Survey indicates tight election race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrat Michael Dukakis and Republican George Bush are likely to face a tight race for the White House this fall, but Dukakis is off to a fast start in some traditionally Republican states, according to a 50-state Associated Press survey.

Democrats around the country expressed optimism about Dukakis' chance to end eight years of Republican rule in the White House.

Republicans in the survey said the contest shapes up as a close one, but several officials added that Bush could win easily if he succeeds in his attempt to depict Dukakis as an heir to the Democratic party's recent liberal past.

Dukakis, the governor of Massachusetts, leads in the polls in California and New Jersey, both of which last voted Democratic in 1964. He is running even with Bush in the polls in Utah, which gave President Reagan his largest majorities in 1980 and 1984. One survey shows him even in reliably Republican Nebraska, and within striking distance in Texas and Florida, key Southern states.

Said Democratic Chairwoman Karen Marchioro of Washington state, "This is the best shot we've had in a long, long time." The last time a Democrat carried her state in a presidential election was 1968.

"I think it will be the closest presidential contest we've had since 1976," said Tom Cole, the GOP state chairman in Oklahoma. Oklahoma hasn't voted for a Democrat in a presidential campaign since 1964.

Republicans have won four of the last five presidential elections, with Jimmy Carter's victory in 1976 the only exception.

While Dukakis leads in nationwide public opinion polls, there is agreement that political fortunes until the election will be influenced by factors such as selection of a vice presidential running mate, debates and the economy.

Republicans say Dukakis' lead is a temporary result of favorable publicity in recent weeks from his string of primary victories against Jesse Jackson.

"Nobody has laid a glove on Dukakis," says South Carolina GOP party director Tom Denny. "That's going to change once the conventions are over..."

For now, Dukakis' lead nationally is reflected in poll results around the country and optimism among Democratic officials in states from Washington and Oregon to New Hampshire.

Jackson backers will battle for state delegates

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Although Michael Dukakis has clinched the Democratic presidential nomination, the Rev. Jesse Jackson's forces head into the state party convention in Houston next weekend acting like the primary campaign's still in full swing.

Jackson's troops know Dukakis has reached the magic number of national convention delegates. The Massachusetts governor's strong victories in California and New Jersey on Tuesday assured that. Yet, Jackson supporters say they'll continue to battle for the 64 Texas delegates up for grabs at the state convention.

"Why not?" asks Hazel Obey of Austin, vice chair of the Jackson campaign in Texas and a member of the Democratic National Committee. "We've worked too hard, we've come too far to turn back. We're taking our direction from Rev. Jackson."

Nancy Brannon of Dallas, political director for Jackson in Texas, says her candidate and his supporters want to make sure that Dukakis takes their concerns into account when the party drafts its platform and writes its rules in Atlanta next month. "These people have a right to make their positions known to the candidate," Brannon says.

Adds Ms. Obey, "If he gives up now, he brings nothing to the table." Dukakis' backers say the front runner has no problems with Jackson's position in that regard. "It's his right," says Railroad Commissioner John Sharp, chairman of Dukakis' Texas campaign.

"He's got 1,000-and-some-odd (national) delegates backing him up. Who's going to blame Jackson for trying to get as much power as he can?"

Democratic National Committee-woman Bille Carr of Houston, a Dukakis supporter, understands that the Jackson's delegates would be "very disappointed" if he gave up the fight now.

"They might not even come to the convention," Ms. Carr says. "He doesn't want them to go back to being inactive."

Ms. Obey says that's a key to Jackson's strategy. She claims that Jackson's two campaigns and voter registration efforts brought more than 8 million new voters to the party.

"Dukakis needs the Rainbow in order to win come November," she says. "I know that the man knows that."

Dukakis, Jackson and other prominent Democrats are scheduled to speak to the two-day state convention that begins Friday. Along with the 5,288 delegates, party officials expect enough alternates, VIPs and media to show up to bring the total crowd at the George R. Brown Convention Center to about 10,000.

Wright: Probe won't hamper role at convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright says the congressional investigation of his financial dealings won't hamper him in his role as chairman of next month's Democratic National Convention.

"There is no cloud over my head, no sir," the Texas Democrat said. "I've done nothing unethical, nothing illegal, nothing violative of the rules of the House."

Wright's defense of his actions came Sunday in back-to-back appearances on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" and ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

■ Wright's ex-aide says he thought book was part of his job — 4B

Last Friday, the House ethics committee announced it was starting a preliminary inquiry into allegations of conflicts of interest in Wright's financial dealings.

Some of the allegations center on a book written by Wright, "Reflections of a Public Man." According to reports Sunday in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and The New York Times, one Texas businessman said he bought 1,000 copies of the book as a legal way to give money to Wright and bypass limits on campaign contributions.

Other allegations concern Wright's political efforts on behalf of several Texas businesses.

Wright said Sunday the allegations are "a partisan political play" by Republicans seeking to deflect attention from ethical violations by current and former members of the Reagan administration.

"It's a partisan play and it will be revealed to be a partisan play," Wright said on the CBS program.

Wright, when asked if he would step down from the chairmanship of the party's convention if asked, said, "I don't expect to."

"I haven't done anything dishonest or illegal," he said. "I'm convinced I haven't violated any rules of the House."

Jessica's kiss helps raise $55,000

LANCASTER, Texas (AP) — Organizers of a mock-wrestling match featuring toddler Jessica McClure say the event to raise funds for a 5-year-old boy's heart-lung transplant was a success.

Although money raised for the Saturday night match hadn't been tallied to a precise amount, Mayor Walter Arnold said Sunday overall fund-raising efforts for Brennan Bolin's operation have reached a total of about $55,000.

Two-year-old Jessica, who drew international attention last October when she was rescued from an abandoned well shaft in Midland, "wrestled" with Kevin Von Erich at Cedar Valley College in this suburb south of Dallas.

Jessica gave Kevin a kiss and then "knocked him dead," before an audience of about 500.

Prospective jurors quizzed in kidnap trial

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton quizzed prospective jurors today as the trial began of Kenneth Wayne Parker, 42, who is accused of two counts of conspiracy to commit kidnapping.

Bunton questioned the 32 potential jurors about their knowledge of the highly publicized case. One juror was excused after he said he had followed the case in the media closely since June Gilkerson, 24, disappeared Nov. 8, 1986.

Tom Morgan, Parker's court-appointed defense attorney, was expected to urge Bunton to move the trial because of excess publicity.

"Those of you selected for the jury are the sole judges of the facts," Bunton told the jury pool.

Fifteen of the potential jurors told Bunton they had heard of the case through the newspaper, radio or television.

Baptist convention mixes politicking, preaching

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Southern Baptists mixed preaching and politicking as fundamentalists and moderates today approached a convention fight over control of the denomination's multimillion-dollar organizational empire.

A fundamentalist wing gradually has gained predominance among trustees of Southern Baptist Convention institutions through nine years of winning the influential presidency of the country's largest Protestant body. But moderates think they can regain the office at the convention, which opens Tuesday. They cite numerous victories on the state level and various fundamentalist moves that have antagonized the grass-roots.

Expected to be nominated for the presidency were the fundamentalist-backed Rev. Jerry Vines of Jacksonville, Fla., and the moderate-backed Rev. Richard Jackson of Phoenix, Ariz. The president has appointive authority over trustees who run the 14.7-million-member denomination.

Harsh words have been traded in the spiraling campaign recently, with fundamentalists demanding literalistic beliefs about the Bible among denominational teachers and agency staffers.

Moderates defend a long-time Baptist concept of the "soul competency" of individuals to interpret the Bible as they understand it.

A respected patriarch of the denomination, the Rev. Herschel H. Hobbs, 80, of Oklahoma City, says the bitter struggle is hurting the Christian cause.

"In this controversy, we are our own worst enemies," Hobbs, the former convention president, said in a statement.

Louis L'Amour dies from lung cancer at age 80

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Louis L'Amour, one of America's most prolific storytellers whose frontier tales of gunfighters, lawmen and drifters enthralled millions of readers from waitresses to presidents, has died. He was 80.

The funeral for L'Amour, who died of lung cancer Friday at his Beverly Hills home, will be private, his daughter, Angelique, said Sunday night.

A few hours before his death, L'Amour was proofreading the manuscript of his autobiography "Education of a Wandering Man," according to Bantam Books, his publisher of 33 years.

■ L'Amour 'stayed in the saddle' writer says — 4B

"For millions of readers around the world, Louis was the embodiment of the North American frontier," said Stuart Applebaum, his editor at Bantam.

"They were able to relive our American history and heritage," the editor added. "His books gave pleasure to truck drivers and truck stop waitresses, financiers and presidents of the United States. His work far transcends the Western novel genre."

L'Amour wrote 101 books, nearly all of them Westerns, including "Hondo," "The Iron Marshal," "The Quick and the Dead," "Sackett's Land," "Down the Long Hills" and "Ride the Dark Trail."

Nearly 200 million copies of the books are in print; his works were translated into 20 languages.

More than 45 of his novels and short stories were made into movies, including "Hondo," "Burning Hills," "Heiler in Pink Tights" and "Stranger on Horseback." Stars cast in L'Amour Westerns included John Wayne, Natalie Wood and Alan Ladd.

Applebaum noted that perhaps his best-known novel, "How the West Was Won," was based on the movie screenplay.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cooler weather forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Partly cloudy skies and cooler temperatures are in store for Midlanders tonight, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The weathermen are predicting a low in the mid-60s and southeasterly winds at five to 15 mph.

Tuesday, skies will remain partly cloudy Tuesday and the high will be near 90. Forecasters predict southeasterly winds at 10 to 20 mph.

Sunday's high of 89 was 105 degrees cooler than the record high for that date of 104 recorded in 1947. Today's low of 68 was 11 degrees warmer than the record low for this date of 58 recorded in 1979.

STATE

Showers dampened the western Panhandle and far West Texas this morning, but elsewhere in the Lone Star State skies were fair, the National Weather Service reported.

Highs were expected to reach the upper 80s to low 90s with highs to 105 over the Big Bend river valleys. Tonight's lows should range from the low 60s in the Panhandle to the low 70s over the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Scattered thunderstorms were expected over the western part of the state this afternoon and evening scattered showers over the lower coastal plains.

On Tuesday, highs should be in the 90s in North Texas. The lows tonight were expected to be in the 60s to near 70.

Showers were possible in along the coastal bend and lower coast today. Highs should be in the 80s and 90s in South Texas, and near 102 in the southwest and along the Rio Grande. Lows should be in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled across the Midwest today, bringing much-needed rain but flooding parts of Nebraska and pelting some areas with hail. A high pressure system kept much of the nation dry.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from northwest Minnesota through western parts of Nebraska into eastern Colorado late Sunday and early today. Besides the rainfall, the storms brought hail and gusty winds. Showers and a few thunderstorms also hit southern Montana and northern Wyoming.

Thunderstorms were heaviest across Nebraska, where heavy rain caused local flooding late Sunday. Hemingford was drenched by 2 inches of rain, while part of the Nebraska Highway 92, west of Scottsbluff, was flooded by 6 to 18 inches. More than an inch of rain was measured at Crawford, which also was blasted by hail one-inch in diameter.

Meanwhile, the rest of the nation was dry as a high-pressure system remained anchored over the central Appalachians. Dry weather also covered parts of the West from the Pacific coast into the inter-mountain areas.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms scattered from the Rockies and the High Plains into the upper Mississippi Valley; thunderstorms through Montana, Wyoming, eastern Colorado and western South Dakota; showers and thunderstorms scattered across the southern half of Florida; showers widely scattered through New England; and sunny skies over the rest of the nation.

JESSICA

Jessica's appearance was sandwiched between the second and third of four wrestling matches promoted to raise medical expenses for Brennan, who lives in Lancaster.

"We weren't sure how the children would react to the wrestling match but they all loved it," Arnold said.

Events leading up to the wrestling match included a $100-per-plate dinner and a pony give-away. All children in Lancaster day-care centers were automatically eligible, but parents wary of taking on the equine responsibility could pay $1 to be removed from the list.

Brennan has idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis, a rare condition in which bleeding occurs within the lungs' linings.

Arnold, whose wife, Bonnie, coordinated the event, said other fundraisers are planned, but he did not know when the goal would be reached.

Surgery is expected to cost about $60,000, with $125,000 not covered by insurance. Lancaster residents had earlier donated about $15,000 for the operation, Arnold said.

WRIGHT

"I may have done some things, at one time or another in my career, that were bad judgment," he said. "But whatever mistakes I've made have not been dishonest mistakes."

Wright refused to say if he thinks the ethics investigation should be conducted by an independent counsel, rather than the committee. "I don't have a preference," he said.

"I'm not trying to tell the committee how to do its business," Wright said on ABC. "I asked them to look into it thoroughly. I asked them to do it promptly. Now, anything that can be done is fine with me so long as it gets the facts out and gets them out soon."

"I want this resolved and I'm convinced that the resolution is going to be that I haven't violated any rules."

The committee's inquiry was originally suggested by Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., one of Wright's harshest critics in the House. But the panel said its investigation will be wider in scope than that suggested by Gingrich.

Wright received a 55 percent royalty totaling about $55,000 on his book. Questions have been raised about Wright's use of a congressional staffer to work on the book, purchases of the book by friends and lobbyists, and about the royalty percentage, which is higher than those usually paid to authors.

Wright said "there was nothing wrong with the contract" and joked that "the royalty proceeds are going to my favorite charity — Mrs. Wright and me."

The book was published by William Carlos Moore, a friend of Wright who also received large printing contracts from Wright's reelection campaign.

"I think it's a good book," Wright said, while acknowledging that it contained little that was new.

"It's not fresh stuff," he said. "Most of it is reprinted from speeches, articles, newsletters, memoirs."

"What all outside forces of evil could not do, we are doing to ourselves. As Paul said in Galatians 5:15, we are like wild animals devouring one another. We deny the very oneness and peace for which Jesus prayed."

As a prelude to the convention, the thousands of "messengers" were offered a day of preaching, some of it from leading exponents of the two factions.

So divided was sentiment that there were separate preaching arenas — a Pastor's Conference of mainly fundamentalist speakers and the Forum for moderates.

The Forum announced its 1988 Denominational Statesman Award to the Rev. Randall Lolley, driven by demands of newly ruling fundamentalist trustees to resign as president of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary.

"Trustees are no longer free to debate and decide issues," he said. "They have people breathing down their necks to accomplish the prearranged agendas."

He, along with four academic colleagues at the Wake Forest, N.C., seminary quit after trustees enacted measures requiring that faculty members profess that the Bible is free of error.

"The price which he has paid for his convictions is a witness to his faith, an act of judgment upon all those who surrender to the temptation to compromise their convictions," said the award citation.

Among preachers scheduled at the Pastors Conference were fundamentalist former presidents, the Revs. Charles Stanley and Bailey Smith, both of Atlanta, and Paige Patterson of Dallas, a key strategist for that wing.

Patterson denounces recent tactics of moderates accusing him of right-wing political ties, calling it "hurtful misrepresentation, apparently born out of a willingness to do almost anything to reverse the conservative resurgence."

Of moderate charges that he was involved in a rightist political group, the Council for National Policy, he says conservative Christians now simply are doing politically what liberals have done for a long time.

"It is no longer the left involved in isolation, but now the conservatives are involved," he said. "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

The Rev. W. Winfred Moore of Amarillo, who sent out the brochure criticizing Patterson and others in the fundamentalist wing, said:

"There are some of our brethren who want to make all of us believe the same way they do...Our diversity has always been our greatest strength. Now they are telling us we cannot be different any more."

L'Amour was a writer who paid scrupulous attention to accuracy.

"If he said that the cowboys went over a hill and to the right was Jones Hill, then there was Jones Hill. He researched it from heck to breakfast," retired newspaperman Jack Evans said Sunday.

"He would travel widely to check out the geography, the way people talked," Evans said from his farm in L'Amour's hometown of Jamestown, N.D. "If you start reading his books, you won't quit. It gets ahead of you and grabs you 'til the end. He was that good a writer."

"He always said he was just a storyteller, in the ancient folk tradition of people sitting around the fire, just telling stories," said Joseph Wersbha, a New York-based television news producer who knew L'Amour for more than a decade.

L'Amour dispelled myths about life in the Old West, such as townsfolk fleeing the bad guys. Many of the actual settlers, he noted, were Civil War veterans not deterred by gunplay.

"I go to an area I'm interested in and I try to find a guy who knows it better than anyone else. Usually it's some broken-down cowboy," he once explained in an interview with The Associated Press.

"I'm actually writing history. It isn't what you'd call big history. I don't write about presidents and generals," L'Amour said. "I write about the man who was ranching, the man who was mining, the man who was opening up the country."

Although he was the first novelist to win the Medal of Honor, and received the Presidential Medal of Freedom, he never won a top literary award. But that didn't bother him.

"He never really paid critics and literati that much mind," Applebaum said. "He received thousands of fan mail (letters) every year. They were the critics that counted."

L'Amour left Jamestown when he was 15 for what he later called his "yondering" years, picking up such odd jobs as prize fighter, tugboat deckhand, longshoreman, lumberjack, prospector, miner, circus roustabout, fruit picker, elephant handler and amateur archaeologist.

As a result, he was largely self-educated. In later years, he lectured on such campuses as the University of Southern California, the University of Oklahoma and Baylor University.

JACKSON

The delegates will select Texas' final 64 national delegates on Saturday. The results of the Super Tuesday primary in March determined how the candidates split the first 119: 43 for Dukakis, 4 for Jackson, 25 for Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee and nine for Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri.

Although Dukakis picked up 140,000 more primary votes than Jackson, Jackson holds about a 9-to-8 edge among the state convention delegates. Their numbers are based on how the various candidates' supporters showed up at precinct conventions after the polls closed on Super Tuesday.

Ms. Brannon and Ms. Obey say if all the Jackson delegates show up, there's a "good chance" they'll win more of the 64 than Dukakis. If that happens, Jackson can chalk up an official victory in Texas.

Dukakis state chairman Sharp calls that "a marginal possibility." He expects delegates pledged to Gore, Gephardt and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon — who are no longer in the race — to tip the scales for Dukakis.

Neither Dukakis nor Jackson allies expect a rift at the state or national conventions that would threaten always-fragile Democratic unity. "If (Jackson) were not to support the ticket, that would make him a bad

DA reopens murder probe

WACO (AP) — Prosecutors have reopened their investigation into the murder of a McGregor woman who left most of her estate to the ministry of Louisiana television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart.

McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell said Sunday that his office renewed the murder investigation of Ida Lee Baugh, 70, because of a reporter's new information that could help him resolve what he called "unanswered questions" about the December 1983 slaying.

The inquiry was not targeted at Swaggart but could involve "one or more individuals connected with the Jimmy Swaggart Ministries at that time," said Feazell.

"What we are looking into right now is the possibility of violations of the Texas Penal Code that could include being a party to murder," said Feazell.

Ms. Baugh was found stabbed and beaten with a wheelchair footstool and died later at a Waco hospital.

Her husband, Maurice Patrick Baugh, died of heart failure five days after her death.

The couple, in their will, left all but 25 percent of their cash only, not to exceed $25,000, to the Baton Rouge, La. television minister.

