Clinton mulls oil wish list

President focuses on marginal-well tax breaks

State delegation takes wait, see stance

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Members of the Texas congressional delegation are taking a wait-and-see attitude following Thursday's bipartisan meeting between President Clinton and 80 lawmakers from oil-producing states.

The meeting was initiated last year following a sharp drop in oil prices. More than 120 members of Congress, led by Sen. David Boren of Oklahoma, sent a letter to Clinton last year asking for the meeting.

The purpose of the meeting was to present a list of proposals to help revitalize the domestic oil industry.

"I am very pleased with the way our presentation went," said Rep. Larry Combest, who represents the 19th District. "Today we

WASHINGTON — President Clinton signaled his receptivity Thursday to giving a tax break for thousands of marginal oil wells, according to members of the House and Senate from energy-producing states.

The lawmakers met with Clinton for an hour and later said they were confident the White House will help fight for passage of a $3-per-barrel tax credit for the first three barrels of daily production from so-called stripper wells.

The nation's 453,277 marginally productive oil wells, producing 10 barrels of oil per day or less, account for 368.1 million barrels of oil each year. This production represents 14 percent of U.S. annual production of nearly 2.7 billion barrels.

Teen 'responsible'

LUBBOCK — A Levelland teenager who claims he had sex at age 12 with a neighborhood woman was found responsible Thursday for the murder of the woman's husband. The jury, which deliberated for three hours, apparently wasn't swayed by the boy's defense strategy that centered on the claim that mental illness resulted when he started having sex with the murdered man's widow. Scattered applause broke out in the courtroom when the verdict was announced./4B

O.J., children attend funeral; police broaden investigation

LOS ANGELES — As O.J. Simpson tenderly took his children to their mother's funeral Thursday, police armed with metal detectors and acting on an anonymous tip expanded their investigation into her slaying to an overgrown, junk-strewn field halfway across the country.

The football Hall of Famer, wearing a black suit, emerged from a white limousine outside St. Martin of Tours Catholic Church in the Brentwood section of Los Angeles and kissed 9-year-old Sydney and 6-year-old Justin before entering the church. Simpson, 46, said nothing as he got out of the limousine, flanked by security guards.

At the same time, the parents of Ronald Goldman, who was slain Sunday night with Nicole Brown Simpson, buried their son in Agoura Hills, just 20 miles away.

In Chicago, police officers using metal detectors searched Thursday for evidence in an overgrown field near the O'Hare Plaza Hotel, where Simpson stayed a few hours Monday after his ex-wife was slain.

Carter: North Korea desires negotiations; U.S. cautious

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Former President Jimmy Carter said Thursday that North Korea's leaders are eager to resume talks with the United States on resolving suspicions about their nuclear program and improving relations.

At the end of the second day of his unofficial visit in the North, Carter said North Korean President Kim Il Sung had agreed not to expel U.N. inspectors during "good faith efforts" by both sides to settle the nuclear dispute.

President Clinton cautiously welcomed the pledge but said the North must also agree to freeze its nuclear program during any U.S.-Korean talks and to install less dangerous technology. The United States meanwhile would pursue U.N. sanctions against North Korea.

"We are hopeful that this development today will be positive and we are awaiting further evidence," Clinton said at the White House after meeting with senior foreign policy and military leaders.

The United States and other nations fear North Korea may already have embarked on a program to make nucle-

Juries grow tight-fisted on those who file personal-injury lawsuits

By Richard Perez-Pena
N.Y. Times News Service

In this land of big lawsuits, the growth of multimillion-dollar jury awards has been halted: juries nationwide have become markedly tougher on people who sue doctors, insurance companies and other deep-pockets defendants, siding less often with plaintiffs. And there is evidence that the size of the awards has leveled off, too.

In 1992, plaintiffs won 52 percent of the personal-injury cases decided by jury verdicts, down from 63 percent in 1989, according to Jury Verdict Research, a legal publishing firm in Horsham, Pa., that is the only one nationally to compile such data. And there are indications that the downward trend continued last year.

The firm's research also indicates that, despite the occasional

Muslims demand feminist author's execution

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — About 2,000 Muslim fundamentalists marched through Dhaka on Thursday demanding the execution of an author who has called for changes in Islamic laws to give women equal rights.

It was the latest threat against Taslima Nasreen, who went into hiding last week when a court ordered her arrest on charges of attempting "to hurt the religious feelings of Muslims."

Activists of the Islamic Constitution Movement chanted "Death to Taslima Nasreen!" as they paraded through the streets.

Author favors Islamic law changes to provide more rights for women.

The demonstrators also met with Interior Minister Abdul Matin Choudhury and demanded that Ms. Nasreen be sentenced to death for criticizing the Koran, Islam's holy book.

Last month, Ms. Nasreen was quoted in a newspaper interview as saying the Koran should be rewritten. She later said the newspaper had misquoted her, but she acknowledged favoring changes in the Shariat, or Islamic laws, to provide more rights for women. Fundamentalists insisted she had blasphemed Islam.

The government of Prime Minister Khaleda Zia, apparently under pressure from the fundamentalists, ordered Ms. Nasreen's arrest.

Russia refuses to support North Korean sanctions

■ Washington again fails to adequately consult with Moscow on vital issue of international security, minister says.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Complaining that Washington has again neglected to consult adequately with Moscow on a vital issue of international security, Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev refused on Thursday to support a Security Council resolution drafted by the United States that would impose sanctions on North Korea.

It was the second time this week that Kozyrev had lashed out at the United States. On Tuesday, he warned Congress that its vote to end the arms embargo against the Bosnian government could ignite "a new world war."

The statements underscore increasing strains as Russia tries to reconcile its new relationship to the United States with surging anti-Western politics at home.

Russia wants to continue to play a major role in world politics. It wants to be a full partner in NATO, to mediate the war in Bosnia, and to dispatch troops to the increasingly troubled former Soviet republics. It feels it should share responsibility with the United States for policing the spread of nuclear weapons.

Yet when Russian leaders appear to follow Washington's lead in international diplomacy, angry domestic opponents rise up to denounce them.

This has increasingly put Kozyrev and his colleagues in the hot seat. On Thursday, he declined to say flatly that his government would veto the resolution. But, addressing himself more to a perceived lack of communication than to the decision itself, he warned that a veto was possible.

"I think presenting the draft unilaterally will seriously complicate Russian consideration of the document," Kozyrev told reporters. "In any case, we will not support a set of sanctions worked out without our cooperation."

Moscow also protested loudly last March when NATO planes bombed Bosnian Serb positions without specifically notifying Russia ahead of time. Bewildered officials in Washington responded that Moscow had given its general consent to such a military response, and therefore should not have been surprised.

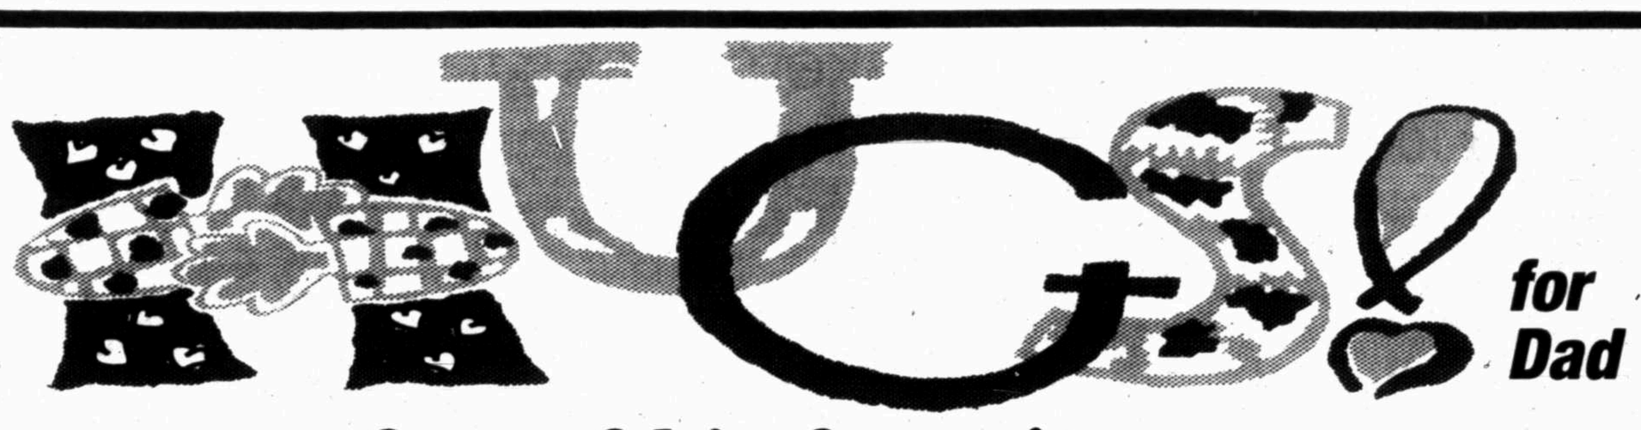

After that misunderstanding, American diplomats devoted considerable energy to calming Moscow's nerves, but they also noted that given nationalist sentiment in Russia and its ethnic ties to the Bosnian Serbs, it suited Moscow to seem indignant.

Similarly, it was not clear how much Kosyrev's statement on Thursday was driven by internal politics and how much by genuine anger.

Whatever its causes, the increased tension is not likely to help discussions over Russia's role in a new loose alliance that offers a kind of junior partnership in NATO to members of the former Warsaw Pact.

Last week, after many delays and complaints about Russia's status with NATO, President Boris Yeltsin said that he would sign the agreement, and on Wednesday NATO urged Russia to begin immediate talks in Brussels to improve relations. Russian officials said they would probably accept the invitation, and Kozyrev announced on Thursday that he would go to Brussels next week.

As with his testy comments about North Korea, Kozyrev mitigated his angry comments about Washington's actions toward Bosnia, this time with warnings he issued to the Serbs.

BROADEN: Police search field near hotel where Simpson stayed

(From 1A)

A patron of a nearby gasoline station said he saw a person fitting Simpson's description in that lot Monday, Detective Bert Luper of the Los Angeles Police Department said. He wouldn't say what they were looking for.

"We're working on an anonymous tip. We're here to collect evidence with the Chicago police assisting," said Luper, one of two LAPD officers in Chicago investigating the slayings.

Police have refused to discuss the case but a police source told The Associated Press that the investigation was focusing solely on Simpson. The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Simpson would be arrested soon.

At Goldman's funeral, there was an undercurrent of anger among mourners.

"I want O.J. to turn himself in, that's all," said Frank Enderle, a family friend. "Now O.J., if you turn yourself in at least your children would have some money because you are going to spend all your money on court cases and you are going to lose."

At Mrs. Simpson's funeral, one mourner, T.J. Carter, said Mrs. Simpson's mother had eulogized her 35-year-old daughter as "a great mom and a great friend." Simpson didn't speak during the funeral for his wife of seven years.

Among those at the service were Olympian Bruce Jenner and former baseball player Steve Garvey. About 200 members of the news media were kept across the street.

After Mrs. Simpson's funeral, Simpson embraced the priest, greeted friends and got into his car for the 50-mile procession to Ascension Cemetery in Lake Forest. Security was so tight there that even the priest who conducted graveside services was stopped and asked for identification.

Before the burial, nine girlhood friends of Mrs. Simpson traded stories of jumping off high-dives and playing pranks as children.

"It's really sad to have a grade school reunion this way," one said.

Simpson apparently returned to his Brentwood mansion in the early evening. Hiding his face, he was hustled into the house by two men who wrapped their arms around him.

Part of the investigation Thursday focused on blood recovered at the murder scene that the Los Angeles Times reported matched Simpson's blood type.

But such a match doesn't mean Simpson was at the scene of the slayings because many people have the same blood types. Simpson attorney Robert L. Shapiro refused to discuss the report.

The Times previously had reported that Simpson had scratches on his body when police questioned him Monday. Mrs. Simpson's throat was slashed, and Goldman's wounds indicate he put up a fierce struggle before he died, investigators said.

Police also were reported to have found bloodstains in Simpson's driveway and his Ford Bronco, and a bloody glove at his mansion and another at the crime scene. Tests on the gloves have not been completed, the newspaper said.

Shapiro has said that at the time of the slayings, Simpson was two miles away at his Brentwood mansion waiting for a limousine ride to the airport.

In other developments:

■ An unidentified limousine driver who says he took Simpson to the airport Sunday told the syndicated TV news magazine "Hard Copy" that Simpson wasn't at his estate at 10:45 p.m. but showed up 15 minutes later looking sweaty and agitated.

■ KABC-TV reported that detectives Thursday interviewed an unidentified female jogger who said she was running in Mrs. Simpson's neighborhood the night of the slayings.

■ On Saturday, the day before the killings, Simpson attended a party in Beverly Hills with model-actress Paula Barbieri, according to her manager, Tom Hahn. Hahn denied reports the two are romantically involved, saying they were just friends.

■ Deputy City Attorney Robert Pingel revealed more details of the 1989 New Year's Day wife beating to which Simpson pleaded no contest and received two years' probation.

Mrs. Simpson had called police to the couple's Brentwood mansion. When the officers arrived, a visibly bruised Mrs. Simpson staggered to the gate in front of the house wearing only a pair of sweat pants and a bra and said, "He's going to kill me."

■ Forensic scientist Henry Lee, who assisted William Kennedy Smith in his successful defense against a rape charge, left Connecticut for California to help Shapiro. Lee will examine evidence collected in the investigation.

■ Shapiro also hired Dr. Michael Baden, a former chief pathologist for New York City who now works as a forensic scientist for the New York State Police in Albany.

CARTER: Clinton is cautious

(From 1A)

ar weapons.

Carter reported by phone to Robert L. Gallucci, the administration's chief coordinator on the nuclear dispute, and did not speak to Clinton.

South Korea also was wary of northern promises.

"We cautiously welcome North Korea's gesture," a Foreign Ministry official said in Seoul.

South Korean Foreign Minister Han Sung-joo spoke by phone with U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher early Friday and was briefed on the Carter-Kim Il Sung talks.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, U.S. Ambassador Madeleine K. Albright met the 10 nonpermanent Security Council members to discuss the proposed U.S. draft resolution on sanctions, repeating in essence what Clinton said in Washington.

Some U.N. diplomats said earlier that to escape sanctions, North Korea would have to fully open up key nuclear sites it now declares off-limits. The diplomats spoke on condition of anonymity.

Kim's promise did not address the refusal of North Korea to allow the U.N. experts to conduct unrestricted inspections, but Carter said he was encouraged by the Communist leader's attitude.

"I look on this commitment of President Kim Il Sung as being a very important and positive step toward the resolution of this crisis," Carter said in a telephone interview with Cable News Network.

Kim's hard-line regime has blocked full inspections of its nuclear program for 15 months.

RAG: Bonnette pleads guilty

(From 1A)

Bonnette, aka, Barbara Bustamante, 36, recently pleaded guilty to a charge of receiving stolen property. She was sentenced to eight years probation.

Midland police allege Bonnette is the "rag burglar" (rags and towels were used to handle items) responsible for a string of burglaries in Midland and Odessa earlier this year.

Bonnette was arrested March 31 following a high-speed chase, that ended near the Odessa Country Club on Highway 80. His wife was arrested later the same day at an Odessa hotel.

That morning, detectives began a surveillance of the area where most of the burglaries occurred, according to police spokesman Sgt. David Garcia.

Bonnette's vehicle was found at Sinclair Place Apartments, 4534 Sinclair Ave. Detectives continued their surveillance until Bonnette got into his car and left. Detectives followed Bonnette in an unmarked car and were later joined by a police unit, which attempted to stop Bonnette.

Garcia said Bonnette attempted to flee and a high-speed pursuit began on Midland Drive.

Officers said Bonnette headed west on the North Service Road on Highway 80. He got on the highway at one point and then returned to the service road. The vehicle then turned north on the road between the old Mansion Dinner Theater and the Odessa Country Club.

Bonnette's car got stuck on the road, which was under construction. He fled the car, throwing rocks at officers in an attempt to elude them, Garcia said.

After a short foot pursuit and struggle, Bonnette was arrested. Evidence of a recent burglary was found in his car, Garcia said.

Garcia said Bonnette is on parole from the Texas Department of Corrections for burglary and other offenses. He said Bonnette had been in and out of prison several times.

WISH: Lawmakers press for industry relief

would give a big boost to a beleaguered industry. Stripper wells are owned or operated by more than 8,000 independent companies, and more than one million landowners across the country receive royalty payments from the independents.

Rep. Ernest Jim Istook R-Okla., a member of the influential House Appropriations Committee, said 75 lawmakers from 27 states met with Clinton in the historic Indian Treaty Room in the Old Executive Office Building where they presented him with 11 proposals to help stripper wells.

But Clinton only responded positively to the proposal for a tax credit for stripper wells, Istook said.

"The president seemed to jump on it more than anything else," he said. "Of the proposals, the stripper well one is the only one the president made specific positive comments on."

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, said he "came away with the sense that we'll get a definitive clear answer soon" on the proposals, adding: "And I'm encouraged it will be a good one."

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., a member of the Senate Finance Committee who authored the proposed tax break, said the president "understood very well" the implications of having more than 16,000 marginally productive oil wells abandoned each year because production costs could not be recouped at a time when oil prices are relatively low.

However, Deputy White House Press Secretary Ginny Terzano gave a more subdued interpretation to the meeting, describing it as "an information sharing" session that gave the president "an opportunity to listen."

"The president made no commitments whatsoever on any of these proposals other than to say that he wants to work with Congress," Terzano said. "It was a very much an opportunity for the president to hear their ideas, their concerns, their proposals — that's what it was."

With America relying upon foreign oil for more than half its daily oil consumption, Boren said the preservation of existing wells has become a matter of national security.

Boren warned: "If we learned anything from the Persian Gulf War we should have learned that we should never put ourselves so much at risk again. We must not be in a situation where we have to risk the lives of young Americans because we don't have a sensible domestic energy policy."

Bill Burton, a White House official who helped organize the summit, went out of his way to point out that not a single lawmaker "stood up and criticized" the president during the meeting.

"I think there was a clear understanding that we would go forward together from here, working to see what could be done," Burton said.

The lawmakers had "urgently" requested the summit with Clinton 14 weeks ago, saying "a prompt and effective response" to the crisis in the energy industry was needed.

Both Boren and Johnston said the president pledged to help overcome a key impediment to passage of the proposed tax credit.

Federal law designed to help lower the federal deficit requires the independent Congressional Budget Office (CBO) to weigh the budgetary impact of new tax breaks to assure that lost revenue is made up elsewhere.

JURIES: Growth of big-dollar awards halts colossal award that generates great publicity and revives claims that juries have run amok, the size of awards has leveled off.

Theories abound as to why the shift has occurred, but the most widely accepted seems to be that criticism leveled at juries and their perceived largesse by two of the most affluent defendants — the medical profession and the insurance industry — has sunk in.

"There's been such a campaign by the insurance industry, by people like Dan Quayle, saying these big awards are killing our society," said Brian Shenker, editorial director of Jury Verdict Research. "People see this in the media, and when they get on juries they think, 'I'm not going to contribute to this.'"

James F. McHugh, an associate justice of the Massachusetts Superior Court, said, "There's less of a sense among juries that it's other people's money we're dealing with." Jurors, he added, "are aware that we all pay these costs" in the form of insurance premiums.

The acid test of this attitude, lawyers and judges say, is in personal injury cases, in which individual plaintiffs are often pitted against corporate defendants and, almost invariably, against the defendants' insurance companies. By contrast, practitioners say, jurors' attitudes have not changed in cases of contract disputes or fraud lawsuits, for example, that tend to pit one company against another.

Some lawyers, like Stephan Peskin, president of the New York State Trial Lawyers Association, say they have seen no evidence of greater jury skepticism regarding plaintiffs' claims. "Jurors still do what's right," he said.

WAIT: State's lawmakers react to meeting

(From 1A)

gave the president a proposal that will bring jobs and national security back to America. Now the president must put his own energy behind the proposal and take action."

Combest, a Republican, said Clinton should get behind the job-saving energy proposal with the same fervor he put behind favored-nation status for China.

"So often we have heard the president say the right thing, then do nothing," Combest said.

Rep. Lamar Smith, who represents the Midland in the 21st District, seconded the notion that the ball was now in the president's court, but was disappointed Clinton did not respond to the proposal in detail.

