Is nation convinced deals 'worth risks?'

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, struggling to regain his credibility in the midst of one of his most serious foreign policy challenges, says he is convinced his decision to sell arms secretly to Iran was worth the risks.

If the cover had held a bit longer, Reagan said, his secret diplomacy would have resulted in freedom for five American hostages instead of only three.

Reagan came under some of the most intense questioning of his presidency at a news conference Wednesday night — and had to retract a statement on a key point shortly after it ended.

He repeatedly denied that he knew anything about an arms shipment by another country, but in a statement distributed a short time later by the White House, Reagan acknowledged, "There was a third country involved in our secret project with Iran."

Aides said the furor over the Iran arms sale constituted the most serious policy crisis of Reagan's six years in office, and critics kept up their attack.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the likely new chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said today that Reagan "had made so many contradictions" with what his aides had told members of Congress that "I think we're going to have to have further clarification."

Reactions follow party lines

President Reagan, ignoring polls that show a loss of credibility over his foreign policy decisions, said Wednesday the secret plot to sell defensive arms to Iran was worth the risk.

Reagan told reporters during his first televised news conference since August that the secret negotiations with a moderate faction in Tehran would have resulted in the release of five American hostages instead of only three had the cover held a little longer.

Early today, local Republican officials refuted speculation that the furor over the Iran arms sale constituted the most serious policy crisis of the Reagan presidency, but Democratic critics pushed forward with their attack.

David Mandel, president of Midland Young Democrats, said he counted several contradictions between what top officials had reported and what Reagan told reporters.

"I wish the president would be honest and tell us what they're doing instead of continuing with this deception campaign," Mandel said.

Mandel said the president's answers to reporters' questions were "defensive" as he attempted to "save face" with the American public.

A variety of treatments — from hospitalization and drug therapy to psychological intervention — exists to aid drug abusers.

Treatments offer trip back from 'never-never land'

By JOHN A. BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Ninth in a series

A curious fact about drug abuse: Society has the means to bring people back from never-never land, but doesn't muster its resources to do it.

Why do people get strung out on drugs? Why do some people need a couple of drinks because they have to make a speech, and then need a couple more to settle down after they have?

At first, a potential drug user may just want to give it a try; then if the feeling was pleasurable, may want to go back to that feeling.

Before long the user begins to look at the drug as a medicine. If he is anxious or stressed, he wants something to calm himself down. If he seeks stimulation, he goes after those things that give him a feeling of excitement, power, accomplishment, ability.

Not all people react to drugs in the same way, says Dr. Meyer Glantz of the Prevention Research branch of the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

"There are some people who try cocaine and find it to be a horrible experience. You give a stimulant to someone who is already fearful and anxious, he's going to find that drug is the worst he's ever had. Give a stimulant to a nervous person and you get an anxiety attack. Not everybody likes most drugs."

But those who do regularly use drugs often begin with a notion of the therapeutic. "When alcoholics or drug users talk about drugs, it's not as some illicit act they're engaging in. It's medicine," Dr. Glantz says.

After a while the drugged state is normal. Everything else is not.

The avenues of help are clear for parents and family.

"I think that in the case of a child, you don't make suggestions, you take charge," Dr. Glantz says. "Some parents think they should ask their 15-year-old if his drug practice should continue. These are parents who can't get him to clean his room and they think they're going to talk their kid out of drugs."

The parents have to say no, until the youngster can say no for himself.

It's harder to say no to an adult. But friends and family members can do a lot of naysaying in their own roles. Says Dr. Glantz:

"I think the first thing you do is make it clear you're not going to help them do it anymore. For a long time we've talked about people who act as facilitators: people who help others use drugs. Not because they're evil. They're just trying to be nice and help the person get along.... So Fred doesn't show up for work one morning and you tell the boss, 'Oh yeah, he called in. He has a flat tire.' But you know where Fred is.

Weinberger thought arms plan 'absurd'

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, while "too loyal" a Cabinet member to undercut President Reagan publicly, never endorsed a White House plan to cultivate new ties with Iran, administration sources say.

He also fought the Iran initiative from its genesis as "absurd," the sources say.

In June 1985, Weinberger characterized the idea of developing new ties with Iran as on a par with "inviting (Libyan leader Moammar) Ghadafy over for a cozy lunch," said a source, speaking on condition he not be identified.

Publicly on Wednesday, Weinberger said nothing critical about the sale of arms to Iran. At a military computer trade show in Charleston, W.Va., he insisted that Reagan's policy on terrorism is "fully understood and supported" within the administration and his attempt to change the policies of the government of Iran "can be well justified."

Pattons 'flattered, humbled' to be Family of the Year

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Buffy, a golden-colored cocker spaniel, likely will be first to greet a visitor at the front door of the newly named Family of the Year's residence on Whitney Drive.

Soon to follow could be the mother — Anita Patton. She may have just rushed home from her teaching job at Emerson Elementary via the soccer field where her two children, Brandon, 13, and Brett, 10, were finishing practice.

Following Buffy to the door could instead be Anita's husband, George Patton (yes, a distant relation), a Midland attorney. He may have just returned home from a workout at the Downtown YMCA or perhaps from a Midland County Republican Men's Club board meeting.

Whomever greets a visitor at the door, one can be sure they're just arriving home from some sort of city or church endeavor. This copious amount of community involvement is just one of the reasons the George Patton family was named the Family of the Year Tuesday night by the Midland Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The program was started six years ago in Midland and focuses the community's attention on the importance of strong family relationships. More than 20 families were recognized and evaluated in four areas: strong family solidarity, high moral standards, religious involvement and community involvement.

"I was flabbergasted, flattered and humbled! We don't do anything most other families don't do," Mrs. Patton, a first-grade teacher, said when she learned the family had won the award.

"We've had our share of hard times when we all didn't agree...by no means are we perfect," Patton, a corporate and real estate attorney in private practice, said of the designation.

Elder son Brandon, an honor student at Goddard Junior High, said the win came as a big surprise to him; the ebullient younger son Brett, 10, added, "I don't know how we did it!"

The core of the Patton family is their involvement in each others' varied activities with special attention and priority being given to the pursuits of the children, Anita and George said.

"We did for ourselves before we were married and then before we had children. We knew when we were older, we had to give the kids every opportunity we could," Mrs. Patton said.

"Most of our time is devoted to the kids. We both have come from Christian backgrounds and we decided the kids should have an early exposure to the Christian beliefs.

"Christian beliefs give a good head start in raising a family. It gives you more of a 'stick-to-it' and strong-willed attitude. Most of our time is devoted to the kids," Patton reflected.

Brandon, who has a heavy schedule for an 8th-grader replete with soccer, playing the tenor saxophone in the school band, singing in the choir at First Baptist Church and tackling all honors courses, "except my computer class," said he's thankful he and his brother have two parents they can talk to.

"And they give us allowance and buy our food," Brandon joked, though seriously added he doesn't like having to clean his room each day.

Brett is a 5th-grader at Fannin Elementary and is a member of Cotillion, Junior Leaders of the YMCA, the Young Musicians Choir as well as soccer and baseball teaMrs.

"I like our family. We usually go places together or end up meeting each other somewhere," Brett said and added he and his brother Brandon really do get along.

As the heads of the Family of the Year in Midland, George and Anita may be asked during their tenure to give advice on how they "do it."

"Be tolerant and have respect for each other. Don't let the first fuss send you to the divorce court.

"You must go through the ups and downs of life — it is full of struggles; you just have to work through them. Overlook the trivia and don't make a big deal out of things," Mrs. Patton said.

"It takes commitment. Don't expect to change your partner. If you can't tolerate something about them from the start, you better find a new partner. The basic person is there. What you see is what you get," Patton said.

"Parenting is the single biggest task in life. We go into it cold. It seems like today the family is too far down on the list of priorities," he added.

"No family is perfect. If you go into it looking for perfection, you're going to be mighty disappointed," Mrs. Patton said.

El Paso probing reports of human sacrifice

EL PASO (AP) — Allegations of human sacrifices by Satan worshippers are being investigated by authorities here, although the sheriff admits there is no hard evidence to support the claims.

"We do not have a specific crime that we can point to or somebody who is reported missing," Sheriff Leo Samaniegio said. "We are looking at are statements from people who used to be involved in Satanism, or who know others who are involved, and who claim that human sacrifices are being conducted in the El Paso area.

"Even though we do not have any hard evidence yet, there is no reason not to believe them," he told the El Paso Times Tuesday.

George Althoff, an officer with the city police Intelligence Division, confirmed that city police also are investigating reports of human sacrifices. He would not elaborate.

Samaniego said he believed an investigation was necessary because "there are too many people within the community who are saying the same things." He assigned detectives who investigate homicides, sex crimes and child abuse to investigate.

Some former Satanists, Samaniego said, told sheriff's detectives that infants who are born to Satanists were sacrificed in rituals. Investigators also were told that transient adults sometimes were sacrificed.

One former satanist, who said she attended weekly rituals for two years, is among those who told detectives about the alleged activity.

Some of the information concerning human sacrifices surfaced at a meeting in October attended by the former satanist, two city police detectives and an El Paso Times reporter.

The meeting was arranged by WATCH, an organization devoted to educating people about cults and the occult.

The former satanist agreed to be interviewed on the condition that she not be identified. During a two-year period, she told the Times, she witnessed three human sacrifices involving newborn infants. She said mothers volunteered to sacrifice their babies.

"It was considered a high honor (by the mothers)," she said.

Sexual orgies and animal sacrifices were part of some of the other rituals, she said, but human sacrifices were for special satanic holidays, such as Halloween.

Whenever satanists conduct a sacrifice, they form a 9-foot circle with a pentagram inside, and walk around it while chanting. A high priest or priestess who officiates stabs the victim with a long, sharp knife. After the victim is killed, satanists drink the blood.

Girl born with one leg joins race for teen beauty title

BORGER (AP) — A girl born with one leg will be lining up with other candidates vying for the title of Miss Nebraska in a teen-age beauty pageant Friday.

Jamie Annette McDaniel, 17, a resident of Gretna, Neb., was selected to compete after her high school asked her to interview for a spot. She was one of 60 girls selcted for the event, to be held Friday-Sunday in Omaha.

Miss McDaniel, whose two grandmothers and an uncle live in Borger, wears a prosthesis which allows her to walk and participate in many sports, including gymnastics and snow skiing.

In an essay required of pageant hopefuls, Miss McDaniel wrote about her love of sports. In Amarillo, where she lived until three years ago, she took part in the Gymnastics Amputee Sports Association and hopes one day to teach the handicapped to ski.

"She has never been handicapped," said Dixie McDaniel, her grandmother. "As a child she was never left at home. She did everything a normal child would do."

In the pageant, Miss McDaniel will compete in all parts of the contest, including formal gown and bathing suit competition.

"I guess a mother always hopes someday her daughter will be in a beauty pageant, but for me I never would let that hope or wish enter my thoughts. So when Jamie was selected by her high school to go for an interview, I felt honored but afraid at the same time," said Annette McDaniel, the contestant's mother.

Woman's clues may help solve 20-year-old 'Moors Murderers' cases

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Police fanned out across bleak, rain-swept moorland today in a new search for the bodies of two children believed murdered more than 20 years ago — reopening the case of Britain's notorious child killers, the Moors Murderers.

Traces of snow lay on desolate Saddleworth Moor as police began searching for the graves of Keith Bennett, who was 12, and Pauline Reade, who was 16.

Police had long suspected the two youngsters were among the victims of Manchester typist Myra Hindley and her lover, Ian Brady.

Officers cordoned off part of the desolate moor, 12 miles outside Manchester, and kept back sightseers who gathered despite a driving rain lashing the rugged countryside.

The search, which could take months, was launched after Ms. Hindley, now 43, this week broke a 22-year silence and pointed out to police on maps other possible gravesites.

The pair, known as the Moors Murderers, haunt British criminal history for the particular sadism of their killing.

Ms. Hindley and Brady, now 48, are in the 20th year of life terms imposed for the killing of a 10-year-old girl, Lesley Ann Downey, as she begged for mercy, and 17-year-old Edward Evans. The bodies were found in graves on the moors in October 1965.

Brady was convicted of killing a third youngster, John Kilbride, 12, whose body was found on the moors at about the same time and who had also disappeared during the previous year. Ms. Hindley was convicted of sheltering Brady after that murder.

"They are frozen in time to the people of this region," Manchester Deputy Police Chief John Stalker said today of the missing children, Pauline, who vanished on her way to a party near her Manchester home in July 1963, and Keith, who disappeared a year later.

In a harrowing scene that reduced jurors to tears at the October 1966 trial, the prosecution played a tape-recording that the murderers made while they killed Lesley Ann in their Manchester apartment.

The child sobbed, pleaded with them not to undress her and to let her go home to her mother. They snapped at her to keep quiet and then tortured her to death.

Myra Hindley, in a statement released by her lawyer Tuesday, said she was prompted to talk to police because of "enormous distress" she felt after getting a letter from Keith Bennett's mother, Winnie Johnson.

REAGAN

Meanwhile, two members of the the Senate Intelligence Committee, which begins closed hearings into administration actions on Friday, said they believe laws requiring congressional notification of such arms sales had been violated, at least technically.

One of the two, Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., called the arms sale decision "a mistake" that was "at least a technical violation" of the law.

After the speech, the usually loyal Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., outgoing chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, criticized Reagan's decision to withhold from Congress word that secret negotiations had been under way for 18 months.

"I suspect that the president does not understand the law with regard to informing Congress on these things...," Lugar said.

In Iran, meanwhile, revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini condemned Iranian officials who had dealt with the United States.

"Why have we lost ourselves?" he asked in a speech. "I never expected such things from these people. At this time they should be screaming at America."

Reagan said several of his top advisers opposed the weapons shipments but said Secretary of State George Shultz, said to be dismayed by the operation, will stay in his Cabinet post.

"He has made it plain he would stay as long as I want him, and I want him," Reagan said.

Sources speaking on condition they not be identified said Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger thought the idea of having arms sent to Tehran was "almost too absurd for comment" and comparable to inviting Libyan leader Moammar Ghadafy "over for a cozy lunch."

Meantime, Robert McFarlane, Reagan's former national security adviser who undertook the secret mission to Tehran, told The Washington Post that it was a "mistake" to provide arms.

After his address to the nation last Thursday failed to persuade the public he was being completely truthful about his secret dealings with Iran, Reagan said Wednesday, "I deeply believe in the correctness of my decision. I was convinced then, and I am convinced now that while the risks were great, so, too, was the potential reward."

On another issue, Reagan offered a new version of what he offered the Soviets at his October summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

He described the proposed agreement on elimination of ballistic missiles as covering five years rather than 10, as the Soviets and Americans have said following the fruitless talks in Iceland. Reagan has given a number of accounts of what he proposed.

But the Iranian arms deal dominated Wednesday night's session.

He insisted he "was not breaking any law" by keeping the 18-month project secret from Congress, which has required the president to inform it of covert operations in a "timely" manner.

Nor did he admit the sale of arms to Iran while pressing that radical Islamic republic to bring about the release of hostages in Lebanon was tantamount to paying ransom to terrorists.

Speaking of the unidentified Iranians with whom the United States was dealing, Reagan said, "I said to them that there was something they could do to show their sincerity and if they really meant it that they were not in favor of backing terrorists, they could begin by releasing our hostages."

"I have reason to believe," he added, "that we would have had all five of them by this last weekend" had it not been for the publicity explosion that followed the leak of the U.S.-Iran dealings, apparently by someone Reagan identified as an Iranian government official "hostile to us."

Three American hostages were released in Beirut at times that coincided with the arms shipments, Reagan acknowledged. But he again denied he had been trading arms for hostages.

White House spokesmen refused to elaborate on his comments about the prospects of getting other hostages out, but Reagan presumably was referring to Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland, who are known to have been held with those who were freed.

Another, U.S. Embassy political officer William Buckley, is said by his captors to be dead, although his body has never been found.

"The press got him on the defensive and his own policy got him on the defensive. When you have a bad policy, you have no choice but to be on the defensive," Mandel said.

Beatrice Hurd, president of the Midland Coalition of Black Democrats, said the president failed to answer many of question on the minds of the American public or provide an honest explanation for his decision to sell arms to Iran.

"He did not answer any questions. I just do not believe him," she said.

Midland County Democratic Party Chairman Janet Massey said she did not see the press conference in its entirety and did not feel qualified to make a statement.

But Midland County Republican Chairman Dean Rucker said Americans must give Reagan his due.

"Normalizing relations with Iran is a commendable goal," Rucker said. "I also think it's important that we recognize that the Soviets place some importance on Iran as a warm water port" and that it "should be protected from Soviet domination."

Rucker agreed that the president was placed in a position of having to explain his decision to sell arms to Iran, but argued that he was on the defensive.

Neither Rucker nor Mandel said they believe Reagan suffered a significant loss in popularity or confidence from the American public over the secret sale of arms.

"Once he makes a full disclosure of the circumstances surrounding the sale to Congress, I believe the president's credibility, if it has indeed suffered, will be recovered," Rucker said.

"Unfortunately, this man has glossed over every major blunder by his administration," said Mandel, "though he may have a little trouble explaining this one away."

U.S. Rep.-Elect Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, did not see the news conference.

State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, and U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, could not be reached for comment.

Despite the major coverage the story has received by the news media, the public may not be as concerned with its outcome, according to a random poll conducted this morning by the Reporter-Telegram.

An estimated 60 Midlanders were contacted for their reaction to the news conference. Of that number, only seven had seen it.

Peppy McKinney, 4715 Erie Dr., is an "old journalist" but he said "some of the cable television stations" had been overpublicizing the entire "arms to Iran situation."

"There are really things we don't need to know," he said in reference to Reagan's confidential handling of the matter but he added, "I don't like all this secrecy either," McKinney said.

Sue True, 3105 N. Elma, said she has been a staunch supporter of President Reagan, but said her emotions are mixed this morning when she thinks of the credibility of the president.

"I realize he has presidential privileges, but after Lyndon Johnson and Vietnam...I'm leery of too much power (being in the hands of one man).

"I'm curious if he did consult George Schultz on this matter. Maybe he should have relied on more of his advisers...so he could have spread the blame around more," Ms. True said.

One Midlander said he felt Reagan knew what he was doing.

"We just need to let him do it. If it had been kept more quiet, maybe we'd gotten more hostages back," Raymond Stroh, 2514 W. Storey, said.

One woman opted for words without arms. Ernestina Reyes, 104 E. Dormard, said this morning, "I disagree with what he's done. I think he lied to America and what he's done is wrong.

"We should be able to talk, but not negotiate (arms) to try to get hostages back," Ms. Reyes said.

Two other "dyed-in-the-wool" Reagan supporters had differing views.

"I found him very subdued last night. Let's just wait and see what happens because we just don't have all the facts yet," Mrs. Ted Paup, 912 Bedford, said.

"I'm behind him 100 percent," Mrs Paup added.

On the other hand, Elizabeth Moore, 2508 Stutz Place, called herself a "staunch Republican."

"But I think last night he showed he's lost his credibility. He's bitten the hand that fed him — middle America. And what's more, I don't think he has the right to lie to us like he has.

"He's following the same lines Nixon took — taking it upon himself to make all the decisions for the country.

"We don't need any of these 'back door deals' (to get hostages back.) Next thing you know, every time one of these countries wants more guns, all they'll do is kidnap some Americans," Ms. Moore said.

But, Ken Kennemer, 1503 McDonald, said America ought to let Reagan do his job.

"In the end, we'll find out about it anyway..." Kennemer said.

PLAN

Weinberger's position while the operation was still secret, as spelled out by administration sources, laid out evidence of a split within administration ranks over who knew about the operation and who was responsible for it. Secretary of State George Shultz has made it clear he opposed it.

"If you're looking for a culprit in this who led the policy down an alley, it would be (Robert) McFarlane," said an official who discussed Weinberger's thinking on the matter.

But McFarlane, Reagan's former national security adviser, said in a story in today's Washington Post that while it was sensible to try to open a dialogue "with reformist people in Iran" it was "a mistake to introduce any element of arms transfers into it."

The Post, quoting sources familiar with McFarlane's thinking, said he agreed to undertake a mission to Iran after being told by his suceesor, Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, that Reagan wanted him to go.

Meantime, the source who discussed Weinberger's position also said:

— Weinberger, Assistant Defense Secretary Richard L. Armitage and a few top deputies were the only Defense Department officials aware of the presidential initiative. Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was not.

— The military equipment shipped to Iran, believed to include spare parts for air-defense missiles, was drawn from U.S. military stocks and provided to the CIA for shipment without any explanation being provided to military commanders.

— The chief architect of the plan was McFarlane. Poindexter took over the task of overseeing the contacts with Iran but played no substantive role in the policy decision to proceed.

The source discussed Weinberger's position before Reagan held his news conference Wednesday.

The sources said the Iranian initiative grew out of a Central Intelligence Agency analysis that Weinberger considered faulty from the moment he read it.

That CIA report, produced in May 1985, concluded there was evidence of a developing power struggle inside Iran and reason to believe the Soviet Union was ahead of the United States in preparing for the death or downfall of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the sources said.

The White House responded with a draft national security directive seeking comment from Weinberger and Shultz on the possibility of urging U.S. allies to cultivate trade with Iran.

Tropical Storm Frances picks up power in Atlantic

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Tropical Storm Frances packed winds up to 50 mph as it swirled in the Atlantic Ocean, and the late-season storm may reach minimal hurricane strength but won't hit land, forecasters said.

The storm was centered at latitude 25.9 north and longitude 62.4 west, or about 450 miles south-southeast of Bermuda, the National Hurricane Center said in an advisory issued at 9:30 p.m. EST Wednesday.

It was moving north at about 5 to 10 mph, and was expected to turn northeast with some increase in speed likely by tonight.

The storm could strengthen to minimal hurricane-strength but may not survive long above a latitude of 30 north, said forecaster Gil Clark.

"We don't think it's going to hit land," said Clark, who predicted the jet stream likely will push Frances over cold Atlantic Ocean waters that will sap its strength until it dies.

Chances of Frances' 250-mile-wide storm system hitting Bermuda also are slim.

"The whole thing lasts about 30 minutes," she said. "After the ritual, the leaders pour some kind of chemical on the body to decalcify the bones and burn the remains. The ashes are picked up and saved for different rituals."

Three other people have related similar accounts to the El Paso Times. Two of them have been interviewed by sheriff's and city police detectives. None of the three are related or knows any of the others.

One of the people, who was not a satanist and who also asked not to be identified for fear of retaliation by coven members, said she had taken a drug and had been drinking before she realized a group of young adults she was with was conducting a satanic ritual.

She claims the group killed an adult woman during the ceremony, but because she was under the influence of drugs, she couldn't pinpoint the place where the sacrifice took place. She said the group buried the body somewhere in the Northeast El Paso desert. People she has told this to do not believe her because she was under the influence of drugs.

Another allegation about a human sacrifice surfaced at the Lee Moor Runaway Center earlier this year.

Barbara Hargrove, director of the center, said a teen-ager who stayed at the center temporarily after running away from home told counselors she witnessed a human sacrifice at a satanic ritual in the desert. Hargrove said the center notified police about the allegation and the teenager was questioned by juvenile police.

I don't think there's such a thing as an addicted person or a dependent person or whatever we're allowed to call them now, who doesn't have serious psychological problems. Just getting a kid or an adult off the drug isn't enough. They need help. They need therapy."

In a handbook on treatment modes, the National Institute on Drug Abuse offers a basic theme:

"Although we can't make life go exactly as we plan, we certainly can make plans that help us enjoy life and don't set us up for disappointment and frustration. Make your goals realistic and plan for them well. Keep them growing and up-to-date with your own progress. And take pride in your goals — they express who you are and who you can be."

That's the way it is, leaving never-never land.

Racketeering convictions to lead to 'power struggle' in crime families

NATION

Scopo Furnari Santoro Corallo

NEW YORK (AP) — Racketeering convictions against three Mafia bosses and five subordinates dismantle the mob's ruling "commission" and will lead to a power struggle among the nation's crime families, federal authorities say.

The convictions Wednesday of the Colombo, Genovese and Lucchese family bosses and the other five also will help destroy "the myth that the leadership of the Mafia is untouchable," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Dennison Young. "This is not the end of it. This case is by no means the last case."

