Fish plans to sue Texaco, Schorre

By JANE MARLER DEES
and PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writers

District 3 City Councilman Kelly Fish today announced his intention to sue Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre and Texaco Inc. for civil rights violations he claims occurred during a Sheriff's Office criminal investigation of past West Texas land deals.

Fish, in a written statement delivered to the Reporter-Telegram this morning, claims Texaco "has some vindictive motive against me for reasons I can only speculate about.

In addition, "It is readily apparent from his improper conduct that Mr. Schorre sees political opportunity in this case, and is willing to sacrifice responsibilities to his office and the due process of law to achieve his own ambitious ends," Fish said.

According to the City Council member's statement, Texaco has "secretly settled" with two other individuals who came under scrutiny during the corporation's internal probe of the Getty Oil Co. land department.

The transactions in question allegedly occurred within the smaller company's department during 1981-82 while Fish was employed there as a landman, Texaco attorney Glyn King has said.

A grand jury is scheduled Wednesday to begin hearing evidence in the case.

In July and August, Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said those involved in the deals could face charges which include theft over $20,000, a second-degree felony.

Responding to Fish's statement this morning, King said: "Since we have not been served with a lawsuit nor had an opportunity to review the accusations, we are unable to comment on them at this time.

"However, as you know and have stated in your coverage, Texaco has expressly declined to discuss or comment on any individuals concerning the matters which are the subject of the sheriff's investigation, which as we understand will be presented to the grand jury by the district attorney," King continued.

King further refused to comment on whether two other parties already had paid restitution in the matter.

Fish in other claims stated that access to evidence in the case was denied to him and granted only to Schorre.

Texaco is termed a "vindictive corporation," and Schorre a "politically motivated prosecutor," in the three-page statement.

Fish also called for Schorre to remove himself from the case and a delay in grand jury proceedings "until a more responsible and dutiful official can be appointed."

West Texas rancher herding shrimp

Vernon Holcomb, manager of Genesis Seafood Inc., shows off a sample of the shrimp he raises on his West Texas farm northwest of Stanton.

STANTON — There's something mighty suspicious and fishy out on the West Texas rangeland: cotton, cattle and shrimp.

Saltwater shrimp.

The commercial shrimp are here because Martin County farmer-rancher Vernon Holcomb somehow wanted to turn a formerly no-count resource — brine — into something worthwhile.

"I've always wondered why the good Lord put it (saltwater) there, and gradually we're figuring out why," Holcomb, 49, said Monday in a 1987 Agricultural Field Day in which cotton, vegetables and aqua-culture were explored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX). The tour took in Ervin and John Bauman's cotton farm near Valley View southeast of Midland and Guy and Renee Richards' 14-acre commercial vegetable farm in the Greenwood community.

Holcomb and his wife, Lillian, began studying what would thrive best in the naturally occurring salt water in Sulphur Draw here and in underground streams and pockets on and under his farm.

Pope arrives at largest U.S. diocese

Papal trip blessing for San Antonio's image, related stories — 3,7A, 8C

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Pope John Paul II today flew to Los Angeles, the nation's largest Roman Catholic archdiocese, ater delivering his message of "one human family" to a tiny but devoutly faithful segment of his flock — American Indians.

Before departing from Sky Harbor Airport, the pontiff walked over to a crowd of about 2,000 people, kissed and hugged several little children, picked one up, and waved to everyone.

After arriving at Los Angeles International Airport, he was to ride in a seven-mile motorcade to St. Vibiana's Cathedral and address an audience of church and governmental officials.

In his prepared remarks, the pope said being a Christian in a "secularized world...can bring opposition and even ridicule.

"It often means being out of step with majority opinion," he said.

He said persevering in faith was especially important "for young people who are trying to live a responsible moral life in the face of a tide of popular culture and peer pressure that is indifferent, if not hostile, to Christian morality."

He left Phoenix for Los Angeles with the memory of a unique demonstration of Roman Catholic faith by descendants of the original Americans. The pontiff called the encounter "for me and all of us, a deep experience."

He used the occasion Monday — a meeting and prayer service with representatives of American Indian tribes — to plead for brotherhood. American Catholics, he said, have not always lived up to their Christian responsibilities in the past but "we commit ourselves to overcoming their present effects."

Ford says Bork 'uniquely qualified' for Supreme Court

Demonstrations erupt as hearings begin — 8C

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford praised Judge Robert H. Bork as "uniquely qualified" for the Supreme Court as the Senate Judiciary Committee opened politically charged confirmation hearings today, but a leading opponent said Bork is "itching to overrule" historic decisions.

In an extraordinary appearance for a former president, Ford declared that Bork's "record has been exemplary" since he took a place on the U.S. Circuit Court of Aoppeals five years ago.

Ford added that Bork, who was seated at his side before the committee, acted "with integrity" in 1973 when Bork carried out then-President Nixon's order to fire Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox in the so-called Saturday Night Massacre.

But Sen. Edward M. Kennedy declared at the nationally televised hearings, "In Robert Bork's America there is no room at the inn for blacks and no place in the Constitution for women. And in our America, there should be no seat on the Supreme Court for Robert Bork."

Kennedy, D-Mass., did not say what decisions he believes Bork is anxious to overturn. But he said, Bork has "shown that he is hostile to the rule of law and the role of the courts in protecting individual liberty. He is instinctively biased against the claims of the average citizen and in favor of concentrations of power, whether that power is governmental or private."

Bork, whose nomination has sparked a ferocious lobbying war between liberal groups opposed to his appointment and conservatives who favor it, sat quietly at the witness table while Ford and then Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole endorsed him. Committee members were not expected to begin questioning Bork until afternoon.

President Reagan has campaigned vigorously for Bork's confirmation since nominating him in July and said on Monday he hoped critics "will be candid about why they oppose him and not fabricate excuses for attacking him personally."

Neither opponents nor supporters have been willing to predict the outcome of the confirmation battle, but there was little disputing the observation Dole made as he echoed Ford's endorsement:

"There are going to be some tough questions. Judge Bork knows that and Judge Bork expects that."

Members of the divided committee said prior to the confirmation hearings they hoped the sessions would cut through the contentious rhetoric of recent weeks and demonstrate whether the judge is fit to join the high court.

"I hope we're finally getting through the smoke and the hype and the hoopla and the hyperbole and find out who Judge Bork is, instead of the babbling that is coming up on both sides," Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said Bork was "definitely not the man I would have chosen to go on the Supreme Court," but added that he's anxious to hear Bork's testimony. Both Leahy and Simpson were interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Bork, 60, has been a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia since 1982. The bearded jurist has described his ideology as one of following the intent of the framers of the U.S. Constitution. Bork believes judges should not create new rights under the law or attempt to become legislators.

His application of this theory in cases involving civil rights, free speech, privacy, anti-trust and other subjects has won him acclaim from the right and scorn from the left.

Shultz begins talks with Shevardnadze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz held a "thorough and constructive" first round of talks today with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze as the superpowers tried to clear the way to a summit despite lingering differences over arms control, human rights and Afghanistan.

"We had a very good meeting, between the minister and I, thorough and constructive," Shultz said after nearly three hours of discussion with Shevardnadze at the State Department.

The Soviet foreign minister, reflecting a mutually upbeat mood, joked to reporters and photographers: "We have come here in order to tell you that the ministers have decided everything."

As Shevardnadze opened his three-day visit, there were signs of flexibility in the U.S. effort to nail down a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles and to reduce more potent strategic arsenals, as well.

Shevardnadze flashed a thumbs-up sign upon his arrival and said he was in a "good" mood. Then, as he left for a brief respite at the Soviet embassy before a White House meeting with President Reagan, he said he felt "O.K."

Shultz declined, however, to clear up what was on everyone's mind: Whether they had discussed a date for Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to come here to see Reagan.

With a wave of his hand, Shultz turned aside a question on the subject from a reporter as he and Shevardnadze posed for pictures with the U.S. and Soviet delegations in an eighth floor reception room.

The meeting at the State Department preceded the signing at the White House of an agreement to establish "nuclear risk reduction centers" in the two capitals to lessen the chance of accidental war.

The two sides offered downbeat forecasts before the talks opened. But this did not disguise the fact that their shared hope was to accelerate a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles for signing at a summit meeting.

County Commissioners approve plan for a $5 million jail and office complex and hire company to proceed with design and development.

Commissioners OK plan for jail-office complex

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Design and development of a $5 million county jail and office complex that three commissioners say would solve the county's courthouse space problem indefinitely, received the go-ahead Monday during a meeting of the Midland County Commissioners Court.

In a 3-1 vote, commissioners agreed to employ Modular Jail Systems Inc. of Humble to proceed with the design and development phase of the proposed one-story jail and office complex on the so-called downtown South Superblock.

Commissioner Guy McCrary said the complex would "solve" the county's space needs for years to come by initially providing 192 beds in addition to the 104 beds that will be available once renovations to the courthouse's fifth-floor jail are complete next spring.

Future wings — to provide a maximum of 576 beds — would be built when the need for space warranted construction, he said.

Commissioner Durward Wright said the complex would be occupied by prisoners from Midland County and the city of Midland as well as those who are in the custody of the U.S. Marshall. Prisoners in transit to the Texas Department of Corrections also could be transferred in from other county jails, he said.

"At this point we are users. We would become providers," Wright said.

But Commissioner Scott Welch, who voted against the motion, and County Judge Bill Ahders, who abstained, argued that the county should not get involved in the jail business.

"Giving the public an hour and 35 minutes to digest this isn't what I had in mind," Welch said. "I think we're putting the cart before the horse."

Wright said he and McCrary have been studying how to best use the land since the court agreed to buy the South Superblock last spring — over protests from district court judges who opposed separating the jail from the courthouse.

"We've been talking about this for two years," he said.

They tried redfish, trout and shrimp under advice of Johnny Harrison, retired Ward County TAEX agent who had experimented with fish and shrimp in the salt water along the Pecos River around Monahans; Gary Clevenger, Martin County TAEX agent, and Texas A&M University marine biologist Dr. Jim Davis.

"WE HAVE AN available supply of saltwater running under the ground and over the ground in Martin County," Clevenger noted.

Though Holcomb kiddingly suggests that he's a greenhorn in shrimping, his shrimp operation indicates that he is quickly becoming seasoned in shrimping: dressing, processing and freezing. It was about 10 years ago when Harrison "put the (shrimp) bug in my ear" at a cattle sale, recalled Holcomb.

"I kind of snickered at him," Holcomb recalled, "and went about to sell him some cattle.

"The good Lord put everything here for some purpose," surmised Holcomb. From the sand and clay, Holcomb carved out 15 acres of ponds varying from one-third of an acre to three acres in size, lined the ponds with clay, and let the saltwater flow.

"Our most successful project has been shrimp," Holcomb said.

But he may be conservative in his operation.

Holcomb noted that his father, Earl Holcomb, who died in 1980, probably would have put in a 200-acre saltwater shrimp operation instead of 15 acres.

"If Daddy went into something, he went into it big. He wouldn't have messed around."

Last year, Holcomb experimented with aqua-farming. This year, while his experiments continue, he's seriously into farming the salt-ponds, which are aerated by paddle-wheels. The paddling keeps the water from stratifying.

HOLCOMB HAS what he calls a "poor-boy" laboratory to test his operation. "We're just doing the best we can with what we've got."

"We'll try not to lie to you," Holcomb said in his West Texas drawl, "but," he quipped, "we don't always tell the truth."

Last spring, Holcomb flew in his airborne shipment of seed shrimp — larvae at $7 a thousand count — and planted them in the four-foot-deep ponds. And to enhance the shellfish's environment, he added a measure — two truck loads — of salt.

"The water quality is good," he said. "We're a little high in some chemicals, and a low in others."

The larvae transformed into molting, flipping shrimp.

In their early development, the larvae are endangered by the dragon-fly larvae, which eat the shrimp larvae. "They are vicious," Holcomb said.

The shrimp forage on algae, plankton and a special shrimp ration, which Holcomb buys. "You have to feed these guys broadcast — (rations) cast across the ponds. By daytime, algae and plankton build up the ponds' oxygen supply for the shellfish.

But once the shrimp reach the big-boy stage, they tend to be their own enemies.

"They do become cannibalistic," he noted. "They do begin to eat each other."

But before they do, Holcomb begins harvesting in October, as the season cools.

"WE'RE SHOOTING for a ton per acre," said Holcomb, who hopes to harvest about 38,000 pounds of shrimp. Once "dressed," the harvested shrimp will total about 18,000 pounds for the West Texas marketplace.

Shrimp dress out at about 60 percent useful meat, which is comparable to beef, he said.

Once harvested by draining the ponds, shrimp are dressed by "flipping heads and pulling legs." Processed dressed shrimp will bring up to $6 or $7 a pound, which converts to about 30 tails of shrimp. Unprocessed heads-on shrimp run $3.95 a pound.

The Holcombs sell shrimp under the name Genesis Sea Food Inc. and will market processed frozen shrimp to restaurants in the Midland-Odessa area.

"The taste is excellent," he said. Shrimp may be eaten fried, boiled, broasted, roasted, barbecued or raw.

The shrimp marketplace is competitive, noted Clevenger. "The market will only hold so much, because you've got the competition from the (Texas Gulf) coast," he said.

But Holcomb noted that his shrimp are far fresher than shrimp brought in from the coastal waters.

"That's one of the advantages," Clevenger said. "They are going to be fresher."

"We're knocking on them doors," Holcomb said. "They're hungry for shrimp here in West Texas."

And unlike farming cotton and raising cattle, "It's tough to tell what you are doing," Holcomb said of shrimping. "You can doctor cattle, but you can't doctor shrimp." So, to gauge how the shrimp are faring, Holcomb casts nets in the ponds to bring up shrimp from the bottom of the ideally pea-green waters, which are alive with more than shrimp.

"It's plumb scary how many plants and animal creatures are in these waters," Holcomb said.

But he's planning to add the not-so-scary mollusks — oysters — to his natural salt water, and farm oysters for the West Texas marketplace.

"I love a good (beef) steak," said the rancher-farmer, "and second to steak, I like shrimp, Cajun-blackened fish and raw oysters."

Several issues remain unresolved. But in an effort to close the gap, U.S. negotiators in Geneva offered also to ban missiles in that range that are capable of carrying non-nuclear charges, a U.S. official told The Associated Press.

The Pentagon had objected to the concession but was overridden, said the official, who demanded anonymity.

In another nuclear area, the official said, Shultz was prepared to take a "flexibile" stance on the heavy land-based missiles that are at the heart of Soviet nuclear power.

Specifically, he will offer to increase the limit initially proposed by the United States on multiple-warhead ICBMs if the Soviets step up negotiations on an overall 50 percent cutback in strategic weapons.

On other fronts, Shultz is trying to persuade the Soviets to adopt more lenient emigration procedures and to agree to withdraw 115,000 troops from Afghanistan over a few months' time.

Shultz posed for photographs with Shevardnadze in a seventh-floor sitting room outside his offce. "We always have a handshake on these occasions," Shultz reminded his guest. Shevardnadze readily complied.

The handful of American and Soviet reporters permitted to watch the picture-taking were admonished in advance that they should not ask any questions.

Consequently, no questions were put to Shultz or Shevardnadze as they chatted amiably through American and Russian interpreters.

The agreement to set up risk reduction centers apparently is the only certain positive outcome of Shevardnadze's visit and his discussion of a wide-ranging agenda with Reagan and Shultz.

A senior Reagan administration official, briefing reporters Monday at the White House under rules of anonymity, doubted that the treaty could be wrapped up during Shevardnadze's visit or a date set for Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to come to Washington for a summit meeting.

The foreign minister brought with him a letter to Reagan from Gorbachev, however, and the U.S. official acknowledged: "We do not know what is in that letter. I do not preclude that he knows he's got dates in that letter."

Gennady Gerasimov, the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, declined Monday to say exactly what was in the Gorbachev letter, but he said he thought it was an assessment of U.S.-Soviet relations and how to improve them.

Asked in an AP Radio interview if Gorbachev wants to come to a summit in the United States, Gerasimov said he does but only with a "centerpiece" on the table.

"This centerpiece must be some agreement, important agreement, for instance about (the) missiles," Gerasimov said, adding that agreement may not be far off.

"Because our minister is here, we are closer than one day ago. And because at last you have this draft of yours on the table, we are also closer," he said. "But still it depends pretty much on three working days here in Washington, D.C."

The agreement to set up risk reduction centers was inspired by Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and John R. Warner, R-Va.. It was completed last May in Geneva after initial Soviet suspicions that the idea was a ploy to divert attention from negotiations to curb nuclear weapons.

There already is a "hot line" for emergency communications between Reagan and Gorbachev. The risk reduction centers would supplement it by providing contact between the capitals when there was no apparent crisis.

The Washington center will be staffed by Americans and the Moscow center by Soviets. Nunn and Warner had proposed a mixture of both nationalities.

On Monday, culminating a spate of downbeat forecasts on the Shevarnadze visit, Reagan said the superpowers still faced "difficult issues" before reaching an agreement to scrap their intermediate-range missiles.

In a statement announcing U.S. negotiators would present a new draft proposal in Geneva, the president said the superpowers "have come a long way" toward an agreement but had not resolved how the dismantling of missiles and other treaty provisions would be monitored to guard against cheating.

The two sides also are still at odds over the U.S.-controlled warheads atop 72 West German Pershing 1A missiles and have not set a schedule for gradually reducing their arsenals of intermediate-range weapons to zero.

The Soviets want the warheads and U.S.-stored backups covered by the treaty — a demand rejected by the American side as unacceptable.

BORK

But by all indications, senators holding the balance remain somewhere between the two ends of the political spectrum. Still, all senators agree that the court is at a crossroads, because retired Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. was a swing vote on abortion, affirmative action and other crucial issues.

Virtually all committee members have publicly stated the nomination should go to the full Senate, although a furious battle may be fought over what kind of recommendation the panel will make.

The nomination could be advanced with a positive or negative recommendation, or none at all.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., interviewed today on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program, discounted charges that Bork's record reveals dangerous extremist views, calling him a "sound judge" who's well qualified for the post.

But Thurmond was countered on the program by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who said Bork's views were "totally off the main stream."

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said on CBS that the committee members have to watch what Bork has to say "on the specifics on the constitutional doctrine and also have to evaluate him as a man, not only what he says but how he says it."

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., also appearing on CBS, says he'll be "looking at the total individual and what the total judge would be."

Because of the expected crowds of spectators, the committee moved from its smaller hearing room into the larger and more decorative Senate Caucus Room, which hosted many of the Iran-Contra sessions.

Missing this time is the raised podium that was constructed especially for the Iran-Contra lawmakers. Senators sat at floor level, around a simple curved table with a green felt top.

The war of words that has been waged over the nomination continued Monday on the eve of the hearings.

During a speech to a National Alliance of Business audience, Reagan made another pitch for Bork, saying that "too often character assassination has replaced debate in principle here in Washington."

"Destroy someone's reputation and you don't have to talk about what he stands for," Reagan said. "Well, I hope Judge Bork's critics will be candid about why they oppose him and not fabricate excuses for attacking him personally. That way, we can have a full and open debate on an important constitutional principle, and when the votes are counted, America will win."

The principle that Reagan was referring to was Bork's belief that "laws should govern our country, and if you want them changed, you should convince the elected legislatures to change them, not unelected judges. This doctrine of judicial restraint shouldn't be controversial in our democracy, but it is."

POPE

In Los Angeles, he was to have the only two-day stay of his nine-city tour. More than 2.6 million Catholics, nearly 5 percent of all the Catholics in the United States, are concentrated in the three counties that make up the Los Angeles diocese.

To prepare for the visit, authorities made a pre-dawn sweep Monday to remove the homeless that inhabit the area around St. Vibiana's Cathedral where the pope will stay.

The cathedral is on the fringe of Skid Row, and the Union Rescue Mission next door — which feeds 2,000 destitute people a day — was ordered closed temporarily.

Church officials say the Secret Service and police insisted on the actions for the pope's security on grounds that a terrorist might hide among the homeless.

Traffic problems were predicted and extensive use of helicopters was planned for the pontiff.

He had a busy schedule — 10 events, including a downtown parade and two stadium Masses. The official welcome was at St. Vibiana's Cathedral, named for the third century virgin martyr who is the patron saint of the diocese. The invited guests were representatives from each of Los Angeles' 284 parishes and 27 missions, including seven founded by Franciscan Junipero Serra in the 18th century.

Church officials fear that publicity about anticipated traffic jams and discomfort may discourage people from coming to see the pope. Warnings of traffic problems and bad or extremely hot weather have been blamed for smaller-than-predicted crowds for the pope in the South.

There was no lack of attendance, however, in Monday's Mass in Sun Devil Stadium at Arizona State University. The pope had a full house, 80,000 people, for the first time on the tour.

Earlier, at the meeting with the Indians, the pope was blessed in the tradition of the Pima nation. Emmett White, a third generation Catholic, medicine man and spiritual leader of the tribe, presented the pontiff with a white eagle feather he used for the blessing.

The Indians, many dressed in tribal garb, welcomed the pope with dances, drums and rattles. He appeared so delighted with his reception that he walked around the arena for 15 minutes, bestowing blessings.

He recalled that Junipero Serra, an 18h-century Franciscan priest, frequently clashed with civil authorities over the treatment of Indians.

"Unfortunately, not all the members of the church lived up to their Christian responsibilities," said the pope.

"We all belong to one human family, and are meant to walk and work together in mutual respect, understanding trust and love," he said, adding:

"I encourage you...to preserve and keep alive your cultures, your languages, the values and customs which have served you well in the past.

JAIL

The commissioners cited the lack of space in the fifth-floor jail and the city of Midland's desire to terminate operations of the city jail as the primary reasons for pursuing the modular jail idea.

Wright said the fifth-floor jail, when complete, will have 20 to 30 less beds than the projected population of prisoners in custody, meaning the county will have to continue to transport prisoners to other counties.

Also, the U.S. Marshall's Service, responsible for housing federal prisoners of the Western District of Texas, has indicated it wants to have a facility in closer proximity to the Federal District Court in Midland, Wright said.

Preliminary plans call for the complex to be constructed of a "boiler plate-type steel" which is covered with as substance that is "extremely efficient from and energy standpoint," said Wright.

"This isn't a little tin building we're putting up here. This is a long-term structure that will be here probably longer than any of us who are here today. And it's attractive," he said.

McCrary said financing of the complex will be determined later in consultation with the county's financial advisors. But he added the county will consider certificiates of participation, lease/purchase agreements, certificate of obligation and/or general obligation bonds as payment options.

The fees to be charged by the county to house city and federal prisoners have not been agreed upon, he added.

City Council members informally expressed an interest in combining the city and county jails after the South Superblock was purchased and passed a resolution last week expressing continued interest in the plan.

The city could realized substantial savings in going in on the project, City Manager Fred Poe has said, estimating that the current $200,000 year price tag for prisoner costs could be cut in half.

Poe predicted a coming push from the Texas Commission on Jail Standards for city jail improvements statewide, a push similar to one that has caught Midland County in a spending vise.

For the past five months, the courthouse's fifth-floor jail has undergone a $1.5 million renovation to correct state jail standard violation and add 19 cells.

Sheriff Gary Painter said the current renovation "only a measure to prevent the commission from closing the jail and nothing more.

"I firmly believe this facility is the way we ought to go," he said.

FISH

Evidence in the case has been withheld and obscured by Schorre, "even though he knows it has relevance to the accusations," Fish said. "Mr. Schorre's conduct in this matter is totally inconsistent with all my pre-existing notions of the forthright character of district attorneys, and I am deeply distressed and disappointed."

Schorre, reached this morning at a criminal justice task force meeting at the state capitol, reacted quickly to news of the statement.

"Mr. Fish is entitled to a fair and impartial hearing by a grand jury," he said. "I will do my utmost to make sure the case is accurately and fairly presented."

Previously, Schorre and county lawmen have refused to confirm that Fish was among those under investigation.

However, "By his (Fish) own statement he is saying it. By his statement he has brought himself in as a suspect," the district attorney said.

Schorre said he was "sorry" to hear the statement, but he said the investigation would continue.

"I am sorry he has decided to try the case in the press rather than follow established legal procedure," he said.

"I did not start the investigation of the case," said Schorre. "It has been handled in a routine manner. It has generated, in my opinion, undue publicity. We haven't approved of it, and we have refrained from commenting on the case, and would like to be able to continue to do so.

"Mr. Fish's personal attack is totally unwarranted, and I think he would be well-advised to let his attorney speak for him, rather than for him to make statements to the press that only cloud the issue," said the district attorney.

Painter said this morning he could not comment on the statement.

"It will not affect our part of it, no," Painter said today, confirming that the investigation into the land deals would continue.

Papal trip blesses San Antonio's image

STATE

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The papal trip to Texas proved to be a personal success for the people who saw him and a publicity success for the city that hosted him.

"Even if he just waves at me a little bit, he is blessing me," said Andrew Gonzalez, a retiree who had to walk only two blocks from his home Monday to watch the pope's motorcade depart to Kelly Air Force Base.

In just one full day here, Pope John Paul II celebrated an outdoor Mass that drew 300,000 people, spoke to Texans in English, Spanish and Polish, drove by the Alamo and became perhaps the first visiting dignitary to leave the state without donning a cowboy hat.

Bishop John Fitzpatrick of Brownsville was among the clergymen who pronounced the visit an inspirational success for Catholics.

"It kind of touches our conscience," he said.

Mayor Henry Cisneros, whose ailing infant son was blessed by the pope, said the visit also provided the blessing of publicity for the city known by many as little more than the home of the Alamo. He pointed out that San Antonio hosted a downtown Grand Prix auto race a week before the papal visit.

"San Antonio has proven itself, in a short span of time, able to turn around and handle what can only be called a world-class event and do so with grace and competence, and I am very proud of our city," Cisneros said Sunday night.

The mayor said John Paul II's brief stay included a look at a cross-section of the community, including the Alamo and a poor section of town.

Fitzpatrick said the pope's message transcended economic classes.

"The message is everybody, individually, is an important person. He was not here just to say hello to politicians and move on. No matter how poorly you're dressed, you're important," the bishop said.

Archbishop Patrick Flores said the visit also had particular meaning for Texas' large Hispanic population.

"I think the pope wanted Hispanics to know they were not being taken for granted," Flores said.

Sunday night, at Our Lady of Guadalupe Plaza, the pope said in Spanish, "I am happy to know that the number of Hispanic priests and religious men and women is growing. But many more are needed."

He also met with Polish Catholics from the Texas city of Panna Maria, addressed a Catholic Charities meeting and visited San Fernando Cathedral, the nation's oldest cathedral sanctuary.

Although the San Antonio crowds were the largest of the pope's visit so far, hotels reported stacks of last-minute cancellations Saturday, the half-million people expected at the Mass did not materialize and souvenir sales were poor.

As many as 150,000 Mexican pilgrims were expected to stream into Texas for the pope's visit, but Border Patrol officials said only a few thousand crossed the border.

Along the papal routes, spectator after spectator used the same four words to describe their glimpse of the pope: "Once in a lifetime."

