Teens share their 'success stories'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth of a five-part series on substance abuse among Midland school students. In cases where first names only are used, the names are fictitious. The people, however, are real. This story deals with two youngsters who fought and conquered addiction.

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Lisa didn't let her drug and alcohol abuse stop her from making good grades in school, nor did she allow it to interfere with her home life.

"Once in awhile I'd do something rebellious," she said, "but basically I was my mom's little girl and I always did real well in school."

Then last summer the 14-year-old succumbed to her abuse.

"My home life got really messed up and I started getting a bad attitude in school. Then I got caught," Lisa candidly admitted.

Today, the Midland junior high school student is dealing with her alcoholism and drug addiction the best way she knows how. She's speaking honestly with others who may have encountered the same problem in their families.

Here's how she described her first encounter with marijuana at age 12: "My best friend's boyfriend — who later became my boyfriend — was really into drugs and smoking pot. One night we went to a vacant house and we tried it."

Like most persons who try marijuana, Lisa said she didn't get high on that initial experience. Unfortunately, though, she continued using pot, then gradually moved on to liquor and other drugs until she "hit rock bottom."

The teen-ager said during her abusing days she had no problem getting alcohol and drugs.

Neither did 17-year-old Jerry. By age 12, he said, he was dabbling in a little bit of both.

"By the time I was 13 until I turned 16 I was basically on my own. My parents were separated and my brother and sister moved out. So, me and Mom moved into some apartments."

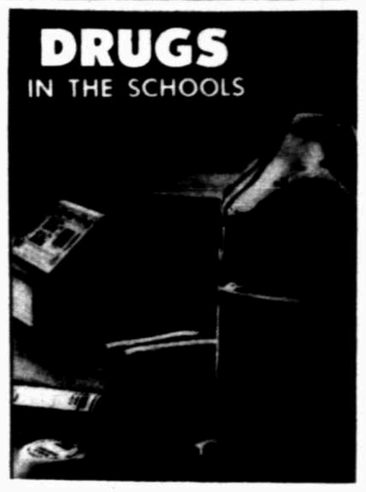

Jerry said he knew people at the apartment complex he would contact for alcohol and drugs. He also purchased some of the drugs at school or at other individuals' homes.

Money was no problem either since he was working in the oil field for his father and making good money.

By 15, Jerry said he was experimenting with "harder" drugs.

"Me and my friend (we had been best friends since the fifth-grade) dropped some acid. We stole his parents' car and rolled it three times."

Talks end without accords

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

GENEVA — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev today concluded their "fireside summit" and headed home without agreement or even guidelines, on how to limit nuclear arsenals. The leaders said "serious differences remain," but pledged to accelerate the pace of arms talks.

After two days of talks, both leaders expressed optimism, largely because of a decision to meet again next year and again in 1987. Nonetheless, their differences, rather than five minor summit accords, dominated news briefings by both sides after this morning's cordial closing ceremony.

"All restraint will be blown to the winds" in nuclear competition unless the United States pulls back from its spaceborne anti-missile efforts, Gorbachev said at a news conference where he characterized summit talks as very frank.

He referred to his many private hours with Reagan and said, "Not a tete a tete went by without talking about the issues of war and peace. It was the central thread of our meeting," he said before departing Geneva.

Sprayberry probe near completion

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A Midland grand jury today was expected to conclude a three-month investigation into alleged improprieties in office by Midland Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry, according to informed courthouse sources.

The grand jury was said to be considering several different indictments as a result of the investigation, which has been conducted by a special prosecutor appointed in August after an initial investigation by the Midland County Attorney's Office and the Midland County District Attorney's Office.

Sprayberry

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre declined to comment this morning, citing the secrecy of grand jury proceedings. County Attorney Mark Dettman was out of town, and Sprayberry is on vacation until Dec. 2, according to Linda Collins, his secretary.

"He said he was going hunting," she said.

Calls to Sprayberry's home were not answered this morning.

Rumors have circulated the courthouse for months that Sprayberry, 44, was under investigation for a wide range of alleged improprieties and abuses.

Sprayberry, a Republican, was first elected JP for Place 1, Precinct 2 in 1980, and re-elected in 1984.

Reportedly, the investigation was triggered by complaints from a former secretary of Sprayberry's about his personal behavior.

"From the very beginning we called in the special prosecutor," said one courthouse source, who spoke on the condition she not be named.

Attorney Andy Shuval of Austin, former head of the Prosecutor Council, was appointed special prosecutor, sources said. An announcement was expected later today after the grand jury concludes its investigation.

RepublicBank will be one entity in Midland

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

The Boards of Directors of RepublicBank Midland and RepublicBank First National, Midland, have jointly announced plans to merge the two banks into one local entity, subject to the necessary regulatory approvals. The decision was approved Wednesday at separate board meetings of each bank.

RepublicBank First National President, Tom Wageman, said, subject to approval by regulators, the RepublicBank Midland facility will become a facility offering a broad range of banking services, including loan departments, to customers. The two RepublicBanks in Midland become the first in the state to utilize a new law recently passed by the Texas Legislature that allows banks to operate a banking facility within 20,000 feet of the bank's headquarters.

Wageman said the decision to merge the two banks was made in order to enhance service and convenience to the customers of both RepublicBank Midland and RepublicBank First National Midland: "We determined that there were a lot of things we could do better than separately," he added. He said that upon completion of the merger, customers of both banks will be able to transact banking business at any of nine locations: Downtown Motor Bank, Downtown Main Bank, Garfield banking facility and Motor Bank, and six RESOURCE locations. "We are the first bank that will have a full service banking facility," he said.

Basin cities reflect nation's growth trend

From Staff and Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — The "rural renaissance" of the 1970s may have run its course, with population growth in the nation's countryside falling behind that of the cities, Census Bureau figures show. Midland and Odessa both reflected that growth in their Census figures.

Growth in the nation's rural regions leaped past that of cities in the 1970s, a sharp change from the movement to urban areas that had been under way for a century or more.

But Census figures released Wednesday show that since 1980 the trend has reversed again, with rural growth dropping off while cities continue to gain steadily.

Midland's population — which included the county — was pegged at 113,600. This was a 37.5 percent increase from 1980 to 1984, according to the Census Bureau. Odessa's population was listed at 144,500, a 25.2 percent increase. For the state, Midland's population increase ranked it first and Odessa came in a close third behind Bryan which was reported as having a population of 117,400 with a 25.4 percent increase.

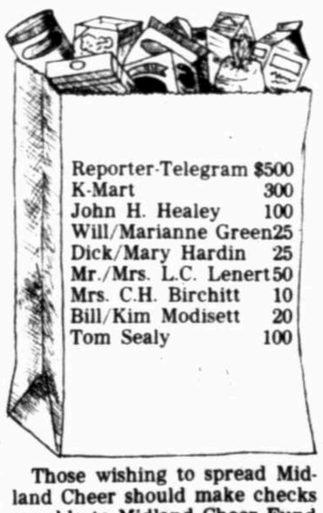

"This apparently restores a pattern of predominantly metropolitan population growth which had extended for more than a century until the dramatic turnaround of the 1970s," said the study, "Patterns of Metropolitan Area and County Population Growth."

"The 1970s was a special period, and we really didn't know how long it would continue," Donald Starsinic of the Census Bureau said in a telephone interview. "But it's reversal of old patterns has not continued."

Panel favors hike in oil industry taxes

From Staff and Wire Reports

Behind closed doors Wednesday night, the House Ways and Means Committee voted for a series of tax proposals that is expected to increase the taxes of the oil and gas industry by $4 billion over the next five years.

That is twice the new tax bite that Reagan recommended for the industry but about half what Dan Rostenkowski, Committee chairman, wanted.

After the committee voted 29-4 for the oil-gas package, Rep. Henson Moore, R-La., said the tax increase would damage the nation's drive to reduce dependence on imported energy.

"If you want to import more oil, here is the way to do it," he said. "He (Rostenkowski) didn't kill us, he just chopped off an arm and a leg."

In proposing to restrict one big industry tax benefit, the oil depletion allowance, Reagan said it is inefficient because it helps mostly those who need it less: producers of rich pools of oil. The committee accepted that reasoning and went further, also scaling back a benefit that permits a quick tax writeoff of certain expenses incurred in drilling wells.

Aides said the committee:

— Agreed to continue the percentage depletion allowance for stripper wells (those averaging less than 10 barrels a day) owned by independent producers, which generally are those that produce but do not have retail operations. The estimated 2 million people who own a royalty interest in those smaller wells also would continue to receive the allowance. The benefit would be phased out for other wells.

The depletion allowance permits a royalty owner and producer to escape tax on 15 percent of gross income from an oil or gas property.

No-pass, no-play hearing stalled for study

HOUSTON (AP) — After deciding data is needed from Texas' 1,100 school districts, a state district judge has postponed the trial of a lawsuit against the state's controversial no-pass, no-play rule on grounds it discriminates against minorities and handicapped students.

Judge Marsha Anthony suspended the trial Wednesday, announcing she would appoint a special master to gather information such as failure rates and the number of students excluded by the rule from participating in athletics and other extracurricular activities.

No-pass, no-play, part of an education reform package adopted by the Legislature in 1984, prohibits a student who fails a course from such taking part in sports or other non-academic activities for six weeks.

Anthony Sheppard, the plaintiff's attorney, said the state has kept its facts to itself.

"The state has been like an ostrich and stuck its head in the ground," said Sheppard, who has gathered information from 20 school districts.

Ms. Anthony, who certified the suit as class action, had ordered school districts to submit the data Sheppard requested. But the Texas Supreme Court, acting on an appeal from the Texas Education Agency, threw out Ms. Anthony's order on Nov. 8.

Assistant Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon, who is defending the law, said the state is not required to keep such statistics.

"The master will do what the state was ordered not to do," he said. "All we're doing is going through a lot of expense to get the same point across."

Belgium ready for post-summit visit

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The Belgian government, wary of security breaches following recent terrorist and gangland-style violence, was deploying 750 paratroopers in addition to an undisclosed number of regular security forces for today's post-summit visit by President Reagan.

Reagan, heading home after two days of superpower talks in Geneva, was stopping at NATO headquarters to tell allied leaders what happened.

The president was to meet for 90 minutes with the heads of government of Britain, West Germany and 10 other member countries of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. France and Spain were to be represented by their foreign ministers, Greece by its deputy premier.

In his first visit to NATO headquarters as president, Reagan was to report on the substance of his meetings in Geneva with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and then lead a discussion of the summit's implications for future East-West relations.

Afterward, Reagan was to make the final leg of his journey back to Washington to address a joint session of Congress tonight.

The European NATO nations, four of which have installed U.S. nuclear missiles despite vigorous public opposition, had hoped the summit would lead to a U.S.-Soviet arms deal that would sharply reduce the number of nuclear missiles in Europe.

While acknowledging they did not expect a dramatic breakthrough on arms control, the Europeans had held out hope that the first superpower talks in six years at least would improve the atmosphere of East-West relations.

The European leaders supported Reagan's insistence on discussing human rights and regional issues with the Kremlin leader, but let it be known arms control was their publics' most pressing concern.

In a series of high-level meetings with U.S. officials leading up to the Reagan-Gorbachev summit, the Europeans stressed that the Kremlin must not be allowed to seize the upper hand on arms control. They pressed for, and welcomed, the Reagan administration's response in late October to a Soviet arms initiative.

To West Germany, America's chief continental ally, a favorable summit outcome could open the way to better relations with communist East Germany — and possibly to the first-ever official visit to Bonn by East German leader Erich Honecker.

Reagan may hear European words of disappointment, however, at his apparent hesitancy to agree to an extension of the SALT II arms accord with the Soviets. It is due to expire at the end of the year.

In a pre-summit report to Reagan, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger accused the Soviets of violating the unratified Strategic Arms Limitation Talks treaty and urged Reagan not to agree to an extension. The Europeans have argued that SALT II is valuable as a constraint on a Soviet buildup of strategic nuclear arms.

In addition to Thatcher and Reagan, the heads of government attending the NATO meeting were Brian Mulroney of Canada, Poul Schlueter of Denmark, Wilfried Martens of Belgium, Bettino Craxi of Italy, Helmut Kohl of West Germany, Ruud Lubbers of the Netherlands, Jacques Santer of Luxembourg, Turgut Ozal of Turkey, Anibal Cavaco Silva of Portugal, Kaare Willoch of Norway and Iceland's Steingrimur Hermannsson.

France was to be represented by Foreign Minister Roland Dumas, Greece by its deputy premier, Ioannis Haralambopoulos, and Spain by Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez Ordonez.

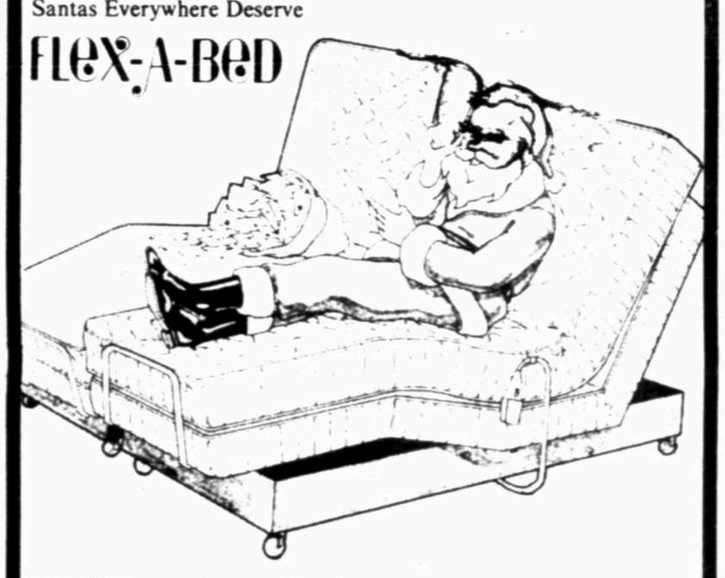

In reference to a recent issue published by the Midland Police Department and the Sheriff's Department, I would like to Thank Mr. Wayne Gideon, as well as, Mr. Gary Painter and their departments for their concern and cooperation, and their efforts to control the flow and use of narcotics in our City and County.

At one point, I entertained the thought that they weren't exercising too much effort on the problem, but I now feel I was mistaken.

I would like to offer my sincere apologies to both men and their departments.

A Concerned Citizen.

SUMMIT

Going into the summit, a chief Soviet goal was to trade the nuclear weapon cutbacks sought by Reagan in exchange for limitation on the president's "Star Wars" program. Reagan vowed to stand firm and apparently did. He also hoped to raise human rights issues uncomfortable to the Soviets, and officials said "extended discussions" did take place.

Reagan, in a 17-hour day across two continents, was to provide his view of the summit this evening, at 9 p.m. EST, in a speech before a joint meeting of Congress. En route to Washington, he was stopping in Brussels to brief leaders of the NATO nations.

Gorbachev was heading for either Moscow or to brief Warsaw Pact allies in Prague, officials would not say.

Reagan and Gorbachev, chatting amiably before separate departures to brief their allies, signaled a thaw in the U.S.-Soviet relationship by announcing they will hold a second summit next year, and a third in 1987. The last summit was held six years ago.

"These two days of talks should inject a certain momentum into our work on the issues between us, a momentum we can continue at the meeting we've agreed on next year," Reagan said.

A U.S. official said the next session would take place in June in Washington, with the return summit tentatively set for Moscow a year later.

Gorbachev, who came to Geneva intent on getting Reagan to abandon his Star Wars missile defense plan, said, "We have to be realistic and straightforward. And therefore the solving of the most important problems concerning the arms race and increasing hopes of peace — We didn't succed in reaching at this meeting."

The Soviet leader added that, "So, of course, there are important disagreements on matters of principle that remain between us."

Reagan, who sought a sharp reduction in nuclear stockpiles, said, "The real report card on Geneva will not come in for months or even years."

A joint statement added, "the two sides have confirmed the importance of an ongoing dialogue, reflecting their commond desire to seek common ground on existing problems."

The leaders reached accord on five agreements covering issues such as cultural exchanges, air safety in the North Pacific, U.S. and Soviet consultates and research on solar technology.

Secretary of State George Shultz, at a news conference, acknowledged the summit "has not produced anything" to curb the nuclear arms race. But he said negotiators may now have "some political impulse" for their talks.

"I would say you get a little advanced by this kind of discussion, but certainly there wasn't any definitive movement," Shultz said.

At his own news conference, beamed to the Soviet Union and broadcast live to America by Cable News Network, Gorbachev said, "We realize the U.S. is unhappy with our reasoning (about Star Wars) but we feel the same way."

Referring to the Soviet proposal for a breakthrough at the arms control negotiations, he said, "We are prepared to engage in radical cutbacks in nuclear weapons, providing that the door to unleashing the arms race in outer space is firmly slammed."

The Soviet leader said he and Reagan looked each other "straight in the eye" during talks that at one point "became very, very lively." He said the discussions revealed to him that the United States shares "the understanding that a nuclear war cannot occur, that there can be no winners in a nuclear war."

A senior U.S. official, at a separate briefing, said human rights concerns would be treated with "greater seriousness and prospect of success" as a result of the summit. He provided no details.

On Afghanistan, the official told reporters "you may see some positive" developments, but here, too, he offered no facts to back up his prediction. "You may see that issue treated more internally and less visibly," said the official, who briefed reporters on condition that he not be identified.

At the closing ceremony, in remarks applauded by Gorbachev, Reagan asked, "Will we join together in sharply reducing nuclear bombs and moving to nonnuclear defense ... to make this a safer world? Will we join together to bring about a peaceful resolution to conflicts in Asia, Africa and Central America?

"The people of America, the Soviet Union, throughout the world are ready to answer yes," Reagan said. He concluded by saying, "There is hard work ahead, we are ready for it. Geneval Secretary Gorbachev, we ask you to join us in getting the job done, which I am sure you will."

The two leaders sat on stage at the International Conference Center, and their remarks were optimistic, but underscored the unfinished business of their meeting.

Reagan said, "I leave Geneva today and our fireside summit determined to pursue every opportunity to build a world of peace, of freedom." His nickname for the summit derives from a meeting Tuesday when the two leaders held private talks for about an hour before a blazing logs in the fireplace of a pool house next to Lake Geneva.

The leaders' comments and a joint statement issued under their name made no mention of new guidelines to spur nuclear arms talks, now set to resume Jan. 16 in Geneva. Negotiators on both sides had tried to hammer out a statement but apparently failed.

"We've reached some useful interim results in agreeing to accelerate the work of nuclear arms negotiators, Mr. Gorbachev and I have addressed our common responsibility to strengthen peace," Reagan said.

"I believe we have established the process for more intensive contacts between the United States and the Soviet Union," he said.

Reagan can claim some satisfaction in the agreement on cultural and educational exchanges, and on the Soviet decision to go along with future summits.

The decision to commit themselves to meet again was reached Wednesday night while Reagan and Gorbachev sat before another roaring fireplace — following dinner at Reagan's borrowed residence overlooking Lake Geneva.

The president spent about four hours alone with the Soviet leader, except for their translators, and apparently hit it off well.

TAX

— Voted to permit an immediate tax writeoff of "intangible drilling costs" that are incurred up to the point at which casing is installed in the well, once that point is reached, aides said, the decision generally has been made that the well will be put into production. Such drilling costs incurred later in the process would have to be written off over 26 months.

Intangible drilling costs cover such expenses as labor, pipe and fuel in connection with drilling.

— Agreed that a portion of the deduction for intangible costs should be subjected to the minimum tax, which in effect would take back a portion of the benefit once it exceeds 65 percent of a taxpayer's net income from oil and gas.

BANK

Wageman said, "The merger of our two fine banks will offer customers the convenience of a broad range of banking services in both a downtown and a northwest location." He said that the two locations would probably provide the bank with the structure it needed and no Clay Desta facility was planned at the present time. He also said that the name of the bank would not be shorted at this time.

Bill Mewhorter, president and CEO of RepublicBank, will join the surviving bank in the commercial loan department as an account executive when the merger is complete but will continue to function in his present capacity until the merger is approved.

Two years ago, after becoming president of RepublicBank First National Midland, Wageman said he did not foresee the possibility of the two banks ever being merged.

"That was two years ago," said Wageman. "There was no need to merge then. It didn't make sense then because the Garfield bank would not have been able to provide the full range of services as a facility of our bank."

RepublicBank Corp. is the nation's 18th largest banking organization and Texas' largest bank holding company and has 38 affiliate banks with combined assets of $22.6 billion on September 30, 1985.

DRUGS

He also said his mother "knew what was going on, but she was going through this big denial."

One day "she came in and asked me to go to the store with her. I knew something was up because she never asked me to go to the store before.... She nearly had to drag me to the car."

Jerry said the drive to the Palmer Drug Abuse Program that day was a "turning point" in his life, even though he continued to "get high" while in the program for about 30 days afterward.

"Then I hit bottom," he said. "You see, you have to hit your bottom before you can climb to the top."

Soon after that, Jerry decided he should get help on his own. He visited his former fifth-grade pal who persuaded him to join PDAP and stick with it.

Lisa, on the other hand, joined PDAP at her mother's insistence.

"She came and got me and put me into this program. The first couple of days I was ready to turn around and quit," Lisa said, "but after a few months I decided to stay."

Since Lisa and Jerry entered the program, they said they have had no drugs and have consumed no alcohol.

Lisa admitted, however, that her return to sobriety was not easy.

"It was hard because my friends kept trying to convince me I'm not an alcoholic, that I never did have a problem."

She also said she had more problems with peer pressure when she returned from treatment than she currently does.

"My friends took me out on the drag one night after I got home. I was so thirsty, but I told them they'd either have to take me home or to the Sonic to get a Coke or something else to drink," she said.

As for Jerry, he's been sober for 15 months.

Looking back, he said "If I'd waited another 10 years, I don't think I'd have been around. I was heading for hell, I really was. My life passed before my eyes when we rolled that car."

Jerry envisions what his life would have been like had he not become involved in alcohol and drugs. "I'd probably be the starting quarterback for the Lee Rebels varsity football team.

Still, he has plans for his life. Included among them are his hopes to become a "cop or a narcotics officer."

Jerry and Lisa do not pretend that they are not alcoholics. In fact, part of their therapy is to work with others who also abused drugs and alcohol.

How do they deal with temptation?

"With fear," Jerry said. "I almost lost my life, my family and my friend."

Then he gazed at the ceiling and fondly recalled the first PDAP session when the counselor told him, "True friends will always meet again, but in a better place."

Said Jerry, "I guess this is what he meant."

GROWTH

"We can't be sure if this is a real trend or just a temporary aberration caused by the recession, the decline in (rural) job opportunities and the energy crunch," Starsinic concluded. "It's too soon to tell."

Touted as being new figures just released by the Census Bureau, spokesmen for Midland and Odessa chambers of commerce disagreed. "They were released in June or July," said Chuck Bernhard in Odessa. Agreeing with Bernhard's assessment, Midland's Steve Hardin joked, "Once you get a good figure you keep releasing it."

Bernhard, however, doesn't believe the figures are valid. "There's a major difference of opinion with these numbers. There's no one in the world who would agree with these figures except the Census Bureau. They took the 1980-82 growth rate and projected it out to 1984. In 1983, things began to fall apart here and there was a decline then."

Hardin believes the population count of almost 114,000 for Midland County is accurate, but that the 37.5 percent increase which could be seen in the early 1980s doesn't apply to today.

The city planning department lists the city's population at 98,940, he said, and when including the entire county the population should hover around 114,000.

"But it doesn't tell the whole story. Our growth was weighted so much in the early 1980s. The city planning staff says it is 2 to 4 percent today," Hardin said.

But he didn't object to seeing the figures again. "The publicity is good for us."

The new study said the metropolitan population grew by 4.5 percent to 180 million people between 1980 and 1984, while the non-metropolitan population increased by 3.4 percent to 56.4 million, the report said.

While metropolitan areas continued to grow at the 1 percent annual rate that prevailed in the 1970s, non-metropolitan growth fell from 1.3 percent annually in the last decade to 0.8 percent since 1980, the report found.

