Governors endorse plan for education

See related story, Page 7A

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — The nation's governors, responding to what they perceive as a public clamor for excellence in education, have endorsed a "beyond the basics" program that would upgrade academic standards and reward outstanding teachers.

The National Governors Association gave unanimous approval Sunday to a policy statement calling on each state to develop a plan for education and economic growth.

Gov. Richard A. Snelling, of Vermont said today's concern goes beyond the shock of Sputnik, when the Soviet launching of the first space satellite a quarter century ago raised doubts about the quality of American education.

This time, said Snelling, there is "no alarming single event" to trigger the concern. Instead, he said, "it was deduced to be an important item on the agenda of America."

Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. of North Carolina, the outgoing chairman of the task force that drew up the policy statement, called on his colleagues to consider the vital role of education in maintaining America's world leadership in technology and economics.

"Education can't be one of our top 10 priorities. For America to be number one, education must be number one in America," said Hunt.

The governors advocated a strengthening of the public school curriculum in order to "make the academic experience more intense and more productive."

They also called on states and school districts to "express a new and higher regard for teachers" by providing honors and financial incentives for outstanding performance.

Reminding governors that they will play a key role in shaping the future of American education, Education Secretary T.H. Bell urged their support of a "master teacher" program that would give public schools an academic rank system similar to those at colleges and universities.

"The master teacher ought to be to elementary and secondary education what the full professor is to higher education," said Bell.

The education secretary said local school boards were to blame for the decline in educational standards because they failed to set adequate requirements for the schools.

Before adopting their policy statement, more than a half dozen governors briefed their colleagues on various measures taken to improve education in their respective states.

Gov. Bob Graham cited a strengthening in "the academic rigor" of Florida's school system, a program that was augmented by such incentives as $5,000 annual bonuses to those designated as "master teachers."

Gov. Thomas H. Kean of New Jersey said his state was demanding proficiency in advanced skills — not just "the bare minimum" — as a requirement to high school graduation.

Vermont's efforts to provide intensified instruction in the earliest elementary grades were outlined by Snelling, who said the program was embraced by dozens of communities despite the Legislature's refusal to provide financing.

The priority given to education during the governors' 75th summer meeting came as governors and guest speakers emphasized the relationship between good schools and economic growth.

Former International Business Machines Corp. Chairman Frank Cary said business' involvement in education was becoming a necessity that goes beyond good corporate citizenship.

"Other nations around the world are giving a higher priority to the education of the new generation than we are," said Cary, linking educational excellence to America's economic well-being.

The statement adopted by the governors also equated improvements in education with national survival.

Victim of cerebral palsy reaches out with poetry

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) — Shirley Klein is a poetic soul who finds herself locked into a body that she can't control.

Born with cerebral palsy, a central nervous system affliction, the dark-haired Beckley native has never known a day when she wasn't wracked by spasms. As a result, most people quickly look away when they see her approaching in her wheelchair, arms flailing and tongue sometimes sticking out.

"The image is one she hates but is powerless to change."

"It's so frustrating," she said in an interview. "People so seldom look beyond the disability and that makes it almost impossible to communicate."

That daily frustration, combined with a deep-seated need to reach out, led her to poetry.

"I wrote my first poem when I was 10," she said, seated beside her typewriter in her office at the West Virginia Vocational Rehabilitation Center. "As long as I can remember, I've wanted to change the world, change attitudes for the better."

Her first book of poems, "Of Bitter Choice," was published this spring with the help of a grant from the Humanities Foundation of West Virginia. In the forward, Ms. Klein discusses the choice that gave the book its title. "It had been a difficult birth," she wrote. "The doctor had to use forceps. I lay like a piece of meat on the table as the doctor looked at my father with a wordless question; my father nodded yes. And, thus, I was consigned to life, a life challenged by cerebral palsy..."

"In my work," she concludes, "I write of the unseen self behind the wheelchair, the unsure step, the wet chin, the awkward movement and the garbled speech. In so doing, I strive to speak for others who face the same hostile world I do, thereby confronting that world with a reality that will no longer be ignored or denied."

She said she published her book for disabled people everywhere, to let them know she understands their pain and loneliness and "to help other people better understand what's inside us."

In one of her poems, titled "To A Special Boy," she writes: "Robbie, we all drag wagons behind us."

Big, red, empty wagons
Waiting for someone to fill them
With some hope, dreams, love.
We pass by different-colored houses.
The door opens, we offer a smile

As the door closes again
And we pass on to the next house
Up the endless hill.

They tell me at the top
In an ever-open doorway
Patient, understanding eyes
Watch for us.

First, though, we must pass up the endless hill
Because along the way
There might be other wagons we can fill

With a bright leaf, a white flower or a song."

Ms. Klein works full time as an information representative for the West Virginia Department of Vocational Rehabilitation. She writes her news releases and composes poetry with the help of a specially equipped typewriter that contains an automatic correction unit.

She sells her book from her home in Nitro, which she shares with a live-in nurse companion, for $3 including postage.

"I write the poems sporadically," she said, "and especially when I'm frustrated. I can take the physical aspect of my disability, but it's the psychological aspect that's the most painful. What I mean is that it's OK that people can't understand me, but when they don't even try to know me, for who I really am, that's when it really hurts."

Bank reopens under name Mid-Cities National

Metro Bank opened today at Midland Regional Air Terminal under new ownership and a new name, Mid-Cities National Bank. The new bank was approved by federal authorities Sunday. Metro Bank failed last week when Texas banking officials declared it insolvent.

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Mid-Cities National Bank opened this morning at Midland Regional Air Terminal in place of Metro Bank, which closed Friday under a bad loan burden of almost $7 million.

Former Metro Bank customers automatically became customers of the new bank, which received its federal charter Sunday around 4 p.m.

For the time being, there will be no change in the bank's 19 employees or seven officers, said Robert Wilson, who is acting chief executive officer.

Mid-Cities' five principal organizers, all businessmen from the Texas Panhandle, agreed to pay the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation $850,000 for a purchase premium.

They assumed all the old deposits and certain other liabilities of Metro Bank and bought the failed bank's securities, installment loans and other assets, according to an FDIC spokesman.

In turn, the FDIC advanced the new bank $17.5 million in cash and retained $20.2 million in assets.

"The FDIC expects to recover a substantial portion of its outlay through the liquidation of assets not transferred to Mid-Cities," FDIC spokesman Alan Whitney said.

Metro Bank had $30.9 million in deposits in 2,400 accounts as of June 30 and listed total loans of $26.7 million. The loan portfolio was a mixture of commercial loans and a few energy loans, with very few real estate loans, according to executive vice president Brooks Atkins.

The bank draws about 55 percent of its customers from Odessa; the remaining 45 percent from Midland.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 8 a.m. EDT Tuesday, August 2
Low Temperatures

Rain Snow
Showers Flurries

National Weather Service
NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Tuesday for most of the East Coast, for the Gulf Coast, for the Dakotas and parts of Nebraska, California, Arizona, Nevada, Utah, New Mexico and Colorado.

Few drops of rain fell Sunday

Although rain was not in the forecast Sunday, Mother Nature squeezed out a few drops, closing out July with a trace for the total monthly rainfall and 2.36 inches for the year. But in Odessa, fire stations reported from one-tenth to one-half inches of moisture, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Sunday's 92-degree reading at 3 p.m. plummeted to 77 by 4 p.m. when rain clouds began moving into Midland. The 15-minute shower left a trace of rain on the Midland area, and temperatures pushed back up near 90 by 6 p.m. The forecast through Tuesday is expected to be sunny and hot with no other rain in sight. Tonight should be fair with the low in the low 70s, rising to the upper 90s on Tuesday. Winds should travel southerly 5-15 mph. Sunday's high of 94 fell short of the record 105-degree reading set in 1944, and the overnight low of 69 was warmer than the record low of 56 set in 1936.

Bank reopens doors as Mid-Cities National

The bank was declared insolvent Friday when State Banking Commissioner Robert E. Stewart said its non-performing loans exceeded the bank's equity capital. He blamed the losses on poor lending practices. Metro Bank immediately was turned over to the FDIC, which spent the weekend going over the bank's records and contacting potential buyers for the institution. The five organizers of the new national bank are Edgar G. Blair of Borger, who will serve as chairman of the new board; David M. Warren Jr. and Billy D. Riley, both of Borger; and Jerry R. Powell, Lubbock, and Roy L. Ryan, Dumas. Blair, a multi-millionaire, owns Blair Oil Company and has interests in several other companies. Warren, who has 30 years' banking experience, is chairman of the board and president of Panhandle Bank & Trust Company in Borger. He also owns a portion of Citizens Bank & Trust Company in Pampa. Riley is in the oil and gas business and has ownership in First Savings and Loan Association of Borger and Citizens Bank & Trust of Pampa. Powell and Ryan are investors who sit on the board of First State Bank of Memphis and Farmers State Bank of Hart. "It's a very experienced and diversified banking group," Akins said this morning. "They have the ability to make the bank grow or they would not have been approved," by banking authorities, he said.

Women plan to plant trees, rosebushes in protest

ROMULUS, N.Y. (AP) — Hundreds of "peace-loving women" gathering here today say they will plant trees and rose bushes at a weapons depot to protest nuclear arms, despite a weekend shouting match and scuffle with townspeople that led to 55 arrests. The demonstrators believe the base is an arsenal of nuclear weapons. The Army refuses to confirm or deny the presence of nuclear weapons at Seneca Army Depot or any other site. A Veterans of Foreign Wars group in nearby Ovid plans a counter-protest today, but will limit its numbers at the sheriff's request, said Carlos Young, a past post commander. "We fought for them when they were being brought up and now

Sri Lanka death toll reaches 200

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — The death toll from eight days of ethnic riots has climbed past 200 nationwide, the government said as it prepared to lift a 24-hour curfew in the capital today long enough for residents to buy food. The bloody clashes between majority Sinhalese and minority Tamils prompted Pope John Paul II to plead Sunday for "a spirit of comprehension and tolerance." In India, pro-Tamil politicians proposed that United Nations peacekeeping troops be sent to Sri Lanka. The rioting subsided over the weekend, but sporadic outbreaks persisted and there were "a few deaths...caused by violence at the hands of civilians," said Douglas Liyanage, secretary in the Ministry of State. Authorities said the curfew in Colombo, the capital, would be lifted temporarily today to allow people to shop for food. Liyanage told reporters there had been 179 killings "of civilians by civilians" across the country from July 25 through July 29. As for civilians killed by soldiers, Liyanage said he had no figures "beyond the 15 shot for looting and arson on Friday."

Residents of the small town of Mount Lavinia, Sri Lanka, which is 15 miles south of the capital of Colombo, form long lines at a government store to purchase basic household items. Shortages of food is just one of the problems facing this country following a week of racial riots.

He also did not include the killing in northern Jaffna of 13 soldiers by Tamil extremists seeking an independent state — an act that triggered the rioting across this tiny island off India's southern tip. More than 500 people, including scores of prominent leftists, have been arrested. The Sinhalese are Buddhists and make up about 70 percent of the population of 15 million, while the Tamils, who make up about 20 percent, are Hindus. Both are of Indian origin. Political leaders in southern India's Tamil region asked Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to call for the creation of a United Nations peacekeeping force to halt "organized genocide" in Sri Lanka. A spokesman said Mrs. Gandhi agreed to study their ideas. Demands for Indian intervention in the Sri Lanka are strongest in Tamil Nadu state, which has declared a six-day official mourning period and ordered all businesses to shut down for a day on Tuesday. The major Tamil Nadu opposition party said it intended to launch statewide agitation if positive action is not taken by next Thursday. The pope, at his summer home in Castel Gandolfo, Italy, called for an end to "painful acts of violence" around the world, paying particular attention to Sri Lanka. "We must pray that among those peoples there may prevail the spirit of comprehension and tolerance, already deeply rooted in their own religious and cultural traditions, in respect to the fundamental principles of justice and the dignity of all men," he told a crowd of 7,000 people gathered at the papal palace. The Sri Lankan government has outlawed three small left-wing parties, and Liyanage on Sunday reiterated statements by Minister of State Anandattisa de Alwis, who had claimed that the violence was plotted by unidentified "foreign elements." De Alwis said the government had evidence of a three-stage plan to overthrow it: first, Sinhalese-Tamil rioting, then rioting by the Buddhist Sinhalese against Moslems and finally division among the Sinhalese themselves. "The people who were plotting all this hope that it would lead to a collapse of the military arm of the government and that the government would not be able to keep the peace," he said. Liyanage did not elaborate on the minister's remarks but said there was evidence that three left-wing opposition parties had engineered the upheaval "to overthrow or at least undermine the authority of the government." President Junius Jayewardene's government also proposed a constitutional amendment that would ban any party advocating a separate Tamil state. Parliament is expected to pass the amendment Thursday.

Reagan defends efforts for women

ATLANTA (AP) — President Reagan, in the face of growing criticism from feminists and minority groups, today defended his efforts for women and said criticism of his firing of half the members of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission was just "hogwash."

Pres. Reagan

Speaking to the annual convention of the American Bar Association, Reagan said, "I reaffirm today our unshakable commitment to eliminate discrimination against blacks, women, the handicapped and other minorities." In particular, the president responded to criticism of his decision to replace three of the six Civil Rights Commission members with nominees sympathetic to his opposition to racial quotas and school busing to achieve integration. "My nominating them supposedly compromises the independence of the commission," Reagan said. "Forgive me, but that's hogwash." The president said that the late President Kennedy had tried, through appointments, to liberalize the commission and that former Presidents Johnson and Carter had named individuals who reflected their philosophy of how to achieve the goal of civil rights for all Americans. "So isn't it strange that we never heard in the past this charge about compromising the independence of the commission?" Reagan asked. "Let's be fair and recognize the attack upon our nominees for what it is."

He pointed out that he has proposed stiffening enforcement provisions of the Fair Housing Act and signed into law the longest extension of the Voting Right Act. Reagan said his administration is also committed "to eliminating all traces of discrimination in the law against women" — even though he opposes the Equal Rights Amendment. In recent years, he said, the so-called income tax "marriage penalty" has been greatly reduced, the maximum child care tax credit for working mothers has been enlarged, the estate tax has been eliminated for surviving spouses and larger contributions for individual retirement accounts for working women have been authorized. In addition, he said, his administration has appointed more women than any other to top policy jobs. "Those who specialize in partisan rhetoric and the politics of accusation may close their eyes to progress," Reagan said. "But Americans are fair-minded. They don't look at the world with blinders. If given the facts, I'm confident they'll agree: Yes, much has and is being done to assure that every woman has an equal opportunity to achieve the American dream." Reagan was strongly criticized last week after he defended his record on women. "I will match our record against any other administration that has ever been here with regard to what we have accomplished for women," Reagan had told a televised news conference. Mary Gray, head of the Women's Equity Action League, a non-profit research and lobbying group, said, "No matter how hard the president tries, his commitment to women's rights is no more than a public relations fabrication." The women's group said Reagan has been unfairly claiming credit for legislative achievements in regard to taxes, Individual Retirement Accounts and child care. Reagan's record also was denounced by the National Organization for Women and the National Women's Political Caucus, which disputed the president's assertion that he has appointed more than 1,000 women to federal executive jobs — a record he said was better than that of President Carter. As for the Civil Rights Commission moves, dozens of liberal and minority groups have criticized the president's action. Nine former commission members — including all three former chairmen — have accused the White House of trying to interfere with the independence and impartiality of the civil rights panel. Criticism of Reagan's action has been aimed chiefly at his sudden replacement of half the members, and not with the qualifications of the nominees. If they are confirmed by the Senate, Reagan will have replaced five of the six members of the commis-

Rape, murder suspect finally caught

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — A rape victim spotted a wanted poster at a sheriff's office and cried out, "That is the man!" — alerting deputies that the suspect in her assault had been sought for nearly two months in a quadruple hatchet slaying. Kevin Cooper, 25, was arrested Saturday by authorities responding to a report of a rape on a sailboat, but it wasn't until later that the escaped convict was identified, officials said. "This is the break we were looking for," San Bernardino County Sheriff Floyd Tidwell said at a news conference Sunday. "We felt quite sure that he would commit another crime... one that we could arrest him for. My only hope was that we would take him into custody before he killed someone else." Cooper, who escaped from the California Institution for Men at Chino on June 2 after mistakenly being put in minimum security, was recognized by the 26-year-old woman at Santa Barbara County sheriff's station, Tidwell said. "She saw the flyer of Kevin Cooper wanted for murder, and she became very hysterical and she said, 'That is the man!'" he said. Officials said Cooper had eluded an intense manhunt following the four June 5 deaths of two months by living and working aboard a 32-foot sailboat. Up to Saturday evening, Cooper had identified himself to authorities as Angel Jackson of Philadelphia. But the rape victim's outcry and fingerprint checks confirmed he was Cooper. He was returned under tight security to San Bernardino County, about 60 miles east of Los Angeles, Deputy Brian Brody said late Sunday. Authorities said he was booked into an isolation cell at the San Bernardino County Jail for his own safety. San Bernardino County District Attorney

Dennis Kottmeier said Cooper may be arraigned at the jail for his own safety and because he has escaped from custody. Kottmeier said arraignment could be as early as today, although Deputy District Attorney Frank Cardinal had said earlier that Cooper probably would be arraigned Tuesday. A fugitive warrant charges Cooper, 25, in the hatchet slayings of F. Douglas Ryen, his wife, Peggy, both 42, their daughter Jessica, 10, and an overnight guest, Christopher Hughes, 12, at their home in Chino Hills near San Bernardino. The Ryen's son, Joshua, 8, survived the attack despite a slit throat and now lives with his grandmother, Dr. Mary Howell. California Attorney General John Van de Kamp blamed Cooper's June 2 escape from the prison four miles west of Chino Hills on "human error." Los Angeles County parole officials failed to tell the prison that Cooper was wanted in Pennsylvania for an October 1982 rape-kidnaping, four burglaries and escaping from a state mental hospital. Prison administrators also failed to note the information when Pennsylvania officials sent it directly to the prison. Cooper had been put in minimum security to serve a four-year sentence for two burglaries in Los Angeles last January. Early Saturday, however, a North Hollywood woman reported she was raped aboard her sailboat, anchored near Santa Cruz Island, 25 miles south of Santa Barbara. The sailboat in which Cooper had been living was anchored nearby, police said. According to Tidwell, Cooper had attended a fish fry on the woman's boat Friday night and left with his employees.

Kevin Cooper, wanted in connection with the slaying deaths of four people at a Chino, Calif., ranch, was captured early Sunday near Santa Cruz Island by Santa Barbara County sheriff's deputies. Cooper is shown aboard a U.S. Coast Guard cutter.

Henry Zais, director of El Paso International Airport security, crash and rescue, looks into the burned portion of a Marine A-4M fighter jet, which crashed at about 1 p.m. Sunday (CDT) at the El Paso airport.

Another military fighter jet crash lands at El Paso airport

EL PASO (AP) — For the second time in four months, a military fighter jet has crashed and caught fire while making a refueling stop at El Paso International Airport.

The pilot, Marine Reserve Maj. Tom Turner, of South Weymouth, Mass., ejected shortly after his one-seater A-4M hit the runway and burst into flames Sunday.

Turner's only injury was a minor cut to his elbow, but an ambulance whisked him to Beaumont Army Medical Center for a thorough examination, authorities said.

Turner's plane was one of at least four A-4Ms en route from South Weymouth, Mass., to Yuma, Ariz., on a training mission.

A few hours after the crash, Turner returned to the airport's Transient Terminal for a debriefing. He said he was feeling "a little shaken up — but fine."

Later he said the crash apparently occurred because the jet lost power moments before landing.

Maj. Bill Sanvidge, the pilot investigating the crash, said the power loss caused Turner to lose altitude faster than normal. After he touched down, the landing gear broke off and the plane slid on its belly to the side of the runway, he said.

Bob Guidry, airport public relations manager, said the wreckage probably would be moved Monday to Biggs Army Air Field for study.

Sanvidge said the investigation will take about a week. He said until technical studies are completed, "we don't know what happened."

Sunday's crash was the second military aircraft to crash at the El Paso airport in less than four months. A Navy F-4 Phantom jet crashed on the snowy night of April 4.

A second plane accompanying the fighter jet left the runway and got stuck in mud. As in Sunday's crash, the pilots of the first plane ejected to safety.

Another military crash occurred in July 1979 when the brakes to a Navy A-7 fighter failed and the jet crashed into a truck on Airport Road.

Foremen: Prosecutor favored police

HOUSTON (AP) — A prosecutor appointed to investigate shootings by law officers kept his pledge not to lead a "witch hunt" by failing to pursue indictments vigorously, several grand jury foremen told The Houston Post.

The Post reported in Sunday's editions that more than half of 20 former grand jury foremen contend that Assistant Harris County District Attorney Terry Wilson may have been protecting police officers.

"There were cases when we should have indicted a cop and we didn't," said Harold J. Richardson of Crosby.

Another former grand jury foreman, Samuel Davis, said Wilson "presents those cases...definitely in favor of the officers."

Davis said his panel thought seriously of indicting two suburban Houston officers in late 1982 and in January. But he said grand jurors faced "a complete lack of cooperation from Mr. Wilson and we finally just had to no-bill them."

"The facts that he brought before us pointed to the officers' innocence," Davis said.

God sends man to hills to find gold

EL PASO (AP) — Gene McCardle says God, in a message from an evangelist told him he would find gold in the barren Hueco Mountains east of here.

And although geologist and metallurgists are dubious, McCardle and laboratories in Dallas, California, Nevada and Florida say he has found minable amounts of precious metals in the mountains where most people find only jackrabbits and rattlesnakes.

McCardle says he has found not only gold, but platinum, palladium, rhodium and silver in quantities that geologist and metallurgists say is impossible.

"Giving the benefit of the doubt, this is not an impossible environment for gold," said Phillip Goodell, an economic geology professor at the University of Texas at El Paso, who added he doubted the discovery of platinum.

"I'm not an absolutist," Goodell said. "There are some freaks in nature. But in all my experience, it is an impossible environment for platinum."

But McCardle, a one-time gambler with a high school education and who calls himself a "desert rat," says he has faith that it was God who led him to the land, faith in the dazzling lab reports and in the recovery process he said he and his partners developed.

"The Lord had to help us," he said. "We're not smart enough to come up with this ourselves. The whole scientific community says it can't be done and four dummies have done it."

"The Lord had to help us. We're not smart enough to come up with this ourselves. The whole scientific community says it can't be done and four dummies have done it."

— Gene McCardle, 'desert rat'

RAY GUARD, a UTEP metallurgy professor, who doubted there would be any significant concentrations of gold in the Huecos, had his doubts shaken when he ran tests on samples from McCardle's property for the El Paso Times and found the equivalent of a tenth to two-tenths of an ounce per ton of raw ore.

Additional tests on raw and concentrated ores showed barely one-tenth of an ounce of gold per ton, and no silver.

"I am still surprised there is a gold deposit out there of any magnitude," he said.

Detecting microscopic gold or platinum in a laboratory usually is easy, but developing a profitable recovery process is another matter, Guard said.

The secret to breaking Hueco gold, silver and platinum, McCardle said, is a home-brewed concoction of acids and heat.

