School Board Has Meeting Tuesday Night

The Aransas County Independent School Board elected Mrs. Justyne Schendel to a position on the faculty; discussed the back taxes owed by Bass Bros., Inc.; heard a report on the present status of the proposed land acquisition by Aransas Wildlife Refuge which governmental bodies in the county are opposing; and wound up with a midnight visit to the new junior high school.

Supt. J. D. Gray told the board that Bass Brothers now owed the school district $28,998.56 in accumulated back taxes and penalties. He broke this down as follows:

For 1960, the taxes on St. Joseph Island (which the brothers received under terms of the will of their uncle, the late Sid Richardson several years ago) amounted to $7,779.08, with accrued penalties of $2,256.93.

In the following year, taxes (still unpaid, as are those for 1960) amounted to $5,230.29, with interest, penalties, etc., amounting to $1,203.99. In 1962, taxes were $5,568.83, with accrued penalties of $947.70; in 1963 the taxes amounted to $5,514.99, with penalties of $596.65.

Total taxes due amount to $23,993.29, Gray said, without those for 1964, likewise unpaid, but delinquent until Jan. 1. Penalties amount to $5,005.27. Total amount due the school district for years 1960 through 1963, is $28,998.56. This sum is the now in litigation in the courts, with a decision hoped for from the 13th Court of Civil Appeals.

Gray reported that on September 8 there were 1263 students in the various schools, and gave the following breakdown: High school, 328; junior high school, 236; Fulton Elementary, 134; Rockport Elementary, 665.

The cafeteria, he said, had served 1036 meals on the first day of school.

The superintendent said that he and his staff were preparing a large map to show the distribution of the school population throughout the district.

He also gave a breakdown on 1964 tax information. Real estate valuations amounted to $10,670,700, Gray said, while unrendered oil valuations were $523,010, and rendered oil valuations amounted to $13,170,460, for a total of $24,364,460.

Personal property totaled another $3,184,770 he said, bringing the overall assessed valuations within the school district to $27,548,940, from which he expected $484,862.11 in taxes.

The meeting closed with a visit to the Junior High School to inspect facilities there.

Sheriff's Dept. Reports Arrests

The Aransas County Sheriff's Department reports that two youths have been lodged in jail on charges of burglarizing two downtown establishments Sunday night and Monday morning. Charges were filed, according Chief Deputy Joe Earl Hunt, before either establishment owner was aware of the breaks.

The Recreation Club was entered and cigarettes, cigars and cold drinks were taken. Also burglarized was the Evans Country Kitchen Cafe from which cold drinks and a little change were taken.

The two youths, 17 and 18, are in jail, lacking $1500 bonds. Close cooperation of local authorities is credited with the rapid solving of the case.

In the same case, Lonnie Young, a transient, 55, was fined $150 in Justice Court for buying intoxicating beverages for these youths. He was released on his promise to get out of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Boyett, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Boyett and daughter Annetta, of Albany, spent Labor Day weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Jim Wade. Mrs. Boyett is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wade.

Quarterback Club Conducting Drive For More Members

The Quarterback Club is conducting a drive to get more members, according to Bob Morrison, who says that this is one way for adults to have more fun.

The Quarterback Club is a method of finding out more about players, the plays, scouting reports on other teams, why this play worked and why that one didn't, Morrison said, and every Monday night at the club meeting, coach and staff discuss these and other things that make the games more fun for club members.

The film of the previous week's game is also shown and explained by the coaches.

If you haven't had the opportunity to purchase your membership card, Morrison says, you can still do so before the first home game of the season Friday night, when ACHS of Rockport plays Bloomington here.

Co-captain of the club, Ben Howard, has membership cards and badges at the HEB Store; Ray Longino also has them at Ray's Texico Station.

Experts Say Winter Fishing Should Be Good

Biologists who have looked the situation over say that winter visitors to Rockport this year ought to enjoy fishing during cold spells, and better than average all through the cool season.

Reason for this is the many Venetian - type subdivisions that have been opened within the past year, with their deep and wide canals, where trout and redfish seek shelter during the cold snaps, running to the deeper canals from the shallow bays.

Only a man in an airplane can gain any idea of the tremendous fishing area that has been opened by dredge and dragline, both in public and private developments.

