Reagan expresses hope as Gromyko talks start

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan held his first in-depth talk with a Soviet top leader today, greeting Andrei A. Gromyko at the White House for a session designed to convince the skeptical foreign minister that the United States "means no harm" and wants improved relations with Moscow.

Reagan appeared somber when reporters were admitted to the Oval Office to witness the start of the meeting. When asked if he thought the session signaled an easing of tensions, Reagan answered in the affirmative.

Reagan said, "I think that anyone must react with hope." Gromyko had said he too was "hopeful" the meeting would produce results.

There was a fire in the fireplace on the cold Washington fall morning. They sat in high-back white brocade chairs, with interpreters nearby. Aides sat on twin white brocade sofas at either side.

Asked about the health of Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko, Gromyko replied: "Perfectly all right."

As six waves of photgraphers and camera crews took turns coming into the Oval Office to take pictures, reporters overheard a bit of the small talk between Reagan and Gromyko.

Reagan apparently was telling Gromyko about the role of women in the U.S. military, because he was overheard to say "everything except combat," adding that women were in the Air Force in World War II.

Later, the president pointed to his desk on the opposite side of the room and began telling Gromyko the history of the wood from which it was constructed.

Gromyko made several jokes about the photographers. When the first group left the room, he commented, "The hurricane is over."

When reporters asked if he were willing to answer 1,000 questions, as he had said earlier, Gromyko replied, "Next year," adding there wasn't enough time today. A reporter asked him a question anyway and he remarked that now he only had to take 999 more.

As reporters' questions to Reagan and Gromyko persisted, Gromyko said it was "too early" because they had not yet had their formal talks.

About half of Gromyko's comments were made in English, the other half in Russian.

As the last of six groups of photographers was being escorted out of the office, Gromyko said, "We could have conducted negotiations in the time it took" for the pictures to be taken.

It was raining when Gromyko arrived at 10 a.m. EDT. He was smiling broadly and waved to reporters before going directly to the Oval Office for the meeting with Reagan. Gromyko was accompanied by Anatoly Dobrynin, the Soviet ambassador to the United States.

Gromyko at 'height of power'

Associated Press

VICTORIA, Texas — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is at the most powerful stage of his career, former British prime minister Harold Wilson says.

Wilson, speaking at Victoria College Thursday, said the Soviet representative is capable of "initiating policy or proposing it" at the top levels of Soviet government.

Gromyko, 75, has been foreign minister for 27 years and has met with nearly every American president since World War II.

"I do not expect he is sending his speeches back for checking" by Kremlin leaders, Wilson said during a news conference.

The United States' dealings with the Soviets will always be hampered by acute Kremlin embarrassment over the state of the Soviet economy, Wilson said.

"It's sticky because they don't want to admit how bad things are," Wilson said.

Wilson, lecturing at a Victoria College seminar, shared several anecdotes on Gromyko and American leaders he has met with during his 55-year career as a public official.

He first took control of the British Labor Party in 1963. The next year, he became prime minister of Great Britain after a narrow Labor victory at the polls.

Wilson and his party unexpectedly were turned out of office in 1970 by Conservative Edward Heath. But Wilson returned to power in 1974 by a hair-thin majority.

Wilson abruptly resigned from office in March 1976, promising he would not return to party leadership. Knighted by Queen Elizabeth shortly after his resignation, Wilson now sits as a Labor Party member of the House of Lords.

Wilson said Harry Truman was "the greatest American president," primarily because of his personal change of heart which led to U.S. support for establishing the state of Israel in 1948.

Though Wilson, who was British prime minister during the Vietnam era, called Lyndon B. Johnson "a good personal friend," he said he nevertheless said he "fundamentally disagreed" with Johnson on his conduct of the war.

Wilson blamed Johnson for backing out of early negotiations with then-Soviet Prime Minister Alexi Kosygin, strengthening the "thuggish characters over there who didn't want to negotiate with anyone at all."

Hospital has 'no money' for indigent care in next month

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Despite having one of the best overall monthly financial reports of the year, Midland County Hospital District's indigent care bill in August was almost $500,000 over budget, according to a hospital official.

With only $27,800 left in the budget until after Oct. 31, there is "no money" for indigent expenses within the next month, Ron Peterson, Midland Memorial Hospital vice president of finance, told MCHD directors Thursday during a board meeting.

Also, no action was taken by directors on agreements with two hospital facilities for the development of a chemical dependency unit, pending further negotiations.

Most of the indigent expenses are related to complicated births in which the indigent mothers have not received prenatal care, Peterson said. Critical cases must be transported, at the district's expense, to neonatal intensive care units in Fort Worth and Lubbock.

"It's very rapidly approaching the time to get a neonatologist and set up our own neonatal intensive care unit," said Director Wanda Mohr.

The board has been weighing the feasibility of providing such a unit against the travel expenses accrued when sending county patients to other facilities. But MMH President Ray Branson contends such plans may result in a duplication of services pending proposals made by two Odessa hospitals for expansions to their neonatal units.

"We have to get more intimately involved with what they're doing over there before we make decisions over here," Branson said.

MCHD's indigent bill for August was $186,574 — a good $40,000 over the budget for the month. Total medical costs for the county's financially needy jumped last month to $2.1 million compared to the budgeted $1.6 million for the year to date.

Salad bars closed as Oregon searches for source of food poison

Associated Press

THE DALLES, Ore. — Restaurants in this northern Oregon city are closing down their salad bars as federal officials join the search for the cause of the state's worst food poisoning outbreak, which has stricken more than 200 people.

The 28 people who remained hospitalized today were being tested to determine whether salmonella bacteria was causing their vomiting, diarrhea and cramps, said Randy Skov, head of admissions at Mid-Columbia Medical Center.

Salmonella has been linked to at least 40 cases, said Carla Chamberlain, administrator of the Wasco County Health Department. But beyond saying that the food at salad bars may be a common link, officials have had little success in tracing the source of the poisonings.

"It's very different from the church supper where everyone ate chicken or potato salad," said Dr. Lawrence Foster, an epidemiologist for the state Health Divison. "This is clearly turning out to be the biggest salmonella outbreak we have had to my knowledge in Oregon."

All of the restaurants in this city of 11,400 people 60 miles east of Portland have been asked to close their salad bars as a precautionary measure. The outbreak began Sept. 13.

Arlo's Restaurant and Shakey's Pizza Parlor — two of three restaurants linked to the outbreak — closed Thursday. The Portage Inn also has been linked to the illness, but remained open, said Ms. Chamberlain. Four other restaurants under investigation remained open, but health officials declined to name them.

Will 'blighted' designation brighten Eastvale?

EASTVALE, Texas (AP) — The water trickles, the septic tanks smell, volunteer firefighters have to borrow water and the roads are so bad that police say they can't tell if drivers are drunk or just trying to avoid potholes.

This small northeast Texas town has so many problems, the city aldermen have declared it a blighted area. So has the Denton County Commissioners Court.

"Whatever the city can have in the way of problems, Eastvale has got them," said County Judge Buddy Cole, who is preparing the official resolution declaring the town "blighted."

City leaders hope the designation will bring in federal and state financial aid, because right now the city's small tax base can't affort water, sewer or road improvements, Cole said.

"I keep thinking of the billions going to Nicaragua," said Mayor Bert Eubank. "All I need is just a couple of million."

To add to Eastvale's woes, businesses and residents are streaming out of this town of 600, further depressing its economy.

The aldermen's list of problems includes streets filled with so many potholes that the U.S. Postal Service and Lewisville school district buses have threatened to discontinue service.

Police Chief Joe A. Schreibvogel has added to the list by citing problems with police equipment and operations.

"Items that are attached to vehicles keep falling off, and they have either been replaced or repaired," the chief wrote in a letter to the city.

"We are unable to tell if we have an intoxicated driver because citizens have to drive on the wrong side of the road half the time so they can miss the large holes," he said.

Fire Chief Tom Lemmier has a few grievances of his own, including fire trucks that slide off muddy hills and fall into potholes. The pumper truck even has to be filled up in the nearby town of Frisco because Eastvale's storage tanks can "be totally emptied in 16 minutes."

In July, the Texas Department of Health declared a state of emergency in Eastvale and rated its water system deficient.

Weather

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

Rain for portions of the Southwest, Northeast and southeast Atlantic coast is forecast through Saturday by the National Weather Service. Tropical Storm Isidore still is threatening Florida.

More rain expected tonight, Saturday

The trace of precipitation recorded this morning should increase as forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport predict more rain tonight and Saturday.

Conditions tonight are expected to be cloudy and cool with a 50 percent chance of rain. Forecasters predict temperatures to be much like the low of 48 experienced this morning. Winds will be from the northeast at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Saturday will be cloudy and cool with the chance of rain decreasing to 20 percent. Highs are expected to reach near 60 with northeasterly to easterly winds at 10 to 20 mph.

The 1977 record high of 102 was 33 degrees above the high recorded Thursday. The record low was 41 degrees set in 1936.

STATE

A weak cold front moved southward into Texas early today, bringing with it another round of cloudy skies, cooler temperatures and rainfall.

The front was located just before dawn along a line from the northeast corner of the state to near Waco to San Angelo, southwestward into the Trans Pecos region.

Scattered light rain was reported early today over the northwestern third of Texas. Most of the state had cloudy skies with the only clear skies reported in extreme South Texas and along the upper Texas coast.

Winds were northerly at 10-15 mph over northern sections of the state and east to northeast at 5-10 mph in South Texas.

Early morning temperatures were in the 40s and 50s behind the front and in the 60s and low to middle 70s south of the front. Extremes ranged from 42 at Amarillo to 77 at Brownsville.

NATION

Tropical storm Isidore roared across Florida early today, heading for the Gulf of Mexico where forecasters feared it could gather strength and become the third hurricane of the Atlantic season.

With highest sustained winds estimated to be 45 mph, the gale force winds from Isidore extended out 100 miles from the center, the National Weather Service said.

Gale warnings were issued for Florida's west coast, and remained in effect on the east coast, where the storm washed out roads and eroded beaches Thursday after moving in from the Atlantic Ocean.

The weather service said the storm could bring 3 to 5 inches of rain to central and northern Florida and southeast Georgia today.

The two hurricanes of the season so far were Diana and Hortense. Hortense remained a tropical storm about 300 miles east of Bermuda at midnight Thursday.

Meanwhile, snow blanketed parts of eastern Wyoming, northeastern Colorado and northwestern Kansas.

Andrei Gromyko living legend

By SERGE SCHMEMANN
New York Times News Service

MOSCOW — When talk turns to Andrei Andreyevich Gromyko, words like survivor, professional, indestructible, veteran, indomitable seem to roll off the tongue almost of their own volition.

The legends are respectfully told and retold: the American presidents he has met, stretching back to Franklin D. Roosevelt; how he sat at Stalin's elbow at Yalta and Potsdam; the tributes he drew from adversaries as seasoned as W. Averell Harriman and Henry A. Kissinger.

He is a man who has been at the center of global politics, scrutinized and analyzed by his adversaries, for more than 40 years, yet whose motives and tactics remain veiled behind an inscrutable facade.

He is, perhaps, the living embodiment of Soviet foreign policy, hard, sensitive to any slight to the dignity of his country and office, secretive, ponderous, unyielding, yet deliberate and meticulous, imbued with a chess player's mastery of precedent, position and maneuver.

It can be argued that the tensions now prevailing in world affairs are as much Gromyko's fault as any other man's. Yet it is a measure of his reputation that his visit to the United States has been elevated to enormous proportions, and his talk on Friday with President Reagan has taken on the dimensions of a milestone in Soviet-American relations.

Gromyko's speech Thursday to the United Nations General Assembly was a classic of his style. He gave away nothing, blaming Washington for all the world's ills and charging that every time Russians have met with the Reagan administration, "from the very outset, everything is doomed to failure."

He concluded with a tantalizing note of hope, that it was still possible "to reverse the current alarming tilt in international developments."

It was a speech designed to make Reagan move first, to depict the Russians as skeptical about success but willing to give the Americans another chance.

Even if Gromyko's consummate skills as a diplomatic tactician are established beyond question, diplomats in Moscow remain uncertain how much actual political power he wields in or out of the Politburo.

As Soviet leader, Yuri V. Andropov promoted Gromyko to the post of first deputy prime minister and evidently gave him primacy over all aspects of Soviet foreign policy. When Konstantin U. Chernenko came to power last February, many Western analysts began to depict Gromyko as one of the real powers in the Kremlin, perhaps as the most powerful Soviet leader.

The evidence has been ample that Gromyko is indeed among the most influential Politburo members, alongside Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, Prime Minister Nikolai A. Tikhonov and Chernenko himself. But there has been little evidence to support the notion that he is any more powerful than his comrades, or that his influence extends beyond foreign policy.

From the time Stalin appointed him ambassador to Washington in 1943, making him at 34 the youngest Soviet ambassador in history, Gromyko has sustained an image of a reliable, loyal and persevering servant of Soviet foreign policy, dedicated to winning for the Soviet Union the influence and respect due a global power.

Gromyko was born July 18, 1904, a son of poor farmers in the Byelorussian village of Gromyki. He joined the Communist Party at the age of 22, finished his education at the Minsk Agricultural Institute, and taught at the prestigious Institute of Economics in Moscow.

It was in Minsk that Gromyko met his wife, the former Lidiya V. Grinevich. They have two children, Anatoly, a specialist on African affairs, and Emiliya, who is married to a diplomat.

Gromyko went to work on the American desk at the Soviet Foreign Ministry in 1939, evidently to replenish the ranks of experts diminished in Stalin's purges. By November 1941 he was at the Soviet Embassy in Washington, and less than two years later he was the Ambassador.

He went on to serve at the United Nations, in Moscow and in London before becoming foreign minister under Khrushchev in 1957.

The culmination of Gromyko's career came in 1972, when President Nixon and his national security adviser, Kissinger, accepted détente and thus, in the Soviet view, political equality between the two countries. A year later, Leonid I. Brezhnev elevated Gromyko to the Politburo.

Since then Gromyko has watched the painstakingly built edifice of détente unravel. His bitterness undoubtedly has been a factor in the Soviet hostility toward Reagan. But diplomats are wary of presuming that a wily professional like Gromyko would let personal frustrations override his instincts for the diplomatic game.

Khrushchev once depicted his foreign minister as a man who would sit on a block of ice unquestioningly until ordered off. Kissinger has summed up the effect of such jokes on the usually dour diplomat this way:

"Gromyko's face would crease in smiles when he was the butt of this heavy-handed joshing. Only his eyes remained wary and slightly melancholy, like those of the beagle who has endured the inexplicable foibles of his master yet bent them to his own will."

Soviet leaders favor Walter Mondale

NEW YORK (AP) — On the eve of President Reagan's first meeting with a top Soviet leader, Moscow has singled out his Democratic challenger, Walter F. Mondale, as one who would likely improve relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

A few hours after Mondale held his own meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, the Soviet news agency Tass said the Reagan administration had "wrecked" negotiations on nuclear arms control.

That includes, the statement said, "all questions dealing with the cessation of the arms race, particularly the nuclear arms race."

But Tass said Mondale's ideas on arms control "would open up certain possibilities for bringing the positions of two powers closer ..."

The Tass statement followed Mondale's 90-minute meeting with the Soviet foreign minister in New York.

Reagan was meeting today with Gromyko in the White House.

"There were no commitments given to me at all," Mondale told a news conference afterward. "I did not try to get any commitment. I was not negotiating. But it's my judgment there is the possibility of an opportunity. We'll find out tomorrow."

Also Thursday, Mondale told the news conference that Reagan should quit trying to pass the blame for the most recent truck bombing in Lebanon.

"The latest statement by the president is inexcusable," Mondale said. "He should stand up and say he is responsible."

He was commenting on Reagan's statement Wednesday about the latest fatal Beirut embassy attack, which prompted an outpouring of public rebuke by members of Congress and former President Jimmy Carter.

Reagan said Thursday his remarks were distorted by the news media, but he would not elaborate.

Reagan's comment in Bowling Green, Ohio was that the United States is "feeling the effects today of the near destruction of our intelligence capability in recent years, before we came here."

Carter said the series of terrorist attacks on Americans in Lebanon "has been brought about by the president's own deeply flawed policy and inadequate security precautions in the face of proven danger."

Mondale said, "By saying the CIA is weak, he (Reagan) encourages terrorists and our enemies around the world to believe that we don't have an effective intelligence capacity when we do."

Reagan, Mondale said, should say, "I was wrong in trying to blame others."

"This is 1984, not 1980," Mondale said. "He is responsible for that government."

Mondale planned no campaigning today because of the Jewish holiday, but a one-day trip to Georgia was scheduled for Saturday. His running mate Geraldine Ferraro was at home in New York with no campaigning planned.

Beirut shoreline shelled by 'enemy,' army reports

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An "enemy boat" shelled the Beirut shoreline today and set a fishing boat afire before army troops chased it away with gunfire, the command of the army's all-Moslem 6th Brigade said.

An army communique said the boat, which it did not identify, approached the coast of mostly Moslem west Beirut at dawn and opened fire on fishing boats in the area, setting one ablaze.

The boat also fired a shell that hit the shore near the seaside Rauche Boulevard, prompting the 6th Brigade command to dispatch a patrol that fired at the boat and "forced it to flee," said the communique broadcast by the state radio.

A similar shootout between a boat and a 6th brigade patrol occurred at dusk Thursday in the same neighborhood. The brigade command said there were no casualties in either incident.

Israeli gunboats patrol Lebanon's coast frequently, and boats of the Lebanese Forces — a Christian militia — also regularly cruise along the Beirut shore to supply a garrison south of the capital.

Lebanon's president, Amin Gemayel, was scheduled to meet today with U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy, who has met with leaders in Syria, Jordan, Egypt, Israel and Lebanon over the past week.

The independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar reported today that Murphy's visits were "very important" but that he had no particular Middle East peace initiative in hand. The paper said he was "trying to freeze the situation" in Lebanon until after the U.S. presidential elections.

Although the district paid all past bills for indigent expenses, three new neonatal patients in August required transportation to and treatment at Fort Worth Children's Hospital at a cost of $62,000.

According to Director Walter Parks, M.D., a bill that is expected to be presented when the Legislature meets next spring could eliminate some of the indigent financial problems suffered at the local level.

"There are some things in the offing that are going to be a big help to us," Parks said. "Of course, that's not going to be of any help in the next three months or six months."

The proposed maternal health care bill would provide state funding to alleviate the duties "the individual counties can (not) or will not" provide, Parks said. As an example, the state would help fund transportation of indigents — an item many counties cannot afford.

"It's not a give-away bill," Parks said. "It's not putting out, like we are, $62,000 per case. It's limiting it to $5,000 a case."

Although a free prenatal clinic is offered at the Midland City-County Health Department on a limited basis, many of the county's indigent women do not take advantage of the service.

"The clinic just can't handle that many. Plus, there's a lack of interest," Parks said, adding that some pregnant women don't think they need prenatal care. "We take all we can but we don't have the personnel to handle that many more."

Parks, along with all other MMH obstetrics physicians, is required to donate services to the clinic on a rotating basis.

"Maybe it's better to expand the clinic and buy the radio time at the stations (for advertising expanded services) than to keep writing out $60,000 checks," said Director Frank Cahoon. "We're obligated. We have to treat the drop-in mother and we want to. But we do have other alternatives."

While Peterson attributes this year's increase in indigent care costs to the expense of improved neonatal technology, he gives credit for the overall favorable August finances to unexpected one-time adjustments.

The adjustments included a reduction in supplies expenses of $344,000, a $99,000 refundable capital surplus deposit and a $42,000 retrospective worker's compensation audit settlement.

Total hospital revenues also exceeded the budget by $312,383, despite patient days and average length of stay coming in under budget.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Wednesday's edition that the Midland Independent School District currently receives $17,469,900 from local revenue sources. It should have been $27,574,245. MISD currently receives $17,469,900 from state revenue sources.

Excavators work at the stockade site.

Work on dam allows stockade excavation

LITTLE FALLS, Minn. (AP) — A utility company's decision to lower the level of a Mississippi River reservoir to do some work on a dam has resulted in the discovery of a spartan fort built in 1805 by explorer Lt. Zebulon Pike.

Douglas A. Birk, the archaeologist in charge of the project, called the cramped stockade "one of Minnesota's major historical sites" and said it was the first substantial American government outpost in what was to become Minnesota.

"We're recapturing a lot of lost history here," Birk said Thursday.

Searchers found military badges, a chip from a sword blade, a U.S. Army button made between 1798 and 1802, hand-forged nails and the outline of an emergency winter outpost built by explorers too tired or hurt to go any farther. Charred post butts poking out of the ground are all that remain of the wooden structure.

President Thomas Jefferson in 1805 assigned Pike to explore the northern part of the Louisiana Territory, newly acquired from France. Pike was ordered to select strategic locations for military outposts and to negotiate treaties with Indian leaders. He led a 21-man unit to far northern stretches of the Mississippi River in October, when an onslaught of cold weather, injuries and fatigue forced him to stop about 90 miles northwest of what is now Minneapolis.

"It was already very cold. He wanted to go on further but felt he was killing his men," said Birk, who read Pike's diary.

Pike's men built the 36-square foot fort in one month, Birk said.

Nine men, mostly injured or sick, remained at the fort while Pike and the others trekked north in search of the source of the Mississippi. He never reached it and returned in March 1806 to the fort. Pike and his men picked up their gear and paddled downstream. The fort burned to the ground 10 years later.

Completion of the Blanchard Dam in 1925 inundated the site, leading scholars to conclude it had been lost, hopelessly buried in sediment or washed away. It was covered with silt and submerged under three feet of water.

On Sept. 15 Minnesota Power officials lowered the water level so that work could be done on the dam. Birk, scraping away sediment from a point off the river described in the diary, found the outline of the building.

More than 30 persons killed in bombing of Pakistani town

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan warplanes bombed a Pakistani frontier town, killing 32 people and injuring 48 in another border violation related to the Afghan civil war, Pakistani officials said today.

Authorities originally put the death toll from the Thursday night raid at at least 80, but then announced that the final figure was 32 dead. A government spokesman said there was confusion because many of the injured, mostly Afghans, were in "very serious" condition.

The attack on the bazaar town of Teri Mangal, eight miles from the Afghanistan-Pakistan frontier, was the 11th reported border violation by aircraft of the Soviet-supported Afghan regime since Aug. 13. Pakistan said the previous raids claimed 54 lives.

The Afghan government says some of the rebels who have been waging a guerrilla war since 1979 have taken refuge in Pakistan.

Marcos' party probing police response to protest

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines — The National Assembly, which is dominated by President Ferdinand E. Marcos' party, leveled unprecedented criticism at police for routing an anti-Marcos protest and today began investigating the violent clash.

The assembly unanimously passed a resolution Thursday night expressing "grave concern and grief" over the violence in downtown Manila earlier in the day, saying people have the right to assemble "without forcible interference." At least 34 people, including seven policemen, were hospitalized.

Marcos' New Society Movement holds a two-thirds majority in the assembly, which had never before passed an opposition measure implying criticism of the government.

The assembly's Committee on Justice and Human Rights was asked to begin an investigation today and issue a report in a week.

The police attacked 3,000 demonstrators when they gathered for a protest march Thursday on Marcos' palace several miles away. Police ordered the crowd to disperse, then fired water cannons and tear gas. The demonstrators responded with homemade shrapnel bombs and rocks. Twelve people received gunshot wounds.

It was the second time in a week that police had broken up a large demonstration. Many previous marches and rallies against Marcos had been unhindered and ended peacefully.

Agapito Aquino, brother of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino, said he would meet with other anti-government figures today to plan "new strategies" to end Marcos' 19-year rule and eliminate U.S. involvement in the Philippines.

He said demonstrators would not stick to protest rallies "where they can disperse us like animals."

As police broke up the march toward his palace Thursday, Marcos met with 50 newspaper publishers, editors and columnists, appealing for help in acheiving economic recovery for the nation.

Prime Minister-Finance Minister Cesar Virata and Central Bank Gov. Jose Fernandez were in the United States negotiating for a $630 million credit from the International Monetary Fund and other loans. The country has been unable to make payments for nearly a year on its $26 billion foreign debt.

Meanwhile, it appeared that a report from an investigating board probing the Aug. 21, 1983 assassination of Benigno Aquino would be delayed again. Board officials had been saying it would be released before the end of the month, but deputy counsel Francisco Villa said Thursday it may not come until next week.

Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fabian C. Ver, in an interview published today, denied there was any military conspiracy in the Aquino assassination. But he promised to court-martial anyone accused by the panel.

Ver said he believes an "unseen being" may have had some role in the assassination of Marcos' chief rival.

Australian dock workers boycott

DARWIN, Australia (AP) — Commercial shipping came to a standstill in the port of Darwin today as dock workers walked off the job to protest the arrival of a U.S. Navy nuclear-powered submarine.

More than 300 dock workers voted to stop work at the port to protest the good will call of the USS Aspro and its supply ship, the USS Proteus.

The workers, contending it was unsafe to work near the nuclear-powered vessel, said they would not bring ships in to port or do any loading or unloading while the Aspro and Proteus were in harbor.

Union spokesman Jamey Robertson said the workers would not return until the ships leave next Friday.

The two American ships were brought into the harbor and berthed by Royal Australian navy personnel. Many of the 900 crewmembers from the two ships went on leave as soon as they docked.

