The News is glad to chronicle the move of these excellent people to Tahoka and the South Plains.

Tahoka High Wins

Tahoka High School boys basketball team came over last night and whopped it on to the tune of 11. However, they can have no advantage for the townfield boys on account of the strange diamond as the game was played on the regular diamond instead of the townfield diamond.—Terry County.

Ha, ha, we'll say the above is a case excuse, Stricklin. Guess the diamond was not equally as large to the Tahoka boys. Try and find a better excuse for defeat than this next time; if you can't, just keep mum. Tahoka boys are just naturally ball players, friend Jack.

S. N. McDaniel has a fine garden, in which vegetables of every variety are growing, and are looking fine. It is the garden that beats the high cost of living, and is an asset that every man can have on the plains where an abundance of pure water is available for irrigation purposes. Have you planted your garden yet?

AN OPEN LETTER

To the Lynn County News:
I take this means of letting my friends and the general public know that the petition that was circulated in our neighborhood, asking my resignation as trustee, accusing me of influencing the teacher for whipping the children sometime back, is absolutely a dirty falsehood.

Yours respectfully,

Santa Fe Will Institute Homeseekers Rates

The Santa Fe Railroad, for the first time since before the late war, will institute homeseeker fares from Missouri River points Kansas City to Omaha, inclusive, and from St. Louis to territory east, to Santa Fe territory in West Texas and New Mexico. This announcement was made Saturday, by T. B. Gallaher, general passenger agent on the Western lines.

Mr. Gallaher, stated that the territory under his jurisdiction never before presented a more inviting appearance, and it is believed that the low rates, with liberal stopover privileges, will encourage and stimulate homeseeker travel to this territory during the current year.

LADY-BUGS DEVOURING THE GREEN BUGS

Recently a jar of green bugs which had been damaging the wheat in certain sections, also several other species of bugs, were sent to the A. & M. College, for examination.

A letter has been received from Prof. S. W. Belsinger of the department of agronomy, saying the green bugs are genuine, but that the other bugs which look like the lady bugs, live upon the green aphids, and should be depended upon to rid the plains of them, also of other injurious insects.

Prof. Belsinger says he does not think the green bug will do any more damage on the Plains, as the season is far advanced and the altitude is too high for them to exist.

He is sending a lot of booklets to the Chamber of Commerce, telling how to get rid of the green bugs. He advises that wheat should not be planted early, and positively no volunteer wheat should be allowed, as the bugs subsist only on green stuff during the winter.—Plainview News.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

An Easter Egg and a Hat

By FREDERICK HART

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

In modern buildings the stair-well is constricted to such a narrow space that if one stands on the twentieth or thirtieth floor and looks down one will probably not see more than a lighted slit, with no suggestion of the depth below. Aforetime, however, when people were not so cramped in their building—or in their souls—stair-wells were generous.

In the old-fashioned four-story mansion, now a rooming house, where Florence Elridge lived, the stairs wound in a stately fashion around a space a good six feet square, reaching from ground floor to roof. Florence, who lived on the third floor, could peek over the banisters and see the second and first floors go about their business. She rather liked the stair-well; it spoke to her of ample days gone by, of large hospitality and easy-going lives, remote from the rush and roar of modern times.

Florence lived alone in a little room on the third floor, as we have said. On the second floor lived a nice young man. His name was Arthur Hayden, and he worked in an engineer's office and got a perfectly amazing salary. He and Florence had met over the mail table in the lower hall, and had passed by ceremonious degrees from a simple "Good-morning" to "There's a letter for you. About you the lucky one!" or some such polite badinage.

The stair-well remained impassive to any budding romance that might or might not be burgeoning on it. It had seen too many brides in its time to grow excited over two young people of opposite sexes who were getting acquainted in its shadow. It seemed to say to itself: "If those young folks don't arrive at the point it isn't my fault. They are eminently well suited, and I must say that the young lady is by all means as lovely as any of the brides who have wended their way over me in days gone by; but why should I interfere? I am an aristocratic stair-well, and it's none of my business." Thus did the stair-well commune with itself in the night hours, as stair-wells do, with little confidential creakings and rustlings. Meanwhile Florence and the nice young man continued to call each other "Miss Elridge" and "Mr. Hayden," and to joke politely when they saw each other, or make a remark about the weather, or something like that.

This went on for some months. Winter showed signs of relaxing into spring. The cold was less intense. The streets were slushy. The shops displayed new hats. Everything pointed to the coming of the benign season. And Easter was at hand.

Florence bought herself a new hat in celebration of the annual festival. She also noted with some concern that Mr. Hayden showed no sign of any springlike reaction. He remained as impassive as ever. His calmness before the advent of the goddess Easter irritated Florence subconsciously, and she took to hanging over the stair-well when he went out or came in to see if he had bought himself a bright necktie, for instance, or had a flower in his buttonhole, or showed any of the signs by which the male of the species responds to the call of the spring. The stair-well, wise in its generation, allowed Florence to look without hindrance, and even warned her, by sundry creakings, when the nice Mr. Hayden was coming.

Mr. Hayden, in fact, should have bought a new hat. His winter headpiece was several seasons old and showed it. It wasn't as though he couldn't afford it; he got, as we have already said, a perfectly amazing salary; but he just didn't. Some men are that way. He continued to wear his old felt, that looked like a coal scuttle, Florence thought. She watched him anxiously now. She really took an interest in that hat, and waited to see whether or not he would get a new one. The stair-well waited, too. It seemed to say to itself: "That young thing is falling in love with that engineer and doesn't know it. She thinks she is interested in his hat. Ha, ha! Wait and see!"

Came the Saturday before Easter. Florence returned at noon. In her arms was a paper bag and in the bag were six eggs, raw. She was going to boil them that evening and draw little pictures on them and give them, next day, to some young friends of hers. She mounted the stairs—they seemed unusually creaky that day, as though they had something to tell her—and was just turning into her room when she heard footsteps below her and knew that Mr. Hayden was coming in.

"I wonder," thought Florence. "Has he bought a new hat for Easter, or is he still wearing that awful old thing?" She rushed to the banisters and leaned far over to look at the ascending Mr. Hayden.

Eggs are unstable things. They have no corners and slip very easily. Any way, the string on that paper bag was not very tightly tied. Florence, leaning over the stair-well suddenly saw, with a gasp of horror, something white and oval slide into view under her very eyes and descend in rapidly diminishing perspective. She opened her mouth to scream, when Mr. Hayden struck his head over the banister, apparently to look at the mail table. The egg and his hat arrived at the same point at the same time.

If the crash had been loud enough to wake seven cities it could not have stunned Florence more. She stared over the railing, unable to cry out, held by a horrible fascination at the sight of the wreck that had been made of Mr. Hayden's hat. He, on his part, after recovering from the blow—an egg falling two stories hits hard—took off his hat, held it so it would not drip, and looked to see who had assaulted him. His gaze met Florence's, and for a moment neither spoke. Then some demon of irresponsibility prompted her tongue.

"Happy Easter!" she called.

He was up the stairs in it, seemed to her, three steps. He stood confronting her and the omelet that had been in his hat dripped sullenly in his hand.

"Did you do that?" he asked sternly.

"I—I'm sorry—it slipped—I didn't do it on purpose—but—oh—you do need a new hat!"

He looked at her a moment, and something in her face made his heart beat hard; and something in his eyes made her drop her own while a wave of red suffused her face. "I—" he began, and stopped. "You—" again a false start. "Suppose you come out and help me pick out a new one," he got out at last. "I'm sure you have much better taste than I have."

They descended the stairs together. The hat had been deposited in her wastebasket. Somehow his hand rested on her arm, then slid down till he felt her warm fingers. "Easter's a lovely season," he said irrelevantly. "Isn't it?" she sighed. "And I think the custom of giving eggs is splendid," he continued. She hid her face in his sleeve. "Oh, don't. I'm sorry—oh

"Yes," said the stair-well critically, "they make a very pretty couple . . . my word! He's kissing her!"

HAD PASSION FOR LEARNING

Fisherfolk of Scottish Town of Buckie Remarkable for Their Devotion to Printed Word.

