DEATON ELECTED TO CITY COUNCIL

Warning Tempers Coolidge's Zeal Over His Finance Record

PRESIDENT IN FINAL SAY ON MONEY AFFAIRS

Last Meeting With Business Experts Brings Out Accomplishments

LOCAL FINANCES BAD

National Chaos in Offing If Money Drain Is Not Stopped

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE
Universal Service Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—Speaking proudly of billions of dollars saved for the people and the nation, President Coolidge tonight made his final address to the business organization of the government.

One by one he reviewed the accomplishments of eight years of the budget system, drastic economies, greater efficiency and dazzling financing which go to make up the most remarkable chapter in the history of world fiscal affairs.

Main Accomplishments

He pointed to the following accomplishments:

Expenditures reduced from $5,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 annually.

Debt reduced by $6,667,000,000.

Interest saved, $963,000,000.

Saved for the people, $2,000,000,000 in taxation.

Relieved 2,500,000 persons from federal taxation altogether.

Sounds Warning

He then sounded a solemn warning that much is yet to be done and that the same economies must be continued to wipe out the remaining debt of $17,000,000,000.

And while federal finances now are in excellent shape, he cautioned the nation that state and local finances are not. They have become such a heavy drain on the earnings of the people as to be "the greatest menace to the continuance of prosperity."

"It is a red flag warning us of the danger of depression and a repetition of the disaster which overtook the country in the closing days of 1920," he declared. "It is a warning that should be heeded by every one intrusted with the expenditure or appropriation of public funds. It is the reason that further commitment by the national government for any new projects not absolutely necessary should be steadfastly resisted."

Last Business Meeting

It was the last time that the president will meet with those who have worked with him in reorganizing

Home Folks Hail Heroic Crew Of America—Scrolls and Money Given

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP)—Eleven men who "only followed the call of duty," and so wrote one of the most thrilling chapters in the whole history of sea rescue, were hailed as heroes in their home port today.

Brought on the city tug Macom, from Hoboken, where their ship was docked after accomplishing the rescue of 32 men from the sinking Italian steamer Florida in an Atlantic gale, Capt. George Fried of the United States liner America, Chief Officer Harry Manning and the eight men who helped him effect the rescue in a 30-foot lifeboat, and Chief Radio Operator Nelson Smith were escorted up Broadway to city hall.

Scrolls Presented.

There illuminated Scrolls were presented, speeches of congratulation were delivered, and rewards were made from a fund by public subscription.

"I just want to say," Captain Fried told Mayor James J. Walker, "that we all thank you and to further state that in doing our duty on the high seas we are doing no more than you do in your several walks of life. It is expected of us to do these things, and we try to do the best we can."

Chief Officer Manning then spoke in similar vein. "I," he said, "only did my duty, and the best I knew how."

Rescued Skipper Excited

Capt. Guiseppe Favolore of the foundered Florida became so excited as one official after another spoke in praise of the America's men that he suddenly rushed across the aldermanic chamber and threw his arms first about Captain Fried and then about Manning, kissing them soundly on the cheeks.

After the scrolls and medals had been presented and the speeches made, the public subscription raised by Paul Block, newspaper publisher, was divided by Borough President Byrne of Brooklyn.

The money awards came as a complete surprise to the men from the America. There was $5,000 for Captain Fried, $2,500 for Manning and $500 each for the crew of the lifeboat and the wireless operator.

AL TO CALL ON HOOVER TODAY

Raskob Makes Engagement For Meeting

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 28. (AP)—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York will call at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning on President-elect Hoover at the pre-inaugural home on Belle Isle.

The engagement was made tonight on behalf of the governor by John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee.

Decision of the Democratic standard bearer to call on his victorious opponent was made tonight, some hours after Mr. Hoover had issued a statement in which he said he would be glad if the former governor could find time to call, and that he would be "most happy to see him."

Mr. Hoover will go to his executive offices in the early forenoon to confer with other callers, but he probably will receive the Democratic leader at the Penney home on the opposite side of Belle Isle.

It was stated that no pictures would be made on the meeting, which will be the first between the two men since they spoke from the same platform in Carnegie hall, New York, nearly eight years ago.

Sale of four "little farm" tracts in the colonization area now under development by Charles Weeks, California intensive farming expert, was reported from the Weeks offices Monday afternoon, following the visit of approximately 500 persons Sunday afternoon to the model farm now nearing completion in the neighborhood of Westmoreland pool.

J. T. Camp and Paul C. Reed of this city were named as two of the purchasers of plots in the Weeks small farm colony. Building of homes on at least three of the tracts will take place as soon as plans can be completed, according to the announcement.

Buildings on the model farm are almost ready for the formal opening of the tract which is set for Saturday, Feb. 2. A house, poultry building, and the other improvements generally found on a small farm in the Weeks colonies are also being built on another section by a local lumber company. These improvements will be sold through the Weeks sales offices it was said, with the land on which they are being erected.

Plans followed by Mr. Weeks in building for members of the small farm communities call for a five-room modern house and a poultry house 24x72, with capacity for 600 chickens.

SECRET OF HOW NEFF GOT JOB TO BE BARED

Former Governor to Present Story as Defense For Mediation Job

CHARGE KEENLY FELT

Waco Man Says He Almost Fainted When Told Of Accusations

By CHARLES S. HAYDEN
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The secret of how Pat M. Neff happened to be named a member of the railroad meditation board has been disclosed and will be laid before the senate committee on interstate commerce at its meeting Tuesday. It was President-elect Hoover and not Senator Earle B. Mayfield who was responsible for the selection of Governor Neff.

The statement is expected to set at rest the claim of Senator Mayfield's friends that he was responsible for Neff's selection and that since the former governor did not support the senator in his campaign for renomination last summer Neff is guilty of rank ingratitude. This is said to be the ground upon which Senator Mayfield is opposing the confirmation of Neff.

Neff Defends Record

According to the story which will be laid before the committee, it was C. C. Couch of Pine Bluff, Ark., an old school pupil of Neff, who says the former governor's name to Hoover, who, in turn, recommended him to President Coolidge.

Appearing in his own defense Neff told the committee today that he was not and is not unfriendly to labor. He said he feels keenly the charges made against him by representatives of the railway brotherhood in Texas.

The committee will meet again tomorrow on the Neff case, expecting to hear from others opposing his confirmation but Senator Watson, chairman of the committee, has given notice this must be the last session.

Opposition to Continue

The committee then will report and, if favorable to confirmation, it is anticipated that Senator Earl B. Mayfield, who is opposing Neff on the ground that the former governor was not "properly grateful," will continue his opposition in the executive session.

Senator Mayfield will take the position that the confirmation of Neff will be personally objectionable to him.

At the hearing today Neff directed his attention chiefly to the charge of the labor leaders that in his handling of disputes between railways and their employes, Neff has been untactful and unfriendly to such employes.

"Came Near to Fainting"

"I came near to fainting when this charge was made the other day," deplored the former governor of Texas. "I have felt that I have been under a cloud ever since and I cannot continue to live under such a shadow."

In summing up the charges

Gerron in House and McFarlane in Senate Push Resolutions Over

AUSTIN, Jan. 28. (AP)—Investigation of the state highway department and the board of control was voted by both houses of legislature today. A committee of four from the house and three from the senate to inquire into 22 charges against the highway department and four against the control board will be appointed.

The charges were preferred by Rep. Elwin Gerron, Waxahachie, in a concurrent resolution. The house voted it 108 to 24 and the senate 19 to 6.

Third Probe Ordered

This is the third investigation authorized by this session of the legislature. A committee already is inquiring into administrative acts of the land office and the governor, attorney general's department and Texas university regents with respect to the manner in which oil and gas leases on university lands were advertised for sale. The awarding of contracts for free textbooks also is being looked into.

When the resolution came up in the house, rules were suspended on motion of Purl of Dallas to permit the immediate disposal of "the most important matter once and for all."

Doors Locked

Call of the house was ordered until the vote was taken. The sergeant at arms was instructed to lock the doors and bring in all absentees.

Petsch of Fredericksburg said he was in favor of the investigation in speaking of his motion later voted down, to have the house membership on the committee composed of the author of the resolutions and others who are unfriendly to the highway commission.

INCREASE IN STREET CAR FARE APPROVED

Council Names Committee To Draft Plan For Raise in Rates

TAX LIMIT EXTENDED

Deaton Takes Office After Selection to Fill First Vacancy

Leon L. Deaton, furniture dealer, was appointed by the Wichita Falls city council Monday night to complete the unexpired term of Aubrey W. King, alderman who resigned last week. Mr. Deaton was notified at his home of the appointment, came to the council room, was sworn in, and participated in the deliberations of the body the latter half of the evening.

After being sworn in, he made a brief talk of appreciation.

Rates Approved

Action on the request of the Wichita Falls Traction company for an increase in fares from six to seven cents was taken in the naming of a committee to work out details of the plan within the week. The council expressed its approval of the seven cent rate to the committee, all of whom were at the meeting. Those named on it are: Thelbert Martin, city attorney; W. N. Bonner, attorney for the company; George D. Fairtrace, city manager, and L. L. Allbritton, manager of the company.

The Burris-Shepherd Undertaking company was awarded the contract for the city ambulance service for the year starting Feb. 1 on their bid of free service. The award was made on motion of Alderman John Hunt.

A special appropriation ordinance for $3,075 was passed to transfer $3,000 to the hospital fund and $75 to the airport fund from the balance on hand in the general fund.

A resolution of protest against the proposed state law to place the regulation of public utilities within cities under the state railway commission at Austin was adopted.

No action was taken on the proposal by Alderman J. H. Patton to call a water bond election. Varying opinions were expressed by the aldermen and by spectators in the council room on the advisability of calling an election at this time.

Soft Water Delayed

Alderman Deaton said he was heartily in favor of a good supply of soft water, but that he believed the time was not opportune. Other councilmen, the mayor and city manager expressed themselves on the proposition last week, and all said they believed the city needs good water. Joe Marlow, Mr. Allbritton, a mailman in the room, P. B. Roberts and Mr. Bonner all spoke on the water and each said that all those with whom they came in contact favored good water but that some doubted the advisability of calling an election now.

The proposition of calling a public mass meeting to let the public indicate its wish to the council was considered but no action was taken. It was explained that the council did not wish to give the impression that it is trying to put the issue forward or force it. The consensus of the aldermen was that if the public indicates it wants a water bond election, the council will be only too glad to call it.

Permission was given for the issuance of a permit to L. V. Tarkenton for the construction of a $35,000 apartment house at Brook and Victory within the city building code.

No action was taken on the request of the mail carriers that they be granted free transportation by the traction company. Mr. Allbritton of the company said that the government paid the postmen's fare while on duty and that he did not know of any place in the country where it was customary for the tram company to haul the men free when off duty.

Tax Limit Extended

The resignation of Alderman A. W. King was received and accepted on motion of Alderman Patton, seconded by Alderman Roy Carter. Appreciation of Alderman King's excellent public service was expressed in the motion accepting his resignation.

An ordinance to require window washers and wall workers to wear safety guards when at work on the sides of buildings was passed on first reading.

The time for the payment of city taxes without the penalties was extended by the council to Feb. 28 on the suggestion of Alderman Hunt after a short discussion in which Alderman Carter declared the granting of extension of time was directly contrary to law and the charter.

Oil Rate Reduction Claims Are Presented

DALLAS, Jan. 28. (AP)—At a hearing before representatives of the interstate commerce commission, in which petroleum companies are seeking reductions in rates, attorneys for railroads here today prepared to contest every claim of the shippers. Illness of Defense Witness Gives Duckett Trial Indefinite Delay

Special to The Record News.

SEYMOUR, Texas, Jan. 28—Because the chief defense witness is ill, trial of George Duckett on a charge of murder growing out of the death of Charlie McDaniel, during a bank raid at Dundee last summer, was indefinitely postponed by District Judge Isaac O. Newton today.

The witness, J. M. Hubbard, is expected to figure prominently in the trial, defense attorneys having said that they expect to prove through him that Duckett was in Newcastle at the time the Dundee slaying and bank raid occurred. Hubbard, it was said, is at Cleburne, Texas.

McDaniel was shot fatally while resisting an attack by a man who attempted to rob the Dundee bank. The shooting occurred in front of the bank. The bandit fled, commandeered two cars in his flight towards Wichita Falls, one of which was found in the latter city.

Duckett was arrested at his home in Newcastle.

The case was brought here on a change of venue from Archer county, where last fall it was found impossible to select a jury due to fixed opinions held by the majority of the veniremen. A venire of 96 men had been called for the trial here today.

NEFF DEFENDS LABOR RECORD

Former Governor Pained By Accusations

against him Governor Neff divided them into two classes, one being that during his entire official life he has opposed labor unions and laboring men, and the other that as governor of Texas he so conducted himself during the shopmen's strike of 1922 as to disqualify him for membership on the meditation board.

Lists Endorsements

With reference to the first, Governor Neff submitted a list of endorsements he had received from various labor organizations for his activities in their behalf while he was in the Texas legislature as well as while he was governor. In discussing the shopmen's strike in 1922 and for which his official actions were criticized Goovernor Neff pointed out that 1,400 men had walked out at Denison and disorders developed during which 100 men were taken out and whipped as well as driven from the state. On being informed that a request had been made for federal troops he had immediately placed Denison under martial law and detailed Texas rangers there to keep the peace and assigning others to various railroad centers of the state so as to maintain order. However, he contended, there was nothing in this which should disqualify him for service on the board. The charge that he had proven biased and without tact in handling labor disputes was indignantly denied by Neff who told the committee:

"If that is true you ought to cut off my head at once and throw it in the waste basket for I would be unfit to service on the board.

Cotton Fields Await

"There is too much cotton in Texas needing picking for me to worry about getting another position."

In detailing the work he has done since he was placed on the board Governor Neff said he was outclassed by but one member. This other member, he said, had settled 39 disputes while he had settled 36.

"I've done a man's work or I would not ask you to confirm me," he added. "I call attention to this because it was stated the other day that I couldn't settle anything. I hate to discuss myself and what I have done.

"You're the subject," said Senator Watson.

"Very well," replied Neff, "I'll go on then and side my blushes as best I can."

He explained that when named for a place on the board he had been engaged in the private practice of law but having practically cleaned up all his cases, was in a position to devote his entire time to the government service. He then submitted a number of telegrams of endorsement, explaining that he had solicited these since it became known that there would be a fight on his confirmation. The charge that he had failed to settle a dispute at New Orleans was met by Neff with the declaration that there were many other unsettled cases and tht this was one on which various members of the board had worked without success.