The convictions "will have a tremendous impact," said William Doran, head of the Criminal Division in the FBI's New York office. "I think that a power vacuum will be created. There will be a tremendous amount of turmoil. There will be a power struggle.

"As far as we are concerned, the commission that was involved in the policy decisions, the direction of La Cosa Nostra, is or has been convicted or killed."

The verdicts proved for the first time that the Mafia was run by a "board of directors" that Doran said "in one way or another touched the lives of every American."

The commission was established by Charles "Lucky" Luciano in 1931 to mediate disputes among crime families, even if that meant killing another Mafia leader, a step that could not be taken without the commission's approval.

Prosecutors charged that the commission periodically met to settle territorial disputes, divide loot, accept new Mafia members and authorize high-level executions including that of reputed Bonanno boss Carmine Galante.

The indictment charged that the commission was behind three separate conspiracies: extortion and labor peace payoffs in New York's concrete pouring industry; loansharking; and the 1979 Galante murder.

Genovese crime family boss Anthony "Fat Tony" Salerno, 75; Colombo boss Carmine "Junior" Persico, 53; and Lucchese boss Anthony "Tony Ducks" Corallo, 73, were convicted of racketeering and conspiracy.

Also guilty of those charges were Colombo underboss Gennaro "Jerry Lang" Langella, 47; Lucchese underboss Salvatore "Tom Mix" Santoro, 72; Lucchese consigliere or counselor Christopher "Christy Tick" Furnari, 62; Ralph Scopo, 58, a former labor leader and Colombo soldier; and Bonanno soldier Anthony "Bruno" Indelicato, 38.

Salerno, Persico, Langella, Furnari and Scopo face up to 306 years in prison. Corallo and Santoro face 326 years and Indelicato 40 years.

By their verdict, the jurors found that the defendants were members of, or worked for, a commission that acted as a "board of directors" for the Mafia — keeping organized crime organized.

In addition to the racketeering and conspiracy counts, all but Indelicato were convicted of extortion, extortion conspiracy and labor payoffs. Corallo and Santoro were also convicted of loansharking conspiracy.

Although U.S. District Judge Richard Owen told jurors that Mafia membership alone was not a crime, Scopo attorney John Jacobs complained that the Mafia became the central issue.

"If it wasn't for this Mafia hysteria, there would've been a different verdict," he said. He had conceded that Scopo took labor payoffs but claimed he was not guilty of racketeering or extortion.

Owen set sentencing for Jan. 6.

New student loan to make borrowers pay more for diploma

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federally subsidized student loans encourage colleges to raise tuition and should give way to a new kind of loan requiring borrowers to pay more for their diplomas, Secretary of Education William J. Bennett says.

Outlining a broad view of what student aid should look like in the future, Bennett on Wednesday described a loan system without federal interest rate subsidies that would also take into account the borrower's ability to repay.

The loans, called income contingent loans, would allow graduates who take low-paying jobs to repay their loans over a longer period, but all borrowers would be required to repay their loans fully.

The proposal will be tested in a five-year pilot program at 10 colleges during the 1987-88 academic year. Bennett said he was sending letters to the presidents of all 3,331 U.S. colleges and universities inviting them to apply to be part of the test.

At the same time, Bennett, a frequent critic of soaring college tuitions, said he may ask Congress to tighten the federal aid spigot. He said his department was looking at excluding any tuition increase greater than 1 percent above inflation when figuring the level of federal aid for which a student qualifies.

Calling for college cost containment, Bennett said boosting student aid in response to tuition increases makes it easier for schools to raise tuition even higher in the next year.

Current federal programs — Guaranteed Student Loans and National Direct Student Loans — subsidize all of the interest on the loans until after the borrower begins repayment and a portion thereafter.

With unsubsidized loans, "no longer will the costs of college be hidden. ...Rather than spending someone else's money, students will find themselves making decisions about their own money," Bennett said.

"This cannot help but make students more conscious of how much they pay their college, and of the quality of the education they are receiving in return," he said.

That drew a response from one of the participants in the conference on financial aid at Catholic University.

"We're not ripping off (students) and distributing dividends through the board of trustees," said Francis J. Michelini, president of the Commission for Independent Colleges and Universities in Pennsylvania. He ticked off a list of soaring campuses expenses, from high-tech microscopes to big bills for disposing of wastes from chemistry labs.

Bennett said the current student aid system, by requiring students to pay off their loans within 10 years, fails to recognize that borrowers are often least able to meet payments in the years immediately after graduation.

As a result, some students feel compelled to reject jobs in low-income professions, he said. Another result is a higher loan default rate, he said.

NATION in brief

Berle: Non-smokers lighten up and let smokers light up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Philip Morris U.S.A. launched what it said was a "lighthearted" campaign urging non-smokers to lay off nagging smokers during today's annual Great American Smokeout.

Comedian Milton Berle, appearing in a videotape played at a news conference Wednesday, endorsed the campaign in a humor routine.

"If all the non-smokers would lighten up and let us smokers light up, we'd all get along a lot better," said Berle, with cigar in hand.

The cigarette manufacturer distributed across the country hundreds of thousands of kits for smokers containing such things as red, white and blue stickers with a horse head saying "Don't nag me. I'm a Great American Smoker."

Guy Smith, Philip Morris vice president of corporate affairs, told reporters at a news conference the campaign is "lighthearted with a serious purpose," aimed at supporting peoples' decisions to smoke.

Food stamps not denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department can deny foodstamps to a person who is on strike but it cannot withhold the assistance from everyone else in the household, too, a federal judge ruled.

U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer said neither administrative convenience nor the desirability of maintaining government neutrality in labor disputes justifies the denial of food stamps to innocent members of a striker's household.

He said the law could be narrowed to adjust the food stamp allotment to exclude the striker, such as cutting down on the allotment when it is known that there is a striker in the household.

Oberdorfer issued his ruling Friday in the lawsuit brought by the United Auto Workers, the United Mine Workers and six individual union members who were denied food stamps while on strike.

Felons getting SS benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poor coordiantion of public agencies is allowing jailed felons to be receiving an estimated $1.16 million annually in Social Security benefits, despite a law prohibiting the payments, the government said.

Richard P. Kusserow, inspector general of the Health and Human Services Department, said in an audit released Wednesday that checks totaling about $261,000 a year may be mailed to felony prisoners held in county jails around the country.

Kusserow's office also confirmed that an unpublished audit, scheduled for release in December, estimates that about $900,000 in payments are made each year to felons held in state and federal prisons.

Kusserow blamed a lack of coordination between the Social Security Administration and federal, state and county prison officials in cross-checking Social Security numbers of prisoners with records of people receiving benefit checks.

China, U.S. strike pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — A five-year agreement between China and the United States will permit cooperation between the two nations in wildlife and natural resource conservation.

The pact also provides for exchange of scientific visits, research material, birds and animals.

The agreement formalized at the U.S. Interior Department broadens U.S.-Chinese links and "will offer tremendous potential for promoting the cause of global conservation," Undersecretary Ann McLaughlin said at a signing ceremony Wednesday.

Vice Minister Liu Guangyun represented the Chinese Ministry of Forestry, which will work with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife and National Park services in administering the accord.

Under the accord, the two countries plan to cooperate on such matters as protecting natural areas and endangered animals and managing wildlife preserves. The Chinese already have been working with the U.S. National Park Service in developing scenic and historic areas, the department said.

Satellite eyes winter storms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The satellite providing weather photos from space will begin moving westward to get a better view of winter storms approaching the country from the Pacific Ocean, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said.

GOES-6, the nation's prime stationary weather satellite, has been positioned to look down from an angle near the center of the country since June 9 — a position designed to watch for hurricanes in both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Its move about 10 degrees of longitude to the west was to begin today.

President's numerous contradictions to spur first congressional inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading Senate Democrat, hours after President Reagan's public grilling on secret arms sales to Iran, said today the Reagan administration still needs to clarify contradictions between what the president said and what his aides have been telling Congress.

At the same time, both a Democrat and a Republican member of the Senate committee that on Friday will launch the first congressional inquiry into Reagan's actions said they believe laws requiring congressional notification of such arms sales have been at least technically violated.

"The president had so many contradictions last night that I think we're going to have to have further clarification today," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., on the NBC-TV's "Today" program.

Nunn, who is likely to take over as chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee in the new Democrat-controlled Congress, said U.S. foreign policy is "in serious disarray and it's time to take some strong steps."

"The president contradicted all the information that had been put out by his aides for the last week," Nunn said. "I had hoped he would be able to restore credibility...but I counted at least seven major contradictions from what I had previously been informed by his top officials."

Nunn said he could not believe that the arms sent were defensive, as the president maintained.

"When you have a major power like Iran that is on the march that has declared its intention to take over Iraq, in this context there is no way you could describe the arms that were transferred as being defensive in nature," Nunn said.

He suggested that a group of "wise men and women" should review the administration's foreign policy decision-making process and propose changes.

Meanwhile, Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky. and a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said on the "CBS Morning News" that Reagan should have admitted he made a mistake in approving the Iranian deal.

"We don't expect perfection in our leaders," McConnell said. "The president has had a very good track record for six years. This particular decision was a mistake."

McConnell said the president's failure to inform Congress until 18 months after the Iranian operation began "was at least a technical violation."

But he said he thinks Reagan still has the confidence of the American people on other issues. "It doesn't mean that his entire record is wiped out by this," he said.

Sen. Lloyd Bentson, D-Texas, another member of the committee interviewed by CBS, said, "I think he (Reagan) did violate the law. The law says that we are to be advised in a timely manner."

Bentson said CIA Director William Casey will have "a lot of explaining to do" when he appears before the committee in closed session Friday.

"My understanding is that he has a written directive from the president telling him not to advise us of this particular incident," Bentson said.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., outgoing chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said Reagan may not understand that the law required him to inform Congress that he had undertaken sensitive secret negotiations with officials of Iran, a nation labeled a terrorist state by the administration.

Lugar told NBC News after the speech that "I suspect that the president does not understand the law with regard to informing Congress on these things..."

The Natonal Security Council "ought to know its place and that is to offer advice to the president," rather than making policy, said Lugar. "The secretary of state has to be the chief person in foreign policy."

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., who will become Senate majority leader in January, also was critical of Reagan.

Shultz 'never suggested' resigning

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says Secretary of State George P. Shultz will stay on the job and has never suggested he wanted to resign.

"He knows that I want him to stay, and he has in advance said that he wants to," Reagan said Wednesday night. "There's been no talk of resignation."

Nor had Shultz set as a condition for remaining at the State Department a promise by the president not to send further arms to Iran, the president said.

"There have been no conditions," Reagan said in a nationally broadcast news conference. "As I say, we didn't discuss that. And, as I've said now, there is no need to go further with this."

Shultz had opposed the president's decision to sell arms to Iran. According to some reports he told Reagan he wanted to leave. According to others, he had informed the president last weekend that he would stay only with a commitment by Reagan not to approve any more sales.

Reagan, apparently alluding to Shultz and possibly Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, said Wednesday night that "several top advisers opposed the sale of even a modest shipment of defensive weapons and spare parts to Iran."

But Reagan also said Shultz and William Casey, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, were "involved in what we were doing."

The president did not explain the role of either Shultz or Casey.

Administration sources, meantime, said Weinberger opposed the Iranian project from its inception. According to a source who spoke on condition he not be identified, the defense secretary in June 1985 called the idea of trying to develop new ties with Iran as comparable to inviting Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi "over for a cozy lunch."

At the news conference, Reagan emphasized that the responsibility for the weapons decision "is mine and mine alone."

He acknowledged that the venture was risky. But, Reagan said, "in foreign policy the presence of risks alone cannot be reason enough not to act."

Shultz had publicly criticized the sale, the extraordinary secrecy which he said deprived the president of "expertise" and called for a public declaration there would be no more sales to Iran.

"It's a mistake for governments to get into the business of trading something of genuine importance for hostages," he said in response to questions after a speech in Chicago Monday night. "Why? Not because you don't want to get the hostages back. And, I suppose, not really because you care that much about a little do-re-me, but because if you do that, all you do is encourage the taking of more hostages and you put more Americans at risk."

Shultz never accused Reagan of swapping the arms for the three American hostages who were released since the U.S. weapons sale was approved. But he called on Reagan to reaffirm the policy of not dealing with states that sponsor terrorism.

Reagan says he broke no law

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says "I was not breaking any law" when he arranged secret arms shipments to Iran and delayed notifying Congress.

But the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said after Reagan's news conference Wednesday night, "I suspect that the president does not understand the law with regard to informing Congress on these things."

Reagan told reporters he has ordered there be no further arms sales of any kind to Iran. "The embargo still stays, now and for the future," he said.

He said the sensitivity of the secret talks intended in part to win the release of U.S. hostages in Lebanon required him to restrict the information to "the barest number of people" inside the U.S. government. "I was not breaking any law in doing that," he said.

He argued that the same law that requires him to inform Congress about such affairs also allows him to delay notifying the lawmakers in life-and-death situations.

"The president, believe it or not, does have the power if in his belief national security can be served, to waive the provisions of that law as well as to defer the notification of the Congress," Reagan said.

Reagan's predecessor, Jimmy Carter, banned arms sales to Iran in 1979 under the Arms Export Control Act when radical Iranians were holding Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

The president is required to report dealings with Iran to Congress under the National Security Act and the Foreign Assistance Act.

Congress will be briefed later this week on the secret negotiations, he said.

Reagan said, "We knew this undertaking involved great risks, especially for our people and for the Iranian officials with whom we dealt. That's why the information was restricted to appropriate Cabinet officers and those officials with an absolute need to know."

"There was no deception intended by us. There was the knowledge that we were embarking on something that could be of great risk to the people we were talking to, great risk to our hostages. And therefore, we had to have it limited to allow the barest number of people that had to know.

"I was not breaking any law in doing that. It is provided for me to do that."

Coming to SDI

The most convincing argument in favor of the Reagan Administration's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), in addition to the Soviet Union's adamant opposition, is the growing number of nations agreeing to participate. Israel is the latest to sign up to do research on the president's proposal for tactical ballistic missile defense systems.

Israel agreed in principle last May to take part in the non-nuclear program. Now it has put its words into action by signing a contract. The document, prepared after careful study by the Israelis, bears the signatures of David Ivri, the director general of the Israeli Defense Ministry, and Gordon Smith, the director general of the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization. Officials in Jerusalem obviously stand solidly behind the program, for the agreement calls for spending at least $5 million for funding the research.

Israel is the first non-NATO country to sign such a contract. One of the reasons action was taken at this time is the report that neighboring Syria, whose President Assad is a consistent enemy, has recently received SS-21 short-range missiles from the Soviet Union.

The Israelis have thus joined Great Britain, West Germany and other nations that share President Reagan's hope that development of a space-based anti-missile umbrella can make nuclear war obsolete. Other nations now have received renewed encouragement to follow suit.

The concept of President Reagan's "Peace Shield" may be a bit mind-boggling for many, but various technological feats in the American space program along with information that the Soviet Union has been working for some time to develop such a missile defense of its own should attest to the logic behind such an endeavor. It's the only move apparent that will remove the fear of a nuclear holocaust.

We can be forever thankful that the president stuck to his SDI guns at the Iceland summit. The research project could lead to banishing the threat of Mutual Assured Destruction, or MADness.

Another View:

Listening to 'them'

When Charles Wick took over the U.S. Information Agency five years ago, his commitment to fighting Communism was clearer than his commitment to advancing truth. To his credit, he has come to see that the two go together. Wick is talking to the Russians about some interesting reciprocal radio. If he can enlarge the terms of the discussion, he could help improve a relationship too often shaped by misinformation.

Say Russia to an American, and what, typically, does that evoke? Grandmothers sweeping icy streets, gray crowds in interminable lines, relentless surveillance. And Russians: what's their image of America? A chaotic free-for-all run by ruthless, fur-coated capitalists living off the masses mired in drugs and prostitution.

The caricatures thrive for different reasons. In the U.S.S.R., government selectivity reinforces the negative stereotypes. Soviet curiosity about America is strong. The average Russian has read many English-language books and seen many American films. Yet the picture that gets through the government filters is often narrow and twisted. What Americans lack is not access but interest. They do not often clamor for Soviet culture. Few have read a Soviet book or seen a Russian film. Yet their interest in American portrayals of Soviet life shows a hardy curiosity about the Russians.

The U.S.S.R. now sprouts tentative responses to Gorbachev's call for a more open society. Last season's hit play in Moscow had more than the usual dollop of criticism of bureaucratic corruption. The cinematographers' union has wangled a review of films previously held back by censors. Writers and artists broach long-forbidden topics. It is a good moment to press the Russians on their illegitimate jamming of U.S. radio broadcasting, a tactic Wick seems to be trying to pursue.

The Soviet position is that radio exposure in the two nations is unequal. The Russians, avid listeners, use short-wave sets. Americans, except for a few ham operators, do not. The Russians have told Wick that they will quit jamming the Voice of America if he will help them find U.S. networks willing to broadcast Soviet radio programs.

The terms of the discussion so far are wrong. Jamming is illegal and unacceptable, nothing to bargain about. The Russians should give it up, not only against the Voice of America, but against all broadcasters, including Radio Free Europe-Radio Liberty. This would surely clear the way for American assistance in approaching potential broadcasters and perhaps also for Soviet use of satellites and cable systems or other innovations.

The deep differences between the two nations will not be brushed away by open airwaves or more frequent film festivals. But with hardheaded, principled negotiations, opening the airwaves is exactly right for a nation committed to the free flow of ideas and information.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Nov. 20, the 324th day of 1986. There are 41 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 20, 1975, Gen. Francisco Franco died in Madrid, two weeks before his 83rd birthday. Franco's death ended nearly four decades of absolute rule in Spain.

On this date:

In 1620, Peregrine White, the son of William and Susanna White, was born aboard the Mayflower in Massachusetts Bay. He was the first child to be born of English parents in New England.

In 1789, New Jersey became the first state to ratify the Bill of Rights.

In 1910, revolution broke out in Mexico, led by Francisco I. Madero.

In 1925, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was born in Brookline, Mass.

In 1943, during World War II, American forces landed on Tarawa and Makin Atoll in the Gilbert Islands.

In 1945, 24 Nazi leaders were put on trial before an international war crimes tribunal at Nuremberg, Germany.

In 1947, Britain's Princess Elizabeth married Lt. Philip Mountbatten in Westminster Abbey.

In 1967, just a few minutes after 11 a.m., the Census Clock at the Department of Commerce ticked past 200 million.

In 1980, after a disastrous reception by New York critics, United Artists announced it was withdrawing its $44 million movie "Heaven's Gate" for re-editing.

In 1983, an estimated 100 million people watched the controversial ABC-TV movie "The Day After," which depicted the outbreak and aftermath of nuclear war.

Ten years ago: Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger flew to Plains, Ga., to brief President-elect Jimmy Carter and Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale on foreign policy matters.

Five years ago: Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union retained his world chess championship in Italy by defeating challenger Viktor Korchnoi in the 18th game of their title match.

One year ago: President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev held more private meetings in Geneva. White House officials said Gorbachev planned to visit the United States in 1986, and that Reagan would go to Moscow in 1987.

Today's birthdays: Author and TV personality Alistair Cooke is 78. Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., is 69. Actress Gene Tierney is 66. Actress-comedian Kaye Ballard is 60. Actress Estelle Parsons is 59. TV personality Richard Dawson is 54. Comedian Dick Smothers is 47. Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., is 44.

JACK ANDERSON

Chief Justice wants to keep free ride

WASHINGTON — Is Chief Justice William Rehnquist a scofflaw?

That's exactly what congressional sources say he is. And at first or second glance, it certainly looks bad for Rehnquist.

Jack Anderson

He has been deliberately ignoring a new law — passed by Congress and signed by President Reagan last month — that prohibits all but a handful of high officials from having chauffeur-driven government limousines take them to and from work. The chief justice is conspicuously absent from the list of eligible VIPs.

A Supreme Court spokesperson confirmed that Rehnquist is being driven to and from work in a government limo. She told our associate Donald Goldberg that the chief justice is aware of the new law's provisions and has a Supreme Court attorney analyzing the statute.

The court spokesperson said Rehnquist may be entitled to a free ride on grounds of security. The new law does allow that particular exemption — for an official who has received a death threat, for example.

But the law requires certifying in writing to Congress that "highly unusual circumstances present a clear and present danger," with the reasons spelled out. Congressional sources say Rehnquist has not submitted such a written certification and thus is not entitled to a limo for security reasons.

The legislation, introduced by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., was intended to cut back on the expensive, unnecessary use of government vehicles by public officials. Congressional studies showed that literally hundreds of federal officials were commuting courtesy of the taxpayers — nearly 70 in the Defense and State Departments, for example. The cost ran to millions of dollars a year.

The new law slashed the list of eligibles drastically. Except for VIPs with security problems and a few executive-branch officials explicitly granted the privilege by the president, use of chauffeur-driven limousines to get to and from work was limited to the president, the vice president and the heads of most agencies — NOT including the Supreme Court.

Capitol Hill sources have described the fierce lobbying by various agencies in this status-conscious city to have their officials exempted. The White House — which has a comfortable share of the exemptions — encouraged this pressure by telling the agency heads to take their beefs to Congress.

One official who had a good case was Selwa Roosevelt, the State Department's chief of protocol. Her job requires full-dress calls on visiting dignitaries at all hours of the day and night. Despite persistent phone calls to Capitol Hill, she didn't make the list. But she told us the White House has assured her she will be among the 10 officials the president can designate to receive home-to-office transportation.

Other VIPs won't be so fortunate and will either have to drive themselves to work, take buses or ride the Metro. Neither the comptroller of the currency nor the chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., for example, made it onto the short list of free riders, even though their agencies lobbied long and hard. Maybe they can hitch a ride with the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, who did make the commuter list.

Even heavy clout in Congress proved unavailing this time. Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, who chairs the influential Senate Post Office subcommittee, tried to get chauffeured commuter rides for the postmaster general and his two top aides. He had to settle for just the postmaster general.

FURY IN FOGGY BOTTOM: Secretary of State George Shultz was reported to be outraged over the White House's backdoor arms-for-hostages deal with Iran, but his wrath was nothing compared to that of his professional underlings in Foggy Bottom. Rank-and-file career diplomats were understandably aghast at disclosure of the secret arms supplies sent to Iran; for years they have been quietly entreating U.S. allies and other governments not to sell weapons to the Iranians.

• • •

FOIA FEE FUSS: Controversy still smolders over the amendments recently passed to the Freedom of Information Act, which makes government files available to the public. One continuing dispute is over who is entitled to a waiver of the often considerable fee for searching and copying requested documents. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, for example, says the law doesn't allow fee waivers for federal prisoners, who are frequent applicants for FOIA searches to help overturn their convictions. On the other hand, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., says convicted felons are entitled to apply for a fee waiver.

MINI-EDITORIAL: There goes Ed Meese's Justice Department again, trying to turn the historical clock back 200 years. A department study deplores the federal government's "usurpation" of states' rights and urges that it divest itself at once. It's almost as if there had never been a Civil War, a New Deal or a civil rights movement. Oddly enough, the attorney general's study group, while denouncing the federal government for sticking its big nose into state business, has no fault to find with the federal treasury doling out grants to state governments. The clock-turners just don't want Uncle Sam to tell the states how they can use the money.

GEORGE F. WILL

Moynihan urges look at American tendencies

WASHINGTON — The political rhetoric praising small government is "a kind of civic religion, avowed but not constraining." Sen. Daniel P. (Pat) Moynihan uses those words to describe FDR's 1932 pledge to balance the budget. However, the description also fits conservatism as it confronts America's fundamental choice: How much economic growth do we want, and how much government?

George F. Will

Since the New Deal, conservatives have argued that national policy has unduly sacrificed economic growth to the growth of government. Moynihan (D-N.Y.) argues in a recent lecture that since 1981 conservatism has "acted in a manner that intensified the trends it most deplored." Pledged to reduce government and increase the rate of economic growth, conservatism has been "bringing about just the opposite." Moynihan says that the paradox of conservatism in power is this: "In effect, big government was made cheap."