Sixty years ago Buckie was known in Scotland as "the holy town." It was a village of theologians. Even the very children could talk and argue on questions which would have puzzled the average divinity student. St. Andrew's university did not turn out men who knew more about the Bible, its writers and its critics than did those fisherfolk, who spent every spare moment of their lives in the study of abstruse volumes by the greatest students of divinity of all ages.

Great Greek scholars were to be found among these fisherfolk. They were self-taught. Their passion for knowledge was such that they spent years of the hardest study so that they might read the Bible in the language in which it was written. Often the whole village would club together to buy some book which was specially wanted. They then passed it from hand to hand and ship to ship until the bindings fell apart and the salt water so stained the leaves that the printing was no longer decipherable.

The books were taken to sea and studied after the nets had been lowered. Each ship had its own "library," books being passed from ship to ship, and when an argument arose those sailors could quote authorities, page and verse, in support of their theories.

New York's "Dry Niagara."
A few miles southeast of Syracuse, N. Y., in a cavity whose bottom is 220 feet below the surface of the adjacent upland lies Jamesville lake, a body of water 500 feet in diameter and about sixty feet in depth. Eastward from the lake extends a gorge through which flows Butternut creek. One authority says that in former times a river flowed here, and that Jamesville lake is the pool that was formed under a great waterfall. Steep cliffs rise around it on three sides, and all the features of a dry Niagara are here disclosed in great detail.—Washington Star.

Where Japanese Excel.

The Japanese are famed not only for their skill in making decorative articles, but for the beauty of the materials used. It is said that the secret of the composition of some of their alloys of brass and copper has only lately been revealed. The finest Japanese brass, called "sinchu," consists of ten parts of copper and five of zinc. Another very beautiful alloy, named "shakdo," to which splendid hues are imparted by treatment with acids, is formed by mixing gold and copper, the proportion of gold varying from 1 to 10 per cent of the entire mass.

HOME TOWN HELPS

WOULD DIVIDE UP INDUSTRY

Prominent Manufacturer Believes Congestion in Large Cities Is in Nature of an Evil.

Have the great industrial centers of the United States reached their maximum growth? A leading manufacturer believes that they have, that the time has come to break up the congestion of workers in large cities, and to get back to the small communities with industry. His theory is that the massing of industrial workers in a large city is bad for the country, and that anything which is bad for the country is in the long run bad for industry. He announces that he has demonstrated to his own satisfaction that industries can be taken to the people who live close to the soil, and that he expects to expand his own industrial activities along this line.

His idea is that instead of housing a large industry in a single large plant or group of plants in a city it can be broken up into small units, and each unit can be successfully operated in a small town, where it will provide employment for the class of people who leave small towns for the industrial opportunities of the cities, and also part-time employment for farmers who are now unable to make a satisfactory living on small farms. The water power available in many small towns will provide the power for the factory, and the factory will provide power for the town's utilities. In this way, he believes, the towns can be made attractive enough to hold the workers, and the whole scheme will save them from the unwholesome life in packed cities.

KEEP TOWN LOOKING RIGHT

Appearance Is Inseparably Connected With Business Success and Prosperity of Community.

The physical appearance of a town has much to do with its business success and progress. People are not attracted to a disorderly town. It looks like the kind of a place where inefficiency is the rule. Visitors have the feeling that that spirit would prevail in the stores in their dealing with the public. But a town whose business and home buildings are kept in good repair and well painted, looks like a winner. People feel that the same spirit of order and system and enterprise must make it a good place to do business.

There are some folks everywhere whose instinct is to slip along as easily as possible. They realize that their real estate is getting to look a little run down, but their motto is, "Never do today what you can put off until tomorrow."

Every time anyone gets out and straightens up a leaning fence, or repairs some tumbledown building, or paints a house that is getting to look shabby, he helps his home town take a step toward progress. His desire for improvement spurs on his different neighbors, and soon the whole street begins to have a new air of alertness and success.—Louisville (Texas) Enterprise.

What Zoning Does.

Some of the things that zoning laws do for a city are summarized by Charles B. Ball:

Zoning substitutes method for chance, symmetry for confusion, progression for patch work, and order for chaos in city development.

Zoning affords for the poor man such security from nuisances and invasion as the rich may provide at great expense.

Zoning is a flexible harness in which city expansion works; it may be adjusted in case it galls or frets at any point.

Zoning will flatten out the human pyramid which congestion has created in a crowded portion of the city.

Zoning sells a town. An unzoned town is like a dead stock of goods on the shelves.

Restorer of Cemeteries.

Miss Marion Eaton of Old Sudbury, Mass., has succeeded in an unusual field for a college woman, that of restoring old graveyards. She is also a garden planner.

"To city people graveyards do not mean much," stated Miss Eaton, "but to the countryman—it holds his loved ones. It is where he goes for his Sunday afternoon stroll, or his after-church smoke, and it should be beautiful. That is what I mean to make it."

Building Up a City.

Build the bungalows, boys, and fill the back yards with chickens and the front yards with flowers and children. The skyscrapers will take care of themselves.—Houston Post.

Carlyle's Estimate of Painting.

It was only by the expenditure of much tact and trouble that Lord Houghton induced Carlyle to give sittings for the fine portrait by Millais which is now in the National portrait gallery. When he went to Palace Gate for the first sitting Millais showed him over the house. "How did you manage to get so many expensive things?" asked Carlyle. "They were all earned by my brush," replied the artist. "Then there are more fools in the world than I imagined."—Manchester Guardian.

LESSON FOR MAY 14

HEZEKIAH LEADS HIS PEOPLE BACK TO GOD

LESSON TEXT.—II Chron. 30:1-27.
GOLDEN TEXT.—God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away His face from you, if ye return unto Him.—II Chron. 30:9.

REFERENCE MATERIAL.—II Chron. 30:31; ch. 32; 34:23-35; Amos 9:7-15.
PRIMARY TOPIC.—A King Who Worshipped God.

JUNIOR TOPIC.—Hezekiah's Great Passover.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Putting Religion First.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—Wise Methods of Reform.

1. Hezekiah Proclaims a Passover (vv. 1-18).
The way for a sinning and divided people to get back to God and be united, is around the crucified Lord.

1. The Invitation Was Representative of the Nation (v. 2a). The king took counsel with the princes and the congregation to show that the proclamation was the expression of the nation's desire.

2. The Time Was Unusual (vv. 2b-4). There was not sufficient time to sanctify the people, nor to gather them together at the regular time, so they resolved instead of postponing it for a year to hold it on the fourteenth day of the second month. This liberty had been granted before in an emergency (Num. 9:6-13). This flexibility with reference to the holding of the passover shows that God's ordinances were made for man and not man for the ordinances.

3. The Scope of the Invitation (vv. 5-9). It included all of both nations who would come to keep the passover to the Lord God of Israel. "Israel" is now used to include both kingdoms. The effort was to win back the nation which had seceded. The posts who were sent with the message were authorized to supplement the proclamation with urgent exhortation to join as a united nation. This urgent invitation was tactfully put as follows:

(1) It touched ancestral memories—"Turn again unto the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel" (v. 6). Both kingdoms had a common ancestry. (2) Recent bitter experience—"Be not like your fathers, and brethren, who trespassed against the Lord God, and were given up to desolation, as ye see" (v. 7). This was a delicate subject, but their ruin was so marked that such truth could be pressed. (3) Yearning for captive kinsfolk—"Your brethren and children shall find compassion before their captors" (v. 9). (4) The instinct of self-preservation—"So that they shall come again into this land" (v. 9). (5) The forgiving mercy of God (v. 9). God will not turn any sincere seeker away from Him. "Him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out" (John 6:37).

4. Israel's Reception of the Invitation (vv. 10-12). This invitation in Israel met a mingled reception. (1) Some mocked. The urgent and sincere invitation only excited opposition and ridicule. (2) Some with humble hearts came to Jerusalem. This is ever the case. The gospel is a savor of life unto life and death unto death (John 6:37).