For instance, those who fished here when the Rockport Yacht Basin was first opened remember the time when this was called the Rockport Fish Bowl, and people came from all over the state to get in on the fabulous fishing of that development. During the extremely cold snaps in 1947 and around 1950-51, tremendous strings of fish were caught there, and old pictures show boats in the basin so thick that it was barely possible to cast a line.

The late Uncle Charlie Bering, of Houston, was one of Rockport's greatest boosters at that time. A fixture at Oshman's Sporting Goods Store until the day he died, Uncle Charlie was always ready for a fishing trip, particularly to the "Fish Bowl," and he led many a fisherman to this area.

When Conn Brown Harbor at Aransas Pass and Little Bay at Rockport first dredged, history repeated itself, and fishermen lined up around both of them, like pickets on a fence, catching tons of trout and redfish, with occasional drum whenever cold snaps drove the fish from the shallow bays into the deeper water of the channels.

It is this fish habit that will bring fantastic fishing to Rockport this winter, according to biologists.

AP, Rockport Shrimp Landings Show Increase

Shrimp landings at Aransas Pass and Rockport during the past eight days picked up slightly over the previous week but were still running behind a comparable period in 1963, according to figures released by Bert Strock, statistician for the U. S. Bureau of Commercial Fisheries.

The statistician reported that total landings at Aransas Pass and Rockport during the past week totaled 371,975 pounds. Landings were made by 211 trawlers.

A comparable period during 1963 shows that 167 trawlers landed a total of 395,000 pounds at the two ports and were averaging about 24.7 boxes per trip. Average boxes per trawler during the past week was about 15, Strock reported.

Landings at Aransas Pass included 293,203 pounds of browns and 27,416 pounds of whites. Rockport landings for the same period were 25,847 pounds of browns and 25,513 pounds of whites.

Strock said that good bay shrimping was being found in San Antonio and Matagorda bays.

Weekend landings at Aransas Pass included 175,767 pounds of browns and 19,633 pounds of whites, Strock reported. Rockport landings for the same period were 20,910 pounds of browns and 13,174 pounds of whites.

Heaviest landings here over the weekend were browns in the 26/30 bracket, followed by browns in the 21/25 count size.

Former Rockport Citizen's Life Told In New Book

Andy Adams, a cowboy who became an author, once lived in Rockport, and in a new book that will soon be on the Texas shelf at the Aransas County Public Library, the story of his life and writings is told with a section devoted to the time he spent here, back in the 80's.

To a young man with capital, Rockport looked like a good place to go into business and with Joe Box, a partner, Andy rented a building on Austin Street from Mr. Berry, a merchant who also a Methodist minister. This was not long after Adams arrived in Rockport in 1890, and the late James Clark Herring fixed the date for the author of the book in this way:

"Main Street was covered with shell in 1890 and Andy let some young boys who were hauling shell have all the feed they wanted on credit. Elmo Herring, James' brother, then eight, began hauling shell too in a small wagon hauled by Hercules, his pet Newfoundland dog. When the work proved too heavy and the sun too hot for Hercules, Elmo substitute his father's prize race horse Dan, who had never been beaten at 300 yards. Along came Mr. Herring and cut short his son's career as a teamster."

Along with Herring, Andy, Arthur Mathis, Judge E. A. Stevens and others were members of the Pelican Club which often played poker at the Herring home.

These and many other episodes in Adams' life are retailed in the book, "Andy Adams, His Life and Writings," by Wilson M. Hudson, who was told the above anecdote by Mr. Herring, when Hudson visited Rockport in 1956.

New Juvenile Books Received At Public Library

A number of new juvenile books, some of which aren't bad reading for adults as well, have recently arrived and will soon be on the shelves at the public library.

The include: "Westward On the Oregon Trail," a beautifully illustrated volume on the great westward migration of Americans in the past century; "Clipper Ships and Captains," that tells the tale of the glamorous days at sea, when American clippers were queens of the waves;

"Steamboats on the Mississippi" is part of the same series, only as its name implies, it deals with the river traffic on the Mississippi River; "Texas and the War with Mexico" tells of the march from Point Isabel to Monterrey and the Castle of Chapultepec in Mexico City.

"Cowboys and Cattle Country" needs no explanation; nor does the title "Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill." Adventures in the "Wilderness" is an enthralling account of early explorations in the West, and "The Battle of Gettysburg" tells, in language that can be comprehended by anyone, of the great Civil War battle.

All of the books are illustrated, many of them with drawings made on the spot by artists that were there.