The growth of America's GNP was 4 percent in the 1950s and 1960s. It dropped below 3 percent in the 1970s and has been barely above 2 percent in the 1980s. Since 1960, the overall increase in U.S. manufacturing productivity of 2.7 percent a year has been less than that of nine European countries (e.g. France 5.5; Britain, 3.6) and about one-third that of Japan (8.0).

Now, what has happened to government recently? Between fiscal 1960 and fiscal 1986, federal outlays rose from $590.9 billion to $979.9 billion. The federal debt has soared from $914.3 billion to more than $2 trillion. In Moynihan's words, we borrowed $1 trillion from the Japanese and had a party — a party of consumption, including a flood of foreign goods.

Ronald Reagan's first presidential act, executed on Inauguration Day, was a federal-employee hiring freeze. He said it "will eventually lead to a significant reduction in the size of the federal work force." Well. At the beginning of fiscal 1981, federal employment, civilian and military, was 4,966,000. At the beginning of fiscal 1986, it was 5,210,000, with most of the increase civilian.

Why does government grow? In August, 1986, Reagan at the Illinois State Fair boasted — yes, boasted: "No area of the budget, including defense, has grown as fast as our support of agriculture." He added that, "This year alone we'll spend more on farm support programs...than the total amount the last administration provided in all its four years." The farmers interrupted his 11-minute speech with applause 15 times.

As Moynihan says, growth of government is a natural, inevitable product of the political bargaining process among interest groups that favor government outlays that benefit them. This process occurs under all administrations. What is different today–so different in degree that it is different in kind–is the radical discontinuity between conservative rhetoric and results.

"Once through the $100-billion deficit barrier," Moynihan says, "then the $200-billion barrier, once through the $1 trillion debt barrier, then the $2 trillion barrier — the politicians were free to soar. After all, no serious harm had come of it." This is what Moynihan means when he says "big government was made cheap." Because of the numbing deficits, the money did not seem to matter much.

There are many facets of the modern world that explain why the civic religion of small government is unconstraining. Knowledge, says Moynihan, is a form of capital, and much of it is formed because of government investment in public education. Our knowledge-based society is based on a big-government provision.

Also, knowledge begets government. An "information-rich" society by its own dynamic learns about matters that make government goods and services either economically rational, as in government support for scientific agriculture, or morally mandatory, as in medicine.

Not long ago, most American workers were farmers. Today about three percent are, and they feed all of us and many more around the world. The most important cause of this revolution was knowledge generated and disseminated by government.

The social sciences and medical science have produced knowledge that has, in turn, driven government in the direction of activism. Anti-poverty programs became a moral choice only after we learned how to measure poverty. Time was, Moynihan notes, when the biggest hospital expense was clean linen. Now we have knowledge of kidney dialysis, and numerous other technologies. We can choose to keep people alive, and so we do, and it costs money.

As society's wealth has increased, so have demands on government. There are limited amounts of clean air and water. But a "people of plenty" accept fewer limits than a society of scarcity. They make the collective purchase of environmental improvements.

These are tendencies of societies such as ours. Tendencies are not inevitabilities. But, Moynihan warns, a society that refuses to recognize its tendencies intensifies them.

ART BUCHWALD

If you want to break a law, now's the time!

If you have committed a white collar crime or are thinking of committing one, now is the time to do it. The reason is the Justice Department has run out of gas and is willing to settle with anyone who seems to have gotten into trouble.

Art Buchwald

Trinka, a lawyer for the American White Collar Criminal Defense League, told me that this is the best time to make my deal with the government attorneys.

"But I haven't done anything," I protested.

Trinka said, "They'll give you a good deal anyway. I have a client who flies around in a helicopter doing TV commercials telling everyone what a great country this is.

"He bilked his stockholders out of a bundle and was fined, given a censure and suspended from playing squash for 10 days."

"What's such a good deal about that?"

"The government agreed not to stop him from doing his helicopter commercials."

"But he manipulated stock. I didn't do anything. Why should I try to make a deal with the government?"

"This is the opportunity of a lifetime. Meese's boys will roll over for a white collar criminal."

"Why is the Justice Department so easy on white collar criminals?"

"Because they're pro family. Almost everyone who commits a white-collar crime has a family. Do me a favor, let me go down and talk to them. I know they are in a good mood. What have you got to lose?"

"I keep telling you I didn't do anything."

"You know Ivan Boesky? Violated all sorts of laws on the books. They stuck him with a $100 million fine."

"That's a lot of money."

"To you that's a lot of money. To him it's less than what he puts in parking meters every day. Besides, now that he's turning state's evidence there's a rumor the government is going to redecorate his house in Palm Springs, Calif."

"That's fine for Boesky — but I still can't figure what's in it for me if I confess to committing a felony."

"It won't be a felony. We'll go see the Justice people and if you act contrite they'll knock it down to a misdemeanor and give you a seven-day Caribbean cruise on the QE II."

"You're just saying that because you're a lawyer."

"I'm looking after your interests. I've never known white-collar crime settlements to be so easy to get. We won't see anything like this again."

I was losing my patience. "But I haven't committed a crime."

Trinka said, "Then go out and commit one so you can take advantage of their sale. Let me plead you now."

"No way. Even if you could make a good deal with the feds, I don't want my name in the papers."

"Did I tell you that if you commit a white-collar crime on Wall Street before Christmas they give you a ticker tape parade down Broadway?"

"But if I plead guilty to a white-collar crime which I didn't commit, won't the other white-collar criminals get mad at me?"

"Why should they when every American is entitled to equal plea bargaining under the law?"

Country is free world's military instructor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over the past year, more than 22,000 foreign soldiers received some type of training from their American counterparts in programs that have made this country the free world's leading military instructor.

The programs, some financed by taxpayers and some tied to payments by the foreign country, have all been authorized by Congress. They stand separate from covert training provided to insurgent movements around the world.

Military training of foreign troops has gained attention as President Reagan signed a bill providing $100 million in aid to the Contra guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government. Officials say the Contras may get training on U.S. territory if Nicaragua's neighbors balk at setting up U.S. training camps on their soil.

The Contras will join soldiers, airmen, sailors and marines from more than 80 nations in getting instruction from their American counterparts, most of it done in this country.

The U.S. training programs are of two kinds — instruction tied to weapon sales and instruction provided under the Pentagon's International Military Education and Training Program, which seeks to build rapport with foreign military leaders around the world.

The first program is more limited. Every time the United States sells a new type of tank, plane or missile to another country, that country's military can get training in its use from U.S. personnel as well as training on its maintenance by the manufacturer. Military training in running logistic supply systems is also offered.

The Pentagon estimates almost 7,900 foreigners received training as a result of foreign military sales in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30. Slightly more than 8,000 received such training in fiscal 1985 and the Pentagon says the number has stayed in that range over the past few years.

The IMET program, meantime, goes beyond the handling of specific weapons. Its focus is primarily on the professional soldier, particularly officers, and much of the training is provided at staff and war colleges.

About 15,000 foreign military personnel received instruction in fiscal 1986, according to Lt. Col. Don Brownlee, a Pentagon spokesman.

Sexual assault case goes to jury for deliberations

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A jury began deliberations today in the trial of a 24-year-old Midland man accused in the sexual assault of an 11-year-old girl.

In closing arguments prosecutor Ralph Petty told the jury there was little doubt that Blaisdell Young was the man who attacked the girl.

"We have brought you the testimony of five identification witnesses that it was this defendant, and no one else, who was lying in wait for this girl."

Defense council Carol Kirk argued that the state had not met its burden of proof in the case. Despite the serious nature of the crime alleged, she urged the jury to only consider the evidence against the defendant.

She said she doubted the victim could have identified the man who attacked her because testimony indicated he had a ladies' stocking over his head.

"There is everyone here who wanted to grab that little girl and make the hurt go away, but please don't let that be the basis for your decision.

In Wednesday's testimony in front of the six-man, six-woman jury, the victim identified the defendant as the man who grabbed and sexually assaulted her May 23 of this year.

The girl, who was calm and spoke clearly on the stand under questioning by Petty, testified she was walking in an alley near Terrell and Mineola streets with two other girls when she saw a black man with a pair of panty hose over his head.

"He came behind me and grabbed me by the neck," she said. She said the man had a screwdriver in his hand, and pointed it toward her chest.

"He said, 'Don't yell or I'll kill you,'" the girl said.

The girl said the man removed her shorts and underwear, then removed his shorts and underwear.

Using anatomically correct dolls, Petty removed clothes from both dolls and asked the girl to show the jury what happened. She showed Petty, who placed one doll on top of the other.

In earlier testimony, two women testified that they chased the attacker after he fled the alley.

Josie Briones testified she chased the man through the alley, then followed him in a pickup truck when she ran into a friend of hers.

Ms. Briones said the man fled on foot across U.S. Highway 80, across a set of railroad tracks, near the Soul City club, 101 N. Mineola. She said she followed the man until he ducked into the Spotlite Club, 210. S. Lee.

She and another witness, who was with her in the truck, Doris Olguin, both positively identified the defendant as the man they chased.

After the state rested its case Wednesday afternoon, the defense called a neighbor of Young's, Ruby Nelson, who testified that the day of the assault, she saw the defendant at his house several times.

ACS: Number of smokers down

From Staff Reports

Having to read, listen to and see all the negatives associated with cigarette smoking are enough to make a smoker quit — purely out of exhaustion.

But according to the American Cancer Society, the past 10 years has seen a decrease in the number of smokers and an increase in the number of those who will not tolerate it in any form.

They say smoking is becoming increasingly unpopular and corporations, cities, states, communities and institutions are placing greater restrictions on smoking. The U.S. Congress has acted to raise excise taxes and require new warning statements on cigarettes and advertising that reflects new medical knowledge about the dangers of cigarette smoking.

A recent Gallup poll, commissioned by the American Lung Association, found that 79 percent of all Americans, including 76 percent of those who are smokers, thought smoking in the workplace should be restricted to designated areas. Eight percent favored a total ban in the workplace.

Almost two-thirds of those surveyed felt that smokers should refrain from smoking in public places. A total ban on cigarette advertising was favored by 32 percent, and another 36 percent were found to favor some type of curb on advertising.

More men smoke than women. Men who smoke make up 33 percent of the male population in America, while 28 percent of the female population smokes.

In general, men with college educations, white-collar occupations and high-income levels are less likely to smoke than high-school gradutes who have blue-collar jobs and lower incomes.

Women who work outside the home are more likely to smoke than housewives and women in households with lower incomes.

The rate of initiation of smoking amoung younger women has not declined, the Gallup poll found, and prevalence is still relatively high among women in administrative and managerial positions. A recent survey conducted for the National Institute on Drug Abuse showed that 18 percent of college women smoke daily, as opposed to 10 percent of college-educated men.

Evidence accumulated throughout the past decade by the American Cancer Society shows that smokers endanger not only their own health, but also the health of those around them.

Maternal smoking has been linked to adverse effects on the fetus and complications of pregnancy, and children of smoking have a higher frequency of respiratory diseases. Recent findings indicate that exposure to tobacco smoke can cause disease, including lung cancer, in otherwise healthy adults.

ACS provides health facts

From Staff Reports

Facts on smoking and health from the American Cancer Society

The risk of developing lung cancer is 10 times greater for smokers than for nonsmokers. Those who smoke two or more packs of cigarettes a day are 15 to 25 times more likely to die of lung cancer than nonsmokers.

It is estimated that 83 percent of the cases of lung cancer could be avoided if individuals never took up smoking.

The six American cigarette companies spend $1.5 billion annually for advertising on billboards, in newspapers and magazines, promotions, many which are televised.

More than 320,000 Americans will die prematurely this year of diseases linked to smoking. That's as many Americans as have been killed in all the wars fought in this century. Worldwide, even the most conservative estimates place the number of avoidable deaths caused by smoking at well over one million a year.

A survey done by the American Cancer Society showed that 85 percent of the 54 million smokers in America want to quit smoking.

Cigarette smoking can not only lead to lung cancer, but cancer of the mouth, pharynx, larynx, esophagus, bladder and pancreas.

In an 18-hour working day, a two-pack-a-day smoker spends from three to four hours with a cigarette in his mouth, hand or ashtray, takes about 400 puffs and inhales up to 600 milligrams of tar.

From 1978 to 1985, the ranks of former smokers increased from 31.5 million to more than 37 million.

Only one-third of smokers gain weight when they give up cigarettes. One-third actually lose weight as a result of combining a general fitness program with their efforts to quit.

Fires caused by cigarettes kill more than 2,300 men, women and children each year in the U.S. And each year, an additional 5,000 victims are burned in cigarette-induced fires.

Smoking costs the American public up to $100 billion a year in increased taxes, insurance premiums, heating and cooling expenses, maintenance and cleanup costs, according to the General Accounting Office of the U.S. Government.

DWI ruling involving area man overturned

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals overturned a lower court's ruling in a DWI case involving a Midland-area man Wednesday, saying trial courts must submit as evidence a defendant's refusal to take a breathalyzer test.

In a stinging dissent, Justice Marvin Teague questioned whether his colleagues had joined the popular movement "to 'lock-step' with those who favor abolishing all rights which the (state and federal) constitutions grant our people, because 'it is only those who are guilty who hide behind those rights and innocent persons have no need to hide behind those rights.'"

The case involved the Jan. 8, 1983, arrest of James Benton Bass for driving while intoxicated along U.S. 80 from Odessa to Midland. The arresting officer testified that after advising him of his rights, Bass first agreed to take a breathalyzer test then changed his mind.

Evidence of Bass' refusal was admitted during the trial, in which he was convicted and issued a probated sentence of six months in jail and a $500 fine. In May 1984, the El Paso Court of Appeals reversed that conviction, ruling that telling the jury of Bass' refusal contradicts state law and the constitutional protection that a defendant "shall not be compelled to give evidence against himself."

The seven-man majority in Wednesday's decision ruled that Bass' refusal to take the breathalyzer test was not a statement "made by an accused as a result of custodial interrogation" and thus not protected by the Constitution.

Teague, however, accused "an aggressive and assertive majority" of the high court of "deep-sixing" a long-standing judicial concept in reaching its decision.

Workshops planned on how to obtain bids

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A series of workshops are being conducted by the Eastside Economic Development Task Force to help small and minority business people apply for city and county contracts.

"One idea is to make people aware there is opportunity within the city and county. It helps broaden the bid base. The more people interested in bidding the more competitive it is," said Nancy Vickrey, executive director with the Eastside Economic Development Task Force.

One of the biggest handicaps facing small business owners is not knowing how to apply for local bids, Ms. Vickrey said.

"Experience is the biggest handicap small business people face. They just haven't done it. When small business people know the players, they become much more aggressive," she said.

The city has contracted with one workshop participant, Billy Jackson of Jackson Dirt Construction Company, said Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor.

On Oct. 28 Jackson's $13,540 offer was the low bid among eight bidders to demolish 32 dilapidated structures in the city.

Jackson will be paid out of an allocated amount of Community Development Block Grant funds that the city is using to clear vacant lots.

The federal government suggests 10 percent of these funds be awarded to minority contractors, McGregor said.

However, the city has not met the suggested requirement for minority contracts, McGregor said.

Purchasing agent Mark Phillips said he did not know what percentage of block grant funds were awarded to minorities last year.

Unlike federal money, McGregor said the city has not allocated a fixed amount of money it will guarantee to minority contractors.

"We're under no obligation to achieve a fixed quota," he said.

But McGregor added, "We will try to involve minorities in the bidding. We will meet with minority contractors. We want to help them get involved and educate them."

Like the city, the county is under no obligation to favor local or minority contractors, said Auditor Floyd Jarnagin.

"Everything is equal. We all have an equal shot of it," Jarnagin said.

But he said, "We try to keep it all within Midland. We try in all manner to acquire goods and services from local business people."

Task force chairman Manuel Carrasco said he hopes the workshops will generate more bidders from the east and southside of Midland.

"I'd like to see better participation on the part of the east and southeast area of town," he said.

One small businessmen, Rick Espinosa, who has successfully contracted with the federal government, said, "Everybody feels it's a mountain of paperwork. It's true, but the government just wants its stuff done right so it can backtrack in case there are problems."

Espinosa owns ESP Manufacturing Company in Odessa, which produces small parts.

Two workshops have been conducted with city and county speakers, and a third one with the Midland Independent School District is scheduled for mid-December, Ms. Vickrey said.

Police dispatcher charged in connection with abduction

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities say a police dispatcher, her daughter and a teacher have been charged in connection with the abduction and beating of two men in which the motive apparently was revenge.

William Oney, 21, one of the victims, suffered a gunshot wound in his arm during the Nov. 2 incident that was apparently in retaliation for some kind of property damage, officials said.

Dispatcher Corrine Hathaway, 45, was fired after a police department hearing Tuesday and arrested immediately after along with her daughter, Bronwen Baker, 22, and Larry Urban, a 46-year-old teacher, authorities said.

Michael Moore, 38, was charged Nov. 11 in the incident, authorities said. He was arrested Nov. 10 on narcotics charges.

Charges of false imprisonment, a third-degree felony, were filed against all four.

Robert Hawthorne and Oney told police they were lured to Ms. Baker's home and bound and gagged by Moore and Urban, who struck and kicked them.

Moore had a gun and threatened to sexually assault them, they said. They said he also tried to force them to perform sex acts on each other.

Despite bad times, people shouldn't give up hope

Hard times soften the heart.

That may not be an axiom. Hard times may sometimes harden the heart or just put an end to its heartbeat. I can't say for certain.

But it seems to me that the more difficult the days, the gentler the heart and the more understanding the mind.

I've seen that right here in Midland in the wake of the bust in the oil patch and in the economic downturn on the farm and ranch. And I know of people who emerged from the Great Depression with suffering in their souls but with an understanding, empathic and compassionate heart. Personal tragedies and honest confrontations, painful though they may be, can make the heart more compassionate if there is that constant struggle to persevere — never give up.

Today, there is a common identity among farmers, ranchers and oil-and-gas people — producers, operators, geologists, engineers, clerks, roustabouts, pumpers. Heydays are not abounding anywhere.

Back during the boom, the farmers and ranchers would lament the inalterable "if only." If only they owned producing oil wells on their land, if only the wealth of the land could be shared, if only they were in the petroleum business, if only they didn't love the land so, and if only farming and ranching were profitable, if only life weren't so unfair, if only the bills didn't pile up, if only this plight were but a dream and not a nightmare, if only reality could be changed.

Those "if onlys" are tormentors and don't change the past or the present. "If only I owned an oil well, I could afford to farm." "If only I were a rich dude, I could make this range land pay off."

Today, equilibrium is lacking.

Back in the drought of the 1950s, poor-to-broke farmers and ranchers could find paying jobs in the oil patch. An oil boom was going on. Jobs were plentiful in the late 1970s and early 1980s when, in the oil and money circle, there seemed to be more money abounding than there was good sense and solid investments.

Today, farmers are scanning the oil field for work. There's none. Oilfield hands are knocking on farm and ranch doors to find paying work. There's none.

The economy seems almost stagnant, there's gloom and doom in the market place, commodity prices are down, bankruptcy is in a sinister vogue, there's caution in spending — although spendthrifts are around as if to deny the obvious.

But, there's one thing still alive, dormant and ready to flourish: hope.

There seems to be more "activity" in the oil field. Some enterprising folks still are putting "deals" together hoping to hit pay dirt and not another dry hole and hoping the barrel price of oil will be reasonably profitable and not a liability.

As a lot, farmers and ranchers are eternal optimists. They never give up. They're sort of like the proverbial wheeler-dealer who will spend his (or your) last dime to drill another oil well.

In recent years, farmers and ranchers weathered the drought.

"Next year, it will be different."

It was, but was no better.

Next year blended into this year, which was an unusually wet year, which effects about the same damage of a dry year.

Next year is coming up again on the farm, ranch, and oil patch.

With hope and tenacity to bank on, maybe "things" will be better and not just different if the hearty and hardy West Texans don't give up and keep plugging away.

Giving up is certain death. Banking on hope is life-giving. Never give up.

The Rebel football team ended its season with a heartbreaking 14-0 loss to Amarillo High in the bi-district playoff game. The team finished with an 8-2 record and a co-district championship.

Lee High is proud to be the new home of the district bell. Good luck to all the seniors who hope to continue their careers in college.

Just as the football season ends, the basketball team opens play for both boys and girls. The girls team started its season against Stanton, while the boys began their quest for another playoff berth on Tuesday against Coronado.

Their home opener will be Nov. 25 against Crane. Chaparral Center will host the annual Tall City Tournament Thanksgiving weekend. The tournament field includes Amarillo High, last year's 5A state champions.

The Lee band and football teams each received great amounts of recognition for their exceptional performances, but few Rebels know of the great achievements Gina Adams has achieved as a baton twirler.

During many pep rallies and halftimes, Gina has thrilled the crowd with her spectacular feats. Her most memorable performance came at the halftime of the Lee-San Angelo game when she awed the entire crowd by setting fire to her baton anf expertly twirling the flames. She received a standing ovation.

The last week in July, Gina traveled to Notre Dame University to compete in an international twirling competition. She returned home as the world champion in her age group.

As in all sports and other activities, many hours of practice are required to achieve high levels of excellence. Gina, who is also the band captain, devotes between three and four hours a day improving her skills.

Currently she is working toward winning regionals in March. She hopes to attend Baylor University, though she has already received a scholarship offer from the University of Houston.

Four suits filed as result of shigellosis outbreak

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The shigellosis outbreak that began near the end of August in the Midland-Odessa area has resulted in four lawsuits being filed in Ector County courts. Reports indicate suits are expected to be filed in Midland County, too.

Three of the suits in Ector County have been filed on behalf of alleged victims of the disease. Another suit, the first filed in connection with the outbreak, was filed by Odessa city councilman Sherman Cox and his son, Gary, who operate franchised Taco Villa restaurants in Big Spring and Snyder and Texas Burger restaurants in Midland and Big Spring.

The Coxes' suit, filed in 70th District Counrt Sept. 26, alleges Creative Food 'n' Fun of Dallas — which owns the Comark Food Distribution company that operates Taco Villa restaurants in approximately 19 cities — along with Comark caused Taco Villa franchise operators and owners irreperable damage by failing to notify them of the suspected contaminated lettuce shipments.

A class action suit filed Sept. 30 in 161st District Court by Odessa attorney David Greenhaw on behalf of Fernando Rodriquez and others afflicted by the disease alleges Creative Food 'n' Fun is guilty of gross negligence and violations of the Texas Deceptive Trade and Practices Act.

The petition filed by Greenhaw lists as other parties to the suit nearly 300 Ector-Midland County residents who allegedly contracted the disease during the outbreak.

On Oct. 31, Rhoda Sue Cupp of 18 Shaw Court, filed suit in 244th District Court seeking damages of $50,000 as a result of lost earnings. In the petition filed, Odessa attorney Melissa Hirsch contends Ms. Cupp became a victim of the disease after eating at an Odessa Taco Villa Aug. 29 and at Chili's on Aug. 30.

The suit names Comark, doing business as Taco Villa, and Chili's Inc., as defendants in the suit and accuses them of negligence.

The suit filed Oct. 24 in 70th District Court by Odessa attorney Ruff Ahders on behalf of Tammy Decker, 1322 W. 19th St., alleges Taco Villa, Creative Food 'n' Fun and Comark violated the Texas Deceptive Trade and Practices Act by misrepresenting and failing to disclose information about goods and services. The suit contends the three defendants displayed "conscious indiffereence to human welfare in general" and seeks $25,000 in damages.

Ector County and Texas Department of Health officials investigating the outbreak attributed the cause to contaminated lettuce distributed by Comark.

The company destroyed about a ton of lettuce after shredded lettuce was tentatively identified as a possible source of the bacteria.

In answering petitions, the three defendants have denied allegations.

Cigarette smoke is a mixture of about 4,000 different chemical substances, some of which are known to cause cancer. People who are exposed to others' tobacco smoke, called sidestream smoke, absorb nicotine and carbon monoxide, research indicates.

On the legal front, bills were introduced in the Senate and the House in 1985 and 1986 to restrict smoking to designated areas in all buildings or building sections occupied by the U.S. government.

The Comprehensive Smoking Education Act was signed into law in 1984. One of its major provisions replaced the current health warning on cigarette packs, advertisements and billboards with four stronger, more prominent warnings.

