to come to a consensus on the guilt or innocence of Hammond and Weddel, who are charged with conspiring to burn the Odessa office building and aiding those who allegedly set it afire in November 1981. Hammond is also charged with lying twice in a deposition taken during a lawsuit over the insurance claim, which was settled for $160,000.

IF CONVICTED, Hammond faces up to 25 years in prison and a $40,000 fine. He could also lose his elected position in the aftermath of a federal felony conviction.

Weddel could serve up to 15 years in prison and pay a maximum fine of $20,000 if convicted of conspiracy and aiding in the alleged arson.

Bunton said Monday he would give the jury several hours today before reading them a "modified Allen charge," in which he instructs the 12 on the importance of reaching a verdict after the time and expense taken in the trial.

But after conferring today with the attorneys, the judge chose not to read the jury this charge.

"We feel too far apart to ever come up with a unanimous agreement," said the note read late Monday by Bunton.

The 12 jurors began their deliberations after hearing four hours of final statements from the two federal prosecutors and defense attorneys for Hammond and Weddel.

In these statements, the attorneys attempted to sum up six days of testimony and evidence entered last week.

WITNESSES FOR the federal government and defense gave often conflicting accounts of the alleged conspiracy leading up to the fire, the setting of the fire and the events following the Nov. 25, 1981, blaze that prompted this proceeding.

Prosecutor Thomas McHugh closed the summations. He admitted the poor character of many of the government's witnesses, but stressed the stories of the various people verified many of trial's key points.

"We bring the witnesses we have," he said, stressing that arsonists should not be expected to be of the finest character.

If given the choice, "I would not select the John Petersons of the world," McHugh said.

Peterson, who spent several days on the witness stand and gave the only testimony linking Weddel to the conspiracy, is in the federal witness protection program. He has been convicted of several felonies and was identified as a suspect in a murder during a 1984 Ector County trial.

McHugh suggested the testimony of L.C. Burditt and Lawrence Earl Peterson, who confessed to setting the fire during last week's proceedings, did match in enough places to prove the government's case.

Defense attorneys also attacked the credibility of these two men. Burditt, of Midland, is serving two years on probation for keeping a gambling place. Lawrence Peterson, brother of the other federal witness, has testified he is serving a 50-year sentence for an Andrews County burglary in federal custody.

THE PROSECUTOR abandoned the contention Weddel joined in the conspiracy after a civic center bond issue failed in December 1980 — ending hopes he could resell the building to the city for a profit.

"I believe he had plenty of money," McHugh said. "It was a simple business decision."

McHugh likened the case to a puzzle. "Standing alone these pieces may be insignificant," he said. "These meaningless pieces become significant. As you begin to put them together, you begin to realize what really happened."

He also noted the only two licensed fire investigators on the scene called it arson set with flammable liquids, while three Odessa fire department captains suggested the blaze was accidentally caused by a short in the electrical wiring.

Odessa attorney Warren Burnett warned the jury about convicting Hammond because of guilt "by mere association." He criticized the government's reliance on witnesses in their protection program.

"They're earning (their freedom from serving time in the Texas prison system) at the expense of innocent people — not only the innocent people who are charged here," Hammond's attorney said.

BURNETT, WHO told jurors he was not charging Hammond a fee for the case, noted the government's drawn-out investigation has forced the defendants and others to "live under a cloud" for more than three years.

"Finally, the whole world, through you, has heard the absolute truth of the matter," Burnett said.

Burnett and Weddel's attorney, Travis Shelton of Lubbock, attempted to discredit the evidence and testimony of the government's witnesses.

They said an alleged meeting between John Peterson, Weddel and Hammond that they brought evidence never happened was necessary to the government's case.

Shelton wondered why the investigators never questioned the two captains on the scene or the first fireman into the burning room during the three years since the fire.

"He only had one shot," said Shelton about Lawrence Peterson's testimony he had thrown a lighted Molotov cocktail through the second-story window of the suite being remodeled by Weddel.

Shelton noted John Peterson, the government's key witness, had originally told the FBI he had no knowledge of the fire, that Weddel and his partner, former Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant, were not involved and that he did not know the third owner, Odessa attorney Ray Stoker Jr.

The Lubbock lawyer also traced the evolution of Peterson's story as the investigation continued.

Prosecutor Ellen Byers started the final summations by tracing the chain of events the government alleges led to the fire. She explained she and McHugh had to prove the building was used in interstate commerce and the fire was set using an incendiary, such as the Molotov cocktail, to satisfy U.S. law.

Sponsorship of bridge is quite common in Europe. The latest example is the financial assistance offered by a commercial firm to one of Britain's finest young pairs, John Pottage and Mark Smith, to enable them to compete in British and European events and so gain international experience without having to worry about the expense.

In a recent British tournament, Pottage showed why he is regarded as a bright prospect. He and his partner reached four spades in a competitive auction and West led his fourth-best diamond. Declarer ruffed and many players took advantage of the fact that they were in hand to finesse the eight of hearts. East won the king and returned another diamond and, because of the 4-1 trump split, declarer could not get back to hand to draw trumps and, in most cases, went down three tricks.

Pottage found a way to protect against a bad trump break. Since East was likely to be short in hearts, declarer gave up on the immediate heart finesse in favor of cashing the ace-king of trumps. Had the suit split 3-2, he would have come back to hand with a diamond ruff, drawn the last trump and now taken a heart finesse. He would still have a trump to ruff another diamond as the entry for a second heart finesse.

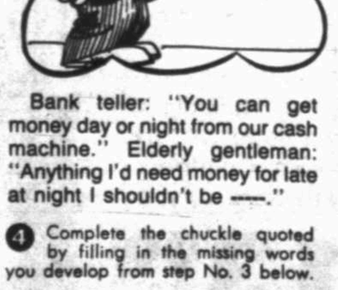

When trumps split 4-1, however, declarer led a low heart from dummy! Had East ducked, declarer would later have played to drop the remaining heart honor. As it was, East rose with the king and returned a diamond. Declarer ruffed, drew the last trump and ran the ten of hearts to secure his contract.

Mardi Gras may be best party in recent years

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Today is Mardi Gras, French for Fat Tuesday, and observers say an older, more affluent and better-behaved crowd — regardless of their state of sobriety — may make this the best one in recent years.

Zulu's arrival aboard the Cotton Blossom at the Canal Street wharf on the Mississippi River, scheduled for sometime after dawn, will start the parades that kick off the day-long climax to the Carnival season and clears the way for the start of the austerity of Lent in this predominantly Catholic area.

It will involve about a million people, drunk or sober.

"This is going to be a good Mardi Gras, probably one of the best in the last few years," predicted Nat Siegel, manager of a French Quarter restaurant. "The crowd seem to be more affluent, and maybe a little older. They are well behaved, they're spending money and there are not as many kids with backpacks."

"It's an older group and not the teenie-bopper groups we have had in the past," agreed Angie Brown, owner of a restaurant in the college district.

Crowds packing the parade routes have been the biggest ever reported and, as an unexpected development, officers get more respect, said police spokesman John Marie. "I saw a couple of arrests last night and as the officers walked the guys to the wagon they were cheered.

"A couple years ago they would have been booed. Time was, if you made an arrest during Carnival you could get beer thrown at you."

Police arrested 222 people on Sunday, compared with 278 on the same day last year and 300 in 1983, Marie said.

Two New Orleans policemen were suspended indefinitely without pay for drinking on duty during Sunday night's Bacchus parade, he said. The two had arrested two other men — one a member of the Federal Protective Service, which guards federal property — and the police department was investigating.

Best known for the cavorting in the French Quarter, the celebration scales down from high society balls to innumerable family-style sidewalk picnics along the noisy routes of 15 city and suburban parades that start with Zulu, peak with Rex and end with Comus.

And there will be the street preachers trying to stop the debauchery.

"There are more than 1,000 out-of-town people to share what God has done," said the Rev. Mark Meinschein of the Soul Patrol street ministry in Dallas. "We came to share with people a better way of life than partying."

H. Devon Graham Jr., a 59-year-old socialite businessman, was named Rex, to ride in splendid robes as King of Carnival in the Rex parade, the set piece of Mardi Gras.Mary Stewart Smallpage, 20, was chosen queen.

Mardi Gras costumes range from simple face painting to elaborate works of art and if the day is warm the getup can be scandalously scanty. The weather forecast was partly cloudy with temperatures near 70.

"I know that many doubted me. I know that many believed that I could not complete the run. I always knew I would.

"I wanted to get my message across to the world that I'm not physically handicapped. I was physically challenged."

Keith learned he had osteogenic sarcoma, or bone cancer, at age 12 after a hockey game. On Christmas Eve 1974, his right leg was amputated above the knee at St. Vincent's Hospital in Bridgeport, Conn.

Computer hackers "just want to prove how far they can get. They're not out to destroy or take data," said Wozniak, 34. "There's never been a hacker who ever took $10 out of a computer account."

Another chance

It was only three years ago when Barney Clark and Dr. William DeVries became practically household words overnight. Not that open-heart surgery wasn't anything new. Dr. Christiian Barnard had opened the field of modern medical technology long before.

But Clark became the forerunner of a new type of open-heart surgery, one in which the replacement heart isn't human but, instead, mechanical. Three years down the road, the mechanical heart crowd has gained its third member, Murray P. Haydon, and appears well on the way to yet another breakthrough for medical science.

There were some understandable qualms at first regarding use of mechanical apparatus to replace diseased or damaged human hearts. The human heart seems sacred, not capable of being duplicated by mere mortal devices.

Yet Clark was living proof for 112 days that man's organs can be replaced by machines. Next came William Schroeder who underwent the innovative heart operation in November and now comes Haydon who, doctors say, is doing extremely well following the operation.

"It went perfect, couldn't have gone better," commented Dr. DeVries following the 3½-hour operation Sunday.

Every breakthrough that challenges human acceptability of right or wrong for medical technology will require that mankind reshape thinking in terms of what can and should be done. A few years back the thought of doctors replacing human hearts with mechanical ones was, without a doubt, provocative. But why not? Haven't doctors replaced limbs with artificial ones for centuries?

Mechanical heart surgery promises to give prolonged life to thousands of people whose human organs are wearing out. The doctors say it's better than a transplanted human heart, which can be subject to failure as the body adjusts following surgery.

Haydon is just one of a few pioneers leading the way into a this brave new field. All of mankind owes them a vote of gratitude for a better human life.

Seeds of capitalism

Shanghai once was one of the leading trading and banking centers of the world. It was called the "Paris of the Orient." Then the communists took over.

Since that happened, in 1949, the finance game has been played under the old Power Rule. The communists have the power, and they make the rules. The people owned nothing. Thus, there was little need for a stock exchange and the banking houses. They were closed.

But a curious thing happened. The Communist government, under enlightenment from Deng Xiaoping, decreed that business firms could finance expansion plans by selling stock to the public.

First to take advantage of the new order was Shanghai Yanzhong Industrial Co. It put 100,000 shares on sale at $17.38 a share — first come, first served.

How did the firm make out? It sold the entire issue in less than eight hours. Shanghai citizens quickly forgot the warnings about the evils of capitalism. Thousands formed a queue a mile long.

The first man in line bought 40 shares. Behind him was an elderly woman who must have had some capitalistic spirit left over from the pre-communist days, because she whipped out 10,000 yuan (about $3,500) and bought 200 shares. Most buyers, however, purchased only one share of stock — enough for a small taste of capitalism.

The stock-sale breakthrough certainly doesn't mean that China is becoming capitalistic overnight — far from it. But, you plant a seed.

Views on the Democratic Party's future

President's agenda

President Reagan's call for a "second American revolution" should be regarded as more than an oratorical flourish. It is clear that Reagan means to alter the relationship between the American people and their government.

In his State of the Union address, Reagan said he wants his second term "to finish what has not yet been done." His domestic goals include less government interference in the economy, less spending on social programs and continued resistance to increased taxes.

That was part of the message to which voters responded by re-electing Reagan in a landslide in 1984. But the reaction to the president's budget proposals shows that some Americans will not be weaned easily from government.

Congress has signaled that the president will be hard-pressed to get all the cuts he wants in spending that largely aids the middle class. Such programs as veterans' benefits, federal worker and military pensions, student loans and Amtrak have powerful supporters.

To enact his program, the president may have to overcome the alliances between Congress, the bureaucracy and the special interest groups. It's often hard for Congress to buck the various lobbies that would be affected by the president's proposals. But this president has an effective weapon: his personal popularity among the American people. He may have to "go over the head" of Congress to get the changes he seeks.

Reagan has already won a victory with the general acknowledgement that federal social spending must be cut and that no tax increase may be approved this year. That would be a departure from the past pattern of constant increases in social spending.

The federal budget deficit, of course, is a primary reason for reducing spending. But the deficit is aso a convenient way for the president to push his belief that the role of government should be reduced. In effect, the president is saying that economic prosperity and "the opportunity society" are being held hostage by high social spending.

Reagan wants to transform the United States. He wants drastic reductions in the role of government and in people's expectations of government. If he is successful, it would truly represent a "second American revolution."

DEA agent's death questionable

WASHINGTON — Long-suppressed evidence sheds new light on the mysterious death of a decorated Drug Enforcement Administration agent six years ago — and on the dubious techniques the drug agency used to go after him.

Jack Anderson

The agent, Sante Bario, suffered a seizure in a San Antonio, Texas, jail cell in 1979, lapsed into a coma and died several months later without regaining consciousness.

He had been arrested and was awaiting trial after a DEA informant charged that he had paid Bario $9,000 to be allowed to keep 5 kilos of cocaine involved in an undercover operation.

According to the official account of his death, Bario choked on a peanut butter sandwich. But initial tests reportedly showed traces of poison in his system.

Bario's widow, Joanne, told my associate Donald Goldberg that her husband was merely holding the money as a favor for the informant, who was afraid his girlfriend would get it. The widow will tell her story in a book, "Fatal Dreams," that is to be published this month.

The case against Bario depended entirely on the informant's word. A tape recording he claimed to have made of the bribe transaction turned out to be blank. The marked bills remained intact in Bario's safe, according to the widow.

A federal judge ordered Bario's posthumous reinstatement, thus securing the widow her survivor benefits, but she wants to clear her husband's name once and for all. New documents, uncovered by her attorney, former Watergate prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste, point to self-serving motivation on the informant's part to set Bario up for a fall: He was not only paid generously by DEA, but was promised help in gaining American citizenship.

"(The informant) was paid a reward of $50,000 for the Bario investigation," states an internal DEA memo dated March 1, 1979. "The Office of Internal Security had also agreed ... to obtain necessary Immigration documents in order that he could reside in the United States. However, it is apparent that (the informant) has committed serious violations of the law, and because of this, Internal Security is not under obligation to obtain these Immigration documents ...."

Another report, dated May 23, 1979, noted that the informant "is under investigation ... and it is anticipated that an indictment against him will be forthcoming."

What did the DEA know about the informant? He had talked a buddy of his, Alain Chaillou, into running a smuggling errand for him, claiming it was a DEA operation.

The informant had left a 1.9-kilo stash of cocaine in Mexico, and couldn't retrieve it himself for fear of his underworld enemies there. So he got Chaillou to pick it up and take it to Bogota, Colombia, promising that Chaillou would have DEA protection.

Instead, Chaillou was arrested at the Bogota airport. The informant called DEA with a cock-and-bull story, then left Chaillou twisting in the wind. The U.S. and Colombian authorities wouldn't swallow his story that he was smuggling drugs for the DEA.

Eventually, one DEA investigator became convinced that Chaillou was telling the truth and concluded in a written report that the arrest "was the direct result of Chaillou's entrapment."

Despite the evidence of the informant's illicit behavior, the U.S. attorney in Puerto Rico, where the informant lived, told the DEA he "did not feel there was sufficient evidence to indict." The prosecutor said he could have gotten an indictment against the informant, but that "the evidence simply wasn't enough to convict."

As to why the DEA was out to get one of its top agents, the speculation is that Bario knew too much about certain questionable DEA practices that were under investigation at the time.

Footnote: A DEA spokesman refused to discuss the Bario case.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: If the Soviets are disappointed in the Greek Socialist government's failure to force American military bases to close, they're not admitting it.

A recent cable from the U.S. Embassy in Moscow reports on a lecture on Greece by a leading Soviet expert. Asked why the Socialists hadn't sent the U.S. military packing — as they promised they would — the Soviet analyst explained: "Greece has discovered that its ties to the United States are so great that it could not move as decisively in this area as would, say, a more independent country."

CHARLEY REESE

Lithuanians fighting our battle

The date, Feb. 18, probably wasn't recognized as significant by most Americans. Lithuanian Americans, howecer, celebrate that date as the anniversary of the restoration of the independence of the Lithuanian Republic. It happened on Feb. 18, 1918.

Charley Reese

Today, Lithuania is one of many countries in the Russian-Communist empire we call the Soviet Union. The United States does not recognize the Soviet Union's annexatin of Lithuania and neither do Lithuanians, in or ut of the Soviet empire.

Because we have the same enemy and, if we re not careful, could share the same fate, Lithuania's storey is not at all irrelevant to Americans.

Lithuania was gobbled up by the Soviet Union in June 1940, one of the fruits of the infamous Hitler-Stalin Pact. You may remember those days when American communists were demonstrating in front of the White House to keep the United States out of the war with the Soviet Union's ally, Nazi Germany.

In a single night, the Soviets shipped 30,000 members of Lithuania's intelligentsia off to Siberia. Counting deportatins and executions, the first Soviet occupa5tion cost 45,000 Lithuanian lives.

The next year the Nazis turned on their Soviet allies. You remember, that's when American communist reversed themselves in mid-air and began to scream for the United States to enter the war to save the world for democracy. The Nazis occupied Lithuania, slaughtered its Jews, and sent Lithuanian resistors to nazi camps.

When the Red Army came back later in the war, 60,000 Lithuanians were shipped off to Siberia. In 1945-46, about 145,000 Lithuanians were forcibly removed from their native land. In 1949, as part of th forced collectivization of agriculture, another 60,000 people were deported.

During the years of 1945 to 1953, tens of thousands of Lithuanian youths fled to the forests and fought the Soviets as partisans until they were hunted down by the Red Army and the secret police and killed. Most of the world never knew of these anonymous heroes or of their deths.

You might think that after such terrible pressures Lithuania today would be throroughly Sovietized, but you would be wrong. Lithuanians still resist. Lithuanians till end up in the Gulag but they cotinue to produce underground literature and they hang tenaciously to their Catholic faith, to their language, to their culture, and to their heritage.

You know, we are so blessed in this country that we frequently take ur blessings for granted. Some Americans are frankly unworthy of them.

I have little regard for Americans who keep silent because they are afraid of losing a little busines or getting a little flack from their neighbors. How can such people look themselves in the face when they know that men and women around the world are dying for the right of free speech?

I have no use for businessmen who contribute to officeholders whose philosophy they know is anti-liberty simply because they sit on committees whose legislation affects their business. A million Americans did not die to create a tax-break for business.

Americans eager to sell out others who are fighting for the same liberties we enjoy just to avoid a confrontatin aren't worth puking over. I'm talking specifically about those who refuse to support Nicaraguans fighting for a free Nicaragua and those who aid to the totalitarian guerrillas in el Salvador and try to coerce the free Salvadorans into aking concessions to those guerrillas.

Most Americans, I guess, think it can never happen here. The joy ride will never end. The Soviets factor that into their plans. If I'm planning to kill you and you think I never will even try it, which of us has the advantage?