"It's once in a lifetime for me. It may be more than once for her," Paul Reittinger of Dallas said, holding and patting his 4-month-old granddaughter Pamela as the popemobile rolled by for the final time in Texas.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your interest in technical and scientific data opens new avenues to career success. Family responsibilities are a drain on your resources and energy, but you feel no regrets. Climb that personal mountain until you reach the pinnacle. Financial security counts big in a partnership. Set money aside for investment purposes. Travel will increase the number of romantic signals you receive.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: blues great B.B. King, author John Knowles, Indians slugger Mel Hall, actress Lauren Bacall, actor Peter Falk, Brewers star Robin Yount, "Candid Camera's" Allen Funt, tennis' Rosemary Casals, golf's Jerry Pate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Curb a tendency to live beyond your means. A rebellion on the home front requires immediate attention. Your health improves when you change your eating habits. Sidestep domestic disputes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A last-minute business change will work to your advantage in the long run. Look at a financial transaction from every possible angle before making a commitment. Romance gives you new inspiration.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An authority figure keeps an eye on you. Seek fresh outlets for your creativity. Study and travel are favored. New rewards and recognition are heaped on you. Enjoy being in the limelight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Financial pressures lessen, thanks to a raise or promotion. A change of lifestyle could reduce domestic tensions. Key associates may disagree with your goals. Seek a logical compromise. You are very persuasive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Partner is highly supportive of your financial and career plans. Move ahead with confidence. Take a calculated risk. Joyful news from home highlights your day. Romance is rewarding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A new partnership gets a shot in the arm from a change in personnel. Talk things over with someone you trust. Be careful not to burn any bridges you may want to recross!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look into the causes of a domestic or financial problem. Consult experts. Improved nutrition gives you better health and more energy. Others are relying on your sound judgment. Do not disappoint them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Pay your debts in full or at least arrange a workable repayment schedule. Make up your mind not to lend money today. A friend or acquaintance helps you see things as they really are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Family relationships are under positive influences. Be flexible. Money becomes more abundant and romance more exciting. Career changes will be required, but you need not worry. You adapt easily to new situations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Strive to work harmoniously with those around you — all will profit. Travel arrangements made now may have to be altered. An intriguing development occurs at work. Romance intensifies. Reveal your true feelings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Office matters will run more smoothly if you get better organized. A stock tip could pay off handsomely. Real estate is also a great investment now. Consult experts. A close relationship improves. Be considerate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A mystifying situation continues to puzzle you. Improve your image by being more outgoing and cooperative. Share specialized knowledge with a young person. Avoid jumping to conclusions. Wait until more facts are known.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North

Opening lead: Ten of ♡

Proponents of one method or another are quick to tell you what advantages their system confers. They are not as fast at pointing out the drawbacks. This column tells it like it is—no single bid or method is a panacea for all ills. You must weigh each one, decide on the pluses and minuses and how it suits your style.

Those who favor light opening bids profess how beneficial it is to get in and out of the bidding quickly; how you disrupt the opponents' constructive bidding by stealing the opening bid from them. What they forget to state is that, when you don't buy the contract, you have often drawn a blueprint for declarer of the lie of the cards. This hand comes from the recent North American Summer Championships in Baltimore.

South's jump to three no trump was a practical solution to a difficult bidding problem. After the lead of a heart, it seemed that nine tricks were there for the taking, but declarer received a shock at trick two when he cashed the ace of diamonds and West discarded a club.

The normal way to go for the contract would be to take two spade finesses. However, East's opening bid marked him for at least the king of spades, and possibly the queen as well. In addition, since East surely had at least nine red cards, there was also the possibility that he was short in spades. So at trick three declarer led a spade to the ace, and was gratified to see the king drop.

On the continuation of the jack of spades, West could not afford to win the queen without setting up the suit. But once declarer had a second spade trick, he was able to concede a diamond and score his nine tricks via two spades, two hearts and five diamonds.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started… through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!

Davis says she'd like to make movie with Taylor, Hepburn

LONDON (AP) — Bette Davis says she'd like to star in a movie along with Elizabeth Taylor and Katharine Hepburn.

The script she has in mind is "Steel Magnolias," Robert Harling's hit off-Broadway play, she said Monday at a news conference to promote her memoir "This and That."

She said she wants to continue acting despite a stroke several years ago that left her with partial facial paralysis. "We're all hams, i guess; we love to be working."

Davis

Her most recent movie, "The Whales of August," directed by Lindsay Anderson, premiered at the Cannes Film Festival in May and is awaiting release in the United States and Britain. Her role was the blind sister of 91-year-old Lillian Gish. "I'm a cranky, cranky, cranky sister," she said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch says his thoughts turned to death when he suffered a minor stroke, so he wrote his epitaph and decided who should speak at his funeral.

He said he wants his tombstone to read "He was fiercely proud of his Jewish faith. He fiercely defended the City of New York. He fiercely loved the people of the City of New York."

He said Monday that he had no premonition of death, but that his illness last month made him think about it.

Koch also said in an interview on "Open Mind," to be broadcast on WNET-TV Saturday morning, that wants his funeral to be at Temple Emanu-el on Fifth Avenue and wants Cardinal John O'Connor to be among the speakers.

Despite differences on a number of public issues, Koch said he and the cardinal "have a special relationship."

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Actor Lorne Greene's real and television families were among 350 mourners who attended memorial services at which his daughter remembered him as a man "loved by all who knew him."

"He was a man who took care of his family. He was a man who always had a story or a joke to tell to ease the pain," Rabbi Steve Jacobs told those who gathered Monday at Hillside Memorial Park here.

Greene

Greene, 72, died Friday at St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica, where he had undergone abdominal surgery on Aug. 19 to repair a perforated ulcer.

Monday's 40-minute service was attended by Greene's wife, three children and two granddaughters, said the actor's personal manager, Charlotte Dial.

Family members wrote reflections on their relationships with the actor, which were read at the service, Ms. Dial said.

"Lorne Greene was loved by all who knew him. He was so giving and never asked for anything in return, except for love," wrote the actor's daughter, Gillian Greene.

Actors Michael Landon and Pernell Roberts, who played Greene's sons on "Bonanza," which was seen by an estimated 400 million people in 80 countries between 1959 and 1973, also attended. Co-star Dan Blocker, who died in 1972, was represented by his widow and son, Ms. Dial said.

Greene, a Canadian native, was a little-known actor and former newscaster when he was cast for the part of the widowed father, Ben Cartwright, who was left to raise three strapping sons on the Ponderosa ranch during the old West.

Hollywood friends at the service included actors Leslie Nielsen, Michael Dante, Gene Barry and Peter Mark Richmond, as well as entertainer Monte Hall.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jazz fans and celebrities have donated more than $13,000 to help pay rent and tax debts of ailing and impoverished jazz great Woody Herman.

"We've had contributions from celebrities as high as $1,000, but they prefer to remain anonymous," radio station KKGO spokeswoman Linda Davis said Monday.

A Los Angeles concert organized by KKGO to raise money for Herman on Oct. 23 will be headlined by Tony Bennett. Ms. Davis said other names will be announced by the all-jazz FM radio station.

The 74-year-old Herman, who has suffered several heart attacks in recent years, was nearly evicted last week from the home he owned for almost 40 years. He lost it in an Internal Revenue Service auction to recoup $1.6 million in back taxes and has been renting it from the new owner, but rent payments fell behind.

BOSTON (AP) — Former House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. now has two buildings in Boston named after him.

The 74-year-old O'Neill told about 300 well-wishers Monday that his family and the Kennedys talked him into agreeing to have the new federal building named for after him. "I don't think I ever voted in the Congress for a building named after a man who had just left the Congress and was still alive," O'Neill said.

O'Neill

The $65 million building houses federal agencies formerly located at 19 sites. Two years ago the legislature named a transportation building after him.

O'Neill summed up his political philosophy by saying "Never think the government is the enemy of the people. The government is the friend of the people."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Qualen, a character actor best known for his portrayal of the father in three movies about the Dionne quintuplets, died Saturday of heart failure. He was 87.

Qualen played the father of quintuplets in three 20th Century-Fox features titled "The Country Doctor," "Reunion," and "Five of a Kind." He played "Muley" in "The Grapes of Wrath," the sea-weary sailor Axel Swanson in "The Long Voyage Home," and a doctor in "The Fugitive."

Qualen also appeared on the television series "Make Room for Daddy" and "The Real McCoys."

In a career that spanned 42 years, he performed in more than 120 films, beginning with "Street Scene" in 1931 and ending with "Frasier, the Senuous Lion" in 1973.

Genetic testing poses a dilemma

Would you want to be told, at age 20, that you will suffer from Alzheimer's disease when you reach your 60s? At the birth of a child, would you want to be handed a computer printout listing the physical and mental problems likely to result from your child's genetic makeup?

Medical science already can isolate certain genes and predict the probability of a person suffering from a number of ailments, including Alzheimer's and Huntington's diseases, cystic fibrosis, manic depression and muscular dystrophy. Now, scientists in Great Britain have announced the discovery of a genetic defect that contributes to the development of colon cancer.

These discoveries offer both good news and frightening prospects. The good news is that physicians and scientists can identify persons who carry genetic defects. What's frightening is that there are no cures for most of these diseases.

Thus, the tests raise serious ethical questions.

Should persons with known genetic defects be discouraged from having families? Should drug intervention or psychotherapy be used to reduce the chances of persons contracting ailments identified by a genetic test? Should a person tell a prospective spouse about a genetic defect?

These are personal decisions that individuals or families only can make. But societal issues arise, as well. Who is to determine whether an individual will be tested? Can the tests be mandated? Most important, who will have access to the results?

Ethicists have grappled with these dilemmas for 20 years — since doctors first learned to determine a child's gender and to detect Down's syndrome before birth.

The search will continue for new tests that could draw a complete genetic blueprint of an individual. Although such tests could be extremely useful in identifying potential victims of heart disease or alcoholism, there are serious drawbacks. Parents of a child with a high probability of contracting a fatal disease could live a terrible life worrying about their offspring. On the other hand, it's almost certain that physicians some day will be able to replace faulty genes and improve and extend the quality of life. But that day is not here.

Long before the reality of genetic testing, Ralph Waldo Emerson, an American essayist, critic and poet, observed: "God offers to every mind its choice between truth and repose. Take which you please; you can never have both."

Modern medical science opens the door of truth. As Emerson would have predicted, it won't be easy deciding whether to walk through it.

Vision of purity

An angel shining with intense hues of blue. Lovers floating above a hillside village. Friendly birds and beasts glowing green or orange. What could be dangerous or subversive about such images, the work of Marc Chagall?

How ironic that Chagall, a Russian native who took a delight in the fantastic and imbued his work with messages of celebration, love and joy, should have been treated as an outcast by the government of his native land.

But now, two years after his death, his paintings, beloved throughout the art world are finally being shown to the Russian public.

Chagall was born a Russian Jew in a village near Vitebsk a century ago. From the Hasidic Jewish sect, he imbibed a joy of life — an attitude he expressed in unconventional paintings of Edenlike human and animal forms, often floating free of earth as if to hasten their passage to heaven. A gentle hopeful mood runs through the body of Chagall's creations — a religious affirmation of life and goodness. It apparently was too much for the Bolsheviks who drove him away in 1922.

Chagall lived in France and the United States. His fame grew with each decade, but Joseph Stalin would not allow the Jewish painter's strange-looking but wonderful angels, animals, flowers and nudes to be exhibited in the Soviet Union. Today, Soviet poet Andrei Voznesensky — who helped organize the Moscow exhibition of Chagall's works — describes Chagall as "one of the greatest artists of the 20th century."

Chagall once said in an interview: "Despite the crimes and massacres perpetrated by mankind all over the world, you still continue to believe in a fundamental seed of purity, a root of essential beauty, a stem of original goodness, synonymous with innocent, playful mischievousness and poetry — in other words, with love."

The exhibition in Moscow suggests that Chagall's fundamental seed of purity was more enduring than the dictatorial power that tried to crush it years ago.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 15, the 258th day of 1987. There are 107 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

One hundred years ago, on Sept. 15, 1887, the city of Philadelphia launched a three-day celebration of the one-hundredth anniversary of the Constitution of the United States.

On this date:

In 1776, British forces occupied New York City during the American Revolution.

In 1789, the Department of Foreign Affairs was renamed the Department of State.

In 1821, independence was proclaimed for Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and El Salvador.

In 1857, William Howard Taft, who would serve as President of the United States and as chief justice, was born in Cincinnati.

In 1917, Russia was proclaimed a republic by Alexander Kerensky, the head of the provisional government that came to power following the abdication of Czar Nicholas II.

In 1935, the Nuremberg Laws deprived German Jews of their citizenship and made the swastika the official symbol of Nazi Germany.

In 1940, during the Battle of Britain in World War II, the tide turned as Royal Air Force planes inflicted heavy losses on the Luftwaffe.

In 1950, during the Korean conflict, United Nations forces landed at Inchon in the south and began their drive toward Seoul.

In 1959, Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev arrived in the United States to begin a 13-day visit.

In 1963, four children were killed when a bomb went off in a black Baptist church in Birmingham, Ala.

Ten years ago: Embattled budget director Bert Lance defended himself before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, denying charges of financial impropriety while a Georgia banker.

Five years ago: Israeli forces began pouring into west Beirut following the assassination of Lebanese president-elect Bashir Gemayel. Iran's former foreign minister, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, was executed after he was convicted of plotting against the government. The first issue of "USA Today" was published by Gannett.

One year ago: Philippines President Corazon Aquino arrived in the U.S. for a nine-day visit aimed at winning political and economic support.

Today's Birthdays: Country music star Roy Acuff is 84. Actor-director Jackie Cooper is 65. Comedian Norm Crosby is 60. Former baseball player Gaylord Perry is 49. Actor-sportscaster Merlin Olsen is 47. Actor Tommy Lee Jones is 41.

JACK ANDERSON

Builder still waiting for U.S. to pay

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Doing business with the U.S. government can be a frustrating and ruinously expensive proposition. Just ask Pat Purvis, a 69-year-old traveling salesman who used to be a building contractor — before he got tangled up in the federal bureaucracy's red tape.

Purvis's bitter experience is well known in Seattle, but it's a Kafkaesque story that should interest anyone who has ever encountered officiousness and inertia at any level of government. Purvis has been trying to collect money he should have been paid by the feds 25 years ago.

His claim to fame — and the cause of his financial downfall — is the landmark known as the Space Needle, which was the U.S. Science Pavilion at the 1962 World's Fair in Seattle. Purvis built it.

The General Services Administration paid Purvis the $3 million he originally bid on the project, but welshed on the $600,000 he shelled out in overtime pay so the Space Needle would be completed by the fair's opening day, May 1, 1962.

Since the GSA's blueprints were drawn in 1948, agency officials had made many changes intended to update the building. In fact, during the year of construction, the GSA caused more than 60 delays for changes in the plans.

Normally, when a government contract is delayed, the completion date is simply put off. But extension of the deadline would have meant no science building at the fair on opening day, so the government urged Purvis to proceed full speed ahead.

Purvis warned the GSA that it would cost more to meet the deadline, but he was told that adjustments would be made after the building was completed. So he went ahead, paying $600,000 in overtime wages.

Then, to Purvis's dismay, the GSA agreed to pay only for equipment and material necessitated by its construction changes — not for the extra labor costs. Purvis appealed to the GSA's Board of Contract Appeals, but it decided — in 1969 — that the government had no legal obligation to pay Purvis for the overtime costs.

The loss of the $600,000 was devastating. Lacking this working capital, Purvis had to borrow to finance other construction jobs and pay his subcontractors. Interest payments were killing him.

His bonding company lent him $1.8 million, with his property as collateral. But with an outstanding loan, Purvis could no longer get a construction bond — and without a bond, he could not get new contracts. When the loan came due, he signed his property over to the bonding company, which sold it at auction.

Purvis had appealed the GSA's decision to the U.S. Court of Claims, and in 1972 he won — sort of. The court sent the case back to the GSA to determine the amount it owed Purvis. The GSA came up with a figure of $62,500. Purvis appealed again, and the Court of Claims set the amount at $390,248.

In 1983, Congress passed legislation authorizing the payment, but the bonding company took it all for lawyers' fees.

At the time of Purvis's original contract, the law didn't allow payment of interest on disputed contract awards. But the law was changed in 1968, and the Court of Claims ruled that Purvis was entitled to interest.

Purvis asked for compound interest and calculated that, with inflation between 1962 and 1983, he was owed $2.5 million. The government offered him $700,000.

Purvis, now a clothing salesman living in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, told our reporter Gary Clouser he'd be happy to settle for the $700,000. He said he never lost faith that he'd eventually be paid.

But there's still a hitch. Congress must authorize the payment to Purvis with a private relief bill. Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, and Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, have introduced legislation, but only about one in 10 private relief bills makes it through Congress.

SILVER CLOUD, DARK LINING? — There's no doubt what the five-year-old bull market has done for institutional investors, individual plungers and stock brokers. They've made billions. But economists are beginning to wonder whether the historic rally has done much for the nation's economy as a whole.

In fact, most experts are mystified by the continuation of the bull market, because it seems so unrelated to the reality of economic performance, which has been sluggish at best. Sources point out that the $2 trillion in increased stock values since 1982 is only paper profit, and much of it would evaporate if everyone decided to cash in.

EVANS & NOVAK

Tip's account of 'deal' termed pure fiction

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Many principals of the juicy anecdotes filling Thomas P. O'Neill's memoir of a long and colorful life in politics are dead, but we are not and herewith testify that what he wrote about us is a whopper.

The account in "Man of the House" (Random House) of how as newly-elected House majority leader he rejected a "deal" we offered him and then "kicked" us out of his office has been noted in book reviews and columns. The account is totally untrue, clouding credibility of other engrossing Washington vignettes by a master storyteller.

Tip O'Neill's book should warn historians dealing with the contemporary politician's memoir, dictated into a tape recorder and compiled by a ghostwriter. While he provides little insight into his historical role of politicizing both the speakership and American foreign policy, O'Neill is abundant with revelations that should be subjected to arduous verification.

One reviewer who complains the book sounds like his ghostwriter has it all wrong. In fact, the cadence is pure Tip, the stories familiar to friends who heard them polished over the years.

That is true of his account that shortly after becoming majority leader in 1973, "Evans and Novak came to my office" and "had the gall to offer me a deal: if I kept them informed as to what was happening in Congress and the White House, they would see to it that I would receive great press notices, which would help smooth the way for me to be the next Speaker. I was ashamed to be in their company, and I kicked them right out of my office."

In a combined 70 years of reporting in Washington, neither of us has offered anybody such a deal or been kicked out of anybody's office. We did visit O'Neill when he became leader (as we similarly visted Jim Wright years later). When we expressed hope we could see him occasionally, O'Neill smiled his assent.

Nor did he shut us out. On March 18, 1977, the newly-elected speaker addressed our twice-a-year political forum. In February 1978 we interviewed him over television from the speaker's office.

In that long interview, he assailed then Rep. Bruce Caputo of New York. "From what I've been told," said the speaker, "he has two employees on his payroll who check the sex life of his colleagues, who check to see if they are out cheating on their wives, who check if they go on corporate planes." Caputo denied everything and challenged O'Neill to identify the staff members. Five days later, the speaker took the floor of the House to apologize.

The Caputo incident may explain why O'Neill turned down our future requests for television interviews. We now know he told his staffers the reason for rejecting us was the fictitious 1973 office incident. "I think that if you gave the speaker sodium pentothal, he would tell the same story," a longtime O'Neill associate told us.

The veracity of other O'Neill yarns is dubious. Consider his revelation that a young Robert F. Kennedy wanted to run against him for the House but was stopped by his father, Joseph P. Kennedy. According to O'Neill's account, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd heard Bobby was going to oppose him in Connecticut, confronted Kennedy and was told, "No, but I am looking for a seat, and I may run up in Tip O'Neill's district." O'Neill said he went to Sen. John F. Kennedy, who called his father.

Everybody connected with that anecdote is dead, save for O'Neill. But Kennedy's friends are not, and they label the story preposterous. O'Neill's account places the event after Dodd was elected to the Senate in 1958 (an election in which Kennedy would have been constitutionally too young) and before the 1960 presidential election.

An intimate of Kennedy in that period, Nashville Tennessean publisher John Seigenthaler, says he never heard him discuss a race against O'Neill or Dodd. "I never heard him express any interest in Congress or the Senate from Connecticut or Massachusetts," Seigenthaler told us. "There is no doubt in my mind that he would have mentioned it to me at some time in our association."

In the vast literature about Lyndon Johnson's 1960 selection for vice president, O'Neill's name never appears. But in his memoir, he describes himself — still an obscure congressman — as the vital go-between. In passing, O'Neill writes that Kenneth O'Donnell told him he falsified testimony to the Warren Commission at the Kennedy family's request.

While it is hard to believe these stories, it is difficult to refute them because eyewitnesses are dead. But we can say firsthand that when it comes to us, Tip's story is pure fiction.

CHARLEY REESE

Democrats' idea of 'moderate' has changed

Charley Reese

One of the earliest clouds of goofy gas which political campaigns generate was the talk about Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., as a possible presidential candidate.

The Democratic Party's nominating process is so dominated by the leftwing that Sam Nunn couldn't get the presidential nomination and he knew it. Despite the effort to pin the label moderate on some of the current Democratic candidates, they are all from the liberal wing of the party.

And the definition of liberal today is such that Harry Truman, Hubert Humphrey and John F. Kennedy would be excluded. In today's political context, they would be called conservative Democrats and they couldn't get the nomination either.

How far the Democratic Party had moved to the left first struck me at the convention in 1980. I looked at those delegates and I wondered, where are the American people? Certainly not here. Those people looked about as typical American as Mick Jagger. The traditional Democrats were not there. They had been replaced by the ideological special-interest groups.

Here was a party in obvious trouble. Jimmy Carter's popularity was in a neck-and-neck race with Richard Nixon's for rock bottom. What alternative did it offer? Sen. Ted Kennedy, the one man more disreputable than Carter. Even so, did they circle the wagons and put their best effort forward? No. Like the ideologues they were, they preferred rancor to closed ranks. They passed a resolution that no Democratic candidate anywhere in these United States could be supported unless he signed a pledge to support the Equal Rights Amendment.

And they learned nothing from their disastrous defeat in 1980. The 1984 debacle was a repeat. Sensible Democrats like Sens. John Glenn and Fritz Hollings and former Gov. Reubin Askew were mowed down by the leftwingers like so much dead grass. They were virtually invisible at the convention. Once more, the leftwing of the Democrats put forward a nominee so far out of the American mainstream that sensible Democrats were forced to rescue Ronald Reagan from retirement.

It appears that the Democratic Party, despite the efforts of men like Chuck Robb, is following the path of the Labor Party in England which allowed its left wing to drive it out of the mainstream. The closer a Democrat is to the mainstream, the farther down in the presidential polls he falls.

That's because the people in Iowa and New Hampshire who will vote will be from the left wing of the party. The rest will be waiting to vote Republican in November, provided the Republicans don't do something awfully stupid which they are capable of doing.

Even though I happen to be registered as a Republican, I don't like seeing the Democratic Party self-destruct. Like most Americans, I'm not partisan. I hate going into the voting booth and having to decide which of two nominees is less likely to do great damage to the Republic. I long for the luxury of choosing the better of two instead of the least worse of two.

Both parties actually ought to back away from the primary system of nomination. The combination of big money and big media favors special interest candidates and demagoguery. The special interests get the pledges in exchange for money and campaign soldiers and the people get the demagoguery.

It would be better to have state conventions choose nominees and allow elected officials and elected party officials to dominate the conventions. I think, in today's world, this would produce a better caliber candidate.

At the same time, we should push both Republicans and Democrats to repeal the laws they have erected which effectively disbar other political parties from getting on the ballot. Democrats and Republicans have a shared monopoly on the ballot and they could both use some genuine competition.

Media and academia don't have much in common with the American people anymore. It'll be really bad when not even the political parties give a hoot what ordinary Americans believe and want.

Bumpy ride doesn't mar smooth visit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The ride in the popemobile was a little bumpy, but Archbishop Patrick Flores says the rest of the pontiff's visit went smoothly.

"We can praise the Lord with relief that everything went well," Flores said after Pope John Paul II departed Monday morning for Phoenix.

"Definitely, my expectations were surpassed in many, many wonderful ways," Flores said. "I have always said I've been impressed with the times I've seen the pope, but I was equally impressed with the people that turned out to see the pope. It was the greatest experience of my life, the greatest experience for San Antonio and Texas."

Flores, the pope's host during the 22½-hour visit, rode in the popemobile with the pontiff along parade routes, pointing out various historical sites.

"It's hard to describe," he said of riding in the vehicle. "You almost have to experience it. It's a little bit bumpy."

Like many people who met the pontiff, Flores said he was impressed by John Paul's vigor.

"I kept thinking when I become 67, or if I do, I wondered if I could have one-fourth the energy he has," Flores said.

Flores, the first bishop of Mexican descent in the United States, said the pope told him he wants Hispanics to know they are not taken for granted.

"I think the pope was challenging Hispanics to be aware of their giftedness and to share it," he said.

INS officials ask for clarification of statements

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Immigration officials say they plan to ask the Vatican to clarify Pope John Paul II's statements in praise of those who aid refugees "arriving from the south."

"Our concern would be if it would generate the impression of an endorsement (of illegal activity) on a national basis," said Duke Austin, a spokesman for the U.S. Immigraton and Naturalization Service in Washington.

Austin said Monday that the INS would ask for a clarification.

"I don't see anything in his statement that would encourage anyone to violate the federal statutes of the United States," Austin said.

The pope Sunday lauded people who help the refugees, but he did not use the word "sanctuary," which is a movement of people who help illegal aliens from Latin America.

Silvestre Reyes, chief agent with the Border Patrol's McAllen sector covering the southernmost part of Texas along the Mexican border, said he did not see the pope's comments as advocating illegal activity.

"I don't think he would advocate any violation of the law," Reyes said. "But we are getting a complete transcript of what the pope said yesterday."

Some Texas Catholics active in aiding refugees Sunday that they considered the pope's comments encouraging.

John Paul II's visit polishes image of city

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — People outside Texas who might think San Antonio is little more than a cowtown with a famous landmark got a new impression of the nation's 10th-largest city from Pope John Paul II's visit, officials say.

"Some people have a very confused idea of what San Antonio is," said Shirl Thomas, spokeswoman for Mayor Henry Cisneros. "The confusion rests a lot on western movies and the idea there might still be cattle on the streets."

The popemobile did pass by the Alamo, the famed mission that played such a key role in the 1836 Texas revolution.

But the pontiff also addressed 300,000 worshipers at an outdoor Mass, drove through one of the poorest sections of the city on his way to Our Lady of Guadalupe Plaza and visited the Municipal Auditorium and San Fernando Cathedral, the oldest cathedral sanctuary in the country.

And where the pope went, so did the attention of a news reporting corps that totaled between 2,500 and 2,700 from around the globe, said Richard Miner, who coordinated press arrangements.

The visit was televised live in San Antonio and other Texas cities, coverage was carried on the major TV networks, and newspapers worldwide carried stories Monday from San Antonio.

"Although the pope is a head of state, his following is worldwide, it goes beyond any one country's boundaries. I don't think we've ever seen that many press people in one place at one time," said Kathy Wine, spokeswoman for the San Antonio Visitors and Convention Bureau.