He and his partners, Gary Lucas, Larry Helms and Ronnie Phillips, have developed their process in a converted school bus housing a crude laboratory and a nearby furnace shed at Lucas Drilling Co.

"It's a Mickey Mouse operation to look at, like something out of 'Sanford & Son,' but we've got everything we need to prove or disprove that it's out there," McCardle said.

ASSAYS FROM KEY Laboratories and others show platinum, gold and silver in amounts ranging from the equivalent of one-tenth of an ounce to more than 3 ounces of the metals per ton.

"That would be fabulous rock," Goodell said. "The assay values are crazy. You're talking about $5,000 a ton, and they're mining rock (in other states) at $10 a ton."

Also dubious are Bill Farr, a geologist with the state's General Land Office in Austin, and Jonathan Price of the state's Bureau of Economic Geology, a University of Texas geological survey institute in Austin.

Both came to El Paso in January to check out the Hueco area.

"I think you'll find most geologists will agree that the occurrence of minable precious metals in that Hueco limestone is highly doubtful," Farr said. "Platinum is even harder to believe."

Price is doubly skeptical because many of McCardle's assay tests were conducted by atomic absorption — a method that can be highly unreliable — instead of the more accepted fire assay.

Verifying platinum atomically is especially troublesome because other metals, such as gold and iron, register with platinum, resulting in inflated values, he said.

REPRESENTATIVES OF four laboratories McCardle has used — Key Laboratories in Dallas, Chemtec Corp. in Henderson, Nev.; Minerals World Inc. in Bartow, Fla.; and Action Mining Co. in Trona, Calif. — confirmed McCardle's results.

Key analyst Ann Rector said she verified her platinum results with quality control tests and guaranteed her findings were no more than 5 percent off.

Texas opens new chapter in selection of textbooks

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas is opening a new chapter in the way it selects textbooks for its schools, by hearing from people who favor buying certain titles as well as from book critics.

Texas is the nation's largest single purchaser of textbooks. The books are such big business here that Pulitzer Prize-winning author James Michener, a former textbook editor, observed "as Texas and California go, so goes the nation."

If a publisher must change a book to sell it to Texas, the changes usually will be included in the book wherever it is sold. If a book fails to sell in Texas, the publisher may decide not to publish it at all.

The process by which Texas selects the books was to resume today with the first textbook committee hearing of the year. Local school districts may use state funds to buy only those books approved by the Board of Education, which will vote on committee recommendations in November.

This year for the first time, the 27-member textbook committee will hear public testimony for — as well as against — books.

The change, enacted by the Legislature, was proposed by People for the American Way, a national anti-censorship group.

People for the American Way contends that people like textbook critic Norma Gabler want to rid schools of materials that encourage thinking and discussion not consistent with their own orthodox views.

Mrs. Gabler once complained to a textbook committee that a fifth-grade history book devoted 6 1/2 pages to Marilyn Monroe while mentioning George Washington only five times.

"Is Texas ready for Marilyn Monroe to become the mother of our country?" she asked.

Texas will be buying nearly $36.3 million worth of new books in such subjects as algebra, world history, French, Latin and construction trades. Replacements for worn-out and lost books, Braille books, freight and other costs will raise the bill to $65.5 million.

THE BETTER HALF

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, August 2, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor Carroll O'Connor ("Archie Bunker"), writer James Baldwin, Reagan confidant U.S. Sen. Paul Laxalt (R-Nev.), Myrna Loy, Peter O'Toole and Oakland A's relief pitcher Tom Burgmeier celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: the man who designed the city of Washington, D.C., Pierre Charles L'Enfant. Travel opens new doors and reveals fresh markets. Enter contests in December. A reconciliation restores your peace of mind, paving the way for happy romance. Higher-ups show greater appreciation for your special skills. A business gets onto sounder financial footing. Conflict brings you a clearer understanding of a problem that has slowed progress at work. Redouble your efforts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Complex projects require strong self-discipline. Your colleagues are more interested in their own pursuits. Shelve new ideas until current problems are solved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Watch what you say today. Personal relationships and family ties flourish. Come to grips with a tricky career or financial problem.

Procrastination will only aggravate the situation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Other people's actions will determine the business and financial decisions you make now. To raise extra cash, sell those things you do not use. A small child gives you reason to celebrate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your personal magnetism works wonders for you now. A candid conversation improves communication with someone influential. A friend's investment advice could be overly optimistic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Profits are high for the self-employed. You enjoy the simple pleasures of life, such as being with friends. Keep in touch with an ailing relative. A blind date could prove enjoyable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good news arrives. A moneymaking idea will pay off handsomely. Although you win a contest, you could be unlucky in love. Seek out good friends if you need comforting.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Complete old business. The success of a special project puts you one step nearer to a raise or promotion. Trust your intuition regarding a personal relationship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Joint financial and business matters require close attention to detail. A decision you make now will have economic advantages. Be on the lookout for bargains.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A change in job status or travel plans will surprise you. Flexibility is your strongest ally. You could miss out in business or romance if you fail to take the initiative.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Differing opinions could confuse you. Your organizational skills give you an advantage over your co-workers. A bargain lands in your lap. The pieces of a romantic puzzle fall into place.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your instincts are right on target. Someone begins to pay more attention to your ideas. Show a greater willingness to live up to your family or business obligations.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Public relations play a big part in your success. Others suggest bright ideas. Steer clear of get-rich-quick schemes. You are very vulnerable in romance. Shore up your defenses!

Perky anchor debuts

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Connie Chung, the new anchor of the refurbished "NBC News At Sunrise," solicited any and all questions during a recent press get-together.

One inquisitive sort asked what her salary was. To make certain everybody in the back heard the question, Ms. Chung repeated it. "Somebody wanted to know what I'll be wearing on my first day to work."

Welcome to "The Connie Chung Show." Even without a drum roll and cymbal crash, it was a stand-up comedy act that Joan Rivers would envy.

On display was the witty, spunky personality NBC bought when it wooed Ms. Chung for a reported $425,000 from her local anchor chores at CBS' KNXT in Los Angeles.

Of course, NBC considers Ms. Chung a talented journalist. But, in today's television climate, journalism won't do it all. Just ask the sober Roger Mudd, who was dumped by the "NBC Nightly News" the same day Ms. Chung was frolicking with the media.

NBC wanted someone to create a new morning for "NBC News At Sunrise," which this very morning replaced "Early Today" on your program guide. The importance of "Sunrise" is that it leads in to the more important and more profitable "Today" show.

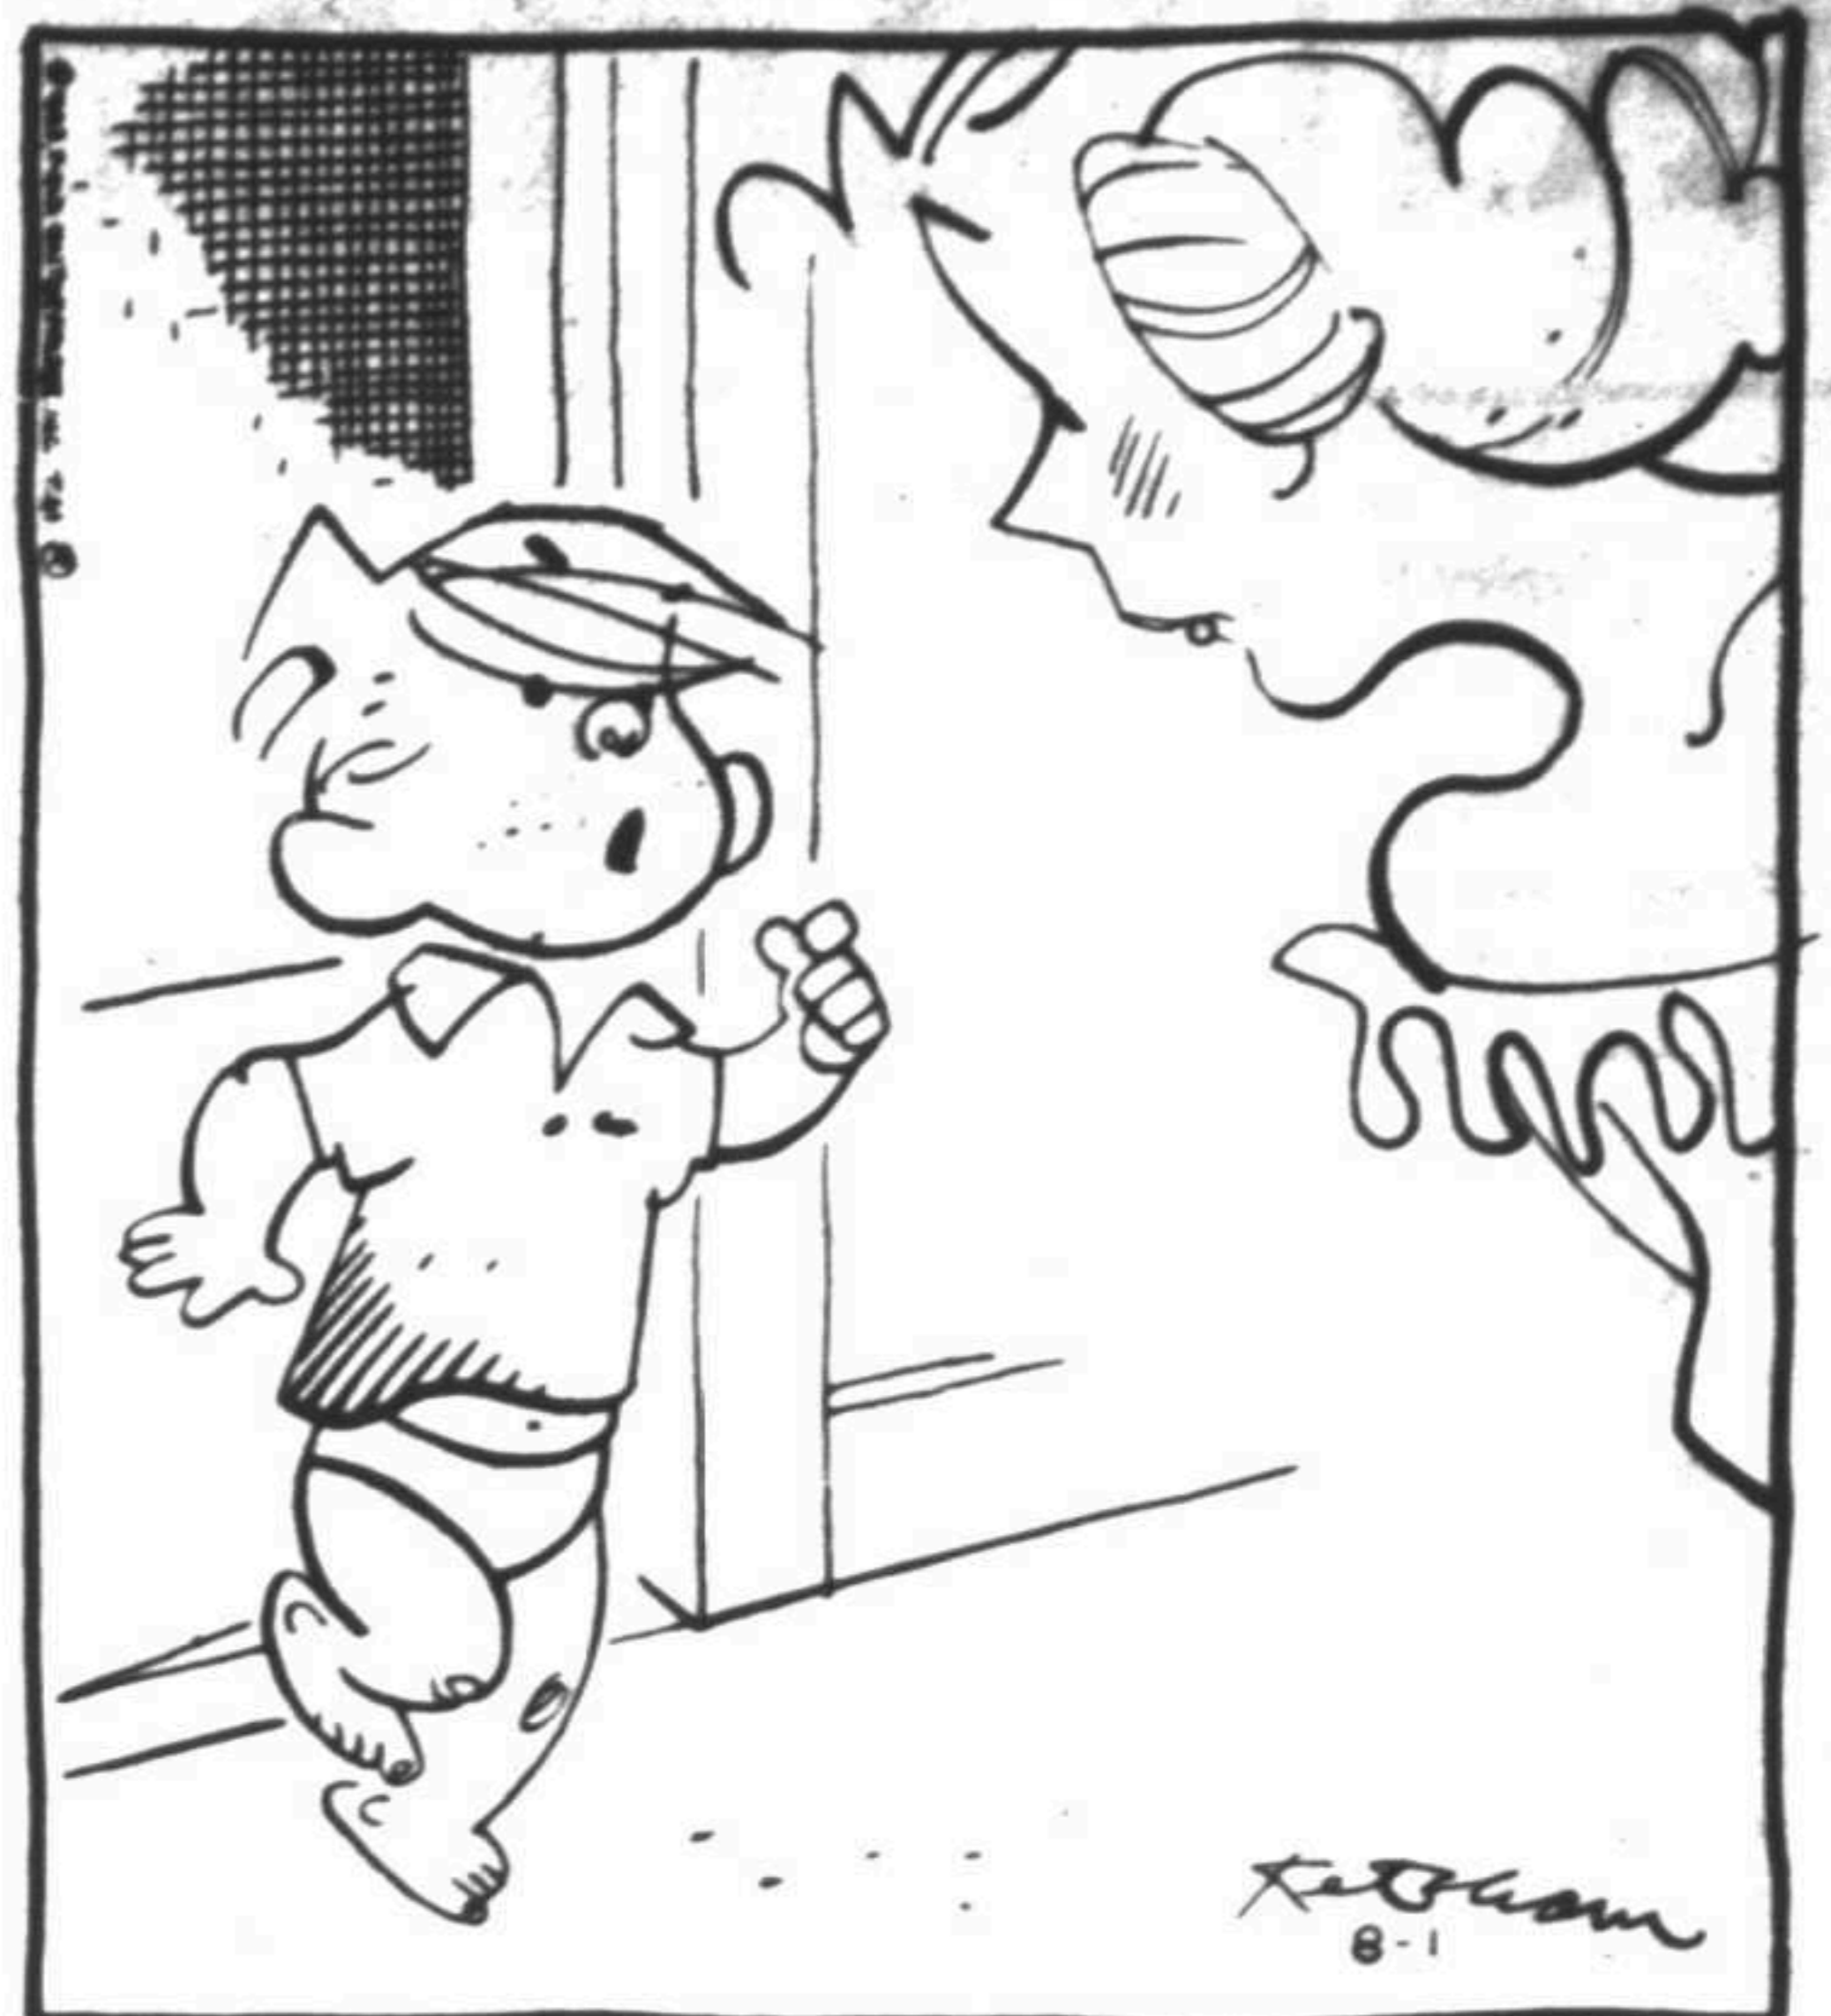

When that lead-in broadcast was "Early Today," with Bryant Gumbel and Jane Pauley, it wasn't different enough from "Today," with Bryant Gumbel and Jane Pauley. "We made a mistake having Jane and Bryant do that show," says Steve Friedman, executive producer of "Today." "It wasn't special."

It also wasn't doing well enough in the ratings against ABC's "World News This Morning." Friedman says an increase of 500,000 TV homes for "Sunrise" could mean double that for "Today," which used to be the pre-eminent breakfast broadcast and now is well behind ABC's "Good Morning America" and a shaky second to the "CBS Morning News."

In the past year, the three dawn newscasts — "Early Today," "ABC News This Morning" and the "CBS Early Morning News" — have attracted about 4 percent of the nation's 83.3 million TV homes. Friedman thinks the time period's audience potential could approach 10 percent, and he's putting the entire burden on Ms. Chung's slim shoulders.

"The research says the audience is there," Friedman says. "We are aggressively trying to get it with an entirely different show. It revolves around Connie. Her career will rise and fall on this show."

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠952 ♦KJ106 ♣6 ♦K1087
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—It is a close decision. Even though your side has at least 26 points combined, the fact that you have a singleton in partner's suit means that you might not have a ready source of tricks. However, you possess a lot of intermediate cards, and that is just enough to swing things in favor of bidding three no trump.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♥Q10652 ♦J92 ♣843
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ Dble Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—If you elected to pass, you have little regard for money—overtricks vulnerable are worth 200 apiece! You can't guarantee that your side can defeat one heart. Also, you can't bid one no trump—that is a forward-going action. Partner has asked you to bid your longest suit, so oblige by bidding two clubs.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J7 ♥KJ872 ♦K7 ♦J873
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Your double fit makes your hand worth more than it counts, but even so, game is doubtful. When not vulnerable, it is usually correct to be cautious; vulnerable, the rewards for closing out the rubber are so great that it pays to be adventurous. At this vulnerability, pass.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ10953 ♥7 ♦A72 ♣95
What is your opening bid?
A.—We know many players who would open four spades with this holding. That is a preemptive bid, but the person you are most likely preempting out of the auction is your partner. It is bad tactics to open preemptively on a hand that contains two aces, because it is very difficult for partner to judge what to do. Open one spade.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♥953 ♦Q1073 ♣KQ952

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
3 ♣ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—It is time for vigorous action. What has happened to the spade suit, and where is all the strength? It is obvious that West is waiting to get into the act, so you should make it as difficult for him as you can. Jump to five diamonds. On a good day West might think that you are strong and that his partner is broke, and so take no action at all.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K7 ♥AKQ93 ♦AQS ♣KJ6
What is your opening bid?
A.—With 22 points and a balanced hand, your natural opening bid is two no trump, so why not make it? The fact that you have a five-card major suit should not stop you. Don't open two hearts—you are about a king shy for that action.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07046. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Tough choices

A University of Texas professor who advises the federal government on energy-related matters told a Midland group last week that governmental regulations designed to protect the environment and restricting free enterprise in the oil industry are keeping the nation from achieving self-sufficiency.

John J. McKetta even went as far as to say the nation's energy situation is self-inflicted and may be fatal unless the regulations are changed. Professor McKetta is exactly correct in noting that it's government regulations that have held the oil industry back. In many respects that regulation has been unnecessary and counterproductive.

But when one talks about governmental regulation in the interest of protecting the environment, the black and white topic takes on a lot of gray tones. Yes, the nation could knock down all its barriers, open all federal land to oil and gas exploration and development, and achieve energy self-sufficiency.

That wouldn't necessarily be the appropriate thing to do, though. Just in recent years we have seen how fragile the environment is and the damage that can be done if man does not proceed carefully and deliberately. In managing the nation's resources — all its resources — leaders have to consider not only today's situation, but also the situation our children and their children likely will face. They need to consider all facets of the energy and environmental picture, not just one.

It's true that government rules and regulations have stymied the oil industry in the quest for energy self-sufficiency, but it's also true that environmental groups have sought action that would bring the nation's energy industry — and the nation — to its knees. That can't be allowed, either.

So what's the answer? Compromise. That's the age-old art of giving every opposing faction some, but not all, of what it wants. That won't please everyone, but more often than not that's the easiest way to find an acceptable solution.

The solution can be varied with the severity of the problem at hand — in this case, the urgency of the energy situation — but that can be accomplished with a give and take attitude on the part of both the oil industry and environmentalists.

When both groups have their feet buried in concrete, nothing logical and beneficial occurs. We don't need a choice of oil or clean water. Compromise can give us a way to build a future for everyone that will be both energy sufficient and environmentally acceptable.

Another View:

Pettiness of nations

No one seriously expected the course of Chinese-American relations to run altogether smoothly, but the tension between Washington and Peking has reached such a point that innocent third parties have been victimized by the pettiness of which great powers, like small people, are capable. American citizens, including children, have been pulled off airliners refueling in Peking and forced to pay $1,000 fines for failing to have Chinese transit visas.

The State Department has retaliated against Chinese citizens during refueling stops, mostly in Anchorage, and will impose comparable fines. Thus does pettiness beget pettiness. What the incidents reflect, though, is the failure of the two governments to deal with the underlying causes of such official behavior. At the bottom, that cause is continuing U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, but over the past year or so the two sides have quarreled over a variety of other issues, none of them vital but all reflecting mutual mistrust and totally different approaches. Amplified by some pretty clumsy diplomacy on the part of the Reagan administration, these disputes seem to have led both sides to reassess the relationship.

