Uncle Mort on aging

IDLE AMERICAN

DON NEWBURY

On a night when sleep was fitful, I caught the tail-end of a TV talk show. A guy quoted my Uncle Mort, who believes drinking buttermilk daily is the secret of his longevity.

First thing the next morning, I called my 102-year-old kin to share what I'd heard on TV.

"The guy quoted me correctly, nephew," he answered. "Actually, I've drunk a pint of buttermilk daily for more than 40 years."

"I did hear once of a guy who believed drinking buttermilk daily assured living until age 100," I said. "But he died at 85."

"See what I mean?" Mort countered, "He didn't drink it long enough."

He reminded me of his upcoming birthday on July 4, and was emphatic-for the first time ever-he wanted no one to bring gifts. "I won't need 'em, 'cause I should be rolling in enough dough in another month to buy whatever I want."

Oh, my. I'd heard this a few hundred times before, and to date, none of his "get rich quick" schemes has worked out.

He's long been convinced that he'll get a surprise inheritance, find stacks of gold right over the next hill, or benefit from oil discovered smack dab in the middle of his spread down in the thicket. Knowing I'd best drag up a chair and get comfortable for a "lengthy listen," I asked him what he's up to this time.

"We live in a world abuzz with social media--with guns blazing--and we're plunging headlong into entanglements that are inevitable when too many people believe in the laws of the land as long as they're applied only to others," Mort began.

It was hard to argue with his premise.

"Way too many shots are being fired today," he moaned. "When I was a kid, we were much into western movies, plunking down our dimes at the picture show every Saturday. We called the movies 'shoot-'em-ups.' Nowadays, shots are fired up, down, angled and sideways, with social media at the ready with pictures and sound."

"Now stay with me, nephew," Mort said. "You'll quickly see why my invention is going to popularize three-wheeled motorcycles."

Though his invention has nothing to do with the basic operation of motorcycles, he thinks the ones with side cars soon will outstrip others in sales.

"Cyclists are bound to opt for three-wheelers when they learn about my invention," he bragged.

With a second wind, he rattled off what he says will make the new side car immediately practical.

He said that with the press of a button, direction of the sidecar can be reversed. Immediately, passengers see where they've been rather than where they're going.

"At the center of a pop-up shield is a mount for whatever may be the weapon of choice for tail-gunners," Mort claimed.

He said a sign holder is attached to the side of the car. "That way, others won't have to guess about the guy or gal's gang affiliation." (He claims this will be particularly helpful on hot days when leather jackets aren't worn.)

As an aside, he said he's planning to attach a sidecar to his golf cart, hoping this will entice Aunt Maude to ride along more often.

"She's adamant about firearms, though," Mort said. "Maude says she's not about to fire anything with more pop to it than a single shot .22."

Eager to change the subject, I asked him if he thinks there should be governors on motorcycles.

"I've felt for a long time this would be a smart thing to do," he stated. He added it would be a good idea to strap quite a few other elected officials on cycles, too.

Since it's just a few days until Mort's birthday, I seriously doubt all of his projected riches will come to pass, so we'll take along a gift, just in case. I'm planning to give him a t-shirt reading, "I Don't Believe Everything I Think."…

Little Chuck

IT'S THE PITTS

LEE PITTS

Chipoltle wants their pork to come from free-rooting hogs who eat non GMO rations and sleep in deeply bedded barns and Panera Bread came out with a No-No list of things they want no part of, including artificial preservatives, colors, sweeteners and flavors. McDonalds wants to serve only sustainable beef and "create excitement for fruits and vegetables" and they have teamed up with the Clinton Global Initiative on a "social and environmental mission." With each passing day another company tells stockman how to raise their animals and how farmers should grow their crops. I wouldn't be surprised in a few years if your Big Mac comes in a wrapper that says...

"Hi, I'm Little Chuck, or at least I used to be. Let me tell you a little bit about myself. I was a Bovine-American who was born in a five star barn in Wisconsin and my birth was monitored by a team of veterinarians. My mother was medicated so neither she nor I felt any pain during the birthing process, although I gotta tell you, I thought I'd never get out of there.

As a youngster I had complete access to sunshine, shade and the outdoors. At night I slept in a heated barn on a Serta® mattress. I had no worries, stress or debt and never had to work a day in my life. The water I drank was certified free of fluoride and all the barbs had been removed from the fences as mandated by federal law. I had access to fresh air at all times, although living with a whole herd of cattle I was exposed to the occasional "tootie."

At two months of age I was anesthetized so that a veterinary surgeon could castrate me. I didn't feel a thing but afterwards I was more conflicted than Bruce Jenner. I ended up having sexual reassignment surgery, which the government paid for. You can follow my sexual journey on my Facebook page.

I was NOT branded with a hot iron but was kidnapped by a neighbor and held for ransom because I didn't have my ID on me. I never felt a cattle prod and was not given any hormones, although I sure could have used some after that whole castration thing. Instead of being branded I was given an ear stud that are so popular with teenagers today. I've never been given an antibiotic nor was I wormed or sprayed for flies because lungworms, bacteria and flies have a right to life too. Besides, lungworms have been put on the endangered species list and I didn't want to get crosswise with the feds. I did that once when I was accused of being the aggressor in an inter-animal aggression case involving a horse and I had to undergo intense sensitivity training.