11. The Passover Kept (vv. 13-27).
1. Altars Removed (vv. 13, 14). In the time of Ahab (ch. 28:24), these heathen altars were erected in Jerusalem. Before there could be worship of the true God all these traces of idolatry must be removed. This act of the people was voluntary, and shows that a right spirit actuated them.

2. The Passover Killed (v. 15).
3. The Priests and Levites Ashamed (vv. 15-20). The zeal of the people put to shame the priests and Levites. They were stimulated to perform their duties according to the law of God as given by Moses. They even took charge of the killing of the passover, since many of the officers were not sanctified so as to render this service for themselves. Though unprepared ceremonially, yet they took part in this most sacred service and were accepted as worshippers through the intercession of Hezekiah. God accepted the purpose of heart rather than the letter of the law.

4. The Praise of Glad Hearts (vv. 21, 22). They continued seven days with gladness: (1) The Levites and priests sang God's praise daily on loud instruments (v. 21). (2) Hezekiah's comforting words to the Levites (v. 22). He commended them and their teaching of the knowledge of God. (3) They made confession of their sins to God (v. 22).

5. The Passover Prolonged Seven Days (vv. 23-27). The king's object in prolonging the feast was to make as lasting an impression as possible, so as to result in the thorough conversion of their souls to God.

Holy Communion.

In the holy communion we plead the great sacrifice which can never be repeated. As Joseph's brethren held up the blood-stained coat before their father to tell him in a touching way that Joseph was dead, so in the holy communion we hold up as it were the blood-stained coat before the Father in heaven.—The Bishop of London.

The Wicked Flee.

The wicked flee when no man pursueth; but the righteous are bold as a lion.—Proverbs 28.

HARDIN PUT BACK ON HIS FEET TWO

Was Relieved of Both Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble by Taylor's States Los Angeles Mail.

"For the second time Tania has come on my feet, and you may know what I think of it," said Tania T. Hardin, 1409 Garden St., Los Angeles, Calif.

"Three years ago, I had rheumatism in my shoulders and neck so bad that I could hardly work. I tried medicine only to get worse. Finally I got hold of Tania, and haven't had a trace of rheumatism since."

"Then last summer my stomach was out of order. I lost my appetite, what little I did eat made me bloated, all stuffed up and miserable. I always felt weak, tired and worn, and was so nervous I couldn't sleep. 'Well, Tania did a good job for me before, so I just got some more of it and now it has again fixed me up. I'm feeling strong and energetic. I used to. I'll tell the world Tania is the medicine for me.'"

Tania is sold by all good druggists. If a boy likes you, don't expect to say so; he can't.

AUTO HITS TEAM

Laurel, April 13.—Unable to get a team driven by Lester Brink, Myrtle avenue, yesterday in the mist, a large touring car driven by an unknown man ran into the team, seriously injured the driver and one of the mules. The accident occurred on Main street near Johnson hardware store. A crowd gathered and one of the bystanders was heard to remark that he should be punished for not putting himself against such an accident. He said that he knew of a person called "SEE THRU" who had bought for a dollar from a corner Baltimore, Maryland, called the "more See-Thru Corporation" and would have prevented the accident no matter how hard it should be. A wind shield treated with this preparation would always remain clear as on a bright summer day, and that every person who drove a car should not endanger life by driving without it. He said that he had over from Govanstown several times before and could not understand the driver of the jitney could not see such speed on a rainy night until told him he always used "SEE THRU". After the driver explained to him how simple it was to use, he so long as it rained he would not lose any time ending the dollar for a box and that he had that it certainly did the trick. He said that it certainly did the trick.

When a man gets into a predicament preserves his temper.

"O Happy Day" says the song as she hung the snowy veil on the line. It was a "happy day" she used Red Cross Ball Blue—tintment.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

THE REASON WHY

EVERYDAY contact with such as regularly come up for in the home or the office, a process of reasoning them out on their own way.

Will find if you steadfastly persevere so that you will get to such a course that you will reach a higher stage of thinking, necessary always to a higher state of efficiency.

Why some one's say-so with the serious thought to the reason is an unwise thing to do.

Of whatever innate cleverness you may have, if this dependence on one else is continued, there will never come to you an opportunity to use this ability.

Will form the harmful habit of depending on others instead of standing on your own strength and using unreservedly in self.

Those upon whom you rely for advice will keep ahead of you just as you court their company and admiration.

In pursuing such a course you add incompetence and lack of force, which disqualify you for leadership.

and advertise to your employers that you are a second-grade man or woman, incapable of forming judgment without help from others.

To observe, reflect and apply ought to be the high purpose of every man and woman in the stern battle of life.

Observe as a child and keep observing until you find the reason why.

If you will reflect, sift out the chaff from the wheat, you will in a short time be qualified to judge the good from the worthless and pick out the best every time you are called upon to make a decision.

With this newly acquired ability, you will know unerringly how to choose the right course and follow it with strength and assurance.

Instead of being a weak dependent, wavering, uncertain and timid, you will grow steadily into a strong, bold leader capable of shouldering great responsibilities.

Keep your eyes open, use the mind given you by the Creator, figure the value of everything that has a direct bearing on your work, apply the useful and you will encounter no real difficulties in finding the reason why, or in piercing the bull's eye of success with an arrow of your own making.

WANTED—A NAME

WANTED—A name for the baby? That sweet little mite of a miss.

With pink hands and feet, and puckering lips sweet.

Held up for a fond parent's kiss.

Rosie, or Josie, or Mary;

Or Margaret, Lilly, or May;

Priscilla or Prue—does any suit you?

We've just got to name her today.

Wanted—A name for the baby?

That's nestling there fast asleep;

A precious wee mite on her pillow of white.

God gave us to guard and to keep.

Annie, or Carrie, or Hazel;

Or Annabel, Oral of Jo;

Annette or Sue—does any suit you?

We've just got to name her, you know.

Wanted—A name for the baby?

That little pink image of love

That came with the year with a message of cheer,

Straight down from the mansions above.

Maggie, or Katie or Flora;

Or Amethyst, Kitten or Bess;

All good, I suppose—but dear goodness knows

We'll just call her "Sister," I guess

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

BY THE SEA

"This is a nice garden," said the little Grape Hyacinths.

They are purple and look something like hyacinths and something like blue-bells.

They are flowers that come from bulbs as the hyacinths do, and are growing in a lovely garden in a small place by the sea.

They had a long, thin, grass-like leaf and the dear little bell-like flowers close together on the stem looked so pretty and springlike.

"It is indeed a nice garden," said some Dogwood flowers. "For we have always been allowed to stay here and each spring we open our big single yellowish greenish flowers."

"We are here too, don't forget us," said the Apple Blossoms.

"And here we are," said the Pansies. "They say we've never been as big as we are this year. There is little Lady Yellow Pansy—she is so big and beautiful and has such an exquisite face."

"Then there is Prince Purple Pansy, and His Lordship Black Pansy and all the rest of us. My name is Gentleman Brown Pansy."

"Of course," said the Flowering Dogwood, "we haven't bloomed as yet. We've just begun our springtime routine."

"What is a routine?" asked the Apple Blossoms.

"You should know," said the Flowering Dogwood.

"We don't, we're sorry," said the Apple Blossoms.

"Well," said the Flowering Dogwood, "we're not much on explaining things like that but we will do our best."

"Now you follow a routine—or an order of events. For example your routine is to be apple blossoms first, then you have leaves, then you have apples which ripen and then you lose your leaves when the fall comes."

"That is your routine."

"A person's routine may be to get up early every morning, eat breakfast, take a short, brisk walk, go to school or business, have lunch, play or work in the afternoon, have supper, study or read or play games or a little of all three in the evenings."

"And if that is the way they plan to do and follow their plans, they say that they are following their routine, or the rules they've made for themselves to follow."

"Trees have routine as you see."

"We understand now," said the Apple Blossoms.

"We're devoted to this garden," said the fragrant Wall Flowers. "We have soft faces and we are always fond of the best of scent."

"We are loved by many and the owner of this garden is devoted to us."

"She does such a kind thing too—she takes bunches of us up to a friend of hers who lives in the city where there are no flowers."

"This friend dearly loves us and puts us in water and gives us fresh water each day."

