Clock ticking toward midnight shutdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the clock ticking toward a midnight shutdown, President Clinton vetoed a temporary borrowing bill today and prepared to close most government operations in a jolting political fight with Congress.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, meantime, called once more for Clinton to sit down with Republican congressional leaders to find an agreement.

"We hope at some point the president will decide to talk with us and have a discussion about how to get this solved," Gingrich told reporters. "I think it's very unfortunate that he is hiding and refusing to discuss with us what would keep the government open."

Speaking from his Oval Office desk, Clinton accused Republicans of engineering a budget crisis to further their spending priorities. "This is not the time or the place for them to backdoor their budget proposals," he said.

The bill Clinton vetoed would have extended the government's ability to borrow money beyond the current debt limit, which will be reached sometime this week. Clinton noted Republican amendments would strip the Treasury Department of its ability to dip into federal trust funds to avoid a borrowing crisis.

"They've voted to put the United States on the path to default," Clinton said. Republican amendments also would limit appeals by death row inmates, make it harder to issue health, safety and environmental regulations and commit the president to a seven-year balanced budget.

He also reiterated his pledge to veto a second bill, which would allow the government to keep operating beyond midnight, when most spending authority expires.

"I will fight it until we get a budget that is fair to all Americans." - President Clinton

A GOP amendment opposed by Clinton would increase Medicare Part B premiums, canceling a scheduled reduction.

In the rare early-morning veto ceremony, Clinton offered his own bills to extend spending and borrowing authority but without the GOP amendments.

Massive federal furloughs may start at midnight and federal borrowing could be disrupted on Wednesday, but Clinton and his Republican antagonists are showing little inclination to avoid the government shutdown.

White House chief of staff Leon Panetta talked today with Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., who chairs the Senate Budget Committee, "to try to find someone who is reasonable that we can talk to," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said.

Domenici later suggested temporarily freezing the Medicare Part B premium at $46.10 a month to avoid the showdown over the stopgap spending bill. The Republicans have been holding out for an increase in January 1996 to $53.50 a month. Clinton favors current law, which would let the premium drop to $42.50.

With a crowd of Democrats roaring in approval, Clinton said in a late-morning speech, "As long as they insist on plunging ahead with a budget that violates our values, in a process that is characterized more by pressure than by constitutional practices, I will fight it.

"I am fighting it today. I will fight it tomorrow. I will fight it next week and next month," he continued. "I will fight it until we get a budget that is fair to all Americans."

A partial federal shutdown looms Tuesday morning, when most agencies' authority to operate would be affected.

FSA, NRCS employees here anticipate federal shutdown

Local employees with the Farm Service Agency and the Natural Resources Conservation Service are anticipating being furloughed today in what appears to be an unavoidable federal government shutdown.

While the shutdown will impact a few Scurry County area farmers who are due Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) checks, the major effect locally would be to the nine local employees of the two agencies.

"We should hear something by noon or a little after," said Pam Naegele, Farm Services Agency (FSA) administrative clerk. "If we are furloughed, that's it. We shut the doors and go home. We're not even going to be able to make payroll unless they (the government) release it."

The five FSA employees get paid every two weeks. Payday is Tuesday. The four NRCS employees aren't due to get paid until next Monday.

"There are some farmers who may have their CRP checks delayed. If we're not in the office, we can't get them out," said Naegele. "But I guess you could say this is about the best time this could happen, because from March until July, we send out advance payments and from January until about March, we sent out final payments. So we're not in a payment period right now."

The workers would be furloughed as of midnight. Offices would be closed until the government orders them open again.

5 Americans dead in bomb explosion

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — A bomb destroyed a building housing American and Saudi military personnel today, killing at least six people and wounding 60. Five of the dead were Americans.

U.S. Ambassador Raymond Mabus issued a statement detailing the casualties and saying that the blast was caused by an "explosive device." It was not clear whether the explosives had been packed inside a car as early reports suggested.

The 11:30 a.m. blast set off a fire that engulfed the modern, three-story Saudi national guard training center, sending out huge plumes of smoke seen across the city. The facade of the building looked like it was ripped off, and windows were broken in adjacent buildings. One man felt the force of the explosion two miles away.

The nearby parking lot was full of badly damaged cars, many of them U.S.-made. Car bodies were bent, windows were smashed, and some vehicles appeared charred.

One little-known group, the Islamic Change Movement, and one unknown group, the Tigers of the Gulf, both claimed responsibility for the bombing. The claims were viewed with skepticism and it was not clear whether the attack was aimed at the Saudis, the Americans, or both.

The Islamic Change Movement issued a statement in April saying that Western forces should leave Saudi Arabia or the movement would "exert all available means to evict these forces from the island of Islam."

Saudi society is insular and tightly controlled by the government, and dissent is rare. The last previous attack against the U.S. military in Saudi Arabia took place during the 1991 Gulf War, when an Iraqi Scud missile hit a U.S. barracks, killing more than 20 Americans.

Mabus said five of the dead were Americans. Saudi government media said the sixth person killed was a Filipino. The Saudi Press Agency reported that 60 people were wounded, most of them slightly.

More than 30 Americans were injured, Mabus said, some seriously.

"We are outraged by this act and deeply saddened by its consequences," the ambassador said. "This was the work of cowards and will not deter our mission in the kingdom."

He did not say how investigators concluded the blast was the work of a bomb.

RASH OF WRECKS - Saturday morning was busy for the Snyder Police Department and EMS crews as they worked two wrecks in a matter of 15 minutes. Jennie Duncan and Patsy Sitton were taken to Cogdell Hospital by Snyder EMS following this accident at the intersection of 25th Street and Avenue R. Duncan was treated and released Saturday and Sitton was released Sunday. (SDN Staff Photo)

Varied agenda for college board tonight

Consideration of a tax abatement agreement and a tuition variance are among the items of new business for Western Texas College trustees, who meet at 7 this evening in the college board room.