But while the relationship between city and rural growth has been reversed on a national basis in this decade, the change does not constitute a return to the general growth patterns that existed before 1970.

One of the most significant changes in recent decades is the increasing strength of the South and West — the so-called Sun Belt — in comparison to the Northeast and Midwest. That has continued.

"In the 1960s the North grew at about three-quarters the rate of the nation as a whole," the report said. "Since 1970 its growth rate has only been one-fifth that of the nation, and the South and West together have grown nine times as fast as the North."

The report said the change in the metropolitan growth patterns is best reflected in the South, the nation's most populous region and the only area where metropolitan growth topped rural growth rates both in the 1970s and 1980s.

In the South, metropolitan growth averaged 1.8 percent between 1980 and 1984, compared to a 1 percent rate in non-metropolitan areas. In the 1970s, urban growth in the South topped rural increases 2 percent to 1.5 percent.

FDA protests House subpoena of food, drug dye studies

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration, facing a congressional subpoena for copies of scientific opinions on potential dangers of food and drug dyes, says it already has delivered most of the material and wants only to protect the privacy of scientists volunteering their time.

FDA spokesman William Grigg, responding to a House subcommittee vote Wednesday demanding copies of the scientific reviews, said 27 of the 30 papers involved already have been given to the panel.

Six of those withheld the identity of the scientist performing the review, he said, honoring the requests of scientists who donate their time to the agency.

"There are only three or so of the actual reviews that were still awaiting some word from the reviewers as to whether to include their names," Grigg said.

"We just feel that they should respect these reviewers' requests for privacy, because we rely on them for this voluntary work and we hope to get them to do similar work in the future," he added.

The House Government Operations subcommittee on human resources voted 6-4 along party lines to issue the subpoena, with chairman Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., contending the agency had not complied with voluntary requests.

Weiss noted that some reviews have been given to the committee, but said the authority of Congress to see the documents cannot be subordinate to the right of the scientists to give their permission.

"The subcommittee's right to information in the possession of agencies within its jurisdiction may not be conditioned upon any further activity by those agencies or by third parties," Weiss said.

He said there was "no legal basis" for withholding the information, adding that any confidential information can be protected from public disclosure by the subcommittee.

The subpoena seeks further information on a study ordered by FDA Commissioner Dr. Frank Young earlier this year to assess the safety of six food, drug and cosmetic dyes. The study was submitted to outside scientists for review. Weiss is seeking copies of the opinions those scientists gave the FDA.

The dyes at issue include the controversial Red No. 3, a food dye best known as the coloring for maraschino cherries, which has been found by some scientists to cause thyroid tumors and chromosomal damages in high doses.

The other dyes are Red Nos. 8, 9, 19 and 37 and Orange No. 17. These five are used only in drugs and cosmetics.

Congress ordered the FDA in 1960 to evaluate the safety of the dyes within 2½ years, but gave the agency authority to temporarily allow their use if studies were not complete by then.

The FDA has used that authority to issue a series of temporary extensions that have run since 1963 and are still in force.

Last year, the FDA drafted a regulation that would have banned the six dyes as a public health hazard.

But the regulation died in review channels without being formally proposed, and the agency this year agreed to allow continued use of the dyes while further study is under way.

Weiss said he first requested the scientists' opinions Sept. 9, but the request was refused by FDA Associate Commissioner Hugh C. Cannon.

"Since the very basis of the scientific peer review process is the ability of the scientists doing the reviews to critique the work in question with complete candor, these kinds of reviews are usually sought by PHS (Public Health Service) agencies with the understanding that they will be kept confidential," Cannon said in a letter to Weiss released by the subcommittee.

When Weiss persisted, the FDA said it would seek the scientists' permission to release the reviews to the subcommittee, either in whole or with identifications deleted.

The subpoena was addressed to Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler as head of FDA's parent department and orders the reviews to be delivered by Dec. 2.

Heckler refuses antibiotic ban in animal feed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler refused on Wednesday to impose an emergency ban on the use of antibiotics in animal feed, saying scientific evidence does not support a finding of "imminent hazard" in the practice.

She denied a petition filed by the Natural Resources Defense Council, which sought the ban on use of small amounts of penicillin and tetracycline.

The NRDC contended the routine, low level use of antibiotics in animal feed is allowing drug resistant bacteria to enter the human food chain, weakening the ability of drugs to fight human disease.

Mrs. Heckler's decision does not end the matter permanently. The Food and Drug Administration still can ban antibiotics in animal feed through administrative regulations.

But that could take an additional two or three years or more, on top of the more than eight years the issue already has been under review at FDA. The NRDC had sought to shorten the process by asking the secretary to declare an "imminent hazard to public health" which would invoke emergency powers and allow an immediate ban.

A. Karim Ahmed, the NRDC scientist who filed the petition, said Wednesday that department officials are "abdicating their responsibility to protect the American public from the drugs in animal feeds."

Ahmed said the antibiotic use poses "a major threat" to public health, but that it is sometimes difficult to understand because it is not an immediate threat like that posed by chemical wastes.

"We're talking about something more subtle and more insidious," he said. "We're losing the ability to treat disease."

In its petition, the NRDC contended that 100 to 800 deaths and 270,000 non-fatal cases of salmonella poisoning may occur each year because use of the antibiotics have let hardier disease bacteria into the food chain.

But Mrs. Heckler said an FDA analysis of the NRDC petition failed to support the allegation.

She said the organization "has failed to establish that the continued use of subtherapeutic levels of penicillin and the tetracyclines in animal feeds present an imminent hazard to public health thaat warrants immediate suspension of their approval for that use."

Darrell Wilkes, an official of the National Cattlemen's Association in Denver, said his organization agreed with the decision, adding, "We were convinced that the case simply could not be made of imminent hazard."

At the same time, however, Wilkes said the decision was moot to most beef cattle operations, since cheaper, more effective substitutes for tetracycline to promote growth and feed efficiency have supplanted the antibiotic since the dispute began.

The dispute involves small amounts of antibiotics that are routinely added to animal feeds to fatten animals more quickly and protect them from herd diseases.

Many scientists believe the constant, low-level exposure to antibiotics kills off weaker, vulnerable strains of bacteria and leave stronger, drug-resistant bacteria — so-called "superbugs" — in their place.

Those bacteria could live in the meat, eggs or milk from the animals and ultimately infect humans, where they would resist treatment by antibiotics.

Baby-to-baby heart transplant a success

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — A newborn with a heart defect received another baby's heart in a rare infant-to-infant transplant performed by the doctor who 13 months ago attempted a radical baboon heart graft on the infant known as Baby Fae.

"A newborn baby born with hypoplastic left heart syndrome underwent a human-to-human heart transplant," Dick Schaefer, a spokesman Loma Linda University Medical Center, said early today.

Dr. Leonard Bailey, who transplanted a baboon heart into Baby Fae on Oct. 26, 1984, performed the infant-to-infant surgery Wednesday, Schaefer said. He said the infant was alive but refused to elaborate, and he did not give the infant's exact age.

Because the parents requested confidentiality, no information on the infant's condition would be released, he said. Information on the donor heart was also unavailable, he said.

Smokeout may fizzle in tobacco-dependent Southern states

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The American Cancer Society found welcome in much of the South's tobacco country for its ninth Great American Smokeout today, but its message was likely to be ignored in some quarters of the land where the golden leaf means jobs.

"I would hope (the city of) Wilson wouldn't be participating in a Smokeout because if it hadn't been for tobacco, there wouldn't be a Wilson," said Marvin Coghill, president of Standard Commercial Tobacco Co.

Although Coghill's hometown declined to participate, the nationwide midnight-to-midnight kick-the-habit campaign aimed at America's 55 million smokers is drawing more people from the tobacco-rich South than ever before.

"We have nearly 80 of our 100 county units participating this year, so there are many activities going on," said Wendy Scott, spokeswoman for the American Cancer Society's North Carolina office. "In 1981, we had 32 units."

Scheduled activities included school essay contests in Nashville, Tenn., "kick the habit" games in Kentucky and a frozen turkey giveaway for Northern Telecom's North Carolina employees who quit cold turkey.

Many companies planned "adopt-a-smoker" campaigns that uses the buddy-system approach to giving up cigarettes. A Maryland ice cream store chain offered a cone of turkey-flavored ice cream to anyone who turned in cigarette packs.

But the approach in tobacco country is low-key, says Wanda Jeffers, a group organizer in South Carolina's Pee Dee region, where much of that state's $184 million tobacco crop is produced.

"I don't think we make everybody mad," she said.

The Cancer Society says smoking contributes to heart and lung disease, including cancers. But many Southerners do not want to hear such a message, particularly those whose livelihood depends on tobacco.

"I smoke five packs of cigarettes a day, and I think it's good for you," Coghill, 52, said. "I'm a living example that they don't know what they're talking about."

The crop brought in more than $3 billion to tobacco growers in eight states in 1984. That money also bolsters department stores, equipment and car dealers and government tax coffers. North Carolina leads the nation in tobacco production, bringing farmers $1.05 billion in 1984.

Across the United States last year, a record 20.4 million smokers participated in the Smokeout. Of those, 5.4 million stopped for the day and 3.1 million were still off cigarettes five days later, according to the Gallup Poll. The society was unable to provide a regional breakdown.

The Cancer Society's goal this year is to get at least one in every five smokers to give up cigarettes for 24 hours.

The Washington, D.C.-based Tobacco Institute launched a counter-offensive Wednesday, issuing a poll in which most people disagreed with legislative restrictions on smoking.

Smokers today are asked by the American Cancer Society to give up puffing tobacco during the ninth Great American Smokeout.

Military subsidy of cigarette prices under Senate fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bid by two senators to force an increase in cigarette prices at military bases has touched off an unusual battle pitting health issues against military benefits.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, at the behest of Sens. David L. Boren, D-Okla., and Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, accepted an amendment to the Pentagon's fiscal 1986 appropriation two weeks ago that would force commissaries and exchanges to price their tobacco products "at the local prevailing price," excluding state and local taxes.

The bill is awaiting a vote by the full Senate. The House version does not contain a similar provision.

Currently, military commissaries price all their products under the same formula, selling them at cost plus a 5 percent surcharge. For cigarettes, that means prices that normally undercut civilian rates by as much as 35 percent.

Exchanges use a different formula, but their cigarette prices also undercut those at civilian outlets by roughly 20 percent. A commissary is a grocery store, while an exchange is more like a department or drug store.

"It makes no sense to be subsidizing the sales of these products and encouraging servicemen and women to use them by keeping their prices 20 to 35 percent lower on base," Boren argues. "American taxpayers are spending millions of dollars to combat health problems caused by cigarette smoking."

Dr. William E. Mayer, the assistant defense secretary for health affairs, supports the price increase on the same health grounds cited by Boren. But the Pentagon — right up to Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger — nonetheless is lobbying against the Senate amendment, arguing there is a larger issue at stake.

According to officials who agreed to discuss the matter Wednesday if not identified, the Defense Department views the initiative as a "dangerous precedent" that could undermine the manner in which military commissaries are funded as well as their value to servicemen as a form of compensation.

The cost of running the military's 412 commissaries worldwide is covered by a regular appropriation of taxpayer dollars, plus the 5 percent surcharge on all goods sold. By selling products at cost plus 5 percent, the Pentagon calculates an average savings of 25 percent for military families on their grocery bills.

In fiscal 1985, that savings was worth an estimated $1.3 billion for military families, compared with an actual federal appropriation of $622 million to run the stores.

The Senate amendment would reduce the fiscal 1986 appropriation of $606.1 million for the commissaries by $77.7 million. It orders the Pentagon to make up that amount by raising tobacco prices.

Bennett expected to change traditional bilingual education

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett on Friday is expected to request new "flexibility" in the bilingual education law, probably along the lines outlined in a speech two months ago in New York.

Bennett said then the Reagan administration wants to encourage local school districts to try approaches to bilingual education other than teaching in a student's native language.

One widely-favored alternative is the "English as a second language" method, in which a student receives intensive training in English while attending classes in which most subjects are taught in English.

The "sink or swim" method — sometimes called "total submersion" — is rarely advocated today but was the most-used method in educating generations of immigrants before Congress in 1968 added a section on bilingual education to the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, a strong supporter of bilingual education, said he was held back a year (in 1923) because he was thrown into a first grade class where he didn't understand the English-speaking teacher.

In 1974, the Supreme Court outlawed the "sink or swim" method in a San Francisco case, Lau vs. Nichols. The justices said school officials were required, under the Civil Rights Act of 1964, to give special help to non-English speaking Chinese students.

The court did not endorse an instructional method, noting that teaching the group in Chinese was one choice but adding, "There may be others."

When Congress first enacted the bilingual education law, it asked for "new and imaginative" programs. But in a 1974 re-write of the law, Congress specified that federal bilingual education money could go only to programs that taught students in their native languages.

Last year, Congress authorized 4 percent of the bilingual apropriation for methods other than "transitional bilingual education." It is likely, according to a staff man on the House Education and Labor Committee, that Bennett may ask for that limit to be raised.

Also, the Department of Education has signaled its aim to use its grant-making authority to ensure that students move out of bilingual instruction into mainstream English. "We're sending the message that there have to be incredibily large amounts of the home language," said Gary Bauer, an undersecretary to Bennett, quote in a recent newspaper article.

In 1969-70, only 76 school districts participated in the $7.5 million distribution. Last year, 581 districts shared $139 million.

Today federally-supported programs now operate in an estimated 125 languages, from Spanish and Haitian Creole to Hmong, Khmer, Chamorro and Ulithian, The New York Times reported this month.

Most of the students in bilingual education, by far, are Spanish-speaking. In Texas, almost one-third of the students are of Hispanic heritage, but many speak only English and many are bilingual when they arrive at school.

Underlying the scholarly debate over bilingual education are intense passions involving ethnic pride, political struggles and jobs.

The debate is most passionate in California, with enormous Hispanic and Asian populations.

A writer for a Washington-based Hispanic publication said Wednesday he and others believe Bennett's hidden agenda is to take funds away from bilingual education and to "starve it to death."

Rep. Gonzalez says the Education Department's agenda is not hidden but open. He believes the goal is to "dismantle the Department of Education and programs to assist disadvantaged persons."

The issue is complicated by the fact that researchers do not agree on whether or how much bilingual education helps non-English-speaking students. Several new federally-financed studies are underway.

Ferraro eyes governorship

Ferraro

WASHINGTON (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro says she doesn't think Sen. Alfonse D'Amato of New York is invincible in the 1986 elections, but the onetime Democratic vice presidential candidate stopped short of saying whether she will be the one to challenge the Republican incumbent.

"I know I'd love to be in the Senate," Ms. Ferraro told reporters Wednesday. But, she added, "I don't know if I'm ready to run."

The former Queens congresswoman who in 1984 became the first female vice presidential candidate from a major political party said she would make her decision next week when her family gathers for Thanksgiving but she would make no announcement until mid-December.

She said her polls showed "it's doable and they show it would be a hard race and they show that I would really have to work very hard to do it."

Ms. Ferraro said she did not consider D'Amato as strong an incumbent as Republicans seem to think.

"My view is that once the people of New York State know precisely what he's doing down here in Washington and how he's voting on issues that affect New York State, they'll determine whether he is a shoo-in," she said.

Last week, Brooklyn District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman, who had been considered another potential Democratic opponent, decided not to make the race, citing D'Amato's formidable $5 million campaign war chest.

That decision enhances Ms. Ferraro's chances of obtaining the Democratic Senate nomination without an expensive primary battle. However, she said Ms. Holtzman's decision did not affect her own deliberations on whether to make the race.

"It was not one of the factors I took into consideration," Ms. Ferraro said. "I don't have the same problem in raising money Liz would have raising money. There are other factors."

"It'll make it a lot easier, sure," she added.

Ms. Ferraro said that if she decided not to make the race she would form a political action committee that would "work to help Democratic candidates."

"I want to see a Democratic majority in the Senate in 1986," she said.

Ms. Ferraro was here to accept an award for her mother, Antonetta Ferraro, 80, from the Displaced Homemakers Network, an organization that helps untrained women forced back into the job market in mid-life through crises such as divorce or the death or disability of a spouse.

Her mother went to work to support the family when her husband died in 1944.

Loss of a friend

When tall, gangly George H. Mahon strode into the U.S. House of Representatives in 1936, few could have guessed that his term of service would not end until 44 years later — or that he would rise to the pinnacle of political power in that august body.

But both — and much more — occurred in Mahon's lengthy and noteworthy career, and when the former dean of the U.S. House died Tuesday evening, he left not only Texas but the entire nation a legacy of political service unblemished by scandal or corruption. He was a politician who served his constituency in the 19th Congressional District, including Midland, and the entire nation with dignity and humility.

His faithful and unselfish service earned him the respect — and the love — of the people of his congressional district, and his colleagues as well. For in his more than four decades in Washington, Congressman Mahon served eight different Presidents and held vast power in his own hands as chairman for 14 years of the House Appropriations Committee.

It was largely because of Congressman Mahon's efforts that Midland received approval for a federal court in 1967, and Midland thanked the congressman in 1979 by formally naming the federal complex the George Mahon Federal Building, United States Post Office and Courthouse. That was a fine gesture on the part of a grateful community, but without a doubt even that fell short of thanking a man who for 44 years tirelessly served the people of this city and congressional district.

Last year in an Associated Press interview, the former congressman left this wisdom from half a century of service to the nation: "In the old days, the chairmen of committees and House leaders set the policy. The new members tended to cooperate with the senior members. Now any congressman who has a story to tell gets in touch with the media. He may not occupy a powerful position; he may not know anything. It is real difficult to have cohesion now.

"You don't want a yes man, but you have to have some level of cooperation. Leadership has become a more precarious, more difficult position."

George Mahon was, in the most stringent definition of the word, a leader — a statesman. With his passing, Texas and the nation have lost a great friend.

Welcome refugees

Like any other country, the United States has its quota of people who view the arrivals of refugees hostilely as a threat to their livelihood and living patterns.

The distrust and suspicion exhibited by these folk turns out to be as baseless as the myth that refugees who fail to displace Americans in the labor market wind up on the welfare rolls.

The record has been set straight by Leo Cherne, chairman of International Rescue Committee, who reports that refugees have made significant contributions to the American economy by bringing ingenuity and high standards to the workplace. The few going on welfare are women with large families, or older people unable to work, and even these pass through the system in a short time.

Most of the refugees arriving here last year came from Iron Curtain countries and from the devastation of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. It took dedication and perseverance for them to escape their homelands and, according to Cherne, they are applying these qualities to the jobs available to them.

In short, experience has shown that the refugees have become, in Cherne's words, "model Americans" and as such they merit encouragement from U.S. citizens whose roots are longer established.

Start toward peace

The agreement regarding consultation on the affairs of Northern Ireland, negotiated between the governments of Great Britain and Ireland, deserves the accolade of "historic." In narrow legal terms it changes little. But in broad political terms it invites the beginning of an important process of reconciliation.

Extremists among the Protestant majority and Catholic minority in the north, who have rejected the agreement and threatened an intensified campaign of terror, demonstrate above all the difficulty of the peace process. Their stubbornness, their fear of an open and free political process, their reliance on hate and violence are fruit of generations of injustice, misunderstandings, manipulations and cruelty that cannot be erased quickly or easily. What Garrett FitzGerald and Margaret Thatcher have done, however, is to declare that Ulster is not and will not be Beirut, and that the civility and traditions of both great communities can prevail in a new harmony freed from the terror of fanatics.

The Irish majority will remain committed to the reunification of their land, and that may someday be accomplished. In the meantime the governments on both sides of the Irish border will respect the principle of self-determination. There is no question that the majority in the north is, at this time, committed to union with Britain.

An Intergovernmental Conference will be the instrument of reconciliation, providing the government of Ireland an advisory role in the future of Northern Ireland. There is no better instrument at this time to reassure the Catholic minority in the north and Irish nationalists on both sides of the frontier that a full and fair consideration will be given to Irish views.

The communique issued after the meeting between Mrs. Thatcher and FitzGerald appropriately set security matters at the top of the agenda for the work of the conference. Until those small bands of vicious killers are isolated and disarmed, the peace effort will be handicapped, slowed and diverted. It is encouraging, however, that part of the initial communique addresses an element of the security program that has made matters worse — the intrusion of the British army where a civil police force would be preferable, if, as the communique states, the constabulary and Armed Forces in Northern Ireland can operate evenhandedly and with respect for both unionists and nationalists.

In 16 years the terror has claimed 2,500 lives. There is no better argument than that to get on quickly with the parliamentary ratification that will set this new process in motion.

On this date:

In 1789, North Carolina became the 12th state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1877, Thomas A. Edison announced the invention of his phonograph, which he dubbed a "talking machine."

In 1942, the Alaska highway across Canada was formally opened.

In 1964, what was at that time the world's longest suspension bridge — the Verrazano Narrows Bridge — opened, linking the New York City boroughs of Brooklyn and Staten Island.

Weather gets blame for crashes

WASHINGTON — For more than a year, we've been reporting on the armed services' dismal safety record for aircraft, and the strange way the brass is tackling the problem. It should be a matter of serious concern at the Pentagon, each year scores of young servicemen are killed in crashes that could have been prevented if the safety experts had been heeded.

Jack Anderson

Nowhere is the problem more serious than in helicopters. Though the aircraft is immensely versatile, it is also inherently fragile, with little margin for error in design, maintenance or handling. But when helicopters crash, the official finding is rarely that the machine was designed badly. The culprit is invariably "pilot error" or weather.

Our associate Donald Goldberg has obtained the Army's internal master list of 1984 helicopter "mishaps" that were officially determined to be "weather related." Here are some examples of accidents that have been attributed, at least partly, to nature:

— A Bell OH58 Kiowa lost control of its tail rotor, "touched down in a right skid ... and slid into a metal container, destroying the aircraft." For years, safety experts have warned that because of faulty design the Kiowa helicopter tends to lose its "tail rotor effectiveness" under certain conditions, and the result is usually a crash. In fact, Bell has developed a kit that takes care of the problem.

— "Wind" was blamed for another Kiowa crash because it was blowing from the wrong direction. "Winds were 30 degrees from left, which placed aircraft in mode known to produce loss of tail rotor effectiveness," the Army report explained. There was no suggestion that perhaps a chopper should be able to maneuver without crashing whenever the wind hits it from a certain direction.

— On a training mission in West Germany, a pilot knocked the landing gear off because his co-pilot, responsible for telling the pilot how far from the ground they were, wasn't paying attention. The helicopter had to hover for half an hour while ground crewmen hastily piled up 30 mattresses for it to land on. How this came to be included in "weather-related" accidents is unclear.

— Six helicopters in West Germany had rough landings — but no injuries resulted — when they took off in weather so bad that the mission should have been canceled. The real reason for the mishap was poor judgment, as the official report suggested. "The decision to go was a product of three types of pressure: self-imposed, peer and command. The crews wanted to fly the mission for the new commander if at all possible. Nobody wanted to be left behind, especially if somebody else could get through."

— A crew chief helping passengers off a helicopter slipped in the snow. As he fell, his helmet hit the chopper's antenna and broke it off. Weather-related.

— A helicopter slammed into a wire strung between two trees about 15 feet off the ground. "Rising sun in the eyes of crew members" made the accident weather-related, though the Army did acknowledge that "unit that strung wire did not notify operations of the hazard, nor was it on the wire hazards map."

— During a night rappelling exercise in California, a helicopter hovered too far above the ground, even though the crew were wearing night-vision goggles. The first soldier down the rope fell 10 feet to the ground, when he presumably let the crew know about its error. "Visibility" made the incident "weather-related."

PAPER CHASE: It took some doing to get to the bottom of this, but we've learned that the Pentagon's supply headquarters recently ran out of toilet tissue and paper towels for 24 hours. The supply depot at Cameron Station in Alexandria, Va., just down the road from the Pentagon, provides everything from transformers to tableware for the armed services. But due to an oversight by the janitorial contractor, many Cameron Station bathrooms were without the paper necessities — until an employee bought the required supplies at a self-service store on the base.