Much of the friction could have been averted had President Reagan avoided inflammatory rhetoric about Taiwan — on which Washington and Peking cannot hope to reach total agreement anyway — and adhered to last year's agreement on arms sales to the letter. By raising doubts about American reliability on the issue Peking most cares about, he has needlessly called into question his government's credibility on other issues that should be part of the normal give-and-take between any two nations.

It is to the credit of the two governments that, so far at least, some issues have continued to be treated on their own merits. Thanks to an upgrading by Washington of Peking's trading status, joint research projects in various technical areas have been allowed to proceed, the United States has agreed to sell the Chinese a number of high-technology items (though not the high-performance computer the Chinese wanted but the Pentagon vetoes as too strategically oriented), and negotiations are under way now in Washington on a long-stalled agreement for the transfer of U.S. technology for the construction of Chinese nuclear power plants. Most recently, the administration has announced a further sale, in fiscal 1984, of $530 million worth of surface-to-air missiles and aircraft spare parts to Taiwan, an announcement that evoked only a mild negative response from Peking. That, too, is a hopeful sign.

Which direction the Sino-American relationship takes next will depend to a great extent not only on the substance of the policy issues that presently divide the two sides, but also on the way this unique relationship is treated by a U.S. administration that often has been oblivious or indifferent to other nations' sensibilities. That, in turn, may be determined by the importance the administration attaches to the Chinese connection. Even if the close friendship some had hoped for must await another era, it ought still to be possible at least to cultivate a correct relationship based on mutual trust. In the delicate and dangerous environment of contemporary diplomacy, that would be no small achievement.

The Country Parson

by Frank Clark

"When anybody asks me to conceptualize something — I figure he doesn't know what he's talking about."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Envoy pushing high-tech sales

WASHINGTON — Arthur Hummel Jr., the U.S. ambassador in Peking, played a major role in the secret campaign to let American firms sell high-technology equipment with military usefulness to the Chinese mainland.

Hummel was born in China to American missionary parents and fought with the Nationalist Chinese in World War II. But now, in his dispatches to Washington, he portrays the Chinese Communist regime as an irreplaceable friend to be cultivated at all cost.

One highly-sensitive cable from Hummel was among more than 20 secret CIA and White House documents shown to my associate Dale Van Atta. A few of them were even classified with such exotic extra codewords as "HOMER."

Referring to the sale of high-tech items to China, Hummel complained that the existing restrictions were too stringent, and claimed that Peking could circumvent them by purchasing technology for high-priority projects from other countries. So, rather than lose contracts to U.S. competitors, the restrictions should be either relaxed or eliminated entirely, Hummel urged.

Hummel urged that China be put in the same category for high-tech exports as India — a suggestion that ignores the fact that India is a non-communist democracy historically friendly to the United States. The ambassador strongly advocated the removal of nearly all national security controls on exports to China, even though he acknowledged that there is "some" risk in this.

Jack Anderson

That's putting it mildly. For the fact is that, with the kind of computers the Chinese can get under relaxed export controls, Peking could aim its nuclear missiles at U.S. targets instead of those inside the Soviet Union. Assuming eternal Sino-American friendship overlooks the dangerous possibility of eventual rapprochement between the two communist superpowers.

In fact, according to one top-secret intelligence estimate, the Chinese have already developed CSS-4 intercontinental missiles with "an expanded nuclear targeting capability, to include the continental United States." They will have 15 of these deployed by the end of the 1980s, the estimate states. Sophisticated American computers would make it easier for Peking to lob its nuclear warheads accurately on American targets.

None of this even takes into consideration the dozens of nuclear missiles China already has that can rain destruction on our Pacific allies. Perhaps for this reason, U.S. officials have not consulted with our allies over lifting the export restrictions, according to my sources.

Even an improvement in Chinese conventional military strength poses a threat to our Pacific friends, the Pentagon warns in a report that includes a geography lesson on proximity of China to our allies: 100 kilometers to Taiwan, 450 kilometers to Japan, 400 kilometers to the Philippines, etc.

But Ambassador Hummel, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and presidential science adviser George Keyworth have succeeded in having mainland China placed in the status of a "friendly non-allied" country. An inter-agency task force is now deciding exactly what high-tech products the Chinese will be able to buy.

When the group's work is done early this month, its guidelines will be quietly placed in the Federal Register for public comment, as required by law. No press releases are planned.

NEXT TO GODLINESS: Except in situations of combat necessity, neatness counts in the armed services. And the Pentagon wants to make sure everyone gets the message, however elementary. Consider a recent two-page memo spelling out neatness rules designed to create "the respect of visitors and guests and a sense of pride on the part of the employees." Here are some of the 15 tips:

— "Aisles should be kept clear to permit circulation between work areas to eliminate tripping hazards."

— "Cigarette-cigar butts and ashes on floors, stairways and furniture are not only unsightly but are safety hazards."

— "Trash and other waste materials should be disposed of in the receptacles provided."

— "Window blinds should be drawn uniformly whenever possible."

— "Windows are not to be left open. This allows rain, snow and freezing temperatures to damage the building... (and) allows birds to enter the building."

— "Calendars, charts, pictures, honor awards, certificates etc. should be placed in such a manner in work areas that they reflect a business-like appearance. Nails, thumbtacks, Scotch tape or similar adhesive materials should not be used."

The rules stop short of ordering Pentagon people to wash behind their ears.

PORE-BOY CANDIDATE: Though no U.S. senator is visibly harassed by the specter of want, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., is a comparative pauper among the other candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination. According to income-tax records he made available, Hart and his wife grossed $113,296 in 1982 — including income from his lecture fees and his wife's real estate business.

After claiming almost $23,000 in deductions, the Harts paid $34,299 in federal income tax.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan nixes exploratory option

WASHINGTON — White House chief of staff James Baker III has quietly informed key congressional Republican leaders that President Reagan has ruled out any "exploratory committee" before announcing his second-term decision.

"He told us the president feels that it would be just plain stupid and everyone would see it as a dodge to delay," a top House Republican leader told us. The "exploratory committee" is a device that lets a prospective presidential candidate "explore" whether his candidacy would get off the ground and start raising money.

Reagan says he needs no such exploration. His plan now is to confide his second-term decision privately in mid-October to Sen. Howard Baker and other Republicans who might run if Reagan did not, but let any formal announcement go perhaps as late as

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

December. He laughs off all the announcement planning by political aides as hogwash. By December, Baker said privately, Reagan is convinced that everyone with eyes and ears will know that he is running for a second term.

HELMS TO KISSINGER

Showing distinctly unfriendly interest, Sen. Jesse Helms is pressing hard on Henry Kissinger to come and answer questions from his Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Latin America, but Kissinger is resisting. Helms's low opinion of the world's most famous diplomat is no secret. But the North Carolina conservative, running in a tough re-election race next year, has specific targets: Did Kissinger send a secret message to Cuba's Fidel Castro through a former president of Costa Rica recently? And does Kissinger have any financial or other "interests" in Latin America?

Helms's effort may be thwarted by Sen. Charles Percy, Foreign Relations Committee chairman and a longtime friend of Dr. Kissinger. Percy may invite the new chairman of President Reagan's Latin America Commission (a post not requiring Senate confirmation) to brief the full committee. That would let Kissinger off Helms's hook.

RESTIVE DEMOCRATS

Three moderate-liberal Democrats, Reps. Albert Gore Jr., Les Aspin and Norman Dicks, will meet privately with William F. Clark, the president's national security adviser, for reassurances that the administration will live up to its commitments on arms control despite Robert McFarlane's departure.

The imminent departure of Clark's deputy to become President Reagan's newest chief Mideast negotiator removes the Democrats' chief contact point with the White House. McFarlane is regarded by moderate Democrats as "safe" on controversial arms control issues; Clark and other administration hard-liners are viewed as distinctly unsafe.

The deal between Gore, Aspin, Dicks and the White House pledged their votes for the MX missile in return for a more flexible arms control policy by the president. Without McFarlane to protect their interest, the Democrats will ask for a new contact point inside the White House.

VESSEY'S ISRAEL VISIT

Army Gen. John Vessey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is off this weekend for the Mideast, sent by President Reagan to give him a first-hand, top-level report on what is going on in southern Lebanon and whether more Marines are needed there.

Reagan's decision to dispatch this country's top commander to the bloody Israeli-Lebanon scene is designed to show President Amin Gemayel that Reagan remains committed to a unified Lebanon, and to show Israel that he really wants a speedy Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon.

But Vessey's inspection has another purpose: to give him on-the-spot information for deciding whether the size of the U.S. Marine units now in Lebanon should be increased — possibly doubled. The answer is almost certainly going to be yes.

CHARLEY REESE

Lebanon diplomacy ridiculous

The partial withdrawal of Israeli forces to more defensible positions in southern Lebanon has been expected and dreaded by the United States and the Lebanese government. The reason is that it exposes both Lebanon and the United States policy in Lebanon for the shams they are.

When the Israeli Defense Forces roared into Lebanon in the summer of 1982 in pursuit of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the United States was presented with an opportunity to advance its own interests at very little cost.

The PLO is the servant of the Soviet Union. Just to summarize the evidence of that would require six columns. One of the services it was performing in Lebanon where it had established a country within a country was to serve as an international headquarters for anti-democratic terrorists. Syria, which has occupied Lebanon since the civil war of 1975, is also an ally of the Soviet Union as well as a vicious opponent of peace in the Middle East. Thus, it would have served us well if both the PLO and the Syrians had been driven completely out of Lebanon.

Those two objectives could have been accomplished in the summer of 1982 if the United States had simply given Israel the whole-hearted support a democratic ally should expect. If we had done for Israel what we did for the British in the Falklands war, then the Israelis could have cleaned up Lebanon and restored its sovereignty without the loss of a single American life.

The Arab-oil-banking lobby, however, is too powerful and the politician in the White House too weak. We vacillated between reluctant support and outrage and finally adamantly opposed the Israeli move and even put ourselves in the ridiculous position of saving our enemies from our friends. In the process of this debacle of diplomacy, President Reagan did a very foolish thing. He committed the United States to restoring Lebanese sovereignty and he landed Marines as part of a four-nation peace-keeping force.

For some strange reason, we then, without including the Syrians, laboriously negotiated a withdrawal agreement between Lebanon and Israel which is dependent on Syrian agreement. The Syrians naturally rejected it out of hand since they have neither the desire nor a good reason to leave Lebanon.

We have no leverage over Syria and the Lebanese government has even less. The other Arab countries won't help, so how is Mr. Reagan going to get 40,000 Syrian soldiers and 10,000 PLO guerrillas out of Lebanon? Well, he hasn't the foggiest idea how to do it so he would like the Israelis to stay in place, protecting both the Marines and the Lebanese government, while the State Department pretends to be working on a diplomatic solution.

Unfortunately, Israel is a small country and cannot afford the luxury of pretense. Israel has lost 100 men since taking up those positions and it cannot afford to lose more. It is going to pull back to stronger positions in the south where its troops will be safer from guerrilla attacks and no longer in between warring Druze and Christian factions in the Chouf Mountains just outside Beirut.

Someone will have to go in between those two groups of armed fanatics and try to prevent the civil war from erupting again. The Lebanese government's army is probably too weak and so it will have to be the peace-keeping force. There is sure to be fighting and casualties.

Reagan is going to have to fish or cut bait. If he keeps his commitment to restoring Lebanese sovereignty then he's finally going to have to admit to the American people what a terrible price this requires: treasure, lives and the risk of war (the Lebanese want $15 billion over 10 years). Otherwise, he's going to have to admit he made a mistake, pull out and leave Lebanon permanently divided.

Pull out is what we should do. The opportunity of last summer was missed and the price of make-believe diplomacy is about to go through the roof.

Kirkpatrick: Chances of negotiating peace in Central America 'alive'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations says indications of flexibility by Nicaragua and Cuba signal some cause for hope that peace can be negotiated in Central America.

Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick, interviewed Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," said there were signs that Nicaragua was increasingly willing to end its support for guerrilla movements in neighboring countries.

She also described as "progress" a recent statement by Cuban President Fidel Castro that he was willing to go along with a regional decision to bar arms shipments and require withdrawal of foreign military advisers from Central America.

She said the chances of negotiating peace in Central America are "very much alive" and that talks aimed at a regional settlement "give us a good deal of hope."

She said she "very much supports that process" sponsored by the Contadora group of Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama. She urged patience, saying that a negotiated settlement will take time.

Foreign ministers of those countries and five Central American states — Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala and Costa Rica — ended three days of discussions in Panama City on Saturday without agreeing on specific steps to keep the regional conflict from escalating.

Meanwhile, House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois said he favors holding the number of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador at 55.

Ex-driver tries to set record

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A 240-pound former truck driver has set forth in a 9-foot sailboat hoping to set a record for the smallest vessel to be sailed around the world by one person.

Bill Dunlop once held the record for an east-bound crossing of the Atlantic in the smallest non-motorized boat.

His boat, Wind's Will, has been modified since last year when he made that voyage, sailing from Portland to Falmouth, England, in 76 days. Because waves claimed his radio equipment before, he took special care to secure the equipment this trip.

Dunlop, 41, of Mechanic Falls, hopes to establish 11 world records.

Cuban exile killed in shootout

MIAMI (AP) — A Cuban exile killed in a shootout with police after holding up a house and wounding four people, one fatally, was the son of a former Cuban education minister, authorities say.

Jose Braulio Aleman, 50, who had a history of mental problems, was killed by police Sunday as they rushed the trim, white one-story house in the Little Havana section. "He opened fire at the officers who returned fire," said police spokesman Juan Santos.

After officers entered the house, they reported finding the body of Maria Candarez, 66, who had been shot in the head. The other shooting victims were reported in stable condition at a hospital.

'Ban based on insufficient data'

CHICAGO (AP) — A new study suggests that a military ban instituted during the mid-1950s on using people with sickle-cell anemia traits as pilots or divers may have been based on insufficient data.

The ban, lifted in January 1981, mostly affected black personnel.

Dr. Leonard Johnson Jr., associate dean of the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, said Sunday that researchers monitored more than 50 pilot recruits with the sickle-cell trait for two years and none had any problems with rigorous training or conditions imposed on aviation candidates.

Javits hospitalized

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Jacob Javits was reported resting comfortably today at Good Samaritan Hospital, where he was hospitalized to take part in research to find a treatment for Lou Gehrig's disease.

The 79-year-old Javits was "in good condition, stable, resting well," said a nursing supervisor early today who would identify herself only as Mrs. Ho.

The former senator admitted himself to the hospital late Friday at the recommendation of W. King Engle, director of the Neuro-Muscular Center at the University of Southern California.

Anonymous gifts puzzle mayors

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — It could be a practical joke or a donation to a worthy cause. But no one's been able to figure out who has been mailing anonymous $2 contributions to Maryland mayors.

The Maryland Municipal League has been trying to trace the unknown donor without success, league spokeswoman Hinda Berson said recently.

So far, mayors from 25 Maryland towns have received the money which always arrives as two $1 bills in an envelope with a Baltimore postmark and no return address, Ms. Berson said.

"It's an interesting thing," she said. "They're (the sender) not even bribing them. Who has $100 to spare to do this kind of thing? It's mysterious." Mayors learned how widespread the gifts were when they began comparing notes at the municipal league convention in Ocean City, Md. last month.

Easton, Centerville, Denton, Cambridge, Salisbury and Fruitland are among the towns which have received the mystery money.

Holiday comes late for troubled town

TIMES BEACH, Mo. (AP) — Gifts, a perspiring Santa Claus and the presence of 700 former neighbors made it a merry Christmas in July for one-time residents of this little town whose holidays last year were washed out.

"This is a reunion, it really is," said Brenda Wieda, one of the celebrants at Sunday's gathering near Times Beach, where freak December floods and the discovery of dioxin all but canceled last Christmas for residents driven from their homes.

The Yule party, held in sweltering 90-degree weather in a park about five miles from the town, was the first occasion many of the former residents had to see each other since they evacuated in December on the advice of federal officials.

Only about a dozen of the 800 families who once lived in Times Beach remain in the town 25 miles southwest of St. Louis, which has no postal service, water or trash collection. The rest have been placed in temporary housing as the federal government buys up the town.

"People who used to live in the town are scattered all over now," said Ms. Wieda.

Environmental Protection Agency tests have shown levels of dioxin at Times Beach as high as 300 parts per billion parts of soil. The national Centers for Disease Control have said that levels higher than 1 part per billion represent a potential health risk where there may be frequent human exposure.

Gerald Johnson, a 51-year-old chemical plant foreman who with his wife and three children has remained in Times Beach, stayed home during Sunday's party and says he doesn't intend to leave the town.

Governors, White House at odds

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — The nation's governors are locking horns with the White House over economic recovery. Vice President George Bush says it's here. The governors say they're still waiting.

The National Governors Association meeting opened Sunday with Vice Bush bluntly rejecting the governors' economic ideas, and the governors saying they have friends in Congress and hope to make President Reagan change his mind.

The leadoff speaker today was Alan Greenspan, once chief economic adviser to former President Ford. He was perhaps the best known of many economists at the conference.

"This session has more economists and more private sector representation than we have ever had," Gov. Scott Matheson of Utah, association chairman, said. "That shows our concern with the national economic situation and our role therein."

The concern quickly took form and motion Sunday as Matheson said economic recovery isn't reaching most states, while Bush declared "a surging economic recovery is under way."

Bush said the administration is determined to block tax increases, while Matheson said the economy won't heal without them because bloated federal deficits would choke recovery.

The vice president also used the conference to deliver a major defense of the administration's Central American policy, saying it had become the victim of a "propaganda war."

Bush said Reagan's movement of three naval battle groups and 4,000 to 5,000 U.S. ground troops to Central America for maneuvers was an effort to create "a security shield" for democracy.

"We are not sending U.S. troops into combat in Central America," Bush said.

The administration won one round, however, when the governors unanimously endorsed Reagan's call for merit pay for teachers. Although they used the less controversial term "career ladders," Matheson conceded it was just another name for the same thing.

Bush said when the administration took office in 1981, "we faced the most serious economic crisis since the Great Depression" and "the United States was well on its way to economic disaster."

"Today," Bush claimed, "less than two years after we began to set these policies in place, a surging economic recovery is well under way."

Guyanese citizens deported

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — About 270 Guyanese citizens have been deported from neighboring Suriname in a government crackdown on illegal foreign residents, according to press reports received here from Paramaribo.

The reports Sunday said many of the deportees have been transported to Springlands, a town on the border between the two countries on South America's northeast coast.

An estimated 40,000 Guyanese citizens reside and work in Suriname, which has a population of about 350,000.

Bottles of champagne explode

PEKING (AP) — The popping of "champagne" from one Peking winery has not been a cause for rejoicing — whole bottles have been exploding regularly before the customers have a chance to open them, the Peking Evening News reports.

A letter from a Peking customer complained that his bottle of sparkling wine blew up half an hour after he brought it home, and "luckily the children weren't nearby," the newspaper said in its Sunday edition.

A letter from the east China city of Nanking said a bottle brought from Peking exploded while the family was watching television in the next room, and left dozens of scars in the wall.

One Peking store reported that more than 100 bottles in a recent shipment from the Changkong Winery had exploded, the paper said. A reporter went to the winery said he was told the problem apparently was with bottles being reused.

Black nations to ban journalists

KADOMA, Zimbabwe (AP) — Six black nations in southern Africa tentatively have decided to ban foreign journalists based in white-ruled South Africa from reporting in their countries.

A communique passed by the information ministers of the six countries said the action was taken to stop South African propaganda.

The countries represented at a two-day conference here were Angola, Botswana, Mozambique, Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

Pilot unharmed after memorial

OLIVER, British Columbia (AP) — The pilot escaped injury when a vintage plane flipped over while landing after a memorial fly-by service for three warplane pilots killed in an accident the previous day, officials said.

Sunday's mishap was the third crash in three days at the gathering of World War II planes. About 100 members of the Western War Birds from the northwestern United States and Canada met at Oliver, 12 miles north of the U.S. border.

In Saturday's crash, witnesses said two Harvard single-engine planes appeared to touch wings in flight as they moved into formation, killing three people. On Friday a Stearman biplane struck a utility pole, but the two people inside suffered only minor cuts.

Truck crashes claim 18 lives

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A truck was involved in two accidents four days apart that killed 18 people, the South African Press Association reported today.

The news agency said five people were killed Wednesday when their car collided with the truck on a coastal road near Atlantis, a community 25 miles north of Cape Town. The truck driver was not injured and left the wrecked truck by a curve in the road, intending to have it towed away later.

A bus carrying 70 picnickers slammed into the truck late Saturday, killing 13 passengers and injuring 57, the news agency said. The 13 dead were trapped inside the bus after it rolled onto its roof and caught fire.