Other items of new business include approval of the 1994-95 audit and a policy pertaining to investment management.

Trustees are expected to approve a tax abatement agreement with Lorber Industries of California, following suit of the City of Snyder and Scurry County. The agreement is part of an incentive plan for Lorber Industries to locate a mill in Snyder.

The board will consider a tuition and fee variance for adult vocational education courses. The request will be made by Mike Thornton, dean of continuing education, to allow the college flexibility in meeting training needs for business and industry.

During information and discussion, the board will consider college class to be taught on the Snyder High School campus and a continuing education enrollment report. Pre-bid consideration for repair of the cooling tower and purchase of steers for the ag/rodeo department are also informational items.

County court hears audit proposal

Scurry County commissioners covered a brief agenda this morning, then recessed until 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in the county courtroom at which time the court will meet with the Cogdell Hospital board of managers.

Changes in medical care and how the changes affect the local hospital are among items expected to be discussed Wedneday.

This morning, the court heard a presentation from Larry Anderson of Mason, Warner & Co. of Lubbock in reference to conducting the annual county audit. The discussion quickly turned to changes in the medical care field.

The accounting firm currently conducts audits for more than 20 hospitals, said Anderson, and he added that the new Medicare legislation is causing almost every hospital to look at its future in a different light than it has in the past.

He urged the court not to be passive as the changes are occurring but to be aggressive in adapting to the changes.

Q—One of the convenience stores has a sign which states "No Smoking — City Ordinance." When did the city pass this ordinance?

A—The city has passed no such ordinance. The store is entitled to post no smoking signs; this one just happens to be a little misleading, apparently.

Gap in Alamo diary renews debate over its authenticity

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Researchers have found a previously unknown chapter of a controversial account of the Battle of the Alamo.

The account is contained in the memoirs of Jose Enrique de la Pena, a Mexican army officer who participated in the charge up the mission's north wall during the famous 1836 battle.

The newly discovered account, found in the archives of the University of Texas at San Antonio, appears to be dramatic record of the Mexican brigade's retreat after the Alamo battle.

According to the one-week account, soldiers were dying of starvation.

James E. Crisp, a Texas Revolution scholar at North Carolina State University who found the "Lost Week" chapter, wonders whether the passage had been undiscovered since de la Pena's death around 1841.

"Maybe this is a story that has not been read since de la Pena wrote it," Crisp said.

Some historians regard the de la Pena diary as one of the most vivid eyewitness descriptions of the Alamo battle and its aftermath.

The graphic detail of the retreat, via Matamoros, Mexico, adds more weight to his argument that the de la Pena memoir is an authentic work by a former lieutenant colonel, Crisp said.

But many historians believe the diary to be a clever forgery and comb history and its footnotes in search of evidence.

"It's still my belief that the de la Pena diary is a forgery," said Bill Groneman, a New York City arson investigator and amateur historian. His 1994 book, "Defense of a Legend," first leveled the charge.

What fuels the skepticism is that two researchers, one Mexican and one American, have published the known text of the memoir, once in 1955 and again in 1975.

De la Pena's memoir condemned Mexican Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna for his blunders after the Alamo. Its most controversial statement was that Davy Crockett did not die during the battle, but was taken prisoner and later executed with others at Santa Anna's order.

The forgery claims are fueled by the fact no one knows who possessed the diary between de la Pena's death and the time an antiquities dealer first edited and published the work in 1955.

That dealer, Jesus Sanchez Garza, published the de la Pena manuscript in Mexico in Spanish in 1955.

The Sanchez Garza family later sold the original manuscript to the late John Peace of San Antonio, a lawyer and former chairman of the University of Texas Board of Regents.

Peace built a substantial collection of works from the Texas Revolution, the bulk of which make up the collection at the UTSA Special Collections Library.

Japanese prisons makes few concessions

YOKOSUKA, Japan (AP) — It has all the usual features of a Japanese jail, from the high walls and drab concrete buildings to the smell of disinfectant wafting through its halls. But Yokosuka Prison is special.

Flapping in the breeze next to Japan's rising-sun banner is the American flag. On one corner of the grounds is a ward set aside for what is probably the largest community of jailed American GIs anywhere outside the United States.

The community is likely to grow.

The treatment of U.S. military personnel who break Japanese laws has become the focus of a national debate in Japan. Support for the U.S.-Japan security alliance has been sapped since a murder in May and the rape of a 12-year-old girl in September.

American servicemen stand accused of both crimes, which were committed on the southern Japan island of Okinawa where more than 26,000 U.S. troops are based.

A Marine pleaded guilty in an Okinawa court to the May killing, and a sailor from Texas has confessed to the rape. Two more Marines are also accused in the rape, but say only that they helped plot the attack and abduct the girl.

If convicted, all would be sent here. Yokosuka Prison, about 50 miles south of Tokyo, is the only facility in Japan where U.S. military personnel found guilty of breaking Japanese laws are sent.

According to Warden Keiichi Hatakeyama, 19 U.S. servicemen and one military dependent are currently serving sentences here. When they complete their sentences, they are sent back to the United States, where the servicemen will get dishonorable discharges.

In all, there are about 45,000 U.S. troops based in Japan. In South Korea, where about 30,000 U.S. troops are stationed, 14 GIs are in prison. Germany, which is host to nearly 77,000 U.S. troops, has eight jailed GIs.

U.S. military officials said that as of Sept. 25, the American servicemen imprisoned in Japan included two convicted of murder, two of robbery-murder, 12 of robbery-assault, two of robbery-rape, one of robbery and one of firearms law violations.