In addition to being voluminous, Ms. Wine said the news coverage of the city was very positive, despite the Thursday night collapse in high winds of two 110-foot towers flanking the altar at the papal Mass site.

The altar was checked for soundness and colorfully redecorated, and the controversy over the towers had all but disappeared by the time the pope arrived.

Pope's praise lifts spirits of Hispanics

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The pope's visit left Hispanic Catholics in Texas encouraged by his praise for the rapidly increasing group's role in the church.

"I am happy to know that the number of Hispanic priests and religious men and women is growing," Pope John Paul II said in an address he gave in Spanish Sunday night at Our Lady of Guadalupe Plaza.

He also reminded them, "The Hispanic heritage of San Antonio and the Southwest is very important for the church. Spanish was the language of the first evangelizers of this continent, precisely in this region."

The increasing proportion of Hispanics in the United States and the church is seen as a major reason the pope stopped in San Antonio, which is 58 percent Hispanic. The ethnic group makes up about 40 percent of the world's Catholics.

"I think that the pope wanted Hispanics to know that they're not being taken for granted, that the church is aware of their presence and aware of their giftedness, as well as of their needs," said San Antonio Archbishop Patrick Flores.

Many cheered earlier Sunday when the pope told an audience of future priests and nuns at San Fernando Cathedral, most of whom had chanted "Viva papa!," that he felt like he was in Mexico.

The Rev. Virgil Elizondo, the rector of San Fernando Cathedral, said before the visit that Rome's awareness of the growth of Hispanics in the United States was one of the main reasons the pontiff came to San Antonio.

"It says there is a large Hispanic population here and it is a stable presence," Elizondo said Monday.

"I think that the greatest thing that he left was that he really sparked an interest in the whole Hispanic agenda," he said.

City official says costs of papal visit 'worth it'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The final bill is still out on the cost of Pope John Paul II's visit, but the bottom line already has pleased some officials.

The city's cost will be at least $390,000 for 800 police officers to be on duty for crowd and traffic control at the Mass site and parade routes.

Jodie Kniejski, who coordinated Bexar County's effort for the papal visit, said her agency's bill could run up to $100,000 to pay for sheriff's deputies, support personnel and traffic control officers for Sunday's papal visit.

"After what I saw yesterday, I am convinced it was worth it," County Judge Tom Vickers said Monday.

He said the county would have no problem finding $100,000 in its $150 million total budget.

"What you justify it on is the public's safety," Vickers said. "You're going to have him in town and you're going to have hundreds of thousands of people and you're going to have to take care of them."

Karen Kliewer, the city's intergovernmental relations director, said, "I think all of our people were very well prepared. My people at the command post were bored and that's what I wanted."

Ms. Kliewer said the archdiocese would reimburse the city for some expenditures, including medical costs at the Mass site where 500 people were treated for heat-related ailments. She said the city's image from the event was worth the expense.

"I've heard nothing but positive comments for the city and that it went so smoothly. There were just no surprises," she said.

Kathy Wine, spokeswoman for the Visitors and Convention Bureau, had predicted the economic impact to the city would be about $36 million, but she was not immediately available for comment Monday.

Chance of area rain diminishes

From Staff and Wire Reports

The chance of rain, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, has diminished to 20 percent for tonight. The skies will be partly cloudy with the low near 60. Winds will blow out of the southwest at five to 10 mph.

Wednesday's forecast calls for fair skies with the high near the 90 degree mark. The winds will remain out of the southwest at 10-20 mph.

The high of 81 for Monday was 18 degrees below the record high of 99, which was set for that date in 1965. Today's low of 63 was 13 degrees above the record low of 50 degrees which was set for this date in 1961.

STATE

A fast moving storm system dumped heavy rains in parts of North Texas today and forecasters said the thunderstorms were expected to spread across the state.

Some local flooding was reported near the Red River, authorities said. As much as six inches of rain fell at Ladonia, Texas. Winds of up to 60 mph downed trees and power lines near Commerce, Texas, said the National Weather Service.

About 4½ inches of rain fell in two hours at Fairlie, authorities said.

Strong thunderstorms also developed over the upper Rio Grande plains. Skies were fair in the western half of the Panhandle and a small part of Southeast Texas.

Thunderstorms stretched from the Red River near Wichita Falls to San Angelo and into the upper Rio Grande plains and South Central Texas. The weather service said a flash flood watch was canceled for North Central Texas because the storms were moving rapidly to the northeast.

NATION

Thunderstorms ranged from Texas into the Midwest today after being blamed for a death and several injuries in the Kansas City, Mo., area.

Thunderstorms rumbled through the Red River area separating Oklahoma from Texas, although heavy rain diminished. A drenching rainfall had set off flash flood watches overnight in sections of northern Texas.

Thunderstorms also were scattered across southwest Texas, northeast Missouri, west central Illinois and Nebraska.

Showers dotted the Northwest and dense fog was widespread early today over eastern South Dakota.

Skies were clear to partly cloudy over most of the northern Plains, northern Rockies, Southwest and East.

County raises tax rate

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The four-month county budgeting process ended Monday with commissioners voting to increase property taxes from 19.96 cents to 21.07 cents per $100 valuation.

By increasing the tax rate to match the effective rate, commissioners say the county will generate the same amount of revenue next year as this year.

Commissioner Win Brown said some taxpayers should receive an actual reduction in tax dollars paid because property values have declined.

According to commissioners, Midland County's tax base has been reduced by 7 percent from $4.54 billion to $4.2 billion as the result of the faltering local economy, brought on by a two-year slump in oil prices and an accompanying decline in property values.

Roland Wilkinson, chief appraiser for the Midland Central Appraisal District, has said homeowners will bear the brunt of any tax increase because most of the devaluations have gone to commercial property.

To illustrate, under this year's county tax rate of 19.96 per $100 valuation, the tax bill for property valued at $100,000 was $199.96. Next year the tax rate will be 21.07 cents per $100, but if the same property is worth only $93,000, that property owners tax bill would be about $195.

County Auditor Floyd Jarnigan said if the county had held the line on taxes, the 1988 budget of $13.4 million would have yielded a shortfall of $647,000. That would have placed next year's budget at about $12.4 million — below the 1985 of $13.1 million.

Jarnigan said commissioners during budget study sessions opted against a pay raise for county employees, except for scheduled time and service raises.

Salaries account for about 50 percent of the county's annual budget.

Along with no salary increases, the commissioners and county departments cut back on their budgets by paring down travel, overtime pay and buying new equipment.

Budgetary increases this year focused on the rise in the county's criminal justice load and recommended suggestion by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield collects the county's ad valorem tax revenue, which accounts for about 70 percent of the county's operating revenue. The remainder is collected from fines and fees.

A drop in revenue without the offsetting effect of higher taxes could have resulted in a decline in county services — from library services and roadwork to law enforcement and record keeping for the courts, said commissioners.

MCH faces $13 million deficit

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — In spite of rate and other revenues increases that are expected to generated slightly more than $7.5 million for the 1988 fiscal year, Medical Center Hospital is looking at a year-end deficit of close to $13 million because of bad debts and indigent care costs, the hospital budget reveals.

Coupled with a "projected" 1987 revenue loss of nearly $12.9 million, that means MCH administrators expect losses from bad debts and indigent care will cost the county-owned hospital slightly more than $26 million through the end of Fiscal Year 1988.

Because of the accounting method used by Medical Center — and most other hospitals throughout the country — the actual estimated deficit presented to Ector County Commissioners Court members Monday showed to be $982,344.

After listening to a budget presentation that lasted close to two hours Monday afternoon, Ector commissioners refused to approved the MCH 1988 budget on a 3-to-2 vote, with Commissioners Bryan Henderson and Bill Tolbert voting to accept the budget as presented by hospital administrators.

County Judge Jan Fisher, saying she believes Commissioners Court members, hospital trustees and administrators need to have "a workshop" to discuss various segments of the budget prior to consideration again, set a 9 a.m. Friday open meeting to reconsider the budget.

MCH Administrator Sam Glenney, who has served in various positions at the hospital during his 17 years in Odessa, said this is the first time in his memory Commissioners Court members have failed to approve an MCH budget that had gained approval of the hospital's board of trustees.

Gross revenues for fiscal 1987, which ends Sept. 30, are expected to be slightly more than $68.4 million, while total 1988 revenues are estimated at nearly $76 million.

Ector County contributions of $2 million, for 1987 and 1988, reduce indigent care losses from $2.3 million to $300,000. However, this leaves a total loss from bad debts and indigent care for the two year period at slightly more than $24 million.

Russ Kyler, assistant administrator for finance, blamed "failure of Medicare and Medicaid payments to keep pace with the rising cost of delivering health care services" for MCH's "large contractual adjustments." Under the contractual adjustment heading in the MCH budget overview section is the subheading "uncollectibles," which includes bad debts and indigent care losses.

Kyler noted in his presentation to commissioners Monday that "patient days," the figure generally used to compile gross revenue projections, are expected to decrease about 2.5 percent in the 1988 fiscal year. Patient days for this year are "projected" to be 79,500, with only 77,500 in the coming fiscal year.

The estimated patient days for 1987 is lower than the total patient days figure shown for 1978, the year a nearly $20 million revenue bond renovation project was completed at the county-owned hospital.

In addition to seeking a 1988 budget increase of slightly more than $7.5 million, MCH is in the process of completing a $9.6 million revenue bond program that will update the hospital's obstetrical and neonatal intensive care unit.

LULAC president optimistic about school lawsuit

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The president of one organization suing the Midland Independent School District for better minority representation through single-member districts is optimistic today after a U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals hearing in New Orleans Monday.

"I think we've got a good case going and I think they'll rule in our favor," said Joe Jimenez, president of the Midland League of United Latin American Citizens.

In 1985, LULAC and the Black Advisory Council filed a voting rights lawsuit against the school district, suing for seven single-member school board positions.

Currently the MISD school board consists of seven at-large positions. MISD has petitioned for four single-member positions and three at-large seats.

MISD appealed in New Orleans Monday two rulings in favor of LULAC and the BAC's 7-0 system by Midland's U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton.

Two of the 15 appellate judges have also ruled once in favor of the minority-interest groups.

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi said today it was hard to judge Monday how the 15-member U.S. Appeals Court panel will rule in 60 to 90 days.

"You really couldn't tell. They didn't give a public vote or anything," Baressi said.

About five judges on the panel made comments on the case which was heard for an hour before the Appeals court, Baressi said.

One judge commented that Bunton should have left the decision up to the school board to go with a 5-2 up to 7-0 system required by state law, Baressi said.

Jimenez said the Appeals Court "really questioned" MISD about their 4-3 plan, which he said does not comply with a state law that holds at least 70 percent of school board members must be elected by single-member districts.

MISD Communications Coordinator Becky Ferguson said if MISD loses its appeal, the school board will then decide whether to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

However, she added, when the board voted to appeal in April they basically committed themselves to continuing the appellate process to the Supreme Court.

Police chief announces eight personnel moves

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland Police Chief Richard Czech today announced eight personnel moves, part of a new personnel policy he said will reverse a decades-old tradition in the department.

Det. Lt. Ron Aaron, 43, who heads the crimes against persons unit, has been promoted to deputy chief in charge of support services, Czech said. Aaron replaces Maj. Sid Corley, who left the department a month ago.

Det Sgt. Jerry Morris, 43, currently heads investigations of residential burglaries, has been promoted to staff lieutenant of the patrol division. Patrol Sgt. Damon Shupp, 40, has been promoted to patrol lieutenant.

Five other transfers were announced today by the chief, and all become effective Oct. 1, he said.

"I'm trying to correct the philosophy of permanency that has existed here," Czech said, referring to his predecessors' resistance to change. "I have the philosophy of moving people around. Management experience is important, and that's what I'm shooting for."

Czech said, before he took over, as a general rule officers were not promoted or transferred to other divisions within the department.

"Apparently, this is what I've been told, you became a detective, you moved up the ladder and stayed there," he said. "And it was the same in other divisions.

"Many modern police departments move their promotions around," he said. "And that will be a continuing policy here, the staff rotation."

Lt. Hank Norton, currently in charge of computer services, will be assigned to the detective division, and will oversee narcotics, intelligence, and identification. He will be replaced by Lt. David Wilks, who formerly was in charge of jail and records.

Patrol Lt. Lannie Lee has been moved into the detective division. He will head the crimes against property unit, Czech said. Lt. Jerry Compton, who heads crimes against property, will head the crimes against person unit, replacing Aaron.

Patrol Lt. Tommy Wilkins, the current staff lieutenant, will be transferred to the traffic division and will head that unit. Wilkins replaces Lt. Gayle Reeves, who is retiring.

Local Teen Court to celebrate first year

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland Teen Court will celebrate in two weeks not only its first year of service, but a sparkling record as well, its coordinator said Monday.

"It's been an unbelievable year," said Ann Scott, Teen Court's coordinator.

What started last August as a little-known vehicle for teens to erase a possible police record for the commission of minor crimes blossomed this past year, and now "the parents call us and ask for help," Mrs. Scott said.

A teen-ager aged 10-16 may be referred to Teen Court for any number of first offenses, which include a traffic ticket, possessing or consuming alcohol or committing a Class C misdemeanor, such as theft under $20, Mrs. Scott said.

Sentences for teens include serving on a later Teen Court jury and doing volunteer work at a number of charitable organizations in Midland.

"We have many wonderful success stories," the coordinator said. One which came to mind was the case of the 13-year-old girl who was caught shoplifting cosmetics one day after school.

The youngster was referred to Teen Court and was "sentenced" to serve later on the Teen Court's jury and to volunteer after school at Casa de Amigos.

The 13-year-old girl tutored others her age at Casa and when she finished her sentence she continued to volunteer her duties.

At Casa's most recent Spring Banquet, the young girl was honored as the "Outstanding Volunteer."

In addition, she serves as a bailiff for Teen Court's bimonthly meetings, Mrs. Scott said.

"That little girl would have been a thief" perhaps, Mrs. Scott said, had she not been given the opportunity via Teen Court to "know she is a valuable human being."

"Sometimes these kids need to know a 'neat' adult," the coordinator continued.

Statistics from the past year show that of the 300 teens who came through Teen Court last year, less than 1 percent have committed a crime again.

The three largest categories of offenses were runaways, theft under $20 and chemical — which include alcohol or substance abuse or possession, Mrs. Scott said.

If the teens do commit a crime again, Mrs. Scott surmised that it most likely is because "they have no support at home."

Teen Court meetings are comprised of teen lawyers, bailiffs, clerks and juries. A district or county judge — Pat Baskin, Bill Ahders, Vann Culp, Barbara Culver, Willie DuBose and James Fitz-Gerald — presides over the proceedings, Mrs. Scott said.

She also gave a lot of credit to the Midland Young Lawyers Association — an organization which helps the teens prepare cases and presides over Teen Courts when a large case load warrants that two courts run simultaneously, Mrs. Scott said.

Teen Court will celebrate its first anniversary Sept. 28, Mrs. Scott said.

"Teen Court is harder because the teens are taking responsibility for their own actions. It's not a situation of daddy taking out the checkbook and paying a fine," she said.

Texas coaches on opposite sides of parimutuel fence

AUSTIN (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry is renewing a classic rivalry, not for football glory but to determine whether Texans will be allowed to gamble legally on horse and dog racing.

Landry and anti-gambling forces are beginning a campaign today to defeat a proposed constitutional amendment that would legalize parimutuel wagering. Fighting him is former Houston Oilers and New Orleans Saints Coach Bum Phillips, who signed on with supporters of the gambling measure.

"We've got our head NFL coach and they've got theirs," Dick Stanford, political director for Texans Who Care, the anti-gambling forces, said. "We've tried hard not to say ours has a better winning record than yours."

Former Cowboys Quarterback Roger Staubach and Baylor University football Coach Grant Teaff are joining Landry and the anti-gambling forces.

Meanwhile, singers Willie Nelson, Jimmy Dean and George Strait agreed to appear at a special benefit in Dallas on Oct. 20 on behalf of the pro-gambling measure supported by Phillips.

"And not one church is supporting us," Ricky Knox, a spokesman for Texans for Economic Development, the gambling backers, quipped.

Churches for years have led the fight to keep the measure off the ballot. They say legalized gambling would promote corruption and crime.

Anti-gambling forces say they are supported by animal-rights groups, inspirational speaker Zig Ziglar, former Baylor University President Abner McCall, former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough, former Gov. Price Daniel and Republican National Committee member Fran Chiles.

Horse owners raised $450,000 in Houston by donating stud services of famous thoroughbreds including this year's Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner, Alysheeba, in a benefit auction.

Owners say racing would promote economic development, tourism and additional tax dollars for the troubled Texas treasury.

Congressional panel to examine television preachers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional subcommittee will put the national spotlight on television preachers next month to see whether their ministries are properly following tax laws, said Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin.

Invitations to testify before the House Ways and Means Committee's subcommittee on oversight are being sent to Jim and Tammy Bakker and the Revs. Ernest Angley, Jerry Falwell, B. James Kennedy, Pat Robertson, Jimmy Swaggart, John Ankerberg, Paul Crouch, Billy Graham, Oral Roberts and Robert Schuller.

Also invited to the hearing are representatives of the National Association of Religious Broadcasters, the Evangelical Council for Financial Responsibility, the U.S. Treasury Department and the Internal Revenue Service.

"The public contributes millions of dollars each year to television ministries which operate in full or in part as tax-exempt organizations," said Pickle, who heads the subcommittee. "Recent events have raised questions which need to be explained."

Jim Bakker resigned his PTL ministry after admitting to a sexual encounter with church secretary Jessica Hahn. Pickle said the Internal Revenue Service is investigating the Bakker case.

"I believe it's important that we examine whether the present law rules are effective to ensure that tax deductible donations given to television ministries are being used exclusively for tax-exempt purposes," Pickle said at a news conference.

Pickle said his subcommittee will focus on IRS auditing techniques and look into whether donations are being misappropriated.

"We're not trying to change the law in this particular area. I have no intention of the subcommittee getting into the question of separation of church and state or rights under the First Amendment. We're to just review the tax law as it pertains to the tax code at this time," said Pickle.

While stressing that he does not intend to single out any specific ministry at the subcommittee's Oct. 6 hearing, Pickle said he will be looking closely at whether ministries use donations to start separate businesses.

As part of their ministry, the Bakkers operated Heritage U.S.A., a religious theme park with amusement park and luxury hotel.

"I'm getting a lot of mail from the public, from all over the country, saying we're trying to take (the ministries) off the air. Nothing is further from the truth," Pickle said. "We're not going to take anyone off the air."

"We're going to be interested in the IRS's prompt and evenhanded enforcement of the tax laws as well as the TV ministries' interpretation and compliance with the tax law."

Gene McQueen

Graveside services for Gene McQueen, 60, of Midland, were Saturday at 3 p.m. in Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Bob Porterfield, pastor of Kentucky Street Baptist Church, officiating. Ellis Funeral Home handled the arrangements.

Honorary pallbearers were Bob Griffin, Joe Aplanalp, Gene Plunkett, Eugene Wanoreck, Ricky Robinson and Chester Sullivan.

State senator considers race against Bentsen

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — After meeting with top Republican leaders in Washington, D.C., last week, Republican state Sen. Don Henderson said Monday he is closer to making a run against Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen next year.

Henderson went to the nation's capital last Thursday to meet with Vice President George Bush, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and other national GOP leaders.

"They told me they want a candidate against Bentsen," said Henderson, a Houston attorney and businessman who has served in the Legislature since 1973. "They seemed enthusiastic about my candidacy — perhaps more enthusiastic than I am."

For the last two months, Republicans have tried to persuade Henderson to enter the race. But Henderson has said he is not sure if he has the drive and ambition to take on Bentsen, a conservative Democrat who is the Senate Finance Committee chairman..

"People have asked me, 'Why not?' " he said Monday. "And that's a pretty good question.

"I wouldn't do it if I didn't think there was a chance I could win," Henderson said. "It's uphill. I wouldn't expect to be the favorite or anything. But I can think of more than one scenario that would be real good from my standpoint."

State Republican operatives have said they want a credible candidate on the ballot against Bentsen in case the popular senior senator encounters some unforeseen trouble after the March 8 primaries. But they are less sure about the party's chance to win, and even more concerned about spending millions of dollars on a losing race.

Jack Martin, Bentsen's campaign manager, said they plan to spend $7 million to $10 million, depending on how "credible" the opposition is. Bentsen would probably win re-election without campaigning or spending a dime, Martin said.

"The more we do, the greater our margin of victory," he said. "And Senator Bentsen has made it clear he plans to campaign hard."

Gramm said he has not taken a position on the race and has not offered his support to any one candidate. "Don Henderson came by, but it was more in the nature of a courtesy call," Gramm said.

John Weaver, the executive director of the Republican Party of Texas, said the GOP organization wants a candidate with established credentials who could run a serious campaign. "Don Henderson could carry the party banner very well.

Ector commissioners OK three cent tax rate hike

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — In what proved to be a marathon session Monday, Ector County Commissioners approved a three cent tax rate increase to support a "bare bones" 1988 budget of $21.9 million and rejected the proposed budget for Medical Center Hospital for the first time in about 17 years.

Commissioners began their regular session at 10 a.m., and except for taking a couple of short breaks, approved the county's budget, the tax-rate increase, and rejected the proposed MCH budget. The session didn't end until shortly after 4 p.m.

County Auditor Bill Hicks told Commissioners Court members that failure to implement the proposed tax rate increase, the first since 1983, would only mean the court probably would have to consider an increase of as much as six cents next year.

During budget sessions this year, Tom Pace, fiscal services director, told commissioners the county's tax base in the past two years has decreased between $900 million to $1 billion.

Preliminary budget requests this year were slightly below the $22.69 budget actually approved for the 1986-87 fiscal year. However, various economies implemented through the current year have reduced spending so far to around $22.2 million, saving county taxpayers about $500,000.

The 1987-88 tax rate of 36 cents per $100 of assessed valuation will cost the owner of a $60,000 home $216, about $18 more than last year, excluding the Homestead exemption.

In the 1986-87 fiscal year, with a 33 cent tax rate, the tax bill on the same home was about $198.

Concerning the tax rate hike reluctantly approved by commissioners, Pace noted the court had reduced spending in every conceivable area possible. Since there are limits beyond which state-mandated functions can't be cut, he said, the only remaining options are to begin services that contribute to the area's quality of life.

Midlander still critical

From Staff Reports

A 17-year-old Midland man remained in critical condition this morning following a two-vehicle accident Monday that police said may have been caused by slick roads.

John Norman Overton suffered chest injuries, and was listed in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital, a MMH spokeswoman said.

Police said Overton was driving a car northbound on Midkiff Road near the Interstate 20 overpass about 5:10 p.m., when his car was struck by a pickup truck pulling a trailer.

The truck, driven by 39-year-old Ruben Cirilo of Levelland, was southbound on Midkiff when it approached traffic ahead, according to police reports. When Cirilo saw the traffic and tried to brake, the vehicle skidded on rain-slickened road and the trailer jackknifed, colliding with Overton's vehicle, reports said.

Cirilo was not injured in the mishap, police said.

The event is sponsored by the Col. Theunis Dey Chapter of the DAR.

Farmer to run for TRC slot

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A San Angelo-area farmer and rancher has announced he will make a second run at the Texas Railroad Commission.

Ralph Hoelscher, 43, of Miles, says he will seek the Republican nomination next year in an attempt to unseat Democratic incumbent Jim Nugent of Kerrville. Former state Rep. Ed Emmett of Kingwood is also in the GOP race, while John Thomas Henderson of Austin is challenging Nugent in the Democratic primary.

Hoelscher, who received 20 percent of the vote in the 1986 Republican primary for Railroad Commission, says he supports deregulation of Texas intrastate trucking, "reasonably priced fuel" and "proper policing" of abandoned oil and gas wells to protect water tables.

"I am again entering this race because I believe I can provide an equalizing voice for all the people of Texas at the Texas Railroad Commission," Hoelscher says in his campaign brochure.

Prison board gives director power to limit admissions

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — In an effort to curb inmate crowding, the Texas Prison Board gave the prison director the authority to make restrictions on admissions.

The board Monday authorized director Jim Lynaugh to anticipate inmate crowding and implement new restrictions on counties that will reduce the number of inmates they send for admission.

The restrictions probably will apply to the 10 most populous counties that account for most of the prison admissions, officials said.

The Texas Department of Corrections has closed 21 times this year because inmate population exceeded 95 percent of capacity — a ceiling mandated by a federal court.

The 27-unit prison system, the nation's third largest — behind California and New York — received about 475 inmates Monday in addition to the 1,100 it admitted Friday. Prison spokesman David Nunnelee said no new inmates would be accepted today.

Population figures Monday showed 39,076 inmates, or 96.52 percent — 617 over the cap. About 134 inmates were released Monday, Nunnelee said.

"We have become concerned about the numbers of people we have coming into the system in one or two days," Lynaugh said. "When we get 1,100 in one day, that puts us far in excess of the 95 percent capacity."

Prison officials predicted inmate crowding would continue to be a problem for several years.

"For the short-term to the midterm in the future. I see it as a problem for years to come," said Al Hughes, prison board director. "If they (Legislature) gave us 2,000 beds tomorrow, we could fill them up in two months and be right back to where we are today."

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

The Volunteer Center of Midland is a new and exciting agency whose main purpose is to recruit and refer volunteers to non-profit organizations. Following is just a few of the many that are now available at The Volunteer Center:

■ The March of Dimes is having a "Jail & Bail" on September 15-18. Join the fun! Needed are judges, bailiffs and court clerks.

■ You could become a volunteer deputy right here in Midland. A great opportunity to learn more about legal procedures.

■ If you are interested in the criminal justice field, this could be just right for you. Very rewarding and satisfying by sharing your time and friendship with these boys and girls.

■ Highly skilled professionals can sign up for one-time projects and for short-term projects, also for serving on Board of Directors for different non-profit agencies.

■ Local girls' and children's groups are looking for exciting and positive adult leaders.

■ There are elderly people in Midland who could benefit from your sharing an hour or two a day or week by delivering their meals or by packaging and loading the meals.

■ If you would like to work in the mental health field, this position could be the one for you.

■ Creative and fun-loving people needed for local theatrical groups. (Carpentry experience helpful or seamstress skills.)

■ This could be your golden opportunity to find out more about the judicial system. Become a court monitor.

■ Your computer knowledge could be beneficial to several area agencies; check it out.

Volunteers Do Make A Difference!

Call the Volunteer Center today to sign up for the worthwhile cause of your choice. You can assist a local non-profit organization or help us out at the Volunteer Center. Our center is always in need of enthusiastic individuals to help with program development and public relations.

Choose from the many special projects we have on file that we coordinate with over forty agencies.

For more information on how you and/or social-civic-religious groups can become involved, give the Volunteer Center a call at 684-5866.

MHMR agreement pleases both sides

DALLAS (AP) — Both sides in a dispute over conditions in Texas mental hospitals are pleased with an agreement filed in a 13-year-old lawsuit.

"I think it's an agreement that will benefit the mentally ill citizens in Texas," said Dr. Gary Miller, state commissioner of mental health and mental retardation.

Legal Services attorney Margo Michels, representing the plaintiffs, said the agreement appears to be a sincere effort by the state to improve conditions for patients in state hospitals.