There are no freebies in the world. Those who will not pay the price of freedom will surely pay the price of slavery. The Soviet Union is working day and night to give Americans a chance to share Lithuania's experience.

If we do not rouse ourselves, we'll find out the hard way that those thousands of dead Lithuanian youths really were our brothers and sisters and really were fighting our battle.

Mattox 'threatened war,' lawyer testifies

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox threatened to "go to war" with a Houston law firm if one of its attorneys did not stop trying to question Mattox's sister, a member of the firm said.

"I knew our bond business was in jeopardy," Wiley Caldwell, head of the muinicipal bond division of Fulbright & Jaworski, testified in state district court Monday during the first day of the second week of Mattox' commercial bribery trial.

Caldwell said Mattox called him June 15, 1983, and said he was angered because Thomas McDade, a Fulbright & Jaworski lawyer, wanted to take a deposition from Janice Mattox, a Dallas lawyer.

"I was really concerned because I had spent 30 years building up our bond business," said Caldwell. "He said unless I straightened out this thing with McDade there would be a complete breach between the attorney general's office and our bond business.

"If we had war with the attorney general it would mean eventually we would be out of business," Caldwell said.

All municipal bond issues must be cleared by the attorney general before being sold.

Another witness, Thomas Asher of New York, a general counsel for Mobil Oil Corp., said McDade, acting for Mobil, needed to question Mattox's sister to see if Laredo Judge Ruben Garcia should be disqualified from handling a suit filed against Mobil by South Texas rancher Clinton Manges and the state.

Caldwell left the stand after completing his direct testimony and will return Wednesday for cross examination by defense attorneys.

Caldwell, a former money raiser for Mattox's political campaigns, said when Mattox called him "He was angry, mad, and upset.

"He said if we did not stop McDade there would be a war and a complete breach between his office and ours," Caldwell said.

At the time, Caldwell said, Fulbright & Jaworski had 17 bond issues pending before the attorney general, totaling about $1 billion.

He said he talked with Mattox later and Mattox claimed McDade "was unlawyerlike and promised to use everything within his power to win the war between his office and Fulbright & Jaworski."

Asher said he hired Fulbright & Jaworski to represent Mobil Oil in the $1.7 billion lawsuit. Manges, joined by Mattox, claimed Mobil owed both Manges and the state money for not fully developing an a 65,000-acre oil lease on Manges ranch in Duval County. The case was settled last year.

Asher said a deposition taken from Manges told of a meeting at Manges' ranch attended by Mattox, the judge and Manges.

"There were also news stories about Mattox and his sister receiving sizable loans from Seafirst (National Bank in Seattle), where Manges had borrowed money," Asher said. "It appeared to us that all these people were players — the attorney general, his sister, the judge, Seafirst and Manges."

It was at this point, Asher said, that McDade asked to take another deposition from Mattox and to question Janice Mattox, a Dallas lawyer.

"McDade had a hunch that all these were players. The attorney general was close to Manges, and Manges was close to Garcia," Asher said.

Sanctuary workers' second trial begins

HOUSTON (AP) — A former school teacher who runs a church-sponsored shelter for Central Americans faces 30 years in prison as he and a woman accused of illegally transporting illegal aliens go on trial for the second time.

A jury seated on Monday in U.S. District Court was to hear opening arguments today in the case of sanctuary workers Jack Elder, 41, and Stacey Lynn Merkt, 30.

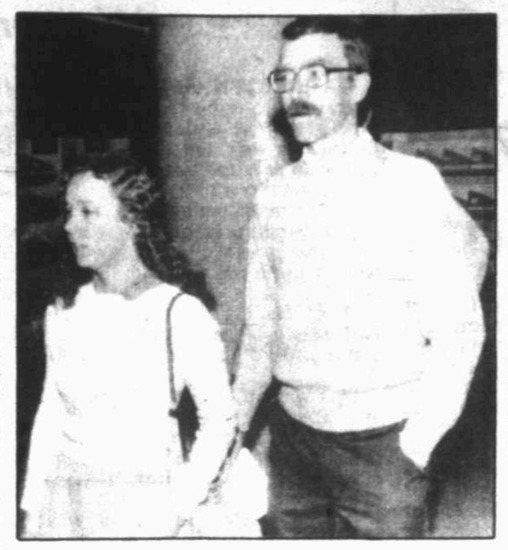

They are accused of violating U.S. immigration laws by conspiring to transport two Salvadorans last November.

Visiting U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela said he expected the case to last about three days. The judge earlier this month moved the case from Brownsville, about 325 miles southwest of Houston, because of extensive publicity.

Elder left his San Antonio teaching job in August 1983 to become director of Casa Oscar Romero, a Roman Catholic Church-sponsored shelter for Central Americans in the Texas border town of San Benito.

Charges against Elder include two counts of conspiracy and two counts of helping two Salvadoran aliens enter the United States and transporting them to the shelter.

If convicted, he could receive up to 30 years in prison.

Stacey Lynn Merkt, 30, left, and Jack Elder, 41, arrive at the Federal Courthouse in Houston Monday for the start of their trial. They are accused of violating U.S. immigration laws by transporting two illegal Salvadoran aliens.

AP Laserphoto

Ms. Merkt, a volunteer at the shelter, is charged with conspiracy and transporting the Salvadorans about 40 miles from the shelter to a bus station in McAllen.

Ms. Merkt is on two years' probation on a similar conviction last May in Vela's court. If found guilty on the latest charges, she could receive up to 15 years in prison and have her probation revoked.

Last month in Corpus Christi, Elder was acquitted of charges of transporting three Salvadorans in March 1984. The jury agreed with defense contentions that Elder did not further the Salvadorans' movement into the United States by merely giving them a ride to the bus station.

Defense attorneys argued news coverage of the other trials would make it impossible to find an impartial jury.

Vela agreed and has ordered the defendants and attorneys for both sides not to discuss the case in public.

Bishop John James Fitzpatrick, whose diocese operates the shelter, said Monday that Brownsville area residents are "pretty much polarized" over Elder's and Ms. Merkt's roles in the sanctuary movement.

Fitzpatrick said he made a personal loan — "mine and the bank's" to post $2,500 bond for Elder and $25,000 for Ms. Merkt.

"I'm one of many, I think, who support them. I'm very proud of them," Fitzpatrick said. "I think they're doing something that's not only Christian, but American."

The bishop said he sees the Salvadoran aliens as political refugees. The government says they're economic refugees who should not be allowed political status.

Should suicide prevention join school curriculum?

HOUSTON (AP) — Experts say suicide-prevention courses should be a required part of school curriculum, but they disagree about how it should be implemented and at what age.

A program of training and a system for recognizing students at risk of suicide may be appropriate because of the rising number of teen suicides, says Janel Miller, a psychologist and a consultant to the Clear Creek School district near Houston.

"It's up 300 percent in the last 20 years," said Mrs. Miller. "The rate is pretty significant. It's pretty scary."

Legislators in California and Florida already have mandated suicide education programs in schools as the result of a growing number of teens who take their own lives.

In Texas, Sue Mihalik of the Texas Education Agency has proposed suicide prevention education beginning in elementary school. The Katy Independent School District already has started such a program and in Dallas, Judi Smith of Suicide Prevention of Texas is proposing suicide education be included in curriculums there.

Mrs. Miller says the Clear Creek School district is looking at the possibility of including suicide prevention courses in the junior high curriculum.

Clear Creek experienced six suicides among students or former students within a year's time, triggering a program of crisis intervention in the Houston suburban community.

Mrs. Miller said a program that would introduce the suicide prevention training in the 7th grade would be useful, but such a program in high school "is too late."

The psychologist said that a program in elementary school would not be useful because children that young have not yet fully grasped the fact of death, much less the concept of suicide.

Ms. Mihalik, however, believes that training to prevent suicides could start in kindergarten with decision-making and study skills, and later, at about age 9, the topic of suicide could be introduced.

"High school is way too late to start something like that," said Ms. Mihalik. "Students should be taught when they are young how to deal with various situations rather than waiting until they get into a crisis situation."

Some parents and educators believe suicide education should be something that requires parental permission, in the same way that courses in sex education require permission in some districts, said Judi Smith of Suicide Prevention of Texas.

"They believe if you talk about death, students will do it," said Ms. Smith.

Mrs. Miller said Clear Creek and a number of other school districts that have experienced a series of teen suicides recently are now being studied by experts from the Centers for Disease Control. She said they are searching for factors that lead to teen suicides.

Convicted killer spared trip to death chamber

WACO (AP) — A convicted killer scheduled for execution this week for his part in the slayings of two men has been spared a trip to the Texas death chamber.

Carl Eugene Kelly, 25, of Waco, was ordered to die by injection before sunrise Thursday. But U.S. District Judge Walter Smith blocked the execution Friday to give a full hearing on a writ of habeas corpus.

Lynn Malone, who was the lead prosecutor in the case, said Monday that Kelly deserved a stay because some "factual and legal" issues should be resolved.

"I don't know that there are problems, but legitimate questions that should be reviewed," he said. "It shouldn't be reviewed with him laying on the table. It's something that should be done with time and thought.

"I think there's a question about the admissibility of his statement that never has been reviewed. He gave a statement in which he admitted involvement. And he has made some allegations that he stopped talking, that he told the police he didn't want to talk with them, and that they re-initiated a conversation with him," Malone said.

Kelly's execution date, set in December by State District Judge George Allen, was his first.

Kelly was convicted Sept. 2, 1980, of the slaying and robbery of Steven Pryor, 18, who was abducted from a Waco convenience store, taken to the city's Cameron Park and fatally shot.

Also killed in the incident was David Wade Riley, a transient who had been asleep in Pryor's car.

After Riley and Pryor were shot, their bodies were tossed over a 60-foot cliff known as Lover's Leap to the banks of the Bosque River below.

Thomas Graves, also of Waco, pleaded guilty to both killings, as well as the slaying of Edward Traywick the day before. Graves, 20 at the time, received a life prison term.

Some agencies give raises above mandated 3 percent

AUSTIN (AP) — Although state lawmakers approved only a 3 percent pay hike, some state agencies granted 1984 raises averaging up to 12.39 percent, according to a list compiled by legislative budget analysts.

"The agencies find the money," said Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, chairman of the calendars committee. "If we allow them 3 percent again this year, they'll find the money again to get the raises they want these people to have."

The extra pay hike comes in the form of merit raises financed by transferring money, Messer said.

The list compiled by the Legislative Budget Board and comptroller's office was distributed to House committee chairman at a Monday luncheon with Speaker Gib Lewis.

Also Monday, the Texas State Employees Union complained about pay raises its members have received.

"Year after year we've had our workloads increased, earned comp time we can never take, watched minuscule cost-of-living raises hailed as major events," Wayne Smith, chairman of the TSEU legislative committee, said at a Capitol news conference.

The 1983 Legislature authorized 3 percent annual pay hikes for state workers. The figures distributed to House committee chairmen showed that workers at 63 of the 75 state agencies (not including higher education) got raises greater than the authorized 3 percent.

The National Guard Armory Board awarded the highest average 1984 raises — 12.39 percent — according to the chart prepared by the Legislative Budget Board and comptroller's office.

Lewis said the 3 percent raise is not the whole story.

"I have privilege to some figures that show otherwise," he said of the salary study.

Messer said agency heads find the money by transferring funds or using money from unfilled posts.

"The average employee in almost all cases is getting more than 3 percent," he said, adding that he does not "begrudge" raises in agencies that can find the money.

White, lawmakers to be briefed on prison report

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White and lawmakers were to be briefed today on a consultants' report that could be the backdrop for the state prison system's budget request.

The Texas Department of Corrections hired a Dallas firm to look at prison facilities and determine their capacities.

TDC Director Ray Procunier told a House subcommittee Monday that he believes the prison system needs more maximum security cells. Procunier did not bring any specific money requests to the House Law Enforcement Committee panel.

"Texas is under the misunderstanding that the whole system is maximum security," Procunier said.

TDC needs maximum security units for 4-7 percent of the approximately 33,000 inmates, he said.

"Texas has way too many dormitories (for inmates) already. Texas should never build another dormitory," said Procunier.

Actress evaluates her congressional defeat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Kulp of "The Beverly Hillbillies" fame doesn't blame fellow Hillbilly Buddy Ebsen for her election defeat last fall — but she thinks he should have stayed out of the congressional race.

Ebsen, who starred with Ms. Kulp on the long-running television program in the 1960s and early 1970s, recorded a radio commercial for her opponent, Republican Rep. Bud Shuster. In the spot, broadcast several weeks before the election, Ebsen said, "Nancy, I love you dearly but you're too liberal for me."

Ms. Kulp still bristles when she thinks about the ad. "How dare he! It wasn't his business," she said.

But there were other reasons for her defeat, she acknowledged, notably her lack of political savvy, a shortage of campaign dollars and the popularity of President Reagan in Shuster's sprawling, rural Pennsylvania district.

"I didn't play the game, I guess," Ms. Kulp, 63, said in a recent telephone interview from Los Angeles. She left her restored, three-story farmhouse in Port Royal, Pa., following the election to visit friends in California.

Although she raised $73,143 in campaign funds last year, Shuster, who was seeking his seventh House term, reported contributions of $269,597, according to campaign finance reports. Ms. Kulp reported gifts of $29,471 from political action committees; Shuster $138,817.

Following years of involvement in local party politics and with the Screen Actors Guild, Ms. Kulp said seeking office was satisfying because "you finally get to put your convictions on the line. It was one of the highlights of my life."

But the experience left her with a feeling there was an image barrier between her and the voters that she could not surmount.

"You're turned off by the distortions," she said. "My feeling is a candidate is elected because they are perceived to be something. Ronald Reagan never talked issues; he waved the flag and the people loved it.

"I was perceived to be an ultra-liberal. If that is their perception — even if they like me — then I can't win."

Shuster garnered 66 percent of the vote last November, while Ms. Kulp, running on the Democratic ticket, attracted just 34 percent of the voters.

The experience, she said, has left her "ambivalent" about the elective process and doubtful she will seek public office again.

Ferraro's candidacy still has impact

Women's issues more important than candidate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro's bid to be the first woman vice president ended in crushing defeat last year, but the New York politician says the impact it had on the nation is continuing.

"I was in Bloomingdale's...returning Christmas presents," Ms. Ferraro said last week. "And a woman walked up to me and said, 'You are — ?' "

"Yes," Ms. Ferraro replied to the half-asked question. "And she said, 'I think I'm going to cry.' And she did."

That woman's reaction symbolizes one effect of the Ferraro campaign — the political stimulation and identification women gained by seeing a member of their sex on the national ticket for the first time.

But the debate continues on what the former Queens congresswoman's effort means for women candidates in the future and women in politics generally.

Ethel Klein, a political scientist from Columbia University, argues that the lessons of 1984 indicate running a woman candidate might not be the ticket either to victory or to advancing issues of concern to women.

"If the tradeoff is a woman candidate or a discussion of women's issues by other candidates, choose the discussion of women's issues," she told reporters last week.

Warning that her stance might be considered heresy by some women, Ms. Klein said female voters respond to candidates that address issues in terms relevant to women, not just to women candidates.

"The women's vote is not women voting for women candidates," she said. "It's women voting on issues of concern to women."

And Ms. Klein believes the Mondale-Ferraro campaign failed to do that, saying it "went for symbol and not substance.

"By not focusing on the substantive concerns of women, the Democrats provided a vacuum in which the Republican message could diffuse some of the women's vote," she added, even while admitting that a change in strategy would have shaved only a slim margin off the landslide defeat.

But the lessons of 1984 are not uniformly negative for women, as Ms. Ferraro's story of the chance department-store encounter suggests.

Women registered and voted in record numbers in 1984, going to the polls in larger percentages than men for the first time in at least 20 years, the U.S. Census Bureau reported.

Ms. Ferraro's candidacy apparently played a major role in that surge, as did the efforts of dozens of national women's groups to get women active in the political process. For example, Joanne Howes of the Women's Vote Project declared victory for her group last week, saying its participating organizations registered 1.8 million new women voters in 1984.

And women are still exhibiting substantial political clout, Ms. Klein said, as they try to block a massive realignment of the nation's political system that would give Republicans control for years to come.

The last such realignment came with Franklin D. Roosevelt's victories and the surge in Democratic strength in the 1930s.

"The women's vote is important because it is stalling a realignment," said Ms. Klein. "The Democrats are in trouble with everybody, except the blacks and the Jews."

She pointed to poll results that showed women providing the margin of victory in many Senate and House races in 1984, helping preserve the Democratic majority in the House and giving the Democrats two new seats in the GOP-controlled Senate.

But the women's vote is not monolithic, Ms. Klein noted, echoing a stance repeated over and over by the Republicans in 1984.

Kidnapped journalist holds no animosity toward captors

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (AP) — Television journalist Jeremy Levin, who spent 11 months in "irons and misery" while being held captive in eastern Lebanon, says he feels no animosity toward his abductors and just hopes four other American captives will be let go.

Levin, who was cheered by about 100 family members, friends and State Department officials upon his return here Monday, thanked President Reagan, Syrian leaders and soldiers, and "many officials who you and I may never know (who) worked long, hard and anonymously to rescue me."

"Boy, I missed you," the 52-year-old Cable News Network reporter told well-wishers at this suburban Washington, D.C., air base. But he said he was not angry with his captors, even though he "literally sat in darkness and deep gloom...in irons and misery" during his captivity, which began with his March 7 abduction from war-torn Beirut.

"I am not bitter, I am not angry," Levin said after he departed an Air Force C-135 jet while waving a small American flag and hugging his wife, Lucille. "But I am glad to be free."

Levin, who may have been held in the same house in eastern Lebanon with four other Americans believed to be hostages, appealed to the kidnappers: "Let my brothers go. Let your brothers go. In the name of our common lord, God and Allah, please let them go."

Levin said he escaped early Wednesday and was discovered by a Syrian Army patrol "hiding in sheer terror" beneath a truck. He said that although he was dirty, shoeless and without identification papers, he was treated "gently, kindly and courteously" by those soldiers.

U.S. military hospital officials in West Germany said Levin was in satisfactory condition.

Papers called 'smoking gun'

ROCKLAND, Mass. (AP) — Formerly classified federal documents provide the "smoking gun" to prove that U.S. officials allowed Nazi collaborators to live in this country, says a former Department of Justice investigator.

A secret unit of the State Department recruited leaders of a group of Nazi collaborators from Byelorussia, or White Russia, which Nazis occupied from 1941 to 1945, according to lawyer John Loftus, author of "The Belarus Secret," written in 1981 after he left the Office of Special Investigations.

The collaborators were brought to the United States after World War II so U.S. authorities could learn about the Soviet Union, and at least 300 are still living in this country, Loftus said Monday.

Loftus wrote about the documents, which he saw while he worked for OSI, in his book, but agreed not to quote from them directly or mention his source.The documents were subsequently declassified.

Protesters face charges

HIGGINSVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Five anti-nuclear protesters face trespassing charges after they jumped the fence at a Minuteman 2 missile site following a support rally for other arrested demonstrators, authorities said.

The five were among about 100 people who rallied on Monday near the silo about 35 miles east of Kansas City in support of four people arrested in November after they broke into the silo site and damaged it with a jackhammer.