Ingleside Downs Rockport, 25-0

The Ingleside Mustangs scored with just three seconds left in the first half, then went on to rack up three more touchdowns in the second half to win their season opener from the Rockport Pirates, 25-0, Friday night.

The non-district game between the Mustangs of 31A and the Pirates of 30AA was well attended at the Ingleside field.

After a scoreless first quarter, Pirate guard Tim Sanchez recovered a Mustang fumble in midair on the Rockport 46 and raced 33 yards before Ingleside quarterback Ricky Kees brought him down on the Mustang 23. Ingleside took over on downs at the 15 and the Mustangs then drove 85 yards in two minutes, 57 seconds with alternate quarterback David Whitney hitting halfback Penny Fregia with a 30-yard pass for the tally.

Kees scored from 19 yards out in the third quarter after a 49-yard run by halfback Bobby Jones set up the touchdown. Tommy Pearson kicked the extra point.

In the fourth, Kees blocked a Pirate punt and the Mustangs took possession on the three-yard line. Whitney powered over from the one. With 10 seconds left in the game, Whitney passed 25 yards to end John Hurta for the final touchdown.

Rockport Man Has Rare Coin

A gold Dutch "ryder" coin, minted in 1763, is one of the prized possessions of E. B. Billings, who occasionally takes it out of its resting place in his safe deposit box to show friends.

A yellowed gold than that of U.S. coins, it is about the size of a $50 gold piece, and on one side bears the figure of a horseman or "ryder," after which it is nicknamed, while on the other side is a crown, a lion with a sword, and the date 1763.

"It was given to me by a friend a number of years ago," Billings said. His father had brought it to this country about 1842. When he gave it to me it was in a velvet-lined box so old that the velvet crumbled away when we touched it.

Research on Billings' part, including letters to the Dutch mint, has developed considerable information about the particular group of coins, which were minted not long after coinage was stabilized in that country.

Worth $42.30 for the gold they contain, and anything that the buyer would give for one as a rare coin, the "ryders" were minted in response to the coinage decree of Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, an Englishman who became governor of the United Netherlands in 1585.

Later, in 1606, the first "ryders" appeared, without a face value, being received for their value in gold alone. However, Billings says, these coins were subject to clipping (that is cutting small bits away from their edges, which were smooth so they were withdrawn and the type he has, with milled edges, like modern coins, was substituted.

The ryders like those Billings has were coined between the years 1760 and 1764, although by the latter year only one Dutch province, Zeeland was issuing any. Since then, no others have been struck until De Twentsche Bank of Amsterdam secured a license in 1960, authorizing purchase of gold ingots for striking 3605 gold ryders, in conformity with the authentic provisions of 1586, by the Netherlands National Mint at Utrecht.

Billings said that the Dutch government had requested a good picture of the coin he has, as one of the few minted 200 years ago that still survive.

ANNUAL FALL SCOUT "ROUND UP" KICKS OFF SEPT. 17

The annual fall "Round-up" program of the Mustang Scout District will be kicked off at the regular monthly roundtable meetings of the adult leaders on Thursday, Sept. 17, 7:30 p.m. at the San Patricio Electric Co-Op. building in Sinton.

Adult leaders in the district are encouraged to attend and receive all of the round up material as well as details of the fall program.

The Cub leaders will be led by Alton Luedke, Sinton, while T. L. Huffstutler, Mathis, will direct the scoutmasters' session. The Explorer leaders of the district will meet under the leadership of J. W. Fraser and Bill Carper, both of Sinton. Accompanying the adult leaders in their meeting will be the two elected post representatives from each Explorer post in the district.

A portion of their meeting will be spent in the planning of a district-wide explorer event to happen this fall. Luedke added that it is expected that the leaders of the units in the district will pledge to recruit about 400 boys boys in the scouting program this fall as a result of the fall round-up program.

GRAND JURY RETURNS ONE INDICTMENT

The September Grand Jury returned one indictment against James Edward Ince and Johnny William Wright, for burglary.

Refuge Manager Claims Service Needs More Land

The Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife has long been seeking land for a duck refuge in the Coastal Bend, but was faced with the problem of no land available until they started preliminary negotiations and found that the Tatton Ranch was for sale, according to Robert H. Shields, manager of the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge.

"This is one of the few areas on the Texas coast which will make the sort of feeding and nesting area we need to preserve wintering ducks as civilization advances," Shields said.