The act also requires that cigarette companies disclose to the Department of Health and Human Services a complete list of all chemicals and other ingredients added to cigarettes during the manufacturing process. Congress must also be kept informed about the department's research on these ingredients and if any particular one poses a health risk to smokers.

Whip handler will snap cigarettes from mouths

Associated Press

A smokeless, snuffless, chewless day was planned in Boerne, and a whip handler was prepared to snap cigarettes from the mouths of volunteers in Dallas as the 10th Great American Smokeout was observed in Texas today.

In Boerne, cigarettes, chewing tobacco and snuff were being regarded as contraband. The sheriff's department was planning to confiscate all tobacco products at major entrances to the Hill Country city in an effort to quash the smoking habit.

Some cigarette smokers in Dallas were prepapared to kick their habits with the help of an Australian whip handler, who uses a whip to snap cigarettes out of the mouths of willing smokers.

The activity, which included a downtown parade, was one of several statewide taking place today and Wednesday to promote the annual Smokeout, which is sponsored by the American Cancer Society to encourage smokers to give up cigarettes for 24 hours.

Wednesday night in San Antonio, the Smokeout was kicked off by a beer-and-tamale party in front of the Alamo to honor people who have been non-somkers for the past 10 years.

In the suburb of Plano today, HCA Medical Center has encouraged visitors, doctors and other employees to stop smoking for a day.

"To assist those individuals who decide not to smoke during the Smokeout, the administrative staff and department managers will be 'adopting' a smoker for the day, providing their co-worker with encouragement and special survival treats," said Dr. Steve Kendall, the hospital's director of the Center for Lifestyle Enhancement.

The hospital promised smoke-stopping survival kits that include gum, tips on quitting and headless matches, along with a supply of celery and carrots for those who need to nibble.

At Methodist Medical Center, staffers put together a song and dance routine called the "Smokeout Shuffle" to be performed for members of the local cancer society and employees.

Hospital spokeswoman Tracey New said cold turkey sandwiches would be served as well.

Ms. Nelson told Ms. Kirk that Young was wearing different clothes than those claimed by several prosecution witnesses.

Another neighbor of the defendant's, Priscilla Woodson, also testified that the clothes she saw Young wearing that day were not the same color claimed by the state's witnesses.

DWI

"Until today, the Legislature of this state and this court has long jealously guarded the right of an accused to remain silent," Teague wrote.

"I am unable to understand how any rational appellate court judge can state without any qualification that an accused, who has been arrested, placed in a police car, asked questions by the arresting officer, to which he gives responses, albeit negative ones, is not then in the grips of 'custodial interrogation.'"

The court's decision returns the case to the El Paso Court of Appeals to consider Bass' other challenges to the conviction.

Officer: Probes clear DPS of wrongdoing

WACO (AP) — Three investigations have not uncovered any wrongdoing in the probe by the Texas Department of Public Safety that led to criminal indictments against District Attorney Vic Feazell, the DPS director says.

Director Col. Jim Adams said Wednesday the three investigations — including a Justice Department probe — into allegations made by Feazell that his civil rights were violated by DPS and FBI investigations, found no evidence of wrongdoing.

Feazell filed a complaint in December 1985 with the Justice Department in Washington D.C., requesting an investigation into an alleged conspiracy to violate his civil rights. He claimed Justice Department and DPS officials were involved in wiretapping, mail tampering and attempting to suborn testimony. The Justice Department mailed Feazell a response on Jan. 8, but he would not divulge its contents.

The DPS official told the Waco Founder Lions Club that U.S. Attorney Helen Eversberg informed him shortly before Feazell was indicted by an Austin federal grand jury on racketeering charges that the Justice Department had discovered no wrongdoing.

Feazell also has been notified of the Justice Department's findings, Adams said. Feazell could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

In addition to the Justice Department investigation, the Texas Public Safety Commission and FBI reviewed the Feazell investigation and found no wrongdoing, Adams said.

"When you investigate a public official, expect to be attacked," Adams said. "In other words, they'll try and create a smokescreen to divert attention from what the real issues of a case are."

Feazell is to stand trial Feb. 2 in Austin on charges he accepted bribes to dispose of cases favorably.

The McClennan County district attorney has maintained the DPS investigation of his office was in retaliation for a 1985 McLennan County grand jury investigation into murder confessions made by Henry Lee Lucas. The Lucas grand jury probe embarrassed Adams and the Texas Rangers, Feazell said, because the Rangers claimed Lucas committed murders which the McLennan County grand jury cleared him of committing.

The investigation of the district attorney's office stemmed from a public statement by Feazell that there were rumors of payoffs in his office and he had two investigations under way, Adams said.

Man convicted of knifing, hammering woman

AUSTIN (AP) — A jury has convicted a man for knifing, hammering and beating a woman while wearing a black ninja outfit.

The jury deliberated an hour and 15 minutes Wednesday before convicting Tony Wigley, 20, of the aggravated robbery of Ellen Duwe, 43.

Wigley who kicked two cameramen in the courthouse hallway while the jury was deliberating, was scheduled for sentencing today.

Prosecutors said they will seek a life sentence.

Wigley, a drifter from Ohio, was convicted in the Aug. 29 attack on Ms. Duwe in her home here. She was hit in the head several times with a hammer and was stabbed in the chest and twice in the neck after being confronted in her bathroom by a man dressed in a black ninja suit.

The attacker also tried to hammer the knife into Ms. Duwe's skull and checked her pulse before leaving the house.

In closing arguments to the jury, Assistant District Attorney Paul Wommack described Ms. Duwe's ordeal as "murderous and deadly attacks indeed."

No defense witnesses were called.

As Wigley was being led back to jail at the start of jury deliberations, he jumped up and kicked an Austin American-Statesman photographer and a television cameraman. Wigley's feet were chained together at the time.

Before reaching its verdict, the jury asked to see all the exhibits, which included dozens of photographs.

Police impound lot may have best car deal in town

DALLAS (AP) — The police department says its overcrowded impound lot has become the third largest car dealership in Dallas.

The best deal on four wheels may be at the impound lot, where broken down and abandoned cars are being sold at the rate of 150 every day. But the same number of vehicles come into the lot each day, which has caused a traffic jam at the facility.

"There's just no space to put another car — especially abandoned cars," said Capt. Bird Senter, commander of the Dallas Police Department's Vehicle Services Division. "It's a very frustrating situation we're in. We've been jammed tight for space for the past several months."

The lot, designed to accommodate about 1,700 cars, has become too small because so many vehicles in Dallas are being abandoned. Weekly auctions aren't reducing the number of vehicles fast enough.

"We've had as many as 1,986 jammed in this pound," said Senter.

Police said the slumping economy and a sharp increase in auto thefts have caused the number of abandoned vehicles to skyrocket. Nearly 12,000 cars were stolen in Dallas between January and September, Senter said. Of these, 6,930 were recovered and processed through the pound.

However, the overcrowding is bringing in revenue. The city charges $40 for towing to the impound, $15 for impoundment and $15 a day for storage. There is a $25 service charge when a vehicle is kept for 15 days.

Auctions of the cars are held every Monday, and about 6,300 have been sold this year at an average price of $248.50, said Senter.

Man posing as cellmate released from city jail

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin police are searching for a 27-year-old man who posed as his cellmate, who was due for release, and walked out of the city jail.

Pedro C. Ruedas, of Austin, who was being held on a burglary charge, is still at large after planning the scheme in detail with the other prisoner. The cellmate was being held on suspicion of theft but wasn't charged, officials said.

Jail supervisor Lt. Howard Park, said Ruedas and his cellmate exchanged information such as date of birth, address, names of relatives — "information that normally only (the prisoner himself) would know," Park said.

"They went over it and over it," he added. "They even compared signatures."

Ruedas left the cell when his cellmate's name was called for release. He correctly answered the jailer's questions and was allowed to leave.

Lt. Roosevelt Sampson said the other man also was released before the ruse was discovered. He could be charged with aiding an escape, a third-degree felony, but no charges had been filed by Wednesday afternoon, Sampson said.

"This is probably only the second time someone has been successful at it in the last six months. Sometimes even under the best security they can get out," Park said.

Jailers are supposed to check drivers' license photos of prisoners before releasing them, but "most of these people don't have any type of picture ID," Park said.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED REDUCTION IN AT&T's TEXAS RATES

The Public Utility Commission of the state of Texas has entered orders in two recent cases that would substantially reduce the charges which AT&T pays to the state's local telephone companies and which could allow AT&T to reduce prices for most of AT&T's customers on calls placed within the state of Texas

The total amount of the reduction to AT&T's customers is expected to be between $115.3 million and $120.6 million. This is in addition to the $19.8 million reduction in AT&T's Texas basic long distance prices that went into effect on March 1, 1986 and is in addition to the approximately $2 billion in AT&T interstate price reductions that took effect earlier this year.

If the changes are approved, all of AT&T's direct dialed long distance, directory assistance, WATS and 800 service customers would be affected, and would experience a decrease in their prices for these services when calling within the state of Texas. The following tables show the anticipated impact of the changes on AT&T customers by service category.

Class of Service	Approximate Overall % Reduction	Approximate Overall Dollar Reduction (in millions)
Long Distance	9.2	$ 68.4
Directory Assistance	20.0	1.0
WATS	29.1	29.7
800	19.9	21.5

The rate reductions are presently anticipated to occur in two phases on or about October 22, 1986 and November 12, 1986. The matter has been assigned as Docket Nos. 6926 and 7113. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf. A complete copy of the tariffs reflecting the potential rate reductions will be on file with the Commission on or before October 23, 1986.

Guatemalan loses feet in train accident trying to save daughter

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 39-year-old Guatemalan woman lost both feet in a train accident after pushing her 4-year-old daughter to safety Wednesday, authorities said.

A San Antonio police officer said he heard a woman scream shortly after 7:30 a.m. when he had been called to railroad tracks near Kelly Air Force Base to investigate reports of people waiting in vehicles to pick up undocumented workers from a freight train.

He found Maria Castellano kneeling on the ground, holding her 4-year-old daughter.

Ms. Castellano told the officer she had started to jump from the moving train while holding her daughter in her arms. As she jumped, Ms. Castellano's dress caught on part of the car, but she managed to push the child away from the train as they fell, police said.

"Instead of letting the baby get hurt, she threw her out and saved her," police spokesman Ricardo Valdes said.

Federal child care grants made

AUSTIN (AP) — Federal grants totaling $277,875 have been made to help find and assist "latch key" children in 10 Texas communities, the governor's office said Wednesday.

"The federal funds are being made available because of the increasing need among families to locate dependent care resources in their communities and to address the growing number of children in self-care, 'latch key' children, who return home after school and remain unsupervised until parents return from work," the governor's statement said.

The grants are administered by the Texas Department of Community Affairs with funds from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Organizations receiving grants included Child Care Dallas; Palo Pinto Community Services Corp., Kleberg County; Houston Committee for Private Sector Initiative; Wee Care Child Center Inc. of Plainview; Economic Opportunities Advancement Corp. of Waco; Tyler Metropolitan YMCA; CSA of Dimmitt; LaSalle and Maverick counties; United Way of Austin; and Corporate Child Development Fund for Texas in Austin.

Thousands of leftists march in Philippine funeral procession

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Tens of thousands of people chanting "Revolution!" marched through Manila today in the funeral procession of a slain labor leader, then appealed to President Corazon Aquino to move against what they see as a rightist threat.

It was the largest and most open display of flags, banners and personalities from the underground left in the heart of Manila since the beginning of the 17-year-old Communist insurgency.

Many marchers wore T-shirts with the hammer and sickle symbol. They raised clenched fists and chanted, "Long live the Communist Party of the Philippines" and other leftist and anti-military slogans.

The daylong funeral procession was for Rolando Olalia, leader of the Partido ng Bayan, or Peoples Party, and militant May 1st Movement, a labor federation; and his driver, Leonor Alayay. Olalia, 52, and Alayay were kidnapped and murdered last week.

WORLD

Cheering office workers pelted the noisy but peaceful crowd with yellow confetti as the procession accompanying the two bodies made its way from the University of the Philippines chapel through the heart of Manila to a suburban cemetery.

A crowd estimated at up to 100,000 people followed the truck-borne caskets through the city. The two victims were lowered into their graves at 9 p.m., nearly 11 hours after the procession began.

The procession earlier stopped 500 yards from Malacanang Palace, the seat of government, which was sealed off by barbed wire barricades and hundreds of police.

Olalia's widow, Feliciana, handed two senior officials a letter for Mrs. Aquino that was read aloud. It urged "swift justice" for the killers and implored Mrs. Aquino to "draw your strength from the masses now at your doorstep" and confront "extreme rightists." Her husband's supporters blame rightist forces loyal to Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile for the unsolved murders.

Nick Elman, an official of the May 1st Movement, called on Mrs. Aquino to "make a decision with our help to dismantle the remnants of fascism in our country."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Khomeini condemns contacts

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini today condemned Iranian officials who want contacts with the United States and said they should be "screaming at America."

"Why have we lost ourselves?" Khomeini asked. "Why should we be so Western oriented or Satan-oriented?"

Khomeini spoke nearly a week after President Reagan revealed that the United States negotiated secretly with Iran for 18 months and delivered some weapons in a bid to improve relations.

Since then, several top Iranian officials have spoken of a possible rapprochement with the United States, while adding this could not happen until several Iranian conditions were met.

"Why do you want to create division among the heads of the country?" he said in a Radio Tehran broadcast monitored in Nicosia. "What has come upon us? Where are we going?"

Radio Tehran said he made the speech to the families of war victims in north Tehran. Iran has been fighting with neighboring Iraq since September 1980.

Accident releases cloud

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — A cloud of smoke drifted over this city today from a chemical accident near the site where a toxic spill into the Rhine River triggered an ecological disaster. Authorities said there was no danger to health.

An experiment using 1,000 pounds of a phenol compound "went out of control" at a testing center of Ciba-Geigy, Switzerland's largest chemical manufacturer, the company reported.

Phenol is a caustic, poisonous, crystalline acid compound found in coal tar and wood tar. Diluted, it can be used as a disinfectant.

Spokesman Benno Gunzinger, the Ciba-Geigy center's foreman, said the accident was caused by human error in mixing chemicals during a 3 a.m. experiment. When the experiment went awry the mixture overheated, producing a cloud of smoke containing phenol particles, he said.

Mine fire blamed on arson

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A major gold mining company said today that arsonists may have ignited a blaze that was raging out of control at a mine embroiled in a wage dispute.

Gold Fields of South Africa, the country's third biggest mining house, said large sections of its Kloof mine had been closed because of the fire, reducing production by 20 percent. No injuries were reported.

The company said an initial attempt to set fire to an underground shaft occurred Monday night, when a fire patrol detected smoke and found that two timber packs, used as underground supports, were burning.

That fire was extinguished and patrols were stepped up, the company said, but on Wednesday night heavier smoke was detected one level below the earlier fire.

Pope: Couples must decide family size

SINGAPORE (AP) — Pope John Paul II, during a brief stop in this densely populated city-state that has actively discouraged large families, told a rain-soaked Mass today that couples must be free to decide how many children they want.

"I wish to assure couples that the church supports them as they strive to exercise responsibly their fundamental right to form families, to bear and rear their children without any form of coercion or pressure," John Paul said in the outdoor Mass for a crowd estimated at 70,000.

Singapore has only about 100,000 Catholics.

"It is the right of the married couple to make a free, informed and mutual decision, in accordance with accepted moral principles, regarding the spacing of births and the size of the family," he said.

The pontiff flew to this wealthy Asian financial center from Bangladesh on the second leg of a two-week, 31,000-mile Asian and Pacific tour. He was next headed to Fiji after a five-hour stopover.

This, John Paul's 3nd foreign tour since assuming the papacy in 1978, also will include stops in New Zealand, Australia and the Seychelles before his scheduled return to Rome Dec. 1.

John Paul did not raise the issue of birth control policy in Bangladesh, a poor, densely populated country of about 100 million.

Singapore, a city-state of 2.5 million people at the tip of the Malay peninsula. It has one of the highest population densities in the world, approximately 10,400 people per square mile in 1984, the latest year for which figures were available.

The government once offered financial inducements and disincentives aimed at limiting births to two children per family. The program was allowed to lapse after the birth rate fell sharply.

More than 100 Catholic students stood in the drizzle waving yellow orchids as the pope arrived. During his whirlwind stopover here, the pope called on President Wee Kim Wee and Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew.

Asked why John Paul came to Singapore, 10-year-old Aileen Teo, who waited in the drizzly weather to greet the pontiff, said, "He has come to see the poor people, listen to their troubles, help them and pray for them."

Hasenfus won't appeal sentence, attorney says

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — American mercenary Eugene Hasenfus has decided not to appeal a 30-year prison sentence for his role in flying weapons to Nicaraguan rebels and will try to win a pardon instead, his Nicaraguan lawyer said.

Enrique Sotelo Borgen said Wednesday that Hasenfus signed a document waiving the appeals process before a revolutionary tribunal.

"We have decided against appealing to end this proceeding once and for all, and to gain time to request a pardon through the National Commission of Promotion and Protection of Human Rights," he said.

Hasenfus said after the verdict Saturday that he would appeal his conviction on charges of terrorism, criminal association and violating the maintenance of public order and security. A three-member People's Tribunal condemned him to the maximum sentence.

After a half-hour meeting with his client, Sotelo Borgen said Hasenfus "is in a good spirits and has great hopes of improving his situation and I try to encourage him."

Before talking to Sotelo Borgen, Hasenfus met with his wife, Sally, for about 15 minutes, the lawyer said.

Mrs. Hasenfus planned to return to the United States today.

Also today, Nicaraguan Vice President Sergio Ramirez was scheduled to visit Madison, Wis., and possibly meet with Hasenfus' relatives.

Hasenfus, a 45-year-old former Marine, is from Marinette in northeastern Wisconsin.

David Merritt, staff director of the Wisconsin Coordinating Council on Nicaragua, said, "It's 99 percent sure that the meeting with the family will take place."

Ramirez, who is on a weeklong tour of the United States, said Tuesday in Kansas City that Nicaragua may release Hasenfus in a bid to improve relations with the United States.

Hasenfus was captured by Sandinista troops on Oct. 6, the day after bailing out of a C-123 cargo plane filled with arms and supplies for the U.S.-backed Contra rebels that was shot down over southern Nicaragua.

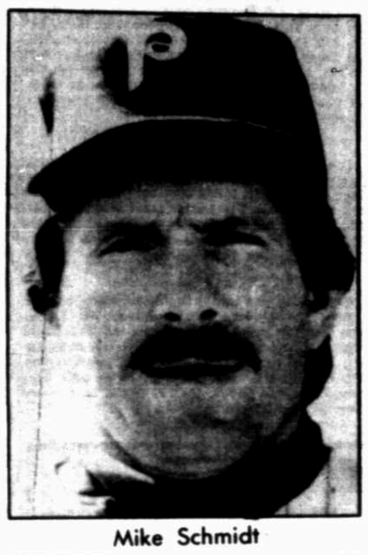
Schmidt wins '86 NL MVP, aims for '87



Mike Schmidt

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Schmidt plans on playing one more season and he now has a definite goal for his final year — an unprecedented fourth MVP award.

The Philadelphia Phillies third baseman, who is five home runs shy of 500 for his career, was named National League Most Valuable Player Wednesday as he joined six other three-time winners.

"I'm gearing up for next year in hopes of being at this podium again," Schmidt, who had 15 first-place votes and 287 points in the balloting conducted by the Baseball Writers Association of America, said. "But I'm not looking past next season."

At 37, Schmidt, who won the award in 1980 and 1981, is the second oldest player to win an MVP award. Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell, who shared the honor in 1979 with St. Louis' Keith Hernandez, was 39.

Houston's Glenn Davis was second in the voting with six first-place votes and 231 points, while New York teammates Gary Carter, one first-place vote and 181 points, and Hernandez, two first-place votes and 179 points, were third and fourth, respectively. Schmidt, Davis and Carter were the only players named on all 24 ballots.

Schmidt hit .290 this season with 37 home runs and 119 runs batted in, both league-leading figures, and he eclipsed the 30-homer mark for the 12th time, three behind Henry Aaron's record. Schmidt was second in the league in runs scored with 97 and his .547 slugging percentage led the league.

"Since the season ended," Schmidt said, "my thoughts (on retiring) are basically the same. I'm not looking past next year."

Schmidt explained that his children, Jessica Rae, 8, and Jonathan, 6, needed their father.

"I went to school and talked with my little boy's teacher," Schmidt said. "He's having a problem right now with my career. He's in the first grade. That's a concern of mind, his growing up and being able to be normal, one of the kids.

"And the longer I continue to play as he gets older and older the tougher it's going to be for him ... to be Jonathan Schmidt as opposed to Mike Schmidt's little boy. That's going to carry weight in my decision.

"Can I slowly get out of the headlines and the limelight? I don't want to do it in a declining career and have to be told, 'You've played enough.'"

Schmidt added that "at this point in time I'm convinced I have one more year of active play in this body. And that's the way it's going to stand."

Schmidt said there were three things that might convince him to change his mind.

"If my knees are OK, if my wife and family can cope with another year or two and the club is a contender. But unless I fall flat on my face next season I want to go out on top. I've invested and done well and I'm able to leave."

Asked if he felt he deserved his third MVP Schmidt never hesitated, responding with an emphatic "Yes."

"This feels something like the end of a political campaign the way the voting broke down," he observed. "I feel like a political candidate making his acceptance speech after months and months of campaigning."

The other National Leaguers to win the award three times were Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1943, 1946 and 1948 and Roy Campanella of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1953, 1951 and 1955.

The four American Leaguers to win the award three times are Jimmie Foxx of the Philadelphia Athletics and Boston Red Sox, and Joe DiMaggio, Yogi Berra and Mickey Mantle, all of the New York Yankees.

Schmidt described the 1986 season as the most enjoyable of his 14-year major-league career despite that the Phillies finished 20½ games behind the Mets in the NL East.

"It was my most enjoyable because of the warmth, the encouragement and respect coming out of the stands, especially after so many years of ups and downs, highs and lows (emotionally)," he said. "That's the thing about the 1986 season I'll cherish and remember the most."

Schmidt is the first NL MVP from a team that did not win its division since Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves in 1983.

Boston pitcher Roger Clemens was named American League MVP on Tuesday.

Rough start may be helping Cranes

Area Football

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The questions were first raised last spring when word was leaked Rickey White had arranged for behemoths like Monahans and Fort Stockton to come over and give his Cranes a licking in the next football season.

Had White, overseer of the Crane football fortunes since 1981, fallen off his rocker? What was he trying to do, get his troops cowering in the corners before district play ever got started?

"A lot of people thought I was crazy scheduling Monahans and Fort Stockton," White said, as he readied his District 4-3A champions for Friday's area game with Childress in Levelland. "But after watching Charles Thompson and Dana Amos line up in the Monahans backfield, there isn't a 3A team in the state that can intimidate us.

"There may be teams that can beat us, but they won't intimidate us."

It's that attitude that has helped the Cranes rebound from a 1-3 start, take the District 4-3A title without a loss and edge Denver City 15-7 in bi-district play last week.

This week the Cranes, in the area round of the state football playoffs for the first time since 1983, travel to Levelland for a 7:30 p.m. game with 1-3A co-champ Childress. The Bobcats are 9-2 after pulling off a dramatic come-from-behind 22-21 victory over Littlefield in bi-district.

And the tough schedule that had Crane boosters shaking their heads early in September, is paying dividends as Crane pushes the end of the season deeper and deeper into November.

"November and December are playing time," White says. "Of course we like to win in September, too. But we approach the season a little differently. We improve from Week One to Week Two. We played better against Denver City than we did against Kermit. We plan it out so we hit a peak.

"I THINK we're hitting our peak now. I've yet to have a Crane team play in December yet, and I want to, it's fun."

Now White leads his Cranes into another challenge, defeating Childress without superstar tailback Gerald Mitchell, who went down late in the Denver City game with a knee injury and is doubtful. White said he may play some on defense, but his 1,800-plus yards rushing will be sidelined.

In his stead, sophomore Sharod Vaden will be asked to shoulder the load at tailback, with help from seniors Cliff Wilson and Carl Claunch.

Vaden, a stockily-built 185-pounder, is not exactly unfit for the role of Mitchell's understudy. Though just a sophomore, Vaden runs with the same type of speed and explosion of Mitchell, but lower to the ground.