"What I got was a vague promise that the White House would respond in some way — and a suggestion that we wait for the Congressional Budget Office to conduct yet another study on marginal wells," the Republican lawmaker said in a prepared statement.

"This was a crucial meeting. It is probably the last of its size we will be able to have with the president. The president made no commitment to support any concrete efforts to help the energy industry, whether suggested by Democrats or Republicans," he said.

Deputy Secretary of Energy Bill White explained in a press conference following the meeting that with almost 100 people in the room wanting to talk, the president elected not to say too much.

White said the only two issues Clinton responded to were tax breaks for marginal wells and exporting from the North Slope to the Pacific Rim.

He said a database to determine the profitability of marginal wells was being studied that would allow tax incentives when the well became uneconomical.

The database might include such items as depth, oil production, and water production, White said.

Asked about other factors that affect profitability — such as paraffin, corrosion and hydrogen sulfide — White said the database was being studied by the National Petroleum Council. He hoped it would not result in a tax law for each well.

Rep. Henry Bonilla, who represents Midland in the 23rd District, blamed the lack of leadership at the Department of Energy for many oil-industry problems. He said the lack of leadership was one reason for the meeting.

"U.S. production was at a 30-year low last year and U.S. dependence on foreign oil is at an all-time high. With the apparent lack of leadership in the Department of Energy, we felt we needed to get the president's attention focused on the crisis in the energy industry.

"Our government is at the root of many of the problems our domestic producers face," Bonilla said in a press release. "We have too many regulations and an unfriendly tax climate that make it difficult for oil and gas producers to stay afloat."

Bonilla, a Republican, said he was encouraged by the president's reception.

"The president seemed impressed by the large number of senators and representatives at the meeting. The president said he had never seen such a large, bipartisan group come to the White House to discuss a single issue."

GAMES: Chi-cah-gah excitement? Naaaah livia. Their teams meet today in the opening match of the coast-to-coast sprawl called World Cup '94.

(From 1A)

President Clinton will be there. So will German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Bolivian President Gonzalo Sanchez de Lozada.

Hey, singer Diana Ross headlines the pre-game gala — this is big!

So, is the city abuzz with excitement? Gripped by "fussball fever"?

In Chi-cah-gah? Naaaah.

"You mean kickball?" sneers one downtown office worker. Another dismisses the very idea that soccer is a sport.

Chicago, host to five of the 52 games, is outdoing itself to show its best side to an expected 300,000 tourists. On tap are a parade, a downtown festival, a tournament for kids, some ooh-aah fireworks and a lakefront concert by tenor Placido Domingo.

"This is the single most important tourism event that will happen in our lifetime," gushes Leslie Fox, the city's World Cup promotion coordinator.

Chicago is strewn with soccer ball symbols: banners on light poles, stickers on highway signs, posters on city buses.

But the frenzied festooning doesn't impress Derek Rector, who was handing out free tickets to a promotional festival this week.

"Crowd-building is difficult for soccer," Rector says. "People are like, they don't even know what it is. Then they find out and they're worried about riots."

But the security types in the city of big shoulders are confident.

"It's a different crowd" at the World Cup level, says Jim Froslid of World Cup USA's local organizing committee. "The people who come over here will spend thousands of dollars. They're not coming over to spend it in jail."

Not all corners of the city are soccer-comatose. In the city's ethnic neighborhoods, whose residents come from countries where soccer is a national passion, there is button-bursting elation. For such fans, World Cup is a happy collision of Super Bowl, World Series and Olympics fervor.

World Cup has been the talk of his patrons for weeks, says Herbert Stober, owner of Resi's Bierstube, a boisterous German pub on the northwest side. Stober, born in Karlsruhe, Germany, says he's bringing in his spare TV so tavern patrons can watch the match Friday afternoon.

Assistant editor Howard Chang says the Chicago-based Korea Times will be "covering it every day."

"It means a lot to us because it's the first time World Cup has been held in the United States," says the South Korean-born Chang, "and it's the third straight time South Korea has participated." South Korea plays Spain in the Cup's second contest, Friday evening in Dallas.

Chang says he doesn't understand Chicago's apparent disdain for soccer.

"It's amazing to me that they don't like it," he said.

But Dan O'Neill, a Chicago accountant and fan of the Bears, White Sox and Cubs, makes a confident prediction while watching a baseball game at Comiskey Park: "It won't be popular here until the world starts calling it soccer, not football."

Then, more as attitude then afterthought, he adds, "And they don't even spell football right overseas."

Mexican prosecutor: Assassin acted alone

MEXICO CITY (AP) — First, it was thought to be a lone gunman. Then, a conspiracy.

Now investigators say they're back where they started, that the evidence shows a 23-year-old gunman had no help in assassinating Mexico's front-running presidential candidate, Luis Donaldo Colosio.

Special prosecutor Miguel Montes Garcia testified Thursday before a Senate commission that the evidence he has amassed disproves conspiracy theories.

"The time has come to offer the evidence," said Montes, who presented new videotapes to bolster his case that Mario Aburto Martinez, a factory worker suffering from paranoid delusions, was the sole author of the March 23 killing.

The shooting of Colosio at a Tijuana campaign rally was Mexico's biggest political assassination in decades, raising speculation that people ranging from drug traffickers to dark powers behind the government were involved.

Montes' report was the strongest yet to say Aburto acted alone, although three security officers arrested as suspected accomplices remained jailed. Montes said on June 2 that he had been unable to build evidence against the others.

Colosio was favored to win the Aug. 21 elections as nominee of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party. The lone-gunman theory has run into rough criticism from an angry and uneasy public.

Montes' aides showed videotapes and suggested the security officers arrested as accomplices were just doing their crowd-control jobs.

The main suspect is Aburto, who investigators said fired two shots from a .38-caliber revolver, striking Colosio in the head and abdomen.

Aburto was arrested moments later; the suspected accomplices — Tranquilino Sanchez Venegas, Vicente Mayoral and his son Rodolfo Mayoral — days later.

France's new national hero also happens to wear an apron

By Bernard D. Kaplan
N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — At Joel Rubuchon's new restaurant here, dinner will set you back a minimum of $250 per person — and that's without wine.

The question of whether ANY food, however good, can actually be worth a tab like that doesn't seem to arise for genuine and wannabe gourmets eager to savor the master's latest innovative dishes like jellied caviar in creamed cauliflower sauce or tarte of truffles, onions and bacon.

The 30-table establishment, called simply Joel Rubuchon and located in one of Paris's smarter residential areas, is solidly booked five weeks ahead.

"Right now, Rubuchon is a god," explains food writer Antoine Lagardaire. "He can do no wrong. There are people in this city who will tell you, quite seriously, that he's the greatest living Frenchman."

In her latest guide, restaurant critic Patricia Welles, an American living in Paris, calls Rubuchon the world's outstanding chef. Others describe him as a modern-day equivalent of Anthelme Brillat-Savarin, the 18th century food critic, and other illustrious gastronomic trend-setters of the past.

Wineless dinner for one at Joel Rubuchon restaurant in Paris costs at least $250. Tables are solidly booked 5 weeks in advance.

On a recent TV program devoted entirely to his career, five well-known French intellectuals treated the 46-year-old restaurateur not so much as a talented cook but as a great artist like Michelangelo or Mozart.

Lagardaire says the Rubuchon phenomenon may have less to do with food than with France's longing for a national hero.

"We hunger for the international acclaim that used to given to our great writers, painters and intellectuals," he explains.

World-class thinkers and artists are scarce these days. Even French high fashion doesn't get the attention it once did. So that leaves high cuisine.

Lagardaire says that "we're at least able to point to Rubuchon and take comfort that in gastronomy we are still the best."

Sociologist Robert Vignerie observes that Rubuchon provides much- needed "reassurance" to his compatriots at a time when France's great culinary tradition is being threatened by the onslaught of American fast food chains.

Palestinians may breathe easier in place they can call home

By Neil MacFarquhar
Associated Press

JERICHO, West Bank — One month into autonomy, it's the flavor of the place that has changed the most.

Both here and in the Gaza Strip, the difference is not just the presence of the Palestinian police, which seems a factor in keeping down bloodshed. Nor is it the huge murals of the much-awaited PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

It's that Palestinians breathe a little easier in the place they can now call their own.

"How can it be anything but fantastic with the Israelis gone?" said Freij Abu Kheiri, a senior official in the PLO's autonomy government.

Much of the change is psychological. Although Israel retains control over utilities and access to the territories, Gaza and Jericho underwent a fundamental transformation when the last Israeli soldiers marched out May 18.

"People see their lives being changed and I think they are looking forward to the future," said Professor Khalil Shikaki, a Gaza Strip native and director of the Center For Palestinian Research and Studies.

With no more 8 p.m. curfew or strike days to interrupt business, stores stay open late. A regular week emerged with the Muslim holy day of Friday off. Gaza beaches, once abandoned to avoid chance encounters with Israeli patrols and to respect the ban on public festivities, are now packed.

Gaza beaches, once abandoned to avoid Israeli patrols and to respect the ban on public festivities, now are packed.

True, the PLO still awaits millions of dollars in promised foreign aid to get the government running. And there is no sign of any organized government to provide ordinary things such as a driver's license.

But Palestinians say, at least it's their own mess.

"Remember they have been under occupation for a whole generation. Most people have never seen an armed Palestinian, never mind an armed Palestinian in a uniform. That alone is enough to sustain people," said Shikaki.

The police have made mistakes. They opened fire while chasing car thieves, wounding two bystanders. But overall they have won high marks for discipline and a gentle approach among a population wary of another outside force.

"In spite of the lack of financial and material resources they are functioning in a positive way, they are not trying to impose themselves," said Saleh Abdel-Shafi, a Gaza economist and frequent critic of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Overall bloodshed dropped after autonomy, although Islamic movements claimed responsibility for at least six killings.

The Islamic Resistance Movement, or Hamas, is not entirely happy with the way Palestinians react to freedom.

"A few negative things have appeared, they are rare, but there is adultery and the spread of shameful clothing among women and girls," said spokesman Hassan Deeb. But he praised the police for a new vice squad arresting drug dealers and clearing the beach of late-night parties.

Analysts note Hamas is trying to retain some clout over religious content of social laws and education. The drop in violence is likely part of their attempt to get into the political mainstream.

Haitians get asylum interviews on ship

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — A U.S. Coast Guard cutter plucked 35 Haitians from their rickety boats on Thursday and delivered them to a ship anchored in Kingston Harbor, where they became the first refugees interviewed at sea under President Clinton's new asylum policy.

The cutter picked up the refugees from three separate boats in Haitian territorial waters and transferred them to the USNS Comfort, a hospital ship converted into a floating migrant processing center.

Reporters and photographers were not allowed on the eight-story ship on Thursday. U.S. Embassy spokeswoman Virginia Loo Farris reported the transfer but gave no further details.

Haitians crowd into overloaded wooden boats to flee the hemisphere's poorest country. Economic conditions and political persecution have worsened since international sanctions were imposed in an attempt to oust Haiti's army rulers, who toppled elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in September 1991.

The United Nations says up to 3,000 people have been killed in political violence in Haiti since the coup.

The Comfort is the first offshore processing center for Haitian refugees seeking political asylum in the United States. Previously, Haitians fleeing by sea were treated as economic refugees, returned to Haiti without interviews and told to seek political asylum at U.S. processing centers there.

Clinton revised the policy on May 8 to permit Haitian boat people to plead their case that they face persecution at home and deserve asylum on political grounds. Implementation of the new policy was held up until arrangements for shipboard interviews could be made.

From Washington, the Pentagon said about 280 military personnel from Fort Hood, Texas, have been sent to the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to help receive Haitians found to be eligible for U.S. asylum.

The group is composed of headquarters staff and logistics specialists and includes military police, Pentagon spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski said.

The Haitians were to be photographed, fingerprinted, fitted with plastic identification bracelets, given emergency medical treatment if needed and fed.

Egyptians pull plug on Peter Gabriel concert

JERUSALEM (NYT) — It's only rock 'n' roll — in most places, that is, except the Middle East, where even a pop concert can turn suddenly into a political issue.

So it was for Peter Gabriel, the British performer, who thought he might make a gesture for elusive regional harmony with a concert on Saturday night at Taba, Egypt, the Red Sea resort on the border with Israel and the site of peace talks between the Israelis and the Palestinians last fall.

The idea was to get Israelis and Arabs together, performers and spectators alike — hands across the water and all that.

But the Egyptian authorities refused this week to allow the necessary equipment across the border, and the so-called peace concert came rapidly unglued.

On the record, Israeli officials say they accept the Egyptians' explanation that the problem is one of security. Off the record, they say they no more believe that than they think they will be dining in Baghdad next week.

There may be a 15-year-old peace treaty between Israel and Egypt, a well-placed Israeli official said, but "every time there's a cultural event, we find we have the most unbelievable difficulties with them." To the Israelis, it was another example of their "cold peace" with Egypt.

The Israeli press bandied about various theories. One held that the Egyptian foreign minister, Amr Moussa, had stopped the performance out of pique that he was not invited. Not so, insisted an Israeli concert promoter. Another report said the Israeli Embassy in Cairo had warned the Egyptians that relations between the two countries would be damaged if the event was canceled, but this, too, was officially denied.

Whatever the reason, the concert was moved just across the border to the Israeli port of Eilat, where few people were holding their breath that ticket-holders from Egypt, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates would show up on Saturday night.

Southern Baptists endorse new dialogue with Catholics

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Southern Baptists and Roman Catholics can be more than political soul mates, the nation's largest Protestant denomination declared Thursday.

In a major step toward ecumenicism, the Southern Baptist Convention said born-again believers may be found in all Christian denominations, and endorsed Baptist-Catholic dialogue.

"We live in a land where there is a demonic onslaught against the forces of decency and righteousness, and we need to stand with good people together," Timothy George, dean of Beesom Divinity School in Montgomery, Ala., told the convention on the final day of its 137th annual meeting.

The declaration overwhelmingly approved by about 7,500 convention delegates places no limits on the freedom of Baptists to persuade other Christians to switch churches.

Set against the historical enmity between the nation's two largest religious groups, the formal declaration of the desire for dialogue was seen as historically significant.

"It certainly is a major step to consider whether members of other churches really are part of the Body of Christ," said the Rev. Frank Ruff of the Secretariat for Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs.

House Republicans try to derail health plan

■ GOP committee members oppose amendment to soften bill's impact on small business by providing tax credits to offset new insurance costs.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — At the urging of Rep. Newt Gingrich, their deputy leader, House Republicans are trying to keep health-care legislation from reaching the House floor in a form that could pass.

Despite criticism from Democrats and even from one Republican who accused Gingrich of putting partisan politics first, Gingrich said on Thursday that Republicans should vote against amendments that might broaden the support for a bill the House Ways and Means Committee is considering.

A few hours later, Republican committee members followed that prescription: all 14 opposed an amendment to soften the bill's impact on small business by providing tax credits to offset their new insurance costs.

But Gingrich's hardball strategy backfired when previously divided Democrats closed ranks and voted unanimously for a series of amendments, even though some made it clear they did not like them, and might alter some later. Several said that Gingrich's moves had unified them.

Gingrich's comments confirmed in part accusations of obstructionism that Democrats have leveled at Republican leaders, saying they were muzzling moderates in their party and blocking compromise on any health-care bill. But they have never provided specifics.

"It's becoming clearer and clearer that they are interested in frustrating action," Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, the Democratic leader, said on Thursday. While Republicans often claimed that they wanted bipartisan cooperation, he said, "Their real intention is to, unfortunately, not do anything."

In an interview on Thursday, Gingrich, of Georgia, responded, "I think it is very sad to see Gephardt reduced to a Clinton level of dishonesty." He said Republicans had repeatedly offered to work with Democrats on health-care legislation, but "what they mean by bipartisan is us caving in." He said members of his party were resisting "selling out your principles to pass one bill."

Gingrich said he told Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee that "they should do what they think is effective in minimizing the prospect that the Gibbons bill will pass."

Panel votes to trim Russian aid, restrict military sales to Indonesia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Thursday to trim $61 million from proposed U.S. aid to former Soviet states and to slap restrictions on military sales to Indonesia.

The committee, in two rapid-fire meetings approving the $13.6 billion foreign aid bill, also approved $80 million in aid to Palestinians and eliminated House-approved restrictions on aid to Greece and Turkey.

The bill also authorizes $2.8 million more to the U.S. commander in the Pacific primarily because of increased military activity due to the showdown with North Korea over nuclear proliferation.

Further changes are expected before the bill, which has already passed the House, clears the Senate and goes to President Clinton. It is expected to be taken up in the Senate next week, after which a House-Senate conference committee will mold the final version.

The committee reduced aid to Russia from Clinton's requested $900 million to $839 million for fiscal 1996. The foreign operations subcommittee chairman, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said aiding Russia and other former Soviet states is critical to U.S. interests but the aid program has been plagued by problems.

"The management of this program has been uncoordinated and short on vision, and the implementation has been no better," Leahy said. "We have tried in vain to discern what the administration's strategy is in each of the (former Soviet states), only to be frustrated by briefings.

Police find member of Courtney Love's band dead in tub

SEATTLE (AP) — The bass player for Courtney Love's band Hole was found dead Thursday in her bathtub with syringes and what appeared to be drug paraphernalia, police said.

The cause of the 26-year-old Kristen Pfaff's death was not immediately determined. An autopsy was scheduled for today.

Love is the lead singer for the alternative punk rock group Hole. Love's husband, Kurt Cobain, lead singer for the ground-breaking grunge-rock band Nirvana, killed himself with a shotgun blast to the head in April.

The police report said she was found kneeling in the tub, and a purse containing syringes and what appeared to be drug paraphernalia was found on the bathroom floor.

Pfaff of Buffalo, N.Y., was a classically trained pianist who didn't play rock 'n' roll until she was 22, said Bryn Bridenthal of Geffen Records in Los Angeles. Hole's recording company, DGC Records, is part of Geffen.

Pfaff had played with Hole since 1993. "Everyone thought everything was fine with her," Bridenthal said.

Report: IRS has trouble keeping its own books

WASHINGTON (AP) — The IRS is not that much better at bookkeeping than some of the taxpayers it oversees, congressional auditors said Thursday.

The General Accounting Office "audit of the auditors" found significant weaknesses in the Internal Revenue Service's basic systems and controls resulting in lost tax revenue, errors in taxpayer accounts and lack of proper accountability for operating funds and assets.

The GAO, the investigative wing of Congress, said it was unable to ascertain the reliability of IRS's 1993 financial statements because of a lack of adequate supporting information.

"It troubles me that the GAO could not issue an audit opinion on the IRS financial statements because the IRS can't get its own books in order," said Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio.

Summer jobs program targets youth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration plans to create more than 600,000 summer jobs for youth and asked private employers Thursday to hire more than 300,000 other teen-agers and young adults.

The government will spend $908 million to create 623,000 jobs for poor youth from age 14 to 21 who live in communities with high rates of unemployment. That is less than the $1 billion spent two years ago, when the program served more than 780,000 participants. The cost per participant is up from $1,282 in 1992 to an expected $1,458 this year.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Doug Ross said the program costs more per person because many participants now also receive mathematics and reading instruction over the summer.

"We're now investing in learning, not just paying you ... to show up on your summer job site," Ross said during a news conference.

He said 40 percent of the participants took advantage of the educational offerings last year, and the agency hopes to raise that to half this year.

Participants in the program earn at least minimum wage. Last year, they worked an average 32 to 36 hours a week for eight weeks. Local program operators determine the kinds of jobs in which they are placed.

Labor officials are pushing to increase the number of young workers hired for the summer by private employers from 300,000 last year to 330,000 this year. A series of public service announcements being sent to television stations across the nation include Labor Secretary Robert Reich, Georgetown University basketball coach John Thompson and others describing their summer jobs and telling entrepreneurs, "Someone gave you a chance, give someone theirs."

Youth hired through the program by private employers already have been pre-screened by local agencies. Ross said the young workers could do "almost anything" legal and safe.

"I think the key is it's got to be useful work," he said.

Employers get no federal incentives to hire the program participants, except the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit, under which the government pays part of the wages of disadvantaged workers.

The White House has recommended scrapping the tax credit, saying it is ineffective.

Free speech ruling underscores rights

The Supreme Court showed good judgment Monday when it issued a unanimous ruling upholding free speech in finding that a Ladue, Mo., ordinance attempting to regulate yard signs was too limiting.