"The Breeze Brothers have told us that this was what happened to those of our family who were taken to the city. You know the Breeze Brothers travel all about."

"They also told us that some of the members of our family have been worn by the friend of our owner and that they've seen the streets and many people and all sorts of city sights."

"Some of our family have been worn by her, too, for she said she loved us as well," said the little Grape Hyacinths. "We don't mean to be jealous for we don't think we are jealous. We just want to be loved too."

"We understand," said the Wall Flowers. "We quite, quite understand."

"But you are her special favorites," said the Grape Hyacinths, "and that is quite right. You should be."

And so the flowers chatted, and nodded their pretty heads, and sang this little song while the Breeze Brothers whistled:

"We, the flowers, all agree

"That we love this garden by the sea."

Spink, Spunk, Spunk.

Papa—Bobby, if you had a little more spunk you would stand better in your class. Now, do you know what spunk is?"

Bobby—"Yes, sir. It's the past participle of spunk."

Not Kind.

Miss Ann Teek (who writes)—I am thinking of writing a love story founded on my own experience.

Miss Young—You'd better give it a happier ending, dear.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

THE HAND OF A MUSICIAN

IN THE hand of a person who is talented in music, the skin is very smooth and soft. This indicates a refined, sensitive nature, with a great dislike for anything that is coarse or unrefined. As a musician, of either sex, must pay attention to details, the fingers must be long in proportion to the rest of the hand.

In the hands of many musicians, the thumb, at its outer angle or joint, is quite pointed. This is held to show a good idea of time or rhythm. A sense of tune is sometimes seen in a point or protuberance on the outside of the thumb, below the joint.

The mount of Venus should be fairly strong and high, to show melody, and this characteristic is seen also in a good mount of Saturn at the base of the middle finger. When there are a good mount of Apollo at the base of the third or ring finger, and a good mount of the moon near the wrist, a decided sense of harmony is shown.

THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

The man who depends on his home paper to build up his home town, thereby increasing his trade, and then buys his printing out of town belongs to the past; he has no place in the progressive age.

The Lorenzo Enterprise is now being printed in the office of the Lubbock Avalanche. James L. Dow, editor of the Avalanche, is the owner of the paper and L. Quinn is editor. Mr. Quinn will maintain his office in Lorenzo and do job work.

The McGee oil well, twenty miles north of Panhandle, on the North Plains is standing 1000 feet in oil, according to Amarillo newspapers. Several more wells are being drilled in Carson and Hutchinson counties. One of the largest gas wells in the world is located north of Amarillo.

Many folks reading the Dallas News these days are led to wonder what the editors of that paper had to write about before the K. K. K. organized in Texas. We would suggest that a change in editorials is due their readers and if nothing else offers they might spend a few on "how to make a flapper flop," or an easy way to do the "shimmy shove," or just any old thing for a rest.—Ex.

The Texas Press Association meets at Denton this week, where they will be the guests of the College of Industrial Arts. The News man would like very much to have attended this meeting, and would have, probably, if we had not been short on "kale." An effort will be made by Panhandle representatives to have the State Press convention meet in Amarillo in 1924. Galveston will probably get the convention next year.

Many Lynn county farmers are busy planting since the rains. Land is in fine condition for planting. It has been several years since the land was in better condition than at this time. One of the largest row crops in the history of the county will be planted this year. The cotton acreage will more than likely be doubled over the acreage planted last season. Prosperity reigns supreme for Lynn county farmers this fall. The wheat crop is in excellent condition and will furnish the farmer with plenty of good coin for the summer.

The City Dads have placed a high-powered electric light on top of the new water tower in north Tahoka. This light can be seen for many miles in every direction, as the stand pipe towers 130 feet into the air. The tower and tank was recently accepted by the council from the contractors. Messrs. Doak and Stewart, ascended the tower to make the inspection.

We are not exaggerating in the least when we tell the world that Lynn county has the best highways of any county in west Texas. A trip over these roads will prove this fact. Our sister county—Lubbock, has by far the roughest roads of any county we have traversed recently. Signs on the highway, read to "step on it," you will soon be in Lubbock, etc., are out of place, for if a fellow did attempt to make any speed over those roads he would be "blowed up" for keeps. Lynn county roads are kept in excellent condition by dragging them immediately after rains, and otherwise looking after their upkeep.

The Crosby County Hustler, published at Crosbyton, by Kelly S. White, a resident of that city, has reached our exchange table. The edition is issued in booklet form and contains 24 pages. Mr. White is an A1 printer and will no doubt make good in the publication of the Hustler in the town of Crosbyton. That little city already has one newspaper and job plant, but no doubt there is plenty of room for both publications, if a bit of work can be obtained from outside territory. Here's hoping Mr. White a long and prosperous career in the publication of the Hustler.

McKinney Courier-Gazette: Some body suggests that there are five things in life which we ought to learn. Here they are: 1. Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. When you smile or laugh your brain for a moment is freed from the load it ordinarily carries. 2. Learn to tell a helpful story. A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick room. 3. Learn to keep your troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to linger over your ills and sorrows. 4. Learn to stop croaking. If you cannot see any good in this world, keep the bad to your self. 5. Learn to greet your friends with a smile. They carry too many frowns in their own hearts to be bothered with any of yours.

SAYS NEWSPAPER IS
TOWN'S BIGGEST ASSETLive Publication Is Most Important
Factor in Boosting a Municipality.

A town's biggest asset is its newspaper, provided, of course, the newspaper has the interest of the town at heart. The true value of this is very often underrated by careless and unobservant persons. A live newspaper can do more to boost a town and advertise it than any other force in it. Its importance is obvious.

A dead paper is a hindrance to any town. A town is judged by the way it is reflected through the columns of its newspaper. A commendable publication in a town draws the attention of outsiders, maintains interest in home industry and goes out heralding the news that its town is the best.

There are many things that go to make up a good newspaper. It is not only the source of news and information, but it acts as a medium for the business houses and their customers. By reading its columns of advertisements, the shopper is informed of the bargains that would otherwise escape notice. It renders the merchant a service by bringing his goods before the people's notice. This double service carried on thru the advertising columns is the biggest feature of the modern paper.

There is quality in advertising. The publication that strives to make the ads attractive will get the advertiser the best results. No one cares to read an ad that is not pleasing to the eye. The modern and up-to-date paper specializes on the arrangement and makeup of its ads to make them attractive and appealing to the reading public. This works for better general results, pleasing to both readers and the advertisers.

The home paper is always the best, as it comes in closer touch with the problems of life in your community. Its interests are your interests and it is desirous of the betterment of local things. Watch the paper that boosts the home industries, schools, churches, etc., and lend it your support.—Ex.

ADVERTISING

Newspaper advertising is one of the greatest educational influences in this country today. Everybody with anything which he expects the public to buy can avail himself of it. If you have a good thing which the public ought to want, but doesn't—try newspaper advertising and charge it to operating expenses. It belongs there.

Why Not Build Now!

The price of building material is in line with the price of the commodities you sell. If you are a farmer see how the price of a two hundred pound hog will compare in purchasing lumber with a two hundred pound hog in 1918, when the price of everything was up.

Don't contemplate Building.—Just build!—Never before was the time better for the builder. Our fine materials priced within the reach of all, makes building costs mighty low, and really for fine building and economical building, our materials cannot be beaten. Figure with us.

YOUR HEALTH GRADUALLY SLIPPING?

Amazing Experience of a Texas Lady Who Declares That if More Women Knew About Cardui They Would Be Spared Much Sickness and Worry.

... Mrs. W. M. Peden, of Texas, relates the following interesting account of how she recovered her health, having realized that she was gradually losing her health:

"It is the greatest thing in the world when you feel that gradually slipping away from you, you certainly sit and take notice. That is what I did some time ago when I found myself in a nervous, run-down condition of health. I was so tired and felt so lifeless that I hardly got at all.

"I was just no account for work. I could get a bucket of water and would not want to set it down. I felt like I could lift it to the shelf. I was, of course, to do even the housework was a task almost impossible to accomplish.

"... nervous and easily upset.

I couldn't rest well at night and was just lifeless.