But because of his tender age, White has been hesitant to put the offensive burden on Vaden. And with Mitchell healthy, there was no need. Now Vaden will be unleashed against Childress.

Of course, he won't be alone. The great blocking Mitchell has enjoyed all season will still be there as the Cranes again have their opponent outmanned on the offensive line. Just as important, the running of fullback Cliff Wilson could be the steadying influence. With defenses keying on Mitchell, Wilson generally gains 50 to 100 yards a game.

White is hoping it is enough to get past the Bobcats. And given another week's rest, Mitchell should be healthy, White is just hoping he gets one more chance to use him.

Young Hawks meet old Celtics, lose

NBA

Associated Press

The Atlanta Hawks, with 50 victories last season and a 7-1 mark to start 1986-87, want to believe that a younger generation of NBA teams is ready to challenge for the championship.

The defending champion Boston Celtics have other ideas.

The Celtics, the oldest team in the league, and the Hawks, with some of the best young players, met for the first time Wednesday night, with Boston winning 111-107.

Kevin McHale, who led the Celtics with 30 points, said the Hawks were "right up there, one of the five top teams in the league."

Other Boston players had similar praise for Atlanta, but Larry Bird said after his 29-point performance that "We didn't play very well and we still beat them. To tell the truth, we're not really worried about them. We're not worried about anyone."

The Celtics and Hawks are both 7-2, but Boston has done it despite injuries to Danny Ainge, Bill Walton and Scott Wedman, although Ainge played briefly against the Hawks in his first appearance of the season. Meanwhile, McHale played 43 minutes, Bird 46, Dennis Johnson 42 and Robert Parish 40. Parish had 20 rebounds to go with his 12 points.

But assistant coach Jim Rodgers, who took over when Coach K.C. Jones was ejected with two technicals in the second quarter, said the Celtics stars are not overworked.

"We're not worried about the minutes the starters are playing right now," Rodgers said. "We want to win basketball games and establish ourselves as the champs. We want the wins and we'll do whatever it takes."

"I think all the talk about the number of minutes the starters are playing is very much overplayed," Johnson said. "We've only played nine games. We have a bench that can help out when we need it."

The Celtics scored eight consecutive points for a 99-92 lead with just over five minutes left and went on to their 45th consecutive home victory, including 42 at Boston Garden.

The Hawks closed the gap to 101-98 with 3:11 remaining, but a three-point play by Johnson and two free throws by McHale put Boston back in control.

"We made too many mistakes," Atlanta Coach Mike Fratello said. "Too many mental mistakes. With a team as good as they are, they're going to take advantage of them."

McWilliams ahead of schedule

Tech picks up sixth win earlier than expected

LUBBOCK (AP) — David McWilliams wanted a winning season in his first year as head football coach at Texas Tech, but he'll be the first to say he didn't expect to have his sixth victory wrapped up by the ninth game.

"If somebody had bet me that, I would have lost an awful lot of money," McWilliams said. "The odds were not in our favor."

McWilliams' outlook was particularly pessimistic after his Red Raiders were routed by No. 1 Miami, Baylor and Texas A&M to fall to 2-3.

"We weren't just getting beat, we were getting drilled. We were getting behind 21-0 in the first quarter. We didn't have a chance," McWilliams said.

He said he found himself thinking, "I hope we can play as perfect a game as possible, compete and stay in the game the whole way."

He added, "I didn't have any second thoughts about having taken the job. I did wonder, but it was more about what I was doing. There was pressure within me to see what we were doing wrong."

And then came Tech's shocking 17-7 victory over Arkansas. Some writers called it the upset of the decade.

"It probably took until that game for us to see a pattern, that the mistakes we'd been making were mosly mental," McWilliams said.

"We were being aggressive enough. We didn't need to spend as much time hitting in practice. What we needed was to think more about what we were doing, to get our timing down, to make sure every step was perfect."

AP Laserphoto

McWilliams altered the practice routine in the week before the Arkansas game. Instead of going full speed in pads two or three days, he had his players in pads only on Tuesday, then drilled them on mechanics the rest of the week.

After the Arkansas win, McWilliams stayed with the plan. The revitalized Raiders followed with victories over Rice, Texas and Texas Christian.

McWilliams began to see a change in attitude among his squad. After several losing seasons — which included a series of near victories turned into defeats because of last-second field goals or kickoff returns — he felt Tech players had developed "not a losing attitude as much as worrying about what was going to happen next."

"It's come to a point now where instead of saying, 'If we play our very best we might can hang in there,' we're saying, 'If we play well we have a good chance to win,'" he said.

SMU came into Lubbock last weekend primed to be beaten, but Tech responded with a stale effort, and some of the glitter rubbed off the Raiders' Cinderella story when the Mustangs left town with a 13-7 win.

Flick gets Charger call against Raiders

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Instability at quarterback, a problem the Chargers thought they had solved last week, resurfaced on the eve of tonight's game between San Diego and the Los Angeles Raiders.

Backup up quarterback Tom Flick will start in place of Dan Fouts, who has been unable to practice this week because of a sore shoulder, San Diego Coach Al Saunders said Wednesday.

Fouts suffered the injury last Sunday during the Chargers' 24-21 loss to the Dallas Cowboys. He had missed the three previous games with a concussion, an injury that also felled reserve quarterback Mark Herrmann during his first start in relief of Fouts on Oct. 26.

"He's nursing an injury to his throwing arm," Saunders said. "It's disappointing that Dan is not able to start because we were really counting on it, but we have a great deal of confidence in Tom."

Flick, a fourth-year pro who joined San Diego as a free-agent during training camp, made his first career NFL start against Kansas City on Nov. 2 in a game won by the Chiefs, 24-23. He was the starter against Denver on Nov. 9, when the Chargers upset the Broncos, 9-3, and snapped their eight-game losing streak.

"One of the problems we've had is injuries to critical positions, Saunders said. "Putting all the pieces together and playing up to our capabilities is something that's not easily accomplished but that's what we have to face. We have to play with the players we have."

The Chargers offense also has been hurt by injuries to running backs Buford McGee and Lionel James, who are both out for the rest of the year.

"It's a real challenge for us to be playing the Raiders right now," Saunders said. "But we have a lot of professional guys and I think they have an attitude right now of wanting not only to gain their self-respect and the respect of their teammates but the respect of the general public.

"A great time to do that is in front of 30 million people on Thursday night TV," Saunders said.

If Fouts throws pain-free during pre-game warmups, he may be available for backup duty. Herrmann also is able to play.

Quarterback changes are not limited to the Chargers, 2-9. The Raiders, 7-4 and still in contention for a playoff berth, benched Marc Wilson two weeks ago after an unproductive first half against Dallas. Veteran Jim Plunkett, who has taken the Raiders to two Super Bowl victories in six years, was named the starter for the rest of the season after he keyed the Raiders' 17-13 comeback win against Dallas.

TALL CITY BOWLING

Bowlers ring tournament phone off hook

By TOMMY GAMMAGE

Bowling has many slang terms such as "Bowling Telephone Numbers." It simply means a person is scoring high games. In this case, persons.

The call came at Tall City Lanes Sunday and was answered by a conference of six bowlers. Interested parties were Michael Terry, Rob Hill, Karen Jordan, Bert Griggs, Darrell Boen and Joe McNeely.

I've seen handicap tournaments where high scores were scattered throughout qualifying, semifinals and finals, but it's been quite a while since I've seen six people put an entire tournament on hold by outdistancing the rest of the field.

They began by qualifying with, shall we say "mediocre three-game scores" of 672 to 712 before really striking up the pace in semifinals. The afore mentioned six bowled the semifinals and out of the 18 games bowled only four were below 215. The remaining 14 games ranged from 215 to 258. And, that's before handicap was added on.

To make that statistic more interesting, Terry had three of the four games under 215, 195-195-194-584, but he also had 189 pins handicap for a 773 series. It wasn't the winning score.

It took a score of 732 to make the top five TV format. With only a five-bowler final, exit McNeely, who could only manage a 722, a score that would normally lead most tournaments.

The leader going into match play was Hill with 792 followed by Terry (773), Jordan (753), Boen (737) and Griggs (732.

Griggs squeaked by Boen in the first game, 245-244 and was ousted by Jordan in the second, 236-213. Enter unknown, first-ever tournament bowler Terry, who eliminated Jordan, 208-201 to set up Terry against Hill in the final match.

Terry won the championship game 249-207 to claim the top prize check of $300. Hill won $150, Jordan $100, Griggs $90 and Boen $80.

Terry lives in Seminole, is married with three children. He travels to Denver City to bowl weekly at Mustang Lanes about 25 miles away and has an average of 123. He has only been bowling leagues since last march. You just never know who's going to win one of these tournaments.

Bowlers of the Week

Bill Theobald, 709 series; Jeff Von Rosenberg, 279 game; Sandy Crenshaw, 245 game, 679 series.

Special Accomplishments of the Week

Doug Provance rolled his first-ever 200 game (208) in his first-ever league. Just two weeks ago, wife Robin bowled 117 pins over her 117 average. Robin said they were and would be practicing more.

Crenshaw finally ended her 10-week slump and, a personal thought, thank goodness because she's on my team.

Bowling Tip of the Week

What is the number of games needed to maintain a 200 average weekly?

The amount of practice needed to maintain a 200 average depends on a few things like lane conditions. The more demanding the lane conditions, the more accurately a ball needs to be delivered and the sharper the eye has to be for ball reaction. If you are bowling under easy lane conditions, you would need less practice.

Probably the biggest factor is how well trained a bowler is in the mechanics and how well the bowler reads the ball. Once control is reached to bowl a 200 average under legitimate conditions, 10 to 12 games a week in practice (along with a couple of leagues) should do. Heaviest practice should be a couple of days before competition.

Corner Kick

BY RANDY BREITZMAN

The Midland Soccer Assocation's 19th fall soccer season may have been its best ever, says MSA Commissioner Melvin Dunn.

Although rainouts on three weekends, which created chaos with the schedule, was unusual, Dunn is enthusiastic over the much higher quality of play.

"We're seeing greater skills at earlier ages," says Dunn, "And much better soccer by many, many teams." Dunn cites the play in 10-Under and 12-Under divisions for special praise. "In those two groups there is much better coaching now, including some coaches who learned the game with their older kids and are now dropping down to coach the younger ones."

"Now they understand the game, do a better job of teaching skills and the finer points of the game. Even beginning coaches in those divisions are learning from them."

DUNN ALSO points out that the MSA's sixth Open Soccer Tournament, promoting competition against opponents from established programs in other cities, has been a tremendous help to younger Midland players.

"Watching other teams come in and pass the ball instead of just seeing how far they can kick it, watching teams use the whole field instead of just running forward, has really helped out younger teams," Dunn noted.

Dunn forecasts, "In another year or two,we'll probably have one of the strongest programs in West Texas."

WHAT's NEXT for the MSA? Registration for the spring season will be Jan. 24 and 31 with games resuming the weekend of Feb. 28. During the interim, the MSA will be preparing to run its fourth year of soccer at Midland and Lee high schools and the third year at the junior high, programs which Dunn points with pride.

"Two weeks ago the MSA hosted a varsity intercollegiate game in Midland and I watched one young man, who a year ago was scoring goals for Midland High, put one in for his college team. It's a nice feeling to see our kids able to go on to something like that."

Frogs near unanimous to win SWC

DALLAS (AP) — Jim Killingsworth's TCU Horned Frogs were a near unanimous-choice by the media to win the 1987 Southwest Conference Basketball championship.

Twenty-three of the 32 media members participating in the vote at the annual SWC Basketball Media Day Wednesday chose the Horned Frogs to edge out Arkansas for the 73rd SWC regular-season basketball championship. Arkansas received two first-place votes while Houston garnered three first-place votes but placed third in total points.

TCU was picked to finish no worse than third in the 1987 race after being one of three teams to earn a share of the 1986 SWC crown. Arkansas, Houston, SMU, Texas, and Texas A&M were chosen to finish anywhere from first to seventh, Texas Tech from second to seventh, Baylor from sixth to ninth, and Rice from seventh to ninth.

The Horned Frogs return four starters from last season's 22-9 team that advanced to the second round of the NIT. TCU opens the 1986-87 season Friday night at LSU in the first round of the Coca-Cola NIT.

TCU guard Carl Lott, last season's Newcomer of the Year, won the balloting for preseason Player of the Year while Arkansas' freshman Ron Huery was voted Newcomer of the Year.

Texas claims fourth SWC volleyball title

DALLAS (AP) — Texas defeated Baylor in four games to clinch its fifth consecutive Southwest Conference women's volleyball title and an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

The Longhorns, ranked fifth in the nation, took the first two games from Baylor, 15-10 and 15-12, despite Baylor hitting .350 in game two Tuesday night.

The Bears were able to take game three, 15-11, but Texas, which did not play any of its regular starters, came back for a 15-4 fourth game victory and the conference championship.

Baylor finished the season at 0-10 and 8-19 overall. The Longhorns are now 9-0 and 23-4 as they extended their current win streak to 10 games.

SMU faculty against 'quasi-pro' sports

DALLAS (AP) — A petition endorsed by the Southern Methodist faculty senate that recommends the university abolish "quasi-professional" athletics programs will be reviewed by university President L. Donald Shields.

The petition, signed by more than half SMU's faculty members during its circulation this week, called for "the immediate, unconditional and permanent abolition of quasi-professional athletics at this university."

The senate, the faculty's representative body composed of approximately 25 members, drafted the petition into a resolution in a special session Wednesday. Prior to the meeting, a statement from Shields was released asking for the faculty's views on the school's beleaguered athletic program.

The faculty also protested what it called special admission criteria, monetary payments and privileged academic treatment for athletes.

The petition recommended the elimination of athletic department management.

"I'm not sure what was in the resolution," said Athletic Director Bob Hitch. "But I would be more than willing to meet with them. That's my job."

The petition comes after allegations last week by a former Mustang football player that he received money from SMU athletic officials after the team was placed on probation for recruiting violations. Other charges of violations followed reports that an SMU athletic booster allegedly has been paying for a football player's apartment.

"We favor traditional honorable amateur athletics and intercollegiate competition only with those institutions unambigously committed to honorable amateur athletics," the petition read.

Injury sidelines 'Horns McCray

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas tight end Tim McCray will miss the final two games of the regular season because of a neck and back injury suffered in practice, team physicians said Wednesday.

McCray, a sophomore from Houston, sustained a concussion, or bruise, of the cervical spinal cord during a blocking drill in practice on Tuesday. Doctors said he sustained temporary weakness in his left arm, but indicated that had subsided and that his condition continues to improve.

McCray will remain hospitalized through Thursday, and will definitely miss Texas' final two regular season games against Baylor Saturday and Texas A&M on Thanksgiving night.

His loss elevates freshman Stephen Clark to a starting role.

The game was marred by a near fight between Bird and Atlanta guard Glenn Rivers in the second period, followed by a shouting match between Fratello and Rodgers.

"Tempers flare in this type of game," said Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins, who had 29 points. "There's a lot of emotion. Both teams will do anything to win. You have to take that approach. They are as tough as they were last year."

Bullets 119, Pistons 105

Moses Malone scored 18 of his 31 points in the first half and Jeff Malone added 17 of his 28 in the same span as Washington easily pulled away from visiting Detroit, which lost its third straight game.

The Bullets opened a 62-40 halftime lead and coasted the rest of the way. Moses Malone scored eight points during a 12-0 spurt that gave Washington a 32-17 lead late in the first period.

Vinnie Johnson led the Pistons with 20 points.

Lakers 117, Spurs 108

Los Angeles improved its record to an NBA best 7-1 as Magic Johnson had 29 points and 13 assists.

The victory wasn't easy for the visiting Lakers, who broke away from an 84-84 tie in the fourth period. The final margin was their largest lead of the game after Johnny Moore hit two three-pointers in the last 2:10.

Byron Scott added 23 points for the Lakers, while Alvin Robertson had 34 points, 10 rebounds, 10 assists and 10 steals for the Spurs.

76ers 98, Knicks 94

Roy Hinson scored 23 points and Philadelphia held off a New York rally from a 16-point deficit in the fourth quarter.

The Knicks, who have lost 15 consecutive games at the Spectrum since 1981, trailed 89-73 with nine minutes left, but an 11-2 spurt cut the deficit to 91-84 with 4:17 left. Hinson had four points down the stretch to help keep the 76ers in front.

Canadiens power past Whalers, 4-1

Associated Press

The Montreal Canadiens didn't invent the power play, but their prowess with a manpower advantage caused the NHL to change its rules some 30 years ago.

But the Canadiens had been having problems in man-advantage situations this season. Unfortunately for the Hartford Whalers, those problems disappeared Wednesday night, as Montreal scored twice on the power play in rolling to a 4-1 victory.

"Our power play really stunk the other night," Montreal defenseman Larry Robinson said in recalling an 0-for-7 showing in a 3-2 overtime victory Monday night over the Boston Bruins.

The Canadiens scored so frequently on the power play in the early 1950s that the league changed a rule calling for a penalized player to serve two full minutes regardless of the outcome.

On Wednesday night, Montreal got power-play goals from Bobby Smith and Petr Svoboda in a decisive three-goal second period.

"The guys were up for the game," Canadiens Coach Jean Perron said. "The power play worked tonight."

The Canadiens, leading the Adams Division by five points over idle Quebec, came away with their fourth straight victory in their first meeting of the season with Hartford. The Whalers battled the Canadiens on even terms in last season's Adams Division finals before losing the seventh and final game 2-1 in overtime.

"We've been winning a lot lately, but we're capable of playing a lot better," Robinson continued. "Our biggest problem is we haven't been moving the puck around that well."

Smith and Chris Nilan had a goal and an assist each, and Patrick Roy stopped 23 shots as the Canadiens remained undefeated (5-0-2) in games against Adams opponents.

Flyers 2, Maple Leafs 2

With his team trailing 2-0 after two periods, Toronto Coach John Brophy had a few choice words. And his Maple Leafs listened.

"The big thing is we had the character and guts to come back," Brophy said. "We came back with a super strong third period and we had the better chances in the overtime."

A deflection by Wendel Clark through the legs of goaltender Ron Hextall with 1:25 left in regulation forged the tie.

The Flyers had taken the lead on goals by Ron Sutter and Dave Brown.

Devils 4, Red Wings 3

Calude Loiselle, acquired in an off-season trade with Detroit, came back to haunt the Red Wings, intercepting a clearing pass with less than two minutes remaining to set up Doug Sulliman's game-winning goal against Glen Hanlon.

New Jersey led 2-1 entering the final period, but Steve Yzerman and Shawn Burr scored early to give Detroit a 3-2 lead.

New Jersey pulled even at 7:48 when Pat Verbeek converted Kirk Muller's centering pass for his 13th goal.

NHL Roundup

Bruins 4, Sabres 4

Buffalo Coach Craiug Ramsey found the Sabres' third-period effort much to his liking.

In his first game since being recalled from the minor leagues, Norm Lacombe scored at 14:18 of the third period to give the Buffalo Sabres the tie.

For the fourth straight game, the Bruins, who got goals from Dwight Foster, Geoff Courtnall, Thomas Gradin and Tom McCarthy, were involved in overtime.

The other Buffalo scorers were Dave Andreychuk, John Tucker and Mike Foligno.

Blues 7, North Stars 5

They aren't singing the Blues in St. Louis, but Minnesota might be an appropriate location.

The Blues, getting two goals apiece from Rick Meagher and Doug Gilmour, beat Minnesota for the second straight night.

Rookie left wing Larry DePalma and Dirk Graham scored two goals each for Minnesota.

Kings 4, Blackhawks 4

Steve Ludzik was simply trying to keep the puck in the Los Angeles zone.

"But, in an instant, I decided, 'What the heck, go for it,' " the Blachawks' center said.His 40-foot slapshot midway through the final period found the net and pulled Chicago into the tie. The Blackhawks remained winless in six games, however.

Jim Fox's 10-foot backhander for Los Angeles at the 7:39 mark of the final period had broken a 3-3 deadlock. Fox's goal came after Chicago power-play goals by Ed Olczyk and Steve Larmer.

Oilers 5, Rangers 4

Glenn Anderson missed his target and won the game just 65 seconds into overtime.

The goal, after a pass from Mark Messier, came after the Rangers had scored three straight third-period goals to erase a 4-1 deficit.

Jan Erixon, Don Maloney and Tony McKegney scored the goals that brought the Rangers back with less than five minutes remaining.

Edmonton's Jari Kurri had scored once and set up two other goals to break a seven-game scoring drought.

While Senior burns WAO course, Norman gets burned

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Australia's Peter Senior set a course record with an 8-under-par 64 Thursday to take the first-round lead at the West Australian Open.

Meanwhile, Greg Norman, playing what he called "pathetic golf," struggled to a 72 and fell eight shots back.

Senior, 27, had one eagle and six birdies in a bogey-free round in which he didn't three-putt once. At one stretch, he birdied five out of six holes.

Norman was 1-over at the turn and had to sink three birdies on the incoming holes to negate a pair of birdies.

Australia's Mike Cahill and Canada's Daniel Talbot were tied for second at 67.

Schmidt thinks MVP should go to everyday players

Associated Press

Mike Schmidt, who now owns three National League Most Valuable Player awards, is one of several everyday players who takes exception to the selection of pitcher Roger Clemens as MVP in the American League.

The Philadelphia third baseman, named NL MVP Wednesday, said "I tend to agree a little bit with (Don) Mattingly, the Most Valuable Player should be reserved for players who are in there every day."

Mattingly, the New York Yankees first baseman, finished second to Clemens in the voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"I know Roger is an exception, like (Detroit's) Willie Hernandez was a couple of years ago. ... They were so dominant as pitchers and they meant so much to their teams when you talk in terms of most valuable.

"You could have an argument between (Jim) Rice and Clemens on the Red Sox. Maybe in that case it's possible for a pitcher to win the award. I am not sure that Roger Clemens wasn't indeed the MVP to the Red Sox. I'm sure Mattingly was the MVP to the (New York) Yankees.

"I'm not in favor of it, obviously, because I'm not a pitcher. And I think a guy like myself or Mattingly or Rice who plays every day maybe should have a chance and maybe eliminate the pitchers."

Henry Aaron, a former National League MVP and the head of player development for the Atlanta Braves, was more vehement, calling the selection of a pitcher as most valuable player "a joke."

Aaron, baseball's all-time home run king who won the MVP in 1957 while playing for the Milwaukee Braves, said Wednesday, "Everyday players cannot win the Cy Young award, and pitchers should not be able to win the MVP award. The pitchers have their own MVP award, and it's the Cy Young. I feel very strongly about that."

Mattingly, the 1985 winner, was among the first to speak out against the selection of Clemens, 24-4.

"A guy like Clemens does a great job every fifth day, but the other four days you're counting on somebody else. I know he is valuable, but it's hard for me to conceive that a guy who is in 33 or 34 games can be as valuable ... as an everyday guy who is out there 162 games."

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rebounded slightly in light European trading early today. Gold bullion fell.

By midmorning, the dollar had posted modest gains from levels reached in Europe late Wednesday, but traders said overall market sentiment for the currency remained unfavorable.

They said the dollar was under pressure from Wednesday's announcement of a 0.2 percent fall in U.S. October housing starts and a statement by U.S. Federal Reserve Board Vice Chairman Manuel Johnston that the Fed has more room to ease monetary policy than it had a few months ago.

An upward revision in third-quarter U.S. gross national product growth, from 2.4 percent to 2.9 percent, resulted mainly from a higher estimate of defense spending and did little to help the dollar, traders said.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday:

—2.0075 West German marks, up from 2.0065

—1.6695 Swiss francs, up from 1.6683

—6.5725 French francs, up from 6.5625

—2.2673 Dutch guilders, up from 2.2665

—1,390.125 Italian lire, up from 1,389.50

—1.38375 Canadian dollars, up from 1.38295

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $387 a troy ounce at midmorning, up from an opening bid of $386 but down from Wednesday's late bid of $392.60.

In Zurich, the metal traded at a noon bid of $386.60, down from $392.50.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $386.70, down from Wednesday's $391.80.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.43 an ounce, down from $5.55 late Wednesday.