A Swaggart spokesman estimated the estate's size at between $500,000 and $800,000.

In April 1984, Jacqueline Euna Warren was convicted of murder in the case and sentenced to 99 years in prison.

Baugh's son contested the will, charging that associates of Jimmy Swaggart ministries exercised "undue influence" on his parents to change their will.

Larry Neale Baugh charged that two men working on behalf of Swaggart Ministries had recommended Ms. Warren to take care of Mrs. Baugh.

"I sense a strong base of support for Vice President Bush" in the South, says Steve French, political director of the Alabama Republican Party. "But Republicans in Alabama realize how close this election can be."

Officials of both parties agree that the vice president also has to contend with weaknesses in the Midwest that were exposed during the primary season.

"If the election were held today, I think Michael Dukakis would stand a good chance of winning Iowa," where a Democrat last won in 1964, said the state's GOP chairman, Michael Mahaffey.

As is often the case, the large industrial states — Illinois, Michigan, Ohio among them — are viewed as key battlegrounds, although Dukakis seems to hold the early advantage in each of them.

Most officials believe Dukakis holds an advantage in New York, the second-largest state with 36 electoral votes. In Pennsylvania, GOP Chairman Earl Baker said Dukakis is "the strongest Democratic candidate" to run in the state. Dukakis's base also gives him a good shot at Connecticut as well as Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and Democratic officials say the three Northern New England states shape up as closer than usual.

"No matter what the polls look like this is going to be a close election because the vice president has an advantage in the Electoral College," says Lee Atwater, Bush's campaign manager. He says in states in the South and West there are "210 or 220 (electoral college votes) easily available for the vice president.... The problem is the other 50 are going to be difficult."

Leslie Dach, Dukakis' communications director, says the Democrat intends to stage raids in normally secure Republican territory. "We can win electoral votes in every region of the country," he says.

It takes 270 Electoral College votes to win the presidency.

The race could be heavily influenced by the vice presidential selections.

The survey turned up little enthusiasm for Jesse Jackson on the Democratic ticket, in keeping with polls that indicate that such a pick would lose support.

Dukakis has been advised by some to look to a Southerner such as Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, a Westerner or perhaps Ohio Sen. John Glenn to fill out his ticket.

"If Dukakis doesn't pick a Southerner, it just makes it that more difficult for us," said Texas Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle.

On the Republican side, the name of California Gov. George Deukmejian came up frequently as talk turned to holding his state in the GOP column. Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander also was mentioned by several as a good Southern choice.

Whatever the preferences, the polls indicate the importance of a vice presidential selection.

The judge also said evidence might be presented that Ms. Gilkerson, who was married when she disappeared, was engaged in an "illicit" love affair when she was allegedly abducted. He asked jurors if that might affect their ability to be fair.

Parker is charged with conspiring to kidnap Ms. Gilkerson and Susan Lindsay, 25. Ms. Gilkerson was abducted and has been missing since that day. Ms. Lindsay, a former Rockdale resident who now lives in Midland, is expected to testify.

The prosecutors, Assistant U.S. Attorneys Wayne Speck and Tom Beery and Midland County District Attorney Al Schorke, will attempt to prove that Parker conspired with David Russell Alderink, 22, to kidnap the women.

Ms. Gilkerson was reported missing after 9 p.m. Nov. 8, and her car was found later at a motel on U.S. Interstate 20, according to Midland police.

According to the indictment, the two women were intended for sale into prostitution in Mexico.

Alderink, a Michigan native who police say met Parker at the Midland County Public Library, pleaded guilty to the kidnapping February 1 in state district court.

He was sentenced to 20 years in the Texas Department of Corrections and has agreed to testify against Parker, according to prosecutors and his attorney, Jim Bobo of Odessa.

At the time of her disappearance, Ms. Gilkerson was a part-time volunteer worker at the Midland County Restitution Center, where Alderink was serving a sentence for burglary.

If convicted, Parker could face a life sentence for each count alleged in the conspiracy.

Bush courts blacks; Dukakis vows to fight drugs

Associated Press

Republican presidential contender George Bush, courting black support, edged away from the Reagan administration on aid to minority businesses. And Democrat Michael Dukakis suggested he would use the U.S. military to help fight the war on drugs.

Jesse Jackson, meanwhile, struck a conciliatory stance on the touchy issue of whether he wants to be the Democratic vice presidential candidate. After declaring last week that he was entitled to consideration and that "consideration means an offer," Jackson backed off a bit.

"I do not want to push Mike Dukakis to that point," Jackson said Sunday, interviewed from Chicago on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press." Asked whether he should be offered the No. 2 spot, he said only that he deserved "serious consideration."

Jackson spent the weekend in his hometown of Chicago, mulling his next move. He has said he will campaign all the way up to the Democratic convention. Dukakis wrapped up the Democratic nomination in the final four primaries last week.

The Massachusetts governor was meeting today with congressional leaders and law enforcement officials from several states to discuss drug issues. He also sounded an anti-drug theme on Sunday, when he told the U.S. Conference of Mayors the administration's anti-drug effort is in a state of "chaos."

That was an apparent dig at Bush, who headed an administration task force on anti-drug efforts. Without providing specifics, Dukakis told the mayors, meeting in Salt Lake City, that the military should be prepared to assist in drug-interdiction efforts.

"It will take tough, sustained and unrelenting enforcement...at home and abroad, enforcement which uses the military where appropriate and necessary," he said.

As Dukakis spoke, Democratic party platform drafters were calling for the appointment of a federal drug czar. A platform-drafting panel wrapped up a long weekend of work Sunday at the resort of Mackinac Island, Mich.

In addition to backing a drug czar, the Democrats released working papers that urged expanded AIDS research, adoption of the Equal Rights Amendment, greater efforts to end homelessness, and a law requiring employers to give workers advance notice of plant closings.

The Jackson forces had mixed success at the platform-drafting sessions. The committee agreed the Democratic platform will label South Africa a terrorist state, as Jackson has demanded. But the panel was split on whether to call for a Jackson-backed freeze in Pentagon spending, and expressed reluctance to call for the tax hikes Jackson wants.

The Republicans, too, were making like a happy family. Over the weekend in Denver, at the first of three "unity conferences" by the Republican National Committee, GOP activists from 16 states — and three former rivals for the nomination — rallied around Bush.

The vice president, who pleased many Republican observers when he went on the offensive last week against Dukakis, promised the party faithful on Saturday they'd be seeing more of the same.

"We're just beginning," he said.

Michael Dukakis told participants at the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Salt Lake City, Utah, Sunday that Reagan administration budget cuts have tied the hands of law enforcement agencies trying to battle the flow of illegal drugs into the country.

GOP voters little reluctant about supporting black

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans say a vice presidential nominee's race and sex are irrelevant, but some independents and Republicans would hesitate to support a black for the job, a Media General-Associated Press poll has found.

Some Republicans also expressed reluctance about supporting a woman for vice president, the national survey said. Independents did not shy from a woman candidate, and Democrats did not lean away from a black or a woman.

The survey also indicated a substantial majority of Americans would oppose President Reagan for a third term if he could run again. Most Republicans favored another Reagan term; independents and Democrats did not.

The poll also found that 89 percent of Americans would not want to be president and a plurality would not want their child to be. Fifty-nine percent thought it possible their child could be president.

On the question of vice presidential candidates, 75 percent of the 1,204 respondents said it would not matter to them if a ticket's second slot were filled by a black or a woman.

Still, 17 percent of independents said they would be less likely to vote for a ticket with a black for vice president, compared with 4 percent who would be more likely to back it. The division was wider among Republicans, while there was no measurable split among Democrats.

The survey did not specify any candidate. Black civil rights activist Jesse Jackson, second-place finisher for the Democratic presidential nomination, has said he should be offered the vice presidential slot.

With a woman for vice president, 20 percent of Republicans said they would be less likely to support the ticket, while 6 percent said they would be more likely. There was no such reluctance among Democrats or independents.

No potential woman candidate was specified. There have been suggestions that Vice President George Bush, who has locked up the Republican nomination for president, may select a woman to shore up his support among women.

Overall, 10 percent of respondents said they would be more likely to support a woman for vice president, 14 percent less likely. That split was within the poll's margin of sampling error of 3 points.

Given a black vice presidential candidate, 6 percent overall said they would be more likely to lend their support, 18 percent less likely.

The split was wider for the presidency: Five percent said they would be more likely to support a black, 27 percent less likely. Ten percent said they would be more likely to back a woman for president, 25 percent less likely.

Nation needs new agenda for '90s

The grueling presidential nominating contest that began in the snow-covered farmland of Iowa and ended under the palm trees of California has done little to define a new national agenda to replace the Reagan era. Even so, Americans will face a classic choice in November between the liberal views of Michael Dukakis and the moderately conservative approach of George Bush.

In coming weeks, both candidates need to do a better job of spelling out their broad visions and specific policies for the voters here to consider.

Dukakis's next crucial challenge will be the selection of a running mate, as we've noted previously, a decision that may well determine whether the Democratic Party is united or divided in the fall. Jesse Jackson, having won the support of 7 million primary and caucus voters and the second-largest bloc of convention delegates, rightly demands to be considered. But unless Dukakis finds a formula that both keeps Jackson off the ticket and wins the backing of black voters, he is unlikely to taste victory in November.

Bush also must find a running mate who will bolster his support with conservative Republicans. The vice president must also continue to battle problems stemming from his eight years with Ronald Reagan and the view many people seem to hold that he is not a forceful leader. We believe that view is incorrect, but lots of Americans seem to hold it nonetheless and it could be a turning point in the election.

In the meantime, the vice president should begin to step out of Ronald Reagan's shadow. His objective ought to be to illuminate the starkness of the choice Americans will confront on Nov. 8: Capable, experienced, conservative leadership compared to an individual inexperienced at the national level who would tilt the nation sharply toward liberal approaches.

If it sounds as though this presidential election offers a classic choice between political ideologies, there's a reason. It does.

Texas delegation solidly backs Wright

WASHINGTON — As the House Ethics Committee begins sifting allegations of impropriety against Speaker Jim Wright, an informal poll of the Texas delegation revealed most members are solidly behind Wright.

But several members likened the Wright probe to one involving Attorney General Edwin Meese and suggested the two should be held equally accountable for their actions.

Wright has vowed to cooperate with the ethics panel, which is weighing questions of whether Wright improperly used his considerable influence and campaign funds to benefit himself, business associates and political backers.

While Wright and his allies claim the charges are politically motivated, the most junior member of the Texas delegation, freshman Republican Lamar Smith of San Antonio, said they are "a fair subject for discussion."

Smith, however, cautioned against the "danger of political railroad, whether of Jim Wright or Attorney General Ed Meese," who is being investigated by a special prosecutor because of his activities on behalf of a friend, E. Robert Wallace, who is accused of illegalities. Smith added: "The laws need to be upheld, but more than that, we all need to be held accountable for our actions."

A similar view was expressed by Rep. Beau Boulter, of Amarillo, the Republican challenger to Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen. Interviewed by telephone from the GOP state convention in Houston, Boulter said the ethics investigation is proper, adding that he is glad Wright has promised his cooperation.

"He should be held to the same standard that people in the administration, like Ed Meese, are held to," said Boulter.

Democratic Rep. Albert G. Bustamante, of San Antonio, is one of several who insisted that the allegations stem from "heavy political pollution by Georgia Republican representative) Newt Gingrich and the gang."

Bustamante said, "The Republicans have people in this administration who have been investigated, indicted and convicted and Jim Wright happens to be there as a target."

Rep. Ronald W. Coleman, D-El Paso, also said he believes the complaints against Wright "are a completely partisan attempt to take the heat off of Ed Meese and the administration's sleaze problem."

And Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, the dean of the delegation who came to Congress 38 years ago, just one term ahead of Wright, has said Republicans are ganging up to "sack the quarterback" of the House.

Rep. Tom DeLay, a Republican who represents the Houston-area town of Sugar Land, didn't want to talk about Wright. "Texas has one of the strongest delegations in the nation and I would like to keep it that way," he said.

Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, also said he preferred not to comment until and unless the Ethics Committee "makes some kind of determination."

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, said the Wright episode "is not helpful, either to the delegation or to the party." Like others interviewed, he said he hopes the flap can be settled quickly, before Wright takes the gavel as chairman of the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta in mid-July.

The only Republican among 10 GOP members in the Texas delegation to sign Gingrich's formal request for an investigation by the Ethics Committee was Rep. Richard Armitage of Denton.

Speaking of ethics, Rep. Smith's bill to apply "revolving door" restrictions on lobbying efforts of former members of Congress and their top staffers will be included in legislation drafted by a Judiciary subcommittee within the next two weeks.

Congressmen who leave office voluntarily or involuntarily frequently go through the revolving doors of the Capitol and earn many times their previous salaries lobbying their former colleagues.

The Smith bill would bar former members and staffers for two years from lobbying the staff of committees on which they last served.

The congressman, who represents the sprawling 21st District, from San Antonio to Midland, offers his bill as an alternative to a Senate-passed version that he claims is so narrow as to prevent some former members from working anywhere in government.

Currently, the executive branch is covered by a revolving door bar — the one that caught former White House advisers Mike Deaver and Lyn Nofziger when they lobbied former colleagues on behalf of their new firms' clients — but Congress has so far exempted itself from those rules.

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, is in Pakistan with Harry Reasoner, one of the regulars on the CBS-TV program, "Sixty Minutes," to help put together a show on "kicking the Russians out of Afghanistan."

Wilson had a lot to do with creating and implementing the U.S. policy that forced the Soviet Union to abandon Afghanistan. He has made frequent visits to Pakistan to check on U.S. aid — both covert and overt to the mujaheddin for Moslem "holy warriors" fighting the Soviet-sponsored regime inside Afghanistan.

As a member of the defense appropriations subcommittee, Wilson insisted that the U.S. buy mules to carry food, medicine and schoolbooks as well as military supplies from Pakistan across the rough terrain to the Afghan rebels.

Cover-ups, brutality hit VA police

WASHINGTON — It's getting harder to tell the cops from the criminals as reports of brutality and cover-up scandals sweep the Veterans Administration police force.

In fact, three cops at VA hospitals in New Orleans and Oklahoma City were recently found to have criminal records. They have been fired. Even more criminals carrying badges are expected to be exposed later this summer by an ongoing VA inspector general investigation at six other hospitals.

None of this should come as a surprise to the VA. Reports of ex-cons being hired on the police force that patrols the VA hospitals date back to at least 1981.

An Ohio police chief shamed VA officials that year when he testified at a congressional hearing that one out of every five VA officers at the Cleveland hospital had criminal records.

Fourteen months later, a VA official vowed that the agency had "closed the doors" to criminals trying to get on the VA police force. Ex-cons would be weeded out by a national crime computer installed at VA headquarters in Washington, D.C., in the office of James Fasone, director of VA security. The computer hook up with the National Crime Information Center instantly checks the names of police applicants against federal, state and local arrest records, according to Marjorie Quandt, an assistant chief medical director for the VA at the time the computer system went in.

"This capability has been in full use since January 1982 and has enabled us to refrain from hiring several applicants who concealed past criminal convictions," Quandt told the congressional panel in September.

But it seems that the crime computer has been gathering dust lately, as evidenced by the ongoing investigation by the VA inspector general.

Last month, VA officials testified at another congressional hearing that headquarters did its job, but the ball was dropped by officials at hospitals where the hiring is done.

Fasone and his boss, Dr. Daniel Winship, testified before a Veterans Affairs subcommittee chaired by Rep. Lane Evans, D-Ill. They said that rather than checking with headquarters, the hospitals are supposed to do their own background checks on applicants for jobs on the police force.

And what happened to the crime computer at headquarters that was supposed to be in "full use" since January of 1982? A VA spokesman told our associate Stewart Harris that the computer is only used as a backup when individual hospitals can't do a thorough background check on their own.

Fasone and Winship told the subcommittee they will impress on hospital police chiefs the importance of background checks before recruiting new cops. And, Winship added, those orders will be backed up by Fasone's central security office, which will "monitor" hiring practices.

In other words, nothing will change.

The quality of the 1,900 police hired to patrol 172 VA hospitals has been an issue for years. In the past, we have reported on allegations of police brutality at the Cincinnati Veterans Hospital. A VA whistleblower told the FBI that the hospital's police chief gouged a disabled vet in the eyes, choked a patient who was in restraints and kicked a panhandler in the groin. The allegations were repeated in testimony before Congress, and the police chief was transferred to another hospital.

While some veterans groups blame the problem on the pay scale for VA cops, others point to a lack of direction from the top.

Headquarters has not been completely idle on the question of whether officers have criminal backgrounds. Cops are being called into personnel offices and asked if they have ever been arrested. How do you think that question would be answered?

... TROUBLE FOR THE AYATOLLAH — Ayatollah Khomeini's fundamentalist regime is beginning to tear apart, but that might make Iran more dangerous.

Iran has suffered major setbacks. In the Persian Gulf, the U.S. Navy has knocked out almost half of Iran's small navy. At home, military recruitment has dropped dramatically. Draft dodgers are fleeing the country by the thousands. Millions more have fled Tehran to escape Iraqi missile attacks.

The war has claimed more than a million lives and caused hundreds of billions of dollars in damage. Now a rebel army, calling itself the Iranian National Liberation Army, has risen up against Khomeini, and thousands of Khomeini's soldiers have defected to fight with the rebels. Khomeini has tried to bolster the military by putting it under the command of the able Hashemi Rafsanjani, but the Ayatollah is clearly in trouble.

Our intelligence sources fear he will react by using his invisible army of terrorists to lash out against his enemies. And the United States is at the top of his enemies list.

The United States could make a deal with Syria to strike a major blow against Khomeini's terrorists, because many of them operate out of Lebanon, where Syria has a large military presence. The Syrians are worried about Khomeini's growing power in Lebanon, but Syria is also desperate for the oil and cash that it gets from Iran. Syria would be willing to wipe out the terrorists, if the United States would make up for the financial loss, but it is unlikely that Congress would make that kind of appropriation.

... MINI-EDITORIAL — The Hallmark Card Co. has unthinkably found some humor in the deadly combination of alcohol and high school graduation festivities. The company produced a line of graduation cards that included such messages as, "Make sure your gown is plenty loose so you can hide at least two bottles of champagne." No one with any sense is laughing. Under pressure from Mothers Against Drunk Driving, Hallmark stopped printing the cards, but some have already made it to the shelves and, no doubt, into the mailboxes of grads. We can only hope that their diplomas make them smarter than the folks at Hallmark.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Momma, your babies quote scripture!

I've been keeping close watch on the situation in Marion, N.C., where the two kids kept getting kicked out of school because they won't stop screaming their heads off about their teachers and classmates going to hell.

Certainly you've seen tapes of 5-year-old Matthew Storde and his 10-year-old brother, Duffey, who stand outside their school and quote Scripture and throw in an occasional mention of "whoremongers" — which is what you throw in, I suppose, when you figure you need a little something to regain your audience's attention when the Scripture-quoting gets a little boring.

I've heard many television evangelists do this but never a 10-year-old boy.

Screamed Duffey Storde at school one day:

"Marriage is honorable in all, and the bed undefiled. But, whoremongers and adulterers, God will be the judge!"