Margaret Gilleo of Ladue had erected a 2-by-3-foot sign in her yard that read "Say No to War in the Persian Gulf, Call Congress Now." But Ladue authorities told her the sign violated the community's ordinance limiting signs in residential neighborhoods to commercial signs in commercially-zoned areas, street and traffic-safety signs and signs indicating a property is for sale or rent.

Gilleo then traded her yard sign for an 8.5-inch-by-11-inch sign in her second story window saying "For Peace in the Gulf." But authorities informed her this, too, violated the ordinance.

Ms. Gilleo challenged the community's ruling on free speech grounds. The high court found the community's ordinance too restrictive, saying: "A special respect for individual liberty in the home has long been part of our culture and our law."

It added that although the government has a "constant and unavoidable" need to regulate expression in public places, "its need to regulate temperate speech from the home is surely much less pressing."

We agree entirely. The court appropriately noted that the need for government to regulate "temperate speech from the home" is not nearly as pressing as it might have been had Ms. Gilleo used profane words or images offensive to people in that neighborhood. Thus, she should have the right to express her opposition to war in the Persian Gulf or, for that matter, her approval of it were that the case.

For government to begin limiting the constitutionally-protected rights of Americans to speak their minds — or to proclaim their opposition to anything via a sign in their yard or the window of their home, in a responsible manner — goes against the very reason this nation was founded.

Schools need state income tax, not levies on property

We're a whole six months and an election day away from the 74th session of the Texas Legislature, but already one thing seems certain.

When it convenes, the Legislature will trot out the caldron with the school formula it had when it adjourned last — rancid, moldy and every bit as unfair as before. And no doubt lawmakers will pronounce it good.

It's an intoxicating brew. With it, the Legislature convinced itself it had done its job in 1992 and — get this — achieved its goal without raising taxes.

It wasn't long after lawmakers clinked their goblets in revelry and skipped town that local property owners began to realize they'd been scammed. The Legislature didn't contribute enough to schools to make up for enrollment increases. School districts would have to make up the difference by raising property taxes.

This week the figures came out — a 6 percent overall statewide increase in property taxes, of which residential property owners shouldered the biggest share. You call that no new taxes? . . .

A state income tax is the way to finance schools. It also would allow for a rollback of property taxes. Indeed, a state income tax would not be acceptable if it didn't roll back property taxes.

Unfortunately, it seems that progressive leaders such as Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and Gov. Ann Richards have given up on these politically risky ideas with the aforementioned election day approaching. In addition, they've been mouthing again the pledge that if elected, Texas can get by through its next session with, are you ready . . .?

No new taxes. Uh-huh.

Places that produce nuclear waste should have to bury it

Dr. Helen Caldicott makes a very good point. To begin solving the problem of the burial of nuclear waste, she believes the waste must be buried in the cities and states that produce it.

That kind of accountability and proximity, says the co-founder of Physicians for Social Responsibility, would help the United States zero in on the nuclear industry and its byproducts. It would force the United States to deal with the health and environmental problems it is bequeathing to its descendants.

We agree. Out of sight often does mean out of mind. Sending waste to faraway places in other states has allowed people to look away as the waste makes its way to communities that may be unknowingly accepting waste dumps because of the promise of jobs.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, June 17th, the 168th day of 1994. There are 197 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 17th, 1972, President Nixon's eventual downfall began with the arrest of five burglars inside the Democratic national headquarters in Washington, D.C.'s Watergate complex.

On this date:

In 1775, the Revolutionary War Battle of Bunker Hill took place near Boston.

Congressman sees genocidal waterfall

WASHINGTON — Deep in the heart of Africa, Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, recently found himself staring out at a gleaming waterfall surrounded by thick foliage. It was, he says, some of the most picturesque scenery he had ever seen.

Anderson

"Then all the sudden," he told us, "you saw bodies coming over (the waterfall), and you said 'That's not what I think it is.' And then one and then two and then three and then boom, boom, boom, one right after another. . . . It was just numbing."

As a presidential observer in Rwanda earlier this month, Hall witnessed the grim results of two months of tribal warfare that has resulted in an estimated 400,000 deaths. The bloated, mutilated and often headless bodies of innocent civilians have clogged the Kagera River between Rwanda and Tanzania in recent weeks. The number of Tutsis — the minority tribe that's being slaughtered by the majority Hutus — has been cut in half over the last two months from 18 percent to 9 percent of the population, Hall says.

Hall will report his findings to President Clinton this week. There is no doubt in Hall's mind that the ethnic bloodshed is an act of genocide, and his report will urge the administration to label it as such.

This could put the administration in a tight spot. Under the Genocide Convention of 1948, signatory countries are required by international law to find the guilty parties and bring them to justice once killings are labeled an act of genocide.

So far, the White House and State Department have fudged and fumbled over using the word "genocide" to describe the slaughter in Rwanda. Officials will only say that "based on evidence we have seen or observed on the ground, we have every reason to believe that acts of genocide have occurred in Rwanda."

A State Department official says the United States is waiting for a special United Nations report on human rights in Rwanda before deciding if the killings will be labeled genocide. An international peacekeeping force the U.N. security council agreed to send to Rwanda has also been delayed by the Pentagon's red tape. It will take at least another month before 5,500 U.N. soldiers are deployed to Rwanda, for that's how long it will take the Pentagon to deliver the 46 armored personnel carriers it agreed to loan to the mission.

Hall stops short of calling for armed American intervention. That doesn't mean America can't lead by exhausting its legal options. "No country, no government is calling it genocide," Hall told our associate Andrew Conte. "I think we could prevent a lot more deaths if we could get involved first legally and then in all the other ways we're supposed to. . . . We have every right in the world to put a stop to this."

While America fiddles, Rwanda continues to burn.

Hall is no stranger to human suffering. As chairman of the Congressional Hunger Caucus, Hall has travelled extensively through the world's most wretched environs. None of his travels prepared him for Rwanda. "When I saw 290,000 refugees in one camp fleeing across the border with great fear and (with) a lot of corpses along the river kind of marking their path, that was the worst thing I have seen."

CHARLEY REESE

Clinton should 'be honest' about Vietnam

President Bill Clinton acquitted himself reasonably well in Normandy, but then the South's mouth just couldn't leave well enough alone. He had to say in an interview how tough it was to resist the Vietnam War because he loved the military so much.

Reese

There are two things wrong with that statement. Like most of his ilk, he was not resisting the Vietnam War; he was busy evading service in it. There's a difference. Secondly, he said in the letter to the ROTC commander at the University of Arkansas, in which he thanked him for "saving me from the draft," that young men of his generation loathed the military.

I respect honest war resisters who are willing to go to jail for their beliefs. I respect genuine conscientious objectors. I don't respect people like Clinton, who evaded his legal obligation to serve in the military and sought to disguise it by being "against the war." He wasn't being asked to approve of the war; he was being asked to fulfill his legal obligation to serve his country in the military. He might not even have been sent to Vietnam. It was military service that he ran from.

Nobody asked those men who died at Normandy and in dozens of other places around the world whether or not they approved of the war, thought it was being properly conducted or believed it met the criteria of a just war. They were just told their country needed them, and they went to war. When Clinton's country needed him, he went to Oxford.

He certainly wasn't the Lone Ranger. Nor did the Vietnam War have anything to do with it. Every war has its shirkers and draft dodgers. A lot of men's patriotism is like a lot of folks' religion — it's OK as long as it doesn't inconvenience them. It's just that during the Vietnam War era you had a lot of articulate middle and upper-middle class kids who could think of lots of reasons they were opposed to the Vietnam War. The main one, of course, was that bullets hurt.

The Vietnam War was no more unjust than any other war. Americans were trying to help a people avoid dictatorial rule by a bunch of communist thugs. Despite the sacrifices of the American military men, the politicians lost their nerve and pulled out. The communist thugs imposed their dictatorial rule, and it was and is just as bad as everyone predicted it would be. Thugs who murder political dissenters are no damned good, no matter what their nationality or ideology.

It would be better if Clinton could be honest. I realize that's like saying it would be better if the desert were wet. But I don't think the American people would hold it against him if he just said, "When I was a young man, I ran from military obligation and I regret doing that and will try to make it up in some way."

But no, he gives us this can of corn about how much he loved the military and how it hurt his soul to have to oppose that "unjust" war, opposition which he says he still does not regret. It is, by the by, characteristic of sociopathic personalities that they never express guilt or remorse about anything.

Well, I try not to regret anything, either, but, boy howdy, do I regret voting for Clinton. Fortunately, the majority of the people in my state had better sense than I did, so my vote didn't really count in getting him into the White House. But I regret it anyhow. I had the red parts about Bush and so I voted for Clinton. That's like stubbing your toe and in your anger shooting yourself in the other foot.

Listening to Clinton kind of makes you nostalgic for Calvin Coolidge, who was famous for never saying much. Once, when Coolidge's wife had been laid up with a cold and couldn't go to church, she asked him what the preacher talked about. "Sin," Coolidge said. Well, his wife went on, what did he say about it? "He was against it," Coolidge said.

That's what I want: a taciturn man for president.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Lone star 'left-outers' come into their own

FORT WORTH — When the Texas Republican party elected attorney Tom Pauken to its chairmanship, a severe case of excitement broke out among the delegates, who whooped, whistled, cheered, backslapped and high-fived til the world looked level. It was as if the U.S. cavalry had arrived, except in their present mood, Texas Republicans wouldn't be calling on the federal government for anything other than prompt withdrawal from the affairs of civilized men and women.

Murchison

Pauken, a hard-nosed Reaganite who ran the federal ACTION agency in the early '80s, brings to his crucial leadership post a passion for the dispossessed, the passed-over, the ignored.

Sounds a bit like Ross Perot, doesn't it? This is no coincidence. Left-outness is the burning sensation that drives political change in the '90s, and Republicans, of all supposedly smug and complacent folk, bid fair to run away with the issue. Provided they understand its importance.

The coalition that elected Pauken was composed, broadly speaking, of left-outers, from businessmen worried about socialized medicine, to family activists worried about crime and schools and condoms, to grassroots types wondering when their party was finally going to start trading serious blows with the other party.

Gov. Ann Richards, with the blood-curdling war whoops that constituted her speech to the Democratic State Convention, can only have whetted the activists' thirst for combat.

The left-outers are ready to rumble. At the convention, they adopted a platform that touches all the conservative bases — spending control, tax limitation, the Second Amendment, right to life, no condoms in the schools, etc. The abortion issue alone kicked up a fuss, with the minority of pro-choice Republicans coming down, for all practical purposes, on the same side as Bill and Hillary Clinton.

Gov. Richards, at her own convention, assailed the Republicans as religious kooks and "mongers of hate." That ole dog won't hunt. However, it was glad enough to bite Gov. Ann on the ankle. Her scornful words came across less as a defense of toleration than as a put-down of religion and religious people, who are the majority in America.

One reason the left-outers feel left out is that political institutions have for so long turned a blind eye to the cultural crisis: family disintegration, bad schools and the like. Another reason of course is deep dismay at how hard they have to work to support the political class. Under the Richards administration, Republican gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush told the convention, the state budget has "grown four times as fast as inflation and incredibly four-and-one-half times as fast as the federal budget grew. Texas now has more state employees than New York." Yippie-ai-ay, and welcome to the New Texas.

You say there's nothing radically novel in the phenomenon of pent-up passion uniting outsiders against insiders? That may be. A similar revolt sent Ronald Reagan to the White House and Jimmy Carter back to Plains. But today's discontents are farther advanced and the stakes, accordingly, higher than ever. Ross Perot tapped into these discontents with dramatic success, as did Bill Clinton before he came clean — post-inauguration, naturally — about his agenda.

The opportunities for coalition-building are manifold. That is one thing Tom Pauken is about — joining diverse sorts of conservatives in a common enterprise. Tex Lezar, the GOP candidate for lieutenant governor (the most inherently powerful post in state government), addressed the state Libertarian Party convention and noted numerous mutualities of outlook and interest. The Libertarians, who polled over 100,000 votes the last time out, declined to nominate one of their own to run against Lezar. Hmmmmm.

The left-outers are coming into their own, and a dramatic consolidation in the politics of Texas may be in the offing. Flowers that bloom in the spring, tra la, vanish by fall, but the present bouquet — from the standpoint of the frustrated, the impatient, the fed-up — is unusually thick and luxuriant.

Thoughts now turn to Simpson's troubled past, his juke step to stardom

By Kenneth J. Garcia and Jake Curtis
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — He had blinding speed that left even the swiftest defensive backs clutching air and grass. He had moves so elusive that it appeared as if the videotape had been spliced.

And his grace and power were not confined to the football field; his celebrity transcended that of many Hollywood heavyweights. He was famous enough to be known by millions of people simply as "The Juice."

Today, O. J. Simpson is a suspect in the deaths of his ex-wife and her friend, and the rough edges of his past are coming under the kind of scrutiny that might have been obscured by his status as a gridiron hero.

Simpson's much-admired modesty stemmed from his very humble roots. Most people in San Francisco remember him as a well-meaning kid who used his breathtaking athletic ability to escape a tough Potrero Hill neighborhood. They choose to overlook that Simpson was a street kid who ran in a gang, tangled with the law and largely neglected school.

His juke step to stardom began as a Galileo High School fullback, a remarkable feat because Simpson was born with rickets and had to wear leg braces. As he grew older he ran often on playground fields and occasionally into trouble.

In past interviews, he acknowledged that he seemed more likely to end up in a correctional facility than in the pro football Hall of Fame. His scrapes with the law were largely brushed aside because people wanted to believe that the handsome, smiling athlete was really as sweet as his photograph suggested.

His friends say they never knew the former football great as the man who pleaded no contest to wife beating in 1989, who allegedly yelled "I'll kill you" as he slapped and kicked her. They contend that the smooth, joking television commentator does not resemble a man who a therapist claims stalked his wife even after their divorce.

Several of Simpson's friends told reporters Wednesday that, despite a growing pile of incriminating evidence linking him to the slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Lyle Goldman, they believe Simpson is being framed.

Simpson is in seclusion in his Brentwood mansion, awaiting a decision from Los Angeles homicide detectives. People who know him insist that Simpson is the warm, caring, gentle man he is almost always portrayed to be.

"If, and I say if, he did something like this, (then) he flipped out," said Vince Tringali, the former head coach of St. Ignatius High School who was largely responsible for Simpson being recruited to USC. "Because the O.J. that I knew would never do this. I'm shocked."

On the football field, Simpson suspended disbelief every fall weekend for two decades. By the time he left City College of San Francisco for USC, he had broken enough junior college records to fill a press booklet. He led the nation's top-ranked team to a Rose Bowl victory. And by the time he left the Trojans, he had a Heisman Trophy and was the top pick in the pro draft.

But before he became one of the world's greatest athletes in two sports — football and track — Simpson was just another gangly 15-year-old with an attitude. In a 1985 interview, Simpson recalled that as a sophomore at Galileo High School, he was arrested for being involved in a gang fight and spent the weekend at juvenile hall.

He said his life changed after that weekend when he came home to find "my absolute hero," San Francisco sports legend Willie Mays, waiting in his living room. There were no speeches, no "stay away from drugs" admonishments. Just a day with Willie Mays.

"We all have our heroes, and we tend to view them as larger than life," Simpson said. "But to have that hero pay attention to me, it made me feel that I must be special, too."

On a football field, he made the spectacular routine, turning 5-yard losses into 80-yard touchdowns and making true believers out of opposing coaches like the hot-tempered Woody Hayes. He wore No. 32 like his hero Jim Brown, and like Brown, he dominated his sport for nearly 10 years before playing out his last injury-plagued years with the then-hapless San Francisco 49ers.

But even then, Simpson remained magic. Season tickets were in abundance in those days. O.J. actually brought the fans back to Candlestick.

Although Simpson was not a superstar in high school, he starred in one of the most memorable prep games in city history. When he was a senior, Galileo, which had lost 19 of its previous 23 games, played St. Ignatius, which had won 23 in a row.

St. Ignatius went ahead, 25-10, "and we were ready to go in and finish the game off," recalled Trangali, then St. Ignatius' coach, "and our fullback fumbled in the air, and he (Simpson) caught it and scored on a 99-yard run."

Simpson then scored on pass receptions of 80 yards and 60 yards as Galileo notched one of the biggest upsets in San Francisco prep history.

"It would take us 10 minutes to score," said Tringali, "and it would take them 10 seconds. I called USC the next day."

Colleges became interested in him after he played at City College of San Francisco. In his two years at CCSF, Simpson rushed for 2,526 yards in 270 carries, an average of 9.4 yards per carry. The team was 17-2-1 in his two years. In one game against San Jose City College, Simpson ran for 304 yards and scored six touchdowns.

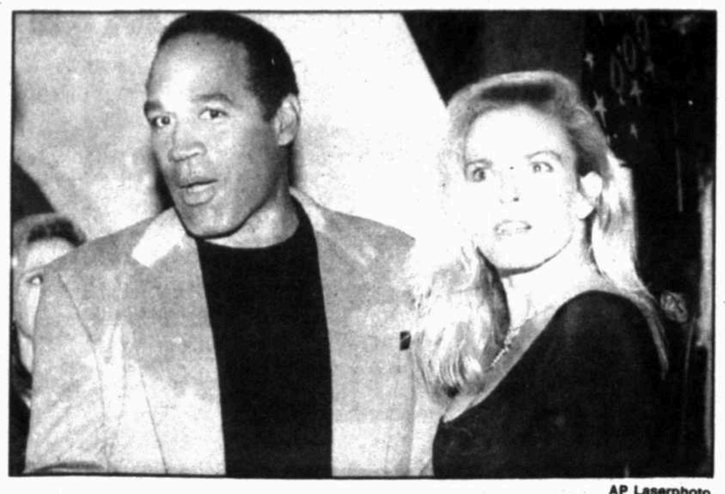

Yet even after gaining fame as a pro football star and sometime actor, Simpson said he never really changed that much. "I've always liked to hang out on corners," he told The Chronicle in 1979. Now it might be Rodeo in Beverly Hills instead of Mariposa on Potrero Hill, but essentially it's the same."

In previous biographies, Simpson said he always wanted to return to Potrero Hill to work with underprivileged children, but he never pulled himself away from the bright lights of Los Angeles. His friends say he grew to love being a celebrity and enjoying the millions he earned from football, endorsements, film acting and television.

His very public life played a large part in his divorce from his first wife, Marguerite Whitley, his high school sweetheart whom he married at USC. The couple had three children before divorcing in 1979, the same year Simpson's son tragically drowned in a swimming pool accident.

But until this week, Simpson was remembered almost exclusively for his gridiron greatness and his television presence, a memory that his longtime friends still want to embrace.

"O.J. is an institution," Tringali said. "(If this is true), the problem is the residue. What is it going to do to young people? They should be told that it can happen to anybody."

Recent rains help prevent fires

■ Number of fires in Midland, surrounding area drops from last year with aid of heavy rains, officials say.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

While the dry, windy summer months are usually prime time for fires in Midland and the surrounding area, local officials say the number of fires for this time of year is down, thanks to several heavy rains.

"We have been very lucky," said Assistant Fire Marshal Lon Dominguez. "With the rain we have had recently, the grass has really greened up and fires have been down. And, we haven't had any that have gotten out of control or been very major."

The Midland Fire Department recorded only 30 fires during May, a significant drop from last May's total of 92.

However, Dominguez said the potential for a major fire is always present during the summer months.

"Our main problems during the summer are the dry grass and high winds we get," he said. "Just because we haven't had a major fire doesn't mean it can't happen, especially if it stays hot and dry."

Dominguez warned residents to be extra careful when dealing with fire this summer, particularly while barbecuing.

"First of all, never let kids be involved in the starting of the fire without adult supervision," he said. "And, don't use gasoline to start a barbecue. Always use charcoal lighter fluid. Gasoline is highly explosive."

He also warned against leaving a fire unattended or not making sure that barbecue coals are completely out.