Bell Petroleum files bankruptcy

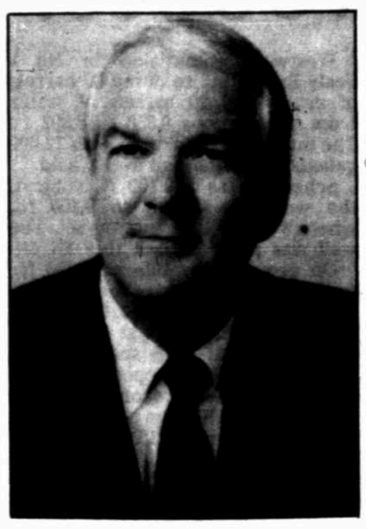
By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

A foreclosure action by First City National Bank of Midland prompted Bell Petroleum Services to file for protection under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code earlier this week.

E.E. Runyan, president of Bell Petroleum, stressed that the company took bankruptcy to reorganize its financial affairs, not liquidate the company. "We had to consider many factors, but the foreclosure action was the action that mandated our filing," he said.

According to Runyan, the company received a notice of foreclosure from First City on Nov. 7, stating that the bank was going to sell Bell's manufacturing plant in Kennedale, Texas — a suburb of Fort Worth on the first Tuesday of December. The plant manufactures oilfield rubber products and is a major asset of the company, Runyan said.

"The bank said it was going to take our most productive asset and sell it on the steps of the Tarrant County Courthouse. We said it wasn't in the best interest of the company, shareholders, creditors or employees to do this. That's what Chapter 11 is for. It allows you to reorganize your business and keeps one overzealous creditor from destroying a good company just to get his money quickly," Runyan asserted.



E.E. Runyan

According to company records, Bell had total assets of $15.8 million against total liabilities of $7.2 million at the time of the filing. "We were still a viable oil field service company," Runyan said. "We still have 77 Texans with jobs at Bell Petroleum, and we want to keep it that way."

He added that the company had just returned to an improved cash flow situation, after adjusting to the collapse in oil prices the first of the year, when it received the foreclosure notice. "First City is our largest creditor, and will be a vital part of our reorganization plan," Runyan noted, adding that reorganization will depend largely on how the bank cooperates.

Back in March, Bell postponed its annual shareholders meeting and asked the Securites and Exchange Commission for an extension in filing its Form 10-K for the eight months ended Dec. 31, 1985 when First City refused to waive Bell's violation of the net worth covenant of its loan agreement. The surprise move meant Bell was in technical default on its loans. Bell and Topco Oilsite Sales, Ltd. of Calgary, Alberta, announced a joint venture in January to manufacture oil field rubber products for the Canadian market.

"We regret we're in Chapter 11. We had no intention of being in this share, but we are and we will have to deal with this the best we can," Runyan said of the 18-year-old company he founded with Bob Bailey, Roy Williamson and Buddy SIpes. Bell Petroleum, which has wireline, hydrogen safety, rubber products and laboratory subsidiaries, has 77 employees, down from a high of 417 in 1981.

Midland Chamber supports import fee

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

The Midland Chamber of Commerce board of directors Wednesday jumped on the bandwagon in support of a variable oil import fee.

At its regular monthly meeting the Chamber's board passed a resolution in support of the fee and a price floor for crude oil. The resolution states, "The Midland Chamber of Commerce urges immediate adoption of a variable import fee on crude oil and refined products that is free from all exemptions and exceptions and that a floor price for crude oil and refined products be established at a level to revitalize the domestic petroleum industry and thereby ensuring the economic security and stability of the United States."

Chamber president Wayne Merritt, noting that the import fee is gaining support from various groups throughout the nation and the Permian Basin, said "When everybody begins to sing the same song, perhaps people will listen. Even though the very idea of an import fee goes against the grain of many in the industry, the fact is that there is no free economy with respect to the energy industry, and an import fee is an idea that is gaining momentum."

In other business, Carolyn Nickell of the Midland Board of Realtors reported on local home sales during October. There were 155 pieces of property sold during the month for a total dollar value of $12,328,000. That compares with 131 properties sold during October 1985 for total dollar value of $11,162,000. Nickell says the average sales price for a home in Midland fell from $85,000 to $79,000 over the one-year period, and notes a 1 percent per month decline in the real estate market during the year.

Hunts aren't slowed by legal fights

DALLAS (AP) — It could take as long as five years to determine how Placid Oil Co. will be affected by the legal fights waged by the billionaire Hunt brothers of Dallas against 23 creditor-banks, one of the Hunts said.

However, William Herbert Hunt said Wednesday that contractors working on projects for Placid Oil are not being slowed by the string of legal battles surrounding the company owned by him and two of his brothers.

Hunt spoke with reporters in a rare question-answer session after giving a speech to petroleum engineers.

He and his brothers, Nelson Bunker and Lamar, filed a $14 billion lawsuit against the banks several months ago. The Hunts claim the banks conspired to destroy Placid and another Hunt company, Penrod Drilling Co.

Placid, one of its subsidiaries and a private trust owned by William Herbert Hunt later filed for bankruptcy protection from creditors.

Hunt spoke Wednesday to the Society of Petroleum Engineers and talked briefly with reporters afterward, saying that suits against the banks have caused concern among companies doing business with Placid.

"But I don't think anyone is sitting," Hunt said when asked about contractors working with Placid. "I think everyone is moving ahead."

Iran minister seeks oil price above $28

ATHENS (UPI) — Iranian Prime Minister Mir Hossein Musavi Wednesday called on OPEC member states to prepare themselves "to pass the $20 psychological barrier" for oil prices, saying the real price for crude oil should be above $28 Tehran radio said.

The radio quoted Musavi as saying the OPEC pricing committee, which met in Quito, Ecuador last week, took a "useful step by setting a minimum price of $18 a barrel."

The oil ministers of Kuwait, Ecuador and Libya, who comprise the OPEC committee, recommended the 13-nation cartel return to a fixed oil price of $18 a barrel based on a basket of seven crudes.

Prices on the spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, are in the $15 to $15 range.

"We believe that in consideration of present market conditions and OPEC's power to lower production," the cartel's 13 members should prepare themselves "to pass the $20 psychological barrier created by Western industrial nations," Musavi said.

"We do not consider even $28 a barrel the real price of oil, and the aim of producers should be to raise prices above this figure," he said.

Iran has been a long-time price hawk within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Oil industry analysts contend that to achieve a price of $18 a barrel, OPEC would need to lower its daily production ceiling of about 17 million barrels a day by 700,000 to 800,000 barrels.

"There is at present good discipline in OPEC," said Musavi, who pointed out that the cartel members would benefit from higher prices.

The OPEC pricing committee's suggestions are likely to be taken up at meeting of the cartel's advisers in Vienna Wednesday and at the full OPEC ministerial meeting that is scheduled to open Dec. 11 in Geneva, the analysts said.

Meanwhile, oil prices seesawed on world markets Wednesday amid signs the global oil surplus may be shrinking.

The American Petroleum Institute reported U.S. oil production in the lower 48 states sank by more than 400,000 barrels in October as the nation's petroleum imports jumped 20.3 percent and overall oil demand rose 2 percent from year-earlier levels.

Traders also said supplies of certain crudes are tight in the Mediterranean because Libya is cutting back on deliveries to European customers due to what the OPEC nation called "operational problems."

Nevertheless, analysts estimate world oil supplies exceed current demand by about 1.5 million barrels a day but could be further reduced by declining U.S. production.

On the European spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, Britain's North Sea Brent crude rose 20 cents to $15.35 a barrel. The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light — the key OPEC crude from the Middle East — added a dime to $14.25 a barrel.

Wagner, Brown may renew bid for Lear Siegler

From Staff & Wire Reports

AFG Partners, a partnership of AFG Industries of Irvine, California and Wagner & Brown of Midland, said Wednesday it will purchase additional shares of Lear Siegler Inc. and may rekindle its efforts to acquire the firm.

The revelation came on the heels of an announcement by Wickes Cos. that it is having trouble financing its proposed $1.62 million deal to acquire Lear Siegler.

Lear Siegler's common stock dropped $10.875 a share to $79 Wednesday in heavy trading after Wickes said it was "not optimistic" that it could finance its proposed acquisition of the diversified aerospace, automotive and electronics manufacturer.

The sharp decline also reflected the stock market's apprehension over the widening Ivan Boesky insider-trading scandal. Across the board, stocks tied to takeovers or rumored takeovers plummeting Wednesday as major deals suddenly appeared in jeopardy.

AFG originally purchased a 9.8 percent stake in Lear Siegler but agreed to sell its postion to Wickes for $91 a share to set the stage for Wickes'sfriendly merger offer.

Cy Wagner

Jack Brown

Lear Siegler's common stock closed at $79 a share at the end of trading on the New York Stock Exchange on volume of 1.6 million shares.

Last week, Wickes had offered $93 for each share of Lear Siegler's stock in a deal valued at $1.62 billion.

Late Tuesday, Wickes announced that it was having difficulty arranging financing for the transaction and may be forced to terminate its tender offer.

A Lear Siegler spokesman said Wednesday the company would go ahead with its planned restructuring if Wickes withdraws its offer.

Lear Siegler said it was "disappointed on behalf of its shareholdrs" by the inability of Wickes to arrange satisfactory financing to complete its tender offer.

The diversified aerospace, automotive and electronics company said its "financial strength and improving earnings prospects assure the success of its major restructuring."

Jack Cressman, a Lear Siegler spokesman, said the company would have no further comment.

In a letter delivered to Lear Siegler management Tuesday, Wickes said its chances of arranging financing are "not optimistic."

Wickes said it has been unable to arrange a "satisfactory agreement" with its principal lenders to finance the tender offer for all of Lear Siegler's outstanding stock.

Wickes's tender offer expires Dec. 11.

Analysts speculated that Wickes may be an indirect victim of the deteriorating market in so-called junk bonds — the high-risk, low-quality bonds frequently used to finance acquisitions.

Drexel Burnham Lambert, the investment banker under investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission concerning its possible connection to Boesky, is a leading junk bond underwriter.

Drexel had represented Lear Siegler during the merger negotiations but had not been retained by Wickes, which sought financing from conventional banking sources.

Wickes, however, has a longstanding relationship with Drexel, which raised nearly $1.4 billion for Wickes earlier this year through junk bond sales.

Wickes said its offer to acquire Collins & Aikman Corp. is not in jeopardy an that it will pay for the acquisition with funds already available.

Crude production falls to 1950s levels, API says

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil production in the lower 48 states fell in October to levels of the 1950s, the American Petroleum Institute said Wednesday.

On the demand side, total deliveries grew 2 percent in October after three months of 4 percent growth, but the organization said underlying growth is probably still in the range of 3.5 percent to 4 percent.

Production of crude oil in October fell by 5.6 percent or 400,000 barrels a day from a year earlier to about 6.7 million barrels a day in the lower 48 states, the lowest level since the annual average of 1958, the group said in its monthly statistical report.

Production in Alaska increased 70,000 barrels a day from a year earlier, so total U.S. crude oil production in October declined a more modest 3.7 percent from October 1985, the Washington-based organization.

Widening probe touches prominent traders

From Staff and Wire Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — While some people on Wall Street worry that the insider-trading scandal makes the stock market vulnerable to a nasty spill, other analysts say fears of a collapse are unwarranted.

Manuel Johnson, vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, predicted the scandal would not permanently harm the U.S. financial system.

"There's always a temporary reaction and an overreaction to these sort of things that can impair financial market confidence," Johnson said.

Still, some analysts contend the market recently had risen mainly on the strength of frenzied takeover speculation, and that since the scandal this week abruptly ended most rumors, it eroded the market's support.

The federal probe into alleged illegal stock market trading has touched both coasts, with some prominent players in the merger speculation game acknowledging they have been subpoenaed but denying wrongdoing.

Investor Carl C. Icahn said he had received a subpoena from the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), but that "no allegations have been made against me by the SEC and I have no reason to believe that any will be made in the future."

"I should like to state categorically that I have never traded on inside information," Icahn said in a letter to employees of Trans World Airlines Inc., and ACF Industries Inc., companies of which he is chairman.

Icahn's ties to Boesky have been the subject of published reports, including speculation that the two teamed up to drive up the price of Gulf & Western Industries stock.

While saying he has known Boesky for several years, Icahn said he has never had "any business arrangements or partnerships with Mr. Boesky with respect to the securities of any company."

Mesa Petroleum's T. Boone Pickens said he has never "cheated" by taking or giving inside information, and he endorsed the government crackdown.

"I'm for exactly what the (SEC) is doing," said Pickens, adding that he has not been subpoenaed in the growing scandal.

Mesa, NRM sign acquisition agreement

DALLAS — (SWN) — Mesa Limited Partnership and NRM Energy Co., L.P. jointly announced the signing of an agreement whereby Mesa would contribute $83.5 million in oil and gas properties to NRM Energy in exchange for 8.6 million common units and $62 million of 10 percent acquisition preferred units.

The newly created acquisition preferred units will receive special income allocations in the event of certain acquisitions and marketable security gains made by NRM and will convert to NRM common units in 1992. It is contemplated that up to $100 million of substantially similar preferred units will be offered to the public following the closing of the transaction with Mesa.

Saxon Oil posts drop in third quarter profits

DALLAS (SWN) — Saxon Oil Development Partners, L.P. announced a net loss of $87,478 for the third quarter of 1986 compared with net income of $546,890 for the same period in 1985. For the nine months ended Sept. 30, the partnership had a net loss of $46,962 as compared with net income of $2,509,843 for the same period in 1985.

Due primarily to the severe drop in oil prices in 1986, total revenues for the third quarter and nine months of 1986 declined approximately 44 percent and 40 percent, respectively, from the same periods of 1985.

Mobil chief seeks fairness in world trade

HOUSTON (AP) — The United States must do everything possible to provide domestic companies with an even playing field to compete with foreign manufacturers if the country is going to remain a world power, the chairman of Mobil Oil Corp. says.

Otherwise, the trade imbalance, which currently is $150 billion, will continue to depress the American economy, says Allen Murray.

"When you talk about the economy of this country you can't avoid international trade," Murray told several hundred business leaders Wednesday at a Forum Club luncheon. "We can't be a great nation if we are not great in international trade."

The United States also must give attention to international trade to keep pace with Japan, Korea, Brazil and other nations that are very serious about their roles in the international arena. Brazil is the third leading exporter in the world, he said.

"World trade is something our leaders largely seem to ignore — until some trade industry gets pinched by foreign competition and screams for protection," Murray said. "The proposed answer is usually an even louder cry for tariffs, or import quotas, or some other protectionist measures that would only make matters worse by triggering retaliation, trade wars and the possibility of a worldwide depression."

Despite his desire to improve America's competitive posture, the Mobil chairman maintained his opposition to an oil import fee, and said he was surprised by the American Petroleum Institute's apparent reversal last week of its stance against a tariff.

"It will not raise a lot more revenue that will flow to the oil industry. Most will go to taxes," he said.

Murray also said he is opposed to the establishment of a minimum oil price, and he does not think the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will succeed in its attempt to boost world oil prices by reducing consumption.

Instead, Murray said he thinks the United States should enforce the trade protection measures already in place. These include prohibitions against dumping foreign products on the American market at reduced prices and against other countries' providing export subsidies.

The United States imposed 36 fines during fiscal year 1986 for violations of the existing prohibitions.

Congress also must attack the budget deficit, because of the direct correlation between it and the trade deficit, Murray said. The deficit keeps U.S. interest rates higher than those in other countries, making it more expensive — and therefore harder — for domestic companies to compete.

"The budget gap ... also acts to keep the dollar higher than it ought to be, and that's another handicap for American business," he said.

Murray also suggested Congress consider a consumption tax, which would generate income from both the legitimate and underground economies. The tax would be levied on domestic consumption, including imports, but not levied on exports.

"It remains the most logical way to reduce the deficit without hurting the nation's economic posture as a world competitor," he said.

CHAMBER

"The negative reports in national and regional publications is causing some problems in the market. Newcomers are offering $20,000 to $30,000 less than the asking price on properties, knowing of local economic troubles. On a home in the $60,000 to $80,000 range, sellers cannot afford to knock that much off the price," added Nickell.

The Chamber's executive director, Joe Kloesel, gave a report on progress being made on the Superconducting Super Collider plant. Kloesel says the West Texas Chamber of Commerce steering committee for the project is readying a proposed site in Glasscock County, and is in the process of evaluating the socio-economic impact the project will have on West Texas. He adds that an undersecretary of energy reported at a meeting two weeks ago that Secretary of Energy Herrington will make a recommendation to President Reagan in the next few weeks that the SSC become a reality.

"Should that happen, he will present the idea to Congress for approval. Upon Congressional approval, states will have three months to present their sites in the best light, and then a site will be chosen," says Kleosel.

The SSC project is expected to attract 2,000 top scientists from around the world. "The salary of the scientists, in addition to their support staff, would be a major boon to the area where the project is situated," he adds.

HUNTS

Asked how the lawsuit against the banks will affect his company, Hunt said, "That is a long-range thing. We discussed it with legal counsel. That's one of the things that will be answered in two, three or five years down the road, whenever things develop in the courthouse."

In his speech, Hunt urged domestic industries to unite in a fight to roll back government regulations. He said industries are handicapped by regulations imposed by the government under pressure from environmentalists.

"Let's face it, Jane Fonda is a hell of a lot more sexy than you are," Hunt said. "You get these movie stars involved. You get this cry to save the environment, and it's tough to counteract that. Problem is, everyone is always looking at it from a one-shot basis. Nobody looks at the overall costs of the thing."

He told the engineers that the cost of government regulations adds an estimated $3 to every barrel.

PROBE

Pickens said he does not believe the scandal will result in fewer future corporate takeover bids because such activity "doesn't have anything to do with Ivan Boesky."

Pickens, said takeover attempts will continue as long as there are undervalued companies in the public market, and as long as inept managers allow stocks to be underpriced.

"The takeover game does not need arbitrageurs," or stock speculators who specialize in buying and selling stocks of companies facing sale or merger, said Pickens.

It has also been disclosed that the investment firm Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. is being investigated by the SEC and a federal grand jury. "These are ongoing proceedings which have been investigating allegations of insider trading over the past few months," Drexel said in a statement.

CRUDE

The total October production of 8.64 million barrels a day, although lower than last year, was higher than in the mid-1970s, when production bottomed out at 8.13 million barrels a day in 1976, the organization said.

The sharp decline in oil prices has hastened the decline in production in the lower 48 states, American Petroleum Institute spokesman R.G. Ensz said.

Because of lower oil prices, oil companies are drilling fewer new wells, capping marginal wells and deferring or cancelling projects to squeeze more oil out of older fields, the organization said.

IRAN

"The numbers have been gently firmer because the market still hopes there will be more good news than bad news," said Jay Amberg, an editor at the Oil Buyers' Guide in Lakewood, N.J. "But OPEC has to come up with something a little better than talk."

But most analysts contend the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries must cut current production by at least 700,000 barrels a day to achieve its $18 target — a move guaranteed to reignite bitter infighting within the cartel at its next ministerial meeting that opens Dec. 11.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas intermediate — the benchmark U.S. crude for immediate delivery — lost 11 cents to $15.48 a barrel. Home-heating oil eased 0.1 cent to 44.40 cents a gallon, while unleaded gasoline crept up by 0.13 cent to 42.23 cents a gallon.

First City suspends paying stock dividends

HOUSTON (AP) — For the first time in its 14-year history, First City Bancorporation suspended dividends on the company's common stock, officials for the Houston-based bank holding company said.

"Through the first nine months of 1986 the company lost $265 million, do I need to go any further?" James E. Day, vice president of public relations, said following the Wednesday announcement.

Day said although the holding company had never suspended dividends before, it had reduced them twice.

Since the first quarter of 1986, the quarterly dividend rate had been 2.5 cents per common share. The rate had been 15 cents in the second and third quarters of 1985, prior to which it was 32.5 cents.

The company's management announced Oct. 21 it would recommend the dividend suspensions to the board of directors at Wednesday's meeting.

The company on Wednesday also declared regular preferred dividends for December payment.

First City reported a loss of $47.9 million, or $1.56 per share, for the third quarter ending Sept. 30. First City's results compare with earnings of $10.8 million, or 20 cents per share, during the similar quarter in 1985.

The holding company, the fifth largest in Texas with 63 banks, had not anticipated the large jump of problem loans from the second to third quarter, Day said.

He also blamed some of the company's losses on the depressed oil economy.

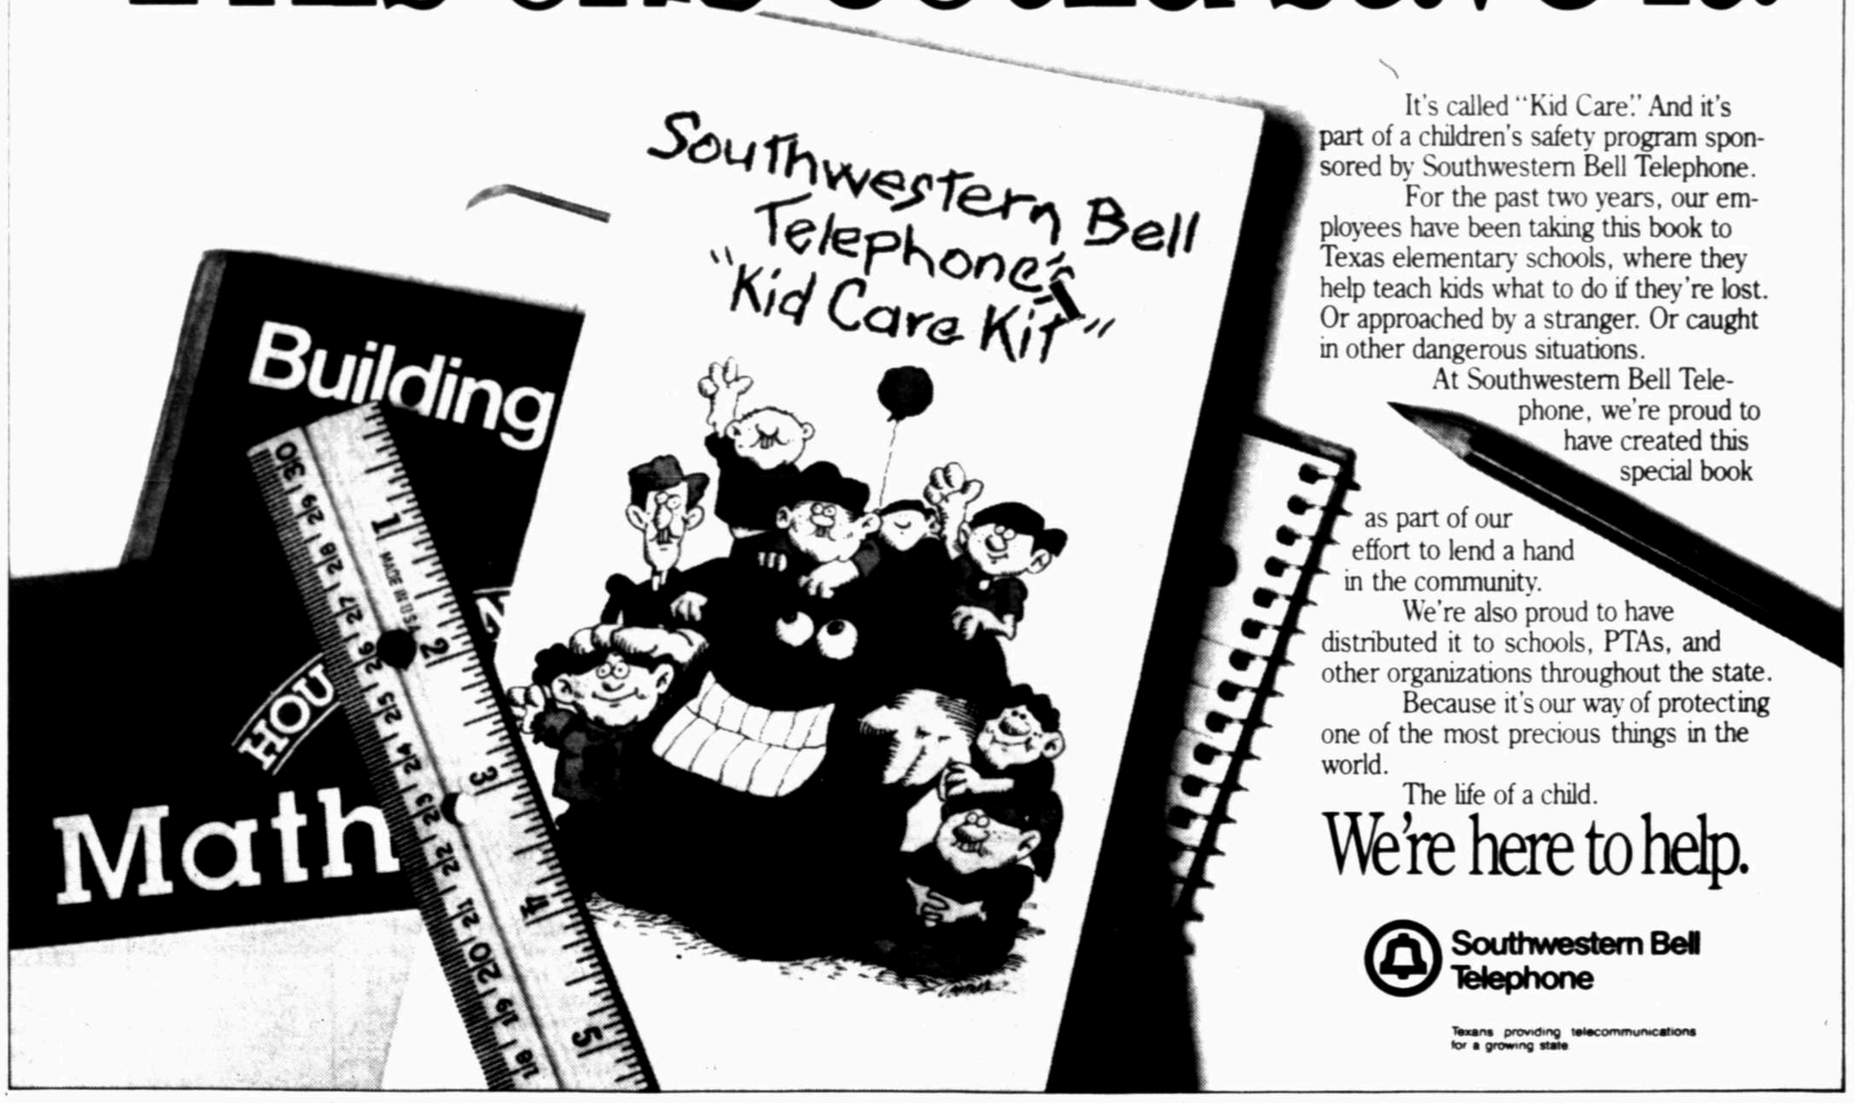
Most school books enrich your child's life. This one could save it.