"I heard of Cardui and after reading I decided I had some female trouble that was pulling me down. I sent for Cardui and began it.

"In a very short while after I began the Cardui Home Treatment I saw an improvement and it wasn't long until I was all right—good appetite, splendid rest, and much stronger so that I easily did my house work.

"Later I took a bottle of Cardui as a tonic. I can recommend Cardui and gladly do so, for if more women knew, it would save a great deal of worry and sickness."

The enthusiastic praise of thousands of other women who have found Cardui helpful should convince you that it is worth trying. All druggists sell it.

WHAT SHALL BE THE OUTCOME?

Sixty years ago next summer, I joined the M. E. C. S., on probation. At the end of six months I became a member in full connection. Since that time, and in a cursory manner, earlier I have been a reader of the Bible, the authorized version—possibly, with the exception of the Catholic version, the only one in extant in this country at that time. It was read and loved and preached and lived by the stalwart country, and its publication and distribution had been and continued to be down to the present time. The one sole and consuming object and aim of the American as well as the British, Bible society, selling it at cost or without perceptible profit, giving away thousands of copies of God's word to the indigent or those who were too little interested in their souls salvation to pay 50c for a bible or 5c for a testament. Meantime the word has been translated into over 300 languages and dialects, many of the written languages of these being the result of the labor of the missionaries, who hewed the trail and broke the ground for spiritual harvest among the heathen, yea, savage peoples, and have entered into their rewards and bringing their sheaves with them, while millions of copies scattered all over this world bear silent testimony to their devotion and fidelity.

In the words of the song.
"It was good for our fathers, it was good for our mothers, its good enough for me."

It is with deep concern and keen sorrow, that I note the tendency to drift away from "My Mothers Bible" and substitute in its place the "Nelson American Standard Bible," published by Nelson & Sons, the name Nelson being a part of this particular version. "The Holy Bible" is sufficient to designate the word of God in the authorized or King James version of the bible.

The student part of last year carried parables columns of the text from both "authorized" and "Standard" versions with an occasional lesson from the authorized. January, 1922 lessons are all based on the authorized with parenthetic inserts to make plain the meaning of the text. Other copies of the current year have the same with the quotations in the explanatory articles taken mainly from the standard.

At one of the closing scenes of the Saviours life, one in authority said: "What Shall I do with Jesus?" Now the question comes to us with force, "What shall we do with our Bible?" Shall we discard it and adopt the Nelson bible? In the event of this substitution, what becomes of the American Bible Society, (to say nothing of the British Bible society), who have for so long given the plain word of God Without note or comment to the masses in this the great free land of religious liberty? What will become of the published word either whole or in part now being printed in the languages and dialects of the heathen world and Catholic dominated peoples, who now have easy access and undiluted word of God? What will become of the expensive and costly equipment for its publication which the Bible Society has been accumulating, enlarging and improving from its earliest incipency to the present date? What shall become of the bible fund yearly contributed to this worthy cause? What shall become of the labor, study and self sacrifice of the missionaries who have so helped and feathered this work, even shortening their lives by so doing? What shall the effect be on the converts from heathendom when we tell them the Bible they know and love is an absolete thing and offer them the newer other Bible? Shall they be committed to the junk heap? Will the Thomas Nelson & sons Company take up this great work in its new gigantic proportions and at great labor, cost, sacrifice and loss give to the world, hungry for the bread of life, grander, better, broader, more perfect word of God, or having undermined, undated and discounted the grand old bible of our fathers and mothers until its dissemination and world wide distribution is weakened and hindered, and a tide of infidelity and unbelief sweeps the world in its tragic usefulness, sell the American Standard Revised at high figures, and to the poor at prohibitive prices as a money-making scheme for themselves? Which shall it be? Which shall we adopt? Deliver us from a "corner" on the word of God.

In the introductory notes of the new indexed Bible published by the John A. Dickson Publishing Co., we find this quotation reference to one of the modern revisions: "It is hoped that it will tend to a clear knowledge of the scriptures," and these prophetic words, "It is claimed by some that the revised version is coming more and more into use, but generations will pass away before the King James Version, the bible of our fathers and mothers, will give place to the Revised Version!"

So mote it be. Amen.

Lynn County ABSTRACT CO.

We meet competition regardless of price; as to service, will let the past speak for itself. It is true that the public have been charged extortionate prices for the past 3 years for their abstract work.

Please stop and see what prices were being charged when we had what was known as the West Texas and Lynn County Abstract firms operating in our County. When these plants were purchased by B. H. Robinson they were operated under the name of the Lynn County Abstract Co., with the same fees that were charged, when both plants were being operated.

As to who operated them it is hardly worth while to mention.

The Lynn County Abstract Company is the oldest and only complete abstract Company in the County, having been doing business here for the past 17 years.

As to the qualifications, as abstractor's will refer you to any business firm or bank in the county, and our work and service speaks for itself. The price which has been charged is the customary price all over the West. However, we remain to meet all competition, regardless of price with the same service and accuracy, as you have received in the past.

Abstract plants may come and go, but the Lynn County Abstract Company will be here forever. When they get better service and prices on this line of work, same will be purchased from KRESS.

THE PARIS GOWNS

Fashion Hints From France May Be Used to Advantage.

Many Embroideries Used on Afternoon and Evening Dresses—Suits Also Embroidered in Places.

Dresses from Paris have so many fine points of distinction that it is interesting to follow their devices and various ways, observes a Paris fashion writer in the New York Times. Perhaps the silhouette does remain practically the same, but that only increases the expression of loveliness of detail.

From many of the French gowns, which are perhaps too exaggerated or too elaborate for actual American wear, one can derive hints and notes that only go to make one's own gowns more beautiful.

There are many embroideries on all the French gowns, both those for afternoon and those for evening wear. Even the suits are embroidered in places. In fact, this is the trimming, above all others, which the French have decided to use for the adornment of the spring gowns.

For evening, there are numberless crystal embroidered motifs, and many of these are being used on all-white gowns, while others are placed in conjunction with very brilliantly colored chiffons and crepes and satins.

The girdles and waistline arrangements continue to be important features, and whenever the gown is quite plain it is bound to have some embroidered motif placed at the waistline in some spot, even when the trimming does not extend all the way around.

The necklines here, as a rule, are rounded and are trimmed with scalloped collars finished with rows of knots. These are extremely youthful arrangements which have a strong appeal for those of a more youthful type. Many of the sleeves end at a point just below the elbow. Often the long and wide sleeves are faced with brightly contrasting colors of silk, and some of them are cut in two long points to resemble the shaping of a swallow's tail.

ORNAMENTS FOR MILADY'S GOWNS

Original Trimmings Featured by Majority of the French Dressmakers; Many Beads Used.

The matter of trimmings, even in a trimmings season, is something that concerns the Parisian dressmakers most sincerely. For, whatever they are or wherever they are placed, they must be perfectly done. And it is these touches which ravish us as we see them appearing on the new French frocks. They are so very original and so inspiring to the creation of dress in this country, no matter what may be said to the contrary.

There are loads of steel beads—small beads they are called. There are little rows of corrugated trimmings—that is, ribbons and narrow pieces of silk either to match the dress in color or to contrast with it in some way.

Egyptian handbags in the way of girdles or belts are made up from the handsomest of beaded and embroidered. On a blue serge dress there is a stunning giraffe of Egyptian red.

There are many fringes seen upon

White Hats Worn.

Right in the face of all predictions that have been made of a big season for sport millinery in high colors, a prediction of the trade voice, a prediction that the coming of the outdoor season will bring with it the biggest vogue for white hats that has been seen for a long time. Whether the prophecy will be fulfilled or not, it is a fact that there is a noticeable and growing sale of all-white hats at the present time.

NEW STUNNING SPORT MODEL

This winsome new sport model is made more attractive by the addition of linen collars and cuffs edged with black taffeta. The costume is in brown eponge. The cape falls in points on either side and ties are fringed, as is the bottom of the skirt.

DRESSES FOR THE KIDDIES

Dotted Swiss and Pongee Are Among the Favorite Materials for the Little Folks.

For very little folk, ranging from two to six-year sizes, dotted swiss and pongee are two well-liked fabrics.