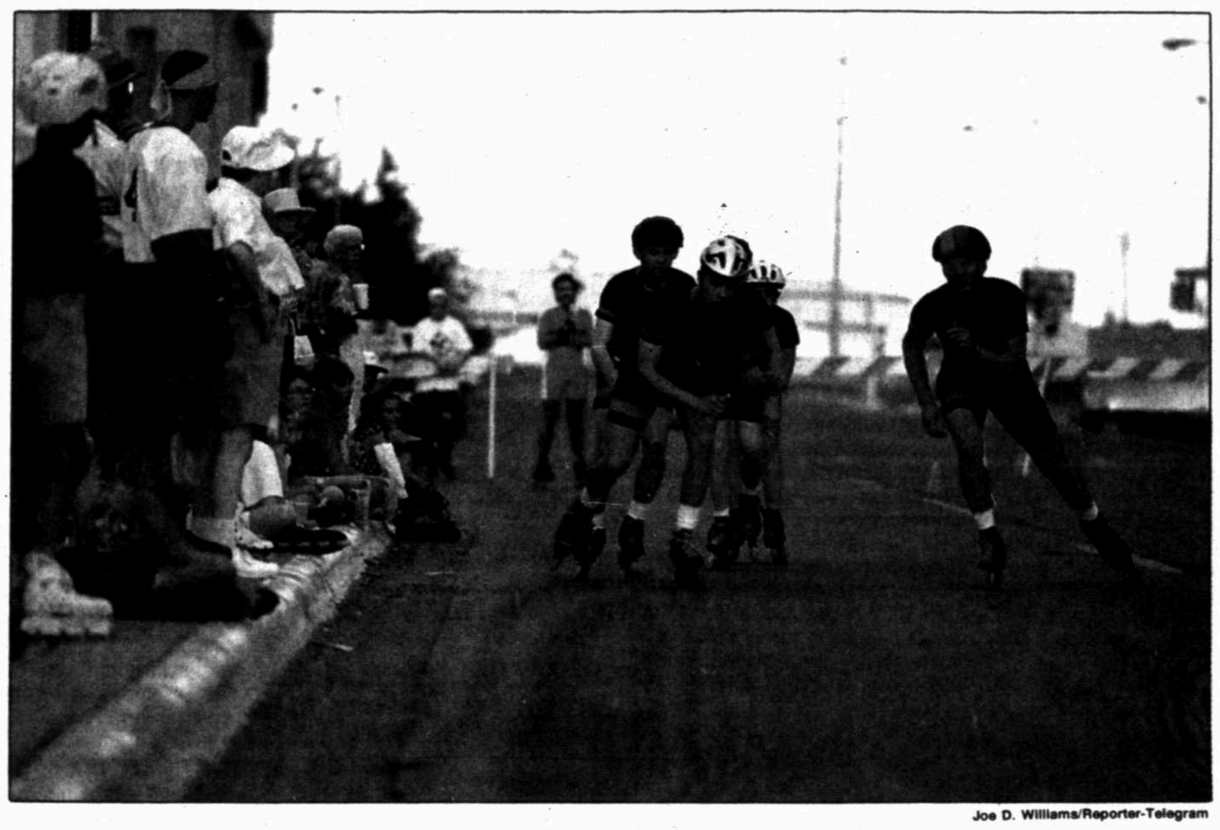

"Those coals can go for a long time," he said. "They can burn into the next day."

Fireworks also have a lethal potential for damage, especially if they are used improperly. And, with July 4 festivities just around the corner, Dominguez said residents should make plans to attend local fireworks shows rather than shooting fireworks off themselves.

"There are always fireworks at Angels Stadium and other places in Midland and Odessa," he said. "It saves money and it's a lot safer."

Fireworks are illegal to possess or set off inside

Cable company: Merger will not affect customers

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The $2.3 billion merger of Times Mirror Co.'s cable television units — including Midland's Dimension Cable TV — into Cox Enterprises' Cox Cable Communications Inc. will result in "no big wholesale changes now" said Missy Orr-Ryan, general manager of Dimension Cable.

"It really is mutually beneficial," Ms. Orr-Ryan said of the merger, particularly since the "telecommunications industry is changing dramatically" due to "convergence, new regulations, technology advancements (and) competition."

When the merger is completed, the international Cox Cable Communications will be the nation's third largest multiple-system operator. It will serve 3.1 million customers, Ms. Orr-Ryan said.

Before the merger, Cox Cable ranked sixth in size among cable-TV operators, and Times Mirror ranked 12th.

Though unrelated to the merger, cable TV rates in Midland will be "going down" in July, Ms. Orr-Ryan said. But the rate change has "absolutely nothing to do with this merger."

Cable rates are set by the Federal Communications Commission, which, incidentally, does not allow a company "to recover cost of acquisition."

Texas Commerce unveils new cash machine

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Texas Commerce Bank, Midland, on Thursday unveiled its latest cash machine, located in the waiting area of the new wing at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

"We were given the hospital's depository account," explained Kathy Farned, communications officer with the bank. "They asked if we would put in a cash machine. Normally we don't have much traffic in that area . . . but we put it in as a gesture toward the hospital. It's actually getting a lot of use."

The machine was installed three weeks ago and was officially unveiled Thursday at a ribbon cutting ceremony.

"It's for anyone here at the hospital, such as those who rush to the hospital in an emergency situation..."

— Kathy Farned, communications officer

Ms. Farned said the machine only distributes cash, which distinguishes it from automatic teller machines. ATMs accept deposits and require a Pulse card. The user must have an account at a financial institution affiliated with the Pulse system.

"It's for anyone here at the hospital, such as those who rush to the hospital in an emergency situation and don't have any money, particularly at night or on the weekend," she said.

The bank has enrolled a number of employees in its "Bank at Work" program, in which their paychecks are directly deposited into their accounts by the hospital's payroll department. They can then use the machine to get cash from their accounts.

The machine is accessible 24 hours a day, seven days a week. It is located in a secure area within viewing distance of the Pink Ladies station and around the corner from the information desk.

Samaritan, hospital form spiritual bond

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

The Samaritan Counseling Center of West Texas Inc. and Glenwood Hospital Inc. are working together to provide more comprehensive care for Glenwood patients.

"Basically, Samaritan and Glenwood have formed an association so that Samaritan can provide a spiritual track that complements and integrates spiritual principles and values into the general psychiatric and chemical dependency program," said the Rev. Jerry Kelly, executive director of the pastoral counseling center.

"Patients can use their spiritual resources to help them learn better coping skills, obtain the most benefit from the treatment programs that are offered in the hospital and have a higher success rate when they leave the hospital."

Glenwood, a psychiatric hospital with a chemical dependency program, and the Samaritan Counseling Center are, "excited about this association," Kelly said.

"Glenwood is offering an important service to the community. It should be a real nice long-lasting association."

Kelly

The mission of the Samaritan Counseling Center is to "express God's love to hurting people; help people move toward wholeness in spirit, mind and body; and complement the ministry of the religious community," according to a fact sheet from Samaritan.

Juneteenth celebration's activities to culminate on weekend

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Juneteenth — the commemoration of the emancipation of black slaves in Texas on June 19, 1865 — is being celebrated in Midland, with the center of activities scheduled for Saturday.

The Juneteenth celebration kicked off Thursday evening — with a volleyball tournament and a choir presentation — at Washington Park and will continue through Sunday.

Shirley Howard, chairwoman of Juneteenth festivities sponsored by the Tall City Lions Club, said she anticipates a good turnout at this year's celebration.

Saturday events will begin with the annual Juneteenth parade.

The parade — which is to start at 10 a.m. Saturday — will begin at Nobles Avenue and Lamesa Road and continue down Lamesa Road to Indiana Avenue where the procession will turn right and proceed to Washington Park.

"I think it's going to be a lot bigger than last year," Ms. Howard said.

The festivities will then begin at Washington Park. About 10 booths, in addition to trailers and other setups, will be at the location.

"There are food booths, clothing booths and game booths," Ms. Howard said.

In addition to the Tall City Lions Club festivities, other events are taking place around town during Juneteenth.

The Texas Association of Roots Historical Arts Councils and the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs Inc., will present Tom Braxton & No Compromise at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, at the Midland Hilton. The performance costs $15 for advance tickets and $17.50 at the door. For information, call 682-2864.

The following is a list of scheduled events, all to take place at Washington Park:

Friday:

7 p.m. - Barbecue-tasting contest

8:30 p.m. - Mr. and Miss Juneteenth Pageant

9:30 p.m. - Fashions Then and Now; Hats on Parade by Ms. A's

Saturday:

11:30 a.m. - Opening remarks and presentation of the history and meaning of Juneteenth by local dignitaries

DAY WATCH

Lights & Sirens

Q. How many gallons of water can a fire hydrant discharge?

A. This depends on the size of the discharge openings, number of hose lines and the pressure at the discharge. A hydrant has two openings 2.5 inches in diameter and one opening of 4.5 inches in diameter with a pressure average of 60 psi — the gallons per minute can be above a thousand. Using the math formula of 30 times the diameter squared times the square root of the pressure equals the gallons per minute discharge. The large diameter hose of 5 inches can carry in the thousands of gallons per minute to the fire engine.

Questions about emergency medical services or firefighting should be sent to Lights & Siren, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, 79702-1152.

Outdoor concert

Eddie Coker will perform an outdoor concert at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at Pages & Prints, Wadley Avenue at Garfield Street. He will follow the show with three mini-concerts inside the store at noon, 1 p.m. and 2 p.m. For more information call Pages & Prints, 570-5173.

Christian speaker

Tony Campolo, Christian speaker and author of 23 books, will speak at Chaparral Center at 7 p.m. today, Saturday and Sunday. The speeches, which will center around the theme "Fully Alive: The Passion and Purpose of the Christian Life," will be free and are open to the public.

Bee attack

WESLACO — A 74-year-old man was stung about 200 times Thursday by bees whose hive he disturbed while mowing his lawn, authorities said.

Rosalio Munoz of Edcouch was treated and released Thursday afternoon at Knapp Medical Center in Weslaco, hospital spokeswoman Debby Rektorik said.

Munoz's wife, Hillary, 66, also was treated at the hospital for several bee stings, Ms. Rektorik said.

Edcouch Fire Chief Oscar Garza said Munoz apparently bumped his lawnmower into a water meter enclosure where the bees had been building a large hive.

The bees attacked him with about 200 stings to his face, chest and back, Garza said.

Samples of the bees were sent to a lab to determine whether they are Africanized, commonly known as "killer bees," or the less aggressive European honeybee variety.

Other survivors include his wife, Malinda Frances Sullivan of Snyder; a daughter, Lavern Dooley of Hermleigh; five grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren.

BOND: Samaritan provides spiritual track

(From 1B)

"The Samaritan policy is to never force our own theology onto a person, but to honor that person's own religious tradition and spiritual heritage," Kelly said.

"We provide a general devotion for the whole hospital for those people who are participating in the spiritual track. We have group therapy, didactic therapy, individual therapy, Bible study and goal setting."

The 20-year-old Samaritan Center — a non-profit agency — is governed by a board of directors representing a broad cross section of the communities served.

The board — comprised of representatives from the medical, religious, business and education communities — has equal representation from Midland, Odessa, Monahans, Big Spring and Andrews.

The Rev. Jarrell Sharp, pastor at Midland's St. Luke's United Methodist Church, is the board president.

"He is very excited that this is taking our 20-year history of providing positive religious health care and integrating it into the hospital setting," Kelly said.

At this time, the program does not include after-care.

"We will send them back to their churches," Kelly said. "We will provide individual outpatient counseling if they want it and choose to have it so that the support will be there when they complete the program, but we're not designing a specific after-care program."

The majority — 75 percent — of the center's $400,000 annual budget is generated through client fees. The remaining is donated by individuals, foundations, corporations and area churches.

The center does not receive funds from United Way, nor does it receive any state or federal monies.

The standard fee for counseling is $70 a session. Fees are adjusted based on a sliding scale with a minimum fee of $25. The average fee collected is $48. The cost of operating the center is $61 per client hour. The $13 difference is made up through donations.

Those implementing the spiritual program at Glenwood include the Rev. Ed Rowley, a senior therapist at Samaritan and the program's director; the Rev. Ron Meyer, the chaplain at Glenwood and a therapist at Samaritan; and Barbara Pierce, Glenwood's music therapist.

The idea to establish such an association originated with Nancy Cranton, Glenwood's administrator. She wanted to fill a vacancy created when the Rapha Program did not renew its contract.

Rapha "is a religious-based program," Ms. Cranton said. "They told me in December they decided not to renew their contract with us. But it was filling such a good need here, I didn't want to lose that.

"I knew that Samaritan was over there and we just started talking with them to see if they could help us out. We had quite a few meetings with Jerry and it seemed like a good match. Plus they are local and have a good reputation."

The program began May 1. An open house was held earlier this week at Glenwood to introduce the program.

"We are in our sixth week now and the response has been very, very positive from the patients and from their families," Kelly said.

"The staff has given us good feedback that this has been helpful to the whole climate of the hospital."

"I feel like we have really been blessed," Ms. Cranton said. "This is working out really well. The patients have been very pleased and the staff really likes it. We've had nothing but positive feedback about their therapists. They are here six days a week, and the patients' needs are really being met."

Currently, around 47 percent of the patients at Glenwood have chosen to receive this optional treatment, Ms. Cranton said.

"That's pretty good," she said. "We're looking at running this into our day treatment program also. We don't have it yet. But that's definitely on our menu to do. And that will take care of people who don't have to be hospitalized, but just need that day treatment experience."

SPEAK: Business breakfast to be Tuesday

(From 1B)

a.m. to 8:30 a.m. — Exxon Co. U.S.A.'s Mike Finch will provide details on how local companies can do business with Exxon and other large organizations.

Finch, the Southwestern Division Materials negotiator, will discuss selling products and services to large organizations with emphasis on buyer/seller relations, including opportunities with Exxon.

At the networking breakfast, each attendee is introduced and approximately eight to 10 vendors are given two minutes each to describe their services.

Buyers talk about their upcoming projects and specific requirements. After the meeting, those attending exchange business cards.

Tuesday's meeting will be held at the Midland College Student Center, 3600 N. Garfield St. Cost is $5 a person, and includes breakfast.

Business persons should call the Midland College South Campus, 684-4100, if they wish to talk about their business at the breakfast.

the city limits. Fines range from $1 to $2,000. The standard fine is $500.

Residents who are in the county are urged to use caution when setting off fireworks. Safe guidelines for discharging fireworks include:

- Discharge fireworks only in open, calm areas, away from brush, automobiles, houses or power lines.
- Keep water handy.
- Buy fireworks only from a licensed vendor.
- Never let children use fireworks.
- Stay a safe distance from an ignited firework and never touch a firework once it has been lit.
- Cool the remains of fireworks with water.

CABLE: Customers to see drop in rates

(From 1B)

Atlanta-based Cox Enterprises will own about 80 percent of Cox Cable. James Kennedy, who is Cox Enterprises' chairman and chief executive officer, will serve as chairman of Cox Cable.

"The Times Mirror Cable operating philosophy and culture are very similar to ours," Kennedy said. "They operate large, stand-alone systems in growth areas. . . . And we're both driven by quality customer service with a deep commitment to the communities we serve."

In addition to the merger, Times Mirror and Cox Cable have agreed to form a partnership in developing cable programming. Times Mirror, which will manage the partnership, will invest up to $200 million in the venture; Cox Cable will invest up to $100 million.

Times Mirror's "The Outdoor Life Channel," which is to be launched next year, is to be the first network funded by the partnership.

Times Mirror, based in Los Angeles, in addition to publishing the Los Angeles Times and the Baltimore Sun, also produces such magazines as Outdoor Life, Field & Stream and The Sporting News.

"Last year, Times Mirror took a really good, hard look and reviewed their position in the cable industry," Ms. Orr-Ryan said.

"And they felt that the company, given their mission as a publisher and as an information provider, was really best suited to be an information provider vs. a network (cable) provider.

"They wanted to really make use of their magazine, newspaper, and professional publishing companies and get into more interactive media and programming.

"They are just going to try to extend their editorial expertise into multi-media," she said.

In a prepared statement, Times Mirror President Robert Erburu said, "With this merger, we have committed our future to the content side of the information highway and have gained substantial resources to pursue our growth strategy."

In the meantime, Cox Cable, which has extensive networks throughout the United States, will gain an advantage in the merger to "compete in this new (communications) environment," Ms. Orr-Ryan said.

Aside from its cable business, Cox Enterprises operates television systems, publishes daily newspapers, and owns and operates television and radio stations.

In Midland, Dimension Cable — which serves 30,600 households — is spending $5 million in putting in 600 miles of fiber-optics lines to replace its coaxial cable.

For viewers, the result of the change will be a "much clearer, sharper picture" and "more reliable" equipment and service, since the "number of electronics" is reduced in fiber optics, Ms. Orr-Ryan said. There is "less to go wrong.

"When the network is complete," she said, "we will be able to go from 54, where we are now, to 150 channels. And we will be able to do phone and data transmissions."

Gay couples sue city over insurance

AUSTIN (AP) — Three gay couples are suing the city after voters decided to cancel health insurance benefits for the unmarried partners of city government employees.

The lawsuit filed in state court alleges breach of contract and unfair insurance practices. But attorney Patrick Wiseman says the real issue is equality and whether employees receive the same pay and benefits for the same work.

"This is a case about whether there are constitutional rights to be treated equally," Wiseman said. "If there are, then this is a prime case for the courts to vindicate those rights."

Sentencing begins for 8 Davidians who declare their innocence

■ Some Branch Davidian members condemned justice system, U.S. District Judge Walter Smith; sentences are expected today.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Disciples of doomsday preacher David Koresh restated their innocence Thursday before a federal judge who will sentence them for crimes connected to the deaths of four federal agents.

Some of the eight Branch Davidian defendants refused to beg for leniency and condemned U.S. District Judge Walter Smith and the justice system. Others asked for mercy, saying they simply wanted to get on with their lives.

The judge is expected to sentence the Davidians today.

"I hope, Judge Smith, that you have a squeaky clean record. I hope you can stand before God and I hope you have everything right because we're all going to stand before God," said defendant Renos Avraam.

Livingstone Fagan, like the others, made references to the Bible and evoked an outburst of support from onlookers.

"We are innocent — absolutely, without a doubt whatsoever. We know we are innocent," Fagan said, as a man in the audience shouted "Amen" and several spectators broke into applause.

Jaime Castillo told the judge "the government should be on trial for its actions."

But other Davidians talked more about themselves.

Defendant Kevin Whitecliff said he wants to return to his wife and two children, who keep asking him when he'll be coming home.

"I hope that you do extend as much mercy as you can on all of us as a group," Whitecliff said. "I've been under duress. I've spent 15 months in jail. I'm not the same individual I was."

The final Davidian to address the court, soft-spoken Graeme Craddock, said he is a non-violent man who should receive "credit" for telling the truth and cooperating with authorities.

"I've got many questions about what happened myself . . . I certainly had no wish or desire for any of those agents to be injured," Craddock said.

Noting his reluctance to speak in public, "even in the best of circumstances," Craddock evoked an amiable response from Smith.

"I'd say you did pretty well, Mr. Craddock," the judge said.

Seven of the eight defendants took turns speaking in court.

Uncle's lesson to do right thing hits snag

FORT WORTH (AP) — David Warner's nephew wanted to keep the $19,670 in cash he found at a ranch near Little Elm, but Warner wanted the youth to turn in the money to authorities.

"I wanted to teach him a lesson about doing the right thing, so I said, 'No, this money belongs to someone; let's call the police and give the rightful owner a chance at coming forward,' and that's what we did," he said.

The Little Elm man figured that if no one claimed the money, his nephew, Matt, would get it back. He didn't suspect the Denton County Sheriff's Department was going to lay claim to the cash.

The money ultimately was returned to the family, after Warner hired an attorney to fight the department's attempts to seize the money as drug proceeds under state forfeiture laws. The district attorney recently dropped the forfeiture suit.

A few days after the April 7 discovery was turned in, a sheriff's deputy called Warner's wife and told her it was "probably drug money." For that reason, the deputy said, the family shouldn't claim the money at the end of a 90-day waiting period.