"We all felt very positive about this particular negotiation," she said. "We see it, and I think the state sees it as a victory."

The agreement between plaintiffs and the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation also was signed by a special panel reviewing implementation of a previous agreement in 1981.

As part of the agreement, filed here Monday with U.S. District Court Judge Barefoot Sanders, state officials agreed to increase staff at some mental hospitals.

5th Circuit Court grants stay of execution

"The state shall be given the option either of retrying or resentencing (King) within 120 days as may be appropriate under Texas law."

— Judge Alvin Rubin,
5th Circuit Court

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A stay of execution was granted a man who twice has been tried and sentenced to die by injection in the 1978 slaying of a Baytown man.

In a divided opinion released Monday, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans said Leon Rutherford King, 43, was denied the opportunity to examine his jurors on the question of whether a life sentence might mean he would be back on the streets in the foreseeable future.

The appeals court ordered the case sent back to the Texas courts.

"The state shall be given the option either of retrying or resentencing (King) within 120 days as may be appropriate under Texas law," Judge Alvin Rubin wrote.

King appealed his 1978 conviction and two years later was granted a new trial. He was convicted a second time and sentenced to death. King was one of two prisoners scheduled to die by injection Aug. 15, 1985, but he received a reprieve from a federal judge.

He was convicted of the bludgeoning death of 26-year-old Michael Clayton Underwood, who was killed after he and his girlfriend were abducted from a Houston night club. The 19-year-old woman was raped but survived the attack.

An accomplice, Allen Ray Carter, also was convicted in the killing; Carter received a life sentence.

In writing the opinion for the two-judge majority, Rubin said such questioning about a life sentence is a legitimate concern for someone on trial in a capital murder case.

However, the majority did not accept King's contention that the jury was biased by the fact that two jurors saw him in handcuffs when the courtroom was emptied because of a fire.

Judge Edith H. Jones attached a 14-page dissent to the 23-page opinion in which she said she believed adequate care was taken to see that an impartial jury was seated.

"It flies in the face of common sense to suggest that asking each juror this one additional question or series of questions would have yielded a significantly more trustworthy jury panel than did the process employed by the trial court," she wrote.

In July 1986, the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals ordered a Texas district court to elaborate on a one-sentence ruling denying King an appeal of his conviction and death sentence.

The appeals court ruling stated that the lower court did not satisfy federal requirements when refusing King's appeal because it did not give specific reasons for its decision.

The court had said in King's case — where no execution date had been set and therefore, no temporary stay involved — there was no justification for the district court's failure to give reasons for the decision.

District courts are to give specific reasons for their decisions in a capital case.

FASHION

Back-to-school fashion features favorites

By MARJ HOLBROOK
Copley News Service

Classics reflect a trendy update for back-to-school fashions this season.

Old favorites — many so old that today's crop of students won't recognize them — are back in a contemporary mold.

Such classics include sweater sets, denims, jersey knits, sweats, turtlenecks, and hooded jackets.

The differences can be subtle, or pronounced.

Denims, for instance, may be acid-wahed, stone-washed, over-dyed, frosted, or black. Look for denim in skirts, jumpers, separates and jackets. Jackets are very big, according to Haim Dabah, executive vice president of Gitano, a sportswear manufacturer.

Sweater sets, those long-sleeved pullovers, have a new look that might appear in a different knit, intarsia design, or oversize styling. The classics of the 1940s have returned, but with a decided 1980s look.

Last spring, long before kids — and even moms and dads — thought of back-to-school wear, designers were holding fashion shows for kidswear buyers.

AMONG THE trends spotted were:

BRIGHTS: Look for turquoise, hot pink, citrus yellow, bitter lime. You'll find them in sweats (both tops and bottoms), warm ski jackets, and knits.

DENIMS: Patterns ranging from stripes to lace, are printed on good old durable denim. Look for denim touched with lace, leather or corduroy. Try a jacket with western touches matched with a miniskirt. For guys, there's the classic jeans look, but done in gray or perhaps a frosted indigo or black. For either boys or girls, there's studded denim glittering with nail heads. Zippers and accent stitching add another dimension to some denims.

SKIRTS: Are back — but the coordinated leggings and tights mean that girls almost any age can be warm. Some come with sweaters in coordinated colors. Plaids, which are never really out of style, are coordinated with shetland sweaters in "no-tice-me" colors like periwinkle and coral.

KNITS: Parents love knits for their wrinkle-free, easy-care qualities. Kids love them for the ease of movement. Both will be pleased with this season's crop that take the "knit one, purl one," off to flights of fantasy. There are argyle, lambs wool classics, jersey turtlenecks, confetti knit separates, popcorn knits and marled knits. Look for tweed effects, geometrics and stripes in primary colors like red or blue, and popular purple.

COORDINATES: Tops and skirts, slacks and shirts, three-piece outfits that might include a turtleneck, hooded shirt and pants or skirt, received applause from buyers last spring.

SWEATS: Those dependable classics have a new impact in brights or primary crayon colors. Here, again, the three-piece outfit is the rule. This might be pull-on pants, top and hooded jacket or tunic. Some "sweats" outfits have tight pants worn with an elongated top that doubles almost as a minidress.

SWEATERS: An angora sweater with a keyhole neck and pearl buttons goes well with casual skirts for school and can be paired with a slim skirt for a dressy look. The newest sweater look is based on the styles of the '50s, with pearl buttons, short sleeves and fuzzy textures.

CNS Photo

Acid-wash jeans with bold, striped sweaters and shirts are in style for back-to-school this fall.

FOR THOSE dress-up occasions, look for sophisticated understatement for girls.

Among the dresses at the show were black velvet and corduroy in traditional styles, some with drop waists or no waists at all.

These were accented by deep lace collars and/or cuffs. Satin or taffeta for girls in sizes 7 to 14 or even 4 to 6 were also popular.

Parents, though, usually want easy care and excellent durability for the outfits that will go to school week after week.

They'll find both qualities in the rough-and-ready fabrics. Few should need special handling or dry cleaning. Some knits may need to avoid the dryer, or even be shaped and dried flat, but most will go from washer to dryer and back in the closet as quickly as a parent (or the student) can unload the cycles.

Salvation Army aids in locating lost relatives

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Thank you so very much for your article on the Salvation Army finding lost relatives.

Because of your article my mother, Earlene Fay Haynes Click of Santa Fe, Texas, and my grandfather, Earl Haynes of Owensboro, Ky., were reunited after 42 years!

Our whole family would like to thank everyone who helped make this possible. You've really made my mother happy. — EARLENE'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Glad I was able to help.

Readers, the Salvation Army operates a Missing Persons Locator Service in 86 countries of the world. This is available to the public. Those interested in this service should be aware of the following basic guidelines:

1. The inquirer should be searching for a near relative.
2. The inquirer must be able to provide essential information about the missing person.
3. The Salvation Army reserves the right to accept or reject any request for services based upon considerations of reasonableness, feasibility or motive.
4. The inquirer is asked to pay a $5 non-refundable fee.
5. The inquirer may secure information and/or a missing persons inquiry form by contacting the nearest Salvation Army office in his area or by contacting the nearest Territorial Headquarters.

DEAR ABBY: I must comment on the letter from "Hurt and Insulted" whose father-in-law said, "Please do me a small favor and change your brand of perfume; I had to go outside to keep from choking."

How I wish I had the courage of that father-in-law. There are several expensive fragrances on the market today that smell exactly like insecticide, and they affect me in the same way. My eyes water, I start to sneeze and my throat closes up. I have had to change my seat at the movie theater, and leave plays and concerts because of certain fragrances worn by both men and women.

Abby, is there a polite way to tell friends you see frequently that you can't tolerate their perfume? — NO NERVE IN JERSEY

DEAR NO NERVE: Yes. Say, "I have an allergy to the fragrance you are wearing," and if that person is considerate and well-mannered, she (or he) will remember not to wear the offending fragrance in your presence again.

AT WIT'S END

Reader has hang up with hangers

EDITORS NOTE: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. She left behind some of her favorite columns.

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

With sexual promiscuity running rampant, I could not believe a letter I received from a woman this week who said she could not get her coat hangers to reproduce.

"I know how much success you've had and wondered how you did it," she said. "I've tried everything from hanging Burt Reynolds on the wall to spraying sexy perfume to hanging a nightie from Frederick's of Hollywood on a hanger. Nothing. Since you are obviously a sex therapist for inanimate objects, maybe you can tell me your secret. The future of my closet hangs on your answer."

Good grief! Didn't your mother tell you anything?

Sexually active coat hangers are at their peak when they are in a small closet. The smaller the closet, the better. We once lived in an apartment with a closet so small it couldn't support a rod ... just two nails. Within a week (the shortest gestation in the history of coat hangers) we had 37 of those little suckers.

Don't look for fertility among satin-covered hangers or sturdy metal skirt hangers with the clamps. The rich hangers that can afford to produce never do. It's the lower economic hangers (like the wire ones that bend over double when you put a silk blouse on them) that are bearing.

The ones that do best in my closet are the ones with no visible means of support ... the ones with the top made out of piano wire and the bottom of rolled-up cardboard.

Hangers left in cars do well, especially the ones that take lodging under the brake pedal or hook over the seat belt and flap out the window.

You have to know that hangers in captivity never reproduce. You know, the ones that are welded to the rod in posh hotels. I don't know how it works, but I think they're neutered when they affix them so you can slide them out of the groove, put your jacket on them and fit them back into the slot.

Some people have tried to trick hangers into reproducing by installing hooks and putting as many as 26 garments on the doorknob. Most coat hangers are too smart for that.

If you're looking for a hanger orgy, just open your closet and announce, "I'm moving next week."

I've told you all I know. The rest you'll have to get from the gutter.

Joan Pertree (left) and Joni Hodges, owners of Olsten Temporary Services in Midland, invite you to call 683-5677. Let Olsten "tempt" you with skilled and professional workers to meet your company's needs.

Let Olsten 'Tempt' you with workers

If the fluctuations in the economy have you wondering whether or not to add new staff members, Olsten Temporary Services is the answer.

Olsten can help you maintain the right staffing level when the work flow varies. With Olsten you avoid overstaffing and keep your permanent personnel free of increased pressures that can cause morale problems when you need teamwork most.

One call to Joni Hodges or Joan Pertree at Olsten can solve your staffing needs. Olsten can meet your needs with workers skilled in a wide variety of office, professional and technical vocations.

Secretaries, clerks, typists, work processors, records clerks, shipping and receiving people, inventory crews, profcessional accounting and bookkeeping personnel, demonstrators, sales help, paralegals, technicians, and drafters are some of the skills available to help you get through a seasonal peak or special project.

Depending on the length of employment, Olsten offers up to eight hours of free training time. Olsten temporaries are constantly upgrading their skills and knowledge to keep pace with your needs.

"Our clients know that the service doesn't stop once the temporary is in place," Hodges said. "Our follow-up includes a first-day progress call, weekly evaluations on performance and a final overall evaluation at the end of each assignment."

Careful matching of temporaries with the job you need done is an Olsten basic. T systematically assess your temporary help needs, Olsten has developed The Olsten Profiler, an in-depth information system of your company's procedures, skill requirements, equipment, and work environment.

"When a client calls and we already have The Profiler complete, we can usually fill the job without any further information," Pertree added. "It saves time on the phone and gets the temporary on the job faster." And Olsten guarantees you satisfaction. If any Olsten employee is unsuitable for an assignment, call within 24 hours and you will not be billed. Olsten can offer this unique guarantee because their operating procedures and quality methods make the guarantee almost unnecessary.

If you are a worker interested in temporary employment, Olsten offers an insurance plan, referral and incentive bonuses, vacation and holiday pay and the exclusive Golden O Club, where you can qualify for free gifts and double Cash-In Hospital benefits, based on longevity and performance.

Call Olsten today at 683-5677 and let them "tempt" you with the perfect temporary to keep your office running smoothly. If you're in the market for a temporary assignment Olsten can tempt you with a flexibile work schedule, weekly paychecks and a varity of work assignments.

Copy Craft announces availability of office supplies

Copy Craft is pleased to announce that they are now (at their customers request) carrying a full line of the "traditional office supplies". Everything you need to run your office, including pens, pencils, paper clips, staplers, etc., are now available to you from Copy Craft.

Ken Craft of Copy Craft is pleased to inform you that you will receive the same "quality products" at a truly "competitive price" along with our total service on all of these new product lines. In most cases the discount will be at a lower price than has been offered to the majority of customers in the Permian Basin area by other office supply firms.

Vendor selection will include firms like Acco, Avery, Berol, Benchmark, Bic, Borden Co., Bostitch, Cross Pens, Dennison, Ghent, Hon, Moore Push Pen, Oxford-Pendaflex, Papermate, Pentel, Pilot Pen, Plymouth Rubber Co., Rolodex, Rubbermaid, Samsill, Scripto, Stempel, and many more.

If you haven't checked the savings and service of a volume dealer you are paying too much. Especially when compared to the cost and lack of service you often receive from others.

Regardless of what product line you are ordering from Copy Craft's 7500 square foot warehouse, you can count on fast, professional service on all of the items they carry.

Ken and Letty Craft, Chuck Sonnenberg, Randy Robbins, Mickey Bond and Berneice Bassham of Copy Craft understand that you don't have time to stop what you are doing to put up new supplies. That's why Copy Craft offers you "full service."

Leaving things at the front door just isn't their style. In fact, Ken explains that they will even be glad to keep an inventory list of your supplies. Depending on your needs, Copy Craft can set up weekly, biweekly or monthly inventory services.

Because Copy Craft's 7500 square foot warehouse allows them to keep an extensive selection of products, their customers enjoy another benefit. For instance, on the occasion when a customer gets a defective diskette, Copy Craft's customer doesn't face a big ordeal to have it replaced. All it takes is a quick call to Copy Craft at 561-9118 and a replacement will be delivered.

The commitment to service goes Copy Craft to continue to have the highest quality products at the best prices around. You don't have to make a choice between full service and discount prices.

Call Copy Craft at 561-9118 and check out their truly discounted prices on your "traditional office supply needs". You will find that the addition of these new products will provide you added convenience as Copy Craft continues to serve your "total supply needs."

Perhaps you need a price quotation on custom forms, such as letterheads, checks, invoices, statements or snap-out forms. Copy Craft will send an area sales representative to pick up a sample and call you back with the various price breaks based on the amount you need.

Copy Craft delivers quality supplies

ServiceMASTER
LawnCare
684-4972

Joe Henson, owner of ServiceMaster Lawncare, can help you get your lawn in shape for the spring, right now! Call 684-4972 for a free estimate today!

ServiceMaster LawnCare can help keep your lawn 'in the green'

Get your lawn ready for the spring with ServiceMaster LawnCare in the fall.

ServiceMaster LawnCare will care for the growth and well-being of your lawn through soil testing, liquid and granular fertilizers and weed control.

"Through chemicals and cultural managament we can make your lawn more manageable and healthy," says Joe Henson, owner. "And a healthy lawn will resist the competition of weeds and insects."

Henson has more than 17 years of experience working in and teaching agriculture. His masters degree in agriculture from Texas Tech University and subsequent years of teaching in the Midland Independent School District qualify him to give your lawn the care you deserve.

"I treat my clients lawns the way I would treat my own," Henson added. ServiceMaster LawnCare can help you eliminate those weekend weed-pulling sessions. ServiceMaster products give you season-long protection from annual weedy grasses and can safely control only the damaging surface insects.

Call and let Joe and Judy Henson measure your lawn and give you a free estimate. ServiceMaster will begin with soil samples from different parts of your lawn. These samples are analyzed by a soil testing lab and the data is compiled in a report, from which a prescription is written for your lawn care.

An agronomically sound fertilizer provides the backbone of any lawn maintenance program. So ServiceMaster custom blends a combination of materials suited just for your lawn. At least 30 percent of every application consists of a slow-release fertilizer.

Letting ServiceMaster take care of your lawn now guarantees a faster "green-up" next Spring and the elimination of those unsightly winter grass-weeds.

ServiceMaster also offers services to keep the rest of your yard looking great. Flower bed management can keep your flower beds, shrubs and trees looking their best.

Lawn Aeration improves density and promotes deeper root growth, resulting in a healthier, greener lawn.

Get your lawn "in the green" with ServiceMaster LawnCare. Call 684-4972 today for your free estimate!

Dimension continues special

After viewing the Cinemax and HBO free preview last weekend you are probably wondering how you can bring all that great entertainment into your home every day. Then you'll be glad to know that you can get either premium channel installed for only $1 and pay only $1 for the first month of service.

Dimension Cable has extended this offer to both new subscribers and viewers who already have basic service only and want to upgradee with HBO and Cinemax.

During the free preview all cable viewers enjoyed such great shows as "The Karate Kid Part II", "Back to School", "Short Circuit", "Touch 'N Go", "Back To The Future", "Legal Eagles", "Aliens" and "Nothing In Common".

In addition to the free preview, Dimension Cable is offering a special where viewers can have their cable connected or their service upgraded for only $1. And if you subscribe now to basic cable, you pay only $1 for HBO, Cinemax or both for the first month of service (current subscribers can upgrade for the same price).

This special price is good only through the end of September and there will never be a better time to bring this quality entertainment into your home.

With school back in session, the staff at Dimension Cable would like to remind you to slow down, especially near schools and in school zones.

"Now that the kids are back in school, we realize there is a shift in family activities," said Doug Smith, Dimension Cable general manager. "Watching television together can be a wholesome entertainment for the entire family."

To supplement your television viewing, Dimension offers the Discovery Channel, a unique new cable channel with interesting and educational programs for all ages. Discovery is funded in large part by the cable industry.

This month on Discovery learn about life in rural China on the show "Ustinov In China". Veteran actor Peter Ustinov highlight the efforts of the Chinese government and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) to improve the education and health care available to rural Chinese children. This is the first time the show has been shown in North America.

"This is a chance for our children to see what goes on in other places," Smith pointed out. "Through the media of television we bring new ideas and different cultures into our home. It breaks down some of the isolation."

Another Discovery Channel exclusive showing this month is "The Perils of Pearls". An intriguing exploration into the Australia pearling industry takes viewers back into history. The vessels used today remain largely unchaned since their first use in the 1880s.

Another channel offered by Dimension Cable is Nickelodeon.

"Nickelodeon has long been noted for emphasis on educational programs for young people," said Smith. "The channel is programmed so that shows for pre-school and younger children are on in the morning, and as the day goes on and kids come home from school, the programs become more advanced."

Nickelodeon has been recognized by the National Parents and Teachers Association and the National Education Association for its nonviolent programming, Smith noted.

A very popular channel for children and adults is the Disney Channel. September features include an Annette Funicello Film Festival, the classic "Old Yeller", "Escape to Witch Mountain" and "Flight of the Navigator".

Dimension Cable offers a variety of viewing entertainment for the entire family. Call 694-7721 and sign up for Cinemax and/or HBO for only $1 for the first month!

Texas-sized lure devised for super collider

AUSTIN (AP) — No other state is known to be considering a financial lure the size of Texas' proposed $1 billion inducement package to land the Superconducting Super Collider, officials say.

Voters will decide in the Nov. 3 general election whether to allow the state to borrow $500 million to enhance its chances of getting the project.

"I don't know of anybody who is participating in the funding at this level or magnitude," Amarillo Mayor Glen Parkey said Monday.

Parkey is vice chairman of a group appointed by Gov. Bill Clements to push the proposed general obligation bond sale on the November ballot.

The Legislature already has authorized the sale of $500 million in general revenue bonds for the super collider, which is expected to cost $4.4 billion to build and have a $275 million annual operating budget.

"I've heard a number of reports in the press that there are other states with billion-dollar inducement packages, but I have not seen any legislation indicating a package anywhere near the Texas package," said Executive Director Edward Bingler of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission, which heard a report from Parkey Monday.

The commission has recommended to the U.S. Department of Energy that the super collider be placed either in Dallas-Fort Worth or Amarillo. Five other Texas site proposals — one near El Paso, one near Midland and three in the Houston-Beaumont area — have been submitted independently to the department.

Twenty other states have submitted site proposals for the super collider, a 52-mile, near-circular tunnel in which subatomic particles will be smashed together at high speeds to allow researchers to study the makeup of matter.

The list of contenders for the atom smasher is expected to be narrowed in December, and a site is expected to be chosen in July 1988.

"Passage of Proposition 19 is very critical to our success," Parkey said of the proposed bond sale. "Texas is perceived as a front-runner in the competition, if not the front-runner. I think we need to do all we can to maintain that."

The group pushing Proposition 19 has hired Karl Rove & Co. of Austin for the effort, Parkey said. Rove was an adviser to Clements in the 1986 gubernatorial campaign.

A total of $850,000, which is to be collected in fund-raising efforts throughout the state, has been budgeted to push the bond sale.

Peter Flawn, chairman of the research laboratory commission, said the presence of the unofficial Texas sites in the super collider competition should help in promoting the bond sale throughout the state.

The commission received a letter from legal counsel Ed Toles, a Dallas bond attorney, saying the bond money could be used for the super collider even if the federal government selects one of the unofficial Texas sites.

Water, oil to be drained from ship

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 1.1 million gallons of salt water and fuel oil from the Battleship Texas is being removed in an effort to drain and refloat the rusting ship, officials said.

Barges will be used to transport thousands of barrels of the fluid away, for disposal through industrial means, said Stratford Morris, director of the Battleship Texas Restoration Project.

"They filled the fuel tanks and empty spaces, which we call voids, with bayou water to set the ship down hard on the mud of her berth so she wouldn't float into the shipping channel sometime and become a menace to navigation," Morris said.

"This is really what's causing the internal deterioration now."

The Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife expects the project, with the help of private interests, to take about three weeks.

Once empty, the 73-year-old vessel, berthed for nearly 40 years at the San Jacinto Battlegound State Historical Park near Houston, should rise several feet at dockside, he said.

"When we remove the fluids, we expect the ship will have lifted between 3½ feet and 4 feet, and we'll be able to determine exactly from her draft what her stability characteristics are."

Morris said draining the ship was the first step in a plan to ultimately see the dreadnought drydocked somewhere on the Gulf coast for structural repairs.

Chapman seeks seat on court of criminal appeals

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A second candidate, District Judge Ron Chapman of Dallas, announced Monday that he will seek the Democratic nomination for the top seat on the Court of Criminal Appeals next year.

Judge Mike McCormick, a Democrat already on the state's highest criminal court, also has said that he will run for presiding judge on the court. Presiding Judge John Onion has said he will not seek re-election for another six-year term.

Chapman is the only elected Democratic judge in heavily Republican Dallas County and consistently has received high marks in the Dallas County Bar Association straw polls. Chapman said, in his nine years on the bench, he has tried more felony cases than any other district judge in Texas. He also said he has been a leader in new child support collection programs and in clearing backlogs on the Dallas docket.

Chapman, 46, received great help in his 1986 election from a popular Dallas disk jockey also named Ron Chapman.

McCormick won re-election to his seat last year. If McCormick wins the presiding judge race, Republican Gov. Bill Clements would name his replacement, Chapman noted.

"I am here today to put a stop to Bill Clements getting to make appointments to statewide elected positions," Chapman told Capitol reporters. "It's time we, as Democrats, just say 'no' to any more Democratic office holders thinking of allowing the governor to make judicial appointments."

If Chapman wins the presiding judge race, Clements would name Chapman's replacement to the Dallas district judge bench.

McCormick said he is not worried about Clements naming a Court of Criminal Appeals judge. "That's just a bunch of double talk, frankly," he said. "Clements has appointed a number of Democrats who excelled on the bench."

Before becoming a trial judge, Chapman worked in the Dallas County District Attorney's office and was a criminal defense lawyer. He estimated the race will cost about $150,000 and is planning a major fund-raiser later this month with Supreme Court Justice Oscar Mauzy.

Judge Sam Houston Clinton of the Court of Criminal Appeals has said he is considering a race for presiding judge.

SMU president wants school to stay in league

DALLAS (AP) — The new Southern Methodist University president says the institution's athletic programs should remain in the Southwest Conference but problems that led to a pay-for-play scandal must be avoided.

"The bottom line is that SMU should remain in the Division I football in the Southwest Conference at the present time," A. Kenneth Pye said Monday at a specially called meeting of faculty members.

"I look forward to the discussion, but I find it unlikely that anything said here is going to change an attitude which I've developed over 15 years," said Pye, who for two years was chairman of the Duke University Athletic Council.

He said the keys to maintaining an honest football program are tighter controls and more rigorous scrutiny than in the past, not dropping to a less competitive division of the NCAA.

"Properly run big-time college athletics serve a useful purpose both in developing talent and developing a sense of communication between university and alumni and also encouraging the presence of a significant number of minority students on campus, the financing of which would not be possible without intercollegiate athletics," he said.

Pye suggested at least two safeguards to prevent the improprieties that led to cancellation of SMU's football program for two years.

"A coach should be subjected to termination if he should have known about a violation but did nothing about it," said Pye.

He said most standard university contracts state coaches can be fired only if they commit violations or do not act on known violations.

"There's no requirement that you can't stick your head in the sand," he said.

He said after the meeting that if SMU employees committed violations that were uncovered in the internal investigation into non-football sports, they [illegible]

Bears mistreat reigning Giants

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Tomczak, Dennis McKinnon and the Chicago Bears defense had something to prove. They did it with such vicious determination that they left the Super Bowl champion New York Giants dumbfounded.

Tomczak threw touchdown passes of 42 and 56 yards, McKinnon came off of a one-year layoff with a team-record 94-yard punt return for a touchdown and the defense registered eight sacks for losses of 53 yards in a 34-19 rout of the Giants Monday night.

The much-heralded battle of the two previous Super Bowl champions turned into an unexpected rout.

"Take away the blocked punt and the interception and what did they have?" said McKinnon, who sat out 1986 because of a knee surgery.

In explaining his punt return, which eclipsed the previous team record of 89 yards by Ray "Scooter" McLean back in 1942, McKinnon said "I crawled for 20 yards, made a move and hit the end zone. That play sealed the coffin."

It came shortly after Terry Kinard intercepted a Tomczak pass and returned it 70 yards for a touchdown that cut the Bears' lead to 24-13 and gave the Giants a brief ray of hope.

"They beat us real good," said Giants' Coach Bill Parcells. "We haven't been beat like that in a long time. It's obvious they did whatever they wanted to against us. Their quarterback was excellent considering it was his first start in a game of this magnitude."

THE VAUNTED Giant defense did little to harass Tomczak, while the Bears were all over Giants' quarterback Phil Simms, who had his bell rung several times and twice had to leave the game to clear the cobwebs.

"They said hello to me a couple of times and I took some shots," said Tomczak, who nevertheless was not sacked once and threw touchdown passes of 42 yards to Ron Morris and 56 yards to Willie Gault in the third quarter.

"Give the offensive line credit," said Tomczak. "The Giants have some studs but our line kept them off of me."

Tomczak also sneaked a yard for a touchdown just before halftime and finished with 20 completions in 34 attempts for 292 yards.

"The greatest thing about this game is we got the football season started," said Bears Coach Mike Ditka, who apparently had his fill of the hype that centered around the contest ever since the NFL first announced the 1987 schedule.