Texas City Case

Taking up the Texas City case, in which it was declared by the opposition that he had pronounced a contract void, Governor Neff explained that he had not been detailed to settle this case but to investigate it. Upon such investigation he determined that the old contract was void and suggested that a new one should be negotiated. In response to a specific inquiry he denied he had ever recommended the men to join a company union and pointed out that the Texas City case had been pending for two years and his activities had not caused any protest until his name came up for reconfirmation.

Senator Mayfield was present but did not ask any questions nor did he prompt any for members of the committee.

Fires' Career Western Epic

his law training at Louisville Law university, Louisville, Ky., journeying as far by train toward the lower Panhandle of Texas as railway lines permitted. The Fort Worth & Denver City line through Wichita Falls reached at that time only to Harrold, which was not "the little town just beyond Electra," but was the important cow town which alone divided the distance between Wichita Falls and Vernon.

Reminiscences of his first days in this state moved Judge Fires to remark upon the tremendous changes in Northwest Texas during the last 40 years. Wichita Falls was estimated as having 600 residents at the time of his first visit here. The present site of Electra was marked only by a large surface watering tank for cattle. Vernon had just been organized as a town, and was planning the first Wilbarger county courthouse. Its population was approximately 400. Chillicothe had its beginning during that year in the form of a postoffice instituted by a man named Jones, from Chillicothe, Mo.

Margaret Important Town

To that point, northward from Wichita Falls, the land near the present course of the Fort Worth & Denver City railway was generally settled, but beyond Wilbarger county, Judge Fires stated, settlers were widely scattered. The seat of government in Hardeman county, having jurisdiction over territory comprising several counties now, was located at the village of Margaret, some miles south of Quanah on the road to Crowell. A stage line, running from Harrold to old Fort Elliot, in Wheeler county, marked roughly the present course of the Colorado to Gulf highway, but at the western extremity of Hardeman county swung to the north, so that the store which marked the beginning of Kirkland was then about six miles north of the present Kirkland townsite.

The city of Childress, which had been selected by the young Kentucky lawyer as his destination, had its beginnings at a spot some miles west of the present location. The community of Carey lay just beyond, and from that point to Clarendon, more than 60 miles distant, only one dwelling marked the trail. That was a ranch house belonging to Judge Brown, and was located at Lelia lake.

County Organized

In the spring of 1887, almost one year following Judge Fires' arrival the organization of Childress county was effected, and he was elected county judge. His first case of "cold feet" followed shortly, he stated, but not directly from his newly acquired judicial duties. On the evening of the day on which he took the oath of office, the community was visited by a torrential rain. The "hotel" at which the judge was boarding was situated at the lowest level of a shallow ravine, and within a few minutes after the downpour began, he and the other guests were almost literally submerged in the 30x18 dugout, the floor of which was some three feet lower than the ground level outside.

In the same year the Fort Worth & Denver City railway extended its lines northward to Texline, lending a great impetus to the more rapid development of the Panhandle district. The present site of Childress was soon selected, and Judge Fires took up his residence here, which has continued to the present time.

Light Population

At the time of Judge Fires' advent to Texas, the Panhandle was peopled to the number of approximately 1,500, with a total of 11 lawyers among them. Each barrister covered a large territory during the ensuing years, he said, with clients as far removed as Lubbock, Plainview and Amarillo. For the first few months following his arrival, Judge Fires said that his only reason for not returning to Kentucky was the complete lack of means of getting away. With a salary of $75 monthly, however, following his election as county judge, the future of the Panhandle appeared brighter, and he was retained to the county of which he has been one of the foremost builders. He is now the only active lawyer of the 11 who practiced there 42 years ago.

The development of the Childress section has been particularly free from the dangerous and harrowing "bad-man" episodes which are supposed to accompany frontier life, according to Judge Fires. The particular incident of such history with which he had a personal connection, he said, was the famous affair between Sheriff John P. Matthews of Childress and Capt. "Bill" McDonald of the Texas Rangers, which resulted in the killing of the former in Quanah in 1892. Matthews was a close friend of Judge Fires who declared that on the sheriff's visit to Quanah on business, rumors were intentionally circulated with a view to stirring up the always popular gun play. The shooting occurred when the two men met at the depot, as Sheriff Matthews was preparing to return to Childress. The two shots said to have been fired point-blank at Matthews did not reach his body, according to Judge Fires, but were imbedded in a heavy plug of tobacco in a pocket over his heart. Shots fired at the same moment from behind the sheriff were said to have caused his death. The bullets which lodged in the tobacco plug are still in Judge Fires' possession, he said.

Plenty of Land for All

Asked if the major portion of his practice before the bar had been given to criminal cases, Judge Fires replied:

"What other kind was there then? There was too much land for folks to fight over that."

In his long practice, the judge stated that he had defended a total of 112 persons charged with murder, six of them having been women. The attitude of an attorney defending such a client, he declared, is to give the very best of his legal skill, and Judge Fires admitted that of the 112 defendants, only two had received senences.

On Monday, Jan. 14, a banquet held at the Childress hotel in honor of Judge Fires was attended by more than 80 lawyers representing the entire northwestern part of the state. Addresses were delivered by John G. Kay of Wichita Falls, and other prominent members of the bar in this section. Judge Fires named A. H. Carrigan, J. T. Montgomery, Sr., Edgar Scurry and R. E. Huff, all of Wichita Falls, as among his earliest friends in legal circles in Texas, and eulogized their courage and tenacity in surviving the hardships of pioneer existence here.

Besides his activity in the profession of law, Judge Fires has been connected with the banking business in Childress for almost 40 years. The first National bank of Childress, organized in 1890 by Judge Fires and Col. John G. James, was said to be the first bank organized in the Panhandle. Colonel James at that time was president of the Panhandle National bank at Wichita Falls, it was stated, which later became the First National bank. Judge Fires moved the First National Bank of Childress to Quanah in 1899, and it has since become known as the Security National bank.

His Banking Career

When the railroad division shops opened in Childress in 1904, Judge Fires organized a private bank, but soon merged it into a new organization known as the Childress National. Later this institution was sold to the City National bank of Childress. Again Judge Fires entered the field of banking, organizing the First State bank of Childress, in connection with Crews Brothers, shortly after the guaranty state bank law was passed.

Besides his daughter, Mrs. Robertson of Wichita Falls, Judge Fires has two sons, Dr. Irby W. Fires of Fort Worth and Chester Fires, ranchman, of Wellington.

vestigation, if one is unauthorized, was unfair," he said. "I want a committee whose report cannot be questioned by the opposition. I mean no reflection on the speaker or the house in proposing this amendment."

Commission Praised

He praised the present commission as efficient and said the investigation should be authorized to exonerate it of the charges made against it "up and down the state."

McFarlane for Probe

In the senate, Woodul of Houston attempted to refer the resolution to a committee.

McFarlane of Graham charged that Woodul was trying to "put it to sleep."

Pollard of Tyler facetiously remarked that there were now only two departments of the state government for which investigations had not be proposed and asked that these be included.

McFarlane contended that the charges had been made public and that it would be "rank injustice" not to get at the facts.

Williamson of San Antonio opposed the investigation, recalling "the waste of money and lack of accomplishment" of the highway department investigation of 1926.

Capitalist Says Sargon Brought Back His Health

The following enthusiastic statement was made by John C. Spencer, of 498 Sixty-third avenue, West Allis, Milwaukee, who for 30 years was actively engaged in the commercial and civic life of that city, but who recently retired from active business to devote more time to his real estate holdings in West Allis, Wisc., and Florida. Mr. Spencer has lived in Milwaukee 45 years, is well known and highly esteemed. He said:

JOHN C. SPENCER

"I am leaving for Florida in a few days and will take four bottles of Sargon with me. I don't intend to be without this wonderful medicine.

"For the past year I have been in wretched health, suffering from rheumatism and other troubles on account of an inactive liver, principally. I lost weight rapidly and my strength was ebbing away. I was constantly troubled by indigestion and constipation.

"I felt a marked improvement after my first few doses of Sargon. Three bottles put me in wonderful condition. My appetite is splendid now, my digestion is sound. I have gained 10 pounds and my strength has returned in proportion. I'm going to continue the treatment, of course—for I wouldn't be without Sargon."

Sargon may be obtained in Wichita Falls from the Renfro Drug Co., Eighth and Scott streets, No. 1 main store, and Seventh and Indiana, No. 2; and in Electra from Lough's Drug store.—Adv.

DEATON WINS COUNCIL POST

New Commissioner Strong For Manager

trace as manager. I pledge myself to serve the city to the best of my ability during the remainder of this term."

The election of Mr. Deaton as a member of the council is under the charter provision of the manager form of government which makes it the duty of the city board to fill vacancies in its membership. Under the manager plan of government, members of the council have charge of the general policies under which the city operates, while the administrative duties of the municipality are discharged by the city manager. Mr. Deaton's election is the first by the council under the manager form of government. The position is honorary under the new form, with members of the commission drawing only a nominal salary for their work for the city.

Civic Leader

Mr. Deaton is in the furniture business, and also is interested in various oil properties and in considerable business and residence property. He is a Mason, being a member of the Scottish Rite and Knights Templar, as well as being a member of Maskat temple. He is vice-chairman of the board of stewards of the Floral Heights Methodist church. Mr. Deaton has also been active in the work of the Wichita Falls Safety council and has recently been doing school work as a member of the Junior Safety council committee. He is a member of the Wichita Falls executive committee of Boy Scouts organization.

Election of the new council member brought approval Monday night from several leaders of the city manager program in Wichita Falls.

"Mr. Deaton has a reputation for being a sound, conservative, and clear-thinking business man, and his addition to the council should mean much to Wichita Falls," said Pat Simmons, vice president of the Wichita State Bank and Trust company.

"I know Mr. Deaton well, and think he is in every way a high class young man, and one who promises to fill the position to which he has been elected with great credit," said N. H. Martin, president of the Hamilton-Martin investment company.

"Leon Deaton," declared J. M. Bland, local realtor, "is one of the soundest and safest young business men in Wichita Falls. I have known him almost all his life, and can not speak highly enough in praise of his admirable qualities. They could not have picked a better man for the conscientious discharge of the duties of the office."

Motor Firm's Show Draws Good Crowd

Approximately 900 persons were reported as having attended the movietone entertainment presented by the Fritz Motor company Monday night in their sales rooms at Eleventh and Scott. Two performances were given, each drawing a crowd which taxed the capacity of the room in which the showing was held.

The entertainment, which is to be repeated Tuesday night, with three different shows at 7:30, 8:30 and 9:30 o'clock, is styled "Champions," and includes views of such well known characters as Knute Rockne, Notre Dame football coach; Ann Pennington, Eva La Gallienne, and a number of Florenz Ziegfeld's beauties. Views of endurance and speed tests of automobiles are included in the films comprising the show.

Flax Growing Tests Given Boost By C.-C. Manager in Eastern Trip

Federal Building Prospects Good, While Greater Power For KGKO Seems Assured, Says Harrison

Plans designed to add the growing of flax to the industries of the Wichita valley were inaugurated last week during the trip through the east taken by Hubert M. Harrison, general manager of the chamber of commerce, following a conference in New York with textile men who have perfected machinery for the treatment of flax fiber.

Definite plans have been made for a complete survey on flax culture to be furnished the local organization by the United States Chamber of Commerce, and for experimentation with the growth of flax in the Wichita valley under the direction of A. and M. college and the department of commerce, Mr. Harrison was informed that cotton root rot would not attack flax plants, and that the prospect for successfully growing flax on Texas cotton lands was promising.

Community Trust

Announcement was made of a plan to organize in Wichita Falls during the present year a community trust foundation to handle bequests for civic and philanthropic purposes, following Mr. Harrison's conference with a group of presidents of New York trust companies which have perfected such an institution. The plan was said to be in use now in 71 different American cities.

While in the east, Mr. Harrison learned of a proposed new transcontinental airline, and discussed with its management the possibility of bringing it through Wichita Falls. No definite statement relative to its route through the middle west was made, Mr. Harrison said, but was assured that this city is being given favorable consideration.

Copies of all state laws for the regulation of motor truck lines were brought back by Mr. Harrison, and will be used by the industrial department in formulating further plans for similar regulation in Texas.

Federal Building

Added hopes for the early announcement of a new federal building for this city were found in unofficial reports given in Washington last week, relative to a new list of building allocations now being prepared by the postal department, and which it was said will be announced next week. Wichita Falls was said to be under consideration, and to have a very favorable chance of being placed on the list soon to be given out.

Mr. Harrison returned Sunday from a trip to the east, taken primarily for the purpose of appearing before the federal radio commission in the interest of a petition from the local radio station, KGKO, for a power allotment of 1,000 watts. The hearing was postponed until Feb. 15 because of a congressional investigation of radio affairs under way at the time first given for the discussion.

C.-C. Votes on Substitution Of Quarterly Meets for Business Council

Ballots are now being sent out to the membership of the chamber of commerce for a referendum on the question of continuing the business council or substituting for its weekly meetings quarterly meetings of the entire membership, according to Hubert M. Harrison, general manager.

Different members of the organization have from time to time expressed the opinion that more than one meeting annually of the general membership would be profitable, Mr. Harrison said. Others, it was said, have considered the meeting of the business council every week something of a hardship on various members of that body. The question is being put up to the membership for decision by means of the ballots now being circulated.

No action toward the formation of a possible new business council will be taken prior to completion of the present referendum.

Attorney Outlines County Defense In Contest Over $31,000 Tax Fees

Wichita county's contest of a claim for $31,000 for back delinquent tax commissions, made by Guy C. Raley, tax collector, and M. L. Tittle, his predecessor, will turn on whether or not the two collectors have meet every technical provision of the statute allowing the commissions, according to a preliminary statement made to the commissioners court Monday by Harvey Harris, special council for the county.

Mr. Harris indicated to the court that he had been informed that there had been omissions in carrying out the letter of the law which might form the basis of the county's defense. These, with the statute of limitations, represent the county's best legal arguments, Mr. Harris said. He said there was no question about the validity of the law which gave a 5 per cent commission of delinquent tax collections to the county tax collector.

It was explained to the court that the two collectors ask the sum by the terms of a law passed in 1915. In 1919, another law, purporting to repeal the first, was passed. Omission of certain clauses from the enabling act in the law of 1919 caused an attack upon the validity of the repeal, and in December the supreme court ruled that the old law, granting the commissions, is the governing act. Mr. Raley and Mr. Tittle have since that time asked the court for $18,000 and $13,000 respectively, claiming it as their official due under the law.