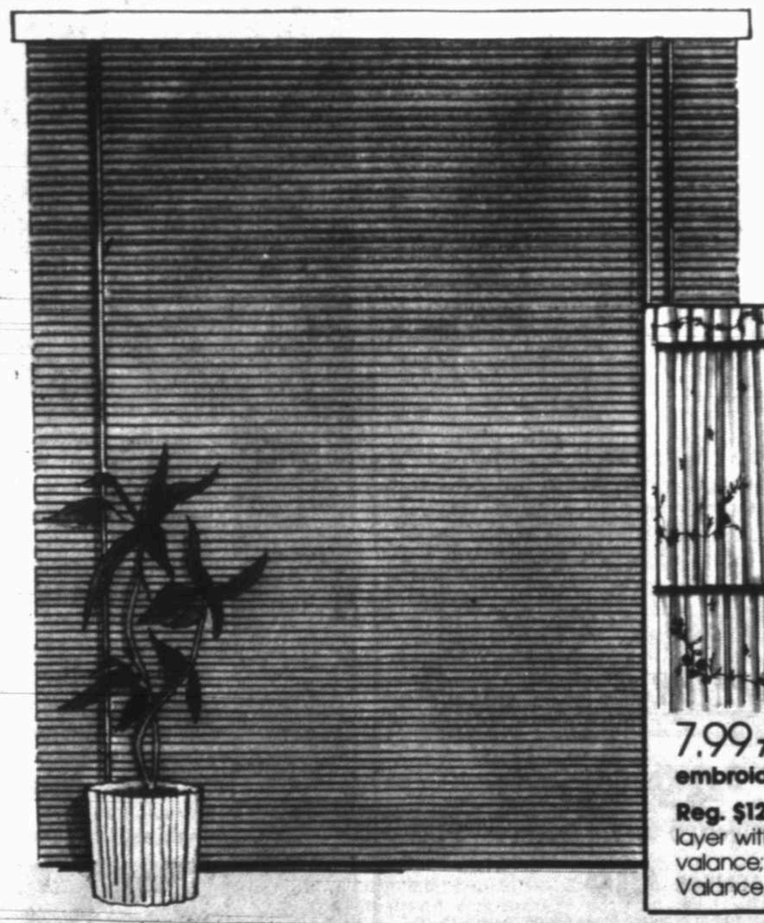

Trial for the four arrested earlier is scheduled to begin today on charges of conspiracy to destroy government property and damaging national defense material. They have been held without bond because they said they would re-enter the site.

Airline gets plane back

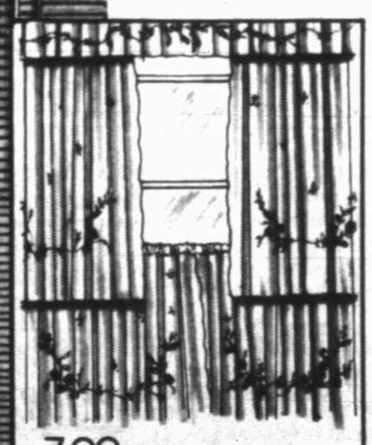

MIAMI (AP) — The Colombian airline Avianca provided $1 million and a $983,400 promissory note to get back a jet seized after the discovery of 2,478 pounds of cocaine in a shipment of Valentine's Day flowers, officials said.

The Boeing 747, worth $119 million, was released Monday after talks between the head of the U.S. Customs service and the Colombian government, said Customs spokesman Clifton Stallings.

Rebels meet Eagles for playoff seeding

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — With Amarillo Palo Duro and Lubbock Monterey waiting in the wings, District 4-5A will take care of its final basketball business here at 8 p.m. today in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum as Midland Lee meets Abilene High in a one-game district playoff.

Both Lee and Abilene are state playoff bound regardless of tonight's outcome. This game was forced because both teams finished 4-5A play with identical 11-3 loop records, a dead solid tie for first place.

THE WINNER will enter the playoffs as the 4-5A champion against Palo Duro. The loser will gain state admission as the district runnerup against Monterey.

Regardless of tonight's outcome, there will be a lot of coin-flipping and decision-making going on after the game. Representatives of all four teams will decide on bi-district playoff dates and sites following the Lee-AHS contest.

"People from both Monterey and Palo Duro will be at the game and we will decide all the bi-district particulars after our game," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler.

Stueckler isn't keeping it secret on how he would like to finish against Abilene High. "I'd rather be first. There is no question about that. That's just the way I am and that doesn't have anything to do with who we will be playing in bi-district."

It was learned over the weekend that Palo Duro lost two starters when Ronnie Stieger, who is averaging over 20 points per game, and guard Gerry Smith were kicked off the team after being picked up for credit card abuse. Since the Lee-AHS winner will catch Palo Duro, tonight's game may have added importance, but Stueckler wasn't playing that game.

"Our thoughts are on winning the district championship," said Stueckler. "I'm sure that losing two starters, if that's true, will hurt Palo Duro, but there are pros and cons to playing both teams.

"MONTEREY is a great shooting team and is well organized. Palo Duro has some great leapers that can cause you a lot of trouble and they beat Caprock easily last Friday without their two starters.

"Still, I think it is to our advantage to beat Abilene High because it helps your momentum. It also helps, whether we win or lose, because the big plus of playing Abilene High is that it's better to play than to sit. I think this game will help both teams."

Then Stueckler joked, "Then again, maybe we should lose. Someone told me the other day that three of the five state football champions were runnerups. Maybe we should lose."

But if anyone had any thoughts that the Rebels would be taking this one lightly, Stueckler dispelled the notion as he headed to Monday's workout with two full pages of practice notes. A full practice schedule was in hand, complete with play diagrams and workout program.

Stueckler looked at the list of things to accomplish and joked, "This game is no big deal. We just do this to keep the kids busy." He followed with a laugh.

Chaps club Howard

Binns near perfect in second half

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — Midland College won by 18 over Howard College, 81-63, at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Monday night, but it wasn't as easy as it looked.

The Chaps trailed by seven, 39-32, at intermission and appeared in danger of losing their share of first place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference race.

But 6-9 Teviin Binns led the second half charge, going 8-for-8 from the field and was almost perfect. He had no explanation for that missed free throw.

MC will take a 12-2 WJCAC record into Thursday night's Frank Phillips College game at Chap Center and with the come-from-behind win against the Hawks, go 22-4 for the season.

HOWARD MAY be just 6-9 in WJCAC and 12-13 for the season, but the nucleus from last year's championship team, which makes up the starting five, is as good as any team in the league. At least, when they play MC.

It's when the Hawks have to go to the bench that the trouble begins and that's the way it was Monday. As the fouls took their toll in the second half, HC's bench proved the Hawks' undoing.

Shooting 14 of 25 from the field in the first half, with Bruce Kimble scoring 18 of his 28 points in the opening 20 minutes, Howard forged ahead 29-19 with 5:20 left in the half on a 12-2 run.

MC's troubles in the first half weren't only on the scoreboard. Lawrence Chumbley went down with a twisted knee in the first minute of play and never returned.

MC TRAILED 39-32 at intermission and Binns had just nine points, most of those bitterly contested by the small posse assigned to keep the New York native away from the basket. Also, with two fingers on the left hand tapped together as a result of an injury last Thursday, Binns was a one-handed shooter.

But Binns' shooting turned things around in the second half. The difference? "They just had one man guarding me in the second half and I had some shooting room."

Of course, it wasn't all Teviin. Chuckie Graves scored eight of his 14 points while Zeak Williams had six of his 10 points, Ricky Grace pitched in all six of his points while Pookey Wigington, Zeak Williams and Vernon Coleman turned in all around floor performances.

Williams six assists and three steals, which keeps him high among WJCAC swipe leaders. Coleman had three assists and his five steals were tops.

Graves led with 10 rebounds, grabbing seven in the first half, while Binns had only four for the night, but then in the second half with MC shooting 19 for 28, there wasn't much coming off the offensive boards.

A quickie diagnosis on Chumbley is "knee ligaments" and the prediction is that he will be out for a few games, pending a more through exam today.

"Miss some games...are you kidding. I'll be ready Thursday," Chumbley vows.

MC QUICKLY reduced Howard's lead in the second half, finding the Hawks vulnerable inside, to score on post baskets by Tony Wright, Binns and then Graves soloed on set up off a backcourt ball-slap by Binns. That cut it to 39-38.

MC finally went ahead 47-46 on two free throws by Coleman and a Wright basket on a Binns feed. But it was only 53-52 MC with 9:18 left. That's when MC took charge.

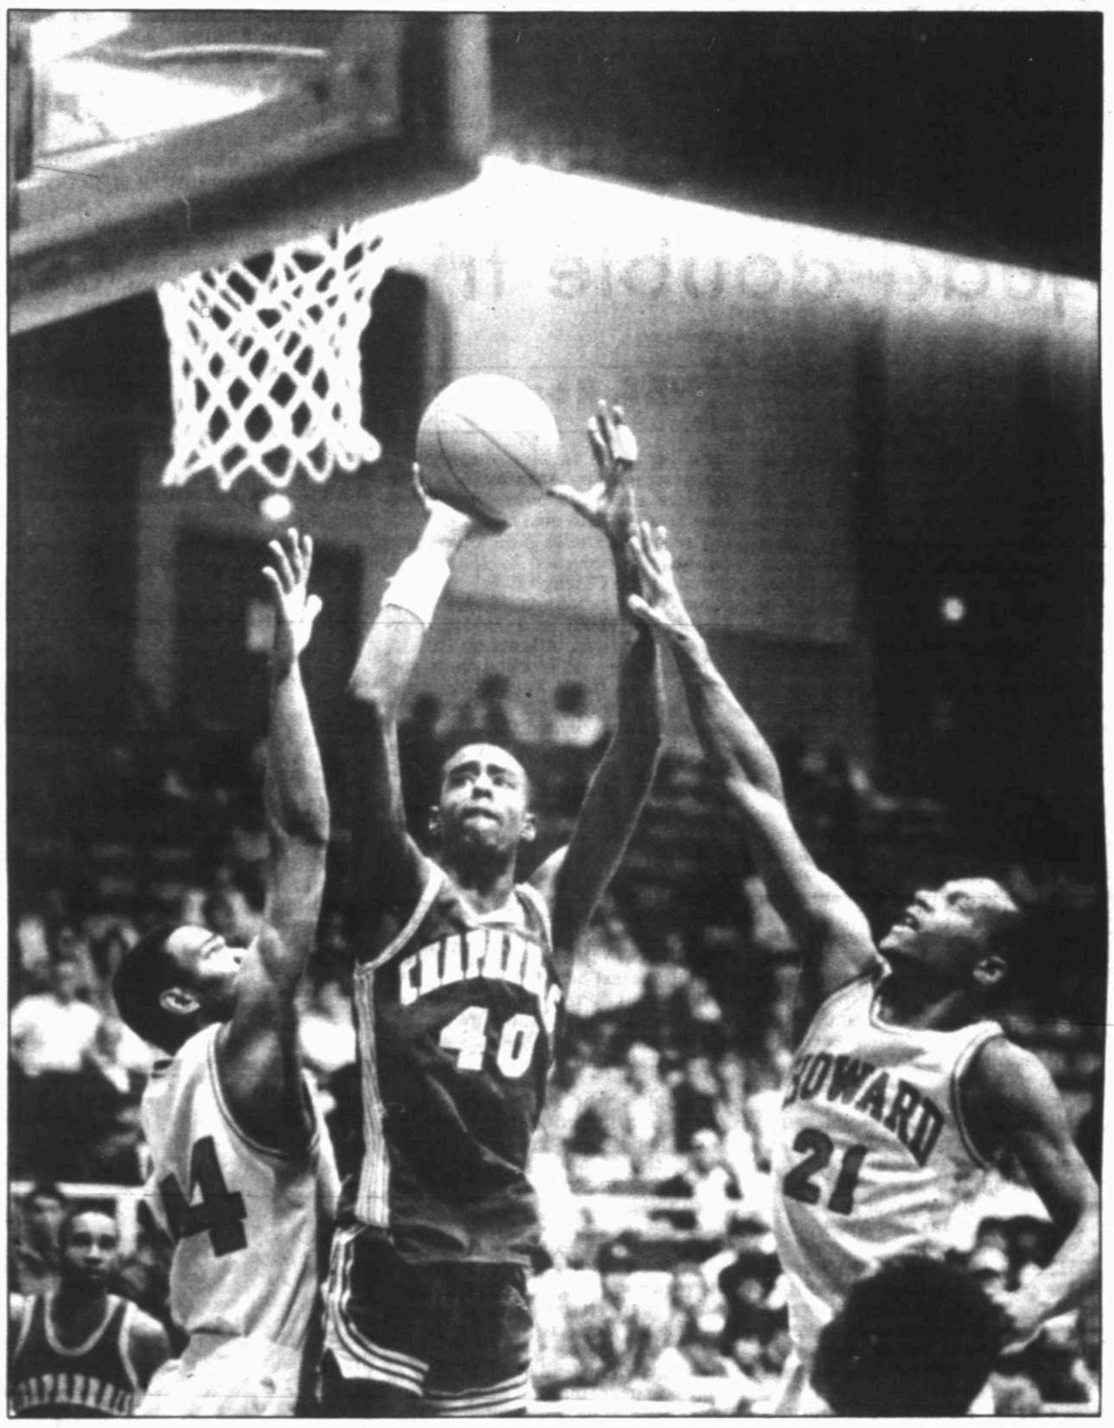

The Chaps ran off a a 16-2 rally, led by Binns' four baskets to make it 69-54 with four minutes to play and it was all over.

Rule boon for hog hats

AUSTIN (AP) — Being on the NCAA basketball rules committee has its advantages, says Texas A&M's Shelby Metcalf, speaking not from first-hand experience but from watching Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton.

Sutton serves on the committee, which voted last spring to institute a coaching box this season designed to keep coaches on — or at least near — the bench, where they theoretically belong.

At a critical point in the Aggies' game with the Razorbacks in January at College Station, Sutton ventured past the little white line to debate a foul on William Mills. He was not hit with a technical foul for leaving the box. Metcalf could have lived with that had he not received a technical only seconds earlier for straying beyond the line.

"I guess Eddie's got diplomatic immunity," the A&M coach speculated several days after the incident. "I'm going to have to get me one of those hog hats because maybe they won't call you for it if you're wearing one."

METCALF WAS joking. Sort of. At the time, it didn't seem like a laughing matter, especially since Arkansas escaped with a 70-67 win.

If Sutton did, indeed, have diplomatic immunity from the coaches box for his membership on the rules committee, it expired in Dallas three days after the A&M incident. Against SMU, Arkansas twice was called for box infractions. Sutton got a technical early, then the bench got one late, as SMU took a 3-point overtime verdict. Afterward, Sutton fumed that the Hogs were "hosed" by the officials.

Since those misadventures involving the box early in league play, things have quieted down. The conference doesn't know the number of box infractions — "That's a negative statistic. We don't keep that," Bob Prewitt, the SWC's supervisor of basketball officials, tried to explain — but coaches appear to be learning how to live with and within the box.

They should, because the rule was enforced on an experimental basis in the SWC last year. The box actually is a line that extends 28 feet from the baseline and ends at a point where, ideally, coaches can't get to the scorer's table. It was tried in the SWC last year, Prewitt said, because of the success the Southeastern Conference had with it in the 1982-83 season.

"I think it's a good rule," said Prewitt, the former SMU coach. "It defines limits on just how far a coach can go."

Some conference followers believe the rule was implemented here not because of the SEC's success with it, but because of a famous Sutton performance at the SWC postseason tournament at Dallas' Reunion Arena in 1982.

In the finals against Houston, the Arkansas coach did everything but moonwalk for the SRO crowd. Taking vociferous exception to an official's call, Sutton stormed onto the court, flung his red sports coat to the ground, strode angrily to the scorer's table more than once and generally conducted himself in a manner that has attained legendary status in conference circles.

"From what I understand, that was part of the reason we've got the rule," said game official Robert Ledbetter of Round Rock, a 17-year officiating veteran who has called SWC games for seven years.

Sutton, perhaps surprisingly, likes the rule.

"I know a lot of people in Texas think I'm a wild man, but I think it's a good rule because coaches have responsibilities they need to accept," he said. "What I did three years ago was wrong. I shouldn't have done it.

"The intent of the rule is not to call technicals if a guy happens to step six inches over the line. The intent is to keep coaches from going down to the scorer's table, like I did in Dallas against Houston."

Establishing intent and developing consistency in enforcing the rule are the two most vital aspects of it. As the Metcalf-Sutton drama illustrated, officials are feeling their way with the rule as much as coaches are.

"One of the problems we have is different officials enforce the rule with different degrees of intensity," said Bill Farney, the University Interscholastic League athletic director who acts as an SWC officials observer at some Texas home games. "The box is like the 55 mph speed limit. It's directed only at those who are going to abuse it.

"It hasn't gagged coaches. It's just taken the exhibitionism out of their performances."

SUTTON NOTED, "Most coaches are actors, to a certain degree. They'll get up to make a point. Sometimes they'll act like they're jumping on the officials when all they're really trying to do is fire up their team.

"The officials need to understand all that, and most of them do. Still, they haven't been real consistent with how they've called that particular rule. Really, all it means is they should use common sense."

Rangerettes watch step

From Staff Reports

Greenwood's Rangerettes may be ranked No. 2 in state Class 2A circles, but any misstep from now on and they might as well be ranked No. 52.

Coach Cliff Stevens' 28-1 8-2A champions meet Shallowater at 7:30 p.m. today at Lamesa in bi-district action. The winner advances to the Region I Class AA tournament at Lubbock's Municipal Coliseum Friday and Saturday.

Shallowater, 5-2A champion, defeated Hawley, 52-42, in a bi-district game Saturday night to advance.

"They have a young, aggressive team," said Coach Stevens, "They play with a lot of emotion. I think if we pay attention to business and do our job we can win. But Shallowater is good enough to beat us. They are small and quick and dangerous."

The Shallowater-Greenwood winner meets the Sanford-Fritch winner Friday at Lubbock in the regional semifinals. The Class 2A semifinals will be played 3 and 4:30 p.m. Friday. The Class 3A semis are set for 6 and 7:30 p.m.

Texas Tech plays at home Saturday night, so finals in both divisions will be Saturday morning, the Class 2A game at 9 a.m., followed by the Class 3A game.

Redmen widen cage poll lead

Associated Press

St. John's, which registered three victories last week by a total of 43 points, remained atop The Associated Press Top Twenty today as the first three teams in the college basketball poll held their places from last week.

The Redmen, 22-1 and currently on the nation's longest winning streak — 17 games — received 59 first-place votes and 1,199 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. St. John's downed Columbia 68-49, Pittsburgh 84-63 and DePaul 93-80 to remain atop the poll. It was the biggest margin of the year by a No. 1 ranked team.

Georgetown, 23-2, which is second to St. John's in the Big East Conference standings, held the second spot in the poll as it received the only other first-place vote and 1,141 points. Michigan, 20-3 and the leader in the Big Ten standings, remained third with 1,044 points.

The first change in the poll came as Memphis State and Oklahoma switched places from last week's rankings. The Tigers, 20-2, who finished with 975 points, enjoyed Metro Conference victories over Cincinnati, Florida State and South Carolina in the last week, while the Sooners, 21-4 and 958 points, also registered victories over Big Eight foes Iowa State and Missouri.