"If the Bureau of Reclamation plan for a canal from one end of Texas to the other makes a supply of fresh water available in the area," he continued, "there seems little reason to doubt that the area between Houston and Corpus Christi will probably become one of the most highly industrialized and populated in Texas.

"We need an area where we can farm, raise food for the birds, and where they can recuperate during the winter, and where we have more fresh water than we have on the Refuge. On the present acreage, brush and its attendant problems make this impossible, and while the mainland is excellent for deer, it doesn't do so well for ducks and geese. There just isn't any place for them.

"The only fresh water on the Refuge now is Burgantine Creek, while on the Tatton Ranch we would have Salt and Cavasso' creeks, where we could construct big impoundments. There's lots of open ground, too, where we could plant crops that would attract the birds."

Another valuable asset of the Tatton Ranch from the conservation standpoint, Shields said, was the fact that it contained one of the few remaining populations of Attwater's Prairie Chicken, a bird rapidly approaching extinction.

Shields said that his bureau had definitely shown interest in the Tatton Ranch, but that it is far from being government property now, there were still many steps to go through before it passed from Aransas County tax rolls.

"It won't be appraised until some time in November," he said, "and that's the first step. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has men in Albuquerque, N.M., that will appraise (continued on page 8)

Woodrow Wilson's Biography Now Available at Library

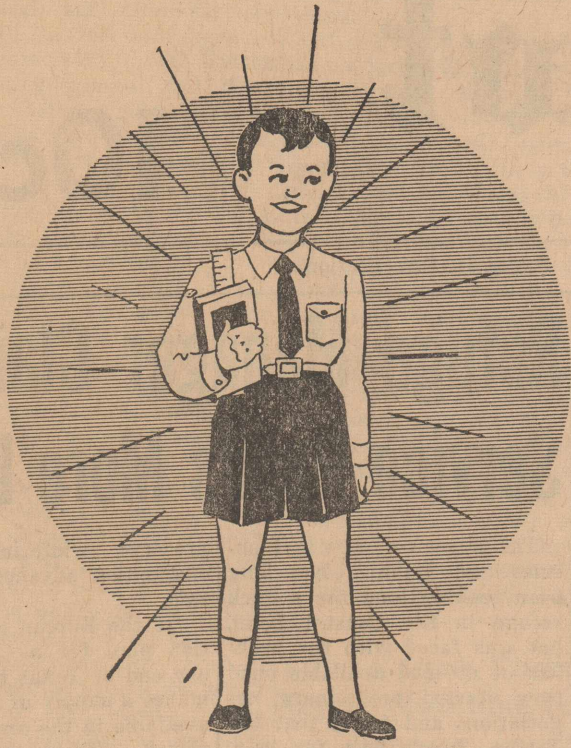

Woodrow Wilson's latest biography, "When The Cheering Stopped" has been added to the shelves of the Aransas County Public Library in response to requests by patriots who were interested in the book.

It deals with the long 17 months when Wilson, President of the United States, was completely isolated from the world by his wife and doctor. No one was allowed to see him. Senators, cabinet officers, the vice president, and the President's orders were scribbled in his wife's handwriting.

The revelation of what actually happened in the White House during this period and what was to follow make "When The Cheering Stopped" a unique book.

"Unquestionably, too," says Allen Nevins, who penned an introduction for the book, "this book will confirm students in their belief that the country should be armed against the recurrence of such lapse in executive authority as is here traced."

Old Texas Racing Feuds Were Bitter

Back in the good old days between the Mexican and Civil Wars, Col. Tom Bales, after helping win the war with Mexico, settled down in the Brazos River Bottoms with a sorrel mare named Blaze as part of his entourage.

Blaze was the fastest thing in Texas, her backers claimed, and at one San Antonio race meet, after showing her heels to everything in sight, she captured a $5,000 purse while Col. Tom cleaned up on bets.

Two of the losers, Capt. Creed Taylor of feuding fame, and Capt. P. S. Wyatt challenged the colonel and his mare to another race. Col. Tom bound himself to race his mare against any Taylor-Wyatt entry within six months, at San Antonio for a stake of 100 bales of cotton, 100 top mules, and $5,000 in cash, or to forfeit $2,000 in cash.

Wyatt and Taylor went back to Kentucky, bought a promising three-year-old for $3,000, despite the fact he was hard to handle, and shipped him to Texas. Somewhere on the road, the horse injured his leg and couldn't run, so they bitterly paid the $2,000 forfeit.