A handful of protesters opposed to nuclear weapons held a small demonstration as the vessels arrived, but police said there were no incidents.

The Australian government allows American warships to make full use of the country's ports under the ANZUS defense treaty between Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

Military monitoring recommended

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A key recommendation of a secret Central American draft peace treaty calls for establishment of a commission to monitor virtually all military activity in the region, including the withdrawal of foreign military advisers.

The seven-member commission would include four members from nations of "recognized impartiality," a Latin American executive secretary and one official each from the United Nations and the Organization of American States.

The proposed treaty, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, was drawn up by the four-nation Latin American mediation group founded 20 months ago on Panama's Contadora Island.

The document reflects the efforts of Venezuela, Colombia, Panama and Mexico to try to achieve peace in Central America through the establishment of democracy, limits on outside military involvement and respect for the principles of nonintervention.

The commission would be asked, under the treaty, to verify each country's pledge not to increase the size or quality its weapons inventory.

The panel also would receive information from each country on the number of foreign military advisers and verify their withdrawal in accordance with an agreed timetable.

This is considered to be one of the most contentious issues in the region because there is broad disagreement on the number of Cuban security advisers in Nicaragua. The United States says there are up to 3,000 while Cuba and Nicaragua put the total at 200. U.S. officials also note that many Cuban advisers could conceal their citizenship and remain on in Nicaragua indefinitely.

In an ironic twist, Nicaragua last week announced its willingness to accept the Contadora draft while the remaining four Central American countries and the United States all insisted it needed additional work.

Until the announcement in Managua, the Sandinista government had been widely viewed as the most reluctant member of the Contadora process. U.S. officials acknowledged that the Nicaraguan announcement was a propaganda victory for the Sandinistas.

The Contadora countries have distributed the draft to the Central American countries and asked that they prepare comments by Oct. 15 when a foreign ministers meeting among all nine nations is scheduled.

Wooden tablets dedicated to Hitler found in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Wooden memorial tablets dedicated in 1945 to Adolf Hitler and his propaganda minister, Josef Goebbels, were found in a Buddhist temple in central Japan, a temple priest said today.

The two wooden tablets, each about 12 by 4 inches, were inscribed on the front with the names of Hitler and Goebbels, and the date May 21, 1945 on the back, priest Chito Kurata said in a telephone interview. Such tablets are commonly prepared as memorials to deceased people in Japan.

Hitler is believed to have committed suicide on April 30, 1945 as Russian troops closed in on Berlin, and Goebbels killed himself the same day.

Soviet attache shot

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — A Soviet military attache was shot in the arm at his home by unidentified attackers last week and has been flown home for medical treatment, Western diplomatic sources said today.

The sources identified the attache as Col. Alexander Terentiez. The Soviet embassy refused to answer any questions on the matter.

The Western sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the colonel was treated at the capital's Nsambya Hospital before being flown out last Saturday.

Britons fear research

LONDON (AP) — The queen's former gynecologist and other doctors are calling for a halt to human embryo experiments that they say could lead to a chimpanzee surrogate mother giving birth to a human baby.

"I can foresee the day when a human baby is born to a chimpanzee. That might happen within 20 years," Sir Ian Donald, emeritus professor of gynecology at Glasgow University, told a conference of the Order of Christian Unity on Thursday night.

He and Sir John Peel, 79, who was Queen Elizabeth II's surgeon-gynecologist from 1961 to 1973, warned that accelerating research into the artificial production of human embryos could lead to the creation of half-human, half-animal creatures in the laboratory.

"This is not an impossible thought for the future. This is one of the things we're worried about.... Research is uncontrolled and unsatisfactory," said Peel, who has been consultant gynecologist at King's College Hospital in London since 1969.

Donald said, "It's only a matter of time before a baby will be grown to term outside the womb. Animals could be used."

The doctors' remarks came as the Christian Unity group, an interdenominational organization, published an independently conducted opinion poll showing that 75 percent of Britons oppose experimentation on embryos produced in the laboratory from donated sperm and eggs.

Naude visits politicians

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — The day after the government lifted his internal exile orders, anti-apartheid minister Beyers Naude visited six opposition politicians hiding from security police in the British consulate in Durban.

"I cannot support the Internal Security Act and have come to express my solidarity with the six fugitives and give them my moral support," said Naude, an Afrikaaner who is one of the prominent critics of the Afrikaan-led government's racial separation policies.

The Internal Security Act is a package of wide-ranging laws that allows police to arrest people without charges and hold them in secret detention. The government says the act is aimed at violent opponents of white-minority rule.

The police want to detain the six South Africans holed up in the British consulate for their part in organizing last month's boycotts of elections for new Asian and mixed race houses of Parliament. Some of the boycott activities turned violent, and the government attributed the low voter turnout to intimidation.

The six sought refuge in the consulate Sept. 13 after Minister of Law and Order Louis le Grange signed orders for their detention.

Britain has refused to intervene on behalf of the six, but says they will not be forced out of the consulate.

Miners ambush police

LONDON (AP) — Eight police officers were injured today when they were ambushed by 700 stone-throwing miners' pickets outside a north England mine in one of the worst conflicts in the 28-week strike, police said.

The pre-dawn fighting occurred at the Silverwood mine in Yorkshire, a strnghold of militant miners. A police spokesman said five of the eight injured officers and two strikers were hospitalized, some believed to have broken arms and legs. Five miners were arrested.

Newspapers reported today that the opposition Labor Party had stepped in with a new formula to end the walkout, and the mine foremen's union was scheduled to announce the results of a vote to strike in support of the miners.

Riots rock Maze prison

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Six convicted guerrillas and eight guards were injured in a fight between rival Protestant and Roman Catholic inmates at Maze prison in Belfast.

British authorities tightened prison security today following the fight Thursday, a spokesman for the Northern Ireland Office said.

The spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the violence was an apparent bid to intensify pressure on the British government to bow to demands by 10 Protestant hunger strikers in Magilligan prison near Londonderry for segregation from nationalist Roman Catholic inmates.

The spokesman said one inmate was hospitalized with head injuries in the Maze trouble.

Korea releasing inmates

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Justice Ministry said today that 804 prisoners will be paroled next week and 177 life-term prisoners will have their sentences reduced to 20 years under an amnesty decree.

Justice Minister Pae Myung-in said no political prisoners are covered by the amnesty, declared in conjunction with the upcoming National Foundation Day holiday on Oct. 3.

The ministry said the 804 criminals scheduled for release are model prisoners who have served more than 65 percent of their terms.

Antarctic visit slated

PEKING (AP) — China's first independent Antarctic expedition, scheduled to start Nov. 20, will include more than 100 scientists who plan to set up a summer research station, the China Daily reported today.

The official English-language newspaper said China began research on the Antarctic in 1980 and has sent 32 researchers to the region as members of foreign expeditions.

Libya hasn't withdrawn

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Libyan troops have not begun evacuating from war-torn Chad as called for in an agreement with France, Chad's information minister said.

France, which started a pullback Tuesday, has withdrawn troops and military equipment from its war front outposts at Salal and Arada south to Biltine and Moussoro, about 150 miles northeast of the capital, N'Djamena.

But French forces were stationary Thursday, apparently waiting for the Libyans to pull back to the north in accordance with the withdrawal agreement.

Dutch firm leads ships salvaging

By RAF CASERT
Associated Press Writer

OSTEND, Belgium — It's 142 years old and the largest in the business. It boasts that it can be on the spot anywhere in the world within 24 hours, and its chief spokesman says, "We never say no."

Smit Tak International of the Netherlands is a ship salvaging company whose latest big job is salvaging the 4,210-ton French freighter Mont Louis that went down off Ostend on Aug. 25 with a nuclear cargo — 30 steel containers of uranium hexafluoride and some slightly enriched uranium.

Over the years Smit Tak has become a sort of AAA of the high seas, responding to calls for tows or to put out oil-tanker fires.

Its 340 vessels include pontoons larger than football fields, fire-fighting craft that pour water on burning ships at a rate of 19,000 gallons a minute and ocean-going tugs that tow oil rigs all over the world.

"We take on all jobs, anywhere," said the company's chief spokesman, Henk Drenth. "We did not know the day (the Mont Louis) sank that it carried radioactive material. The owners told us that later."

Smit Tak assigned a 30-man crew, including divers, to retrieve the containers of uranium hexafluoride being sent to the Soviet Union by France for enrichment.

As the crew members went about their work in the North Sea, other Smit Tak crews were towing dozens of oil rigs across oceans, Drenth said. Still others were dousing a burning oil tanker in the Persian Gulf and salvaging ships off Egypt, Spain, Sri Lanka and in the Red Sea.

The oil tanker was a victim of the Iran-Iraq war and the sixth to be salvaged so far this year by Smit Tak.

"We can be paid either by the day or get a lump sum for a job," Drenth explained in an interview.

But for the work on the Mont Louis, Smit Tak and the Belgian salvaging firm l'Union de Remorquage et de Sauvetage, whose tug reached the scene first, chose a third possibility: a "no-cure, no-pay" contract.

Under this option, they get a percentage of the value of the cargo, in this case estimated at $10 million.

The insurer Lloyd's of London, as arbitrator, will fix the exact amount which Drenth said will depend on the working conditions, the size of the salvage crew and the state in which the cargo is retrieved.

"But in principle the reward of any 'no-cure, no-pay' deal can go as high as 95 percent of the value of the cargo.

"The reward in the case of the Mont Louis is an open question at this point."

"We're busy day and night," said salvage operator Paul Goris of l'Union. "No-cure, no-pay eggs us on to get the stuff out as quickly as possible."

The highest pay-out Drenth said he could recall for salvaging a ship ran to more than $14,000 a day.

Smit Tak's 3,300-member work force operates out of the company's head office in Rotterdam, the Dutch port.

Drenth said that nearby is a warehouse filled with salvaging and fire-fighting equipment worth almost $8 million, adding "It is stocked in containers ready to be flown anywhere in the world at a moment's notice."

He said there are similar warehouses in such widespread places as Galveston, Texas; Bahrain; Curacao; Hamburg; Singapore, and on the Red Sea at Jidda, Saudi Arabia.

"We can be on the spot in 24 hours anywhere in the world," he said.

This past May, several Smit Tak tugs spent five days putting out a fire on the Al Ahood, a tanker whose engine room was hit by a missile in the Persian Gulf.

Drenth agreed with French and Belgian officials who have said there was little danger in the Mont Louis' cargo.

"Ships carrying chemicals are much worse," he said. "We salvaged decayed ships in the (Persian) Gulf carrying all kinds of dangerous chemicals in plastic bags. When these chemicals react with water, then we have a rather nasty situation."

Troop talks begin again with same deadlock

By LARRY GERBER
Associated Press Writer

VIENNA, Austria — The nearly 11-year-old talks to reduce NATO and Warsaw Pact forces in Europe have resumed after a summer recess, with East and West still stuck on the same issue — the number of each other's troops.

The talks have been the only major East-West arms negotiations to proceed since the Soviet Union last year walked out of two sets of talks in Geneva on reducing nuclear arms.

Dutch Ambassador Jan Hein van de Mortel, speaking to reporters after the talks resumed Thursday, said the bargaining on troop deployment should not be complicated by East-West tensions or problems with other negotiations.

"We hope that an in-depth dialogue on concrete issues will now develop," he said.

A Warsaw Pact spokesman, Jozef Sestak of Czechoslovakia, said: "The socialist countries are not giving up in their determination to lead the Vienna negotiations off the (stand-off) created by the West."

The negotiations involve troops in West Germany, East Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

NATO negotiators have claimed that the Warsaw Pact forces in the region outnumber the West's.

Sestak claimed that Warsaw Pact forces in the region number 980,000, to 990,000 for NATO. Van de Mortel avoided giving specific troop estimates, saying the figures are constantly in flux. But he claimed NATO is outnumbered by more than 150,000 ground troops and by more than 200,000 men when air and support forces are included.

The dispute over how many troops each side has — known in negotiators' jargon as the "data issue" — has been a major stumbling block.

Proposals made in 1983 by the Soviet bloc called for troop withdrawals to begin without agreement on the number of existing troops.

In past years, the West has insisted that each side agree on how many troops are actually in the region before proceeding with reductions. But on April 19, NATO dropped that insistence.

Lookin' to win

For 12 years, the AA farm club of the Chicago Cubs has called Midland home, but it came as no real surprise Thursday when the Midland club's co-owner, Bernard Lankford, announced the signing of a new contract, this time with the California Angels.

A number of Midlanders might wonder about the change since the Chicago team has done so well this season, having just won the National League East title. It was the first time in 39 years the Chicago Cubs had won a title.

But in the world of professional sports the won-loss column is paramount. That's because winning teams attract crowds, which translate into profits for the team's owners and, sad though it was, the Midland team hadn't been a consistent winner, producing only one co-championship in the Texas League in its years here. Lankford alluded to that fact at the news conference in which he announced the change when he said, "We were looking for someone with more dedication to their farm system and an organization that would field, if not necessarily a winning team, a competitive team."

Of course, there were other reasons. In winning the National League East this year, Chicago Cubs general manager Dallas Green relied heavily on talent from the Cubs' farm system to enhance trades for his team. While that talent helped the Chicago team, it hurt the farm teams such as Midland which also have to justify their existence via gate proceeds.

So it's understandable that the local owners would make a change in affiliation. Somebody has to pay the light bill for the stadium. And, according to Lankford, this change may help do that.

If it does it will be great for the local owners, the California Angels organization and Midlanders, too, because it will mean action-packed baseball. Midland is ready for that kind of professional sports affiliation.

In bidding the Cubs farewell, thousands of Midlanders will recall good times spent at Cubs Stadium over the past decade. But now it's time for that relationship to end. So welcome to Midland, Angels! We hope to have a great relationship with you in coming years.

Michener's example

James A. Michener deserves a 19-gun salute for the manner in which he thanked his alma mater for the college education it gave him.

The object of the distinguished author's affection and appreciation was Pennsylvania's Swarthmore College, one of the most respected centers of higher learning in the country. Fifty-nine years ago a $2,000 Swarthmore scholarship made it possible for a young high school boy by the name of Michener to go to college. Fifty-nine years later he paid back the "loan," plus interest of $1,998,000. Along with the money went this word of thanks:

"That's one thousand to one, just about the financial value of a good liberal arts education. Of course, the spiritual value is a lot higher."

Mr. Michener added a thought that ought to be read and reread by any members of the modern generation who take a college education for granted. Said he of Swarthmore: "People don't realize that these kinds of institutions are great because they exist in the tradition of the humanities. My education paid off handsomely, but it was no accident."

James Michener's gratitude is of the noblest order. By reimbursing Swarthmore College for its scholarship, with interest added, he has set a good example for alumni and alumnae all across the nation.

Hong Kong accord

After two years of negotiations, Britain and China have concluded a draft agreement on the future of Hong Kong. In broad definition, the provisions of the agreement are clear enough. Britain will transfer sovereignty of its colony to China in 1997. Thereafter, although Hong Kong will be a part of China, it will be governed by local officials, its currency will remain convertible, its judicial system will continue and freedoms of press, speech and travel will endure. The negotiators envision that Hong Kong will continue as a thriving enclave of capitalism perched on the edge of the great land mass of communism.

The first reaction within Hong Kong has been positive; and why not? The transfer date is far enough into the future so that a good deal of money can be made in the meantime. Plenty of time remains for Hong Kong's affluent citizens to make their decisions as to their personal futures. Moreover, the agreement itself assures an orderly change of sovereignty, which, in turn, should eliminate uncertainty and promote stability. Both are important for Hong Kong's economic health.

Yet the details, as yet unpublicized if indeed worked out at all, will be important, and it is upon them that Hong Kong's real future depends. It is well and good to talk about press and speech freedom, but Peking has experienced neither and, in fact, has always been hostile to the concepts. How will China react in times of social or political stress in Hong Kong? Will it attempt to manipulate the local government?

The gross outlines of the transfer agreement, in short, appear encouraging. The enduring uncertainty is whether a totalitarian communist regime can ever be tolerant of and hospitable to social and economic freedom.

Soviet arms verification tough

WASHINGTON — President Reagan meets today (Sept. 28) with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. Some implacable anti-Soviet advisers wanted the president to confront Gromyko with charges that the Soviets have routinely violated arms agreements.

Jack Anderson

In fact, a report was prepared, accusing the Soviets of arms-treaty violations.

But the president has overruled the hotheads and stopped the release of the report. In too many cases, intelligence reports of Soviet violations are riddled with "ifs," "buts" and "maybes."

Equally experienced analysts can look at the same raw data and come to different conclusions: i.e., that the Soviets are violating arms-control treaties repeatedly or that they are keeping strictly to the letter of the treaty limits.

How is this possible? My associate Dale Van Atta investigated one classic example of confusing intelligence: the alleged Soviet violations of the 1974 Threshold Test Ban Treaty.

He examined top-secret CIA, Pentagon and National Security Council studies on the treaty. Here's what he found:

The treaty itself is simple. It bans underground testing of nuclear devices with a yield of more than 150 kilotons. Though both sides have yet to ratify the treaty, they signed it and agreed to abide by its provisions.

Unfortunately, the only way to accurately measure the size of an underground explosion is to have seismographs close to the blast site. The Soviet Union will not allow this, so the United States must resort to guesswork — sophisticated and scientific quesswork, but guesswork nontheless.

Because U.S. seismic monitors are thousands of miles from Soviet test sites, the information must be compared with similar data obtained from U.S. and French tests of known kiloton yields. But as one secret NSC report noted, "the seismic waves from Soviet explosions travel through the earth ... along paths very different from those of U.S. or French explosions."

Furthermore, U.S. estimates rely heavily on comparisons with data from the Nevada Test Site, although the geophysical conditions may be entirely different at the Soviets' Central Asian test site in Semipalatinsk.

The result is that the size-estimate of Soviet test explosions — what scientists call the "central-value yield" — can be off by a factor of two. If the central-value yield is exactly 150 kilotons, for example, the actual size of the Soviet test bomb could be as low as 75 kilotons — or as high as 300 kilotons.

Since 1974, the United States has detected 18 Soviet test explosions that had a central-value yield of more than 150 kilotons. After 14 of these, the United States secretly delivered complaints to the Kremlin, but "given the uncertainties involved in our yield-estimation process," a secret report explained, the Soviets were not accused outright of violating the treaty. In each case, the Soviets replied that the tests were 150 kilotons or less.

There's no way U.S. scientists can contradict the Soviets with certainty. In one explosion — on Sept. 14, 1980 — the central-value yield of 315 kilotons seemed to indicate that the Soviets had set off at least a 157-kiloton bomb, seven kilotons over the treaty threshold.

But since even the central-value-yield limits are only a 95 percent probability, there was a 5 percent chance the blast was, in fact, 150 kilotons or lower.

To compound the uncertainty, the U.S. methodology used in 1974, when the treaty was signed, produced estimates 150 percent higher than the current system. That would mean the Soviets could have tested at least a 393-kiloton device four years ago — and possibly one as powerful as 1,574 kilotons.

But nobody knows if the current test-monitoring method is more valid than the one used in 1974 — or if both are cockeyed.

HYPE OF THE WEEK: Republicans are gleefully calling their effort against Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., the No. 1 congressional race in the country.

The reason? Jones, chairman of the House Budget Committee, failed to list the amount of his wife's income on his financial disclosure form and the details of a loan he cosigned for her.

Jones' wife, Olivia, made less than $5,000 a year for three years from a house-renovation partnership. Republican challenger Frank Keating, a former U.S. attorney, tried to make hay out of the situation.

But a congressional Democrat observed that "if the best thing Keating can come up with is that Jim forgot to check the right box on a disclosure form, then Keating is in trouble."

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: A presidential commission headed by industrialist Peter Grace scrutinized the government's books for ways to eliminate excessive spending.

His survey came up with 2,478 ideas to reduce federal waste, inefficiency and over-spending. How much would these proposals save the taxpayers?

Answer: $424.4 billion over the first three years, more than enough to wipe out the federal deficit.

Lebanese mum on bombings

WASHINGTON — Lebanese intelligence officials suspect but will not identify the Shiite fundamentalists in the Beirut area behind the truck-bombing of the U.S. Embassy, confirming growing U.S. impotence — matched by an alarming Soviet resurgence — in the Middle East.

Information obtained by Lebanese agents about the fourth major terrorist attack on U.S. installations in the Middle East is not being confided to the U.S. Suspicious of American policymakers, officials in the Beirut regime may fear that U.S. retaliation would further damage Lebanon's status in the Arab world.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

There is not the slightest taint of suspicion that any Lebanese official had prior knowledge of the attack that killed two Americans. But resistance to confiding in Washington shows the depths to which trust in the U.S. has fallen in Lebanon since the collapse of Secretary of State George Shultz's well-intended effort to arrange simultaneous withdrawal of Israeli and Syrian troops.

In this mood of malaise, neither diplomats nor specialists in anti-American terror are willing to speculate publicly on where terrorists will attack next. One intelligence insider told us: "This is a dog that does not bark. We cannot know where it's going to happen next."

A good guess is one of the small Persian Gulf states such as Bahrain or the Arab Emirates, or even another stab at Kuwait. A slaughter of American diplomats at the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait last winter was barely foiled, largely by good luck.

The situation is symptomatic of America's Mideastern malaise, deriving from policy decisions in Washington. The veto by the U.S. in the United Nations Security Council early in September of a Lebanese-sponsored resolution condemning Israel's occupation conduct almost certainly helped trigger the terrorist attack on the new U.S. Embassy in presumably secure Christian Beirut.

Seeking to avoid the new stigma of a veto, Shultz and top Mideast hands at State almost begged Lebanon to hold off offering the resolution. But the weak Lebanese government, faced with the grave deterioration of its southern regions under Israeli occupation, went ahead anyway.

Lebanese officials privately told the U.S. that Israel's refusal to soften its harsh regimen in occupied Southern Lebanon made delay of the U.N. resolution impossible. They said they had no other choice with Lebanese families divided, commerce at a standstill and Shiite killings by the Israeli-run Southern Lebanon Army a common occurrence.

Loss of influence in the small country where the U.S. had exercised full sway ever since President Eisenhower landed troops there in 1958 is matched in reverse by Soviet movements throughout the Middle East. That's a situation Reagan administration officials prefer to play down — as when Kuwait was about to sign a multimillion-dollar weapons deal with the Soviets this past summer.

Robert C. McFarlane, the president's national security adviser, said he doubted that any such deal would actually be consummated. Despite McFarlane's reputation for prudence, he was proved wrong. Indeed, the Kuwait-Soviet arms deal has now entered a deeper phase, with the first-ever agreement to accept Soviet advisers and technicians to train Kuwaitis on their new Soviet arms.

In Egypt, the return of the Soviet ambassador to Cairo and the Egyptian envoy to Moscow marks a restoration of normal diplomatic relations that Israel, helped by the U.S., is unable to persuade the Egyptians to duplicate. Egypt put its Israeli relations on hold, pulling its ambassador out of Tel Aviv after Israeli troops moved into Southern Lebanon.

Considering Egypt's importance in the Arab world, Soviet influence rises throughout the Middle East because of its closer ties with Cairo. The Kremlin's Mideast stock also is boosted by the new alliance between Morocco, America's closest North African Arab friend, and Libya, a hated enemy of Washington and ally of Moscow. The Moroccan-Libyan alliance is an offense to American sensibilities that would not have been contemplated five years ago.

In this framework, reluctance of the Lebanese intelligence service to confide in the U.S. government is chilling. It points to even colder days ahead in once warm relations between the U.S. and the Arabs, as Washington ever more builds Israel as its only ally in the region.

Governor offensive

First, I must say Gov. Mark White's original idea was a good one: to improve our educational system. We all want our public schools to be the very best they can be.

However, I found his remarks, quoted in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on Friday, Sept. 14th extremely offensive. Because someone disagrees as to method does not mean he "is more concerned about winning games than about teaching kids." The goal of educators is to help each child reach his fullest potential, not encourage the more intelligent and "trash" the rest. The governor's remark that "smart ballplayers win more than dumb ones" was not only shallow, but callous and destructive.

It is true that the "school reform bill" has been the main topic of conversation in coaching circles during recent months. But Gov. White will be surprised to learn that the coaches I've been listening to have been most concerned about individual students, not about won-lost records.

If he had done his homework, Gov. White would know that students who fail classes often have never been eligible to participate in athletics. Further, honor students will not be affected by this particular provision either. So the focus is on the "average" student: the boy or girl who perhaps makes B's and one or two C's. This student often encounters one or two problem areas during his high school years. Perhaps it is in the first few weeks of geometry, or of calculus. He may have a little difficulty grasping the theories at first. But he works hard, and with the help of his teacher, or perhaps a friend, he brings his grades up again.

In the meantime, however, he has been thrown off the football team. When he returns he finds someone else filling his position, and the season is nearly over. If this is his senior year, he may very well feel it has been ruined. Of course, in time he will realize it was not the "end of the world," and with luck there are no permanent scars. But what positive effect has this rule had?

Consider a student who has missed school because of a serious illness or accident. She returns to discover that the tutoring helped, but in one class she has difficulty at first because classroom participation has been missed. So she is put off the basketball team. She can bring her grades back up, but how have we helped her?

Finally consider the student who has faced a divorce or death in the family, or the transfer student. Here the potential for real damage is greatest. Just when he needs support and friendship the most, he is told he may no longer join friends, but is pushed into the "non-achieving" group where his contact with fellow students could well lead to loss of interest in school, drugs, or alcohol.