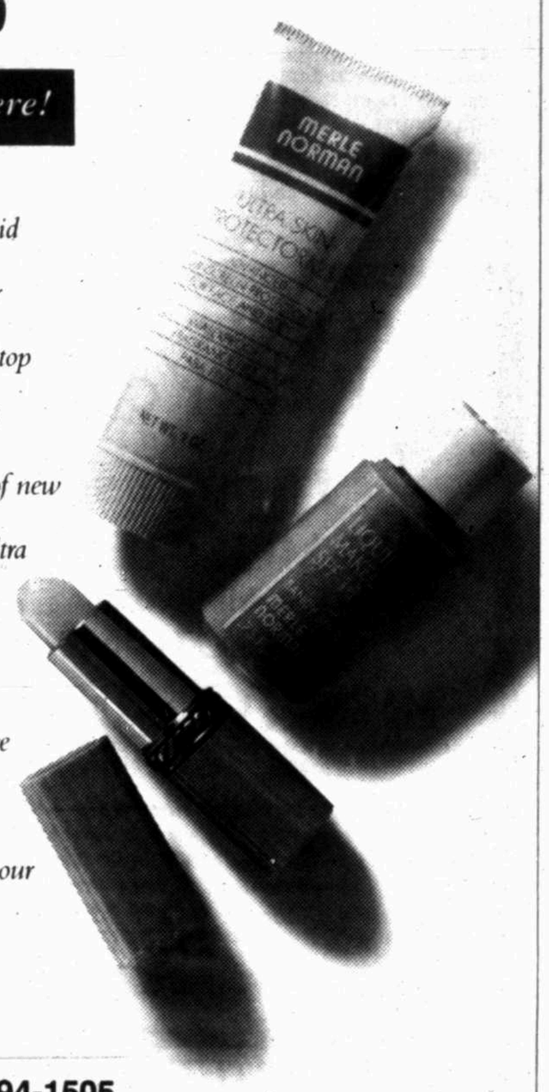

"She felt like he was threatening her, in a way, because he mentioned that drug people have been known to hurt people and their horses and such," Warner said.

That was the first hint that the sheriff's department might try to seize the money, Warner said.

Levelland teen gets maximum punishment for man's murder

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Levelland teen-ager depicted as a victim of sexual abuse was sentenced to the maximum punishment Thursday for killing his alleged assailant's husband.

The Texas Youth Commission will confine the 15-year-old boy until he turns 18, when a judge will decide whether he goes to prison for no more than 40 years.

Jurors took three hours Thursday to find the teen-ager guilty of delinquent conduct by shooting Jackie Condren in the back Sept. 19.

The jury rejected defense claims that the boy wasn't responsible for the shooting because he incurred mental illness when he started having sex with Condren's wife three years ago.

Hockley County District Attorney Gary Goff called the murder "horrible, despicable, cowardly."

Goff pointed out that the boy already has spent time in juvenile custody for sexually assaulting a 4-year-old girl. He asked the jury: "What message do you want to send these young, arrogant, out-of-control punks who want to carry a pistol?"

Prosecutors called the teen-ager "just plain mean" and denounced the idea he was so traumatized he couldn't help being violent.

But defense attorney Ray Lopez insisted his client was a victim and needed treatment. Lopez pleaded for leniency.

"I'm not going to stand here and tell you he was a little angel," Lopez said in closing arguments. "Does that sound like the actions of a normal child? That is a child crying out for help."

North knew about drug trafficking, ex-agent says

AUSTIN (AP) — Oliver North knew large shipments of cocaine were being smuggled into the United States by mercenary pilots he'd hired to assist Contras in Nicaragua, according to a former federal agent.

Celerino "Cele" Castillo, who was a supervisory agent for the Drug Enforcement Administration in El Salvador, said he told a U.S. ambassador to El Salvador as well as then-Vice President Bush in 1986 about the drug smuggling in North's Contra supply operation.

No action was taken, Castillo said.

"(Former Marine Lt. Col.) Oliver North was running the operation. His pilots were known drug traffickers listed in government files and these people were being given U.S. visas," Castillo said Thursday in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Castillo's account was first told to The Texas Observer, a 10,000-circulation magazine that carries the story in today's issue. He also has written a book due out next month on the North case.

Messages left with DEA officials in Washington went unreturned, and a secretary for Bush in Houston who refused to give her name said he was out of the country. No one else would be available to comment, she added.

North was a central figure in a U.S. operation that sold arms to Iran and used the proceeds to finance the Contras, the pro-American guerrillas in Nicaragua who were fighting a takeover by communist-backed countrymen. He was convicted, then acquitted of charges that surfaced in extensive hearings on the Iran-Contra affair.

North, the Republican nominee for a U.S. Senate seat from Virginia, denied Castillo's allegations.

"It's totally garbage, absolutely, 100 percent untrue," North spokesman Dan McLagan said. "I think he's trying to sell books, make money. It's a nutty conspiracy theory with not one scintilla of truth."

Castillo resigned from the DEA in 1992 and now works as a private investigator in McAllen, Texas. He said he observed a hangar in Ilopango, El Salvador, where many of the pilots hired by North originated drug and weapons smuggling missions.

"They were running large quantities of cocaine to the United States via Ilopango," he said, adding that shipments were flown to Florida, Texas and California.

At one point, Castillo said, he posed as a member of a drug cartel and took surveillance pictures of cocaine smuggling taking place out of Ilopango hangars controlled by North's Contra supply operatives.

Castillo's pictures, as well as numerous reports he filed, have been shown to several federal officials with little to no response, he asserted.

FAMILY MATTERS

Wife's overspending affects couple's relationship

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: Can you do something to make my wife stop charging and spending? Throughout our 11 years of marriage, she has always spent more money than we have. She runs up the credit card charges and hides them from me. For one reason or another, I always find out.

May

One time (company) called me at the office threatening legal action! When I called my wife, she denied that she had charged anything, but when I got home she did confess. Can you believe that? (Company) had just called me and she still lied!

Now I'm sick and tired of all this. I just found out that she has done it again. The last time, or time before this, she promised and swore she would never ever do it again. I told her then that I was going to leave her if she did it one more time. She swore she'd never do it. Yesterday I received another telephone call, but this time from a collection agency for charges I never knew anything about. I was furious and called her. She became hysterical over the telephone and I had to go home.

After I got home, we had a very emotional talk. The upshot of it was that she didn't think she could stop charging and spending. Now I don't know what to do. I'm still very hurt and angry, but she's pitiful and I feel sorry for her today. I really don't want to divorce her, but she's using up all of our savings. What can she do to stop herself? ALL CHARGED OUT

DEAR ALL: The steps necessary to help your wife's spending patterns depend on its characteristics, which I can't really determine from your letter. I will list some of the possibilities.

Her spending could be associated with the need for instant gratification, which is considered to be compulsive buying — an impulse disorder. Researchers Ronald Faber and Thomas O'Guinn define compulsive buying as "chronic, repetitive purchasing that becomes a primary response to negative events or feelings." They also found that people in this category often experience higher levels of depression and anxiety.

Her spending habits could be learned family-of-origin behavior. Perhaps the family or some member of the family — usually a parent — had the same behavior pattern. Or perhaps a parent tightly controlled spending within the family and this could be rebellion against those rules.

An entire set of issues is associated with how an individual perceives money and his or her self-esteem. For some, spending money is tied to status and empowerment. Also, spending can be a form of passive-aggressive behavior in someone who can't express anger at a spouse or self. And so on. My point is, her spending pattern can have a number of explanations, all of which typically require counseling.

I have found that consistent overspending after promising to "never do it again" is a significant problem in the marriage. I encourage you and your wife to seek professional help with a clergyman or marital therapist.

I also have found that this is rarely an individual problem. While one person may do the spending, the couple suffers the consequences and both need to be involved in the solution.

A support group for chronic overspenders exists, but I don't think there is a local chapter. If any readers have more information, please write me and I will print it in the column. This problem can be addressed, but like so many other deeply-felt issues, it does require hard work.

THE FOLLOWING SPORTS AND PARENTING TIPS ARE OFFERED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

- Keep in mind the major reason kids play sports is to have fun and to feel worthy, competent and successful.
- Teach your children that success in sports is more than just winning. Help them feel successful when they are improving or mastering skills, giving maximum effort and striving to win.
- Help your athlete set realistic, achievable yet challenging goals. Offer to work with him or her to meet these goals.
- Reward and encourage skill improvement, good plays and good behavior. Remember to praise effort, not just performance, to motivate a child to try hard.
- Mistakes are part of learning a sport, and young athletes will make plenty of them. When your child makes a mistake, give encouragement and, if needed, ideas on how to correct the error. Avoid criticizing and punishing for mistakes.
- Show your children that you love and accept them, regardless of the game's outcome or how they have performed.

Battered women need help, not propaganda

By Jane Holleman
N.Y. Times News Service

There are new arguments cropping up, bolstered by books written by women, that say that we women are unnecessarily alarmed about our plight.

They say that women aren't beaten, raped or battered as often as statistics reveal. Yes, we know what kidders those federal crime experts can be. The new propaganda claims that as a gender we aren't sexually harassed, discriminated against or cheated by delinquent child support payers so much as our girl-mob mentality leads us to believe.

To women who read these books I say: If you are now in a wonderland of a man's tyranny and shrinking by the moment, I don't want this new argument to thwart your survival; your pain isn't a statistical quirk. Your pain is real.

Women who are far too young to die succumb daily to complications of heart disease, drug overdoses, cancer, strokes and eating disorders because the poison of fearing a man kills you slowly, as if he put arsenic in your tea each day. You can feel so trapped that deciding to get sick and die is the only way out. Emotional abuse exacts the toll of lessening your lifespan.

A physically abusive man likely will and surely can kill you by accident. An angry man who pushes a woman into a wall doesn't know that she won't hit her head and bleed inside her skull. The apologies won't matter. You'll be dead. If you have children, they'll be alone. And it should chill you that they may be alone with him.

A batterer can victimize anyone. You're not abused because you're weak or stupid. You're abused because people who batter are extremely good at it.

They begin by taking away your options, convincing you that you have nowhere to go. Your friends are scum. The money is all his. The kids are his. You're his property. The names he calls you when you're late getting home or when you spend money on yourself are so awful that a family newspaper can't print them. Yet you live with the horror of having them spat in your face every day.

I want you to know that out there is a legion of people who can help you, people on hot lines who know that you've kept the secret of being slapped or insulted because you think it's your fault. It isn't your fault. Abusing you is his illness, one you alone can't help him cure. You need lawyers, counselors, ministers, law enforcement authorities — to help you safely and quickly get out of danger. Calling your local mental health agency is free, and it's the beginning of a lifeline for rescuing yourself from all the hurt.

If it's an emergency, call 911. Remember that it's against the law for a bully to threaten or beat you just because his life isn't perfect.

Don't read books that say your pain is a national myth. Instead, reach out and survive, if only for those who love you. Later, when you're safe and well, you'll know that you always have deserved to be loved.

Questionnaire is for women

N.Y. Times News Service

To add a little soul to the columns of data the government collects on working women, the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department is asking working women all over the country to respond to its "Working Women Count" questionnaire with demographic factoids and more qualitative information on their relationship to their jobs.

The survey asks women how they feel about their jobs — with choices ranging from "I love it" to "It's totally miserable" — and what they would do to make it better. It provides space to write a brief essay to President Clinton on what it is like to be a working woman.

The survey is being sponsored by several "partners" — corporations, politicians, labor unions, political groups, media organizations and state and local governments — who are helping distribute the questionnaire from May through August. It is also being printed in several women's magazines.

Results will be released in the fall.

Food stamps buy restaurant meals

By Peter Jackson

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — For Angelina LeClair, being able to use food stamps in certain restaurants means a hot breakfast — a blueberry muffin, bacon and coffee — in the cafeteria adjoining the housing complex where she lives.

"I'm there every morning," says LeClair, a 69-year-old who is among the 128 elderly or disabled residents of the Marcotte Congregate Housing center in Maine's second-largest city.

Across the Androscoggin River in Auburn, in one of the textile and shoe factories that have been converted into subsidized housing, Ruth Trosper says even the $10 a month in food stamps that she receives is enough to eat out occasionally at a small restaurant down the street.

"I can have my breakfast down to the diner, where otherwise I couldn't afford it," said Mrs. Trosper, 74.

MAINE IS one of the most recent states to sign up for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's food stamps-in-restaurants program, which has existed in some form for 20 years but remains unused by most states.

Participation is limited to food-stamp recipients who are at least 60 or their spouses, disabled people who receive Supplemental Security Income and the homeless. Maine restaurants cannot be certified for the program unless nearly all of the meals they offer can be purchased for less than $5, including a beverage. The restaurant rules vary from state to state.

The program presents "another opportunity for a warm meal" for people who otherwise might go without, says Peter McCarron, food stamp director for the Maine Department of Human Services.

Yet nationally, only 16 other states allow food-stamp recipients to use the coupons in restaurants, according to the USDA's Food and Nutrition Service, which administers the food stamp program.

Even in many states that do participate, finding restaurants that accept food stamps may be next to impossible. Fewer than 200 restaurants around the country accepted food stamps as of last fall, the most recent figures available, and half of those were located in New York state.

WENDY WEBSTER of the National Restaurant Association in Washington said the program has not been publicized enough but allowed that restaurateurs also may have reasons for not wanting to participate.

Accepting food stamp customers would add to paperwork, such as teen-age labor reports, minimum-wage requirements and tip audits, that already overwhelm many restaurant owners, she said.

"Most restaurant operators forget that they're even working with food," she said.

Philip Shanholtzer, a spokesman for the Food and Nutrition Service in Alexandria, Va., said it is up to the states to take the lead in the program.

"The program is there, and the states know that," Shanholtzer said. "There really aren't a lot of resources for going out and promoting it."

Ironically, Maine officials initially applied for the program because they thought the federal government required it. When they learned it was optional, they decided to press ahead anyway because it seemed like a good idea.

"It didn't cost the state any money," McCarron said.

THE FEDERAL government spends about $27 billion a year providing food stamps for nearly 27 million Americans. The benefit varies based on income — up to $112 a month for a single person — and averages $68 a month.

Although Maine has been in the restaurant program for only a couple of months, it already is among the most active participants. More than three dozen restaurants are certified, and more applications are pending.

About 20,000 households are eligible for the program, out of the 63,000 that receive food stamps, with senior citizens making up the vast majority of those who qualify, McCarron said.

Last year, officials sent letters describing the program to about 4,000 restaurants culled from state licensing lists. The letters included tear-off coupons to request application forms, McCarron said.

"The state of Maine is doing a fantastic job trying to get the word out," said Charles DeJulius of the USDA Northeast regional office in Boston.

AT THE NEW Auburn Diner, where Mrs. Trosper likes to eat breakfast, co-owner Louise Giguere said she serves no more than a half-dozen people who use food stamps even in a busy week — not enough to make much difference in her bottom line. But she thinks older people appreciate the new program.

"We look at it (as a way) to get them out of the house," Giguere said.

States participate in program

Associated Press

According to a list prepared by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service last fall, 17 states have a program under which restaurants accept food stamps from elderly, disabled and homeless people.

They are: Arizona, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Texas and Wyoming.

Even in many states that do participate, finding restaurants that accept food stamps may be next to impossible. Fewer than 200 restaurants around the country accepted food stamps as of last fall, the most recent figures available, and half of those were located in New York state.

DEAR ABBY

Mother-in-law talks her way out of woman's good graces

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother is a lovely woman who has one problem: She is sometimes completely overbearing.

Van Buren

When she visits us, she stays in our small apartment where we live with our 2-year-old son. Throughout her visit, there is no peace, no time when she is not pouting if we do not spend every waking moment with her. She is always cleaning or rearranging our furniture, but, worst of all, she talks incessantly.

My own mother would never behave this way.

The three "R's" I advise for all mothers and mothers-in-law are as follows:

(1) Respect the privacy of your child, his or her spouse and their family.

(2) Recognize that you are a guest in THEIR home.

(3) Relax — and if at all possible, check into a hotel or motel. You will be more comfortable, and so will they. — WORN OUT IN WISCONSIN

DEAR WORN OUT: Generalizations are dangerous — especially this one. I have heard from numerous women (and men, too) who adore their mothers-in-law.

Oddly enough, more husbands than wives adore their mothers-in-law.

P.S. I happen to be one of the lucky ones. I have loved my mother-in-law for 54 years; take a bow, Rosie (Mrs. Jay) Phillips in Minneapolis.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband is getting married again. Although he is thousands of dollars in arrears on child support, he has come up with money to rent tuxedos for our two sons to wear to this formal event.

Although he refused to set foot in the church where I taught Sunday school for 10 years, he is getting married there after openly living with his girlfriend for three years.

It seems this is not unusual these days. It's fairly common for a man to dump one woman, then marry her replacement right in the ex's back yard.

I am considering attending the wedding to "give the groom away," but I suspect this would make my sons feel uncomfortable.

Any suggestions? — TRYING TO ADAPT

DEAR TRYING: Yes. Skip the wedding. Revenge is never as sweet as the revenger hopes it will be.

DEAR ABBY: I have enjoyed some of the letters you have printed about encounters with naked people. Some of your other readers may have some funny stories, too.

My favorite incident happened in a local meat market in Watkins Glen, N.Y. It was during the Summer Jam of 1973, which was the largest rock concert ever held. (That's right — most people are under the misconception that the largest was Woodstock but those of us who live in Watkins Glen know better.) Anyway, Jim, the shopkeeper, looked up to see a bearded hippie standing in front of his counter with nothing on but one sneaker.

Not one to be easily nonplussed, Jim remarked, "I see you lost a sneaker." The response was, "Hey, man, I didn't lose a sneaker — I found one."

Thanks for letting me tell this story outside of Schuyler County. — A FRIEND OF JIM'S

DEAR FRIEND OF JIM'S: Thanks for sharing this story with me. My readers can always use an "upper."

Dogs' allergy symptoms are skin irritations

NEW YORK (AP) — People aren't the only ones who suffer from hay fever and other springtime allergies. Dogs can be tormented by allergies, too.

It is estimated that allergies afflict at least 15 percent of America's 55 million dogs. But instead of sneezes and runny noses, canine allergies manifest themselves as skin irritations, according to Center Laboratories, makers of an allergy test.

Pet owners should look for these telltale signs:

- Dog rubs against carpet and furniture, scratching itself frequently and licking skin itches.
- Dog has itchy ears, feet and skin, and acts irritably. Untreated allergies can lead to hair loss and extensive skin damage.
- It is important to see a veterinarian as soon as you suspect your dog has allergies.

Learn rights before facing loss of job

Hearst News Service

If you are afraid you will be facing the firing squad at work, learn what your rights are and how to respond to the threat of a pink slip.

Unless you can prove discrimination because of age, race, sex, color, religion, national origin or disability, Michele Wolf wrote in an article in the current issue of Good Housekeeping, you may have little hope of legal protection from losing your job.

"Montana is the only state with a statute that says an employer has to have 'just cause' for discharging an employee," said St. Louis attorney Mary Anne Sedey, vice president of the National Employment Lawyers Association. "Although some states, through court decisions, have provided greater protections than others, in many your employer can fire you 'at will' — for good reason, bad reason, or no reason."

The bottom line, according to Laura S. Schnell, an employment attorney with a New York City firm, is this:

"It's not illegal to be unfair and it's not illegal to be mean. And a personality clash is a perfectly legal reason for a company to fire someone, even though it's clearly not the employee's fault."

The first step in protecting yourself is to recognize a problem as it develops. For example, you may realize that a lower-paid colleague is being groomed for your job.

It is not illegal to replace an employee with someone who is paid less. But Sedey said if you can prove your boss' preference for a younger colleague is based at least in part on age, you may be protected by the Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act. It prohibits its discrimination against employees age 40 or older.

An employee returning from maternity leave is protected by the Pregnancy Discrimination Act and the Family and Medical Leave Act. But many companies have a maternity-leave program that does not guarantee an employee the same duties on her return, said Donna G. Swanson, a senior program analyst with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's (EEOC) Office of Program Operations.

If you believe you are in danger of being fired, keep a diary of experiences that indicate something unfair is happening. Save any records that document your accomplishments. Speak with your supervisor in a calm and nonconfrontational way about your concerns. Do not confide in Human Resources, which is an arm of management.

Officials cite secret plan to cope with 'immigration emergency'

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States government is putting the finishing touches on a secret plan to cope with a "mass immigration emergency" that could bring a sudden flood of immigrants into the country.

The plan provides a framework for how the United States will deal with a huge migration that could follow a sudden or radical political transformation in Cuba, such as a civil war resulting in the collapse of the Castro regime.

"Operation Distant Shore" involves 37 federal agencies, including the Department of Defense, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

After top-level meetings at the White House, officials are expected to complete the plan within days. It is outlined in a classified document carrying the label, "Warning: For Limited Official Use Only."

The main focus of the plan is the Florida coastline, and it is designed to halt any massive flow of immigrants from Cuba, Haiti or other Caribbean countries. Phyllis Coven, a deputy attorney general, said the plan was "generic" and could be extended to other parts of the border as well.