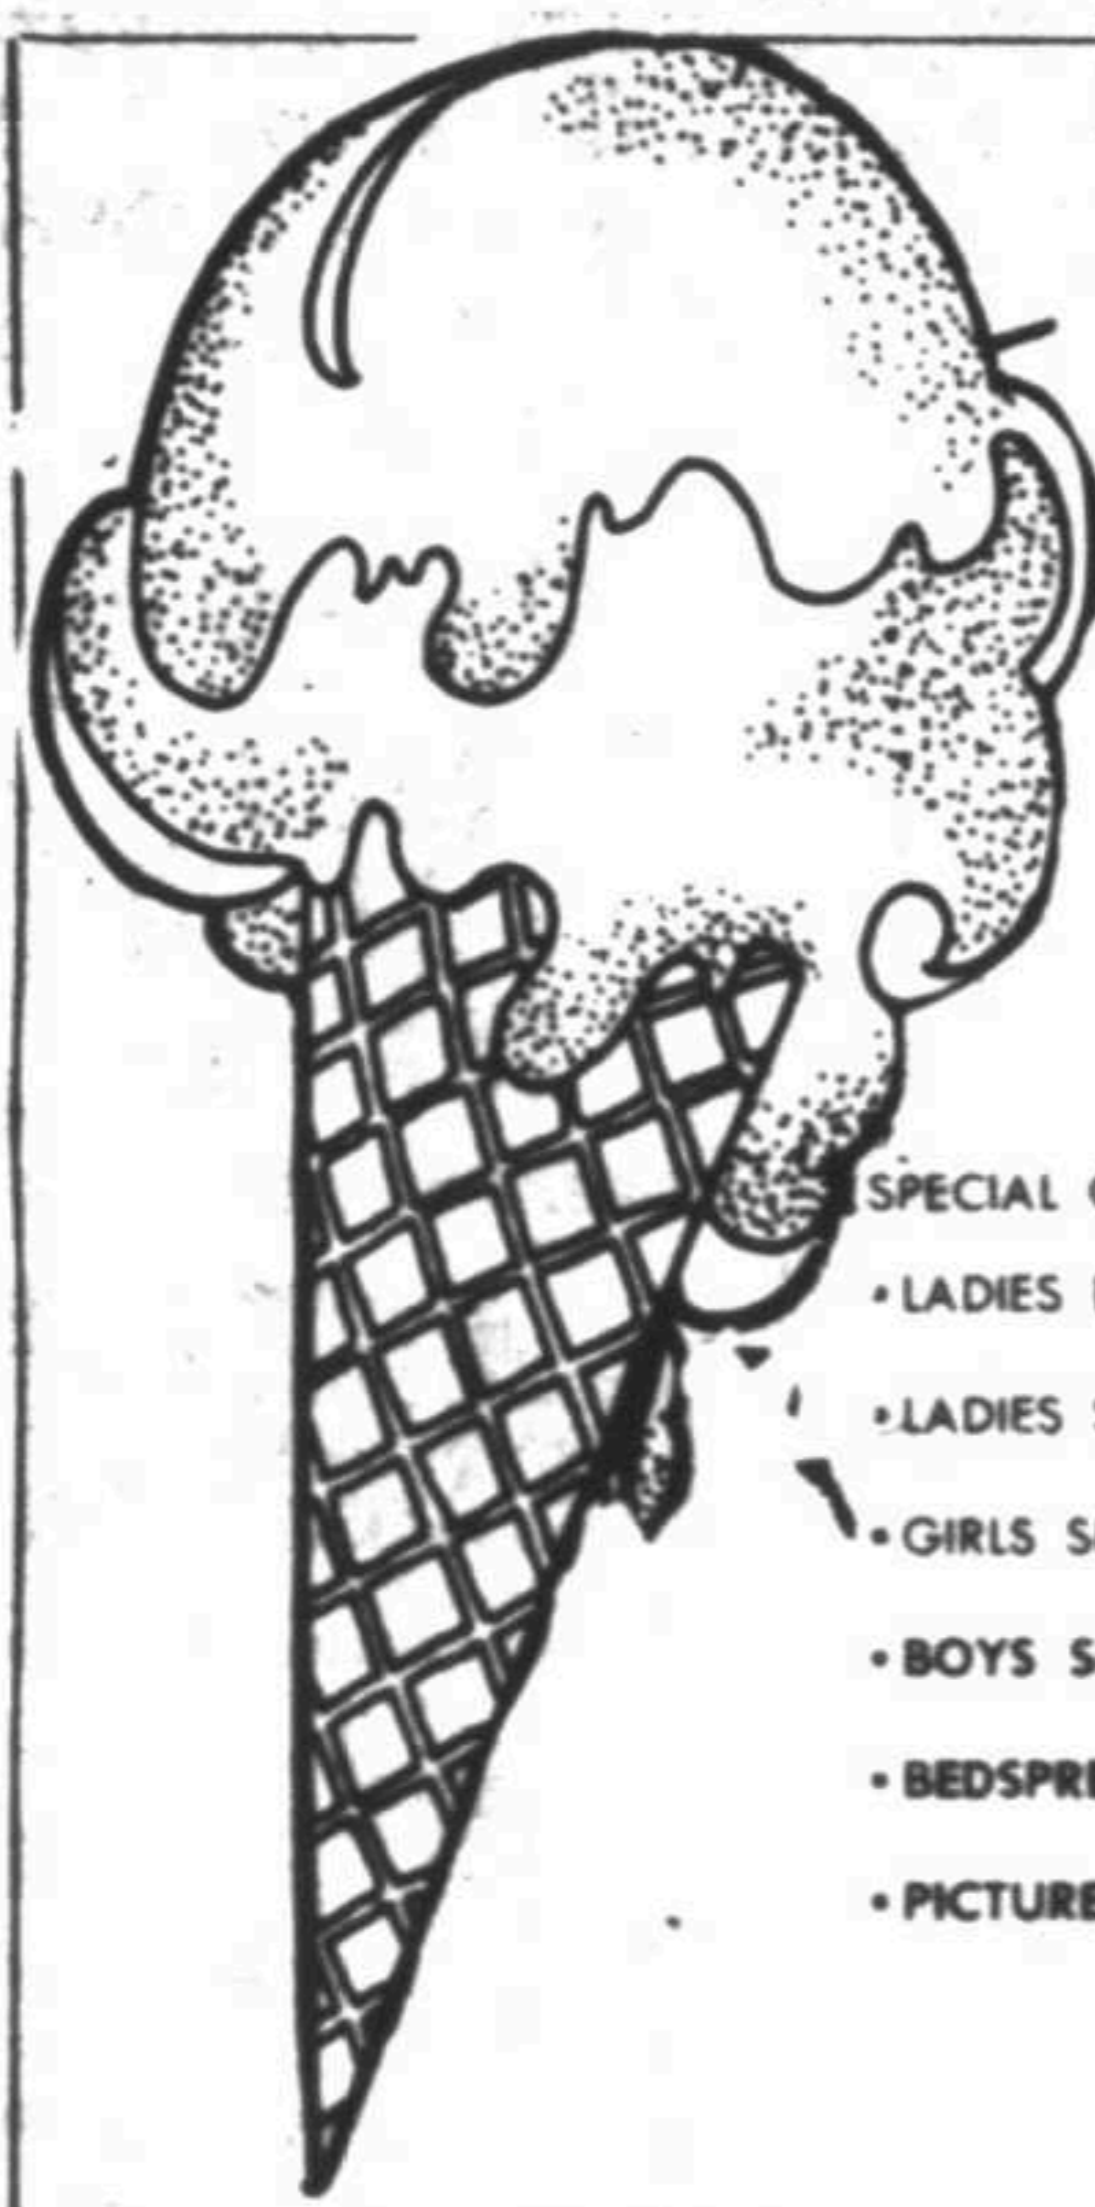

Tar washes onto shore

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Large patches of tar from the giant, war-caused Iranian oil slick have washed onto Bahrain's west coast, and officials said today they have mobilized a task force to clean up the beaches.

Khaled Fakhro, head of a committee assigned to combat the seven-month-old Persian Gulf slick, said Bahrain was prepared to manufacture inflatable booms and other barriers to deflect the slick away from the island nation's coasts.

He said experts also were working on means of channeling the tar into designated locations before disposing it, possibly by burying it in sand.

Fakhro said the main body of the slick had not been sighted near Bahrain or Saudi Arabia.

Pierce hurls first pro shutout against Cubs

Arkansas claims series 4-1 over Midland with 8-0 win

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Assistant Sports Editor

Arkansas pitcher Walt Pierce hurled his first nine inning professional shutout at the Midland Cubs Sunday night, winning by an 8-0 count and adding to the current woes of the Cubs.

Cubs Stadium in the last 10 days. "The wind really did help. I think a couple of the shots the Cubs had would have gone out on any other night," Pierce said, who picked up his seventh win of the year against five losses.

Brooks got two of the four hits off Pierce, but was thrown out stealing both times as Cub manager Tommy Harmon tried to make something happen to his team which has won only six times in the last 25 games.

Carlos Lezcano doubled in the eighth inning, deep to left center, and was the only Bruin to get as far as second base. But the blast was with two outs and Pierce KOed Don Hyman on strikes to end the brief threat. The only other hit came in the sixth when Rick Baker bounced a single over third, but was thrown out trying to stretch the hit into a double. The Cubs left only two runners on base.

"This is the first time in pro ball that I've had a nine inning shutout," Pierce said. "I got a seven inning shutout last year and Terry Clark and I combined for a seven inning shutout against Jackson this year. I went 6 1/2 innings in that one."

MIKE ANICICH, in the throes of a bad slump, almost ruined Pierce's shutout bid twice. Anicich flew out to the wall in left twice, but Pierce's biggest help — Old Man Wind — saved him.

The Cubs' Joe Housey, 0-2, took the loss as the Travelers scored all they needed in the first when Gotay Mills singled, stole second and scored on Rod Booker's single to left. But Housey still had his best outing in three starts. He gave up only three hits and one run through the first six innings before he gave up two, two-out runs in the seventh and an unearned run in the eighth.

Ray Soff came on in relief in the eighth and gave up four runs in the ninth for the final count. Booker drove in three runs and Barry Saylor two for the Travs.

Baker rallies from five down to win City Golf title

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY Sports Writer

Bill Baker overcame a five-stroke deficit Sunday to edge Grant Spencer and claim the Midland City Golf tournament on the second hole of a sudden death playoff in the championship flight at Hogan Park.

Baker's win gives him his second title in his last two tries, but he last won the tourney in 1974.

For second place Spencer, it was the second time in the past two years that a solid effort netted only a bridesmaid's role.

SPENCER SHOT a 67 in opening round play, while Baker recorded a 71. Spencer, at one point, apparently had things in hand, but ran in to trouble on the 12th hole. He hit his drive into the left rough, then hit a tree coming out and his ball went into the water. The ensuing double bogey trimmed his once-sizeable lead.

"When he had me five strokes down," said Baker. "I was thinking of maybe second place. Then everything fell into place. He just didn't close the door."

"I just got pretty lucky," Bill played a dynamite round," said Spencer. "When you play good and get beat by someone who plays better, you have nothing to be ashamed of. That's the way a tourney should be. It was good competition."

Baker needed a 20-foot putt for a birdie on 18 to force the sudden death playoff.

"That hole he bogeyed put me back into it," Baker said. "I was real proud I won this. He's a fine player."

A brief rain storm that hit the area did not interfere with play.

Baker, who claimed a first prize of $172.80 in merchandise from the Hogan golf shop, says he may be investing in a new pair of shoes soon.

Here are the results from the City Golf Tournament.

Robinson, Kell, Marichal, Alston make it to Fame

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y. (AP) — Induction into baseball's Hall of Fame was pure euphoria for Brooks Robinson, and the great third baseman of the Baltimore Orioles could not help wearing his emotions on his sleeve.

But a somber mood surfaced later when Robinson and two fellow honorees — George Kell and former San Francisco Giants pitcher Juan Marichal — enlarged on their heady experience at a press conference.

A fourth inductee, Walter Alston, manager of the Dodgers for 23 years, was unable to attend because of a recent heart attack.

"Now that I'm in the Hall of Fame, I feel I am the luckiest man in the world," Robinson said. "But I can't help thinking about all those deserving people who haven't made it."

"The commissioner (Bowie Kuhn) pointed out that in all of baseball history, only 148 players have gained the Hall of Fame. I had doubts that I would ever make it. I had begun to think of baseball as offensive oriented."

"Now that George and I (both third basemen) are in, I am getting positive vibes that defense is getting more appreciation. Maybe we will help open the door for Luis Aparicio, whom I think certainly should be in, as well as players such as Phil Rizzuto and Peewee Reese."

RIZZUTO AND Reese, shortstop rivals in those dramatic New York Yankee-Brooklyn Dodger World Series of the late 1940s and 1950s, having failed to receive sufficient votes in the regular balloting of baseball writers, become eligible next year for consideration by the Veterans Committee.

Aparicio has long had strong support but failed to gain the necessary votes.

Kell, who himself was picked by the Veterans Committee, agreed with Robinson.

"I had to wait a long time," he said, "but it was worth the wait. I am sure Aparicio, Reese, Rizzuto and other great defensive players will get recognition."

"When I look at a ball player, I have one criteria. Is he a winner?"

Robinson, Kell, Marichal and Alston were joined by two media veterans — Sports Editor Si Burick of the Dayton (Ohio) Daily News and broadcaster Jack Brickhouse of Chicago's TV station WGN, who received the Ford Frick Award.

THERE IS an interesting corollary in the careers of Robinson and Kell, although of two different eras. Both are natives of Arkansas, played the same position, were teammates briefly and landed in the Hall of Fame on the same hazy Sunday afternoon as 12,000 wild baseball fans besieged this normally placid village of 2,500 at the foothills of the Catskills.

Robinson said that as a kid, growing up in Little Rock, he followed the brilliant batting and fielding career of Kell, then starring for the Detroit Tigers.

"George was from Swifton," Robinson said. "I kept up with box-scores of all Arkansas players. Bill Dickey lived on my paper route. I always gave him paper an extra zip."

"In my rookie year with the Orioles in 1957, George, finishing out his career, was playing third base. I had never met him before. When they put me on third, George moved over to first."

Kell said that his friend, Hoot Evers, gave him advance warning of the new kid coming up in the Oriole organization.

"Some people thought he wouldn't hit well enough," Kell added, "but (manager) Paul Richards predicted he'd be a fine hitter. He was the toughest out I've ever seen." Robinson called Kell a great influence, adding, "He never once said, 'Do this, do that.'"

FORTY BUS loads of Baltimore fans, all wearing black and orange baseball caps, swinging banners and screaming at the tops of their lungs, turned Cooperstown into a madcap street carnival Sunday.

Their unbridled enthusiasm was challenged only by that of a huge outpouring of Latins, largely youngsters, hailing Marichal, who followed Roberto Clemente as only the second Latin American to gain the Hall of Fame.

The high-kicking former Giant right-hander said the reception almost matched that given him earlier in the year when he returned home from New York after being elected.

"Half the town came out — 3,000 or 4,000 people," he said. "And that was just the airport."

Robinson was overwhelmed by the support of Oriole fans.

"I feel strongly about the Baltimore fans," he said. "I sort of came with the franchise. Now that Yaz (Boston's Carl Yastrzemski) is retiring, you won't see players staying that long with one club any more."

"Not that it's bad. Free agency gives everybody a chance to win. You can't close your mind to it."

Studley's new system isn't easy

HOUSTON (AP) — Chuck Studley's defensive coaching prowess helped the San Francisco 49ers win a Super Bowl title but he still had to convince his new charges, the Houston Oilers defense, that his complicated system works.

"The first day I talked to them we put in four coverages and they are used to getting one," said Studley, named Oriole defensive coordinator in January. "I had bed check that night and I went to (linebacker Gregg) Bingham's room and he said 'Coach this is really complex.' He's right, it is. But it's only as complex as I think it needs to be."

Slowly, the idea light turned on. "Bingham came up to me two days later and said, 'It's beginning to come through,'" Studley said.

Now Studley sees the new system beginning to spread throughout the team.

"I think, not only is it coming through, but they like it," Studley said.

"They are beginning to understand and they can see the merit to it."

Studley's biggest problem now will be getting the complicated new set of line charges and secondary coverages installed in time to help turn around the Oiler defense this season.

THE OILERS had the worst defense in the NFL last season, yielding 382 yards per game and intercepting only three passes all season.

"I told them that we have got to pack at least three years of work into one year," Studley said.

Therefore, learning skills become important for both rookies and veterans, Studley said.

"We have a lot of great mental ability here but whenever we put in a new coverage they slow down a step," Studley said.

Harrah helps Corrales get first victory

By The Associated Press

Toby Harrah went 5-for-5 and drove in three runs with a bases-loaded, tie-breaking double that powered Cleveland to a 16-11 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Sunday in Pat Corrales' first game as the Indians' manager.

Corrales, who was fired two weeks ago as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, replaced Mike Ferraro, who was dismissed Sunday as the Indians' skipper.

With the score tied 7-7, the Indians moved in front on Harrah's three-run double in the fifth against reliever Jim Aker, 2-1.

The Indians added two more runs in the sixth with the help of Jule Franco's RBI triple, then Bake McBride's run-scoring single in the seventh produced Cleveland's 13th run.

Toronto third baseman Rance Mulliniks had tied the game 7-7 in the bottom of the fourth with a solo home run, his fifth of the season, off winner Juan Eichelberger, 4-10.

In other American League games, Mike Boddicker tossed a four-hitter and Eddie Murray hit a home run as the Baltimore Orioles extended their winning streak to five games with a 6-0 victory over the Texas Rangers, who have lost six in a row and are 5-19 since the All-Star game.

Don Baylor's grand slam homer, the eighth of his career, highlighted a six-run 11th inning that gave the New York Yankees a wild 12-6 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Cecil Cooper's run-scoring double knocked in the go-ahead run as the Milwaukee Brewers scored four runs in the ninth inning to beat the Boston Red Sox 7-5.

Mike Brown drove in two runs with a triple and a double to lead the California Angels to a 4-0 victory over the Oakland A's behind Geoff Zahn's seven-hitter.

Seattle pinch-hitter Manny Castillo ripped a two-out, run-scoring double in the ninth inning to give the Mariners a 3-2 win over the Minnesota Twins.

U.L. Washington drove in three runs with a single and a homer as the Kansas City Royals beat the Detroit Tigers 7-5 in the second game to gain a split of their doubleheader. Alan Trammell hit a three-run double in the second inning to lead the Tigers to an 8-6 victory in the first game.

Andretti ends frustration with Provimi 200 victory

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. (AP) — Mario Andretti ended more than two years of frustration when he took the lead with just three laps remaining and raced to a victory in the CART Provimi Veal Indy-car race at Road America.

The 43-year-old driver, the 1969 Indy 500 winner and the 1978 Formula One world champion, had not won a race of any kind since taking a 150-mile Indy-car event in September 1980 at Michigan International Speedway.

And Sunday's race didn't come easy, either, as he ran nearly the entire 200-mile race with a bad clutch, a malfunctioning radio, and had a problem with the waste gate, the part that controls the turbo-charger power on the powerful open-wheel cars.

"The last five laps, the car was jumping out of gear on the average of four or five times a lap," Andretti explained. "That was real thrilling. I had to hold the gearshift lever down hard and hit the downshift just right. It was really a stroke of luck that we finished."

This was the second CART-PPG Indy-Car World Series event run on Road America's 4-mile, 14-turn road course — the first was last September — and the second time the race has been decided in the last few laps.

Josele Garza, who never has won an Indy-car race, somehow managed to squeeze past Andretti, Al Unser Jr. and Bobby Rahal to move into first place on the 40th of 50 laps.

The young Mexican held the top spot until he spun negotiating turn 6 on the 44th lap. Rahal whipped past to take the lead, with Andretti less than 2 seconds behind.

That's the way it stayed until Rahal, who was leading late in last year's race before running out of fuel, slowed suddenly on lap 47, his tank running dry again.

That opened the door for Andretti, who took control with his Cosworth-powered Lola T-700 racer and ran off with the 35th triumph of his Indy-car career, tying him with retired Bobby Unser for third place on the all-time victory list.

Andretti leads the Indy-car set in road course victories with 11.

Al Unser Jr. finished second and his father, a three-time Indy winner, was third. The two Unseers were the only other drivers on the same lap with Andretti and remain the only two drivers to have finished every lap in each of the six Indy-car races this season.

Andretti's Budweiser-sponsored car, co-owned by actor Paul Newman and businessman Carl Haas, crossed the finish line 15.96 seconds ahead of the 22-year-old Unser Jr.

Andretti averaged 99.410 mph and picked up $37,182 from the total purse of $248,570.

Rahal appeared to have the fastest car all day, leading four different times for 24 laps. But, even with all his problems, Andretti managed to keep him in sight.

"I thought he (Rahal) had some problems toward the end of the race," Andretti said. "But I had some problems of my own. I had to be a little cautious. Then, suddenly, he just came back to me and I went past him at the third turn. I didn't even know what had happened to him."

"Then I just had to concentrate on finishing the race myself. It was no picnic at the end. In fact, it was a very intense race. Flat out all the way."

Indy 500 winner Tom Sneva was fourth, a full lap behind the leaders. He was followed by John Paul Jr., the winner of the Michigan 500 two weeks ago. Paul drives for Midland's VDS racing team.

Senior Tournament starts Tuesday

Midland Elcor is one of six teams shooting for the 1983 Texas Teenage Baseball State Seniors title at Cubs Stadium starting Tuesday and playing through Thursday.

Other teams will come from Waco, Tyler, North Mesquite, Brownwood and Snyder. The Snyder team recently won the Class 4A state high school baseball title and the team features some of those players.

The Midland Elcor team is largely made up of 1983 District 4-5A runnerup Midland Lee. Two Midland High Bulldogs and one player from Odessa High have been added to the team for the tournament.

The tournament gets off to an early start Tuesday with a 10 a.m. opening game, but the pairings for that game won't be known until tonight when the teams arrive in town.

Games are scheduled to follow the opener at 12:30 p.m. with first round action ending with a 5:30 p.m. game. A loser's bracket game will be played at 8 p.m.

Japan wins Far East LL title

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Japan blanked Guam 3-0 today and won the 1983 Far East Little League baseball championship.

The Japanese boys completed the six-nation tournament at Seoul Municipal Stadium with a 5-0 record.

Japan, winning the title for the first time since 1978, will represent the region in the annual Little League World Series tournament in Williamsport, Pa., Aug. 22-26.

The Japanese victory ended a six-year monopoly by Taiwan of the regional title. Japan beat Taiwan 2-0 in opening-day action Thursday.

Wallach's homer lifts Expos past Cards, 6-5

In the National League, Tim Wallach slammed a one-out homer, his 13th of the season, in the bottom of the eighth inning to lift the Montreal Expos to a 6-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Bobby Brown, playing his first game for San Diego, homered and singled to drive in two runs and scored three times, and the Padres turned in their first triple play in more than five years as they defeated the Atlanta Braves 5-2.

Bo Diaz homered and drove in two runs and John Denny won his 11th game in 16 decisions as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Chicago Cubs 5-2.

Despite being no-hit for 8½ innings by Jose DeLeon in the second game, the New York Mets swept the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-6, 1-0 in a pair of 12-inning games.

George Foster drove in the winning run in the nightcap on a fielder's choice that scored Mookie Wilson from second base. Jesse Orosco was credited with the victory in each game to boost his record to 7-5. The Mets won the opener on Bob Bailor's bases-loaded, one-out single over a drawn-in infield.

DeLeon, making only his third major-league start, flirted with the first National League no-hitter in two years for the second time in his three major-league starts. He struck out 11 and walked three in nine innings and the Mets did not get close to a hit off him until Hubie Brooks singled with one out in the ninth.

Phil Garner hit a two-run single and Jose Cruz followed with a two-run triple to highlight Houston's seven-run seventh inning, while Joe Niekro fired a seven-hitter to give the Astros a 9-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Bob Brenly's two-run single highlighted a five-run eighth inning rally and the San Francisco Giants registered an 8-6 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers to gain a split of a doubleheader before a sellout crowd of 53,178. The Dodgers won the first game 2-1, scoring an unearned run in the ninth on catcher Johnny Rabb's error and getting a combined three-hitter from Burt Hooton, Tom Niedenfuer and Steve Howe.

Adams, Adams, Peden, Turnbo win Blowout

The team of Adams, Adams, Peden, Turnbo proved too strong as they kept a stranglehold on the lead they established Friday and cruised to a two-stroke victory in the championship flight at the Ranchland Hills Country Club Blowout Tournament.

The team was threatened only by Hicks, Hicks, Huckabee and Snyder but their three day total of 185 edged the Hicks team by a pair.

Both teams carded 63's Sunday to finish the three day affair. Finishing third was the team of Whiteside, Cromwell, Sledge and Geisselman at 188.

Elsewhere, in the first flight the team of Mays, Lindgrin, Griffin and Boudreaux overcame a two stroke deficit on Sunday to edge past Winborn, Parker, Lackey and Rose for the first time in the tourney, 194-195.

In the evenly matched fifth flight, which featured an oddity after day one in that all seven teams entered posted identical 72's, on Sunday all teams had different scores. The fifth flight was won by McWilliams, Lowery, Logan and Goode with a 211 total.

Following are Blowout results:

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT: Adams, Adams, Peden, Turnbo 185; Hicks, Hicks, Huckabee, Snyder 187; Whiteside, Cromwell, Geisselman, Sledge 188.

FIRST FLIGHT: Mays, Lindgrin, Griffin, Boudreaux 194; Winborn, Parker, Lackey, Rose 195; Hall, Whitley, Heath, Arrick 200.

SECOND FLIGHT: Watkins, Dewees, Woodfin, Jones 199; Roan, Roan, Scott, Smith, McDaniell, Carey, Franklin, Redden, Barton, Byrd, Gray, Cook, all tied at 208.