It's called "Kid Care." And it's part of a children's safety program sponsored by Southwestern Bell Telephone.

For the past two years, our employees have been taking this book to Texas elementary schools, where they help teach kids what to do if they're lost. Or approached by a stranger. Or caught in other dangerous situations.

At Southwestern Bell Telephone, we're proud to have created this special book as part of our effort to lend a hand in the community.

We're also proud to have distributed it to schools, PTAs, and other organizations throughout the state.

Because it's our way of protecting one of the most precious things in the world.

The life of a child.

We're here to help.

Opening lead: King of ♡

Opening bids that describe your distribution are well and good if your side buys the hand. But if you end up defending, you might have given declarer valuable clues to playing the hand. Consider this hand from the Mixed Pair Championship at the recent World Bridge Olympiad in Miami.

After South passed a hand that many would have opened, West's two hearts showed an opening bid with at least five hearts and four clubs. After North's takeout double, South wasted no time in bidding the full value of his hand.

West led the king of hearts, then shifted to his singleton diamond. At the helm was the veteran Floridian star Jack Denny, and he made short work of the hand. He won the diamond in the closed hand and led a club toward the queen. West grabbed his king and exited safely enough with a club to the queen.

When West followed to both the ace and king of trumps, his hand was virtually an open book. His bid had announced at least nine cards in hearts and clubs, and he had already shown up with two trumps and a diamond. Therefore, only one of his cards was unknown, and Denny didn't much care what it was. He led a trump from dummy and confidently finessed the nine. When that held, he could claim his contract.

Actually, the contract was secure even if West's unknown card turned out to be the trump ten. While he would then have been able to win the trump trick, he would have been end played. A club return would have been into declarer's A-10, and a heart return would set up dummy's queen. (If West returns the ace of hearts, declarer ruffs and can get to the table with a diamond to cash the queen of hearts.)

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!

Patrick Duffy goes into seclusion with family, friends after parents' murder

BOULDER, Mont. (AP) — "Dallas" star Patrick Duffy was in seclusion today with relatives and friends, and stunned residents of this ranching community expressed outrage at the shotgun slayings of his parents.

Terrence and Marie "Babe" Duffy were killed by shotgun blasts during an apparent robbery at their tavern Tuesday night. Two men were charged Wednesday after telling the girlfriend of one about the crime, authorities said.

"Everybody's stunned. This town is so small that everybody knows everybody else," said Denise Sutherlin, who works at the Boulder Monitor newspaper owned by her parents. "I can't believe they're dead. It hasn't sunk in yet."

"Things like that just don't happen in Boulder," said Bud Smith, an auto repair shop owner who had been at the Duffys' bar little more than an hour before they were killed.

Patrick Duffy, who plays Bobby Ewing on the CBS television series, and his sister, Lt. Joanne Hunt of the Seattle Police Department, arrived in this southwestern Montana town Wednesday.

The actor would have a statement later, said Bob Crutchfield, a spokesman for Lorimar-Telepictures in Los Angeles, the producers of "Dallas."

The show shut down production briefly Wednesday but resumed at Duffy's urging. Lorimar issued a statement in Los Angeles expressing sympathy for Duffy and his family. "Everyone is overcome with grief," it said.

Once a rough-and-tumble mining camp, Boulder is a generally peaceful ranching community of 1,500 people midway between Helena and Butte. The Duffys, owners of The Lounge on the main street, were found dead Tuesday night.

Wentz

Miller

Sean A. Wentz and Kenneth A. Miller, both 19 and of Helena, were arrested in Helena and appeared before a justice of the peace there. They each were charged with two counts each of deliberate homicide and held on $500,000 bond.

Neither entered pleas, and they face a preliminary hearing Dec. 4 here.

Miller appeared near tears as he entered the courtroom.

The two were arrested following a brief auto chase after a visit to Wentz's girlfriend, said Helena Police Capt. Ron Morley. "They mentioned a crime where some people had been shot and were dead. They left the girlfriend's house and she immediately called her mother, and she (the mother) called us."

Residents said the killings were all the more shocking because the Duffys' bar had been such a peaceful place.

"It's the kind of place you'd want to go for a quiet drink," said Kevin Dempsey. "They didn't like the rowdiness. They were quiet people. They kept most of the riffraff out. If any trouble started they (the troublemakers) were out the door."

"We don't have enough money in the whole town of Boulder to make it worth getting shot over," said Phil Yanzick, owner of another bar in town.

The 37-year-old Duffy lives in Los Angeles with his wife, Carlyn, and their sons, ages 10 and 6.

An occasional visitor to Boulder, Duffy was a source of pride to his parents, who had a wall of pictures of him in their bar and often talked about their children with their friends.

WARWICK, Okla. (AP) — Archaeologist Harold V. "Tex" Brown died Wednesday of cancer. He was 56.

Brown's discovery of the Comanchero dugouts south of Quitaque, Texas, led to excavations that caused many historians to change their theories as to how and where the Comancheros lived.

He also initiated the drive that ended in the return of Jim Thorpe's track marks into Amateur Athletic Union record books as well as the return of Thorpe's Olympic medals from Sweden.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Former X-rated movie star Linda Lovelace has been sent home to await a liver donor after being cleared for a transplant.

Miss Lovelace, whose real name is Linda Marchiano, was placed on the transplant list Wednesday at Presbyterian-University Hospital, said hospital authorities.

Mrs. Marchiano, 37, was admitted to the hospital for tests on Nov. 10. She suffers from acute cirrhosis of the liver resulting from a hepatitis infection she apparently contracted during a blood transfusion.

VACHERIE, La. (AP) — The Delta Queen flew the Union Jack when Britain's Princess Margaret rode the steamboat up the Mississippi River.

The princess, in town for "British Week" promotions, sang along as the calliope tooted "Dixie" and called for Bill Bailey to come on home.

"We were astonished that she knew the words to those old songs," said D. Perry Moran of the steamboat company that played host Wednesday.

Her trip started with a 20-minute helicopter flight from the Superdome at New Orleans to Oak Alley, a riverside plantation house, and ended when the royal party debarked at another plantation home, Houmas House.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Medical cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union could be carried into peace efforts, says Albert Sabin, who received an award from that country.

Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin on Wednesday presented the Russian-born Sabin with the Soviet Order of Friendship Among Peoples, and pinned the 10-pointed star on Sabin, who celebrated his 80th birthday this year.

Sabin, who emigrated to the United States in 1921 and developed the oral polio vaccine at the University of Cincinnati, praised Soviet scientists for their work in testing the medicine on a mass population.

NEW YORK (AP) — Publisher Malcolm Forbes mishandled a bottle of 1787 Chateau Lafite he bought for a record $156,000 in December, a wine expert says.

The bottle was put on display at Forbes Magazine Galleries. The cork apparently has dried out under display lights and is slipping slowly into the bottle.

The problem was revealed earlier this year in an article in The Wine Spectator, a San Francisco-based bi-monthly, which said the Forbes Gallery had asked Michael Broadbent, head of Christie's London wine department, what to do.

"I had to tell them there was nothing they could do," Broadbent said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Roger Yassen, president of Chaine Des Rotisseurs, a gastronomic society, criticized the display conditions, saying "Mr. Forbes should be spanked."

The wine, found in Paris last year, was once the property of Thomas Jefferson.

Harold Samuels stands by one of Langdon Kihn's artworks at the Museum of the Southwest now on display until Jan. 15.

Art dealer offering free consultations at museum

Pulitzer Prize nominee, art dealer, lecturer and antiquarian bookman Harold Samuels is at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., until 5 p.m. today providing free consultation and appraisal services.

He is in town for the installation of the Langdon Kihn Retrospective Exhibition, which will hang through Jan. 15.

The Kinn exhibition is drawn from Samuel's private art collection and is an important representation of Indian life and culture during the early part of the 20th century. Kihn's work is valued for its artistic as well as its historical value, bringing more than $9000 at auction for a painting of average size. This figure represents a tripling of value over the last five years.

Samuels and his wife Peggy own the largest private collection of Frederic Remington materials in the world and they authenticate Remington art. They were nominated for the Pulitzer Prize for "Frederic Remington: A Biography."

The Samuels are co-authors of "Illustrated Biographical Encyclopedia of Artists of the American West" and of "Contemporary Western Artists." They have also published a book on art investment entitled "Everyone's Guilde to Buying Art."

Air Force Band of the West to perform concert

The Air Force Band of the West Concert Band will perform a free concert at Lee High School Auditorium at 7 p.m. Monday.

Tickets for the performance, which is sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram, may be picked up at May and Duncan Music, Gary's House of Music, Pages and Prints, Gene Bartus Fine Mensware, Video Concepts, Carmen's Mexican Imports, Kwik-Kopy Printing, Daily News & Tobacco and North Park Florists.

Ticket holders are asked to be seated by 6:45 p.m. because the doors open to the general public at 6:50 p.m.

The program is designed with care.

"We try to build a program that has all the ingredients, much as you set down to design a menu for your guests for dinner," says conductor Col. Benny L. Kundsen. "We begin with a march and follow this by featuring one of our virtuoso soloists, then a heavier piece of concert band literature and another famous march, then we wrap up the first half of the program with what we call a razzle-dazzle piece — lighter and more entertaining."

Following intermission, the "light entertainment program" features the band's singers, Voices in Blue, in a special 30 minute show production, a "Salute to Leonard Bernstein," Kundsen says.

The concert closes with what Kundsen calls "a patriotic close," in keeping with the band's purpose.

"The mission of an Air Force band is to support troop morale and entertainment programs for our people on Air Force bases, to support Air Force recruiting programs off base and to support air force community relations objectives in the civilian communities where we are assigned," Kundsen says.

Works to be performed include John Philip Sousa's "New Mexico March," Dmitri Shostakovich's "Festive Overture," Floyd E. Werle's Concertino for Three Brass, Norman Dello Joio's "Satiric Dances," E.E. Bagley's "National Emblem," Glenn Osser's "Beguine for Band," and a "Salute to Leonard Bernstein" and a "Salute to the Armed Forces."

Guest performers for this year's production are former Midlander Susan Clark and Bobby Gene Ball, both of whom are presently featured with the Atlanta Ballet. Atlanta, Ga. The two will dance the snow pas de deux and the grand pas de deux.

Tickets for the hour and 45 minute production, which includes one intermission, are priced at $12 for adults and $6 for students and senior citizens. 'Dark Shadows' still haunting PBS stations

By MARY BYRNE MCDONNELL
Hearst News and Feature Service

Ghouls and monsters, often considered merely the frightful by-products of creative or insane imaginations, actually may help keep us sane, say psychologists. By taking the monsters of our minds and concretizing them in toys, games, books and film, the monsters become manageable, helping to relieve anxiety caused by our own mental monsters.

This may be a clue to the tremendous resurgence of popularity enjoyed by the gothic psycho-drama-soap "Dark Shadows." It ran on ABC-TV from 1966-1970, and this story of a peculiar Maine family plagued by a handsome, deadly vampire and generations of his ghostly mates is still re-running on PBS stations around the country.

The show retains such popularity that its fan club publishes the largest fan newsletter in the country, surpassing even "Star Trek's."

A recent "Dark Shadows" convention drew close to 1500 fans. Many, like the original watchers, rush home from junior high to catch the episodes, but large numbers are the same audience that watches "Dallas" and "Dynasty."

Whole families seem to be addicted. Even Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward claim to be fans.

One New Jersey PBS station discovered just how loyal DS fans are. When new management canceled the show recently, fans began sending in pledges with "not to be cashed until 'Dark Shadows' is resumed" written across the donation checks.

Kathryn Leigh Scott, who played Maggie Evans and Josette DuPres (delicate and wistful bride of the charming and evil vampire, Barnabas) in the soap and the two movies it spawned, is publicizing her new book, "My Scrapbook Memories of Dark Shadows," a behind-the-scenes look at the show culled from her memorabilia. The russet-haired actress recalled that she was a student at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts when she landed the "Dark Shadows" part.

"The job was not a big break, but it was my first steady job and I was glad to get it. Professionally, it was a workshop, and personally, it determined my friends, my career direction, and my future travel."

The show's producer, Dan Curtis, has remained a catalyst in her professional life, and she met her husband, Time Magazine photographer Ben Martin, as a result of the show.

"A lot of well-known people have appeared in 'Dark Shadows,' and several were launched by the show. Dan wanted to use Kate Jackson so badly that he agreed to the Academy's rule that she not have a speaking part until she graduated. She didn't say a word for four months! The show gave Joan Bennett a new start. She hadn't done anything for years, and she's worked ever since."

David Selby, Marsha Mason, Abe Vigoda, Angus Cairns and Thayer David were among the more than 100 actors and actresses who became entwined in the four centuries of ghoulish plot.

Creating the elaborate gothic action on a network soap budget with 1960s technology was no small feat, according to Miss Scott. Dry ice for the fog and some sticky pink stuff for cobwebs were staples on the set.

"Editing was so expensive that we just went with what we had."

This often made for high-comedy — vampires swatting at flies, supposedly solid tombstones tumbling at the brush of a cape, and breath-holding special effects tried only once — on camera.

Miss Scott recalled the time when Louis Edmonds, who played a very staid gentleman, forgot he was in the final scene.

"He'd already started to change and was standing in his dressing room, in his shorts, socks and tee shirt. The wardrobe mistress came rushing in frantically. He dressed as he ran on the set, and we shot the scene — elegant Louis leaning against the fireplace, brandy in hand, attired in shirt, tie and smoking jacket — with only shorts and socks below.

"He'd never had time to finish dressing, so the camera crew had to be very careful. We were never supposed to change until taping was finished, and that was a real lesson."

Miss Scott has come a long way from the Victorian-clad fiancee of the renowned vampire. In 15 years, her career has spanned three countries and as many media.

Recently she was seen as Dan Travanti's wife in "Murrow" and as George C. Scott's mistress in "The Last Days of Patton." She wrote "My Scrapbook" and launched her new publishing company while on the set of "My Affair with the President's Wife," a new film with Charles Bronson.

"There's so much waiting time sitting around a set that it really wasn't hard."

She also managed to do four TV shows and 30 commercials since beginning the book on Feb. 9.

"Oh, and I've got a play opening Dec. 15 at the Ensemble Studio Theatre. It's called 'Secrets' — a comedy."

Miss Scott has time to write books and plays, run a business, act, and keep two homes, one in Los Angeles and the other in London. Yet she exudes sparkling serenity. What are her secrets?

"None of this has been dumped on me overnight. I've been married 15 years. I'm not a workaholic, but I love to work. I feel totally comfortable in my life."

'Hill Street Blues' will air Tuesday nights

NEW YORK (AP) — Venerable "Hill Street Blues" won't be sacrificed to upstart "Moonlighting" on Tuesday nights, according to NBC, which announced time shifts for the police drama and the new "L.A. Law" and "Crime Story."

The network said starting Dec. 2 "Hill Street" will move from its 9 p.m. CST Thursday slot to Tuesday night at 8 p.m., opposite ABC's hit Cybill Shepherd-Bruce Willis screwball comedy detective series.

"L.A. Law" will be seen Thursdays at 9 p.m. in place of "Hill Street" starting Dec. 4, and "Crime Story" will follow "Miami Vice" on Fridays at 9 p.m. as of Dec. 5.

The rumored changes were confirmed in a statement by NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff.

NBC spokesman Gene Walsh said Tartikoff hopes "Hill Street," which has a loyal following in its seventh season, will fare better against "Moonlighting" than has the gritty, 1960s Chicago police drama "Crime Story," which has yet to find an audience.

Walsh said Tartikoff has promised the producers of "Hill Street" another time shift if the Tuesday slot doesn't work out.

"There's a lot of sentiment around here for 'Hill Street,' because it started NBC on its way back," Walsh said.

NBC was No. 3 in ratings among the broadcast networks when the innovative series made its mid-season premiere in January 1981. "Hill Street" drew critical acclaim and stayed on the air, despite low ratings, sweeping the Emmy awards the following year.

The series is produced by MTM Productions, headed by Grant Tinker until he became NBC chairman in July 1981. This year he left NBC, now the No. 1 network.

"L.A. Law," set in a spiffy, fast-paced law firm, produced by "Hill Street" co-creator Steven Bochco, stands to benefit from following NBC's Thursday night hit comedy lineup — "The Cosby Show," "Family Ties," "Cheers," and "Night Court."

"After the season's first seven weeks, we feel 'L.A. Law' has done reasonably well on Friday, but we think it could explode to hit potential on Thursday," Tartikoff said.

"Crime Story" will settle in behind producer Michael Mann's "Miami Vice," in place of "L.A. Law."

Opened peanut butter stored on shelf

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Once peanut butter is opened, can the jar be kept on the shelf or should it be refrigerated? What is the shelf life? When it's kept on the shelf for any length of time it develops an odor. Is it still good? Mrs. J. Grego, Palm Harbor, Fla.

A. Refrigerating peanut butter is unnecessary unless you use the "old-fashioned" type and, once stirred, wish to keep the oil from separating. But keeping peanut butter cold will have no effect on its shelf life.

"Peanut butter cannot spoil microbiologically since it's very low in moisture," explains Phillip Wells, Ph.D., nutrition research associate with Best Foods. "Microorganisms such as bacteria and molds need a certain amount of water to grow in. Of course it's possible for peanut butter to become contaminated with water but this almost never occurs during normal use."

Peanut butter on the shelf lasts at least a month and often much longer. At some point chemical changes will begin to take place and it will become rancid. If it doesn't smell good, don't eat it.

Q. I purchased some ginger root at a supermarket, planted it, and now have a lot of ginger roots. The only thing I know about it is that it's usually dried out and ground into a powder. Can you give me any information on how to prepare it and what it's used for? I. Zender. Richmond, Ind.

A. Ginger, a root used as a spice, has been a common ingredient in Chinese and Indian cooking for centuries. In the West it has been used mainly in its powdered form in ginger snaps, gingerbread and as a flavoring base for carbonated beverages, but recently has become more popular in the American kitchen.

Irene Kuo, in "The Key to Chinese Cooking," says ginger "is used in small quantities as a subtle seasoning agent as well as a subduer of undesirable tastes, such as fishiness, the strong 'organ' flavor of meat, and the grassy, raw taste of some vegetables." The taste of ginger has been described variously as piquant, peppery, tangy or lemony, depending on where the ginger has been grown and whether whole root or powdered ginger is being used.

After first washing them and drying them in the sun you can grind up your ginger roots. Or you can use them fresh. If you slice off two ⅛-inch thick slices, about the diameter of a quarter coin, this will equal one teaspoon of chopped ginger.

Frieda Caplan, who markets fresh ginger root from the Fiji Islands, suggests that you try the following: A little grated ginger with dark brown sugar perks up the flavor of sweet potatoes and winter squash. Try grated ginger in carrot, tomato or parsnip dishes and in fresh peach or apple pie, or a fruit compote.

To enhance the flavor and help eliminate fishy odors and taste, rub fish with a thin slice or two of ginger root before cooking, or scatter ⅛ teaspoon grated ginger per two servings over broiled, pan fried, grilled or baked fish. Before placing ham, beef, pork or lamb roasts in the oven, rub thoroughly with several slices of ginger root. As a marinade, steep a few thin slices in the fluid for several hours.

Caplan will send you recipes for using ginger if you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Produce Specialties, 732 Market Court, Los Angeles, Calif. 90021. Give the name and address of the store where you purchased the ginger.

Here's a friend's easy recipe for marinated chicken: ½ cup dry sherry, 2 teaspoons of ground ginger, ¼ teaspoon garlic powder, a garlic clove, minced. Marinate chicken overnight. Broil.

Q. I recently began wearing thermal underwear to bed and find them quite warm and comfortable. However, I notice tags on these items stating they are not to be used for sleepwear. Could you explain this? What could be the harm? Mrs. V.K., Ventnor, N.J.

A. Without knowing more about the garment in question, Ann Beard, a clothing and textiles specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Texas A&M, suggests two possibilities:

"The underwear may be a size that can be included in a children's size range as well as in a junior or misses size range. If so, the garments must be labeled as not for use as sleepwear unless they pass the federal standards for flammability of children's sleepwear. Since most thermal underwear will not pass the flammability tests they carry the warning label.

"Another possibility is that the manufacturer might have these tags placed in all the thermal underwear he makes in order to be sure it doesn't get left out of the garments that do require the tag. While this might cause a consumer to question the reason for the warning, it would not violate any regulations or cause harm to consumers, and it would protect the manufacturer."

Reader feedback: Mrs. H.C. Bowman, Somerville, Ohio: "In answer to your reader from Florida who wanted to know how to get a Formica tabletop shiny again, I tried all kinds of methods that were supposed to work but nothing got mine shiny. So I decided to try Minwax Clear Gloss Polyurethane. I applied four or five coats to the tabletop and now have a very beautiful, durable shine. I can't say enough about how pleased I am. Incidentally, polyurethane is a plastic and so is Formica, so it bonds well."

Health guidelines include children

DALLAS (AP) — The American Heart Association says that what's good for adults is good for children, and for the first time has broadened its dietary, exercise and anti-smoking guidelines to include youngsters.

In three position papers published in an issue of the medical journal Circulation, the heart association recommended that children should avoid excess fat and cholesterol in their diets, should exercise moderately and should, above all, stay away from cigarettes.

"We are advising all children to begin now creating the habit of healthy living," said Dr. William Wiedman, former chairman of the heart association's Council on Heart Disease in the Young.

Weidman, one of the people most directly responsible for the children's guidelines, said Monday at a news conference during the annual meeting of the American Heart Association that they are virtually identical to the guidelines for adults.