"It was one of the hardest hitting games I've seen and you expect that when two good teams get together," said Ditka. "Our offensive line did a helluva job. No sacks. They gave Tomczak great pocket protection."

THE GIANTS took the opening kickoff and Simms quickly put the offense into gear as the Giants marched to the Chicago 10-yard line. Then came a sack by Todd Bell and Simms fumbled with Wilber Marshall recovering.

The Bears were forced to punt, but it was blocked by Erik Howard and Tom Flynn recovered in the end zone for a 7-0 New York lead.

Kevin Butler kicked a 24-yard field goal for the Bears before the quarter ended and then the Bears took charge after that with the defense repeatedly sacking Simms.

An 80-yard drive which ended with Tomczak's 1-yard sneak with :08 left in the half gave the Bears a 10-7 lead.

On Chicago's second possession in the second half, Tomczak hit Morris with a 42-yard touchdown pass. The next time the Bears got the ball, he threw a 56-yard touchdown pass to Gault on the first play.

"The game dictated that we throw more, we now have burners on both sides," said Tomczak of Morris, a rookie from SMU, and Gault.

"They are not a one-dimensional offens," said Giants linebacker Carl Banks. "They have big play capabilities and they caught us off guard tonight."

SIMMS COULD have blamed his protection for breaking down, but said, "a couple of times I should have gotten rid of the ball earlier. I would have liked to gone deep down the field.

"I expected the game to be physical," added Simms, who was the MVP in the Giants' 39-20 Super Bowl victory over Denver. "Early in the game we made some key mistakes and you can't do that against the Chicago Bears."

But in the end it was the Bears' defense that prevailed. The Giants managed only 75 yards rushing and 128 net yards passing.

Much had been made of which team had the better linebackers.

And for this game, the Bears' linebacking corps of Mike Singletary, Otis Wilson and Marshall all had a hand in the sacks.

"I don't know and I don't care," said Singletary when asked if he thought the Bears had the better linebackers. "The important thing is the three of us know who we are.

"At the beginning, Simms was very confident and kept us off balance," said Singletary. "So we sucked it up and began to execute the way we knew we could."

Big 8 claims top two; Arkansas up to 11th

Associated Press

Oklahoma and Nebraska, the cream of the Big Eight Conference, remained atop The Associated Press college football poll today after posting their second straight convincing victories.

Oklahoma received 54 first-place votes and 1,193 points in the nationwide balloting by a panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The other six first-place ballots went to Nebraska, which had 1,127 points.

Three Top Twenty teams tumbled after losing to other ranked squads. UCLA, third a week ago before being overrun by Nebraska 42-33, dropped to 13th; Michigan fell from ninth to 19th after falling to Notre Dame 26-7, and defending national champion Penn State dropped from 11th to 20th after losing to Alabama 24-13.

Arkansas, the only Southwest Conference school in the top 20, moved up two spots to 11th after a convincing 31-10 win over Mississippi.

With the victories, Notre Dame jumped from 16th a week ago to ninth, while Alabama, 19th last week, moved up to No. 11.

AP Top 20

Moving up one spot to third was Auburn with 1,027 points. Louisiana Sate, No. 6 a week ago, jumped over Ohio State and moved into fourth place with 926 points. Ohio State remained at No. 5 with 908 points.

Rounding out the Top Ten are Miami of Florida, advancing one spot from seventh to sixth; No. 7 Florida State, up from eighth place; No. 8 Clemson, up from 10th; Notre Dame and No. 10 Washington, which moved up two spots from No. 12 a week ago.

The Second Ten, in order, are Alabama, Arkansas, UCLA, Tennesse, Arizona State, Pittsburgh, Michigan State, Georgia, Michigan and Penn State.

Last week, Penn State led the Second Ten, followed by Washington, Arkansas, Tennessee, Arizona State, Notre Dame, Michigan State, Pittsburgh, Alabama and Georgia.

Alabama's victory snapped Penn State's 13-game overall winning streak.

NFLPA readies union counterproposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The NFL Players Association, with one week left before its Sept. 22 strike deadline, planned to submit a counterproposal to the NFL Management Council's contract offer today.

NFL management presented its offer on Sept. 7 and the sides spent two weekend bargaining sessions going over the proposal. On Sunday, after 11½ hours of talks, NFLPA executive director Gene Upshaw said the union would present its own proposal on Tuesday, one he said could "go a long way toward a settlement."

Upshaw said the union would devote Monday to preparing that proposal, so it was something of a surprise when management learned that Upshaw spent part of the day at the Redwood City, Calif., training facility of the San Francisco 49ers.

Upshaw, who couldn't be reached for comment, was believed to have met with the 49ers in another effort to rally that team to the union's cause.

Quarterback Joe Montana and kicker Ray Wersching, neither a union member, have indicated they would probably play even if a strike is called, and cornerback Ronnie Lott said he might also choose to play rather than join a walkout.

"That's really incredible," Management Council spokesman John Jones said. "That means either Gene has no input on their counterproposal or they've been sitting on the thing.

"He told us we (management) had to come here to Washington because he has a sick relative in Texas and he had to be near an airport. If that's true, then what's he doing in San Francisco?"

NFLPA spokesman Frank Woschitz said Monday that union officials would likely "work through the evening" on its proposal, consulting with the nine-man executive board and player representatives.

"This is a big deal," Woschitz said. "We just don't have a few guys working on this. We want opinions from as many people as we can."

The sides spent 11½ hours Saturday and Sunday in their first negotiating session since Sept. 2. Before Saturday, the two sides had met for just 4½ hours since the old collective bargaining agreement expired Aug. 31.

Jones said the union's proposal, its first since the talks formally began in late April, "if nothing else, will put things into a manageable form that will enable us to address each issue point by point."

Jack Donlan, executive director of the Management Council, said the union's plan to present a counterproposal was not necessarily a sign of progress.

"We would have hoped they had a counterproposal ready when we resumed talks Saturday," Donlan said. "I'll know what progress we've made after I see it."

Lee, MHS open 4-5A volleyball

From Staff Reports

Midland High and Midland Lee collide to open the District 4-5A season tonight, with only one team emerging as a likely contender for the playoffs.

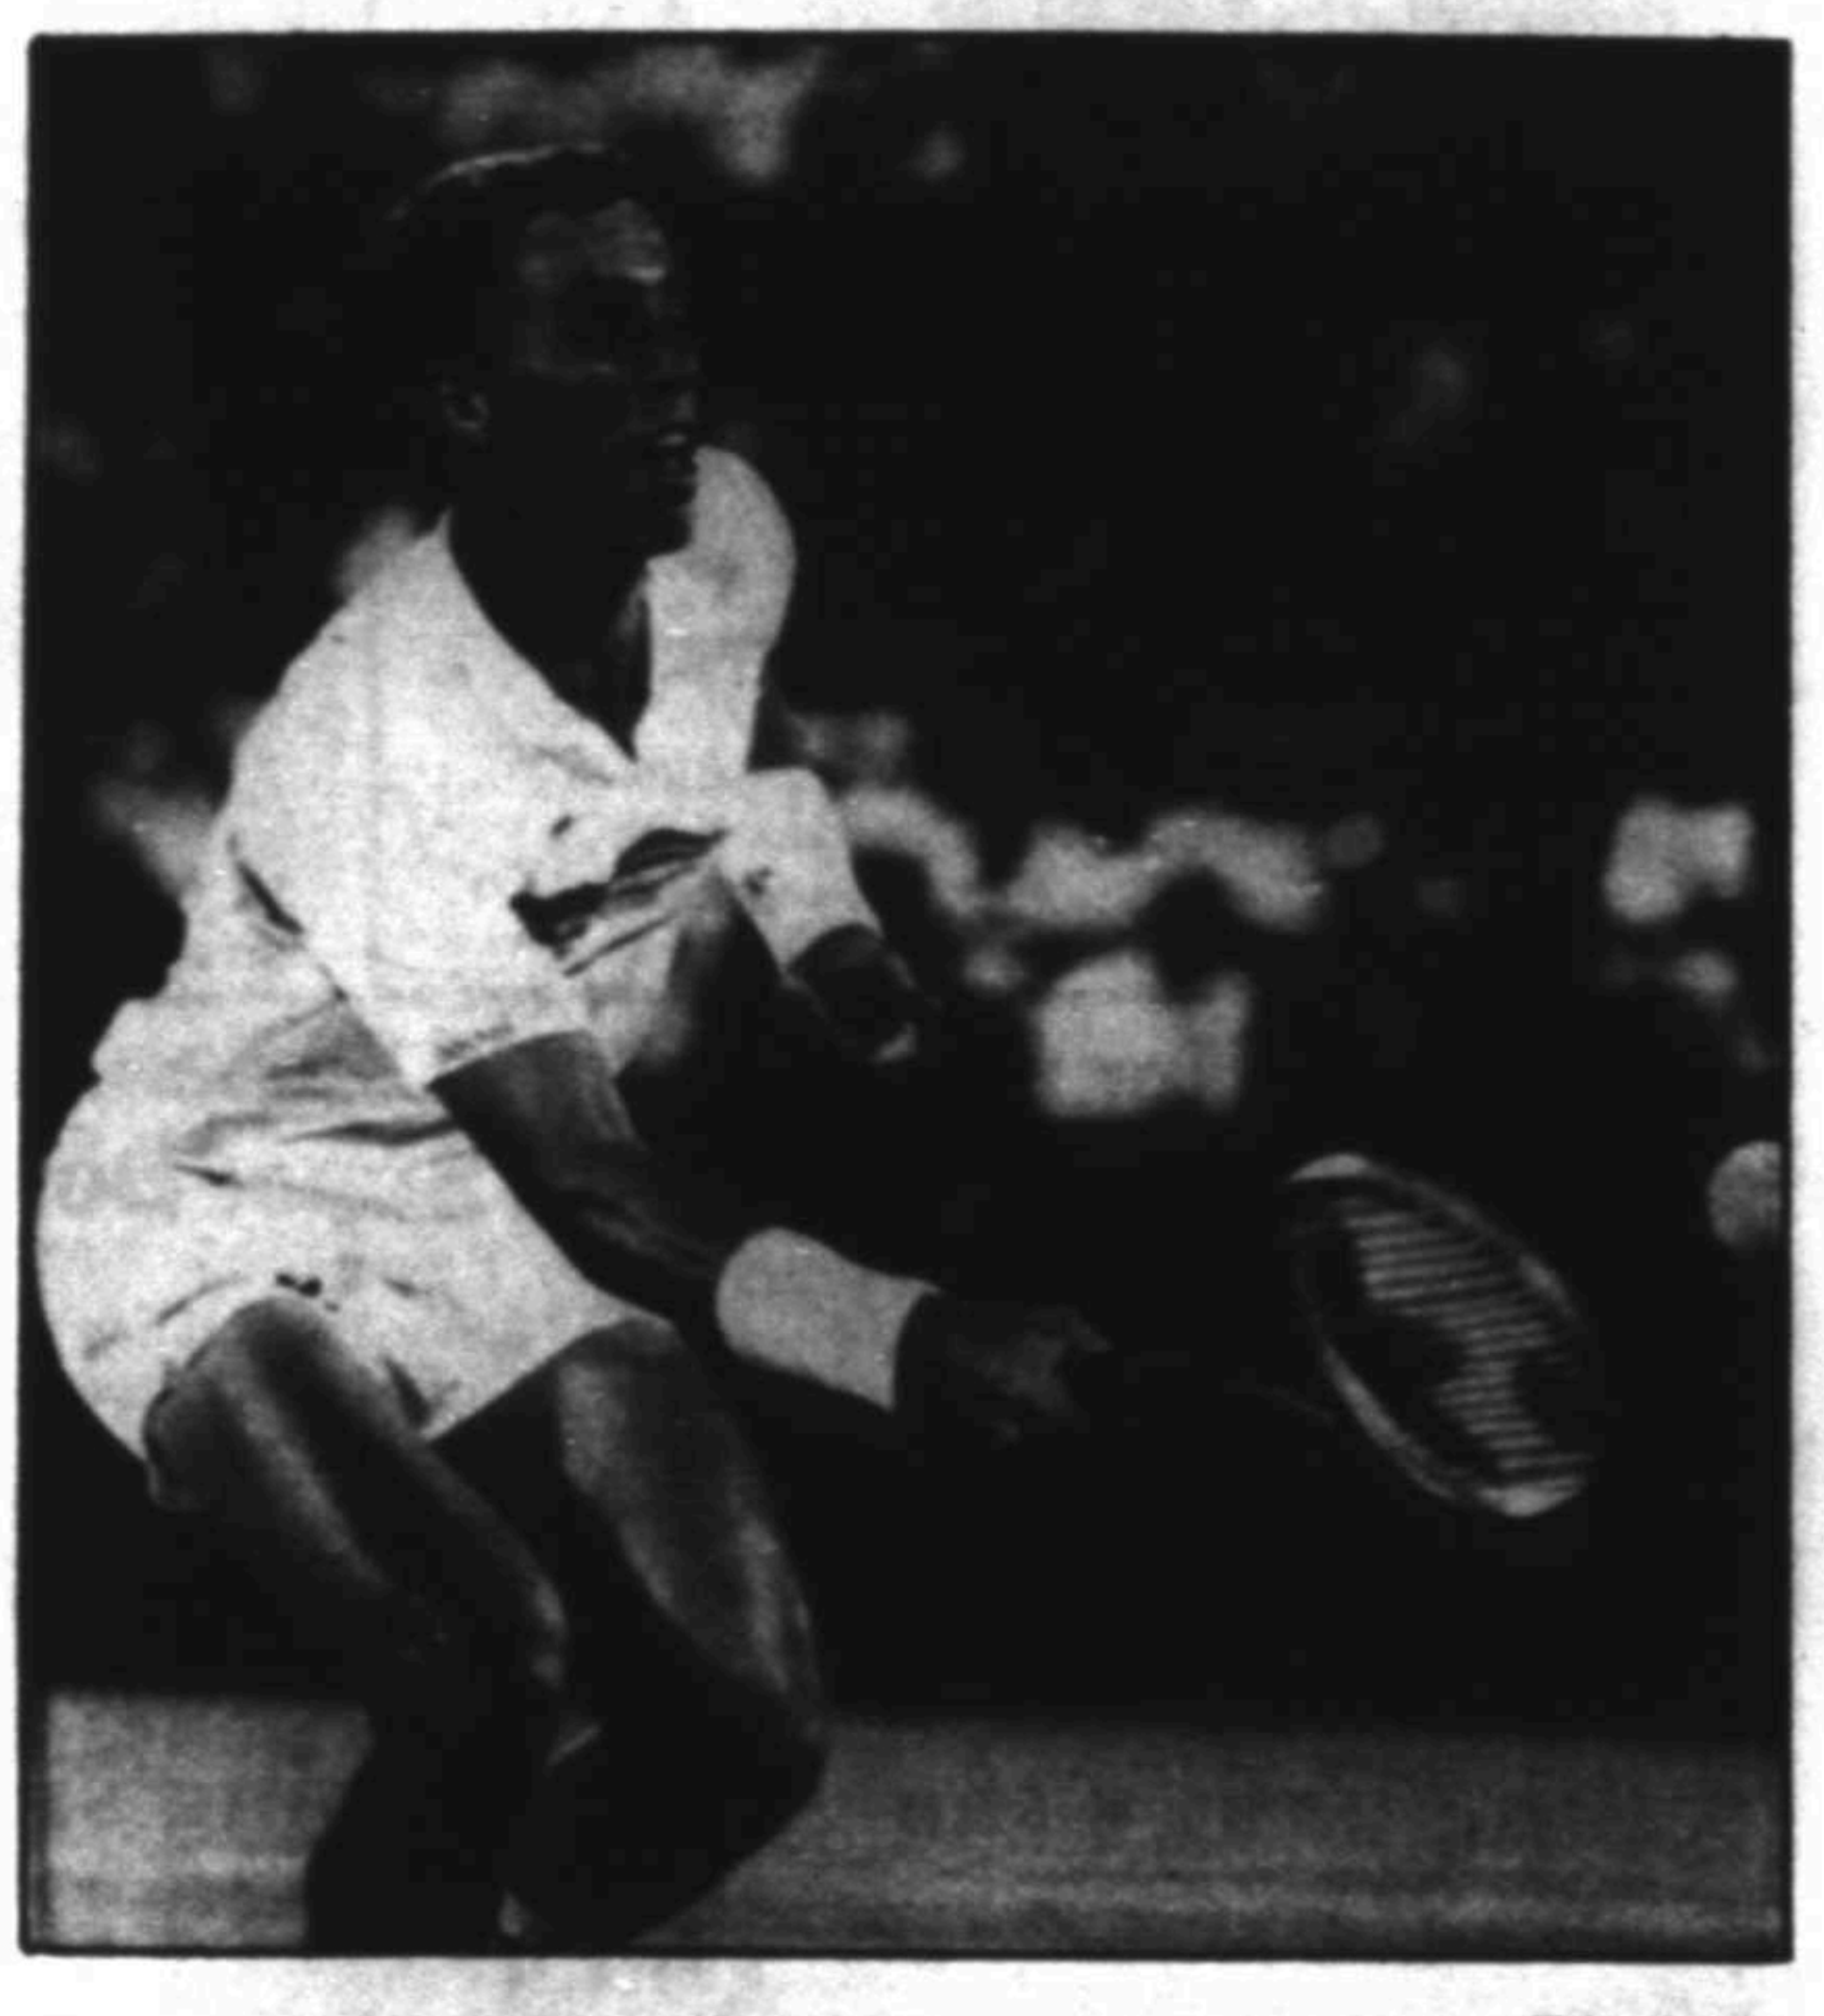
The junior varsity teams will tip off the action at 6:30 p.m. in the Lee Gym with the varsity squads set to battle immediately following.

The Lady Bulldogs, 10-9 in predistrict, appear to be one of the district favorites under coach Sonja Pittman, coming off wins over Denver City and Crane last week.

MHS traveled to Crane Saturday, recording an 8-15, 15-11, 15-13 victory over the Lady Cranes. A week ago, MHS evened its mark with a 15-11, 12-15, 15-9 decision over the Mustangs of Denver City. Now the Lady Bulldogs are setting their sights on a return trip to the playoffs in 1987.

And while Lee is young and green, coach Janice Baulch's troop's keep improving each week. Last week, the Rebs tuned up for MHS with a 15-5, 11-15, 15-4 win over Wink. Just 3-9 on the season, Lee can erase those memories with a good start in district play.

Flu-ridden Lendl still outlasts Wilander



AP Laserphoto

Fighting off the effects of a strength-sapping flu, Ivan Lendl hung on to win his third straight U.S. Open title Monday in New York over Mats Wilander of Sweden.

NEW YORK (AP) — No one was surprised Ivan Lendl won his third straight U.S. Open championship — except Ivan Lendl.

"I just can't believe I won this one," a flu-ridden Lendl said after his 6-7, 6-0, 7-6, 6-4 victory over Mats Wilander Monday. "I was out of juice for the last 3½ sets. It was strength of mind and a little bit of luck."

And the most relentless game tennis has seen since Bjorn Borg was in his prime.

"He's just steadier than anyone else," Wilander said. "If I don't play well the whole match, he plays the same and he wins."

Lendl joined John McEnroe as the only men to win three successive titles in the Open era.

"It's something I never dreamt of, it's unbelievable," said Lendl, the top seed who dropped only the one set to Wilander in the entire tournament and won his sixth Grand Slam crown — he has three French Open titles. "If somebody told me three years ago that I would win three in a row after losing three straight finals here, I wouldn't have believed it. I would have said that person was crazy."

Anyone who suggested that Wilander, a classic baseliner from Sweden and the third-ranked player in the world, would attempt to serve-and-volley in the Open final might have been accused of the same thing. But Wilander felt "it was the only way I could win."

"I think I played the way I have to," said Wilander, 23, who has two French Open and two Australian Open championships. "I was the one who was attacking, but you can't attack all the time. I can't attack any more for my style. I don't have that good a volley and he passes so well."

Martina Navratilova, who won the women's singles for the fourth time, beating Steffi Graf on Saturday, added the women's doubles and mixed doubles titles on Monday. That made her the first player since Billie Jean King at the 1973 Wimbledon to win the triple.

Navratilova, whose three championships made her the only player to collect at least $1 million from the Open — it took her 15 years to do so — teamed with Pam Shriver for the doubles crown and Emilio Sanchez of Spain in mixed.

U.S. Open

She has won 48 Grand Slam titles.

LENDL DIDN'T think he did anything particularly well, except survive.

"I've been in bed, feeling lousy, for four, four and a half days," he said. "If this was another tournament, I would not have played Saturday (in the semifinals against Jimmy Connors) or today.

"I had no strength for almost 3½ sets. I played on emotion."

Lendl, 27, of Czechoslovakia, has been accused of lacking emotion on the court.

"I tried to keep my emotions up because my strength was going up and down," he said. "I felt like I was falling over on two or three points ... then I felt stronger.

"When I lost my strength, I felt quicker and able to move better.

"I'm not as flashy as they are," he said of some of his tour opponents. "I don't have as much talent as others but I work very hard on my game and I'm steadier."

He proved that when he beat Wilander in the French Open final in June. He displayed it once again here.

"In this kind of match," he said after collecting the $250,000 first prize, "there is such little difference between the players."

ACTUALLY, THERE is a wide gap between Lendl and the rest of the men's tennis world. He certified that by winning a major title despite being ill.

Wilander got the first break of the match, in the fifth game. Lendl broke back in the eighth and they went into the tiebreaker.

Wilander, who clearly was the crowd favorite, held a set point at 6-5, but Lendl hit a service winner. After Wilander saved a set point with a spectacular forehand passing shot from the baseline, he won it when Lendl hit a forehand wide.

Lendl breezed through the second set as Wilander won only five points.

ERIC SCHURER

Lamesa, Fort Stockton shaking up 2-4A

Schurer

Somebody shake me, I must be looking at the District 2-4A pre-district standings up-side-down.

Let's see there's Lamesa, 2-0, now how could that be? The Tors haven't put a winning record together since 198... And what about Fort Stockton? Now I know second-year coach Ken Herring is used to having Panthers up at the top of any leader board, but that was the Odessa Permian Panthers.

What's going on is not exactly a changing of the guard, but don't think the old guards of Monahans, Sweetwater and defending champion Big Spring haven't noticed. And with each team facing a rebuilding club in this week's 2-4A openers, the early season good fortune may just continue, at least for another week.

Lamesa has fashioned its unbeaten mark against with a nip-and-tuck 21-20 edging of Levelland on foreign turf and a 23-0 thrashing of Brownfield last Friday. Tors coach Clyde Noonkester sweated out a scoreless first half before Gerry Woodberry cut loose an 83-yard TD run to unleash a 23-point second half blitz.

The Tors can gauge their progress by looking at one other score that came in over the weekend: Levelland 41, Snyder 6. Suddenly that squeaker outside of Lubbock looks pretty good when stacked against some other 2-4A rivals.

But Noonkester is keeping an even keel as Lamesa boosters dream of their first winning season since 1973.

"We know what's going on when we get into district play," Noonkester said looking ahead at a murderous district slate. "There are no easy ones in this district, but we feel like we're going to be more competitive than we have been in the past."

The Tors, who have compiled a 2-13 record in league play over the last two seasons, open 2-4A play Friday when the host Andrews. The Mustangs are off to a slow 0-2 start, but have fallen to perennial playoff-contender Hereford and 5A Midland High.

In Fort Stockton, Herring seems to have completed a turnaround that has seen the Panthers explode for 83 points in two weeks of play. And this from a team that has scored less than 10 points in 15 of its last 20 games.

Herring, an assistant to former Permian coach John Wilkins for 13 years, began to turn things around last season, his first, with a defense that yielded just 12 points per game against offensive powerhouses like Big Spring (16 points), Sweetwater (18) and Monahans (20).

Now, it seems, Herring has turned his attention to the offense. Led by bruising senior fullback Mike Nix, a college prospect at linebacker, Fort Stockton has rolled to an average of 310 yards rushing per game, with quarterback Pete Martinez throwing in more than 100 yards per through the air.

The Panthers come home to face Snyder Friday in their 2-4A opener.

Elsewhere around 2-4A, Big Spring returns triumphantly home after its upset of Lubbock Estacado to face San Angelo Lake View and Monahans travels to Pecos. Sweetwater will take the week off to recover from a 15-13 loss to Abilene High.

Cards don't catch baserunning snafu, fall to Phils

NL Roundup

Associated Press

Von Hayes and Greg Jelks almost pulled a boner that would have made New York fans forget Fred Merkle.

Mike Schmidt hit a fly-ball single over a drawn-in outfield in the bottom of the 11th inning Monday night, giving the Philadelphia Phillies a 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Monday night.

But the Cardinals missed an opportunity to get out of the inning without a run being scored when they failed to notice that Hayes and Jelks, on first and second, failed to advance one base before leaving the field.

That's the same mental error that Merkle made in a game on Sept. 23, 1908, ultimately costing the New York Giants a pennant.

The umpires stayed on the field, giving the Cardinals a chance to tag the runners and nullify the game-winning run, but St. Louis never made a move. Finally, Hayes and Jelks went back and touched the respective bases.

The loss by the Cardinals cut their lead to 1½ games over the Mets in the National League East.

Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog looked back to the ninth inning as the reason St. Louis lost the game.

"Two out and nobody on in the ninth inning," Herzog said, referring to the Cardinals' 2-0 lead in the ninth, when the Phillies rallied to tie the game on Juan Samuel's two-run double.

Astros 8, Dodgers 1

Houston broke an eight-game road losing streak and moved into second place in the West as Kevin Bass drove in four runs with a two-run homer and three singles and Gerald Young had four hits and four stolen bases against Los Angeles.

The Astros, who finished with 16 hits, took a 3-0 lead in the first against Dodgers rookie Shawn Hillegas, 2-3, on run-scoring singles by Bill Doran and Bass and a sacrifice fly by Craig Reynolds.

Nolan Ryan, 8-14, allowed one run and eight hits in 6⅔ innings. His nine strikeouts gave him the major-league lead with 235 in 182⅔ innings.

Mets 6, Cubs 5

New York overcame three Chicago homers as Gary Carter, Darryl Strawberry and Keith Hernandez drove in two runs apiece for the Mets, who climbed within 1½ games of the Cardinals in the NL East.

Rick Aguilera, 9-2, pitched six innings for his sixth straight victory, five of them since being activated from the disabled list on Aug. 24. Jesse Orosco allowed one hit in the final three innings for his 15th save.

Andre Dawson hit his 44th homer, a three-run shot, and Leon Durham followed with his 27th for a 4-1 Cubs lead in the third inning. Jody Davis hit his 19th homer in the sixth, pulling Chicago within 6-5.

Giants 4, Padres 3

San Francisco took a 6½-game lead in the West when Jose Uribe lined a one-out homer in the bottom of the ninth inning to beat San Diego.

Uribe, who now has four homers, broke a 3-3 tie with the homer to right field on a 1-1 pitch from Lance McCullers, 7-8.

Craig Lefferts, 4-5, was the winner in relief, pitching two perfect innings. Eddie Milner homered in the first for the Giants, and Carmelo Martinez homered for the Padres.