Duke, 18-4, and Syracuse, 19-4, each improved one spot from last week's poll. The Blue Devils, who defeated Stetson and Notre Dame in a pair of non-conference games, received 913 points, while the Orangemen, 19-4, who beat Big East foes Providence and Seton Hall as well as Louisiana State, had 873 points.

Georgia Tech, 18-5, which lost its only game of the week to Virginia, fell two places from last week and was eighth with 720 points, while Southern Methodist, 20-5, held the ninth spot with 675.

Louisiana Tech, 22-2, which made its debut into the poll nine weeks ago, joined the Top Ten for the first time this season as the Bulldogs received 622 points. Louisiana Tech narrowly escaped defeat in two Southland Conference victories, an overtime decision over Southwestern Louisiana and a one-point victory over McNeese State.

Nevada-Las Vegas leads the Second Ten — which has three new members — followed by Tulsa, North Carolina, Iowa, Kansas, Illinois, Virginia Commonwealth, Georgia, Oregon State and Boston College.

Gooden, Mets reach agreement

ST PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Dwight Gooden, who set a major league strikeout record for rookie pitchers last season, has agreed to a one-year contract with the New York Mets that will give him a "shot at around half a million dollars," his agent said Monday night.

The 20-year-old right-hander received slightly more than $40,000 last season which he capped by being voted National League Rookie of the Year.

"I'm pleased with it and Dwight is pleased with it," said agent Jim Neader from his office in Tampa.

Neader said the agreement guaranteed an amount "slightly less" than what pitcher Fernando Valenzuela received from the Los Angeles Dodgers in his second year, and under its terms, "all told, he will have a shot at around half a million dollars, maybe a little bit less, which we think is fair for him."

Though details were not disclosed, it is believed Gooden agreed to a salary of between $325,000 and $350,000, with a chance to earn another $150,000 in bonuses based on pitching a specified number of starts and innings and attaining other achievements.

The agent said before the contract would be signed, "We have to review the language of the clauses, which are in this case quite complex, and we have to make sure that everything is covered in detail."

He expected the signing to take place next Monday, but he said the pitcher would report to the Mets camp with the other batterymen as scheduled on Thursday.

"Dwight is ready to get down to the business at hand which is playing baseball for the New York Mets and he's looking forward to being their opening day pitcher against St. Louis in April," Neader said.

Though the agent had said earlier the pitcher might not report unless he had a contract, he said Monday night that "recently there was no doubt whatsoever" that Gooden would be in camp on time.

Neader met with Mets General Manager Frank Cashen and Al Harazin, vice president in charge of baseball administration, for 2½ hours Monday before announcing the agreement.

Neader said Gooden, who was 17-9 with a 2.60 earned run average and 276 strikeouts last season, had been working out in near his home in Tampa.

Louganis dives to Sullivan crown

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Greg Louganis, having achieved unequalled levels in men's diving, has abandoned talk of retirement and is eyeing new goals.

"I'm going to continue diving. I'm working with National Spa and Pool Institute to promote diving. We're promoting water diving safety," said Louganis, who became the 55th winner of the Sullivan Award as the nation's top amateur performer on Monday.

Louganis, 25, received the award in his sixth year as a finalist. He placed first in voting by some 2,500 participants who made the choice from a group consisting of 10 Olympic gold medalists.

"I've had a big change in my plans. I really thought I would retire after the Olympics and last year's national championships," he said. "Now, I'm going to take it one year at a time. I'm going to go to next year, the world championships. If I do well, then I'll hang on for another two years (the 1988 Olympics)."

Louganis, the winner of a record 29 national championships who swept last year's Olympic diving competition, also plans to continue studying for an acting career and will soon publish his autobiography.

Greg Louganis

"I was afraid there was going to be a tremendous down after the Olympic Games," he said. "But they've had me going everywhere. Now when I go to the pool, it's like a luxury. It's kind of my sanctuary. I love it.

"There's no place that I'd rather be at that moment when I'm working out. It's great. I've gotten a different perspective of diving now and I'm really enjoying it more now than ever."

His first competition this year will be in the indoor nationals at Tuscaloosa, Ala.

"I don't expect to be in top form," he said, admitting that he was a little heavier than the 160 pounds he weighed last summer. "I'm having a lot of fun and this is an exciting time for me. I don't have real high expectations (for the nationals)."

Louganis, who plans to continue training at Mission Viejo, Calif., under the watchful eye of Ron O'Brien, brought impressive credentials to this year's balloting. In sweeping the diving competition at Los Angeles last summer, the three-time world champion accumulated 710.91 points and became the first to break the 700 barrier on the platform.

He credited revised rules that allow him to receive trust funds and retain his amateur status for keeping him active.

"This way I don't have to live off my mother and train. I can have my cake and eat it," he said. "He (O'Brien) encouraged me to continue competing. I've achieved the goals I set earlier, but now I've got new ones," he said.

Those goals are to become the first diver to score 800 points on the springboard and to top 700 again on the platform, he said.

In the past, Louganis has seen hurdler Edwin Moses, gymnast Kurt Thomas, speedskater Eric Heiden, distance runner Mary Decker and sprinter Carl Lewis win the award.

"I really didn't have any expectations (of winning)," he said. "If you don't have any expectations then you don't get disappointed."

He compared the award to college football's Heisman Trophy. "I just don't get a $7 million contract," he said in reference to the contract quarterback Doug Flutie signed with the New Jersey Generals after being selected as college football's top player for 1984.

The elite group of finalists also included gymnast Mary Lou Retton, who captured the all-around competition at the Olympics by receiving perfect 10s in her last two events.

Bird passes up quad double try

Associated Press

Larry Bird was one steal away from National Basketball Association history and was too tired to care.

Bird had 30 points, 12 rebounds, 10 assists and nine steals and Boston had a 22-point lead after the third quarter of Monday night's 110-94 victory over the Utah Jazz. But after playing 42 minutes the day before in a loss to the Los Angeles Lakers, Bird was in no mood for record-setting.

One more steal would have given him the first regulation "quadruple double" — double figures in four categories — in NBA history. Bird was told he had a chance for the record, but he chose not to play in the fourth period.

"I already did enough," Bird said. "If it had been close, I'd have been in there trying, but when you're ahead by 30 points, what do you have to prove?"

The Celtics had only nine players in uniform because starters Robert Parish and Cedric Maxwell are injured and backup guard Quinn Buckner was ill. But Bird, and Utah's miserable shooting early in the game, kept Boston in control.

"Bird took it away from us," Jazz Coach Frank Layden said. "It was a great effort on his part. He played a lot of minutes yesterday in Los Angeles. But he knew his team was short a couple of key guys, so he went out and played real hard. He's as good as there has ever been."

THE CELTICS led 34-10 after the first period and Utah never got closer than the final margin the rest of the way. The Jazz shot 3-for-25 from the field in the first period and didn't get their first field goal until only 4:07 remained in the quarter.

"We had a running start and the Jazz couldn't make their shots go," Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said. "The first quarter says it all. I've never seen any team in the NBA go cold for that long."

After losing to the Lakers Sunday, Jones said, "We were down so it really helps to win one like this. This game was way beyond my expectations."

Bird hit 13 of 22 shots from the field en route to his game-high 30 points, while teammate Kevin McHale added 29 points while hitting 11 of 17 field goal attempts.

The only official NBA quadruple double was recorded by Nate Thurmond of the Chicago Bulls, who had 22 points, 14 rebounds, 13 assists and 12 blocked shots in a 120-115 overtime victory over Atlanta on Oct. 18, 1974. Statistics on blocked shots and steals have been kept only since 1973, so there may have been others that went unrecorded.

Utah got 22 points from backup forward Fred Roberts, who is getting more playing time because Utah scoring leader Adrian Dantley also is injured.

NBA Roundup

Clippers 125, Spurs 121

Derek Smith scored 30 points and Marques Johnson 26 as Los Angeles came from behind in the fourth quarter against San Antonio.

Smith and Johnson combined for 23 of the Clippers' 37 points in the fourth period as Los Angeles rallied from a nine-point deficit in the final 8:32.

The Spurs, who got 28 points from George Gervin and 26 from Johnny Moore, led 108-103 with 5:40 to play before the Clippers scored seven straight points. They never trailed after that.

Cavaliers 120, 76ers 113

Cleveland, which won at Philadelphia for the first time in 23 tries last Friday, made it two straight over the 76ers as World B. Free scored 35 points.

The Cavaliers trailed 43-30 in the second quarter, but a 21-2 streak put them ahead 51-45. Philadelphia then rallied behind Andrew Toney, who scored 23 of his 43 points in the first half, to lead 55-53 at halftime.

Rookie center Mel Turpin had 20 points and 17 rebounds for Cleveland.

Pistons 122, Suns 103

Detroit scored the first 11 points of the game and went on to lead by as many as 27 in a rout of Phoenix.

SWC honors Jennings again

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Tech's Bubba Jennings has been named the Southwest Conference basketball player of the week for the second time this season.

Jennings claimed the vote among the SWC men coaches for the second time in four weeks. As a repeater for the honor, he follows SMU's Jon Koncak, who won back-to-back honors in mid-January.

Jennings, Tech's 5-foot-10 floor leader, hit 48 points in victories over Rice and Arkansas to keep the Raiders in contention for the SWC lead. One of the SWC's all-time free-throw leaders, Jennings went six for six during the week to give him a 87.2 percentage on 75 of 86.

REBELS

LEE AND AHS have met two times this year with both winning on the home court by big margins. It will be interesting to see how a game on a neutral site will turn out.

Lee won the first meeting 91-74 at Chaparral Center while the Eagles bombed the Rebels by an 87-74 count in Abilene the last time the two teams played.

The two teams are close also in season records with Lee holding a slight edge with a 24-7 mark while AHS is 22-7.

The AHS starting five of Mickey Russell, Greg Lowry, Kirt Robinson, Joe Agnew and Cliff Johnson are all capable of putting big numbers on the boards and all have had big scoring nights against Lee.

The Rebels also have a starting five that can chip in big points in Brian Marczynski, Derek Westbrook, Anthony Dickens, Raymond Morney and Tyrone Thurman. Thurman is the only starter who has not had a 20-point game this year, but even this assist-minded guard has been in double figures for three straight games.

That may be why neither regular season contest was close. Both teams are capable of delivering the knockout punch. This is a game in which neither team will want to get behind early.

PLAYOFF NOTES: Monterey and Palo Duro will be idle until the bi-district game. Monterey was the outright District 3-5A champ while the Dons were the outright runnerup...Of key interest to the 3-5A and 4-5A teams involved in the bi-district playoffs, El Paso is set for its bi-district round Friday night in a doubleheader at the El Paso Special Events Center. El Paso Burges will take on El Paso Eastwood at 6:15 p.m. while El Paso Riverside will meet El Paso Andress at 8 p.m. The winner of those two games will advance to the area playoffs with the winners from 3-5A and 4-5A...Area winners will advance to the Region I tournament in Midland, March 1-2...Midland High was the last team from the Tall City to play in Midland's Region I tournament and drew a near sellout crowd at Chaparral Center in a game with Fort Worth Dunbar...

Manute Bol, the tallest player in U.S. basketball at 7-foot-6, doesn't have to reach very far to touch the rim. The Dinka tribesman from southern Sudan weighs only 195 pounds.

'Basket-Bol' grips Bridgeport

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Not since P.T. Barnum took General Tom Thumb on tour has a show from this city gained as much attention as the one fans are calling "Basket-Bol."

All but one of the University of Bridgeport's first 21 games were sold out. People come not so much to root for their teams as to see Manute Bol, a native of southern Sudan's Dinka tribe and the tallest basketball player in the United States — if not the world.

"When I first came here they looked at me funny," Bol said of his classmates and fans, "but now they don't care."

Bruce Webster's job is much like Barnum's was. His life has changed for better and worse since Bol came on the scene. He is Bridgeport's basketball coach. He also is Bol's surrogate father, friend and publicist.

"The difficult part of it for me is handling his daily schedules so we both can live," Webster said. "Constantly getting him to the dentist, getting him to the foot doctor, getting him to the orthopedic doctor, making sure that he eats well, making sure that he goes to the weight program, making sure that he gets his visa cleared ...

"People ask me how big he is, I say, '7-foot-6, with sneakers 7-7, the length of his leg is 48 inches, his arm is 44 inches, his waist is 32 inches, he's missing 15 teeth, he was born Oct. 16, 1963.'

"I've got three kids of my own and I couldn't tell you any of those things about them."

OF COURSE, none of Webster's children is able to do the things that Bol does on a basketball court.

"I couldn't believe he blocked my shot from the foul line," is the way Central Connecticut State University guard Tony Little summed up the feelings of many of Bol's opponents this season. In the game against Central last week, Bol scored 28 points, grabbed 15 rebounds and blocked eight shots.

It was a typical performance.

With Bol averaging 23 points, 14 rebounds and eight blocked shots per game, Bridgeport is 19-4 this season and stands atop the Division II New England Collegiate Conference at 9-1.

"I like to play every day," said Bol, who began playing basketball just five years ago. "I can play two times a day. I'm not thinking about the pros right now — I just play and concentrate on what I'm doing in college."

Opposing teams cannot figure out how to guard him or how to shoot over him. Webster said one opposing coach ordered his team not to shoot within 15 feet of the basket. He said one of the coaches at New Hampshire College stood in the key and swatted back his players' shots with a broom to prepare them for a game with Bridgeport.

"C.W. Post practiced with what they called a Bol Stick. They measured a player who was 6-5 and gave him a stick with a big hand on it to make up the difference to 7-6," Webster said. "Well, Manute blocked 12 Post shots and I think five New Hampshire shots."

Still, Bol believes other players are able to take advantage of him because of his dominating size. "Sometimes the referees do not call the fouls and I get mad," he said. "But that makes me play better. Like when I play against somebody and he pushes me and they don't call a foul. I don't have to hit him, I play harder."

BECAUSE OF his height and limited background in the United States, Bol requires special attention off the court, too.

"When he first got here we took two single beds and tied them end-to-end and we thought that was the cure-all," Webster said. "But then a couple of weeks later he came in and said he had a bad back.

"So then the school housing department bought an extra-long queen size bed. It's 84 inches long and he's 90 inches long, so if he sleeps on a diagonal he's all right."

Bol came to the United States from the Sudan national team. Before that, he lived with his family, part of the traditionally tall Dinka tribe.

Webster described the Dinkas as a nomadic group of people who raise cattle and travel to wherever they can find water. Only the larger cities in Sudan have electricity. The Dinkas, Webster said, have no electricity and live, for the most part, in mud huts.

Former Fairleigh Dickinson coach Don Feeley noticed Bol while he was touring Sudan. He brought him and another player, Bol's roommate and friend, Deng Nhial, to the United States to play.

"To some degree we're probably using or getting the benefits of Manute," Webster conceded, "but at the same time we're making a very legitimate effort to give him a solid education and to Americanize him and make him independent in this country."

Bol attends a special English course for three hours every day and hasn't missed a class at the university. But he isn't as good about his weight-training program or his special diet.

Tom Thumb eventually put himself out of the circus business by growing from 25 inches and 15 pounds to 40 inches and 70 pounds. Bol's problem is that he can't seem to eat enough to gain the weight he needs to mix it up inside with the bigger centers of college basketball.

"I don't like a lot of the food here," Bol said in broken English. "The food is the same (as in Sudan), but they way they cook it is different."

Bol weighs about 195 pounds.

"He only likes steak, hamburgers, spaghetti and chicken," Webster said. "We tried giving him this special diet with different sorts of vegetables to balance it out, and giving him 5,000 calories a day and he won't eat it. ... He eats small amounts of food three or four times a day and he probably should be eating five or six times a day.

"He's a great player but he doesn't have the ability to withstand punishment. He can be knocked out of position by even Division II pivotmen," Webster added.

Memphis State tastes revenge in 99-75 romp

Associated Press

Revenge was sweet — but not sweet enough for Memphis State's William Bedford.

"We should have gotten 150 on 'em. We owed 'em something," the 6-foot-10 Bedford said Monday after contributing 19 points to fourth-ranked Memphis State's 99-75 romp over South Carolina which avenged the Tigers' only Metro Conference loss of the season.

The only other member of The Associated Press Top Twenty in action was 11th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, and the Runnin' Rebels beat Fullerton State 78-69 in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association contest.

Keith Lee led Memphis State, playing at home, to its 20th victory in 22 games with 26 points and 13 rebounds. The 6-10 Lee scored nine points as the Tigers opened a 51-37 halftime lead, then ran off 12 straight points — four field goals and four free throws — in the first 10 minutes of the second half. Andre Turner, the Tigers' 5-10 point guard, also had 19 points, 14 in the first half. Keith James had 20 for South Carolina.

College

"Lee had a heck of a game," said South Carolina Coach Bill Foster. "When he plays like that, you can't stop him."

"We're on a good roll now," said Lee. "We can go a long way if we keep playing like we know how."

At Fullerton, Calif., Richie Adams had 20 points — 15 in the second half — and 13 rebounds as UNLV rallied from a 37-28 halftime deficit.The Rebels took the lead for good in the second half on Armon Gilliam's tip-in that made it 42-40 and UNLV extended it to as many as 15 points with Adams and Frank "Spoon" James, who had 19 points, leading the way.

Nevada-Las Vegas is 20-3 over-all and 13-1 in the PCAA. Fullerton was led by Kevin Henderson, who had 19 of his 28 points before the intermission.

A tip-in attempt by Kevin Carter, who led all scorers with 20 points, bounced off the rim.

Texas gals soar

Associated Press

With Texas avoiding the upsets that hit the upper echelon of the Top 20 last week, its fans are beginning to get excited over the possibility that the No. 1 Longhorns will be on the court next month when the NCAA Women's Basketball Finals are held in Austin.

"We got a note from our athletic director that all the arena-level seats are just about gone and please don't make promises to anybody," said Texas Coach Jody Conradt.

Her team maintained its No. 1 position for the fourth straight week with 57 first-place votes and 1,194 points in this week's women's basketball poll.

The overall vote total for the first seven teams was the closest in the poll's nine-year history with four teams virtually tied for fourth place.

Northeast Louisiana, 21-1, reached an all-time high by moving from fourth to second with two first-place votes and 1,106 points. The Lady Indians, who have four Southland Conference games this week, celebrated the occasion with a 91-63 win at North Texas State Tuesday night.

Mississippi, 24-1, which leaped from fifth to third for its highest ranking ever.

Homeowners may save by refinancing mortgages

WASHINGTON (AP) — With mortgage rates now averaging less than 13 percent, refinancing is becoming a more attractive option for the roughly 2 million Americans paying more than 15 percent in interest on their existing fixed-rate home loans.

The Mortgage Bankers Association says that, in general, a homeowner must plan to remain in the home for another three years or longer to recoup the expenses involved in refinancing.

The interest rate on the existing loan also should be at least two points higher than the new rate to make refinancing worthwhile.

To refinance a mortgage, homeowners will have to go through closing a second time, paying for many of the same reports and lawyers' fees all over again. Transfer taxes do not have to be paid again.

To determine whether refinancing will result in savings, lenders advise homeowners to first consider the costs involved.

Find out whether there in a penalty for paying off the existing loan early. Approximately 42 states allow such pre-payment penalties, but they don't apply to all loans. FHA and VA loans, for example, are not subject to pre-payment penalties.

For guidance on other costs, the best source may be the settlement sheet from the original closing.

Look for the costs of title search, title insurance, a credit report, attorney's fee, points paid to the bank at closing, and appraisal fee.