Although they keep kicking the Storde boys out of school in hopes they will finally and mercifully hush, their father continues to encourage his sons and claims the boys are only exercising their freedom of speech and religion.

That may be, but I still wonder if Duffey Storde has any idea what a "whoremonger" is.

I'm 41, and I'm not certain how one would go about mongering a whore. I suppose we'll have to wait for an explanation in Jimmy Swagart's memoirs.

Why I've been keeping such a close eye on the Marion, N.C., story is that what I have feared for a long time apparently is taking place.

When I was a kid, all the guys wanted to grow up to be cowboys, space rangers or football players. We watched television, and we idolized cowboys, space rangers and football players.

Later, kids watched television and wanted to grow up to be rock stars. You get all that money if you're a rock star, you get to ride in limousines and everybody knows who you are. What I am afraid is happening now is kids, like the Storde boys, are watching television and want to grow up to be evangelists.

You get all that money if you're an evangelist, you get to ride in limousines and everybody knows who you are.

And even if Duffey or Matthew Storde had no interest in becoming television evangelists, it could have been old Dad who came up with the idea.

"Listen, boys," he might have said, "I want the two of you to go to school tomorrow and start screaming at the top of your lungs about whoremongers."

"No matter how hard they try to make you shut up, don't pay any attention. The news media will discover you and you'll be on your way to becoming rich television evangelists."

"But, Dad," the boys might have asked, "what's a whoremonger?"

"Just keep screaming boys. You're my ticket out of this hick town."

CHARLEY REESE

What's needed is strategy refresher course

Many people miss the point of the recent summit because they do not understand the difference between strategy and tactics. Unfortunately, President Ronald Reagan is one of them.

Strategy is an overall plan for achieving a final objective. Tactics are the maneuvers used to reach the final objective. For example, your strategy may be to marry a certain girl. How you court her in an attempt to persuade her to marry you are tactics.

The important point is that tactics can change without changing the strategy. If one thing doesn't work, then you try something else. If that doesn't work, then you try another approach and so on until you either obtain the objective of your strategy or you give up.

The strategy of the Soviet Union is to isolate the United States because, as a liberal democracy, the United States would be defeated by the Soviet Union.

Thucydides, an ancient historian, summed up the whole of international relations in a quote by an invading Athenian general: "...in fact the strong do what they have the power to do and the weak accept what they have to accept."

As evolved under Mikhail Gorbachev, the Soviet strategy includes the neutralization of Western Europe, flanking the U.S. in the Caribbean and Central America, and attaining decisive superiority in nuclear weapons.

Current Soviet tactics are to achieve their strategic goals by waging a peace offensive. Neither the Soviet decision to switch tactics nor Reagan's mistaken belief that détente is possible came about all of a sudden. Beginning in 1963, with the arrival of Secretary of State George Shultz, there began what appears to have been a systematic elimination of advisors who had a realistic view of the Soviet Union.

Former U.S. Ambassador to United Nations, Jeane Kirkpatrick, has recently reported a cryptic conversation in late 1983 when Michael Deaver approached her at a meeting and said, "I may as well tell you this, you'll have to find out sometime. This president may have an opportunity to make peace for our times...when the time comes, we can't have you and Bill Clark (then National Security Advisor) around raising questions."

This puts Deaver, a disgraced public relations advisor, in a much more sinister light. What he said implies clearly that he had knowledge Mrs. Kirkpatrick, a foreign policy expert, did not have. Further, what he says explicitly makes clear that no dissent would be allowed once the opportunity arrived.

At the same time, new people were assuming prominent roles in the Kremlin — people with the most experience in the West and who best understand how to manipulate the West.

Gorbachev's advisors at the summit have included Gen. Vladimir A. Kryuchkov, deputy chairman of the KGB who in 1978 was placed in charge of all espionage abroad, and who oversees the work of the Soviet Institute for the Study of the U.S.A. and Canada headed by Georgy Arbatov. Anatoly Dobrynin, former ambassador to the U.S. and according to defector, Arkady Shevchenko, a passionate U.S. hater, was brought back to Moscow to occupy a key position.

For a detailed account of these changes, see "The Reagan Detente" by Albert L. Weeks in "Global Affairs," spring 1988 issue.

These Soviet experts know the difficulty democracies have in maintaining their defensive strength and the whole of the Gorbachev tactical peace offensive is to make it even more difficult.

It was an interesting choice of words used by Deaver: peace for our times. Those are close to the words Neville Chamberlain used when he returned from Munich after discovering that Adolf Hitler, despite the warnings of conservatives, was somebody you could do business with.

Glasnost is really maskirovka — camouflage.

Utility workers help elderly woman with bill

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bertha Shefton closed her eyes and shuddered as she relived the moment.

The 80-year-old widow owed $103.44 on her water bill, and city utility truck No. 986 had just arrived at her small, white stucco bungalow to cut off the water.

Doing without water would be hard enough for a frail old woman in the suffocating subtropical heat and humidity of south Florida, but Mrs. Shefton also cares for a granddaughter who has lost her left leg to diabetes and must undergo kidney dialysis three times a week.

"I tried to explain that somebody had stolen my Social Security check and that I'd pay the bill as soon as my next check came in," Mrs. Shefton told a visiting reporter. "They told me they were only doing their job."

"It was plain to see those boys didn't want to do it. They said they were real sorry, but it was still awful to watch them drive away and know our water had been cut off."

But what the crew did next has made the four men local heroes and brought in donations that should make Mrs. Shefton secure for a long time: they drove back, turned the water on and scraped up enough cash to pay her bill.

"When the word got out about what happened, a local plumbing contractor volunteered to pay Mrs. Shefton's water bill for a year. Another local company is paying her electric bills," said Benny Scott, who supervises city water department crews.

Scott and the three members of the city's celebrated utility crew — Joe Johnson, Mark Craddock and Lyn Roberts — visited Mrs. Shefton one recent steamy afternoon. They stopped by to say hello and see how she was faring.

"These are my friends," Mrs. Shefton said, giving Scott a hug. "These fellows are my heroes, they're the ones who started the wheels turning for me."

The wheels began turning Mrs. Shefton's way almost immediately after the utility truck pulled away from the curb in front of her house on April 14.

"We decided we just couldn't leave her like that," Johnson said. "It was the middle of the month, and that meant it would be more than two weeks before the old lady's next check would arrive. It was plain that she and her granddaughter really needed help."

Cutting off water service in such a climate makes people desperate, the crew members said.

"Some of them get real nasty and threaten to shoot you or sic their dogs on you," said Roberts. "Others get down and beg you not to do it, which only makes it worse."

Mrs. Shefton had merely asked for enough time to fill her bathtub and a few pots and pans with water before service was shut off.

"It really touched me," Johnson said.

So the crew members called their office on the truck radio and found out how much Mrs. Shefton owed. Then they began pulling money out of their pockets.

"Joe and I each put up $15 and Willie Hargrett, our foreman, pitched in $20," Roberts said. "Some other fellows at the office also contributed a few dollars, and Benny Scott put up the remaining $33.44."

Craddock put in a dollar.

"But that was every penny he had," said Roberts. "It was a gift from his heart."

News media soon picked up the story.

"Since then we've gotten dozens of calls and letters from all over the place," Scott said. "People from as far away as California have sent money and checks for Mrs. Shefton; a local guy even stopped by and gave us a check for the $103.44 we had put up."

Scott said he has turned over all the contributions, including the $103.44 check, to Mrs. Shefton's church, where a fund has been set up for her.

"So far, we've received more than $700," the Rev. Otis Sample, pastor of the Mount Calvary Baptist Church, said recently. "We'll use the money to help her pay her bills."

Suzanne Fleming of Medina, Wash., holds Puli, the freeze-dried dog. Puli, a Hungarian sheep dog, was put to sleep in 1984 because of cancer.

This dog will never be barking up wrong tree

MEDINA, Wash. (AP) — Puli is a well-behaved Hungarian sheepdog that spends most of his time lying in front of a fireplace, never jumps on the furniture and never makes any noise. Puli has been dead four years.

But his owners, Suzanne and Rob Fleming, continue to enjoy their preserved dog.

"It's sort of like Puli is still alive because of all the laughs he gets," Mrs. Fleming said.

The Flemings once left the fluffy white dog in the back seat of their car while they went sailing. Upon returning, they asked a friend to let the dog out.

"Larry kept whistling, 'Come here, boy,' took a closer look and said, 'Uh, Rob, I think you might have left your dog in the car too long. He's not moving.' We were in tears we were laughing so hard," Mrs. Fleming said.

The Flemings' teen-age daughter had a different reaction when she learned her parents had decided to have the family pet freeze-dried instead of buried. The dog was diagnosed with spinal cancer and the Flemings had him put to sleep in 1984.

Mrs. Fleming understood her daughter's fury. "I mean, how do you tell your friends that your parents are having (the family) dog freeze-dried?" she asked.

For $650 a taxidermist in Portland, Ore., posed the dog lying on its side with head up and looking alert. The dog weighs about 10 pounds and needs only occasional cleaning with acetone.

The Flemings say they made the right decision, and enjoy having their dog around the house.

"He was like a child to us," Mrs. Fleming said.

Genetically altered microbe to be injected in corn stalks

HANOVER, Md. (AP) — Scientists plan to turn a green cornfield into a laboratory this month to test a genetically altered microorganism in hopes of killing a caterpillar that costs American farmers about $400 million a year.

Proponents call testing of the microorganism Cx-Bt a step toward a new era of chemical-free pest control. Critics worry that genetically engineered materials will spread uncontrollably once released into the environment.

The microorganism will be injected into corn stalks to combat the European corn borer, one of agriculture's most destructive pests.

Although researchers have conducted other experiments of genetically altered materials in the environment, the tests will be the first approved for a genetically altered "plant vaccine," said the microbe's creator, Peter Carlson, chief scientist of Crop Genetics International Inc.

"If Crop Genetics is successful, this time or in future tests — and there are similar developments going on all over the place — this will be a significant step forward in the production of food," said Richard D. Godown, a Washington-based lobbyist for the industry.

Biotechnology industry officials say Cx-Bt is just the edge of a "gene revolution" that could dramatically boost crop production and help feed a world population expected to double in the next 40 years, while cleaning up the environment.

But the industry's main critic says the field tests, which will begin June 20, are part of a dangerous trend to unleash hundreds of similar products without evolutionary defenses against them.

And, said Jeremy Rifkin, president of the Washington-based Foundation on Economic Trends, the pesticide doesn't work.

"If they develop a niche, you're stuck with them," Rifkin said. "They mutate, they migrate."

Environmental groups, including the National Audubon Society and the Environmental Defense Fund, did not oppose the limited field tests approved in May, and officials say if their questions about spread are answered with more tests, they may support the final product.

The crucial question for environmental groups is whether there will be adequate testing and regulation because Cx-Bt is just the beginning of a rush of dozens, perhaps hundreds, of similar products, said Maureen Hinkle, the Audubon Society's director of agricultural policy.

NATION IN BRIEF

FBI needs better guidelines for surveillance, ex-aide says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI should include stringent safeguards against abuse in the guidelines it used to launch a lengthy investigation of Reagan administration political opponents, says a former Justice Department aide.

Eric Richard said the bureau's investigation of the Committee in Solidarity with the People in El Salvador from 1983 to 1985 was carried out under "relatively lenient" guidelines on foreign counterintelligence and international terrorism. The group opposes Reagan administration policies in Central America.

In prepared congressional testimony, Richard said the probe could justifiably have been conducted under another set of guidelines, the "relatively rigorous set of investigative rules" governing domestic security and terrorism investigations.

Details of the FBI investigation of CISPS surfaced in February. Internal FBI documents showed that agents investigated nuns, union members and college professors who opposed Reagan administration Central America policy, photographing protesters at peace rallies and recording license plate numbers. The investigation involved nearly all of the FBI's field offices.

Richard suggested that the FBI rework the international terrorism guidelines and apply some of the safeguards against abuse that are contained in the domestic security guidelines.

Tennis match raises funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tennis balls zoomed like missiles over the White House lawn, causing even

President and Nancy Reagan to duck, but it was all for a good cause as some $500,000 was raised to combat drug abuse.

Celebrities, tennis pros and administration officials gathered Sunday at the White House tennis court for the fourth annual fund-raising event.

The president and first lady joined a crowd of several hundred guests and corporate sponsors, watching tennis stars Tracy Austin, Vince Van Patten, Jimmy Arias and Dennis Ralston compete in a match that had no winners — local sportscaster and master of ceremonies Glenn Brenner got the score mixed up.

Jetliner skids off runway

SEATTLE (AP) — An Alaska Airlines jetliner skid off a runway after landing at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, and four of the 82 people aboard sustained minor injuries, officials said.

The accident occurred late Sunday as Flight 187 from Tucson, Ariz., landed, and resulted in a 15-minute closure of the airport, authorities said.

The extent of damage to the Boeing 727 was not determined, although there was no fire and no damage to the fuselage was visible.

The passengers used emergency chutes to evacuate.

New AIDS test developed

NEW YORK (AP) — A new test can distinguish infants infected by the AIDS virus from those who only appear infected because they carry blood proteins from their mothers, a study suggests.

The test works by detecting genetic material from the virus, rather than the standard method of detecting the proteins as evidence of possible infection, scientists said.

Strong quake breaks windows in California

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A strong earthquake that broke windows, emptied supermarket shelves and knocked children off their feet was one of the strongest tremors to hit the quake-prone region in years, authorities said.

The earthquake, felt over a 350-mile area from Santa Rosa to Bakersfield, was the sharpest of at least three measurable tremors in California on Sunday. There were no reports of serious injuries or damage.

"We got rocked and rolled pretty good," said police dispatcher Chris Mraz in Milpitas, 10 miles west of the quake's center.

The quake registered 5.3 on the Richter scale, according to the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park. The University of California Seismographic Station in Berkeley recorded it at 5.1 on the Richter scale of ground motion.

Ceilings cracked, a water pipe burst and burglar alarms sounded in the area closest to the epicenter, and nervous residents rushed into the street in at least one neighborhood and jammed phone lines throughout the San Francisco Bay area. One man said he saw parked cars moving in the U.S. Army's Presidio base in San Francisco.

The quake hit at 6:45 p.m. and was centered on the Calaveras Fault about 10 miles northeast of San Jose, near unincorporated Alum Rock.

Both seismographic centers recorded several small aftershocks Sunday night, and Berkeley center spokesman Anthony Lomax warned that another tremor of up to magnitude 4 was likely.

Experts expressed concern because the 5-mile-long epicenter was just north of the center of a destructive quake that hit Morgan Hill in 1984, registering 6.2 on the Richter scale, the region's strongest tremor in years.

Sunday's quake's shallow epicenter increased its impact on the area, experts said.

Two children in Fremont, 10 miles north of the epicenter, said they were knocked to the floor and suffered mild bruises when the ground began to ripple.

"It still hurts when I walk," said 5-year-old Tommy Harang, whose 12-year-old sister Chrissy also took a fall.

FUN IN THE SUN

MARC residents, right to left, Jamie McCullough, Joe Martinez, Daniel Kirwan, and Eric McHam enjoy an excursion down the rapids on the River Raft ride Saturday at Six Flags.

14 MARC RESIDENTS VISIT SIX FLAGS

For some it was their first time to travel in an airplane. For others it was a chance at adventure. But everyone agreed that they were going to have the time of their lives.

Saturday 14 residents of MARC (Midland Association For Retarded Citizens) traveled to Arlington and were treated to a full day of fun and excitement at Six Flags over Texas.

The trip was the brain-child of Sue Snelson, president of Midland Travel Agency, who said she has long wanted to do something special for the community.

"We are pleased to have an opportunity to help make this activity available for this special group of young people," said Snelson.

According to Snelson, American Airlines and an anonymous benefactor who contributed the admission for the tickets to Six Flags teamed up with Midland Travel Agency to sponsor the trip for the MARC residents.

Political consultant's forgery trial begins

SAN MARCOS (AP) — A vice president for a Houston political consulting firm accused of hiring teen-agers to forge signatures on nominating petitions for Republican candidates says the company has not lost political clients.

But political observers say Southern Political Consulting may not have picked up additional candidates as a result of the scandal.

Rocky J. Mountain and his company each are accused of 64 counts of misdemeanor forgery in an alleged scheme in which teens were given beer and directed to fake names on petitions for former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont.

The operative is scheduled to go on trial here today with Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Sherman Ross presiding. The trial was moved to Hays County because of widespread publicity in the Houston area.

Forging petition signatures is a misdemeanor in Texas. If convicted, Mountain could face two years in jail and a $2,000 fine. The company could be fined as much as $10,000.

Mountain said his company will be defended by Houston lawyer Joe Bailey, The Dallas Morning News reported. Harris County Assistant District Attorney Casey O'Brien will prosecute.

The case stems from reports that hundreds of forgeries were discovered on petitions for du Pont and fellow GOP presidential hopefuls Bob Dole and Alexander Haig. All hired Southern Political Consulting to help collect 5,000 signatures necessary to qualify for the Republican primary ballot.

The candidates denied any knowledge of the forgeries. But du Pont announced in February that he wanted to withdraw from the Texas primary, saying he had learned that his campaign, "was the victim of a nasty fraud undertaken by the same company that offered to sell us signatures."

A woman whose teen-age children were hired by the company to gather signatures said Mountain provided beer to the youths and told them to fill in the petitions with names from a list of registered voters.

The Republican Party last week adopted a proposal to allow future presidential candidates to qualify for a place on the ballot by paying a $5,000 filing fee.

Mountain said his company is doing some non-political public relations work for two private business accounts.

"Business would be a lot better if this hadn't happened. It has forced us to do some diversification, which really in the long run is probably going to help," Mountain told the Morning News.

Court refuses to reinstate Crosby's cocaine conviction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to reinstate rock star David Crosby's cocaine conviction and five-year prison sentence, overturned by a Texas court only after Crosby spent five months in prison.

The justices, without comment, let stand a ruling that Dallas police unlawfully searched Crosby's nightclub dressing room.

A state appeals court ruled that evidence gathered by police in the unlawful 1982 search — including cocaine and a pistol confiscated from Crosby — should not have been used as evidence at Crosby's trial.

Crosby, who gained fame as part of the group called Crosby, Stills and Nash, was convicted of unlawfully possessing cocaine and carrying a handgun in a tavern.

A state appeals court overturned the conviction and prison sentence last Nov. 12. Crosby was freed after having served five months of the sentence.

Paramedic rescues Texan

TUSCUMBIA, Ala. (AP) — A paramedic who rappelled down a 40-foot bluff to rescue a Texas boy said today that such cliff-scaling is rare in his Colbert County territory but that equipment for it is part of his routine gear.

Frankie Thaxton, a paramedic with the Helen Keller Memorial Hospital Ambulance Service, rappelled down the bluff Friday to rescue 11-year-old William Joseph Isbell of Santa Fe, Texas, who fell down the side of a cliff while playing with a young relative.

Isbell was taken to the hospital in Tusculumbia, where he was listed in satisfactory condition Friday night before being released. Ambulance personnel said he appeared to suffer no more than minor cuts and bruises.