Expos 6, Pirates 4

Hubie Brooks lined a two-run double in the 14th inning as Montreal pulled within two games of St. Louis and ended Pittsburgh's seven-game winning streak.

Mike Fitzgerald started the 14th with a single off Bret Gideon, 1-5. After a sacrifice, Tim Raines was intentionally walked, setting Brooks' double to left-center off Tim Drummond.

Andy McGaffigan, 5-2, was the winner despite giving up a 13th-inning homer to Bobby Bonilla that tied the score after Tim Wallach gave the Expos a 4-3 lead with a homer in the top of the 13th. Jeff Parrett pitched the 14th for his fifth save.

Braves 3, Reds 2

Atlanta got two runs in the seventh inning on Albert Hall's run-scoring double, his stolen base and Dale Murphy's sacrifice fly, and the Braves held Cincinnati to four hits.

With the score tied 1-1, Ken Griffey opened the seventh off Guy Hoffman, 9-10, with a pinch-hit double, advanced to third on Dion James' sacrifice and scored on Hall's double to center. Hall then stole third and scored on Murphy's sacrifice fly, an insurance run the Braves needed in the ninth.

Alexander earns his stripes

AL Roundup

Associated Press

Since coming to Detroit in an Aug. 12 trade, pitcher Doyle Alexander has been a real Tiger.

"As long as you're hitting the corners like Alexander is, he's going to be successful," said Boston outfielder Jim Rice, who went hitless in three at-bats against Alexander in a 3-0 loss to the Tigers Monday night. "He doesn't have to challenge you. He keeps the ball in play and those guys get him some runs."

Alexander scattered eight hits and twice worked out of bases-loaded situations in seven innings to improve his record to 6-0 since the Tigers acquired him from the Atlanta Braves. The right-hander got hitting and fielding support from Kirk Gibson, who drove in Detroit's first run and cut down two runners at the plate from left field.

Alexander struck out four and walked four before getting relief help for the last two innings from Mike Henneman, who earned his fifth save.

Boston's Roger Clemens, 16-9, who got out of one bases-loaded jam, but not the second, allowed seven hits over the 6⅔ innings he worked. Clemens also walked four and struck out four.

Blue Jays 18, Orioles 3

Ernie Whitt hit three of Toronto's major-league record 10 home runs as the Blue Jays rolled past Baltimore.

The Blue Jays hit three homers in the second inning, two in the third, one in the fifth, one in the sixth, two in the seventh and one in the eighth in breaking the record of eight homers in a game set by the 1939 New York Yankees and tied by six other teams. Whitt hit solo homers in the second and fifth and added a three-run homer in the seventh.

George Bell hit two homers for the Blue Jays to take over the major-league lead with 45. Rance Mulliniks also had two homers while Lloyd Moseby, Rob Ducey and Fred McGriff each homered once.

Brewers 6, Yankees 4

Ernest Riles and Dale Sveum each hit solo homers and reliever Dave Stapleton won in his first major-league appearance as Milwaukee defeated New York.

The victory moved the Brewers one-half game in front of the Yankees and into third place in the American League East.

White Sox 8, Twins 2

Dave LaPoint pitched four-hit ball over 8⅔ innings and Greg Walker knocked in four runs, three with a double in the fifth inning, as Chicago beat Minnesota.

LaPoint, 4-3, struck out four and walked six before needing last-out relief help from Bob James. James finished up after giving up a two-run single to Randy Bush.

Royals 8, Angels 5

Bill Pecota's fifth-inning double snapped a tie and reliever Bud Black stopped California for six innings as Kansas City beat the Angels.

Pecota's double off reliever Jack Lazorko, 4-6, scored Willie Wilson, who had started the inning with a bunt single and then stole his 48th base of the season.

The Royals moved to within 3½ games of first-place Minnesota in the American League West, which lost to Chicago 8-2.

Rangers 2, Athletics 1

Oakland reliever Steve Ontiveros walked Darrell Porter with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning, giving Texas its victory over the Athletics.

Ontiveros, 8-8, had walked Pete O'Brien intentionally and Larry Parrish unintentionally, setting the stage for Porter's game-winning RBI.

The loss dropped the Athletics out of a second-place tie with the Kansas City Royals in the American League West.

Indians 11, Mariners 8

Brook Jacoby drove in three runs and Jay Bell hit a two-run homer to lead a 16-hit attack as Cleveland beat Seattle.

The win overshadowed a fine performance by Seattle's Mickey Brantley, who went 5-for-6 with three homers and seven RBI.

Ripken's inning streak halted

TORONTO (AP) — Cal Ripken Sr.'s reason for ending Cal Ripken Jr.'s consecutive inning streak at 8,243 was simple.

"I want to get everybody to stop writing about the consecutive inning streak," said the Baltimore manager, referring to the media attention generated by his son's ironman string.

The younger Ripken said he was "somewhat" surprised to hear he would be replaced defensively by Ron Washington in the bottom of the eighth inning Monday night as Baltimore was getting bombed by the Toronto Blue Jays, 18-3.

"He said 'if you hit, then you're going to come out,' and I hit in that inning," Ripken Jr. said. "I said (to him), 'all right.'"

Ripken, who had an RBI double earlier, hit into a fielder's choice. He went into the clubhouse briefly and then returned to the dugout to watch the Orioles play.

The consecutive innings streak, believed to be the longest of its kind in major-league history, began June 5, 1982 at Minnesota. Ripken's streak of 908 consecutive games will continue today, said his father.

"I hope to heck I'll put him back in there tomorrow," said Ripken Sr.

Ripken Jr. began the streak at third base, but he switched to shortstop on July 1, 1982 and had played there since.

"During the whole time the people examined the streak, the part that fascinated everybody was 'don't you feel you should come out of the game when the score is 15-1 and give somebody else a chance to play?'" the younger Ripken said. "I've always given the same answer.

"I stay in there to play for a couple of reasons. If you're not swinging the bat well, those type games give you an opportunity to experiment in game situations to maybe help yourself the next day. The same thing is true if you are swinging well — you want to continue to swing well and go to the plate for the extra at bat."

Ripken said he did not spend time wondering about his endurance.

"I didn't sit in a hotel room and wonder what the significance of all those numbers were," he said. "So I never envisioned how it would end.

"From a purely factual standpoint, the manager is in control and the player tries to do what the manager wishes. So it comes down to a manager's decision and a player abides by that."

Williams now a valuable commodity

WASHINGTON (AP) — After languishing on the bench for a year, Washington Redskins quarterback Doug Williams needed only one game to prove he still has the talent to be a starter in the NFL.

Last Monday, the Redskins came close to trading Williams to the Los Angeles Raiders for a second-round draft pick. Washington finally rejected the deal, and now Coach Joe Gibbs wouldn't give away the hard-throwing veteran for a lot more.

Williams, 32, no longer is a luxury for the Redskins. He is their starting quarterback because Jay Schroeder is expected to be sidelined at least two weeks with a sprained right shoulder.

Williams, a former star with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, had played only one down in the NFL since 1982 before coming off the bench Sunday to throw for 272 yards and two touchdowns in the Redskins' 34-24 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

No longer can he be dangled as trade bait, and no longer can Washington be criticized for paying $475,000 per year to a player who runs the "scout team" offense in practice on weekdays and stands on the sidelines on Sundays.

Williams wasn't fond of his role as a high-priced insurance policy, either.

Greatness won't carry over in parity of NFL

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

A simple point, proven every year, was demonstrated again on the opening day of the 1987 NFL season: Just because a team is good (or bad) one year, it doesn't have to repeat the performance the next.

So the St. Louis Cardinals scored three touchdowns in the final minutes for a 24-13 win over Dallas, which had beaten them twice by a combined score of 68-13 last year; Houston (5-11) beat the Los Angeles Rams (10-6); Pittsburgh (6-10) beat San Francisco (10-5-1); New Orleans (7-9) beat Cleveland (12-4), and — most demonstratively, Tampa Bay (2-14) beat Atlanta (7-8-1) 48-10, amassing the most total yards (460), the most points and the largest margin of victory in their mostly dismal 12-year history.

Even the 40-17 win by AFC champion Denver over Seattle demonstrated the folly of punditry. The Seahawks, who finished last year with five straight victories, including a 41-16 rout of the Broncos, already had been anointed as this season's successor to Denver as AFC champion.

The Bucs' win came in Ray Perkins' first game as Tampa Bay coach, demonstrating that the time-worn solution of replacing the coach instead of the players sometimes works. It also demonstrated that it sometimes doesn't — it was Atlanta's first game under Marion Campbell.

"The single biggest difference in this game was coach Perkins. He had a fantastic game plan," said quarterback Steve DeBerg, the perennial stand-in who threw for 333 yards and five touchdowns, guaranteeing that No. 1 draft choice Vinny Testaverde would remain on the bench a while longer.

HOUSTON'S 20-16 win over the Rams demonstrated something else — that just because a team looks great on paper doesn't mean it will look great on the field.

The Rams were supposed to have integrated a potent passing offense into its Eric Dickerson-led running attack. The catalyst was the addition of offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese and the additional experience of quarterback Jim Everett, who had his first full training camp this year after being acquired as a rookie early last year from — yes — Houston.

Instead, Los Angeles blew a 16-3 lead in the fourth quarter.

And while Dickerson gained his usual 149 yards on 27 carries, he also had his usual fumble — remember him dropping the ball three times in last year's NFC wild-card game? That set up a field goal by Tony Zendejas with 1:01 left that clinched Houston's victory.

Everett? He was only 9-for-26 for just 125 yards with two interceptions.

Rams Coach John Robinson, who called it "the worst performance we've had since I've been here and probably the worst for any team I'm ever coached," blamed it on the complacency of a favorite resting on its 16-3 laurels.

NEW ORLEANS' biggest problem entering the Cleveland game was its history — the Saints have never had a plus-.500 season in its 20 years. Despite improvement last season in Jim Mora's first year as coach, they finished 7-9 and were beset with the same dire predictions for this season.

So despite questions at quarterback, they went out and won with the more important ingredients — defense and special teams. They broke a 21-21 fourth-quarter tie with a safety after Brian Hansen's punt was downed at the Cleveland 1, then added another safety before Morten Andersen's field goal clinched it, 28-21.

Herschel will play hurt

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING (AP) — Herschel Walker says he played with a separated shoulder all three years he was at the University of Georgia and for two years in the now-defunct USFL and isn't about to let the injury keep him out of the Dallas Cowboys' NFL clash Sunday with the New York Giants.

Walker, the Cowboys' all-purpose performer, injured his left shoulder on a critical fourth-quarter play in Sunday's 24-13 opening loss to the St. Louis Cardinals.

On third and four at the Dallas 26 with 1:52 left and Dallas leading 13-10, Walker caught a short swing pass. St. Louis' Carl Carter knocked Walker out of bounds inches short of the first down.

Walker suffered a separated shoulder on the play. Instead of having a first down that would have let the Cowboys run out much of the clock, Dallas punted and the Cardinals rallied to win.

"I hurt my shoulder on the play," Walker said. "I thought I had the first down. I probably should have spun and taken it on upfield. But I knew my shoulder was separated and I was just trying to step past the line."

Walker said he played at Georgia for three years with a separated shoulder and had the problem two years with the New Jersey Generals in the USFL.

"It's something I'm used to having and I'll play against the Giants," Walker said. "I'll be ready to go."

Walker said he may make some changes in his shoulder pads.

"I might make an equipment adjustment," he said.

The Cowboys listed Walker as probable for the NFC Eastern Division game in New York.

Listed as questionable for the game were safety Mike Downs with a sprained shoulder and rookie kick returner Kelvin Martin, who suffered a leg injury in the preseason.

Also listed as probable was quarterback Danny White with "an irritated right wrist, sprained right shouldr, and strained neck."

Walker, who had 152 yards rushing and receiving, came into the game worried about a knee he injured in training camp. Walker didn't play in the Cowboys' 1-3 preseason.

"My knee was OK but I got kind of tired because I only had one week of practice," Walker said.

St. Louis scored three touchdowns in a span 1:39 seconds as the Dallas defense collapsed.

The Cowboys were second guessing themselves Monday because they threw the ball with four minutes to play instead of trying to run the clock out.

"We thought we saw some passes that were wide open," said offensive coordinator Paul Hackett. "We were on the verge of winning the game but couldn't finish it off."

California GM blasts team's desire

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The California Angels have all but fallen out of the American League West pennant race in the last couple of weeks. In the wake of the slide, General Manager Mike Port has questioned the desire of some of his players.

"We have some people here who have done the job and some who haven't," Port was quoted as saying by the Riverside Press-Enterprise. "The key word is some.

"Instead of making piddly excuses and moaning about (contract) security, they should have put their problems aside and pulled together with the rest of the team for two hours every day. Is that too much to ask? I think not.

"They lack something inside," Port said, pointing to his heart.

The Angels fell to 2-10 in September when they dropped an 8-5 decision to Kansas City Monday. Entering Monday night's game at Kansas City, the defending AL West champions were 68-76 and in fifth place, 8½ games behind the division-leading Minnesota Twins.

Port said he was disenchanted with about a quarter of the players on the roster, but refused to name them, saying, "They know who they are."

If they don't, Port certainly made them aware of it.

Braves may bring Phil Niekro back

LILBURN, Ga. (AP) — Fans and sportswriters are calling for the Atlanta Braves to hire Phil Niekro for one farewell pitching performance this month at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"They're my home, my family," said Niekro, who broke in with the Braves in Milwaukee in 1964 and played 18 years with the franchise in Atlanta before being released at the end of the 1983 season.

The man who won 268 games with the Braves, third best in franchise history, wants to throw his last pitch wearing a blue and red cap with an "A" on the front.

"When I got away from it the last three or four years, it was always my feeling that some way or another, I was going to come back to Atlanta and put that uniform on again," Niekro said.

Briercroft
Announces The End Of
The One Way CD.

THE OPPORTUNITY PLUS C.D.

Liquidity Plus a Guaranteed Increasing Rate

Briercroft has changed the traditional "one way CD." With our new Opportunity Plus CD, you don't have to pay a penalty for early withdrawal and we will guarantee a 1.00% rate increase if you choose to renew your CD. Our rate increase guarantee means the longer you leave your money in, the more money you make. Most certificate of deposit investments work one way. You put your money in, then wait for a fixed period of time to withdraw your principal. If you take your money out before the maturity date of your CD, you incur a substantial penalty for early withdrawal. The Opportunity Plus CD gives you liquidity and a guaranteed higher rate if you renew.

Money When You Need It

At Briercroft, we know there are times when you need a liquid investment. Should you need your money for an emergency, you may withdraw anytime after the first 90 days with no penalty and without giving prior notice. Even if you withdraw a portion of your principal, we will still guarantee a 1.00% rate increase on the remaining principal when you renew your certificate.

Here's How It Works

When you invest a minimum of $10,000 for one year, you can withdraw your funds as often as once every 90 days with no interest penalty. Your interest will be paid quarterly. At the end of the year, you have an option. You can either withdraw your money or, if you choose to renew for a second year, Briercroft will guarantee a 1.00% increase over your original rate of interest. If you choose to renew at the end of year two, Briercroft will guarantee another 1.00% increase over the second year rate of interest.

The Chamber of Commerce is a great place to get to know other business people in the community. Whether it's at their trade show, seminars, or business mixers the Chamber offers me the opportunity to meet new people, renew friendships, and share ideas and thoughts about what's going on in Midland. This contact has been beneficial for my business — but most of all I really feel my membership in the Chamber of Commerce is the best investment I can make in Midland's future.

Dollar mixed gold firmer

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed in early European trading today. Gold prices firmed.

European currency dealers said the dollar has recovered from worse-than-expected U.S. trade figures for July.

But they said the market was waiting for U.S. retail sales figures for August, due to be released later today. Those figures were expected to rise two percentage points over July.

"The only factor in favor of the dollar is that people say the trade figures were bad, but they won't be so bad again," said a dealer at a Munich-based bank, citing special factors in the July figures such as larger-than-usual oil imports.

In London, one British pound cost $1.6360 today, more expensive than Monday's $1.6345.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

— 1.8207 West German marks, down from 1.8225

— 1.5115 Swiss francs, up from 1.5110

— 6.0825 French francs, unchanged

— 2.0490 Dutch guilders, down from 2.0505

— 1,315.50 Italian lire, up from 1,310.60

— 1.3165 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3210

All financial institutions were closed in Tokyo today for Respect for the Aged Day, a national holiday. The Japanese yen was trading in London at 144.53. It closed in Tokyo at 143.90 Monday.

Gold prices were firming in early European trading, but bullion dealers said there was little reason for it.

"It is just a drift up," said a London dealer, predicting the market would not let the metal rise above $460.00 an ounce.

Bullion trading was light because of the closure of the Tokyo market and because currency markets and the situation in the Persian Gulf were quiet, dealers said.

STOCKS

Stocks win bonds higher

Stocks posted their fourth straight winning session Monday, with the Dow Jones industrial average closing up 4.30 at 2,613.04.

Bond prices rose in early trading Monday, but closed mixed. The Treasury's closely watched 30-year bond fell $1.25 for every $1,000 in face value while its yield rose to 9.51 percent from 9.40 percent late Friday.

Credit markets usually follow the direction of the dollar, but while the U.S. currency rose Monday, Treasury issues declined. Analysts were not sure why.

RETAIL SALES

Surging auto demand sends retail sales upward

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales, bolstered by a surge in demand for autos, climbed 1.3 percent in August, the biggest increase in six months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that retail establishments sold $128.6 billion worth of goods in August, up $1.6 billion from the July sales level after adjusting for seasonal variations.

It was the biggest monthly sales increase since a 4.8 percent jump last February and it followed revised increases of 0.5 percent in July and 1.2 percent in June.

Most of the strength in August came from a rebound in auto sales, spurred by new incentive programs automakers have been forced to offer customers in an effort to reduce huge backlogs of unsold cars.

Car sales shot up 4.5 percent last month, the biggest increase since a 13.7 percent rise in February.

Excluding autos, retail sales would have risen a much more modest 0.3 percent in August, down slightly from a 0.5 percent advance excluding cars in July.

Still, analysts were encouraged by the fact that retail sales have posted advances for three consecutive months. Earlier in the year there had been concern that high levels of consumer debt and sluggish income growth would force Americans to cut back on spending, espcially for big ticket items.

Since consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of overall economic activity, economists were worried that even a slight reduction in spending could jeopardize the current economic expansion.

With the rebound in consumer spending in recent months, many economimsts have boosted their forecats for overall economic growth for the second half of the year.

For August, sales of durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, were up 2.3 percent. However, all of the strength came from the jump in auto sales.

FSLIC opens sales center

DALLAS (AP) — Need a skyscraper? Or perhaps a gracious Southern home?

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. said Monday that such properties — part of the portfolio of failed institutions — will be offered for sale soon at markdowns of about 50 percent.

Prices range from $150,000 to $55 million, and sales will be on an all-cash basis.

In a new marketing step, the FSLIC opened a center to sell more than $400 million in real estate and mortgage loan portfolios acquired from failed institutions.

The properties will be listed at the FSLIC Southern Regional Office in Dallas. Interested buyers can browse through a slide show at the center advertising the properties.

"This marketing center represents FSLIC's intensified commitment to provide investors with improved access to, and information about, available properties and the process for acquiring them," said Mary Creedon, deputy director of the FSLIC.

The center is FSLIC's first such marketing operation, according to a prepared statement released by the corporation.

Despite Texas' softened real estate market, queries have been on the increase and there seems to be slight upturn in the market, said Tom Procopio, FSLIC southern region director.

"When I got here in May last year we only had a trickle of inquiries for properties, but we are receiving about 400 inquiries a month and it's going up every month," Procopio said.

More than 900 properties are available — including undeveloped land, housing developments and commercial buildings obtained from 16 failed thrift institutions located throughout the FSLIC's southern region — Ms. Creedon said.

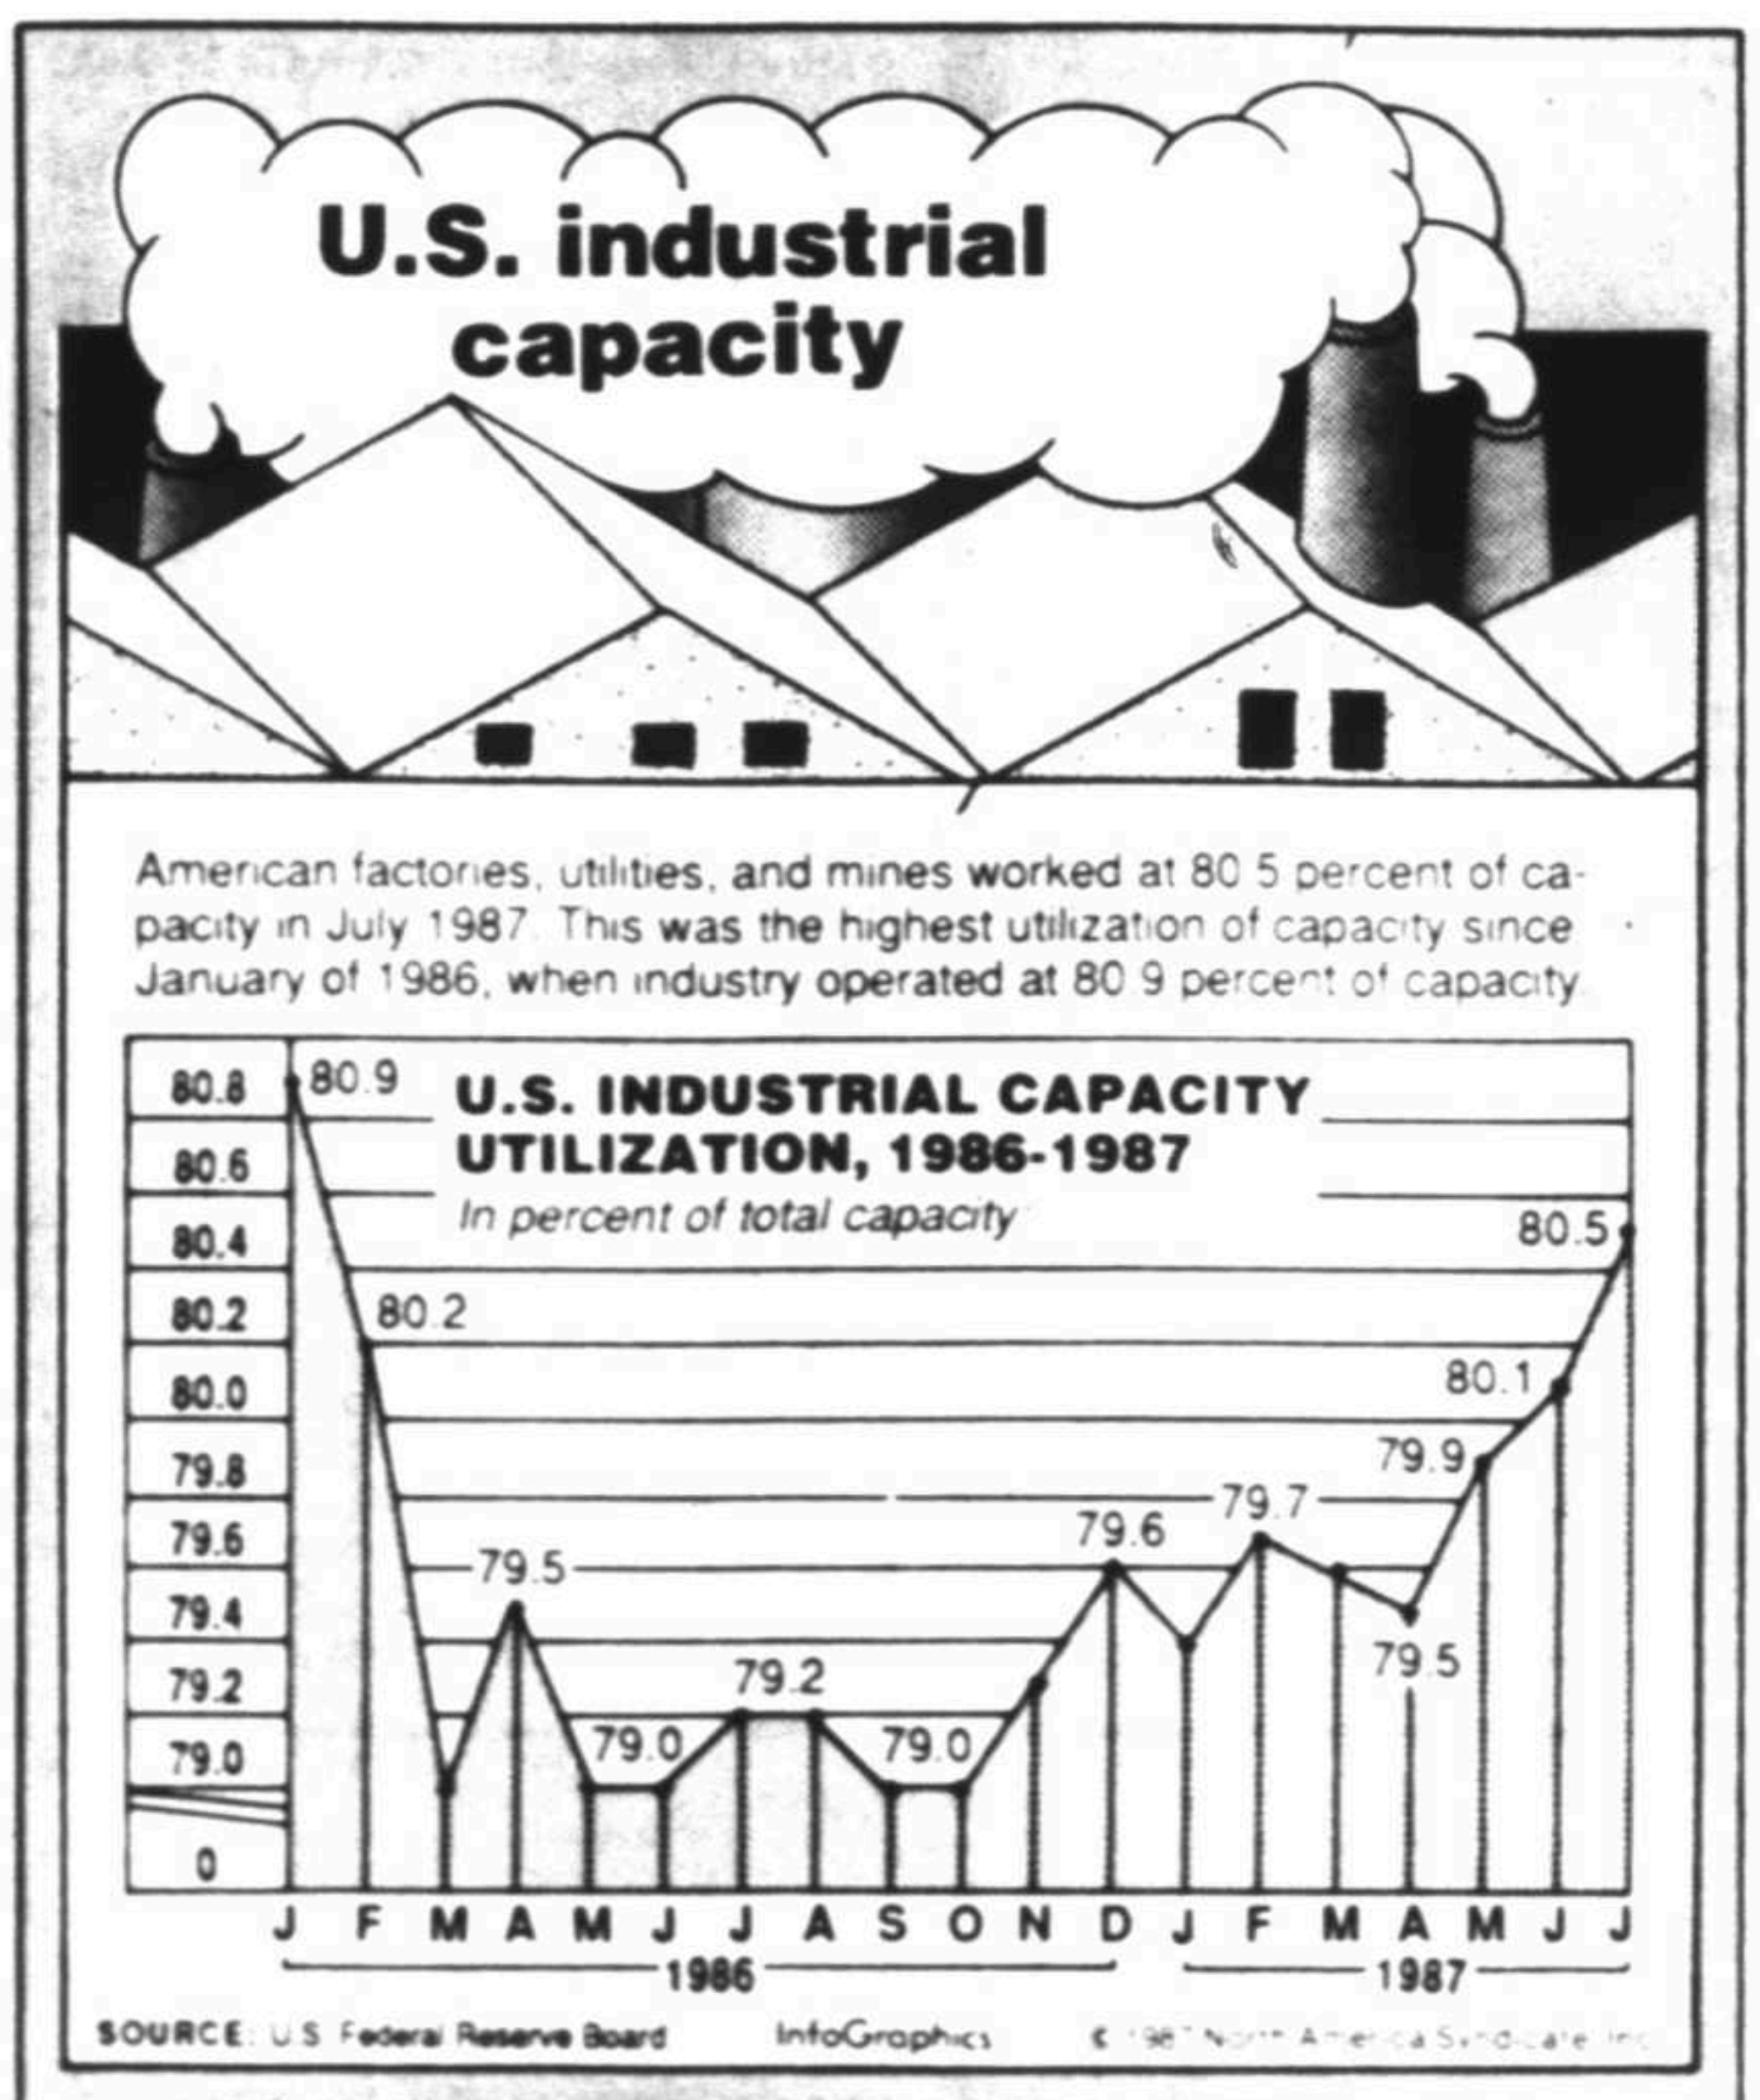
Approximately 70 percent of the properties are from Texas and the rest are from Alabama, Arkansas, California, Florida, Missouri and Nevada.