Consulting with the lender can lead to cost savings.

—Title search: This fee, about $15, can be negotiated.

—Title insurance: The mortgage bankers recommend asking the original lender if a "substitution loan rate" policy can be issued rather than a new owner's policy. The old policy may apply, they say, and the savings could be as much as 70 percent of the roughly $400 fee.

—Credit report: This fee may be waived if you stick with the same lender.

—Attorney's fee: You can use your own lawyer or the lender's. Don't be afraid to ask in advance what the fee will be.

—Points: This charge, equal to one percent of the loan amount for each point, is also negotiable with the lender. Check with a number of lenders, especially institutions where you have savings or IRA accounts. You'll often do better where you are known.

—Appraisal: This charge covers the cost of making sure your house is still worth enough to justify the amount you want to borrow.

Checking the original settlement sheet will help determine whether fees for document preparation, notary services, recording, etc., apply in your area.

Another charge involved in refinancing is the recording tax, which varies from jurisdiction to jurisdiction.

Once you have roughly determined the costs of refinancing, you need to determine the savings.

Consider only the principal and interest payment since any other tax or insurance fee collected by the lender each month likely will remain the same.

About 800 members of the United Mine Workers union marched on the Sprouse Creek Processing Co. on Monday when officials ordered them to return to work or lose their jobs.

Firm orders striking workers to work

LOBATA, W.Va. (AP) — An embattled A.T. Massey Coal Co. subsidiary that ordered 48 striking employees to return to work or be fired locked its gates after the workers showed up accompanied by an estimated 800 union members.

There were no reports of violence, and one union official said miners used "their Sunday dinner manners" during Monday's standoff.

Sprouse Creek Processing Co. President James Slater issued a press release saying he refuses to meet "with a large group of unruly people."

Sprouse Creek officials refused to admit the employees into the fenced compound Monday and told them to report for work again today, when they were to fill out numerous personnel forms and be fingerprinted and photographed — as any new employee — before being put back on the job.

A United Mine Workers union spokesman said his members would return today, too.

The standoff represented the latest turn in a 4½-month UMW strike against Sprouse Creek and other Massey subsidiaries that refused to sign the national coal agreement reached Oct. 1.

Massey says it needs concessions if its companies are to remain profitable. UMW miners say the company's real goal is breaking the union.

Monday's demonstration contrasted sharply with earlier episodes in which the miners wielding baseball bats attacked cars carrying non-union workers.

The employees showed up as ordered on Monday but first demanded a contract, setting up a card table and folding chairs outside the mine and offering to sit down and bargain.

Accompanying the workers were as many as 800 miners from eastern Kentucky and West Virginia marching six abreast in a line stretching for about a quarter-mile down the highway.

The miners, wearing white ribbons on their arms and tiny U.S. flags on their hardhats, sang protest songs as they picketed. They carried signs asking, "Are we in West Virginia or Poland?"

"All we want is peace and a contract, and when we get a contract there will be peace," said Fred Decker, president of UMW Local 1160 in Wyoming County. "There are a thousand people here all with their Sunday dinner manners on."

Massey officials say the company's subsidiaries have offered to sign the same contract the UMW negotiated last fall with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association. But the UMW says it isn't interested unless Massey signs a single contract for all its subsidiaries, assuring the miners' re-employment rights throughout the company.

Dollar sets new highs as gold lowers

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar shrugged off a modest central bank intervention early today to set new highs against a string of European currencies. Gold prices moved lower.

The dollar, riding continued high American interest rates and bullishness over the U.S. economy, has now set records on 10 out of the 12 business days this month.

On Tuesday, it shattered previous marks against the French franc and Italian lira, surged to a 13-year high against the Dutch guilder and reached a seven-year high against the Swiss franc.

The dollar's advance came despite dollar sales by the West German Bundesbank. Banking sources said, however, that the amount of cash involved was small.

As word of the sales spread, the dollar dipped in value briefly against the mark but recovered and was again above the 3.30 level, breached last week for the first time in 13 years.

The dollar began the day in Tokyo with a strong gain to a closing 260.20 yen from Monday's 256.55. Later, when markets opened in Europe, the dollar was quoted at 261.50 yen.

Other dollar rates in Europe at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

— 3.3065 West German marks, up from 3.2945

— 2.8135 Swiss francs, up from 2.8015

— 10.1350 French francs, up from 10.0700

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.0925, virtually unchanged from $1.0930 Monday.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Yoakum well flows 1,941 barrels

From Staff Reports

A confirmation well to ESTORIL PRODUCING COMPANY'S prolific Boswell No.1 has been tested at an even higher rate than the discovery well.

The Boswell No.2, located 1,990 ft. from the east and south lines of Section 747, Block D, John H. Gibson survey, 8 miles northwest of Denver City in Yoakum County, flowed 1,941 bopd with no water and 12 Mcfd, on a 30/64 in. choke. Gas, oil ratio was 6:1 with a flowing tubing pressure of 125 psi.

The well was completed in a Devonian open hole section at an interval from 13,115-13,140 feet, following the spotting of 500 gals of acid.

Estoril declines to state the size or nature of the structure, but an esitmated 12-14 wells could be drilled in the new Devonian field. According to Estoril, the Boswell No.2 is 30 foot higher on the structure, accounting, perhaps, for the more prolific initial potential.

A 14,000 ft. east offset well to the Boswell No.2 is being drilled 467 ft. from the east line and 2,173 ft. from the south line of Section 748, according to Phillip Dunfor, Estoril executive vice president.

Matt Holton/Reporter-Telegram

Probably higher on the structure the Boswell No. 2 flowed approximately 100 barrels more than the Boswell No.1 Devonian discovery which completed in November to flow 1,824 bopd. The No.1 Hendricks is an east offset.

Runnels well retested to produce 480 Mcf

Reclassifications have led to openers in TRC District 7C.

DESANA DEVELOPMENT CORP. reclassified the No. 1 Jennings as a Capps gas producer in the Winters field of Runnels County. The well tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 480 Mcfd. Gravity was 40.6. Gas-oil ratio was 226,956:1. The well flowed through perforations 3,826 to 3,836 ft., which were acidized with 750 gallons and fractured with 42,000 gallons and 4,000 lbs. sand.

The well is located 2,353 ft. from north and 850 ft. from west lines of Section 332, Block 64, H&TC survey, 3.5 miles south-southeast of Winters.

The Jennings was orginally finaled as a Capps oil producer March 10,1983. It was tested to flow 6.98 barrels of 39 gravity crude and 13 barrels of water on a 14/64 inch choke.

Crockett well retests to pump 18 barrels

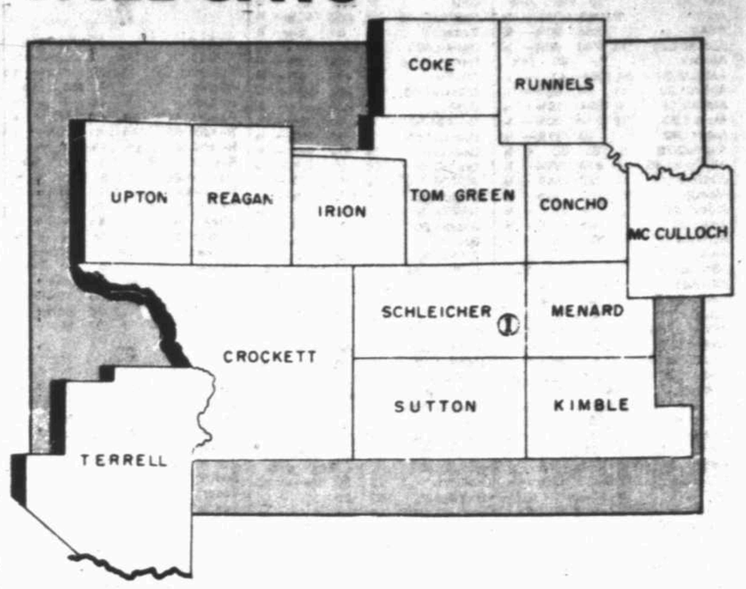

A second reclassification has opened Upper Queen production in the Bralaw field of Crockett.

C.F. LAWRENCE & ASSOCIATES, INC. reclassified the No. 1 Shannon "D" to pump 18 barrels of 32 gravity crude and 20 barrels of water. Gas-oil ratio is 6,111:1. The Upper Queen zone was perforated from 1,897 to 1,909 ft.

The well is located 2,800 ft. from north and 2,600 ft. from east lines of Section 2, Block GG, James Wiley Heirs survey, 12 miles east of Iraan.

The Shannon was originally tested July 18, 1982 for a calculated absolute open flow of 426,660 cubic feet daily.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

All municipal bond interest is reported

By BILL DOYLE

Q. In preparing their 1984 federal income tax returns, people on Social Security now have to go through the exercise of adding together their adjusted gross income, interest from otherwise "tax-free" municipal bonds and half of their SS benefits. If the resulting figure is $25,000 for an individual or $32,000 for a married couple filing a joint income tax return, they have to pay tax on some of their SS benefits.

This all results from the "Social Security Amendments" act, passed by Congress in 1983 and signed into law on April 20 of that year.

I own municipal bonds I purchased prior to that date. Do I have to include the interest from those bonds in this tax calculation? Also, does this apply only to interest from "registered" bonds — not "bearer" bonds?

A. You are required to include all of your municipal bond interest in that complicated calculation — spelled out on pages 10 and 11 of the instruction booklet that comes with the Form 1040 federal income tax return.

It makes no difference when you purchased your municipal bonds. Nor does it matter whether your bonds are in registered form, with your name on them, or in bearer form, with interest coupons attached. The rule is that you include all your municipal bond interest to determine if you have to pay tax on part of your SS benefits.

The way this works out, you could be hit with tax on up to half of your SS benefits. It's also a backdoor way Uncle Sam has found to tax some municipal bond interest.

• • •

Q. A stock I own pays a dividend, part of which is a "return of capital" and not subject to income tax. Do I have to include that return of capital dividend when doing the calculation to determine if part of my Social Security benefits are taxable?

A. No. Although you must include all tax-free interest in that calculation, you are not required to include return of capital dividends or any other tax-free or tax-deferred income.

Don't make the mistake of adding into that calculation anything you don't have to. That could be a costly error — resulting in you paying income tax on more of your SS benefits.

• • •

Q. I am 77 and living on Social Security. Last year, I won $3,286 in a state lottery. Do I have to pay income tax on that money? I haven't paid income tax in years, because I have not had enough income.

A. If the $3,286 lottery winning and your Social Security benefits were your only income last year, you owe no income tax and don't even have to file an income tax return.

A single person, 65 or older, doesn't have to file unless his or her 1984 income — excluding Social Security — was $4,300 or higher. For a married couple, both 65 or older, that number was $7,400.

• • •

Q. When a person wins money in a state lottery, 20 percent is withheld for federal income tax. If the lottery winner is on Social Security and works part-time, is the amount he won added to his salary to determine if he is eligible for SS benefits?

A. No. Only "personal service income" — salary, wages, commissions, fees, tips and the like — determine if a person's SS benefits will be reduced. Lottery winnings, along with interest, dividends and other types of income don't enter that picture.

A lucky lottery player must pay income tax on his or her winnings at whatever tax rate applies. If he or she ends up in a tax bracket below 20 percent, there will be a refund coming from some of the 20 percent withheld on the lottery prize.

Lottery winnings, of course, must be included in adjusted gross income and can result in some of the winners' SS benefits being subject to federal income tax.

It's 'better late than never' to start exercise program

Dear Dr. Solomon: What would you think of a 65-year-old man who retired recently after sitting at a desk for almost 40 years and who now wants to get into an exercise program? If you think it is a good idea, what is the best way to get started? — Leslie, South Bend, Ind.

Dear Leslie: I would think that the person is following the adage "better late than never," and I would encourge him in his efforts. It is just as important for an older person to take part in an exercise program as it is for a younger one. Both can benefit from it.

As for the specifics, I would suggest that the person obtain an OK from his physician before starting out. The physician is in the best position to recommend the type of activity that would be best, the intensity of the activity and its duration and frequency; however, there are certain general considerations that apply to everyone.

An older person who has been sedentary for an extended period of time should begin an exercise program at a low level; it is not possible to make up in two weeks for 40 years of inactivity. The level of exercise can be increased gradually over a period of several weeks.

The warm-up and cool-down periods are important for everyone, regardless of age. A daily exerise schedule would be optimal, but even a three-day-a-week routine would be beneficial. And these benefits will include enhanced mental health.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have seen a number of articles in which it said that women should have mammography in order to diagnose breast cancer, but the articles don't say why this would be better than, for example, examination by a doctor or breast self-examination. Just what is it that mammography can do? — Mrs. M.V., Columbia, S.C.

Dear Mrs. V.: Mammography makes possible the discovery of a mass before it would be discovered by either the patient or her physician, but should be done in conjunction with clinial evaluation and self-examination. Although the procedure involves some exposure to radiation, the benefits to be obtained from it appear to outweigh the risks associated with it.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Although I read your column regularly and enjoy it thoroughly, I think you are being inconsistent in your views on boxing. On the one hand, you recommend participation in athletic activities, and then you come out against boxing. Sport is sport. Different people may enjoy different events, but why discriminate? — Roger, Tucson, Ariz.

Dear Roger: A number of studies have shown that boxing often results in brain damage, and that does not meet my definition of "sport." A fairly recent study of 18 boxers, three of whom were college graduates, showed that 11 had abnoraml results on at least one neurologic test, and 16 had definite evidence of brain damage. I realize the athletes are also injured in other athletic activities, but at least the aim in these other sports is not the cause injury to the opponent.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm allergic to molds and get shots. What else can I do? — Mr. P.Z., Lexington, ky.

Dear Mr. Z.: Molds live in moist environments. I tell my patients who are allergic to molds to avoid moist rooms such as basements and not to use humidifiers.

In some of my patients I found an allergic reaction may be brought on by different foods containing or contaminated with molds, e.g. cheese, dried fruit, mushrooms, soy sauce, wine and beer.

House dust may contain large amounts of mold spores.

You should avoid areas where molds thrive, e.g. piles of leaves, wood logs, areas of deep shade or heavy vegetation. Your lawn should be kept mown and old leaves collected by someone else.

Traveling in the countryside during the harvest season should be avoided as should walks in the woods. A summer cabin closed up all winter should be aired and cleaned before a mold allergic person stays there.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband and I have always had a good sexual relationship, but now that I am 53 years old, I find that having sex is sometimes painful. Is this unusual? Is it all psychological? — Mrs. A.J., Dallas

Dear Mrs. J.: The answer to both your questions is "no." Dr. James P. Semmens, of the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston, says that one-half of all women over 50 years of age have dyspareunia (painful intercourse). Physical reasons may range from vaginal scarring to inflammation caused by infection or by chemicals used in douches and vaginal sprays, and bladder and anal problems.

However, psychological problems may also be a factor. They include the woman's feelings about her partner, her attitude towards sex, or even the method of contraception.

Equally important is the fact that the condition can be treated, and I suggest you arrange to see your gynecologist for a discussion of the problem. It may respond to very simple treatment, such as the use of a lubricant.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can recall stories of children who swallowed large amounts of flavored baby aspirin because they thought it was candy. Some of them became seriously ill. Would acetaminophen cause the same kind of problem if someone took too much of it? — Mrs. G.T., Roanoke, Va.

Dear Mrs. T.: Acetaminophen is a fairly safe drug, but it can cause hepatitis (inflammation of the liver) if a person consumes too much of it. In fact, according to Dr. Mack Mitchell, of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore, an overdose can even result in death.

The greatest risk is for people who are fasting or who are malnourished. Alcoholics also are at increased risk of acetaminophen toxicity. On the other hand, children appear to be at less risk than adults.

Dear Dr. Solomon: There has been a lot written about women who are getting married at an older age than they used to, and therefore having children at an older age, and how this might affect the baby. For example, I believe you have written that there's a greater chance that an older woman will have a baby with Down's syndrome. But I don't recall seeing anything about older men who become fathers. If an older man becomes a father, would there also be a greater chance of some birth defect? — Mr. R.L., Hartford, Conn.

Dear Mr. L.: The results of a study conducted at the New York State Department of Health indicated there would be an insignificant increase in the incidence of children with birth defects if more older men become fathers. Even though Down's syndrome can often be traced to the father, the cause does not appear to be related to the father's age. However, if more older men did become fathers, it is likely there would be an increase in the rate of fetal deaths.

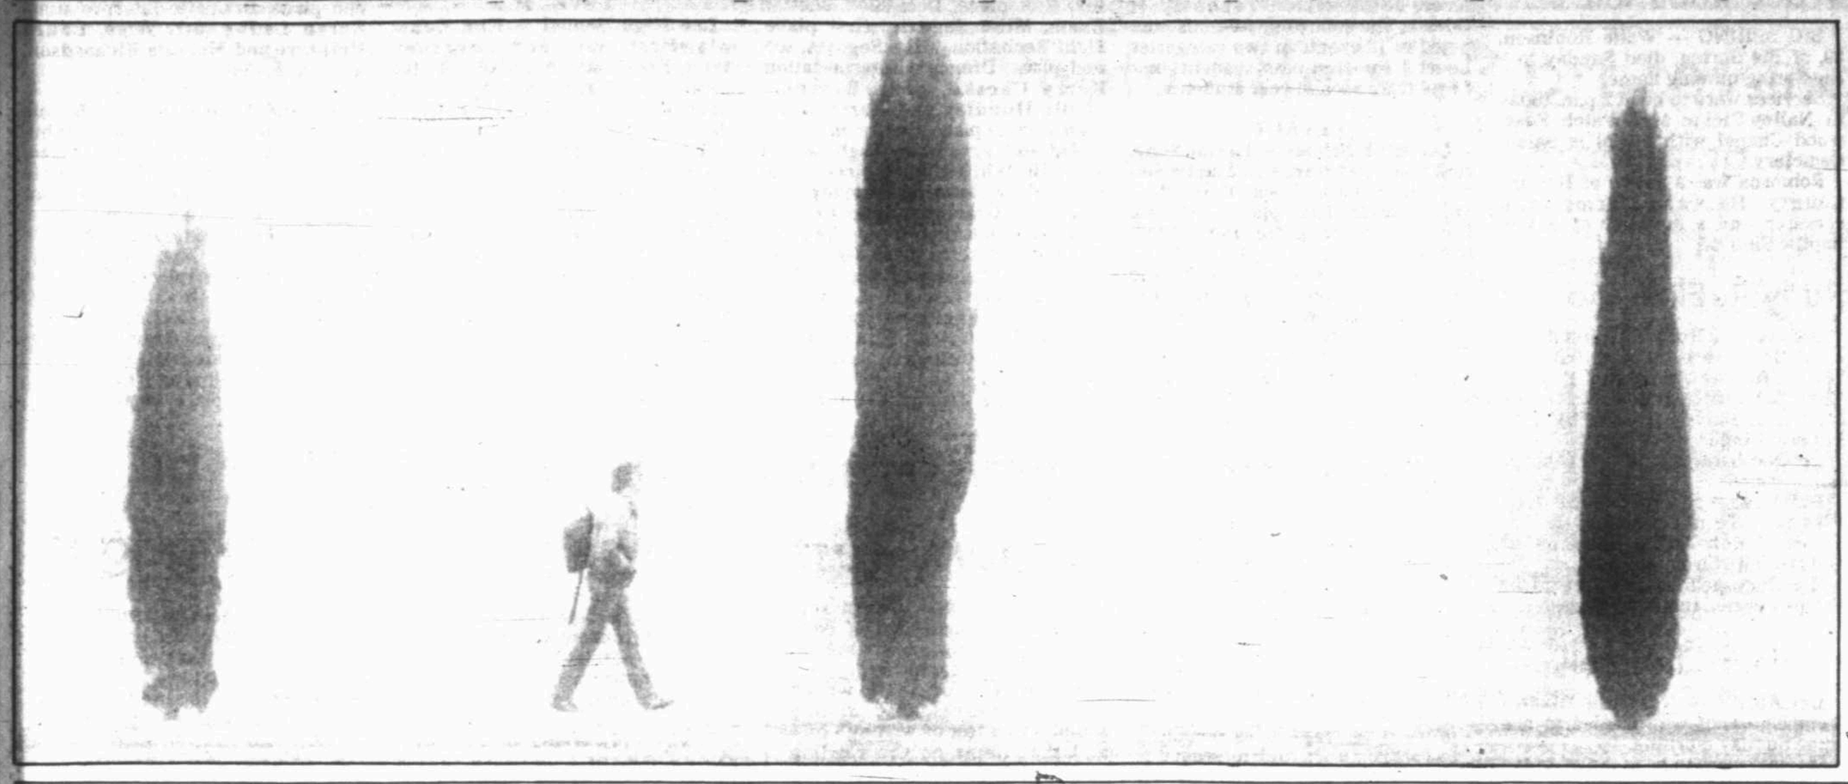

Dear Dr. Solomon: Many years ago I remember being told that cod liver oil was good for arthritis. Now that I have arthritis, I am interested in knowing whether there is any truth to this. Do you recommend cod liver oil for patients with arthritis? I have heard some people say that it actually works. — Dennis, White Plains, N.Y.