Mr. Raley told the court Monday that former county Judge B. D. Sartin had told him that the fees would be refunded by the county if at any time the courts held them due the collector. He said he had considered that the funds were simply put in escrow in the county treasury while the question was pending in the courts.

After the conference with Mr. Harris, the commissioners called for Wayne Somerville, county attorney, and E. P. Walsh, county auditor. No action was taken, the court indicating that it would leave the facts to be determined by a court of law.

"FLU"

He had a bit of a headache and a couple of chills—but pshaw!—it was only a "slight" cold and he'd shake it off! That was yesterday. Today he was in bed, burning with fever one moment and the next shivering with chill. The doctor took one look and—"Flu!"

Nearly every case of "flu" starts with a cold. Do what you can to avoid colds. Stay out of crowds as much as you can. Avoid sneezers and coughers. But—if you catch cold—lose no time in breaking it up.

"Hit the Deck" Is Passable Show

By The Record News Critic

Vincent Youman's "Hit the Deck," a nautical musical comedy something short of being salty, but bearbearing a cargo of good lines and a crew of clever steppers, pleased a large Wichita Falls audience at the Majestic theater Monday evening.

Most of the other songs and numberse served largely as a sprightly prologue for the "Hallelujah" chorus which has made the show famous, and which inspires the most effective and spirited work from the chorus. Katherine Bingham, singing as "Lavinia" the negro cook, did her best work there.

Polly Mara made an appealing "Looloo" searching the seas and the Orient for her Smith. Edward Garr, as "Bilge" himself, was an adequately handsome and militant gob.

Correction

Roy Daniels is not a candidate for place two in the coming city election as was announced in the Record News Monday morning. Petitions are being circulated for Mr. Daniels for place three, but he has not announced whether he will run for the office.

"When a sweet tempts me, I light a Lucky Strike."

Rosalie Adele Nelson

Rosalie Adele Nelson, The Original Lucky Poster Girl

Reach for a Lucky instead of a sweet.

"I'm a 'Lucky Girl' because I've found a new way to keep my figure trim. Whenever the desire for a sweet tempts me, I light up a Lucky Strike. It's remarkable how nicely the toasted flavor of Luckies satisfies me. Toasting has taken out all impurities—all that is left is the thrilling Lucky aroma. I certainly am lucky to be 'The Lucky Girl.'"

ROSALIE ADELE NELSON

THE modern common sense way—reach for a Lucky instead of a fattening sweet. Thousands are doing it—men keep healthy and fit, women retain a trim figure.

Lucky Strike, the finest tobaccos, skilfully blended, then toasted to develop a flavor which is a delightful alternative for that craving for fattening sweets.

Toasting frees Lucky Strike from impurities. 20,679 physicians recognize this when they say Luckies are less irritating than other cigarettes. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

A reasonable proportion of sugar in the diet is recommended, but the authorities are overwhelming that too many fattening sweets are harmful. So, for moderation's sake we say:—

"REACH FOR A LUCKY INSTEAD OF A SWEET."

TO EAT WITHOUT BECOMING FAT

Avoid Too Much of Any Food —and Too Little Exercise, Say Authorities

Some people seem to think that all they need to do to reduce is to stop eating sugar. That isn't true. As a matter of fact, as a prominent medical authority says, "Every food that has any food value at all is fattening if taken in large enough quantities." "Reducing weight," he goes on to say, "means to eat less, keeping the diet balanced and attractive."

Medical authorities are alarmed at the national "craze for reducing." "The experience of centuries has shown," says a celebrated doctor, "that a poorly nourished body becomes much more quickly subject to such disorders as anemia, tuberculosis, the common cold, or various types of infection, than does one properly upholstered. . . . The craze for thinness is an attempt to modify the process of nature."

How much more wise and sane it is to eat moderately of all foods rather than omit the one ingredient that adds so much to the enjoyment of eating. Sweetness is nature's ideal flavor. And no other food is pure or as cheap as sugar. Eat plenty of such healthful foods as cereals, apple sauce, grapefruit and fresh and canned fruits and vegetables of all kinds—sweetened to taste. Sweetening makes it easy to eat the healthful foods regularly and daily. Don't overeat, but remember it is dangerous to undereat. The sugar way is the happy way. The Sugar Institute.

The Sophisticated Philanderer, In the End, Wants a 'Moral' Wife

Does the Old-Fashioned Girl or the Modernist Win Out in the End?—Why Every Young Couple Should Have a Home of Their Own—Ought the Working Daughter to Help With the Housework?

Dear Miss Dix—I have read many times what you have written about men preferring old-fashioned girls, but I have never been one. They are scarce as hen's teeth. I used to be an old-fashioned girl and never had a date before I started to drink and smoke and pet. Now I have dates to burn. It is the girl who isn't too particular that the men want nowadays. Put that in your cigarette holder and smoke it, Miss Dix. —HELEN.

Answer—I am going to let a man answer your letter, Helen, for in the same mail came a letter from a man who says:

"Dear Miss Dix—This letter is written by a man who is a sophisticated philanderer, who likes his women and his liquor, and, until lately, could not have been forced to the altar with a shotgun. He has demanded a lot from the girls who have been attracted by his sophistication and worldliness, and the fact that those demands have been usually met is sad but conclusive proof that the majority of the girls of today are palin dumbbells.

"Deep within themselves men of my type wonder more about this than they do about the girls who are naturally wild, and they respect the modern dumbbell less than they do the wild woman, even though they seek her out and persuade her to go whoopee. Furthermore, the girl who consents is a sap to think that whoopee is going to lead her into undying popularity and eventually to wedded bliss.

"Few men, no matter what they have been themselves, want to face the world with a wife who has been a plaything for scores of other men. Such a girl might acquire a fool for a husband, but how long would such a matrimonial alliance last, and what would there be in it for the woman, anyway? You are right when you say that it is biologically necessary for a successful wife and mother to be of high morals, and it is equally true that the men who preach the double standard are the very ones who do not care to marry a potter.

"Naturally, every girl desires to acquire a mate, but the right man will never be found lurking in the bushes along the primrose path. And while the good girl may have an unfilled date card and suffer somewhat from the lack of masculine attentions, she has a chance of making a far better marriage than has the flappy flapper.

"While a lot of men, both married and single, are more or less worthless, the majority have a good side which is responsive to the right appeal, and that is bound to come from a woman who has kept herself pure. I speak from experience, because after having had my fling with the petters and the neckers it has been my undeserved good fortune to find the good old-fashioned girl who is going to take pity on one who has been a poor fool and marry him. Her goodness has prompted me to write this letter, and voice a warning to the girls who are laboring under the illusion that whoopee is harmless and that they can get away with it the same as we privileged men. They can't. The sooner they make up their minds to the fact that it doesn't pay a girl to lower her ideals for the sake of a date, the better for them."

So there you are, Helen. That is the point of view of a man who knows the ropes on the Ship of Pleasure. Consider it well.

Dear Miss Dix—I am engaged to be married to a girl who is an only child, whose parents are unwilling to give her up and insist that after our marriage we must live with them. I have felt so strongly that this would jeopardize our chance for happiness that it has delayed our marriage.

I have represented to my fiancee that it would indefinitely delay the start in life which we should make on our own account; that it would deprive me of the privilege, which every man must cherish, of being master in his own home, and that it would require me to sacrifice my right of independent thought and action, and subject me to direct or indirect domination of my parents-in-law. This I am not willing to do. And my fiancee is not willing to leave her parents. So the situation is deadlocked.

I am amply able to provide my wife with a good home and every comfort and luxury. I will be grateful for your frank views on the subject. —RAYMOND.

Answer—You are exactly right in wanting to set up your own home when you are married, where you and your wife can get acquainted and fight out your own battles and adjust yourselves to each other without any outside interference.

Every young man and woman who go off by themselves when they get married have a hundred times the chance of happiness and of making a go of marriage than those who continue to live with their parents have. This is true not only because parents cannot keep from sticking their fingers in their children's pies and taking sides in every spat, but because the young couple who live alone are dependent on each other for society and so grow closer together, and, having no eavesdroppers, they can talk out their secret thoughts to each other and shower each other with little endearments that they would be ashamed to indulge in before mamma or papa.

You are quite right in thinking that if you go to live with your wife's people that you will have no authority over her and no influence with her. She will naturally turn to her mother and father for advice and counsel, as she has always been in the habit of doing, and she will be guided by their opinion, not by yours. You will have to listen to "mother thinks this" and "father thinks we had better do that," and, that doesn't set well on any he-man's stomach. Furthermore, no matter how much board you pay, you will always be in the attitude of living on your wife's folks, and that won't add any to your prestige in business.

Inevitably, when you live under another man's roof, you lose your individual freedom. You are bound to conform to his ways and customs. He is the master, you are the guest. When you live with your in-laws they will feel that you should obey them just as implicitly as their own child does. Your future parents-in-law have already showed how selfish and dominating they are by not being willing for their daughter to follow the custom that all human experience has proved to be the wise one, that of going away with her husband, when she gets married, to her own home.

If the girl loves her parents better than she does you, and prefers staying with them to going off alone with you, leave her where she is. You will find no happiness with a woman who is more a mamma's girl than she is a wife.

Dear Miss Dix—I heartily agree with you that a man who works all day at his job should not be expected to come home at night and do the housework, but don't you think that the same thing is true of a working girl? My two sisters and I toil to the limit of our strength every day, but when we return home we are expected to do the bulk of the housework at night and give everything a good cleaning up on Sunday. Our mother is young and strong and healthy, but she does not feel called upon to do anything more than barely cook the food we provide. She never makes a bed, or dusts a chair, or washes out a handkerchief, or sews on a button, for her idea is that standing eight hours behind a counter in a department store or pounding a typewriter is just a mere diversion.

What do you think should be expected of a working girl in the way of domestic duties? —BARRIE.

Answer—Not a thing. If your mother had sons instead of daughters she wouldn't expect them to help with the housework and do their laundry. No, indeed.

She would rush around trying to make things comfortable for the poor dears who had to work so hard. She would go around telling all the neighbors how good they were to provide her with a nice home and support the family. But it is different with girls. God knows why. When girls go out and do a man's work in the world most mothers expect them to do a woman's work at home, also. And the girls are foolish to do it.

Of course, if your mother were an invalid, then it would be your duty to help with the housework, but as long as she is able-bodied she should treat you like a star boarder that she was afraid of losing, and do everything she can to make you comfortable.

—DOROTHY DIX.

PRESS ANGERS KING'S MEDICS

Young Professor's Success Sets Off 'Jealousy'

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
Universal Service Writer

LONDON, Jan. 28.—A tempest in a teapot has been raised here by the clash between newspaper enterprise and the professional ethics of medicine. All because the London newspapers gave what the medical press characterizes as "unfortunate and undue prominence" to the contribution made by young Professor E. C. Dodds to the treatment of King George.

The ethics of the medical profession are as delicate as a sensitive plant, and it seems that they have been ruthlessly trodden upon by the London press. Professor Dodds is a young man, only 29, and is the head of the Bio-Chemical department of Middlesex hospital. A few weeks ago, when King George's illness appeared to be at its most critical period and the combined skill of 11 medical practitioners was unavailing to lift him from a condition of extreme exhaustion following almost two months of illness, Professor Dodds was called in to make an analysis of his majesty's blood and he found that it was deficient in calcium—or as the layman would say, it lacked lime.

Calcium Injected

Professor Dodds on several occasions injected small quantities of calcium in proper solution into the veins of the king. No hint of this new treatment was allowed in the bulletins until several days after the injections had been made.

Then the bulletins, in a very guarded manner, began to note "a slight change for the better" in the king's condition, and coincidentally with his hopeful tone, the public was first told about Doctor Dodds and his experiments with the calcium injections.

Perhaps it was but natural that the London newspapers were eager to seize upon any new development in the complicated scheme of the doctor's treatment of the king. Certainly theirs was a not unreasonable deduction which was to the effect that a young doctor of 29 had made a distinct contribution to the business of bringing his majesty back from the shadow of death. One Sunday paper had a special article devoted to Professor Dodds and his work, both at the Middlesex hospital and at the bedside of the king.

Retraction Demanded

It is whispered in Fleet street, which is the park row of London, that one of the king's physicians was so wrathy over this complimentary article that he called upon the proprietors of the paper wherein it appeared and made an insistent demand that the article should be retracted, or at least, that an explanation should be given the readers of that paper that by the publication of the offending article a great strain had been put upon the delicate condition of medical ethics. Whether this rumor be true or not, the fact is that the paper did nothing of the kind.

But in the publication of the Lancet and of the British Medical Journal which have just followed this episode, a delightfully ponderous slap on the wrist was administered in true professional manner to the offending London press.

DEMAND FOR VICKS SUPPLIES GOOD INDEX TO SPREAD OF FLU

An interesting sidelight on the present influenza epidemic has been the accuracy with which the demand for Vicks Vapo-Rub reflects the flu situation in various parts of the country. Vicks is the external treatment which proved so helpful in 1918.

Last November, rush orders from the Pacific Coast for more and more Vicks told of the beginning of a new epidemic. As the flu moved east, sudden increases in the demand for Vicks marked its spread from state to state.

Now that influenza has become fairly general, it is once more necessary, in spite of vastly increased capacity, to run the Vicks laboratories all night long, as the public now demands over 375,000 jars every 24 hours.—Adv.

"Any day but that!"

It's exasperating when men don't understand — and embarrassing when they do. Women who have learned of Midol don't have painful periods.

Midol is not a narcotic. It acts only on the organs affected. Perfectly safe, but swift; it brings complete comfort in five to seven minutes! No matter how hard a time you've always had, Midol will dispel every particle of pain. It is only common sense to use it, for it does nothing to hinder the normal, natural process of menstruation; but makes it painless.

Get Midol in the trim little case of aluminum, for purse or pocket; 50 cents, at any drug store.—Adv.

DEATH HOVERS OVER FAMILY

Poverty Stricken Brood Prey to Disease

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Once there were 16 McCanns but today there are only 10 left—this starts like a sob story and it is.

Another McCann is dead today, 2-year-old Gregory, and his body lies on the top of the kitchen tubs for want of money to buy a casket.