TERRORISTS NOT WELCOME: The Reagan administration is delighted with Kuwait. The tiny country recently declared it will no longer be a refuge for terrorists. This is a dramatic change. In the past, Palestinian and other terrorists could always count on Kuwait for safe haven. Now those responsible for bombing the U.S. and French embassies there have been tried, convicted and imprisoned. And, despite terrorist threats, the government has refused to set them free.

LOBBYISTS LAMENT: The American-Israel Public Affairs Committee is afraid it may have peaked too soon in its campaign to block the sale of arms to Jordan. The White House decided to postpone the sale until March. The stalling tactic caused consternation at AIPAC, which had been lining up its big guns on Capitol Hill for months, ready to blast the arms deal to bits. Now the lobbyists are faced with a five-month delay, and they're not sure they can maintain opposition to the sale at the fever pitch such things often demand.

GEORGE F. WILL

Soviets still rely on 'overkill'

GENEVA — When tranquil, as he usually is, George Shultz resembles an Easter Island statue. When aroused he is more oyster-like, unquestionably alive but undemonstrative. However, he reportedly was quite exercised in Moscow when Mikhail Gorbachev treated him to a rude and ignorant lecture about the pathologies of American society. That episode probably strengthened the President's tendency — a tendency as quintessentially American as Ronald Reagan himself — to regard his Soviet adversary as either a patient or a pupil, someone to be treated or taught.

George F. Will

When statesmen's heads touch Swiss pillows, the heads often acquire the pillow's attribute: soft. But the President's peculiar hopes were acquired in Washington and reflect an alarming continuity grounded in national character.

At the first meeting between a President and a Soviet leader — Tehran, 1943 — Roosevelt decided he could apply to Stalin the American therapeutic and didactic impulses. The theory was that his charm, and the wartime alliance with democracies, would wean Stalin from his paranoia and misunderstandings.

Because a prophet's most important qualification is an adequate memory, it was easy to predict that Reagan, whose politically formative years were Roosevelt years, would see the summit as a chance to dispense "reassurance" and information to Gorbachev. Reagan, who in five years has failed to modify Tip O'Neill's views of America, came here convinced, according to a senior aide, that "personal dialogue" would alter Gorbachev's views of America. But those views are products of the ideological prism through which reality is refracted for Leninists. Presidential dialogue will change those views when the sky rains artichokes.

A wit once asked, If a little knowledge is a dangerous thing, who has enough to be out of danger? Fair enough. But how much is needed to refute Reagan's notion that the summit could "eliminate some of the paranoia, if we could reduce the hostility, the suspicion that keeps our two countries at odds"?

Paranoia is a condition susceptible to therapy and cure, and hence is a comforting diagnosis of Soviet behavior. Also comforting is the Reagan thought (reported by an aide) that Soviet "mistrust" is rigid in a historically "understandable fear of aggression from outside." However, the Soviet army has been fighting in Afghanistan two years longer than it fought Hitler. It is fighting not because of a paranoid fear of invasion, but because the Soviet system is organized for aggression.

Rumors flitting like barn swallows in and out of Washington windows recently included this one, which I believe: One briefing paper suggested that Reagan begin the summit by telling Gorbachev that our countries have had similar experiences. Our country had to settle the West, his had to conquer Siberia; and indeed, California and Siberia are sort of similar accomplishments. The foreign-policy bureaucracy has lots of ideas, and consistently proves the old point that a man is not necesarily intelligent because he has many ideas, any more than a man is a good general just because he has many soldiers.

Like most Presidents, and especially like the one who set out to seduce Stalin 42 years ago, Reagan does not have an inclination toward theory. Rather, he has an experiencing nature. He responds to individuals and individual situations, and assumes other leaders are like him. Furthermore, politicians in democracies prosper through persuasion, and those who prosper most spectacularly acquire Rooseveltian vanity or Reaganite serenity regarding the amount of ice that will be melted by the sunshine of their personalities.

The desire to deal with an adversary in "human terms," with the adversary somehow shorn of his culturally acquired attributes (such as Leninism), is understandable. But it leads to confusing psychology with politics. To believe an adversary is adversarial only because of "unreasonableness" rooted in historical experiences is to recast diplomacy as therapeutic anthropology.

There may be a guileful side, to this talk about soothing and instructing the Soviets. A summit that is described in advance as therapeutic in intention can be called a success simply because it occurs. By this semantic fiat, frothy ideas such as cultural exchanges — Beach Boys for ballerinas — are not beside the point, they are the central point: more therapy-through-"communication."

Whether the President's rhetorical run-up to the summit has been naively optimistic about modifying Soviet behavior, or cunningly calculated to lower expectations for concrete results here, or a bit of both, clearly the Soviet side is investing a lot in "communication." It has deployed an unprecedented number of briefers and interviewees.

The Soviet Union is (in Orwell's words) a place where yesterday's weather can be changed by decree, and Soviet respect for the power of words is proportional to Soviet disrespect for the integrity of them. The Soviet regime relies on overkill in all things, and for this summit has borrowed the capitalist form of it: When the product is shoddy, double the advertising budget.

ART BUCHWALD

Defecting Soviet spies don't pay!

I was jogging in Langley, Va., when I spied K in rubber boots hosing down a Ford in the CIA car wash. This surprised me because K ranked fourth from the top in the Company's hierarchy and was the last person I expected to see swabbing cars.

"What gives?" I asked him.

K cussed. "I owe this to Vitaly Yurchenko."

"You knew Vitaly Yurchenko?"

"I not only knew him, I was his baby sitter."

Art Buchwald

I said, "I'm impressed."

"Don't be. That's why I'm washing cars."

"What a tumble for No. 4 in the firm."

"Somebody had to be the fall guy when the rat redefected to Moscow. K sat on the bumper of a sedan. "As Yurchenko's nanny my orders were to stay with him day and night and see that all his needs were taken care of. If he wanted pizza I got him pizza, if he wanted to see an X-rated movie on a VCR I checked one out, and if he wanted to play Trivial Pursuit I gave him all the easy questions. There wasn't anything I couldn't produce including two tickets to the Redskins game."

"I didn't know the CIA had Redskins tickets."

"We don't. Someone in our basement forges them for us when we're on Company business."

"Were you the one who took Yurchenko to Ottawa so he could meet his Soviet mistress?"

"Of course I was. Yurchenko told me as we drove up that all he had to do to get his loved one to defect was whistle. But it didn't work out that way. Yurchenko whistled and his paramour gave him the Bronx cheer."

"KGB agents were never good lovers."

"It was a gamble. What we didn't know was that Natasha or whatever the hell her name was had been stringing Yurchenko along. She never had any intention of running off with him and raising a houseful of little defectors in Virginia."

What did Yurchenko do when he realized he had made the trip for nothing?"

"He went into a funk and told me he no longer believed in the American dream."

Nothing you've told me so far explains what you are doing in the CIA car wash."

Although the Ottawa trip did not go as expected I was forgiven by the director and still permitted to be Yurchenko's baby sitter. I took him to the Smithsonian, the Kennedy Center, the Capitol and stood in line six hours for a tour of the White House."

"Isn't that a dangerous place for a defector?"

"The Soviets would never look for a turncoat in a tourist line at the White House. In any case, my job was to keep him happy. The only thing that drove me up the wall was Yurchenko never picked up a tab. I mean, we're talking about 120 days of breakfast, lunch and dinner. Every time the check came he sat there with his hands in his pockets and pretended he didn't see the saucer. Wouldn't this tee you off?"

"Yes, it would. But wasn't it the CIA's money?"

"Maybe so, but Yurchenko could at least have made a gesture. The final straw was when I took him to dinner at the Au Pied de Cochon in Georgetown. I made up my mind that for just once Vitaly was going to pay the bill. When it came we sat there staring at each other. I didn't make a move, and neither did he. Finally he said to me, 'What if I walked out of this restaurant without paying the check? Would you shoot me?' I said, 'Of course not. We don't shoot cheap defectors who won't pick up the tab.' So Yurchenko got up and left. I gave the waiter my credit card, but by the time he returned it was too late. Yurchenko was sleeping safely in the Soviet Embassy."

I said, "Now I understand everything except why they assigned you to the car wash."

K wiped a fender with a chamois cloth. "The boys on the seventh floor believe this is the best place to hide until Bill Casey no longer wants to kill me."

Mandela: U.S. condones '20th Century slavery'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wife of jailed South African black leader Nelson Mandela, accepting the Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights Award, said the Reagan administration's policies toward the Pretoria government have condemned her people to "20th century slavery."

Winnie Mandela charged that the Reagan administration considers civil rights for black South Africans to be against U.S. interests.

"Your government has taken the view that our liberation would be a setback to its own sphere of influence," she said Wednesday in a filmed statement at the Kennedy awards ceremony at Georgetown University.

Mrs. Mandela, who was barred from leaving South Africa to receive the award, said, "Your government condemns us to a 20th century slavery by echoing the propaganda of the racist regime" in South Africa.

Sharing the award were the Rev. Allan Boesak, a mixed-race minister who founded the anti-apartheid United Democratic Front, and the Rev. C.F. Beyers Naude, a white South African who was banned by his government for seven years and who succeeded Bishop Desmond Tutu this year as secretary general of the South African Council of Churches.

Boesak also was not allowed to leave South Africa to accept the award. He was charged with subversion last month and released on bail with severe restrictions following his arrest for planning a march on the prison holding Nelson Mandela.

In her statement, Mrs. Mandela described as a failure the administration's policy of "constructive engagement," or using quiet diplomatic means to urge reform in South Africa's apartheid system of racial separation.

"We ask no more than what the people of the United States enjoy as a basic right: the right of each person to have one vote," she said.

"The South Africa regime has declared war on children," she added. "Some as young as seven are in detention. They are supposed to be a danger to the racist regime."

Her husband was sentenced in 1964 to life in prison, and since then Mrs. Mandela has been jailed, banned and banished by the South African government.

Boesak's wife, Dorothy, and 8-year-old son, Allan Jr., accepted his award.

"My daddy would like to be with you this morning but he can't because the government won't give him a passport," Boesak's son said.

Naude, who broke with the Dutch Reformed Church in 1963, appeared in person and called on the United States to use its economic power "to force South Africa to abolish this evil system of apartheid."

House delays immigration issue of harvest-time 'guest workers'

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — A House Judiciary subcommittee has completed action on an immigration reform measure, sidestepping a vote on a new "guest worker" program to permit thousands of foreigners into the United States to harvest crops.

The guest worker issue will be dealt with when the bill is before the full Judiciary Committee and on the House floor.

Immigration Subcommittee Chairman Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., said Tuesday he hopes the full committee will take up the bill the first week of December.

Delay in tackling the foreign worker provision is aimed at giving Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y., and a group of Democrats from California time to work out a compromise.

Many farmers and depend upon illegal foreign labor to harvest crops. Allied with other groups, they helped to kill the 1984 immigration reform bill that passed both houses but died in a conference committee as time ran out on the 98th Congress.

This year, growers say they will support new sanctions against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens. But, as a trade off, they want a new program to assure them of an adequate labor force at harvest time.

The Senate earlier this year passed an immigration bill providing criminal and civil penalties for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens. The most controversial aspect of the Senate's version is a new program to admit up to 300,000 foreign workers for as long as nine months

NATION in brief

U.S. to sell China nuclear technology

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has approved 19 requests to provide U.S. nuclear technology to China and 27 more are pending, but none of the information will be provided until an atomic agreement between the two nations takes effect next month, U.S. officials say.

The requests were made under U.S. laws that are not part of the pending agreement, the officials told Congress on Wednesday.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, took aim at the agreement Wednesday at a hearing of the Senate Governmental Affairs nuclear proliferation subcommittee. He also castigated the Energy Department for approving the 19 requests in view of congressional opposition to the pending agreement.

The cooperation agreement was signed by the United States and China last July. It would permit the sale of American reactors and other technology China wants for its ambitious civilian nuclear power program.

Rig crashes monument

WASHINGTON (AP) — The driver of an 18-wheel tractor trailer was arrested after crashing his rig into the Washington Monument.

Garrow Ernest Brigham, 36, of Savage, Md., drove across 500 feet of grounds and through two small fences and rows of benches before hitting the monument, said U.S. Park Police Major Richard Cusick.

"We have not determined a motive, but there were no articles in the truck to indicate that he meant to harm the monument," said George Berklacy, a spokesman for the park service.

Brigham's rig scraped against the obelisk, denting his cab and leaving a streak of green paint about four feet long across the northwest side of the structure.

No one was injured in the incident. Damage was estimated at $3,500 by the National Park Service.

Boxing bill approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas lawmaker says federal law should forbid people convicted of felonies from working in the sport of boxing, claiming they are "leeches" who prey on honest, hard-working fighters.

The comments by Rep. Ralph Hall, D-Texas, came Wednesday as a House subcommittee approved a bill that would establish a federal boxing commission to draw up voluntary rules aimed at making the sport safer.

The measure will now be considered by the full House Energy and Commerce Committee.

Women charge adultery

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A Navy commander facing court-martial on fraternization and adultery charges lodged by four enlisted women says he will be cleared.

Capt. Peter S. Corr Jr., commander of the Naval Education and Training Center, said Wednesday there was probable cause to present the charges against Cmdr. John R. Hollis to a general court-martial.

The four enlisted women testified at a hearing last month that Hollis, 38, violated military regulations by pursuing them romantically.

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders may be able to turn the heat down Friday as temperatures are expected to warm in the Permian Basin area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for partly cloudy skies and a low in the upper 30s tonight, warming to a high near 70 Friday. Tonight's winds will be from the south at five to 15 mph, continuing through Friday.

Wednesday's high of 50 was 33 degrees below the record high set in 1942. This morning's low was seven degrees above the 1975 record of 25 degrees.

STATE

Clearing skies and warmer temperatures were on the horizon for all of Texas tonight and Friday.

But warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico covered most of the state early today, resulting in a cloud cover for all but extreme West Texas.

It was to be cloudy over North Texas and South Texas today, with the clearing trend to begin in North Texas tonight.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 50s in South Texas. Highs Friday will mostly in the 50s and 60s except in the 70s in South Texas and near 80 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Some light rain was reported during the night and early today in North Central Texas and drizzle was reported in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Skies were clear to partly cloudy over West Texas and clear over extreme West Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 50s along the coast and in deep South Texas.

NATION

Snow and bone-chilling cold blanketed the western half of the nation today, with near-blizzard conditions expected in the Colorado Rockies.

Michigan's upper peninsula got up to 16 inches of snow Wednesday night, and 80-mph winds sent a freighter crashing into a pier near the Soo Locks in Sault Ste. Marie, causing a 35-foot gash in the ship's side. No one was injured, the Coast Guard said.

A winter storm watch was posted over the northern mountains of Utah and Colorado early today. Travelers' advisories for snow were posted for eastern Oregon, the Columbia River Gorge and Cascades of Oregon, Nevada's Lake Tahoe region, Idaho and western Wyoming.

Unheralded Reb defenders get job done

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The names on Midland Lee's 1985 defensive unit are about as obscure as the names of the privates who died in the Alamo.

Only those fans closely associated with the Rebels can name more than two or three defensive players. Yet, here is a defensive unit that has given up just under 13 points a game and seems to be getting better and better with each passing week.

Some will remember 21 points by Midland High, 28 by Abilene High and 27 by Big Spring. Others will remember the games against offensive powers like Odessa High, Odessa Permian and San Angelo where the Rebs gave up a combined meager total of 26 points.

"We don't have any stars on the defense. That's for sure," says defensive coordinator Earl Miller, who coaches the linebackers. "We have to have a team concept with this group or we would get kicked off the field. These kids have done a good job with what they have to work with."

Three "No-Name" examples that have helped to make Lee a playoff deserving defense are defensive end Brad Cooper, tackle Ronald Pertile and linebacker Jay Roach. They are by no means the whole defensive unit, but they are examples of why the Rebels have become a good defensive team. Anyone seeing Lee's 13-7 win over Amarillo High last weekend would have to agree.

ROACH, LEE'S strong side linebacker, is the veteran of the two. Roach had a lot of playing time last year during Lee's 12-2 season at linebacker, but was not a starter. He was used a lot in certian passing situations last year.

"Jay has become a leader for us," notes Miller. "He is good at taking the run and pass away against all formations. In our league, you have to have a good strong side linebacker who can make adjustments on the field. Jay fits that mold because he thinks on the field. He has a 4.0 grade point average or better in the classroom."

Roach, who is second on the team in tackles with 98 and seven against Amarillo High, had his biggest moment in the Odessa High game when he tackled Garry Powell for a loss on a two-point conversion attempt in Lee's 7-6 win.

"I feel like I have a lot more responsibility in the area of leadership and as a player as a senior starter," notes Roach. "Being in the playoffs during your senior season is something special. It would have been a pretty sad thing if we hadn't made the playoffs this year.

"We have pride in our defense and we seem to be getting better. What we need to do now is play the first half like we do the second half. We've been a great second half team this year. You can tell all the running we do during the week pays off because our conditioning seems to help in the fourth quarter. I think we wear some teams down."

Miller added, "Roach was the third team center during his sophomore spring training and wanted to switch to linebacker. He was kind of like Pool Webb, who was a quarterback that we converted to a linebacker last year. At linebacker, we take anything we can get and try to coach them the best we can. Some of these kids really work out — like Roach."

COOPER ENTERED the 1985 season considered as a second or third team defensive end. His fame had come in track where he was known for running away from opponents instead of over and through them. Now he is considered one of the best defensive ends in District 4-5A.

Defensive line coach Eddie Wolski says of Cooper, "Brad was thinking about giving up on football and putting all his attention into track. I asked him — I begged him — to give football another shot. He has quickness and speed, but he isn't big at 170 pounds. He plays a lot with his heart."

Cooper had 14 tackles against Amarillo High. He has produced eight quarterback sacks and pressured the passer 12 times while causing three fumbles.

"I think our defense has played pretty well considering the fact that we aren't as big as the team has been the last two years. We've been able to adjust at the half in our games and that has proven to be important," says Cooper. "The coaches talk to us, then we talk to each other and get things straightened out. I've always played defensive end, but I wasn't sure I was going to play that much this year. I did consider just staying with track, but I'm glad I didn't."

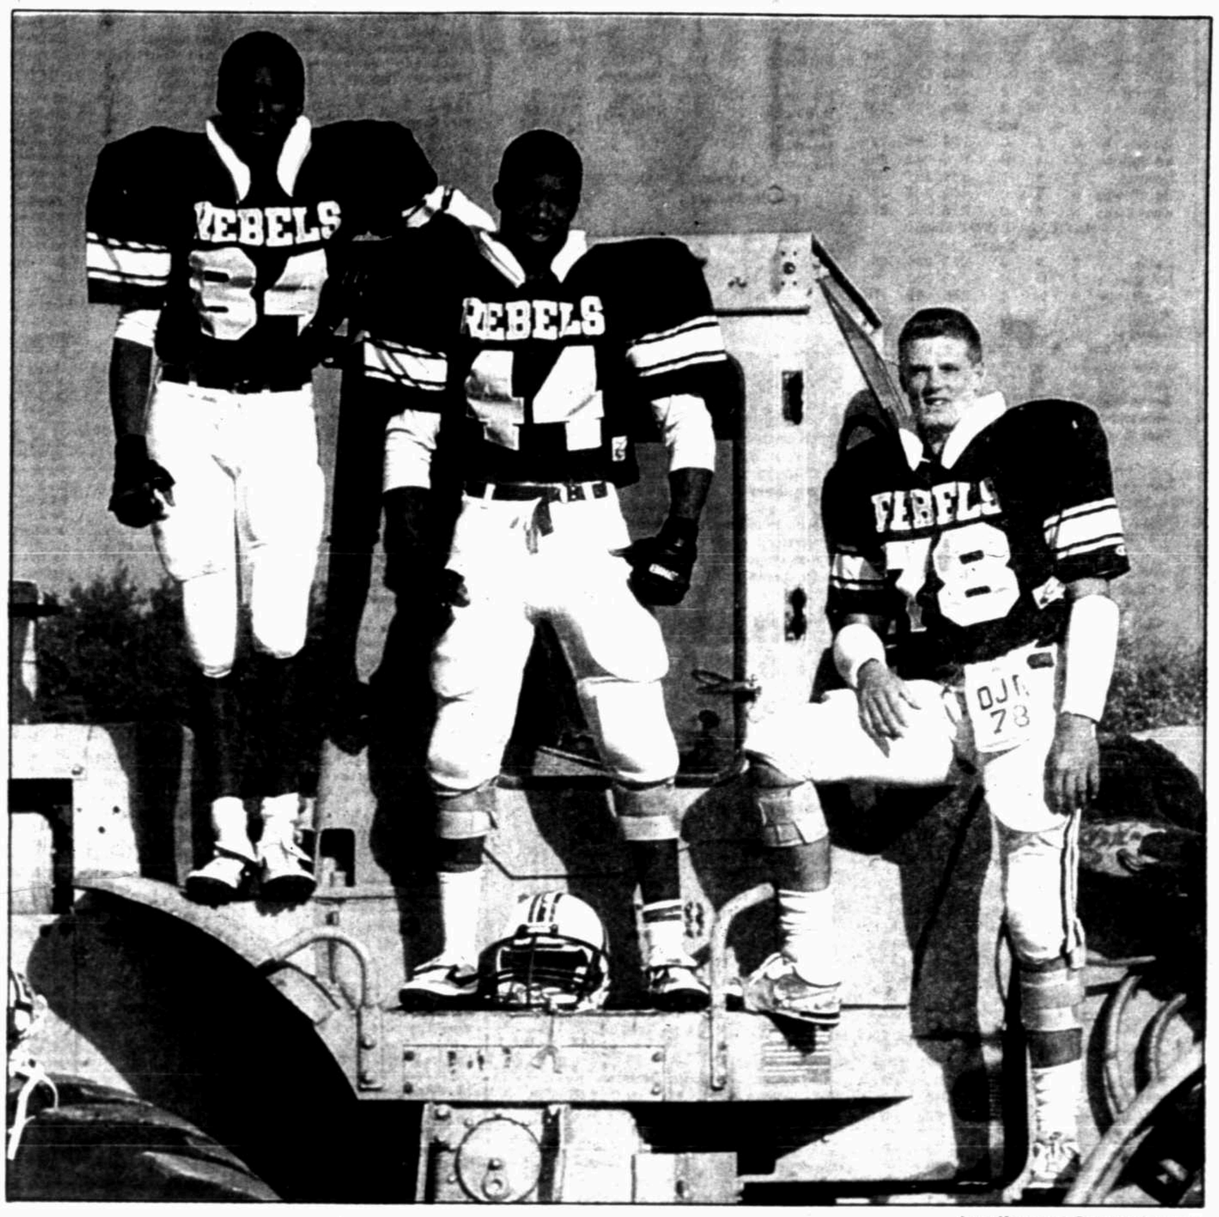

PERTILE WEARS the unlikely number of 44 at defensive tackle. That's because he started the season as a linebacker, gathering some splinters on the bench. Pertile's story is almost a rags-to-riches affair.

"Ronald was a fourth team linebacker and we ran into the situation where we needed some defensive linemen due to some injuries. Ronald was willing to make the switch. He wanted to do anything he could to earn a starting job," said Wolski.

Miller said, "It was either moving Pertile to tackle or playing Wolski there. And Wolski is slower than I am. We really didn't have a choice, but the kid has really come around."

Pertile weighs only 180 pounts, which is small for a defensive tackle, but he has 69 tackles, five quarterback sacks and caused three fumbles. He had 10 tackles against Amarillo High.

Austin-Permian: Exception or rule?

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

EL PASO — In recent years, District 4-5A hasn't been having too much trouble in games against El Paso schools. One-sided wipeouts have been the rule, not the exception.

Friday night, 4-5A champion Odessa Permian travels to the border city to take on District 1-5A runner-up El Paso Austin in the Sun Bowl at 7:30 p.m. Both coaches are expecting this to be the exception.