I certainly do not defend the abuses in athletics — we all want to see them corrected. But the wrong solution to a problem can be more harmful than the problem itself.

I beg the members of the Legislature to consider this provision of the bill very carefully, and then make the necessary adjustments.

Mrs. Paul Stueckler
Midland

Lack of space hinders library

The unsung heroines of this town are those gracious women who so efficiently attend the library.

They need space to shelve that which we have and receive almost daily new entries.

Perhaps with a little encouragement some oil family or oil company would donate a block of land, well located, for a new building or a four-story wrap-around with escalators would get the job done for maybe a century. And a basement under all of it as museum space — already well located!

Midland with all of its wealth could do either easily and quickly.

Jimmy Little, attorney for convicted murderer Velma Barfield, is surrounded by members of the Barfield Support Committee during a news conference in Raleigh, North Carolina Thursday after Gov. Jim Hunt refused to grant clemency for Mrs. Barfield who is scheduled to die Nov. 2 for poisoning her boyfriend.

Woman wants no more attempts to save her

Velma Barfield

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Velma Barfield, who fatally poisoned her mother, her boyfriend and two other people, asked that no further attempt be made to save her after Gov. James Hunt refused to stop her Nov. 2 execution.

The 51-year-old Mrs. Barfield would be the first woman put to death in the United States in 22 years and the first in the state since 1944. She has the option of dying in the gas chamber or by lethal injection.

The Democratic governor, who is in a highly charged campaign for the U.S. Senate seat held by conservative Republican Jesse Helms, denied accusations that "political pressures" played a role in the decision and said he was upholding "the fundamental rule of law."

Defense attorney Jimmy Little said Mrs. Barfield would not seek a stay of execution unless her lawyers change their minds that an appeal might eventually succeed.

"Velma feels that the emotional upheaval ... should come to an end," Little said after informing his client of Hunt's announcement that clemency would be denied. "She is prepared to accept the governor's decision."

Little said he filed a motion in Wake County Superior Court late Thursday asking that no request for a stay be considered unless he or another of Mrs. Barfield's attorneys filed it.

Mrs. Barfield was sentenced to death in 1978 for poisoning her boyfriend, Stuart Taylor of St. Pauls. She confessed on the witness stand that she also poisoned three other people, including her mother, but was not charged in those deaths.

Her supporters tried to convince Hunt that she committed the murders while addicted to prescription drugs that impaired her reasoning. They said she has undergone a religious conversion while in prison and benefited society by counseling scores of female inmates.

At a packed news conference in his state capitol office, Hunt said it was his "sworn duty as governor of this state to uphold the fundamental rule of law."

George Gardner, executive director of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union, referring to the Nov. 6 election, said he regretted that Hunt made the decision "at a time when political pressures were paramount.

"I know there had to be considerations other than the evils of the death penalty in the governor's decision," Gardner said.

Hunt said politics did not make "any difference whatsoever. That has no place in the consideration of a matter of this kind, and it has had none here."

Deputy press secretary Lynne Garrison said Hunt received 4,798 letters and signatures on petitions involving the Barfield case. Of those, 2,926 favored her execution and 1,872 opposed it.

Mrs. Barfield's attorneys had turned to Hunt on Sept. 15 as a last resort after the U.S. Supreme Court rejected her request for a new trial in August.

"I cannot in good conscience justify making an exception to the law as enacted by our state legislature, or overruling those 12 jurors who, after hearing the evidence, concluded that Mrs. Barfield should pay the maximum penalty for her brutal actions," Hunt said.

Hunt said there was "evidence" that Mrs. Barfield had been involved in yet a fifth death, but would not elaborate.

Alice Taylor Storms, Taylor's daughter, said Hunt's decision did not surprise her.

"There was no other decision but to deny clemency," Mrs. Storms said in a telephone interview. "Basically, we are very satisfied with what Gov. Hunt has done...."

Sylvia Andrews, daughter of John Henry Lee, whom Mrs. Barfield confessed to poisoning, said Hunt "went by the merits of the case. I feel he has not been connned by Mrs. Barfield."

Tax shelters not for rich, but penalties may be

WASHINGTON (AP) — Low- and middle-income Americans in growing numbers are buying into what they consider the ultimate tax shelter: they make a small down payment on an overvalued investment and "finance" the balance through the Internal Revenue Service.

Using such a scheme, a taxpayer can wipe out all tax liability for the current year and get back all taxes paid in the three previous years.

IRS Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr. offers a blunt warning to lower-income people who are investing in such tax-avoidance schemes, which once were confined to the wealthy. "If you're going to taste forbidden fruit," he says, "be prepared to pay the price."

When well-to-do people get caught in "abusive" tax-shelter arrangements, they usually have no trouble settling their accounts with the IRS. But for lower-income taxpayers, Egger noted in a recent interview, it often creates a collection problem for the agency, which sometimes ends up confiscating a family's property for back taxes.

The latest shelter scheme is built on a law designed to help businesses survive when expenses — tax deductions — in a given year exceed income. If the resulting loss is too big to be used up in one year, it can be carried back over as many as three years, canceling any tax liability for those years.

The law permits a business to file a Form 1045 with the IRS, which is required to process the filing within 90 days and — if it looks proper — to issue a refund for those years.

In a typical lower-income tax-shelter scheme, a promoter will buy a nearly worthless musical recording and, by passing it through a series of hands, inflate the price to $250,000. An investor will make a $2,500 down payment and sign a 12-year note for the balance, which, on paper, would be paid off with proceeds from the sale of copies of the tape.

By claiming a 10 percent investment tax credit for the $250,000 purchase, a $25,000-a-year wage earner can avoid any tax liability in the year of purchase and have enough "loss" left over to exceed all the tax paid in the three most recent years. The person files a Form 1045 and within 90 days gets a refund of those taxes.

Another promoter might set a lower price on the tape, accept the down payment and mark the account closed as soon as a share of the refund is received.

"The thing takes on as many variations as there are promoters," Egger said. "But the promoters know it is impossible for us to audit all the returns in 90 days. In the great majority of these cases, they know they are going to get their money back."

In the typical case, Egger said, an investor might get back $15,000 from the IRS. "What will he do with it? Pay a sizable chunk to the promoter, of course; pay bills, buy a car, take a vacation. But we are reasonably sure that by the time we complete an audit, assess a deficiency, impose a penalty and interest, we are going to have a collection problem. They won't be able to pay."

Already, Egger said, "we have identified thousands of (shelter) returns with heavy, heavy involvement of people with relatively low incomes — in the $15,000, $25,000 category."

During a spot check at its Kansas City service center this summer, the IRS examined 71 tax-shelter plans whose filings for refunds looked suspicious. Twenty-five involved 271 lower- and middle-income investors — "factory workers, secretaries, athletic coaches, teachers, school principals, court reporters, salesmen and draftsmen," Egger said.

He said it is clear some professional tax-return preparers are advising taxpayers to invest in such arrangements. "At one service center we found numerous returns from a single preparer — you would swear he literally had run off the returns on a duplicating machine. They were identical."

Al James Golto of the H&R Block tax-preparation firm agreed with Egger that lower-income shelters are getting more attention from promoters because of the IRS campaign against "abusive" shelters used by the wealthy.

Egger said the IRS will fight lower-income schemes with the same tools Congress recently approved for attacking shelters of the wealthy. These include requiring promoters to register tax shelters with the IRS and give the agency a list of every investor.

Train hits school bus, kills two, injures driver

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — A freight train smashed into a bus carrying four private school students Thursday, killing two and injuring the driver, who was the mother of one of the victims, officials said.

The other two students escaped in time and were not injured.

"It appears that the bus stalled out while making the crossing," said Linda Main, a Florida Highway Patrol supervisor in nearby Fort Pierce. A railroad official said he understood that the bus went around a lowered gate at the intersection.

"When I got there the crossing was activated and the arm was down," said Chief Warren Alford of the St. Lucie County sheriff's department.

The National Transportation Safety Board sent a team to investigate.

"Two of the children were able to exit the bus from the front door just prior to the collision," the Highway Patrol said. "There was one child asleep on the rearmost seat. While two of the children exited ... the third child ran to the rear of the bus to awaken the sleeping child."

Those two — identified as Raimie Finn, 12, and John Douthitt, 10 — were thrown from the bus. They were pronounced dead at the scene, said Thomas Honaker, administrator of Port St. Lucie Hospital.

According to Alford, the bus from the Indian River Academy in Fort Pierce had just started its morning rounds when it was struck by the Florida East Coast Railway train about 7 a.m.

The train was on its way to New Smyrna Beach from Miami and was traveling about 40 mph, according to the Highway Patrol.

The other two students — identified by the patrol as Shawn Finn, the 15-year-old sister of one of the victims, and Kevin Hazellieff, 13 — "were unharmed and needed no hospitalization," Honaker said.

The driver, Cindy Burnett Douthitt, 28, mother of the boy who was killed, was in stable condition with multiple fractures, Honaker said.

The bus was torn from its frame by the impact and thrown 65 feet, said Alford.

The private Christian school, which has 420 students in kindergarten through 12th grade, suspended Friday's classes, said Ed Lounds, chairman of the school's board.

"There has been a certain amount of grief," he said. "It's like the grief of a family."

NTSB investigators were dispatched from the Atlanta district office, said Brad Dunbar, a spokesman in Washington.

"We don't know what the safety issues are but we do know it was a protected crossing," he said. "The obvious initial question is how did the bus get on the tracks with the train approaching."

Priest resigns after pleading guilty to soliciting prostitution

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A priest who pleaded guilty to soliciting sexual acts from a male Portland police officer who was posing as a prostitute has resigned from the parish post he held less than a month.

Archbishop Cornelius M. Power said the Rev. Peter Shea, 52, resigned as pastor at St. Philip Neri Catholic Church in southeast Portland following a meeting with the archbishop, who oversees the church in Western Oregon.

Prior to his recent appointment to the Portland post, Shea was a pastor in Austin, Texas.

Last week, Shea pleaded guilty to a charge of prostitution and was fined $50, according to Paul Silver, assistant chief district attorney for Multnomah County.

Shea was one of 17 men arrested for soliciting the male undercover officer. Others arrested included a school teacher and several area businessmen.

NATION IN BRIEF

Deaths of two workers investigated

ROMEOVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A processing unit of a Union Oil Co. refinery has been cordoned off while investigators probe the deaths of two workers killed by falling debris while they were cleaning up after an explosion that took 17 lives in July, company officials say.

A third worker was injured by the debris Thursday, said Union Oil spokesman Barry Lane.

The July 23 explosion at the refinery left 21 people injured and rattled homes and windows for miles.

Thieves 'automatically' arrested

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Two of three men charged with stealing $40,000 from malfunctioning automatic teller machines were arrested as they tried to buy plane tickets to Hawaii, authorities say.

A late-model car allegedly bought with the illicit bonanza from the thefts Sunday and Monday also was seized when the third man charged in the theft was arrested, police said.

"There apparently was a malfunction with the bank card they were using or the computer running the machine," and the money-counting system didn't work, said Detective Capt. Ernerst Stelzer said. "The machines kept spitting out the money."

Crystal Cathedral gets tax refund

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (AP) — The Crystal Cathedral, a church that lost its tax exemption and paid $473,185 in taxes under protest, has received $247,922 in refunds but says it may press for the remainder.

The church, site of televised Christian services by the Rev. Robert Schuller, got the refund Wednesday after the Board of Equalization restored a partial exemption the church had lost for holding commercial events in its sanctuary.

Michael Nason, a church spokesman, said the church board would decide whether to challenge the refund decision.

Illegal immigrants lose court battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illegal immigrants from El Salvador have lost a court battle for special status that would exempt them from being returned to their war-torn homeland.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey ruled Wednesday that the Reagan administration properly is exercising its discretion in seeking to force the Salvadorans to leave the United States.

An estimated 300,000 to 500,000 Salvadorans are in this country illegally.

Hospital union receives charter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees has received its charter as the 96th affiliate of the AFL-CIO.

In a ceremony at the headquarters of the 13.8 million-member labor federation Thursday, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland presented the charter to Henry Nicholas, president of the 60,000-member hospital union and one of only two blacks who head AFL-CIO affiliated unions. The other is Frederick O'Neal, president of Associated Actors and Artistes of America.

Nicholas' union had been a division of the larger Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Workers Union, but it broke away from the parent union earlier this year.

Security increased at Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Security has been increased at the two entrances to the U.S. Capitol grounds, with police cars ready 24 hours a day to ram unauthorized vehicles that might try to enter.

Capitol Police Sgt. Karen Magee said Thursday a police car manned by a single officer had been assigned to 24-hour duty just inside the checkpoints at the north and south entrances to the building's parking lot.

"It's been in the works for some time," she said. "We haven't received any specific threats."

In recent years, a few cars have sped through the lot and even broken through police barricades, but no car bomb attacks of the type that have damaged U.S. Embassy buildings in Beirut have ever been attempted at the Capitol.

Mubarak sends message to Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian Foreign Minister Abdel Meguid, bearing a message from President Hosni Mubarak, has told President Reagan that Egypt sees some hope for reviving the long-stalled Middle East peace process.

Meguid declined Thursday to say when that might be, but he replied "yes" to reporters who asked if Egypt sees a chance of getting the peace process going again.

"I think there are some hopes and indications," he said.

While he would not discuss the contents of the Mubarak message to Reagan, Meguid said his government has "some ideas about the whole process and we have expressed them to our friends, particularly the United States."

Pre-school tries to stay afloat amid drug trade

LENNOX, Calif. (AP) — The Stepping Stone Pre-School, a small island in a steady stream of drug trafficking, is struggling to keep open despite falling enrollment which its owner blames on the illicit trade outside its front door.

Marijuana salesmen hail cars passing on Inglewood Avenue and shove handfuls of contraband through open windows.

Sometimes, they lean inside vehicles to haggle along the one-mile stretch of road that has become the most popular market for illegal drugs in the South Bay, an oceanside suburban area near Los Angeles International Airport.

Police are frustrated, Lennox residents are angry and neighbors are scared.

"I think what I object to more than anything else is their enthusiasm," said the school's operator, Reita Dodge, 49.

"I've had a lot of friends and people tell me that I should be (afraid), even the police department," said Ms. Dodge.

However, the parents are afraid, she believes, and enrollment has suffered at the school Ms. Dodge began operating eight years ago. She says she built enrollment from 15 to 50 in that period, but it's back down to 30.

Police say they've been able to do little because investigations are difficult and costly — they have to observe a transaction to build a case that will stand up in court, and the needed surveillance requires teams of officers concentrating on the drug trade.

Ms. Dodge said she went to police, but they were unable to help. At one point, she said, she approached cocaine dealers directly and asked them to leave, and the next day graffiti was scrawled on her school.

Finally, last week she told the Torrance Daily Breeze, a local newspaper, about the problem in hopes publicity will help clear the streets.

"I can't take it any longer," said Ms. Dodge. "I've never been that much of a fighter, but I'm a fighter now."

Los Angeles County sheriff's Detective Trudy Thompson, a narcotics investigator, says people come from "all over" to buy drugs on Inglewood Avenue, which is bordered by a mix of commercial and residential buildings.

"They don't have to know anybody. They don't have to get out of their car. They can drive up, stop, somebody comes up to them. It's simple," Ms. Thompson said.

"You've got a flagrant violation of the law that the community is up in arms about," said sheriff's Capt. Robert N. Wilber, Lennox substation commander who met with residents Aug. 23 and plans another meeting Monday.

Mike Neill, owner of a tax preparation business, said he lost 200 clients in one year because of the drug traffic.

"I cannot believe that the police department and the district attorney and the judicial system allow this to go on," he said, citing several occasions when he called county officials. "I felt like I was throwing my tax dollars down the toilet."

Charles Griffin says his son, Charles, who goes to the school, asked why police don't stop the drugs.

"I said, 'Well, you know, there's only so many policemen that's around,'" Griffin said.

In order to build a criminal case that will stand up in court, deputies are required by the district attorney to observe the transaction, cite the buyer, and arrest the seller.

'Dogs, Steers meet in District opener

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

After soaring to the heights, the Midland High Bulldogs are once again back on the ground. It's not because their balloon has burst in their 3-0 season, but because they are suddenly winning games with a ground attack and an aggressive, hard-hitting defense.

Gone is the all-out aerial attack of last year that saw passes nearly every other play — and sometimes more often. And, gone is Odessa Permian, the traditional brutal District 4-5A season opener for the Bulldogs.

Replacing these two departed items are a vastly improved running game that compliments the pass and the Big Spring Steers — an improved team in its own right at 2-1. The Bulldogs will definitely see the latter and hope for the former tonight as they open their 4-5A season with an 8 p.m. kickoff at Memorial Stadium.

THE BULLDOGS are ranked fifth after pre-district play in total offense with 883 yards. Of those, 634 came on the ground largely due to the efforts of 4-5A rushing leader, halfback Keith Byrd. Byrd has gained 323 yards and scored two touchdowns on 55 carries.

Byrd is also one of Midland High's leading receivers with six catches for 65 yards and that gives him 388 yards for the lead in 4-5A tandem offense.

"Keith is a real good competitor," said first-year Midland High coach Doug McCutchen. "But, having not played running back before, he's a bit inexperienced but he's doing a good job finding the holes and continuing to run after he gets hit. It's a fine credit to his competitiveness."

Byrd is just part of the offensive attack Big Spring coach Quinn Eudy is impressed and concerned with.

"I think Midland High probably has five of the best athletes in the district this year," said Eudy. "I naturally think we'll have to stop their veer offense, the rushing attack.

"From what I've seen of it, Coach McCutchen has done a great job of implementing it from a totally different concept (the all-out passing game)," continued Eudy. "Like I said, he has five, and maybe six, of the best athletes with probably the greatest tight end in the world (Darrell Davis), a split receiver with sprinter's speed (Allan Foret) and Byrd who is leading the district in rushing."

DAVIS, WHO is fourth on the receiving list in passing yardage with 120 yards from five catches, also doubles as a linebacker.

McCutchen has also seen a few things about Big Spring he has been impressed with.

"Probably a couple of big things about Big Spring this year is they have one very aggressive team. They keep coming at you," said McCutchen. "The other is they play the whole game. Both games they've won were come-from-behind victories in the fourth quarter (against Snyder and Lubbock Monterey). They're well coached and have the ability and desire to go out and win.

"Big Spring has three real good backs," continued McCutchen. "Jay Pirkle is probably the one we're most familiar with. He's back from last year and is an excellent runner. They'll probably go to him when they need some yards.

"Another back is Colin Carroll who alternates with Pirkle. And their quarterback last year, Tommy Gartman, has moved to halfback. But, the thing that makes Big Spring work this year is their quarterback Carl Speck. He runs the veer. He does a good job with the pitch and he throws well."

Eudy admits Pirkle will be getting a lot of offensive playing time, but, being a defensive starter, will use offense as a chance to take a break when he needs one. Carroll is listed as the starting fullback ahead of Pirkle.

SINCE BOTH teams run out of the veer attack, little the Bulldogs or Steers do should come as much of a surprise to the other's defense.

"It gives both of us an advantage, to a certain extent, in that we see the offense ourselves," said Eudy. "We will have to execute the offense, try and establish the run first. We have to try and control the ball and keep it away from their offense. We'll probably try and throw the ball about 10 or 15 times."

By trying to keep the ball out of Midland's hands doesn't mean Eudy is worried about his team's defense, even though it is second to last in 4-5A stats, allowing 245.3 yards per game.

"Our defense has played super all year," said Eudy. "It's probably been our big emphasis this year. I think it will be tested very well because of the great job Midland does running its' offense."

Statistically, defense is the strongest point in Midland High's game plan, placing fourth in the district by allowing 189.3 yards per game and only 20 points.

"The defense has really done a great job," said McCutchen, who saw his defenders scored upon early against Monterey and Andrews and follow with scoreless football the rest of both games. "They accept the challenge this year and are playing with a lot of intensity. Even though they're still learning the new defense, they make up for mistakes with enthusiasm.

"I think we're going to realize the situation we're in (being unbeaten) and go after Big Spring," said McCutchen. "It should be a great ball game. We need to realize that we need intensity to start off the district right."

And, as far as Midland High is concerned, keep it up until the season is over.

Angels ousted from contention

Associated Press

The California Angels have fallen from the chase, and the Minnesota Twins are left with only a slim hope of capturing the American League West — all without the division-leading Kansas Royals lifting a bat.

Both the Angels and Twins lost Thursday night while the Royals were idle, and now the picture in the AL West looks like this:

The Royals lead the Twins by two games and the Angels by four, with three games left for each team. That eliminates the Angels, and either a Kansas City victory or another Minnesota loss would clinch at least a tie for the Royals.

The Twins lost their third in a row, 4-3 to the sixth-place Cleveland Indians, on a home run by Jamie Quirk with two out in the ninth inning. Quirk had not been to bat for the Indians since being recalled from the minors on Monday.

"How did he get here?" Twins catcher Tim Laudner asked. "I don't know if he just showed up and they gave him a uniform, or what."

The Angels lost 2-1 to Texas on a sixth-inning homer by Ned Yost.

"Yeah, first place is over," Angels Manger John McNamara said. "It's gone. Going into the season, I honestly felt we could pull it out, even though no one thought we could."

The Royals finish up with three games in Oakland, beginning tonight. The Twins have three more at Cleveland.

Laudner and Ron Washington had homered to help give the Twins a 3-0 lead when Mike Smithson gave up a Cleveland run in the eighth inning on Jerry Willard's RBI single.

Enter Twins' reliever Ron Davis.

Davis, now 7-10, gave up two more runs on a walk, a sacrifice, an RBI grounder and a run-scoring single, tying the score 3-3. Then, in the bottom of the ninth, Davis struck out the first two hitters before Quirk, a former Royal, homered just inside the right-field foul pole.

"I might have just helped them (the Royals) put at least 20 grand in their pockets, if they get to the playoffs," Quirk said.

American League

AP Laserphoto

Minnesota's Mickey Hatcher (right) is out at home in the sixth inning of the Twins game at Cleveland. The Tribe knocked off the Twins with a ninth-inning home run.

Rangers 2, Angels 1

Yost's two-out solo homer in the sixth broke a 1-1 tie, and Dickie Noles pitched four innings of one-hit relief for the Rangers.

The Angels have lost six of their last seven games, starting with the second game of a three-game series at home against Texas. "It just sort of snowballed after that," McNamara said.

Reggie Jackson gave the Angels a 1-0 lead with a fourth-inning homer, his 25th, but the Rangers tied the score in the bottom of the inning on Yost's sacrifice fly.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

You want dumb? Call UIL

This has to be a bad weekend for H. Ross Perot and Gov. Mark White, perpetrators of Texas' new education reform legislation.

"Dumb" athletes will be taking to the field in District 4-5A openers and one game — Lee vs. San Angelo — has captured the imagination of the entire state. This certainly isn't what Perot and Gov. White have in mind. I guess they would rather all football teams stay at home and look up a couple of local drug dealers.

GOV. WHITE recently said, "I'm frankly tired of seeing some coaches come out and say, 'Why don't you let our kids flunk one course?' Some of them are more concerned about winning ball games than about teaching kids.

"Coaches ought to get their priorities straight. We're going to win some ball games, but I've found that smart ballplayers win more than dumb ones."

Come January, high school athletes, band members, drama students and any other student involved in extra-curricular activities must pass every course in order to participate in events outside the classroom. Otherwise, according to Gov. White, you're just "dumb" and don't deserve to suit up.

I think that is a stiff penalty for most any student and I wonder what the alternative will be for the student who runs into trouble with one course. Drug dealers probably lobbied for this legislation.

The reason this measure concerns me is that it hits close to home. If this legisation had been in effect in the early 1960s, I know one person who would have missed football season in 1962. I know this person better than I know anyone in the world — it's me.

I CAN remember having trouble with a chemistry course during football season. I passed with help of the final exam, but under these new rules where 70 is passing and eligibility required weekly, I would have missed football season.

I was certainly not an example of a great honor student, but I don't consider an overall high school average of 88 as "dumb." I guess Gov. White and I come from different school systems, but I did graduate from college — despite trouble with high school chemistry. The final question is should I have not been allowed to participate in athletics because I ran into trouble with one course? I frankly can't see how that punishment would have helped me.

And for Gov. White's information, the last time I noticed most coaches in this state are also teachers or have been. Is he now saying that coaches don't care about education? I guess they teach classes just for the fun of it.

So, while we still have high school football in an acceptable form, here's this week's District 4-5A picks.

Midland High 24, Big Spring 7: Both have beaten Lubbock Monterey while Midland High defeated Lubbock Estacado, a team Big Spring lost to. The Bulldogs could have run Monterey off the field, but sputtered offensively in the first game. Those problems are being eliminated weekly, so watch for a big MHS show. The Bulldogs will be emotional. They haven't been 4-0 since the 1950s and the Steers aren't Odessa Permian.

Midland Lee 17, San Angelo 7: Early in the week I was going to pick San Angelo just as a reminder to Lee fans. But careful study through the week convinced me that San Angelo's win last year was a fluke. Lee won't beat themselves this year.

Odessa Permian 34, Abilene High 7: Fort Worth Eastern Hills coaches are saying that Permian is the No. 1 team in the state after losing to both No. 1 Longview and No. 2 Permian. Abilene High lost to Longview last week, so it follows that the Eagles can't handle Mojo.