The boy and his relative, who was not identified, were playing on a bluff in the power line break on Smallwood Road near Alabama Highway 247. According to the children's account, the relative slid a few feet down the side of the cliff, then Isbell fell while trying to help him back up.

Man jailed for biting ear

LUBBOCK (AP) — Police claim a man detained in a routine traffic stop bit off a part of an officer's ear as he was being placed in a squad car.

The officer, Brian McNeill, was treated at Methodist Hospital for injuries suffered in a scuffle that occurred Saturday when he assisted other officers.

Willie Jackson, 27, was arraigned Sunday by weekend magistrate Pat Moseley, who set a $10,000 bond on the charge of assault on a peace officer. A $300 bond was also set on criminal mischief, driving while intoxicated, resisting arrest and two assault charges.

Jackson remained in jail today in lieu of the bonds, said Sgt. Victor Lugo.

Man, son drown in lake

FORT WORTH (AP) — Authorities say a man and his son drowned in Eagle Mountain Lake after the father became exhausted while trying to pull the boy from turbulent waters.

Searchers pulled the boy, Marcos Andrade Jr., 7, from murky waters of the lake near Azle at 10:05 a.m. Sunday.

Tarrant County Medical Investigator Ed Bodiford said the body of the boy's father, 33-year-old Marcos Andrade Sr., was recovered more than one hour later by a team of Fort Worth Fire Department divers.

Witnesses told authorities the Fort Worth residents were fishing about 10 a.m. in a restricted area off a cliff near the dam when the boy fell into choppy waters below.

Fired employee takes hostages

RICHARDSON (AP) — A man dismissed from his job at a computer company returned today with a 12-gauge shotgun and took two hostages at the firm's offices after firing several shots, police said.

The 28-year-old man, who has not been identified, entered the building shortly after 8 a.m. and attempted to take four hostages, but two of them escaped, said police spokesman Jim Wheatley.

He said one man and one woman were taken hostage, but their names and ages were not immediately available.

Three to four shots were fired when the gunman entered the building, but no one was injured, Wheatley said.

He said police are maintaining telephone contact with the suspect and that "the man appeared calm."

Police sealed off the area around Zeus Components of Dallas, located near North Central Expressway. A police tactical team was dispatched to the company, said police spokeswoman Nancy Hodges.

"We received a phone call at 8:15 a.m. informing us of the situation," she said.

A Zeus employee hung up the phone when called by The Associated Press. Another telephone call also was disconnected.

Ms. Hodges said unconfirmed reports were that the suspect was disgruntled about his dismissal from the company in this North Dallas suburb.

Odessa police continue probe of Sunday morning stabbing

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police here continue to investigate the stabbing of a 33-year-old man Sunday morning.

Robert Gonzalez, 1112 N. Hancock, was stabbed three times about 9:55 a.m. Sunday "by a man he didn't know, but could identify," according to police spokesman Cpl. John McAhon.

Gonzalez was stabbed in the left side, left arm and left leg by the suspect, McAhon said. Reports taken by investigating officers were somewhat confusing as to where the stabbing actually occurred, he said.

Gonzalez told one investigating officer the man who stabbed him knocked on his door, entered the house and immediately began stabbing him, McAhon said. He told another investigating officer the stabbing occurred on the porch outside the house.

Gonzalez told investigators the man who attacked him was an Anglo male about 6 feet one inch tall, weighed about 180 pounds and was wearing a T-shirt and blue jeans.

McAhon said the report by investigating officers "seems to indicate a woman he was on a date with Saturday night was at the house with him" when the attack occurred. The report did not identify the woman, he said.

Gonzalez was transported to Medical Center Hospital, but MCH personnel this morning were unable to provide a condition report.

Parkland Hospital appeals injunction on AZT

DALLAS (AP) — Parkland Memorial Hospital is appealing a temporary injunction that forced the elimination of a waiting list for AZT and making it and another experimental drug available to indigent patients.

The appeal, filed Friday, came 10 days before the scheduled start of a civil trial in a suit that the Dallas Gay Alliance filed against Parkland, alleging inadequate medical care for the hospital's AIDS patients.

The injunction was requested by the alliance on behalf of five of the hospital's AIDS clinic patients and of seven other AIDS victims who died while on the AZT waiting list.

AZT is an experimental drug that prolongs the life of acquired immune deficiency syndrome patients, but is not a cure. AIDS is always fatal, medical officials say.

Alliance members say they are confident the injunction will be upheld.

"The thing that's really sad is that Parkland is trying to use technical legal grounds to reverse a court order made on the basis of a compassionate plea," alliance president William Waybourn said.

"Any delay by Parkland in continuing to carry out this order is compromising the lives of the patients who rely on Parkland for care,"

Parkland, in its appeal, is challenging the authority of the May 19 order by state District Judge John McClellan Marshall to require the hospital to eliminate the waiting list and offer the experimental drug Pentamidine to indigent patients.

Pentamidine is an aerosol drug believed to suppress an often-fatal pneumonic infection affecting half of all AIDS patients.

Parkland's appeal is based primarily on two contentions:

— That the injunction was motivated by sworn pleadings and affidavits and the alliance had "no admissible evidence to support it (the injunction)."

— That the judiciary cannot dic-

Tanker truck's driver killed in I-45 mishap

FAIRFIELD (AP) — A tanker truck loaded with a caustic chemical overturned on Interstate 45 early today, killing the driver and causing the substance to leak onto the roadway, authorities said.

The truck's driver was pronounced dead at the scene. The wreck closed one lane of the freeway's northbound lanes, said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells.

A dike was constructed alongside the roadway to contain the chemical. Officials of the Texas Water Commission and state Highway Department said an undetermined amount of sodium hydroxide leaked after the crash at 7:45 a.m.

Wells said the tractor-trailer rig was northbound from Deer Park when it slid sideways, rolled once and crashed into the interstate's right shoulder near Dew, about 15 miles south of Fairfield.

The driver, who has not been identified, apparently lost control of his rig, said Wells. He did not know how far traffic was backed up as a result of the crash.

MARC Executive Director Ray Unterbrink said that the residents were very excited about this opportunity.

"This is an exciting event for the young people who will participate and we are grateful to Sue Snelson for her generous support in organizing and underwriting this opportunity."

After an early-morning flight from Midland to Dallas-Fort Worth the group of 14 excited young adults were bused from the airport to Six Flags where their day of fun-in-the-sun began.

For Ronnie Hanks, this trip made the second time he has visited Six Flags.

"When I lived in Dallas with my parents we came here once and I rode every ride twice," said Hanks. "Today I'm going to ride them all again."

MARC resident Misty Bellows claimed she liked the airplane ride the best. "It was fun, it went up real high, and then it came down," said Bellows of the Six Flags ride that resembled a WWII aircraft.

For Joe Martinez and friends Eric McHam and Daniel Kirwan rushing through the rapids on a bright yellow circular river raft was the highlight of their day at Six Flags. "I liked how it went around and around," giggled Martinez. "And I got all wet."

Ricky Starnes and friend Sherman Hughes said they had fun with the bumper cars. "It was fun to crash into everyone," said Starnes. "I was trying to hit Sherman."

However, not all of the amusement park visitors were convinced riding on every ride was the best idea. When asked if he wanted to ride on the dreaded double-loop rollercoaster, MARC resident Donald Bowley replied, "No, I don't think so, I'd rather stay here and sit in the shade."

Fast-talking Texan champion auctioneer

AMARILLO (AP) — Fast talking has paid off for a Texas man who beat out 65 other livestock auctioneers to win the 25th Annual World Livestock Auctioneer Championship. In the contest dominated by sharp eyes and quick tongues, Joe Don Pogue of Sulphur Springs took home $1,000 cash and a championship ring. Jerry Welschmeyer of Vienna, Mo., was reserve champion and Sam Teply of Lexington, Neb., was runner-up champion in the contest, sponsored by the Livestock Marketing Association.

The contestants in Saturday's contest each sported their own particular calling style, ranging from low-key and straightforward to flashy and loquacious.

And they did run on. "Here they come. They're good ones," called Keith Dinwoodie of Armstrong, British Columbia, as a lot of cattle were driven into the ring. "Look at the legs on 'em. The quality's here. Just the way you want to buy 'em, fellas."

As the bids went higher and a buyer took the lot, Dinwoodie congratulated the buyer: "Good eye, sir. Good cattle."

Dinwoodie, a former winner in the world all-around competition for all types of auctioneers, said his natural propensity to babble led him into livestock selling.

"I grew up in Alberta on a ranch. I was kind of a mouthy kid, and one day my dad and uncle said, 'Why don't you be an auctioneer?'"

The tricky part of selling livestock, say auctioneers, is keeping a close eye on buyers, whose bidding motions may look more like nervous tics than anything else.

"The bidders out here today have been super," said John Tarter of Smiths Grove, Ky., one of 15 finalists in the contest. "When they bid you can really see it. Sometimes you get the eye winkers and finger wigglers."

Along with sharp eyes, auctioneers have to talk fast and still be understood, and that takes practice.

Many of the contest participants attended auction school, but they said practice makes perfect.

"I practice while I'm driving," said Duane Baxley from Paso Robles, Calif., another finalist. "Some people sing or talk to themselves while driving — I practice selling."

Listening to other auctioneers also helps, Baxley said.

"Number one is you start out slow and you start out plain," said Tarter. "There's no substitute for experience and hours spent selling."

Duded up in their Sunday best, the callers were judged on their vocal clarity, ability to spot bids and talent for keeping the sale moving. The identity of the judges, all marketing business owners, are withheld, said LMA spokesman John McBride.

For those who can't get enough of the sounds, sights and smells of a livestock auction ring, the LMA sells cassette tapes of the calling contest.

"We sell dozens and dozens," said McBride. "It's amazing, but there are some people who just love to listen to auctioneers."

L'Amour stayed in saddle during hard times, man says

EL PASO — Louis L'Amour alone kept Western literature in front of the public during a "dark and bleak time for writers of Western fiction," an El Paso historian and former president of Western Writers of America said Sunday.

Leon Metz, who served as president of the organization in 1982, said some Western writers envied L'Amour and others resented him because "he got all the space in the bookstores."

"But they forget he's the one who held Western literature together when it was falling apart in the late 1960s, the '70s and into the '80s," Metz said.

"There was a time that TV was saturated with Westerns, then they were gone. People didn't realize that not only were they gone from TV, they were gone from the bookshelves. Louis L'Amour carried the lamp. He let the people know we existed."

L'Amour died Friday in Los Angeles of lung cancer. He was 80.

Metz met L'Amour in 1982 at a Western Writers convention in Santa Rosa, Calif.

"He was soft-spoken and quiet," Metz said. "I have a hunch he knew even then he had cancer. We gave him our Saddleman Award for lifetime achievement that year."

Metz won the Saddleman Award three years later.

"I remember thinking, 'My God, I got the same award we gave to Louis L'Amour and he's the greatest of them all.' Not that I would compare myself to him, but it was an honor."

Francis Fugate, retired English professor at the University of Texas at El Paso and current president of Western Writers of America, said L'Amour "was very serious about the craft of writing."

"There are more than 600 members of Western Writers of America and all 600-plus of us are sure sorry to see him go," Fugate said.

Other El Paso members of Western Writers of America praised L'Amour's meticulous research methods.

"He always tried to be flawless in the accuracy of the background in his novels," said Nancy Hamilton, associate director of Texas Western Press at UTEP. "That's important because in the last 20 to 30 years readers have become more sensitive to accuracy, and they've been more demanding of writers to be accurate."

Ex-aide thought Wright book 'part of my job'

FORT WORTH (AP) — A former aide to House Speaker Jim Wright says he believed working on a Wright book was "part of my job" and he was not told the project was to be accomplished on personal time.

"I did think it was part of my congressional job," Matthew Cosolotto told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in a telephone interview published today. "That was my understanding at the time, and I still think that."

Appearing on two network interview programs Sunday, Wright said Cosolotto performed the job voluntarily and on personal time included with his congressional duties.

"Matthew volunteered to work on the book," said the Fort Worth Democrat. "Matthew hasn't done anything wrong. I wouldn't ask him to do anything wrong...There's nothing to hide."

The book's publisher, Carlos Moore of Fort Worth, has said he envisioned the book as a way for him and the speaker to make money.

One of Wright's friends said he bought 1,000 copies of his books as a legal way to show his appreciation beyond the limits on campaign contributions.

"If I wanted to help Jim and wanted to give him some money, I couldn't do it," said Fort Worth developer S. Gene Payte. "But I could buy his books."

Payte, who has known Wright since he entered Congress in 1955, told the newspaper he bought the books at a cost of $6,000 "to show my appreciation."

Federal election laws limit individual campaign contributions to $1,000 for each election.

Payte said he knew about the limit but wanted to find a way to boost Wright's income, the Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

The developer also said he wrote letters to nearly 50 Fort Worth businessmen urging them each to buy $1,000 worth of the books, but did not know if they followed up on the request. He would not name them.

Publication arrangements for the 1984 book, "Reflections of a Public Man," is one aspect of an inquiry by the House Ethics Committee. The committee decided last week to conduct the inquiry to determine if Wright has violated rules on ethics and conflicts of interest.

Sunday, Wright denied that he had violated House conflict-of-interest rules in his financial dealings and declared "I am extremely confident" of being cleared.

Fort Worth orthodontist Gene Wood, another longtime Wright friend, said he paid $1,000 to publisher William Carlos Moore after Moore told him he was trying to put together a group of about 20 people to finance republication of the book last year.

"I paid to have some republished and a big box (of books) was sent to me," Wood said. He added that he had already given Wright the maximum $1,000 in campaign contributions.

Wright has acknowledged that some supporters bought large numbers of books, but said it wasn't an attempt to get around contribution limits.

"I think that's a mistake," Wright said. "I don't think anybody really thought that."

Wright instead said, "I'm glad they thought enough of the book."

Meanwhile, another longtime Fort Worth friend of Wright said he was present when Wright asked a congressional aide if he would "sacrifice a couple of weekends" to work on the book.

Ben Procter, professor of history at Texas Christian University, located in Fort Worth, recalled the request in a sworn statement Wright provided the ethics committee Friday.

Town rallies around hospital after tragedy

PERRYTON (AP) — Residents are rallying around the staff of Ochiltree General Hospital as the institution copes with tragedy.

Four members of the Ochiltree General staff died Friday when their plane crashed near Austin.

"It's a shock to the community," Perryton Mayor Doug Hale said.

The medical professionals were flying from Perryton to Austin for a Texas Medical Foundation conference, said Lawrence Ellzey, president of the hospital's board of directors.

The crash killed 34-year-old nursing supervisor Roy Henry Grunden, 36-year-old Donald Douglas Holmes, a member of the hospital's board of directors, 41-year-old V.S. Christopher, one of only five doctors at the hospital, and 44-year-old Jerry Leon Weatherly, hospital administrator. Now the hospital is pulling together to regroup from the tragedy, Ellzey said.

"Everybody is pitching in and helping," said Ellzey. "Some of the nurses who have leave and vacations coming have canceled their plans. The hospital as a whole has risen to the occasion. We will handle this situation."

One nurse said the crash brought home the truth that health care professionals live with daily.

"Death is death. It's final and it's devastating and there is nothing you can do about it," an Ochiltree General nurse who declined to give her name said.

Bastrop County sheriff's deputies said witnesses told them they heard the plane's engine misfire and the craft then apparently tried to land in a field near Elgin, a community 25 miles east of Austin.

Federal Aviation Administration officials called the Department of Public Safety at 8:43 a.m. after losing the plane on radar and the crash site was spotted several minutes later.

Arab-American deported

LOD, Israel (AP) — Israel today deported Arab-American activist Mubarak Awad, an expulsion Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said was necessary to deter violence.

Awad was accompanied up the stairway to the TWA aircraft by two police officers before other passengers boarded. He waved briefly before entering the jetliner.

Police barred reporters from the tarmac at Ben Gurion International Airport and took identification documents from several journalists who ventured near the plane. Armed border patrol guards forced news photographers off the roof of the terminal building.

TWA flight 885, carrying Awad to New York, took off at 4:15 p.m.

Also today, Israeli soldiers fatally shot a 43-year-old Palestinian man in the head while searching a village near the West Bank city of Ramallah, a hospital official said. The army said it was checking the report.

Shamir last month ordered Awad, a 44-year-old advocate of non-violent resistance to the Israeli occupation, deported despite U.S. objections. The prime minister told Israel radio today that Awad's expulsion "will have a deterrent influence" on other Arabs.

Shamir maintained Awad played a leading role in the six-month-old Arab uprising in the occupied lands. The rebellion has adopted some of the methods advocated by Awad, including use of commercial strikes and boycotts of Israeli products.

Awad was brought to the airport near Tel Aviv more than an hour before his flight to New York. The van carrying Awad sped behind a hangar and was parked. Awad could not be seen by reporters.

About a dozen Israeli supporters held placards at an airport entrance. One, written in Hebrew and English, read: "Mubarak: Next Year in Jerusalem."

Awad issued a written statement today in which he urged Israelis and Arabs to "learn to take a risk for peace."

"It would be unfair and cowardly on our part to postpone our conflict for the next generation," the statement said.

Awad, who has a home in Wapakoneta, Ohio, also vowed to return to his native Jerusalem.

Early today, in the West Bank town of Abwein, Israeli troops shot and killed Dab Mahmoud Hussein after he failed to obey an order to halt, according to Dr. Yasser Obaid, director of Ramallah Hospital.

Hussein's family said he did not stop because he was deaf and could not hear the order.

The death brought to 207 the number of Palestinians killed in the uprising that began Dec. 8 in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war. Two Israelis have also died.

On Sunday, Israeli officials discussed punishment for Palestinian arsonists blamed for fires that have destroyed at least 35,000 acres of woodland and farm pastures in the past week, officials said.

Shamir told Israel radio as he toured a factory near Tel Aviv that Israel would respond to an upsurge in Arab attacks "swiftly and aggressively."

Referring to an unprecedented firebomb attack Sunday at Tel Aviv's main shopping mall, he said:

"This is more proof that they (the Arabs) are not just talking about the (occupied) territories but that the conflict is one for our survival. These are blows against our existence."

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Industry Minister Ariel Sharon spoke out about a need to use guns to punish firebomb-throwers and arsonists who have destroyed Israeli forests in recent weeks.

Rabin told the weekly Cabinet session Sunday that he had authorized Israeli civilians in the occupied territories to shoot at Arabs holding firebombs, the Jerusalem Post daily reported.

Sharon, a former defense minister, said on army radio that Arab firebombers should be shot dead "not only after they (the firebombs) are thrown. They must be shot with the intention to kill to allow normal life for both Arabs and Jews."

Israeli police, meanwhile, arrested three 20-year-old Palestinian men suspected of trying to set fire in a field in a Jerusalem suburb over the weekend, the radio said.

Shamir has also said he would introduce legislation to jail arsonists for up to 15 years.

Libya says book reveals 'real ugly face' of Reagan administration

LONDON (AP) — Terry Waite's family expressed optimism Sunday that the church envoy will be freed by his Lebanese captors despite a book claiming Oliver North planned to use him in a death plot against Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi.

Libya reacted to the report by saying it revealed the "real ugly face" of the Reagan administration and it accused the United States of official terrorism.