Gregory slept on the tubs in life. There were only three rooms and many McCanns—Vincent, 18; Joseph, 17; James, 14; Helen, 12; Thomas, 4; Theresa, 3; and 6-month old Alfred. Bernard, the eldest is married and helps a little but only makes a little. The older boys work when they can but sickness seems to run in the family.

Joseph McCann, the father, earns $24 a week as a watchman. Mrs. Annie McCann, his wife, has borne 14 children. Ill health has loomed over her entire brood. And just as they got finished paying for the funeral expenses of their last stricken child, another one succumbed.

Little Gregory's spells became more frequent and severe. A doctor was called in and told the McCanns that Gregory and 3-year-old Theresa must go to the hospital. He also said that the rest of the family must stop sleeping on draughty floors and must eat more food.

It was all right to suggest hospital treatment and de luxe domestic accommodations like beds for everybody, but where was the money coming from? So Mrs. McCann tended the sick as best she could.

Gregory's fever got worse. He was wrapped in an extra ragged blanket atop his tubs. Finally he dozed off. He never waked.

Mrs. McCann called an ambulance. The interne pronounced Gregory dead and took little Theresa away to the hospital in a serious condition.

"I haven't even candles to burn for Gregory," said Mrs. McCann in a wooden voice. "I had some candles for my last one."

Texas Bottlers Praise Dry Law

DALLAS, Jan. 28. (AP)—Prohibition, leading to replacement of bars by soda fountains, has been of incalculable value to the soft drink industry, delegates to the Texas Bottlers' association, which opened a convention here today, said.

After reports had been made to the convention in the morning, President J. C. Blake, Nacogdoches, outlined the development of the organization in its 26 years of existence. President Blake pointed out that advertising created the desire for soft drinks.

Others on today's program were: C. G. Cotton, Fort Worth, and Carl A. Jones, Bristol, Va., president of the national association.

Quick relief for COLDS since 1889

Won't go out to play

When healthy youngsters, usually full of mischief, suddenly lose their ambition to be engineers or policemen, they are probably full of cold germs. Loss of appetite, listlessness, or feverish condition, should put parents promptly on guard.

As a rapid-action weapon against colds, no remedy is better known than GROVE'S BROMO QUININE. Easy to take and mildly laxative, it rids the system of poisons caused by colds. The tonic properties keep vitality up.

Because grip, influenza, and other serious illnesses often begin with a cold, it is wise to obtain quick relief when any cold threatens. And equally wise, to make certain of getting the right remedy. So emphasize GROVE'S, when asking for GROVE'S BROMO QUININE. Price 30c.

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspironal, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as 10 times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

Scientists are a little late promisin' to make wood edible, for I know folks right now that would eat a croquet ball if it had vinegar on it. Ike Sutes is still confined to his bed with flu, but Bootlegger Ike Lark reports that he's taperin' off fine an' will be back at the sawmill in a few days.

The four big men of the movie industry are, respectively, a tailor, fur dresser, glove salesman and penny arcade operator. Maybe that's the reason behind some of the splendid movies we've seen lately.

Mrs. Anna Shurter, 101, of Sabetha, Kansas, used a telephone the other day for the first time in her life. Probably just called to find out about the airplane schedules.

Mussolini is the big man of Italy, no doubt, but what kind of chance do you think he would have as governor of Oklahoma?

Defeating "The Rap"

THE Chicago police, rounding up some 3,000 assorted hoodlums, gunmen and drifters to see if perchance they could not send a few of them to prison, drew a very illuminating bit of underworld philosophy out of one of their prisoners.

This man, a giant ex-convict with a prison record long enough to wrap around his neck, protested that he had had so many convictions—"raps," he called them—simply because he had had very bad luck.

"Aw, I didn't have the proper defense," he explained. "You can lick any rap with the proper defense."

There, in all its simple beauty, stands revealed the philosophy of the underworld: "You can lick any rap with the proper defense."

Of the underworld, did we say? Pardon us. It is a philosophy that has extended a good distance beyond the underworld—indeed, there are times when that brief sentence seems to be one of the ruling maxims of American life.

"You can lick any rap with the proper defense." In other words, our legal and social systems do not even come close to meting out exact justice. Whatever you can get away with is all right. A good lawyer covers a multitude of sins. If you get by you're a fine fellow, and if you get caught you're a sap.

Is that attitude confined to the underworld? Unfortunately, it is very obvious that it is not. To be sure, the trial of any notorious criminal usually hinges on almost anything on earth but the simple question of his guilt. Some Heaven-sent technicality can almost always be found; if not, any smart lawyer can usually contrive to befuddle the jury enough to make it forget the real point at issue. But this is only a part of it.

Consider the case of Col. Robert W. Stewart, who deceived a Senate committee and was brought to trial for it. His lawyer discovered that fewer senators had been present than a totally forgotten technical provision of the law required, so Colonel Stewart was turned loose. Was the actual question of his guilt or innocence really passed on? Of course not. Colonel Stewart "had the proper defense"—so, of course, he licked the rap.

It would take altogether too many sheets of good paper to cite all the instances that could be cited, and nobody would get excited over such a list, anyhow. We are too used to the philosophy voiced by this Chicago crook; too used to ignoring all moral values and using only the simple standard, "Can you get away with it?"

There is no use in demanding that our crime centers be broken up so long as this philosophy holds good. There is no use in demanding that unscrupulous grafters be chased out of public life, no use in demanding that thinly-disguised confidence men be chased out of the business and professional fields.

As a nation, we are committeed to the belief that you can lick any rap with the proper defense. Until we discard that maxim for something a lot finer there isn't much hope for improvement anywhere.

The Cruiser Bill

THE new cruiser bill is now reported endangered by the possibility of a filibuster.

A filibuster, you know, is what happens when a small group of senators, too few in number to defeat a measure that actually comes to a vote, contrive by technicalities to prevent the measure from ever being voted on. That is, they oppose their own wishes to the will of the majority and very neatly toss a monkey-wrench into the machinery of legislative government.

Regardless of the merits or otherwise of the cruiser bill, it would be distressing to have it fail in that manner. If it is voted down on the floor, well and good. If it dies because a scattered few are able to prevent it from being voted on at all, we have a glaring example of minority rule at its worst.

Prosperity and Education

THE amazing growth of secondary education in recent years is emphasized in a current bulletin from the department of the interior.

At the present time more than one-half of the population of high school age is in attendance at high school. In the cities this rate is even higher; in rural areas it is somewhat lower.

But what is noteworthy is the fact that 30 years ago not more than one-seventh of the young people of high school age went to high school. High school enrollments, indeed, have doubled since so late a date as 1920.

First of all, this reflects very plainly our greater prosperity. But its real significance, of course, lies in the fact that education now is far more general than it ever was before. And since a democracy like ours must have an educated, intelligent citizenry, this is highly important.

WHEN THE POLL TAX IS IMPORTANT

Only a few more days in which to pay poll taxes, and while this is considered an off year, there will be held city and school elections that mean much to the individual citizen. In fact, the minor elections have more direct bearing upon our local affairs than any state or national election can have. Every citizen who would like a vote in these elections must pay his poll tax in time this year.

PROVING THE CASE

Deceit must be a natural trait of the human race, else how can you account for so much of it? We abhor it yet we plead guilty to a lot of it. Conventions and inhibitions, both man made and questionable as to the good they do, bring about a great part of it. But to deny that there is deceit, is impossible and one has only to listen to a couple of catty females who seriously dislike each rave over each other to know what we are talking about.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—A terrific storm sweeps the north Atlantic. Distress signals crackle over the waves. "SOS," comes the cry. "Hatches washed away. Fire in engine room. Won't last another half hour. Rush assistance." Gray-haired skippers clutch the rails of their bridges and grimly survey the lashing torrents that are sweeping the fo'c'stle. Certain disaster to shift into the face of a gale like that, and yet—"another hatch carried away. Man swept overboard—impossible to save him. Hurry. Hurry."

"Change the course 13 degrees to nor'west," comes the order from the bridge. Into the fury of the storm. Hatches must be battened down, portholes closed, all loose cargo lashed fast to the deck. Somewhere behind the veil of sleet and fog a steamship is in distress. And the unwritten law of the sea must be answered.

In the wheelhouse the compass spins. The helmsman slowly puts the wheel over. As the bow slowly shifts into the gale the shock of each wave crashing over the side of the boat rocks the ship from stem to stern with titanic ferocity. Down in the engine room a bell sounds the signal to increase speed.

Below decks the passengers are aroused. Bells are sounding in the steward's quarters. Doors are opened. In the passageways whispered conversations between frightened passengers are taking place. "Have we struck something?" "George, will you go up to the captain this minute and have the boat stopped? I can't stand this for another moment!" "Help me strap this life preserver on my back, sweetheart."

A lifeboat is carried away. Rumor spreads over the ship that water is pouring into the hold; that the ship is sinking. On the promenade deck an old traveler who is never troubled by a "little blow" is carried off his feet and spun down the deck by a mountainous wave that has broken through a window up forward. In steerage a mother presses her babe close to her and falls to her knees in prayer. A lawyer from Sioux City in the de luxe suite is writing: "To whom it may concern: To my only son and heir I bequeath——"

Morning comes. The storm has spent itself. Another radio is flashing in the wireless room: "Steamer in distress is now proceeding on course. No damage done. Man reported overboard found this morning asleep in the smoking room. Thanks for help." The course is again set for New York. Passengers are pacified. Business in the dining room picks up and stewards turn in for a few winks after a night of feverish activity.

Three days later at Quarantine, near New York, the ship news reporters come on board. Here is a whale of a story. Here are first-hand witnesses to the rescue story which was recorded in terse messages on the front pages of all the dailies.

Passengers are eager to give their versions of the "worst storm the Atlantic has ever seen. A deck steward is willing to admit that he has never seen such waves in his 17 years as a seaman. A radio operator estimates that one wave must have been at least 100 feet high. An old woman fell out of her berth and sprained her wrist. The story is getting good; people injured, railings bent, windows broken.

The boat is docked. Reporters rush to the captain's quarters to get "the old man's side of the story" and the official log during the storm. The skipper has just signed the payroll. He is preparing to leave the boat, and the reporters enter his cabin, hats in hand.

"Must have been an awful gale, captain," the reporters begin.

"Well—yes, a good little blow. If you've been across once or twice, it would be quite a little blow. But when you've been 30 years at sea, it's just another storm. And now, what can I do your you gentlemen? There are no births, deaths or stowaways on board. Sorry we never have any good stories for you."

Since people started going to hear pictures sound has taken on new importance in New York. Now country cousins are being piloted around where they may hear the best sights of the metropolis.

There is, for instance, the Echo of Shuttle Square. He may be seen at one of those curves that leave a gap between train and platform, and best heard at the evening rush hour, when any train from the Grand Central terminal is discharging its mashed and damaged cargo. "Watch your step!" he sings. "Watch your step! Watch your step!"

Watching their steps himself, he comes fascinated, and as the great outpouring increases in intensity and the steps in the consequence more rapid he unconsciously begins to try to keep time.

"Watch your step!" he staccatoes. "Watch your step! Your step! Your step! Step! Step! Step! Step!"

Then he catches his breath and starts deliberately and with great dignity all over again.

FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By WALTER ECKERSALL

This big yard and goal man has been acclaimed the greatest football quarterback of all times and is conceded to be one of the foremost national authorities on the game.

Walter Eckersall

His favorite fable has to do with that profession of street venders who go about with their wares, making loud noises and waiting for housewives to come out and buy fruit and vegetables from their wagons.

"One of the boys," as Eckersall tells it, "was sort of new to the racket (racket is right), and wondered why he made so few sales. Nevertheless, he worked on, shouting at the top of his lungs. It so happened that one of his buddies had started to work the same street. The buddy was gray-haired and quite experienced in the technique of huckstering. He came up alongside of the younger man and looked at him disgustedly.

"'Well, what's the matter?' asked our hero.

"The old man eyed him from head to foot. 'You won't never get no trade hollering like that,' he said.

"'Why not?' asked the ambitious young huckster. 'What's the matter with the way I'm hollerin'?'

"'Why, hell, man—anybody can tell what you're sellin' without even comin' outside to see!'"

QUITAQUE, Texas, Jan. 28.—Citizens of this city are manifesting considerable pride in a report recently given by the officials of the Forth Worth and Denver's South Plains railway, stating that the Quitaque station has received a larger volume of freight and passenger business than any other city served by this new road, which opened Nov. 22, 1928.

During the month of December, 1928, receipts at the local station amounted to more than $38,000, besides $2,000 worth of express shipments. The employed force at the opening of the line in November consisted of one man, and has been increased with the heavier demands to a present force of four full time employes.

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has invented the Vicarion, a device with which it is possible to re-create scenes out of the past. The invention is a sensational success, with all the theaters installing it in place of motion pictures. Complete Illusions, Inc., which at that time controls all the improvements on the movie, faces ruin, but when Ferdinand Mortimer and Jerry Ballard, heads of the company, call on him, Brainard refuses to make terms.

Brainard's records of the past are contained in "bombs," which hold liquid air, and while he is projecting one of the "bombs," which was unmarked, he sees a beautiful gossamer-clad girl, with whom he falls in love, although he is engaged to Phyllis Norman. During the first demonstration of the Vicarion, with Phyllis and her family looking on, a strange man staggers in the studio. He is unable to tell who he is and Brainard names him Van Winkle, and makes him his aide.

Brainard calls in the operator who made the unmarked record, but gains no information from him. He orders Van Winkle to investigate the making of the bomb. Brainard projects one of the three remaining bombs containing the woodland scene in which the girl with whom he is infatuated appears and decides the records were made by Jeffry Honer, a criminal whom he has employed. Honer dies of fright while listening to the voice of his dead brother which Brainard projects by means of the Vicarion and Honer's secret of the "bomb," which contains the "sunrise nymph" passes into the hands of Mortimer and Ballard.

The World Changes

But people began to pay little attention to the newspapers. Magazine and book sales almost ceased. There was no time to read. What with morning matinees in the theaters and with more and more managers opening multiple-unit rooms for the private accommodation of people who did not desire publicity on the affairs they wished to rehearse, nobody had time for anything else. Of course there were furious arraignments of Brainard for furnishing private records at all; and it was asserted that nothing was recorded that he did not permit to be recorded. But some of the people who criticised him most were among those to avail themselves of his tempting service. Extravagant sums were doubtless paid for special privilege—perhaps to suppress special privilege! Phyllis grew sick over whispered reports that came to her, and marveled at the extent to which the thing had gone. She began first naively to doubt that Radley actually handled the mere physical detail of issuing all the permits credited to him—then she knew it was impossible, and was comforted by the certainty that half at least of the stories she heard were untrue. When she asked him, in one of the now rare opportunities to ask him anything, he laughed and shrugged, and offered to set a condenser up for her in her own home where she could check up on any of his activities she desired. He showed her a new machine he was making in which fifty records could be made at once, all portions of one, or all of separate events.