I was naturally weaned when my mother got tired of me tugging at her flanks. Luckily I had access to a team of "weaning counselors" or I don't know how I'd have survived that whole traumatic ordeal. At eight months I was sent away to boarding school because my mom thought I needed exposure to a wider world. She thought it would be good for my inner development if I went to a feedlot in Dalhart. I had a blast at the feedlot where we took turns playing practical jokes on the pen riders.

Then one day I was told we were going on a field trip to an organic alfalfa farm but were instead taken in an air conditioned truck with individual stalls to a "deconstruction facility". The trailer I was hauled in was spotless and inspected by the U.S. Department of Manure (USDM). If you want to see documentation go to www. stupidpaperwork.gov.

The last thing I remember I was floating off to sleep. So there you have it, my life story. By the way, for everyone who buys one of my burgers, one dollar will be donated to PETA.

I hope you enjoy your hamburger because I gave it all I could. Signed Little Chuck."

Legislature passes budget as session wraps up

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS By Ed Sterling | Texas Press Association

AUSTIN — Four days before the June 1 end of the 84th regular session of the Texas Legislature, both houses finally agreed after months of deliberation on a state budget for fiscal years 2016 and 2017.

A 10-member conference committee worked out differences between the House and Senate versions of the budget. The House vote on final adoption of House Bill 1 was 115 ayes to 33 nays; the Senate vote was 30-1. HB 1 awaits approval by Gov. Greg Abbott.

House Speaker Joe Straus called the $209.4 billion budget "balanced and disciplined." Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick, who presides over the Senate, praised the budget and the $3.8 billion tax cut the conservative budget affords. The two biggest funding areas in the budget are $78 billion for education and $77 billion for health and human services. Straus posted comments, paraphrased here, on priorities HB 1 addresses:

1. Education — The budget pays for the addition of roughly 80,000 new students per year in the state's overall public school enrollment. Also provided is an additional $1.5 billion for public education. More resources will go toward higher education, graduate medical education and TEXAS Grants, the state's signature financial aid program.

2. Transportation — Reversing a decades-old practice, all of the money in the State Highway Fund must be used for transportation. Diversion of some of those dollars for other programs will not be allowed. The transportation budget is augmented by oil-and-gas tax revenues through a constitutional amendment approved by voters in November 2014.

3. Transparency — Taxes and fees must be used only for their intended purpose.

4. Border Security — Some $840 million of the budget will be used for the implementation of HB 11, the border security bill, and to hire 250 new DPS troopers and allow a 50-hour work week for DPS troopers statewide.

5. Long-Term Obligations — Funding is provided to address a shortfall in retired teachers' health care and to address the solvency of the state employee pension system.

6. Mental Health — Funding for behavioral health and substance abuse services is increased by $151 million, providing additional resources for both inpatient and outpatient services.

LAWMAKERS EXPLAIN VOTES

One of 33 House members who voted against HB 1 was Rep. Donna Howard, D-Austin. Rep. Howard said the public school funding portion of the bill leaves 31 percent of school districts with less funding per pupil than was received prior to 2011 budget cuts; pre-K funding at some $148 million is still below

IS IT OKAY TO CURSE?

We were the next to the last stop on our school bus run. School had started and I was in the second grade. Some of the older boys enticed a few of us younger boys to the back of the bus and started teaching us some new words. They encouraged us to repeat the words and when we did they would break out in laughter. Well, when I got home I thought I would impress my folks with my new vocabulary. Guess what? No laughter just horror stricken faces. Maybe they didn't understand my new word so I tried a different one. Boy, that got a response, my mother grabbed me by the ear and my grandmother got something from under the sink. After the wrestling match and my being drug to the bathroom and my mouth being washed out with a big bar of soap, I decided not to use any of those new words again. The Bible says we shouldn't use bad words, using God's name in vain, (Exodus 20:7, Leviticus 19:11&12). In Leviticus 24:10-16 is a story of a man who cursed God and God commanded the people of Israel to kill (stone) him. It is a serious matter to use curse words (James 3:10). We do not kill people because they use God's name in vain but God knows and remembers the words that we use and He will punish, (Ezekiel 35:12&13, Revelation 20:11-13). See you in Church next Sunday. # Wellness center heads to bond election

Thursday meeting to discuss options for new clinic

BY MELISSA PERNER
THE OZONA STOCKMAN

The wellness center is headed to a bond election.

During a special meeting on May 26, the Crockett County Commissioners' Court approved the wellness center petition as certified by the tax assessor-collector. This means the wellness center will be on the November ballot, along with the new jail, for a bond election. The two items will be separate on the ballot.

County Judge Fred Deaton said the petition had 692 signatures and that County Tax Assessor-Collector Michelle Medley accepted 614. Crockett County has 2,474 registered voters. Only 10 percent, or 247, were needed on the petition.