Dear Dennis: Except for what may be a placebo effect — that is, some people who feel that something is doing them good actually feel better — I'm afraid that cod liver oil is of no benefit in the treatment of arthritis. The idea that cod liver oil may be of value seems to be related to the idea that arthritis occurs because the joints are not properly lubricated, and that the oil provides lubrication.

People whose arthritis improves after they take cod liver oil may be demonstrating the placebo effect. Another possibility is that they would have improved spontaneously even if they had not taken anything.

For Rosalie, Galveston, Texas: The greatest cause of death in elderly individuals is cardiovascular disease.

Bill would make students bear cost of transferring

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Public school students would have to bear a larger percentage of tuition costs if they choose to transfer from one school district to another under a proposed bill introduced by Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield.

State funding of school districts whose students transfer to another district would be eliminated under House Bill 698. The proposed bill would amend the existing law to eliminate the state "per capita apportionment," if the student transfers to another district.

Don Furgeson, Midland Independent School District business manager, said school districts across the state receive about $230 per student per year based on "per capita apportionment." The amount transfers with a child to another district under the current reading of the law.

The legislation also proposes that the district to which the student transfers could charge the transferring student a tuition fee "in an amount that does not exceed the district's actual expenditure per student in average daily attendance."

MISD currently receives $3,100 per student in average daily attendance and charges 65 percent — roughly $2,000 — of the total amount in ADA to students tranferring from other school districts.

In other words, "students and parents would have to pay the full cost instead of the state" if they want to transfer to another district, Furgeson said.

"We don't really have a problem here in Midland. We may have one or two students a year from Greenwood who come over to take a few courses. Suburban districts like Houston do have a problem because so many of its student transfer from one district to another," he noted.

"I think what the bill is saying is that 'it's fine if you want to change schools, but don't expect the state to pay for it,'" he added.

The proposed bill would take effect Sept. 1, 1985.

Another piece of proposed legislation — affecting Texas junior colleges — would amend current provisions of the Education Code regarding branch campuses, and allow for capital construction and real estate purchases.

The proposal for the collection and use of taxes for capital expenditures by junior college branch campuses was introduced by Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City.

According to Midland College President Jess Parrish, "The bill would enable the citizens of a community to issue a separate tax levy for the construction and maintenance of a branch campus building, rather than the governing body of a junior college (doing so)."

Hypothetically speaking, "We operate a division in Fort Stockton in the high school. But if the citizens were to decide they wanted to build a facility to serve as a branch campus, the proposed bill would allow them to levy a tax just for the construction of the building," he said.

Current law provides that the junior college governing body may levy a tax for maintenance of a branch campus, at a rate not to exceed five cents per $100 valuation.

The bill would provide for use of the tax for "maintenance and capital expenditure."

HB 784 provides that the proceeds of the taxes could be used "to fund capital construction, to purchase real estate, and to operate and maintain a junior college district branch campus."

Midlanders arraigned on burglary charges

From Staff Reports

Two Midland men arrested early Sunday morning in a car police say was seen leaving the scene of a burglary were arraigned Monday afternoon by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Clarence Edward Blaylock, 49, and Oscar Leroy Lewis, 43, were charged with burglary of a building. Bond for each was set at $15,000.

The two were arrested in connection with the burglary of a house at 1808 E. Oak. An $800 air conditioner/heater unit and a $200 water heater missing from the house were recovered from their 1977 Pontiac Grand Prix, according to police.

Blaylock, 1604 N. Fort Worth, and Lewis, 307 S. Lamesa Road, were arrested at the intersection of Fairgrounds Road and Kentucky Avenue at 11:45 a.m. Sunday, about 30 minutes after the burglary was reported.

A Ford half-ton pickup reported stolen Sunday was recovered by police on patrol early this morning. According to reports, the vehicle, owned by Patrick Stanley of 909 W. Indiana, was found parked between two vacant houses in the 200 block of east Washington. A $400 car stereo was missing from the vehicle, which was returned to Stanley.

Equipment valued at $2,250 was stolen from the yard of a house under construction at 1803 Devonshire Court, according to reports. Elisardo Madrid, 4619 Versailles, told police the items were chained together and were last seen at 5 p.m. Friday. The $2,000 stone mixer, $240 wheelbarrow and $10 chain and lock were discovered missing at 8 a.m. Monday.

Steven L. Owens, 4201 N. Garfield No. 220, reported the burglary of $810 worth of items from a storage unit at 5005 Andrews Highway. The unit, last checked at 5 p.m. Feb. 4, was locked and there were no signs of forced entry. Discovered missing at 1 p.m. Saturday were a microwave oven, AM/FM cassette stereo, 12-gauge shotgun and .22-caliber rifle.

B.B. Salgado, 1902 N. Jackson, told police $708 worth of equipment was stolen Thursday night from a workshop on the north side of his residence. Taken were a lawnmower, air compressor, extension cord and truck tire gauge.

About $435 worth of jeans and dress pants were reported stolen from a dryer in the laundry room of the Junction Apartments, 1902 N. Midland Drive. According to reports, Karen Randell of Apt. 602 said she had gone to her apartment to get clothes hangers at 2:30 a.m. today and when she returned, her clothes were gone.

Rudy Woerndle, 3207 Reo, told police a radar detector and pair of sunglasses were stolen from his car while it was parked at his residence between 8 a.m. Thursday and 3 p.m. Sunday. Total loss was placed at $360.

About $300 worth of items were reported stolen in a burglary Monday at the Odessa Jones residence, 310 S. Tyler. According to reports, entry was gained by kicking open a rear door. Taken were a color television set and watch.

Boy Scout master's trial postponed

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The trial of a former Boy Scout master charged with indecency with a child was postponed this morning because the judge was ill.

It has been tentatively rescheduled for 9 a.m. Wednesday in 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin's court.

Joseph Gallagher, 37, 610 W. Cowden, was indicted Dec. 12 on the second-degree felony. If convicted, the defendant could be sentenced to two to 20 years in the Texas Department of Corrections and fined up to $10,000.

An indictment Aug. 8 charging Gallagher with sexual abuse of a child was dismissed when he was reindicted on the indecency charges. He was released after posting a $7,500 bond.

Gallagher is no longer associated with the Boy Scouts.

The former scoutmaster at St. Ann's Catholic Church is charged in the indictment with an offense alleged to have taken place the night of July 22 and the morning of July 23 with an 11-year-old boy Gallagher met at the Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch in the Davis Mountains.

According to Tom Morgan, administrative assistant district attorney, who will be prosecuting the case, the complaint was filed July 31 by the boy's mother, who was actively involved in scouting as a den mother when she and her son met Gallagher. The son spent the night with Gallagher when the alleged offense occurred.

Gallagher is being represented by Vernon E. Reichle, who filed a motion Jan. 16 to quash the indictment. According to the motion, "the defendant is alleging he did not touch the genitals with any intent to arouse and gratify the sexual desire of the defendant as eight to 10 hours is a long period of time to maintain an intent to arouse and gratify a sexual desire obtained by touching..."

The motion also states that the defendant "admits to drying off the body of said child after he bathed or showered," but states the defendant "did nothing to gratify his alleged sexual desire..."

A motion for probation if the defendant is found guilty also was filed Jan. 16, according to court records.

A jury, which was selected today, will set the punishment in the event the defendant is found guilty of the charges.

MIC no longer threat to Houston

LA PORTE, Texas (AP) — The chemical that claimed 2,500 lives last December in an accident in India no longer will pose a threat in a Houston-area Du Pont Co. plant which uses it, because a way has been found to disarm the killer substance, company engineers say.

Du Pont is spending $10 million to $13 million at its La Porte plant southeast of Houston to build a "closed loop" manufacturing process and hopes to have it operating by June 1, company officials say.

The Texas Air Quality Board issued a building permit last week and construction is to start immediately.

Methyl isocyanate, or MIC, a temperamental compound that is one of the most poisonous, volatile chemicals known, is used by Du Pont to make insecticide. Hundreds of tons of MIC once were stored at the plant beside the Houston Ship Channel.

But history's worst industrial accident changed all that.

Last Dec. 3, an MIC storage facility at a Union Carbide plant near Bhopal, India, leaked more than 25 tons of the chemical, sending a cloud of death spewing into a nearby residential area. About 2,500 died and another 3,000 were injured.

The accident sent a worldwide wave of shock through the chemical industry and caused an review of safety procedures at plants everywhere.

At the time of the accident, storage tanks at the La Porte Du Pont plant contained 120 tons of MIC, almost five times more than was spilled in Bhopal.

R.D. Stewart, manager of the La Porte Plant, said that once news of the Bhopal tragedy became known, he immediately made plans to dispose of the MIC through processing. The following days, as the MIC was reduced to an insecticide, were tense, he said.

"I must admit that from Dec. 4 to the end of January, I was concerned," said Stewart. "Bhopal was a shock to everybody."

Even though Du Pont had used MIC for 15 years without an injury-causing accident, Bhopal changed the company's view of the hazardous chemical.

"Pre-Bhopal, we looked at the factors and decided it (use of MIC) was worth the risk," said Stewart. "But after Bhopal, we took another look and decided that now was the time for a change."

MIC is a key chemical step in the manufacturer of Lannate, an insecticide that, ironically, was developed to help protect the environment.

Lannate is used on field crops to control chewing insects. The insecticide is short-lived, with a half life of only 48 hours. It was developed to replace DDT, a long-lived chemical that damages the environment.

Stewart said it was believed the environmental advantages of Lannate was "worth the risk" of transporting MIC halfway across the country and storing it here in huge quanities.

Properties peculiar to MIC require some of the most expensive precautions of any industrial substance. The chemical is toxic, unstable and flammable. Exposure to only 0.02 parts per million is considered hazardous.

MIC is so unstable that it must be stored at temperatures below 36 degrees and at a pressure of no more than 15 pounds per square inch. The chemical will react swiftly — by rapidly heating and expanding — at contact with water or with such common metals as zinc or iron.

Union Carbide is the only company manufacturing MIC in the United States.

Until last December, Du Pont annually purchased about 51 tank cars of the chemical and had it shipped from the Union Carbide plant in West Virginia. It was unloaded in a special rail yard at the Du Pont plant in La Porte and transferred through stainless steel pipes to the storage tanks.

The storage tanks, triple-walled and made of stainless steel, were kept only half full, with the empty bunker space filled with pressurized, dry nitrogen gas.

In 15 years of handling the chemical, Du Pont experienced only one spill. Eight ounces escaped in 1981 and evaporated before they could be neutralized. No one was injured.

Following the Bhopal accident, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration conducted an inspection of the Du Pont plant, the Union Carbide facility in West Virginia, and three other U.S. plants where MIC is used.

Should 'National Feet Day' send press running?

"I'm so sick of people proclaiming things," said a fellow journalist the other day.

I agree.

The National Shoemaker's Association declares some obscure weekday as "National Feet Day" and the press is off and running.

Used to be there were very few special days. Christmas, Easter, Thanksgiving, Halloween, Fourth of July and Valentine's Day were red-letter dates that split up the other 359 ho-hum days and gave us something to look forward to.

And let's not forget birthdays.

As a kid, the world revolved around the sun and the sun revolved around my birthday, the way I saw it. The earth's population was created and existed for the sole purpose of wishing me a Happy Birthday, with much appreciation and presentation of expensive gifts.

In the classroom, Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays were pretty powerful stuff as well. At least until they changed them to the most convenient Monday (or is it Friday? — I've been confused ever since).

I guess it was about that same time that the world went crazy and started giving special importance to every day, week and month of the year.

Lest we think this year is no different from any other, 1985 has officially been proclaimed the "Year of Well Being," according to the 1985 Chase's Annual Events, the What's What of meaningless memorializations.

With that aspiration in mind, let's examine what we've missed to date.

Did you know (or care) that January was National Soup Month?

It was also Prune Breakfast Month. That's tough. Being brought into this world during that lovely month, I find it difficult to give equal billing to a bowl of shriveled plums.

But January was also a popular birth month for such notables as Ethel Merman and Millard Fillmore (he used to be president) and was host to unforgettable celebrations such as National Pie Day, National Meat Week and the most important for those who care — Week's Week (set aside to call attention to all the weeks of importance in the forthcoming year.)

Others included Trivia Day — perhaps set up by those few who still think that Trivial Pursuit is fun, in order to "pool" information — and the one day that rivals Christmas, as far I'm concerned — National Nothing Day.

National Nothing Day (Jan. 16) was established "to provide Americans with one national day when they can just sit without celebrating, observing or honoring anything." Bully.

If you think January was beyond the normal acceptance level of most logical adults, let me tell you about February.

February is real popular.

It is, all at the same time, Potato Lover's Month, Shape Up with Pickles Time (Pickle Packers International) and National Cherry Month.

Uh, pardon me, but who cares? (I can safely say that because I haven't noticed any potato, cherry or pickle farms in the area.)

Of course, legitimate and noble concerns are represented during February as well. American Heart Month, American History (and Black History) Month, International Friendship Month, American Music Month and National Children Dental Health Month all identify with these 28 days.

But February still has its share of silly celebrations. National New Idea Week (please don't think up any new weeks to honor) and National Pay Your Bills Week (I celebrated that one on National Nothing Day) are not to be missed.

Some rather weird events also occur this month. Feb. 10 is World Marriage Day (started by the Rev. Sun Yung Moon, no doubt) and Feb. 11 is White Shirt Day. This innocuous-sounding observance was started by blue collar workers during a 1937 strike against General Motors. Each year on that date, factory workers in Flint, Mich., wear white shirts to work.

And celebrated persons get added recognition during February — most notably, Jackie Gleason (how sweet it is) and Rene Theophile Hyacinthe Laennec, inventor of the stethoscope.

I, for one, have had enough.

I say poo to Pooh Day (Jan. 18) and peanuts to National Peanut Month (March). Take me back to when Washington was born on Feb. 22 and when a skittish groundhog and a cheap box of chocolates were the only thing to stir the soul during the month of February.

Leave National Pig Day (March 1) to the holiday hogs who can't leave well enough alone. They can trot down to the municipal library and pick up a copy of Chase's Annual Events if they want.

But they had better read fast.

March 1-7 is Return the Borrowed Book Week.

Board asks commissioner to develop teachers' test

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — The State Board of Education, during a regular meeting recently, directed the commissioner of education to proceed as "rapidly as possible" to secure funds and to secure a contract for reading and writing skills tests to be administered for recertification of teachers, as required by House Bill 72.

An estimated $5.8 million in funds reportedly is needed to develop, validate and administer the tests. The funds will come from Texas Education Agency and an appropriation from the Legislature.

The board action was taken in response to a report received from an advisory committee which had reviewed proposals for complying with the state law that mandates testing for recertification.

The advisory committee, made up of experts with testing ability from across the country, told the board the use of scores from examinations which teachers and administrators may have already taken, such as the Graduate Record Examination or the Scholastic Aptitude Test, was neither a valid nor legally defensible approach to assessment of basic skills in reading or writing. In addition, the committee advised development of tests which involved free-response writing samples as a test of writing skills; and that items on the reading and writing tests be closely related to skills required for successful performance in the classroom.

The board directive would cause the basic skills test in reading and writing to be developed and administered at least two times prior to June 30, 1986, the deadline set by state law for testing for recertification.

State law requires all certified school personnel to be tested as a condition for continued certification. More than 200,000 persons, including public school teachers, administrators, state and regional employees and college and university faculty will be required to take the test.

Included in the plan for developing the test is the printing and distribution of an information brochure about the exam and the development and distribution of study guides im ample time for individuals to prepare for the test.

Legislators introduce bill allowing second mortgages

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans want to use their homes as collateral on loans for education, medical and other expenses, according to two lawmakers pushing a constitutional amendment on second mortgages.

"We're only trying to let people use equity for a purpose that is important to them," Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said at a Monday news conference.

Brooks and Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, on Monday filed the proposed constitutional change that is opposed by the Texas Consumer Association.

The two lawmakers said their proposal would not put borrowers in undue jeopardy of losing their homes to creditors.

Under the current law, a Texan can lose his home only for failure to repay a first mortgage, home improvement loan or taxes. Texas is the only state that bars second mortgages, according to Brooks.

The senator said second mortgages are needed by families who have "paid 18-20 years on the property, have their first lien down to $15,000-$20,000, have a home worth $70,000 and want to send the child to college or they have a catastrophic illness."

"This allows Texans to borrow on the equity of their homes," said Ms. Danburg. "The money is rightfully theirs."

The Texas Consumer Association said in a position paper that second mortgages are not needed in the state.

"The homestead exemption has played a role in the economic stability of the state and has worked well for Texas citizens," the association said.

Ms. Danburg said second mortgages could be used to help Texans start businesses. But the consumer association said loans for new businesses, and most other purposes, now are readily available.

Senator: Timeshare buyers often find 'no room at inn'

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Ray Farabee's "no room at the inn" timeshare bill has been sent to a Senate subcommittee for review of how it proposes to regulate such sales.

Farabee's bill would allow a customer three days after a sale to change his or her mind and get out of the deal, unless the transaction had been arranged by a licensed real estate agent.

Timeshares "are subject to fraud or abuse," Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, told the Senate Economic Development Committee on Monday.

He said timeshares "appeal to the desire of people who work 50 weeks a year and want for two weeks to go to some far-off place."

One example of a timeshare would be the purchase of two weeks each year at a vacation resort. There are arrangements, Farabee said, where a person can exchange two weeks in Colorado, for instance, for two weeks in Florida.

"Our biggest problem with the exchange program is overbooking, and the only time you can get two weeks in Florida is the middle of the summer," said Farabee. "Often, there is no room at the inn."