"They're 8-3 for the year at the present time," said Permian mentor John Wilkins. "The main thing about them is they've got the leading 5A rusher in the state of Texas with in tailback Steven Lee, 2,194 yards and averaging right at 200 a game.

"He's got good moves, good quickness and good speed. Not great speed but good. Any guy who averages 200 yards a game by himself is a factor to be reckoned with.

"They've got another good back in Carl Gerry, their fullback at 5-foot-10, 200 pounds. He had 140 yards last week and he keeps you honest up the middle.

"We've got to slow Lee down, not let him have a 200-yard game against us if we expect to win. We can't let him break the long run. We know he's going to get some yards against us but we hope it's three or four a whack and not 30 or 40."

Austin coach Carlos Lowenberg has a lot of respect for Permian, especially after last year's 56-0 defeat. However, he doesn't believe his team is an automatic loser this year.

"There's not a whole lot you can say about Permian," said Lowenberg. "They're a heck of a ball club. We feel we can play with them. We don't feel like they're quite as strong as last year. Defensively, the probably are, but offensively, they don't seem to have quite the same talent withouth their big fullback Dal Watson and quarterback Alton Holloway."

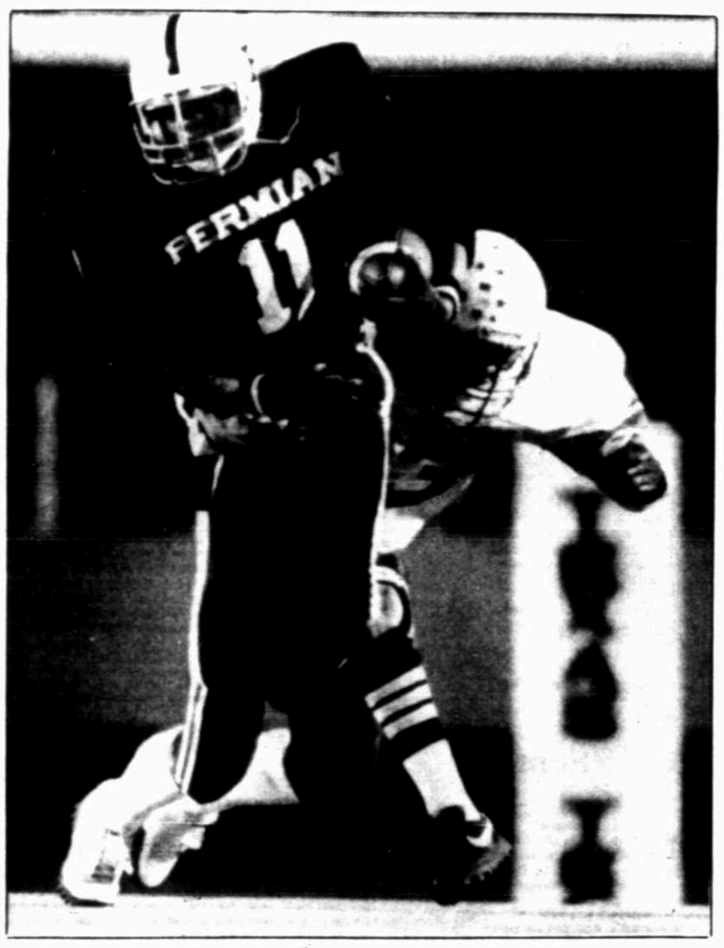

While Lowenberg feels Permian's offensive isn't as strong as last year, he remembers all to well one kid back for his senior year. Split end Greg Anderson.

"We didn't play Anderson very well last year," said Lowenberg. "We manned him up with Steven Lee and it was an awful mistake. We didn't cover him well to the inside. We don't know how we're going to stop him this year, but we're working on it."

"El Paso really isn't a passing team," said Wilkins. "They throw sparingly but effectively when they do. They like to run, run, run, run and throw a pass to catch you off guard."

DEFENSIVELY, THE El Paso Panthers "run out of a 5-2, odd-man front," said Wilkins. "They like to blitz their linebackers on occasion. They've got good quickness, really good overall quickness, on defense particularly."

Red Devils' attack: Going, going, gone

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The big play is a big part of any offense, but for the Rankin Red Devils, it sometimes seems to BE the offense.

The big play carried the Devils to a runner-up position in District 6-A and into the Bi-district playoffs Friday at 7:30 in Fort Stockton against Fort Davis. Iraan, the 6-A champs, will meet Dell City Saturday at 2 p.m. in Iraan.

Nineteen times Rankin has pulled off scoring plays of more than 30 yards this season, 13 of them on the ground. Fullback Randy Fulton leads the Devils' charge with 1,017 yards rushing and a 6.7 yard per carry average. Sophomore quarterback Mick McCravey comes up next with 553 yards and a 5.8 average while another sophomore, George Abalos has gained 402 yards on the season.

"Any time our linemen block out a hole, with our speed, we're capable of going all the way," Rankin coach Dwayne Turner said. "When these kids break out in the open, we know they can break it all the way."

TURNER IS hoping he can reach into the well one more time against an Indians' defense that has been stingy in allowing the big play.

"I'm really impressed with their quickness, especially the quickness of their backs," Fort Davis coach Tom Howard said. "We've got to contain their backs and keep them from making that big play. Fortunately, we haven't given up too many."

Class A Playoffs

The Indians lost a pair of pre-district games, both to teams in Rankin's district. First a 14-0 decision to Wink, a team Rankin beat 40-0, and a 55-0 blowout by Iraan. Rankin also fell to the undefeated Braves, but just by a hairs-breath, 13-12.

"Against Wink we played our worst offensive game in two years," Howard said. "We turned the ball over seven times. In the Iraan game, we didn't even show up."

FOR FORT Davis, making its second consecutive playoff trip, the key is keeping the ball out of the hands of the fleet Rankin backfield. To do that, Howard will employ a potent backfield threesome of his own.

Quarterback John Henderson guides an option-oriented attack and has racked up 735 rushing yards of his own. Sophomore tailback Daniel Granada is the biggest threat in the Indian backfield with his 4.6 speed in the 40-yard dash. Granada has run for 1,107 yards and, at 165 pounds, is tough to bring down — if he can be caught. The fullback, Adam Morales, can't be overlooked either. His 751 yards attest to that.

"They're a big team, they have good size on the line and their backs are big, too," Turner said. "After seeing them on film, there is no way we could be overconfident going in."

Bears of '85 like Raiders of old

For all those loyal fans who felt betrayed when the Oakland Raiders went Hollywood, don't despair. There is an alternative.

Proof positive was witnessed Sunday in Texas Stadium when the Chicago Bears terrorized the Dallas Cowboys, 44-0.

In a frightening demonstration of physical football, the Bears were everything the Raiders, even back in their uncouth Oakland days, were and more.

It was enough to give pause to a one-time Bears fan, who had abandoned Chicago after they had become only a faint memory of the Monsters of the Midway back in his youth.

Dallas may be America's Team, but it represents Texas and all it stands for, yet the Bears were the Roughnecks. This isn't the type of company you'd want in your living room, but there they were on Sunday afternoon, breaking up the furniture and brutalizing the residents while endeavoring to make it seem all palatable by using an oversized Refrigerator for laughs to break up the sadistic display of ill-manners.

Laughs? How'd you like a 308-pound behemoth fall on top of you, as he did Danny White? And this is one Danny got up from.

Don't get the idea that the Bears are cast in the mold of the Raiders, a team that jawed improprieties and threats and then indulged in just enough cheap shots to establish a reputation as bullies.

A couple of years ago after a very verbal game in Texas Stadium, Drew Pearson related how one of the Raiders' meanest linebackers directed a steady stream of invectives at a young and innocent wide receiver from Ohio State.

Drew listened for a while and finally said, "Matt, you're just wasting your time talking like that to Doug, he doesn't even know what most of those words mean."

Like the Raiders, the Bears talk, but then they go out and back it up with the kind of viciousness that has not only restored the appellation of Monsters, but made Chicago the most feared defense in the league.

As savage as is the nature of the Bears' assaults, apparently, by today's standards, it's all perfectly legal. But it still seems the treatment accorded White is, how do they put it, "dehumanizing" and perhaps steps should be taken.

The primitive image promoted by the Bears is aided by those uniforms.

When quarterback Steve Fuller was asked whether the Cowboys deserved to be called America's Team after Sunday's humiliation, his "They still have pretty uniforms" may have been prompted by a little envy.

Over the years, the memory plays tricks, but these seem to be the same uniforms the Bears wore back in 1940 when they devastated Washington 73-0 in the NFL championship game. Perhaps, the numbers are an inch or two bigger, a concession to larger stadiums.

The suspicion was strengthened during the post-game interviews in their cave under the stands. Underneath those outer shells are floppy-eared leather helmets. In fact, I think I saw a No. 77 on the one worn by Walter Payton.

It seems only appropriate that the Bears play in Soldier Field, the oldest stadium in the NFL. If you are going to stage a bare-knuckle fight, a barge is the suitable site, not Madison Square Garden.

UT signs seven-footer

AUSTIN — George Muller, a 7-foot-1 center from Wayne High School in Huber Heights, Ohio, has decided to play basketball for the Texas Longhorns next year.

The Austin American-Statesman quoted Wayne High principal Alex DeNino as saying Muller had committed to Texas on Tuesday. Muller averaged eight points, seven rebounds and three blocked shots per game as a junior.

Three tied for Phoenix lead

MIYAZAKI, Japan (AP) — Spain's Seve Ballesteros and Tsuneyuki Nakajima and Motomasa Aoki of Japan each shot a 5-under-par 67 Thursday for a share of the lead after the first round of the $600,000 Dunlop Phoenix Golf Tournament.

Ballesteros, who has won this tournament twice, birdied three of the first four holes and sank a 25-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole.

He had two other birdies and one bogey on the 7,032-yard, par-72 Miyazaki Phoenix Country Club course in southern Japan.

"I want to keep this position until the final round," Ballesteros said.

Nakajima, the leading money winner on the Japan PGA tour this year and Aoki each picked up five birdies.

"My tee shots were perfect today," Nakajima said. He also expressed confidence about becoming the first Japanese player to win the tournament, Japan's richest. Foreign players have won all 11 previous tournaments.

One stroke off the pace at 68 was Craig Stadler, followed by five players at 69 — Hubert Green, Taiwan's Chen Tze-chung and Japan's Koichi Uehara, Hideto Shigenobu and Yasuhiro Miyamoto.

Mattingly wins runaway victory in MVP balloting

More Sports, Pages 6B, 7B, 8B

By MURRAY CHASS
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Don Mattingly, who did just about everything this year except put the Yankees into the playoffs, achieved a runaway victory Wednesday in the voting for the American League's most valuable player award. In so doing, Mattingly became the first person to stop the Kansas City Royals in a postseason contest.

Mattingly easily defeated George Brett, who led the Royals into the playoffs and then the World Series championship. Mattingly became the first player on a non-championship team to win the award since Jim Rice of the Boston Red Sox won in 1978.

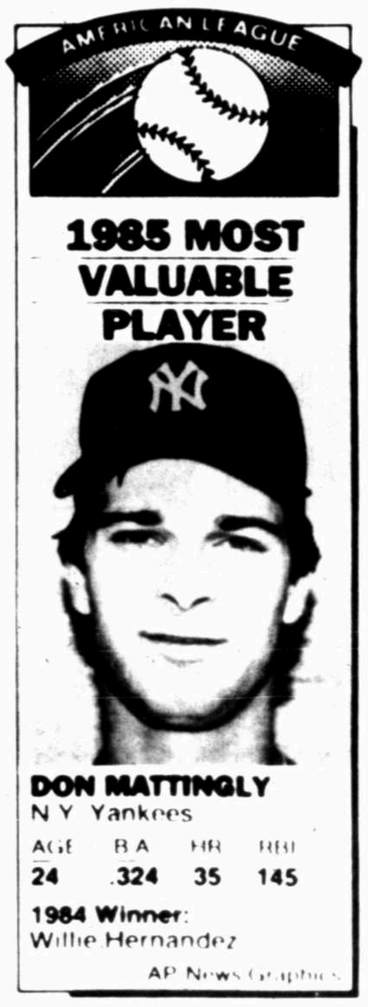

In the voting, conducted before the postseason by a panel of 28 members of the Baseball Writers Association of America, two from each league city, Mattingly received 23 first-place votes and 5 second-place votes for a total of 367 points. Brett, whose September slump might have cost him votes, was named first on five ballots, second on 20 and third on three for a total of 274 points. They were the only players named on all 28 ballots.

Rickey Henderson, the Yankees' offensive catalyst, was third with 174 points and was followed by Wade Boggs of Boston with 159, Eddie Murray of Baltimore 130, Donnie Moore of California 96, Jesse Barfield of Toronto 88, George Bell of Toronto 84 and Harold Baines of Chicago 49.

Bret Saberhagen, Brett's teammate and the Cy Young award winner as the league's top pitcher, was 10th with 45 points. Other Yankees who placed in the voting were Dave Winfield, 12th with 35 points, and Ron Guidry, 15th with 15.

Willie McGee of St. Louis won the National League award on Monday, giving the Yankees' minor league system a sweep of the major league most-valuable honors. Both Mattingly and McGee began their professional careers in the Yankee system and played together at Nashville of the Southern League in 1981. McGee was traded to St. Louis after that season, but the Yankees held onto Mattingly.

In only his second full season in the majors, Mattingly, who is 24 years old, led the majors with 145 runs batted in, batted .324 (third in the American League) and hit 35 home runs (fourth in the league). He also led the majors in doubles (48) and led the league in total bases (370) and extra-base hits (86). Defensively, he led American League first basemen with a .995 fielding average.

"I never dreamed of putting those kinds of numbers up," Mattingly said at a Yankee Stadium news conference Wednesday night. "There's no way you can say I'm going to get 140 or 150 r.b.i. and over 30 homers."

Yet, last spring, on the night that the Yankees renewed Mattingly's contract for the 1985 season, he angrily said his time would come. "I'll have the hammer next time," he said.

He said Wednesday that he had made his spring remarks out of frustration over his failure to achieve what he thought he was worth as 1984 batting champion, but when reminded of the "hammer" comment, he said, "I guess I do have it now."

Combining base salary and bonuses, Mattingly earned $455,000 this year ($5,000 more than Dwight Gooden, whose contract his was patterned after). The total included a $50,000 bonus for the mvp award. Fifteen other first basemen earned more money than Mattingly, with Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia who was moved from third to first, making the most, $2,130,300.

Negotiations for a new contract have barely begun. Jim Krivacs, Mattingly's agent, has met once with George Steinbrenner, the Yankee owner.

"I'm trying not to anticipate anything," Mattingly said. "Let Jim handle it. I'll stay away from it as much as possible. I don't think there's anything for me to be around about."

There will be one major difference in his negotiations this year: If Krivacs and Steinbrenner can't agree on a one-year or multiyear contract, Mattingly can go to salary arbitration, where he can show that seven first basemen will be earning more than $1 million next season, and his production this year exceeded theirs.

Mattingly is the 11th Yankee to win the most valuable player award, but those 11 have won a total of 18 times. Thurman Munson was the last previous Yankee winner, in 1976. The last Yankee first baseman to win was Lou Gehrig in 1936.

Mattingly appeared at the news conference with his right hand still bandaged from minor surgery on the little finger.

"About halfway through the season," he explained, "I felt a little tightness in my hand, a catching when I closed my hand. It would kind of snap. It hurt, but it didn't affect my hitting. I thought about not having it done now, but I decided I might as well."

Niekro felt he'd pitch for Braves again

ATLANTA (AP) — Knuckleball pitcher Phil Niekro says he felt he would pitch again for the Atlanta Braves, but he gives the team credit for wanting to develop its stable of young pitchers.

Braves General Manager Bobby Cox said the club decided against bidding for Niekro as a free agent because it wants to develop its younger pitchers, including Paul Assenmacher, Marty Clary, Duane Ward and Matt West.

Niekro insisted he can still pitch in the major leagues and said he plans to play next season, possibly with the Yankees.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A cash prize or promotion could soon be yours. Get expert advice on the best way to handle a complicated financial matter. Free choice is very important to a parent-child relationship. Use your talents to help a wonderful cause. The romantic outlook is particularly bright at Christmas. Steal away from the crowds and have a heart-to-heart talk with that special someone. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actress Jamie Lee Curtis ("Perfect"), tennis great Billie Jean King, Rodney Dangerfield, 1985 Wimbledon winner Boris Becker of West Germany, director Arthur Hiller, actress Geraldine Page, actor Robert Vaughn, music man Hoagy Carmichael, France's Charles de Gaulle.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Defer judgment until you have more facts and figures. A minor conflict leads you to take decisive action where your career or finances are concerned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel opportunities abound. An educational question will be settled in the near future. A scholarship is part of the picture. Group activities could prove more rewarding than one-on-one encounters tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A conflict could arise between career and home life. A compromise averts an emotional confrontation. Spend more time with teen-agers and recent disagreements will soon be forgotten.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It may be time to form a new partnership. Get everything in writing to avoid problems later on. You benefit from consulting a lawyer or accountant. A conservative approach pays dividends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Timing is your most important tool -- use it wisely. Financial security is a top priority. Follow the advice of experts only. Someone who flatters you could have ulterior motives. Go slow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Welcome a chance to travel. Take along mate or partner if you can. A mini-vacation leaves you feeling rejuvenated. Postpone signing a rental contract until better terms are available.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Communicating with a parent or older relative could be difficult. Buckle down to work and you will impress someone influential with your zeal. Romance looks more promising than in the recent past.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A conflict with an authority figure will require all of the patience and tact you can muster. Important events occur on the home front.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A new project receives backing from an unexpected quarter. A change in personnel could lead to a promotion or transfer. Set more realistic goals and you will have fewer disappointments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friendship and finance do not mix now. Forget about going into business with a friend or relative. A sudden extravagance could be your undoing. Remember your budget!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone who has annoyed you extends an olive branch. Be gracious. You bolster your financial position by mending broken fences. Stubbornness may pay off in business, but it will only bring trouble in romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your close associates are helpful but will expect favors in return. Push harder to get a special project underway. The financial picture looks bright. You and romantic partner enjoy unusual rapport.

Just because the defenders are trying to do horrible things to you does not mean that you have to submit meekly to their nefarious schemes. Stand up and fight.

We understand the frustration that led East to double four spades. However, it is not a sound tactic at this vulnerability, even at duplicate. Unless North has taken leave of his senses, the best East can hope for is a one-trick set. He should simply sit back and take his medicine.

West led the ten of hearts. East overtook with the ace and shifted to his singleton diamond. East's villanous plot was obvious to declarer—the defender was returning a singleton diamond and hoping for a ruff. Even with all hands on view, it is not easy to see how that can be prevented, since West's nine of hearts is an entry. At the table, however, declarer found a fool-proof method, as the cards lie, to thwart the enemy's plans.

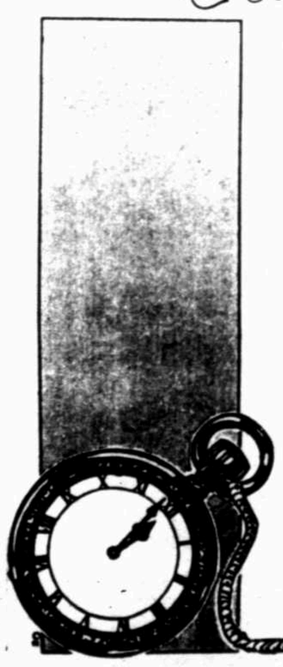

He won the diamond in dummy, cashed the ace-king of clubs and then led the jack of spades. East was forced to cover. Declarer won the ace and then delivered the coup de grace – he led the nine of clubs from hand!

When West could not play a club higher than the nine, it was all over. Declarer discarded dummy's remaining heart loser and communication between the defenders' hands had been severed. East was able to win a club trick he had not anticipated, but he had no way to get to his partner for a diamond ruff.

No matter what he returned, declarer would be able to win, concede a trick to the master spade and claim the rest of the tricks. All declarer lost was one spade, one heart and one club!

Swedish recipient of Jarvik-7 dies

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The first non-American recipient of a permanent artificial heart, 53-year-old Leif Stenberg, died early today, doctors announced.

The Swedish businessman had suffered at least one stroke since an American Jarvik-7 plastic and metal heart was implanted last Easter at Karolinska hospital in Stockholm.

Stenberg was the world's fourth recipient of a permanent artificial heart.

Before suffering a stroke in early September, he appeared to be making the fastest recovery of any of the recipients.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Bruce Springsteen won some more glory Wednesday night, taking two awards at the 4th annual American Video Awards, one for best male performer and the other for best pop video for his song "Glory Days."

Sharing the spotlight with "The Boss," was comedian and rocker Eddie Murphy, who won the best urban contemporary video category with his video, "Party All the Time."

The best female performance went to Aimee Mann of the lower-case Boston quartet, 'til tuesday, for the video "Voices Carry."

Ricky Scaggs won the best country music video award for "Country Boy" and Sade won in the category of best new artist.

Best performance by a duo or group went to Wham! for the video "Everything She Wants," and the group took a second award in the best home video category for a production titled appropriately, "The Video."

RAJNEESHPURAM, Ore. (CNS) — Commune leaders Wednesday announced 86 Rolls-Royce automobiles formerly used by Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh would be sold in one of several major cutbacks planned in efforts to keep Rajneeshpuram alive.

In a press conference, Rajneeshpuram officials said they expected to get $5 million or more for the cars — perhaps from a single buyer — but that their need for income extends far beyond that.

"For people who aren't interested in long hours and no pay and miserable weather, this ain't the place to be," said Swami Prem Niren, mayor of Rajneeshpuram and the guru's former personal attorney. "We've got a lot of work in front of us."

He added, "We're not Christians and we're not martyrs. We're not interested in being crucified."

The reorganization, coming at a time when scores of followers of the exiled mystic were planning to leave, led many residents to forecast a future Rajneeshpuram that would be a small, commerce-oriented shadow of its independent but financially mighty former self.

LONDON (AP) — Spanish tenor Placido Domingo will interrupt his year of fund-raising for Mexican earthquake victims to sing in the Verdi opera "Simon Boccanegra" in January, the Royal Opera House has announced.

Domingo had been scheduled to sing the lead role in Verdi's "Otello," but decided to devote a year to fund-raising after the earthquake killed four members of his family.

Sir John Tooley, director of the opera house, announced Wednesday that Domingo has agreed instead to sing a supporting role in "Simon Boccanegra" because it will require less rehearsal.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress-singer Barbra Streisand, donating profits from her new single "Somewhere" to AIDS research and nuclear disarmament, says the song's lyrics reflect a "life-affirming attitude" needed to save lives.

The American Foundation for AIDS Research and PRO-Peace, which is sponsoring an anti-nuclear march from Los Angeles to Washington D.C. next spring, will share the proceeds equally, Streisand said Wednesday.

According to the final words of the "West Side Story" song, written by Stephen Sondheim and Leonard Bernstein, "we truly have no choice but to find a way to live together 'Somehow, someday, somewhere,'" she said.

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Folk singer Joan Baez, concluding a six-day visit to Poland, says Solidarity founder Lech Walesa was "much less ferocious" than she expected and urged her to meet and perform for the Polish people.

"My feeling about Walesa is the same as my feeling for Bishop Desmond Tutu and the same as my feeling for Dr. Martin Luther King. They know their enemy is their brother," Miss Baez said Wednesday.

Walesa, founder of the outlawed Solidarity union movement, has received the Nobel Peace Prize, as did Tutu, a black Anglican bishop from South Africa, and U.S. civil rights leader King.

Miss Baez, 44, a longtime champion of human and civil rights, performed for Walesa and his family at their apartment, and gave several impromptu concerts for thousands of people during her stay.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt's first lady, Suzanne Mubarak, says despite her husband's busy schedule, President Hosni Mubarak now spends more time with her than when they were first married and he was an air force pilot.