David Waite, brother of the Anglican Church envoy, called the allegations in the book "mischievous."

But he added: "We are very optimistic about the eventual outcome of Terry's situation. The big question is the timing of it."

"We are probably now in the most positive era we have ever been in, as far as this situation is concerned... We just have to wait and pray, as we have been doing all along, that we will eventually see a good outcome."

The book, "Best Laid Plans, The Inside Story of America's War Against Terrorism," was written by David Martin, Pentagon correspondent for CBS, and John Walcott, national security correspondent for The Wall Street Journal.

An excerpt printed in U.S. News & World Report alleged that North, a former U.S. National Security Council aide, planned to ask Terry Waite to go to Tripoli to meet Gadhafi in 1986 to seek help in freeing hostages in Lebanon.

The article alleged that Waite's visit would be timed to ensure that Gadhafi was in his compound when the Americans launched their bombing raid on the Libyan capital April 15, 1986. According to the book, the idea was to increase the chances of Gadhafi being killed in the raid.

Libya's official Jana news agency, in a dispatch monitored in London, said, "The plot revealed today and the ones before it which included American official terrorism and subversion represent the style of smugglers and heads of gangsters."

It added: "Every day the U.S. administration reveals its real ugly face showing that America has become the official center of the administration of terrorism and subversive plots, assassination and aggression against other peoples in a manner never seen before in contemporary political history."

The Reagan administration ordered the bombings of Tripoli and Benghazi after accusing Gadhafi of supporting international terrorism.

David Waite said: "I think it is mischievous of people to put things like this (the alleged North plot) into books just to add a bit of spice to them."

"They are talking about a person (Terry Waite) who is not in a position at the moment to defend himself," he added.

Waite said his brother always "made it very clear he was not in any way associated with anything underhand or sinister."

"He was and still is a humanitarian working for the Archbishop of Canterbury as an envoy on properly humanitarian grounds."

Gadhafi was apparently unharmed in the bombing, although there were rumors that the attack left him confused and disoriented. Libyan officials reported that his 15-month old adopted daughter was killed and two young sons were wounded.

Terry Waite disappeared in Beirut in January 1987 while on a mission to help win the release of foreign hostages in Lebanon.

North, a former Marine lieutenant colonel, has retired from the military and is awaiting trial on charges stemming from the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan rebels from U.S. arms sales to Iran. He was fired from his NSC job in November 1986, when the diversion became public.

Robin Hill takes 5 firsts

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Midland High senior-to-be Michaela Hasek showed why she may be an Olympic hopeful, but the former state backstroke champion was upstaged by a couple of younger City of Midland Swim Team mates on the last day of the 42nd annual West Texas Invitational Sunday at Doug Russell Pool.

Robin Hill won five events in the girls 10 and under division to pace the COM tankers to a third-place team finish behind the Dads Club of Houston and the El Paso Aqua Posse. Both the Dads Club and Aqua Posse scored more than 1200 points, but further team scores were unavailable at press time.

While Hill won her division in the 200 freestyle, 100 breaststroke, 50 butterfly, 100 backstroke and 100 freestyle, Matthew Houston came through with four wins for COM in the boys 13-14 division, winning the 100 breaststroke, 200 butterfly, 100 free and 200 individual medley.

Other COM winners were Hasek in the senior girls 100 free; Carrie Henry in the 13-14 girls 100 and 200 free; Stacy Fennell in the 11-12 girls 100 free; Howard Flowers in the 11-12 boys 100 back; and Curt Kieffer with boys 8 and under meet records in the 50 fly and 50 back.

Hill, Houston and Amber Goodwin in the girls eight and under division won high point awards for their divisions, though Goodwin tied Patricia Goldman of the Aqua Posse. Other high point winners were Alegria Breaux of Dads Club in 11-12 girls; Mariah Cade of the El Paso Water Ranch, 13-14 girls; Elin Bartell of the Aqua Posse in senior girls; Charlie Escher of Dads Club, eight and under boys; Devin Howard of Aqua-Tex, 10 and under boys; Jeffrey Rodriguez of Pecos Swim Team and Chris Archer of Dads Club, a tie in 11-12 boys; and Kevin Henderson of the Aqua Posse in senior boys.

COM coach Brad Swendig said the Midland swimmers showed marked improvement Sunday over their Friday and Saturday performances. Swendig credited the COM surge to more rest time after a tough week of workouts.

"I think we worked out a little bit of soreness each day," Swendig said. "We looked out of shape Friday and Saturday, but we got tired as the day went on."

While Hasek edged Bartell in the 100 free, 1:04.31 to 1:04.41, Aqua Posse's Cynthia Whetten set a meet record in the 100 back. The El Paso girl's 1:09.01 easily broke the old standard of 1:09.91.

Hasek finished in 1:10.32, but she realizes she'll have to do much better to qualify for the U.S. Olympic Trials to be held at the University of Texas in August.

Scott only one out away

Associated Press

Six pitchers this season have had eight innings of dreams and one of disappointment.

Houston's Mike Scott provided the latest no-hit saga on Sunday when Atlanta's Ken Oberkfell lined a single to right field with two outs in the top of the ninth to ruin the right-hander's shot at the second no-hitter of his career.

Scott then retired Gerald Perry to finish with the one-hitter and a 5-0 victory over the Braves at the Astrodome.

"It's always disappointing when you come so close and don't get it, but at least we got the win," Scott said. "I wanted to get in a lot of innings today because our bullpen needed it."

It was the sixth time this season a pitcher has carried a no-hitter into the ninth inning only to lose it.

Others to take a no-hitter into the ninth in 1988 are Scott's teammate Nolan Ryan, Ron Robinson of Cincinnati (also 8 2-3), Doug Drabek of Pittsburgh, Odell Jones of Milwaukee, and Tom Browning of Cincinnati.

Elsewhere in the NL on Sunday it was Montreal 4, New York Mets 3 in 11 innings; Chicago 4, St. Louis 3; Philadelphia 5, Pittsburgh 4; San Diego 5, Los Angeles 2; and Cincinnati 10, San Francisco 6.

Scott retired the first two batters in the ninth, but Oberkfell lined Scott's first pitch to him several feet to the left of right fielder Kevin Bass.

San Antonio's Darrin Fletcher crosses plate with run in fifth as Angel catcher Erik Pappas block the ball.

Big inning wins for San Antonio

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

San Antonio defeated Midland, 13-7, in the opener of a six-game Texas League series that will conclude the first half race, a meaningless finish for the Angels, perhaps, but vital for the pennant-grasping Missions. Yet both managers were asked to explain their pitching moves.

For Midland's Max Oliveras, it was, How come you left starter Todd Eggersten in so long? For San Antonio's Kevin Kennedy: How come you took starter John Wetteland so soon?

It was Eggersten who absorbed an eight-run cannonading in the fifth that virtually decided the game. While Wetteland was pitching a three-hitter, leading 10-3 and was just one inning away from qualifying for his eighth win when lifted.

"There were two out, one run in and Eggersten was pitching well," said Oliveras. "I didn't have anybody ready to bring in."

What happened was, Eggersten hit a batter with two out and Walt McConnell beat out an infield hit to load the bases.

"With a little more experience, Jeff (third baseman Jeff Manto) would have let the shortstop handle that ball," Oliveras said of McConnell's hit. "But then that's why he's here in this league."

What followed was a jackpot, three-run double by Louis Lopez as the Missions strung together six straight hits.

AS FOR Wetteland, "He's been fighting the flu for two days in Wichita. He practically forced us to let him start tonight, although he has a fever and can't hold anything down," Kennedy advised. "Even so, he had a pretty good fast ball, but he couldn't keep the ball down where he usually does. He just didn't have the strength in his legs."

"We monitored him closely from the first inning on and just felt it was time to get him out of there."

The six walks and four strikeouts in four innings from a pitcher whose walk-strikeout ratio was 41-81 going into the game was a clue that something was wrong.

In the fourth, after a walk and bunt single, Jeff Manto tagged him for a home run, his 15th to give Midland a brief 3-2 lead.

THE ANGELS made a comeback gesture in the seventh when the defensive support of relief pitcher Tony Mack took a coffee break. First there was Jim McCollum's one-out bad bounce single. Second baseman Manny Franco then dropped Lee Stevens' double play liner and shortstop Juan Bell booted Tom Alfredson's grounder. Before it was over, Midland had three unearned runs and Manto his fourth rbi of the game on a sac fly and Mack had departed in favor of Mike Hartley.

The three Mission pitchers limited Midland to five hits and a post script encouraging note was Lee Stevens' solo homer in the ninth, his seventh of the season.

Johnson leads Lakers over Pistons, 99-86

By SAM GOLDAPER
N.Y. Times News Service

PONTIAC, Mich. — Magic Johnson left Michigan State University as a 19-year-old sophomore to join the Los Angeles Lakers and give the National Basketball Association something it had never seen: a 6-foot-9-inch playmaker.

On Sunday, Johnson returned to his home state for the NBA finals, and did everything to beat the Detroit Pistons — the team he grew up rooting for.

He put on an outstanding exhibition of creative passing, leading the Lakers to a 99-86 victory before a Silverdome crowd of 39,188, the third largest in playoff history.

The victory not only gave the Lakers a two-games-to-one edge in the four-of-seven-game series, but it enabled Los Angeles to regain the home-court advantage. The next two games will be played here on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

Johnson, who missed once from the field in eight attempts, had 18 points, 14 assists and 6 rebounds.

Isiah Thomas led the Pistons with 28 points, 20 in the second half, which was half his team's points. That statistic perhaps more than any other points up how poorly Detroit played in the second half.

Coach Chuck Daly of the Pistons was not around to see his team finish the game. For only the third time in the five years he has been the Detroit coach, he was tossed out of a game, leaving with 5 minutes 5 seconds remaining and the Pistons trailing by 86-76.

Earl Strom, one of the officials, charged him with two technical fouls within a matter of seconds, bringing the ejection. Dick Versace, one of his two aides, took over the coaching duties.

"I was upset earlier because I thought Adrian Dantley was fouled several times going to the basket," Daly said after the game. "We didn't seem to be able to get a call. I argued too profusely and got ejected, which was Earl's right. He's the man with the whistle, and I was wrong."

Coach Pat Riley of the Lakers suggested that Daly used the ejection to make a point for the next game. "What do you think?" Riley said. "He might be trying to create a little bit of furor."

The Pistons, who led just twice in the game, only briefly mounted serious threats. The aggressive Laker defense, which challenged every Piston shot, closed down the middle. For the first time in the series, the Lakers also were able to run effectively, and they shot 51 percent from the field.

"Anything that you do, you have to have a mission, and it's all about that," Riley said. "Today was only one game. Our objective was to win the game. Our goal is to win the title. Today's win was as big a win as we've ever had because of the hole that we were in. And now it's their squeeze game."

"We talked about rebounding and inside defense at halftime," the Laker coach said. "I thought that was going to make the difference today. Our aggressiveness as a defensive team, the contesting of shots and finishing it with the boards, was the difference. I thought the rebounding kept the Pistons in the game in the first half."

James Worthy, who had the first 8 points of the second half, led the Lakers with 24 points, and A.C. Green had 21 points. Byron Scott finished with 18 points, and Kareem

Abdul-Jabbar, who had three rebounds in the first two games, had four in the decisive third period, when the Lakers outscored the Pistons by 31-18.

Adrian Dantley added 14 for Detroit, which had won five of its previous seven playoff games on the road.

In a strange first half in which defense prevailed, the Lakers led, 47-46.

The teams combined to hit the first eight shots, six by the Lakers, in the first three and a half minutes.

With 7:15 left in the first quarter, the Lakers, hitting 9 of their first 13 shots, built a 19-12 advantage on a 3-pointer by Byron Scott. That quickly began to diminish as the Lakers missed their next seven shots before Worthy, who had 8 points in the period, scored on a layup off a fast break with 45 seconds remaining.

That basket provided the defending champions with a 23-21 advantage. The Pistons shot 44 percent for the quarter. Dantley had 9 points as he repeatedly went around the Laker defenders.

By the time the half was over, each team, trying to press and trap, was called for two illegal-defense violations. There were also eight blocked shots, five by the Pistons, three by John Salley and two by Bill Laimbeer.

With the Lakers ahead, 34-31, with 5:55 left in the half, Riley decided to go with a small lineup and without a center for more than four minutes. It was hot in the Silverdome, and he needed to rest the 41-year-old Abdul-Jabbar, but Mychal Thompson, Abdul-Jabbar's replacement, has not been shooting well. Riley also wanted his team, which was playing primarily a half-court game, to run more. The Lakers did run more, but they missed their shots.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar beats Bill Laimbeer with a sky hook.

Seve wins Westchester playoff

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Seve Ballesteros not only redeemed an earlier failure, he also exorcised a haunting memory with his playoff victory in the Westchester Classic.

"Ever since the Masters playoff (in 1987) when he 3-putted the first extra hole before Larry Mize pitched in to beat Greg Norman, I have no confidence in my putting," Ballesteros said.

"I lost a lot of confidence in my game. I lost a lot of confidence in my putting," said Ballesteros, who has been in a decided slump since that playoff loss in the Masters. "I started missing a lot of short putts at critical times. Everytime I would start to do something good, I miss a short putt or do something wrong."

"This was very important," he said Sunday after his birdie on the first playoff hole had eliminated Norman, David Frost and the bitterly disappointed Ken Green.

"I feel much better," said Ballesteros, who has won two Masters, two British Opens and now ranks as the likely favorite in this week's U.S. Open.

"It is a tremendous help. It puts my confidence at a high point, and confidence is very important to me. When I came here my confidence was not very good. I had not been playing very good. Nothing was going right for me."

"I didn't feel on top of my game, but I guess things went right for me and that is a big factor for me for going into the U.S. Open."

Ballesteros' victory, worth $126,000 from the total purse of $700,000, was his second in this tournament, sixth in this country and first in the United States in three years.

He won it by boldly attempting to drive the green on the 314-yard 10th hole at the Westchester Country Club course.

He did the same thing a year ago, but pulled the shot badly, thrashed around in trees and trash for a while and did not complete the hole, losing to J.C. Snead's cautious, routine par.

This time, his drive reached a greenside bunker. He came out to five feet and — after Norman and Frost had played three shots and Green four — dropped the winning putt.

The playoff was set up when all four participants birdied the par-5 18th hole, finishing regulation play at 3-under-par 276.

"I did what I had to do," said Norman, who came from six strokes back with a 7-under-par 64, the best round of the tournament.

"All in all, I'm happy with it," Norman said. "I gave myself a chance to win the golf tournament. I'm disappointed with not winning, but I didn't give it away — Seve won it."

And Ballesteros' putting was the key in the stretch run. There was a 20-footer for birdie on No. 14, a 10-footer for par on the 16th and a 12-footer on 18 for the birdie that put him in the playoff.

Ballesteros had a closing 67, Green, from nearby Danbury, Conn., who said he would rather win this tournament than the Masters, U.S. or British Opens, had a 70. And Frost, a runner-up for the eighth time without a victory in four seasons on the American tour, shot 68.

Taiwan rookie defeats Lopez

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Mei-Chi Cheng, a rookie from Taiwan, sank a seven-foot birdie putt on the second playoff hole on Sunday to defeat Nancy Lopez and win the $300,000 Rochester International LPGA tournament.

Cheng, Lopez and Patty Sheehan finished the 72-hole tournament at 1-under-par 287, the only players to record sub-par totals.

It was the first tournament victory for Cheng, whose nickname is "Magic." She entered the tournament 30th on the earnings list with $41,102 and took home $45,000 for the victory.

On the first playoff hole, the 377-yard, par-4 18th, both Cheng and Lopez had pars, but Sheehan missed an 8-footer for par after blasting out of a sand trap.

Cheng sank her birdie putt on the 386-yard, par-4 first hole after Lopez just missed a 16-foot birdie attempt.

Cheng's winning total was the highest winning score recorded so far this year on the LPGA Tour. Scores like that are usually reserved for the U.S. Women's Open in July, but gusty and swirling winds made the 6,182-yard, par-72 Locust Hill Country Club course especially difficult.

Nancy Brown, who shot a 71 on Sunday, finished fourth at even-par 288.

Cindy Rarick and rookie Danielle Ammaccapane both shot 74s on Sunday and finished tied for fifth at 289.

Casper makes it a million $$$

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Billy Casper, became the seventh player to earn $1 million on the Senior PGA Tour and posted a bogey-free 67 on Sunday to win the Senior Tournament Players Championship by two strokes over Al Geiberger.

The victory was the second of the season for Casper, 57, who collected $600,000 that nearly doubled his 1988 earnings to $1,321,117. He has won $1,026,434 since joining the Senior Tour in 1981 and joined Don January, Miller Barber, Gene Littler, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Bruce Crampton as the players who have won more than $1 million on both the regular and senior tours.

Marvelous Marv tired of waiting, retires

RAVENNA, Italy (AP) — Former middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler announced his retirement from boxing on Sunday, saying he didn't want to wait around for a rematch with Sugar Ray Leonard.

"My heart says yes (to continue boxing), but my brain says no," Hagler told NBC following its telecast of the WBA middleweight championship fight between his brother, Robbie Sims, and Samu Kalambay.

"The only reason I would return would be to regain my title, but since Leonard has been playing games, it would probably take another year to work things out," he said.

Hagler, 34, hasn't fought since losing a split decision to Leonard on April 6, 1987. Leonard, who came out of retirement for the bout, retired again following his victory but recently indicated that he might fight again.

"I feel fortunate to get out of the ring with my faculties and my health," Hagler said. "I'm going to say goodbye to boxing. I'm going to retire and go into the movies."

Hagler, of Brockton, Mass., said he reached his decision after talking with his wife, his mother and his longtime co-managers, Goody and Pat Petronelli.

75,000 see NASCAR era come to an end

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A crowd estimated at more than 75,000 witnessed the end of an era as the NASCAR Winston Cup teams made their final assault on Riverside International Raceway.

But Sunday's final chapter of stock car racing was rather tedious and less than tidy at the 31-year-old track, scheduled for demolition later this summer to make way for a planned community and shopping mall.

Rusty Wallace won the Budweiser 400 in a race in which there was one red flag, seven yellows and some confusion that resulted in Dale Earnhardt drawing a penalty that cost him his chance at victory.

"I need to work a lot harder than I am," she said. "I've been swimming 8,000 meters each morning and 5,000 in the afternoon, but that will increase."

"I think if I work hard enough, I can make the Trials."

Hasek needs to cut about a full second off her personal record of 1:07.43 to make the cutoff for the Trials. She'll aim for the mark at Senior Circuit meets in Houston and Austin later this summer.

Realistically, she realizes her time may not have come for national glory.

"I've got a real slim chance of making it this time," she said. "I'm focusing more on '92 (the Olympics in Barcelona, Spain).

Last year at Palm Springs, Stevens had 19 homers and it was suspected he might take advantage of the inviting fences and wind currents to make hay in Midland.

"He's not getting the kind of pitches here that he got last year," confided Oliveras. "They are keeping the ball away from him and he's going through a learning experience. I wouldn't be surprised to see him hit 15 home runs in the second half...he's big and strong enough to..."