Deaton did warn the commissioners that with the jail and the wellness center there is an ethics issue when it comes to the court.

"We can't come out for or against the bond election. We can't push it nor can we talk against it. So, it's up to us ethically to stay neutral in this. What we can do, we can do the best we can to make sure we have a fair election," Deaton said.

Commissioner Eligio Martinez said he was concerned about the property the wellness center has acquired. The J. Cleo Thompson Family have donated land between their offices and FESCO, across from the clinic and care center, to the Crockett County Wellness Center Board.

Martinez said he is concerned about spending taxpayer money on private land.

Deaton said prior to the bond election, site surveys will have be done on the property. He also said the county will have to ask architects O'Connell Robertson and the county's attorneys about the land.

Martinez also said he called everyone in his precinct that signed the petition, and many told him they did not realize what they were signing.

"I told them the thing is you signed it, so it's going to go to a bond. Whether you understood it or not, that's no different. The thing is you've signed it and you've allowed this to go forward," Martinez said.

CLINIC

The commissioners and the Crockett County Care Center Health and Services Board will have two joint meetings Thursday, June 4, at the courthouse annex. The first one will be at 3 p.m. and the second at 6 p.m. Both meetings are open to the public, and the commissioners are encouraging as many local citizens to attend.

Both meetings will deal plans, construction costs, bond options and financing for a new Ozona health clinic.

The county can't call for a bond for the new clinic.

According to the Texas Health and Safety Code, sec. 263.021, "10 percent or more of the qualified property taxpaying voters of a county may petition the commissioners' court of the county to establish or enlarge a county hospital or any medical or other health facility."

Deaton said if the commissioners do not want to deal with a petition, the county can do certificates of obligation, which are bonds issued by the county without voter approval.

"Certificates of obligation mean that we borrow the money and we do the project as commissioners," said Commissioner Pleas Childress III.

Deaton said if the people of Crockett County do not agree with certificates of obligation they can petition to not have a clinic by certificates by obligation. Like the wellness center, only 10 percent of registered voters are needed.

Deaton said if that petition happens then the commissioners will have to call a bond election for the clinic.

Also at the May 26 meeting, the commissioners did approve a contract with architects O'Connell Robertson for a new clinic.

OTHER AGENDA ITEMS:

· The commissioners approved to advertise for bids for crushed rock material for county road work. They also approved advertising for bids for road work on County Roads 107 and 209 through the Texas Department of Transportation grant funding.

· Road Department Supervisor Jeffrey Stuart also presented information about fencing around the dam on the Baker Ranch. Stuart said he still needed to talk to the landowners but that the county and the Crockett Soil and Water Conservation District have funds to do the fencing.

the $200 million appropriated prior to the 2011 budget cuts; higher education funding is still less than the high-water mark of a decade ago; and TEXAS Grant recipients would receive smaller grants than previously offered.

Sen. Sylvia Garcia, D-Houston, the only senator who voted against final adoption of HB 1, said, "While I wanted to join my colleagues in voting for this budget, I could not in good conscience support a budget that fails to adequately fund the priorities of working families in Texas while leaving roughly $18 billion in state coffers. We have many unmet needs that could and should have been addressed in this budget. All Texans would benefit from investments in our infrastructure, our health and our youth."

'CAMPUS CARRY' BILL

SB 11, allowing a concealed handgun license holder to carry a weapon "on or about their person" but not in plain view of another person on the campus of a college or university, was passed on party-line votes in both chambers of the Legislature on May 31.

The legislation, written primarily by Sen. Brian Birdwell, R-Granbury, and cosponsor, Rep. Allen Fletcher, R-Tomball, would take effect Aug. 1, 2016, for four-year institutions and on Aug. 1, 2017, for public junior colleges.

A "local control" amendment drafted by Rep. John Zerwas, R-Simonton, allows the governing body of an institution of higher education to amend or prohibit concealed carry on campus or on certain premises within a campus. Institutions that pass such measures must report their rules and reasoning in periodic reports to the Legislature.

FEDERAL DISASTER AID

Gov. Abbott on May 29 requested a Presidential Disaster Declaration for Texas counties suffering from damages brought on by recent thunderstorms, tornadoes and flooding. President Obama granted the request and Federal Emergency Management Agency personnel are on the job.

"We have seen so many lives lost, homes damaged or destroyed and communities threatened by this devastating storm system," said Nim Kidd, director of the Texas Division of Emergency Management. "Texas is grateful for the swift response by FEMA and I look forward to working with my FEMA partners to ensure critical assistance is delivered to Texans in need."

What is a public notice?

It's information about important government activities. Notice in the newspaper is required for a good reason — to make sure it's NOTICED. It's crucial to government transparency…and government accountability.

Your local paper is the most visible, independent source for this crucial service. We not only print notices in the paper, but post them on our website and a statewide website at no extra charge. And they're archived forever, so there's a permanent and unalterable record.

Texas newspapers have published public notices since 1836. As your hometown paper, we're proud to provide this service to our communities.