Dotted swiss, either in white with pastel colored dots or darker shades, like red or brown, speckled in white, appears with marked frequency. In the lighter colored numbers a popular mode of embellishment is the smocking in colored mercerized threads matching the color of the dots, forming yokes. One dress noted in brown, dotted in white, was trimmed with rows of insertion and edging of fine lace, insuring the laundering possibilities of the frock.

Striped handkerchief linen or dimity, in rather broad and bold stripings, also appear in the group for small people. When these stripes are selected for the fabric, the choice is invariably for tucked details.

In the pongees, worsted embroideries are the favorite usage, forming yokes and accenting pocket contrivances.

Panels and Eyelet Inserts.

A showing of summer frocks features handkerchief linen and organdy with panels and insets of eyelet embroidery. The frocks are in the pastel shades and white and on them rich and heavy eyelet embroidery is most effective. Lace insets and panels, as well as lace-edged girdles and flounces, also are to be noted. Except that often the sleeves are a mere pretense and the waistline remains long, these frocks are a hark back to the summer gowns of by-gone days.

Colors in Millinery.

Millinery colors stress bright red, American Beauty and almond green. Tangerine, sage and periwinkle are also popular.

FLOWER APPLIQUES FOR TRIM

Dainty, Old-Fashioned Bouquet, With Lace Paper Edges, Now Adorns the Blouse.

The dainty, old-fashioned bouquet with its lace paper edges that experienced such a revival in the trimming of handmade handkerchiefs now comes to adorn the blouse. Sometimes the flowers are of wool and sometimes in fabric or a cluster of both with the lace paper imitated by a frill of three-fourths-inch valenciennes. Here the corsage is, of course, much larger and is properly posed at the waistline of the blouse.

In other flower trims on blouses, all sorts of fabrics and manipulations are used, from twists of self-material on crepe de chine, made into bunchy flower motifs, to flat overlapping layers of picot-edged organdie, which is often used on silk blouses.

Three-Piece Costumes.

In the three-piece costume with cape to match, white is favored with red, yellow or black.

MODERN METHODS KEEP AUTOS NEW

Several Excellent Liquid and Wax Polishes on Market Give Admirable Results.

SPRAYER USEFUL ON SURFACE

Owner Must Not Assume That New and Helpful Aids in Beautifying Have Superseded Water—Cars Must Be Washed.

The present-day owner using modern methods may keep his car looking new all the time, nor will he have to spend more than a few moments a day to accomplish this end. For instance, there are now on the market a number of liquid and wax polishes which will give admirable results if they are used as directed.

In the use of wax polishes the first step is to clean the body of the car thoroughly. The polish is applied to the surface with a piece of cheese cloth and then another clean cloth is used to distribute the wax evenly all over the surface. Car owners commonly make the mistake of thinking that the more wax applied the better. As a matter of fact a very thin film is all that is needed. The polish will last for from four days to a week, and after it has been applied at the beginning of the week a little rubbing with a clean cloth will bring out the luster again. The wax polish may be used for body, fenders, hood and other lustrous surfaces and it will also be found that if the under side of the fenders is cleaned and given a good coating of wax less mud will be deposited and what is there may be easily removed.

Spray Polish.

The most recent type of body polish is that which is sprayed on the surface with a large sprayer. In using this polish the body must be thoroughly cleaned with water. If the body surfaces are merely dusty the polish may be sprayed on and then be wiped off with a clean cloth. After spraying the polish over the surface a piece of cheesecloth is used to wipe off the excess.

The present-day owner must not assume that these new and really useful aids to beautifying the motorcar have superseded plain water. The contrary is true. The car must be washed just as formerly, after which the new polishes will bring out the luster of the original finish.

Soap should never be used on the body except for removing grease or oil spots. A small piece of soft cloth, well covered with castile soap suds, serves very well to remove grease from the panels. The hood should never be washed while it is hot, as this will result in discoloration. In cleaning the radiator send a stream of water from the rear instead of the front, to keep moisture out of the mechanism.

Use a Chamois.

In drying the body a clean chamois skin should be used, rubbing being done in straight lines. If spots of tar or road oil are found on the body it is best to treat them with salt, butter or kerosene. The butter softens the deposit so that it may be wiped off easily. Kerosene should be applied locally and wiped off within a minute.

To keep pace with the improved appearance of the body it is necessary to give some attention to the top and the upholstery. A weekly brushing of the top inside and out will aid materially in its life. Fabric tops should never be cleaned with gasoline, kerosene or other oils, as they tend to destroy the rubber in the top. Castile soap and water applied with a stiff brush is the best cleansing medium for the top.

GARAGE-DOOR LATCH UNUSUALLY DURABLE

Good Plan to Put One on That Will Last for Years.

Device Shown in Illustration Has Been Used With Satisfaction and Requires No Expensive Materials in Making.

It is a good idea to provide a large garage door with a good, heavy latch, put on in such a way that it will last for many years and will resist the efforts of thieves. The latch illustrated has been used with satisfaction, and requires no materials for its construction except some scraps of bar iron, a few bolts or cap screws, some steel wire, and a leaf from an old automobile spring. It is, however, well to get a piece of two-inch angle iron.

Scraps of Bar Iron and an Old Auto Spring Are Made Into an Unusually Durable Garage-Door Latch.

to use as illustrated, as this adds much to the security against theft. A coat of black paint will improve the looks of the metal parts, and enough play should be left so that the paint will not interfere with their free working.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

POOR PACKING CAUSES LEAK

Excessive Squeezing of Candle Wick or Other Material Is Apt to Cause Trouble.

When the water pump begins leaking do not assume that necessarily it is because the nut is too loose. Frequently the nut is not to blame at all, but poor packing is the real cause of the trouble. Packing for this part consists of candle wick soaked in tallow, heavy twine similarly treated, or special packing material. After the nut has been turned to press the packing down do not turn it further, as excessive squeezing is apt to damage some part of the body of the pump.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

Don't use gasoline to clean leather unless you want to crack it.

When ball bearings become worn it is not always necessary to have complete new bearings installed. The old ones can be repaired and be almost as good as new.

An empty oil can, in addition to the regular equipment, is a good thing to carry in the car. It may be filled with gasoline for priming the cylinders or cleaning spark plugs.

A simple but frequently forgotten precaution in regard to filling the gasoline tank is that the mouth of the gasoline can should be carefully wiped off before filling to remove any dust or dirt that may have lodged there.

Just polishing up the points when cleaning a spark plug is entirely insufficient. Remove all the carbon from the porcelain or mica by washing them in a solution of gasoline.

TOURING CAR FOR WEEK-ENDS MADE DELIVERY CAR FOR BUSINESS WEEK

At last the small shopkeeper whose wife insists on a pleasure auto while his business affords only the funds for a needed delivery car, can satisfy both wife and business. This new "convertible," sold in England at small cost, is a roomy, sturdy light delivery car during the week. And when Sunday comes the owner lets down the folding seats—as shown in the photograph—and has a touring car seating six to take "Arriet and all the little 'Arry's and 'Arries" driving in the country.

MARY MARIE

BY ELEANOR H. PORTER

ILLUSTRATIONS BY R.H. LIVINGSTONE.

COPYRIGHT BY ELEANOR H. PORTER.