He was quite as indifferent to personal danger as ever, it appeared. He had had the Bonmar surrounded with a battery of powerful lights that burned all night of every night, and the current for which, he said, was furnished from a dozen different circuits, so that it could not be cut off by accident or design without elaborate preparations. The purpose was obvious. It was advertised of him that he never went anywhere out of the light; and the inference would have needed no pointing, even if she had not heard him tell of his reasons for believing himself protected. Possibilities of killing him subtly or at long distance were publicly discussed, and reports were monotonously recurrent that it had been attempted by one ingenious method or another. But he only laughed at these stories also.

Nevertheless, the change she had seen beginning in him went on. His face haunted her. The consciousness of his power was not more plainly written in his eyes than the growing ruthlessness of its use. Yet there was a constantly recurring flicker of something there that belied both. What was the ruling motive that guided him? What was his incentive? Sometimes, she seemed to feel that he was asking these questions of himself. Which would be the worse state—to be filled with desires and possess no means of gratifying them, or to have unlimited means, and no desires?

She mourned over him and in lonely nights she sobbed at her helplessness to affect in any way his career. Now and then hope flamed up—just enough to keep her from utter despair—at some clearly beneficent effect of his activities. He put a sudden stop to certain abuses in a charity home home, for instance, long suspected but never proved; and sent the guilty managers to trial without a chance of escape. Three-quarters of the open crime in the community ceased, almost overnight, it seemed. In some public quarters there was an abrupt tendency to frankness and sincerity in act and speech that was almost laughable. People were being frightened into decency, if that was wholesome.

But they were being frightened out of activity. Many forms of business had come suddenly to a stand. How could one man sell anything to another at a profit when the second could look at his costs and his profit sheets at will? How could anything but necessities change hands, and these at any but reasonable advance, when the history of every transaction was subject to Brainard's open sesame, and hence to be had on demand—if the demand were great enough. Monopolies on all sides were gasping for their financial breath; middlemen were in panic; competition was impossible; pooling was useless; men looked into their competitors' books; heirs looked at individual bequests in secreted wills; speculators could listen to manipulators' plans; contents of safe-deposit boxes could be inspected at will; secrecy was almost wholly at an end; bluff was dead! Given time and location, any plan or act that had not been confined to one head and executed silently and in the dark was accessible to all interested men!

People breathlessly asked the scared question as to whether all business had been founded upon cheating and lying. Where was the vaunted honesty of the modern business man? What was honesty? Could business survive, on the basis of publicly advertised costs and profits, with everybody allowing everybody else a "fair return" on capital for labor? No man could conceal an asset or a debt. No laborer could cheat on a day's work, no employer could falsify a record of gains.

Vicarionized!

It was Aunt Belief Brainard again who said that people were becoming vicarionized! Newspapers had of course cartooned "the Vicarion face." Now they more seriously echoed her comment. But the phrase, which might have been funny, was literally true.

Thousands in her own little city seemed suddenly to live for nothing else but the sensations available in the places of public shows. Reports from elsewhere showed that conditions were the same. Of course! Why should men and women be content with everyday, humdrum existences when, for the price formerly paid to see a motion picture, they could have their choice of infinite variety of thrills as if if actually lived? You could walk with Wordsworth up his tilted little back garden; you could ride a race neck and neck with Tod Sloan; you could sit for an hour with the cynical Whistler, or beloved Charles Lamb, or with Emerson, or Samuel Johnson; you could cross the hot Sahara by airplane; you could watch the brush work of Franz Hals; you could listen to Spurgeon or Beecher—or Thomas a Becket; or shoot lions with Theodore Roosevelt; you could sit with the multitude in Vespasian's coliseum, or with a crowd in the Yale bowl; you could watch the strange love affairs of an Ibsen, or the funny old carpet slippers of a Rubenstein; you could look at the doings of a Pompey or a Scipio—or of a Steve Brodie or a Pat Crowe! But for the limitless elasticity of human credulity, it would have been paralyzing! It was but a pallid comment someone made to Phyllis, that men and women were becoming vicarionized because all the fascinations of the radio, motion pictures and talking machines, which had once captivated them, were here raised to the nth power. In the Vicarion's scenes it was as if there were no recording medium between the spectator and the real. Old methods of entertainment were as incomparable to this as was the temperature generated by the base burner to that of the electric arc!

Phyllis could not grow accustomed to it; yet in a way others seemed to. She believed that local conditions must fairly represent conditions elsewhere, except that the home of the Vicarion was naturally the center, momentarily, at least, of its demonstrations. It could be only a matter of weeks, perhaps of days, before some sort of intereference with Brainard's career must develop, people said. But why did it not develop? Was everybody holding his breath and waiting for an automatic collapse of conditions that seemed so unreal? Did everybody think that the Vicarion was simply a nine-day wonder and that its reach and effect would be much more closely circumscribed than it first appeared? But every day new features of its power and its operations were reported. If you chose—always, of course, if you chose—you could watch an Eskimo freeze slowly to death by the light of the midnight sun on a detached floe; or a swift, deadly duel of Apaches by the light of a link in the old sewers of Paris! Winged, you could follow the wandering albatross endlessly out to see—or look down into the seething depths of a volcano! You could climb the crags and look into the eagle's nest, or upon the family affairs of the rattlesnake!

You could stand in a burning forest and watch a fox and rabbit run side by side; or you could float in polar moonlight and see million-ton icebergs crack off the glacier's face! What authority could stop people who wanted to look at these things and their like? What constituted authority, and who constituted it? What government itself could stand stable in face of a people's passion? A passion it was!—and day by day the passion was mounting!

Brainard leaned back in his chair. He could not sit erect. His cigaret had fallen on the rug; Ballard put his foot on it.

"I'm wondering, Brainard," he said, "how you knew that Honer was dead."

"I made—a record of him—in the cabin."

"Was that before or after you left the bomb in his fireplace?"

Brainard did not know how to answer that question.

"Of course," went on Ballard, "you killed Honer, Brainard—likely with a ghost out of that bomb. But I'm not interested in that. I've got you by a better hold than that. Of course you know that I can't look at the real memorandum Honer left me without your seeing the record there, too. But I won't need to now. I'll just go back to my office and wait there till you come to me begging to pay for the privilege. And the more trouble you make me before you come, the more it will cost you."

He was walking toward the door. He was going! Brainard stood up.

"Just a—minute, Ballard!" He coughed. "You're fooling yourself now But—you'll find that out, in time. Just ask my secretary to—call the doctor, will you? Are you—familiar with the—the pain that comes with—gallstones?"

Ballard turned and hesitated. Then he smiled. "Rather cleverly conceived, Brainard, for a man in your condition. But, if you want a doctor, it is not for the malady you mention. Call him yourself." And he went out.

As the door closed, Brainard sank down, his head pounding on his desk. He sat stunned. Presently he heard the door open again. In another moment he felt a hand touch his head.

"Mr. Brainard! Are you ill?"

It was Miss Arden. He did not answer. She became alarmed. "Mr. Brainard!" she cried. She started away from him as if to summon help.

He managed to speak. "Wait!" he gasped.

She came swiftly back and caught his hand. After a moment he sat up slowly. She looked into his face and suddenly dropped down beside him, clasping his hand against her breast, then against her face.

"Oh, you are ill!" she cried. "Let me call help! What shall I do? Oh, let me help you!"

He shook his head at her weakly. She fell to kissing his hand and crooning. He could not stop it; did not want to. It vaguely comforted him. He knew this girl perfectly; she looked upon anything as opportunity that would give her an excuse for forwarding intimacy with him. But she was gentle, and solicitous and feminine.

"I'm all right," he told her at last, and took his hand away from her.

"Oh," she said, "I know! It was that horrid Ballard! I knew when he went out that he—that he'd done something terrible!"

She was scanning his face. Brainard was wondering how long it would take her to be on her knees to Jerry Ballard if she knew how near she was to the truth. Perhaps, like Ballard himself, she was testing his spiritual knee-jerk to learn if his powers as a dictator were still alive.

"No," he said, bringing a smile to the surface by great effort, "it wasn't Ballard—though nothing would please him better. I'm subject to—these attacks lately."

"Let me call the doctor!" She sprang up.

"No. I'll go down and see him," he answered. "I know what he'll say: 'Sleep up.'"

His strength was coming back to him. He wondered now at the profound effect of his crisis. It was not natural, was it? Perhaps there was more benefit than he had thought to be expected from sleeping up.

He left the girl in his office and forgot her before he reached the hall. There he went directly to his studio and shut himself in. He had a decanter and bottles in his tray closet now; and he took a long drink, and then another, before he dropped into a chair.

Of course, Ballard would be as good as his word. It might even be that the man had no other envelope from Honer than the one which had been shown to contain nothing! Perhaps he had never had anything from Honer but the hint that Honer had something that Brainard wanted. But thinking so would not alter the case; for Brainard could not prove whether or not an index had been left by Honer. So long as he suspected that it might be in Ballard's hands, it might as well be there! Would the day come when he would beg for it? He was trembling now with the hope—the miserable hope—that the thing existed that made that a possibility! What did Ballard want in exchange for it? Brainard's power, of course. And the day Brainard should admit that he wanted it, his power would be gone! Had he admitted it?

Why must he have that fateful index? Why must a man have anything he desired with his whole heart? Of what use to canvass that again? She was his Circe; and he was no Ulysses! He was no demigod; and mere man always bought what he wanted most at the price of all else he possessed. How long would it take Brainard to conclude that such a price was not too much? And yet, what was this that he wanted to buy? Perhaps not even anything that could belong to him! No man ever followed an emptier reward—even a follower of cocaine! But no lover of cocaine was ever more in love! Here was a man with world power in his hands heartsick for a mere woman—yes, for a wraith of a woman—yes, a wraith of a wraith, a vibration, a matter of gases, a breath of air—a thing without substance or shadow! He had held up a mirror and an image had danced across. For that instant he had held her, as it were, in his hands. But between him and her a gulf was fixed. Yet she was his breath of life! What was this power she held over him—the power of this law he could not defy—this power it gave into the hands of his enemy? He must seek her. If she was in life, he would seek her to the world's end. If not, he might willingly die to go to her. Men had done things as mad as that. But if he could not hope to find her in one world without a clue to time or place, how could he follow into another without knowing which he followed "of all the myriads who"!

His mind drifted. Phyllis had said there would be disaster. Perhaps she was right, though she could not have guessed the manner of it. No one knew, or had known—except the man who had died with the secret.

Even his enemies who held his desire away from him did not know what it was. Did the gods know? And was he one whom, about to destroy, they first made mad? Clearly he was mad! Was she then his Nemesis, that Sunrise Sprite! Poetically that should be his fate! But damn the poetical! He was the master! Why dramatize or sentimentalize his predicament? What was the cure? Why, it was as obvious as ever. If he could not find her, he could tear her out of his memory, out of his heart, by the bleeding roots! But—supposing him cured!—what then? Great God, he did not want to be cured?

Dragnet

How cruelly a man was shut within himself. Someone had said that the senses, instead of being "windows of the soul," were curtains of the soul, veiling us away from real contacts with real things. How short was human reach! He was a man in a glass case called consciousness, with the things he wanted just outside! In a moment of clear vision he saw that, as he was, so were other men. What he had done for them he had done for himself. The Vicarion paraded the things outside the glass! More; it was only the Vicarion that had made men, any of them, aware of captivity. Consciousness—present consciousness—a prison! Its walls divided him from his heart's desire! And them from theirs, perhaps. No, only men who were fools enough to want things that were outside the glass! But he cared nothing about them; he cared—for two things—one now become the other's price—and he balanced them against each other.

He went to the control-board of his multiple condenser at last. Here was his dragnet, which he might fling abroad with hope—for fisherman's luck. He mumbled the old phrase about the good fish remaining in the sea with grim appreciation of the reason why it had never turned any man from singleness of desire.

He knew not where to direct his search. And it is in such confusion and under such compulsion that men gamble or grasp at superstitions for guides. As well set his dials with his eyes shut as to manipulate the machine with careful plan. As well offer supplication and propitiatory promise to such gods as might be as to put faith in system when one must deal with chaos. As well rattle the dice blindly in the cup as to attempt to foresee their fall by peering in upon them. They were as likely to be loaded for as against him. Fate herself had been known to be kind; she had been extraordinarily kind to him! Why all this anticipation of ruin? It was his weariness! Why not hope? He turned his dials, and threw back his head to make his prayer.

I Saw It Myself

By C. W. ROGERS

Posted on the highway leading from Frederick into Altus, Okla., is a sign proclaiming that "Altus is the biggest town of its size on earth." It is not difficult to agree with the wittiism, after a passar around the walks that bound the courthouse plaza, or "square" as it is called up this way. The founders of Altus planned in generous proportions. It should be added that the establishments around the square comprise only a part of the business district. Altus lays claim to being "the industrial and jobbing center of southwest Oklahoma." The claim is supported in a chamber of commerce pamphlet which enumerates scores of industrial and commercial enterprises.

It was the pleasure of this writer to be present at the annual meeting and banquet of the Altus Chamber of Commerce.

The more or less radical Mr. Henry L. Mencken of American Mercury fame has said that the United States has 110 million people, all alike, and another smartie has said that one chamber of commerce meeting is like every other. Neither was right, with the exception that every chamber of commerce meeting is like all others in that it is a gathering of public spirited citizens earnestly planning the material and moral welfare of the community. How well the Altus chamber has progressed in its endeavors was shown in part by the appearance at the meeting of two boys and two girls, leaders in 4-H farm clubs, who actually "ran away" with the program. It is not discrediting President C. W. Snyder or Past President Roscoe Holt or the guest speaker of the evening when the assertion is made that these youngsters excelled in compelling the interest of their auditors. They have acquired mastery of expression.

If a recorder of plain statements of fact may be pardoned for digressing, the opinion is ventured that no county can invest too heavily in the support of 4-H farm clubs. With no intent to invade the provinces of the ministry, it must be said, the 4-H club is helping to do directly what the ministry accomplishes by indirection—its aim is the making of farm boys and girls into healthy, happy, prosperous citizens—by supplying a material incentive, irresistible to youth, to "make the best better," in the nature of contests. Every project of the club is a contest with unfailing reward in greater or less degree for all who earnestly strive to win. No good citizen should neglect to become fully informed on the objects and accomplishments of the 4-H club.