"This is a plan that has been in the works for a long time," she said. "The goal is to have a coordinated response (to an immigration emergency)."

Cuba's Fidel Castro might not be around much longer. His sudden departure could send flood of refugees toward Florida.

But sources familiar with the plan say its primary purpose is to deal with a possible mass migration from Cuba, although it could be helpful in dealing with other countries as well.

One part of the plan calls for turning local law enforcement officials — police and others — into temporary INS agents to help process the hundreds of thousands of immigrants who might arrive on U.S. shores. Another part calls for converting military bases into emergency housing shelters.

Officials were hesitant to say exactly what would constitute an "immigration emergency" and said there was no specific number of immigrants that would trigger the plan.

An emergency might be either "a large number of people over a short period of time, or a small number for a long period of time," said Nancy Wittenberg, Florida's director of refugee programs. "Both take their toll on a community."

A clear impetus to complete the plan is the possibility that Cuba's Fidel Castro might not be around for much longer — either because of his advancing age or because of the instability that could be set off by the country's deteriorating economic situation. The fall of Castro could send hundreds of thousands of Cubans, who are just 90 miles from U.S. shores, heading toward the Florida coastline.

Work on the plan began 13 years ago after Florida social service agencies were inundated with 125,000 Cuban immigrants during the Mariel boatlift. The state's political leaders fear that a new influx would overwhelm local services and have been demanding assurances from the Clinton administration that they will not be stuck with the full cost of any new migration. Last July, all 25 members of the Florida congressional delegation wrote to Attorney General Janet Reno, expressing their concern that details of the emergency plan had not been worked out.

"While no one can accurately predict the timing or effects of a transition of power in Cuba, each hour brings us closer to that nation's next revolution," the letter said.

Top-level White House officials discussed the plan with Florida legislators last month.

Towels vanish from ship that hosted aides

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is looking for a few good towels — and bathrobes — that vanished from an aircraft carrier that hosted White House aides during President Clinton's recent visit to Normandy.

An internal White House memorandum, dated Thursday, said the USS George Washington had discovered that 84 towels and robes were taken from the ship's staterooms. The items had a total value of $562, and the memo asked responsible staff members to pay for any they might have taken.

"As you know, the ship and the U.S. Navy served as our gracious hosts during this trip," said the memo, obtained by Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind. "They provided these items for our use, not as souvenirs. They have requested reimbursement of $562 from the White House for the above items."

The memo, written by Isabelle Tapia and Michael Lufrano of the White House's Office of Scheduling and Advance, added, "Make any checks payable to the USS George Washington."

It was distributed to all staffers who had stayed aboard the nuclear aircraft carrier.

After Burton distributed the memo to reporters, White House Communications Director Mark Gearan said a top White House aide had already repaid the Navy the full $562.

Gearan said Ricki Seidman, the White House director of scheduling and advance, had made the reimbursement out of her personal funds "to dispel any notion of impropriety."

Forty White House aides and 23 reporters stayed on the aircraft carrier the night of June 5, when the warship cruised from Portsmouth, England, to the coast of Normandy, France, for D-Day commemoration ceremonies.

Clinton himself stayed aboard the ship, as did Chief of Staff Thomas "Mack" McLarty and advisers George Stephanopoulos and David Gergen.

The aides and reporters paid $11 each for use of the staterooms and bathroom articles such as sandals and toiletries. Reporters who stayed on the ship will also receive copies of the memo, Gearan said.

After 33 years, woman's stolen wallet is returned

INDIANA, Pa. (AP) — Mary Brewer got her wallet back, and almost everything was there. Black-and-white snapshots. Three-cent stamp. Driver's license — from 1961.

The only thing missing was the $9 she planned to use to buy vitamins because she was pregnant with her first child. That was 33 years ago.

"There are certain things you remember," said Mrs. Brewer, who is now 52. "It was traumatic. I remember being very upset about it."

Mrs. Brewer was 19 when the wallet disappeared. She left it in her car, which was parked in a bowling alley parking lot, and went to church. When she came back, the wallet was gone.

A construction worker named Martin Snyder recently found the wallet between partitions of a wall in the men's room of the bowling alley, which is being demolished. Mrs. Brewer guesses that a thief took her money and ditched the wallet in the bowling alley.

The wallet was tattered when it arrived in the mail Wednesday, but Mrs. Brewer was happy to get it back. She was surprised, too, that Snyder took the time to hunt her down.

"We wanted to make sure she got it back and just let her know," said Larry Houck, Snyder's boss. "I'm sure she was curious about it."

Mrs. Brewer said she won't lose it again. It contains too many memories.

Chadwick to SFA

NACOGDOCHES — Royce Chadwick, who has coached every level of women's basketball and is 231-91 overall, has been hired as the sixth coach of the Stephen F. Austin Ladyjacks, athletic director Steve McCarty announced Thursday.

Chadwick, 36, comes to SFA from Howard College in Big Spring, where he was athletic director and Howard Lady Hawks were 148-21 in five seasons.

Chadwick replaces Joe Curl, who resigned for personal reasons in May after one season.

The Ladyjacks were 23-7 last season, winning their seventh-straight Southland Conference title and appearing for the seventh time in the NCAA Tournament.

Chadwick has two degrees from Southwestern Oklahoma State and began his career at Olton High School in 1983. He was named District 5-2A Coach of the Year for a 21-5 record and district championship for the Fillies.

In 1985, Chadwick advanced to the collegiate ranks, leading Panhandle State to a pair of NAIA national playoffs.

Before moving to Howard, Chadwick coached Sam Houston State, posting an 18-9 record in 1988-89 as the Lady Kats had their first winning season.

'Legends' moves

AUSTIN — The title sponsor for the Legends of Golf tournament ended a 17-year relationship with the city of Austin Thursday, announcing that the senior event will move to the La Quinta Hotel Golf and Tennis Resort in La Quinta, Calif.

Gary L. Countryman, chairman and chief executive officer of Boston-based Liberty Mutual Group, said the move was made to enhance the appeal and prestige of the tournament, which has been largely credited with starting the Senior PGA Tour.

Next year's tournament will be played April 22-23 at La Quinta's PGA West. It will be televised by ABC-TV.

The Legends, which utilizes a unique two-man team, "best-ball" format, started in Austin in 1978 at Onion Creek Country Club and moved to Barton Creek Country Club in 1990.

The five-year contract Liberty Mutual had with Barton Creek Country Club and Freeport-McMoRan, the tournament's second-biggest sponsor, expired after this year's tournament in May.

No baseball strike yet, but players say it's possible

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The executive board of the Major League Baseball Players Association got a chance Thursday to take a good look what the owners are offering, then ended its meeting without setting a strike date.

Despite that, the owners' proposal, made Tuesday, appears to have reinforced the players' will to fight off the proposed salary cap with the sport's eighth work stoppage in 22 years.

"I hope it doesn't happen, but my gut feeling is that it will, and anybody who's been around baseball for a long time feels the same way," Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres said Wednesday.

The executive board, which met at O'Hare International Airport, more likely will set a strike date when it reconvenes in Pittsburgh on July 11, the day before the All-Star game.

"Regardless of whether it's four years, two years or one year, a salary cap makes free agency, as we know it, pretty much eliminated," Atlanta Braves pitcher Tom Glavine said after owners released their plan Tuesday.

Owners, claiming they need to eliminate the dispari-

■ Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus sit atop the leader board after the first round at Oakmont.

OAKMONT, Pa. — For one day at least, Jack Nicklaus was 22 again. And for one day at least, Tom Watson was his nemesis again.

On the Oakmont course where 32 years earlier he won the first of his 18 major pro championships, Nicklaus rolled in a 40-foot birdie putt on the last hole Thursday for a 2-under-par 69 in the first round of the U.S. Open.

Then he sat back and watched as challenger after challenger failed to beat that score — until four hours later when Watson birdied No. 17 to take the lead alone at 68, besting for one day at least the Oakmont course that was the site of two of his biggest disappointments.

"I see Nicklaus up there and if Jack can do it, why can't I do it?" Watson said about seeing Nicklaus' 69 posted on the leaderboard.

"Maybe this will be the time Watson wins at Oakmont, who knows?" Watson said, referring to his second-place finish here in the 1983 Open when he bogeyed 17 on the final day and finished behind Larry Nelson. He also blew a five-shot lead on the final day of the 1978 PGA at Oakmont and lost to John Mahaffey in a playoff.

The 54-year-old Nicklaus, drinking water constantly to offset the 95-degree heat, raised his arms in the air and then grabbed his sweat-drenched head in disbelief as his birdie putt fell on 18.

"All I was trying to do was figure out some way to get it close enough for two putts and I looked up and it went in," Nicklaus said. "I played about 10 feet of break."

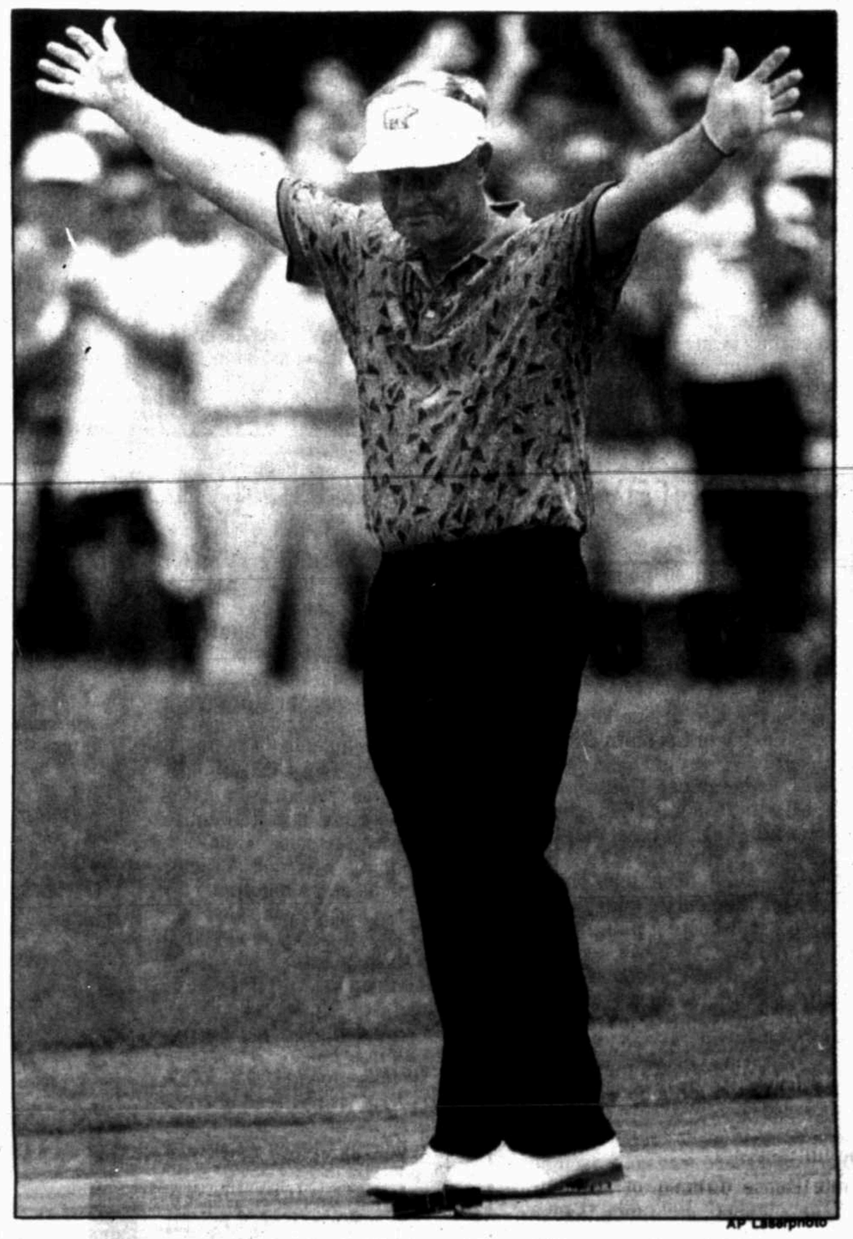

Watson, 44, broke into an impish ear-to-ear grin when his birdie putt dropped on 17.

"It seems like I play my best on a course where par is a good score," Watson said. "When it gets to a tournament like the TPC where Greg Norman was 24 under, I'm not in that ballpark.

"But under tougher conditions its seems like I'm more adept at getting up there among the leaders."

Nicklaus was tied for second at 69 with Ernie Els, the South African who was born seven years after a 22-year-old Nicklaus won the 1962 Open in a playoff with Arnold Palmer here. Also at 69 was three-time Open winner Hale

Separated by the equator and the world's largest ocean, Midland and the continent of Australia appear to share few characteristics.

But 26 years ago, a world-class swimming coach saw similarities in the two places. He brought them a little closer together then, and this summer he's doing it again.

Former Olympic swimmer and coach Terry Gathercole has volunteered to help coach the City of Midland swim team through August. COM swimmers, already a force among West Texas swimming clubs, now receive instruction from one of the top coaches in the world.

"You don't come to Midland for the scenery, you come for the people," said Gathercole, who got a fledgling COM program off to a rousing start in his five years as the club's head coach from 1968-73. "West Texans are so much like Australians. You could bring a bunch of Australians to West Texas and they would slip into this community with no problem at all. And you could bring a bunch of West Texans to Australia and they would do the same."

Gathercole certainly slipped into the Midland community without problems 26 years ago. He had never been to West Texas when then-COM board president Nash Dowdle called him to test his interest in the COM job.

"I thought he was full of (it)," Gathercole said.

Dowdle said he would fly Gathercole to Midland and pay his expenses.

"About 10 days later the tickets and expenses arrived in the mail and I thought, 'These people must be fairly sincere,'" Gathercole said.

The almost treeless and flat landscape of the Permian Basin didn't phase the Australian.

"Australia has got a lot of country exactly like this, so it was no big deal to me," Gathercole said. "If I had come from Europe it may have been a real culture shock."

Five years later, with Gathercole nearing the end of his contract, COM built an indoor pool. On the same site last June they opened one of the best swimming and diving facilities in the state. Over the years COM has produced two junior

Rockets lost without Horry

■ Robert Horry's injury in the third quarter put a dent in the Rockets' momentum in Game Four of the NBA Playoffs.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Robert Horry soared toward the basket for a dunk. Anthony Mason met him in midair and swatted him to the floor.

As Horry crashed to the court in Game 4 of the NBA Finals, the Houston Rockets' hopes fell with him.

When their versatile 6-foot-10 forward left the game with a bruised back, right wrist and left hand late in the third period, the Rockets were leading the New York Knicks 54-50.

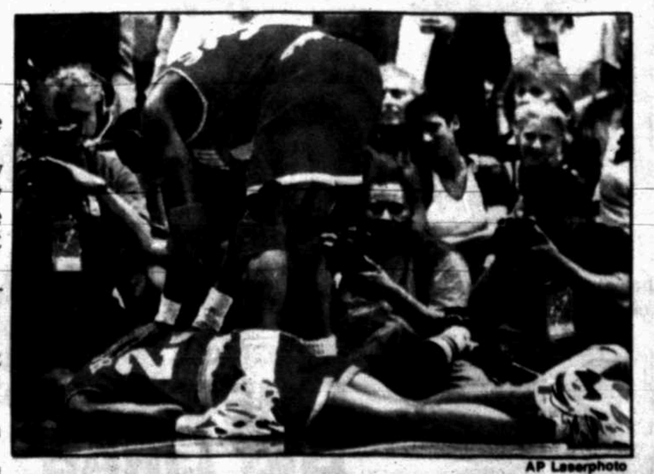

By the end of the quarter, the Knicks were only trailing by one. And with Horry sidelined for nearly the entire fourth period, New York dominated the boards and beat the Rockets 91-82 Wednesday night to even the best-of-7 series at two games apiece.

"It really hurt us when we lost Robert," said Houston guard Mario Elie. "He was playing really well. When he went out, we lost our momentum."

The Knicks have a reputation as the league's most physical team, and Mason — a 6-7, 250-pound block of muscle — is their most physical player. So Horry wasn't surprised or upset by Mason's move, even though it was called a flagrant foul.

"I went for a dunk and he fouled me hard," said ty between clubs from large and small markets, would give players a 50-50 split of revenue in exchange for the union agreeing to a salary cap that would force clubs to have payrolls of 84-110 percent of the average.

"What they've released is a public relations campaign that can work only with unenlightened people," said Randy Hendricks, an agent for dozens of players. "If the owners want a major restructuring in the game, they should be prepared to share the decision-making and the responsibility of ownership with players."

Salary arbitration would be eliminated under the owners' plan, but the threshold for free agency would be lowered from six years' major league service to four — with the provision that a player's former club could match any offer until he has six years' major league service.

"The right of first refusal is bogus free agency," Hendricks said.

Players are fearful clubs unilaterally will implement a salary cap after the season and are preparing to strike in order to force an agreement.

"I'm a union man. We have 25 solid union people here," Minnesota's Kirby Puckett said of the Twins. "We are 25 solid members in this clubhouse."

Glavine, who plans to attend today's meeting, said the proposal was "a better starting point than I thought."

"But obviously there's a lot of holes, the biggest of which alludes to free agency," he said.

A strike would threaten the World Series and baseball's new joint venture with NBC and ABC. Mike Herman, president of the Kansas City Royals, said his team estimates it will lose $16 million this year and would be better off financially if the players strike.

"If we don't pay players' salaries, we don't make money but we stop losing money," he said.

Herman doesn't expect fans to be sympathetic to players if they do walk out.

"If I were a fan, I'd be mad," he said. "Why are we fighting? If everybody's a millionaire, what are we fighting for? I don't want to hear guys making $3 million or $4 million a year complaining they don't make enough."

Gwynn said the timing is unfortunate, but it won't stop a strike.

Revamped Oilers add tight end

HOUSTON (AP) — The revamped Houston Oilers have added a tight end to their offense and color-coordinated their defense.

The run-and-shoot offense will be supplemented this season by two-back sets and tight end Pat Carter, who left the Los Angeles Rams for a chance to be part of the new-look Oilers.

New defensive coordinator Jeff Fisher, who replaced his former boss Buddy Ryan, plans to add a color-coding system designed to teach the complicated "46" defense that Ryan installed last year.

The players got their first feel for the new systems at a two-week minicamp that ended Thursday.

"I think I'll have a chance to catch some passes, but we're not doing away with the run-and-shoot," Carter said. "You don't do away with something that's been so successful."

Thanks to the new NFL salary cap, the Oilers locker room has taken on a new appearance during this off-season of change.

Warren Moon has been traded to Minnesota and Pro Bowl defensive ends William Fuller and Sean Jones are gone in the free-agent shuffle.

Sean Salsbury, a starter for the Vikings last year, has taken up residence in Moon's old locker as a backup to Cody Carlson.

Carlson's seven-year wait behind Moon is over, and activity around his locker has increased.

"I really feel excited about the upcoming season for the team and my opportunity to play," Carlson said. "I was happy before, doing what I was doing, but not satisfied.

Fisher, who played for Ryan at Chicago and coached under him at Philadelphia, will continue preaching the defensive scheme that Ryan installed before leaving to become head coach of the Arizona Cardinals.

One major difference is that the players are getting more tutelage, such as color codes for identifying certain offensive formations, than Ryan offered.

Ryan had one color for several formations and expected his players to make the correct call.

Players are warming quickly to Fisher's patient approach.

OPEN: Nicklaus, Watson play like youngsters

(From 1C)

Irwin, 49, and Frank Nobilo, a 34-year-old New Zealander who has won three times on the European tour since 1988.

"My wife said to me this morning, 'I'm going to put a spell on you.' She said, 'You are 22. You are 22,'" Nicklaus said.

On this day, for this magic round, Barbara Nicklaus was right, Jack was 22 again. And again he was duelling with Watson, the winner of eight majors and challenger to Nicklaus for the title of best in golf throughout the 1970s.

"Linda just said 'Get out there and shoot a good round' and kicked me out of the house," Watson said about his wife. "Nothing is a substitute for having confidence in your swing. I'm playing well."

Two strokes behind Watson at 70 were Jumbo Ozaki, Curtis Stange, Scott Verplank and Kirk Triplett.