And with his Angels out of the race, Oliveras is playing the final series of the first half with hopes of "getting a little momentum, a winning streak to carry over into the second half."

Yount hits for cycle

Associated Press

With his team ahead 13-2, Milwaukee's Robin Yount could afford to think about himself.

Yount singled to center in the first, homered to right in the third and doubled to right in the sixth. He was the leadoff batter in the eighth.

"I was aware I needed a triple to hit for the cycle and in a game like that you can gamble," said Yount, who hit a deep drive to left center and made a headlong dive into third.

Dale Sveum homered twice and drove in five runs and Rob Deer added a two-run shot to lead a 16-hit attack Sunday as the Brewers pounded the Chicago White Sox 16-2.

Rangers 3, Athletics 2
Charlie Hough scattered six hits to beat Oakland for the seventh consecutive time as Texas beat the visiting Athletics.

Hough, 6-7, is 14-5 lifetime against Oakland. The knuckleballer struck out seven and walked three en route to his fifth complete game and third in a row.

Former Ranger Dave Stewart, 9-5, lost for the fifth time in his last six games. Stewart allowed five hits and struck out seven.

Ruben Sierra hit his 10th homer to give Texas a 3-1 lead in the third and Don Baylor homered leading off the ninth for the A's.

Tigers 5, Indians 4
Luis Salazar's two-run homer capped a five-run outburst in the first two innings and Detroit held on to complete a four-game sweep at Cleveland.

Yankees 6, Orioles 5
Claudell Washington's single over Baltimore's drawn-in outfield drove home the winning run with one out in the ninth inning as New York beat the Orioles for the second straight day.

Red Sox 8, Blue Jays 2

Mike Greenwell's three-run homer highlighted a five-run first inning as Boston snapped an eight-game losing streak against Toronto.

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 6-5, allowed eight hits, walked two and struck out two in eight innings as Boston beat Toronto for the first time since Aug. 10, 1987. Bob Stanley pitched the ninth.

Angels 6, Royals 4
Ted Power allowed four hits in eight innings and Bill Buckner drove in three runs with a homer and a double as Kansas City won for the ninth time in 10 games by defeating California.

Power, 4-1, retired 20 consecutive batters following Jack Howell's lead-off double in the second. He struck out six and walked none in winning his third straight game. Gene Garber pitched the ninth and allowed Chili Davis' two-run homer, his seventh.

Power had pitched shutouts in his two previous starts, but his scoreless streak stopped at 18 innings when Wally Joyner hit his third homer of the season following Brian Downing's double in the first.

Twins 6, Mariners 2
Gary Gaetti's two-run homer sparked a five-run fifth inning and Charlie Lea allowed four hits in seven innings as Minnesota won at Seattle.

"I threw the pitch I thought I'd get him out with but he hit the ball well," Scott said. "I don't know if it was a good pitch or not but it doesn't really matter now. It was a nice clean hit."

Scott walked none, but the Astros had made two errors in the game spoiling his chances at a potential perfect game.

Scott pitched a no-hitter on Sept. 25, 1986 in a game that clinched the NL West Division title in a 2-0 victory over San Francisco. No NL pitcher has thrown a no-hitter since.

"I don't think that I had the stuff I had against the Giants," Scott said. "It was one hit short of that magic." Astros catcher Alan Ashby said.

"If you're comparing him to two years ago, he was great today. Two years ago, he was super human."

The last no-hitter in the majors was by Milwaukee's Juan Nieves, a 7-0 victory over Baltimore on April 15, 1987.

The Astros gave Scott the lead with three runs in the first inning off Rick Mahler, 7-6, on Bill Doran's RBI double and run-scoring singles by Bass and Craig Reynolds.

Expos 4, Mets 3
Andres Galarraga tied the score with a three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth and Hubie Brooks singled home Tim Lincecum in the 11th inning as Montreal sent visiting New York to its fifth straight loss.

Raines led off the 11th with a walk against Terry Lincecum, 1-1, stole second, was sacrificed to third and scored on Brooks' single.

Mets starter Sid Fernandez allowed one hit over the first eight innings. He was replaced by Randy Myers who yielded Galarraga's league-leading 16th homer.

Phillies 5, Pirates 4
Kevin Gross pitched 7 2-3 innings for his fifth victory in his last six decisions as Philadelphia defeated slumping Pittsburgh at Three Rivers Stadium.

Steve Jeltz tripled home a run in the Phillies' three-run second inning and doubled in another run in the sixth as the Philadelphia beat Pittsburgh for only the third time in their last 13 games. The Pirates lost for the eighth time in 12 games.

Cubs 4, Cardinals 3
Greg Maddux became the major league's first 11-game winner as Chicago defeated St. Louis and swept the three-game series at Busch Stadium.

The 22-year-old Maddux, 11-3, allowed eight hits, struck out eight and walked two to win his fifth straight. He also singled and scored twice.

Padres 5, Dodgers 2
Ed Whitson won his third straight as San Diego defeated Los Angeles for a sweep of the three-game series at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Whitson, 6-5, allowed six hits in seven innings and Mark Davis pitched the final two innings for his ninth save. It was the Padres' first sweep of the Dodgers at home since April 14-16, 1986.

Reds 10, Giants 6
Danny Jackson drove in three runs and pitched seven strong innings to lead Cincinnati past San Francisco at Candlestick Park.

Jackson, 6-3, limited the Giants to one hit until the sixth inning, retiring 15 straight batters following a first-inning single by Chris Speier. Tim Lincecum pitched the final two innings for the Reds, yielding a three-run homer to Rusty Tillman with two outs in the ninth.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may feel that you are being crowded. Wait until you have all the facts to make a decision. Timing is critical in getting a loan. Ask an old friend to be a co-signer.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The greater your flexibility, the greater your chances for success. Hop a plane if it will help business. Your affectionate ways build the confidence of your partner and children. Listen, then act.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pa-petwork continues to mount. It is time to get better organized. Retire old files. Computer science could help you solve a problem. Pursue your relationship goals. Return phone calls promptly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Choose a career path that will give you many options. Make year-end travel plans now. To maintain solid business connections, resist a workplace romance. Family ties take on new importance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not jump to conclusions if you hear rumors about a business or customer. You need to delegate routine responsibilities so you can pursue new ideas. Handle important financial matters without delay.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A lost letter could cause frustration. Be alert and make necessary adjustments. An out-of-town visitor disrupts plans. Be gracious. You learn something. Take the lead in romance. Discuss your intentions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A conflict of interest is indicated. Staying on schedule will be difficult. Seek your co-workers' cooperation in order to meet a deadline. A diet and exercise program boosts your self-confidence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A sudden change in fortune catches you by surprise. Do not rush headlong into risky financial ventures. Someone makes romantic overtures. You may not be ready for a commitment. Be kind but firm.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not place too much faith in promises made at a social event. Old problems connected with jointly held funds crop up again. Your future security is involved. Seek advice from financial experts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Not a good day to launch new ventures. Do everything possible to improve your relationship with important people behind the scenes. Getting more rest and relaxation will help you make wiser decisions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use your intuitive powers. You know exactly how far you can go with higher-ups. Small-scale financial gains are likely. A budget revision will help avert a money crisis. Talk with partner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not take on more than you absolutely must. Delegate routine responsibilities wherever practicable. An excellent day for discussing vacation plans with family. An exotic setting holds great appeal.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠9532 ♥7653 ♦AQ ♣AJ4
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ 2 NT* 3 ♥ ?
* unusual
What action do you take?
A.—You have a magic hand! Partner's unusual no trump overall has promised at least 10 cards in the minor suits, so anything short of five clubs would be an underbid. It's not a question of whether you can make game, but whether you could be missing a slam!

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ53 ♥AJ62 ♦83 ♣953
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ 2 NT* 3 ♥ ?
* unusual
What action do you take?
A.—You have the same high cards and distribution as in the previous example, but this time your high cards are in the majors, where they are of minimal help to partner. Pass. Why should you go down when the opponents almost surely will?

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A6 ♥KJ109542 ♦A105 ♣4
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
? What do you bid now?
A.—Because of your seventh heart, you have considerable extra trick-taking power even if you do not have much more than a minimum in the way of high cards. You can show this extra strength and virtually set the trump suit by jumping to

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J85 ♥Q4 ♦AQ5 ♣AQ972
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ 2 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—To overcall at the two-level vulnerable, partner must have a good suit and about the values for an opening bid. Since a doubleton queen in these circumstances is excellent support, don't make partner do your bidding for you—jump to four hearts.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K873 ♥KJ1065 ♦K6 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—This is a close decision between two no trump and pass. Since partner probably has a six-card suit, which rates to give you a source of tricks, and he could easily have extra values which he could not show, we lean toward the slightly aggressive two no trump.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ10952 ♥83 ♦Q105 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ 1 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's one no trump overcall is at least the equivalent of a one no trump opener, i.e., 16-19 points. So make the same bid you would have made had partner opened one no trump. Jump to four spades.

Tomlin says she and Midler have 'similar heart' despite differences

NEW YORK (AP) — Lily Tomlin, whose humor is as sly as Bette Midler's is raucous, says she and Midler, her co-star in the newly released comedy "Big Business," have a "similar heart" despite their differences.

The two comedians pointed out their contrasting acting styles in this week's People magazine. "I immerse myself totally in the character and prepare everything before hand," said Tomlin, 47.

"I don't like to think too much," said the 42-year-old Midler.

In "Big Business," the actresses play two sets of identical twins who were mixed up at birth by a shortsighted nurse.

Tomlin says of her opposite number, "Obviously she's a fantastic performer. But there's a lot more to Bette than the Divine Miss M. There's this tenderness and frailty and a wonderful kind of dearness that's truly touching."

She adds, "There is something about us that has a similar center, a similar heart. We're both kind of outrageous but with a down-to-earth core. I like Bette tremendously because she's out there, bawdy, then sweet and real."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tiffany, the 16-year-old pop star who sued for freedom from her mother, believes she and her mother will overcome their differences.

In an interview conducted before she agreed to withdraw her petition to be legally recognized as an adult, Tiffany vowed she wouldn't go home again, but not because she doesn't like her mother.

"I love my mom and my mom loves me," she said. "We'll overcome this. Hopefully I'll be emancipated. I still want to be emancipated and have not at all changed my mind. But I don't think my mom at all is saying, 'If you get emancipated I'll never talk to you again.' That's just not my mom."

Terms of Tuesday's settlement between Tiffany and her mother, Janie Williams, were not disclosed. "This whole court thing in some people's eyes has been made out to be such a bad thing, but it's really reality," said Tiffany, who filed emancipation papers for legal status as an adult in March after her mother refused to approve a management contract between the singer and George Tobin, her manager.

Tiffany has scored on the pop charts with remakes of '60s hits such as "I Saw Her Standing There" and "I Think We're Alone Now."

FORT PAYNE, Ala. (AP) — The country-music band Alabama drew 35,000 people to its seventh annual charity concert, and lead singer Randy Owen says past problems won't stand in the way of future June Jams.

Saturday's crowd was far below the 61,000 who attended in 1986, when Alabama was at the peak of its popularity. But last year's June Jam was hit with heavy rain and paid attendance fell to 20,000, leaving no money for charity.

The first five June Jams raised $1.5 million. Because of last year's problems, Owen and other band members fought rumors that this year's concert would not occur. Once plans became final, band members had to dispel rumors that this would be the last.

Entertainers joining Alabama for the daylong concert included the Charlie Daniels Band, Exile, K.T. Oslin, Carl Perkins, the Bellamy Brothers, Sweethearts of the Rodeo, Dan Seals, Gary Morris and Ricky Van Shelton.

Owen says he's making plans to mark the state's homecoming celebration, Alabama Reunion, at June Jam VIII. Festivities will include having the Alabama Symphony Orchestra join the band on stage to perform its hit "My Home's in Alabama."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer Dionne Warwick brought together her show business friends in a benefit concert that capped a weekend of events organizers expect to raise $1 million for AIDS education.

The four-hour, $100-a-seat concert at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts Sunday night reunited Ms. Warwick, Elton John, Stevie Wonder and Gladys Knight for a live rendition of their athenic hit song, "That's What Friends Are For" — a plea for help in the fight against the deadly virus.

Frank Sinatra was to have joined the stars on stage, but son Frank Sinatra Jr. told the audience the singer had "taken ill" and would not perform. Ms. Warwick, who organized weekend events that included a special dinner and AIDS education workshops, cried as she made an plea for more funds to educate the public about AIDS.

"We've got a big fight on our hands," she told the audience. "And we know that with the help of people like you, we're going to win that fight."

Elton John and Stevie Wonder made the longest trip for the benefit, arriving Sunday after performing Saturday at the FreedomFest anti-apartheid concert in London.

"That is what friends are for," Wonder said of his cross-Atlantic journey to stand with Ms. Warwick. Betts said ticket sales for the concert, a sale of rights to the concert to cable television and other proceeds should bring the weekend's receipts to close to $1 million.

CANTERBURY, N.H. (AP) — Gertrude Soule, a Shaker leader whose storytelling helped outsiders understand her rapidly disappearing religious community, has died at age 83, leaving no more than 10 sect members in the United States.

Soule died in her sleep Saturday, Richard Kathmann, director of the Canterbury Shaker Village, said Sunday.

Her death leaves only two Shaker women in their 90s in New Hampshire, and up to eight in Maine. Soule was born in Topsham, Maine. At age 11, she and her sister were placed with the Shaker community at Sabbathday Lake, Maine, after the death of their mother.

She chose to remain with the community when she turned 21 and signed the Shaker vow of celibacy. In an interview this year, she said the vow was a challenge at times.

"Of course, when you're young you have high thoughts," she said. "But you're living in a community where a lot of sisters and brothers are living a celibate life and you don't think anything about it." Shakers believe God has a mission for everyone, she said.

"Whoever's mission it is to marry and bring new life into the world, that's their mission," she said. "Our mission is to live as near as we can to Christ's teachings."

In the early 1950s, Soule became an elderess, or spiritual leader, of the Sabbathday Lake Society. In 1957, she was appointed to the Lead Ministry of the United Society of Believers.

Is OPEC headed for price war?

Experts predict significant decline in oil prices

By YOUSSEF M. IBRAHIM
New York Times News Service

VIENNA, Austria — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is sliding toward a new price war during the next few months, as its 13 members find themselves locked into irreconcilable differences.

Even if OPEC members agree to a meeting that started here Saturday, most experts predict that oil prices are headed for a significant decline beginning in the late summer, with cheaper energy prices for consumers and economic problems for the producing nations.

In a lukewarm attempt to search for a compromise putting the best face on what several OPEC officials describe as a desperate situation, the oil ministers agreed to suspend their meeting on Sunday for 48 hours so that they can consult privately in the search for solutions to an array of conflicts.

These range from the basic questions of the price of oil and each country's production quota to technical matters like the definitions of crude oil and condensates, an oil derivative that some OPEC members are counting as a form of natural gas to exclude it from their production quotas.

But the lack of enthusiasm is palpable, and political differences, primarily involving the Persian Gulf war between Iraq and Iran, are so deep that a number of experts contend that the safest solution for the oil organization is to leave its current oil production and pricing policies intact, with all their inequities and contradictions.

"The current OPEC conference may well end up with a simple quota rollover for the second half of this year," said the OPEC Listener, a new publication put out by a group of energy writers who formerly worked for the Petroleum Intelligence Weekly of New York.

In a warning echoed by many oil industry analysts, the publication said OPEC production is already out of control at a level of 18.5 million barrels a day. "Barring some miracle of political reconciliation, leakage over the next six months could increase by 1 million barrels a day," the publication said.

The political miracle refers to an unlikely end of the eight-year-old war between Iraq and Iran that has dogged OPEC and has become the single largest problem facing the organization.

In addition, several OPEC officials believe that Saudi Arabia has reached the limit of its patience with cheating and is prepared to match every production increase by raising its already large production of 4.3 million barrels a day, sometime this summer.

In a veiled warning, King Fahd of Saudi Arabia who has taken a personal interest in oil policy since he fired Ahmed Zaki Yamani as oil minister in 1986, reiterated recently that all OPEC members should strictly adhere to production quotas.

Businesses need capital, planning to grow

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The dual Achilles' heels that often trip up new or expanding businesses are thorough planning and adequate capital.

A lack of either makes the other nearly impossible to realize, according to a group of small business funding experts.

Without a complete, well thought-out business plan, the chances of a lender — conventional or non-conventional — risking money on an enterprise are nil. And, without enough capital to back them up, the best laid business plans in town can easily come apart at the seams.

Although there are many areas which should be explored in finding finances for a business venture, the best place to start is with a conventional banker.

"It would be hard to overstate the importance of having a good, strong working relationship with a banker who understands your business needs," explained Jerry Jones, PhD., dean of business studies at Midland College.

A commercial lender is not only a source of conventional loan funds, but can serve as a gateway to Small Business Administration loans, revolving loan fund monies and other fiscal opportunities.

"Banks are making greater demands on their loan officers to make visits to borrowers' businesses in es-

for First City National Bank of Midland. SBA loans and other special project money offer advantages for both the banker and the borrower.

The banker is exposing himself to less risk because of SBA and other guarantees and the borrower typically can utilize longer payment schedules and can borrow with lower equity requirements.

"The biggest drawback to borrowing conventional funds, particularly for a new business start-up, is that the equity requirements are so high, the business must almost be able to afford not having the loan," said Jeff Longbotham, vice president of business and commercial lending for First City.

Stringent lending guidelines, made even tighter by tough times in the banking industry, place added importance on incentives such as the SBA's Section 7(a), which pushes bank funds into the local community, with assurances from the federal government that the loans will be repaid.

Most local banks will help potential SBA borrowers package their loan application, which must include current and historic financial statements (for an existing business) or a documented business plan, pro-forma balance sheet and cash flow projections for the first year (for a new business).

Laid back, native West Texan Pam Porter has many of the "good ol' boy" ways that has enabled her to help launch a major communications system in the Permian Basin.

Pam Porter: Growing an industry

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

When Southwest Bell Mobile Systems sought to launch its cellular telephone system in the Permian Basin, it might have looked to an available pool of seasoned oil executives, familiar both with the territory and the communications needs of the oil industry.

Instead it chose an attractive, former fashion model just beginning to make her mark as an executive.

If looks were a criteria for hiring, it would be easy to see how the attractive Texas Tech graduate got her job. But it was a combination of factors that led Southwest Bell Mobile Systems to recruit her from the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission where she had served as director of public relations and administrative services.

"I encounter it less frequently than I used to, because so many women have positioned themselves in responsible positions through hard work. But, I have been fighting the looks thing for a long time," says Porter who modeled part time at the Dallas Apparel Mart for 14 years and still models furs on an occasional basis for a Houston firm. "People look at me and ask how I can look like that and still have brains."

But it was brains, skill and expertise that landed her the job as director of operations for Southwest Bell Mobile Systems in the Permian Basin.

"I think they recruited me because I have energy, know and love West Texas, and have proven skills as a professional planner and manager," said Porter.

dence it has paid off for the cellular telephone system which now calls Midland-Odessa its "little pocket of excellence."

Co-workers vouch for her energy: "She has two speeds — off and full speed." The sales number vouch for her management expertise: As the

Thrift suing ex-officers for fraud

DALLAS (AP) — A $630 million lawsuit filed by Sunbelt Savings Association of Texas claims the thrift was victimized by fraud and negligence by its former officers.