"The Americans here tend to be in for long sentences," said Hatakeyama, who refused to discuss any case in detail. "One of our concerns is keeping the stress that causes from leading to trouble. But we haven't had any trouble yet."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today a shrewd manipulator might try to make you feel obligated to him or her. You are not, so don't fall for this person's ploys.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A bargaining arrangement could fall flat today if you're expecting to get more than you're prepared to give. Without proper parity, the deal won't work.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Make sure to properly acknowledge friends who do you favors today. If you fail to show gratitude, your friends might not be around when you need them later.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If good intentions were graded today, you'd walk away with high marks. However, acting on these constructive thoughts might not come as easily.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your material interests will continue to remain in favorable condition, but today you might be tempted to spend more than you can afford.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today, try to distinguish between being abrasive and assertive. If you cross this fine line, quarrels might ensue.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Opportunities that usually come easily for you might not be properly utilized today. Remain cognizant of all developments or you will kick yourself later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not become disheartened by slow progress in a new endeavor. Your failure could suddenly change into success.

Odessa man charged in case of missing mother and child

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — An Odessa man has been charged with killing a mother and daughter who disappeared from their Huntsville-area home nearly two years ago and have never been found, the Walker County sheriff said Sunday.

Raymond Cobb, 19, was arrested in Odessa Saturday night and returned to Huntsville on Sunday. He was being held on two counts of capital murder in Walker County Jail after Justice of the Peace John Pasket denied bond.

Meanwhile, sheriff's authorities hope to locate the remains of Margaret Owings and baby daughter Kori on Monday, Sheriff Dale Myers said.

"We are currently conducting a search this afternoon and tomorrow we'll start again for the remains of the lady and her baby. We think they are within a mile of the residence from which they disappeared." he said.

Myers said the case began Dec. 27, 1993, when Lindsey Owings returned to his farm home on U.S. 75, about five miles north of Huntsville, and found it had been burglarized. He first thought his wife Margaret, 22 at the time, and Kori, 16 months, were out, but later reported them missing.

Cobb, who lived across the road from the Owings in 1993, was questioned numerous times, Myers said.

Efforts to convert railway corridors opposed

DALLAS (AP) — Efforts to revive unused railways as public recreation trails may be sidetracked as landowners and conservationists disagree over whether the access plans infringe on property rights.

As projects in several parts of Texas gain speed, public and private interests are clashing.

Supporters of the trails say the public should have access to the land and that public interests outweigh private concerns. But some landowners and officials attack rail trails as an invasion of privacy.

"We're against them from the standpoint of how they abrogate individual rights," said Lewis Dodd, a spokesman for the Hill Country Heritage Association, a nonprofit property rights advocacy group based in Fredericksburg.

"They are wanting to take people from the urban areas and give them the niceties of the country," he said. "And a lot of that is invasive."

It's been 12 years since Congress passed legislation to preserve railroad corridors and three years after federal money became available to help develop rail trails.

The movement "is gaining momentum and support" in Texas, said Steve Emmett-Mattox, community affairs coordinator for the nonprofit Rails-to-Trails Conservancy in Washington, D.C. "More and more, people are seeing possible uses for old rail lines."

The state has five public pathways including almost 79 miles. Also, planning is under way on nine funded projects, and 15 other railways have caught the attention of trail supporters.

A group of East Texas residents including Delia Meese had promises of a federal grant to help build a 19-mile asphalt trail from Jacksonville to near Tyler.

The state, which administers the program, pulled the funding after local officials and the East Texas Landowners for Private Ownership raised concerns about property rights, privacy and security.

Paint the wrong picture

George Herbert, the English clergyman and poet, said, "Deceive not thy physician, confessor nor lawyer." Fair enough — unless you are playing bridge against him. Then being able to weasel an extra trick via a deceptive play is both recommended and highly enjoyable.

Obviously, South was ambitious in jumping straight to six spades. He might have dabbled his toe in the water with a four-diamond cue-bid. Or used Blackwood. Or jumped to five spades, asking North to go on with good trumps. But South had just made a dubious slam on the previous deal that had needed two finesses and a 3-3 break. With the opponents rattled and luck running his way, South decided to go for all the marbles.

South saw that if the diamond finesse was working, there would be no trouble. But if it lost, the defenders might cash a club trick. To try to dissuade West from switching to clubs, assuming he didn't have the ace, South called for the heart queen at trick one. As expected, East covered with the king and South won with his ace. Now came a spade to dummy's king, followed by the diamond nine, which ran to West's king.

As South had hoped, West tried to cash the heart 10. Gratefully, South ruffed, drew the last trump and ran his diamond suit, discarding all of the dummy's club losers.

Finally, note that South did well not to draw all the trumps before taking the diamond finesse. If he had, East would have signaled his club ace by discarding the encouraging 10 (or discarded the heart two as a count card).

Aikman to undergo MRI

49ers shock Cowboys

IRVING (AP) — Nothing has changed in the NFL. The Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers are still quite capable of defending themselves.

Ask the Dallas Cowboys, who have lost three consecutive games to the 49ers, including last January's NFC title game, if the 49ers are still potent despite injuries and free agent losses.

"This team is still intimidated by the red shirts and gold helmets," said Dallas defensive end Charles Haley. "What's different? They find Jerry Rice, throw to Jerry, then Jerry catches. And Jerry runs."

Rice ran Dallas out of Texas Stadium on the second play of the game Sunday as the 49ers beat the Cowboys 38-20 in a game reminiscent of the NFC championship meeting last January.

"We still have the Cowboys' number," said tight end Brent Jones. "We're still alive and kicking."

The 49ers, who had lost their last two games, moved into a tie with St. Louis and Atlanta for the leadership in the NFC West with a 6-4 record. Dallas dropped to 8-2.

Rice caught five passes for 161 yards through the dazed Dallas secondary. The 49ers came up with a game plan that evaded Deion Sanders and had Rice being watched by linebackers.