Tied at par 71 were Clark Dennis, Hajime Meshiai of Japan, Colin Montgomerie of Scotland, Ben Crenshaw, Mark Calcavecchia, Don Walsworth, Mark Wurtz, Dave Rummells, Jim Thorpe, Steve Lowery, Jeff Maggert, British Open champion Greg Norman, who double-bogeyed 17, and Australian Bradley Hughes.

Two-time Masters winner Bernhard Langer was in a group at 72 along with Seve Ballesteros.

Nick Faldo, seeking to add the U.S. Open to his two Masters and three British Open titles, was in a bunch at 73, along with Tom Kite.

Defending Open champion Lee Janzen shot 77, Masters winner Jose Maria Olazabal had 76, and the 64-year-old Palmer shot 77.

Play was suspended for the day because of lightning shortly after 8 p.m. with 18 golfers still on the course, none of whom had a chance to make the leaderboard.

On this sweltering, still day, golf balls turned into tiny dots as they all but disappeared in the haze hanging on the hills and choking the river valleys of Western Pennsylvania.

Players, soaked in sweat, played at an agonizingly slow pace and left the driver in the bag as they tried to nudge 3-woods and 1-irons into the fairway and clear of the tangled, unforgiving rough.

The greens, slowed slightly by sprinklers overnight, were nonetheless treacherous.

NBA: X-rays negative, Horry to play Game 5

(From 1C)

Horry, who had 10 points at the time. "It's the finals; you've got to foul hard."

However, Houston forward Otis Thorpe felt Mason was too aggressive.

"Robert is one of our key players, and to try to take him out was uncalled for," he said.

Horry, who helped Houston win Game 3 with 16 points and eight rebounds, said he didn't feel that bad immediately after the play. But when he came back and played briefly in the fourth quarter, he said he felt "shooting pain up and down my back."

Although Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said Horry was questionable for Game 5 on Friday night, the second-year pro from Alabama was more optimistic.

Robert Horry says he will be at full strength Friday night. Thursday, X-rays were negative and Horry said there was no reason he can't play in Game 5 on Friday.

"I'm playing" he said. "I'm a little sore but that was expected. I felt it was a clean play. He went for the ball. He just didn't get high enough."

Horry said that if he goes up for any more dunks, he will use two hands instead of one so he can hold on to the rim to protect himself.

Horry's absence helped the Knicks outrebound the Rockets 14-6 in the fourth quarter. New York finished with a 50-33 advantage on the boards, including 21-7 on the offensive end. Charles Oakley had nine offensive rebounds for the Knicks, two more than the entire Rockets team.

"Rebounding was a big factor for the Knicks and a big minus for us," said Thorpe, who led the Rockets with 10 rebounds. "We'll have to show a little more heart out on the floor Friday. But you've got to give New York credit. They came out and played hard early and put us in a hole."

The Knicks opened the game with a 17-2 run and stayed in front until Horry made one of two free throws following Mason's flagrant foul to put the Rockets up 51-50 with 4:18 left in the third quarter.

Hakeem Olajuwon had 32 points, eight rebounds and five blocks for Houston, but he wasn't satisfied.

"I said before the game that I'd rather score 21 points and win than score 50 points and lose," he said.

Eusebio powers Astros' win

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

SAN FRANCISCO — Tony Eusebio hit a pair of two-run homers Thursday, powering the Houston Astros to a 6-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Ken Caminiti added a solo homer and righthander Darryl Kile pitched seven strong innings.

Kile (5-2) blanked the Giants on two hits until the sixth inning, when Dave Martinez doubled with one out and scored on Barry Bonds' two-out single.

John Hudek worked the ninth for his 10th save.

Padres 7, Cubs 1

SAN DIEGO — Andy Ashby pitched a five-hitter, allowing only one unearned run, as San Diego beat Chicago.

The win was the Padres' first after five losses to the Cubs this season, and it gave Ashby (3-5) three complete-game victories and a no-decision in his last four games. He struck out six and walked none.

Willie Banks (7-6) suffered only his second loss in his seven decisions, allowing two runs on five hits in five-plus innings.

Bip Roberts extended his hitting streak to 19 games, the longest in the National League this season, with an RBI single in the seventh.

Braves 11, Rockies 8

ATLANTA — Charlie O'Brien's two-run homer highlighted a five-run eighth-inning rally that carried Atlanta to a victory over Colorado.

The Braves rallied off reliever Bruce Ruffin (3-3), starting with Fred McGriff's single and Ryan Klesko's double down the right-field line.

Mark Lemke drove in McGriff on an infield grounder that Walt Weiss threw wildly into the dugout past first allowing Klesko to score the tying run and Lemke to reach second. O'Brien followed with his fifth homer of the season.

The victory went to reliever Mike Stanton (2-1) who pitched the eighth inning.

Pirates 7, Cardinals 5, (10)

ST. LOUIS — Jeff King's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 10th inning drove home the go-ahead run and lifted Pittsburgh to a victory over St. Louis.

The Cardinals lost despite tying a major-league record with seven double plays, a feat last accomplished by Atlanta at Cincinnati on June 27, 1982.

Alejandro Pena (3-2), who allowed Gerald Perry's seventh career pinch-hit homer to tie the game with two outs in the ninth, was the winner.

New York's Key wins ninth straight on mound

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

BALTIMORE — Jimmy Key won his career-high ninth straight decision and Pat Kelly homered and drove in three runs Thursday night as the New York Yankees beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-1.

Wade Boggs also homered for the Yankees, who won three of four from Baltimore to finish their road trip 5-6.

Athletics 6, Rangers 4

ARLINGTON — Ruben Sierra's two-out RBI single in the ninth inning gave Oakland a victory over Texas.

Stan Javier and Brent Gates hit two-out infield singles off rookie starter John Dettmer (0-1) in the ninth. Jay Howell relieved and gave up Sierra's grounder to right. Oakland added a run when Gates scored from third on Howell's wild pitch.

Sierra has nine hits in his last 13 at bats with runners in scoring position.

Indians 7, Red Sox 6

CLEVELAND — Albert Belle's two-out, two-run single capped a three-run ninth inning as Cleveland rallied to beat Boston for its 15th straight home victory.

The Indians' home streak is the longest in the majors since Boston won a record 24 in a row at Fenway Park in 1988, and the second-longest in Cleveland history behind a 16-game streak at Cleveland Stadium in 1951.

The Indians, who haven't lost at Jacobs Field since May 1, have won six straight overall. Boston lost its eighth in a row.

Brewers 5, Tigers 4

MILWAUKEE — Matt Mieske hit two home runs, including a one-out ninth inning shot as Milwaukee beat Detroit.

Mieske hit a solo shot off starter Tim Belcher that tied the game at 4-4 in the seventh, then hit a 1-2 fastball off Buddy Groom (0-1) for the first multi-homer game of his career.

Royals 4, Mariners 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Wally Joyner had three hits and three RBIs as Kansas City topped for its fourth straight win over the Mariners.

Angels 6, White Sox 5 (10)

CHICAGO — Chili Davis' second homer of the game snapped a tie in the 10th inning that sent California to a victory over Chicago.

Davis, who hit a three-run homer in the third, led off the 10th by hitting a 1-2 pitch from Kirk McCaskill (0-2) for his 13th homer. Davis also hit two home runs in a May 11 game at Texas.

Joe Grahe (1-3) pitched 2 2-3 innings of relief for the win.

Angels take long road to 11-9 win

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — Chris Smith singled home two runs in the 15th inning Wednesday saving Midland the embarrassment of blowing a nine-run lead and giving the Angels an 11-9 triumph here over Wichita.

The 15 inning contest, taking four hours and 18 minutes, was the longest game of the season for Midland. The Angels hit total of 20 was their best of the year.

The Angels (31-33) appeared on their way to an easy win when they led 9-0 after 6½ innings. But Angel starter Korey Keling left after giving up his first run and Wichita's improbable comeback followed. The Wranglers (22-42) scored six runs in their last at bat of regulation play to tie the game at 9-9.

Wichita got five runs in their comeback off Midland reliever John Pricher. Keling allowing one run in seven innings.

The Angels scored four runs in both the third and fourth innings. Mike Wolff's solo home run in the seventh gave Midland a 9-0 advantage.

The Wranglers began the comeback with a run in the seventh and two in the eighth. Wichita starter Glenn Dishman had little success against the Angels, giving up eight runs in 3⅓ innings. But Dishman didn't get the loss, exiting in the fourth.

After five long scoreless extra innings, Smith's hit proved to be the game winner. Angel reliever Julian Heredia threw 5⅓ innings to get the win. Ron Watson pitched the 15th frame to get the save.

King, Bower share lead in Rochester

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Betsy King, one victory away from the Hall of Fame, and Laurie Brower, who earned her first top 10 finish last month, had 66s Thursday and shared the first-round lead in the LPGA Rochester International.

One stroke behind, at 5-under-par, were rookie Vicki Goetze, Lisa Kiggens and Patty Sheehan, who has won three of the last five tournaments at the par-72 Locust Hill Country Club.

Eight players had 68, including Kelly Robbins and Nancy Ramsbottom.

Brower had gone 23 holes without a birdie before making four in a row on her front nine.

Her career-best finish was a tie for ninth at the Lady Keystone Open last month.

USFSA meets to decide fate of Harding's career

More Sports/8C

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tonya Harding won't be there to defend herself when a U.S. Figure Skating Association panel meets next week to discipline her for her involvement in the attack on rival Nancy Kerrigan.

No attorney will show up to represent her, either.

Among other things, the panel will consider stripping Harding of her national title and banning her from the association for life.

Harding's attorney, Bob Weaver, sent a letter to former U.S. Olympic Committee president William Hybl, who heads the panel, outlining why she believes no action should be taken against her.

Weaver wouldn't reveal the contents of the letter Thursday, but noted that Harding resigned from the association as part of her plea bargain in the criminal investigation of the Kerrigan attack.

"She feels that appearing and responding to the charges, particularly in the form that the evidence is being presented, would be counterproductive to getting her life in order," he said.

The hearing, which will be closed to the public and the media, will begin late in the afternoon of June 29 in Colorado Springs, Colo., and is expected to conclude the following day.

The panel will center its deliberations on evidence it already has and Harding's admission that she helped develop a phony alibi for those who planned the attack, according to a source close to the panel who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Harding admitted in court that on Jan. 10, four days after the attack, she met with ex-husband Jeff Gillooly and Shawn Eckardt to make up the alibi. She pleaded guilty to conspiracy to hinder prosecution, and was placed on three years' probation.

Harding's plea gives the panel the ability to act quickly, the source said.

The panel may decide to take away her title as of Jan. 10, the source said, and avoid trying to determine whether she was in on the plot before then.

Kerrigan was struck above the right knee Jan. 6 after she worked out in preparation for the U.S. championships in Detroit. With Kerrigan out of the competition because of the injury, Harding won the title two days later.

Despite the injury, Kerrigan won a silver medal at the Lillehammer Olympics in February. Harding was eighth.

Devers wins second 100 meters title

■ USA-Mobil Track

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Not even a slow start could prevent Gail Devers from winning her second straight women's 100-meter title at the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships on Thursday night.

A thunderstorm, however, prevented the completion of the women's 10,000 final.

Devers, usually quick out of the blocks, appeared to be caught napping when the starter's gun went off, and she trailed until overtaking Sheila Echols at 60 meters.

Over the final 20 meters, Carlette Guidry closed on Devers and caught her with five meters remaining, but Devers outleaned her.

"In this race, I did not get out and did not run the first 50 of my race at all," Devers said. "I felt like I had to work harder at the end. But I made it through."

Devers is the first repeat champion in the event since Merlene Ottey in 1984-85.

Devers, the 1992 Olympic gold medalist and 1993 world champion, was timed in 11.12 seconds in edging 1991 national champion Guidry, 11.15.

It was another remarkable victory for the 27-year-old Devers, who in 1990 was diagnosed with Graves' Disease, a life-threatening thyroid condition. She still takes drugs every day to replace missing hormones.

The race began shortly after the deluge struck and when thunder and lightning hit, the field of 18 had completed 1,200 meters, but they were ordered off the track by meet officials. Long-time track observers could not recall a race ever being stopped under such conditions.

There also were 11 triple jumps remaining, and the event was completed when the weather cleared.

Mike Conley, the 1992 Olympic champion and 1993 world champion, won his second straight national title and fifth overall, leaping 57 feet, 5½ inches, the best triple jump in the world this year. Conley got off his winning jump just before the storm.

Dennis Mitchell ran a front-running race in winning the men's 100 in 10.13.

With thunder crackling in the background and after a total of three false starts by other runners and one recall, Mitchell rumbled down the straightaway and beat a fast-closing Jon Drummond by .01 second.

It was the second national title for Mitchell, the 1991 and 1993 world champion bronze medalist and 1992 Olympic bronze medalist. He also won in 1992.

Emotional Navratilova ends final stint at Eastbourne

Associated Press

■ Tennis

EASTBOURNE, England — Emotion got the better of Martina Navratilova Thursday and she ran off the court fighting back tears after what likely was her final appearance at one of her favorite tounraments.

Navratilova was beaten 6-7 (5-7), 6-2, 6-4 by American Meredith McGrath in the quarterfinals at Eastbourne, a grass court tournament she won eleven times. In another upset, Mary Pierce was beaten by a little-known junior in the under-21 event.

Pierce lost to 15-year old Ludmila Varmuzova 6-4, 6-4 in match that took only an hour.

Halle Grand Prix

HALLE, Germany — Jim Courier, honing his grass game for Wimbledon, overpowered Germany's Bernd Karbacher 6-3, 6-2 to advance to the quarterfinals.

Courier slammed aces to end both sets at the $525,000 tournament, played in a grass court stadium built to duplicate Wimbledon, which begins Monday.

Courier next faces fast-rising Russian Yevgeny Kafelnikov, who downed Jonathan Stark 7-6 (7-3).

Manchester Open

MANCHESTER, England — Top-seeded Wayne Ferreira found himself a service break down in the final set for the second straight day before recovering to advance to the semifinals of the $290,000 Manchester Open.

Ferreira was down 0-2 in the third set against Greg Rusedski, the No. 7 seed from Canada, but won five straight games for a 6-3, 5-7, 6-3 victory.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JUNE 17, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will carve out a very special professional niche for yourself. September offers you a unique opportunity to resolve conflicts on the home front. Refuse to engage in deceptive business practices. A reputation for honesty has much more value than fleeting financial gains. A romantic partner may act somewhat distant early in 1995. Stifle an impulse to force the issue. A trip or change of residence is featured in the spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Barry Manilow, comedian Joe Piscopo, baseball player Dave Concepcion, singer Dean Martin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A positive attitude will help you move mountains today. Follow through on work projects already underway. A tender word can melt the hardest heart.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Align yourself with those in power. With a child, a gentle approach will get you much further than a scolding. An overheard conversation provides some gossip that will come in handy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A friendship is put to the test. Bide your time where romance is concerned. Your independent streak may put you at odds with someone you love.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone may be trying to pull a fast one. Wait until next week to sign legal documents or give the seal of approval to a long-term project. Your financial security is at stake.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stick to your priorities. A supervisor now sees your efforts in a more favorable light. A romantic partner may still be giving you the runaround.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Kind and caring by nature, you sometimes let others take advantage of you. Learn from a recent mistake, then get on with your life. Consult a lawyer if unsure of your legal rights.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Self-discipline is a terrific asset now. Concentrate on activities or ideas that will bring you extra income. Energy counts as much as brains at this time, so be enthusiastic!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Well-timed action could turn an inventive idea into a gold mine. Seek reliable backers and get any agreements in writing. Give in to a strong desire to visit someone at a distance this weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Greet new challenges with confidence. You will be able to go around or leap over any obstacles. Friends are impressed by the "new you." Guard against colds.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Big gains are seen in family relationships when you put yourself on the line. Show children your tender side. Comparison shoppers will find some real bargains today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The sentimental side of your nature could land you in hot water now. Keep your business life and personal life strictly separate! Taking special friends for granted would be a costly mistake.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could be closer to making a decision involving love and marriage. A desire to help others may lead you to put in extra hours at work.

TODAY'S CHILDREN: Although making friends is never a problem for these outgoing Gemini, keeping them may be more difficult. They need their space and tend to move in and out of relationships fairly rapidly. Help them find ways to handle everyday stress and they will enjoy longer, happier lives. A tendency to eat lightly makes a weight problem unlikely. Adventuresome and adaptable, these Gemini make delightful traveling companions. The ideal job will allow them to take an occasional trip as well as frequent seminars.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ♠	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

Make life as easy as possible for partner. We've said that often, but cannot repeat it enough. That's the secret to winning defense.

West's jump to two spades was, by partnership agreement, intermediate, showing a good suit and the equivalent of an opening bid. Afraid that a bid of three hearts would sound competitive, North chose instead to jump to game, which ended the auction.

West cashed the king and ace of spades, then continued with the queen. East discarded a diamond, declarer ruffed and led a low trump. When West's ace appeared, South claimed the rest of the tricks.

The correct defense is easy to spot from the West seat. South surely must have the ace and king of clubs and king of diamonds to open the bidding, so the only hope of setting the contract lay in a trump promotion. To make that clear to partner, West should have led a low spade to the third trick.

As long as East takes care to ruff the trick with the eight of hearts, the contract must go down to defeat. Declarer can overruff with the queen and lead a trump, but when in with the ace of hearts, West simply reverts to a spade and, whether declarer ruffs high or low in dummy, East must score the jack of hearts en passant for the setting trick.

Burt slips into Fla. courthouse, quietly ends marriage to Loni

STUART, Fla. — Remember the rancorous breakup of Burt Reynolds and Loni Anderson? Guess what? The divorce came and went.

Reynolds slipped into a courthouse through a back door Wednesday and ended the marriage. Here's the settlement tally:

The star of the TV series "Evening Shade" gets the $4 million ranch in nearby Jupiter, and a $2 million waterfront mansion. Anderson, who appeared on the show "Nurses," gets $2 million over five years to pay for her new home. She also gets a $500,000 vacation home in North Carolina and $15,000 a month in child support for their adopted son.

Custody of the boy and who pays attorney fees will be settled in California.

LOS ANGELES — Bo Diddley was cheated by his manager and is due $400,000, a judge says.

Bo Didley was cheated by his manager, judge says.

Music mae Martin Otelsberg siphoned the money from the rock pioneer's account over a decade, U.S. District Judge Edward Rafeedie said Wednesday. The judged ordered Otelsberg's widow, Lila, to pay up.

Mrs. Otelsberg, who lives in Palm Springs, also was ordered to turn over books and records dating to 1972, when her husband became Diddley's manager.

Otelsberg's estate was placed in trust and Rafeedie froze its accounts until it is determined if more money is owed, said Diddley's lawyer, John Rosenberg.

The decision may be appealed, said Ellen Rosenberg, an attorney for Mrs. Otelsberg.

"It was a blow to her," Rosenberg said. "It's not an easy thing for anyone to have to deal with."

Diddley, 65, said he became suspicious after Otelsberg's death when he sought return of the records and got excuses instead.

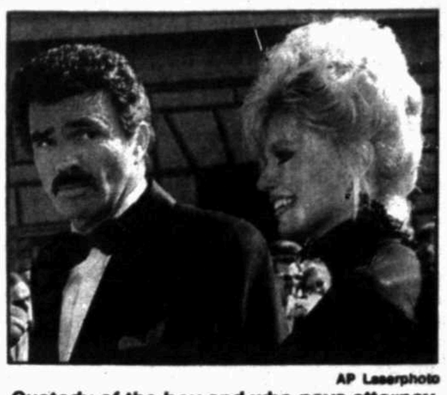

"I figured there was something funky. Big funky," he testified last week.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Charlton Heston parted the Red Sea in "The Ten Commandments." Now he wants to unite Tennessee voters?

Heston will travel the state next week in support of Republican U.S. Senate candidate Fred Thompson, a fellow actor.

"Fred is a living symbol of the citizen legislators who once peopled Congress,"

Custody of the boy and who pays attorney fees will be settled in California.

Heston said Wednesday.

Thompson, who appeared in "The Hunt for Red October" and "In the Line of Fire," is expected to face Democrat Rep. Jim Cooper in November for the final two years of Vice President Al Gore's Senate term.

ATLANTA — Hip-hop singer Lisa "Left Eye" Lopes is in rehab, several days after she was charged with arson for a fire that destroyed her boyfriend Andre Rison's home.

Lopes entered an alcohol abuse treatment program voluntarily, said her lawyer, Darryl Cohen. He wouldn't say when she began treatment or where she is.