Abilene Cooper 21, Odessa High 14: This is one you hate to pick because it could swing either way. Cooper, however, is one quarterback ahead of the Bronchos.

"We learned eight plays today. Eight. I was at UH (the University of Houston) for three years and I think we had four plays, maybe six." — Akeem Olajuwon, the 1984 first NBA draft pick, speaking Monday after completing his first practice under Houston Rockets Coach Bill Fitch.

1919 — In the shortest nine-inning game in major league history — 51 minutes — the New York Giants beat the Philadelphia Phillies 6-1.

1920 — A Chicago grand jury indicted eight members of the Chicago White Sox on charges of fixing the 1919 World Series, which was known as the "Black Sox Scandal."

1938 — Gabby Hartnett hit his famous "homer in the gloamin'" in the ninth inning against Mace Brown to give the Chicago Cubs a 6-5 victory — their ninth straight — at Wrigley Field. It was a key triumph en route to the Cubs' National League pennant.

District 8-AA unbeatens a good bet to stay there

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Looking through the glass a month ago, the Greenwood Rangers appeared to be headed for a roller-coaster season.

Coach Joe Longley's Rangers were bumped upstairs to Class AA for the 1984 season, and although Longley claimed they weren't ready for the bigger time, those fears are sounding more and more empty.

You see, a funny thing happened on the way to a rebuilding year. It never got there. The Rangers are going about their business where they left off - they beat Iraan last year en route to eight straight wins and a district championship.

As things stand, the opposition in District 8-AA may find that Greenwood is ready, willing and eminently able to spoil their party. To date, the Rangers have ripped through three opponents and have yet to be scored upon.

And as Greenwood prepares for tonight's home date with Grandfalls, they seem to be gaining steam.

The runnin' Rangers won't have any troubles tonight, and they've got another patsy next week in Rankin. In all, the Rangers look to be headed for a collison course with 8-AA enemies in two weeks. Grandfalls will take a not-so-grand fall tonight, 46-8.

The peerless prognosticator went 6-1 last week, and only an upset win by Rankin over Water Valley spoiled the slate. For the year, area teams have complied with the forecast enough for an 18-5 record through three weeks.

LEADING THE chase capably in the 8-AA are Reagan County and McCamey. The Owls are as much as a surprise as the Rangers. With a new coach and a new philosophy have come a new record. At 3-0, the Owls have already exceeded by one their win total of a year ago. Even more incredible is that the Owls have won their last two games against District 7-AAA teams, and face another this week at Coahoma.

Big Lake won't have to worry about that after tonight. They should be more than ready to take on the 8-AA after sinking Coahoma 14-13.

McCamey's hard-hitting defensive unit has surrendered only six points in three games, and the Badgers appear to have things going their way again for coach Buster Leaf. McCamey smashed Alpine 25-0 last week and travel south to Van Horn tonight. Van Horn hasn't shown much this year, so the Badgers should put on a clinic by about a 33-7 score.

Stanton dropped a 7-0 game to Crane last week, and that was the first Buff setback of the year. Defense has also been a Stanton strength of late, and they should do admirably in a home date against Ozona. The lions have been pretty feeble lately, but the Buffs had trouble against the bigger Cranes. Still, the home field advantage ought to be worth something. A win, perhaps? The answer is yes, and the score sounds like 13-12.

As for the Cranes, after three weeks they have managed only one score but made it stand for the win over the Buffs. Now Crane faces Alpine, and coach Rickey White can breathe easier. Momentum means a lot in high school football, and the win over Stanton undoubtedly made for more enjoyable practice sessions this week. Call it Crane, 20-0.

Rankin also lit up the scorebaord and the win column for the first time last week by erasing a 12-0 lead to beat Water Valley 15-12. The Red Devils still have a long way to go, but Big Mo' probably will carry the Devils to a 19-6 win over Forsan.

Adkison leads MHS

From Staff Reports

Except for Midland High's sophomores, Thursday was wet and gloomy for the sophomore and junior varsity football teams.

MHS sophomore Anthony Adkison had the biggest day of all, however, in leading the Bulldog sophomor unit to a 41-18 win over the Big Spring sophomore squad.

Adkison rambled for touchdowns of 79 and 93 yards to open and close MHS scoring in the rout. After the Steers had netted an early 6-0 lead, Adkison went on his first jaunt with Richard Tripplett's PAT giving the 'Dogs a 7-6 edge.

The MHS running game also was prominent, especially after Jaime Madrid rambled 29 yards for a second-period score. The conversion failed, but not after MHS's third score on a 19-yard pass from Adkison to Ricky Duran. Big Spring connected on a long scoring play as the half ended, but missed the conversion for a 20-12 halftime count.

In the third quarter, Madrid got a fling at quarterback and hit Lee Atwater on a 15-yard scoring pass. That made it 27-12. Tyrone Oliver had a 16-yard run early in the fourth quarter to put MHS up 34-12. The Steers countered with a scoring drive to get their final points, then Adkison streaked 93 yards for the final tally.

The sophomores are now 3-1. They have the next two weeks off.

Lee's sophomores canceled their date with San Angelo due to weather and travel problems.

The junior varsity took the day off without planning to, as Angelo eked out a 14-7 win over the Lee JV.

The Bobkittens got off to a fast start then held on to hand Lee it's first loss of the year. Doug Bonds punched in a 6-yard run for the first tally, then he hit Sammy Stewart on a 53-yard strike to give San Angelo a 14-0 advantage.

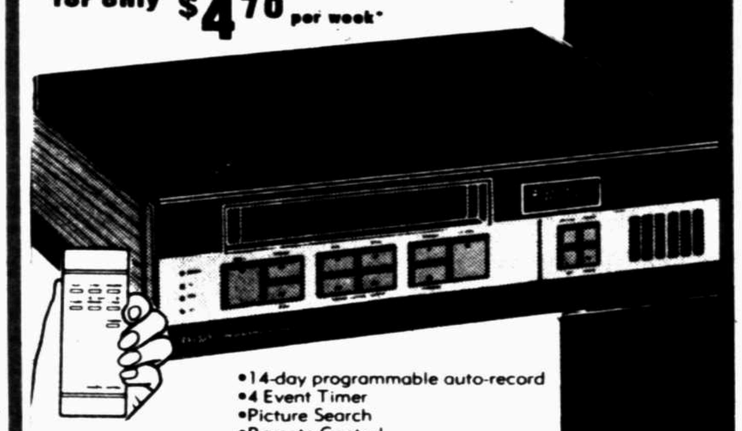

Both scoring drives came as a direct result of Lee fumbles.

Tommy Wood got Lee rolling just before halftime with a 25-yard scoring run, but that was all as SA shut the door defensively.

The Bobkittens are now 3-1.

Midland High's JVs fell to Big Spring by a 28-6 count.

VOLLEYBALL

"I told Celina she'd probably have to serve every point in the third game," said MHS coach Sonja Pittman. "She almost did too. What did she end up with anyway?"

Of Carrasco's 12 points, including her second game winner when Permian's Leeann Rood was whistled for an illegal set at 14-12, nearly all were hard shots that barely cleared the net.

"It's a good thing she did serve so well tonight," said Lanz. "Without her serves, we might not have won. We all seemed to be serving the ball well, but her's just seemed to be working."

In all, Carrasco served for 18 of the Bulldogs' 40 total points. But, like a true team player, Carrasco wanted to pass around the credit.

"I feel like we played together, all around, real well," said Carrasco. "Amy Hubbard, our setter, played well and so did everybody else. I feel if we keep it up we can keep winning."

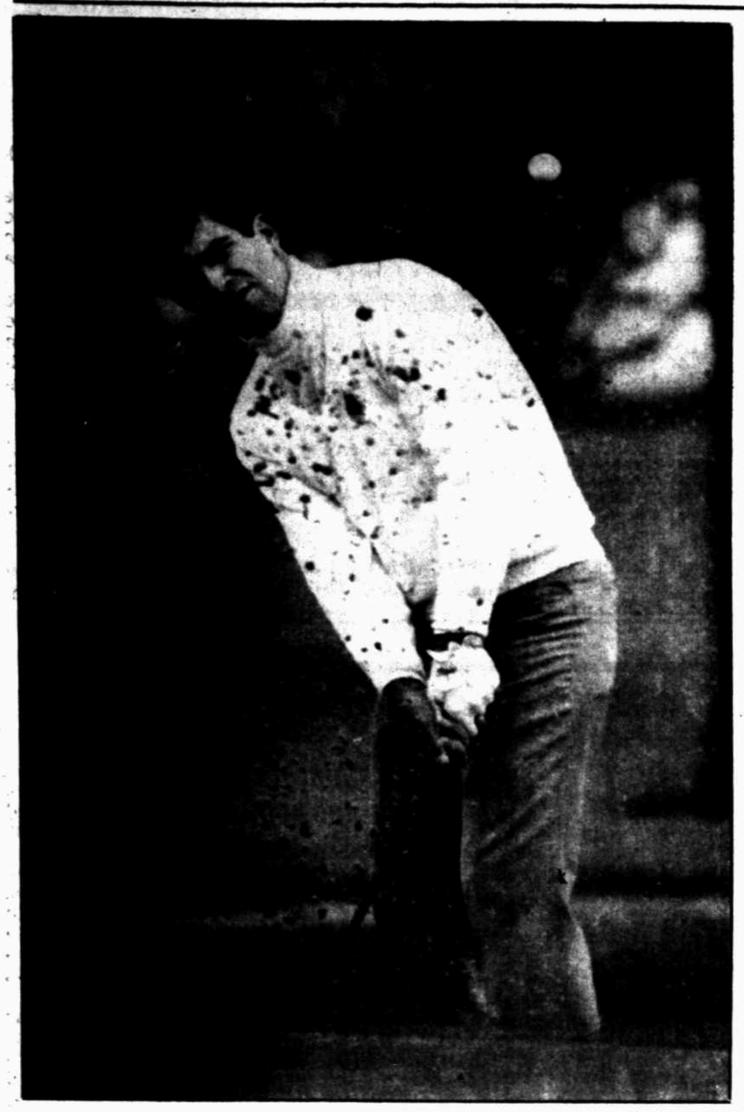

"If we keep it up, we have a chance at San Angelo," chimed in teammate Lauri Wilson about District 4-5A's year-in and year-out leading nemisis. "I think we can beat them."

CARRASCO ALSO pointed out that Permian played an exceptional game.

"I think they're pretty good," said Carrasco. "They may be 0-5 (0-6 after the loss to MHS), but they don't play like it. If we would have lost this one it would have hurt our chance at district."

"Permian played great," echoed Pittman. "Everything we put down, they brought back up. They played really incredible defense. People will have to look out for them in the second half because they're going to beat somebody. They'll probably be a spoiler because the race for second is so close."

The Bulldogs, now at 4-2, are in the midst of that race and will close out the first half of the 4-5A season Tuesday night against cross-town rival Midland Lee at Lee Gym. The varsity match is scheduled for 7 p.m., preceeded by the junior varsity at 6 p.m.

PGA Tour rookie Brett Upper blasts out of the sand trap on the 14th hole at the LaJet Classic in Abilene. Upper, Jodie Mudd and Ronnie Black carded 66s for the first-round lead.

Upper, two others tied at LaJet

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Ronnie Black and rookie Brett Upper both spoke of experience, of the maturing process necessary on the PGA Tour, after they moved into a tie for the first-round lead in the $350,000 LaJet Golf Classic.

"I have gained immeasurable experience in the last two years," said Black, now in his third season on the tour and a two-time winner.

"It's just experience. My game has matured. I'm a better driver, a better putter, I hit the ball better," Black said Thursday after his 6-under-par 66 had given him a tie for the lead with Upper and Jodie Mudd.

"The first half of the year I was just getting adjusted to the tour. It has been a learning experince for me. As the year went on, the more I learned, the more confidence I got, the better I played," said Upper, who has had a couple of eighth-place finishes in the last two months.

But Tom Watson, trying to nail down a record sixth Player of the Year title, spoke of a problem that has nothing to do with experience — a reluctant putter.

"It's just putting — just like it was at Milwaukee," said Watson, who made a last-minute entry in this event in an effort to protect his two-point lead on the Player of the Year standings.

"I made a couple of no-brainers (a 35-footer for birdie and a 45-footer for eagle-3), but the putts I needed to make, I either mis-hit or misread," Watson said after his 70 in the chilly, cloudy weather.

PGA champion Lee Trevino had the same total on the 7,166-yard Fairway Oaks Golf Club course that was robbed of its natural defenses by the absence of wind.

A single stroke off the pace at 67 were Curt Byrum, Howard Twitty, Canadian Dan Halldorson, Mark Brooks, Dan Forsman, Jim Simons and Vance Heafner.

Upper finished off his effort with birdies on the last two holes. Black, a winner in the Anheuser-Busch earlier this year, rebounded from a tee shot into the water on the 10th with birdies on the 11th and 12th.

And Mudd, attempting to gain the 125th spot on the money-winning list and an exemption for next year, missed only one fairway, hit 16 greens and was in the fringe on the other two.

Lachemann canned as main Brewer man

From Wire Reports

BASEBALL — Milwaukee Manager Rene Lachemann, whose Brewers will finish in last place in the American League East Division this season, was fired and former Brewers manager George Bamberger was named to replace him in 1985.

Bamberger managed the Brewers from 1978-1980 before stepping down after undergoing heart surgery, then managed the New York Mets in 1982 and part of 1983 before again resigning with health problems...

GOLF — South Africa's Gary Player, the veteran in the field, defeated Japan's Tommy Nakajima 5 and 4 in the first round of the $183,000 Suntory World Match Play Championship.

Other first-round winners included Corey Pavin of the United States, Toru Nakamura of Japan and Nick Faldo of Britain...

TENNIS — Yugoslavia took a surprising 1-0 lead over Britain in a Davis Cup tennis series, as Marco Ostoja, its No. 1 player, beat British newcomer Stephen Shaw 5-7, 6-4, 9-7, 6-2 in a 3-hour, 4-minute match.

In the second singles, Britain's John Lloyd, ranked 29th in the world after playing well in the U.S. Open, and Slobodan Zivojinovic were tied 6-4, 5-7, 7-5, 3-6, 5-5 when darkness halted play...

Paul Annacone defeated Dan Cassidy 7-6 (11-9), 7-6 to advance to the quarterfinals of the Seiko Super Men's Professional Tennis Tournament at the Neal Blaisdell Center.

Marty Davis downed John Alexander of Australia, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4, in the day's other singles match...

BASKETBALL — Sam Bowie says that he's flattered to be mentioned in the same breath as Bill Walton and will be happy if his talent approaches that of the former Portland Trail Blazer star center.

The Blazers hope Bowie becomes the team's first dominating big man since Walton left for San Diego six years ago.

Bowie, the second player chosen in June's National Basketball Association draft, reached a contract agreement with the Blazers Wednesday. The six-year pact, to be signed today, reportedly earns the 7-foot-1 Kentucky star some $5 million, making him the third-highest paid rookie in NBA history...

General Manager Norm Sonju says the Dallas Mavericks have gone as high as they will go in trying to sign first-round draft choice Sam Perkins.

If that's true, the all-American forward-center from North Carolina may not be playing for the National Basketball Association club this season, Perkins' attorney said.

"Dallas has had a marvelous system, but the honeymoon is over," Perkins' attorney, Lee Fentress, told The Dallas Morning News. "He (Perkins) is going to get what he's worth. Either that, or he'll play somewhere else, or he won't play at all."

Neither Perkins nor Terence Stansbury, whom the Mavericks took with the 15th pick in the June draft, reported for the team's rookie camp on Wednesday.

Nicholls rips SHSU, 24-6

THIBODAUX, La. (AP) — Fullbacks Oscar Smith and Lionel Vital combined for 143 yards rushing and one touchdown apiece Thursday night in a 24-6 Nicholls State football victory over Sam Houston State that gave the Colonels sole possession of first place in the new Gulf Star Conference.

Quarterback Keith Menard combined with Dwayne Brown on a 45-yard touchdown pass play and Scott LeBlanc kicked an 18-yard field goal in helping Nicholls to its second consecutive win after an 0-3 start. The Colonels are 1-0 in the GSC.

Sam Houston State, 3-1 and 1-1, got its only scores on field goals of 37 and 30 yards by Jeff Jones in the second and fourth quarters.

Smith finished with 76 yards on 13 carries and Vital gained 67 yards on 17 tries as the Colonels shelved a usually potent passing game in favor of a rushing attack, anchored by a ferocious offensive line, that ground out 212 yards on 45 carries.

Menard had 10 completions on 17 attempts for 158 of Nicholls' 170 passing yards.

Vital's touchdown, Nicholls' second of the game, came from a yard out with 28 seconds left in the 14-point second quarter, while Smith scored from the two late in the game.

A blocked punt by Darnell Carmouche set Nicholls up at the Sam Houston 20 and Vital scored seven plays later.

It didn't start out so easy for Nicholls. Sam Houston State drove 76 yards with the opening kickoff only to be stopped at fourth and goal from the one.

Bowie Kuhn poses with an autographed bat outside his New York office Thursday as he packs up on his final day as commissioner of baseball. Former Los Angeles Olympic Committee President Peter Ueberroth is the new commissioner.

Kuhn makes way for Ueberroth

NEW YORK (AP) — There was no brass band playing "Hail to the Chief." There were no bandoliered bodyguards wearing tall fur hats. No coaches and white horses. No twenty-one gun salutes.

No pomp. Only circumstance.

The circumstance was Bowie Kuhn was moving out. There was a changing of the guard, of sorts.

"You know this day is coming, but it's still sort of a shock when it arrives," Kuhn said, standing among the boxes of papers and books that were the accumulation of 15½ years as commissioner of baseball.

Although he officially rules the game until Monday, Oct. 1, he physically moved out of his office Thursday night to make room for the new man, Peter Ueberroth.

"I had a few years to think about it, so, presumably, it should not come as a monumental thing," he said. "But it still is."

Few were there to usher him out, although he did receive several telegrams and phone calls from, among others, Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig and New York Yankees boss George Steinbrenner.

Kuhn's daughter Alix helped him pack a few things — enough to fill more than 20 boxes sitting in the hallways outside his office — but she tried to stay out of the pictures that chronicled her father's exit.

Kuhn, in shirtsleeves and suspenders, stood behind his desk. His favorite autographed LeRoy Neiman print of Willie Stargell no longer hung there; it was standing in the hallway alongside the boxes. Some shopping bags, stuffed to overflowing, sat on a chair by the window at 350 Park Avenue in midtown Manhattan.

"Do you think we're finally putting to rest those stories that say I'm not really leaving," he said, smiling, always smiling.

"Now here's a poignant note, isn't it?" he said, autographing a baseball. "I'm signing my last baseball."

Besides giving Ueberroth plenty of time to unpack, Kuhn left the office a little early to accept an invitation to fly to Korea for that country's World Series, which begins Sunday. He also will participate in a ceremony opening the stadium in Seoul that will be the site of the 1988 Olympics.

Kuhn, who turns 58 next month, said he would return to the United States in time for the real World Series, but he would not attend. He might not even be at home in Ridgewood, N.J.

"I haven't made up my mind," he said. "There's a weekend during the Series that may be my last chance to see the leaves in Vermont. I have a place up there. I might be there."

In any case, he will watch the World Series on television for the first time since he took office on Feb. 4, 1969, succeeding Gen. William Eckert as baseball's fifth commissioner.

"It will be a different experience," he said, "perhaps a little on the pensive side. But being away from the responsibility of baseball will be fun. I can root for whom I want."

And whom might that be?

"I can't answer that yet. I'm still commissioner until Oct. 1," he said. "Ask me in Korea."

George Allen quits coaching job

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — George Allen, saying it was "a day of sadness and a day of pride," resigned Thursday as head coach of the United States Football League's Arizona Wranglers, apparently ending his 14-year pro coaching career.

Allen, 66, said he would remain with the organization as chairman of the board and part owner. He named assistant coach and offensive coordinator Paul Lanham as his successor.

Lanham, 53, told a hastily called news conference that "this is a time of great mixed emotions for me. How do you replace a legend?"

Although Allen did not completely close the door toward his possible return to coaching, he said he would "be there to help" Lanham, who has never been a head coach before.

"He won't falter. Paul will do a good job. He's an old friend and a colleague who's been with me since way back in my days with the Washington Redskins in the National Football League," Allen said. "I'll be here every day trying to make this franchise successful. I'm not leaving football. I'm just changing jobs."

Allen, who led the Wranglers to the Western Conference championship last season, said he reached his decision to step down about midnight Wednesday night and informed team owner Dr. Ted Diethrich over dinner.

"I left the table in tears," said Diethrich, a noted Phoenix heart surgeon. "I knew it was the end of a coaching relationship and I was deeply saddened to see that. But Coach really isn't leaving. He'll be advising us on a daily basis."

Diethrich also announced that "there are no plans to merge the Wranglers with any other USFL team at this time" and added that the team hierarchy would stay intact with Allen's 28-year-old son, Bruce, remaining as general manager.

"Everything is set for this franchise to continue to win," Allen said. "I'll miss being on the sidelines, but there are areas within the franchise that are more critical at this point than what is happening on the football field, like league meetings. I'm anxious to lend my expertise in those matters."

The resignation came as a complete surprise since Allen was last seen here at a Wranglers' tryout camp Aug. 25 and told The Associated Press that he was returning as head coach and honoring the final year of his $300,000 contract.

"My problem is I'm ready to go as soon as I hear the burr of the projector. I just got caught up with being back," Allen said Thursday. "I've really been tossing this idea (of resigning) around since the championship game against Philadelphia."

Arizona lost 23-3 to the Stars in the USFL title game July 15 in Tampa, Fla. It ended a storybook season in which the Wranglers rallied from a 6-8 record in late May to finish 12-9 and keep from becoming Allen's first losing team.

"I wouldn't go through last year again for $20 million, $30 million or $40 million," said Allen, who came to Arizona after the Wranglers and Chicago Blitz swapped franchises last Sept. 30. "It was a disasterous transition. But we turned what looked like a disasterous season into a conference championship. It may have been the best coaching job I've ever done."

"I've been very fortunate. I've accomplished just about everything I ever wanted to do in football."

"In the end, we never put our hitting and pitching together at the same time," McNamara said. "But I'm not going to change anything for the rest of the games because we still have a shot at second."

Yankees 2, Tigers 1

Don Baylor's one-out pinch single in the eighth inning drove in the tie-breaking run as the Yankees beat Detroit's ace reliever, Willie Hernandez, who hadn't lost since Aug. 14.

Red Sox 4, Orioles 3

Mike Easler's single scored Tony Armas, who had doubled, with two out in the eighth inning as Boston rallied to beat Baltimore.

Mariners 7, White Sox 2

Seattle scored seven runs in the sixth inning, highlighted by rookie Rick Valle's three-run homer, his first in the majors. The Mariners started the sixth with five consecutive singles.

Cristina Ferrare won't apologize for her semi-nude photographs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Model Cristina Ferrare says she is "not going to apologize" for semi-nude photos of her that appeared in a Brazilian magazine.

The photos in the Sept. 8 edition of the weekly Manchete had been used seven years ago to illustrate a story in Harper's Bazaar.

The Harper's edition "was a beauty and health issue and I did some photos in the buff, in the jacuzzi, in the buff," said the former model who recently separated from her husband, former automaker John De Lorean.

She made the remarks Thursday on "AM Los Angeles," the local talk show she co-hosts.

"I was a big girl when I did it and I am not going to apologize for it," said Ms. Ferrare, 34.

The photo editor of Manchete said the pictures were "no big thing" and did not even boost the issue's sales.

ROME (AP) — Filmmaker Federico Fellini says his next movie, "Ginger and Fred," will be about a couple of veteran dancers — but their names won't be Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

The film, Fellini's first project since "And the Ship Sails On," will star Fellini's wife, Giulietta Masina, and Marcello Mastroianni, Italian newspapers reported Thursday.

"'Ginger and Fred' is not the biography of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, as many people have suggested," Fellini, 64, was quoted as saying by the Turin daily La Stampa. "I just want to tell the story of a couple of old dancers and make a parody of the modern world."

Miss Masina starred in Fellini's 1954 film "La Strada," which won the Oscar for best foreign film.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Richard Gere faces an Oct. 25 hearing on charges he assaulted a garage attendant after harassing the man for eight months.

Gere, accused of assaulting Harold White, appeared Thursday in Manhattan Criminal Court, where he pleaded innocent and was released on his own recognizance.

White said Gere jumped him from the rear, then punched, kicked and choked him on July 11 after having harassed White "for the past eight months by repeated foul and abusive language."

Gere's lawyer, Martin Garbus, denied the charges, saying his client is a "highly respected and accomplished actor with an exemplary background and a history of service in the community."

Gere starred in the movies "Officer and a Gentlemen," "American Gigolo," "Looking For Mr. Goodbar" and "Breathless."

George Wallace

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Doctors will try to determine the origin of a fever that has put Gov. George C. Wallace back in the hospital, for the fourth time since his inauguration.

Wallace, 65, had no comment to reporters or onlookers as he was wheeled into University Hospitals on Thursday.

"About mid-morning his fever was about 101 to 102 degrees," said Billy Joe Camp, the governor's press secretary. "He worked in the office yesterday and woke up this morning feeling badly. He hasn't been in for a checkup in a long time."