They still believed their horse could whip Blaze, however, and so shipped Derby, as he was called, to the Taylor ranch near Cuero, where expert trainers took him over, finding his leg all right, but his temper vicious. He tried to savage strangers and fought the whip; killed a couple of people who tried to ride him, and indulged in all kinds of plain and fancy cussedness.

The horse had speed, however, and once more his owners matched him with Colonel Bales' mare, and the purse was raised to $10,000 besides the mules and cotton. Backers still favored the mare, however, and she was two-to-one favorite.

The animals got off to an even start and held neck and neck for a half mile, but then, although Bales' jockey went to the whip the Kentucky horse pulled ahead and at the finish line was leader by three lengths.

The colonel was not happy and challenged for another race, this time over a three-mile distance, at the same place, for the same stakes, with any entry they owned.

This time Bales went horse hunting and bought a Mississippi horse that he paid $5,000 for. He was a four-miler but Bales thought he might do as well in a three-mile race.

The news got around and in the second race betting was even heavier than before, with Bales' new horse the odds-on favorite. Once more the crowd was mistaken. Derby came home winner by five lengths.

Colonel Bales quit horse racing right there. He paid his bets, took his race horse and went home to raise cotton and mules, while the race stayed won.

Letter to Editor

Sept. 9th, 1964
To the Editor Rockport Pilot.
The officers, directors and many of the members who have been contacted believe that a statement of the activities of the Rockport Sportsmen Conservation Assn., Inc., with regard to the recent shell dredging discussions, is due at this time.

There is no state law closing these bays to the dredging of shell, nor does the regulatory powers granted provide for so doing. If these bays are to be closed to dredging of shell then the State Legislature will have to close them.

The State Parks & Wildlife Commission is charged with the responsibility of protecting exposed shell reefs and nursery grounds, not only from damage to these reefs, from dredge operations, but also from pollution, due to other sources, wasted in the bay waters.

Our committees have met with the officials of the 5th Region office here in Rockport in regard to the dredging of shell by Heldenfels Bros. in Copano and Aransas Bays.

At that time there was no formal request to dredge any specific reefs. Such request to the State Parks & Wildlife Commission is necessary prior to dredging. Such request is then referred to the local office for their recommendations. Depending on the circumstances their acceptance or disapproval is sent to headquarters in Austin.

The local state office personnel have sounded and charted many reefs in these bays. They accept responsibility to see that any dredging is conducted in such a manner that damage to exposed reefs and nursery grounds do not result. We have been told that any dredging of submerged reefs, which have been approved for such operations, will be closely checked. They have the authority to move the dredge in case of damage to exposed reefs and nursery grounds is resulting, and they say they will use their authority when required to protect the feeding and nursery grounds of sea food in these bays.

The members, a great majority of them, in this Sportsmen's Association have confidence in the Parks and Wildlife local office personnel. We believe that they are just as interested as we are in protecting our sea food resources. They need our cooperation and we pledged to give it.

M. W. Cochran, President, Rockport Sportsmen Conservation Ass'n, Inc.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Rowe and children visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Mills in Port Bolivia last week.

...what is it doing?

A community development program sponsored by CENTRAL POWER AND LIGHT COMPANY, Arm for Industry is designed to help South Texas communities make their towns better places to live. The 1963 program brought good results and focused national attention on the human and natural resources of South Texas; 49 communities are carrying the benefits forward in the expanded 1964 program. Continually, all of these towns and cities have been aggressively promoting a broader front of local improvement. Civic groups are striving for more tourists and conventions. Plans have already gone into operation for revitalizing downtown areas where the need exists. Recreational facilities have been and are being improved right now. Considerable interest has been aroused in attracting new residents. Local leaders in business are working diligently to promote industrial sites. It is certain all this effort leads to a better community and makes the future very bright indeed... more jobs, new residents, a broader tax base for improvements, better schools, bigger shopping centers. Every community will benefit through self-improvement — and those doing the most effective job will share in CPL's Arm for Industry awards.

SPACE AGE BUILDINGS ARE DIFFERENT

The influence of the space age is being manifested throughout Texas by a new and exciting spirit of exploration and discovery, and the resulting impact on Texas culture is loosening bonds of tradition and convention.

Nowhere are results of this revolution more apparent than in the Coastal Bend. On its skyline, in almost every city, new and unique building shapes are being developed on the architect's drawing board out of complex geometry combined with reinforced concrete's plastic potential.