THIRD FLIGHT: Hollis, Clark, Thornton, Morgan 200; Thomas, Langford, Harless, Melzer 202; Johnson, Womack, Ranson, Lucas 203.

FOURTH FLIGHT: McGee, Hall, Taitley, Metts, Jenkins, Jenkins, Towren, Roye, Bell, Bell, Claess, Stuckey, all tied at 208.

FIFTH FLIGHT: McWilliams, Lowery, Logan, Goode 211; Wilson, McClatchey, Lyons, Watson 212; Nell, Buckner, Johnson, Brandes 214.

SIXTH FLIGHT: Armour, Smith, Desler, Skiller 213; Wilson, Scoggins, Green, Doan 217; Estep, Pepper, Newman, Casey 220.

SEVENTH FLIGHT: Witten, Glasco, McBride, Holder 214; McClatchey, Deas, Wright, Noles, Irons, Everitt, Peulzer, Ely, tied at 222.

Petroleum investments near record levels

ANNAPOLIS, MD. — Led by investments in property acquisition (income) programs, investments in oil and gas programs reached $1.343 billion in the first six months of 1983, up 40 percent over 1982.

The figures are only 8 percent less than the all-time high of $1.459 billion invested during the first six months of 1981.

Annapolis-based Investment Search Inc., which specializes in analyzing and evaluating oil and gas programs, estimates total investments for the year 1983 will reach $3.132 billion based on sales to date.

This would be 8.1 percent higher than the all-time record investment of $2.896 billion reached in 1981 and 33 percent higher than the investment of $2.353 billion reached in 1982.

THE INCREASE in investment is due entirely to a substantial jump in investments in the so-called income program group, which acquire already producing oil and gas properties. The income program group has experienced a phenomenal growth over the last several years.

Investments in these income programs during the first six months of 1983 were nearly two and one-half times the amount similarly invested during the first six months of 1982.

Investment in drilling funds was down sharply from 1982, totalling only about one-half the investment of one year ago. That amount was slightly less than half the investment in drilling funds during the first six months of 1981, the banner year for drilling programs.

Completion, royalty and lease acquisition funds, the third major category for investment in oil and gas programs, showed a substantial increase over 1982.

INVESTMENT IN these programs increased tenfold, but accounted for only 4 percent of all investment in oil and gas programs.

INCOME FUNDS

The steady increase in investments in the income funds since 1979 can be attributed to a number of factors, the most important of which is the lower investor suitability requirements for income funds and a larger number of potential investors.

In 1980, investments increased $187 million over 1979; in 1981, they rose $344 million over 1980. In 1982, investment increased $505 million over 1981; and in 1983, Investment Search, Inc. estimates that investment in SEC-registered income funds will increase more than $1 billion over those investments in 1982, totalling 10 times the investment in income programs just four years ago in 1979.

While the larger numbers of potential investors are necessary to support this new level of investment, Investment Search, Inc. attributes this very large increase to the following:

- Investors and their brokers have great confidence in oil and gas investment purposes,
—There is confidence in the outlook for oil and gas prices by investors and brokers alike, and in the fact that —THE TAX SHELTER departments of major brokerage firms switched their attention to income funds after they and their clients experienced disappointing results from the drilling funds that these same tax shelter departments were recommending.

The income programs, while not offering much in the way of first year tax deductions, have performed reasonably well as a whole. Those that have been in existence long enough to measure have not resulted in loss of equity.

Investment Search, Inc. president Arthur Jerrold King said, "Investors must keep in mind that we have not yet seen results from the size of funds now being sold."

"We do not yet know whether this significant increase in size will have an adverse or positive effect on the property acquisition programs and, while we recommend income programs as a proper oil and gas investment vehicle, prudence must be exercised in the selection process. It is not a vehicle for experimentation by inexperienced operators with investors' money."

Petro-Lewis Funds, Inc. of Denver continued to be the leading fund-raiser with $411.5 million in sales during the first half of 1983, versus $212.9 million for the same period in 1982.

COMING IN SECOND was Damson Oil Corporation of New York City with $252.6 million versus $116.2 million during the first half of 1982. Sixty-five percent of the money invested was placed in programs sponsored by Petro-Lewis and Damson.

"While the direct variation method of predicting sales points to a 94 percent increase, in income fund investment for the year, to $2.51 billion, it is entirely possible that these investments could be nearer the $2 billion mark," King said. "We are thus projecting an increase of $750 million to $1.25 billion. If forced to pick a number, I would estimate total SEC-registered income program sales of $2.5 billion in 1983," King said.

DRILLING FUNDS

Investment in drilling funds has dropped sharply. The higher risk experienced by investors and brokers during the period of greatly increasing investment in drilling programs (1975 through 1981) is one reason.

The failure of a number of drilling program sponsors, combined with lower maximum tax rates and a general overreaction to the poor performance experienced by investors in their investments in the drilling programs during a period when the overheated climate for oil and gas drilling investment provided more money than the somewhat fledgling industry could prudently absorb, is also a reason.

INVESTMENT in the first half of 1983 was just under half (46 percent) of investment in the first half of 1982, which is 25 percent of the first six months of 1981.

In predicting drilling fund investment for the remainder of 1983, King said, "The direct variation method of predicting investment indicates that total investment in drilling funds for the year will be $554 million, or an average of about $46 million per month for the remaining six months.

"My own feeling for the situation, based on discussions with investors and a number of tax shelter specialists at leading brokerage firms, is that investment will begin to pick up slightly in the second half. That is not enough to make a boom year for the drilling funds, but it should be a little bit better second half than one would expect based on historical patterns from the first half monthly curve."

King said he expects drilling fund investment to be near the $750 million mark for the year 1983.

The first half leader in the drilling fund category was Dycos Petroleum Corporation of Minneapolis which raised $38 million. Following close behind was the Stone Petroleum Corporation of Lafayette, Louisiana with $36 million. Woods Petroleum Corporation of Oklahoma City came in third with $34 million.

DRILLING FUND investments for these three companies combined comprised 38.5 percent of all such investment for the first half of 1983.

"The figures for Dycos are somewhat misleading," King said, "considering the fact that their second program closed on the first day of the second half of the year — July 1st — with total investment of an additional $32 million. Together with their first partnership, that makes Dycos' total drilling program investment $70 million for the year."

"While that is down from $90 million in 1982, I believe this to be one of the bright spots for the drilling program industry so far this year," King continued.

During the first six months, 23 sponsors who began operations in drilling partnerships during the first half of 1982 had no such programs during the first half of 1983. Of these, 5 are definitely out of the public program business, 6 have not filed programs of any kind this year, 7 expect to have programs in the second half, 4 have apparently switched to the more popular income program.

Damson Oil Corporation, which has historically offered both drilling and income programs, has indicated that they may not have a drilling program this year.

Other Types of Public Funds

The third category of public funds includes completion and royalty acquisition funds, total investments in which were $54.2 million, raised by six companies. There were only three companies offering such funds in all of 1982, with total sales of $9.9 million. The increase in sales and in the companies offering these types of programs is reflective of a movement away from drilling funds.

Rule changes could harm coral

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Relaxed rules will allow oil companies to sink offshore wells so close to a coral formation that drilling wastes will be dropped on it, three Texas A&M scientists say.

Dr. Thomas J. Bright said he and two colleagues wrote to David Russell, acting director of the Minerals Management Service of the Interior Department, last week.

Bright said he and two other A&M oceanographers, professors Richard Rezak and David W. McGrail, are afraid the new regulation will damage the Flower Garden Bank, the only living coral reefs in the north-west Gulf of Mexico. The reef lies 120 miles southeast of Galveston.

Current regulations allow firms to drill only at 100 meters deep and deeper and allow them to release wastes no shallower than 90 meters beneath the surface.

The proposed change would allow drilling at 85 meters, about a mile closer to the reef. Wastes could be discharged at 75 meters.

Bright said the letter sent last week pointed out that the coral reef extends from 46 to 82 meters deep. Because water levels vary by as much as 12 meters, drilling wastes could reach as high as 63 meters, it said.

Bright said studies conducted on reefs off the Florida coast have found that drilling mud, used to lubricate a drill bit, can cause coral to calcify.

Part of the East Flower Garden Bank is contained in a block to be sold Aug. 24 as part of Interior Secretary James Watt's accelerated offshore leasing program.

Tomlinson Oil Co. moving south

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Tomlinson Oil Co. Inc. plans to move its headquarters from Kansas to San Antonio as part of a cost-cutting effort, company officials said.

The public oil company is consolidating its administrative office and Midland office operations with existing operations here, according to Tomlinson vice president John Trunk.

The Midland office was closed in May and that, along with the move, will result in the laying off of about 17 employees, most top managers, he said.

The company will move from Wichita to San Antonio next week, Trunk said.

Tomlinson has been losing money for about three years, and reported a $2.3 million loss in earnings for the third quarter ending May 31. Company officials have predicted an earnings loss for the entire year.

CAKE IN THE SHAPE OF A PUPPY IS THE STAR OF KID'S PARTY

To generations of American children, a birthday party symbolizes something magical. The clamorous games and fanciful food are always enchantingly different from ordinary daily routine.

Suddenly sandwiches become star-shaped or heart-shaped, courtesy of a cookie cutter. Pink lemonade, ice cream and cake are in unlimited supply. Needless to say, the most captivating part of the party menu is usually the cake.

Employing a bit of prestidigitation, Mom can fashion this cute Pepperidge Pooch basically from two seventeen-inch coconut layer cakes, a can of vanilla frosting and some melted chocolate for Spot's brown spots. It is surprisingly easy to do if you follow the cutout pattern and directions given in the recipe to follow.

It will make cleaning-up easier if colorful plastic mats and paper napkins are used as well as plastic cups. They can be gathered up and tossed out while the youngsters are out in the back yard playing catch with the new mitt.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Business activity may lose momentum

By CHET CURRIER AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After a surge in the spring and early summer, many economists suspect that business activity will soon lose some of its momentum.

But, they hasten to add, the kind of slowdown in economic growth they envision could prove to be an overall plus rather than a problem.

"A very high growth rate would not persist very long with out causing higher inflation and increases in interest rates," says Ben Laden, chief economist at the investment management firm of T. Rowe Price Associates.

"In fact, if the pace of recovery were considered to be too fast, the Federal Reserve and the administration might take steps to slow it down."

The way economists S. Jay Levy and David Levy see it, other forces are already at work to cool things off.

"Industrial production's rise, rapid so far in 1983, will soon begin to moderate," the father-son team of forecasters maintains.

"Retail sales will be strong through Christmas, sluggish in the first half of next year."

The Levys argue that weak demand for U.S. exports will act as a brake on economic growth in this country.

"A major reason for the worsening trade picture is the excessive value of the dollar relative to foreign currencies," they say.

At the same time, they maintain, some of the most important stimulants to economic activity lately have lost their former force — among them the housing industry's revival, deficit spending by the federal government, and inventory-building by increasingly confident businesses. A drop in mortgage interest rates from about 18 percent to about 13 percent touched off a spurt in housing activity. But since then mortgage rates have stopped falling and backed up a bit again.

The swelling of the federal deficit to about $300 billion this year has raised many justified concerns, the Levys say, but it has also provided some short-term impetus to the recovery. They believe the deficit is likely to narrow somewhat in the government fiscal year beginning in October, thereby reducing its stimulative effects.

The economy got another short-term boost in the second quarter of this year as businesses switched from drawing down existing inventories to building up their stocks of goods. To accomplish this shift of gears requires a rapid increase in production.

Such a changeover is "an important event that occurs only once during each business cycle," the Levys said. "This change having been made, the economy needs to look elsewhere for a further stimulus to business activity."

Evans Economics, a Washington-based forecasting firm, estimates that the inventory buildup slowed to almost zero in June. "Accumulation will be quite modest during the summer months," it said, "so that the gains in industrial production will be much smaller."

The firm expects measures of economic activity for July, which are due to be published over the next few weeks, to "surprise many by posting much more moderate gains than were recorded during the second quarter."

The hoped-for outcome of slower growth would be an easing of the recent pressures that have pushed interest rates higher. In this script, only when government and business policymakers are much less confident about prospects for the recovery than they are now can interest rates fall enough to get that recovery moving ahead strongly again.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were broadly lower in early trading today as blue-chip issues failed in an attempt to erase opening losses.

Auto, mining, aerospace, retail and drug stocks paced the losers on the New York Stock Exchange, while several energy and financial issues edged higher.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which skidded 44.47 points over the past three sessions, was off another 6.21 points, to 1,193.01, after two hours of trading today.

The measure trimmed an opening 5-point loss to less than a point after an hour of trading, but then retreated again.

Overall, losers led gainers by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE, whose composite index fell 0.37 to 93.90.

Big Board volume totaled 32.36 million shares at noon EDT, against 40.26 million at that hour Friday.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Doyle

Risks involved in metals market

Q. What are the pros and cons of investing in the precious metals market? I have read much about the advantages, but never see anything about the downside risk. Brokers and bankers I have spoken to seem to ignore the metals markets and can't give valid arguments against such investments. I need an unbiased opinion of this market.

A. It's difficult to get a truly unbiased opinion on that subject. That's because most people who have experience in that market are either hot for it or dead against it. There's little middle ground.

The "pro" side is that you can make a bundle in precious metals — gold, silver, platinum and palladium — if the price of the metal you buy goes up. The "con" side is just the opposite. You can lose your shirt.

Just look at the price of gold. After skyrocketing to $850 a troy ounce in January, 1980, it plunged below $300 in June, 1982 and recovered to almost $500 within six weeks — before going into another slide. Since then, it's been bouncing up and down, as I write this, is hovering around $400. Where it's headed in the future is anybody's guess.

There are many ways to play the precious metals market. You can buy coins, bullion bars or small wafers, invest in stocks of U.S., Canadian or South African mining companies, or buy such things as warehouse receipts or certificates.

Proponents contend that, over the years, the value of precious metals has been the "perfect hedge against inflation." That claim doesn't sit well with people who bought at much higher prices than we're seeing these days.

Unless you buy mining stocks, which pay dividends, precious metals are not investments. They are speculations, because they produce no income. There's nothing wrong with speculation for people who can afford to run big risks, but most people can't and are wise to stay away from the metals market.

Q. I took some one-ounce gold Kruggerands to a coin dealer recently to sell, as I have done in the past. This time, the dealer asked for my Social Security number and said he had to report the transaction to the Internal Revenue Service. How long has this been going on?

A. Since July 1. As of that date, dealers have been required to record customers' gross proceeds from the sale of precious metals and coins and send annual reports to the IRS. The same rule took effect on the same date for brokers' reporting customers' sales of stocks, bonds, commodities and such.

This is all part of enforcement of the compliance provisions in the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982. The aim, of course, is to catch people who have been selling gold coins, securities and other things and never reporting profits on their federal tax returns.

Q. I am being pressured by long-distance phone calls from a super salesman at a commodity futures firm. I realize the average person wouldn't stand a chance in the commodity futures market, but what are the odds that these "experts" can successfully invest for me?

A. If I were making book, I'd lay long odds against it. Anytime you get a high-pressure phone call from someone you don't know, the smart thing to do is hang up.

Unless you're a producer or a user of the commodity involved in the futures contract, you don't invest. You speculate — a polite word for gamble. If the "experts" were as good at that game as they claim, why would they cut you in on the action?

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through his column. Address questions to Bill Doyle, King Features, c/o the Reporter-Telegram, Midland, Texas 79702.

Hot dogs help increase grocery bills

Grocery bills rose by more than half a percent last month, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey which shows the totals were boosted by higher prices for hot dogs and butter.

The price of a pound of all-beef frankfurters went up during July in nine of 13 cities surveyed — more than any other item. Butter prices increased in seven cities.

The AP marketbasket covers 14 food and non-food items, selected at random. Prices of all items were checked at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973 and have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. No attempt is made to weight the survey results according to what percentage of a family's actual food budget each item represents. Nor are the figures adjusted for seasonal variations.

THE LATEST NUMBERS included both good and bad news for consumers. Despite July's increase, the marketbasket totals show an overall decline for the first seven months of 1983, thanks to price drops earlier in the year.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture expects only modest increases in food prices this year. Bad weather during the winter and spring caused some rises, particularly for fruit and vegetables, but the USDA says the problems should be over.

The heat in the Midwest has caused concern over the wheat and corn crops, but analysts say existing grain supplies are large enough to prevent a boost in retail food prices, even if commodity prices rise temporarily.

The latest AP survey showed that the marketbasket went up at the checklist store in eight cities, rising an average of 2.3 percent, and went down in five cities, dropping an average of 2.1 percent. Overall, there was an average increase of six-tenths of 1 percent in the marketbasket bills during July.

PRICES DECLINED IN January, March and May. Comparing prices today with those at the start of the year, the AP found the marketbasket total was up at the checklist store in five cities and down in eight. Overall, there was an average drop of seven-tenths of 1 percent in the marketbasket bills during the first seven months of the year.

Consumers who shopped carefully found some bargains during July. The price of eggs, for example, decreased at the checklist store in eight of the cities surveyed; chopped chicken was down in seven cities; and pork chops decreased in six cities.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes or comparable substitutes were used. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the over-all total.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentage of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

THE ITEMS ON THE AP checklist were: chopped chicken, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. A 15th item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

ALBUQUERQUE: The marketbasket went from $21.54 to $21.28, down 1.2 percent. Orange juice and fabric softener increased; pork chops, chopped chicken, eggs and milk decreased; the remaining eight items were unchanged.

ATLANTA: The total dropped nine-tenths of 1 percent, from $21.58 to $21.38. Paper towels, butter, peanut butter and frankfurters went up; chopped chicken, pork chops, orange juice, eggs, detergent and tomato sauce went down; everything else stayed the same.

BOSTON: The bill went from $19.99 to $20.21, up 1.1 percent. Peanut butter, fabric softener and hot dogs went up; coffee went down; the remaining 10 items were unchanged.

CHICAGO: The total for 12 available items went from $16.21 to $16.31, up six-tenths of 1 percent. Pork chops, orange juice and frankfurters went up; chopped chicken, detergent and tomato sauce went down; the checklist size and brand of coffee and fabric softener were unavailable at the survey store; everything else stayed the same.

DALLAS: The bill went from $20.28 to $19.81, down 2.3 percent. Coffee, towels, butter and hot dogs went up; chopped chicken, pork chops, eggs, detergent and milk went down.

DETROIT: The total for 10 available items rose 4 percent, from $16.43 to $17.09. Chopped chicken, butter, detergent and frankfurters went up; pork chops and milk went down; the checklist size and brand of orange juice, peanut butter, fabric softener and tomato sauce were temporarily unavailable at the survey store. The remaining four items were unchanged.

LOS ANGELES: The bill for 13 available items went from $18.05 to $18.42, up 2 percent. Chopped chicken, pork chops, tomato sauce and sugar went up; eggs and hot dogs went down; fabric softener was temporarily unavailable at the survey store; everything else stayed the same.

MIAMI: The total for 13 available items dropped 3.9 percent, from $19.64 to $18.87. Chopped chicken, paper towels, butter and peanut butter went up; pork chops, orange juice, coffee, eggs, detergent, tomato sauce, milk and frankfurters went down; sugar was unchanged; and the checklist size of fabric softener was unavailable at the survey store.

Dollar hits new records, gold falls

LONDON (AP) — The dollar surged ahead in early trading today, hitting new records against the French franc and Italian lire on expectations of higher U.S. interest rates.

Gold prices fell by more than seven dollars an ounce in what dealers described as "very thin and very nervous trading." Currency dealers said the dollar moved on from Friday's sharply upward trend as interest rate expectations were reinforced by the increasing U.S. money supply. Higher interest rates make dollar-denominated investments more attractive.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar rose sharply to finish 243.10 yen, compared with 241.50 on Friday. Dealers said Japanese and Southeast Asian banks bought dollars heavily.

Soviets warn West Germany

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union marked the eighth anniversary of the Helsinki final accord today by warning West Germany that its planned deployment of U.S. nuclear missiles threatens its ties with eastern Europe.

"The military danger for West Germany will increase many times," the Communist Party daily Pravda said in a front-page editorial. "It will have to look at East Germany through a thick fence of missiles."

The editorial echoed warnings by Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov when West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl visited Moscow last month.

The United States plans deployment of Pershing 2 missiles in Germany, and cruise missiles in Germany and other NATO countries starting in December if U.S.-Soviet arms control talks in Geneva fail to produce an agreement by then.

Solidarity leader returns after one month

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa returned to work today after a month's vacation that nearly cost him his shipyard job.

Walesa told The Associated Press on Sunday that Solidarity's underground coordinating committee may soon issue a communique about plans for the outlawed union's third anniversary. Today, however, he declined comment on Solidarity as he returned to his electrician's job at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk.

Walesa risked losing his job a month ago when he took an unauthorized two-week vacation. But after talks with shipyard officials, he was told he would not be fired. He was then given two more weeks' leave.

Regarding the union's anniversary, Walesa had said, "Solidarity always has celebrated the 31st of August." He helped form the union during strikes at the shipyard in 1980.

Last year Solidarity proclaimed two weeks of "visible demonstrations" that ended in nationwide protests on August 31. Solidarity's clandestine five-man "temporary coordinating committee" has been silent since the lifting of martial law and declaration of a partial amnesty July 22.

But Walesa, in a telephone interview from Gdansk, said he expected the committee to issue a communique on the anniversary "within the next few days."

About 1,000 people have been covered so far by the amnesty, which offers to not prosecute fugitive Solidarity members who turn themselves in by Oct. 31 and pledge to abide by the law.

Envoy to discuss troop withdrawal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Reagan's new Middle East envoy, Robert C. McFarlane, opened talks today on the deadlocked Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement but Syria vowed to keep its forces pitted against Israeli units in Lebanon.

McFarlane met at the presidential palace with Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem and President Amin Gemayel's national security adviser, Wadi Haddad, the state radio reported.

The radio said McFarlane would meet later with Gemayel and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan in a fresh effort to break the stalemate over foreign troop withdrawals.

Gen. John Vessey, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, met with Gemayel on Sunday night, and was scheduled to confer with Lebanese commanders today. The Beirut newspaper An Nahar said Vessey was discussing ways of strengthening Lebanon's army.

Syrian President Hafez Assad marked his country's Army Day today by vowing to keep his 50,000 troops in Lebanon until the Israeli army pulls out unconditionally.

"As long as the Israeli invasion of Lebanon continues, our armed forces will stay to confront the usurpers over Lebanese soil as part of the wider confrontation of the Arab-Israeli conflict," Assad said.

It was Army Day in Lebanon, too, and the top commander, Gen. Ibrahim Tannous, said in the order of the day to his 32,000 soldiers and officers he was confident they would extend government control beyond Beirut to the rest of Lebanon.

Chad: Libyan jets attacked outpost

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Chad says Libyan war planes have attacked the northern oasis town of Faya-Largeau and is pleading for French, U.S. and other countries to provide air support.

Libya denied raiding the key outpost, which Chad said its army recaptured from Libyan-backed rebels after a five-hour battle Saturday.

Chadian officials claimed that Soviet-built MiG-23s of the Libyan air force struck Faya-Largeau three times Sunday. Foreign Minister Idriss Misikine said Libyan planes also attacked twice during Saturday's fighting, and one jet was downed.