"Now he wakes up the children in the morning so they are not late for work. He himself makes tea for himself and the children," Mrs. Mubarak said in an interview published Wednesday in the weekly magazine Akher Saa.

She said her husband encouraged her to return to university studies after their two sons entered school. "During examination time, my husband used to take the children outside the house to give me a chance to concentrate and study," she said.

Celebrating the move of Miss Universe, Inc., to Los Angeles with a shopping trip to Rodeo Drive are Deborah Carthy-Deu of Puerto Rico, left, Miss Universe 1985, and Laura Martinez-Herring of El Paso, Texas, Miss USA 1985.

Sixers' owner not happy despite win

Associated Press

When you have a franchise as successful as the Philadelphia 76ers, sometimes winning isn't quite enough.

Despite a 117-113 National Basketball Association victory over Golden State Wednesday night, Sixers owner Harold Katz blasted the team's play. "If they're happy, they're fooling themselves," Katz said. "That was a tainted victory. I've tried to be very patient but I'm starting to lose my patience."

NBA

The team's lackluster 6-5 record under rookie Coach Matt Guokas and a sparse crowd of 10,070 had Katz in a sour mood.

"The fans are showing it — they're not coming out," he said. "I'm completely out of patience — period. I'm not saying it's Matty's fault, but we're just standing around. We're playing slow-motion basketball. Matty likes to run, but it's 11 games now and we're still not doing it."

Forward Charles Barkley, who scored 22 points, including two free throws and a dunk in the final eight seconds, answered his boss with angry words of his own.

"Why doesn't he coach the team, then?" Barkley said. "It's like spitting on a man when he's down."

Philadelphia led 99-86 with just over 10 minutes left in the game, but rookie Chris Mullin scored 15 points during a 22-8 surge that pulled Golden State in front at 108-107 with 4:23 to play.

Then, with 23 seconds left, Eric Floyd's 20-footer gave the Warriors a 113-111 advantage.

Moses Malone's layup with 11 seconds remaining tied the score. Fouled on the play, Malone missed the free throw, but Barkley grabbed the rebound, was fouled and hit two free throws. His dunk at the buzzer provided the final margin.

Rockets 126, Pacers 97

Houston's Twin Towers, Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon, ran roughshod over Indiana.

The Rockets blocked 15 shots to none for the Pacers, with Olajuwon collecting six blocked shots and Sampson four. Sampson also had 26 points and 11 rebounds, while Olajuwon had 28 points and 10 rebounds.

The Rockets, who have won eight of their last nine games, built a 72-50 halftime advantage and continued to expand the margin in the second half. Rookie Wayman Tisdale, making his first start, had a season-high 27 points to lead the Pacers.

Suns 121, Spurs 100

Phoenix won for just the second time in 13 games as Larry Nance and Alvan Adams scored 26 and 23 points, respectively, against San Antonio.

The Suns took control of the game with an 11-2 run in the second quarter that lifted them to a 56-44 halftime lead. Rookie Georgi Glouchkov had six of those 11 points. Steve Johnson led the Spurs with 21 points, while Walter Davis had 20 for Phoenix.

Celtics 115, Jazz 106

In Boston, Robert Parish started a 15-6 Boston romp over Utah in overtime with four free throws in the first minute of the extra session.

The Jazz outscored the Celtics 37-21 to take an 86-79 lead early in the fourth quarter after trailing 58-49 at halftime. Karl Malone scored 11 points in the third period to lead the comeback.

But the Celtics, who had four players with more than 20 points, rallied to tie the score 100-100 at the end of regulation.

Lakers 122, Clippers 107

Earvin "Magic" Johnson amassed 22 points and 20 assists as the Lakers improved their record to 11-1 and handed the Clippers their seventh consecutive loss.

The Clippers, who got 34 points from Marques Johnson, scored the first five points of the second half to cut an eight-point halftime deficit to 59-56, but a 35-20 Lakers run gave them a 94-76 lead late in the third period.

Pistons 109, Knicks 98

Kent Benson, making his first start of the season, had 21 points and 10 rebounds for Detroit, which snapped New York's three-game winning streak.

Benson, who equaled his previous high point total this season with 12 points in the first period, capped a 17-6 spurt at the start of the third quarter with a three-point play, giving the Pistons a 79-55 lead. They went on to lead by as many as 27 points.

Bucks 116, SuperSonics 106

Milwaukee won its fifth straight game as Terry Cummings scored 14 of his 28 points to put Seattle 12 points behind in the first quarter.

Cummings scored eight points in the final 3½ minutes of the opening period during an 18-6 Bucks run that carried them to a 38-26 lead.

Sidney Moncrief scored eight of his 21 points early in the second half as the Bucks extended their advantage to 76-62.

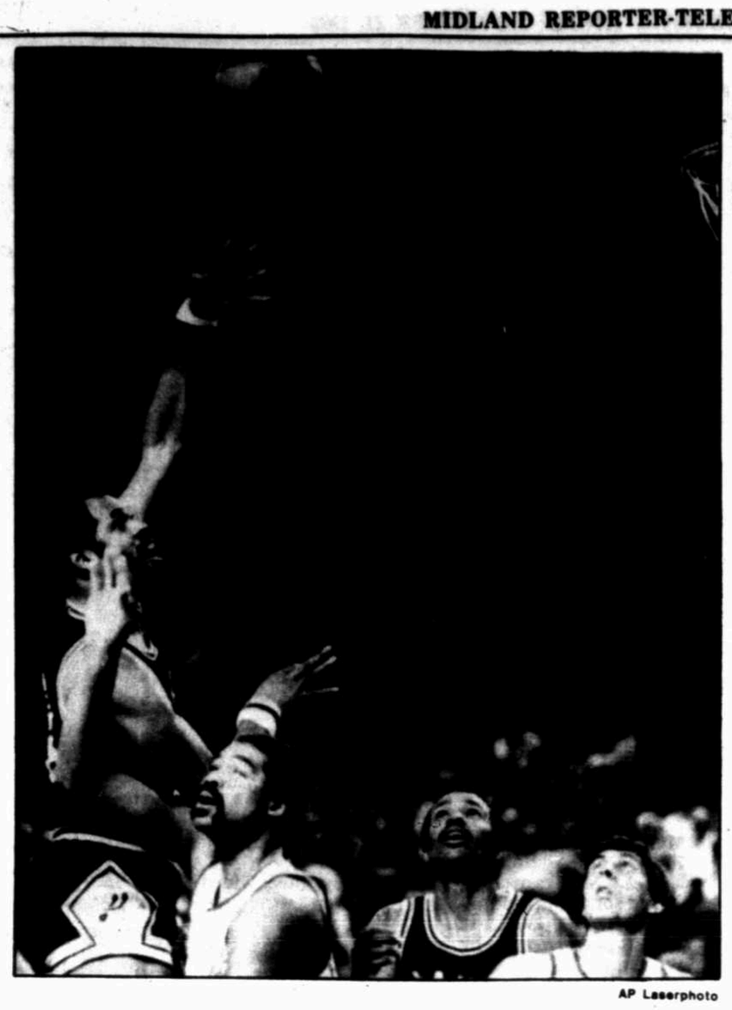

Bullets 101, Cavaliers 98

Washington held on to beat Cleveland for only its second victory in 10 games as Gus Williams scored 19 points and Cliff Robinson added 16 points and 16 rebounds.

Hawks 116, Bulls 101

Dominique Wilkins scored 13 of his 28 points in the first quarter as Atlanta grabbed the lead against Chicago and never gave it up.

The Hawks led 35-30 after one period and extended the margin to 60-49 at halftime. They padded the advantage to 81-61 midway through the third period.

Badgers, Owls looking at tough Area opponents

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

After easy Bi-district wins last week, District 8-2A's McCamey and Reagan County are ready to move on to bigger and better things.

Unfortunately for the Badgers and the Owls, that means bigger and better football teams.

Both will get their stiffest tests of the season Friday night in Area playoff action. McCamey, district champ of 8-2A at 9-1, will face Hamlin, the No. 2 ranked team in the state at 11-0 and champs of 6-2A, at 8 p.m. in Andrews.

Reagan County, 7-3, will travel to Big Spring to play Shallowater, 9-1-1, the District 5-2A winner, on Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Stadium.

"My heartbeat is beginning to pick up," McCamey coach Buster Leaf said in mid-week as he prepared his team to face the Pipers, a team that hasn't lost a game since 1983. "They can do it all. They're quick and they have so much skill and enough size that they've done anything they wanted to all year."

In truth, it does look that way. In going 11-0 so far this season, coach Art Briles has stretched an unbeaten streak dating back 1983. Last season his team was stopped in a 13-13 tie in the quarterfinals on penetrations by Panhandle.

Last week Hamlin defeated Morton, an archrival from 5-2A, 46-12 to win Bi-district. The closest anybody has been to the Pipers all season was a 28-7 defeat of Wall, a team the Badgers beat 16-0.

"We haven't played anybody really tough, yet," Briles said. "We thought Wall was a good team, they played us real hard, that's what worries us about McCamey being that they're in the same district."

Class 2A Playoffs

THE PIPERS' high-powered offense is led by senior quarterback Michael Howerton, a three-year starter and a candidate for all-state honors. Howerton is the leading rusher out of Hamlin's wishbone attack with 850 yards, but he is pushed by tailback Coy McGee, another experienced senior. McGee has rushed for more than 800 yards.

"We're a senior-oriented team, we have a lot of experience and maturity," Briles said of his team, which lines up 11 seniors on defense and seven on offense.

Leaf is concerned about how his Badgers, generally considered the quickest team in this area at the 2A level, will match up with the tremendous speed and quickness of the Pipers.

"We've never seen anybody with this kind of speed. That's our biggest problem, how to match up with that?" Leaf said. "Don't get me wrong, though. We're not going up to Andrews just to show up, we're going up there to line up and get after 'em.

"I believe, my coaching staff believes and the kids believe, that we can play with anybody."

WHILE THE Badgers and Pipers tussle in Andrews, Reagan County will be waging a war of its own with Shallowater in Big Spring.

"Shallowater will be a bigger test for us certainly," Owl coach Ronnie Reeger said. "We're talking about a district winner that went 9-1-1. They're a quick team. I would compare their quickness to a team like McCamey. They're not as physical, but they pass the ball better."

The Mustangs have a quarterback to do it, too. Senior Davey Rhodes has thrown for 1,247 yards this season and was 18-of-27 last week in beating Haskell.

"We run out of the I-formation on offense and we throw the ball a little more than the average team does," admits coach Keith Kitchens. "We like to throw 15 times a game or so, but we mix it in with the run quite a bit."

Rhodes' favorite targets are seniors Tim Lennon and Greg Roberts. Lennon has caught 33 passes for 639 yards and 11 touchdowns, while Roberts has flagegd down 25 passes for 366 yards.

The Shallowater running game also has not been shabby this season. Alternating tailbacks Ronnie Barron and Johnny Revilla have totaled more than 1,100 yards between them. Barron leading the way with 646 and Revilla with 493.

"Reagan County is a big and powerful team — it looks like they just line up and run right at you," Kitchens said. "They have a big offensive line and a big fullback and they just try to wear you down. Of course, they might just come and throw the ball 25 times at us."

It's not likely, according to coach Reeger.

"We run basically the same plays. We've got nothing to hide," Reeger says of his team's game plan.

For both Reagan County and McCamey, there will be no place to hide come Friday evening.

RANKIN

THE WINNER of the Rankin-Fort Davis game will play the survivor of the Forsan-Goldthwaite contest, a battle of unbeatens.

For Turner, just getting back into the playoffs for the first time since 1980 has been the goal of the season. Now that the Devils are there, Turner would like to get one more crack at Iraan.

"Oh, it's a great feeling. I'm just happy for the kids, the town and all the coaches," Turner said. "I'd like to play Iraan again because that would mean we'd have played at least three playoff games. But we have a strong nucleus of kids returning next year and even the year after that. I think we'll have a good team for a couple of years anyway."

IRAAN, 10-0 and ranked No. 5 in the latest state poll, plays an overmatched Dell City team. The Braves have romped over nearly everyone they've played this season, outscoring their opponents 419-21. The 13-12 win over the Devils was Iraan's closest call, the next being a 24-6 win over Sanderson. The Braves have recorded five shutouts and posted wins over 2A playoff teams McCamey and Marfa as well as 2A's Eldorado.

MOJO

And, against the passing game, Wilkins said, "They've done a good job. They got hurt in the Andress game with the run.

"Offensively, we've got to go out there and play and that's always somewhat of a disadvantage, the long bus trip. We hope we can overcome that.

"Austin has a good football team. We've worked hard this week to prepare for them and I hope we're ready to play."

One of Permian's biggest advantages over Austin could lie in the numbers game, overall team depth.

While Permian uses a platoon system with no two-way starters, Austin is going both ways heavily with seven players starting on both sides of the ball.

"We were talking about that today," said Lowenberg. "We've got to do something about it early, get a lead early in the game. Late in the game, it's going to be rough on us because we've got a lot of players going both ways."

Not only get an early lead, but also cut out the mistakes. They don't make any mistakes, don't fumble or turn the ball over. Palo Duro had a field day against them on the ground but had five or six turnovers that killed them."

And, on a man-to-man basis, Lowenberg said, "we match up well with them, no doubt about it."

That only leaves playing the game to determine which team advances to next week's regional battle.

LEE

"We were lacking at defensive tackle and I wasn't starting at linebacker. This move gave me a chance to start and I'm not griping about the move," said Pertile. "I needed my chance to rise to the occassion and this was it. It really wasn't a tough move for me, but I did find out that I had to play to the best of my ability at all times. I'm a small tackle and face some pretty big guys across the line. I have to use all the strength I have."

Wolski added, "Ronald wasn't an overnight success. He started against Eastwood, but hurt his neck. We got a neck roll for him to wear and he has come on like gang busters since."

The names of Kevin Witt, Tracy Mayfield, Chris Kenney and Terry Young in the defensive secondary are better known because that's where most of Lee's experience is from last year.

But the "No Names" are finding it harder and harder to hide in obscurity as Lee travels the playoff trail. When a runner takes a tumble, there is a good chance that a Roach, Cooper or Pertile is draped around one leg.

Oilers beat Canadien goattender in OT, 5-4

Associated Press

A hero one minute . . . a goat the next. Such is life among those who belong to that unique fraternity known as goaltenders in the National Hockey League.

Steve Penney is one of those masked men, and he could use one today in Montreal following the embarrassment of an overtime goal Wednesday night that gave the Edmonton Oilers a 5-4 victory.

"I didn't think he would shoot from that angle," Penney said of the game-winning goal by Edmonton's Mark Messier just 42 seconds into the sudden death session.

Penney's Coach, Jean Perron, did some thinking of his own, deciding afterward that his goaltender had simply blown the game despite making several acrobatic saves to keep the Canadiens in the contest.

"We should have won by three or four goals tonight," Perron said. "I don't know what was the matter with Penney."

While Penney was missing an easy save, Toronto's Don Edwards was livid about another miss, one he insisted was committed by officials who couldn't tell the difference between the crossbar and the net in the Maple Leafs' 7-3 loss to the New York Rangers.

Oilers 5, Canadiens 4

Messier wasn't thinking about getting his 11th goal when he let loose from a bad angle deep in the Montreal zone.

"I just wanted to put the puck on the net," he said, adding that "anything can happen" when you do.

"It surprised me," said Penney, who let in five goals despite the high-flying Oilers managing only a game total of 28.

"He wasn't that busy tonight," Perron said of Penney. "That must be the reason, but I really don't know."

NHL Roundup

Rangers 7, Maple Leafs 3

"After 11 years I guess I know the sound of a post," Toronto's Edwards said of a first-period goal — one of three on the night — by New York's Bob Brooke that tied their game and gave the Rangers momentum.

A television replay appeared to support Edwards' claim that the puck hit the crossbar and not the net.

"I'm going to say it hit the crossbar and then the back of the net," Brooke said.

Black Hawks 2, Canucks 0

Vancouver was hot, coming off a seven-goal game less that 24 hours earlier. But the Canucks hadn't won in Chicago in nearly three years. They still haven't.

Bannerman recorded his eighth career shutout, due in part to an impotent Canuck attack. Coming off a 7-5 victory Tuesday night in Detroit, Vancouver managed just 17 shots on goal.

But Bannerman remained less than impressed with second-place Chicago's 7-10-2 start, or that of St. Louis, which leads the Norris Division with a 7-7-3 record.

Jets 3, Blues 1

Hayward may have fallen flat, but it certainly wasn't on his face. Lying on his back, he reached up with his glove and robbed St. Louis' Bernie Federko from point-blank range.

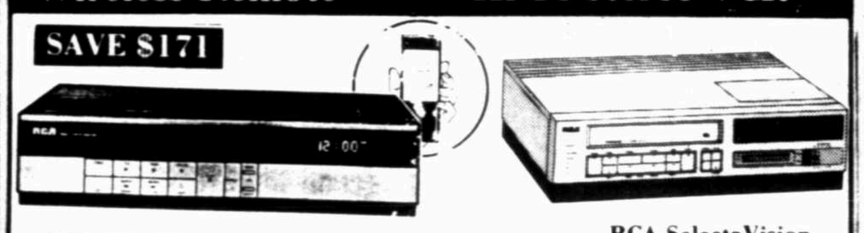

The save — one of 35 on the night — preserved a 2-0 lead by the Jets with 20 seconds left in the second period.

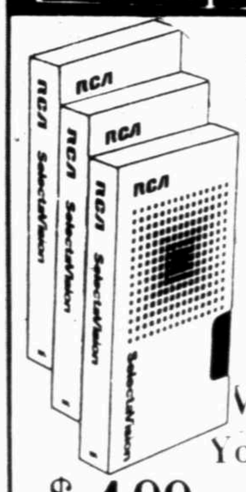

"We had some outstanding goaltending tonight," Winnipeg Coach Barry Long said.

In Irving

The Dallas Cowboys entered Sunday's heralded NFC showdown with the Chicago Bears confident that history, at least history as recorded since 1970, would repeat.

The Bears hadn't beaten the Dallas Cowboys since Mike Ditka was a tight end for the Papa Bear, George Halas.

And now, after serving an apprenticeship at Dallas, where he obviously learned well, Ditka was back in Chicago as head coach and word was he had reincarnated the Monsters of the Midway, who earned the nickname by the terror they spread through the NFL back in the 1940s.

Despite a 10-0 record, the best defense and the best runner in the NFL, there remained those skeptics who felt, despite appearances, the Cowboys would expose them as the same old friendly Bears who hadn't beaten Dallas in over a decade.

The Bears it turned out were for real. They handed Dallas their heads on a platter on the way to a 44-0 win, the first time the Cowboys had been shutout since the St. Louis Cardinals turned the trick, 38-0 in 1970.

The defense sewed it up in the first half and the offense made it a rout in the second half, much to the dismay of a festive, expectant throng of 65,000 merrymakers.

At the end, the only merrymakers were the Chicago fans, who had made the trip from the Windy City to see their heroes make it 11 straight and wrap up the NFC Central title in the process.

William (Refrigerator) Perry provided the lone light spot of an otherwise long, dismal afternoon in which Dallas quarterback Danny White was twice knocked out of the game by Bears' linebacker Otis Wilson and even rugged tight end Doug Cosbie was forced to retire with his ears ringing.

Perry lined up in the backfield on two different sorties. "They only use me in the backfield inside the five," the Refrigerator declared.

The first time, Perry carried the ball two yards to the one, although he was convinced he had scored. Quarterback Steve Fuller took it over from there with Perry serving as a decoy at halfback.

In the second half, Perry again got in the offensive lineup in the third period and led the interference for Walter Payton. After throwing his block, the Refrig got up and tried to carry Payton into the end zone.

"I just wanted to get Walter into the end zone. Everybody was jumping on him.

"But defense is why I came in here, and I'm playing well. I was in the quarterback's face the majority of the time, making them throw quick passes, forcing them to run out of the pocket. We just knew we had to put pressure on White the whole time, for the full game. That's what we went out and did."

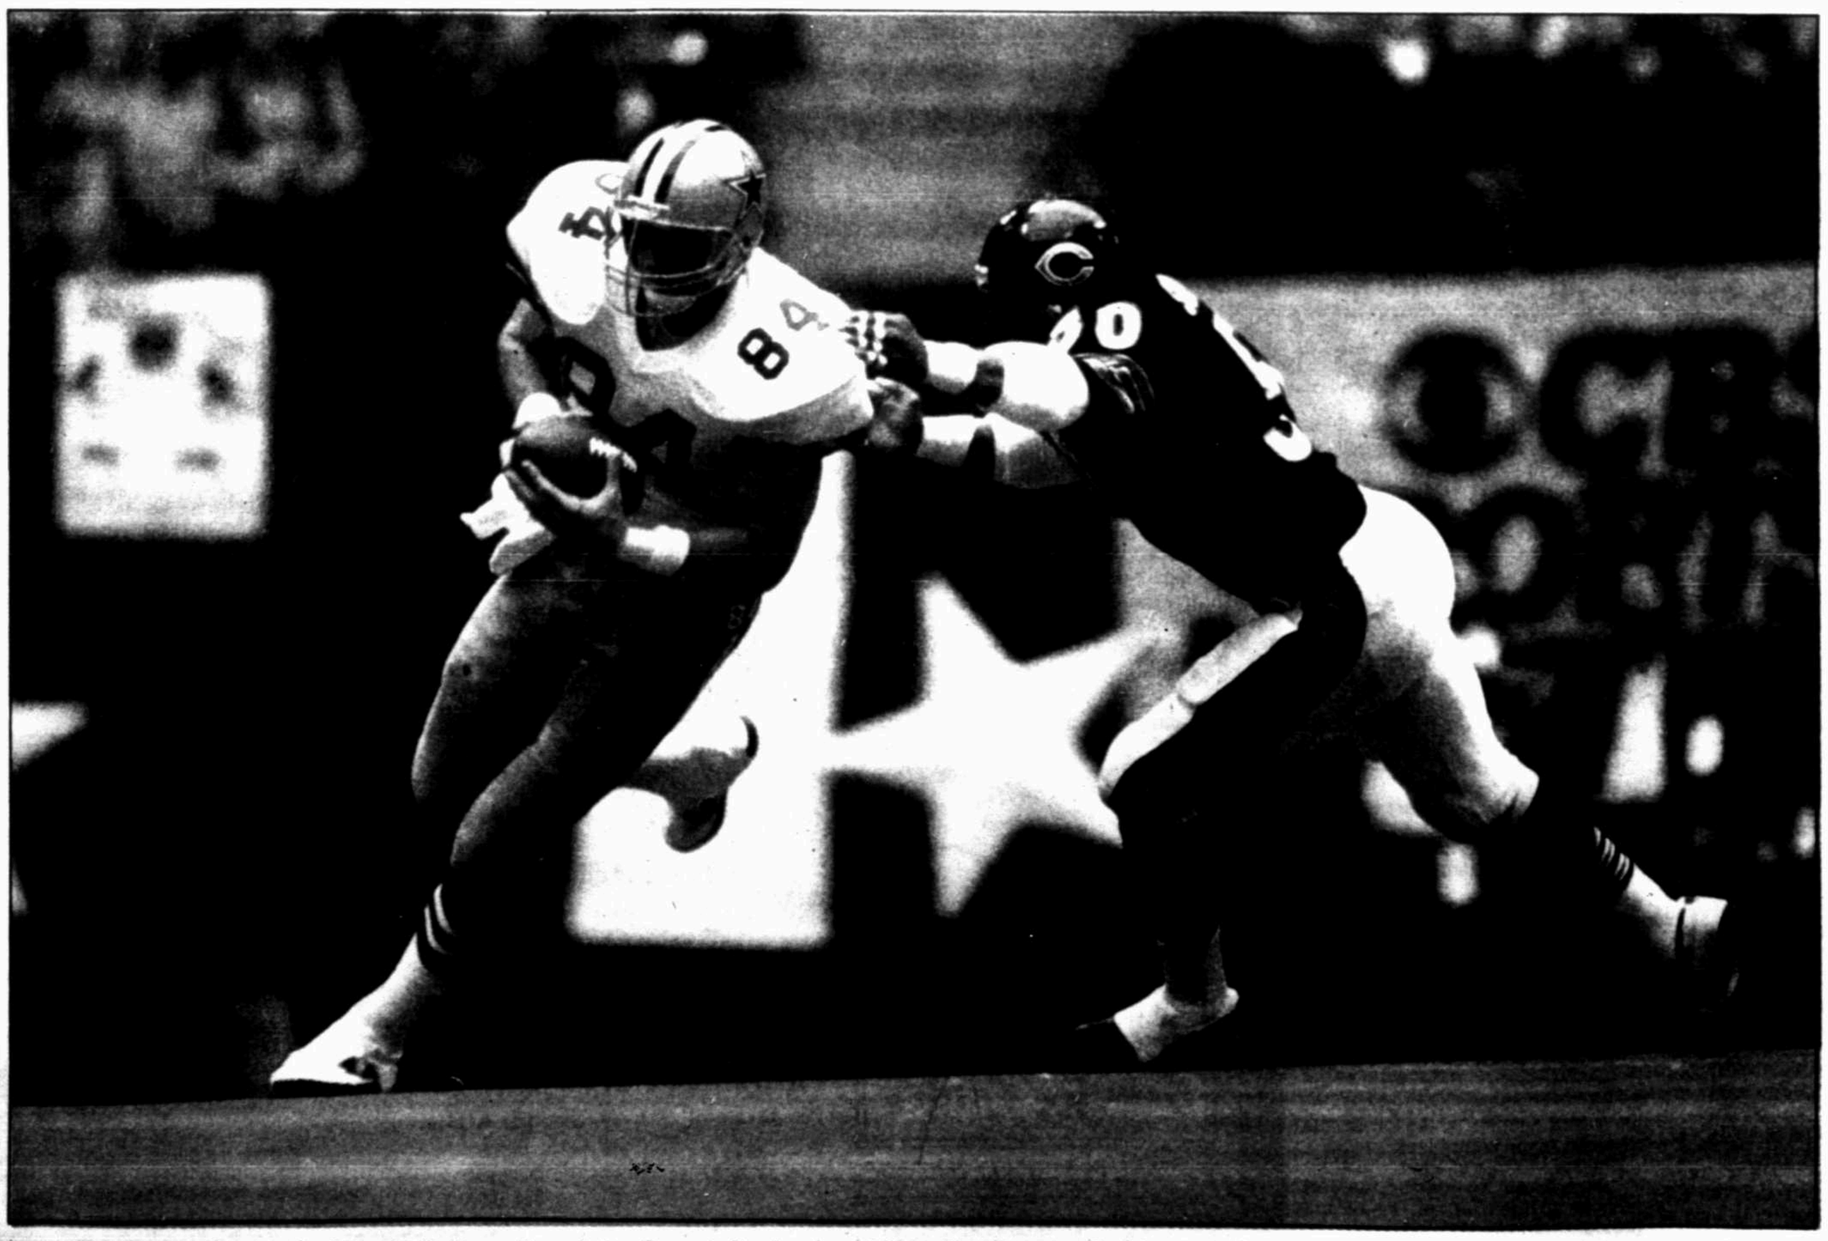

Defensive end Richard Dent high-fives William Perry, the mobile Refrigerator, after Dent picked off a Danny White pass for a 1-yard touchdown.