In the past, these shapes and their names—hyperbolic paraboids, barrel vaults, domes, folded plates—were known only to engineers and architects, but they are rapidly becoming familiar sights up and down the coast, the outgrowth of the solution of a myriad complex problems of beauty, function and economy.

The architects who have employed these complex shapes have done so because they have better solved some particular problem of space. In general they are of the type designated as thin-shell concrete, and they derive their strength and economy from their form.

To illustrate, lift a sheet of paper by one edge and it hangs limply, yet, rolled into a half circle it can be lifted by one edge and will support itself. The same thing happens when it is folded accordion-wise. Applied to roofs, for instance, enormous spans can be produced from concrete as little as 2 1/2 inches thick. Reduced weight of this roof structure may then allow economies throughout the structural system.

Not exclusive in the use of such structures, nevertheless the Coastal Bend appears to have utilized them more than other areas. This, architects say, is because of a unique set of circumstances. Concrete has been a familiar and accepted building material, much used because it resists corrosive humidity. Architects who had seen them elsewhere liked them and sold their clients. Engineers, intrigued by their form, learned how to design them, and builders produced the unusual buildings at realistic prices.

One of the earlier structures of this kind was that built for Gualt Aviation at Corpus Christi's International Airport, in which the grace and drama of flight are implicit in every line. Despite its radical appearance, down-to-earth planning preceded every step and the building was designed by Corpus Christi architect, Joe L. Williams to provide maximum space from a fixed investment. This resulted in a practical and aesthetically pleasing structure.

A pair of Harlingen architects, Taniguchi and Croft, developed the Charles H. Flato Memorial building at Dick Kleberg Park in Kingsville, the Growers Marketing Association building, the Casa del Sol, and Ben Milam Elementary, all in Harlingen.

Donnelly and Whittett, of Corpus Christi, designed the International Airport; Charles P. Donnelly is designer of the new Refugio Public Library; the Flour Bluff National Bank came from the drawing board of William Stalter, Corpus Christi; Jack Turner, of the same city, designed the Doctor's Square, while the soaring tower of Parkway Baptist Church is the brain child of John B. Oatman.

Two other Corpus Christi structures that use hyperbolic paraboids in their construction are the beautiful home of Richard S. Colley designed for Mr. and Mrs. Guy Braselton and the soaring Americana Motel, which A. Art Williams designed.

The new Los Fresnos presents a superficial resemblance to a bunch of mushrooms, but is most pleasingly architecturally. It was designed by Bowman, Swanson and Hiestler, a Valley firm which also drew plans for Cookly Junior High School in Harlingen. McAllen High School was the work of Zeb Rike; Schanen Estates Elementary School in Corpus Christi was designed by Horace B. McCord; the attractive Knights of Columbus Hall at Alice is the work of Paul Garcia; Cameron County Pavilion on Padre Island was designed by Gayle Wilhite and the unusual Tropics Motel at Rockport is the work of David Graeber.

More unusual than any of these, but one that is pleasing to the eye, is the Gizmo, at 7103 San Pedro, in San Antonio, where unusual wares from all over the world are offered in the atmosphere of a trade mart.

Jim Ben Clobardants and daughter Robin Ann, of San Antonio, spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clobardants.

In Texas... after a swim, beer is a natural

On a hot summer day, a dip in a cool stream can be wonderfully refreshing. Equally refreshing when you're relaxing afterwards with friends is a hearty glass of beer. There's hardly another beverage around that suits what you do for fun as much as beer. Camping, hiking, or just lounging on a lawn chair—beer brings to each just the right touch of extra good living.

Your familiar glass of beer is also a pleasurable reminder that we live in a land of personal freedom—and that our right to enjoy beer and ale, if we so desire, is just one, but an important one, of those personal freedoms.

REFUGE MANAGER—

the land, and after the appraisal we will still have to negotiate with Mr. Tatton regarding mineral and other rights and the price. If these problems are resolved, and we still desire to purchase the land, approval must come from the Migratory Bird Conservation Commission."

This is composed of Secretary of the Interior Udall, Secretary of Agriculture Freeman, Secretary of Commerce Hodges, Senators Hruska from Nebraska and Metcalf from Wyoming and Congressman Karsten of Missouri, and Goodling, of Pennsylvania.