Second-string quarterback Elvis Grbac and wide receiver Rice killed Dallas on the game's second play with an 81-yard touchdown pass. Merton Hanks returned a fumble 36 yards for a touchdown 13 seconds later and the rout was on.

San Francisco paralyzed Dallas much as it did in the NFC championship when the 49ers built a 21-0 lead in the first 6:25 of the game. The 49ers went on to win 38-28 and eventually defeat San Diego in the Super Bowl.

"It was like the same game," said Sanders. "But I was on the opposite team then. My hats off to Jerry. He's the best receiver ever to play the game."

Rice, the NFL's career leader in receiving, slipped open behind linebacker Darrin Smith for a slant pass over the middle from Grbac and went 81 yards. Rice confused the Cowboys by lining up in the slot.

"Part of the game plan was to get me one-on-one with the linebacker, and they bit on it," Rice said. "I knew it was time for me to do what I do. I have a lot of respect for Deion."

Rice had been involved in a pregame exchange of words with the Cowboys' $35 million cornerback, Sanders. Rice had complained that Sanders took credit for the Super Bowl win. Sanders said Rice was "ignorant."

"We moved Jerry around a lot so we could get him away from Deion," Grbac said. "They were running around and looked confused.

"Deion said there was no camaraderie on this team. It was wrong for him to say that. We showed it today."

San Francisco played without Steve Young for the fifth consecutive game. The Cowboys only had Troy Aikman for about seven minutes.

Aikman was injured on a first-quarter sack by Dana Stubblefield. Aikman fell heavily on his left knee and will have an MRI exam today. Doctors said the quarterback has a bad bruise.

Wade Wilson subbed and threw two interceptions before he left with a cut chin late in the fourth period.

Grbac completed 20 of 30 for 305 yards and two touchdowns and scored once himself.

"This was a damn important game for our team," said San Francisco coach George Seifert. "We wanted to do everything we could to win this game."

Young said Grbac was terrific.

"White hot pressure on somebody is a way to force some pretty good stuff," Young said.

Michael Irvin failed in his quest to set an NFL record with an eighth consecutive 100-yard receiving game, being held to just four receptions for 37 yards. He got small consolation with an 8-yard touchdown pass from Jason Garrett.

"They are a better football team than us," Irvin said. "I can't tell the future, just what happened today. They're a better team than us. Period. They came out and beat our butts."

Dallas coach Barry Switzer said "I don't understand why things happen the way they do. It looked like the same game as last year at the beginning. "

Switzer's boss, owner Jerry Jones, said "This was terribly disappointing. We certainly didn't expect this. We just got our fannies kicked."

Local teams hit the hardwood Tuesday

Basketball season begins in earnest Tuesday as the Snyder High School Tigers and Lady Tigers open with San Angelo schools and WTC Lady Westerners begin conference play.

The Lady Tigers, fresh off a four-team scrimmage in San Angelo, will host San Angelo Lake View at 6 p.m. Tuesday in Tiger gym. The JV will play at 4:30.

According to Coach Steve Qualls, "We did pretty good in the scrimmage." Snyder, San Angelo Central, Del Rio and Ozona took part with each session consisting of one 20-minute period. Snyder won three of four sessions, losing only to Ozona.

The Lady Tigers return four lettermen from last year's squad.

The Tigers hosted Lubbock Monterey in a scrimmage Saturday. They open the regular season Tuesday against San Angelo Central at 7:30 p.m. in the high school gym. The Tiger JV will play at 6 p.m. in the junior high gym.

After a week off, the Lady Westerners will hit the hard wood Tuesday against Howard College. The first conference game tips off at 7:30 p.m.in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The Lady Westerners have already seen Howard once, loosing in overtime, 76-70 in the second round of the Lady Texan tournament at South Plains in Levelland.

Snyder, Ira host playoff contests

The 1995 version of the Texas High School football state playoffs begin Thursday night with first round games continuing through Saturday.

On the local front, Snyder makes its first post-season appearance since 1991. The Tigers will play fifth-ranked Stephenville at 1 p.m. Saturday in Shotwell Stadium in Abilene.

Sweetwater will play Mineral Wells at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, also in Shotwell.

Tiger Stadium will be the site of a 2A bi-district game Friday at 7:30 p.m. between Albany and Stamford.

Bulldog Stadium in Ira will host Sands and Westbrook in a six-man bi-district match-up. Ticket prices for the game will be $3 for adults and $1 for students.

9th ends with win over Sweetwater

Snyder High School freshman football team ended its season with a 20-14 victory over Sweetwater Thursday. The win makes the freshman record 7-3 for the year, 3-1 in district play.

Cheyene Robinson scored twice for Snyder on a two-yard run and a 70-yard kickoff return. Jacob Hodges scored on a 24-yard run. Sam Bedwell caught a two point conversion.

For the game, Robinson gained 80 yards on 14 carries, Hodges 34 yards on four carries while Juan Arizmendi rushed 12 times for 42 yards.

Others who carried include, Nathan Sorrells three carries for 16 yards, Cory Mandrell two carries for 25 yards and Banks Alexander two carries for four yards.

For the game, Snyder gained 190 yards on 39 carries. They were zero for three in the passing department.

Bengals take win over Houston Oilers, 32-25

HOUSTON (AP) — The Bengals looked different, acted different and did something no Cincinnati football team had been able to do in the past decade — win a game in Houston.

"Our defense came out with an attitude," coach David Shula said after his Bengals dumped Houston 32-25 Sunday and in the process tried to shed their dubious distinction as the NFL's worst defensive team. "You have to come out with an attitude when you are at the bottom of the league like our defense is."