Wallace, who has been wheelchair-bound since a gunman's bullet crippled him during his 1972 presidential campaign, was hospitalized three times for a total of 36 days during the first three months after his inauguration in January 1983.

LOVEJOY, Ga. (AP) — Former Sen. Herman Talmadge says he's ready to marry for the second time, at age 71.

Talmadge, who divorced his first wife seven years ago, said Wednesday he will marry Linda Pierce, a 45-year-old Gwinnett County home economist employed by the University of Georgia Extension Service.

"It will be soon," Talmadge said, although both he and his bride-to-be refused to disclose the date. Talmadge, who was divorced in 1977, was defeated for re-election in 1980.

Former Vietnam Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, left, talks with Vietnam veterans at the Vietnam Memorial in Wasington during May 1983. Bunker, who died Thursday at the age of 90, presided over the "Vietnamization" of the conflict and the withdrawal of hundreds of thousands of American troops who were replaced by South Vietnamese.

Bunker dead at age 90

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. (AP) — Ellsworth Bunker, a diplomat under seven presidents who was ambassador to South Vietnam during the height of the war in Southeast Asia and oversaw the "Vietnamization" of the conflict, has died at age 90.

The veteran statesman had been hospitalized at Brattleboro Memorial Hospital since Sept. 13 and died Thursday evening of complications of a viral infection with his wife and daughter at his side, said family spokesman Alan Carter.

The 6-foot-2-inch Bunker, who stood ramrod straight with a full head of white hair and wire-rimmed glasses, was the image of a diplomat.

In 1962 he served as a special negotiator and helped avert war between the Netherlands and Indonesia over Dutch New Guinea. Bunker was a peacemaker again in Dominican Republic in 1965. And before his retirement in 1978, he was chief U.S. negotiator for a new Panama Canal Treaty.

But it was in South Vietnam that he played his most prominent foreign policy and diplomatic role. Appointed ambassador by President Lyndon B. Johnson in April 1967, Bunker was a major symbol of American military involvement during the war's bloodiest and most divisive years.

Born in Yonkers, N.Y., on May 11, 1894, Bunker graduated from Yale in 1916 with a bachelor's degree in history and economics. He started out unloading sugar for the National Sugar Refining Company, which his father had helped to found. By 1940 he had risen to president of the company, and became its chairman of the board in 1948.

Bunker entered public service in 1951 when President Truman appointed him to serve as ambassador to Argentina during a low point in relations with that country.

He later served as ambassador to Italy, India and Nepal and was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1963 and 1968.

He was a delegate to the United Nations General Assembly in 1956, and in 1962, served on the U.S. National Commission for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

That same year, he helped avert war between the Netherlands and Indonesia over Dutch New Guinea, now called West Irian. Bunker again played peacemaker in 1965, serving as chief mediator between warring factions in the Dominican Republic.

As ambassador to South Vietnam from 1967 until May 1973, Bunker presided over the "Vietnamization" of the conflict and the withdrawal of hundreds of thousands of American troops, who were replaced by South Vietnamese.

Earlier this year, Bunker was asked to assess America's involvement in Vietnam. "I think it was a great tragedy," he said. "I feel very strongly that by the end of 1972 we had achieved our objective, made it possible for the South Vietnamese to defend themselves.

Movie called most violent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It hasn't been a good month for John Milius, the director of "Red Dawn," but he isn't taking it lying down.

The National Coalition on Television Violence called the movie the most violent on record and said its depiction of invading Communist troops is "rapidly preparing America for World War III."

Peace demonstrators marched outside MGM-UA in protest of what it said was Milius' "comic-book mentality of war."

MGM-UA apologized to veterans groups in Alaska who protested the movie's ad line: "No foreign army has ever occupied American soil. Until now." Japanese forces captured two Aleutian Islands during World War II.

Critic Vincent Canby of the New York Times called him "emotionally infantile" and "politically nuts."

Milius contends that "Red Dawn" rather than promoting war shows that "nobody wins these wars." He added, "I suppose that next some extreme right-wing organization will give me an award, which is equally ridiculous."

Actress turns 50

The Associated Press

Brigitte Bardot, the seductive "sex kitten" of film in the 1960s, turned 50 today — a milestone she did not welcome.

Miss Bardot has been reclusive and sometimes depressed in recent years, according to published reports. On her last birthday, she tried to kill herself.

Her long blonde hair and dark, vulnerable eyes made her a sensation after her first film, "And God Created Woman" in 1956.

Miss Bardot made about 40 other films before retiring 11 years ago and devoting her time to the defense of animals.

In a July interview with Paris Match, she said she lives simply, "no makeup, straight hair, with the lines on my face. You'll never see me in a gold lame dress again. ..."

It is all very well to know the best way to play a particular suit combination. Unless you consider the hand as a whole, however, you may be applying your knowledge at an inappropriate time. Where did South go wrong on this hand?

As soon as North learned about his partner's club support, he set out for slam. He decided against a grand slam when South could not show second-round spade control.

Declarer ruffed the opening lead and drew trumps in two rounds. With nine clubs in the combined hand, declarer knew that there was a 52 percent chance of dropping the queen. He cashed the ace-king but the lady failed to appear.

Eventually declarer fell back on the spade finesse. Unfortunately that failed, and the contract was down one.

Declarer's mistake was that he took the wrong finesse — he should have taken the club finesse! True, the chances of the drop in clubs were better than the finesse, but the contract was assured even if, after West followed to the second club, the finesse of the jack of clubs lost to the queen.

East would now be out of clubs, and he would have to return either a diamond or a spade. A spade would give declarer a free finesse; a diamond would permit him to ruff in dummy and discard a spade from his hand. In either case, the table's fifth club would take care of declarer's remaining spade loser, and the slam would be home.

Bunton rules inmate wasn't denied rights

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton has ruled that Midland County Jail inmate Carol Johnene Morris, 33, was not denied constitutional rights when she was transferred to a "single cell."

In a suit filed against former Chief Deputy G.W. Thompson and former Jail Capt. Bennie Cureton, Ms. Morris claimed that she had been in "solitary confinement" for seven months due to her "attitude" and because of her race — black — and sex.

The judge found no violation of her civil or constitutional rights.

"We're extremely satisfied with the decision handed down by Judge Bunton," said Mark H. Dettman, first assistant county attorney, who defended Thompson and Cureton in the trial before the judge.

Ms. Morris represented herself.

"Her suit is indicative of the majority of prisoner litigation," Dettman said, "in that it's frivolous."

Ms. Morris, however, held that Cureton, now chief deputy, and Thompson, now a sheriff's lieutenant, "presented frivolous reasons" for holding her in the single cell and away from the general jail population.

"The underlying motive for prolonged detention in solitary confinement was to inflict severe mental (anguish) and punishment (on her)...because of personal dislike," Ms. Morris argued.

She is being held in jail while she is appealing her convictions for theft and forgery. She opted to remain in jail rather than being transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections to serve sentences of five years for theft and eight years for forgery.

Initially, after she was jailed in December 1983 for violating her probation for theft, Dr. Patrick Y. Leung, county physician, had recommended that Ms. Morris be segregated from other female prisoners due to her withdrawals from heroin and the associated unpredictable behavior.

She had a 12-year history of heroin abuse, according to testimony in her trial.

Ms. Morris was returned to the cellblock with the other women prisoners. However, in the latter part of January, the jail's Disciplinary Review Board ordered her to be "solitarily confined." Other inmates had complained about her "being aggressive" and trying to "take over" the cellblock.

The judge ruled that her two-month confinement in the single cell prior to her revocation hearing in late February was "reasonably related to a legitimate governmental purpose.

"Jail officials had received reports from other inmates that plaintiff (Ms. Morris) was aggressive and intimidating," Bunton said in his order. "Regardless of the accuracy of these reports, the Court in this instance must accord jail officials deference in how they acted or reacted to that information," Bunton reasoned.

"Surely jail administrators cannot sit by until an inmate commits an indiscretion against another inmate before taking action. Clearly these administrators have a duty to ensure the safety of other inmates, as well as of jail personnel."

Bunton noted that each 9-by-6-foot single cell has a bunk, shelf, writing table, shower, sink and toilet, but that the "minimal opportunity (for a single-cell inmate) to exercise and have sunlight did not constitute punishment."

Ms. Morris remained in the single cell until Feb. 25, when she was released on bond for her revocation hearing, and was returned to jail after state court had revoked her probation.

She was returned to the single cell and subsequently filed a grievance.

Investigations by Thompson revealed she had been transferred from one federal prison to another in the 1970s for "disciplinary reasons" and that she was involved in homosexual activities. She had served federal time for distribution of heroin.

Based on her background and complaints from jail inmates, jail officials decided to return her to the single cell. She remained there until her federal hearing in August and was returned to the cellblock. However, she disobeyed an order and was returned to the single cell for 15 days, Cureton said today. After that period, she is to be returned to the cellblock.

Bunton further ruled that Ms. Morris' Eighth Amendment Rights (prohibiting slavery or involuntary servitude except as punishment for crime) were not violated.

The judge ruled that evidence reflected the jail provided Ms. Morris with "the basic essentials of hygiene" and that she was provided with "adequate food, medical care, bedding, and clothing...

"The evidence showed that (Ms. Morris)...was subjected to inactivity, lack of companionship and perhaps a low level of stimulation" but that those "conditions do not constitute cruel and unusual punishment."

MISD, GISD representatives attend meeting for school administrators

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Representatives of the Midland and Greenwood Independent School districts will be on hand this weekend to voice concerns and discuss strategies for implementing education reforms at the joint annual convention of the Texas Association of School Administrators and the Texas Association of School Boards.

An estimated 6,000 school board members and administrators from throughout the state are expected to attend the three day convention at the San Antonio Convention Center in San Antonio.

According to GISD Superintendent Sam Martin, convention delegate assembly members will discuss and adopt various education reforms which may or may not be presented to the next session of the Texas Legislature.

Included among the topics to be discussed are polices concerning curriculum standards, district finances, school board leadership, teacher pay, long range planning and personnel evaluation.

Members of the delegate assembly will focus primarily on education reforms enacted by the Texas Legislature in House Bill 72 and on the extensive reform of the public school curriculum initiated as a result of earlier legislation by the State Board of Education.

Assembly delegates representing MISD are board members Bill Jackson and Joe Golding. GISD assembly delegates are Patsy Harrington and Charles Gardner.

"I'm interested and our board members are interested in topics regarding long range planning. In other words, we're interested in areas that will have an impact on our school district in the future," Martin said. "But I'm not so certain that they're (the assembly delegates) going to change anything."

GISD Board President John Underwood said he expects school board members and administrators will have an opportunity to hear, see and discuss strategies for improving several aspects of Texas schools.

"It's going to be a learning experience. I don't look for any drastic changes. If there are any changes at all, I assume they'll more or less be on how the new laws will be interpreted by the State Board of Education," said Underwood.

MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr. said his hopes for the convention also are to "give us (school board members and administrators) an opportunity to share information and opinions on all the changes taking place."

Baressi said he looks forward to meeting Katherine Raines and discussing many of the issues that will affect MISD and other school districts in the Permian Basin.

Mrs. Raines of Cleburne recently was named by Gov. Mark White to the newly appointed State Board of Education. She will represent District 14, which encompasses Midland, Odessa and other West Texas school districts.

According to Baressi, the convention will offer a comprehensive program featuring demonstrations and mini-clinics as well as architectural and commercial exhibits.

Featured speakers include candidates for U.S. Senate, U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm and Texas Sen. Lloyd Doggett; former prisoner of war Navy Capt. Gerald Coffee; humorist James Blakely.

Coffee will address a general session at 10 a.m. Sunday and Blakely will be featured speaker at the convention banquet at 7:30 p.m. also on Sunday. Both Gramm and Doggett will speak at the convention luncheon at 12:15 Monday.

Class provides self-esteem for singles

By JUDY GIANNETTINO
Associated Press Writer

AMARILLO (AP) — Dan Smith doesn't pretend to be a theologian. In fact, he readily admits he doesn't even understand theology.

That, however, hasn't stopped him from forming and teaching a Sunday school class that boasts a larger membership than that of most of this Texas Panhandle city's 199 churches.

The secret, Smith contends, is the wide appeal of his non-denominational class — a program for singles, primarily divorced people, who need to learn that "being single is OK and a single's lifestyle is OK."

And while the class, dubbed Singles Too, does study the Bible and Christian teachings, it also is "probably the single biggest social event in Amarillo," said Smith, a divorced father with custody of his two sons.

Parties and community projects, along with the Sunday school class at Amarillo's Paramount Terrace Christian Church, make up the program of Singles Too, which Smith started in February 1981.

"I'd feel guilty when I'd just drop my boys off at Sunday school," Smith said, "so one day about seven of us single parents met."

That small gathering, where the singles discussed the problems and perils of being among the growing number of non-married Americans, swelled to 350 "because obviously the need was there," he said.

The owner of an advertising agency and a former television sportscaster, Smith, 41, was divorced 12 years ago.

While adjusting to being single again after eight years of marriage, Smith said he sought understanding and advice from ministers, but could not find anyone who understood what he was feeling.

"So, I quit going to church," he said recently.

"A lot of pastors and ministers just don't know how to help divorced people who are facing a difficult time in their lives," he said. "In our class, we try to show people they aren't the only ones feeling the way they do — show them they're not alone."

Yet, Smith said, Singles Too tries to avoid being a "singles therapy session."

Instead, he said, the Sunday school classes focus on "Biblical lessons that absolutely are directed to singles, where they live."

Jesus Christ often is touted by Smith as "the greatest single of all time."

But the "cornerstone" of Singles Too, Smith said, is self-esteem.

"All over the country, singles need something meaningful in their lives," Smith said. "When most people are divorced, they do what is expected of singles — they go to singles bars. But for a lot of people, that just isn't the answer. Yet if they don't fit in there, they feel there's no place for them to fit in. It brings their self-esteem down."

Smith's answer to the seemingly no-win situation for singles is to "show them a single's lifestyle is OK and to show them that there are a lot of us (singles) out there, living fulfilled lives."

His class, which draws attendees from as far as 60 miles away each Sunday, "has been a real good focus for singles — people who have gone through this trauma in their lives and now have found something useful to do and now get something useful for themselves."

Smith said his class has grown at the expense of other area churches because "we've really hit on a nerve center."

And, he said, the unique program is needed nationwide.

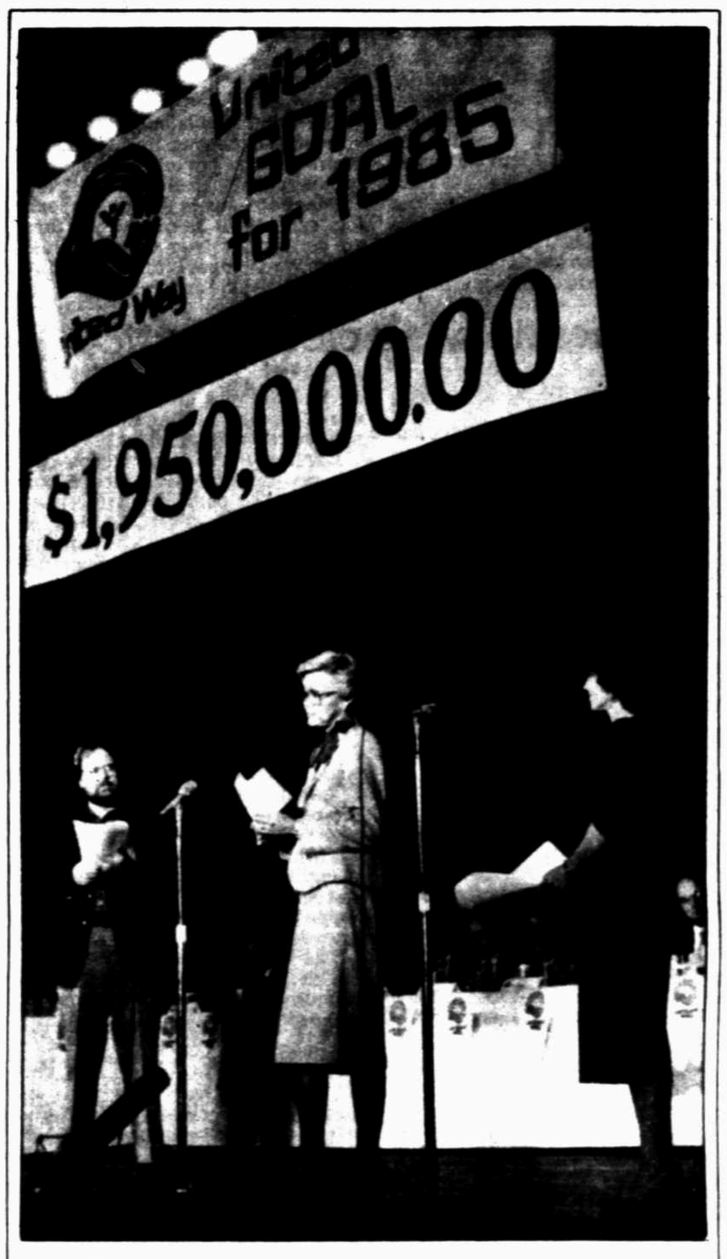

"I think we're in the forefront here of things that are going to have to go on all over the country," he said. "Singles, especially divorced people, need this kind of self-esteem building."

The class, which also is open to the never-marrieds and the widows and widowers of the Amarillo area, differs from other singles-only organizations because of its religious focus, Smith said.

But it doesn't try to impose moral restrictions on its members, he said, adding that many of its attendees have been recruited at singles' bars.

And the class takes credit for several marriages.

"We're not advocating that marriage is bad," said Smith, who hopes to one day remarry. "We're just saying that being single isn't bad either."

United Way reaches 38 percent of goal

From Staff Reports

The United Way of Midland has raised $737,018 so far in its fall fund-raising campaign, it was announced Thursday at a report rally at the Yucca Theatre.

"That represents 38 percent of our goal" of $1.95 million, said Campaign Vice Chairman George B. Irish. "We're there because of the work of each one of you," he told the 200 United Way volunteers who attended the luncheon.

"I think the campaign's off to a good start — we're off and running," said Dr. Joseph A. Baressi, chairman of the public and professional division.

Emcees Ed Clements and JoAnn Bagwell of KCRS radio introduced the campaign cabinet members, who reported the totals raised so far in their respective categories.

For Special Gifts, the total was $78,000; for Pacesetters, $8,795; for Education, $5; for Residential, $9,225; for Small Business, $3,550; for Wildcat, $6,100; for Independent Oil, $1,500; for Professional, $7,880; for Trailblazers, $42,444; for Government Services, $33,721; for Major Oil, $214,901; for Intermediate Oil, $58,382; and for Major Firms, $272,515.

"I feel the campaign is going very well," said Irish after the rally. "It's obvious that the great pains we took to develop an organization are now paying off."

"Everything is going very smoothly, and we have to give credit to the staff, the loaned executives and to (Campaign Chairman) Joe O'Neill, who put the whole thing together."

Thursday's report rally was the first of four, with the next one scheduled for Oct. 4. The $738,018 raised so far includes about $500,000 raised in the summer pilot campaign.

"We have only four weeks left — four important weeks — to reach that goal which means so much," Irish told the volunteers. "And with your help, we'll reach that goal."

Texas teen-agers learn to fight fires

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Fighting fires, like starting them, can't be done without someone's help.

Such is the case with five 16-to-18-year-old Chapel Hill youths, who from late August through May, have a special arrangement with Gary Howell, Chapel Hill High School principal.

If they can maintain a 70 average in school, the youths may fight fires under emergency conditions during school hours in this Smith County community of about 600 people.

"I feel they are responsible young guys who take their jobs seriously," Howell said. "Their job is a service to the community and it is a worthwhile project."

However, before they can actually respond to calls heard on the pagers they always carry, the teen-agers — Scott Polley, Tommy Ford, Mark Stiensipher, Scott Phillips and Kelly Acker — must, like senior firefighters, attend monthly business and training sessions with the Chapel Hill Volunteer Fire Department.

The five must be "voted in" to the department and approved by Howell to be able to leave class and fight fires. The firefighters must also go through a probationary six-month period where they are, again, voted on by senior members.

"They don't just play around and play dominoes," the Chapel Hill principal explained. "They know what they are doing."

Fire Chief Rocky McMillan, who started out in the Chapel Hill Volunteer Fire Department as a junior member, said, "We try not to keep them out of class if we can help it."

A common scenario for the junior firefighters during school hours would include answering the emergency page after getting permission through their teacher to leave class. According to Polley, 17, a senior at Chapel Hill, unless the class is having a major test, the teacher usually does not object to the students' sudden departure.

After that, the junior firefighter usually checks out with the school office, goes to his automobile parked in a special space for the group, and makes the half-mile journey as fast as the law allows, Polley said.

Polley explained the junior firefighters are sometimes the first to arrive at the fire station. If this is the case, the students open the fire department door and prepare one of the five trucks — depending on the type of fire — for travel.

Then, depending on how many senior firefighters show up, the students get into their "bunker gear" — hats, coats and pants — and go to the emergency on the truck.

"If you're not needed, you're put on standby," Polley said. "Then we just sit around the table listening to the scanner (if those who went to the fire call for assistance)."

Richard Cannon, a veteran firefighter with the Chapel Hill Fire Department explained there could be times when junior firefighters are the only ones to respond to the emergency page. At that time, the junior member must phone the county office for either assistance or the authority to drive the fire truck.

Midlanders with blue cards don't need to re-register

From Staff Reports

In an overzealous effort to be double sure they are registered to vote, some Midlanders are re-registering.

Janeice Builta, elections administrator, said her office is receiving 100 to 150 postage-paid voter registration applications each day. Of that number about a fourth to a half are coming from citizens already registered.

"If they have their blue card and haven't changed addresses, they don't need to send in the application form," said Ms. Builta.

The blue voter registration cards are valid until Feb. 28, 1986.

For more information, call the Elections Administrator's Office, 687-0231.

Flower garden makes sense to blind visitors

AMARILLO (AP) — Most of us picture a flower garden as a riot of color, with various blooming plants contributing splashes of brilliance.

To a blind or partially-sighted person, a garden can mean something quite different — a blend of fragrances and textures that speaks to senses more subtle than sight.

Along the north side of the Amarillo Garden Center is a row of brick planter boxes selected, not for their visual display, but for their scents. Some are varieties of geraniums specially bred to produce fragrances not innate to the colorful flowers.

"Here — smell this," says Mrs. Burton Elliott, first president of the center. "It's a rose-scented geranium."

She plucks a leaf from the blooming plant and rubs it.

The leaf has the heady, unmistakable aroma of a rose.

"These are specially crossbred to produce the scents," explains center Director Jane Meyers. "We have apple cider-scented geraniums, lemon-lime-scented, rose-scented..."

In addition to the special crosses, the women explain, the garden has a variety of other highly fragrant blooming and non-blooming plants selected to provide a sensory experience for those who cannot see and appreciate the beauty of the blossoms.

"This with the little blue (blooms) is catnip — it's a member of the mint family," Mrs. Meyers says, "we have some mint and several kinds of basil, and, of course, honeysuckle."

Mrs. Elliott plucks a leaf from the plant, raises it to her nose, nods her head and smiles. "I used to eat this — chew on it — when I was a kid."

The garden also features varieties of lythrum and of dianthus, the group that includes carnations. Separate from the fragrance garden planters, in a wind-sheltered area, there is also a magnolia tree.

"I've been to the fragrance gardens in Cleveland and in Brooklyn," Mrs. Elliott says, "and there they have plaques in Braille on each planter, describing what's in it. We didn't think there was reason to do that here; not enough people around here read Braille."

She indicates the stepped planter boxes on the hillside.

Nursing home residents need better nutrition, man says

AUSTIN (AP) — Elderly people in Texas nursing homes need better food to overcome malnutrition problems, the House Study Committee on Nursing Home Reform has been told.

"Cut out some of the beans and hot dogs and give these old people better food," Lou O'Riley, president of United People for Better Nursing Home Care, said Thursday at the fourth public hearing held by the committee.

The committee later will draw up recommendations to the 1985 Legislature on any law changes needed for nursing home reform.

"Maybe beans is all some operators can afford from the pay they are getting now from the state," said John Wade, operator of nursing homes in Uvalde and Pearsall.

Janie Sieberg, executive director of the Texas Dietic Association, advised the committee to recommend new legislation calling for "regular nutritional assessments of nursing home food."

Ms. Sieberg said there is a form of "starvation" in some nursing home food, "an area of protein-calorie malnutrition."

Ms. O'Riley said that in addition to a vital need for balanced nutritional meals, food should be prepared so the elderly can eat it.

"About 95 percent of these patients have no teeth," Ms. O'Riley said. "You give them a brittle old pork chop and it's hard for them to gnaw on it and get anything out of it."

She said nursing homes often have a lot of "greasy stews.'

Rep. Smith Gilley, D-Greenville, read a letter he received from patients in a Greenville nursing home complaining of "too much chili dogs with hot spices and hot link sausages with gristle in them."

Wade told the committee the state should increase the $29.95 it pays daily for Medicaid patients, which he said does not cover the cost of operations.

"If I did not have my private pay patients, I couldn't stay in business," Wade said. "If the state pay is not improved, we're going to end up with two types of nursing homes — the ones with private pay patients and those with $29.95 Medicaid patients."

He said some nursing homes now have 80 to 90 percent Medicaid patients.

BASTROP (AP) — Law enforcement officers, in a major crackdown on suspected drug trafficking, Thursday began rounding up 38 Bastrop County residents on a variety of drug charges.