The lawsuit, filed in state district court in Dallas, names former Chairman Edwin McBirney III, 13 other officers and accounting firm Grant Thornton.

The lawsuit paints a picture of a free-spending atmosphere at Sunbelt, reflecting the fast-lane lifestyle and reckless management practices that regulators say helped lead to a crisis in the state's thrift industry.

McBirney is among the 400 industry officials whose records were seized as part of the massive federal probe of Texas financial institutions.

The lawsuit filed by Sunbelt claims that McBirney orchestrated the management practices that led to the thrift's problems, leaving it with a negative net worth of more than $1.6 billion.

The suit alleges that McBirney and other defendants accepted kickbacks, made reckless loans, distorted the books and took some of Sunbelt's best deals for themselves while spending lavishly for private aircraft, entertainment and gifts.

McBirney, who left Sunbelt in 1986, denied the allegations Friday. He said the thrift's problems were caused, in part, because of mismanagement by federal regulators and the new management team headed by Tom Wageman.

"During the past two years, the current management, acting under direct supervision of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., has been responsible for losses totaling $1.7 billion," McBirney said in a prepared statement.

"The suit obviously is an effort by current management to cover up their own mismanagement by blaming (Sunbelt's problems) on former officers, directors and professionals."

The lawsuit, however, claims that McBirney and other defendants spent $4.89 million to operate seven aircraft over a four-year period, overstated Sunbelt's income and paid $12.72 million in dividends to stockholders.

Halloween and Christmas parties in 1984 and 1985 cost Sunbelt $1.3 million.

The suit also names accounting firm Grant Thornton as defendant, claiming that it failed to detect accounting irregularities or the inadequacy of internal controls.

Hugh Adams, a managing partner at the accounting firm, denied those charges.

"We just happened to be dragged in," he said, adding that there is "no basis" for the lawsuit.

Sellers dominate anxious market

From Staff and Wire Reports

Anxiety about the upcoming OPEC meeting coupled with technical market factors have sent energy futures prices skidding. In morning trading, prices continued lower, dropping 18 cents to $16.55 — down almost 80 cents since last Wednesday.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange Friday, the July contract for West Texas Intermediate fell 34 cents per barrel to close at $16.73. On Thursday, the key contract fell 26 cents.

Among refined products traded on the exchange Friday, contracts for July delivery of wholesale unleaded gasoline settled 0.48 cent lower at 49.22 cents a gallon, and wholesale heating oil closed at 44.25 cents a gallon, down 0.65 cent.

"Sellers completely dominated the market," said Madison Galbraith, senior energy specialist with Merrill Lynch Energy Futures.

"You can't take a position against the (OPEC) meeting unless you are really gutsy," Galbraith said.

Dollar higher ahead of trade figures

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against most major currencies in early European trading today, and dealers said activity would remain sluggish until Tuesday's release of the latest U.S. trade figures.

Gold prices fell in Europe from Friday's closing bids but were up slightly from the late bid price in New York. Gold plunged almost $7 an ounce in New York on Friday to $449 after European markets closed, largely because of falling oil prices.

Foreign exchange dealers in Frankfurt said the dollar received support from a remark by U.S. Federal Reserve Board Vice Chairman Manuel Johnson on Saturday. He said there is some room for the currency to rise.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to 125.07 yen from 124.85 yen late Friday. Later, in London, it was quoted slightly higher at 125.12 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Friday's rates: —1.7221 West German marks, up from 1.7180

—1.4425 Swiss francs, up from 1.4355

—1.9133 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9280

—1.22075 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2191

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.8250 to buy one pound, up from $1.8175.

Bullion dealers said trading was also quiet pending Tuesday's release of U.S. trade figures.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $451.10 a troy ounce and at mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $450.50, both down from late Friday's bid of $456.20.

In Zurich, the bid price was $450.50, down from $458.00 late Friday. Hong Kong financial markets were closed today to celebrate the official birthday of Queen Elizabeth II.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.98 a troy ounce, down from 7.17 late Friday.

Dow ends week 30 points higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground Friday, but the Dow Jones industrial average came up short in its bid to reach a new 1988 closing high.

Dow Jones' average of 30 blue chips rose 8.36 to 2,101.71, finishing the week with a net gain of 30.41 points.

The average failed, however, to maintain a mid-session gain of more than 21 points that carried it past the post-crash closing peak of 2,110.06 it reached on April 12.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 875 up, 585 down and 514 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 155.71 million shares, down from 235.16 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 181.58 million shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $11.25 billion, or 0.42 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .53 to 152.89.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 1.15 to 313.62, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 1.06 at 271.26.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market added 1.65 to 386.25. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 309.33, up 8.45.

Unleaded gas price flat in $1 range

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The average price of gasoline was virtually unchanged from three weeks ago in a nationwide survey, an oil industry analyst says.

The Lundberg Survey of 12,000 gas stations determined the average price per gallon was 100.23 cents as of June 10, just three hundredths of a penny less than the May 20 average of 100.26 cents, Tribby Lundberg said Sunday.

Icahn forms acquisition holding company

NEW YORK (AP) — Takeover strategist Carl C. Icahn said he was forming a new holding company to act as his sole vehicle for acquisitions, including a possible hostile takeover bid for Texaco Inc.

Icahn Texaco's biggest shareholder, said Friday the holding company intended to raise up to $3.25 billion through an offering of $500 million to $750 million in common stock and about $2.5 billion in debt securities.

The Icahn group of companies also will contribute equity to the holding company, including its interests in Texaco and Trans World Airlines Inc.

Domino's accused of 'hairy' discrimination

DETROIT (AP) — Domino's Pizza Inc.'s policy of requiring male employees to keep their hair cut above the collar is discriminatory because women are permitted to have long hair, a lawsuit filed against the pizza chain contends.

The Wayne County Circuit Court lawsuit was filed last week by Michael Pitt, an attorney appointed by the American Civil Liberties Union to represent Scott Bedker, 17, of St. Clair Shores. Bedker was told in January that he must cut his shoulder-length hair or lose his job.

Mexico's economic pact cuts inflation

By LARRY ROHTER
New York Times News Service

MEXICO CITY — Last December inflation in Mexico reached a then record monthly high of 14.8 percent, capping a year that saw the consumer price index rise 160 percent, the largest amount in Mexican history. Last month, however, inflation dipped to less than 2 percent, the lowest monthly figure in nearly seven years.

This dramatic turnaround is the most visible sign that Mexico's "Economic Solidarity Pact" is beginning to yield some of the fruits that President Miguel de la Madrid promised when the program went into effect six months ago.

A mixed package of wage, price and foreign-exchange controls, the agreement is intended to restore the Mexican economy to health without incurring the damage that Argentina and Brazil suffered in recent years when they adopted more drastic plans to combat similar economic problems.

The sharp decline in the Mexican inflation rate credited to the pact, signed by business, labor, farmers and the government on Dec. 15, has brought other benefits with it.

Interest rates, which at the start of the year ran as high as 183 percent, have fallen to 36 percent, and the panic psychology of late 1987 that was contributing to a flight of capital has been arrested, at least temporarily.

"This is a success for which all Mexicans can congratulate themselves," de la Madrid said in a speech last month.

"I believed when I signed the pact last December that the results were going to be much slower and that we would not reach an inflation figure of 2 percent a month until the end of the year."

Business leaders, bankers and economists, however, are less sanguine than their governmental partners about the behavior and well-being of the Mexican economy.

While conceding that the initial results of the pact have been encouraging, they argue that much depends on the Mexican government's willingness and ability to follow through on the commitments it has made.

"It's still too early to tell about the ultimate success of the pact," said Rogelio Ramirez de la O, a leading economic consultant here. "The numbers are ambiguous. Inflation has come down, but on the fiscal side the signs are not at all clear."

The pact has required most Mexicans to tighten belts already constricted by six years of austerity. The economy is expected to contract by 2 percent or more this year, and many workers have seen their wages, which declined 50 percent in real terms between 1980 and 1987, shrink even further this year.

"This pact is not about growth or development," one government official said in an interview this month, dismissing criticism of the program. "The only aim of this pact is to obliterate inflation."

Although the goal of the pact is widely supported, the measures used to achieve it have changed. Initially the agreement called for a temporary freeze of wages, prices and the currency rate. The freeze was supposed to be replaced by an indexation program on March 1.

On Feb. 28, however, the government announced that the freeze would continue another month, and in late March it extended the arrangement for two more months. Despite opposition from some business groups, the freeze was renewed again on May 22 and is now scheduled to continue in effect at least to Aug. 31.

Coincidentally or not, Mexico will hold presidential elections on July 6. Many Mexicans expect that once the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party has won another six years in office, the pact will be substantially revised.

Carlos Salinas de Gortari, the former minister of budget and Planning who is the party's nominee, indicated as much in a speech on June 6. He said that when he takes office in December he plans to use "new instrumentation" to bring about a resurgence of growth while simultaneously forcing inflation down to a level of less than 10 percent a year.

Precisely how the government plans to proceed remains unclear. Though inflation is expected to drop sharply this year, the domestic economy is in recession and is unlikely to show many signs of vitality.

The domestic picture is complicated by the fact that not all products have been subjected to price controls. As a consequence, price increases in the uncontrolled sector have been creating inflationary pressures that private sector economists believe the government is going to have to address well before Salinas takes office.

"It's going to be touch and go come August or September," said one foreign official who specializes in economic affairs.

Privately, government officials say they are looking to the export sector, the most dynamic part of the Mexican economy in recent years, to be the motor that pulls Mexico back into economic growth.

The king's current oil minister, Hisham Nazer, who by all accounts takes a hardline approach on OPEC cheating, has delivered irrevocable, but business-like, warnings to his OPEC colleagues that Saudi requests should not be ignored, various OPEC officials said. Unlike Yamani, who had little authority behind his negotiating stands, Nazer has the full confidence of King Fahd, several senior Saudi officials said.

OPEC officials also said Saudi Arabia is not prepared to "reduce a single litre of its oil production," in the words of one Arab OPEC member, to prop up oil prices. Iran, Libya, Venezuela and a number of other producers are clamoring for such a cut in output, which is also opposed by Kuwait and other Arab producers in the Persian Gulf.

Some conflicts emanate from the war. Iraq, with the support of the Saudis and Kuwaitis, is demanding parity with Iran's oil production quota of 2.4 million barrels a day, a position rejected by Iran which insists Iraq's quota should only be 1.5 million barrels a day, based on a historical ratio of production between the two countries.

The issue is moot since Iraq is actually producing 2.7 million barrels a day, excluding itself from the OPEC quota system altogether. Iraq is also obtaining 300,000 barrels a day from Saudi Arabia and Kuwait as a form of financial support for its war against Iran.

first half of 1988 winds down the company has already exceeded its sales goals for the year by 100.

"We're blowin' the doors off," says Porter in her best good ol' boy Texanese. She says an ability to sound and act like one of the boys, even though she doesn't look like one is a definite asset. For her management skills she credits "heavyweight" mentors at PBRPC. "I had some very good tutoring from some of the top elected officials in West Texas," she explains.

Now responsible for a staff of only eight, she was once responsible for a staff of 100 when PBRPC was at its peak during the boom. Before joining the 17-county organization she had served brief stints in the public relations department of several oil companies.

Porter says she loves the challenge of total control. "I love setting goals and quotas and being responsible for seeing them met or exceeded. I also love the responsibility for setting budgets and learning to live with them."

If overcoming business hurdles appeals to her, perhaps it comes natural. The high hurdles, along with basketball and the mile relay, were her specialties at Texas Tech, where she received a degree in management in 1977.

Born and raised in Lubbock, her father was an oil and gas accountant and her mother a school teacher.

Where to from here? Says Porter: "In five to eight years I would like to be a vice president in a larger market. It may mean having to leave West Texas, but I would pay the price."

NEEDS

An important community resource for both bankers and borrowers at this point in the process is the Economic Development Center at Midland College, several local bankers agree.

Under the direction of Dr. Jones, the center's counselors will assist business people in completing a computerized business planning software program, which produces a "first-rate, comprehensive business plan," according to several local bankers.

"Probably the most important aspect of the planning software and the MC program is that it allows entrepreneurs to focus on the answers, not figuring out what questions they need to be asking themselves," said Art Donnelly, chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Venture Capital Committee.

"We will not spoon-feed our clients," Jones said of the Small Business Institute programs. Working through the software questions — everything from sales and cost projections of goods and competitive operational strengths and weaknesses and considering compensation — gives business people a better sense of what they are up against, Jones said.

And, "if an applicant does not have the commitment to complete a comprehensive business plan, it might mean they would be better off not going into business for themselves," Longbotham added.

With answers in hand, a borrower and his banker are ready to consider the various loan sources which could comprise an attractive financing package.

Among the options available are: ■ SBA Section 7(a) — The most prevalent form of SBA financing, 7(a) loans have minimal restrictions on the use of loan proceeds, and a typical 30 percent equity contribution for start-up companies can be roughly half of what is required for conventional bank financing.

With its interest rate capped at 24 percent above the prime rate and 90 percent guarantees available on the first $155,000, the 7(a) loan program can be used to finance virtually anything but refinancing existing bank debt.

In addition to lower risk from government guarantees, banks also like 7(a) loans because they can offer improved liquidity. If the bank needs to, it can "capitalize on the liquidity opportunities and maximize yield on the unguaranteed portion of the SBA by selling the guaranteed portion of the loan," explained Michael Davis, vice president of United Bank.

■ SBA Section 504 funds — Administered by the Permian Basin Regional Development Corp., a non-profit corporation operated by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, a Section 504 loan can only be used to purchase fixed assets, those with an average life of 15 years. These loan funds cannot be used to finance more than 40 percent of a project's cost and must fall within a range of $50,000 to $500,000.

Although the PBRDC has yet to make its first 504 loan, local economic development authorities say the program has been very successful in the Lubbock and Kilgore areas.

An additional requirement of 504 funding is job creation — one job per $15,000, is the target level. "Unlike many federal agencies, however, SBA has no rigid (job creation) threshold a project must clear before being considered eligible."

"As a result, projects which have high economic security impact, but low direct job impact — for example, renovating a key structure in a commercial strip area — can be eligible even though the direct job impact is somewhat limited," according to SBA officials.

■ Midland Economic Development Co. — This revolving loan fund offers less flexibility in terms of job creation, but can exercise greater discretion in other areas, according to MEDCO president Stovall.

Most of the guidelines used by the 11-members who administer MEDCO funds, which originate with the federal Department of Housing & Urban Development, are considered "prudent lending practices," Stovall said. "But we have the flexibility when we need be."

"Because each loan is not subjected to bank examiners' hindsight, we are able to use that flexibility when we feel it is warranted," he added.

One area which gives many new business borrowers trouble is adequate, up-front equity investment. MEDCO can loosen its guidelines in what constitutes equity — in terms of real estate, goodwill, etc. — to help otherwise qualified applicants.

In addition to a one job per $20,000 of loan funds requirement, MEDCO also requires that loan funds be invested within the Community Development Block Grant area, which includes most of the east and south sides of Midland, including downtown, plus much of the commercial and industrial area along U.S. Hwy. 80.

Another program which often supports new and expanding businesses can help with meeting the job creation criteria. The job training and placement assistance (JTFA) administered by the Permian Basin Private Industry Council can pay up to one-half of the first year's salary for qualified low-income employees.

■ Venture capital — The Midland Chamber of Commerce offers matching services for entrepreneurs looking for outside capital and who are willing to turn over some control of the company to their new "partner" in return.

The chamber's Venture Capital Committee is working to computerize its database on more than 70 Texas venture capitalists and several hundred other from across the country and around the world, according to Donnelly.

■ UDAG monies — Urban Development Action Grants are federal funds administered through the city, typically for large scale projects designed to "help revitalize a city's economic base."

UDAG funds, which are generally at least $100,000, usually cover 15 to 25 percent of a project's cost.

For example, UDAG funds were used to develop and renovate many of the hotels and other facilities along the Riverwalk in San Antonio, according to Nancy Vickrey, economic development coordinator for the City of Midland.

■ Other programs, for more specialized needs, are also available through the SBA and the Texas Department of Commerce.

Small business energy loans, contract and seasonal lines of credit, small general contractor loans, export revolving lines of credit, qualified employees trust loans, handicapped assistance loans, and industrial revenue bonds may be appropriate options for some businesses and their bankers.

One common misconception about many of the financial assistance programs is that they are targeted strictly at minority business development. "All of these programs are enabling to but not limited to minority firms," Vickrey explained.

All of the programs are administered non-discriminatorily to enable minority-owned and other disadvantaged businesses to participate in the funding, but none require minority ownership.

Outside Midland, other state programs can prove useful to businesses.

The Texas Capital Fund CDBG program is available in cities with less than 50,000 population for the same type projects as MEDCO.

In towns with fewer than 20,000 resident and less-than-average manufacturing growth, Rural Industrial Development Loan funds are available to fund fixed asset purchases up to 40 percent of a project's total value.

The Farmers' Home Administration's Business & Industry Loan Program is available to fund a variety of commercial projects in communities with less than 50,000 population. The program is similar to the SBA's 7(a) program which excludes farm-related business loans.

Icahn discussed Texaco buyout with Canadians

NEW YORK (AP) — Takeover strategist Carl C. Icahn says he discussed a joint acquisition of Texaco Inc. with two Canadian oil concerns and that Citibank verbally agreed to finance such a deal.

The disclosures were contained in a weekend deposition of Texaco's largest shareholder conducted by attorneys for the oil giant, reported today by the Wall Street Journal.

The deposition was part of escalating legal maneuvers between Icahn and Texaco over his attempt to buy the company for $60 a share, which values it at $14.6 billion.

Icahn and Texaco have been engaged in an acrimonious takeover dispute since last month, the latest episode in the troubled oil giant's attempt to normalize following its prolonged bankruptcy-court ordeal.

The investor, who owns 14.8 percent of Texaco stock, is conducting a proxy fight for five seats on the company's board in an effort to pressure management into letting shareholders vote on his takeover offer. Results of the proxy contest will be disclosed at the company's annual meeting this Friday.

Icahn disclosed to Texaco lawyers that in the last two weeks he held separate discussions toward a possible takeover partnership with Gulf Canada Ltd. and Husky Oil Ltd. Icahn also said a Citibank representative assured him that financing a Texaco takeover was "eminently doable."

His disclosures could substantiate Texaco's claim that Icahn has improperly failed to disclose the extent of his takeover talks with other parties. Icahn has denied any wrongdoing.

Other court documents unsealed at the request of the New York Times indicate Icahn once tried to arrange the purchase of a large stake in Texaco held by the investment firm Kohlberg, Kravis, Roberts & Co. to Canadian investor Marc Belzberg, but the deal never happened because of a price disagreement.

Texaco attorneys say those documents suggest Icahn may have improperly attempted to find allies for coordinated purchases of Texaco stock as part of a broader plan to take over the company. Icahn has denied such charges in the past.

On Friday, Icahn said he was forming a new holding company to act as his sole vehicle for acquisitions, including a bid for Texaco. He said the holding company intended to raise up to $3.25 billion through an offering of stock and debt securities.