Cincinnati had been giving up more than 403 yards per game, but recovered three of five fumbles, intercepted a pass and harassed Oilers quarterbacks all day, sacking them four times. On one of the sacks, Oiler starter Chris Chandler was knocked out of the game with a leg injury, leaving his playing status uncertain.

Biologists puzzle why sharks bite as attack numbers rise

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

HALF MOON BAY, Calif. (AP) — Out of the dark water below, a gaping circle lined with triangular two-inch teeth rises with blinding speed and clamps onto the unwary diver's leg.

And, just as suddenly, the terrifying incident is over: The shark lets go and swims away, leaving its victim to struggle to shore.

As surfing, sailboarding and diving multiply the number of humans splashing in the water along the U.S. coast, such attacks are increasing.

"The water does not belong to human beings," says George Burgess of the University of Florida, who keeps the national shark attack count. "When you're entering the ocean, you're entering the wilderness. It's not jumping in your pool in the back yard."

The attacks still puzzle marine biologists, who are trying to determine why sharks strike.

In 1995, according to Burgess' numbers, virtually all of the attacks have occurred on the East Coast. Florida has had the most, with 28 incidents as of early October, compared to 22 for all of 1994. Three- or four-foot black-tipped sharks are suspected in most of those attacks.

The Carolinas have recorded eight shark strikes, with Georgia and Texas each reporting one so far.

The West Coast lists three shark encounters, all in California and all believed to be great whites, the species made famous by the "Jaws" movies. In Hawaii, where tiger sharks are the usual culprits, a swimmer was killed last year, but the state has had only one attack in 1995.

No fatalities have been recorded in the United States this year. In fact, says Bob Lea of the California Department of Fish and Game Department, fewer than 10 confirmed shark attack deaths have been logged since the 1950s, when reliable statistics began to be kept.

"Jaws" aside, fatalities are rare.

"The sharks get an immediate understanding that they have bitten off more than they can chew," Burgess says.

Marco Flagg, an experienced diver attacked at Point Lobos in Northern California in June, can attest to that. He sports the scars of a three-inch gash in his arm and a V-shaped puncture on his leg.

"I looked to my left and below and saw the massive, wide open, near-circular, teeth-lined mouth coming right at me," Flagg says.

His air tank and an underwater computer absorbed most of the blow; after one chomp, the shark disappeared.

One of the nation's leading experts, Samuel Gruber of the University of Miami, estimates attacks are up about 20 percent this year. He thinks the increase in East Coast incidents can be blamed on the unrelenting series of tropical storms and hurricanes. That makes better wind and surf conditions and puts more people in the water near the offshore sandbars where fish collect.

"There's also more turbulence in the water," he says, "so your white hand or foot can look like a fish."

In all three California attacks, the victims were on or near equipment such as boats, sailboards or water scooters. Some scientists believe the sea hunters mistake the oval shapes for their favorite food — seals and sea lions.

Two decades old real estate deal may jeopardize artifacts

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Historians contend a significant archaeological site that could include part of a famous mission has been devastated because of a real estate deal made 20 years ago.

Destruction of most archaeological sites in the Walker Ranch National Historic District, including possible traces of the missing Alamo mission ranch, has led the Texas Historical Commission to list it among the state's 10 most endangered properties.

The deal being questioned by the state historical commission allowed the San Antonio River Authority to buy 321 acres of land, but let Dallas developer Robert Folsom keep title to the artifacts and sites.

"If that's legal, everyone will start doing it," said Mark Denton, an archaeologist in the Division of Antiquities Protection. "You can envision bizarre deals where you pay more for property if title to the archaeological deposits is withheld."

A state attorney general's office advisory opinion determined the deed violated the antiquities code and said the archaeological sites belong to the state of Texas, according to documents obtained by the San Antonio Express-News.

White cell count signals infection

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have to have a white cell count to check for infection. What is this all about?

DEAR READER: The blood contains red cells (which supply oxygen to tissues) and white cells (which fight infection). Although this is somewhat of an oversimplification, the number, type and age of the white blood corpuscles reflect the state of the body's immune system and our ability to combat infection.

Thus, in the presence of infection, the healthy body pours millions of white cells into the bloodstream, much like the mobilization of soldiers in preparation for war.

The normal white blood cell count is 5,000-10,000 per microliter. In the presence of infection, the WBC is commonly between 12,000 and 20,000, depending on the severity of the infection. This elevated count may also contain an increased number of immature forms of white cells, called "bands."

Therefore, I conclude that your physician proposes to verify his suspicions that you may have an internal infection by obtaining a WBC, which is merely one of many tests, including X-rays and other blood analyses, used for this purpose. An elevated WBC does not tell where the infection is or what's causing it. Rather, the elevated count simply reflects the presence of an infection somewhere in the body.

For example, if you had severe abdominal pain, a high WBC would indicate appendicitis, diverticulitis, gallbladder irritation, or other infection for which you might need surgery or antibiotics. On the other hand, in the presence of a normal WBC, the doctor would have to address the non-infectious causes of abdominal pain, such as kidney stones, or intestinal obstruction.

The WBC is a simple and useful test that, in conjunction with a thorough examination and other tests, helps doctors diagnose a variety of ailments.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Blood — Donations and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Tylenol does not help the pain of my arthritis. Where do I go next?

DEAR READER: In my experience, acetaminophen (Tylenol and others) is not a particularly effective treatment for arthritis. You may have more success with over-the-counter ibuprofen (such as Advil) or naproxen (Aleve).

If non-prescription medication is unsatisfactory, you will have to consider one of the many prescription drugs, such as Voltaren, Lodine, Feldene, Anaprox, and others. Your doctor can advise you and supply the necessary prescription.

AIDS claims Matt Allen, but not before he celebrated 13th

DALLAS (AP) — Matthew Allen knew what he was up against. He knew you can't beat AIDS forever.

But he was determined to beat it for a little while — at least long enough to reach his 13th birthday.