"The drugs involved cover just about everything — speed, cocaine, marijuana and others," said Sgt. Gene Blomstrom, a member of the Greater Austin Organized Crime Control Unit.

He said the offenses are individual cases and not part of an organized drug trafficking effort.

Abilene orders firms to cut water usage

ABILENE (AP) — Commercial and industrial users of water must cut back their monthly consumption of water by 10 percent because of an extended drought, the city council has ruled.

Abilene city council members voted Thursday to order commercial and industrial water users to cut water consumption except for drinking and restrooms by 10 percent, based on their average usage over the last seventh months. But they can use more water if they are willing to pay additional fees.

The action came despite the heaviest rain this week in the past three years. Rainfall amounted to 2.60 inches of rain between Tuesday night and Wednesday morning.

Run-off into Lake Fort Phantom Hill, the city's primary water source, accounted for a rise of two-tenths of a foot, authorities said. But the lake remained 20 feet below the spillway.

Commercial and industrial water users can use more than their alloted water, but they face the payment of additional fees and possible disconnection of their water. There will be a $200 reconnect fee for anyone who is disconnected for violating the water conservation ordinance.

The fees are $5 per 1,000 gallons of water for the first 5,000 gallons used over the alloted amount, $10 per 1,000 gallons of water for the next 5,000 gallons and $20 per 1,000 gallons for higher usage.

Car washes that do not have recycling systems must cut usage by 30 percent. Earlier, car washes without water wells or recycling systems were required to close on Sunday and Monday.

A ban on lawn watering will remain in effect for all customers, officials said.

The allotment for commercial and industrial users applies to customers who use more than 10,000 gallons per month.

The minimum fine for violating the water conservation ordinance is $75.

Football fields can be watered with some type of water flood system, but not with sprinklers. And the city's three golf courses have been alloted no more than three million gallons of raw water per month from Lake Kirby.

Councilman Harold Nixon voted against the changes in the ordinance because of the fees to be charged.

"We're saying the water is out there if you can pay for it. That's not correct," said Nixon. "We're either running out of water or we're not."

Councilman Julian Bridges said the council is united for the purpose of cutting back water consumption.

Tom Simons, owner of an Abilen car wash, was not happy over the latest development.

"We've spent $13,500 to find an alternate water source.

Police officers exposed in 'Cop Cakes' calendar

FORT WORTH (AP) — Some Texas police officers may join former Miss America Vannessa Williams in saying they wished they hadn't posed for pictures.

The police officers posed partially clothed for "Cop Cakes," also billed as "the calendar they said shouldn't be done."

An advertisement promoting the "beefcake" calendar appeared in Thursday's Fort Worth Star-Telegram. It showed a half-clothed Fort Worth Detective Don Albietz lying at the feet of what appears to be a seductive female officer, who is actually a Dallas model.

The calendar sells for $7.25 and was created by officers Ed Haton, an evening patrol officer, and George Garcia, a dowtown foot patrol officer, both of Fort Worth, and is being advertised as a calendar "that shows how your police officers relax when not on duty."

Officers from Fort Worth, Dallas, San Antonio and Austin posed for the calendar pictures.

Albietz said he's only seen the proofs of the photographs to be published, adding, "They're decent from what I've seen. I don't think they'll get anybody in trouble."

But Administrative Deputy Chief H.L. Clark wasn't so sure about that.

"We can't have our people doing something that will take away from the public's image of a police officer," Clark said. He said that when he first saw the advertisement he did not recognize Albietz.

"That's not the image we'd like our officers to portray to the public," Clark added.

Albietz first tried to tell his colleague and inquiring newsmen that it was not him.

"It's not me, it just looks like me," the detective said.

"We're all going to chip in and get one for the office," a fellow detective in the Theft Division said Thursday.

In addition to the picture of Albietz, officer Freddy Garcia appears in a diaper, Pat Moore imitates Conan The Barbarian, motorcycle officer Jesse Means portrays Mr. T and officer J.J. Wagner also appears on the calendar.

Abandoned baby dies before couple starts adoption process

HOUSTON (AP) — A baby found abandoned in a vacant apartment hours after he was born died the same day a couple was to start procedures to adopt him, a county welfare worker says.

Daniel DeShane Carter, found wrapped in dirty curtains last April, died Thursday, probably of an intestinal infection, said Judy Hay of the Harris County Child Protective Services.

A public appeal was made for couples interested in adopting a baby with health problems. Many responded and a couple in their 30s with one child of their own was selected, Ms. Hay said.

"They had been thinking about adopting for a long time," she said.

TDC has no comment on monitor's report

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Corrections says it has no comment yet on a report by a court-appointed monitor which claims some top prison officials sought to cover up violence against inmates by guards and tried to hinder investigations into some incidents.

"We sure don't have anything on it. Nothing at all," Charles Brown, spokesman for the TDC central office at Huntsville, said Thursday.

The confidential report was authored by monitor Paul T. Belazis. A copy of the 110-page document was obtained by The Associated Press.

According to Belazis:

— Some high-ranking Texas Department of Corrections officials sought to impede investigations into violence by TDC personnel against inmates.

— Discipline against TDC employees has been erratic, lacking objective standards.

— A number of high-ranking TDC employees have taken part in violence against inmates.

— Some officials who were disciplined for taking part in violence received only minor punishment.

The monitor's report covers the period from Sept. 1, 1983, to June 7 of this year. It has been distributed to the attorney general's office, TDC lawyers, lawyers for inmates who filed civil rights litigation against the prison system and to Vincent Nathan, the court-appointed special master who oversees the prisons.

Once both sides submit written comments about the report, it is to be given to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, who ordered sweeping prison reforms. Officials said the report should be made public at that time.

According to the report, a number of disciplinary actions have been taken by the TDC's central office for violations of the "Standards for the Use of Force."

However, it charged, "TDC's disciplinary measures have lacked objective standards and, consequently, have been in a number of instances clearly inadequate.

"Many high-ranking staff and officials responsible for enforcement of the court's orders among subordinate staff have themselves participated in use of illegal force against inmates who posed no immediate threat to institutional security."

Despite that, the report said, "some of these individuals have received suspensions and comparatively minor demotions with continued high rank and salary. In a few instances, even successive violations of the 'Standards' have been ignored by central administrators."

Report author Belazis wrote that "most troubling of all...have been the efforts of some central administration personnel to deceive the court with respect to disciplinary action ostensibly imposed and to prevent violations of the 'Standards' from coming to the attention of the special master's office."

The report discussed actions of the Office of Operational Audits, the TDC's internal investigation arm.

"The staff as a whole have shown courage and determination in conducting investigations which identified misconduct in every level of the TDC chain of command," it said.

Allegations of misconduct that were upheld by the investigative office have involved TDC officials "of every rank," the monitor's report said.

"In addition, central administrators have attempted to minimize or avoid disciplinary action with respect to some employees and to prevent certain misconduct from coming to the attention of the special master's office."

The report cites numerous incidents of violence against inmates.

In one case, an inmate who had barricaded himself in a prison day room was beaten by 15 to 25 guards armed with riot batons, it said.

According to the report, when two officers approached the inmate, he "offered no resistance other than to raise his hand in an attempt to protect his head.

Cadets refuse to testify before panel

BRYAN (AP) — A grand jury investigating the death of a student after a hazing incident at Texas A&M University began taking a second day of testimony today, but three juniors present when the student collapsed would not appear, their attorney said.

Grand jurors heard Thursday from 10 of 22 witnesses subpoenaed in the investigation of the death of 20-year-old Bruce Goodrich, a first-year member of the school's Corps of Cadets. Among witnesses scheduled to testify today was Donald Burton, commandant of the military-like corps.

Brazos County District Attorney Bill Turner said he expected the panel to decide today whether to return any indictments.

W.W. "Bill" Vance, an attorney for the three juniors, spent about half an hour before the grand jury. When he emerged, he said his clients were "not going to appear" before the panel.

Bob Wiatt, director of university security, said 10 of 22 witnesses subpoenaed testified for more than six hours during the first day of testimony. He confirmed the three juniors were among those subpoenaed.

The grand jury convened exactly four weeks after Goodrich's death, which a preliminary autopsy showed was due to heat stroke. Goodrich, a transfer student from Webster, N.Y., was rousted from his bed along with his roommate at 2:30 a.m. Aug. 30 and forced to run and do calisthenics on a hot, humid night.

Goodrich collapsed during the exercise but was encouraged to get up and keep running, university officials said. The other student did not suffer any ill effects.

Turner said the three juniors could cite their Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination in refusing to appear.

"I think the state's interest is to make sure all the evidence has been presented to the grand jury," Turner said. "It's not a usual case. It's just a case that takes special attention."

Earlier in the day, Dr. Rodolfo Loo, a staff physician at Texas A&M's student health center, said he does not believe an antibiotic prescribed to Goodrich the day before he died contributed to the death.

Will 'Dallas' fans tune in to Doggett-Gramm debate?

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A debate between U.S. Senate candidates will face heavy competition from the popular TV series "Dallas" — and a Texas A&M University professor says that's just how Republican Phil Gramm likes it.

Gramm is scheduled to meet Austin Democrat Lloyd Doggett in College Station — Gramm's hometown — at 8 p.m. today.

That's the same time viewers of CBS ratings giant "Dallas" will be tuning in to learn the answer to a mystery begun last spring — who hit Bobby Ewing with a bullet aimed at his evil brother, J.R.?

"I strongly suspect many people will be watching 'Dallas' or wrestling, if wrestling is on," Bruce Robeck, who teaches a course in political campaigning at Texas A&M University, said Thursday. "A lot of people won't be watching. I doubt they're going to perceive a Gramm-Doggett debate falls into the entertainment category."

None of which should bother Gramm. Most experts believe Gramm, who says his polls show he is the leader in the race to succeed longtime Republican Sen. John Tower, has the most to lose in a debate. So Friday's time slot, with its potentially meager audience, is "ideal" for the Democrat-turned Republican, Robeck said.

"He's the frontrunner and doesn't want to advertise his opponent," Robeck said. "He doesn't want to risk a misstatement that could potentially weaken his support or split off potential supporters. A Friday night broadcast is competing with real entertainment."

But Gramm spokesman Larry Neal believes the debate "is going to attract enough newspaper writers and TV stations. It's going to get a lot of attention."

Neal said his candidate is not worried about bloopers. He said the debate is "based primarily on the issues at stake in the campaign and the records of the candidates. There's such a variance between the candidates on the issues.

"There's no way Phil Gramm can lose," Neal said.

Doggett spokesman Bill Collier admitted the debate may lose a lot of viewers because of the opposing show.

"We'll concede that. Hopefully, a lot of stations will tape delay it (the debate) and run it later," Collier said.

Janice May, an associate professor of government at the University of Texas, said the affair may also suffer because it's being broadcast on public television.

But she warned that "things could come out of it even though you're not going to have a whole lot of people in Texas glued to their TVs."

One result could be inclusion of debate segments in commercials run by the candidates, both of whom are "good debaters," she said.

"The fact that people aren't using it live doesn't mean you can't take segments and use it effectively," Mrs. May said, recalling that former Gov. John Connally used debate segments in ads for one of his successful campaigns.

Britons disagree about 'rich eccentric's' purchase of Magna Charta copy

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' "rich eccentric" has left some Britons happy that a 687-year-old copy of the Magna Charta emigrated to the New World, but some others aren't feeling so jolly about it.

Billionaire H. Ross Perot has paid $1.5 million for the only known original copy of the document still in private hands, and it is to be displayed at Washington's National Archives next to the U.S. Constitution, the Bill of Rights and the Declaration of Independence.

"I'm delighted your rich Texas eccentric bought it," said Phillip Howard, literary editor of the London Times. "It's part of your heritage as well as ours."

Sir John Plumb, a history professor at Cambridge University, called Perot a "public-spirited man" and added that "it's a jolly good thing for you to have a copy of the document that affects your Constitution."

The Magna Charta proclaimed that all citizens have inalienable rights that even kings and governments cannot abridge. The charter imposed significant limits on the king's authority and set the foundation for such basic rights as jury trials.

Perot's 1297 copy, which he bought from the Brudenell family, is one of several versions signed by English kings in the 13th century.

James Holt, a professor of medieval history at Cambridge, said he opposes exporting the document and criticized the family for selling.

Other Britons downplayed the importance of the Perot acquisition.

"It's by no means unique," said Enoch Powell, a member of Parliament. "That's a copy of a late re-enactment."

King John I signed the first Magna Charta under threat of civil war in 1215 at Runnymede. The version signed in 1297 by King Edward was the first to become statutory law. Perot's document is one of only four known copies.

When the government of New Zealand tried to buy it in 1980, D.P. Waley, director of documents at the British Library in London and a export advisor to the government, objected sharply.

"It's an historic national treasure," he said.

Gramm: One-third of Doggett's funds from homosexuals

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Rep. Phil Gramm, a Republican running for the U.S. Senate, says that based on a gay newsletter's advocacy, opponent Lloyd Doggett is receiving a third of his money from homosexual activists.

Doggett's campaign secretary, Bill Collier, told the San Angelo Standard Times on Thursday that the allegation was "ludicrous."

"One out of every three dollars contributed to my opponent's campaign is coming from gay and lesbian activists," Gramm said at an airport news conference Thursday.

Gramm and Doggett are to meet in College Station at 8 p.m. today for a televised debate.

Gramm cited the figure in saying that the Austin Democrat's views "are counter to the traditional values of Texans."

Gramm said his information came from an August 1984 newsletter of the Dallas Gay Alliance. He passed out copies to reporters at the press conference.

The newsletter describes a fund-raising effort which "encourages gays in Texas to send $1 or more" to Doggett's campaign.

Using the newsletter's estimate that there are 700,000 homosexuals in Texas, Gramm said that $700,000 of Doggett's campaign funds must, therefore, come from homosexuals.

Collier said the estimate is ridiculous.

Judge indicted for assault, lewdness

DALLAS (AP) — A veteran state district judge, indicted on three misdemeanor counts of assault and lewdness stemming from alleged sexual harassment, says he is innocent and that he was framed for political reasons.

A Dallas County grand jury returned the indictments against Judge Dee Brown Walker on Thursday, and prosecutor Hugh Lucas said the charge "involves fondling and lascivious touching."

Walker, 71, who is seeking a sixth term on the 162nd district court bench, is accused of touching a deputy district clerk on the buttocks and a lawyer on the neck and arm.

He is also accused of touching for sexual gratification the genitals of a second clerk in his courtroom.

But Walker says "it didn't occur. If I did all they said I did, I'd have to have an arm six to eight feet long. This is framed up by the district clerk down here for political reasons."

The grand jury investigation was sparked by affidavits from two female assistant district clerks who say Walker had sexually harassed them. The affidavits were turned over to the district attorney's office by District Clerk Bill Long, a Republican.

Walker, a Democrat, has since filed suit seeking Long's removal from office. Long has denied that politics played a role in the allegations.

Lucas said the grand jury also asked him to file a complaint against Walker with the Texas Commission on Judicial Conduct. If sustained, the complaint could result in Walker's being reprimanded or removed from the office he has held since 1963.

"Certainly it's politically motivated," Walker said. "I'm not guilty of any misconduct toward those girls."

He vowed that he will not resign the judgeship and said that he will continue his bid for a sixth term in office in the Nov. 6 general election.

The two assault indictments, both Class C misdemeanors, refer to touching incidents and the public lewdness indictment, a Class A misdemeanor, refers to fondling, Lucas said.

The Class C charges are punishable by a fine of up to $200. The Class A charge is punishable by up to one year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Decorated sergeant convicted of theft

EL PASO (AP) — A decorated Army sergeant has become the first soldier to be convicted after raids that netted at least $350,000 worth of stolen government property, officials say.

Staff Sgt. David Corter, 29, of Fort Bliss, was given a dishonorable discharge and sentenced to five years' hard labor Thursday after he pleaded guilty to stealing government property.

Corter, who also pleaded guilty to altering and removing government records, served 11 years in the Army and won two good conduct ribbons and one Army achievement medal.

He was accused of stealing $50,000 worth of government property while working in an Army supply office, authorities said.

Corter testified that he and another non-commissioned officer filed requisitions for tools and machinery, then took the items and removed all traces of the requisitions from Army records.

Capt. Maryann Hyson, Corter's attorney, asked for a reduced sentence, saying that Corter's family needs his income to survive. Corter's wife, Arlene, said she earns about $100 a week delivering pizzas and cannot pay the family's $327 monthly mortgage payment and utility bills.

Corter also has a 3-year-old daughter. His 5-year-son died in an accident last September.

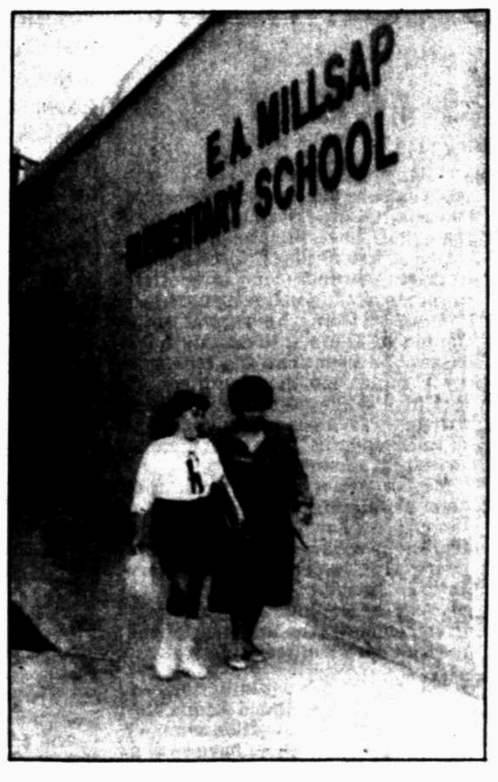

"This is a family already beset by tragedy," Ms. Hyson said.

Hyson also pointed to Corter's 9½ years of good service, saying "those years are worth something."

But prosecuting attorney Capt. Theodore E. Dixon argued that the Army needs to show others they can't do what Corter did. Dixon did, however, agree with defense witnesses that Corter was a good supply sergeant.

"He knew his job and he knew it well," Dixon said. "He knew it so well that it took a heck of an investigative job to catch him."

Suspect in student's shooting 'mad at world,' officials say

HOUSTON (AP) — A 28-year-old man who is believed responsible for shooting and wounding a fifth-grader raising the U.S. flag outside his school surrendered to police early today, telling authorities "he was mad at the world," authorities said.

The man also is believed responsible for firing a .22-caliber semi-automatic rifle at a seventh-grader at another school Thursday, a sheriff's spokesman said.

"We've got the car. We've got a suspect in custody. We've got the weapon," Harris County Deputy Don Schoenfelder said. "We're about 99 and three-quarter percent (sure) it's the right one."

Schoenfelder said the man turned himself in about 4:30 a.m. The man was being questioned by investigators and could be charged later today, Schoenfelder said.

The man lived in northwest Harris County, the area in which the school is located, Schoenfelder said. The man's car has Arkansas license plates, but "he's been here a while," Schoenfelder said.

Texas Ranger Charlie Cook said, "He just stated that he was mad at the world and had lost everything."

STATE IN BRIEF

Mattox wants change in spousal immunity law

GALVESTON (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox urged state judges Thursday to support a change in the law that would eliminate immunity for husbands and wives testifying against each other in child abuse and other family violence cases.

"Family violence cases are the most difficult there are to prosecute," Mattox told a judicial conference, "and a major reason for this difficulty is the current law governing spousal immunity.

"I am a strong supporter of proposed new legislation to eliminate spousal immunity in cases of suspected child abuse and other types of family violence, whether it be against wives, children or elderly parents."

Mattox also urged judges to order child-support payments be withheld from paychecks and to use protective orders in cases of family violence.

Man stabbed to death

AUSTIN (AP) — A 25-year-old Salvadoran man was stabbed to death Thursday outside a North Austin apartment, police said.

The victim, Ernesto Resendez, suffered five stab wounds — one to his face, three in the chest and one on his right side, said Travis County Medical Examiner Robert Bayardo.

"The three wounds to the chest were in the heart and lungs and he died of internal bleeding," Bayardo said.

Police said the stabbing followed an argument at the apartment, where five men lived. The victim, whose body was found at 5:50 a.m., and the others are believed to be from El Salvador and are legal residents of the United States, police said.

Prison activist charged

AUSTIN (AP) — Prison activist David Ruiz was charged Thursday with aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon in connection with a robbery and rape in Austin earlier this month, police said.

The charge follows a Sept. 15 attack in which three men robbed five people at an apartment. Police said a 25-year-old woman at the apartment was sexually assaulted.

Bob Looney, a lawyer who has represented Ruiz during the past two years, said Ruiz is innocent.

Ruiz, 42, a paralegal worker, was indicted Tuesday on charges of aggravated assault, possession of a firearm by a felon and being a habitual criminal.

William G. Patterson (right) is accompanied by lawyer Warren Bickford IV, after being indicted in Chicago on 15 counts of wire and mail fraud. He was acquitted of 25 counts of a fedeal indictment, Wednesday, in Oklahoma.

Penn Square officer indicted in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — A $1 billion loan fraud involving the failed Penn Square Bank led to $800 million in losses at the troubled Continental Illinois bank, said a prosecutor announcing the indictment of three men, including a former officer of each bank.

Just hours after a weeping William G. Patterson was cleared Thursday in Oklahoma City of all fraud charges stemming from bad loans at Penn Square, the former energy loan officer was named in Chicago in a 16-count indictment involving allegedly irregular loans.

Also charged were John R. Lytle, a former vice president of Chicago's Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co., and Enid, Okla., oil businessman Jere A. Sturgis, U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb said.

Webb said Penn Square's Patterson directed Lytle to authorize loans between July 1980 and July 1982 to oil and gas companies that were Penn Square customers. In return, Patterson arranged for Lytle to get $585,000 in kickback loans from Penn Square, Webb said.

Lytle did not have to repay the loans, but rather benefited from a complicated series of transactions that, in effect, resulted in Penn Square paying itself back, Webb said.

"The $1 billion in loans ... has currently resulted in a loss to Continental Illinois National Bank of approximately $800 million," Webb said. He added that he could not gauge whether the loans contributed to Continental's recent financial problems, which required a federal bailout of $4.5 billion.

On Wednesday, Continental shareholders voted overwhelmingly to relinquish 80 percent of their control of the nation's 11th largest bank to the federal government in exchange for the bailout.

Patterson was found innocent Thursday in Oklahoma City of the last two of 25 charges of wire fraud, misapplication of funds and making false entries. He had been acquitted on the other 23 charges Wednesday.

The new indictments were returned by a federal grand jury Tuesday, Webb said, but were suppressed until Patterson's trial ended.

El Paso cuts rates

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — El Paso Natural Gas Co. will begin Oct. 1 reducing its rates by $100 million annually under an order approved this week by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

The company, which sells gas wholesale to distribution companies in five states, said the rate reduction stems from the renegotiation of several gas-purchase contracts coupled with the lowering of pipeline operation costs.

John W. McFall, El Paso Natural Gas public relations director, said the new rates approved Wednesday in Washington, D.C., would mean distribution companies would pay about 11 1/2 cents less per dekatherm. A dekatherm equals 1 million BTUs or about 975 cubic feet of gas, he said.

McFall said whether the lower cost to distribution companies would be passed along to consumers would be up to the individual utilities served by El Paso Natural Gas, a subsidiary of Burlington Northern Inc.

Eighty percent of the company's gas is sold in California, McFall said.

Dollar up; Gold lower

LONDON (AP) — The dollar edged higher in quiet European trading early today despite a cut by several American banks in their prime lending rate. Gold prices were a shade lower.

Currency traders said the effect of Thursday's one-quarter percent cut in the prime rate — to 12¾ percent, sparking a modest dollar selloff — had worn off by this morning. Lower interest rates make the dollar a less attractive vehicle for investment.

The dealers also reported that fears of central bank intervention in the markets had subsided. Such intervention late last week helped stem a record-shattering dollar surge.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 245.40 Japanese yen from Thursday's 244.90. Last Friday's the dollar closed at 247.45 yen.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.2465, slightly cheaper than Thursday's $1.2490.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Settlement near in largest tax-evasion case

A settlement is near in the largest corporate tax-evasion case in the nation's history, arising from charges against the commodity trader Marc Rich, officials said. While the settlement would not affect the charges against him or his partner, two companies indicted in the case would plead guilty and pay the government more than $100 million to resume operations, the officials said.

Third world countries to experience growth

Third World countries will experience economic growth of 3 ½ percent this year, according to Jacques de Larosiere, managing director of the IMF. His prediction came as the 39th annual meeting of the IMF and the World Bank closed.

Searle family puts firm on auction block

G.D. Searle & Co. has been put on the auction block by the Searle family, which asked management to help it diversify its holdings. Analysts said the company could bring close to $4 billion. The family holds 34 percent of the company's stock.

At&T announces more organization switches

AT&T Information Systems announced changes, amid reports that the company has been unable to fashion a successful marketing strategy. The organizational shuffle is the second in two years at the company, formed to market computers, phone switching systems and advanced office equipment for AT&T.

Sohio to buy Gulf's Southest operations

Sohio said it would buy Gulf's operations in the Southeast, apparently clearing the way for Chevron's acquisition of Gulf. Chevron's chairman said the Sohio deal was valued at "something less than a billion dollars."