The Icahn group of companies also will contribute equity to the holding company, including its 36.1 million shares of Texaco and its interests in Trans World Airlines Inc. and ACF, a leasing company.

Icahn began acquiring Texaco stock last year when the company was mired in bankruptcy-court proceedings and its stock was trading $20 lower than the current price of about $51 a share.

Texaco sought federal bankruptcy protection in April 1987 when it faced a record $10.53 billion judgment to Pennzoil Co. awarded by a Texas jury that found Texaco improperly interfered with Pennzoil's attempt to buy Getty Oil Co. Texaco settled with Pennzoil two months ago by paying it $3 billion and has proposed a post-bankruptcy recovery involving the sale of $5 billion in assets.

U.S. wine market may be in another state of flux

By SHARON BENOIT
Copley News Service

The volatile wine market is in another state of flux. Many observers point the finger, this time, at fickle consumers and advertising backlash, not wine marketers.

For a decade, the wine market enjoyed popularity and steady sales. White wine replaced the martini at lunch, while sweet pop wines, such as white zinfandel, enjoyed many days in the sun. Wine marketers, especially in California, spent billions to deliver messages of their products to consumers via pro-drinking newspaper and magazine ads and outdoor billboards.

Now there's a shift toward anti-drinking ad campaigns on television and in print, which has led many observers to believe another major shakeout in the wine industry is on the verge of making an impact.

In recent years, fruit-flavored seitzer water or fancy exported carbonated waters have replaced white wine at lunch. California coolers surfaced, wiped up the market and split consumer preference.

Now, the picture has changed, again. California generic wine sales have shifted into a depressed mode, and California varietal sales have skyrocketed. Internationally, wine consumption is down, and U.S. wine consumption is on a steady rise. And perhaps the most interesting trend of all is the American consumer's desire for red instead of white wines.

It's an ever-changing, never-the-twin-shall-meet predicament, according to several wine industry observers.

Harvey Steiman, editor of Wine Spectator, a national consumer wine magazine, says the "U.S. wine consumption increase goes against the international trend, which shows consumers drinking less wine, but better wines."

Steiman sees American wines, particularly those harvested in California, continuing to gain significantly in the world market. The most notable shift, says Steiman, is from white to red wines.

"White zinfandel has been very popular for several years, but the insipid trend is to go back to red. You've got to realize most of the world drinks red wine. Americans made white wine popular when they began ordering it as a substitute for cocktails. Now the white wine drinkers are ordering Perrier or other non-alcoholic fare."

Equally interesting is an observation by Gaumberg-Fredrickson partner Eileen Fredrickson, a national wine industry consultant, who sees wine magic happening to the very traditional varietal categories, such as cabernet sauvignon and chardonnay.

"What's really selling now are quality varietals with a good price point," she asserts. "It's an explosive trend."

California also is currently outperforming the rest of the wine markets, according to Fredrickson and Frank Walters, vice president/research of Impact, a wine industry newsletter.

Still, the wine world does not stop on the West Coast. Approximately 70 percent of all wine consumed in the United States is produced in California. In Oregon and Washington, wine production is up; New York is down in the table wine category, and sparkling wine production in the Eastern state is up.

"New York is doing fabulously," reports Fredrickson. "The state's 'Class by the Glass' promotional program has turned its wine industry around in the last few years. There are a flurry of new wineries, especially on Long Island. There also have been many new plantings of the classic varietals grapes."

Fredrickson points out, "The California wine industry is infinitely bigger than all the wineries in the rest of the United States put together. This state is not threatened at all by the 40 other states now producing wine, including Texas, New Mexico, Virginia, Mississippi and Georgia. These wineries are all very small."

Overall, wine sales are generally up from five years ago. The American and California categories have gone up at a greater rate.

On May 15, Impact broke an exclusive story about the rise in popularity of varietal wines. Walters says the total sales of California varietals in 1987 rose nearly 20 percent to 29 mil-

Executives fill leisure time with off-the-wall activities

By MILDRED HAMILTON

Helping excavate a Crusader castle on Cyprus, flying search dogs to a missing person hunt in California's Trinity Alps wilderness, growing exotic vegetables in a back yard, playing trumpet in a jazz band, pounding the puck with other 65-year-old ice hockey buffs — these are some of the ways executives leave their high-powered careers and attendant stresses back in the highrises.

Leisure is a many-splendored definition to male and female leaders, who demand maximum rewards from their precious and limited free time.

Fortune magazine took a look at how Americans invest $350 billion a year in leisure, and then a closer look at how 330 "achievers" spent their money and time in unwinding pursuits. The result is "On Your Own Time: The Fortune Guide to Executive Leisure," by Fortune writer Marilyn Wellemeyer, just published by Little-Brown ($24.95). She tracked tycoons and aspiring tycoons through canoeing in the Arctic to spotting rare birds in Papua New Guinea.

The Crusader castle digger was Frank J. Spingola, 58, office manager of the American Licorice Co. He picked up his shovel courtesy of Earthwatch, a nonprofit organization that recruits volunteers for field research with outstanding scholars of many disciplines.

SPINGOLA ALSO has happily given vacation time for the last 12 years to such Earthwatch projects as recovering artifacts from a Bronze Age village in Spain, going to Swaziland to study early man, retrieving mammoth fossils from a South Dakota dig, and exploring the lifestyle of cave dwellers in Texas. He has become pals with two other enthusiastic Earthwatchers, a retired banker turned Arizona rancher and a retired Pan Am pilot. Now they pick an annual Earthwatch project together.

"This year we may go to Switzerland, for a dinosaur dig near the town of Frick," Spingola said. "It is more comfortable than the desert."

Jan Ostrat, 43, can leave his building-products plant and minutes later be airborne on a Civil Air Patrol mercy mission. The businessman puts in 100 to 200 hours a year flying for CAP, the civilian auxiliary of the Air Force that aids in rescues.

The book cites two life-saving missions in which Ostrat participated. In 1983, he and his crew picked up a faint radio signal that led them to a missing plane crashed in a brush-filled canyon. They directed a Forest Service helicopter to the site, where the seriously hurt pilot and passenger were evacuated.

On a search flight in 1984, Ostrat and a CAP observer found two crash survivors in a mountain pass in the Yosemite area, at 10,000 feet in fresh snow. That search-and-rescue work earned him an award. "CAP gives you a chance to get away from the hubbub of business," Ostrat praised his hobby.

The fitness boom and the increased number of gourmet foods combined to swell the interest in gardening, which Fortune calls the most popular leisure activity in the United States. Thirty-three million households have vegetable gardens, but Jill Cole, 30, partner in a head-hunting firm, has an exotic vegetable garden.

COLE CULTIVATES and harvests such tasty novelties as Le

Marche purple Sicilian artichokes, white Italian and Asian eggplants, an old type of Italian tomato, and American tomatoes that bear green, walnut-sized fruit in protective husks. She is also raising a type of watermelon once nearly extinct, the large, sweet Moon and Stars, named for its yellow spots on dark green skin. And the salads she and husband mix often include the tangy blossoms of the nasturtium, calendula and violet.

James M. Benham, 51, founder and chairman of the Benham Capital Management Group, turns from managing billions in money-market funds to tooting his trumpet for relaxation. He plays with the Full Faith and Credit Big Band, a 19-piece band he underwrites. He has been fourth trumpet since the band was organized in 1975 by Dent Hand, Benham's general legal counsel, who plays fifth trumpet. Full Faith and Credit, which has recorded two records, will make a third album this month.

"I think of playing as a form of meditation," said Benham, who rehearses each Tuesday night. The financial leader also practices in the master bedroom every night before dinner.

The breathing processes it takes to get hot air to move through the trumpet, to make it 'speak,' get rid of all those business thoughts that are on your mind. That's when you can escape into the experience, and all the other problems of the day, the week, the year, they're out of your mind."

WHEN CARTOONIST Charles Schulz, 65, wants to get away from Peanuts, he puts on his ice skates and practices for the Snoopy Senior World Hockey Tourney. He did, that is, until he fell last September and tore up his left knee, requiring surgery.

"I hope to skate in this summer's tournament, but I'm waiting for the word from the doctor," he said recently.

Each July for 14 years Schulz has hosted the tournament, "the finest senior ice hockey in the world," at the Redwood Empire Ice Arena he had built in Santa Rosa, Calif., "the world's most beautiful ice arena."

Schulz, who first played as a Minnesota schoolboy, invites 800 amateurs, all over 40, to the tourney, organized by age divisions. Modified rules make the sport safer, and three evenings of social activities with Schulz and his wife, Jeannie, enliven the program.

"What makes ice hockey so good, obviously, is that when you are playing it, you aren't thinking of anything else. It is very exhilarating. Ice hockey is a wonderful team sport as well as a wonderful individual sport, and we have a good group of guys," said the right wing, who answers to "Sparky."

Wellemeyer also found an investment ace who races Porsches for fun, a nuclear medicine specialist who holds ballooning records, a real estate developer who is globally known for his game-fishing skill, and a film magnate who has scaled the highest peaks on seven continents. All the standard sports — sailing, skiing, trekking, swimming — have their devotees, while croquet, curling and exhibiting show dogs also are hailed as tonics for tension.

One executive described the personal rewards of his leisure activity, putting on water skiing shows.

"I've spent 20 years at my firm and hope to spend 20 more, but at no time do I expect I'll ever get a standing ovation from 10,000 people for it."

New dance craze gets 'backfield in motion'

By LENA WILLIAMS
New York Times News Service

Every few years, it seems, a dance erupts from America's black culture that gets young people everywhere moving, and older people shaking their heads. The 60s had the twist, the 70s the freak, the 80s break dancing. Now there's da butt.

Da butt started as a song by the Washington go-go band Experience Unlimited. As the lyrics say, da butt is a "physical thing, but not hard to do: you just shake, shake, shake it."

THE SHAKING IS DONE in a suggestive crouch, rear end extended, by people who are sometimes inspired to take off some of their clothes. Some parents and religious and civic leaders say the whole thing is a shame.

The dance began in clubs in Washington and Baltimore. National audiences got a look at it earlier this year in the film "School Daze," Spike Lee's barbed comedy about the pursuit of status at a black college. Since the film's release, the song has crossed over from rhythm and blues into the mainstream of pop music.

Billboard, a trade magazine for the music industry that compiles a chart of the top 30 crossover songs based on their play by radio stations, listed "Da Butt" as No. 11 this week.

White club-goers are now doing the dance. Radio stations have held da butt contests. An article in Newsweek magazine concluded, "Like it or not, da butt is all da rage."

IN MOVIE THEATERS, people watching "School Daze" sometimes get up and dance along to the homecoming scene, in which all the students do da butt. And at some discotheques dancers are reported to have stripped to their underwear while doing da butt, in imitation of the scene in the movie.

Such displays disturb some blacks. "Our black teens are having problems enough: teen-age pregnancies and broken homes," said Larry Morris, president of the Wilmington, Del., chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "Now along comes a song that seems to lack any responsibility or recognition of these problems."

He and others suggest that one has only to listen to the lyrics to understand:

When you get that notion, put your backfield in motion, Doin' da butt.

Aaaah, sexy, sexy, sexy. Ain't nothin' wrong if you wanna do da butt all night long.

Lyrics aside, the dance itself has the support of dance historians.

"The media impression is that these dances are just another fad, when they really are reconstitutions from a long line of African and religious dance," said Robert Thompson, a professor of Afro-American History at Yale University.

"Among black Americans dance is an aspect of black personal identity and cultural integrity," said Dr. Judith L. Hanna, the supervisor of graduate studies in the anthropology of dance at the University of Maryland and the author of "To Dance Is Human" (University of Chicago Press, 1987). "Proper Afro-American dance demands the demonstration of certain postures and gestures held in esteem in black culture."

FOR MOST PEOPLE who do da butt, of course, it's just another dance. "Harmless fun," said Roy Campbell, a 27-year-old Philadelphia journalist.

On a recent Saturday night at RSVP, a nightclub in Washington, when the disk jockey called for da butt, nearly all of the mostly young black crowd poured onto the dance floor and formed a line for da butt.

"All of those people criticizing are probably upset that they can't do it," said Sharon Bailey, 26. "If it was up to some of these folks, the only dance we could do would be the waltz."

Introducing No Guesswork Auto Service

The People You Trust For Tires Are Tops In Service Too!

Look for the new signs. It's happening all over town. There's a new look, a new spirit, and a new service capability wherever you see the words: Goodyear Auto Service.

We're computerized. At Goodyear, we take the guesswork out of auto service. When you come in for a tune-up, a Goodyear certified mechanic begins by hooking your car to a computerized engine analyzer.

Over 100 tests. With quiet efficiency, the computer performs over 100 comprehensive tests on your car's engine. The diagnostic results help the mechanic by pinpointing problems quickly and accurately. There's even a computer printout that you get to keep, and it shows exactly what's needed to be done.

The non-guesswork tune-up. A computer checklist leaves nothing to chance, so there's no backtracking or time-wasting. Digital readouts, instead of pointers and dials, assure accurate readings. The result: A precise tune-up.

Computerized four-wheel alignment too. Whether you own front-wheel drive, rear-wheel drive, or four-wheel drive, Goodyear offers computerized alignment service. Our computerized equipment can provide a printout that indicates simultaneously the correction needed for each wheel. This aids accuracy, helps eliminate error.

DEAR ABBY

Wife afraid sexual relations may be fatal for husband

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 48 years old and my husband is 49. Ours is one of the really good marriages. We recently celebrated our 25th wedding anniversary. Now the problem:

Van Buren

Last year my husband had a triple bypass, and although he has had a remarkable recovery, at my insistence we now have separate bedrooms. I pretend that I am no longer interested in sex, but the truth is, I am terrified of the thought of his dying in my arms if we make love again.

His doctor says I am worrying needlessly, but I am not convinced. My husband would like to resume our normal relations, but I can't help feeling the way I do.

Perhaps you've heard from other couples in this predicament. Any advice will be greatly appreciated. — PLAYING IT SAFE IN SKOKIE

DEAR PLAYING: Do I have a book for you — and for others who are "playing it safe" for the same reason.

Please get "Heartmates — A Survival Guide for the Cardiac Spouse"

by Rhoda F. Levin, published by Prentice Hall. The author, herself a cardiac spouse, offers a complete program for dealing with your problem, and you will rejoice in a whole new worry-free beginning. Doctors have praised this sensible, readable book.

It's the best $18.95 you'll ever spend. Check your local bookstore.

DEAR ABBY: Another National Secretaries Day has come and gone, and I have never been able to figure out why we need a special day to "honor" us for doing what we are being paid to do.

I have been the secretary for the same man for 22 years. I love my job or I wouldn't have stayed here this long. I know I'm competent or I wouldn't have kept this job and received the raises and bonuses I have over the years.

Abby, may I give the bosses out there a word of advice? Forget "Secretaries Day." The best investment you can make is to say "thank you" to your secretary for a job well-done. And to say "thank you very much" for exceptional performance. — APPRECIATED IN JUNEAU

DEAR APPRECIATED: Thank you for a letter well-written, and thank you very much for a message much needed. A word of praise, a compliment or simple "thank you" for a job well-done should not be limited to secretaries. Every working person needs to hear those words.

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for that principal who banned the use of limousines and rental of tuxedos and gowns for a high school freshman frolic!

I wonder how many parents had to make a sacrifice in order to foot the bill for such frills because they didn't want their children to feel left out.

I think young people can wait until they are high school seniors to enjoy such expensive luxuries. — GETTING BY IN PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR GETTING BY: My mail ran about 50-50 in favor of banning limousines and tuxedos for a freshman frolic. The young people favored the frills. The parents did not. The problem: Once a precedent has been set, it's almost impossible to change it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I often travel by car around the country. On our last trip, as on previous ones, we ran into people at rest areas asking for money.

The first person was trying to get to a family reunion in St. George, Utah, in January because he couldn't get home for Christmas. He offered to sell us anything he had, or return our money. (He had used up his money on car repairs.) Not wanting to give out our address, we just gave him the money.

The second one was about two hours west of Phoenix. A woman and her husband were trying to get to Phoenix. They had run out of gas and were broke. She was in her 50s — she stood by the restroom door asking for money. I gave her $5 and asked how much she had collected. She said $9. I said, "Well, that should buy enough gas to get you to Phoenix" — then suggested she get in touch with Travelers Aid. She continued to ask others for help.

In a third instance, we were asked for money for gas and food. This time there was a young child and a couple of ragtag-looking adults. The car hood was up, the man was sitting on the curb and the woman was sitting in the car. This time we did not make a donation.

My problem: If I don't help out, my conscience bothers me. If I donate, I wonder if I'm being suckered.

Abby, do you think rest areas are just a convenient place to panhandle? What would you do? I am ... CHARITABLE BUT SKEPTICAL

DEAR CHARITABLE: Rest areas are an ideal place to panhandle, and I'd decide how to handle it very much the way most people do. I'd size up the situation, then act on my hunch.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ANYONE WHO IS LUCKY ENOUGH TO HAVE A LIVING FATHER: If you're wondering what to give Dad for Father's Day, consider this: Sit down and write him a letter telling him how much you appreciate him — and why. I promise you it will mean more to him than anything you could buy. Trust me.

To get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.99 ($3.99 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage and handling are included).

Directing dreams solves problems

Copley News Service

You can create movies in your mind by mastering your dreams. And by directing your dream plot lines, you can combat problems when you're awake.

So says dream researcher and author Dr. Allan Hobson.

In his book, "The Dreaming Brain," Hobson claims taking charge of your sleep is simple.

Start by giving yourself a dream plot line suggestion.

Tell yourself that you'll wake up as soon as you realize you're dreaming. And then record what you remember about the dream when you do.

He says after a few weeks, you'll remember plenty and your dreams will follow the guidelines you set down before bedtime.

CULLIGAN DRINKING WATER SYSTEM GIVEN SEAL OF APPROVAL!

THE ONLY WATER TREATMENT MANUFACTURER THAT HAS RECEIVED THE NATIONAL SANITATION FOUNDATION'S LISTING FOR REDUCTION OF 11 WATER CONTAMINANTS

The nation's leading environment and health standards and certification organization, the National Sanitation Foundation, has granted its official Listing Mark and authorization to use it to Culligan International Company's Aqua-Clear H-82 drinking water system.

Culligan's Aqua-Clear H-82 system is the first drinking water system to be listed under National Sanitation Foundation Standard 58. The Aqua-Clear H-82 is a reverse osmosis system representing the best technology available to reduce a wide variety of undesirable contaminants, such as lead, sodium and nitrates, at the point-of-use.

"This mark is an unprecedented third-party certification for our system," says Donald Mahlstedt, vice president of Culligan, household products division. "No other water treatment manufacturer has received the Listing for reduction of these contaminants."

The listing under these standards is specifically for reduction of the total dissolved solids, hexavalent chromium, trivalent chromium, arsenic, barium, cadmium, fluoride, lead, mercury, selenium, asbestos and nitrate. In addition to contamination reduction testing, NSF also verifies that product materials do not impart impurities into the water. All of these chemicals are regulated by the EPA under the Safe Drinking Water Act and are potentially harmful if ingested in significant quantities.