FSLIC assets managed by private contractors and the Federal Asset Disposition Association also will displayed in the marketing center. All together the 13,000 assets total about $1.5 billion, Procopio said.

Nationwide the FSLIC has about $7 billion in assets, he said.

Buyers can obtain a list of available properties and make inquiries through a letter of intent or on a standard contract form. After depositing their earnest money, buyers then have 30 days to evaluate the property and ensure that it meets their needs.

The Dallas market display center offers a 7-minute slide show displaying available properties and portfolios for prospective buyers to view.



American factories, utilities, and mines worked at 80.5 percent of capacity in July 1987. This was the highest utilization of capacity since January of 1986, when industry operated at 80.9 percent of capacity.

July's industrial capacity was high at 80.5 percent, and August output continued the upward trend.

Industrial production up from July high capacity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Output at the nation's factories, mines and utilities edged up 0.3 percent in August, the smallest increase since April, the government reported today.

The Federal Reserve said the August increase followed much stronger gains of 0.8 percent in July and 0.7 percent in both June and May.

It was the smallest advance since a 0.1 percent rise in April. Still, it marked the seventh consecutive month that industrial production has increased as American manufacturers reap the benefits of a weaker dollar, which has boosted demand for U.S. products on overseas markets.

There was a sharp cutback in production of passenger cars, which dropped 11 percent in August as automakers reduced output in the face of a huge backlog of unsold cars as well as difficulties in obtaining some parts.

Autos were assembled at an annual rate of 5.9 million units in August, down from a July rate of 6.7 million units. This decline was offset, however, by a further surge in production of light trucks, leaving overall auto production up slightly in August.

Overall, production at U.S. manufacturing plants rose 0.3 percent in August, just one-third of the 0.9 percent gain in July. Production at factories making durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, was up 0.5 percent while output of non-durable goods rose a much smaller 0.1 percent.

Output of business equipment, which has grown rapidly this year, increased a sharp 1 percent in August, reflecting improved demand both domestically and overseas.

Output at the nation's mines was unchanged in August following a 0.2 percent July decline. This sector, which includes oil and gas well drilling, is 2.3 percent higher than a year ago, reflecting a small improvement following the steep declines in 1986 caused by falling oil prices.

Bad loans force big banks to trim payroll

NEW YORK (AP) — Continuing loan problems, ever-heightening competition and other pressures against earnings make it likely more major banks will slash overhead costs and sell non-strategic businesses in coming years, analysts say.

In the latest such move, Chemical New York Corp. announced plans Monday to cut payrolls by about 10 percent at its Chemical Bank unit and other unspecified businesses. It also plans to sell its consumer finance subsidiary and other non-strategic assets.

Chemical, the nation's fourth-largest bank holding company, said it would take a one-time charge of about $135 million for costs stemming from the restructuring, resulting in a $65 million net loss for its third quarter.

But it also said it expected the moves to increase its pretax earnings by about $150 million annually beginning next year.

"If you want to be a major player in the 1990s you're going to have to strengthen your financial performance," said Ken Herz, a Chemical spokesman. "We think in the year 1992 we're going to be awfully happy we undertook this thing."

The company's stock rose $1.37½ a share to $39.75 Monday in New York Stock Exchange trading.

The move reflects changes already undertaken or foreseen for several major banks that have seen operating expenses rise steadily in recent years.

A key factor hastening the trend is the wave of losses the big banks suffered in the second quarter, when they added billions of dollars to their reserves for covering potentially uncollectable loans.

Chemical had a $1.1 billion loss in that quarter because, like other big banks, it made a major increase in its reserves for covering potential bad loans to Third World debtors.

The industry as a whole was expected to earn about $5 billion to $6 billion in 1987, down sharply from the $17.9 billion earned last year, largely because of the loan loss reserves.

Earnings also have suffered from a decline in revenue from traditional businesses such as corporate lending, which has been invaded in force by foreign and domestic competitors. In addition, as the capital markets became more accessible for traditional bank customers they are increasingly likely to meet their financing needs with commercial paper as with bank loans.

Although bank earnings have grown in recent years, analysts note that part of the gains stemmed from non-recurring factors such as trading profits from the bull market in bonds and from volatile foreign exchange markets of the mid-1980s.

"I think there's a definite trend at larger institutions to streamline somewhat," said Charles Orabutt Jr., of the Chicago investment firm Duff and Phelps Inc. "I think it's critical they do so."

Deficit hits record

Jumps to $44.1 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deficit in the broadest measure of U.S. foreign trade swelled to a record $41.1 billion from April through June, pushing the country further into hock as the world's largest debtor nation, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the imbalance in the nation's current account rose 11.7 percent from the $36.8 billion deficit in the January-March quarter and was well above the previous record of $38.0 billion set in the final three months of last year.

The current account is considered the most important trade figure because it measures not only trade in merchandise but also trade in services, primarily the flow of investment funds between the United States and other countries.

The United States suffered a record $141.4 billion deficit in the current account for all of 1986. The performance during the first six months of this year indicates the 1987 deficit will easily surpass that mark.

The government has already reported that the July-September quarter got off to a disastrous start with the trade deficit in just merchandise soaring to an all-time high of $16.5 billion in July.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said Monday that the recent string of bad U.S. trade deficit reports would make it harder for the Reagan administration to head off congressional passage of tough trade restraints. Baker warned of international trade wars if Congress passes legislation similar to that now before a House-Senate conference committee.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Discretion needed in administering trust between CDs, mutual funds

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. My father passed away two years ago, leaving his $100,000 estate in a trust to take care of my mother. My mother had no experience managing money and put her money, also about $100,000, in a separate trust. My brother, sister and I are the trustees of both trusts. I do all the paperwork.

The trusts are in certificates of deposit at three savings and loan associations with Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. coverage. Both trusts have small money market deposit accounts, into which the CD interest is deposited. As needed, I move money into my mother's personal checking account.

Mother is 68, in good health and happy with the way things have worked out. She gets her Social Security checks and sometimes needs a little interest from the trusts. Her life style has not changed.

The trouble is that my sister has started working part-time for a company selling mutual funds and insurance. She wants to put ALL the trust money into mutual funds with that company. She says CDs are a rip-off and FSLIC is not worth anything.

My brother is tied up with his own concerns and doesn't care what we do with the trusts. My mother is worried about investing in anything she doesn't understand. She has faith in FSLIC CDs, because our father kept his money in them.

This is tearing the family apart. Can you advise?

A. You're going to have to calm your sister down. Like many other people who peddle mutual funds part-time, she's Gung-Ho — probably from attending motivational sales meetings. Those sessions are close to three-ring circuses.

If Sis really believes FSLIC coverage is worthless, she has been brainwashed by that sales organization. Congress recently passed and President Reagan signed legislation replenishing that federal deposit insurance fund.

It's possible — perhaps, likely — that your mother's money would do better in mutual funds than in CDs. Over the years, most mutual funds have produced investment results superior to CDs.

However, except for money market mutual funds, all of which have yields lowers than CDs, there is risk in all other mutual funds. Given her financial situation, your mother's money should not be put at risk.

There would be no harm in putting a small amount from the trusts, say, $10,000, into a mutual fund. That might satisfy your sister and get her off your back. But, as for putting all or even a major part of the trust money into mutual funds, my advice is: "NO WAY."

If push comes to shove, convince your brother to vote with you against your sister's notion. Remind him that, as trustees, you have a fiduciary responsibility to invest the money in a prudent manner for your mother's benefit.

Q. I am 79, in poor health, with no heirs or close relatives to advise me. I have finally decided how I wish to leave my money. The amount is large to me, having been saved over three generations. But it would be small to trust departments at banks.

Is there a better choice than a bank trust department?

A. There might be. However, by using a trust department, you can join the choir silent knowing that what you leave will be handled efficiently and exactly as you desire.

The trust department fees might be stiff, because they typically are a small percentage of the estate. The more you leave, the lower the percentage charge. Check with your bank and several others.

You might be advised to simply have a will drawn up, leaving everything to be turned over to the organization you have picked.

But if you have a complicated plan in mind for distributing your estate, an expert executor will be needed. A good trust department, with experience in those matters, would do very helpful.

Black chamber encourages entrepreneurship for youth

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs Inc. met the members of its newest affiliate organization – the Chamber of Young Entrepreneurs – at its monthly meeting Monday night. Seven of the new group's 20 members were present for the meeting.

Designed to encourage the entrepreneurial potential of the youngsters between junior high and junior college ages in the community, the MBCE's youth organization held its organizational meeting late last month.

Although the only specific project on the drawing board for the young entrepreneurs group is a newsletter, Felecisima Collins MBCE liaison with the group says the plan is for members of the youth group to work with departmental vice presidents to learn what's involved in running a chamber of commerce-type organization.

In addition to "learning the ropes" of the chamber, developing contacts in the business community will hopefully "prepare them for a career as an entrepreneur or in another role in the business world," Ms. Collins explained.

The first project the young entrepreneurs will be active in is the Alvin Ailey Repertory Dance Ensemble's Celebration in Dance, Oct. 16. Among the tasks to be completed by the chamber and its new young assistants in the next month are ticket sales for the 545-seat Theater Midland and advertising sales for the commemorative program.

More than simply an opportunity to bring an outstanding cultural event to Midland, the Ailey dance celebration is also a fund-raiser to support the Young Chamber and other MBCE programs, said James Fuller, chairman of the chamber's task force for the event.

Cameron pays $61.5 million for Smith's McEvoy-Willis

HOUSTON (SWN) — Cameron Iron Works Inc., announced that Sept. 11, a U.S. bankruptcy court in Los Angeles, approved its purchase of the McEvoy-Willis division of Smith International Inc., at a purchase price of $61.5 million subject to certain adjustments.

The bankruptcy court approval came after an open court auction in which one other bidder participated. Smith has been in a Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceeding since March 1986.

Cameron and Smith had previously entered into definitive agreements covering the transaction. The closing is scheduled for September 30, 1987, subject to satisfaction of the remaining terms and conditions of those agreements.

McEvoy-Willis manufactures land and marine wellhead equipment and choke valves for the worldwide oil and gas industry. The division had 1986 sales of $91 million and operates manufacturing facilities in the United States and foreign locations.

Cameron Iron Works, Inc., a vertically integrated worldwide company, designs and manufactures oil tools for oil and gas drilling and production, and makes forged products for the aerospace, military and power generation industries.

American ups WellTech share

HOUSTON (SWN) — American Oil & Gas Corp. announced that it has acquired approximately 43 percent of the shares of WellTech Inc., in exchange for 850,000 common shares of American.

This acquisition, in addition to the 37 percent already owned by American, will result in American owning in excess of 80 percent of WellTech. Simultaneously, American is offering to acquire the remaining shares on the same terms.

The combination of American and WellTech will result in a company with approximately $100 million of assets, $30 million of stockholders' equity and annual revenues projected at $150 million. Shares outstanding after the combination on a fully diluted basis will be approximately 9,500,000.

BANKS

Some of the major banks have adjusted in recent years by attempting to increase their presence in the capital markets and other non-traditional areas. Others already have felt the sting of major restructuring programs aimed at dealing with the industry consolidation.

BankAmerica Corp., which lost about $855 million in its last two fiscal years, has been selling non-strategic assets for some time. In addition, it slashed 14,800 jobs from its payroll in the year ended June 30.

Mellon Bank Corp., the venerable Pittsburgh bank holding company, plans a $65 million belt-tightening that includes cutting 1,900 jobs, about 10 percent of its payroll, by year-end. The cuts are part of a restructuring following Mellon's $626 million loss in the first half of this year due to problem foreign, steel, energy and real estate loans.

Analysts said further cutbacks were expected at other banks, although they were unsure whether any would match the magnitude of Chemical's.

Chemical, which employs about 21,000 people, will make its cutbacks through layoffs, attrition and voluntary retirement.

DEFICIT

While the United States has run a deficit in merchandise trade for 15 of the past 16 years, the current account was in surplus as recently as 1981 as Americans' earnings on overseas investments were enough to offset the merchandise deficits.

But a flood of foreign goods has wiped out the cushion once provided by investment earnings. This situation has made the United States the world's largest debtor country as Americans have handed over billions of dollars to foreigners in exchange for imported goods.

Being a net debtor means that foreigners now own more in U.S. investments than Americans hold in foreign investments. The United States was last a net debtor nation in 1914. It regained that status in 1985 with a foreign debt of $111.9 billion. That debt grew to $263.6 billion at the end of last year.

The current account deficits so far this year indicate the country's foreign debt has risen well above $300 billion, putting the United States far ahead of Brazil, the previous debt leader with a foreign debt totaling $108 billion.

The deterioration in the current account deficit in the second quarter was led by a 2 percent increase in the merchandise trade deficit, which edged up to $39.5 billion.

John Paul II meets Benjamin Bad Bear

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

NATION

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — "You're too young to realize it," Thomasine Bad Bear told her 2-year-old son, "but one day you will tell your grandchildren that you saw the pope, here in Arizona."

Litle Benjamin Bad Bear, from the Crow tribe, was as wide-eyed as some of the bishops when a Pima medicine man in full regalia raised an eagle feather and blessed the pope, who spends a good deal of his time blessing others from his Popemobile.

All in all, Pope John Paul II's meeting with 14,000 native Americans in Phoenix on Monday was an event worthy of the directorial skills of John Ford.

There was the pontiff enthroned on the summit of a mechanized mesa that turned to the four winds, surrounded by a council ring of chiefs in full plumage, bishops in crimson sashes, even a brown-robed Franciscan in sandals to evoke the old missionary days. Tom-toms and rattles heralded the arrival of the buckskinned and moccasined dancers, who provoked the stars — or at least countless strobe lights — to share their dazzle.

Then an Eskimo from Alaska with a mighty voice sang the Lord's Prayer, which was simultaneously broadcast into the sign language of many tribes by a dozen beaded and feathered translators.

Only the scoreboard and a few Coors beer signs betrayed the setting as Veterans Memorial Coliseum, the home of basketball's Phoenix Suns, instead of a a great council fire sending up a few real whiffs of cedar smoke.

While conceding that "mistakes" and "blunders" were made in the church's past dealings with the Indians, he defended the early missionaries for bringing schools, improved living conditions and "above all proclaiming the gospel" throughout the Southwest.

The pope drew scattered applause when he made "special mention" of missionary Junipero Serra, a candidate for sainthood whose grave in Carmel, Calif., he will visit later in the week over the protest of some Indian leaders.

Opposition to Serra's canonization centers on accusations that he stood by while Spanish troops enslaved and mistreated Indians.

But twice the assemblage of Indians from dozens of tribes came to its feet, cheering and waving feathers, when mention was made of Kateri Tekakwitha, the Mohawk maiden who was driven out of her tribe for embracing Catholicism and whom Indians hope will soon be raised to sainthood.

The pontiff, who seven years ago declared her "blessed," a major step toward sainthood, praised her to tumultuous applause as "an outstanding example of Christian life."

"I will not be upset if they make a saint of Father Serra," said 16-year-old Lasan DeCora, a Papago Indian who traveled 100 miles from the Anegam with 17 members of her family to see the pope. "But I do hope they soon make a saint of the lily of the Mohawks so that I can pray to her to help me become a surgeon and work among my people."

Lasan said that during his American trip, she prays every night for the safety of the pope, who she does not think "it is at all disrespectful or too Hollywood to call the great white father."

Hugh Enos, a Presbyterian who had come from the Pima-Papago reservation at Upper Santan, Ariz., nodded in vigorous agreement when the pontiff praised the gathering "as noble descendants of countless generations inhabiting this land, whose ways were marked by great respect for the natural resources of land and river, of forest and plain and desert."

"I work in a hazardous waste dump and what he says is very true," Enos affirmed. "My people moved softly through this land and buried no hazardous materials in Mother Earth. I wonder if the pope knows 250 of our empty drums, filled with water, were used in Phoenix as barriers for his parade route."

Bork protested throughout country

Associated Press

Up to 1,500 people jammed a Philadelphia church to protest Robert H. Bork's nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court on the eve of today's Senate confirmation hearings, while smaller groups rallied in Washington and elsewhere.

The mock "funeral for justice" in Philadelphia on Monday night drew a spectrum of liberal groups who view the nomination of Bork, a conservative federal appeals court judge, as a threat to hard-won civil rights victories.

At Yale University, Bork's old school, about 250 students gathered on the steps of the law school Monday to protest his nomination.

In Washington, 100 people held a candlelight vigil Monday night at the Supreme Court building, while in San Francisco, 30 protesters gathered on the steps of the federal building.

In Toledo, Ohio, and Seattle, minority groups banded together with lawyers and labor leaders in efforts to persuade legislators to block Bork's move to the nation's highest court.

In Louisville, Ky., about 50 people gathered to organize a letter-writing campaign to defeat Bork's nomination.

And in Iowa, a coalition of 17 labor and women's groups began working to block Bork's appointment as University of Iowa students rallied against Bork on the eve of his confirmation hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

A woman dressed as Lady Justice carried a scale tipping far to the right at the mock funeral in Philadelphia.

Rep. William Gray III, D-Pa., urged the protesters to "rededicate and recommit ourselves to the struggle for freedom and justice in this society.

Robertson exceeds goal, entering race

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — Television evangelist Pat Robertson, fresh from an upset victory over his Republican rivals, said today he has exceeded his goal of 3 million signatures in support of his presidential campaign and will formally enter the race on Oct. 1.

Robertson also said he has received more than $10 million in contributions.

At this southern Virginia community where he has his campaign headquarters, Robertson recalled in a prepared statement that a year ago he began an effort to determine "if there truly exists a grassroots groundswell of support for a candidacy by me for the Republican nomination for the presidency of the United States."

Standing in front of bundles of petitions, many headed "Go for It Pat," Robertson said his campaign "has to my satisfaction accumulated the names of an estimated 3.3 million Americans to encourage my candidacy."

He said he would try to obtain another 4 million names before the first primaries are held in 1988.

Earlier on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," Robertson said his campaign "looks like it is a go," but that he didn't want to take any steam away from his formal Oct. 1 announcement.

Robertson's prospects got a boost on Saturday when he stunned frontrunners Vice President George Bush and Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas by winning a straw poll at a Republican meeting in Ames, Iowa.

The event was thought to be a battle between Bush and Dole, who are running neck and neck in most polls in Iowa where precinct caucuses next February will be one of the earliest tests of the campaign.

But when the straw votes were counted, the surprise winner was Robertson with 33.6 percent of the votes. Dole was second with 24.9 percent and Bush third with 22.4.

The Robertson campaign pulled off its biggest coup a year ago when it out-organized Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York in a contest to select thousands of party delegates in Michigan. While the exact breakdown of that contest won't be known until party meetings next January, it is generally conceded that Robertson finished first, Bush second and Kemp third.

Robertson also has made strong showings in South Carolina and Florida.

"I've won four out of four and if that isn't electable I don't know what is," he said after the Iowa vote, responding to claims that even if nominated he could not win a general election.

Bush conceded, "We've got a lot of work to do."

At a news conference Monday in Milwaukee, the vice president said, "Pat Robertson came on like gangbusters."

"I was impressed," said George Wittgraf, Bush's Iowa campaign manager. "There was a lot of hard work and a lot of discipline. He is a serious candidate and this is another indication of the seriousness of his candidacy."

"He got a lot of respect tonight from the other candidates," said Steve Roberts, a Des Moines lawyer active in Dole's campaign.

Iran reduces Strait of Hormuz risks

EDITOR'S NOTE — Richard Pyle, the Cairo-based Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, filed this report as a member of the journalists' pool covering U.S. Navy activities in the Persian Gulf.

By RICHARD PYLE

ABOARD USS GUADALCANAL IN THE GULF OF OMAN (AP) — Iran recently has taken steps that reduce the threat posed by its Silkworm anti-ship missiles to shipping in the Strait of Hormuz, U.S. military sources say.

While details were not divulged, the change was reflected in the fact that U.S. warships escorting two reflagged Kuwaiti tankers through the narrow Hormuz passage from the Persian Gulf to the Gulf of Oman maintained full alert for a shorter period than previous convoys had.

The convoy of two tankers, a U.S. Navy fuel tanker and three warships including the 18,000-ton helicopter carrier Guadalcanal cleared the 110-mile strait in a lingering twilight Monday without any overt signs of aggression from the Iranians.

Aboard Guadalcanal, the crew went to a full alert, or battle stations, for three hours — far less than has been customary for warships making the dangerous transit.

The reason for the difference, according to a U.S. source who spoke on condition he was not identified, was that recent military intelligence reports have indicated a reduction in the scope of the "Silkworm envelope," the Navy's term for the stretch of Iranian coastline where the long-range Chinese-built missiles are considered a threat to shipping.

According to charts used by the Navy, the convoy was almost an hour into the strait before Capt. Skip Dirren, the commander of the Guadalcanal, ordered his crew to General Quarters, the highest stage of alert.

Dirren said the determining factor in that decision was "the threat," but declined to elaborate.

He said, however, that the reduced time at General Quarters was good news for some members of his crew, who were scheduled to take tests today for promotions.

"It's a lucky break for the kids, not to have to spend eight hours at General Quarters," said Dirren, 44, of Virginia Beach, Va.

The Guadalcanal's crew were at full alert, in combat gear and at battle stations, for eight hours during the carrier's entry into the gulf through the Strait of Hormuz in mid-August, according to Cmdr. Howard Nesbitt, the ship's executive officer.

The carrier, which transports eight RH-53D mine-sweeping helicopters that clear a path for the tanker convoys, left the gulf Monday for the first time since its arrival. It was to take on supplies from a replenishment ship in the Gulf of Oman, outside the strait.

The convoy included two missile frigates, Rents and Flatley, escorting two petroleum products carriers, the 81,283-ton Surf City and the 79,999-ton Chesapeake City, and a surprise starter, the U.S. Navy supply tanker Sealift Mediterranean.

The mine sweepers from the Guadalcanal were at work as the convoy neared the strait, dragging gear designed to cut submerged mines loose from their moorings.

The mine sweeping was being done not for the outbound ships but for another convoy that entered the gulf and passed the outbound group at mid-morning.

The inbound group, escorted by the frigate Hawes and the missile destroyer Kidd, was to split up after entering the gulf.

U.S. officials said earlier that the 401,382-ton supertanker Bridgeton, which led the inbound convoy, was headed for a shipyard in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, for repairs to its hull, damaged by a mine during the first convoy on July 24.

The other ships in the convoy were the 46,723-ton Gas Prince, which made the first trip with the Bridgeton and has since been to Japan, and the 290,085-ton Al-Funtas, the last of 11 Kuwaiti tankers slated to be re-registered under the Stars and Stripes to protect them from Iranian attack.

The Al-Funtas, soon to be renamed Middleton, was also bound for Dubai where it will be converted to a petroleum products carrier, according to U.S. officials.

The southern gulf waters were exceptionally busy as the two convoys passed within about 1,500 yards of each other — two parades of ships surrounded by mine-sweeping helicopters and other helicopters flying protective cover. An Iranian naval supply ship observed from a discreet distance.

The Iranian ship, identified by U.S. officers as the Cushehr, sailed alongside the carrier for a while until the frigate Klakring, running up a huge U.S. flag as a battle ensign, interposed itself between the two and the Iranian ship sailed off.