National Semiconductor sales, earning up

National Semiconductor's sales and earnings climbed sharply in the first quarter, but some analysts voiced caution about the semiconductor industry in the month ahead.

Paul Companies to sell operations to Amev

St. Paul Companies has agreed to sell its life insurance and mutual fund operations to Amev Holdings for $137.5 million.

A new president was named for 20th Century-Fox Film's new Entertainment Group. The promotion of Lawrence Gordon is the latest in a series of recent Hollywood shake-ups.

Stock prices advance with the Dow Jones

Interest rates fall amid note, bond demand

Interest rates fell, amid increased demand for notes and bonds. However, data indicating little change in bank borrowing from the Fed tempered enthusiasm late in the day. Another report showed the money supply falling $3.4 billion in the latest week.

Prime lending rate cut quarter of percent

The prime lending rate was cut to 12 ¾ percent from 13 percent by the nation's major banks. Bankers cited a general decline in interest rates and a slow demand for loans, but they hesitated to predict that the rate would drop further. The move comes nearly a week after Morgan Guaranty trimmed its rate to the same level, and a day after Wells Fargo cut its prime to 12 ½ percent.

Prime rate may continue downward trend this year

NEW YORK (AP) — The prime lending rate offered by America's biggest commercial banks may continue to fall for the rest of the year, after a slight decline to 12.75 percent, analysts said.

Major banks nationwide cut the prime rate a quarter of a point from the 13 percent level Thursday.

Kathleen Cooper, economist with Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, said there is "a good chance" the prime rate may drop soon to 12.5 percent or slightly lower. But, she added, "next year will be on the rise again."

William Welsh, bank analyst with the Wall Street firm of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. Inc., said his organization also foresaw higher rates next year. But he concurred that for a while, the slowing economy should mean less credit demand, which tends to lower short-term rates such as the prime.

"Hopefully, this is the beginning of what we were looking for," he said.

International financial giants Bank of America in San Francisco and Citibank in New York were joined by most of the big money center banks and many regional banks in cutting the prime.

The first step to the lower prime was taken a week ago when Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. cautiously dropped its prime rate from 13 percent, where it had been throughout the industry since June.

U.S. Steel announces shut down

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp. surprised its southern West Virginia coal miners as they voted on a new union contract by confirming that 1,500 employees would be laid off today and 450 more on Sunday.

U.S. Steel spokesman Gus Tremer, contacted at the company's Pittsburgh headquarters Thursday, said operations would be suspended indefinitely today at seven mines in McDowell and Wyoming counties, two coal preparation plants and the company's Gary District maintenance facility.

"Fifteen hundred employees will be affected," Tremer said.

In addition, Frank Coffman, president of United Mine Workers Local 2236, said employees at U.S. Steel's Morton mine and preparation plant at Winifrede in Kanawha County were told that they also would be laid off.

U.S. Steel spokesman Bill Hoffman confirmed today that 450 employees would be affected by the shutdowns that would take effect Sunday in the company's Dakota District, covering Kanawha and Boone counties.

"It's the same problem at Dakota as at the others, a lack of sales expected in the foreseeable future," Hoffman said. "Everybody was worried about a coal strike, so people stockpiled.

"It is unfortunate that we have to do this, but on the other hand, if there's no business out there, if there's no demand, there's no need for supply," he said.

U.S. Steel miners learned of the layoffs as they joined United Mine Workers union members nationwide in voting on a new contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, which includes U.S. Steel.

The UMW pact, which union leaders said was approved, contained no concessions from the union, something U.S. Steel won from its steelworkers last year. The company reportedly pushed for similar concessions from the UMW, but Tremer said he had no indication that the layoffs were timed to coincide with the coal contract vote.

Tremer said the company is not pulling out of Gary, where two years ago U.S. Steel mine layoffs pushed the local unemployment rate to 90 percent.

"We're not pulling out at all," Tremer said. "This is just an indefinite suspension of operations."

He said 40 employees would be kept on the job in case a sudden startup is warranted.

The layoff was the company's second in as many years in southern West Virginia. The company furloughed 1,200 Gary Hollow miners in 1982; some 600 have been called back.

UMW officials said they were given no prior notice of the layoffs.

"We had heard rumors but nothing for certain," said Buck Wade, an official in UMW Subdistrict 29 office at nearby Welch, adding that he did not think the shutdowns were connected to the contract voting.

Gary Mayor Ron Estep said the move could be disastrous for the economies of Gary and McDowell County, which had a 44 percent unemployment rate after the 1982 layoffs.

City services and employment will likely have to be cut "within a month," Estep said. "Most of the town's income comes from proceeds of the business and occupation tax paid by U.S. Steel."

Use of state mailing lists hit

AUSTIN (AP) — The state has sent the names of 680,000 Texans who have filed unemployment compensation claims since January 1983 to political party officials.

One Republican official says it's a Democratic ploy but a lawyer who negotiated the mailing says it's not.

"This settlement blows my mind," said state GOP party chairman George Strake of Houston.

Assistant Texas Secretary of State Ed Davis said Wednesday his office mailed the names as partial settlement of a lawsuit that began under a state Republican administration.

In 1982, then-Secretary of State David Dean distributed a list of 28,000 people he said were possible felons and who should not be allowed to vote. A South Texas voter registration group, VOTA, filed suit against Dean's action in federal court in Brownsville. The suit has never come to trial.

Davis said his office spent $15,000 in staff and computer time comparing the list of 900,000 Texans who had filed unemployment compensation claims over the past 20 months with the list of registered voters.

Those who applied for jobless benefits and were not registered to vote were included in a special computer run that was mailed to voter registrars in Texas' 254 counties. The list also was sent to Democratic and Republican party chairmen in each county, Davis said.

George Korbel, a San Antonio lawyer representing VOTA, said Dean's office had used state technology "for the creation of a list (of felons) to discourage the minority (voting) process ... and we wanted to demonstrate that state technology could be used to open up rather than close down the process."

"The list is simply the biggest, most up-to-date list that is accurate and available under the Open Records Act," said Korbel.

Strake said, "If they wanted to be fair — and no one has ever accused them of being fair — they would have compared driver's licenses with registered voters and gone after a bigger universe."

He said Democrats like the settlement, "because they think they've got a big plum that will help in the area of voter interest."

Davis said, "I'd like to point out that this settlement is not something the Democrats or this office generated."

"The offer was so cheap compared with defending a lawsuit, I couldn't pass it up," Davis said.

He said many on the list are undoubtedly back at work by now, and "the list is not represented as one of people out of work."

Former Secretary of State Dean, who was appointed by former Republican Gov. Bill Clements, said use of the list by Democrats "may be a very miscalculated move."

"With Reagan-Bush and (Phil) Gramm leading in Texas, it has been suggested that the biggest thing Republicans may have to combat is complacency," Dean said. "And this kind of (Democratic Party) effort probably will give a major boost to Republican efforts to register and turn out the vote. It may be the shot in the arm Republicans need."

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 257 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 increased $2.3 billion to $175.2 billion during the week ended Sept. 26, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 10.51 percent from 10.72 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 10.64 percent from 10.67 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity increased one day to 38 days.

William E. Donoghue says: "The asset increase of $2.3 billion was primarily due to institutional investors returning to the money funds to continue earning higher rates than could be earned by entering the market. The funds' average maturity has increased two days in the past two weeks. Most of the fund managers of the largest funds extended the maturities of their portfolios this past week. The sharp drop in the 7-day average yield is a reflection of the lower T-bill yields since early September."

HNG reports income for fiscal year 1984

HOUSTON — Houston Natural Gas Corp. has announced income from continuing operations for the fiscal year ended July 31, 1984 of $122,146,000 or $3.17 per common and common equivalent share, compared with $140,146,000 or $3.42 per share for the prior fiscal year. The fiscal 1984 results from continuing operations include non-recurring write-offs and year-end adjustments of approximately $13 million, or 34 cents per share, largely resulting from an increase in reserves for bad debts and from write-downs of certain properties and producer refunds as required.

Net income for the year, including earnings from discontinued operations, was $141,490,000 or $3.68 per share, compared with $190,657,000 or $4.66 per share for fiscal 1983. The fiscal 1984 results include write-offs and year-end adjustments of $21.6 million, or 56 cents per share; a loss related to the disposal of a discontinued operation of approximately $6.9 million, or 18 cents per share; and an extraordinary charge of approximately $22 million, or 57 cents per share.

After all write-offs and adjustments, net income for the fourth quarter was $8,632,000 or 25 cents per share, compared with $26,415,000 or 64 cents for the final quarter a year ago.

In addition to the write-offs and adjustments, the company said fourth quarter results were affected adversely by reduced sales to one of its electric utility customers as compared to the prior year. The company said, however, that it expects more favorable gas sales comparisons in the coming months, particularly as sales under recently-announced contracts with new customers begin and as the Texas Gulf Coast economy continues to improve.

"Although competition in the Texas intrastate markets remains intense, we expect our sales and the financial performance of our core businesses to improve significantly over the next 12 months," Kenneth L. Lay, HNG's chairman and chief executive officer said.

Lay also noted that the company's fiscal 1985 capital budget for continuing operations is approximately $320 million, compared with $256 million for fiscal 1984. More than half of the total 1985 captial expenditures budget, or approximately $180 million, will be designated for exploration and production.

At fiscal year-end proved reserves were 7,371,363 barrels of oil and 357.3 billion cubic feet of natural gas, compared with 4,616,618 barrels of oil and 307.0 billion cubic feet of natural gas for the prior fiscal year.

HNG has completed the sale of Liquid Carbonic Corp. for $407 million cash and is moving forward with the disposition of its marine and coal businesses. Lay sid that considerable interest had been shown in both Pott Industries Inc. and Zeigler Coal Co. and the company expects disposition to be completed by calendar year-end.

"We currently are evaluating the acquisition opportunities available in our primary businesses and expect to make a major acquisition during fiscal 1985. If this cannot be accomplished as planned, the company expects to continue to repurchase its own shares," Lay said.

In other action, the board declared regular quarterly dividends, all payable October 1, 1984, to shareholders of record September 17, 1984: $1.16 1/4 per share on the $.65 percent Redeemable Preferred Stock, 1964 Series ($100 Par); and 50 cents per share on the common stock ($1 Par).

Love Oil reports sharply increased revenues

DENVER — Love Oil Company Inc. has reported annual earnings of $1,230,290 compared with a net loss of $155,234 for the previous fiscal year.

Revenues increased sharply to $2,835,472 from $1,305,044 for fiscal 1983.

Earlier this year, Love Oil obtained a $5 million line of bank credit to be used for acquisition of oil and gas properties. Last January, the company sold its major producing property for $3,450,000 and recorded a net gain of $2,319,318 on the sale for fiscal 1984.

KenCope Energy buys back shares of stock

SAN ANTONIO — T.M. Ford, Jr. president of KenCope Energy Companies, has announced that the company has purchased 120,000 shares of the company's common stock owned by Nancy Copeland of Odessa. The purchase price for the stock is $405,000 or $3.375 per share.

Ford said, "The purchase of the shares represents management's faith in the financial integrity of KenCope and the underlying value of its stock.

Also the board of directors authorized the purchase of up to an additional 100,000 of the company's common shares in open-market transactions. The purchases will be made periodically, and the number will depend on market prices and availability. The stock purchased will be held in treasury to be used for general corporate purposes. The firm has 4,656,125 shares outstanding.

Judge rules Teamsters denied right to informed vote on UPS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ruling that 90,000 Teamsters were "denied their right to an informed and meaningful vote" on a proposed contract with the United Parcel Service, a federal judge has impounded ratification election ballots.

In a decision released Thursday, U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant also forbade Teamster President Jackie Presser and other leaders of the union to resubmit the contract offer for another vote for at least 15 days.

The results of the rank-and-file membership ratification vote were unknown. The balloting was on a proposal to renew a contract with United Parcel Service 10 months before expiration of the current agreement covering some 90,000 Teamster members.

At the union's headquarters here, spokesman Duke Zeller said, "We're going to, of course, comply with the judge's ruling, and we're going to resubmit (the contract to the members) after the 15 days."

Bryant's ruling came in a suit brought against Presser by William Bauman of St. Louis, Mo., chief steward for the Teamster UPS workers.

In the decision, the judge sided with arguments by Bauman and the dissident union faction, Teamsters for a Democratic Union, that Presser had given rank-and-file Teamster workers at UPS too little time to mull over the proposed contract extension.

Bryant ordered the impoundment of the contract ratification ballots returned by Teamster UPS workers to a Silver Spring, Md., post office facility. He also said the ballots could "not be used for any purpose associated with the current contract proposal between the IBT (International Brotherhood of Teamsters) and the United Parcel Service ...."

Pillsbury to buy Van de Kamp

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Pillsbury Co. has agreed to buy Van de Kamp's Frozen Foods, the nation's biggest producer of frozen Mexican dinners, Pillsbury officials said.

The Minneapolis-based Pillsbury made a multimillion-dollar offer "we just couldn't refuse," said James Hull, controller of General Host Corp., which owns Van de Kamp's.

Terms of the sale, which is subject to approval by Pillsbury's directors, were not disclosed.

Van de Kamp's, based in Long Beach, also sells frozen fish, frozen Chinese food and other ethnic entrees.

The sale, if completed as planned by Nov. 5, would be Pillsbury's biggest acquisition since it bought Haagen-Dazs, an ice-cream producer, in September 1983, Pillsbury spokesman Johnny Thompson said Thursday.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

There are risks in stocks

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My individual retirement account is at a brokerage firm. In August of 1983, on the advice of the account representative, I invested a few thousand dollars of my IRA money in a utility stock for a higher return. A few days later, he asked for authority to invest the rest of my money. I agreed and he purchased stock of another utility for my IRA. That purchase and his commission wiped out all the cash in my account.

The first utility stock stopped paying dividends and has plunged in price to about two-thirds of what I paid. The second has fallen about one-third. Do you agree I was poorly advised? In my opinion, that guy doesn't know very much about his business. Needless to say, he no longer handles my account.

A. Of course you were poorly advised. That's a risk you run by relying on a broker's advice. Let's face it. Anyone with the omnipotence to pick nothing but winners in the stock market wouldn't have to work as a broker or at any other trade.

When you have an IRA at a brokerage firm, it's a "self-directed" account through which you can buy stocks, bonds and many other things.

Some people select investments for such accounts on their own. Some rely on brokers for advice. And some give their brokers "discretionary authority" over the accounts, allowing the brokers to buy and sell without consulting the customers.

The broker with whom you understandably are unhappy picked two clunkers — the first after consulting you, the second with the discretionary authority you gave him. You might have done better or worse choosing your own IRA investments.

You've learned the unfortunate lesson that there are risks in stocks. Anyone who wants to avoid all risk — in an IRA or anyplace else — shouldn't buy stocks.

• • •

Q. If I purchase a bond at a premium price for my self-directed IRA and the bond is redeemed at its lower face value when it matures, can I report the difference in the two prices as a capital loss on my income tax return?

A. No! You don't report either capital losses or capital gains on bonds, stocks or anything else you have in an IRA.

You don't pay income tax on the money you put into an IRA. And, while your money is in an IRA, you don't pay tax on that money or the money it earns in interest, dividends or gains in the value of your IRA investments. Nor can you take a capital loss — thereby reducing your income tax bill — if your IRA investments decline in value.

When you start making withdrawals from your IRA, you will be required to pay full income tax on the money you take out. It won't make any difference whether the values of your IRA investments have gone up or down.

• • •

Q. My self-directed IRA is invested in stocks. One of the stocks has a dividend reinvestment plan allowing stockholders to use their dividends to buy more shares at a 5 percent discount from the market price. The brokerage firm at which I have the account says I cannot participate in the dividend reinvestment plan. Is there some way this can be changed?

A. Sure. The brokerage firm and-or the custodian or trustee for your IRA — most likely, a bank — could change their way of handling things. That would involve reprogramming computers on which IRA records are kept.

Most brokerage houses claim that would be a bothersome and expensive thing for which there isn't much customer demand. In the neighborhood where I grew up that lame excuse would have been called "a crock."

The hard fact is that brokers don't get commissions on dividend reinvestment plans.

Q. Two years ago, when we needed a loan to pay some bills, I telephoned the savings and loan association which holds our mortgage. I was told they would get back to me.

About a week later, a man came to our house and said he was from the S&L. He gave us his card, which stated he was a "licensed real estate broker" and didn't mention the S&L. When I asked about that, he said his firm and the S&L work together.

We filled out a loan application and he said we had to give him $350 "to push the loan" and we would get the $350 back if the loan was not approved.

When we never heard from the S&L, I called there and was told they never heard of that man. I have called the office on his card often. He's always "out" and never calls back.

Enclosed are photocopies of that man's card, the check we wrote to his real estate agency and the receipt he gave us. What can we do about this?

A. Based on the information you supply, an old Brooklyn Dodger fan would say, you "wuz robbed."

Take your story and the originals of the photocopies you sent along, as well as any other evidence, to the county prosecutor's office. File a complaint, so that character can be nailed before the statute of limitations runs out.

In this imperfect world, there are many shady operators. The con man who came to your house seems to have had a contact at the S&L, who tipped him off that you were looking for a loan. He then came around, figuring you were a pigeon ready to be plucked.

Also, get in touch with the top executives at the S&L, which certainly doesn't want its reputation sullied by the actions of the employee who put that con artist on to you. That "steerer" should be fired.

• • •

Q. There is an on-going discussion, although "argument" might be a better word, about whether Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage at banks is better than Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. coverage at S&Ls, or vice versa. Which do you say is superior?

A. Toss a coin. One has to be counted as good as the other. Each protects each depositor up to $100,000 at a member institution, as does the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund at a member CU.

No one has ever lost a dime in an insured account with FDIC, FSLIC or NCUSIF coverage. But that doesn't shut down the arguments among the three segments of the "banking" business.

Child books reflect worry over abuse

Copley News Service

Ever since children's literature developed as a separate style of writing, it has been used to point young readers in the right direction.

While children had always been subject to morals and lessons taught to them from adult literature — Sunday Bible study, for example — the lessons to be learned in children's books were directed more toward the little ones' lifestyles.

And some of it was pretty scary.

When historical essayist and poet Hilaire Belloc published "Cautionary Verse" for children in 1939, he didn't tread lightly. The child who persisted in playing with matches, for example, burned up.

As time went on, the lessons eased up, for it became unfashionable to scare children. Even fairy tales were considered too frightening by some publishers, who brought out less scary editions.

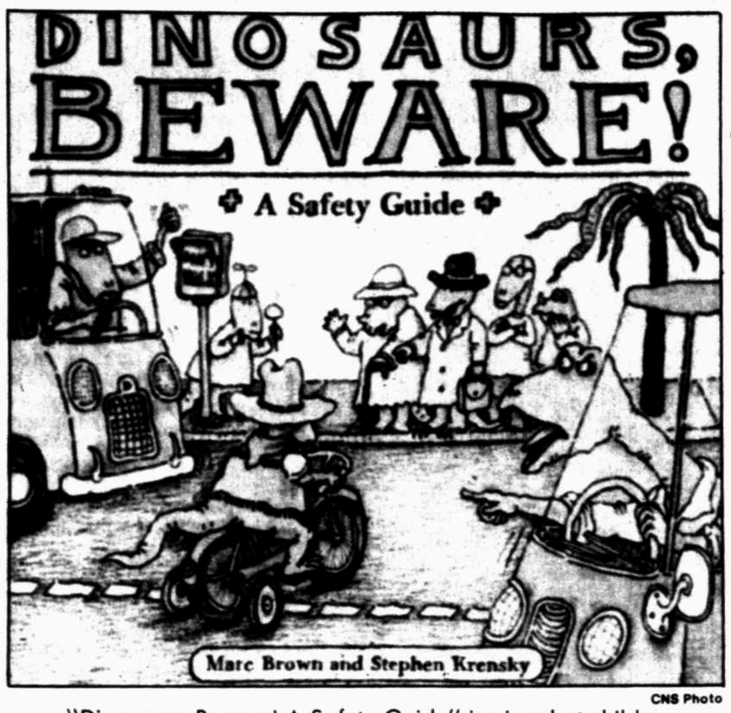

Children's books were more likely to instruct their young readers about human relationships — being kind to others, understanding those who are different, and even such difficult subjects as sexuality and death, while warnings about physical dangers were confined mostly to walking safely in traffic.

But now parents, educators and social workers are becoming more worried each year over the insidious threat of child abuse — particularly child sexual molestation — and it's back to the old warning: "Don't talk to strangers."

Society has become more comfortable talking about sexual abuse, and more and more people — particularly women — are opening up and telling of devastating experiences they had in their childhood.

Studies and surveys are being done. Glamour magazine, for example, recently ran a survey in which 40 percent of the 2,014 women respondents said they were sexually abused as children, and of those, 70 percent said they told no one.

In addition, there have been in the news, within the past year, several dramatically graphic cases of sexual abuse from child caretakers, particularly the case of the McMartin Preschool in Manhattan Beach, Calif., where, it is alleged, at least 42 children were abused. This has added to parents' concern.

CNS Photo

"Dinosaurs, Beware! A Safety Guide" is aimed at children.

This concern is reflected in new books for children, and in the requests by parents for children's reading materials, say city librarians and bookshop owners.

Three popular books being sold at one bookstore, for example, all address the problem. A book that is particularly popular with children, because of it's amusing drawings is "Dinosaurs, Beware! A Safety Guide." It gives 60 safety tips, including dangers at home, at school, at play, in the streets and also warns against talking to strangers.

Also relying upon amusing illustrations of improbable animals to catch the attention of young children is the book "Never Talk to Strangers," by Irma Joyce, with drawings by George Buckett. The format is simple: repetition of the simple direction, "Never talk to strangers." No reason is given.

A book for children who are old enough to read the stories themselves is "No More Secrets for Me." The four stories within tell about children in situations of molestation, and how the children deal with the problem in a positive way by telling someone about it. According to Louise Howton, a bookstore co-manager, the book is particularly in demand by parents.

Much of the emphasis in recent literature on sexual abuse emphasizes the child's right to say 'no' and to keep his or her privacy. It also emphasizes the necessity for children to find someone to tell when something does happen, even though the abuser may be someone they have admired or cared about.

Magazine written for 'parents of multiples'

NEW YORK — There are articles titled "Eating for Three," "Automatic Playmates" and "Multiple Dangers." And there are advertisements for the Maclaren Double Buggy, the One-Stop Twin Book Shop and the Twin Matey baby carrier.

Not surprisingly, the publication's title is Twins, billed as "The magazine for the parents of multiples." Founded by a mother of twins in Overland Park, Kan., the slick-paper, four-color, 64-page magazine attracted 6,000 subscribers after its first issue appeared in July. More than 20,000 copies of the second issue are being distributed.

"The magazine is for the 500,000 parents nationally who have twins under the age of 15," said Barbara C. Unell, its founder and editor, who is one of those parents. "There is no other national magazine for the parents of multiples."

Mrs. Unell's twins, Amy and Justin, were born in 1980. She vowed to start the publication, she said, "when I realized that I just couldn't find any magazine that regularly offered parenting information about twins." Her husband, Robert, the father of the twins, who is a marketing researcher, did preparatory studies on the concept.

Speaking of the situation that led to twins, Mrs. Unell said, "You find yourself constantly adapting information originally intended for the parents of single children — and then wondering whether it's really applicable to your family."

Study: Fat babies rarely become fat children

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fat infants rarely become fat children, say researchers who monitored 450 babies through age 9 and found that overweight babies slim down through a natural growth process.

Studies at the University of California at Berkeley did not, however, determine why some babies are fat and whether fat children are destined to be fat adults, the researchers said.

Contrary to popular belief and earlier studies, "the obese infant is not predestined to become an obese child," the research team of nutritionist Leona R. Shapiro wrote in this month's issue of the American Journal of Public Health.

In a telephone interview Tuesday, Ms. Shapiro said the study prompts her to advise mothers of fat babies: "Don't be alarmed. ... The fat ones thin down by themselves without any particular kind of intervention. It's just the normal growth process with them."

However, Ms. Shapiro's study also found that fat 9-year-olds usually displayed sudden weight gains beginning at age 6, although in some cases as early as age 2 for girls and age 3 for boys.

Students read romance novels

New York Times News Service

BOSTON — "Hey, John, what sort of books do the students at UMass have sticking out of their back pockets?"

Bernard Flynn, proprietor of a new book shop called the Trident on Newbury Street, was talking to John Stomberg, a sophomore at the University of Massachusetts campus here, who will be working for Flynn as soon as the shop opens for business.

"I hate to say it," Stomberg answered gravely, "but I see a lot of romances."

Flynn's face sagged. He would stock joke books and science fiction, rock-and-roll picture books and other best-selling recreational reading for his share of the Boston area's huge population of college students. But there are limits, he said. "I will not have romances," he said. "They might as well be written by computers."

As 200,000 college students prepare to descend on Boston and Cambridge, Medford and Wellesley, the ancient axle of American academe, proud mother of learning and liberal concern, local booksellers have been devoting more than their usual attencated young adults.

Their attention is mixed with a measure of dismay. Over the last few years, not only romances and mysteries but also hardcover comic books and countless books on making money have been crowding out the college best sellers of years past, which many booksellers insist were more literate.

"There are no cult authors anymore in the Vonnegut style or the Tolkien style or the Salinger style," said Charles E. Ridewood, manager of the Paperback Booksmith off Harvard Square in Cambridge. "Hermann Hesse? Nothing like that." Fragmentation has supplanted crazes, Ridewood said. The trend is toward trash.