Battlefield reports could not be confirmed independently because journalists were not permitted to travel to the front.

However, U.S. State Department press officer Sue Pittman in Washington read an official statement which said, "Libya is using Soviet-built fighter bombers and reportedly helicopter gunships to conduct these raids."

"The Libyan bombing inside Chad constitutes a further flagrant and unprovoked outside intervention in the internal affairs of Chad and represents a dangerous escalation of the situation. The United States condemns this open aggression by Libyan armed forces," she said.

"Libya should cease its bombing raids immediately and should withdraw its military forces from Chad."

During a rally in N'Djamena, government spokesmen called on all "friendly countries."

Idriss said he delivered such a request to Claude Soubeste, France's ambassador in the Chadian capital of N'Djamena.

The French Foreign Ministry in Paris had no immediate reaction. France has a treaty with its former colony to provide military protection from outside attack, and has supplied weapons to the army led by President Hissene Habre.

However, France has turned down all requests to have its troops engage in the conflict. Chad's former president, Goukouni Oueddel, launched the rebel offensive in late June.

The United States recently agreed to supply Chad with military vehicles and other equipment, but not with combat weapons.

The official Libyan news agency JANA said "a spokesman for the Foreign Liaison Bureau today categorically denied the involvement of the Libyan Arab forces in the current fighting between the forces of the unified legitimate government and the forces of renegade Hissene Habre in northern Chad."

 August 1, 1933 — August 1, 1983

From our beginning 50 years ago, our growth has been tied to the Southwest: its people, its business and industry, its cities and schools, and most of all, its unique spirit that turns ideas into accomplishments.

We've seen many changes in the Southwest and in our industry. We've grown from a handful of people to become a leading investment banking and brokerage firm with offices from Texas to the West Coast. But through these years of growth our goals have remained the same: to provide the very finest in investment and financing ideas, and to make certain every RPR client receives our own special brand of personal service.

To all our friends and clients, and to our employees — who are our most valuable assets — we express our sincere gratitude for making the first 50 years possible. With your loyalty and confidence we look forward to another half century of progress.

Gene Beggs rolls his biplane in an aerobatic demonstration.

Airborne aerobatics

It is only when we become conscious of our part in life, however modest, that we shall be happy. Only then will we be able to live in peace and die in peace, for only this lends meaning to life and death.

— Antoine de Saint Exupery
French aviator-writer

The aviator spoke with the quiet confidence of a seasoned, peerless flier.

"Tighten the seat belt as tight as you can get it," said Gene Beggs, as he was readying his two-place Pitts Special biplane for an afternoon spin. "You literally become part of the airplane."

He climbed into the cockpit and tightly belted and harnessed himself in until he, indeed, was as much a part of the airplane as the airfoil. He made contact, turned over the 200-horsepower engine in his high-performance aerobatic aircraft. The propeller's slipstream ruffled up the air. The machine rolled forward.

He made three-point "S" turns in taxiing to the runway at Midland Regional Airport. He zigzagged, so he could see where he was going in the tail-dragger.

At the runway's threshold, Beggs revved up the engine, again checked the flight controls, magnetos, fuel and oil pressure. He increased the throttle, as he released the brakes, breezed down the runway and soared into the blue West Texas sky.

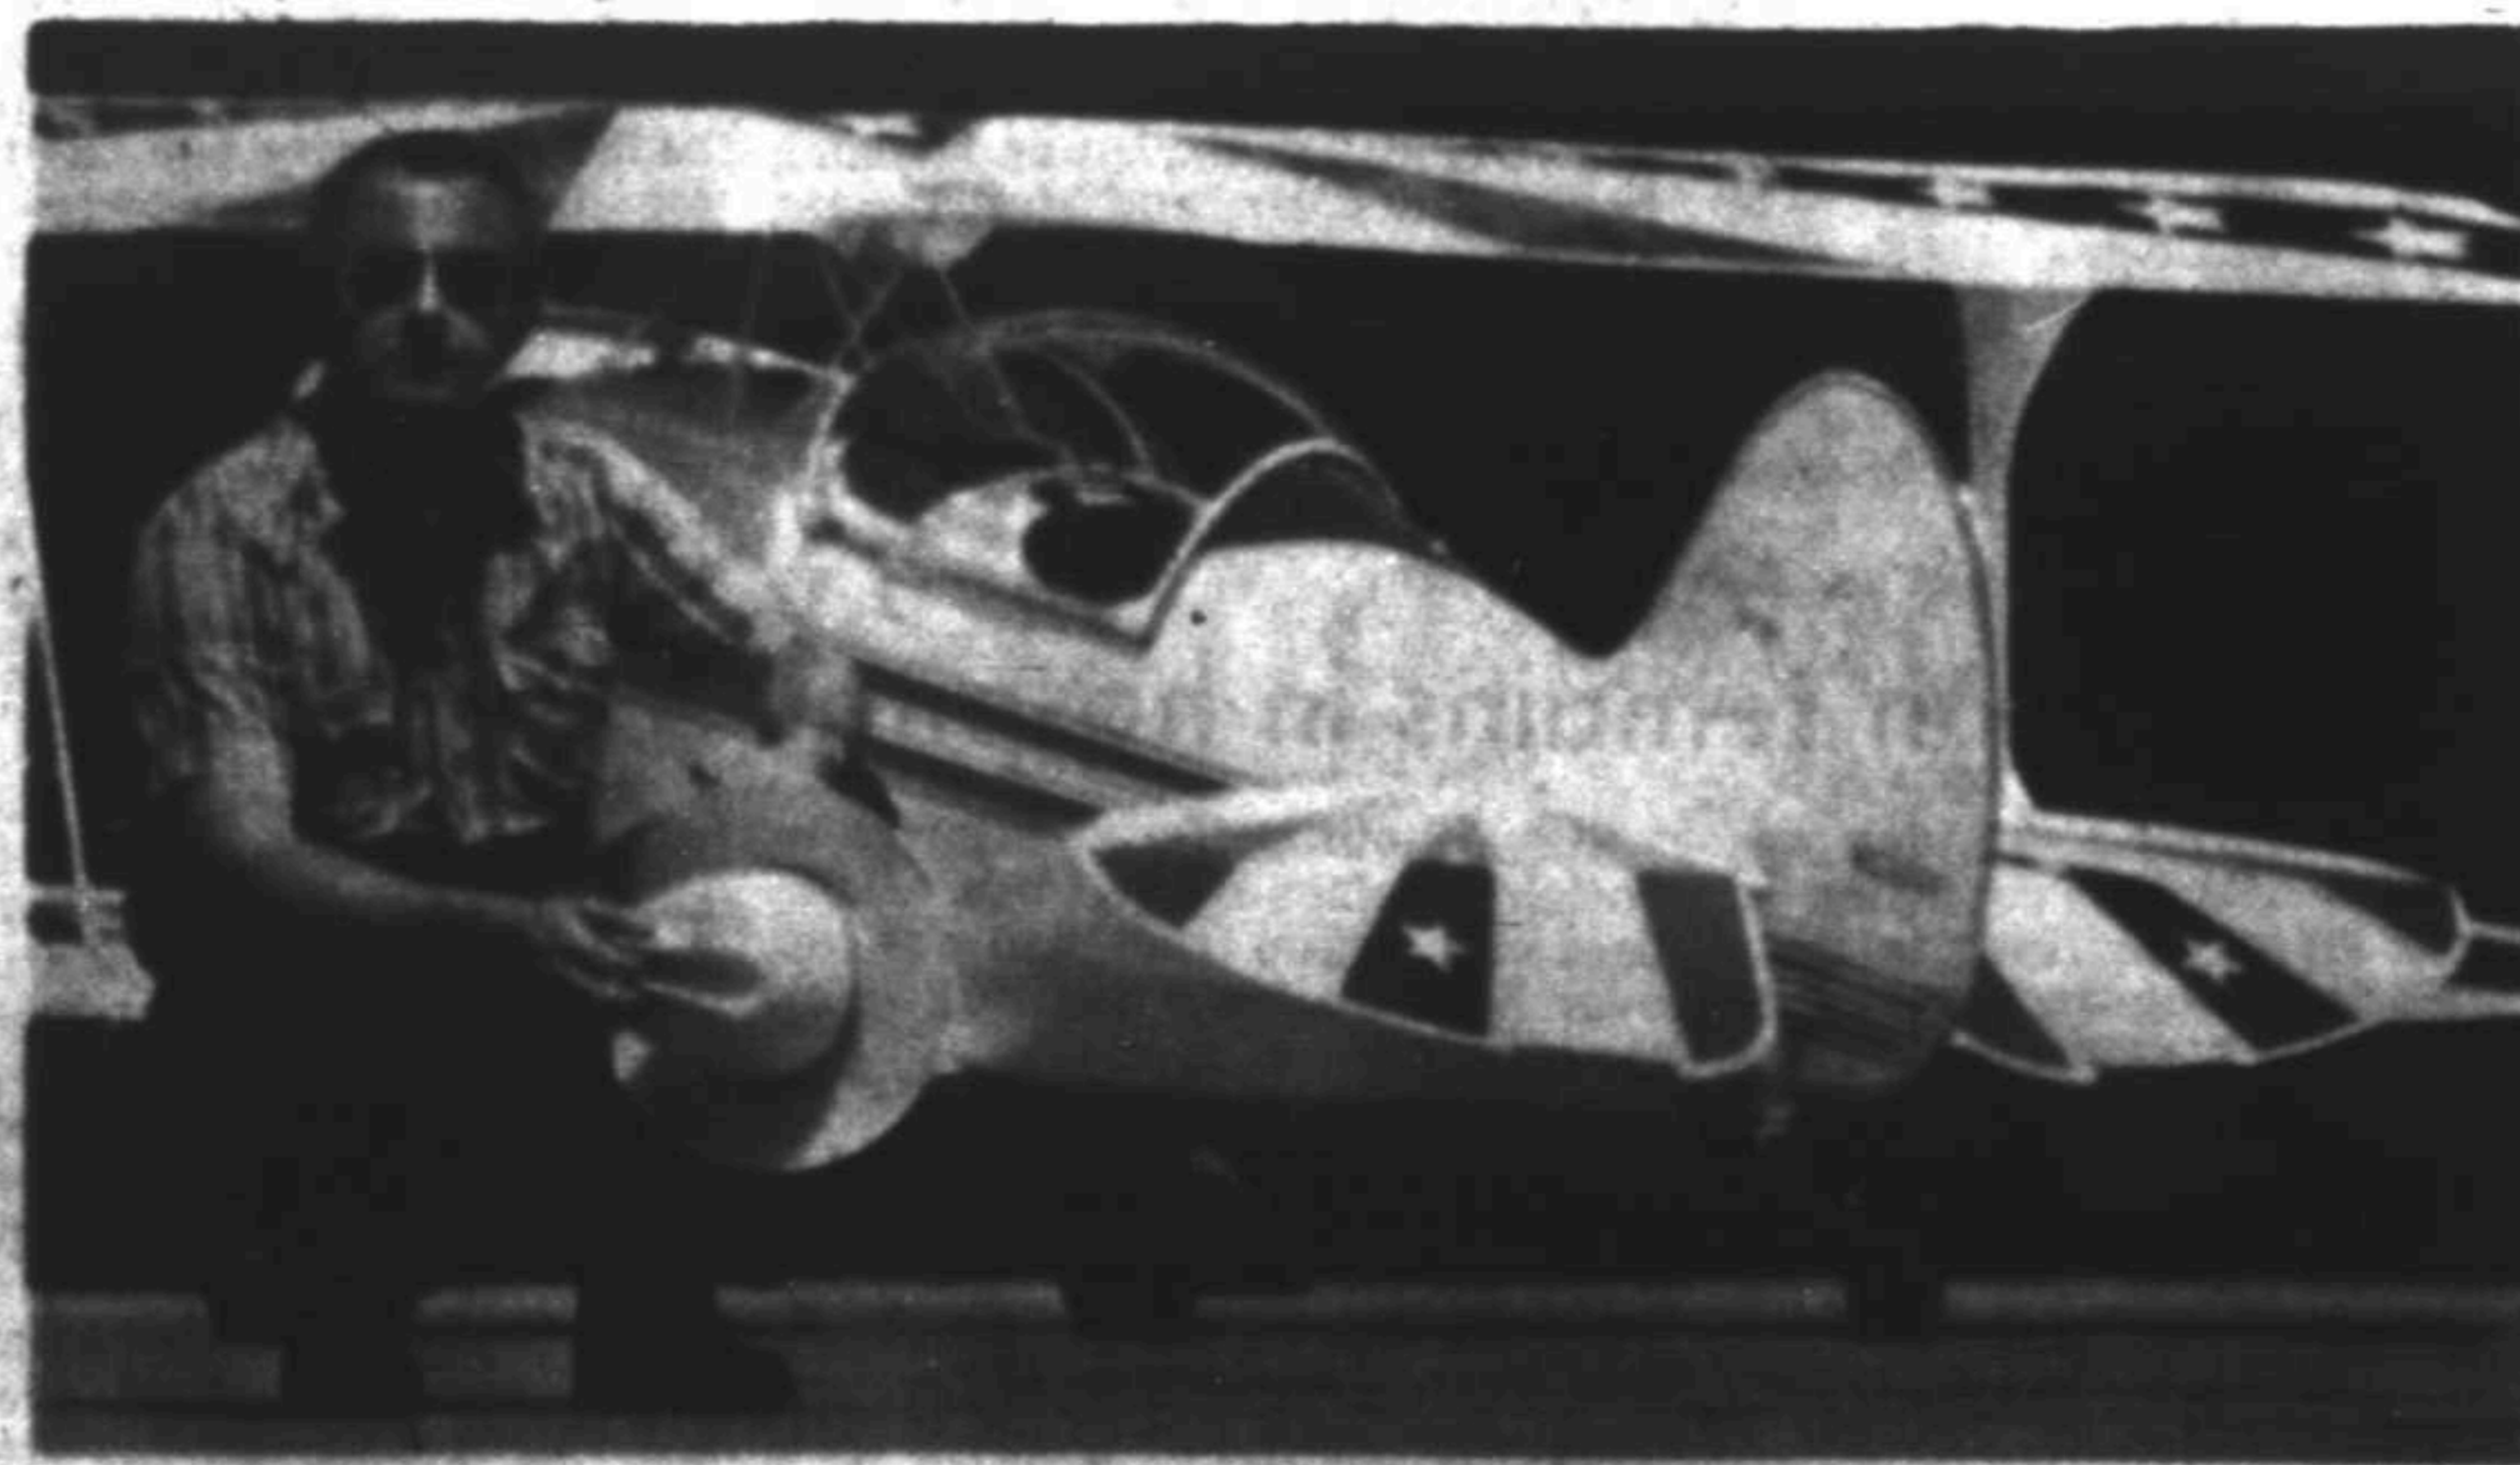

"This (Pitts) has more performance than most pilots need," a fellow pilot, Jimmy McKelvain, had said while admiring the biplane.

Aerobatics is the ultimate form of flying, says Gene Beggs, whose passion is flying most anyway but straight and level.

Gene Beggs says the Pitts Special biplane dominates unlimited aerobatic competition as well as being "one of the most exciting airplanes in the world to fly."

Air about egrets far from 'delicate'

AVINGER, Texas (AP) — William Shakespeare wrote of birds, "The guests of summer, where they most breed and haunt, I have observed the air is delicate." The Bard had not been to Avinger.

A special breed of waterfowl has descended on this Northeast Texas town where birds now outnumber humans 40 to one. Since last April, 35,000 cattle egrets, small white herons, have taken over two acres on Avinger's edge and built a rookery "to breed and haunt." They're making an awful mess.

"These birds stink, they're noisy and they pose a threat to community health," said Marvin Parvino, mayor of this town of 600.

Parvino has learned the law protects birds, but who, he asks, is there to protect Avinger from the birds.

"If you want to know what I think, I think the government cares more about these birds than people," he said.

Egrets and almost all non-game birds are sheltered by two international treaties, as well as federal and state laws. James Foster, a game warden in nearby Linden, said the egrets are protected because they are migratory.

Federal and state authorities contacted by the mayor knew the law; the birds go where they please and those harassing birds get fined. But no one knew why the egrets picked Avinger to nest or how long they planned to stay.

The only consolation, officials said, is that Avinger's not alone. Waco, Mexia, Fort Worth and other Texas towns have all sought help from authorities in dealing with the birds.

"The Fish and Wildlife Agency is aware of the problem," Interior

Department spokesman Doug Baldwin said Sunday in Washington. "Our scientists will be working with state and local officials in seeking non-lethal means of discouraging the birds from remaining there."

Such measures might include loud noises, imitating egret distress cries and scarecrows, he said.

Not knowing how long they'll have the messy guests, some Avinger residents fear the worst.

"The government says the birds will go to Mexico sometime this fall," said Gladys Smith, whose house is next to the rookery. "But what I want to know is, how do they know when they're in Mexico? Maybe they think they're in Mexico now."

State health officials admit disease is possible any place wild animals gather, but they say no serious illness attributable to egrets has been confirmed. They haven't talked to Mrs. Smith.

Since June she has suffered from a respiratory infection she blames on the birds. Many of her neighbors have taken flight, afraid the birds will make them sick, but Smith says she's too old to move.

Experts from Cass County's health department, Texas Parks and Wildlife, U.S. Fish and Wildlife, a state representative and congressman have seen the site, but none seemed alarmed at the possible threat the birds pose to public health, Parvino said. He believes anyone who visits the rookery and doesn't think the site breeds disease is featherbrained.

It's easy to see why. The rookery is ankle-deep in bird droppings, eggs fall from the trees like leaves and shrubbery is coated in rotting yolks. Dead baby birds litter the ground.

Refugee's killer still unknown

DALLAS (AP) — A Cambodian refugee who died of head injuries inflicted by a bat-wielding man may have been killed by the same man who has attacked other refugees from the Southeast Asian nation, police say.

An Pech, 47, who once fought as a second lieutenant in the Cambodian army, died Friday, eight days after his skull was fractured as he sat eating dinner on the front yard of his apartment building.

Police say they have no leads in Pech's death, the second random killing of a Cambodian in Dallas in a year, but believe the attack might have been done by a man who has gone after other Cambodians in the neighborhood.

Since the July 21 attack on Pech, six of the 10 Cambodian families in Pech's apartment building have moved.

"No one is sure why this is happening," said a friend of Pech's, who asked that his name not be used.

"The police do not know what to tell us. What do the police do? We wonder. Many people already have moved to California instead of Dallas. It is better there," the friend said.

An estimated 15,000 Southeast Asian refugees live in Dallas, most of them Vietnamese. Cambodians began arriving in large numbers in 1979; last year, 300 to 400 settled here.

Pech had been in the United States since 1974 when his government sent him to the University of Texas at Austin. After communists took control of Cambodia less than a year later, he moved to San Antonio and settled in Dallas in 1976.

Police investigate local burglaries

Midland police are investigating the burglary of a residence in which almost $2,000 worth of jewelry, a camera and radio were taken late Saturday night or early Sunday morning.

Alice Whitehead of 1305 N. Colorado reported the burglary of her residence at 2:30 a.m. Sunday. Entry apparently was gained through a south bedroom window. Jewelry worth $1,000, a radio valued at $600 and a 35mm camera brought the loss to a total of $1,775.

Also reported early Sunday morning was the burglary of a residence occupied by Albert Kelly, Route 2 Box 142-B. Kelly reported about $60 in currency, two shotguns, a rifle and two gold necklaces were taken. Reported at 2:35 a.m., the loss was valued at $1,564.

The Fish Market, No. 31 Plaza Center, was burglarized sometime between 11:50 p.m. Saturday and 3 a.m. Sunday, according to police reports. With the owner out of town, police were unable to determine if anything was missing. A security guard had checked the building at 10 p.m. and a policeman checked it at 11:50 p.m. Saturday. Entry apparently was gained by breaking a sliding glass door on the south.

A television set, shotgun, jewelry and a pocket knife, valued at a total of $1,210, were reported missing by Victor Cano of 601 S. I St. According to police reports, Cano's residence apparently was entered by prying open a north bedroom window. The burglary took place between 8 p.m. and 11:43 p.m. Sunday.

William L. Card Jr. of 2812 Frontier reported $1,156 worth of items missing from his home at 6:50 p.m. Sunday. The burglary took place between 7 a.m. and 6:45 p.m. Sunday. About $25 worth of change, jewelry, video games and tapes, and a television remote control box were taken.

Midland girl dies in traffic mishap

ODESSA — A 7-year-old Midland girl was killed shortly after noon Saturday when she was thrown from a pickup which then rolled over her in an accident on Interstate 20.

Jody O'Gin Rose, who was riding in the cab with four other Midlanders at the time, died at 12:50 p.m. near the intersection of Rochester Street and Pool Road, according to a spokeswoman at Odessa Medical Center Hospital. Police reports do not indicate where the girl died or if a justice of the peace ruled in the death. Her body was taken to Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home and later transferred to Kimbrough Funeral Home in Cisco for funeral services.

According to Lt. Rusty Baker, public information officer for the Odessa Police Department, Denise Marie McConnell, 25, of Midland, was driving a pickup in the westbound lane of Interstate 20 when she heard a noise in the bed of the vehicle. As she turned to look back, she apparently veered into the shoulder on the left side of the road. She apparently "overcompensated" and turned the pickup too far to the right, hitting a reflector pole and traveling into the bar ditch on the north side of the highway. The vehicle overturned 1 1/2 times. The 7-year-old was thrown from the vehicle, which rolled over her, Baker said.

The other passengers were taken to Odessa Medical Center where Linda Gooden, 25, and Robert Thomas Zukevich, 5, were treated and released. Ms. McConnell and Diana Hollis, 1, were listed in stable condition this morning.

The address of all five passengers was listed as P.O. Box 11101, Midland.

Teen-ager fights cerebral palsy and wins

FORT WORTH (AP) — In elementary school, Kim Davis endured taunts from classmates who called her clumsy and "a flunker." Later came leg surgery and arm surgery and therapy and the frustration that goes with fighting a condition with no known cure.

"In P.E., I was always the last one when we'd run the 500," she says. "I don't have many good memories from elementary school and junior high. When people said things it hurt. But by the 10th grade, I could run up and down the stairs. From the 10th grade on, those are the best years. I've had. Now, the only time I really notice it is at school."

"It" is cerebral palsy, a condition that in Miss Davis' case is congenital. "It" is damage to the left hemisphere of the brain that translates into limited control over her right arm and leg.

And "it" belies what Miss Davis is today: a bright 18-year-old Arlington High School senior-to-be with hazel eyes and chestnut hair. A confident woman who talks about prospective boyfriends and plans for college and a career. An athlete.

And when the 1983 National Cerebral Palsy games opened Saturday, she carried the ritual torch to open the six-day event at Amon Carter Stadium on the Texas Christian University campus.

She also is competing in the shot put, the discus, the 100-yard dash and the 800-yard relay. She is, she says, within three inches of the world CP record for the shot put and within about three feet of the world mark for the discus.

Champion looks inside himself while perfecting aerobatics

By ED TODD Staff Writer

Gene Beggs is a competitor who looks into himself and not at the other fliers when he strives for perfection in aerobatics.