Midland's unemployment rate rises slightly

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Midland's unemployment rate rose from 5.4 percent to 5.1 percent from September to October, according to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission office in San Angelo.

George Williams, labor analyst with the TEC, attributed the increase to October being caught in a lull after the summer months and before the holiday season. "While the oil and gas decline has had something to do with the decline, October is just kind of a slow period. I don't see anything significant in the latest figures."

Midland's total unemployment totaled 3,500, up from 3,300 in September. The city's total employment stood at 61,000, down from 61,200, while the civilian labor force held steady at 64,500 a second month.

Williams commented that while Midland is following a state trend of increasing unemployment, the city's rate is still below the state's unemployment rate of 7.6 percent.

The local unemployment rate has grown from 3.3 percent in October, 1984, a decline Williams attributed to a decline in the oil and gas industry. In the last few months, such companies as Mesa Petroleum and Delta Drilling announced plans to close their Midland offices.

Although retail stores like Mervyns, which just hired 200 people for its new Odessa store, offer new employment opportunities for Midlanders, most are still under construction or in the planning stages.

Williams noted that last year, the unemployment rate fell in November and slightly in December, and also showed a decline in December of 1983, which he attributed to temporary Christmas hiring.

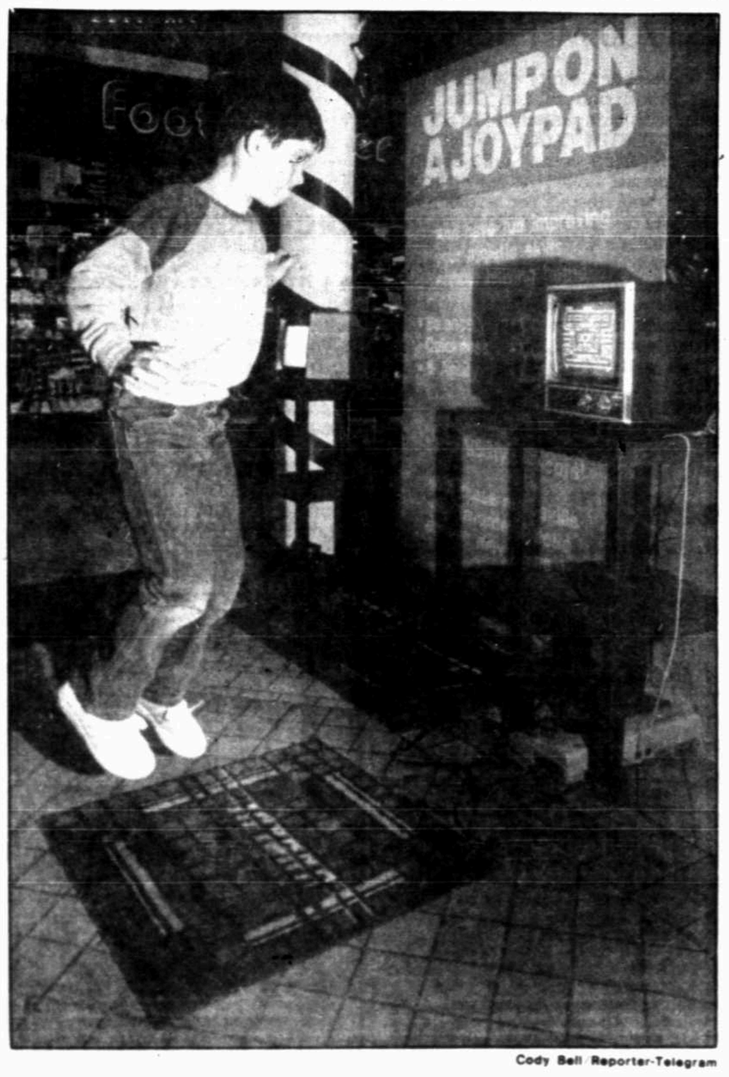

He said he expected the unemployment rate to increase slightly while some industries such as construction go through a slow period during the winter.

However, he said, that is usually offset by hiring for Christmas, and usually doesn't affect the employment picture until after the Christmas holidays.

Midland ranked fourth in the state in employment, following Austin, Bryan-College Station and Dallas. Odessa, with an unemployment rate of 6.4 percent, is twelfth in the state. Odessa's rate increased slightly from 6.3 percent in September.

Figures for October of 1984 showed a strong local employment picture, with an unemployment rate of 3.3 percent and a civilian labor force that numbered 76,200. Total unemployment was 2,500, and total employment stood at 73,700.

At the time, the TEC was attributing the employment increase to a strong economic recovery and the oncoming holiday season.

Midland stands above national income average, despite declines

Business/Oil Editor

Midland remains above the national average but has suffered declines in per capita personal income, and total personal income, according to the U.S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of Economic Analysis, which compiles personal income data from around the nation to provide cities with accurate growth and decline indicators.

According to the latest computer report, covering 1982 and 1983 periods, Midland had a per capita personal income of $15,507 in 1983 which was down 7.7 percent from 1982 levels, which was a higher decline experienced by either the state or nation. Despite declines, however, Midland is still fifth in the state and eighth in the nation in per capita personal income, making it 33 percent above the national average.

Midland Chamber Executive, Grant Billingsley, said such a decline could be expected, since Midland is an administrative town with a large number of white collar jobs. He said some jobs were obviously lost in the resulting boom and bust of 1982.

In total personal income, which includes: wages, salaries, dividends, interest and rental and transfer payments received by Midland residents, a decline of only 1.4 percent was indicated. This is less than the 5.4 percent state average and the 6.2 percent national average declines.

With a total personal income of almost $1.7 billion, Midland ranked 19th in the state and accounted for .09 percent of the state total. It was 211th in the nation for total personal income.

The report added that 71.4 percent of the total personal income in Midland came from earnings; 23.1 percent from dividends and interest and 5.5 percent from rent and transfer payments. In those sectors wages and salaries (earnings) declined 4.7 percent from 1982 to 1983, while income from dividends, interest and rent increased by 5.7 percent. The single biggest change in total personal income came in the transfer of payments sector which showed an 18.7 percent increase.

In examining personal earnings by industry, it was found that oil-related employment accounted for 34.3 percent of the total earnings, while service firms added 14.8 percent and retail trade another 9.7 percent of the earnings. Durable goods manufacturing accounted for 5.6 percent of earnings in 1983, while government accounted for 7.1 percent. It was also in these later sectors that the largest increase and decreases were found. The biggest decline in earnings came in the durable goods manufacturing sector which suffered a 19.5 percent decline, while state, local and federal government became the fastest growing with a 16.4 percent increase.

Personal income plummets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal spending plummeted 0.9 percent last month, the biggest decline in almost 25 years, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department attributed the big plunge to a drop in car sales following an auto-buying binge in August and September.

Personal income rose 0.4 percent in October, the best gain since a 1 percent rise in April.

The big spending spurt had left consumer debt levels at a record high and the personal savings level at a record low. Given those two factors, analysts had predicted that spending will slow sharply in coming months as consumers take a breathing spell.

This slowdown is expected to have adverse affects on the overall economy. Since consumer spending makes up almost two-thirds of the gross national product, many analysts are predicting extremely weak growth in coming months.

The government reported Wednesday that the GNP grew at a 4.3 percent annual rate this past summer, the fastest clip in more than a year.

While the Reagan administration is forecasting growth will top 5 percent this quarter, few private analysts are that optimistic. Many are looking for a slump to around a 3 percent growth level with even further weakness in the first half of next year.

Happy feet, exercise could replace joy stick

ENTREPRENEUR

By DEANNA NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Dallas entrepreneur Ron Johns has developed a new challenge for old video games that could revitalize the dwindling video game market. But Johns' product is more than just a new technique of playing video games.

The "JOYPAD" is the first computer-oriented product to challenge players to react with their feet. He says this is important because a child's physical skills are the key to his self-confidence. According to Johns, "The JOYPAD is fun because it allows the player to be part of the action."

The JOYPAD is a two foot square carpet with four embedded directional switches and a handheld firing button. It can perform all the functions of a joystick on both home computer and video games. By stepping on the designated switch quadrants, the player can control the characters just as he would with the joystick. Balance, quickness and agility all are factors in playing the games with the JOYPAD.

JOHNS, WHO SPENT 20 years with Texas Instruments and was most recently in charge of their educational toy division, began developing his idea during a time when he was very involved in soccer. As a trainer and coach, he saw the potential for kids to develop their soccer skills by repetitively performing certain motions and skills with their feet. Many of the exercises involved the moving of the feet in a square pattern over and over. The correlation between what the hands were doing with a video joystick and what he was trying to get his soccer players to do with their feet was the beginning of Johns' scheme.

Putting his idea into production in April 1985, he had 25 prototypes by late May. The electronics are manufactured in Juarez, Mexico and put into the mat in Rome, Georgia. All the manufacturing is overseen by Johns, who also writes the specs, designs the prototypes and tests the product.

After designing the prototypes, Johns' next step was to select a marketing plan. Because of the very nature of the product, he knew that a demonstration method of sale would be the most effective.

"TO SELL THEM retail would mean they would be sitting in a box on a shelf and that would not be real effective." Choosing West Texas over the bigger markets in Dallas or Houston was an intuitive move according to Johns. At the present time, he is only marketing the product in Midland, Abilene and Lubbock.

"Because of the importance of sports in West Texas, coupled with the cooperation I received in this area, it just seemed the right place to do it," he said.

Conducting a marketing survey, Johns discovered the potential of his product and learned that kids felt the JOYPAD was not only a fun way to play video games, but also felt it was a challenge worth achieving. The survey also showed that parents felt the product would give their child confidence and were impressed with the athletic challenge it presented.

"Kids have energy to burn and often times no way to burn it. This gives them an outlet and it can be done in the house during bad weather. Kids think it's fun, because they're playing games, while parents think it's neat that their kids are getting exercise, and not just sitting in front of a television set all day," he said.

Congressional candidate asks Reagan to veto tax proposals

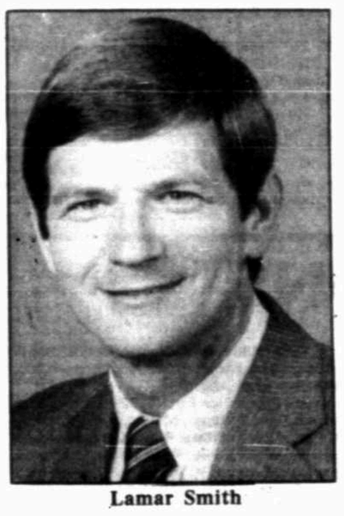

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Congressional candidate Lamar Smith told a group of Midland oilmen that the current tax reform proposals removing depletion allowances and intangible drilling costs were a mistake, and encouraged President Reagan to veto any legislation that eliminates these tax breaks.

Smith, running for Tom Loeffler's seat as U.S. representative from the Twenty-first District, told the West Texas Producers Forum at the Petroleum Club Wednesday that "Lawmakers don't understand the domestic petroleum industry, or how vital it is to American security. You have to have flexibility and incentives, and this proposed policy is not in the best interests of America."

To help domestic producers compete on an equal footing with foreign producers, Smith proposed a sliding import fee equal to the Windfall Profits Tax. "No one wants to become more dependent on foreign oil," he said, adding that projections are for the U.S. to import half its crude by 1995, which Smith called an intolerable situation. "We need to do everything to help the petroleum industry recover."

"If oil falls to $20 a barrel, there will be severe repercussions in the economy - the national economy, not just Midland's," he warned.

Lamar Smith

Another topic of concern that Smith discussed was the nation's budget deficit. "We face the crisis that the national debt will reach $2 trillion, and that much will absorb capital that would have been used to purchase homes and expand businesses."

Referring to the Democrat-controlled House of Representatives, Smith said "We must teach them to be more conservative and more fiscally responsible." He put forth two requirements that would help reduce the deficit, the first of which was a constitutional amendment to balance the budget. "Congress has shown that it is unable to police its spending, and needs outside control." The second requirement, he said, was to give the president line item veto. "There are all kinds of ways to reduce the deficit," he said.

On nuclear disarmament, Smith, whose campaign slogan is "New Texas Leadership for the Reagan Revolution," applauded Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars." He said the plan is the first program with the potential to make nuclear arms obsolete.

"I don't consider SDI a military question or a political question. I consider it a human survival question. We need to get away from the aptly-named "MAD" or Mutual Assured Destruction. SDI won't militarize space, it'll demilitarize nuclear arsenals on Earth." He did, however, express concern about Reagan's offer to share the technology with the Soviets, which he believes is meant to assure Western Europe that Reagan is serious about disarmament.

Study shows reserves key to energy's future

HOUSTON (AP) — A glut of mergers and buyouts is making it harder for several major U.S. energy companies to dole out sufficient money to replace their vital oil and gas reserves, according to a new study.

And smaller independent companies often lack the capital for such exploration and development, said a study of the industry released Wednesday by Arthur Andersen & Co.

Finding new oil and gas reserves is "the real key factor" that affects the financial status and futures of energy companies, said Richard Adkerson, director of the nationwide accounting firm's Houston-based oil and gas industry services.

"For them to be able to stay in business, they have to be able to replace those reserves," he said.

But while domestic energy companies' profits rose 7.5 percent in 1984 — the first time in four years, many of the 400 firms surveyed were plowing smaller portions of their profits back into exploration and development.

Judgement may not have an immediate impact on Texaco

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The $10.53 billion judgment against Texaco Inc. should have no immediate impact on the finances of the nation's third largest oil company, say Wall Street analysts who question whether the jury's verdict will stick.

But the analysts who follow the fortunes of Texaco for investment firms said that should the unprecedented award be upheld, Texaco faces serious difficulties at a time when its operations are improving.

The award far exceeds the $8.6 billion market value of Texaco's outstanding common stock, and analysts questioned whether the heavily indebted company could raise the cash to foot the bill.

In what is believed to be the largest judgment in U.S. history, a district court jury in Houston held Tuesday that Texaco must pay Pennzoil Co. $7.53 billion in actual damages and $3 billion in punitive damages for interfering in Pennzoil's plans to acquire Getty Oil Co. A judge still must review the verdict before entering a final judgment.

Getty backed out of a preliminary agreement to merge with Pennzoil early last year and was purchased by Texaco for $10.1 billion.

Texaco, which said it would appeal the verdict, has been showing renewed growth. Earnings for the third quarter rose 28.1 percent from a year earlier despite a 7.4 percent drop in sales.

"The company is in the best financial position it has been in many, many years, but that doesn't mean it can pay a $10.5 billion settlement," said Bruce Lazier, an analyst at Prescott, Ball & Turben.

Texaco had earnings of $926 million on revenue of $35 billion in the first nine months of the year and reported assets of $37.4 billion.

Two major business-information services, Standard & Poor's Corp. and Moody's Investors Service Inc., left their credit ratings for Texaco unchanged Tuesday despite the judgment, saying the eventual outcome of the case remained uncertain.

"The decision is not expected to have any near-term financial impact on Texaco," Moody's said.

Standard & Poor's said that any ultimate judgment of more than $1.5 billion against Texaco "would likely have negative implications for Texaco's ratings." But it also said that "Texaco is expected to aggressively defend its position, which could delay the final resolution of the lawsuit for several years. At this point, the amount and timing of a damages payment by Texaco are highly uncertain."

Wolfcamp find flows 140 barrels

From Staff Reports

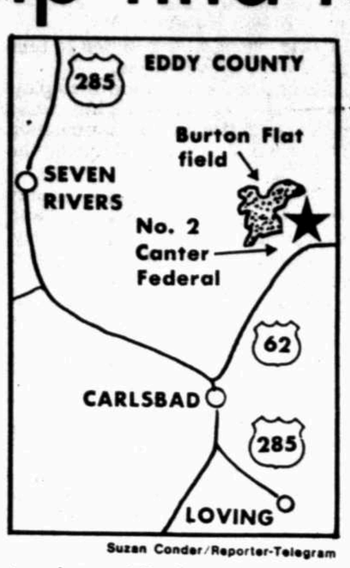

J.C. WILLIAMSON has completed a Wolfcamp discovery in Eddy County, approximately a mile southeast of the Burton field, and about a miles northeast of the Burton Flats East field.

On potential test, the No. 2 Canter Federal flowed 140 barrels of 44 gravity crude, 157 Mcfd and no water on a 13/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 405 psi. Production is through perforations 9,431 to 9,461 ft., which was acidized with 7,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,119:1.

Drilled to 11,874 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 10,900 ft.

The well topped the Bone Springs at 5,920 ft., Strawn at 10,482, and the Morrow at 11,396 ft. on ground elevation of 3,315.2 ft. Pay was topped at 9,431 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from north and east lines of Section 10, T20s, R29e.

Oil allowables set at 100 percent

AUSTIN (AP) — Continuing a move started in April 1972, the Texas Railroad Commission has set the Texas oil production rate for December at 100 percent of market demand.

The rate was set Monday after commissioners reviewed oil companies' nominations to buy a total of 2,245,610 barrels of Texas oil daily.

The December nomination total, was a decrease of 19,421 barrels daily compared to November. December 1984 nominations totaled 2,316,474.

The December rate applies to all fields in the state except those that are assigned lower production rates so reservoir pressures will not be depleted.

December nominations from major purchasers, with changes from November, included:

- Amoco, 166,000 barrels daily (down 2,000)
- Chevron 138,500 (down 19,970)
- Exxon 294,100 (down 1,200)
- Mobil 160,200 (up 200)
- Phillips 83,000
- Shell 95,800 (up 7,100)
- Texaco; 93,100 (down 2,000)
- Union of California 25,500.

ANOTHER POINT THAT the parents liked was that it has revitalized the investment they made several years ago when they bought the video games.

Much of the thrust of Johns' marketing efforts has been directed at athletics. "On an athletic field or court, the players are taking in multiple visual inputs that are all interrelated. The feet must react to these situations. This is the same idea behind my JOYPAD."

At a 1983 video game conference conducted at Harvard University, Patricia Greenfield, who is a pyschology professor at the University of California in Los Angeles, said, "In order for a player to become skillful at Pacman and other video games, it is necessary to learn parallel processing of multiple interacting variables, all operating simultaneously. This skill has certainly appeared in the real world."

Johns, who is constantly working on cost reduction, plans to follow this product with special software. The JOYPAD, which sells for $39.95 and can be seen at the Midland Park Mall, is adaptable to the Atari 2600 VCS and 400, 800 and 1200 home computers as well as the Sears Arcade Games and the Commodore 64 and VIC 20 cumputer systems. It can also be adapted to the Texas Instruments Home Computer, Apple II and Radio Shack TRS 80 color computers and the Odyssey home video games.

If sales continue to jump as high as the kids who are enjoying the JOYPAD, Johns plans to market his product nationwide.

AMC offers $700 rebates

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. says it will offer rebates of up to $700 on its U.S.-made Renault Alliance and Renault Encore subcompact cars.

Today's start of the rebate program, the first from domestic automakers on 1986 models, coincides with the expiration of the company's 8.8 percent financing plan, AMC said Wednesday.

The base Alliance, which starts at $5,999, and the base Encore, starting at $6,719, will carry a $400 cash rebate, AMC said. The top-of-the-line versions of those cars will carry a $700 rebate.

RESERVES

Profits declined 7.4 percent in 1983 and 18 percent in 1982, according to the annual study, which examines trends in the oil and gas industry from 1980 to 1984.

Major energy companies invested as much as 67 percent of their revenues in exploration and development in 1981 and 68 percent in 1982, the study indicated. But reinvestment levels for those companies polled fell to 59 percent in 1983 and was 60 percent in 1984, the study said.

"During the five-year period these companies, which constitute the bulk of the oil and gas industry in the United States, spent almost $200 billion trying to develop their reserves, which is a very substatial amount of money," Adkerson said.

"We anticipate that this amount of revenue reinvestment will fall during 1985 because, principally, of the restructuring and the mergers," he said. "That has long-term consequences for the industry."

Some of the recent acquistions include Chevron Corp.'s purchase of Gulf Oil for $13.3 billion earlier this year; Texaco Inc.'s purchase of Getty Oil Co. last year for $10.2 billion; and Coastal Corp.'s $2.4 billion purchase this year of American Natural Resources.

"The fact that certain of the companies assume such large debts in connection with these mergers and acquisitions and with the financial restructures clearly is going to require that funds be diverted from new exploration and development into financing the new debts that they face," Adkerson said.

Meanwhile, smaller independent companies also are reinvesting decreasing amounts of their revenues, according to the study.

Those companies traditionally plowed back more than 100 percent of their revenues — and as much as 200 percent in boom years — into exploration and development, Adkerson said.