Over at Mangum, first town visited after departing from Altus, a majority of the citizenship was continuing to jubilate over the election of "Bill" Williams, native of De-Leon, Texas, to the office made vacant by the death of H. D. Henry, representative to the Oklahoma legislature from the fourth senatorial district. In a campaign that lasted only a week "Bill" trimmed his influential Republican opponent. They do say that "Bill" is sure to wind up in congress.

Editor Elmer Jessee's Greer County Star office politics was forgotten for the moment when reference was made to Mangum's building activity.

Editor J. O. Tuton of the Greer County News hastened to enumerate a few of the big projects under construction, which included a $40,000 theater and Masonic temple, nearing completion; an addition to the Border hospital to cost $50,000 and the Franklin hotel which when completed will represent an investment of $150,000. It was said that the municipal water softening plant, on which $45,000 is being expended, is nearing completion. Another enterprise is the municipal airport, managed by Ray Shifflett, which involves an expenditure of $35,000.

Mangum's handsomely furnished Elks club is an institution of which the city is proud. The order has been active in the promotion of civic projects. The roster of the club embraces foremost business men of the city, including the mayor, Dr. G. Fowler Border.

When Doctor Border was inducted into office the city was broke. Today it is conducted on a cash basis with money in the treasury. Mangum now owns its light plant, gas plant and waterworks, due to the efforts of its present mayor.

Mangum is the county seat of Greer, the county which Claremore's most distinguished journalist once said that Oklahoma tried to shove off on Texas and Texas made Oklahoma take it back. Fact is that Texas fought to get title to the county and lost in the supreme court of the United States 32 years ago.

Greer county is a rich county, its potential riches enormous. Its annual crop production is around $7,500,000, according to B. E. Davis, chamber of commerce secretary.

In the nearby Wichita mountains are inexhaustible quantities of granite gravel and nearer are other large beds of sand and gravel required in road and building construction. In the northern part of the county are salt beds and gypsum deposits that ultimately will add to the wealth of Greer.

There are many former Texans in Mangum and Greer county, including the Mangum mayor. The native Tejano feels at home here. That's why this writer was slow in departing for Hollis, capital of Harmon county, the next stop.

Best Remedy for Obstinate Cough Made at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It also promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and at the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs and "flu" coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Nation's Capital Basks In Summer Sunshine

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. (US)—With the thermometer hovering around 60, Washington basked in a spring-like atmosphere today. A warm sun quickly dissipated a few flakes of snow that fell during the night.

CLEAN KIDNEYS BY DRINKING LOTS OF WATER

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. They they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.—Adv.

Give freely

When your Children Cry for It

Mothers, who take one simple precaution, are seldom worried. With a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria in the house they can do what their doctor would tell them to do, when baby is fretful, feverish, colicky, constipated or stuffed-up with cold—give a few drops of this pure vegetable, pleasant-tasting preparation. It comforts, Baby and soothes him to sleep in a jiffy. It's perfectly safe for the youngest infant. Use it freely—and as often as needed, specialists advise. A more liberal dose is all it takes to comfort and relieve older children, when feverishness, bad breath, no appetite, colds, etc., show they need a good purging. The mark of genuine Castoria is the Fletcher signature on the wrapper. Look for it to avoid imitations.

GLYCERIN MIX, STOPS CONSTIPATION IN DAY

"I could not get a bowel movement without some kind of medicine. Adlerika helped me in one day and now I have no trouble."—Mrs. Wm. Daum.

Adlerika, a simple glycerin, buckthorn bark, saline compound, acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel and brings out foul matter you would never believe was in your system. This old matter may have poisoned you for months and caused GAS, sour stomach, headache or nervousness.

Try this simple proof: Take any medicine which acts on lower bowel only—most laxatives do. After your bowels have moved, take Adlerika and in a short time you will be astonished at how much MORE sour, old matter and GAS is brought out!

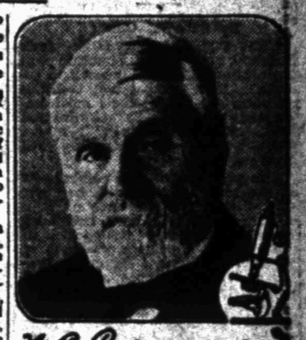

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika checks the growth of intestinal bacteria."

Dr. J. Weaver: "In my 50 years' practice, I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."

J. E. Puckett: "After using Adlerika I feel better than for 20 years. Awful impurities were eliminated."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel! Just ONE spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. At leading druggists. Prescription He Wrote in 1892 is the World's Most Popular Laxative

H. B. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 80

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.—Adv.

SHARKEY AND STRIBLING TO ESTABLISH CAMPS THIS WEEK

FLORIDA SITES TO BE CHOSEN

Jack to Arrive Today And Willie Tomorrow

By FRANK GETTY

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. (UP)—Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling will go to Miami Beach this week to establish their respective training quarters for the winter's most important heavyweight elimination bout. The Bostonian will arrive there Tuesday and Stribling will arrive a day later.

The presence of the combatants at the scene of the fight, together with the first appearance of tickets for the affair, will invite an adequate forecast of the success of the venture, a project which is at once Tex Rickard's legacy to boxing and Jack Dempsey's introduction in the role of a promoter.

Success Is Forecast

Even before the principals hang up their punching bags and start popping over their sparring partners, there is every reason to predict that the Sharkey-Stribling bout will be a financial as well as a pugilistic success.

The choice of a southern resort as the scene of Stribling's first real opportunity to demonstrate his worth as a heavyweight contender was a happy one, as the late Tex Rickard well knew. The enthusiasm of the south for the Georgia youngster who has nearly 150 knockouts to his credit at the age of 24 is sufficient guarantee in itself that the seat sale should approach the most sanguine expectations of Dempsey and his associates.

Young Stribling is extremely unpopular here in the north; but then Sharkey does not need an adding machine to calculate the number of his admirers. Each, after his fashion, is a "Leach Cross" of the prize ring; a boxer whose drawing powers lie largely in the fact that a majority of the cash customers come hoping to see him beaten. This is true of Stribling only in New York, of course; as for Sharkey, his appearance in a ring outside of Boston usually is the signal for a storm of boos and cat-calls.

A New Civil War

This state of affairs—the exuberance of southern fight fans mingled with the vociferous criticism from the north—promises to make the evening of Feb. 27 a lively one in the big outdoor arena now being built at Miami Beach.

The south has seen heavyweight championship fights in its day, but has never produced a heavyweight champion. Every railroad ticket office on lines leading to Florida will provide a ready invitation for those with the price to go to Miami Beach to back Billy Stribling in his big chance, since seats for the fight will be sold together with tickets to the scene of battle, the latter selling at half price for the occasion.

The temperamental Sharkey is not at all pleased that the bout is to be held so far south. He and his manager Johnny Buckley admit frankly that they would prefer to wait and make a match here in New York when the outdoor season rolls around. But they have signed to go to Florida for a guarantee of $100,000, and boxing is very much a business proposition with this pair of big-hearted Bostonians.

ESTELLINE, Texas, Jan. 28.—Estelline is proud of its high school basket ball team—with very good reason, fans here believe. The local prep cagers have defeated Shamrock, Childress and Kirkland twice, Wellington, Carey, Hedley and Turkey.

Parish directed a green football squad last fall, with a majority of the candidates never having played or seen the game previously, and won four, lost three and tied one contest.

Police Recover Auto Before Word of Theft

When a card from the sheriff at Haskell notifying local police to watch for the car was received Monday afternoon the machine was already standing in the police storage garage.

A Chevrolet coupe which was stolen from Arnold Ramming, 800 Fillmore street, Sunday was recovered Monday morning in Scotland park by Fred Fountain, city officer.

Jake-Walkers

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—The campaign against jake-walkers is speeding up throughout America.

Los Angeles reports the capture of a common pedestrian, habitat North America, on the outskirts of the city.

He had almost reached the business section of the town.

Experts agree that this rare specimen of flattus feetus was driven into the city by hunger.

Portland, Oregon: A jake-walker was trapped while gnawing a lamppost down. These animals are doing much damage in the northwest.

Jacksonville, Fla.: Mr. Hoover is much interested in the antics of strange two-footed animals which look at him furtively when he passes in an automobile.

They are very shy. When a horn is sounded they jump far, loose and wide.

St. Louis: A jake-walker was captured while trying to cross the main street without a note from his parents.

Boston: Kind-hearted automobilists are throwing crumbs on the snow for sparrows and jake-walkers.

Memphis: The continued blowing of police whistles has frightened the last of the jake-walkers from this city. They once roamed the prairies in countless numbers.

Dallas, Texas: Judge Grump sentenced a jay-bopper to six months in a revolving door for reckless driving. His shoe-laces were untied.

San Francisco: A chauffeur was mildly reproved today for running down a pedestrian out of season.

Washington: The supreme court handed down a decision from the nation's rumble seat this week. It states that the traffic situation is not a survival of the footist.

New Orleans: A jake-jumper was rescued from a safety zone in Canal street yesterday. Canal street is the widest thoroughfare in the country. The horn-leaper had been marooned in the safety-zone for two weeks without food or water.

Denver: Judge Magoop has finally solved the problem of compelling jake-walkers to walk straight. He gives 'em 20 years on a treadmill.

Newport, R. I.: Miss Tootie Klaxton Lowder has been disinherited by grandmother for eloping with a pedestrian.

Norfolk: The last of the jake-walkers has gone from our midst. He made a left turn on a wharf.

Plane to Carry Waggoner Racer From Tijuana to New Orleans

TIJUANA, Mexico, Jan. 28. (US)—Plans here underway today for shipping Vermajo, a thoroughbred racer of W. T. Waggoner's noted three D's stock farm stables, from Tijuana to New Orleans by airplane, it was announced here by officials of the Tijuana Jockey club.

The trip will be made following the close of the racing season here which comes only four days before the feature of the New Orleans racing season, the big Louisiana derby.

Although a race horse has been shipped once before by airplane when Baron Long sent one of his colts by plane from Tijuana to Tanforan, this will be the longest trip of the kind attempted in America.

"All we need to do is to take the seats out of one of our regulane planes," said an official of the air line which will carry the horse, "put in some board flooring and the necessary feed and water. There will be plenty of room for a horse without crowding him. The distance by rail from Tijuana to New Orleans is more than 2,100 miles, and it is estimated that the airplane trip will consume about 24 hours flying time at the ordinary cruising speed of 90 miles an hour."

ACTION LOOMS IN FISTIC BILL

Ross' Card Tomorrow Night Looks Like Corker

Adolph Friedman's boxing protege, one Gene Cullen of Austin, will show his pugilistic skill tomorrow night for the edification or razzing of Wichita Falls enthusiasts of the sport. Friedman, from the ring last week, issued a challenge to all southwestern middleweights in behalf of Cullen. Adolph intimated that Promoter Alex Ross was reluctant to give Cullen a go here. Ross countered with the statement that he is making his own matches.

Cyclone Hall, who was in the ring waiting to shake hands with Jimmy Walker, whom he stopped in the first round, accepted Friedman's sweeping defy. So tomorrow night is the night, and Mr. Friedman's exponent of the sour science will be arrayed against the Cyclone socker from Childress in the 10-round windup of Professor Ross' excellent card at 821 Indiana avenue.

Howard Scott of Electra and Kid Murdock of Sulphur, Okla., the corking feathers who fought a slashing go here recently with the Texan winning in the last round on a foul, will meet in a return duel. It is for eight rounds and is the semi-windup.

Kid Garland, the flashy Burkburnett kid, will meet Henry Adams of Wichita Falls in a six-round scrap and it should be replete with action. Three other bouts on the card include Jimmy Wilson, Oklahoma City, the fellow who made such a game fight last week, vs. Virgil Oden, Wichita Falls, welterweights; Lem Lewis and Art Skeen, Wichita Falls, welters; Black Dummy vs. Black Wolf, middleweights, and a curtain-raiser.

Rickard's Investment In Argentine Failed And He Got Promoting Bee

Dream of Buying Ranch in Texas Never Materialized, Though He Always Longed to Return to Old Home

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Wandering about the streets of Reno, Nev., during the weeks in which Tex Rickard was engaged in the nerve-wracking business of promoting the Jeffries-Johnson fight, there was a slim, tousle-haired youth, who looked as though he had just rolled out from under a passing freight.

That, in truth, was exactly what he had done. He was a knight of the side-door pullman. He was there for the purpose of seeing the big fight, even though it meant crashing the gate. For days he haunted the crowded saloons, making frequent grabs at the free lunch counters when the bartenders weren't looking. When he wasn't doing this, he was dogging the footsteps of Tex Rickard or loitering about the training camps. From a distance he would stand and admire the great promoter with mixed awe and admiration. Often he felt the urge to speak to him, but could never screw up the courage. Rickard never gave him so much as a passing glance.

The young man, whose name was William Harrison Dempsey, was just a unit of the drifting riffraff that every championship prize fight attracts. Apart from his springy, nimble way of moving about and his wonderfully lithe figure, there was nothing to distinguish him from the rest of the hangers-on. If you had asked him at that time what he was doing, he probably would have replied:

"The best I can."

Little did either Tex Rickard or Jack Dempsey suspect that between them they were to make millions and dominate the pugilistic world. If anyone had pointed Dempsey out to Rickard at that time and said: "That young hobo over there is going to be one of the greatest heavyweights of all time, and the biggest money-maker the ring ever knew," Tex would probably have found at least one thing in turbulent Reno to laugh over.

Dempsey Vanished

The fight took place, and the great crowd dispersed to all points of the compass. The young hobo vanished into the dust of the Nevada desert, and his path was not to cross Rickard's for many years. How Jack drifted into the fight game and finally worked himself up to the height of challenging Jess Willard for the heavyweight championship of the world is another story. But it was to be Tex Rickard who was to give him the opportunity that was to make him world champion nine years later.

Neither is the hectic career of Jack Johnson a part of this biography after he and Tex Rickard parted company in Reno. After a series of scrapes and misadventures that for years kept him beyond the borders of the United States, a fugitive from the law, we find him in April, 1915, facing the giant Jess Willard in a Havana ring, with his title at stake.