"When you get right down to it," he said, "there's nobody out there to hurt you, help you or hinder you, or put you under pressure but you."

Beggs, a national aerobatic champion and a member of the five-pilot United States World Aerobatic Team, will be competing for the world championship in aerobatics in July 1984 in Hungary.

In reaching his goal, the aviator, who is based at Midland Regional Airport, has won a score of championships and laurels in International Aerobatic Club-sanctioned contests. His winnings include:

UNLIMITED

—First place in unlimited IAC regional competition: Rocky Mountain Aerobatics, Longmont, Colo., 1981; Copperstate Aerobatics, Phoenix, Ariz., 1982 and 1983; Lone Star Aerobatics, McKinney, Texas, 1983.

—Second in regional IAC unlimited competition: Lone Star Aerobatics, 1980 and 1982.

—Second in IAC unlimited aerobatics, Fond du Lac, Wis., 1982.

—Third in U.S. National Aerobatic Championship competition at Sherman, Texas, 1982. This placing put Beggs on the U.S. World Aerobatic Team. "I hope this year I win No. 1" in the national championship competition in Arizona in October.

—Third in unlimited in the Kansas City Aerobatics, 1980. "This was my first year of unlimited competition."

ADVANCED

—First place in advanced IAC competition: Rocky Mountain, 1979; IAC at Fond du Lac, 1979; U.S. National Aerobatic champion, 1979.

INTERMEDIATE

—First place in U.S. National Aerobatic Championship competition, 1978.

—First in Copperstate Aerobatic competition, 1978.

—Second place in IAC competition at Fond du Lac, 1978.

—Third in Lone Star competition, 1978.

SPORTSMAN

—Second place in U.S. National Aerobatics, 1978.

—Third place at IAC competition at Fond du Lac, 1978. "That was the first trophy I ever won."

Aviator practices aerobatics in blue skies of West Texas

Beggs was airborne and at home in the air in his favorite flying machine.

He is happy aloft.

"The Pitts Special is one of the most exciting airplanes in the world to fly," said the unassuming, reticent aviator. "It's unlimited. It won't check out (break up) as soon as you will." Though vulnerable on the ground, "in the air, it's virtually indestructible from air loads."

TO BEGGS, FLYING is an art.

"Aerobatics is the ultimate form of flying," the top-flight flier said. "It enables you to express yourself and to experience freedom in ways others do in gymnastics, dancing, figure-skating, writing poetry, painting. Aerobatics is my way of expressing myself...It's my way of showing what my mind has learned to do with the airplane. It's a form of aerial ballet."

At 5,000 feet over the West Texas plains, Beggs put the flashy red-white-and-blue painted aircraft through a series of maneuvers, including loops, rolls and inverted flying.

He spends more hours flying upside down, sideways, inside, outside, up and down than most pilots do straight and level.

His penchant is aerial ballet.

Beggs, at 39, is a national champion bound for world aerobatic flying honors. He is one of five members of the United States World Aerobatic Team, which will compete in the World Aerobatic Championships in Hungary in July 1984.

Beggs has won championship contests sanctioned by the International Aerobatic Club (IAC) since the mid-1970s. He earned those laurels in his single-engine Pitts, which is stressed for nine positive Gs and nine negative Gs. With its symmetrical wings, the Pitts "will fly just as well inverted as it will right-side up."

Beggs' earlier IAC championships were in his 180-horsepower hand-made Pitts S-1S, which also won him the Wright Brothers trophy for the best Pitts in the United States in 1981. His latter-day championships were in another single-seater, his more powerful Pitts Special S-1T. He uses the two-place Pitts for instructing in aerobatics, which he recommends for any safety-conscious flier.

BEGGS, WHOSE students hail from Texas to

In addition, Beggs won the Keith Allan Memorial Trophy for best four-minute free-style flight in 1982.

In the world championship, Beggs will be flying through 19 compulsory maneuvers, two free-style maneuvers and one "unknown" maneuver.

"That one we are not permitted to practice," Beggs said. "We fly off the sequence card."

In readying for the championship, Beggs flies and practices daily, keeps physically fit by exercise, and tries not to get too tired.

"That's the way you keep from getting tense — by practicing. I don't get nervous, but I will get to the point I won't socialize with anybody I have to compete against." Such fraternization may "blow your concentration," he said.

"It's OK to be the nice guy," Beggs reasoned. "But you can talk yourself out of it (the championship). You should never be concerned about anyone else's accomplishments. You can't better yourself by thinking about the others."

Still, Beggs allowed, "I have learned a tremendous amount from the other competitors."

In the 1984 World Championships, the U.S. team will be vying against the best aerobatics fliers from the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, West Germany, Italy, France, Australia, England, Spain, Canada and Switzerland.

The Americans and their aerobatics planes will be flown to Europe by a Lufthansa-German Airlines Boeing 747.

On the United States team are:

—Leo Loudenslager, 39, of Sussex, N.J. "He's the man I've got to beat," said Beggs. Loudenslager, an American Airlines captain, has won the national championships seven times. He flies a mid-wing Laser 200.

—Henry Haigh, 58, a retired industrialist from Howell, Mich. Haigh has won the national championship once. He flies the SuperStar monoplane.

—Gene Beggs, 39, of Odessa. Beggs, a flying instructor, flies the Pitts and is the newcomer on the team.

—Gene Soucy, 35, of the Dallas area. Soucy, an airline pilot, is a three-time winner of the national aerobatics. He flies the biwing Christen Eagle.

—Tom Collier, 39, of Atlanta, Ga. Collier, a Delta Airlines captain, flies a Pitts.

Beggs is comfortable in his spiffy biplane.

"The Pitts has literally dominated the sport of aerobatics since it came out in 1947," he said. "I set out a long time ago in my aviation career to reach the top. At times, I sense utter frustration and at other times I experience sheer ecstasy when I've won..."

Canada, offers three basic courses:

—Basic aerobatics: Spins, loops, rolls.

—Intermediate aerobatics: Spins, loops, rolls, hammerhead stalls, Immelmann turns, snap rolls and four-point hesitation rolls.

—Advance aerobatics: Outside maneuvers, loops, rolls and spins, inverted spins, snap rolls.

Why put an airplane through stressful exercises?

"Aerobatics is a lot of fun," said Beggs, who has logged more than 14,000 hours as pilot-in-command in his 15 years of flying. Aerobatic training makes for a safer, more proficient flier who will know how to react in emergency situations.

"It's also a good safety course. The pilot learns the three axes of control — pitch, roll and yaw. He will learn how to enter and recover from spins."

Though aerobatic flying is not a requirement for gaining a pilot's license, Beggs said a pilot who knows the basics of aerobatics would be a safer pilot.

THE PILOT of a light aircraft caught up in the wake turbulence of a larger aircraft suddenly could find himself confused and disoriented and the airplane stalled out and spinning. The pilot and airplane could be earthbound and doomed.

"Those things are just like a tornado," he said, "and hang around 10 minutes" after the larger aircraft, such as a jet airliner or a corporate jet, has moved on.

"It can abruptly roll the airplane."

How do the plane and pilot recover?

"The reaction of most inexperienced pilots without any aerobatic background would be, if rolled upside down, to pull back on the control stick." Such an action might, if the airplane already is low, put the aircraft and pilot permanently into the ground.

"Just about any airplane will spin," said Beggs. "All you have to do is stall it out, and if the pilot doesn't know what's happening, he'll very likely spin."

"About every airplane will come out of a spin if you release the controls."

For pilots not interested in pursuing aerobatic excellence, a basic course in aerobatic flying is flying insurance.

"It just adds a lot to a pilot's confidence, capability and safety."

The CP Games, at this point, are more of a grassroots project in terms of funding — Miller Lite nationally, and the Junior League of Fort Worth locally.

The national games are sponsored jointly by the Fort Worth Parks and Recreation Department and United Cerebral Palsy of Tarrant County.

The logistics are not simple with an event that involves more than 2,150 people, including coaches, officials and "team care volunteers."

DEATHS

L.D. Whigham

Services for L.D. Whigham, 50, of 300 Cloud will be at 11 a.m. Tuesday at Newbie W. Ellis Funeral Home with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be at Resthaven Memorial Park with military services conducted by the American Legion Post No. 19.

Whigham died Thursday at his home.

Pallbearers will be Pete Henderson, Hobby Hudson, A.F. Arron, Terry Heense, Don McMillan and Dan Eversole.

Honorary pallbearers will be members of American Legion Post No. 19, Shriners and VFW Post No. 4149.

Jody O'Gin Rose

CISCO — Services for Jody O'Gin Rose, 7, of Smith Traller Park in Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday at Eastside Baptist Church in Cisco. Burial will be in Pleasant Hills Cemetery, directed by Kimbrough Funeral Home of Cisco.

She died Saturday afternoon from injuries suffered in a one-vehicle rollover on Interstate 20, off the intersection of Rochester Street and Pool Road.

She was born Aug. 21, 1975, in Fort Stockton.

Survivors include her parents, Linda Jo Hollis of Midland and Jimmie Earl Rose.

Winnie Childers

ODESSA — Services for Winnie Lou Childers, 53, of Odessa, mother of Garland Childers and Don Childers, both of Midland, are pending under the direction of Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home in Odessa.

Mrs. Childers died this morning at an Odessa hospital.

She was born Oct. 7, 1929, in Sweetwater. She moved to Odessa in 1953 from Sweetwater. She was married to G.W. Childers Nov. 27, 1949, in Big Spring. She was a housewife.

Survivors include her husband, two other sons, a brother, four sisters and six grandchildren.

Mary Cavanaugh

Services for Mary Jane Cavanaugh, 47, of 1905 Maberry, will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the Sanctuary of First Baptist Church with Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Newbie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Cavanaugh died suddenly Sunday at her lake home at Granite Shoals.

She was born March 19, 1936, in Uvalde where she grew up. She was graduated from Baylor University in 1956 and was married to Dr. Herbert R. Cavanaugh that year. When he was discharged from the Air Force they moved to Chapel Hill, N.C., where she taught school. They moved to League City and, in 1971, came to Midland. She was a member of First Baptist Church, Medical Auxiliary, Contemporary Study Club, Rake and Spade Garden Club, Midland Symphony Guild, Midland Tennis Association and Women's Auxiliary of the Texas Wing of the Confederate Air Force.

Survivors include her husband, three sons, John Winn Cavanaugh, James Stephen Cavanaugh and Herbert Cavanaugh Jr., all of Midland; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Stephens of Uvalde; and a brother, Sam Stephens of Uvalde.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Scholarship Fund of the Midland County Medical Auxiliary.

Manuel Lopez

BIG SPRING — Services for Manuel "Nino" Lopez Sr., 27, of Big Spring are pending at Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

He died Saturday morning in Big Spring.

Edna Heffington

BIG SPRING — Services for Edna Mae Heffington, 66, of Big Spring will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Funeral Home. Burial will be in Mount Olive Memorial Park.

She died Saturday in Big Spring. Ms. Heffington was a Baptist and a resident of Big Spring for 55 years.

E.B. Thorpe Sr.

BIG SPRING — Services for E.B. Thorpe Sr., 77, of Big Spring, will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with Dr. Phillip McCleendon officiating. Burial will be in Memorial Park.

He died Sunday in a Big Spring hospital.

Thorpe was born Dec. 27, 1905, in Paris. He married Robbie Corder July 30, 1928, in Anson. He worked in West Texas for Continental Oil Co. for 37 years, retiring in 1967. He was involved in ranching and later became active in the postal service at Junction. He was a member of the Volunteer Game Warden Association. He was a Baptist.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Don and Jack Thorpe, both of Big Spring; two daughters, Mrs. Wes (Dorcas) Doss Pearce of Big Spring, and Mrs. Doug (Norma Jean) Aston of Buchanan Dam; three brothers, the Rev. Curtis Thorpe and W.R. Thorpe, both of Odessa, and Samuel Thorpe of Kermit; three sisters, Evelyn Lytle of Austin, Fae Ingram of Sugarland and Mary Spencer of Hayward, Calif.; 11 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren.

Big Lake man remains in hospital

A 26-year-old Big Lake man was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning following an automobile accident which occurred on the south service road of Interstate 20 near Loop 200 about 9 p.m. Saturday.

Steve Stout suffered injuries to both feet after he fell out of the back of a pickup truck and was run over by a trailer being pulled by the pickup.

The driver, Paul Akin of Big Lake, was uninjured.

And when the 1983 National Cerebral Palsy games opened Saturday, she carried the ritual torch to open the six-day event at Amon Carter Stadium on the Texas Christian University campus.

She also is competing in the shot put, the discus, the 100-yard dash and the 800-yard relay. She is, she says, within three inches of the world CP record for the shot put and within about three feet of the world mark for the discus.

No suspects arrested in death

BIG SPRING — No suspects had been arrested by early this morning in connection with the Saturday stabbing death of Manuel "Nino" Lopez, 27, of Big Spring.

Responding to a disturbance call at 1517-B Wood St. at 2:30 a.m. Saturday, police officers found Lopez dead in the front yard.

He was pronounced dead at the scene by Municipal Judge Melvin Darratt of Big Spring.

Police detectives reportedly are seeking three suspects.

'Growing up' attitude resisted for many reasons

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO - We all know people who don't grow up. The guy who goes through a "mid-life crisis," dumps his wife of 20 years, moves into a snazzy apartment, starts dressing like a 20-year-old and going out with one. The woman who raised four children and managed a household for 20 years, but refuses to become involved in the family finances. She still acts like a little girl around her husband, her parents and even her sons when they get old enough.

There are people who approach their 40s and 50s with a sense of horror and grim resignation. They believe in the fantasy of Peter Pan, though in real life the slight greenish tint would be 81 and gray now, still asking Tinkerbell to sprinkle more magic dust.

Even though being grown up means something different to each person, most people know when they are. Although using different words, the definitions from psychologists, social workers, psychiatrists and other therapists are simple and revolve around the same general idea.

"Growing up is feeling that you can look at the world and say, 'I am in charge of me,'" explains Sophie Van Bourg, 60, a marriage and family counselor. "It's saying, 'There are some things I can't change in the world, but in what I can change, I've got options and choices.'"

"Feeling grown up is feeling more liberated," says George Silberchatz, 33, a hospital psychologist and co-director with psychologist John Curtis of a three-year federally-funded project of brief psychotherapy with older adults. "In many respects, there's a much greater freedom in working toward one's own destiny."

When people don't feel grown up, they maintain strong symbiotic ties to their parents, says Mary Goulding, a clinical social worker and co-director with psychiatrist Robert Goulding of the Western Institute of Group and Family Therapy. "They still call their parents with a problem, the parents try to solve it, the child still feels inferior, and the parents still have their old job of being in charge."

If a person doesn't have parents around, childish behavior may be directed at others. "A person plays games with his or her spouse," says Robert Goulding, "and continues the same kind of experience they had as kids" by putting a spouse in the parents' place.

One reason why many 30- and 40-year-olds say they don't want to grow up is because their models were so negative. Who wants to become an adult if you see your parents only as serious, burdened people with no sense of the joy of living? Who wants to get older when your mother tells you that life is 90 percent pain and 10 percent pleasure?

"The image is so full of drudgery for them," says Ellyn Bader, 35, a psychologist and member of Stanford University's clinical faculty. She has clients in their 60s who say they don't feel grown up. "Being a child is a more desirable position."

In primitive cultures and in some isolated societies today, growing up is more simply defined, with a ceremonial rite of passage that may last only a few hours. But Western culture gives more permission for stringing out the process of becoming an adult, says Bader. Leaving home may be the beginning step, but going into the Army, to college, or into a marriage is just moving into another protected environment that doesn't demand much responsibility.

Let's not forget economic conditions," says Van Bourg. "For post-war babies, the sky was the limit." Parents who had come from poor homes prospered in the 1950s. The children were given everything that was denied the parents when they were young. Often, the lesson of responsibility, learned best in the form of a job, was one thing they weren't given.

Instead of comparing adulthood to stepping from a child's position over an invisible line to a position of maturity, growing up is more like trekking up a mountain for the first time. You drive to the base camp in your parents' car, get out and begin climbing - but not straight up. You zig-zag. At times you get distracted by one part of the mountain and forget your goal. Some people tire and decide it's easier to go back down. They surmise that the view from the summit probably can't be much better than from a point three-quarters of the way up. Those who continue can imagine some of the feelings and the sights that await them, but they know they've gotten to the top only when they get there and see the world from an entirely new perspective.

Many people never get to the summit, never experience the feeling of freedom, wonder, joy and peacefulness, because they're afraid to give up feelings they never got enough of when they were children. Bader describes a client: "She never was close to her mother. She feels as if the little bit of closeness she gets now she would have to give up if she grows up."

In their book, "Changing Lives Through Redecision therapy," Robert and Mary Goulding describe another reason people shun adulthood. Through years of working with clients, they found that "people who don't want to grow up got injunctions not to grow up."

"It was their parents' messages."

Three-year-old Robbie Driver made his first attempt at fishing with his grandfather, Robert Dorton, showing him the ropes. The two were fishing in Watterson Lake, which had just been stocked with 1,000 rainbow trout.

Careless car owners leave easy prey for pros

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Lock your car and take the key.

That's the easiest way to prevent someone from stealing your car, says an expert in the car security field. Yet nearly 80 percent of the more than 1 million cars stolen each year in this country are easy prey because owners carelessly leave the keys in the ignition or don't lock the door, he notes.

But experienced professionals can make a car vanish, with little chance of getting caught and at considerable profit, adds Donald Baker, director of loss prevention and security at National Car Rental System headquartered in Minneapolis.

"A skilled thief can break into a car in 40 seconds," he warns. Although there are no foolproof methods for preventing a car from being stolen, Baker offers some tips to slow a thief down, which are included in a booklet the company has compiled:

- Lock your car and take the keys with you.
- Never leave your car running unattended to warm it up or even

- dash into a store.
- Be sure to close all windows tightly.
- Park in well-lighted areas, under street lights or in front of a brightly lit building.
- If you park on the street, turn your car wheels sharply to the right or left to prevent towing. For cars with four-wheel drive, pull on the emergency brake, and place the car in "park," which locks all wheels.
- Park in a locked garage whenever possible. If you park on the street every day be sure not to leave the car in the same place. Try to park in the middle of the block to make towing more difficult.
- If you park in a lot, leave only the ignition key with the attendant. Make sure the key numbers do not appear on the key you leave, since thieves can readily duplicate a key.
- Don't leave an extra set of keys in a "secret" hiding place. Thieves usually check the visors, ashtrays, under the floor mats, and fenders.
- Engrave the vehicle identification number in hard-to-find places which will make it easier to identify your car if it is stolen.

- Keep your license and registration with you and not in the car, unless required to do so by state law. Many who have their cars stolen find themselves victims of burglaries as well.
- Owners of luxury cars, expensive sports cars and specialty vehicles run a greater risk of having their cars stolen, Baker points out. He suggests that owners consider installing anti-theft devices to prevent theft or at least hinder the thief's ability to enter, start or drive the car away.
- Devices range from a noisy alarm that goes off if the doors are opened, to hidden cut-off switches on the ignition or fuel line. A more expensive system usually means better protection. More important is learning how to use such a device and making it an integral part of your driving habits.
- Four basic types of devices are available. Some owners even install their own brand of deterrent device to give added protection, since the system may be unfamiliar to a thief:
- Doors and parts locks, which

- discourage looters and strippers as well as drive-away thieves.
- Reinforcers for ignition locks, which also disable the steering, transmission or both.
- Car stoppers, which kill the ignition or block the fuel line before or after a thief hot-wires your car or starts it with a duplicate key.
- Alarms that are triggered in a variety of ways such as unauthorized entry, wheel-jacking or a towing attempt.
- If your car is stolen, promptly report the crime to the police and to your insurance agent. You should jot down such information as year, make, vehicle identification number, model and license plate number, and keep it in a safe place, so you can refer to it if your car is stolen, Baker advises.

Children suffer from domestic violence

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

DENVER - On the morning of June 6, 1982, Virginia and Archie Calvaresi were getting ready to attend Mass. Someone knocked at the door.

Virginia, a 65-year-old grandmother, opened the door to face two Arvada, Colo., police detectives. They had terrible news.

Early that morning, their 30-year-old daughter, Charleen Hofer, had been murdered, shot to death in bed by her fiance. And, waiting outside in the police car - still wearing their pajamas - were the murdered woman's two young sons, sleepy and bewildered from the hours just spent at the police station.

The children do see it (the crime), they do recognize it, they do remember it - they know what's going on. And sometimes they're screwed up for the rest of their lives," he said. "Parents just don't realize what they do to the kids when something like this happens."

In Jefferson County, for example, children removed from the scene of a violent crime in the home generally are placed in temporary foster homes until more permanent arrangements can be made, Nadeau said. In Denver, on the other hand, the Department of Social Services has a 24-hour family crisis center, which houses the children temporarily, said center director Jerry Paulsen.

IN BOTH JURISDICTIONS, the children generally wend their way into relatives' care - although fights often ensue, Paulsen said, with the children once again dropped onto the battlefield.

In the case of Charleen Hofer's young children, the two were split up, with each going to live with their natural fathers, Virginia Calvaresi said. Garrett, now 5, spent about 10 months with his grandparents before moving in with his father in Denver; Travis, 14, has been in Evanston, Wyo., since his mother's funeral.

On the night Phillip Peterson killed the boys' mother - Peterson's fiancee and housemate - both Garrett and Travis had been asleep in a nearby bedroom. Peterson, 47, fired four shots into Hofer's head and neck with a .22 caliber rifle. He later said he was depressed over his health, his unemployment and a crumbling relationship with Hofer, who he suspected was seeing another man.

But minutes before the shooting, Peterson reportedly tiptoed to the children's room and shut their door so they would not hear the gunfire, according to Arvada police detective Dale Jones. In fact, the night before the murder, Peterson tested the rifle in the garage to see how loud it was, later telling police he had not wanted to wake the kids, Jones said.

Last December, Peterson was convicted of first degree murder in District Court in Golden and sentenced to life in prison.

Sadly, many such murders take place when children are present - perhaps even watching. "If it's going to go down, it's going to go down - whether the kids are at home or not," said Jack Byron, Jefferson County senior deputy district attorney.

BYRON IS PROSECUTING the case of Joachim "Jock" Niemand, an 11-year veteran of the Denver police force, accused of killing his wife and her lover last December in the Niemand home. At the time of the shooting Dec. 24, all five children - ranging in age from 4 to 11 - were asleep upstairs. Their 32-year-old mother, Sandra Niemand, was slain at the foot of the stairs and, since the body could not be moved, the children were carried out with their eyes shielded and heads covered with blankets, Byron said.

IN YET ANOTHER case in Jefferson County, a 23-year-old divorcee, Cynthia McQueen, was stabbed repeatedly and decapitated, allegedly by boyfriend Phillip Gallmanis, 20. McQueen reportedly had wanted to end their relationship.

On April 20, the day Cynthia McQueen was murdered, a coworker called her apartment to see why she had not arrived at work. McQueen's 3-year-old daughter answered the phone, reportedly telling the caller:

"Mommy's sleeping and she's sick. Mommy's head's broken. There's blood dripping down the wall. Mommy's scared."

In the one-bedroom apartment, detectives discovered the little girl, her 1-year-old brother, and McQueen's body. Court records indicated the little girl saw the slaying. The child drew a picture showing an outline of her mother's body with a circle off to the side. The circle, she told police, was "Mommy's head."