Shields said that a number of erroneous opinions had arisen about the grazing rights to the land, if and when the government buys it. The government policy in such cases has been to allow the landowner to retain grazing rights if he is willing to pay the going rate for such rights in the area in question. If he isn't, and someone else outbids him, the landowner may not be able to retain such rights.

Another misconception has arisen during the controversy in which Aransas County, its schools, Navigation District and Chamber of Commerce are opposing acquisition of the land because of its loss to the tax rolls.

"Recently the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge was accused of leasing government acreage for grazing purposes at the rate of 25 cents per head annually. Actual grazing rates on the Refuge have been considerably higher. At present they are 75 cents per animal per month, and from this 25% of the total has been reverted to the counties. In 1963 this amounted to approximately $8500 for the 47,000 acres now in the refuge. Beginning in 1966 the county will have the option of accepting either 25 per cent of the Refuge income, or 1% of the purchase price, with readjustment slated for every five years."

The money for acquisition of the land will probably come from duck stamp funds, Shields said, if the Tatton land is purchased. Under such acquisition, there is a clause in the act that says 25% of the land can ultimately become public hunting grounds, after it has been developed.

"In a Kansas Refuge we acquired," said Shields, "the purchase was made in 1957, and 1960 the public was allowed to hunt. Here it would be necessary to farm the land, establish feeding and resting areas to which the birds would come, and, once these were established, under the terms of the act, public hunting could be allowed over as much as 25% of the acquired area."

Lake Corpus Christi Cheap Vacation Spot

It all depends—if you live here it's Lake Mathis, but if you live in Corpus Christi or consult maps it's Lake Corpus Christi, in the midst of Lake Corpus Christi State Park.

Bordered by South Texas mesquite and live oak, it is a haven for boating, water skiing, catfishing, horseback riding, swimming, sailing, and just plain lazy living.

It is 27 miles long, with some 200 miles of shoreline, and was created in 1953 by completion of Wesley Seale Dam, which provides fresh water for Corpus Christi and the surrounding area.

One of the state's most popular parks, there are large picnic areas where there are tables, grills, water and lights. In addition the state-operated park has 25 screened shelters which may be rented for $2 per day, plus $1 for each car; a trailer park with water and electrical connections for $1.50 a day, or camping area where you can camp for $1 per night.

Life guards are on duty at the fenced swimming area during the summer and there are bath houses, showers and lockers that may be rented.

Fleets of skiffs owned by individuals and the state may be hired for fishing or boating, or your own outboard may be launched at the public ramps.

Excellent sites for vacation and retirement homes ring the lake and at least one development includes an air strip for the residents' convenience. Others are planning golf courses, and one has a country club slated in the near future.

JORDAN-ELMORE VOWS SAID SATURDAY

In a double ring ceremony Saturday evening, Sept. 5, Norma Jane Elmore became the bride of Neal Freeman Jordan at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Preston McHugh of Fulton, with the Rev. Ben H. Bohmfalk officiating.

An arrangement of Florida palms and white mums provided a setting for an improvised altar.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Preston McHugh, the bride wore a princess style dress of soldier blue faille with white accessories, and carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Miss Mary Ellen McHugh played the traditional wedding music.

Mrs. Preston McHugh was her sister's matron of honor. Mr. Merrill Swann, of Rockport, was best man.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Johnnie Dunbar, of Rockport, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Lura (Red) Jordan, of Rockport.

Following the ceremony a reception was held on the patio at the McHugh home.

After a short wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Rockport.

Parents of all children in the school are invited to attend future meetings which normally occur the first Monday every month.

Miss Dorothy Rowe visited Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rowe and son John, in Richmond last week.

Sandia Bank Holds Nostalgic Memories

Any size goes, Sandia isn't much, but it has one thing that has focused the eyes of most bankers on what has been known as the watermelon capital of Texas. In the forward reaching sixties the Sandia State Bank is valiantly waltzing backward.

Its president, Robert R. Mullen, of nearby Alice, has embarked on a project whereby the bank has been restored to its turn of the century charm, and as he and Executive Vice President Ward see it, they may not be keeping pace with the jet age but they're having a heck of a lot of fun.

Ward says the plan is to make the bank and the quaint old rail station across the street into area museums.

Restoration work so far has been concentrated on the bank's interior, with the modern bookkeeping and banking machinery relegated to the back rooms, where customers and visitors don't see. But out in front, anything that looks like it had been created later than the reign of Queen Victoria has been banished. Instead of the polished low walnut counters of today's banking in the big cities and small towns of America, there are shiny brass spittoons (unused), tellers cages of oak with curlycue grillwork, tall old clothes trees, and antique desks.