The Hormuz passage took the convoy near the Oman coast, where a haze covered the sawtoothed mountains.

On the darkened bridge of the Guadalcanal, officers were constantly calling for checks on other vessels in the busy strait — from large tankers to small Oman navy patrol boats.

Just as the Liberian-flagged tanker, the Grand, had hitched a ride with the outbound convoy — the second time in a week it has trailed along with the U.S. warships — a Greek container ship sailed alongside the group of ships heading into the gulf.

The traffic in the waterway included a tanker being accompanied by the British destroyer Edinburgh. The British vessel's captain sent a message to Dirren, his counterpart aboard the Guadalcanal: "It is reassuring to see you here."

Message of peace opens U.N. session

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The General Assembly, which draws a parade of world leaders to New York each year, opens its 42nd session today with a message from the secretary-general saying the "dynamics of peace are at work."

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar was not due back at the United Nations from his peace mission to Iran and Iraq until Wednesday. However, the 67-year-old Peruvian diplomat released a message to the assembly today, noting there were "many elements of profound and incalculable danger" worldwide.

"But the dynamics of peace are at work," he added. "There are hopeful signs of a realization that greater security can be assured with fewer weapons and more development."

Perez de Cuellar's mission to end the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war drew special attention at the world body on the eve of the new General Assembly's 13-week session.

"It is our fervent prayer that his journey is fruitful and that this sad episode in human history is finally concluded," Humayun Rasheed Choudhury, the foreign minister of Bangladesh, said Monday in a speech closing the 41st General Assembly, of which he was president.

Iran's president, Ali Khamenei, will be among a dozen heads of state who will address the General Assembly during a three-week general debate that starts Sept. 21. A visit by such a high-level Iranian official to the United States is rare, since Washington and Tehran have no diplomatic relations.

Khamenei speaks to the General Assembly Sept. 22, President Reagan addresses the body Sept. 21 and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze is scheduled to speak Sept. 23.

Choudhury closed the 41st session by calling on the 159-member United Nations to focus on two things: closing the gap between the world's rich and poor and achieving global disarmament.

"While some countries continue in their opulence, there are others in whom the pangs of poverty instill a numbing sense of despair," Choudhury said.

He said many people feared the Earth has become "an Armageddon of horror and destruction."

But he said he was optimistic about recent progress on arms control, including a proposed U.S.-Soviet treaty to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

The 42nd General Assembly is xpected to name Peter Florin, East Germany's deputy foreign minister, as Choudhury's successor as president.

Perez de Cuellar is scheduled to deliver a report to the 15-nation Security Council this week.

He is trying to get the warring nations to comply with a Security Council resolution passed July 20 that demands a cease-fire and calls on each side to return to internationally recognized borders and exchange war prisoners.

U.S. officials have said that if Perez de Cuellar is unable to report progress in implementing the resolution, the United States may ask the Security Council to declare a worldwide arms embargo against Iran.

Peace mission ends; Iran moderates stance

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar left for New York today, concluding a peace mission during which Baghdad called for international sanctions against Iran and Tehran insisted that Iraq be condemned as the aggressor.

He told reporters at the airport he discussed in detail in Tehran and Baghdad "an outline of a plan for the implementation of the (U.N. Security Council) resolution" calling for a truce in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

"I did not arrive empty-handed," the U.N. chief said. He refused to elaborate.

A U.N. source, who briefed reporters earlier on condition of anonymity, said Perez de Cuellar found that Iran has moderated its stance regarding a cease-fire.

"There seems to be a certain like movement, maybe not enough but at least you can talk about things which a year ago when we were there (in Tehran) the first time we were not even able to discuss," said the source.

Perez de Cuellar took off from Baghdad airport at 3:15 p.m. aboard a private jet.

Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz was at the airport to see him off.

Aziz today renewed a call for punitive measures against Iran for failing to respond to the July 20 U.N. resolution.

The resolution calls for an immediate, unconditional cease-fire, withdrawal of troops to internationally recognized borders and an exchange of prisoners. Iran would have to withdraw from Iraqi territory.

"We welcomed the Security Council resolution 598 not because...we don't have our points of view about this or that element in it, but because we accepted it as a binding resolution taken by the authority in this world which is in charge of peace and order," Aziz said in English.

He said Iraq would reject any changes in the resolution and that Iraq hopes the council "will abide by its own resolution, its spirit and its sequence."

Aziz met twice with Perez de Cuellar during his two-day stay in Baghdad.

He said that "we hope...the Security Council will not waste any time in reaching and drawing the right conclusion about the situation and then head toward the second stage." That was a reference to a call for punishment of any side that fails to abide by the resolution's provisions.

Asked about Iran's demand that Iraq be branded the aggressor and punished, Aziz said: "Iran is the aggressor...If anybody is going to be punished for that, it is the Iranian regime."

Iraq invaded Iran in September 1980 after border clashes. Iraq says the war began two weeks earlier when Iran shelled border towns.

Perez de Cuellar flew into Baghdad Sunday after a two-day visit to Tehran.

He met with President Saddam Hussein and Monday. Foreign Ministry officials said he and Aziz conferred again today before he left for home.

In the Persian Gulf, where Iran and Iraq have observed an undeclared truce in their tanker war since Thursday, two Kuwaiti tankers with U.S. warship escorts moved north toward Kuwait today.

U.S. sources said military intelligence reports indicated Iran recently reduced the area threatened by its Silkworm anti-ship missiles in the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the gulf. The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, did not give details.

The U.N. source traveling with Perez de Cuellar said the U.N. chief managed to "nail down the positions of the governments" of Iran and Iraq on the cease-fire resolution.

He said Tehran's leaders had for the first time been willing to discuss a truce.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Strikes cause big losses

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Weeks of labor unrest have cost the nation $1.59 billion in lost production and $520 million in exports, the Trade and Industry Ministry said Tuesday.

Officials said the figures accounted for losses from July 25, when the ministry began compiling statistics, to Sept. 11.

Hardest hit was the auto industry, which suffered $870 million in production losses, according to the ministry. The next hardest hit was the electronics industry, with $267 million in production losses, followed by shipbuilding ($156 million), metals ($98 million), and chemicals ($82 million).

The auto industry suffered $254 million in export losses, making it the hardest hit in that area as well.

Electronics placed second in export losses, with $156 million, followed by metals ($37 million), and chemicals ($35 million).

The Labor Ministry said strikes have erupted at 3,241 work places since June 29, with all but 132 cases resolved through labaor-management negotiations.

The labor unrest included strikes at six workplaces with at least 1,000 employees each.

Oil spills off Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Coast guard and firefighting units Monday battled to clean up a huge oil spill that killed hundreds of water fowl and threatened the western Swedish coast.

The state-run radio said it was the worst oil spill in a decade in Swedish waters.

The spill, which was discovered Friday, apparently came from a leaking oil tanker, but the ship has not been found or identified. The oil drifted rapidly toward the coastline over the weekend.

Hostage incident foiled

PARIS (AP) — A gunman took two bank employees hostage in a robbery attempt, but he was taken into custody when police stormed the buidling and shot him in the leg, authorities said.

His two captives had managed to escape unharmed during the 4½-hour siege at the downtown bank.

The gunman burst into the Credit Lyonnais bank about 4 p.m. and demanded 1 million francs (about $167,000), police said.

All of the customers and personnel escaped, except for two women employees taken hostage, and a police SWAT team arrived on the scene about 45 minutes later.

About 8:30 p.m., the police charged the building after the two women had managed to reach an upper floor of the bank while the gunman remained downstairs.

After being shot in the leg by police, the gunman was taken unconscious to a hospital. There was no word on his condition.

He was identified as Messad Sidi Ahmad, an Algerian, and said to be wanted for two dozen burglaries and about 10 holdups.

Immigration issues eyed

OTTAWA (AP) — The House of Commons on Monday approved legislation that would give the government stronger powers to deal with illegal immigrants.

The bill, introduced at the start of a special summer session of Parliament called to deal with immigration issues, was passed by a vote of 92-52.

It was opposed by legislators of the Liberal and New Democrat parties during heated debate and they prepared for another fight in the Senate against the governing Conservatives.

The bill would allow authorities to detain refugees appealing for asylum, turn back ships carrying illegal immigrants, and impose penalties on refugee smugglers and others helping foreign nationals enter Canada without valid documents.

Elephant kills third person

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A circus elephant squeezed a horse trainer to death after the man climbed inside the animal's enclosure at the Ashton Circus in northern New South Wales, police said today.

The man was the third killed by Abu the elephant in 13 years.

A crowd of adults and children gasped as the 5,500-pound elephant pinned the man to the ground and crushed him Monday night in the town of Gunnedah.

Chlorofluorocarbon use may be reduced

MONTREAL (AP). — Foam cups, cushioned egg cartons, home refrigerators and car air conditioners are among everyday products responsible for damaging the veil of ozone that protects the Earth.

They all make use of chlorofluorocarbons, a range of super-chemicals discovered in the 1930s and favored for their non-toxic, non-flammable and non-corrosive qualities.

This week in Montreal, environment ministers and envoys from 43 countries hope to conclude a protocol on reducing the use of chlorofluorocarbons by 50 percent before the end of the century.

DuPont, the world's largest manufacturer of the chemicals, produces 250,000 tons a year under the brand name Freon at plants in six nations.

While environmentally safe in the lower atmosphere, scientists discovered in the 1970s that chlorofluorocarbons have a disastrous impact in the 25-mile ozone layer that forms a belt around the Earth from 10 to 30 miles high.

As a result, the United States banned use of the chemicals in aerosols in 1978. Canada and Scandinavia followed suit.

But the trouble didn't go away. Chlorofluorocarbon production for other uses is growing at about 5 percent a year and an estimated 1 million tons of chlorofluorocarbons are added to the atmosphere every year.

The United Nations Environment Program began meetings in 1982 to corral attention to the problem and a Vienna Convention for the Protection of the Ozone Layer was signed by 28 nations in 1985.

Still unresolved in Monday's meetings in Montreal was whether the pact to cut down on chlorofluorocarbon production should require ratification by countries that produce 60 percent of the chemicals, or 90 percent. The United States supports the higher percentage, while most other countries favor the lower number.

Lee Thomas, administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, said he was prepared to compromise but wanted to ensure that all major producers were covered by the agreement and U.S. manufacturers were not put at a competitive disadvantage.

More than 1 million jobs are involved in chlorofluorocarbon production, a $100 billion-a-year industry. Industries are trying to develop new, safer compounds.

Thomas said he was confident the Montreal conference would resolve differences over whether the European Economic Community should be treated as one unit or 12 separate countries.

"I am optimistic that the protocol can be concluded positively ... by Wednesday," added Thomas, who overcame opposition within the Reagan Cabinet to win authority last Saturday to sign the protocol.

In Washington, Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., a leading advocate of curbs on chlorofluorocarbons, called the Montreal proposals a "good first start" but said ozone-depleting chemicals ultimately must be eliminated. The Senate will have to ratify any treaty.

Some companies have already acted. The MacDonalds hamburger restaurant chain has announced it is replacing chlorofluorocarbon-filled plastic foam containers.

Ozone is a smelly, unstable gas formed by three atoms of oxygen. At ground level, too much of it forms smog.

But in the stratosphere, it protects the human race by absorbing the sun's ultraviolet rays, keeping the Earth from overheating and saving human beings from skin cancer and eye damage.

When refrigerator coolant leaks, plastic foam breaks down or aerosols are used, chlorofluorocarbons escape and eventually percolate into the stratosphere, where they can linger for decades.

Heated by the sun, the chlorofluorocarbon molecules come apart and the chlorine atom each contains can destroy up to 10,000 ozone molecules.

In 1985, British scientists reported that the ozone layer over the South Pole had decreased by 40 percent in 10 years. Latest research showed a similar thinning over the Arctic.

Most experts connect the polar gaps to an already observed 3 to 7 percent ozone depletion attributed to chlorofluorocarbons and other chemicals, such as the nitrogen in nitrous oxide fertilizers.

Dole leaving amid airline safety woes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole said today that her decision to resign and join her husband's presidential campaign was a personal choice to take on another cause.

"I loved the job" because of the opportunity to make a positive difference for people, she said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America." But, she added, her goal now is to see that Sen. Bob Dole is elected president.

There are serious implications in this effort to select the leader of the free world, Mrs. Dole said.

She announced her resignation Monday, leaving office at a time when her department is under fire from critics who are complaining about airline performance and safety.

She said she will leave office Oct. 1 to enter her husband's campaign fulltime, beginning with a 12-state campaign swing through the south. She said today that she expects to campaign separately from her husband, for the most part.

In a letter to President Reagan, she said the decision to resign came "with considerable soul searching" but that she no longer felt she could give her job top priority and still help the Dole campaign effort.

"I have always put the department first. ...Now I want to put the campaign first," Mrs. Dole, a soft-spoken, Harvard-educated native of North Carolina, told reporters.

Her departure creates a major Cabinet vacancy with only 16 months left in Reagan's term and as the Transportation Department has been in the spotlight this summer because of rising complaints from airline travelers and concerns about air safety.

Critics have blamed Mrs. Dole in part because the department has approved a string of airline mergers which has concentrated much of the industry in about a half-dozen large carriers.

Last month, the department announced new requirements for the airlines to disclose delays, but the effort was criticized by some members of Congress who vowed to pursue legislation that would impose broader restrictions on air carriers.

The new disclosure requirements were described by Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., as "too little, too late" from a department that often needs congressional prodding to take action.

Meanwhile, the airline industry has sharply criticized Mrs. Dole for becoming too involved in the activities of the Federal Aviation Administration. The Air Transport Association, which represents the major airlines, has intensified a campaign to have the FAA separated from its parent department.

After Mrs. Dole announced plans for tighter restrictions on private planes, the Aircraft Owners and Operators Association put advertisements in major newspapers calling for her resignation.

Mrs. Dole this year called for the hiring of more air traffic controllers. But her congressional critics said she only did so after Congress made clear it would require more controllers to be hired anyway.

It is likely that James Burnley, the department's deputy secretary, will assume Mrs. Dole's job temporarily, although sources suggest he is unlikely to be appointed on a permanent basis.

With Mrs. Dole's departure, the administration has no women of cabinet rank. An early name to surface as a possible successor was Patricia Goldman, a moderate Republican who is vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

Mrs. Dole has made no secret in the past that she enjoys her job as the country's eighth transportation secretary, the first woman to hold the post, and the highest ranking woman in the Reagan administration.

"She wanted to stay as long as she possibly could," an aide to Mrs. Dole said. "But she came to the realization this is about as long as she can stay and still give her husband all the help she wants to give him."

"She obviously was torn," said the aide, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified by name. Her final decision was not made until Sunday when she called the president and asked to meet with him Monday morning.

According to sources in the department and in the Dole campaign, Mrs. Dole, a greatly sought-after speaker, has been urged for some time to quit the department and devote more time to campaigning for her husband.

Mrs. Dole has traveled extensively this year, often in key presidential primary states. Last month she spent 21 days on the road, many of them on campaign trips for her husband.

She defended the purely politial trips, saying they amounted to the equivalent of 11 working days — all either vacation or her weekends, which she considers her own time.

Dole, the Senate minority leader, is expected to formally announce his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination early next month.

While pressure has mounted from Dole campaign strategists to get Mrs. Dole to join the campaign full time, aides to Mrs. Dole insisted Monday that no suh pressure came from the candidate himself.

Documents show confusion preceded crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Confusion over taxiways and radio frequencies marked the takeoff preparations of Northwest Flight 255 which crashed last month seconds after lifting off from the Detroit airport, according to documents.

Investigators are trying to determine whether the confusion caused the plane's two pilots to become so distracted from their routine preflight activities that they forgot to properly set the aircraft's wing flaps. The crash killed 156 people, including the pilots.

The wing flaps of the two-engine McDonnell Douglas MD-80 jetliner, bound for Phoenix, Ariz., were not in the proper takeoff position, inhibiting the plane's ability to lift, the government's investigation previously has concluded.

In all, about a half minute passed as the pilots and tower discussed a mixup in radio frequencies as Flight 255 was taxiing for a takeoff, according to a transcript of radio communications released Monday by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Neither the transcript nor the tape made clear which of the pilots was speaking.

The transcript showed a busy airport with controllers in contact with 52 aircraft flying into Detroit or preparing to take off during a 55-minute period. Weather conditions caused some departing aircraft to change runways which may have led to the radio frequency and taxiway problems for Flight 255.

According to the transcript, Flight 255 had been given a specific taxiway turnoff, "Charlie," to get to the new runway.

"I guess we went by Charlie. We're going to (runway) three-center, right?" the pilot asked the controller at one point. The controller, who was handling westbound traffic, acknowledged and provided new directions.

"Okay, ah we'll follow that heavy nineteen forty five," Flight 255 replied, alluding to a wide-body aircraft ahead of them.

"So long," the pilot added, indicating he understood he was being shifted to another controller, who was handling eastbound departures.

But the flight crew apparently did not change radio frequencies.

"Northwest two fifty five are you on the frequency?" the new controller, who was handling eastbound departures, asked Flight 255.

"Nobody turned us over til just now when I called him back," the pilot replied. He then asked whether he was supposed to have changed frequencies on his own or have waited for directions from the tower.

But the controller informed Flight 255 that the tower already had given directions several minutes earlier to change frequencies. "The controller (handling Flight 255 earlier) said he switched you over. Maybe another aircraft acknowleged," the new controller told the Northwest plane.

"We didn't acknowledge," the pilot of Flight 255 replied.

The transcript, however, showed that the original ground controller, indeed, had assigned Flight 255 a new frequency several minutes earlier, but that the acknowledgment was vague and the crew of Flight 255 may not have been aware of the change.

In all, the exchanges about radio frequencies took 32 seconds as Flight 255 continued to taxi to its takeoff position.

The transcript gave no indication as to what activities or conversations might have been going on during this time inside the cockpit of Flight 255. But aviation experts say this is the time the crew might have been occupied with going through a preflight checklist that would have included setting of the flaps.

Four minutes later the aircraft was ready for takeoff, but was given a three-minute hold from the tower, then cleared for takeoff. Flight 255 acknowledged and indicated it was about to depart.

It was the last to be heard from the aircraft as the controllers turned to other incoming and outbound traffic. Just over a minute later, the transcripts indicated something was amiss.

1787 Constitution Daybook

Associated Press

Saturday, Sept. 15, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Jacob Hiltzheimer "went with General Mifflin to see the Camel advertised in Shippen's Alley between Walnut and Spruce Streets, gave 1 (shilling) 6 (pence) each for seeing him."

CONFEDERATION TODAY

The congressional delegates in New York awaiting the one more delegate needed for a quorum continued to kill time as best they could.

CONVENTION TODAY

Daniel Carroll (Md.) opened the day by moving for a committee to prepare an address to the people to accompany the Constitution. John Rutledge (S.C.) and Roger Sherman (Conn.) pointed out that such an address would be improper before Congress acted on the document. The motion lost.

John Langdon (N.H.) then moved to add an extra representative each for North Carolina and Rhode Island. Sherman supported one for North Carolina. Rufus King (Mass.) was against changing and said he wouldn't sign if Rhode Island's representation was increased. Charles Pinckney (S.C.) and Gunning Bedford (Del.) favored the motion. Rhode Island and North Carolina were voted on separately. Each lost, 5 aye, 6 no.

Section by section, the Convention continued to work through the document, debating several points and making changes. Edmund Randolph (Va.), George Mason (Va.) and Elbridge Gerry (Mass.) then stated their objections, and Randolph moved for a second convention to respond to the issues raised during ratification. At that point, James Madison records:

"On the question on the proposition of Mr. Randolph. All the States answered — no. On the question to agree to the Constitution, as amended. All the States ay. The Constitution was then ordered to be engrossed.

"And the House adjourned."

DELEGATES TODAY

George Washington noted the day's events as follows: "Concluded the business of Convention, all to signing the proceedings; to effect which the House sat till 6 o'clock; and adjourned till Monday that the Constitution which it was proposed to offer to the People might be engrossed and a number of printed copies struck off. Dined at Mr. Morris' and spent the evening there."

James Madison, in preparation for his return to New York as a Virginia congressman, borrowed $100 from John Blair (Va.), who would be going home and who apparently had part of his expense money left.

Thomas Fitzsimons (Pa.) wrote Noah Webster to start writing on behalf of the new federal system.

John Dickinson (Del.) sent two notes to George Read (Del.). In the first he announced that a headache had kept him from attending the Convention yesterday, and that he was about to leave for home. He had heard the delegates were going to give an entertainment at City Tavern for the Philadelphians who had entertained them, and enclosed a bank bill to pay for his share.

A little later, he had another thought, and wrote asking Read if the members were to sign the document, to sign for him.

LOOKING BACK

Gunning Bedford

Born in Philadelphia, Gunning Bedford Jr. was the son of a carpenter, alderman, and militia captain. Bedford attended the College of New Jersey (Princeton) and married Jane Parker of New York during his college years (the date of the wedding is uncertain, probably 1770). The couple eventually had three children. (An unnamed daughter, Henrietta, and Gunning James; confusion arises due to historians' entanglement of the families of Gunning Bedford, a second cousin, and Gunning Bedford, his father). On the occasion of his commencement, as he delivered the valedictory, his wife looked on, having made the journey on horseback with their first baby.

Upon graduation, Bedford settled in Philadelphia and studied law under Joseph Read. The Bedfords then moved to Dover, Del., in 1779, when Gunning was appointed attorney general. Because of the "unhealthyness" of Dover, they moved to Wilmington, and Bedford continued to pursue a career in public service. From 1783-1785, he attended the Confederation Congress, and in 1784, he served as a delegate to the Delaware Assembly.

Having gained a reputation as an outspoken politician and a fine orator, the tall, handsome, somewhat corpulent man made his presence known during the Convention. Bedford recognized the need for a stronger, more efficient central government. As a representative from a small state, though, he was on guard against the intrigue and ambitions of the larger states. To that end, he fought vehemently for equal representation in the Senate, and did not hesitate to announce to the delegates of Virginia, Pennsylvnia, and Massachusetts: "I do not trust you gentlemen."

Once, however, the Convention adopted the clause of equal representation in the Senate, Bedford assented to the Constitution, albeit with some objections. After he signed it, Bedford then pushed for ratification in the Delaware Convention in December 1787, where the Constitution was first ratified.

He later accepted President Washington's nomination as a U.S. district judge for Delaware.

Tick-borne disease may be spreading across country

NEW YORK (AP) — Lyme disease, a tick-borne illness causing rashes, arthritis and brain disorders and once confined to a few Northeastern and Midwestern states, appears to be spreading to other parts of the country.

Recent studies indicate that the disease can produce severe nervous system disorders that look like brain tumors, Alzheimer's disease and multiple sclerosis, condemning some patients to years of needless suffering because of misdiagnosis, researchers say.

Carol Ciesielski of the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said that Lyme disease has now been reported in 32 states, and that the sketchy evidence available indicates that it might be on the rise.

Nevertheless, 86 percent of the 5,731 cases reported to the Centers for Disease Control occurred in the seven states in which the disease was first found, Ciesielski said in an interview Monday. Those states were Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

She is scheduled to present her findings Wednesday at the International Conference on Lyme Disease and Related Disorders, sponsored by the New York Academy of Sciences.

The number of reported cases likely falls far short of the number of actual cases, but no one has an accurate estimate of how often Lyme disease occurs, Ciesielski said.

"It's definitely being recognized more frequently and in more areas," she said. But she said authorities do not know whether its incidence is increasing or whether doctors are merely becoming more adept at diagnosing it.

Lyme disease was identified in 1975 by Dr. Allen Steere, formerly of Yale University, who noted an unusually large number of cases of arthritis in young people in Lyme, Conn.

In 1982, a corkscrew-shaped bacteria of the kind known as spirochetes was discovered to be the cause of the disease, and it was found to be usually treatable with antibiotics. The disease is transmitted by ticks that carry the spirochete.

Ninety-one percent of the patients whose cases were reported to the Centers for Disease Control had skin rash, making that the most common symptom of the disorder.

Arthritis occurred in 51 percent of the cases, 18 percent had brain disorders and 10 percent had inflammation of the heart, which can be fatal.

NATION IN BRIEF

Searle offers drug refund

WASHINGTON (AP) — G.D. Searle & Co. is offering a new "patient promise" under which it will refund to people their out-of-pocket costs for prescription drugs that do not achieve the desired outcome.

"The refund applies if for any reason the doctor is not satisfied with the results," Dr. Sheldon Gilgore, chief executive officer of the pharmaceutical company, said Monday. "It's unconditional."

Under the new program, the doctor and patient send a card to Searle along with a receipt for the most recent prescription and the remaining medicine, if there is any. Searle will pay the postage and refund the patient's costs.

Searle distributes more than 20 drugs in the United States, including birth control pills and products to fight hypertension, angina, infections, asthma and diarrhea.

Public housing aid sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Big-city mayors are calling on the federal government to help reverse the decline in public housing by providing an extra $7 billion a year to modernize existing structures and build additional living quarters.

Chicago Mayor Harold Washington said Monday the mayors want Congress to spend $5 billion a year for five years on updating and renovating existing public housing.

Mayor Frank Cooksey of Austin, Texas, said the mayors recommend the construction of 24 million housing units by the year 2000, of which 4 million would be for low- and moderate-income Americans. At a rate of 350,000 units a year, that would cost $2 billion to $2.5 billion a year, according to estimates from the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

A conference task force on housing drew up a set of proposals to present next month to the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee's subcommittee on housing and urban affairs.

Improved day care urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition supporting better day care services for children is urging Congress to enact a $2.5 billion program to encourage child care programs across the nation.

The proposal announced Monday by the Alliance for Better Child Care will will address quality of care as well as expansion of existing services, according to Marion Wright Edelman, president of the Children's Defense Fund and a member of the coalition.

Edelman and Gerald McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said the alliance bill will be introduced late this fall in time to put day care on the agenda for the 1988 elections.

"This country is not going to be let off the book any longer from doing what it should do," said Edelman.

50 LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE OF BID:

The San Angelo Independent School District will receive sealed bids TO PURCHASE FOUR (4) 1/2 TON PICK-UPS. Bid forms and specifications are available in the Purchasing Office, SAISD, 1621 University, San Angelo, Texas 76904 and sealed bids must be received in this office not later than 11:00 AM, Tuesday, September 29, 1987.

September 8, 15, 1987

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
Project No. 281/1052

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for the furnishing of materials and labor for construction of a 2,250 s.f. office building including parking and handicap access facilities at the northeast corner of Carver St. and South Avenue will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 3:00 p.m. on the 7th day of October, 1987. Bids will be publicly opened and read aloud at that time.

Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.

Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Project No. 281/1052".

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the City Engineer, Fifth floor of the City Hall, 300 North Loraine, Midland, Texas, and may be secured upon a deposit for FIFTY DOLLARS ($50) for each set as a guaranty of safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the contractor on submission of bid on the work, with such plans and specifications, or upon return of the plans and specifications immediately after the examination of same and advising the City Engineer that no bid will be submitted, otherwise the deposit for same shall be forfeited.

A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws his bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance and payment bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, and to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.