IN BOSTON

SYNOPSIS.—In a preface Mary Marie explains her apparent "diversity of personality" and just why it is. She also tells her reasons for writing the diary—later to be known as "The Diary of Mary Marie." The diary is commenced on the day when she begins her new life. Sarah's account of her birth, which seemingly improved her father, who is a famous astronomer, less than a new star which was discovered the same night. Her name is a compromise, for her mother wanted to call her Sarah and her father insisted on calling Jane. The child quickly learned that her home was in some way different from those of her friends, and was puzzled. Nurse Sarah tells her of her mother's arrival at Andersonville as a bride and how astonished she was at the sight of the thirty-eight-year-old girl whom the society professor had chosen for his wife. Nurse Sarah makes it plain that the household seemed a strange place to the child and how her father and mother drifted apart through misunderstanding, each too proud to in any way attempt to reach out to the other. Mary Marie of the time spent "out west" where the "perfectly right and proper" divorce was being arranged for, and her father's very unaccountable behavior. By the court's decree the child is to spend six months of the year with her mother and six months with her father. Boston is her home.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

Everything seems awfully queer. I guess because Father isn't here, for he wrote very polite and kind letters to come to get our things. He said he was going to New York for business for several days, so Mother and I don't fear he should annoy her by his presence. Then, another morning Mother's queer. This morning she was singing away at the top of her voice and running all over the house doing up things she wanted; and when I came down on the floor in the morning crying as if her heart would break with her head in Father's big chair before the fireplace. But she wiped up the minute I came in and said, no, no, she didn't want anything. She was just tired; that's all. And when I asked her if she was sorry, she said, no, no, no, indeed, she wasn't. She was just tired as glad could be that she was only she wished Monday would come and come so we could be and that's all. It's a Saturday now, and we go just day after tomorrow. Mother's trunk is most packed, and she says she wishes she'd planned to go today. I've said good-bye to all my friends, and promised to write loads of letters about Boston and everything. They are almost as excited as I am, and I've promised, "cross my heart and hope to die," that I won't leave those Boston girls better than I am—especially Carrie Heywood, my dearest friend.

Nurse Sarah is hovering around everywhere, asking to help, and pretending she's sorry we're going. But she isn't sorry. She's glad. I know it. She never did appreciate Father, and she thinks she'll have everything her own way now. But she said I could tell her a thing or two I wanted to. But I shan't.

Father's sister, Aunt Jane Anderson, and St. Paul, is coming to keep house for me, partly on account of Father, and partly on account of me. "If that is going to be with her father for the rest of the time, she's got to be a woman there beside a man, and a nurse and a nosey servant. They didn't know I heard that. And now Aunt Jane is coming. My how mad Nurse Sarah would be if she knew. But she doesn't.

Now I'll end this chapter here with a fresh one down in Boston. I do so wonder what it'll be like—Mother's home, Grandpa Desmond, and all the rest. I'm so excited and hardly wait. You see, Mother took me home with her but once, when I was a very small child. I don't know why, but I guess Father wanted me to go. It's safe to say I didn't, anyway. He never wants to do anything, hardly. That's why I don't want him to go. I don't want Grandpa Desmond's. And when he didn't go only once, in ages. I don't think it will be in Boston. I don't think of it—really, truly Boston!

CHAPTER IV.

When I Am Marie.

I'm here. I've been here a while. But this is the first minute I've had a chance to write a word. I've been so busy just being here. And so busy. There's been such a lot going on since we came. But I'll try now to begin at the beginning and tell what happened.

Well, first we got into Boston at four o'clock Monday afternoon, and there was Grandpa Desmond to meet us. He's lovely—tall and dignified, with gray hair and merry eyes like Mother's, only his are behind glasses. At the station he just kissed Mother and me and said he was glad to see us, and led us to the place where Peter was waiting with the car. (Peter drives Grandpa's automobile, and he's lovely, too.)

Mother and Grandpa talked very fast and very lively all the way home, and Mother laughed quite a lot. But in the hall she cried a little, and Grandpa patted her shoulder, and said, "There, there!" and told her how glad he was to get his little girl back, and that they were going to be very happy now and forget the past. And Mother said, yes, yes, indeed, she knew she was; and she was so glad to be there, and that everything was going to be just the same, wasn't it? Only—then all of a sudden she looked over at me and began to cry again—only, of course, things couldn't be "just the same," she choked, hurrying over to me and putting both arms around me, and crying harder than ever.

Then Grandpa came and hugged us both, and patted us, and said, "There, there!" and pulled off his glasses and wiped them very fast and very hard.

But it wasn't only a minute or two before Mother was laughing again, and saying, "Nonsense!" and "The idea!" and this was a pretty way to introduce her little Marie to her new home!

Well, First We Got Into Boston at Four O'clock Monday Afternoon, and There Was Grandpa Desmond to Meet Us.

Then she hurried me to the dearest little room I ever saw, right out of hers, and took off my things. Then we went all over the house. And it just as lovely as can be—not at all like Father's in Andersonville.

Oh, Father's is fine and big and handsome, and all that, of course; but not like this. His is just a nice place to eat and sleep in, and go to when it rains. But this—the one you just want to live in all the time. Here there are curtains 'way up and sunshine, and flowers in pots, and magazines, and cozy nooks with cushions everywhere; and books that you've just been reading laid down. (All Father's books are in bookcases, always, except while one's in your hands being read.)

Grandpa's other daughter, Mother's sister, Hattie, lives here and keeps house for Grandpa. She has a little boy named Lester, six years old; and her husband is dead. They were away for what they called a week-end when we came, but they got here a little after we did Monday afternoon; and they're lovely, too.

We have dinner at night here, and I've been to the theater twice already in the afternoon. I've got to go to school next week, Mother says, but so far I've just been having a good time. And so's Mother. Honestly, it has just seemed as if Mother couldn't crowd the days full enough. She hasn't been still a minute.

Lots of her old friends have been to see her; and when there hasn't been anybody else around she's taken Peter and had him drive us all over Boston to see things—all kinds of things; Bunker Hill and museums, and moving pictures, and one play.

But we didn't stay at the play. It started out all right, but pretty soon a man and a woman on the stage began to quarrel. They were married (not really, but in the play, I mean), and I guess it was some more of that incompatibility stuff. Anyhow, as they began to talk more and more, Mother began to fidget, and pretty soon I saw she was gathering up our things; and the minute the curtain went down after the first act, she says: "Come, dear, we're going home. It—it isn't very warm here."

As if I didn't know what she was really leaving for! Do old folks honestly think they are fooling us all the time, I wonder? But even if I hadn't known then, I'd have known it later, for that evening I heard Mother and Aunt Hattie talking in the library.

No, I didn't listen. I heard. And that's a very different matter. You listen when you mean to, and that's sneaking. You hear when you can't help yourself, and that you can't be blamed for. Sometimes it's your good luck, and sometimes it's your bad luck—just according to what you hear!

Well, I was in the window-seat in the library reading when Mother and Aunt Hattie came in; and Mother was saying:

"Of course I came out! Do you suppose I'd have had that child see that play, after I realized what it was? As if she hasn't had enough of such wretched stuff already in her short life! Oh, Hattie, Hattie, I want that child to laugh, to sing, to fairly tingle with the joy of living every minute that she is with me. I know so what she has had, and what she will have—in that—tomb. You know in six months she goes back!"

Mother saw me then, I know; for she stopped right off short, and after a moment began to talk of something else, very fast. And pretty quick it went out into the hall again.

Dear little Mother! Bless her old heart! Isn't she the dearest dear to want me to have all the good times possible now so as to make up for the six months I've got to be with Father? You see, she knows what it is to live with Father even better than I do.

But I know now why I've been having such a perfectly beautiful time all this week, and why Mother has been filling every minute so full of fun and good times. Why, even when we're at home here, she's always hunting up little Lester and getting him to have a romp with us.

But of course next week I've got to go to school, and it can't be quite so jolly then. Well, I guess that's all for this time.

ABOUT A MONTH LATER

I didn't make a chapter of that last. It wasn't long enough. And, really, I don't know as I've got much to add to it now. There's nothing much happened.

I go to school now, and don't have so much time for fun. School's pretty good, and there are two or three girls most as nice as the ones of Andersonville. But not quite. Out of school Mother keeps things just as lively as ever, and we have beautiful times. Mother is having a lovely time with her own friends, too. Seems as if there is always some one here when I get home, and lots of times there are teas and parties, and people to dinner.

There are gentlemen, too. I suppose one of them will be Mother's lover by and by; but of course I don't know which one yet. I'm awfully interested in them, though. And of course it's perfectly natural that I should be. Wouldn't you be interested in the man that was going to be your new father? Well, I just guess you would! Anybody would.

There are quite a lot of them, and they're all different. They'd make very different kinds of fathers, I'm sure, and I'm afraid I wouldn't like some of them. But, after all, it's Mother that ought to settle which to have—not me. She's the one to be pleased. 'Twould be such a pity to have to change again. Though she could, of course, same as she did Father, I suppose.