Gallmanis has been charged with first degree murder; he recently pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity. The sanity trial is set to

Aging doesn't mean mental impairment

WASHINGTON (AP) - As the lifespan continues to increase, it is important that Americans better understand the aging process, says Jack Osofsky, executive director of the National Council On The Aging.

"It is a universal myth of aging that symptoms of mental deterioration automatically accompany old age," says Osofsky. "That is just not the case; and, consequently, thousands of elderly people may not be receiving the kind of help that can mean a more comfortable, productive life."

He cites a recent nationwide survey by Sandoz Inc., a pharmaceutical firm involved in geriatric research, that showed that almost 45 percent of respondents believe that "senility," which they define in various ways, is a natural part of aging - like gray hair.

"Many of the symptoms which people define as senility, such as memory loss, confusion and personality changes, are attributable to a variety of causes, most of which can be treated," Osofsky points out.

The survey also shows that the U.S. population believes senility is just hardening of arteries in the brain and that nothing can be done to help preserve alertness and improve memory lapses," he adds.

"The fact is, senility doesn't always have to happen. It is the exception rather than the rule and the majority of people who survive into old age never experience significant memory loss, confusion, disorientation, personality changes or other symptoms.

"Even those estimated 5 to 6 percent of the 22 million people in the over-65 population who do suffer from severe intellectual impairment and an additional 11 to 12 percent who suffer mild to moderate symptoms can be helped," he said.

Another expert on aging is Dr. Richard Besdine, assistant professor of Medicine, Division on Aging, Harvard Medical School. Besdine, also director of Geriatric Education at the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for the Aged in Boston, suggests some simple ways to improve the memory of the elderly:

- Be alert and aware: Anything you wish to remember you must first observe carefully. Make sure that you are concentrating on one thing at a time.
- Link ideas to images: All memory is based on associating new information to something that you already know. The trick is to link what you want to remember to a strong visual image. For example, most people easily remember the shape of Italy because they have been told that Italy is shaped like a boot.

VIRGINIA, ALTHOUGH shocked by the death of her middle child, said she whisked the boys out of the car and into her home. "I remember telling them, 'Well, my little darlings, I guess from now on it's going to be grandma and grandpa,'" she recalled. "And they kept saying - especially the older one - 'Why, Grandma, why did he have to do that to Mama?'"

Suddenly, on that Sunday morning in June, the Calvaresis had lost a daughter and acquired two children, 4-year-old Garrett Hofer and 13-year-old Travis Klopfenstein. The children had lost their mother; their father-to-be had killed her.

The case - and there are many - points up another set of victims in the aftermath of domestic violence and murder: the children. When one or both parents are slain, what becomes of the children? Where do they go? And what kind of emotional pain must they endure?

"CHILDREN ARE THE primary set of victims," said Nelson Nadeau, director of Social Services in Jefferson County where Arvada is located. "The victim dies, and his or her situation is pretty cut and dried. It's the kids who really suffer the greatest."

In the past year, Nadeau said he has seen a surge in the number of violent crimes in Jefferson County west of Denver where innocent children were present.

Comments touch off less than tickling reactions

DEAR ABBY: I usually agree with your answers, but I think you came on a little too strong in your answer to "Tickled to Death in N.Y." Although for her tickling may be "torture" (as you called it), others find it highly erotic for both the "tickler" and the "ticklee."

I'm a 22-year-old guy whose girlfriend agrees that tickling combined with bondage has added a lot of zest to our sex lives. After being tickled to the point of near exhaustion, we are both highly aroused sexually.

For you to equate tickling with sadism and torture makes tickling sound like something evil. Torture causes pain and damage to the body; tickling does not.

Lighten up, Abby. - TICKLED TO BE TICKLED IN TRENTON, N.J.

DEAR TICKLED: Read on for a letter from another reader who was also less than tickled with my response. My answer is the same for both of you.

DEAR ABBY: I could not believe your response to "Tickled to Death in N.Y.," you said, "Tickling is in reality a thinly disguised method of torture." Abby, that's absurd!

I have a 5-year-old daughter who loves to be tickled. In fact, she begs me to tickle her. To even suggest that in doing so I am torturing her is the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard. I'm sure there are a lot of parents who tickle their children because the children enjoy it.

There is nothing more pleasant than the laughter of children.

Please reconsider your foolish statement. - DISGUSTED IN FLORENCE, S.C.

DEAR TICKLED AND DISGUSTED: "Tickled to Death" wrote: "As first it was a game between us, but it's gotten out of hand. Every time we're together, he pins me down and tickles me until I am hoarse from screaming and my lungs ache. I am very ticklish at the bottoms of my feet, my ribs and underneath my arms, and that's what he goes for. This is no laughing matter. He is driving me crazy!"

That kind of tickling goes beyond a mutual agreement. When brute force is used, it is clearly sadistic and can hardly be compared with tickling a child who begs to be tickled. (Yo, wouldn't pin the child down and continue to tickle her while she begged you to stop, would you?)

Tickling during bondage may be highly erotic (I'll have to take your word for it), but all harmless game-playing must be a matter of mutual agreement.

In conclusion: Whatever the activity, if it is FORCED on one by another, that, my friends, is cruel and sadistic.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't hand out any prizes for the most insensitive mother-in-law in the world until you've heard about mine.

The first words she ever spoke to me, when my then-girlfriend called long-distance to tell her we were marrying, were, "Do you have any money?"

When she came on the train for our wedding (and to meet her future son-in-law), she first tried to fix her daughter up with "a lovely young man" she had met on the train!

The day before our wedding, she told her daughter that she'd been to a psychic who told her that we would have a miserable marriage.

We were to be married by a judge in a simple civil ceremony, so as we climbed the stairs to the courthouse she said, "This couldn't be tickler if you had planned it." - R. IN ALBANY

Koch turns home into blood bank

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Ed Koch knows that some people would give anything — even blood — to get inside Gracie Mansion, the official and elegant residence of the city's chief executive.

On Sunday, Koch transformed the mansion into a clinic for the New York Blood Program, which is trying to cope with a serious blood shortage caused by the unfounded fear that donors might contract the deadly disease AIDS.

The 58-year-old Koch, who gives blood three times a year, strolled through the mansion greeting donors. To one firefighter, he confided, "I hate the sight of my own blood. So I don't look."

Dr. Johanna Pindyck, director of the blood program, said 400 people pledged to give blood at Gracie Mansion.

In return, donors got cookies, coffee and a free tour of the house.

NEW YORK (AP) — Patti Davis says her parents, President and Mrs. Reagan, are "tolerant and accepting" of their children, but that her father's election to the White House brought her close to nervous collapse.

Rumors of an "icy" relationship between the 30-year-old actress — who adopted her mother's maiden name — and her mother are "a pack of lies," she was quoted in this week's People magazine. "I wish the press would stop picking on my mother," she said. "My parents are tolerant and accepting of us."

She said she "dreaded" her father's victory in the 1980 election.

"I said I couldn't handle that — and I didn't. Right after the inauguration I got really sick. I couldn't breathe and had to be taken to the hospital emergency ward. It was stress. My whole body went into shock," the magazine quoted her as saying.

Miss Davis said her parents skipped her legitimate-theater debut in a summer stock performance in Traverse City, Mich., because they are "sensitive about upstaging either my brother Ronnie or me."

NEW YORK (AP) — A lot of troubled waters have flowed under the bridge in the 13 years since Paul Simon and Art Garfunkel last recorded together, but now the musicians are breaking the sounds of silence with a new album.

"Think Too Much," which Garfunkel says is about 85 percent complete, will be released after their summer tour. The singers would hardly have envisioned the album in the early 1970s, when they followed separate paths after finishing "Bridge Over Troubled Waters."

Neither of the 41-year-old lifelong friends — they first performed together in fourth grade in New York's Forest Hills — has much to say about that celebrated breakup.

But Garfunkel, asked if he still worries that he's mainly a "hired singer" who complements Simon's music, lyrics and guitar, told the New York Daily News' Sunday Magazine, "That is a gross way to put it. I wonder if it's true, though."

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.
If allergic to cat, get rid of it

Dear Dr. Solomon: My youngster is allergic and the doctor says that the cat we have in the house is the cause of it, and that we should get rid of it. Isn't there any other way of handling this situation? — Mrs. S.L., Flagstaff, Ariz.

Dear Mrs. L.: I would like to be able to say that you can have your cake and eat it too, but this simply is not possible. The basic principle in the treatment of an allergy is to identify what is causing the symptoms and then avoiding it or getting rid of it. In your child's case, the choice unfortunately lies between parting with the pet or continuing to suffer from allergic symptoms.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 66 years old and I have worked in a machine shop all my life. Most of my friends and acquaintances are also skilled blue-collar workers. Over the past few years it seems that these people have had more than their share of heart attacks. Most of them did not smoke and they weren't executives and they didn't have million-dollar problems to decide. Why should people like this who have been doing physical work all their lives be getting heart attacks? — John, Newton, Mass.

Dear John: The results of studies conducted in the United States and Sweden suggest that the fewer decisions a person is called upon to make on the job, the greater the risk of a heart attack. The crucial point seems to be the lack of input on the part of the worker into how the job should be done.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I went to a doctor one evening because I was having some pain and he told me that I have rheumatoid arthritis. He also made an appointment to see me the following morning. I didn't like to ask him why, but I really didn't see any sense to seeing him two days in a row. Don't you think a doctor should be able to take care of everything during a patient's first appointment? — Francine, Cincinnati, Ohio

Dear Francine: First let me suggest that if you have any question about how and why your physician schedules patients, you should ask. I try to anticipate my patients' questions, but if they are not clear about something, they feel perfectly free to ask. It is not possible for patients to comply with a physician's instructions unless they know what is expected of them and why.

As for your specific question, I can only speculate about the reason for the successive appointments. The severity of rheumatoid arthritis often varies from one part of the day to another. When you were examined in the evening, for example, you may have seemed to be in better condition than you actually are. By examining you the following morning, the physician can obtain a more accurate picture of your condition and therefore be able to prescribe for you more appropriately.

Actress says her greatest part was hiding drinking

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gale Storm, one of television's earliest stars, says that her greatest performance was hiding her alcoholism.

"I kept it hidden," said the 62-year-old actress, who starred in the comedies "My Little Margie" (1962-1965) and "The Gale Storm Show" (1966-1969).

"It was the best acting job I ever did. During the seven years prior to going into the hospital, I was doing dinner theaters around the country and I would never, ever have a drink before a performance.

"I never had any inkling that I might have a drinking problem. I had no warning. By the time I realized it, I not only had a problem but a very serious problem. When I entered the hospital, I wanted to crawl in. I was so easily recognized," added Miss Storm, who credits her religious faith with helping her stay sober.

Now, with more than four years of sobriety behind her, Miss Storm spends part of her time helping others learn the "joy and freedom" she found in giving up the habit. She has been the TV spokeswoman for the Raleigh Hills Hospitals chain, where she was cured after being in three other hospitals, and hopes to do more commercials for them in the future.

During her treatment, she learned that alcoholism is a disease "and that's the most important thing you have to understand. It's not a weakness or a character flaw."

Alcohol has held no appeal for her in the past four years, she said. "Never once have I felt, 'I've earned a drink.'"

Married to Lee Bonnell, a former actor and now an insurance company executive, Miss Storm lives in a beachfront community south of Los Angeles in Orange County. She is the mother of four grown children but still retains that fresh-faced look and wide smile she had when she was the "queen of the B pictures."

Miss Storm also has just begun a business of selling men's wrist watches with pictures of Jesus Christ and the 12 apostles on the dial. The watches are sold through dealers for about $179.95.

"I had one made up for my husband and he loved it so, and when he started wearing it friends of ours wanted to know where he got it," she said. "That's how the business was born."

She no longer does dinner theater and her only television role in recent years was on "The Love Boat." She laughed about her appearance on that popular ABC-TV show because in her last TV series she played the social director aboard a luxury liner.

"I'm very eager to do more acting," she said. "But I'm a little choosy. Paris mean a great deal to me. And I have been so busy doing interviews and talk shows and any-

The Texas-born actress began her Hollywood career in 1939 after winning a talent search contest. She appeared in a number of movies and at one time was Roy Rogers' leading lady in a series of Westerns.

She co-starred with Charles Farrell in "My Little Margie" and with ZaSu Pitts in "The Gale Storm Show," which was subtitled "Oh Susanna." Her only daughter was born while she was making the latter show and she named her Susanna.

Raymond Massey dies at age 86

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor Raymond Massey, who died Friday at the age of 86, was a man of "enormous humor and courtesy" with a gift for making his characters come alive, recalled his son Daniel.

"Just look at his work as Abe Lincoln. It's an uncanny ability to get inside another person's mind and soul," said the younger Massey, an actor who lives in London.

The actor's portrayals of the Civil War president led one critic to describe him as "the man who took Abraham Lincoln off the penny" and brought him alive for millions.

Massey, more recently known as Dr. Gillespie on the "Dr. Kildare" television series (1961-1965), died at Cedars Sinai Medical Center. The death was due to complications from a month-long bout with pneumonia, said another son, Geoffrey Massey, of Vancouver, British Columbia.

The craggy-faced actor appeared in more than 70 movies and 80 stage productions, with starring roles in 11 Broadway shows. He retired a decade ago, but had just completed filming an autobiographical television program to be shown in his native Canada.

Among his films were "The Prisoner of Zenda," with David Niven, who died Friday, "Arsenic and Old Lace," "East of Eden," "Seven Angry Men" and "The Naked and the Dead."

Massey, who directed or produced many of his stage productions, played Lincoln in Robert Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize-winning Broadway play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" for two years, then took the show on national tour.

Raymond Hart Massey was born on Aug. 30, 1896, in Toronto. He was the grandson of the founder of the Massey farm machinery empire and the brother of the late Vincent Massey, Canada's first Canadian-born governor general.

Actress Fontanne dies at age 95

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Stage and screen actress Lynn Fontanne, who died at the rural farm where she retired, was a master of her craft willing to share her knowledge with others, actress Carol Channing says.

Miss Fontanne, who was 95, died of pneumonia and old age Saturday, her physician said. The death followed by six years the death of her famous actor husband, Alfred Lunt.

The Lunt-Fontanne team has been held by the acting profession as an example of fine technique, including the overlapping of dialogue and the use of physical movement to enhance characterization.

Miss Fontanne was complimented for years on her youthful beauty. Critic Alexander Woolcott is quoted as once having said: "If this keeps on, people will think she is Alfred's daughter."

She was born Dec. 6, 1887, in Woodford, England, and came to the United States in 1916 "because she couldn't get anything but ingenue parts in London," actress June Walker once said. "Time was running out; she was about 30 then."

She met Lunt during a summer-stock tour three years later. They married in 1922 in New York.

They performed together until the 1960s, but made few movies and fewer television appearances so that not many people remember today the acting quality that made them famous.

Insurance considered for unemployed

WASHINGTON (AP) — After weeks of battling over defense and foreign policy, Congress is taking up national health insurance for the unemployed and other domestic issues this week before adjourning for more than a month. An extension of the federal revenue sharing program for local governments and measures to tighten controls over toxic wastes and to bail out the Railroad Retirement System also are on tap in the final week before the summer recess. In addition, the House is due to act on a bill that would establish the third Monday in January as a national holiday to honor the birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. Debate is scheduled for this afternoon, but a vote may be delayed until Tuesday. Debate also is scheduled this afternoon in the House on legislation to help the faltering Railroad Retirement System, which has 1 million pensioners and has been running at a deficit in recent years. The legislation would assure the solvency of the fund by increasing employee and employer contributions and reducing some benefits. The Senate, meanwhile, will be trying to find its way out of a filibuster over the administration's so-called target price proposals, which would freeze grain price supports at this year's level for 1984 and 1985. Agriculture Secretary John Block considers the plan essential for reducing the $21.2 billion price tag for the federal farm program. He says the freeze — which will cost farmers $3.8 billion over three years in direct federal payments — is needed to make U.S. commodities competitive in international markets. Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said Block would meet with legislators this afternoon to try to end the stalemate. Later this week, the House is set to vote on a three-year, $4 billion program to provide health insurance for unemployed workers and their families. Various versions of the plan have been endorsed by four congressional committees — two in the Democrat-controlled House and two in the Republican-controlled Senate — which is an indication of the strong bipartisan congressional support the measure has. The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that as of February, 10.2 million jobless workers and their dependents lacked any form of health insurance. However, White House budget director David A. Stockman has insisted that President Reagan will veto such a program if it doesn't carry financing provisions to pay for the block grants that would go to state-run insurance programs. The Senate Finance Committee has approved a more modest two-year, $1.8 billion program. While the House version has no financing provision, the Senate Finance Committee bill includes increases in some Medicare premiums and a freeze on payments to physicians to pay for the health insurance. House supporters of the plan oppose the financing mechanism chosen by the Finance Committee, saying it is unfair to shift the cost of the jobless health insurance to elderly Medicare recipients. While the House was acting on the measure this week, possibly as early as Wednesday, it was unlikely the Senate would consider it until September. Also this week, the House will vote on legislation to extend the federal revenue sharing program to local governments through 1988. The current authorization expires Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year. The House version would raise spending to $5.3 billion annually. A version pending in the Senate is more in line with the administration's request for a simple three-year reauthorization at the current level of $4.5 billion a year. A House vote is tentatively scheduled Tuesday and a Senate vote could come later in the week. Since it began in 1972, the revenue sharing program has sent state and local governments more than $60 billion to be spent as they wish. The House also will consider legislation later in the week that would expand the number of businesses subject to regulation by the Environmental Protection Agency and close what critics say are loopholes in current laws governing toxic wastes. Senate action is not expected until after the August recess.

Mother chained to bed by official

DENVER (AP) — The city safety manager, bearing flowers and an apology, visited a woman who had been chained to her hospital bed by sheriff's deputies before and after she gave birth. Karen Daskam, 30, entered Denver General Hospital with labor pains Friday, after appearing before a federal magistrate who ordered her held on $5,000 bond on a fugitive warrant. She has been charged with abducting her 6-year-old daughter from her former husband. City Safety Manager John Simonet ordered the woman unchained late Saturday night, several hours after she gave birth to a son. Deputies "didn't use a great deal of discretion," Simonet said Sunday. No disciplinary action is planned for the deputies, who followed the letter of the law in restraining Mrs. Daskam, said Simonet, noting restraints are usual for prisoners held for another jurisdiction. "You can't fault the guys working there," he said. "They have a responsibility. It's the policy." Mrs. Daskam was charged in a warrant issued June 9 in Monroe County, Fla., with abducting her daughter, Kimberly Dawn Huntsberry, who is in the custody of Mrs. Daskam's first husband, Shane Huntsberry. The FBI said Kimberly was found with Mrs. Daskam and has been turned over to the Jefferson County Department of Social Services. Mrs. Daskam was taken to the hospital Friday afternoon when her labor pains started, then was jailed when the pains subsided, authorities said. She returned to the hospital at about midnight Friday and was kept handcuffed to her bed during labor, said Nerissa Booker of Evergreen, a family friend. The handcuffs were removed before Mrs. Daskam was taken to the delivery room, where she gave birth to 5-pound, 3-ounce Richard Reginald Daskam II at 12:08 p.m. Saturday. A shackle was placed on Mrs. Daskam's ankle when she was returned to her hospital room. Mrs. Booker said. Mrs. Daskam, who has had two other children with her current husband, said Sunday she took Kimberly from her former mother-in-law's home in Plantation Key, Fla., because she planned a home delivery and wanted Kimberly to be present. Simonet said it was "absurd" to think the woman might try to escape from the hospital without her baby. "I'm not about to tear out of here and leave four children behind," Mrs. Daskam said. "I'm comfortable now and at least I have one of my babies with me."

Department's errors cause extra payments

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Errors by a state transportation department engineer, a contractor and a subcontractor caused Oklahoma and Texas to pay more than $400,000 in extra funds to construct a new bridge spanning the Red River south of Altus, The Daily Oklahoman reports. The newspaper, citing department records, said in Monday's editions that errors in the concrete mix required removal and reconstruction of 76 newly placed bridge pier columns and nine pier caps. The Oklahoman said the total cost of the reconstruction project was $682,223.63. Texas paid $256,285.66 last February, while Oklahoma's share was $207,646.49, the newspaper said. Construction began May 26, 1981, on the new bridge on U.S. 283 linking Jackson County, Okla., with Wilbarger County, Texas. J.A. Tobin Construction Co. of Dallas submitted the low bid of $4.6 million to become prime contractor for the job. Tobin paid $215,286.46 of the reconstruction cost, or 31.5 percent, the newspaper said. A board of claims formed at the contractor's request had recommended that the states pay 60 percent of the reconstruction costs and the contractor 40 percent, the Oklahoman said. When Tobin objected to the 60-40 split, R.A. "Dick" Ward, Oklahoma transportation director, took the Oklahoma Transportation Commission a negotiated settlement, which increased the states' share to 70 percent. The commission accepted the settlement on Feb. 1, 1982. Ward told the commission, according to the meeting minutes, that the settlement was necessary because of the prospect of lengthy and costly litigation, the newspaper said. Jon Powell, assistant transportation director for human resources and public affairs, said the department has altered its policies from "prescription contracting to performance contracting." Rather than contracting with a firm, prescribing the exact type of work and expecting the firm to do the work precisely as prescribed, the department provides specifications and guidelines, tests performance throughout the job and negotiates changes in specifications during the job, he said. Dennis Gensman, state Transportation Department resident engineer in Altus, was in charge of the project. The board of claims reports said Gensman twice changed the mix formula to add air to the concrete, the Oklahoman said.

Sinking party-goer saved

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — The party-goer shall remain unidentified, authorities say, because being pulled out of mud by a 15-man crew and a winch is "an embarrassing situation for any respectable person." It happened early Sunday after an all-night drinking party. The man, identified only as being 24 years old, decided he would walk the few miles from the Redwood City party to his home in San Mateo. But, said Menlo Park police officer Jim Neal, the party-goer wandered into a marsh near the Dumbarton Bridge on San Francisco Bay and promptly began sinking in the goo. A photographer taking pictures of wildlife heard the man's cries for help and called police.

When they arrived, the man was already in mud up to his armpits. The 15-man rescue squad, outfitted with rope and winch, was called and the chastened partygoer was removed from the marsh. Neal said the man was so disoriented he thought he was in San Mateo, but instead he had been walking in the opposite direction. "What is even more embarrassing was the fact that when we pulled him out, his boots and pants remained behind," Neal said. "He was sinking quickly and was lucky someone was nearby," Neal said. "Otherwise, with the din of the bridge traffic, he would never have been heard" shouting for help.

Group wants silo to be preserved

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Aviation Historical Society wants one of the state's Titan 2 missile silos preserved as a museum after the Air Force deactivates them. Richard N. Holbert, president of the society, said the group is working with Arkansas congressional delegation to have one of the 17 missile sites declared a National Historical Site and turned over to the National Park Service. Sens. David Pryor and Dale Bumpers, Holbert said, have pledged their support for the idea. The society thinks preserving a site would remind people of the role the Cold War played in this country's history, Holbert said recently. "Such a site would also recognize the significant contribution that these weapons and the crews that manned them made to the cause of maintaining world peace," he said.