Farabee also cited cases where a timeshare is sold and then the corporation selling the timeshares fails and the buyers "don't get their money back."

His bill provides for an escrow account to be set up for timeshare firms.

Dallas man elected to UT board of regents

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Jess Hay of Dallas, a member of the University of Texas System Board of Regents since 1977, was elected chairman of the nine-member group, replacing Jon Newton, whose term expired this month.

The regents also elected Robert B. Baldwin III as first vice chairman and Shannon Ratliff, second vice chairman. Both are of Austin.

Hay first was appointed to a six-year term on the Board by Gov. Dolph Briscoe. He was reappointed by Gov. Mark White in 1983.

In assuming the chairmanship, Hay noted, "As a first priority, the board must extend its best efforts to continue adequate legislative funding for the components of the UT System and, indeed, all of Texas higher education." He emphasized that "the appropriations requests currently before the Legislature are well below the levels needed to maintain the momentum of the UT System's academic and research progress and would severly limit this state's ability to meet the high technology requirements of the future."

Hay received a bachelor of business administration degree in 1953 from Southern Methodist University and a law degree from SMU School of Law in 1955.

He was associated with the law firm of Locke, Purnell, Boren, Laney and Neely from 1955-65 and was a partner with the firm from 1962-65. He was elected president and chief executive officer of Lomas & Nettleton Financial Corporation in September 1965 and to his current position of chairman of the board and chief executive officer in October 1969. He became chairman and chief executive officer of Lomas & Nettleton Mortgage Investors when it was organized in 1969.

Hay also is a member of the board of directors of Exxon Coporation, Greyhound Corporation, Trinity Industries Inc., Mercantile Texas Corporation, Verex Corporations and Republic Financial Services Inc.

A former member of the Democratic National Committee, Hay served as national finance committee chairman from 1977-78. He is a member of the Dallas Citizens Council; the Greater Dallas Planning Council; the Dallas, Texas and American Bar Associations.

In other action, regents:

— Approved the establishment of a $120,000 Barbara Jordan Fund in the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at UT at Austin.

Income from the fund will be used to provide scholarships, internships, travel to internships and Presidential Management Internship interviews and publication of professional reports for graduate students in the LBJ school.

— Accepted a $10,000 anonymous donation to establish the Art Appreciation Endowed Scholarship in the UT at Austin Department of Art. Income from the endowment will be used to grant scholarships to art students.

The gift was made in honor of Susan M. Mayer, lecturer in the art department and museum education coordinator of the Archer M. Huntington Art Gallery; and McDonald Smith, associate professor of art history.

Adcock's offers 20 percent discount on drapery service

Darla Adcock Nelson, manager of Adcock's Ideal Drapery Service rehangs drapes in the offices of W. V. (Red) Roberts, president of Columbia Drilling Co., Inc.

Draperies represent a sizeable investment. That's why Darla Adcock Nelson, manager of Adcock's Ideal Drapery Service, challenges property managers to protect their company's drapery investment. Moreover, Adcock's is offering a 20 percent discount through March 29 to help apartment managers and other property managers start getting the most out of their investment.

The International Fabricare Institute suggests that the life of drapes can be prolonged by regular cleaning, that is at least once a year.

Adcock's Ideal Drapery Service is the place to turn for high quality, professional service. Three generations of experience go into Adcocks's Ideal Drapery Service. Fred Adcock began Adcock's Ideal Cleaners and Drapery Service in 1952 and it is still owned by his son John Adcock and managed by Darla Adcock Nelson, John's daughter. This strong family commitment means outstanding and professional drapery cleaning for Midland. In fact, the Adcock name has been a synonym for quality in dry cleaning since the shop first opened in 1952.

Recognizing that the life of draperies can be greatly lengthened by proper, regular cleaning, the Adcock family has now commited their business exclusively to draperies and specialty items.

Adcock's has always specialized in draperies, but now they can offer Midland even better service. In many places clothing takes priority over drapes. That may be understandable, but it is still frustrating to have the office wide open to the world for days while waiting on the drapes to be cleaned. Adcock's has changed that by offering faster, more complete service.

Darla Adcock Nelson, the manager, emphasizes that they offer COMPLETE drapery service. That means that you don't have to take down all the dusty drapes and then rehang them, yourself. Darla will come and take them down for you. Moreover, she will provide a temporary cover for the windows.

As she takes the drapes down she is careful to label them to assure that every panel will get back to its proper place when she returns in a few days to rehang them. Just imagine what a time saver this can be.

At the shop three generations of experience go into the cleaning, pressing, and pleating of drapes. Because the Adcock's understand how valuable your drapes are, they use naphtha, not perchloroethylene (perc) which many cleaners use. Naptha is gentler on colors and fabrics. This is extremely important when dealing with draperies.

The professionals at Adcock's are perfectionists who are determined to make your drapes look great by using the accurate and fast Perfectpleat machine.

Adcock's Ideal Drapery Service is also equipped to repair your drapes and they have a special process for whitening sheers. In addition, they give special attention to fire damaged drapes, using special deodorizers to restore freshness.

The Adcock family commitment to fine dry cleaning is extended to individuals as well as businesses. Office buildings and apartment complexes no longer have to settle for anything less than a complete and professional drapery cleaning service. Go by Adcock's Ideal Drapery Service at 309 Dodson Street or call Darla at 684-6697. She'll be glad to come out and give you a free estimate. Remember three generations of experience go into the professional care of drapes and specialty items at Adcock's Ideal Drapery Service.

If you haven't picked up your free 1985 calendar at Adcock's, but sure to do that this week.

An idea becomes a reality

In Cheapy Car Lease an idea of Bill Buttry's became a reality. After working in the new car, truck and equipment leasing business for 25 years he realized that it was time for a change.

"I just got tired of owing the banks and financial institutions a bunch of money and felt the time was right for the type of service Cheapy offers," says owner Bill Buttry.

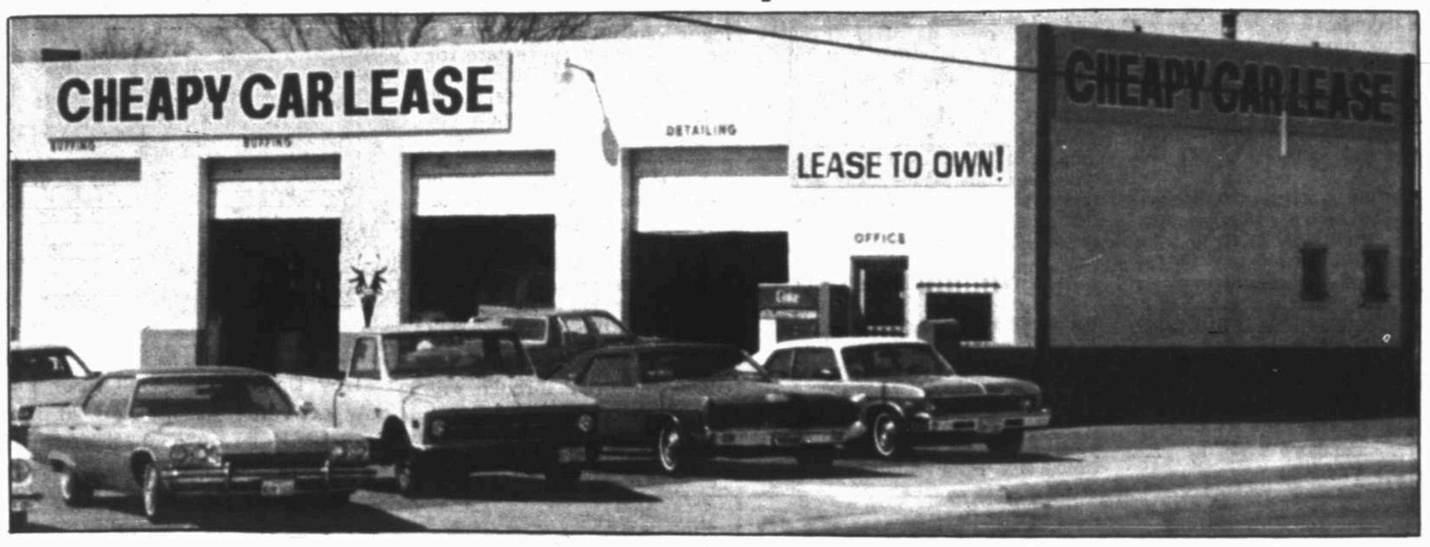

CHEAPY Car Lease can operate at an affordable price to the public because their strategy of rent-to-own is the same used by manufacturers who sell televisins, furniture, appliances, etc... Cheapy Car Lease opened in March of 1983 and is now running well over 100 units.

Leasing your car to own is the best way to have transportation at a price that will not burn a hole in your pocket book.

Nowadays most people can not afford two cars at $500 a car for four or five years, so Bill and General Manager David Lewis came up with the lease-to-own idea. For a small down payment and weekly or bi-weekly payments, you can drive off in a CHEAPY car.

To further service you, Bill and David have recently drawn up a reimbursement plan that allows the customer to purchase insurance with a local insurance agency and Cheapy Car Lease will make the payments for you and add it to your weekly bill.

Cheapy Car Lease, at the corner of Midland Drive and Highway 80, doesn't want you to be without transporation. It is their objective to provide you with the car of your choice and to be of service to you.

Mask maker adds mystery to Mardi Gras

New York Times News Service

NEW ORLEANS — To the world at large, the devotion of a man's life to the making of masks seems frivolous, a pursuit not destined to help one to rise in corporate board rooms.

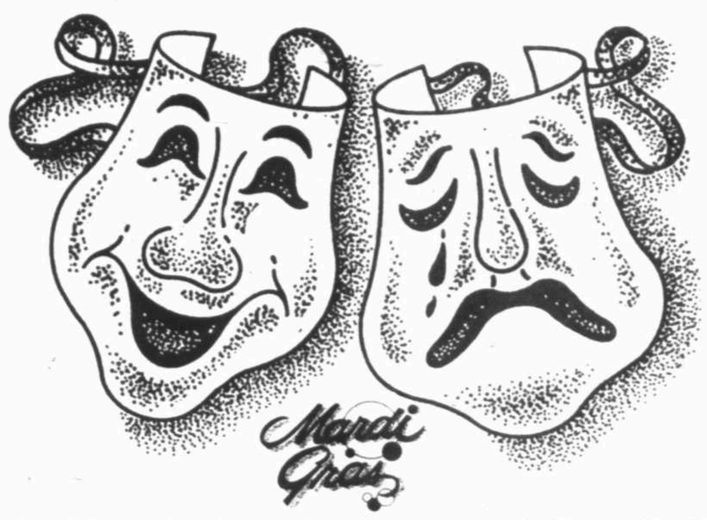

Joseph McLaughlin, who designs and builds masks of extraordinary flamboyance, knows what a lot of people think. And McLaughlin, a fashion designer turned mask maker, thinks the world is too caught up in pinstripes and punch clocks for its collective mental health.

"People often have difficulty fantasizing," he says. "With a mask you can create an illusion. You can become what you want to become."

The idea of becoming your fantasies is one of the great underlying attractions of Mardi Gras, the month-long, pre-Lenten festival this city is celebrating. And that idea brought McLaughlin, who lives in Los Angeles, to New Orleans.

"I like it here," he says over breakfast. "People understand masks here. In other places when I do shows people come up to me and say, 'This is lovely, but who wears them?' I don't have that problem here."

To those who make that inquiry McLaughlin has a stock reply. "People with imagination," he tells them.

New Orleans supports a number of mask makers, people who give their creativity over to fashioning fantasy out of cloth, leather, feathers, metal, and anything else which comes to mind.

"There are more mask makers here than anywhere in the country," McLaughlin says. "I think the quality of this town allows that."

New Orleans, more than most places, is a town of eccentrics. It is not unusual to see people in masks or dressed in the most colorful, violent, post-punk finery. Cyndi Lauper, with her Crayola-red hair, would not look out of place on a normal afternoon in the French Quarter.

Thus the market for masks. They are made here, displayed in serious art galleries here, and collected as works of contemporary art.

And they are not cheap.

"I don't work cheap," McLaughlin says.

Take the purple feathered mask hanging on the gallery wall. It is fluffy and there are pointed leather ears and a leather feline nose. When you try it on McLaughlin instructs you to open your mouth in a cat-like snarl.

The price is $145.

Other masks fit close to the skull and create a futuristic effect.

"I like to think of them as a piece of silk thrown onto someone's face and then a wind machine turned on them," McLaughlin says.

In a plexiglas case at the front of the exhibit sits a black leather mask. The top of the mask is lined with a grey cylinder and there are dozens of silver steel pins sticking out. It is a mask that would not be inappropriate in a bar featuring chains and leather as the hottest fashion item.

Other masks sprout horns and great wings of multi-colored plumage. Some of the wings are several feet long.

On the wall hangs a mask sporting a bird's head, beak intact, which seems to be launching itself from the wearer's forehead.

"That's bizarre isn't it?" McLaughlin says. "Though in New Orleans I don't suppose it is really bizarre. It is a lot more bizarre in Los Angeles."

For New Orleans, particularly for Mardi Gras, nothing is too bizarre, he says. That is one of the reasons he was attracted to this city.

"People kept telling me I needed to come here. People who liked my designs and liked this city recommended it. They were right," he says. "My imagination here is completely unfettered. I can do anything I want and someone will buy it."

It is not uncommon for McLaughlin to create eight masks in a day.

"I am always fantasizing," he says. "I fantasize about everything. I do it continually. My mind works very quickly. I have a million fantasies going right now."

McLaughlin, who designed the headpieces and masks for the Jacksons' Victory Tour, is also well-known in the film world.

Steven Spieberg collects his masks. "He has a wonderful imagination and loves fantasy," McLaughlin says.

Larry Hagman, J.R. on "Dallas," is also a collector. And McLaughlin's work is featured in recent music videos by Jermaine Jackson, Latoya Jackson, Stevie Nicks, and Laura Branigan.

But McLaughlin loves to see his masks on ordinary people who want to become extraordinary for a little while. "After all," he says, "isn't that what Mardi Gras is all about?"

Floats called 'art form'

New York Times News Service

NEW ORLEANS — The head of Medusa is six feet tall. Out of her mouth comes the forked tongue of a serpent. Snakes coil out of her hair.

Joseph Barth, a young man in paint-splattered jeans who sports a smile of day-glo intensity, is casually leaning against the horrid head.

"We regard what we do as an art form," he says, accentuating his remarks with a flick of a paint brush.

For the last nine years Barth, along with his father and brother, has been regarded as one of the most innovative and talented of the select group of artisans who build Mardi Gras floats.

The floats, giant papier-mache figures designed around a particular theme, are the centerpieces of the huge parades that mark Mardi Gras in this city. On the floats — there can be as many as 20 in one of the larger parades — members of the krewes, the city's Mardi Gras societies, ride through town. The costumed krewe members throw trinkets — plastic beads, souvenir coins, plastic cups — to the noisy throngs along the parade route.

"Only in New Orleans do you have a city where people can pretty much make their livings by building floats like these," Barth says. "Isn't it something?"

In the Barth Brothers' metal warehouse in East New Orleans the fantasies take shape. Over there is a giant 15-foot skull, open-mouthed and grinning. Around the corner is a 20-foot giant holding the decapitated head of a fallen foe. All of these floats are only hours from rolling down Canal Street, the heart of the city.

"If you went to another city and proposed something like this, that you have a month-long festival with parades and millions of people, they would think you were crazy," Barth says.

While he talks, workers are peeling the paper backing off gold foil and sticking it to a float depicting an ancient goddess of water. The goddess, a warm smile on her face, leans percariously out from the front of a float. One of her huge hands and her face was sculpted by Barth from clay. The remainder is papier-mache coated with a special, water-proof adhesive.

"I do sculpture," Barth says. "I do more classical things that I show in galleries around town. But I consider this sculpture. It is very much an art form."

Barth says his family, which has been involved with Mardi Gras for three generations, is interested in bringing back the traditional look parade floats had at the turn of the century.

Carnival provides excuse to dress wildly

New York Times News Service

NEW ORLEANS — One year Don Lee dressed up as a fairy godmother, complete with jeweled scepter, crown, and gold-dusted wings.

Lee's skirts flowed around him in white and blue taffeta and his white face makeup offset the blue sequins in his full beard. He was, to put it generously, quite a sight.

"It was the second year I had come to New Orleans and I got caught up in the whole thing," he remembers. "Then I got to thinking, 'This is too, too outrageous. I'll get arrested or something.' You see, I'm from Mississippi and to even think about something like that up there would mean social destruction and a criminal record."

The hairy-faced, 200-pound, six-foot-tall fairy godmother got over his cold feet with the reassurance of friends, and strutted out in full regalia on Fat Tuesday — the crowning day of New Orleans' huge Mardi Gras celebration.

"No one even gave me a second look," he recalls now, laughing. "No one cared because they were too busy making themselves what they wanted to be. Why, there were people practically naked, for God's sake."

Among other things, Lee found out that on Mardi Gras 200-pound fairy godmothers are a dime a dozen. It is a holiday that is all-New Orleans — spectacular, outrageous, brazen, bizarre, bawdy, drunken, and wild. Mardi Gras is an assault on every sense, from moral to visual, that anyone raised normally has ever possessed.

BUT, THEN again, normalcy has no place in Mardi Gras. New Orleans has become a city in which everyone is mad to do what their mothers always told them they couldn't.

Since there is almost nothing that can be done that hasn't been done a hundred times before, it's not easy to raise the eyebrows of officialdom.

Take the time a dwarf was spied walking down the middle of Dauphine Street in broad, Mardi Gras daylight. He was dressed in gold sandals, matching wings and a gold lame g-string. Atop his head was a lavish gold crown.

A police car, cruising the street, stopped beside him and the officer riding on the passenger side waved the dwarf over.

In any other city in America, a morals charge would likely have followed. On Fat Tuesday in New Orleans, all the cop wanted was a chance for a quick snapshot. After the photo was taken, the cop waved and offered a friendly smile as he pulled away.

The dwarf headed toward Bourbon Street to lose himself among the uproarious masses packed wall-to-wall.

ODD AS it may seem, all of this madness has its basis in religion. Carnival begins on Twelfth Night, Jan. 6, the Feast of the Epiphany, when the wise men visited the Christ child.

Carnival, which loosely translates as "farewell to flesh," is a time when revelers live well in preparation for the 40 days of the Lenten season.

The culmination of Carnival is Mardi Gras, French for Fat Tuesday. Lent, the austere season, begins on Ash Wednesday. Traditionally Mardi Gras was a day of feasting and excess, but over the years in New Orleans (and in Mobile, Ala., where the custom began) it has grown to be much more.

Mardi Gras now refers to the season, which began in earnest about two weeks ago.

Public and private funding of the event is now estimated at more than $50 million. The plethora of carnival societies now have 45,000 members in all. Several million people, both locals and tourists, turn out yearly for the gigantic parades; there are several each day during the celebration's last big blast, from Friday until Fat Tuesday.

This past weekend, the city was flooded with tourists who will spend an estimated $50 million daily on food, hotel rooms, taxis, drink, and souvenirs.

These big bucks lend a touch of irony to one nickname for Mardi Gras: "The Largest Free Show on Earth."

DURING THE parades, sponsored by krewes or Mardi Gras mystic societies, people will crowd the parade route four and five deep for a chance to catch the trinkets that are traditionally thrown from the floats.