He made it.

Matt Allen died Friday from complications of AIDS, a little more than a month after he became a teen-ager.

"His goal was to get to his 13th birthday, and he made that," said his grandfather, the Rev. Jimmy Allen, a former San Antonio minister and past president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Until last December, Matt attended classes at Lakewood Elementary School in Dallas. From kindergarten until fourth grade, only a small number of people at the school knew of his illness.

Lydia Allen, Matt's mother, and his younger brother, Bryan, also died of AIDS. Bryan died as an infant in 1986; Mrs. Allen in 1992. All three contracted it from a tainted transfusion Mrs. Allen received hours before Matt's birth.

Her husband, Scott Allen, wasn't infected, but was dismissed as youth minister of a Christian church in Colorado Springs, Colo., in 1985 when he sought his pastor's consolation after learning of his wife's infection.

Moving to Texas before Bryan's death, the young couple discovered many Baptist churches wouldn't allow Matthew to attend their Sunday schools, despite pleas from his prominent grandfather.

In 1992, Matt drew national attention when his father revealed his son's condition publicly.

Although Matt had been bedridden for about a year, Matt's school chums gathered the Saturday before his Oct. 4 birthday for a small party with balloons and gifts.

"They treated me like a normal kid before we went public, and they treated me the same after," he said he once told The Dallas Morning News in an interview. He could recall only one taunt from a classmate directed at his illness.

Last February, all 699 Lakewood students formed concentric circles around Matt and his family in a moving "Circle of Life" ceremony that the school used as its formal goodbye.

"Even in that moment he was looking beyond his fears and pain and trying to focus us on the larger issue," said principal Karen Rogers.

"His theme was thanks to the students and a challenge to us to be sensitive to the needs of other people who are HIV positive and who have AIDS," she said.

Matt is remembered as "an exuberant child who took life at full speed," as his grandfather described him to the San Antonio Express-News.

"Matt was very courageous, his grandfather, now a chaplain at a Big Canoe, Ga., retirement resort, told the newspaper. "He took 36 pills a day every day of his life and never complained."

A memorial service for Matt will be held at 5 p.m. Wednesday at the Dallas Horticulture Center at Fair Park.

Besides his father and grandfather, Matt is survived by his paternal grandmother, Wanda Allen of Big Canoe, Ga., and his maternal grandmother, Joyce Williams of San Antonio.

Editor's note: Memorial donations may be directed to the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, in care of the AIDS Clinical Research Fund, P.O. Box 910888, Dallas, Texas 75391-0888.

Shoplifter Not Read Her Rights Should Have Heard Riot Act

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1995 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Upset Mother," whose daughter was arrested for shoplifting. Since her daughter was not read her rights, she asked if they should fight the arrest in court. Before she wastes her money on a lawyer and court costs, let me answer a few of her questions.

The person who originally detained the girl probably was an employee of the store, not a police officer. Because security personnel (often called "loss prevention" or "asset protection" employees) are private citizens, they are not required to read suspects their rights. After security personnel have processed the paperwork required by the employer, the police would then be called. It is the police who in most cases issue a citation and give the offender a court date. Miranda rights are read to a suspect when he or she is going to be taken to a police station or a juvenile detention center to be processed.

I have been a loss prevention officer for more than five years. I am a guard and I do not wear a uniform, but I watch cameras and walk the floor looking for shoplifters.

It was nice to see a parent concerned about her daughter's rights, but in this case, the daughter should take whatever punishment the court deems appropriate.

Please do not use my name since I work undercover; just sign me ...

LOSS PREVENTION OFFICER

DEAR OFFICER: Thank you for explaining why the young shoplifter may not have been read her rights. Read on for a letter from a reader who criticizes the girl's mother for failing to teach her daughter the virtues of honesty:

DEAR ABBY: I was amazed by your reply to "Upset Mother," who seemed to be more concerned with her daughter's rights than the fact that this "normally good" girl committed a blatant theft and was caught in the act.

You advised the mother to consult a lawyer to determine if her little girl's rights were violated. Surely you jest. The rights of society were violated by a girl whose obviously indulgent parent views the crime as a prank that could be corrected with an apology, a long lecture and a month's grounding.

"Upset Mother" should be hauled into court for failing to instill basic values in her daughter. If the girl had been properly taught when she was a preteen, the theft may not have occurred in the first place.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter from "Santa Monica Reader," whose mind went blank when he was about to introduce an acquaintance (this has happened to all of us):

Here's a lighthearted trick my late husband, Gene, often used: Speaking directly to the person whose name he could not remember, with a straight face he'd say, "I remember your name, but can't think of your face" — at which time the forgotten one would blurt out his name, then laugh.

It worked every time, and no one felt insulted or embarrassed.

'Suicide machine' was used

DETROIT (AP) — The latest person to die in Dr. Jack Kevorkian's presence used the "suicide machine" in addition to inhaling carbon monoxide, his attorney said.

Kevorkian has acknowledged attending 26 deaths since 1990, and in two of the first three, Kevorkian supplied an apparatus that allowed patients to inject a sedative and a heart-stopping chemical into their own veins.

Until Wednesday's death of cancer patient Patricia Cashman, however, most people who died in Kevorkian's presence had breathed carbon monoxide.

Kevorkian stopped supplying the so-called suicide machine in 1991 after Michigan authorities lifted his medical license, blocking his access to sedatives.

Kevorkian was able to supply the machine again this time because Cashman had saved up a quantity of the pain-killer Seconal, attorney Geoffrey Fieger said.

Cashman, a 58-year-old woman from San Marcos, Calif., who suffered from breast cancer, flipped a switch to allow the flow of Seconal into her veins, followed by the heart-stopping drug potassium chloride, Fieger said. She then pulled a clip to release carbon monoxide as a backup, he said.