As I said, they're all different. There are only two that are anywhere near alike, and they aren't quite the same, for one's a lawyer and the other's in a bank. But they both carry canes and wear tall silk hats, and part their hair in the middle, and look at you through the kind of big round eyeglasses with dark rims that would make you look awfully homely if they didn't make you look so stylish. But I don't think Mother cares very much for either the lawyer or the bank man, and I'm glad. I wouldn't like to live with those glasses every day, even if they are stylish. I'd much rather have Father's kind.

Then there's the man that paints pictures. He's tall and slim, and wears queer ties and long hair. He's always standing back and looking at things with his head on one side, and exclaiming "Oh!" and "Ah!" with a long breath. He says Mother's coloring is wonderful. I heard him. And I didn't like it very well, either. Why, it sounded as if she put it on herself out of a box on her bureau, same as some other ladies do!

"Dr. Anderson is not a wretch at all. He's an honorable, scholarly gentleman."

"Beautiful Isle"

Type of Cart Used in Sugar Cane Districts of Formosa.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

One of the most important of the "slices of China" taken by outside nations, but one which there has been no mention of restoring, is the island which the world knows as Formosa, but which the Japanese, since they gained possession of it through the China-Japanese war, have named Taiwan.

"Ihla Formosa"—Beautiful Isle—the early Portuguese voyagers called it; and never was a more appropriate name given to an isle of the sea.

If you care to confirm this in one of several pleasant ways, sail along the west coast of Formosa in a tek pai, or bamboo raft, on a clear day, and you will witness a pageant of mountain scenery that will haunt the memory for many a day.

Beyond the fertile plain, with its emerald paddy-fields and its picturesque little villages dotted here and there on the banks of meandering streams, foothills with unending variations of contour silhouette their tree-fringed summits against the paler screen of more distant mountains. Of these, sometimes five and sometimes even six parallel ranges are visible at once, each a separate ribbon of color, shading from the deepest sapphire to the palest azure and extending in an unbroken chain of beauty from north to south.

On the east of the island you can see the highest coastal cliffs known, at some places rising abruptly to an elevation of about 6,000 feet, and affording an impregnable wall of defense to the wild aboriginal tribes living in the mountains back of them.

All Kinds of Vegetation.

Formosan scenery is unusual in its diversity of vegetation within such narrow confines—the greatest length of the island from north to south is about 244 miles and 80 miles is its greatest width.

From the palms and tropical fruit trees of the western plain it is only a short step to the slopes of the lower mountains, with their exuberant jungles of various growths—the bearded banyans, the graceful tree ferns, which in sheltered nooks attain the height of palms, and the ubiquitous bamboo grass.

Here, among moss-strung trees, is found growing the beautiful butterfly orchid, while in exposed spaces, nestling among the rocks, rose-pink azaleas flaunt their gay blooms. A little higher are plateaus covered with camphor laurel, the largest tracts of these valuable trees in the world, while still higher grow the forests of coniferous trees—the giant benzil, similar to the redwoods of California, the largest trees in the East and the second largest in the world; the valuable hinoki or Japanese cypress, and the pine cedar and spruce of the New England states; and higher yet the craggy peaks of the tallest mountains, but sparsely covered with vegetation of any sort, where eagles build their nests, and which for the greater part of the year lie beneath a mantle of snow.

The usual approach to the island is the port of Kelung, in the extreme north. Almost any time one arrives in Kelung the rain will be found coming down in sheets, obscuring the hill-crested harbor.

Board a train for Taihoku, the capital city, which on most maps still bears its old Chinese name of Taipei, and in about ten minutes you will pass through a long tunnel, under a mountain ridge on the other side of which you will in all probability find the landscape flooded with sunshine. Rain seems as out of place in this new world as stars in the broad daylight.

Here and there the train passes the low, mud, thatched dwelling of some Chinese homesteader with a pool of water by way of front yard, where huge slate-colored buffaloes take their noonday siesta.

Taihoku is a Fine City.

The distance of 20 miles to Taihoku is covered in a little more than an hour, and there the traveler is sure to be amazed at the westernized appearance of the city—the broad streets, the beautiful parks, and the imposing public buildings. Only the gateways of the old wall, which surrounded the ancient Chinese city, remain, looking as out of place in their rejuvenated setting as the Egyptian obelisk in Central park. Even Daitoteli, the Chinese section of Taihoku, is unnaturally clean for a Chinese city.

The Japanese insist upon two official house cleanings a year, and as they are executed under a policeman's vigilant eye, there is nothing slipshod in the undertaking. All a man's chattels, his lures and penates, his wives and children, even to his cherished opium pipe, are heaped unceremoniously in front of his dwelling, and the work of scouring begins.

During the summer months Daitoteli presents its busiest face, for it is then that the tea season is in full swing. The colonnades of the tea hongs, if such an imposing architectural term as colonnades can be fittingly applied to such unimposing structures, are alight with the staccato accents of chattering tea pickers. These are generally young girls, as old hands are too numb for the deft manipulation of the tea leaves.

Seated on low stools before wide wicker trays, these bright-eyed maids, in their peacock-blue smocks, their front hair clipped in bangs, and with a gay posy or two stuck in the braided knots at the backs of their necks, are in animated contrast to their rather drab surroundings.

Everywhere one sees coolies packing the gayly flowered lead-lined boxes that carry their sexsive freight of tea to America. About 50 per cent of Formosa Oolong goes to the United States.

The population of Formosa is mainly agricultural. The cultivation of rice, and more especially sugar cane, is encouraged by the government, and these are grown in great quantities.

Monopoly in Camphor.

However, the most interesting industry is the production of camphor, and it can truly be said to be peculiar to the island, when it is remembered that Formosa holds a practical monopoly in the world's market of this valuable drug.

Shortly after the Japanese came to Formosa, 25 years ago, the camphor industry became a government monopoly. Before that time there had been a great deal of ruthless waste, both in the cutting down of trees and in extracting camphor from them.

At first the Japanese, too, were careless in this respect, for the supply of camphor trees seemed practically limitless, but the great increase in the demand for the product in late years has made scientific afforestation necessary. Now large tracts of land are given over to the cultivation of the camphor laurel. The oldest of these cultivated trees are now some twenty years of age.

In point of view of value, few trees can rival the camphor. An average tree, say with a basal circumference of 12 feet, will yield about 50 piculs of camphor (approximately 6,900 pounds), which, at the present market price, is worth several thousands of dollars.

Native stills are scattered here and there throughout the districts where crude camphor is collected, packed in tins and carried down precipitous mountain paths on coolies' backs to the nearest railway line, whence it goes to the refinery at Taihoku.

Ever since we have any authentic record, Formosa has been peopled with wild tribes of probably Malayan and Polynesian origin. They are nearest in point of resemblance to the Dyaks of Borneo and, although their origin has never been proved beyond a doubt, they are sufficiently like certain of the South Sea tribes to justify us in ascribing to them a common ancestry.

They are found on the island today in all stages of development. The "raw" savages, as the Chinese term them, live much as their ancestors did centuries ago, while the "ripe" savages, living on the borderland between their wild kin and Chinese settlers, have more or less assimilated Chinese ways of life. The savage population of Formosa is estimated at about 150,000.

At present Formosa enjoys greater freedom from savage attacks than ever before in her history. This is due to the fact that the Japanese have installed a live-wire barrier from Karenko, about midway on the east coast, to Pinan, in the south, a distance of about a hundred miles, to serve as a protection against savage raids.

The future of Formosa under its present benevolent paternal government looks bright indeed. Never before has this island, so beautiful to the eye, enjoyed such a degree of prosperity.

EVEN CAREFUL CALOMEL USERS ARE SALIVATED

Next Dose of Treacherous Drug May Start Misery for You.

Calomel is dangerous. It may salivate you and make you suffer fearfully from soreness of gums, tenderness of jaws and teeth, swollen tongue and excessive saliva dribbling from the mouth. Don't trust calomel. It is mercury; quicksilver.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tonic you will wake up feeling great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.—Advertisement.