Social issues, politics, women's issues, black studies, Eastern religions, psychology, drugs, serious fiction, all have sturdy followings, booksellers say, and occasionally a hot new book does well on campus. But most of those topics have cooled in recent years.

Science fiction is as popular as ever, and Frank Herbert's "Dune" novels keep reviving. Fantasies and thrillers of all kinds are running very strong. So are business books such as "Megatrends" by John Naisbitt and "In Search of Excellence" by Thomas J. Peters and Robert H. Waterman Jr.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter fears sister will tarnish golden anniversary

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My parents will soon celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary, and we, their children, are planning a grand reception for them at our country club.

We are six children, three sons and three daughters. The problem is the youngest sister — the beauty of the family. She's been on the fast track since her teen-age years and has humiliated and disgraced us many times, but our parents seem always to forgive her.

She was arrested for shoplifting in high school. Later, she was kicked out of college for stealing. At 23, she eloped with a wealthy young boy of 19. A year later, he caught her in bed with a 16-year-old caddy she dragged home from the country club.

She's on her second marriage now, and this husband doesn't have the big bucks her first husband had, so she's a hooker. Everybody in town knows this but our parents.

Do we have to include her at the 50th? I'm afraid she'll hustle men at the party. I spoke to our minister about this and he said, "'I' stands in the middle of pride," but then he doesn't have a hooker for a sister.

Please advise us. — THE ELDEST

DEAR ELDEST: The purpose of the celebration you're planning is to bring joy to your parents, so don't mar it by excluding your sister. Listen to your minister. Wise man, he.

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 and George (not his real name) is 34. We are very much in love and plan to marry soon. This is my second marriage and George's first. The problem: George contributes to the support of his two illegitimate sons. He became a father at 18, and then again at 20 (two different women). I have never met George's sons. Each lives with his mother in a distant state.

George plans to provide for his sons' college educations, which may mean some sacrifices on his part — and mine.

I understand this, and I'm not grumbling about it. My problem? My parents haven't been told about George's sons. George says he thinks my parents should be told now, but I've asked him not to tell them yet. My parents are small-town conservative people, and I'm afraid they would be turned off on George if they knew he had two illegitimate sons.

Help me get my head straight, please. — CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: I agree with George. Tell your parents now. Even small-town conservative people should respect a man for facing up to his responsibilities.

Your George must be quite a man. Cherish him.

AT WORK

Taking self seriously necessary for successful job hunt

By ADELE SCHEELE, PH.D.

Q. My husband has heart problems and had to leave his company. At 40 he is ready to start his own business. My children are all grown and can't support us. I am afraid we won't be able to cover our costs even though we live modestly. Would you have any idea as to what direction I could go in? I read your column and like your responses.

A. Try to find a reentry program for women offered by a local YWCA or college for group support. Then, examine your past and list exactly what tasks you have enjoyed — organizing events, fund-raising for religious groups, even flea markets, or bookkeeping for your family. These tasks, though unpaid, have market value if you can translate them into what an organization needs. If, for example, you enjoy shopping or have a skill in exchanging goods, then consider working for a department store either in sales or in customer service departments.

You might also go to your minister, priest, rabbi or to the presidents of the PTA or any charities you may have worked for and ask for leads to a job. Don't be afraid that they won't take you seriously. If you do, they will, at any age.

Q. I am presently in sales. I want to make a career change to political analysis and consulting. I have both an undergraduate and graduate degree in history with a concentration in the area of international relations. I have also done some writing and continue to read extensively in the areas of politics and international relations. What is my best course of action?

A. Use the upcoming elections as your opportunity to change careers. If you can't get hired, then volunteer for a political campaign manager or local party office to do just what your skills dictate: analysis and consulting. By mid-November you should be in a far better situation.

Dr. Scheele answers questions from readers in her column. Write to her in care of this newspaper.

AT WIT'S END

Even parental lectures can become obsolete

By ERMA BOMBECK

Every once in awhile, I think mothers should go through their repertoire of speeches and toss out all those that don't work anymore.

Parental lectures are like anything else. They become obsolete. Kids outgrow them. They're used too often and lose their effectiveness. (When the kids recite it along with you, it's time to phase it out.) And face it! Some of them don't work. They've lost it.

The speech that never worked for me was, "I've never asked you for much, but I'm begging you now." Actually, I put a lot of myself into that lecture. My shoulders slumped, my eyes became dull, and sometimes I cried. I even choreographed it, dragging across the floor and coming to rest on a kitchen chair where I shredded my nose tissue. I'd finish the phrase off with, "Please take out the garbage before it attacks us," or "Stay off the phone until the doctor calls me with my test results." It should have moved them to tears, but it never did.

Another one that was a total flop was, "Never mind, I'll do it myself." It was from my "Guilt Sampler." Friends of mine used it effectively for years, so it must have been my delivery. Whatever, I always ended up with the kids saying, "Okay," and making a fast exit.

Saying goodbye to parental sermons is like bidding adieu to old friends. How I miss "Do you want Mommy to cry?" Few speeches since have made them feel so rotten. "You will never see another cookie as long as you live," was a wonderful soliloquy until the kids became independently wealthy and found out they could buy their own stash.

Others I was glad to unload. I felt like a fool when I was delivering them. Every time I gave the "One of these days you'll thank me for being so strict" speech I knew I wasn't being convincing by the way they looked at me like I was headed for paper shoes city.

Naturally, a parent never wants to let her repertoire run low. You have to work all the time to replace old speeches with new ones. I'm getting a lot of mileage out of "Would it kill you to get married and make me a grandmother?" I also like "If you don't want to tell me what's bothering you, just drop it, and I'll understand." (Allow three days to deliver this one.)

I tried one the other day that I thought was a winner. "What do you want me to do, keep my mouth shut and say nothing?" I won't go into details . . . but it needs work.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Surgery's effect difficult to assess

Dear Dr. Solomon: I realize that coronary bypass operations are supposed to protect a person against getting a heart attack. But lots of people are in danger of getting a heart attack, so how do you decide who should have the operation and who shouldn't? — Kip, Clarksburg, W.Va.

Dear Kip: Dr. Nevin M. Katz, of the Georgetown University Hopsital in Washington, D.C., says there are two basic criteria for coronary artery bypass surgery. The first is when it is ncessary to relieve symptoms that have not been relieved by medical treatment and that continue to interfere with the patient's lifestyle. The second is when it is believed that surgery will improve survival.

An older patient with coronary artery disease who is not bothered to any great extent by his symptoms may not be interested in surgery. On the other hand, a patient of the same age who enjoys tennis and otherwise engages in strenuous physical activity may find that his symptoms seriously interfere with his way of life, and may therefore decide on surgery.

The effect of coronary artery bypass surgery on survival in a particular patient is more difficult to assess. In general, it depends on the patient's specific condition prior to the operation.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why would a doctor warn a patient against using too much steroid medicine on the skin? I can understand why it would not be a good idea to use too much of it internally, but I don't see why putting it on the skin would be a problem. — Ms. D.G., Tempe, Ariz.

Dear Ms. G.: The excessive use of steroids on the skin can create a number of problems. Obviously, the overly generous use of steroids increases the cost of treatment. In addition, it may also increase the risk of side effects.

The overapplication of steroids can result in tolerance and, therefore, a lessening of its effectiveness. Should this occur, the effect may be overcome in some cases by reducing the number of applications, even to the extent of adopting an alternate-day schedule.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I always seem to have some sort of inflammation around my lips. Can you recommend what I should do about it? — Ken, York, Pa.

Dear Ken: Treatment of the condition you describe would of course depend on its cause, and your letter does not give much of a clue in this regard. Probably the most common cause of inflammation around the lips is licking them. The condition is then aggravated becaue the patient tends to continue licking the lips in order to keep them wet.

If this is in fact the cause, there are ointments that can be helpful. But you should first see your physician to determine the cause and to prescribe an appropriate medication.

Radio station offers multilingual program

JENKINTOWN, Pa. (AP) — One of Montgomery County's cultural treasures is buried in the basement of the Benson East building in Jenkintown. There's no need to hire Indiana Jones for this one, though. Anyone can share the wealth by finding 103.9 on the FM radio dial.

Since 1972, WIBF radio has been broadcasting programs in Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Russian, Ukrainian, Armenian, Hebrew, Yiddish, Greek and Korean. There are also programs for the Irish and Polish communities.

Owned by Fox Brothers Management Corp., the 5,000-watt station transmits throughout the Philadelphia area. Station manager Douglas Henson says the competition provided the impetus to add foreign language programs which have become "quite a success."

Henson, whose background was in television, remembers when William Fox started WIBF and Channel 29, both in the Benson, in 1965. Four years later, the television station was sold to Taft, became WTAF and moved downtown.

At that time, Barry Reisman produced a radio show on Sunday mornings. Now, he also does an afternoon show. His lively programs consist of Hebrew and Yiddish music, news you might hear in Israel, a song from "Yentl," updates on financial news and driving conditions, as well as the best places to enjoy a kosher meal.

Reisman also does occasional talk shows and interviews, hosting celebrities such as Jan Murray, Don Rickles and Milton Berle. His show has changed with the trends during his 18 years on the air. "When disco was big here, it was also big in Israel," he said.

WIBF's ethnic programming does much to keep the community aware of local events as well as informing them about other countries. Bill and Bessie Sarris, for example, have been bringing news from Greece to Philadelphia since the early 1950s.

Bill, who is from the island of Paros, was involved in radio in Athens. He has been acting as correspondent for the station, making two-month to three-month trips to Greece, and returning with the latest news and music.

Bessie, who is from Philadelphia, is the program announcer and translator. Their son, Chris, engineers the shows, which are broadcast from the Sarris' home on Saturdays and Sundays.

WIBF bills itself as having the only Spanish broadcasts designed for the varied Latin community in the Delaware Valley. "Fifty percent of the Spanish community is Puerto Rican, the other 50 percent is a mixture," said Edgar Martorell, director of Radio Hispanoamericans Inc.

Martorell left his home in Argentina seven years ago and became manager of the 10-year-old program on WIBF. The show's disc jockeys hail from Argentina, Puerto Rico, Bolivia and Santo Domingo.

Weeknights and Saturday afternoons, Radio Hispanoamericana plays Spanish rock, romantic music and the South American salsa and merengue. Also broadcast is a religious program, a soap opera and news from Spanish-speaking countries.

The Spanish and Italian language programs began in 1969. According to Luigi Patitucci, director of the Italian program, the popularity of his show increased when it was moved from a late evening hour to the dinner hour weekdays. A format change four years ago added Italian news and sports from Rome. A Saturday afternoon program is devoted to the interests of young people.

A Russian refugee, Demitri Ganapolsky, came to the United States in 1979 and began working at WIBF in 1982. His multilanguage program includes Russian, Yiddish, Ukrainian and Moldavian. The show delivers music, poetry, local sports and community news

On Saturdays and Sundays, worship services are broadcast from Keneseth Israel, Salem Baptist Church and the Korean Presbyterian Church, among others.

Tasmania's tiger search begins

Australia has begun one of its largest wildlife searches ever, for the elusive Tasmanian tiger, the world's largest carnivorous marsupial.

Advanced video technology and sound sensors will be used in going over a 347-square-mile area in Tasmania, Australia's island state, where in recent years sightings have been reported. But the last known of these striped-back creatures died in a Hobart, Tasmania, zoo in 1937.

Carson celebrates 22nd anniversary

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Johnny Carson joined "The Tonight Show" in 1962, his hair was black and plentiful, he was married to his first wife and his sidekick was Ed McMahon.

As he celebrates his 22nd anniversary as host of the NBC late-night show, only McMahon is still around.

"I followed Jack Paar as host, which was dangerous in a sense," said Carson, his hair now silver and thinning, his third marriage coming to an end. "Paar was such a mercurial personality. Everyone wants to make comparisons. You have to find your own format, your own style, and whatever comparisons there are will go away after a while.

"I remember one newspaper critic said I was no Jack Paar. I said he was no Westbrook Pegler, either. I didn't start out to be Jack Paar."

Lucky for us. Johnny Carson is an American original, at 58 the country's most visible humorist. His four-times-a-week appearances on "The Tonight Show" give him more exposure than any other comedian.

Carson handles that exposure adroitly. His monologues are funny not because the jokes are great; they aren't. But Carson is faster on his feet than Muhammad Ali at his peak, and his recovery from a deflated gag is a delight.

Once again, Carson will celebrate his anniversary with a two-hour prime-time collection of memorable moments from the past. It will be shown Monday.

"The retrospective will have at least 45 minutes of stuff from the past year," he said. "The problem is always what to put in and what to leave out. Everyone has a piece they like. So, we'll have a few old classics, but we wanted to show some new things."

For the last six weeks, Carson has been working with editors.

"The only thing live will be the monologue, which you can never do ahead," he said in an interview in his NBC office. He sat at his usual workplace, a couch. On the coffee table before him was the material for that night's show.

He recalled that on the 10th anniversary show, Ronald Reagan, then governor of California, showed up to read a telegram of congratulations from President Richard Nixon. "I have a feeling we won't be getting a telegram from Nixon this year," he said.

Carson's Nixon impression was once a "Tonight Show" fixture, as his Reagan impression is now.

"I never did Nixon very well," Carson said. "I do Carter and Reagan very well. I guess for me it's the rhythm of their speech. Reagan's accent is easier for me. The way things are going it looks like I'll be doing Reagan for another four years. Walter Mondale would be very hard to do. There's nothing to grab hold of."

Is TV violence dangerous to health?

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Is violence on television dangerous to your family's health?

Public TV addresses that question, and others like it, tonight in "The Violence Factor," a provocative examination of TV violence, which has become another 20th century environmental issue. Like toxic waste and smog, TV violence is a man-made problem.

Edwin Newman, the show's host, reports that by age 18, today's youth will have seen 18,000 murders on TV and countless acts of aggression, in some cases some 40 hostile acts per program.

And, with cable and its R-rated movies reaching more homes, violence on free TV undoubtebly will increase as the commercial networks fight for defecting audiences.

While public TV intelligently discusses violence, the networks will be showing it tonight on CBS' "The Dukes of Hazzard," NBC's "Hunter" and "Miami Vice," and ABC's "Hawaiian Heat" and "Matt Houston."

"The Dukes of Hazzard," designed for younger audiences, exhibits cartoon-type violence in the form of good-ol'-boy hijinks. It's bloodless, and nobody gets hurt. "Hunter," "Hawaiian Heat" and "Matt Houston" are more typical thrills-and-spills cop shows.

"MIAMI VICE," in the mode of "Hill Street Blues," treats violence more realistically — both in its occurrence and emotional consequence.

Regardless of how sensitively and authentically TV treats the reality of violent crime and violent punishment, the fact is that Hollywood producers and the networks overuse violence. Some 20 shows this season substitute heavy action for hard thinking in their approach to problem-solving.

"I've never been able to understand how the American car industry went into decline with the amount of car crashes on TV," Newman said in an interview.

Violence isn't restricted to police shows. Many parents have objected to music videos shown on MTV, which exhibit explicit and subtle themes of mayhem, sadism and sexism.

Newman said the financial realities of TV dictated that violence would disappear faster than a speeding bullet — if the public didn't tolerate it or the advertisers didn't want it.

In the 1960s, NBC experimented with two seasons of highbrow concerts from the Tanglewood music center. "Not a minute of programs was ever sold," Newman said. "NBC even had the '1812 Overture' with fireworks."

CRITICS OF TV's steady diet of violence say it distorts children's senses of reality and leads to fear, anxiety, desensitization and emulation. The program cites several studies supporting that view.

In one, Dr. Leonard Eron, professor of psychology at the University of Illinois, studied the habits of 400 viewers for 22 years. His conclusion: "People who had watched the most violent TV between birth and age 8 had committed the most serious crimes by age 30."

The most well-known study, released by the National Institute of Mental Health in 1982, said, "The causal relationship between televised violence and anti-social behavior is sufficent to warrant appropriate and immediate remedial action."

The network reaction, as it had been to previous studies, was a knee-jerk denial. The networks attacked the methodology as flawed and rebutted it with their own in-house studies.

"None of the groups that we examined showed any kind of consistent, significant relationship between television and aggression," said Dr. Horst Stipp, NBC's director of social research.

In essence, TV is saying that TV doesn't influence behavior. Yet, the whole rationale for TV commercials is to influence behavior.

ONE MAN interviewed by "The Violence Factor" said he saw a couple on "Police Story" get away with shoplifting. "I said, well, if they can do it, so can I. I tried it and got caught."

In trying to establish responsibility, the program has a section called "Circle of Blame," with everybody blaming somebody else: networks, viewers, producers and advertisers.

Asked if he believed a federal agency, such as the Federal Communications Commission, should censor the networks and tone down violence, Newman thought for some 20 seconds before saying no, "because of the difficulty of measuring the degree and amount of violence."

He prefers letting an informed public regulate. Programs like this, he said, will help "stir up interest and get people thinking about this issue of overpowering importance."

"If you want to do something about it," Newman says in his concluding comments tonight, "don't underestimate the power of our representative form of government, or the weight of a simple call or letter, or public meeting.

"Think about it. Will you become involved in programming television — or will you sit back and let television program you?"

London shows ready to invade Broadway

LONDON (AP) — London is once again preparing to invade Broadway with no fewer than a dozen shows.

The current or recent shows on the West End, London's Broadway, are being considered for a New York run this season, despite some London producers' fears that it is becoming more difficult to guarantee a Broadway success.

"It's a dicey proposition opening a show on Broadway," said producer Duncan Weldon, whose Triumph-Apollo production company may have three shows in New York by season's end.

"A great deal of care has to be taken," echoed producer Michael Redington, aware that New York production costs and ticket prices are often five times higher than in London.

Among the shows given the thumbs-up by Rich on his recent trip to England was a five-hour revival of Eugene O'Neill's 1928 "Strange Interlude," starring two-time Oscar winner Glenda Jackson as the epically neurotic Nina.

Weldon hopes to bring a revival of Eugene O'Neill's 1928 "Strange Interlude" to Broadway next February.

He also plans a New York engagement in April of "Aren't We All?" — the Frederick Lonsdale comedy that will run on the London stage through Nov. 3 with Rex Harrison and Claudette Colbert.

The Ahmanson Theater in Los Angeles will present the Weldon-Triumph Apollo revival of John Osborne's 1965 "A Patriot for Me."

Due for an eight-week run beginning Oct. 5, the play may go on to New York, pending Actors' Equity approval of its largely British cast and the availability of star Alan Bates.

Michael Redington is co-producing a New York run of "Pack of Lies," Hugh Whitemore's drama about espionage and betrayal, for a Broadway premiere at the Royale Theater in January. Rosemary Harris has been cast in the role that won actress Judi Dench the London equivalent of the Tony Award.

Set in the London suburb of Ruislip, the play might seem too local for foreign consumption, but Redington said that "its themes of friendship, loyalty and trust are so universal that they can be understood by any community."

Most critics pan long-lost novel by D.H. Lawrence

LONDON (AP) — A long-lost semi-autobiographical novel by D.H. Lawrence has emerged from its time warp to a mixed reception from the critics, but the publisher says it is selling well.

The hostile reviews call "Mr. Noon" mediocre, overwritten and boring. But others have hailed its appearance, not only for its literary value but for the light it casts on the great author's life and sexual attitudes, portrayed in such classics as "Sons and Lovers" and "Lady Chatterley's Lover."

Novelist Anthony Burgess called the work "something very like a major novel and one of immense autobiographical interest," while the weekly Listener welcomed it for filling in a major gap in Lawrence's development as a man and a writer.

"Mr. Noon" was completed in 1921 but never got published. Although tame by today's permissive standards, it is believed that it was too sexually explicit for its time.

In 1972, the manuscript was acquired by the Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas in Austin, and it was published last week by Cambridge University Press.

The first part, 93 of the 292 pages of "Mr. Noon," is a novella that was published in 1934 and describes the sexual adventures of a young man growing up in provincial England. The second part, only now published, chronicles the experiences of the Lawrence-like Gilbert Noon in Europe, focusing on his elopement with the wife of an English professor.

Noon's elopement is believed to be a thinly disguised account of Lawrence's true-life romance with Frieda von Richthofen-Weekley, whom he lured away from her English husband in 1912 and married. They remained together until his death in 1930.

News of the novel's imminent publication was greeted enthusiastically by Lawrence scholars hoping to learn more about the man whose sensitive explorations of love and sex made him one of the most acclaimed and controversial writers of this century.

"And what have we? We have a long, disjointed, mediocre roman a clef," wrote Christopher Stace in the Daily Telegraph. "There is nothing here Lawrence has not done better elsewhere. The heavily autobiographical content means, of course, that thesis-writers will seize on 'Mr. Noon' with delight, but as a work of art it fails."

Cast members of "Rub-a-Dub-Dub," an original production at the Dell'Arte School of Mime and Comedy, pose for a photo. The 13-year-old school was the lure that attracted actors from Sweden, West Germamy and Canada to the tiny logging town of Blue Lake, Calif., to study.

BLUE LAKE, Calif. — Two Swedes, two Canadians, a Dane, a West German and two Americans were working the kinks out of "Rub-a-Dub-Dub," an original piece in its final dress rehearsal in the 1912 Odd Fellows Hall in this sleepy Hamlet.

"It's an absurd piece, zany, an expressionistic type of theater," mused Joan Schirle, 36, writer and producer of "Rub-a-Dub-Dub." "Something that gives a small ensemble like this a chance to stretch its talents."

Schirle's play is about the ex-dictator of a Latin country, his two girlfriends, a woman trying to commit suicide, a bizarre ship's captain and a swimmer, all of whom sail off in a leaky boat and get lost in the Bermuda Triangle.

It's a musical comedy-melodrama, with players wearing Greek "monster" masks in one scene.

What brings six actors from Sweden, Denmark, West Germany and Canada to this tiny logging town on the Mad River deep in a Northern California redwood forest? The Dell'Arte School of Mime and Comedy. The 13-year-old school in the 82-year-old frame building in this most improbable of locations, hundreds of miles from the nearest city of any size, is one of a handful of schools of its kind.

"ONLY (MIME Jacques) LeCog in Paris is comparable," noted Dell'Arte's director, Alain Schons, 40, who was a University of Paris professor of scenography, masks, puppets and related techniques for four years before moving here in 1979. "We teach performing skills ignored by the academic world of theater. Through experimental study of mime, mask, clowning, juggling, acrobatics, music, dance, melodrama, commedia, martial arts and vaudeville, Dell'Arte students reinforce their commitment to the craft of performing."

But why here, in Blue Lake, of all places?

"To work in a rural setting far from the temptations and distractions of a big city," Schons explains. "We have a rigorous training schedule. Everyone attends classes from 9:30 to 12:30 in the morning, 2 to 5 in the afternoon and 7:30 to 10:30 at night, five days a week and often on weekends. We keep our students busy day and night. They come here to learn, not to rest."

It is a school with a small enrollment — 24 for the beginning nine-month basic training program, plus a month on the road performing in an original production such as "Rub-a-Dub-Dub."

Tuition is $2,650. Tuition for an advanced class, restricted to six to eight students for six months of study and one month in a touring company, is $1,750. About half the students are from the United States, half from Europe.

DELL'ARTE IS not only a theatrical school but the home as well of the Dell'Arte Players, a widely heralded professional acting company that spends six months on the road and six months in Blue Lake at the Odd Fellows Hall. Schirle and many of the performers in the professional company are instructors at the school part of the year. She is a lead performer and co-author of many of the Dell'Arte plays praised by critics for their originality and inventiveness.

The Odd Fellows Hall, upper photo, is the home of the Dell'Arte School of Mime and Comedy. Alain Schons, right, a former University of Paris professor, directs the school, which is also home to the Dell'Arte Players, a widely heralded professional acting company.

The company performs up and down the West Coast, in Los Angeles and San Francisco, at major theater festivals and as part of the California Arts Council's theater touring program. In 1980 it was the only American company invited to perform at the Venice (Italy) Biennale.

"Dell'Arte combines performing with workshops. Those who come here learn the techniques of creating their own theatrical producing company," explains Ralph Hall, 32, ventriloquist, mime and comedian. Hall, from Red Oaks, Iowa, is one of the year-round teachers at the school.

"People who come here are dedicated," he continues. "This is survival theater. Those enrolled are not planning to become stars and set the world on fire, to hit it big on Broadway, TV or films. They do plan to spend their lives making a living working in theater."

ADDS SCHIRLE: "Those who come here for the most part are professional mimes, acrobats, jugglers, clowns, actors, dancers, singers looking for multiple skills to survive as soloists or as members of small ensemble groups. They're wandering troubadours in the truest tradition of commedia dell'arte, traveling the circuits of fairs, small theaters. They come here to pick up techniques on how to do it all — plot building, focus, pace, timing, delivery, movement, voice, singing, acting, staging, scripting, improvisation, the business end. There are but a handful of touring companies in this country, many more in Europe."

Hall calls this kind of theater "going back to the roots, keeping a neat tradition going."

Ruth Griffin, 31, a dancer from Massillon, Ohio, and a dance instructor at California State University, Fresno, before enrolling in this year's advanced class as the only American performer in the group, says she "loves this kind of performing, the intimacy of how it touches the audience. The spirit is very much alive, not so established and set. It's taking a risk."