"This was a pure suicide," Fieger said. "This woman injected the drugs knowingly. She turned on the machine herself."

Oakland County Medical Examiner Ljubisa Dragovic had said last week carbon monoxide poisoning was the cause of death. Responding to Fieger's statement, Dragovic said an autopsy also found drugs in Cashman's system.

"We're deciding how those drugs factored into the death," he said.

Citizens marching

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Repeated citizen marches around drug-infested neighborhoods are discouraging dealers and buyers, a City Council member says.

Eight times since October, some 50 to 120 residents have circled the sections of the city believed to be havens for drug dealers.

"We don't even have a thought about stopping," said Dwain Dodson, a council member and chairman of Plainview-Hale County Crimestoppers. "We expect when the city's crime and drug statistics come out to see a definite change."

Acting on information from undercover agents, activists stop in front of houses where drugs are sold and shout anti-drug slogans at those inside. Some in the homes shout back, some try to ignore the noise and some move to neighbors' homes.

The weekly site of each march is kept secret, he said. That unnerves many dealers and their customers and probably reduces the number of drug deals, Dodson said.

"Evil prevails when good men do nothing," said Bettye Graves, one of about 60 area residents who braved 30-degree weather Saturday night to send a message to drug dealers. "People are tired of it. I am."

Police Chief Roy Osborne shares the marchers' enthusiasm, although he said it's too soon to measure the impact on crime in Plainview, where the population is about 22,000.

Nonetheless, the united message the city is sending is enormously important, he said.

"The entire community is not going to condone what's going on just because it's not in their neighborhood," he said. "That's probably the most positive thing to come from this so far."

Campaign reform said too late

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shrugging off criticisms of moving too slowly on political reform, House Speaker Newt Gingrich says his more ambitious plans for changing the political system won't be ready for the 1996 election.

"I want to look at the totality of power in America, not just a very narrow definition of campaigns," Gingrich, R-Ga., said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Gingrich said legislation on political reform was unlikely before next summer. "Nothing is going to be done before the next election and everybody knows that," he said.

House Republican freshmen have led the fight for gift ban and campaign finance reform, and some have been openly critical of Gingrich and other GOP leaders for failing to make the issue a priority.

One view is that the Republicans have lost enthusiasm for political reform since taking over Congress and seeing a big jump in contributions. In the first six months of this year, the party received $20 million in contributions from corporations and individuals, twice the Democratic amount.

But Gingrich countered that "the issue is much bigger than they think it is." He said political reform must also include such issues as personal wealth being used to win political office and the campaign ads of large organizations, such as labor unions and advocates for the elderly.

The Georgia Republican mentioned that Ross Perot spent $67 million on his independent bid for the presidency in 1992, and some lawmakers used their personal wealth to finance campaigns. "Should Frank Lautenberg be able to write a check to buy a Senate seat?" he asked of the wealthy New Jersey Democratic senator.

Gingrich last week proposed the formation of a bipartisan commission, composed of eight members from each party, that will be asked to report by May 1 on how to change the political system.

Under his plan, the House and Senate would have to consider any idea supported by three-fourths of the commission members, and review any idea with majority support.

'Ace Ventura' sequel new No. 1 at box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Carrey's comedy sequel "Ace Ventura When Nature Calls" was the No. 1 weekend box office attraction, earning an estimated $40.3 million, the biggest for November outside the Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

"Get Shorty," which sat atop the box office rankings for three weeks, was bumped to second place with $8 million. Official box office figures will be released Monday.

7. "Seven," $2.7 million.
8. "Fair Game," $2.6 million.

Accidental shooting

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A man showing his girlfriend the sawed-off shotgun in his pants accidentally shot himself in the genitals, police said.

Police called to the scene found Kevin Hall lying on a street corner clutching his groin. His pants, which had a large hole, were still smoking.

Hall, 18, told police he had been hit in a drive-by shooting, but his girlfriend said he had been showing her the gun when it went off.

Hall was treated at a hospital Friday for a cut to his penis and powder burns on the inside of his thigh. Police then arrested him on several charges, including possession of a sawed-off shotgun.

The gun was found in some nearby bushes, police said.

Hall also was arrested on suspicion of reckless endangerment and illegal discharge of a firearm. He was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond pending arraignment today.

Allen: female stars grab headlines

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Poor Tim Allen. The "Home Improvement" star says no matter what he does, female sitcom stars always seem to grab the headlines.

Leading the pack is Roseanne. Every time there's a battle on the set, it's news, and Allen says he knows why.

"When I hear the fuss, I'm figuring the ratings are sagging. And of course, it all gets worked out a day later. For nine years this woman's been in the press. I think it's brilliant," Allen says in the Nov. 18 edition of TV Guide.

Shuttle prepares for next Mir docking

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Atlantis chased the Russian space station Mir around Earth today while five astronauts aboard unfurled the shuttle robot arm and performed other chores in preparation for this week's docking.

The 245-mile-high linkup, the second of seven planned shuttle-Mir dockings, isn't until early Wednesday, but there's plenty of work to be done as Atlantis closes the roughly 5,000-mile gap between the two spacecraft.

There was also some time today for Canadian astronaut Chris Hadfield, the only rookie aboard Atlantis, to reflect on his first space flight.

"This is a tremendous experience for me," Hadfield said in a space-to-Earth news conference with reporters in Canada. "I've seen all the pictures, but there's nothing like being here.

"This is a magnificent experience."

The crew's first major task, assigned to Hadfield, is moving a Russian-built docking port into position in the shuttle cargo bay.

This port — essentially a 15-foot tunnel with hatches on either end — will be left on Mir to make future shuttle dockings safer and easier.