"It would have been a disaster if there had been one set of recommendations for people over 18 and one for people under 18," said Wiedman, professor of pediatrics at the Mayo Medical School in Rochester, Minn.

He said he advises parents to eliminate excess cholesterol, fat and salt from their children's diets, to get them into the habit of aerobic exercise, to be sure the children maintain a normal weight, "and really lean on them about cigarette smoking," one of the leading causes of coronary heart disease.

"It has to be a family effort," he said.

Nerd cereal considered 'wimpy' product by experts

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

Every once in a while my smaller children and I take a day trip to Lubbock and it has become tradition that on the way home, we stop at our favorite variety store and the kids each buy a box of Nerds candies.

Now, for those who don't live with small children and therefore don't have the slightest idea what Nerds are, they are teeny-tiny fruit-flavored candies that come two flavors to each box. The boxes are divided down the center, top to bottom — the left side has a flavor and the right side has another flavor, and the only way they are mixed is if consumers mix them themselves.

I don't know what the attraction is — the candies aren't better than any others, in my opinion, and a lot worse than many — but the kids like them and so we buy the Nerds. (Sometimes it is so easy to please a child.)

Evidently my children aren't alone in their fascination with Nerds candy. Ralston Purina Company has noticed how children like the candy, and carried it one step further by introducing Nerds cereal. Of course we had to check it out.

Nerds cereal is packaged — naturally — two flavors to each box, one flavor in the left side and one in the right. The cereal also comes in teeny-tiny puffs, although they are much larger than the candy pieces (but much smaller that ordinary cereal puffs).

Our box was oranged-flavored on one side, cherry-flavored on the other. The cereal is also available with grape- and strawberry-flavored Nerds in the same box. A 12.5-ounce box cost $2.25, which averages out to 18 cents for each one-ounce serving. (Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising claims the cereal is "tiny tangy crunchy sweetened cereal" that is "fortified with 9 essential vitamins and minerals."

Nutrition labeling lists each serving as containing 120 calories, as well as 25 percent of the thiamin, niacin, iron, vitamin B-6, folic acid and vitamin B-12, and 15 percent of the riboflavin and zinc suggested by the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance. Of course, both the calorie count and the nutrition percentages go up when milk is added.

In the taste test, I have to be truthful and admit the small testers were — well, disappointed. They seemed to like the cereal OK as long as they were eating it dry, straight from the box; but when they poured it into bowls and added milk, the kids couldn't finish their servings. It seems to get really soggy, really fast.

Co-workers have said their children like the grape- and strawberry-flavored Nerds. My kids didn't like their box of orange- and cherry-flavored cereal. Even a friend who came to spend the night wouldn't touch it.

We finally ended up throwing most of the cereal away.

Turkey requires safe thawing, cooking procedures

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Turkey isn't a hazardous food, but what the cook does — or doesn't do — to the bird can literally make you sick.

Like all protein foods, turkey can harbor food poisoning bacteria, such as salmonella. But in large, dense foods that require several steps in preparation, bacteria have even more opportunity to grow if proper precautions aren't taken.

While food-borne illnesses are rarely fatal, they can cause unpleasant symptoms that can last for several hours or even days. Medical experts estimate that a high percentage of symptoms attributed to overeating or flu are actually food-borne illness.

The following precautions should be taken in preparing a stuffed turkey:

■ Thaw the turkey in the refrigerator as recommended on the package directions. Thawing the bird in a microwave oven or by putting it in a watertight package under cold running water are also safe thawing methods. But don't thaw by letting it sit on the kitchen counter, since room temperatures allow bacteria to grow.

■ Wash the defrosted turkey thoroughly, running water over its inside and outside areas. Drain the body cavity and wipe the turkey fairly dry.

■ Stuff the turkey right before you cook it. Warm, moist dressing is an ideal medium in which bacteria can grow.

You can prepare the dry stuffing ingredients the day before, cover them tightly and leave at room temperature. But keep the perishable ingredients, such as butter, mushrooms, oysters, cooked celery, onions and broth, in the refrigerator. Then combine ingredients just before stuffing the turkey.

■ Cook the turkey in a 325 degree oven. Cooking in a very slow oven at 200-250 degrees is not recommended. Because of the low temperature, the turkey and stuffing could take more than four hours to reach a high enough temperature to destroy bacteria.

■ Make sure the turkey is fully cooked. Insert a meat thermometer into the thickest part of the thigh muscle without touching the bone. Then cook the bird until it reaches 180 degrees to destroy salmonella bacteria.

■ Once the turkey is completely cooked, remove all the stuffing from the cavities. Harmful bacteria is more likely to grow in the stuffing if it sits in the bird after cooking.

■ After dinner, refrigerate the turkey and stuffing immediately. Food poisoning bacteria can grow quickly in high protein foods left at room temperature.

Hair care tips practical

NEW YORK (UPI) — While the glamorous hairstyles of Linda Evans, Victoria Principal and similar stars may arouse envy in the hearts of American women, the average woman has neither the time nor the patience to imitate their elegant coiffures.

According to Jacob Neal, hair stylist and, with Gloria Byron, co-author of "High Performance Hair," women are looking to the wrong celebrities for grooming tips.

The constant glare of the camera demands that sportswomen look good all the time — even when sweating on the tennis court. Due to the nature of their work, they are inclined to be especially hard on their hair. While an actress can have her hair and makeup touched up between scenes; an athlete does not enjoy the same luxury.

"High Performance Hair" offers the same tips that Neal provides his clients, who include tennis stars Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd, basketball player Nancy Lieberman and skiing champion Suzy Chaffee. Neal explains the methods he uses to groom these athlete's hair, and describes how they can be adapted to suit the needs of any active woman.

"High Performance Hair" is published by the McGraw-Hill Book Company, New York, and is available in hardcover for $17.95.

DEAR ABBY

Honest family introductions right step

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: I recently published a letter from "Birmingham," who wrote to say that while she was at the home of a new friend, the children came home from school and the mother introduced them this way: "I'd like you to meet my son, Andrew. And this is my stepson, Johnny."

"Birmingham" wrote: "Might it not have been kinder to have introduced them both as 'sons'?" Then she ("Birmingham") remarked that she had a relative who always made it a point to tell people on first meetings that Sharon and Natalie were her whole sisters, but Jennifer was her half-sister. She added, "Another relative, believe it or not, would say in the presence of her children, 'Tommy is our own child, but Jimmy is adopted.'"

"Birmingham" asked me to comment. I did, as follows: "In making a casual introduction, any mention of "step," "half," "own" or "adopted" strikes me as insensitive and uncalled for. Should a closer friendship develop, the specific relationship will probably be disclosed in due time. But until and unless it does, to make a point of it is both tasteless and inappropriate."

That seemed to be a reasonable and proper comment, right? Wrong! Read on for a few of many critical letters:

DEAR ABBY: I am the stepmother of two wonderful children who have lived with my husband and me for over five years. The children's mother lives in the same town in which we live. When introducing the children, I state that they are my stepchildren. Not only would their mother have corrected me for calling them my "children," but the children would have corrected me. (And they have!)

So, you think the introduction of stepchildren as such is "tasteless and inappropriate"? Well, you haven't had a 12- and 14-year-old correct you in front of a stranger. Abby, give us mothers a break! — THE 'WICKED STEPMOTHER' IN HOBBS, N.M.

DEAR ABBY: My own mother, to whom I was very close, died when I was 13. My father remarried and later moved to a city where I had never lived. My stepmother not only told all her new friends that I was her daughter, but maligned me to them and complained continually about my lack of love and respect. She treated me with contempt, and then had the temerity to complain to my children about what a terrible child I had been. She also berated me for telling my own children all about their "real" grandmother.

Thirty years later I am still trying to undo the damage she has done. She even persists in introducing me as her daughter after I have repeatedly asked her not to. I do not wish to be thought of as this woman's daughter. Moreover, the memory of my own mother means a great deal to me and I want to keep it alive for my children.

So you see, Abby, some of us stepchildren prefer to be introduced that way. — A STEPCHILD (NO CITY, PLEASE)

BETTER BUSINESS

Prevent hassles

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

To avoid holiday mail-order headaches:

■ Deal with reliable firms and order early. Unless the ad or catalog states otherwise, the seller has 30 days to ship your order or advise you if unable to ship. If you use a credit card, the 30 days begin when your account is charged. Exceptions include C.O.D., photo finishing, magazine subscriptions and growing plants.

■ Before buying, carefully read catalog merchandise descriptions and information on guarantees, refunds and exchanges.

■ Clearly indicate your name and address on the order and keep a detailed record of it, including the company's name and address, the date of the order, type of merchandise and method of payment.

■ Always pay by check or money order. Never send cash through the mail.

■ Check your order promptly when you receive it. If the package arrives damaged, write "refused" on the wrapper at the time of delivery and return it unopened to the sellers.

■ Before you order from an unknown company, check the company's record with the Better Business Bureau.

Educators skeptical of toys

Hearst News Service

They have flashing lights, colored keyboards and voice simulators. They promise to entertain children for hours while filling their heads with spelling, reading and math skills. And they're expensive — up to $70 a crack.

They're electronic learning games, a small but rapidly growing segment of the toy industry. They have names like Learning Window, Lesson One, Whiz Kid and Electronic Talk 'N Play Learning System. The toys, which generally retail for $35 to $70, are aimed at upwardly mobile parents who want their children to succeed educationally. But educators are skeptical about manufacturers' claims of educational value.

"I think parents are being misled," said Stephen Sulzbacher, associate professor of psychiatry and behavioral sciences at the University of Washington. "I know of none of the toys that are really educational instruments."

Electronic learning toys appeared about 10 years ago, but the market continues to grow. Manufacturers' shipments of these toys grew from $113 million in 1984 to $204 million in 1985, according to the Toy Manufacturers of America. During the same period the toy industry as a whole grew from $8.3 billion to $8.7 billion.

Educators' opinions of such toys are reflected in the fact that nobody has apparently studied their effectiveness. The implication is that no one takes them seriously.

Ken Bumgarner, Washington state director of basic education and curriculum, also doubts such toys have lasting educational value. Bumgarner did his dissertation several years ago on the effects of positive reinforcement on learning. He found that while children need to know whether their answer is correct, their performance isn't improved by routine praise — a point that applies to electronic toys with built-in rewards for right answers.

"Providing just indiscriminate praise for performance is not helpful in terms of achievement," he said. "It should be focused praise and very clearly earned in the eyes of the student. If kids get praise and they haven't earned it, it's actually detrimental to the learning process."

FAA establishes toll-free number

New York Times News Service

The Federal Aviation Administration has established a toll-free number for consumers to use for complaints about aviation safety or FAA services. The number is 800-FAA-SURE.

The service will allow consumers to make complaints about carry-on baggage, airport security, child safety seats and airplane noise.

The number is not to be used for such problems as smoking complaints, lost luggage, flight cancellations or refunds. Those should be addressed to the airlines. If not satisfied, travelers can complain to the Department of Transportation's consumer office, 202-366-2220.

Expert: Compulsive overspending curable

By JAY GOLDINGER
Copley News Service

Compulsive overspending can be as personally devastating as overeating or alcoholism, but a California psychologist who studies spenders says they can be cured with caring and understanding.

Nancy Wallace, who treats credit card "addicts" and people with "shopping problems" says overspending is "not a sickness or an illness, but an inability some people have to say to themselves, 'no, I can't afford it.'"

"Often, the compulsive overspender is a collector who is pulled to add to his or her collection and can rationalize the purchase," says Wallace, who is affiliated with the La Canada California Counseling Center. "People buy books this way even though many of them go unread. They can justify it by saying, 'My God, is it wrong to have another book?'"

These collectors can start accumulating different things — like shoes. Wallace says Imelda Marcos' collection of 3,000 pairs of shoes is a bizarre example, but overspending on shoes is prevalent in many American households, among both men and women.

Again, it's something they can justify.

According to her research, few people actually binge on useless luxuries to pamper themselves. Few really have the urge to splurge on frivolous purchases unless they win the lottery or get an unexpected windfall of cash.

THE TYPICAL compulsive spender who has credit card and charge account debts of $10,000 to $35,000 is probably a "creative person or someone in a mundane "head-oriented" profession," explains Wallace, "who buys paintings they can't afford because they hear a calling to study it and perhaps teach others."

Unlike the impulse buyer, the compulsive overspender establishes a "pattern to his purchases" and systematically will buy expensive and elegant clothes, furnishings and accessories for his home or will spend money on personal travel, cosmetic surgery or will buy lavishly for his children.

All can be rationalized. But can these spenders be curbed?

Wallace says yes, but it may take six months. The first step, she says, is for the compulsive spender to be confronted and comforted, not punished or stripped of all credit cards. (In most cases, their credit cards have hit their ceilings or have been revoked). "You want to show them their spending is out of control. They know it but you have to reinforce it while being caring and supportive at the same time."

The second step is to let the overspender "replace the need" by helping them find out what is "calling them" to buy the books, the shoes. Since people don't share their spending traits with friends or relatives — they just write the check or plunk down the credit card — they are rarely aware of the motivation and too busy justifying the purchase, according to Wallace.

AT THE SAME TIME, she instructs the compulsive spenders to re-examine each check or credit receipt to retrace where the dollars went.

"What I often find is that people will not spell out what the purchase is for — clothes, shoes , hair — because they feel they do not deserve it." In short, they become closet spenders, a compulsion run amok. This is a symptom of low self-esteem and can be traced back to a difficult childhood.

The third step is to help reconstruct that low self-esteem that by now, says Wallace, could be shattered by pushy collection agencies, threatening letters from creditors and others hounding the spender for payments.

This may involve therapy where a trained professional like Wallace performs what's called "re-parenting" — providing the sympathetic and supportive ear that a mother or father (or husband or wife) has not given the spender. "I make no judgments. Whatever they say is accepted. Often, they are being too hard on themselves, and I point that out."

She says the compulsive spender shouldn't bear all the blame. Department stores and credit card companies encourage people to use their credit, even if it has strained the limit.

"It doesn't do any good to take away someone's department store charge card," insists Wallace. "Customers can walk in and the store will look up their account number and unless the account is closed, will let them charge what they buy. It's hard to break into the world of credit, but once you're in, it's not that tough to stay in, even if you declare bankruptcy."

WHAT'S MORE, banks and saving and loans are mailing pre-approved credit cards to strangers hoping the person will use the plastic so they can collect their fee from merchants and earn up to 21 percent annual interest rate on the unpaid balance.

Wallace says a friend of hers was offered, within a six-month period, credit cards totaling $37,000 worth of purchasing power. "Now, that's sickness, and it's not the cardholder's fault."

'Dress-A-Live-Doll' program begins

From Staff Reports

The Salvation Army's annual "Dress-A-Live-Doll" program has become a Christmas tradition in Midland. Each year, individuals, churches and organizations provide new clothing for hundreds of local needy children.

Since it began in 1974, the "Dress-A-Live-Doll" concept has offered the opportunity to give to the less fortunate by helping children from infancy to 12 years old with their clothing needs. The first "Dress-A-Live-Doll" program benefitted 50 youngsters. The Salvation Army now clothes approximately 700 children yearly, according to Mrs. Paul Karcher, chairman of "Dress-A-Live-Doll."

Individuals or groups may choose to outfit one child or several. Families recommended for help are visited by the Salvation Army to determine the needs and sizes of the youngsters. Each child in the family under 12 years old will be included.

Dressing a child includes purchasing a complete ensemble, including socks, shoes, sleepwear, school clothes and sweaters or jackets. The cost per child is about $100 and is tax deductible.

Several local stores participate by offering discounts for donors.

Participating merchants are Anthony's Department Store, Kid's Korner, Payless Shoe Source, Sears Roebuck & Co. and Upstairs-Downstairs.

Persons interested in participating should call Fay Jones at the Salvation Army office, 683-3614, before Dec. 2. Donors and recipients will not be known to each other. Donors will receive a sheet of paper with the first name, sizes and code number of a child. This information should be presented to local merchants by donors to verify their participation in the program.

All clothing should be gift wrapped in several boxes and tagged with the child's name and code number and placed in a plastic bag, also identified. The gifts must be delivered to the Salvation Army office, 300 S. Baird, by Dec. 17.

Other cities have shown interest in the Midland Salvation Army's "Dress-A-Live-Doll" program, which has been very successful, according to Mrs. Karcher.

"I believe that the success of the program is due to the generous nature of Midland citizens combined with a specific need of specific underprivileged youngsters."

Diapers' link to toxic shock syndrome said non-existent

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal health authorities are busy telling worried telephone callers that there is no link between highly absorbent diapers and toxic shock syndrome.

Calls from the New York area began a couple weeks ago after a New York television station broadcast stories on the question, said Dr. Lee Harrison, medical epidemiologist at the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

He's taken about eight calls a day on the subject while manning the agency's public phone lines, he said in a recent interview.

"There's nothing to it. We are basically telling parents when they call us there's nothing to worry about," Harrison said.

CDC records on toxic shock cases show no instance linked to the diapers, he said. A consumer group that has petitioned state and federal regulators on the question also says it knows of no cases.

Toxic shock syndrome is characterized by a sudden high fever, a drop in blood pressure and, in severe cases, shock. In 1984, the last year for which complete numbers are available, the CDC counted 262 cases. The fatality rate is 1 percent to 2 percent.

Concern over highly absorbent diapers was raised recently by a Rochester consumer group called the Empire State Consumer Association, which on Sept. 29 petitioned state and federal agencies to study the question.

Judy Braiman-Lipson, president of the group, said Friday it has never heard of a case of toxic shock caused by such diapers.

"We're not saying it's going to happen," she said. "We're asking the question to rule that out."

The concern is generally about synthetic superabsorbent materials that are worn against the skin, she said. The petitions to the New York attorney general, Consumer Product Safety Commission and U.S. Food and Drug Administration, cover not only infants' diapers but also products for incontinent adults.

The petitions asked that the products be removed from sale until mandatory standards are created. A safety commission spokesman said Friday the petition it received is under study.

Toxic shock is caused by a toxin secreted by bacteria. Most adults are immune because their bodies manufacture proteins called antibodies which disable the toxin.

Use of tampons, especially highly absorbent tampons, has been linked to many cases of toxic shock.

The CDC's Harrison said diapers differ fundamentally from tampons in that the diapers are worn outside the skin, which is a far better barrier to infection or toxin absorption than is the lining of the vagina.

Tests on high-absorbency diaper fabric showed that even when bacteria were encouraged to produce the toxin through conditions not found in a diaper's normal environment, they failed to produce enough toxin to do any harm, said Philip Tierno, associate professor of microbiology at the New York University School of Medicine.

He said other studies have found that some 80 percent of infants up to age 6 months have the antibodies that protect them from the toxic shock toxin.

Grades feared

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The end of every school term strikes fear into the hearts of countless children. They know that all too soon, report cards will be issued, and they will have a lot of explaining to do.

The importance of report cards is grossly overemphasized, according to Dr. Gordon Bishop of the United States International University in San Diego.

Bishop cautions parents to remember that educators often have different ideas about what letter grades mean. Moreover, letter grades do not indicate how hard the child is trying. For instance, a less intelligent child may bring home a "C," but he may have struggled to achieve what on the surface seems to be a mediocre grade.

When children are at the elementary school level, parents should ask teachers the following questions:

- How well does my child get along with others? Does he or she display leadership skills?
- Are my child's skills improving? Does he or she complete homework assignments?

For older children, Bishop suggests parents ask:

- Is the child acquiring the learning skills necessary to succeed in college? How fast and how comprehensively does the child read?
- Does the child need extra tutoring, help with study skills or extra classes in order to prepare for the SATs?

Arsonist kills prosecutor, self, leaves note of plans to avenge four others

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — An arsonist who killed himself and the man who prosecuted him 31 years ago left a note indicating he planned to use a van full of weapons to avenge himself on four others involved in the case, police say.

Malcolm R. Schlette, 72, left the note, signed and dated Monday in his Santa Rosa apartment before he left for his victim's law office in a van loaded with guns, knives and survival gear, police said Wednesday.

The note read: "I declare as my final act on Earth that I and I alone am responsible for all acts of violence I was able to perpetrate against my enemies," according to San Rafael police Detective Michael Keller. "My regret is that society only gave me this avenue to square extraordinary wrongs committed against my branch of the Schlette family."

Schlette fled in the rented van Tuesday afternoon after firing two shots into William O. Weissich from a .45 caliber pistol equipped with a laser sight and silencer, authorities said. He was cornered by police a short time later and apparently took a fatal dose of poison. He died at the scene.

"If it wasn't for that, there was a strong possibility that Mr. Schlette may have committed other acts of violence on his intended victims," Keller said. "He was extremely well prepared to carry out a possible hostage and kidnapping."

Weissich was Marin County district attorney in 1955 and prosecuted Schlette, who was convicted of two counts of arson for a pair of fires at his ex-wife's tavern on the Marin County coast.

Named in the note along with Weissich, 66, were Charles Daniels, a San Rafael insurance investigator at the time of the fires; arson investigator Fred DuPuis; former Marin County Undersheriff Sid Stinson; and Nick Giampali, a private investigator and former San Rafael police lieutenant.

Schette was paroled Oct. 10, 1966, after serving nearly 11 years of a possible 20-year prison sentence, but was arrested four days later after trying to buy guns and a bazooka in Los Angeles. He was returned to prison and served an additional nine years. He was released March 9, 1975.

> "If it wasn't for that, there was a strong possibility that Mr. Schlette may have committed other acts of violence on his intended victims. ...He was extremely well prepared to carry out a possible hostage and kidnapping."
>
> — Michael Keller

Weissich's wife, Rosemary, recalled that she wrote to then Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., pleading with him not to release Schlette.

"I wrote to Jerry Brown and said, 'How will you possibly justify to me and his children if you release this man and he succeeds in killing my husband and their father?' "

Stinson said Schlette were watched carefully for years after his 1975 release. "He didn't do anything, and eventually the watch just evaporated. I retired three years ago and didn't watch him any more."

Weissich, who resigned as district attorney in 1960 to return to private practice, was pronounced dead at the scene of the shooting.

Police stopped Schlette's van several blocks away. Witnesses reported hearing a shot inside the van and seeing Schlette put pills in his mouth before toppling from the van to the ground.

He was carrying what appeared to be several sticks of dynamite and had a hand grenade tied around his neck, but the grenade turned out to be a dud and the dynamite was fake, police said.

Found in the van was an Mini-14 Ruger semi-automatic rifle, also with laser sight, along with hundreds of rounds of ammunition, several pairs of handcuffs, a gas mask, dagger, stun gun, rubber raft, cable ties, two coiled lengths of cord, a weapons belt and jug of water.

Officials said autopsy results might not be available for some time.

Nuclear winter theories have to be 'credible'

By MALCOLM RITTER

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists can increase the credibility of the "nuclear winter" theory by answering some key questions about smoke and clouds, a physicist says.

"If any of this is going to have any effect on nations, it has to be credible," said Joyce Penner, co-leader of a project at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California to study the environmental effects of nuclear war.

"As long as these scientific uncertainties are floating around, it's not as credible as it can be."

Nuclear winter refers to a predicted blockage of the sun's rays by smoke and debris after a nuclear exchange, leading to a long-term drop in temperatures.

"We don't know enough right now to predict how bad it will be," said Penner in a telephone interview this week.

Penner, who reviews research on nuclear winter in today's issue of the British journal Nature, said current estimates for several key factors yield a wide range of possibilities for the climatic impact.

At one extreme, she said, is temperature changes of only about 8 to 12 degrees Fahrenheit that "in summer would not bring you down to freezing levels, and probably would not be horribly severe."

At the other end are "devastating" and longer-lasting temperature drops, which some predictions say could bring freezing temperatures to the Midwest in summer, she said.

Key unanswered questions include how much light smoke particles would absorb if they formed relatively large clumps, she said. Another concerns the large clouds that would form over the huge fires triggered by nuclear war.

"We really have no way of predicting as yet how much of that cloud interacts with the smoke, absorbs the smoke and rains it out to the ground," Penner said. "There's a lot of detailed physics in answering that question."

Scientists also don't know how much smoke materials will give off when burning in massive fires, as opposed to smaller blazes for which information is available, she said.

Some of the questions should yield to research, while others — such as what time of year a nuclear war will be fought and what targets will be hit — can't be answered in the laboratory, she said.