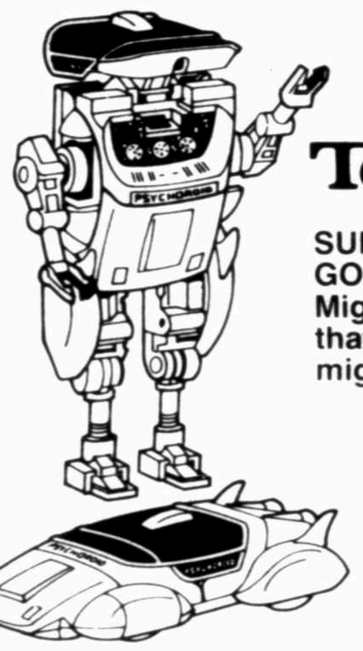

But now, smaller independent companies may reinvest only 58 percent of their revenues because they lack the capital and must repay financing debts they incurred in the past, he said.

Vietnam vets have place to center their problems

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Ten years after the fall of Saigon, Vietnam War veterans in Midland and Odessa have a place they can call home.

Opened in October, the Vet Center at 3404 W. Illinois Ave., is the result of the U.S. Veterans Administration's latest wave of efforts to build centers across the nation for Vietnam War veterans.

"The construction of the centers began in late 1979 and early 1980 as a result of the recognition of 'post traumatic stress disorder' (PTSD) as a diagnostic category among the psychiatric and psychological community," said Scot Prinz, the center's director. "What originally started out as rap groups for vets turned into the development of the centers. The first phase was in 1980, the second in 1982-83 and the third is this year."

Prinz, himself a veteran of the Vietnam War, said the programs originally were designed to run three years but have been extended "at least through 1988 now."

Figures supplied by the U.S. Census Bureau estimate that nearly 8,000 Vietnam veterans reside in the Midland-Odessa area, but Prinz doubts that number.

"With past experience, I feel safe in doubling that figure," he said.

The response to the center has been healthy, according to Richard Burns, office manager.

"We've had about 50 vets show up," he said. "And that doesn't count the ones who have not been put on the official list."

Burns, wearing a T-shirt that reads, "Participant Southeast Asia, 1964-1975 — Second Place," believes in the vet centers, crediting them with helping him cope with post-war stress.

"I walked into a vet center in Springfield, Mass., needing help and I've been involved with them ever since," he said. "I didn't know what my problem was. I didn't know that it was PTSD. I worked for the center in Springfield for a year as a volunteer and then took the job here."

Burns compares PTSD with the "shell shock" of World War II and "battle fatigue" of World War I. Prinz, however, believes that Vietnam veterans had their own special problems.

"The Vietnam War was a jet age war," said Prinz. "The guys that went over there had a very short transition period both going over and coming back."

"The average age was 19 years old and they usually went to war by themselves, went into the reception company by themselves, were assigned to units where the old-timers didn't want to have anything to do with the newcomers because it was such a risky business," he said. "While they were over there, they learned to survive but when it came time to go back they began to get scared again and went back through the same thing they endured while going to Vietnam.

"They went 'in-country' and went home, by themselves."

Prinz estimated that the entire process of re-entry into U.S. society from the war-torn jungles of Southeast Asia was extremely short.

"In 24 to 72 hours, they were back out on the streets," he said. "And even then the homecoming was not exactly a super kind of thing. It was not like World War II where the transition period of war to home was slow and where ticker tape parades awaited those who served."

Once back on home soil, continued Prinz, the Vietnam veteran encountered families who weren't sure how to deal with them and, in general, a "neutral America," that preferred to put the war behind them.

"When I returned I hid out in the numbers at college," he said. "I very seldom divulged that I had served in Vietnam — it only generated a lot of grief.

Ex-county attorney announces candidacy for City Council

From Staff Reports

Rendall

A former county attorney, Robert Rendall, announced this morning he will seek the District 4 seat on the Midland City Council now being held by Steve Davidson.

During a news conference at Midland Center, Rendall pointed to the need for Midland's economy to diversify and for the council to look ahead to a situation that he sees coming — the day when property values drop and so do the resulting tax revenues.

"Being in business I'm cognizant of a need for a base more than oil and gas. It's a cyclical industry. We need some way to stop up the gap when we have low oil and gas prices," he said.

He cited the need to provide necessary services and incentives to encourage economic growth and diversification. "This can only be accomplished by continuing to take the necessary steps to provide an adequate supply of water resources and other necessities required for long-term economic growth," said Rendall, 32.

Property values have stayed level or have dropped in some cases, he said, and when a reappraisal is completed "it will affect the budget. They will have to cut the budget or raise revenues to make up the shortfall," he said.

"The city has to run like a business and they have to make short-term and long-term projections. There have been some forward thinking people on the council."

Rendall said when the single-member district plan for city council elections became effective last spring he looked at running for a position. And when Davidson announced two weeks ago he would be running for mayor next spring, Rendall said he looked at it closer.

In making his decision, Rendall noted he has attended Bonham Elementary, Alamo Junior High and Lee High School, all located in District 4, and that he has many friends and acquaintances who live in that area. "They are attuned to the philosophy of expecting quality city services without wasteful expenditures of tax revenue," he added.

The council members he contacted all "feel good about being on the council. When you look at it in the broad perspective, they all have enjoyed the experience." Rendall said community leaders made positive impressions on him as he was growing up in Midland.

"The spirit of volunteerism, pride and interest in the community make Midland a most desireable place to reside and raise families," he said.

Although the city election won't be held until the first Saturday in April, Rendall said he was making his announcement at this time to get his organization pulled together. "And there has been so much activity in statewide races that people are listening and tuning in to it," he said.

Day will seem endless to those in Smokeout

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

One day is 24 hours long — that's 1,440 minutes or 86,400 seconds. Trivia to most, but not to the countless Midlanders getting through the ninth annual Great American Smokeout — they're watching every sweep of the second hand.

Ruth Haight started counting Wednesday.

"I started early and decided to try going 24 hours without smoking," said the Midland Memorial Hospital employee. "People keep coming up, puffing on their cigarettes and saying, 'this sure tastes good,' and I tell them 'it sure looks good,' but I going to stick with it."

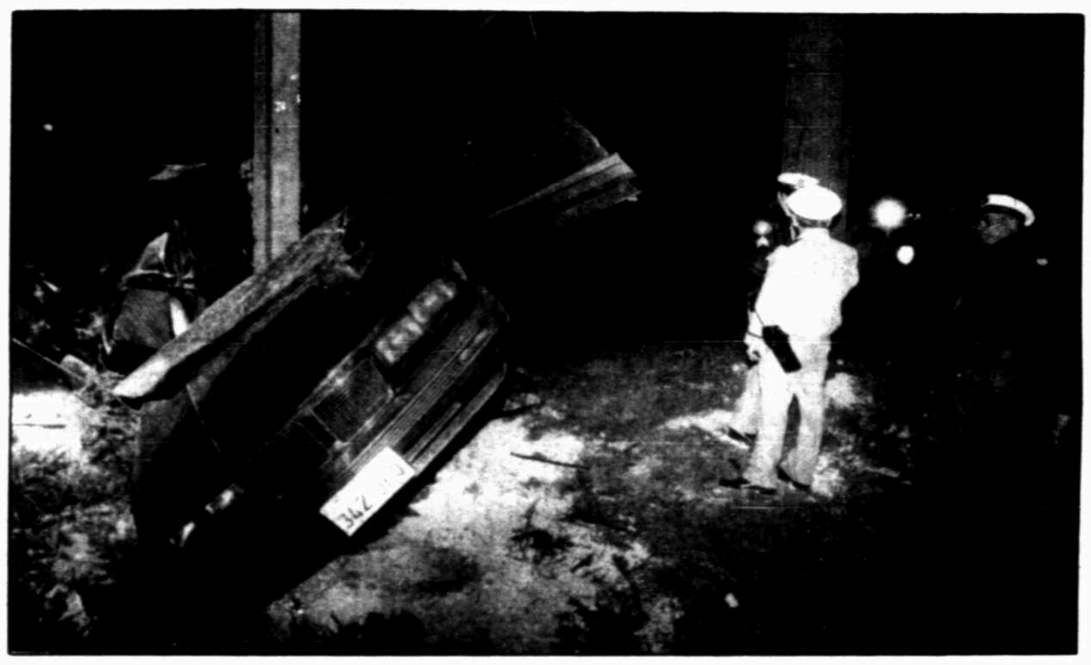

Most Midlanders, even if they're not participating in the American Cancer Society's annual campaign to clear the air, are aware of the event. The ubiquitous "survival kits" — red, white and blue plastic sacks containing the paraphernalia necessary to get the smoker through a day of abstinence — are hard to miss.

"We're giving out the survival kits at the information desk and handing out literature as well," said Cynthia Brust, a MMH spokeswoman.

The kits are also being pushed in the Midland city offices.

"We've had people from all the different municipal worksites trying to quit," said Carmen Edwards, director of the City of Midland Employee Health Program. "Some of them are being 'adopted' in the ACS' 'Adopt-A-Smoker' program, but we also have several 'orphans' who are going it alone."

Accident scene

A 37-year-old Midland man who was thrown clear of this car before it hit the billboard post was listed in critical condition this morning with head trauma, according to a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman. Arturo P. Romero, 3210 Elma, lost control of his 1985 Pontiac Grand Am in the 1200 block of North Loop 250 about 10:44 p.m. Wednesday, according to police reports. The car hit a sign and Romero was thrown clear; the car then crashed into the billboard.

Garden City man charged in drifter's murder

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

An unemployed 23-year-old Garden City man was charged today with the Tuesday murder of a drifter on a lease road in northwest Midland County, according to Sheriff Gary Painter.

Bond for Miles Karl Berry was set at $25,000 this morning by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine after Berry's arrest Wednesday night by Midland Sheriff's deputies. Berry was being held this morning in the Midland County Jail.

"The boy and this old man got into an altercation," Painter said this morning.

53-year-old Robert Ray Kittle, a drifter from the Dallas area, was found shot to death about 8:40 a.m. Tuesday on a lease road off State Highway 158 just north of County Road 60. He had been shot in the cheek and chest with a .22-caliber rifle, according to the autopsy report, which put the time of death at about 6:45 a.m.

Berry was identified through a tip received by the Sheriff's Office after Kittle's description was publicized by the news media, according to Sheriff's Investigator Jim Newsom.

"He (Kittle) had been seen with an individual the night before his death," Newsom said.

Kittle, who arrived in Midland Saturday, had been playing guitar and panhandling in several Midland bars, and he met Berry in one of them Sunday, Painter said.

"He was trying to help the old man get some work. They'd been drinking," said Painter. Apparently, Kittle had asked for a ride out of town so he could hitchhike to another city. For some reason a dispute broke out, and Kittle was killed, Painter said.

Enforcement of seatbelt law will begin Dec. 1

From Staff Reports

Enforcement of the state's new mandatory seatbelt law will begin Dec. 1, local law-enforcement officials announced today.

The law went into effect Sept. 1, but motorists were given three months to get used to buckling up. Beginning next month, however, front-seat occupants of passenger cars and light trucks must wear their seatbelts or face a possible fine ranging from $25 to $50.

"We will begin the actual enforcement," said Maj. Dudley Thomas of Midland's Department of Public Safety headquarters. The DPS enforces traffic laws outside the city limits, but Thomas said Midland and Odessa police would also begin enforcing the seatbelt law Dec. 1.

Law-enforcement officials are counting on "a high degree of voluntary compliance," said Dudley, who noted fatal accidents have declined about 6 percent statewide since the law took effect Sept. 1, even without being enforced.

Wearing seatbelts not only saves lives, it saves money, Dudley said: "We expect to see a continued decrease in insurance rates."

Under the new law, drivers will be ticketed for unbelted passengers under the age of 15. Trucks up to a ¾-ton capacity are included in the law, but owners of older vehicles which were manufactured without seatbelts are not required to have the belts installed.

Local pilots take to skies for airborne treasure hunt

A group of aviatrixes called The Ninety-Nines recently concocted a scheme to lead some fliers of both genders astray.

It worked in spots but not in the main.

It was a 200-mile aerial treasure hunt that tested the navigational skills and humor of 13 pilots and their observers.

Their scenic route and clues included such notable landmarks as the salt lake southwest of Crane; the hidden metropolis of Imperial; Grandfalls, a place that's definitely not Niagara Falls; Royalty, where the only queen is a bee; irrigated cotton fields; a tire-testing track between Fort Stockton and Pecos; 39 tires on a mobile home; Kermit, only a hop away; Goldsmith, where black (as in oil) is golden, and Pyote, home of the ghostly Rattlesnake Bomber Base, and finally, Odessa.

"The treasure hunt was more to test your navigational skills," said Joann Price, who along with her husband Steve and friend Paula Gauthier repeatedly flew over the course to plot it and to log clues to guide the fliers.

Prior to letting the pilots start their hunt and handing them charts and quiz lists, Ms. Price instructed the pilots on headings on the navigational charts: " 'T' is for true, and 'M' is for magnetic."

" 'L' is for lost," quipped a pilot.

Paul Erdmann, who, like vaudeville's Al Jolson, never shuns the limelight, was leery of the hunt.

"Those girls are devious," he joked. "They've been spending weeks at this to make sure they have the right clues. I'm sure there's some trickery to it."

He was right. No one, including the Ninety-Nines's own Mary Alice Tidwell, scored a perfect 50 in answering the 41 questions on the hunt's quiz.

And no one, surely, was distracted by the scenery, marked by its lack of splendor, along the route over the West Texas plains.

"Boy," exclaimed Erdmann's sidekick-wife, Florence, as he piloted his aircraft over some oil fields and ranch land, "there's a whole lot of nothing out here."

Well, the embarrassing coincidence came in the outcome of the flight. Erdmann, who forever is eager to speak out, "happened" to win the contest with a 37-point score. Back in the summer, he also won a flying-poker rally sponsored by the Ninety-Nines.

Now, Erdmann's chief navigator and principal spotter on the treasure hunt was world-class aerobatic pilot Gene Beggs. Erdmann had a definite advantage but no handicap.

"I've got to quit showing up," he said without an ounce of seriousness. "They're going to lynch me. Actually," he confessed, "it was Gene."

But Erdmann tried to get the advantage. He had telephoned Ms. Price two or three times prior to the flying hunt to get some navigational clues.

"She wouldn't talk," he said. "They (the Ninety-Nines) were fair and square about it."

Back at Schlemeyer Air Field, near Odessa, Ms. Price and her compadres were computing the hunt's scores. The scoring was close. But she hinted at the winner when she emerged from the backroom and announced: "I hope we don't have a mobbing here."

The winner, of course, was Erdmann, who gloated.

"I hired the champion (Beggs)," he bragged. "No wonder I won first place. They could have saved time and energy and just sent me the prize," which was awarded by the Ninety-Nines's Purple Sage Chapter, which sponsored the contest.

Erdmann beamed. His friend Beggs, a modest sort, just smiled, gave a happy thumb-up sign, and went on his way.

"As Sgt. Preston (of the Yukon) says to his dog, King, 'This case is closed,' " Erdmann said. "I'll put my prize on display at the bank tomorrow."

Ms. Price and the Ninety-Nines accept Erdmann, who happens to be president of an aerobatic club here, for all he's worth.

"He's playing it for all can get," she said in her amusement.

More than anything, the flight was for enjoyment and to hone up pilots' flying and navigational skills.

"We're trying to get more people involved in aviation," Ms. Price said. "People fly for business, but they don't (always) have fun doing it. We're trying to build some camaraderie among pilots."

Jury to deliberate fate of convicted murderer

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 161st District Court jury of eight men and four women were expected to begin deliberations before noon today to set the sentence of a 20-year-old man found guilty Wednesday on a charge of murder.

Jurors spent less than two hours behind closed doors Wednesday afternoon to find Robert Patino guilty of the April 2 fatal shooting of 19-year-old Daniel A. Castillo Jr.

District Judge Tryon Lewis ordered jurors to return to court at 8:30 this morning to begin hearing punishment arguments in the case.

Testimony during Patino's trial revealed that, while he did not handle the gun allegedly used to kill Castillo, he was an active participant because he drove the car from which his 17-year-old cousin, Israel Patino, fired the shot that struck Castillo in the back of the head.

Israel Patino faced trial on a charge of murder in 70th District Court in July, was found guilty and sentenced to 50 years in prison. Yet to come to trial is Robert Patino's 18-year-old brother, Carlos, who is also charged with murder in the death of Castillo.

The three are also charged with attempted murder in the wounding of Terrence Lopez, 17, and aggravated assault on Rene Gomez, 18, who was a passenger in the Lopez vehicle at the time of the shooting near the intersection of West Clements and Summer Street on Odessa's southside.

In closing arguments, assistant district attorney Carson Grimm told jurors that under the law of parties it was not necessary for them to find that Patino actually fired the shot that killed Castillo, only that Patino was a willing and active participant. Patino demonstrated his part in the affair, Grimm said, by pursuing Lopez's car and making U-turns to maintain pursuit.

Patino's court-appointed attorney, G. David Smith, told jurors they had no choice but to find Patino not guilty because the state had failed to present evidence that would show Patino killed Castillo.

Contending the Patinos were merely defending themselves, Smith said jurors must determine from evidence presented who was the aggressor in the incident. It was not Robert Patino, he said.

Smith stated the death of Castillo, wounding of Lopez and assault on Gomez "as the result of a godawful feud that should never have existed in the first place."

The Patinos, Smith contended, were reacting out of fear of Lopez, who had stabbed a man, he said. Lopez was indicted earlier this year and faces trial on a charge of attempted murder in connection with the Feb. 16 stabbing of Ruben Cuellar on the parking lot of the now-defunct Daddy's teenage nightclub in the 5000-block of West University. Lopez has also been charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon and simple assault.

Smith told jurors the Patinos were only acting in self-defense, shooting only after shots had been fired at them from the Lopez car.

CENTER

With a quick transition, cool receptions and confused families, the veterans had yet another barrier that added to the general malaise.

"There was a whole lot going on in this country that some of us never were aware of simply because we were out of touch for two years," said Prinz. "I'm still learning about the two years when I was in Vietnam. When I left here in 1966, the war was still basically popular at home. While I was over there, however, Martin Luther King and Bobby Kennedy were killed and by the time I came back, things were completely different."

All these factors, indicated Prinz, compounded the PTSD that many veterans were experiencing.

A list of post-war responses attributed to PTSD (also called delayed stress reaction) available at the center contains no less than 24 different emotional and physical problems affecting the veterans — 10 years after the war.

Among them are depression, anger, tendency to react under stress with survival tactics, suicidal feelings, flashbacks to Vietnam, alienation, sleep disturbances, negative self image, memory impairment and survivor guilt.

Some shocking statistics follow the list.

"It is estimated that the number of deaths from suicide may now have exceeded the number of deaths from combat. There were 58,000 deaths in combat," said the report, compiled by psychologists and psychiatrists working with the Vietnam Veteran Outreach Program — the Vet Center's parent program.

"Of those veterans who were married before going to Vietnam, 38 percent were divorced within six months after returning from Southeast Asia," said the report. "Between 40 and 60 percent of the veterans of the Vietnam War have persistent problems with emotional adjustment. The number of Vietnam veterans hospitalized for alcoholism has more than doubled in the past seven years."

The Vet Center has three counselors including Prinz who work with vets "in session." The center offers individual, family and veteran group counseling, wife/partner and couple counseling, employment/job placement assistance, compensation and pension information and Agent Orange information.

Also offered are referral services such as alcohol and drug treatment programs, V.A. medical and mental health care, legal information, crisis calls and contract counseling.

The center is open from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday and 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on Fridays. Vets may call 697-8222.

Council finds another $7,000

From Staff Reports

For the second consecutive evening, Midland City Council met in special session to approve some changes in bond refunding which would give them another $7,000 in immediate savings to add to the $1,036,762 saved the previous evening.

During the emergency session in City Hall at 9 p.m. City Finance Director Troy Gifford said the accounting firm found an additional $100,000 in the General Obligation bonds. "The simplest thing was to pass an ordinance to amend the ordinance we passed last night to reduce the amount of the bond issue by $100,000. The net effect is a kick for us — $7,000 in interest," he said.

The previous evening the council approved a refunding, or refinancing, plan for 10 G.O. bonds amounting to $24,075,000 and $24,885,000 in Colorado River Municipal Water District revenue bonds. From that transaction, the city saved the initial $1 million in interest immediately. The interest rates had ranged from 9 to 13 percent; under the refunding interest rates on the bonds range from 5 to 8 percent.

Savings under the G.O. bonds now amount to $428,585, on the CRMWD package, $623,956.

With the $100,000 located, the city's G.O. bond package was reduced to $23,975,000, according to Deputy City Manager Fred Poe. The length is the same — through 1997, he said.

Council members attended the late-night meeting in their casual dress — pants or jeans and sweaters. At the conclusion, Councilman David Godfrey joked, "Tomorrow night's meeting will be at midnight."

SMOKE

Both Cabbage Patch and orphaned smokers will get a chance to win one of three turkeys being given away by the City of Midland to its smokeless employees.

Ms. Edwards notes, however, that the prize is a "cold turkey" and is not "smoked."

She estimates that "over 100" employees are trying to quit in this year's campaign.

"It's hard to guess because we're so spread out," she said. "But out of 950 total employees, that's not a bad figure is it?"

While city workers may find the day taxing, employees at Midland College are learning a thing or two from their students.

"There's a whole bunch of the faculty that are being sponsored by the Student Senate as part of the 'Adopt-A-Smoker' program," said a spokeswoman for the public relations office. "They're also handing out survival kits and literature around campus."

The annual Great American Smokeout, kicked off Wednesday at a pre-Smokeout rally at Centennial Plaza, is in its ninth year as a nationwide (and becoming international) campaign.

Jail renovations making progress

From Staff Reports

Midland County is making progress toward renovating it 85-inmate jail, Midland County Commissioner Win Brown said today.

Brown was disputing news reports out of Austin which said the state Jails Standard Commission members had indicated the jail "is not making any progress on renovation work."

No actual physical work has started on the project, noted Brown, but the county commissioners have retained Midland architect Walter Pate to draft specifications on the renovation, which may get underway late this year or early in 1986.

"You just don't go in there and start ripping and tearing" without first planning, Brown said. "We've had some past commissioners who wanted to do it that way, which is not a business-like approach to any situation."

Earlier this year, the Jail Commission cited the Midland County Jail for several violations and issued a remedial order to limit inmate capacity to 85.

The repair-renovation work is to correct Jail Commission-cited flaws and other deficiencies in the jail, which is on the fifth and top floor of the 1930-vintage courthouse. Renovation is to include replacement of the roof and air-conditioning system, repair of the plumbing system, improving cell lighting and installing an automatic emergency-unlocking for the jail's single cells.

"Let's make sure we know what we are doing before was start sawing and hacking," Brown said of renovation.

Man pleads guilty before trial starts

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The retrial of a 53-year-old man on a charge of indecency with a child ended early Wednesday afternoon when he suddenly agreed to plead guilty to the charge in 244th District Court.

Prospective jurors had barely returned to court about 1 p.m., following a lunch break, when Matt Thomas, the attorney representing Gene Bobo, informed Judge Joe Connally his client had decided to plead guilty to the charge and accept a plea bargain offer he had earlier rejected.

Connally agreed to allow Bobo to plead guilty to the charge and sentenced him to a 10-year probated sentence and a $2,000 fine.

Assistant District Attorney Roger Summers and Thomas had spent most of the morning qualifying the panel of prospective jurors and the final panel of 12 was yet to be selected when Thomas returned to court with the surprise announcement.

Bobo had been indicted on one count of indecency with a child in connection with an incident that allegedly occurred Oct. 30, 1984.

An initial trial in January 1985 in 161st District Court ended when the jury announced it was hopelessly deadlocked and Judge Tryon Lewis granted Thomas' motion for a mistrial.

Testimony during the first trial revealed several children living in the vicinity of Bobo's east Odessa apartment had been in the habit of going to his apartment to buy candy he offered for sale at a reduced price.