"Throw me somthin', Mister!" is the standard cry as people — from grandmothers to pre-schoolers — fight for plastic bead necklaces, aluminum doubloons, frisbees, plastic cups, plastic umbrellas, rubber spears, bikini underwear, and artificial roses.

The most prized "throw" in all of Carnival is a Zulu coconut. The actual coconut, hand-painted and covered in glitter, is handed out by the Krewe of Zulu, Mardi Gras' oldest predominantly black krewe.

The "throws," which adorn people's necks and rearview mirrors during Mardi Gras, become relics when each year's Carnival is over, and become a kind of specialized currency in New Orleans. People here have extensive collections of doubloons, costumes, beads, and other memorabilia, and there are at least three Mardi Gras museums in the city.

The public celebrations have been going on in New Orleans since the city was founded, but in 1857 Comus became the first marching society to parade. Comus had a street procession and then a ball, much as the older krewes do today. It was the beginning of the modern celebration.

The older krewes, such as Rex, Comas, and Momus, are still highly selective about their members. Membership in these krewes generally signifies a family with deep roots in New Orleans society.

The older krewe's balls are strictly formal and by invitation only. In the society pages of the local newspaper there is much debate in the weeks leading up to Mardi Gras about "proper behaviour" and dress at the balls.

For example, should a woman invited to a ball still wear elbow-length white gloves? Should all the women's gowns be floor-length? Should a woman walk across the ballroom dance floor unescorted?

Such are the fine-tuned questions on which Mardi Gras ball etiquette revolves. But winds of change have blown even through this most traditional celebration.

The gay population of New Orleans has seized on Mardi Gras with a passion. Balls, where the queen may sport a beard, are now considered by some to be the most fun and daring in town.

IT IS just such flouting of tradition that is the basis of Mardi Gras. At the beginning, the crowning of "royalty" by each krewe was intended as a satire on the crowned heads of Europe. But as the tradition became more deeply rooted it became more serious. And in 1950 the Duke and Duchess of Windsor made international headlines by bowing to the make-believe monarchs at the Rex ball.

And the temporary prestige of carnival royalty does not come cheap. The cost of being king of Rex or Comus is said to be in the tens of thousands of dollars.

T-shirts philosophically fun

Hearst News Service

The T-shirt — that humble counterpart to those humble blue jeans — has become a staple of American fashion. Since the '50s, the basic design hasn't changed much, but designs and slogans change almost weekly. As someone in the T-shirt biz said, "The T-shirt isn't a fad, but what you put on it is."

Recent hot sellers in the T-shirt slogan department include "Life is Hard and Then You Die," "When the Going Gets Tough, the Tough Go Shopping" and "Are We Having Fun Yet?"

Among T-shirt manufacturers and stores, there's a great deal of copying as T-shirt slogans can't be copyrighted. And often, a popular shirt will inspire other slogans. From the enormously popular "I don't have a drinking problem, I drink, I get drunk, I fall down, no problem" you get "I don't have an eating problem, I eat, I get fat, I buy new clothes, no problem."

There are T-shirts for nearly every philosophy. For feminists, there's the currently popular "Behind Every Successful Woman is Herself." Mom might like "Because I'm the Mommie, That's Why!" For your BMW-driving friend who owns a Cuisinart and collects teddy bears: "Whoever has the most toys when he dies, wins." Most single women in San Francisco love: "So many men, so few are straight."

The first T-shirt with a imprint on it is thought to have been Mickey Mouse, which was made in the '30s. But Mark Dixon, associate editor of Impressions magazine, a trade publication covering imprinted clothing, says the first might have been T-shirts from the University of Michigan.

Originally, T-shirts came from France. They were "discovered" by American G.I.s during World War I. The soldiers brought them back and American companies began to copy the cool, lightweight cotton underwear. These early "T-shirts" were the sleeveless type. They were considered to be underwear and not to be worn in polite society.

During the '30s, a T-shirt with sleeves was manufactured in the United States. During World War II, American G.I.s worked, slept and wrapped their toothbrushes in government-issue T-shirts. But during the late '40s, T-shirts went back to being underwear again.

Marlon Brando fueled the trend when he appeared in the early '50s in "A Streetcar Named Desire" in a T-shirt. James Dean also wore a tight, sassy, sexy T-shirt in "Rebel Without a Cause."

By the '60s, the T-shirt became an emblem of the terrible teens. "Worn with blue jeans in the '60s, the T-shirt became a perfect anti-establishment symbol for both sexes. It was a very public way to tell the older generation you didn't conform to their suit and tie and way of life," wrote Ken Kneitel in his book "The Great American T-Shirt."

By the time the Vietnam war rolled around, T-shirts were politicized. They soon were emblazoned with angry anti-war statements. One of the more popular ones was "Join the Army, travel to foreign countries, meet interesting and unusual people and kill them."

Also during the '60s, T-shirts became used as a promotional or advertising tool. Budweiser is thought to be the first company to put its label on a T-shirt. The promo T-shirt became an ad man's dream, and Budweiser was soon joined by all sorts of other companies.

In 1976, the wife of one of the members of the Grateful Dead had the group's name printed on a few T-shirts. The concessioner for Winterland, Dell Furano, asked if he could try to sell them before one of the concerts. The T shirts sold almost instantly and a business was born.

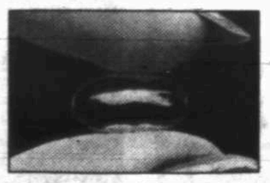

Today, Winterland Productions is reputed to be one of the five biggest T-shirt printers in the country. Last year, Winterland printed more than 1 million dozen T-shirts. For the most recent Rolling Stones concert, between $700,000 and $800,000 was made in one day alone. More than 100 music acts have contracted with the company to make their T-shirts.

Possibly the bigggest T-shirt collection is owned by San Francisco radio announcer Carter B. Smith. Smith has 26,045 T-shirts and started his collection in 1976 by asking listeners to send in their favorites. Every day, Smith wears "the T-shirt of the day" and thanks the sender on the air.

AT WIT'S END

No consolation in conservation

By ERMA BOMBECK

I had only to hear my husband, Jack the Clipper, riiiip the story slowly from the newspaper and shout, "Aha!" to know that all of us were in for it.

I have not seen the man so excited since he caught the bank in a 17-cent error.

He summoned the family about him and when all was quiet, told us how he had just come across some startling statistics regarding the price of electricity.

"Did you know?" he asked, "that it costs each of us $135 a year to take a hot bath and that the washer costs $3.50 a year to operate?"

"Are you suggesting that we all bathe together in the soak cycle of the washer?" I asked.

"I am suggesting that we all take a good look at what is going on around here. A shower is a lot cheaper and uses less water." As we thanked him for sharing that revelation with us and got up to leave, he said, "And another thing. A waterbed costs $4.35 a year to heat while an electric blanket costs only $2.20."

I grabbed the clipping. "Why don't we all stand under a hair dryer to keep warm? That only costs $1.75 a year."

"For a nickel more," said my son, scanning the list, "we could use the vacuum sweeper to suck the dirt off."

My husband left the room, once again in defeat.

The stories of fathers vs. family in the war against excessive utility costs are old ones. There isn't a father in this world who has not followed a beacon of light in the sky and expected to find a Hollywood premiere at the end of it, only to find it came from his own home.

They cannot see the humor in air-conditioning the garage by leaving the door open in the summer or heating it in the winter by the same process. It's all dollars and cents.

I said to the kids, "Your father has a point. After all, he pays the bills and all he gets back for it is waste. From here on in we stop and think about how much it costs in electricity before we turn on a single appliance."

When my husband came to breakfast, he said, "Where's the coffee?"

"I made it in the popcorn popper," I said. "It only costs 40 cents to run while the electric coffee maker costs $5.40."

One son didn't shave because it cost 40 cents a year. The other one was late for work because the clock ($1.03) was unplugged and a strange smell was coming from the freezer because it cost $109.45 a year to keep it plugged in.

I offered him a piece of solar toast from the window sill, but he just kept walking toward the door.

He hasn't won in 35 years . . . but you have to give him credit. He never stops trying.

DEAR ABBY

Belle hung up about hanging up

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Anxious in Kentucky" wrote in part: "My mother said it's an old tradition that the person who makes the telephone call should be the one to end the conversation. Is that true?"

You replied, "This old tradition is news to me."

Well, Abby, it's not news to me. I was raised in the South, and my mother told me the same thing.

"Anxious" also said that she had been late countless times waiting for the caller to end the conversation because her mother had told her that she would talk all night before terminating a conversation she didn't initiate.

I consider myself well-mannered, but I doubt if I would go that far. — SOUTHERN BELL(E)

DEAR BELL(E): Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 63-year-old woman who grew up in Rhode Island, and I, too, was taught that it was impolite to end a telephone conversation I didn't initiate.

I am now enrolled in a communication course for nurses, and I submit the following from one of our textbooks: "Many people act nonassertively under the mistaken notion that certain behavior defines politeness and consideration for others. They have learned, for example, that it is impolite to end a conversation with someone who has called them; to enter ongoing conversations between two other people; to ask dinner guests to leave when the evening has grown late; to agree with compliments, or to praise themselves. These sorts of behaviors are neither impolite nor aggressive; they are assertive." — DOROTHY BARNETT, SAN GABRIEL, CALIF.

DEAR DOROTHY: Thank you for debunking an outdated rule of etiquette that never made much sense in the first place.

For the callee to wait indefinitely for an inconsiderate caller or a bore to terminate a telephone conversation is, in my opinion, more idiotic than impolite.

In conclusion, Dear Readers, everything your Mama done tole you 40 years ago ain't necessarily so today.

DEAR ABBY: In the old days, when a woman wanted to meet a man who caught her eye, she used to drop a handkerchief. I guess they still do.

If a man wants to meet a lady, what should he drop? — CURIOUS IN WOODSTOCK, ILL.

DEAR CURIOUS: His wallet.

DEAR ABBY: I'm putting the thin world on notice. I am sick and tired of your belittling putdowns.

I'm not going to feel guilty any more because I don't exercise until I drop. I'm not going to feel guilty because when I buy three dozen doughnuts for my family, the clerk looks at me like she thinks I'm going to eat them all myself, because I know skinny people with bulimia who do that.

I am not going to let thin people tell me that being overweight is bad for my health, when I know that constant dieting is worse.

I'm not going to any doctors and nurses who give me shots like they're harpooning a whale.

I'm not going to watch skinny people down three Big Macs and wonder why I gain weight eating one.

I'm not going to give up swimming because people stare at the sight of me in a swimsuit.

One thing I will do is be kinder to thin people than they are to me. Diet? Maybe. Self-respect, you bet, — PHAT IN PHOENIX

WORLD in brief

U.S. wants in Japan's communications market

WASHINGTON (AP) — American officials say they won't play "Uncle Sucker" when Japan opens its telecommunications market to foreigners for the first time April 1.

Since the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. a year ago, Japanese manufacturers have flooded the U.S. market with equipment ranging from telephones to sophisticated switching gear. Now, the Federal Communications Commission wants U.S. manufacturers to have the same access to Japanese consumers.

The Japanese market for communications products is the second largest in the world, behind the United States. And to make sure U.S. manufacturers are treated fairly in that new marketplace, the FCC is studying retaliatory options in the event Japan does not give equal treatment to American and Japanese companies.

Park built at blast site

SAN JUAN IXHUATEPEC, Mexico (AP) — Children laugh and play in a public park built where three months ago giant fireballs consumed blocks of houses as an explosion at a petroleum storage plant ripped through this poor neighborhood at the edge of Mexico City.

The park and its fountains, plazas, benches and swings are part of the federal government's efforts to compensate the people of San Juan Ixhuatepec for their terrible loss the morning of Nov. 19. The plant was run by Pemex, the government oil monopoly.

Nearly 500 people were killed and hundreds of people burned in the inferno.

Six activists arrested

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Six prominent anti-apartheid campaigners were arrested today on high treason warrants and security police raided activists' offices in major cities, police confirmed.

Col. Vic Haynes of police headquarters in Pretoria said the six were arrested in the same investigation that led to treason charges being brought last year against seven other anti-apartheid activists.

Police said the six arrested in Johannesburg and Durban today were Albertina Sisulu, wife of jailed African National Congress leader Walter Sisulu; Sam Kikine of the South African Allied Workers Union; Isaac Ngcobo, whose affiliation was not immediately known; Dr. Ishmael Mohammed of the Transvaal Indian Congress; and Frank Chikane and Cassim Saloojee, both senior officials of the United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition.

The names differed from six names supplied earlier by the law office of Priscilla Jana, who often defends people charged with political offenses. Mrs. Jana's office later said others may have been detained for questioning rather than charged with treason.

Israeli officers killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two Israeli army officers were killed in separate attacks in south Lebanon, the military command in Tel Aviv said today. In Sidon, a Lebanese man accused of collaborating with Israeli occupation forces reportedly was killed.

The deaths of Col. Avraham Hido, 41, and Maj. Shaul Zehavi, 27, brought to three the total number of Israeli fatalities since the Israeli army withdrew from the Sidon region into a trimmed occupation zone on Saturday.

The Israeli military command said Hido was killed Monday in an ambush on the outskirts of the market town of Nabatiyeh, seven miles north of the Israeli border.

Korean cabinet changes

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Lho Shin-Yong, the former national security chief, was inaugurated as prime minister today and promised to pursue a policy of liberalization and democracy.

Lho spoke at an inaugural ceremony one day after President Chun Doo-hwan carried out a Cabinet reshuffle, naming new ministers to 13 of the 22 Cabinet posts.

The Cabinet changes followed elections that saw Chun's ruling party retain solid control of the National Assembly, but which also brought the emergence of an outspoken opposition group as South Korea's second strongest party.

China fetes Year of Ox

PEKING (AP) — One billion Chinese stocked up on food and firecrackers to welcome the Year of the Ox, and the Communist government cautioned them to avoid "extravagant waste" in festivities ringing in the lunar New Year.

Work in China virtually comes to a halt during the three-day holiday, which officially starts Wednesday — the first day of the Chinese new year. Most factories and offices close, and trains and buses overflow with travelers who want to spend the holiday, known as Spring Festival, with their families.

In preparation for the occasion, surging crowds at Peking markets snapped up fish, pork and vegetables for sumptuous New Year's Eve dinners that traditionally include bite-sized dumplings in the capital, spring rolls in Shanghai and lavish fish dishes in the south.

Peking station alone is expected to handle nearly 6 million travelers.

Patrols continue at Piedras Negras border

By JULIA MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

WORLD

PIEDRAS NEGRAS, Mexico — Hundreds of plainclothes federal and state police patroled city streets after violence at a political rally drove scores of Mexicans fleeing into the United States.

The patrols Monday prevented groups from converging near the international bridge where Sunday's violence occurred and three police officers were reportedly wounded.

"From the people we have been interviewing as they are coming through the border since last night, things are getting back to normal," C.E. "Dob" Cunningham, a U.S. Immigration Inspector in Eagle Pass, said today, "just the normal patrol that the city does. From all indications we can learn, it is back to normal now."

Across the border in Eagle Pass, Texas, where more than 100 Mexicans fled during Sunday's demonstration, one Mexican woman was hospitalized in stable condition after being shot by police during Sunday's political rally, officials said.

Eighteen others, including three who asked for political asylum, refused to return to their homes for fear of political reprisals, said Cunningham.

All but one were being detained in jails in Uvalde and Zavala counties, said a U.S. immigration intelligence officer who did not want to be identified by name. A 14-year-old boy, was taken to a juvenile detention center in South Texas, officials said.

Seven people were being held in Uvalde County jail for questioning by immigration authorities, Richard Bennett, a sheriff's dispatcher, said.

Eighty-three Mexicans were returned to their homes here from Eagle Pass late Sunday and early Monday.

One Mexico newspaper quoted Mexican police officials as saying that one, and possibly two, of the 101 Mexicans who stampeded to the U.S. side of the border during clashes with police were being sought in connection with the shooting of three Mexican police officers.

But the immigration intelligence official said American authorities had been unable to confirm that more than one police officer was shot during Sunday's melee.

One demonstrator surrendered a gun to American authorities, who were questioning a pair about their activities during the rally, Cunningham said.

The violence occurred around midday Sunday as a peaceful gathering of about 2,000 demonstrators began to disband, witnesses said. The group had blocked traffic on the international bridge going into the United States to protest what they claim were stolen mayoral elections Dec. 2, according to National Action Party spokesman Jose Gabriel Espinoza.

Police began charging toward the demonstrators with guns drawn, then started firing, Espinoza said.

The ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party claimed a narrow victory in the 1984 elections, while the opposition National Action Party claims it has documentation to show it had won.

The governing PRI has won virtually all major elections since its founding 55 years ago. But in recent years the opposition party has gained in strength, winning a number of smaller elections in areas near Piedras Negras.

"We're seeing people fed up with one-party rule, which amounts to dictatorship of a party," said the U.S. immigration intelligence officer. "The ruling party in Piedras Negras is being challenged probably for the first time in its history and they don't like it," he said.

Peres hopes to smooth Israeli, Vatican relations

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY — Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, who came to the Vatican today for an audience with Pope John Paul II, hopes the meeting will smooth relations irritated by Israel's annexation of Jerusalem and the Vatican's support for Palestinian rights.

Peres arrived for a half-hour meeting with Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Agostino Casaroli before sitting down to private talks with the pontiff.

An honor platoon of 12 Swiss Guards saluted Peres as he walked across a red carpet in St. Damasus' Courtyard to the Apostolic Palace.

Before Peres' visit, the last Israeli head of government to meet the leader of the Roman Catholic Church was Golda Meir, who held a stormy session with Paul VI at the Vatican in 1973.

Peres refused to say before his audience what he intended to discuss with John Paul but expressed hope the talk would improve relations between Christians and Jews.

"Too many tragedies have been caused by misunderstandings between Jews and Christians," he told reporters before leaving Israel on Monday.

Peres' aides said they expected no dramatic developments from the private audience.

The aides said Peres had not requested the audience, and that it was Vatican officials who initiated contacts for a meeting when it was learned that Peres was coming to Rome to meet Italian leaders.

Israel, which has no diplomatic relations with the Vatican, has a long list of complaints over the Roman Catholic Church's position toward the Middle East conflict.

Although the Vatican has never explained its refusal to establish ties with Israel, it was understood that the Jerusalem issue and Israel's territorial disputes with the Arabs were contributing factors.

Pope John Paul II has advocated a special status for Jerusalem with international guarantees to protect the rights of Jews, Moslems and Christians in the city.

The Israeli government says it won't negotiate its claim to sovereignty over all of Jerusalem. The Jewish state annexed the Arab sector of the formerly divided city after it was captured in the 1967 war.

Israeli was unhappy with the Vatican's support for a Palestinian homeland in Israeli-occupied territories. A 1982 audience John Paul II had with Yasser Arafat, chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization, still rankles the Israelis.

NEWSPAPERS: the mass medium for the upscale market

Many retail advertisers..automobile dealers, computer stores, banks, brokers, to name a few..depend on high-income households for most of their business. Now, from the most recent Simmons studies, comes proof that the pre-eminent way to reach high-income households is the daily newspaper. Below are the median household incomes for the three leading local media, from Quintile I, the people who spend the most time with a medium, to Quintile V, the ones who spend the least time. As you can see, newspaper's best readers have more than twice the household income of TV's heaviest viewers. Somebody's getting skewed!