That fight, promoted by Jack Curley and Harry Frazee, went 26 rounds and Jess Willard won by a knockout. Those at the ringside afterward declared that Johnson, arm-weary from hitting the massive cowboy, simply collapsed in the 26th round from utter exhaustion. He laid himself down on the canvas, and, shading his eyes from the vicious glare of the sun, permitted himself to be counted out. It has often been said that there was something prearranged about this, but no proof of it has ever been produced.

Jess Willard, although he proved to be the white hope for which the white race had been clamoring for so many years, was never a popular champion. He lacked personality, and was without the gift of making friends. He never liked the boxing racket, and as the years went on the heavyweight title seemed to sour his disposition. His career finally led him to that fatal Toledo ring in July, 1919. And here Tex Rickard comes back into the picture, and with him appears the lithe young hobo whom he failed to notice nine years before. It was the beginning of the historic association of Tex Rickard and Jack Dempsey.

Tex Had Wanderlust

Rickard was born with the wanderlust in his blood. By the time he was 15 years old he had covered half a dozen states on horseback, and was preparing for the romantic Alaskan adventure. Back from the trackless wastes of the frozen North, he wandered into California, from there to the Nevada desert, then to the Atlantic seaboard, and back to Nevada again.

When the high-pressure excitement of the Jeffries-Johnson fight at Reno had subsided, Tex again thought he would go back to Texas and buy a ranch that had been in his dreams ever since he made his first gold strike in the Klondike. He told his friends that he was wearied with the life of a showman and ballyhoo expert, and wanted to settle down.

After each one of his great fistic promotions Tex had a habit of expressing similar sentiments. After the Toledo fight he said he was through and would retire. But he didn't. Later he announced that the Dempsey-Carpentier extravaganza was to be his farewell. After each of the Dempsey-Tunney battles he said he would like to quit. Knowing Tex Rickard as I did, I always carried the conviction that he would die in harness, which is exactly what he did. When death overtook him, he was paving the way for another battle for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Rickard never got around to buying that Texas ranch. After the Reno fight, he prospected around for a while, restless and with the wanderlust raising dreams of fortunes to be made in distant lands. Then someone told him of the golden opportunities for a live wire in the Argentine, and Tex could not resist. Off he started for the great cattle-raising plains of South America. His South American adventure did not pan out. He invested large sums in great tracts of grazing lands, only to discover that he could neither make them pay nor get his money out again by selling.

We find him next in New York on the threshold of promoting another fight that was to completely overshadow the battle of Reno.

COOLIDGE ASKS FOR CAUTION

President Reviews Record On Finances

the fiscal affairs of the government.

In 1921, he said, the annual expenditure was $5,000,000,000 dollars, exclusive of the debt payments. The interest alone arounted to $1,000,000,000. The national debt was $24,000,000,000, business was prostrate and 5,000,000 people wert out of work.

"The government was permeated with extravagance," he said with asperity.

Then with visible pride in his accomplishments he said: "We have inserted a golden page in our history. Peace has its victories no less than wars. I believe that the federal government today is the best conducted big business in the world."

Lets Record Answer

Then for the first time the president revealed that he was quite well aware of what many had said of his so-called "stinginess," but was quite willing to let the satisfactory condition of the country be his answer.

After referring to the general prosperous condition of the country, notably the increases in bank deposits, the president turned his thoughts to the future as he continued:

Enormous Debt Remains

"In spite of all these accomplishments much yet remains to be done. We still have an enormous debt of $17,000,000,000. In spite of all our efforts for economy, our great savings in interest and our four reductions in taxes, the expenses of the federal government during the last year are showing a tendency to increase.

"While much has been done in increasing the costs, by far the largest item of credit is due for preventing increased expenditures. A short time ago there were pending before the congress and seriously being advocated bills which would have doubled our annual cost of government.

"At the present time committees have reported, and there are on the calendar in congress, bills which would cost more than a billion dollars. Had there not been a constant insistence upon a policy of rigid economy, many of these bills would have become law.

"It would be a mistake to suppose that we can continue our national prosperity with the attendant blessings which it confers upon the people unless we continue to insist upon constructive economy in government. The margin between prosperity and depression is always very small. A decrease of less than 10 per cent in the income of the nation would produce a deficit in our present budget."

In conclusion the president paid a high tribute to Gen. H. M. Lord, director of the bureau of the budget.

STAR TOSSERS ARE HOLDOUTS

Annual Crop of Recalcitrant Athletes Recorded

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. (UP)—Many major league baseball stars are dissatisfied with the terms of their 1929 contracts, according to a poll of the teams by the United Press. With the training season only a month away, some of the leading stars of last season are numbered among the apparent holdouts.

Mickey Cochrane, star catcher of the Philadelphia Athletics who was awarded the American league's most valuable player prize last season, has returned his contract to Connie Mack unsigned. Cochrane is said to want $4,000 more than he received in 1928.

Paul Waner, Pittsburgh outfielder and the National league's most valuable player in 1927, has balked at the terms offered him, as has his little brother, Lloyd. Barney Dreyfuss, however, denies they are holdouts.

Vance Wants 25 Grand

Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn pitching ace who won the National league's most valuable player prize in 1924, along with most of the other Robin regulars, has not signed a contract for 1929. Vance is said to want $25,000 for next season.

Buddy Myer, third baseman obtained from the Boston Red Sox in exchange for five players, and Leon Goslin, batting champion of the American league last season, are believed to be holdouts among the Washington Senators. Sam Rice, Sam Jones and Fred Marberry are others who have not signed contracts. Out of a squad of 32, only 12 Senators have signed.

Secretary Jim Tierney of the New York Giants insists none of the Giants is holding out, but word from Bill Terry at Memphis and Fred Lindstrom at Chicago is to the effect that they want more money before they sign.

O'Farrell Is Unsigned

Bob O'Farrell, catcher who won the National league's most valuable player award in 1926, is another Giant who has not signed.

Jess Haines, star moundsman of the St. Louis Cardinals, may join the ranks of the holdouts any day now. He had a conference recently with Branch Rickey, vice president of the club, and failed to sign his contract. Haines was one of the leading holdouts of two years ago. Haines won 24 games and lost 10 in 1927 and won 20 and lost eight last season. On this record, he believes he is entitled to the highest salary on the Cardinals.

Dick Porter, rookie outfielder who was purchased from the Baltimore Orioles for $40,000, has returned his contract to the Cleveland Indians unsigned.

Yank Stars in Fold

Neither the Chicago White Sox nor Chicago Cubs report any holdouts, but it would not be a surprise if several of the White Sox stars registered kicks over Charles Comiskey's cutrate salaries soon.

With eight of their stars signed, the New York Yankees are not worrying. Babe Ruth, Earl Combs, Lou Gehrig, Herb Pennock, Tony Lazzeri, Mark Koening, Waite Hoyt, Wiley Moore and George Pipgras are under holdover contracts.

There are no known holdouts on the Boston Red Sox or Boston Braves.

Fields is considered to have first call for the title bout despite the fact that Thompson scored a knockout victory over the champion at catchweights last November.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (UP)—Babe Ruth may leave for the New York Yankees' training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., early in February, if present plans of the home run king materialize.

Health And Diet Advice

RECTAL DISORDERS

The last few inches of the intestines, termed the rectum, are subject to a number of disorders and irritations such as hemorrhoids, piles, fissures, inflammations, prolapsus, neuralgia, etc. There are very few parts of the body where a local trouble can produce so many reflex pains and waste so much nervous vitality.

Hemorrhoids are simply varicose veins of the rectum. They become enlarged because of some interference with the normal flow of blood away from the rectum. These veins are especially liable to enlargement because they do not contain the usual valves to keep the blood from flowing backward.

The blood supply of the rectum is connected very directly with the portal circulation of the liver. When the liver becomes sluggish or overworked the rectal veins must necessarily enlarge. It is therefore necessary that all liver disturbances be cured before one can expect to free the congested rectal circulation.

Other conditions which may produce hemorrhoids are a prolapsus of the abdominal organs, excessive use of cathartics, a long-continued sitting or standing position, straining while lifting, excessive intestinal gas and constipation. With women the cause may be from an enlarged or misplaced uterus, the pressure from tumors, pregnancy, indolent habits of living, etc. It is known that fully 95 per cent of all women suffer from some prolapsus of the abdominal organs.

A fissure of the rectum is simply a break in the membrane caused by long-continued constipation, the irritation of poisonous feces or the stretching, tearing effect of lumpy stools. Sometimes the internal irritation and infection may be so great as to produce an opening from the inside of the rectum out through the skin of the buttocks. This is called a fistula, and can only come from a continual neglect of rectal disorders which could easily be cured in their insipiency. Local treatments are often effective and necessary in curing rectal disorders, but of course to produce a permanent cure the cause of the trouble must be removed.

When the membranes of the rectum themselves are prolapsed, it is best to push them back as often as possible and immediately apply a local treatment of ice or ice water to contract and produce a better tone in these weakened membranes. This ice treatment is helpful in all rectal disorders if taken in this way. Break off a small piece of ice, shave it into a cone-like shape and carefully insert the small end into the rectum, holding it in place with a thick towel. The ice cone should then be forced farther up and held there while the ice melts. This treatment should last only four or five minutes, until the ice is melted. The blood vessels will contract in this way, and the circulation will be better after each treatment. Injections of ice water may be given with a small hand syringe in place of the ice treatment. Exercises should also be used to overcome any condition of internal prolapsus, and local treatments to be given by your doctor may be also necessary in severe or infected cases.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Milk Diet

Question: Mrs. G. L. writes: "I am about to have all 22 of my teeth pulled. What should I eat to keep up my strength and health? I've always had more or less gas, and feel like a drum after eating."

Answer: One of the best diets for you to take while recovering from your mouth troubles is to go on a well regulated milk diet. If you will take a glass of milk every hour during the day, as long as you are awake, you will be able to get enough nourishment without using any other food. Your gums will heal more perfectly under this diet than if you tried to use other foods.

Peanut Butter

Question: F. G. asks: "Does peanut butter make a bad combination with some foods and what are they?"

Answer: Peanut butter may be used in combination with any other food providing the peanut butter is made from roasted peanuts.

Failing Memory

Question: H. B. asks: "What is the cause of the memory failing, and is there a cure for it. A friend of years of age is apparently in good health, but his memory is failing."

Answer: Your friend's trouble is always an evidence of decreased vitality and a general breaking down of the nervous system. The trouble can be kept from getting worse by the patient living on a good diet and keeping up a free elimination of toxins from the body.

Price Cut Fails to Cool Drilling Ardor

Special to The Record News

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas, Jan. 28.—The low price of crude and the prospects that more declines are to follow the one announced last week in the midcontinent are not serving as a deterrent to drillers in this part of the state.

The close of the week and the return of fair weather found more rigs running, more derricks going up, more pipelines being laid and plans for the further development of Stephens county as not seen here in many months.

The Hitson No. 2 is now a derrick. It is located about 600 feet southeast of the Hitson No. 1. C. M. Root is the owner and Root and Rhodes are the drillers. It is in recently proven territory west of town about one mile. West of the Hitson No. 1, Clark and company are drilling below 1200 feet, having run 12-inch pipe during the week new closed at a depth below 1100 feet.

East, southeast and northeast of Breckenridge, the Mesa Production company, Ramsey and Decker and others have started new tests. Edgar Johnson and Cap Lyman of the Mesa company are drilling on acreage in the north Caddo field. This is about 14 miles northeast of town.

The Lone Star has received a shipment this week of nine cars of pipe to be used locally.

Other locations for oil and gas tests have been made in the southeast part of the county, near Necessity.

INDIANA S. O. CUTS GAS PRICE

Dreary News for Refiners Forthcoming

Special to The Record News

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 28.—The Standard Oil Company of Indiana Tuesday morning will reduce the tank-wagon price of gasoline 1 cent a gallon and the service station price 2 cents a gallon in the 13 states where it makes the market. Its action will be the result of the crude oil cuts of last week.

The new gasoline prices will compel refiners to lower their spot prices, now ranging from 7 to 8 cents a gallon in tank-car lots, to 6 to 7 cents. This will force many refiners to cut runs of crude to stills and cut into any margin of profits they might be making at present prices.

Student Building Fee Is Held Legal

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 28. (UP)—Collection of $2.50 from each University of Oklahoma student to support the Student Union building was held legal by Judge Sam Hooker in district court today.

Judge Hooker denied a temporary order asked by Floyd Rheams, law student, and 20 others. The $2.50 is required each semester. The student building houses a cafeteria, pool room, ball room, card rooms and committee offices.

Rheams' attorneys will either appeal or try the case on its merits before Judge Hooker, they said.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. (AP)—Prices were somewhat irregular in the cotton market today, with an early decline followed by recoveries which carried the price of May contracts up from 19.81 to 19.99. That month closed at 19.93, with the general market steady at net advances of 5 to 17 points on buying which was attributed to covering by recent sellers and a moderate trade demand.

The market opened steady at a decline of 3 to 6 points in response to rather less favorable trade advices from Manchester, and the indifferent showing of Liverpool cables. Comparatively light offerings were readily absorbed and prices stiffened during the middle of the morning. March advanced from 19.81 to 19.96 and July from 19.45 to 19.65 or about 11 to 17 points net higher.

This bulge met further selling and liquidation supposed to come partly from the South, and the market sold off to about the low prices of the morning, or a shade lower on the near months. The selling then tapered off and the market firmed up in the late trading on a renewal of trade demand and covering. Last prices were the highest of the day on new crop months, which were more active with indications of a somewhat broadening trade or commission house interest.

Selling on the midday decline may have been promoted by rumors of possible curtailment of mill production in the South if business did not improve, but according to some of the local brokers the trading was hardly active enough to suggest any fresh factor of importance.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 28. (AP)—Cotton prices failed to develop any definite trend today due to the absence of news developments. The market worked slightly higher after easing off on buying said to be for western interests. Realizing development on the advances and May contracts which had traded up to 19.35 eased off to 19.18 but a late rally carried the option to 19.29 where it closed, net 5 points higher. The general market closed steady at net advances of 3 to 13 points.

First trades were 1 point up to 4 down. There was a flurry of selling right after the opening and March sold off to 19.15, May 19.20 and July 19.18, or 3 to 4 points net down.

Offerings were absorbed at the decline by a moderate demand made up of buying said to be for western interests and some covering and before the demand was supplied by realizing and liquidation March traded up to 19.32, May 19.35 and July 19.33, or 14 to 15 points above the early lows and 11 points over Saturday's close.