The bank also boasts an early ball-style typewriter, donated by a corpus Christi firm; a hand operated check stamper, cannonballs, and assorted old guns, one of which was in the loot recently taken by a soon-caught bank robber!

Word said the bank will continue to add period curiosities from now on, and that he and Mullen have no fixed schedule for completing restoration.

Work on the depot is going slower than on the bank, but when the project gains momentum, the two men plan to create a train station worthy of the days when railroads were in their heyday. The Southern Pacific, from whom the depot was purchased, has shown much interest in the project, Word said.

Sandia—Spanish for watermelon—was once a flourishing shipping point for the South Texas watermelon crop. Today it is known chiefly as the location of the huge Knolle Dairy Farms, which possesses the world's largest herd of registered Jersey dairy cows. A. H. Knolle was one of the original stockholders of the Sandia Bank, one of the oldest in Jim Wells County.

Mullen said recently "it was the smallest bank in the county when we bought it. It didn't even have a filing cabinet. All the equipment was real old, so we just decided to keep the old stuff and refinish it."

But since Mullen took over, the bank's deposits have tripled, and today it has nearly a thousand accounts with deposits approaching the $3 million mark.

The interest the bank's restoration program has attracted was pinpointed when, as a routine courtesy, Mullen invited the state's leading bankers to Sandia's Fiftieth Anniversary Celebration a year or so ago.

"About 250 of the top men in the state showed up," Mullen said. "It was quite a day."

VISITORS ENJOY LAST FLING

Rockport's beaches and ski basin were crowded, motels were full, and Goose Island Park was playing to capacity crowds as visitors having their last fling at summer deced on Coastal Bend areas for the Labor Day weekend.

Padre Island, Mustang Island, Port Aransas, and the beaches along the Gulf of Mexico were also crowded. Cars crossed the Padre Island Causeway Saturday at a better-than-200-per-hour clip. All three ferries to Port Aransas were busy, with cars, many of them pulling trailers, frequently stacked up, waiting their turn.

Shelters at Lake Corpus Christi at Mathis were also in great demand, and the shores of this fresh water lake were covered with picnickers, while boats of water skiers and fishermen dotted the lake.

Weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Adams were her sister, Mrs. Leland Hastings, San Antonio; the Adams' daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. David Moon and daughter Lindsay, of West; and Mrs. Martha McMordie and sons of Cuero.

Editorial

With the purchase of the Tatton Ranch in Aransas County is of prime concern to the various taxing agencies in the county, a few words from an article on the rise of non-taxpayers recently published in the Wall Street Journal should be of considerable interest to everyone in the county.

"Expansion of the Federal government's tax-exempt properties is a particular problem in some areas," the article says in part.

"In northwest Wyoming, Grand Teton National Park used to be 20 miles from the Teton County seat of Jackson. But the park has been overflowing onto land acquired and donated by the Rockefellers, and its edge is now a mere two miles from Jackson; only an elk refuge separates the park from town.

"This expansion has preserved spectacular mountain scenery for tourists. But in the past 15 years it has also taken 36,697 acres of formerly taxed land off the rolls; only 76,262 of the county's 1,816,960 acres are still subject to tax. 'The result is a very frugal county government,' says one Teton County rancher — Wyoming's Governor Clifford P. Hansen.

"And in Arizona, according to Presidential Nominee Barry Goldwater, the state can tax only 12% of its land area, because of high Federal land holdings. 'I think that it's high time that the Federal government thought seriously of turning these lands back to the states so they can be used profitably for taxes,' the senator from Arizona said recently."

Removal of the Tatton Ranch lands from the county's tax base would not only remove taxes from the tills of the county taxing agencies, but it would also cut down the legal tax base against which bonds can be issued, with the result that in the near future it could well be insufficient for issuance of anything but a nominal amount. With the need for a fresh water system staring the county right square in the face, this is something to think about.

Another reason for some deep cogitation is the fact that the land which the Federal government wants to acquire would interfere with use of either Salt or Cavasso creeks as sites for reservoirs in which Guadalupe River water could be held, as part of our water system. This reason may not be too valid, but certainly one of the more economical plans for a water system suggested by the engineers working on a water survey took note of the fact that these sites were available, and might well be used to augment the water supply for the human beings that live in the county, instead of for the birds.