Early today, Hadfield put the 50-foot shuttle crane through a series of test paces. On Tuesday, he'll maneuver the arm to lift the tunnel from its platform in the rear portion of the cargo bay so it can be attached to another tunnel that leads to the shuttle crew cabin.

Three are charged in alleged bomb plot

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A man who allegedly saw himself as a prophet and sent warning letters to President Clinton and Texas Gov. George W. Bush was one of three people arrested on charges of plotting to build a fertilizer bomb.

Ray Willie Lampley, 65, his wife, Cecilia Lampley, 47, and John Dare Baird, 53, are charged with conspiracy to manufacture and possess a destructive device, assistant U.S. attorney Doug Horn said. The three were being held without bond and were scheduled to appear in federal court today.

They were arrested by the FBI Saturday at the Lampleys' home in Vernon, 90 miles east of Oklahoma City. The arrests are not connected to the April 19 bombing of the federal building in Oklahoma City, authorities said.

McIntosh County Sheriff Bobby Gray said the FBI recovered bomb-making materials from a back room in the Lampleys' house but apparently did not find an assembled bomb.

Federal authorities would not comment further.

Ray Willie Lampley is a self-proclaimed prophet who allegedly supports anti-government sentiments, FBI Special Agent Timothy Arney said.

Gray told The Sunday Oklahoman that Lampley has been sending letters "to certain people — the president, the governor in Texas, and even I got some — that we were going to be dead within a certain amount of time."

High court agrees to hear free-speech challenge case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to hear a free-speech challenge to a federal law aimed at restricting indecent programs on cable television channels leased to local groups.

The court said it will consider arguments that the law and federal rules stemming from it will lead to censorship in violation of the Constitution's First Amendment.

The provisions have not taken effect during the legal challenge by local program producers and viewers.

The case involves channels that cable companies are required to lease to local groups, as well as those set aside for public access.

In other actions, the justices:

—Agreed to study the case of a North Carolina man fired after his supervisor said he had become too old "for this kind of work."

—Rejected the appeal of a lesbian mother seeking to prevent her ex-lover from having any place in her 6-year-old son's life. The action allows the ex-lover to prove she is entitled to visitation rights.

—Threw out an appeal by a San Francisco man convicted and sentenced to death for seven "trailside slayings" in northern California parks in 1980 and 1981.

—Kept alive a Michigan lawsuit by families seeking monetary damages because corneas or eyeballs were removed from recently deceased relatives without family consent.

—Refused to hear the appeal of former Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-Texas, who was convicted of racketeering and accepting an illegal gift while in office.

From 1984 until 1992, cable TV systems could not bar indecent programs from leased-access and public-access channels. Companies provided lock boxes so subscribers could block channels they did not want to see.

The government says indecent programs depict or describe "sexual or excretory activities or organs in a patently offensive manner." The material does not have to meet the legal definition of obscene.

Following criticism of certain programs on some leased-access channels, Congress voted in 1992 to let cable companies bar indecent material from such channels.

If a cable company does not want to bar such material, any indecent programs shown must be segregated on blocked channels that can be unblocked only on a subscriber's written request.

The law also makes cable companies liable for any programs that violate obscenity laws. Obsenity is not protected by the Constituton's First Amendment, but the previous law protected cable companies from being held liable for carrying obscene programs.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia threw out most of the law on free-speech grounds. But the full circuit court reinstated the law last June.

Ex-congressman's sentence is upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to hear the appeal of a former Texas congressman convicted of racketeering and accepting an illegal gift while in office.

Bustamante, now 60, began serving time at a federal prison in El Paso, Texas, shortly after his 1993 conviction was upheld last February by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

A Democrat from San Antonio who served four terms beginning in 1984, Bustamante also was fined $55,000. His sentence also provided for a two-year period of supervised release after his prison term.

He lost his congressional seat to Republican Henry Bonilla in 1992, and blamed the federal criminal investigation for his defeat.

The appeal acted on today did not challenge that part of Bustamante's conviction dealing with a $35,000 bribe from a friend's food service company in exchange for helping the business try to renew an Air Force contract.

Prosecutors also said Bustamante was given an illegal gift — a no-risk stake in a deal involving an attempt to obtain a San Antonio television station license.

According to trial evidence, San Antonio lawyers Oliver Heard and R. Lawrence Macon made the offer, and Bustamante was expected to contribute $15,000.

The court took no action in the selection of an auditor as it is to hear presentations from two other firms next Monday.

In other business, the court canvassed the votes of the Nov. 7 constitutional amendment election, agreed to pay the bills and approved four line-item transfers.

Among those approved were a transfer of $130 from public officials' liability insurance to dues in the office of the district attorney and the transfer of $175 from medical insurance to travel allowance in district judge's office.

The court also approved a transfer of $150 in the budget of the health department from utilities to operating supplies.

Also approved was a transfer of $2,686 from maintenance repairs to the coliseum fund to pay for electrical work.

County Judge Ricky Fritz presided. Commissioners in attendance were Roy Idom, Ralph Trevey and Jerry Gannaway. C.D. Gray Jr. was absent.

George Martin says 'Beatles Anthology' was 'traumatic' effort

NEW YORK (AP) — George Martin, who auditioned the Beatles and produced their most successful albums, says coming back 25 years later to assemble "The Beatles Anthology" was a "traumatic" experience.

"It was sad and happy and funny and miserable — all those things," Martin said in the Nov. 20 issue of The New Yorker magazine.

After the band finished their last record, "Abbey Road" in 1970, Martin says, "I felt as though we'd run a race and we were looking at each other, exhausted, and thanking heaven we wouldn't have to run it again."

As Martin compiled the anthology from archival material over the past year, Paul McCartney sometimes stopped by, and once or twice, George Harrison and Ringo Starr popped in. "Just the four of us, sitting in Studio Two at Abbey Road," Martin said.

The first of three "Anthology" releases reaches stores next week.