During the afternoon, however, the profit-taking and liquidation persisted and carried active positions to new lows for the day 6 to 7 points net down. In final trading there was another flurry of buying and the market recovered 10 to 11 points of the loss with March closing at 19.24 and July 19.27. October showed the maximum gain of 13 points closing at 18.97.

MISSING YOUTH MAY HAVE LEFT VOLUNTARILY

LAREDO, Texas, Jan. 28. (AP)—The theory that Harry Williams, 24, newspaperman, for whom about 350 American immigration and patrol authorities have been ordered to search, may have left this border town voluntarily and unharmed was regarded as tenable today by some officers checking over leads in Williams' unexplained disappearance nine days ago.

Higher Money Rate Expectations Hold Trading in Check During Day

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. (US)—Expectation of a higher money rate for over the month-end induced quiet liquidation in the majority of issues that closed the stock market lower, today. Westinghouse and a few others benefited from individual developments but the list as a whole was irregular throughout.

Gain in Westinghouse of 7⅞ was the best among the active stocks, while Radio jumped 5, National Dairy Products added 3 points to its advance and American Smelting gained 1¼. No serious loss was sustained, as there was consistent support throughout. Steel closed 2 points lower, General Motors lost 2¾, American Telephone 3, Montgomery Ward 3¼ and Johns Manville dropped 2 points. New York Central gained 2⅞, while Baltimore & Ohio, the Katy and others advanced fractionally in a generally firm rail list.

Oils remained soft under the influence of price cutting. Call money held at 6 per cent, but was in scarcer supply at the close. Volume remained under the 5,000,000-share level.

Three months ago the highly favorable position and prospects of the power and utility stocks was told of in this column. Now they are the feature of the market. Electric Bond and Share, National Power and Light, Public Service of New Jersey and others have scored big advances, with Electric Bond and Share the feature with a rise of more than 150 points since it was first mentioned here. Despite the advance, those in the best position to know hold to their bullish position, as they declare that only a small part of the favorable developments in the power group has become known as yet.

Of course, the big rise they have enjoyed will result in a more irregular market therein from now on as big profits prove too attractive for many holders.

United Gas Company is attracting attention of important operators who have been bullish on utilities. American International continued well taken, for it has benefited more from the advance in Electric Bond and Share than any other corporation with the exception of General Electric.

Electric Auto Lite continues to be influenced by the operations of the new group that took over sponsorship a few weeks ago. It is estimated that for the first six months of this year alone it will earn close to $12 a share.

General Motors was the subject of favorable talk in many quarters, but was held back by the general nervousness induced by the money situation. Nash displayed a favorable undertone coincident with continued group support on expectation of a record half year to June 30.

International Cement was taken in hand by a new pool coincident with a report that earnings this quarter would be the largest in history for the period.

Carbide remained the favorite of the strongest group operating in the market at the moment. There is reason to expect that stockholders will receive special distribution before many months. Underwood also was well taken. There were rumors that it would merge with another important organization. However, there is no likelihood of such development for the near future, although eventually it seems logical to expect that Underwood and International Business Machines will get together.

Belief that there would be no special dividend action at the Steel meeting tomorrow was an inducement to selling, although earnings for last year equaled about $11.50 a share against less than $9 on the common in 1927.

Sinclair and other oils met selling again. There is the same old reason for the disappearing action of the oil list and that is: Too much oil. However, this year the leaders of the industry are taking steps to correct the evil before it does as much damage as in previous times. By reducing the price for crude they will hold down production. It is believed that strict control will be exercised so that the industry can enter the normally prosperous spring period in a good position and in such event good absorption of the oils should be evidenced if much further setback were experienced.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, Jan. 28 (AP)—Increased general selling, some from foreigners, and with a good deal also against purchases of corn, led to a sharp setback of wheat values today. The United States wheat visible supply total failed to show as much falling off today as in various quarters had been looked for.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1⅛ to 1⅞c net lower, corn finished 1⅛c to 1⅝c down, oats ⅛ to ⅝@⅞c off, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 15c.

Nervousness for wheat was in evidence throughout the day, with especial weakening noticeable after word came that domestic visible stocks of wheat had diminished only 1,748,000 bushels for the last week, as against 3,519,000 bushels decrease during the week previous.

Best rallies in wheat values folowed reports of select storms in Nebraska and of another cold wave en route, threatening wide areas of winter wheat unprotected by snow.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat weakness. Moreover, no new corn export business was apparent, and the corn visible supply increased 2,362,000 bushels for the week.

Provisions met with heavy selling on price bulges that resulted from upturns in the value of hogs.

SOUTH AFRICA ASSEMBLY RATIFIES KELLOGG PACT

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, Jan. 28. (AP)—The house of assembly of the Union of South Africa today ratified the Kellogg pact.

GEORGE REMUS NOW A PAUPER

Bootleg King's Fortune Is Wiped Away

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 28. (UP)—The last of George Remus' huge bootleg fortune vanished today when an agreement was reached on a federal liquor tax penalty case.

Remus loses $25,000 in collateral he put up several years ago to indemnify the American Surety company of New York. The Surety company pays the government the $25,000 as tax penalty, under the agreement.

If the statements of Remus at the time of his trial for the murder of his wife, Imogene, at Cincinnati last year can be believed, the collateral wiped out today was one of the last remaining vestiges of the millions Remus amassed several years ago when he was withdrawing whisky from Indiana warehouses upon alleged false permits and flooding the middle west with it at fancy prices.

The suit settled today was that of the government against the Surety company upon a $50,000 bond insuring payment of beverage tax and penalties in case 20,000 gallons of whisky was illicitly removed from the W. P. Squibb and company distillery at Lawrenceburg, Ind. The case is six years old.

COUNTY ORDERS TAX GUARDS

Protection of Funds in Final Rush Provided

Employment of guards to protect the large sums of money handled by branches of the county tax collector's office in Electra, Burkburnett and Iowa Park during the closing business at the end of the month was authorized by the county commissioners court Monday. A special guard has been at work in the Wichita Falls office since early in January.

With only three more days to go before penalties fall due, thousands of property and automobile owners were yet to apply for tax receipts and license plates at the collector's office Monday. C. W. Parker, deputy collector, said that only 11,000 license plates have been issued, and that 5,000 cars must be handled within the next three days if the county drivers are to comply with the law.

Around 6,800 poll tax receipts and 700 exemptions had been registered in the collector's office late Monday. It will take 3,000 more to bring the total to the expectations of an off year, Roy A. Jones, chief deputy, explained, and 7,000 to bring it up to the mark reached in 1928, general election year.

Three Minor Thefts Reported to Police

Three cases of petty theft involving a loss of approximately $100 were reported to police headquarters Monday.

W. A. Pratt of 1221 North Sixth street reported the loss of eight hens from his chicken roost early Monday morning while A. R. Ashton, 207 Bluff, reported the loss of a watch, a pair of pants and a pair of overalls, valued at $67.50.

A hundred cans of automobile tube patching and several tire boots were taken from an automobile owned by Frank C. Billingsley, 1300 Harrison.

Proved to Be Just What I Had Been Needing, He Says

Ned Shamlain, Wichita Falls' Popular Photographer, Praises Orgatone for Relieving Troubles

Mr. Ned K. Shamlain, well known and popular photographer, whose studio is located at 710½ Indiana avenue, Wichita Falls, Texas, is now an ardent champion of the merits of Orgatone since the medicine has proved of such great benefit to him. Mr. Shamlain is well known throughout this entire section, having been in service and instructor of photography for the government during the world war and is also prominent in Masonic circles. In relating his experience, Mr. Shamlain said:

MR. NED SHAMLAIN

"During all the 10 years that I suffered nothing ever helped me like Orgatone. I not only suffered terribly with stomach trouble, but was also bothered a great deal with sick dizzy headaches. It just looked as if everything I would eat would sour in my stomach and cause me to have attacks of indigestion. I didn't sleep well, either, and was nervous and restless. I tried several different kinds of treatments and finally the doctors suggested a change of climate, but nothing seemed to give me a bit of relief. I heard so many people right here in Wichita Falls telling about the good Orgatone was doing them that I decided to try it. Before I had taken one-half of the first bottle I could notice an improvement in my condition, because I wasn't troubled with gas or indigestion and those sick, dizzy headaches left me. So I kept on taking Orgatone, and soon found that I could eat things I never dared touch before I began on the medicine, and sometimes didn't seem to trouble me like it used to. I can sleep nine hours a night now and feel like life is worth living, because I seem to have better general health than I've been in years. I am just so pleased over the way Orgatone is helping me that I am glad to say a good word for it."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison's Drug store, 716 Indiana avenue, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative. Out-of-town customers are being supplied promptly by mail upon receipt of price, one bottle $1.25 or six bottles for $6.25.—Adv.

The next order of the day is to hear the phonographs of the city tuning up with "Hallelujah" and "Sometimes I'm Happy," the song hits from "Hit the Deck," which was at the Majestic theater Monday night.

THE BARKER
Vitaphone at the Strand

Here is a show that combines a logical plot with perfect casting and splendid acting. The life of the "trouper" is no bed of roses and it is shown in all its stark realism.

Like an opera, the musical picture starts off with an overture, giving a forecast of the atmosphere; the calliope, a brave march and tense drama.

The music during the love scene under the peachtrees or during the dramatic moments underscores every emotion and helps to make one feel that one has attended one of the most satisfying productions ever shown here.

Of the smaller acts the "Northern Patrol," a quintet deserves mention. They sing in the good, old fashioned way.

Some folks have wondered how far Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., would be in the movies by this time if he didn't have his famous father and his famous father's name behind him. A look-see-listen at "The Barker," now playing at the Strand, indicated the young man has considerable ability and a world of personality. He is not the star of the show or even one of the stars, but he is cofeatured along with Betty Compson with his name immediately following that of Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill, the stars.

Dolores Del Rio's "The Red Dance," a melodrama with action enough to suit Ace Pendleton, is again back on the screen at the Majestic after having given way for a day to "Hit the Deck," the musical comedy.

Those specialty numbers at the Olympic by the members of the Tom Lewis company are hot and fiery. The folks at the Olympic like them. Cut and dried entertainment is not in it with the extemporaneous offerings of the company, for they bring to the footlights a human element the crowds like.

Wichita Rabbits On Display Here Tonight

The rabbit aristocracy of the Wichita Falls community will be on display Tuesday night, when the American Rabbit & Cavy Breeders association of Texas will hold a table show at the Maricle Coal & Grain company's store, 804 Eleventh street, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Rabbit breeders in this vicinity have been invited to bring their best senior rabbits for display. No entry fee will be asked, it was announced.

Charles J. Adams of Denison, licensed judge of the association for the state of Texas, will judge the exhibits.

Nature Thought of Everything

Nature thought of everything when the human body was made. When the body is about to become ill, nature planned danger signals to warn us. Thus, if our children grind their teeth when they sleep, or lack appetite, or suffer from abdominal pains, or itch about the nose and fingers, we should know that they may have contracted worms. Then, if we are wise, we buy a bottle of White's Cream Vermifuge and safely and surely expel the worms. Thus we avoid the danger of very serious trouble. White's Cream Vermifuge costs only 35c a bottle, and can be bought from Miller Drug Store.

Walters Pastor Ill In Hospital Here

Rev. Robert H. Lewelling, pastor of the First Methodist church at Walters, Okla., was brought to a local hospital Monday in the ambulance of the Merkle Undertaking company. Rev. Mr. Lewelling, it was reported, has been confined to his home for several weeks with an attack of influenza, followed by pneumonia. He was accompanied here by his wife and son.

DON'T STARVE TO END FAT

Few succeed without harm. Try the modern way, embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. The results are seen everywhere.

Marmola contains a gland element which helps turn food into fuel and energy. The formula appears in every box, also the reasons for results. Thus you will know how the changes occur without harm.

All druggists supply Marmola at $1 a box. Go start it now. Take four tablets daily until weight comes down to normal. Do this because of the new beauty and vim which Marmola has brought to so many, for so long.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

The Blunt Uncompromising Truth

If you will stop and study the situation for a moment, you will realize that the plainest and most outstanding fact in motoring today is that there are no other cars which can be classed with Cadillac and La Salle.

It takes an expert to select a first class diamond and appraise its value. With motor cars the situation is quite different. There are certain outstanding facts about automobiles that are common knowledge to every man, woman and child and these facts serve to create sharp distinctions and to classify cars on the basis of quality and value.

Thus Cadillac's position as the leader of the fine car group is an accepted fact that one would scarcely think of challenging and, in the minds of all, Cadillac is readily granted first place on the basis of prestige gained over a period of 25 years, the incomparable brilliance, smoothness, flexibility and reliability of its 90-degree, V-type, 8-cylinder engine, and its extraordinary value.

Safety and Control. But within recent months Cadillac and the Cadillac-built La Salle have forged ahead to such an extent that you may not realize how vastly their superiority over all other cars has been increased—especially from the viewpoint of safety and easy mastery of control.

Take these latter two points, which any one will quickly admit are of paramount importance in this day of high speed and congested traffic.

In braking, gear shifting, steering and all the operations of driving, either on mountain roads, or on level highways, or in city traffic, there are no other cars in all the world that can compare with Cadillac and La Salle.

That is because, for one thing, you can not find on any other cars the Cadillac-La Salle Duplex-Mechanical Four-Wheel Brakes, the most powerful braking system ever developed, yet the easiest and quickest to operate.

On no other cars can you find the Cadillac-La Salle Syncro-Mesh Silent-Shift Transmission which enables you to shift your gears at any speed, under any conditions, without awkwardness or the slightest hesitancy. The operation is almost instantaneous as well as clashless.

The foregoing represent safety features of the utmost importance, as is the improved steering mechanism, but there is also the crystal-clear, non-shatterable Cadillac-La Salle Security-Plate Glass. In the event of collision you will not be injured by flying glass fragments; neither will there be any danger from the impact of stones cast up by the wheels of passing cars.

These are some of the new facts to add to those you already know about Cadillac and La Salle. A car will be placed at your disposal at any time so that you can familiarize yourself with them. When you have done so your conviction will be stronger than ever that in all the world there are no cars like these.

In addition to 23 refreshingly beautiful Fisher Bodies for the new Cadillac and the new La Salle, there are 15 exclusive and exquisite custom-built models Fleetwood designed and Fleetwood built.

La Salle prices $2295 to $2875; Cadillac $3295 to $3995; Fleetwood up to $7000—all prices f. o. b. Detroit. Cadillac-La Salle dealers welcome business on the General Motors Deferred Payment Plan.