The member of the group TLC has had past problems with alcohol abuse, Cohen said.

Lopes, 22, is free on bond on charges of arson and criminal damage to property. The fire June 9 destroyed Rison's two-story mansion near Alpharetta, north of Atlanta. She also is accused of damaging three vehicles parked at the home.

Rison is a receiver for the Atlanta Falcons.

ROME — Former porn star Ilona "Cicciolina" Staller, facing arrest in New York in a custody battle with artist Jeffrey Koons, has surfaced in Italy, saying she feels "like a fugitive."

A judge last week issued an arrest warrant for Staller after she disappeared with 1½-year-old son, Ludwig Maximilian Koons.

In a telephone interview with the newspaper La Stampa, Staller was quoted Thursday as saying she has moved from Genoa to Trieste in northeastern Italy. She gave no details.

Staller appealed to Italy's justice minister to protect her son in the custody fight.

Koons sued in Italy for divorce and custody of Ludwig.

COM: Olympian returns

(From 1C)

national champions, a U.S. Olympic team member and a coach who became chairman of the U.S. Swimming Olympic International Operations Committee.

"I think we would be one of any number of mediocre teams in Texas (if not for Gathercole's coaching stint)," said current COM head coach Brad Swendig. "Unbeknownst to a lot of Midlanders there's a lot of history to this team, people who have shaped U.S. swimming both administratively and in the water."

Gathercole, 58, set world records in the breast stroke in 1958. He competed on Australian Olympic teams in Melbourne in '58 and Rome in '60, winning a silver medal as part of the 4x100 meter medley relay team in Rome.

The former Australian Olympic head coach can now be found piercing the enclosed air at COM's pool with his Australian accent. He bobs his head up and down following the swimmers' heads as they practice the breast stroke. Gathercole's hair is gray, but his build is still closer to that of a swimmer's body than most men his age.

He has been working his charges harder than is their custom since getting here about four weeks ago.

"Right now we think it's awful and we don't want to do it," said 16-year-old Susie Carnett, a nine-year veteran of COM. "But he knows what he's talking about. He's trained Olympians."

"We're one team that worked probably harder than any team for quite a distance from here," Swendig said. "(And) he stepped that up."

But Gathercole, who retired from coaching in February '93 after helping coach the Australian Olympic team at Barcelona, includes humor and a sense of perspective in his coaching.

At a recent workout, a group of 16 teenagers stared up at their coach as he explained breast stroke technique. They apparently were paying more attention to something other than Gathercole.

"Did you all watch the young lady go by?" he asked. "If anybody should have been watching the young lady go by it should have been me."

The coach's approach is far removed from Lombardi-like intimidation methods.

"I do not believe that you just coach by threat or fear," he said. "I believe you'll get a good result if people enjoy doing what they're doing. And they should be doing it because that's what they want to do ... (but) that doesn't mean that it's play time."

No need to worry about any COM swimmers thinking Gathercole's workouts are play time.

"We knew that he was coming and we figured how hard it was going to be," said COM swimmer Paul Houk. "Everybody was getting kind of real nervous."

But the young swimmers are coming around.

"I just think it's neat that he would come here and help us," Carnett said. "We're out in the middle of nowhere."

But it's a nowhere that looks a lot like some of the nowheres in Australia.

CUP: Lalas speaks for U.S. team

(From 1C)

ing red hair and three-inch goatee, has become the most visible member of the U.S. World Cup team. If anyone can sell soccer to Americans, it could be Lalas.

His image appears in magazines both in the United States and in Europe. He schmoozes on television with Jay Leno. The cameras simply can't get enough of Lalas. The world suddenly has become his stage.

"I've never seen a craze like this for an American soccer player," goalie Tony Meola says. "It's good for the sport and Alexi knows how to handle it."

Lalas, wearing a battered old Red Wings cap, arrived home this week. The Americans will play Switzerland in the Pontiac Silverdome on Saturday. Lalas grew up in nearby Birmingham, about 10 minutes from the stadium.

His father is an engineer, his mother a poet. They lived in Greece until he was 5. That's where Lalas learned soccer. When he was old enough for high school, they sent him to Cranbrook, an all-boys boarding school in the area.

"My parents gave me a wonderful environment," Lalas says. "But I hated them for sending me to a private school at the time. It took me away from all my friends. But I've thanked them a million times ever since. It really gave me my introduction to soccer."

Lalas, a 6-foot-3, 195-pounder, was no wimp hiding from contact sports. He captained the Cranbrook ice hockey team which won a state championship. He also played hockey for one season at Rutgers.

"Everyone plays hockey in Michigan," Lalas says, laughing. "It's the law."

But hardly anyone in Michigan, or in the entire country it seems, cares much about soccer. A recent survey found seven of 10 Americans weren't even aware the World Cup was being played here.

This is football country. In fact, the Silverdome is home to the NFL's Detroit Lions. So why would a young man with his size and athletic skills elect to play soccer?

"About the time I was coming out, it was starting to be cool to play soccer," Lalas says. "We weren't getting all the rejects from football anymore. It was OK to play soccer, and I still got a lot of cool girls!"

Lalas isn't the best player on the U.S. team. Far from it. In fact, he is rather slow for a defender. What people, including U.S. coach Bora Milutinovic, love about Lalas is his free spirit.

"Lalas is a winner in everything he does," Milutinovic says. "It is in his heart, in everything he does."

The man is a natural performer.

In addition to his soccer, Lalas also is a talented guitarist. He sings with a rock group called "The Gypsies" and has written a soccer-oriented song.

Obviously, if things go well for the U.S. team, Lalas will be flooded with endorsement offers. He might not rival Michael Jordan, but it could be lucrative.

The endorsement he covets most is 7-Eleven.

"I live for cherry Slurpees," Lalas says. "They are the best food in the world. If I got a Slurpee endorsement, I'd die a happy man."

During their TV chat, Lalas told Leno he might like to be a bus driver when his soccer days are over. Fat chance! The media isn't likely to let go of such an engaging persona, especially if soccer catches on in the United States.

If that's the path life takes him down, Lalas will go along. But he knows the wild image the camera loves doesn't really match the man.

"That's just a portrayal," he says. "It's imagined. I know in my heart I'm more than that. I know it's helping to sell soccer in this country. It's part of the deal. I'm aware of that and I'm comfortable with it.

"In the final analysis, it's what you do on the field. It has nothing to do with what I do with a guitar. That's nice. But it's not my responsibility to sell America soccer. My job is to help win the World Cup.

"Yet I know when I'm done with the sport, I want it to be easier for kids to get into it than it was for me."

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished slightly higher on Thursday, recovering from a dip earlier in the day to retain Wednesday's sharp gain.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July settled at $19.91 per barrel, up 5 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Prices fell on signs of eased tensions with North Korea, but buying later intensified, pulling crude from its daily low of $19.57.

Saber-rattling and talk of sanctions against North Korea contributed to a nearly $1 per barrel increase in oil prices on Wednesday. The climb took oil to its highest level in nearly a year.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery next month settling at $2.134 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 3.8 cents.

Multimedia leader

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — In a dramatic sign of the changing entertainment business, Hollywood's leading talent agency has hired a senior executive from AT&T Corp. to lead its multimedia unit.

Robert Kavner, AT&T executive vice president and the chief executive officer of its multimedia division, will join Creative Artists Agency as a senior executive July 1, the companies announced Thursday.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar finished mixed Thursday, advancing against the Japanese yen on worries about the Korean situation but falling to its lowest level of the year against the German mark and Swiss franc.

Gold prices fell on domestic markets after closing mixed overseas. On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $385.40 per troy ounce, down $1.40.

In New York, the dollar ended at 103.25 yen, up from 102.65 late Wednesday.

In New York, the pound was worth $1.5205 down from $1.5215.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared with late Wednesday: 1.6315 German marks, down from 1.6355; 1.3700 Swiss francs, down from 1.3705; 5.6557 French francs, down from 5.5820; 1,604 Italian lire, up from 1,597; and 1.3893 Canadian dollars, unchanged.

On New York's Comex, silver for current delivery fell 6.2 cents to $5.451.

Stocks rebound

NEW YORK — Stocks were mostly higher Thursday, recovering from some morning inflation jitters that were prompted by strong reports on the economy.

Volume was down from Wednesday, but prices got a late day boost from buying triggered by Friday's expiration of options and futures.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 20.93 to 3,811.34.

Rift erupts among OPEC members

Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria — A day after OPEC united to keep oil production steady and crude prices up, a rift erupted Thursday over selecting a new leader of the cartel.

In an unusual public rebuke, Venezuela complained that Iran was the only member to vote against its candidate, effectively vetoing his election.

The outcry occurred after the ministers failed to name a replacement for Subroto, the former Indonesian oil minister who has been secretary-general of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries since July 1988. His term expires June 30. The secretary-general directs the group's daily activities and serves as its spokesman at international conferences.

Venezuela nominated its former oil minister, Alirio Parra, for the coveted post, and Iran put forward Hussein Kazempoor Ardebili, Tehran's ambassador to Japan and a former oil ministry official.

Venezuelan Oil Minister Erwin Jose Arrieta said Parra had the support of 11 out of the 12 member countries. Iran refused to back him.

Since OPEC rules require a unanimous vote, Parra was kept out of the job.

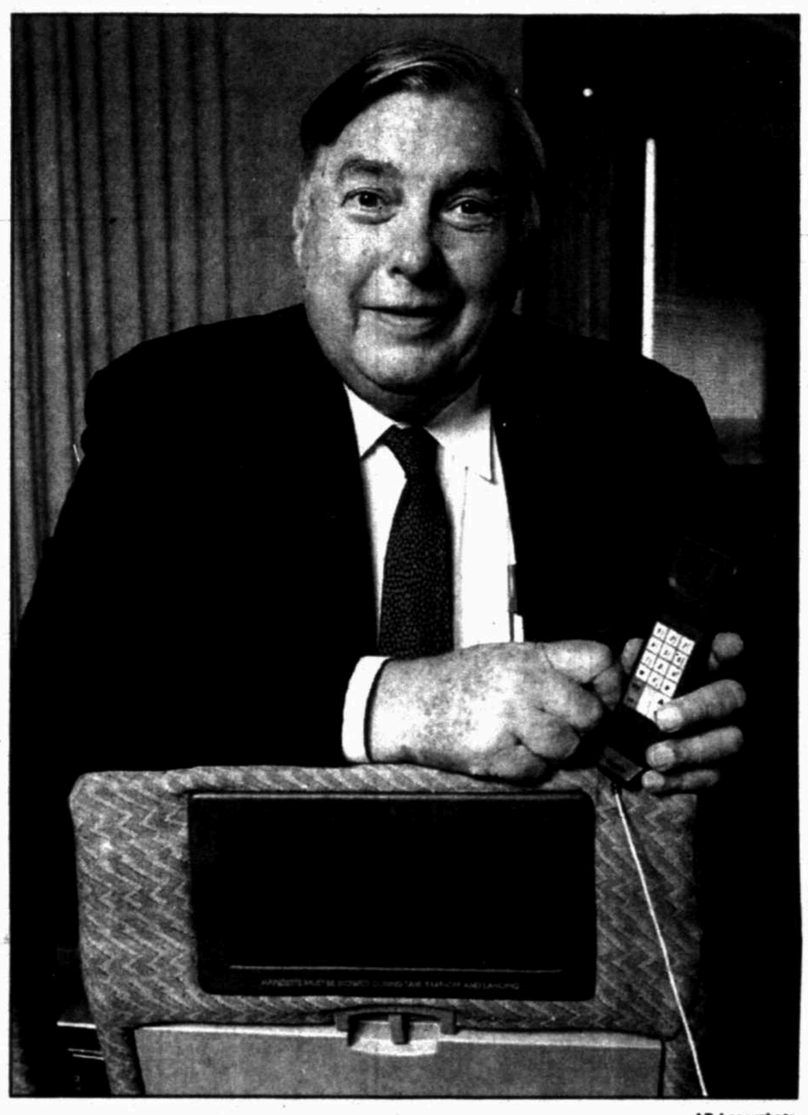

As a temporary solution, the ministers decided to let their rotating president, Libyan Oil Minister Abdalla Salem el-Badri, serve as acting secretary-general until the end of the year.

"It was a stalemate," said Alhaji Umaru Baba, Nigeria's minister of state for petroleum resources. "This decision will give breathing space for tempers to cool down."

Arrieta called for a change in the group's rules so that a nominee could win by majority vote. And he said Parra would be nominated again at the group's next meeting in November.

Iran, for its part, wasn't saying much. Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh said that "we have six months" before the issue comes up again.

If irritated about the fumble over the secretary-general, the ministers were buoyant about the prospect for higher crude prices after agreeing Wednesday to leave oil pumping untouched for the rest of the year.

In-Flight Phone Corp. founder and chairman John D. Goeken demonstrates a phone system configured for USAir on Thursday in Chicago. MCI Communications Corp. announced Thursday it will invest $20 million in In-flight's parent company, The Goeken Group Inc. The deal gives MCI an entry in the hotly competitive in-flight market.

Builders cut back construction of single-family houses in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Builders, seeing home sales slowed by higher mortgage rates, cut back construction of single-family houses in May for the second straight month.

Many analysts said higher rates will curb activity for the remainder of the year, although they predict single-family housing starts in 1994 will total more than the previous year.

"The single-family sector is the bulk of the industry and ... we're starting to see it taper off," said economist David Lereah of the Mortgage Bankers Association.

"We're seeing a general drift down in single-family starts," agreed economist Stan Duobinis of the National Association of Home Builders. "Interest rates are moderating a little now, which certainly will keep the decline from being overwhelming, but we will see a continued decrease."

The Commerce Department said Thursday that overall housing starts rose 2.6 percent in May, to a seasonally adjusted 1.51 million annual rate. Increases in the South and West offset declines in the Northeast and Midwest.

But the growth was entirely in construction of apartment buildings.

Single-family starts, which represent 80 percent of housing construction and are most affected by mortgage rate changes, slipped 0.5 percent, to a 1.20 million rate. They had fallen 5 percent in April, to 1.21 million.

And although multi-family starts jumped 16.7 percent, to a 308,000 rate, many analysts said the increase was unsustainable and predicted construction would decline in June.

Despite the drop in the single-family sector, housing starts for the first five months of 1994 were 21.1 percent higher than a year earlier. For all of 1993, starts totaled 1.29 million; many analysts expect they will climb to nearly 1.40 million this year.

The Labor Department also reported Thursday the number of Americans filing first-time claims for unemployment benefits fell by 11,000 last week to a seasonally adjusted 348,000, lowest in nearly two months.

The decline was expected by most economists, who say the job market is improving although at a slower rate than earlier in the year.

The reports were the latest signs of a slowing economy after four interest rate increases engineered by the Federal Reserve to head off any inflationary pressures.

Many analysts believe the three-year-old housing recovery peaked in December, when starts jumped to a 1.61 million annual rate, highest since January 1989.

Unable to sustain that pace and frozen in many parts of the nation by the severe winter, starts plunged 21.2 percent the following month although they regained some of the loss in February and March.

Four luxury cars, Saturn top 1994's customer sales satisfaction survey

DETROIT (AP) — For the third year in a row, four luxury car brands and General Motors' Saturn topped the J.D. Power ranking of customers' satisfaction with the way dealers treated them when they bought new cars.

Lexus, the luxury division of Japan's Toyota Motor Corp., ranked No. 1, edging Infiniti by a point. Saturn, Cadillac and Lincoln completed the top five.

J.D. Power and Associates, a marketing concern in Agoura Hills, Calif., surveyed 45,000 people who bought 1994 cars and light trucks. Numerical scores were assigned to the brands based on buyers' satisfaction with dealers.

Among other things, the survey measured how well salespeople explained a vehicle's features, how well it was "prepped" and how customers were treated when they picked up their cars.

The average score for the industry was 122, and 17 nameplates ranked above that.

Nine were from the Big Three U.S. automakers and six from European makers. Lexus, with 157, and Infiniti, at 156, were the only above-average Japanese brands.

Sixteen of the 17 brands also were above average last year, with Plymouth moving onto the list for 1994. None of last year's brands dropped off.

Land Rover's 141 score led the above-industry-average truck list, followed by Oldsmobile, GMC, Ford, Chevrolet, Dodge, Pontiac and Plymouth.

Dodge, Plymouth and Land Rover weren't on the truck list last year, and Land Rover showed a 34-point improvement to move above average.

Chrysler and Toyota fell off the truck list. They and other truck brands ranked below the industry average of 117.

J.D. Power does not release a ranking of vehicles scoring below average, but it sells that data to automakers, along with other information from its surveys, which also look at owner's opinions of vehicle quality at various times after purchase.

"All manufacturers are making great strides in product quality improvements. Now, as quality differences among nameplates become less distinguishable to the consumer, the fight to attract and retain consumers is shifting to dealers and their salespeople," said J.D. Power III, president of the marketing company.

The automakers know that.

Network switcharoo: ABC signs Scripps

NEW YORK (AP) — It's network switcharoo time again, with E.W. Scripps Co. signing a long-term deal to affiliate stations in three cities with ABC.

Two of the stations are UHF outlets being abandoned by the Fox network in Tampa, Fla., and Phoenix. The third is the VHF station WMAR in Baltimore, an NBC affiliate.

ABC notified its VHF affiliates in those markets that they will be dumped. They are WTSP in Tampa, WJZ in Baltimore and KTVK in Phoenix.

The deal will leave Scripps with five ABC stations, two NBC stations and one CBS outlet. A ninth station it owns, KSHB in Kansas City, will lose its Fox affiliation but hasn't signed with another network.

Last month, Fox announced a deal that would give it 12 new affiliates from CBS, ABC and NBC. In the latest round of switches, Scripps said Thursday it signed a 10-year affiliation agreement for all five of its ABC affiliates. Scripps didn't announce when the switches will be made.

Scripps spokesman Richard Boehne said ABC was picked because of good working relationships with its Cleveland and Detroit stations and the need to find a replacement affiliation for the Phoenix and Tampa stations.

CBS, which is losing eight affiliates to Fox, was said to have talked with Scripps about a deal.

Frank Gardner, senior vice president for television at Scripps, said the company intends to develop "a full range of local news and information programming" at the Phoenix and Tampa stations to complement the ABC lineup.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Brokers feel their advice justifies sales load

By Bill Doyle

Q: I am a financial consultant with a large, well-respected brokerage firm. I tell my clients to buy shares of no-load mutual funds if they truly understand the financial markets and they have the emotional temperament and patience to avoid the mistakes most no-load investors make.

Doyle

A lot of investors don't meet these criteria. I provide service to investors who need advice, or "hand-holding" all through the process — maybe for 10 to 30 years. I explain I am paid for these services through the sales load and 12b-1 fees.

Most people need and want advice. It's not free. Why do you advise readers to avoid load funds? It's clear many need professional help.

A: "Professional help" covers many different services, ranging from brokers peddling load mutual funds to psychiatrists. I'm certainly not going to point readers toward a shrink or "financial consultant," which is just a fancy name for "broker."

It's true that many — perhaps, most — investors lack the temperament or ability to choose successful investments. That's where mutual funds come in and why funds have been so successful.

All that is really necessary in mutual fund investing is to pick a fund with good performance whose investment objective is in line with yours.

Investors should choose a middle-of-the-road fund and not shoot for the moon. Last year's top performers could be left in this year's dust. Although investors who hold to this course won't get rich in a hurry, they will greatly reduce their risk of losing a bundle.

You make a good case for brokers and the fat fees they collect. However, for investors who do a reasonable amount of studying before investing, sales loads and 12b-1 fees simply cannot be justified.

Q: I am a widow, 86 years old. I have $31,000 in a money market mutual fund, which is not paying much interest. What should I do with that money?

A: My advice is to leave it where it is.

Money market mutual funds use accounting practices that keep fund share values constant — at $1. So, if you have $31,000 in that fund, you own 31,000 shares.

There has been only one case in which investors lost money in a money market mutual fund. Back in 1978, the First Multifund for Daily Income lost 7 cents on the dollar. But First Multi really was a short-term bond fund masquerading as a money market mutual fund. The rules have since been tightened to prevent anything such as that happening again.

Assuming that $31,000 represents your entire savings, you cannot afford to take any risks with your money. You will have to be satisfied with the current low yield.

310 General Help Wanted

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

A small deposit is required.