According to testimony, Bobo had told some of the children he would leave his apartment door ajar and they could enter without knocking.

In the offense for which he was indicted, Bobo was accused of appearing in the living room of his apartment wearing only an undershirt when a child was present.

Convicted killer hopes to block his execution for second time

STATE

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer Jay Kelly Pinkerton, facing lethal injection next week for the slaying of an Amarillo woman, says he's hoping to duplicate his efforts of earlier this year, when he succeeded in an appeal that blocked his date with death.

"From what I understand, my family, my lawyer, are still working on it," he said Wednesday in what could be his last meeting with reporters.

Pinkerton, 23, who would be the youngest person put to death in the United States since the Supreme Court allowed the death penalty to resume in 1976, says he too is working "around the clock" on what he hopes will be a 30-page appeal he'll mail to the high court.

"I don't look for the execution to take place, but then that's not totally in my hands," he said. "If it does take place, I accept it. If not, I accept that also.

"I was prepared before. I've been prepared quite a long time now."

Pinkerton faces death before dawn Tuesday for the rape-slaying of Sarah Donn Lawrence in 1979.

The former meat cutter was 17 when he was arrested for killing the 30-year-old woman, who was raped, stabbed as many as 50 times, had her throat slashed and body mutilated during a burglary of her home.

Pinkerton also was convicted of capital murder for the stabbing death of Sherry Welch, a former beauty queen who was the victim of a similar attack.

On the night of Aug. 14, as he was waiting to be strapped to the gurney in the Texas death chamber, the Supreme Court voted 6-2 to keep him alive. The prison warden informed him of the stay at 11:43 p.m. Execution was scheduled for just past midnight.

"I think this time I'm going to do a lot better," Pinkerton said.

The high court subsequently rejected his appeal and a state judge set Nov. 26 as Pinkerton's third death date.

"My case was not denied — only refused, which allows me to continue my appeal," he said Wednesday.

The appeals are based on what he says was his illegal arrest, inadmissable evidence and inadequate defense counsel. He also contends that a state judge should not have issued a new death date because the Supreme Court has not ruled on his motion for a new hearing.

Pinkerton would become the 11th Texas inmate to be executed since the state resumed the death penalty in 1982. Six of those executions have occurred this year.

Gonzalez says Gibson acting 'childish'

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez says an opponent's challenge to forego donations from political action committees is "childish."

Former state Rep. Jay Gibson of Odessa will oppose Gonzalez in the May Democratic primary. Gibson said Wednesday he would set tight restrictions on contributions to his campaign.

"I will not accept one dollar from a political action committee special interest group, and Justice Gonzalez, I presume, will return the contributions he has already taken and not take any more," Gibson said.

Gonzalez said, "I think it's childish. There's nothing wrong with political action committees."

Political action committees are groups formed to raise money for campaign contributions.

Gibson has said he is challenging Gonzalez because a group of lawyers formed an organization called "The Supreme Court Justice Committee" to raise money for Gonzalez.

From Staff Reports

The countdown to Christmas Day has started, and the Midland Parks and Recreation Department has an even earlier deadline for people who like to get into the holiday spirit early.

The third annual mini Christmas tree contest has started and deadline for entries is Dec. 12.

The city, working in conjunction with the Museum of the Southwest, is sponsoring the contest for people who enjoy demonstrating their creativity and imagination by decorating a tree.

According to rules, the tree must be between 1 and 2 feet tall, must have its own stand or base, may be constructed of any material or be of any design or color and may be decorated with any type of material.

There is no age limit for contestants. Individuals or groups may enter, and they may enter as many trees as they wish.

Trees should be delivered to the Museum, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. from Dec. 6-12. They may be picked up by Dec. 30.

All trees should have a card with the name, address and telephone number of the contestant tied to it.

Trees will be judged Dec. 13 and awards for first, second and third place will be announced during the Christmas tree-lighting festival at 6 p.m. that day in Centennial Plaza Park. Winning entries will be on display that evening in the lobby of Midland Center.

All the entries, including the winning ones, will be on display at the Museum of the Southwest from Dec. 6-30 during regular museum hours, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

The IAC meeting, which is open to pilots, airframe power mechanics and others interested in aviation, will be held at 1101 W. Texas Ave. in the Buffalo Trail Council Boys Scouts of America headquarters building, according to Paul Erdmann, IAC chapter president.

Speakers at the meeting will include Ben Visser, senior research engineer for Shell Development Co. at Sugarland; Joe Moriarty, president of the U.S. Aerobatic Foundation and a Rye, N.H., manufacturer of piston rings for engines for aerobatic airplanes and race cars; Terry Capehart, a Mena, Ark., builder of high-performance aircraft engines; and Gene Beggs, a Midland-Odessa aerobatic pilot who is on the United States World Aerobatic Team.

The chapter, also known as the West Texas Aerobatic Club, in January will begin meeting at 7:30 p.m. on the first Thursday of each month in the Memphis Aero lounge at Midland Regional Airport.

Erdmann noted that the chapter's latest project is the buying of a Bellanca Super Decathlon aerobatic airplane for club use.

Burned body positively identified as that of banker

HOUSTON (AP) — The badly burned body of a man found in a 1984 Jaguar earlier this month was positively identified Wednesday as that of missing Houston banker Edward G. Baker, Harris County Medical Examiner Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk said.

Baker's body was found in his expensive sports car Nov. 8 in northwest Harris County.

A spokesman for the medical examiner's office said on Nov. 13 that the body was Baker's, but Jachimczyk denied two days later that a conclusive identification had been made.

Jachimczyk on Wednesday said the positive identification was made by using teeth found in the car.

Baker's wife of six months, Sandy, has said mobsters killed her husband because he owed them $1 million in loans to his company, Vanguard Groups International.

Medicare ruling 'unfair'

AUSTIN (AP) — A legislator Wednesday described as "unfair and unwise" a state moratorium on Medicaid payments to hospitals and nursing homes that don't have a certificate of need.

The 1985 Legislature abolished the Texas Health Facilities Commission, which was the agency in charge of issuing certificates of need to build or enlarge medical facilities.

In July, according to Rep. Juan Hinojosa, the Board of Human Services decided to cut off Medicaid payments to hospitals and nursing homes that did not receive a certificate of need by Aug. 31. The moratorium could extend through Dec. 30, the McAllen Democrat said.

"This type of arrogance is why the public loses confidence in our government's institutions since many seem to be accountable to no one. I, for one, intend to hold the board accountable next session," Hinojosa.

Three jailed in hotel robbery, slaying of clerk

IRVING (AP) — Two men and a woman were in custody today in connection with the execution style slaying of a night clerk who was shot during the robbery of an Irving motel near Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Capital murder charges are expected to be filed later today against two men in their early 20s and a 35-year-old woman, accoridng to Irving Police Lt. Richard Bailey.

One other person was being sought, Bailey said.

The three were arrested, Bailey said, in connection with the predawn robbery last Saturday of a Holiday Inn in which two clerks were bound and gagged, forced to lie down in a closet and shot.

Doug Walker, 25, of Irving, died after he was shot twice in the back. Donald Hall, 29, of Arlington, was in serious condition Wednesday night at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas. He was shot in the abdomen, police said.

Police said two people walked up to the motel lobby counter about 5 a.m. Saturday and asked for a room. One put a briefcase on the counter, pulled a 9 mm pistol and said, "This is a robbery."

The clerks were forced to lie down behind the counter while the the robbers opened the cash register and took more than $200, police said.

Officers said the clerks were then taken to a closet where the robbers tied their wrists and gagged them. One of the robbers fired two shots at Walker, killing him, and two shot at Hall, striking him once.

The robbers then dragged a 300-pound safe from the building and drove away, officers said.

Suspect held without bond in three murders

HOUSTON (AP) — A 28-year-old man was arrested Wednesday night in the slayings of three people, including two sisters, found in a northwest Houston townhome last week, police said.

Richard Gerry Drinkard was arrested at home, police spokesman J.C. Mosier said. He was held without bond on a warrant for investigation of capital murder, Mosier said.

"The only possible motive that our detectives perceive is possibly a burglary," Mosier said. "There were purses and wallets from the victims that are still missing so we can speculate that perhaps it was a motive to rob these people."

The severely beaten bodies of Lou Ann Anthony, 42, of Houston, and her sister, Ladean Hendricks and boyfriend Jerry Mullins, both 47, of Coleman, Okla., were found dead in Ms. Anthony's townhome Friday afternoon, homicide detective Gil Schultz said.

All three had suffered massive head injuries, police said. Tuesday, police recovered a hammer from a creek near the townhome which they believe was used to beat the victims.

Ms. Hendricks and Mullins had traveled to Houston last Thursday, according to Ms. Anthony's son, Brian Talley. Mullins was scheduled to get medical treatment for a hand injury suffered in a recent industrial accident, Talley said.

The bodies were discovered Friday by Ms. Anthony's daughter after the trio failed to keep an appointment.

Bite treatment successful

AUSTIN (AP) — A team of Austin doctors has had success treating spider bites with a procedure commonly used to treat severe wounds and burns, according to an article in Texas Medicine magazine.

The procedure consists of a temporary skin graft, which involves surgically covering the wound with a piece of pig skin saturated with a water-soluble protein called silver sulfadizine.

The specially treated skin graft reduces pain, combats infection and minimizes scarring, according to physicians Robert Ersek, Gary Surak and C. Wade Peters, and David Denton, PhD.

They said a 1982 study showed that burn wounds treated with this type of skin graft healed at twice the rate of those treated with sulfadizine cream alone.

Ex-lawmaker paroled

EL PASO (AP) — Former state Rep. Bob Valles, convicted of official misconduct for stealing government money to pay off gambling debts, will be paroled today after serving 8½ months of a four-year sentence.

In March, State District Judge Brunson Moore sentened Valles to prison after the ex-lawmaker violated terms of his probation by being arrested for drunken driving.

Valles' parole was approved Nov. 4 by the state Board of Pardons and Paroles and was not contested by El Paso County officials, authorities said.

Valles, who served four terms in the House, was accused of having his bookmaker's wife on his legislative payroll, although she performed no work. He pleaded guilty to four counts of official misconduct.

Asbestos suits separate

BEAUMONT (AP) — U.S. District Judge Robert Parker has refused to reconsider his earlier order to combine more than 1,000 personal injury asbestos cases as a class-action suit.

The judge Wednesday did grant a request from lawyers representing asbestos manufacturers to allow the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans to review his class certification before a trial is conducted.

Goddess to be airlifted by Chinook

AUSTIN (AP) — If all goes well, it should take only five minutes to airlift the Goddess of Liberty from the Capitol dome where it has stood for 97 years, officials say.

If the delicate operation goes off without a hitch, the twin-engine helicopter should lower the statue from its 311-foot-tall perch on the dome to the lawn shortly after 8 a.m. Sunday, said Col. Herbert Purtle, the guard's aviation officer.

"If everything goes well, we hope to have it sitting on the ground at five minutes after 8 (o'clock)," Purtle said.

"This will then end the first and perhaps most important aspect of the beginnings of the Capitol restoration," said Capitol architect Roy Graham.

The 1½-ton Goddess, erected in February 1888, has been so severely cracked and corroded by weather that it must be replaced. After public display on the Capitol grounds for three days next week, the statue will be repaired and used in molding a duplicate for the dome, Graham said.

Standing about 16 feet tall, the zinc statue has made the Texas Capitol some 3 feet taller than the U.S. Capitol in Washington.

The CH-47 "Chinook" helicopter will be piloted by Lt. Col. Jim Looney, 41, of Hitchcock, and CWO Craig Roberts, 38, of League City, both full-time instructors and test pilots for the Texas Army National Guard at Ellington Air Force Base in Houston.

"We do not feel like there will be a danger," Purtle said. "We have planned this entire operation with great care and meticulous preparation so that any chance of an incident or damage to the Goddess, the Capitol building or the spectators will be extremely minimal," Purtle added, explaining that the Chinook will carry a reduced fuel load and be prepared for maximum lifting.

The helicopter generally is used for hauling cargo or artillery pieces, Guard officials said.

"This is what the CH-47 Chinook was designed for. It's a cargo aircraft. It's the safest aircraft in the country," Purtle said.

The statue's arms and Lone Star already have been removed.

Purtle and Patrick Rice, a metallurgical expert who has been working on the Goddess project, said numerous safety measures have been taken to prevent the statue from falling through the Capitol roof.

Rice said a special, dual harness system has been devised to hook the statue to the helictoper for the lift.

State architect Roy Graham displays the left hand and star which was removed from the Goddess of Liberty atop the State Capitol. The statue is scheduled to be removed by helicopter Sunday in preparation for her replacement.

Grand jury indicts head of juice company

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County grand jury has indicted the vice president of a Dallas juice company on charged he sold thousands of gallons of juice that failed to meet state and federal health standards to Dallas area schools.

The indictment returned Wednesday names Steven Robert Zantop, vice president of Juci-Rich Products of Texas on misdemeanor charges alleging he "misbranded" and "adulterated" orange juice and lemonade he sold to schools including Dallas, Highland Park, Grand Prairie and Plano.

The indictment also alleges the firm operates under unsanitary conditions and is not registered with the state to manufacture food.

Zantop, who denied the allegations, faces up to a year in the county jail and a $2,000 fine if convicted.

Zantop says his company did not violate any laws and said the problem occurred in one batch of juice that was voluntarily recalled. He said the problem was corrected.

The indictments resulted, he said, from an "overzealous" health inspector "who came in here and just decided she didn't like me."

Authorities said the four-count indictment was returned after a two-month investigation by the texas Department of Health and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Officials said some of the juices sold to the schools as 100 percent pure juice contained a yellow coloring dye and others contained benzoric acid, a preservative. Neither substance was listed on the label of ingredients on the four-ounce juice cartons, officials said.

Lynwood Scholtz, assistant director in the food and drug division of the state health department, said some people can develop allergic reactions to the dye, but he said the additives are not "harmful to the general public."

Juci-Rich stopped using the dye until new cartons were printed, and Zantrop said he though "everybody was happy until now."

Zantrop denied that the company operates under unsanitary conditions and said he has since applied to the state for permission to manufacture food.

School dropout arrested for string of fires

HOUSTON (AP) — An 18-year-old high school dropout has been arrested and charged with arson for a string of fires in southwest Houston, arson investigators said.

Damon Henry Downs, was arrested Tuesday night in a shopping center parking lot, said Fire Department spokesman Bill Paradoski. Downs, charged with arson Wednesday, was awaiting a transfer from the city jail to the Harris County Jail, police spokesman J.C. Mosier said.

Bond was set at $500,000, he said.

Police said a man had called them claiming responsibility for several fires and identifying himself as the "Fondra Firebug," a name taken from the French word "fondra" which means "will melt."

Downs, an electronics wizard, was already set to appear in court Wednesday on a misdemeanor charge of making a harassing communication. He was out of jail on that charge on $800 bond.

In a sports car at time of his arrest, Downs told authorities there was a bomb in his car, Paradoski said, but a one-hour search of the vehicle turned up nothing.

Authorities have been investigating the case since last week, when a man identifying himself as the "Fondra Firebug" telephoned the Fire Department and threatened to set a fire at a southwest Houston apartment building. Minutes later, a fire was reported at the complex.

Officials say they believe the self-described firebug may be responsible for more than a dozen — possibly even 18 — fires at Houston area homes and offices.

Principal OKs mock wedding of black, white

BRYAN (AP) — A mock interracial marriage between two high school students was allowed to proceed at the last minute after the school's principal relented and approved the nuptials.

The bogus wedding held Tuesday was part of an assignment for students taking a home and family living class at A&M Consolidated High School.

For the past five years, students taking the course have planned mock weddings to learn about roles and responsibilities involved in the ceremony.

This year for the first time, students in the course chose a black student, Tanya Ford, as the bride and Mike Swaldi, who is white, as the groom.

Students said they were told Monday that Principal Sandra Parker canceled the mock ceremony because she wanted to avoid conflict from the community. But at the last minute Tuesday, they were given the go-ahead and the wedding was held.

Ms. Parker said she originally called off the ceremony because she wanted the examples used by the school to be representative of accepted community behavior.

"The community looks at a school to illustrate and to model," she said.

Student Louise Reading said Ms. Parker called off the wedding to avoid hearing complaints from the community.

"She said this was a very conservative town and that she wanted to keep the school within the normal behavior of the community," the student said.

U.S., Soviet Union sign new accords ending sanctions

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WORLD

GENEVA — The United States and the Soviet Union today signed new cultural accords that end a sanction imposed against Moscow for its invasion of Afghanistan but pave the way for the people-to-people exchanges that President Reagan says are vital to fostering real peace.

As President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev looked on, Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze signed the agreements, which provide for exchanges of Americans and Soviets in a variety of fields, including performing arts, academics, business and athletics.

The agreements were among five accords signed by Shultz and Shevardnadze at the conclusion of the first superpower summit in six years.

The United States and Soviet Union agreed to create a joint scholarship program for students in natural science, social sciences, humanities and technology, and to promote Russian language in the United States and study of the English language in the Soviet Union.

A parallel agreement provides for "general exchanges" to promote understanding of "aspects of each country's life and society." Among those to be included in the exchanges are arts groups, professors, print and broadcast journalists, and library exhibits, as well as government officials at the federal, state and local levels.

The two countries also agreed to establish new communication links to improve air safety in the North Pacific to avoid incidents like the Soviet downing of a South Korean jetliner two years ago.

The fourth agreement opens a new U.S. consulate in Kiev and a Soviet consulate in New York, and authorized the two governments to conclude negotiations to resume commercial air travel between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The last agreement is designed to foster research on the sun as energy through transfers of technology and "basic knowledge."

Reagan said in a speech to the American people on Nov. 14, "Imagine how much good we could accomplish, how the cause of peace would be served, if more individuals and families from our respective countries could come to know each other in a personal way."

"Imagine if people in our nation could see the Bolshoi Ballet again, while Soviet citizens could see American plays and hear groups like the Beach Boys."

The chief negotiator of the cultural agreement, Raymond Benson, said in an interview that the program would make possible exchange visits of groups like the Bolshoi, Beach Boys and New York Philharmonic.

But he said it would have a more modest start for student exchanges than Reagan envisioned, with up to 100 graduate students a year from each country to begin with. About 25 graduate students have traveled to each country annually in recent years even without an accord.

Signing of the agreement ends one of the few remaining sanctions imposed by the United States against Moscow for the Afghanistan invasion in 1979.

The last agreement expired at the end of 1979. Negotiations on a new accord were under way, but former President Carter broke them off to protest the invasion of Afghanistan in December of that year.

Reagan used the negotiations as a sanction against the Soviet Union after the shooting down of the South Korean airliner on Sept. 1, 1983. Negotiations were about to begin on a new agreement, but Reagan canceled them after the attack.

Insects invade dry foods

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. During the past two years I have been discovering small, flat worms in my dry food products, particularly noodles, but also in pancake mixes and pre-formed graham-cracker pie crusts. In some cases, the products have been old. In other cases, less than two months old. The pie crust had just been purchased.

I began storing these products in zip-lock storage bags immediately upon purchase, hoping to protect them from exposure to air (which I thought might be the problem). However, this has not helped. In fact, one such bag, containing two unopened bags of noodles less than two months old, contained what appeared to be well over 100 worms.

There is no correlation with brand. I've found them in variety of brands from just plain noodles to macaroni-and-cheese mixes, soup mixes with flavor packets. Can you help? M.L.K., Upland, Calif.

A. Another reader in Iowa recently wrote with a similar problem. What she found were the actual insects in the various products. What you're probably seeing are the insects — either beetles, weevils, moths or mites — in their larval stage. Although they probably originated in a factory or store several years ago, since you find them turning up in everything, your whole kitchen appears to be invaded.

You now have a lot of work to do. Bernice Lifton, in the book "Bug Busters," advises first of all that from now on you not mix new foods with those already in your kitchen. Throw out all infested items. Suspect those foods that seem all right, but quarantine them.

Thoroughly vacuum and wash all pantry surfaces. Heat or freeze all susceptible foods. Buy new stocks of food in the smallest amounts possible for a few months and use them up quickly. If at all possible, don't resort to spraying pesticides.

Many of these insects can bore through anything, including zip-lock bags, leaving holes barely visible to the human eye. They don't regenerate spontaneously, so keeping a product air-tight has no effect. Store your newly purchased items in glass, metal, hard plastic or in the refrigerator.

I would like to hear from readers who have experienced similar problems and would like to know how they dealt with them.

Q. I often make guacamole to serve at lunches, but could never make it in advance because I found that the avocado mixture would always turn brownish after a while. Then I heard on a cooking show that to keep this from happening you should return the avocado pit to the mixture and the guacamole would not discolor. I tried it and it worked. I'd like to know what is in the pit that prevented the discoloration? Susie Cower, Palo Alto, Calif.

A. Here is a good example of how a belief originates, is passed along and becomes a conviction without any scientific merit to back it up.

Carole Hansen, spokesperson for the California Avocado Commission, reports, "In tests we have done here, we have found that the avocado pit has no effect on keeping guacamole from turning brown. What people must realize is that when they prepare guacamole, ingredients such as tomatoes, salsa and lemon juice are typically used. Any of these ingredients will keep guacamole from discoloring."

Apparently you hit on the right mixture of ingredients that one time, and the pit just sat there doing nothing.

Another way to keep guacamole from turning brown, in case you don't add acidic ingredients to it, is to press a piece of plastic wrap directly, repeat directly, onto the surface and then refrigerate.

Q. I have a question concerning eggs. I understand they are high in cholesterol. I have a friend who is not in the best of health, but she eats two or three eggs a day. This worries me, but she informed me it was all right since she buys fertile eggs. Is there a difference? Mary Leonard, Smyrna, Ga.

A. Cholesterol is cholesterol whether an egg contains a rooster's sperm or not. Years ago the government told us to eat two eggs for breakfast every day, but now nutritionists are saying we should limit our intake to no more than four a week. Each egg yolk contains about 260 mg of cholesterol which, in relationship to its weight, has the highest concentration of cholesterol of all food.

For reasons yet unknown, some people's cholesterol rate doesn't seem to be affected by their diet. Your friend may or may not be one of these. The only way to find out is to have her cholesterol level checked by a doctor.

Reader Feedback:

• Sally Janzich, Bremen, Ind.: "About 18 or 20 years ago when my two kids were small, I too wondered how they made the creamy rice pudding in the delis. My kids loved it. I decided it had to be top-of-the-stove cooked. So I just used a plain cornstarch-based pudding from an old Betty Crocker cookbook and added my already cooked rice. Just about any amount from 1 to 2 cups works fine.

⅓ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten, or 1 whole egg
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 teaspoon vanilla

Blend sugar, cornstarch and salt in a 2-quart saucepan. Combine milk and egg yolks (or egg); gradually stir into sugar mixture. At this point I add the already cooked rice. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and boils. Boil and stir for one minute. Remove from heat and stir in butter and vanilla. Pour into dessert cups or cool it in a bowl. Sprinkle with cinnamon if you like."

• Effie Allsup, Modesto, Calif.: "Concerning a question from a reader that she could not get creamy rice pudding, the secret is this: When it has cooled, add Cool Whip to get your desired thickness. This works in any kind of cream pie fillings, too."

Chipped beef returns

By LINDA ANDERSON

Linda Anderson

For years and years, I have been hearing horror stories about creamed chipped beef on toast, sometimes called something unprintable on a shingle. In fact, some of my father's favorite "war stories" have this unspeakable food in them.

And for years and years I have doubted the accuracy of such stories — I mean, how could one single dish be so consistently awful?

Now, Armour has taken a huge marketing gamble and introduced Creamed Chipped Beef dinner in a box. Everything needed to make the dish is contained in the box, except the toast. All the cook has to add is water and milk.

The adult, teen and children tasters tried this mix, checking it out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. We had all heard the stories, but were willing to risk tasting the dish anyway.

A 2.5-ounce box of Armour's creamed chipped beef cost $1.93 and contained enough for two average-sized or one very generous serving. (Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

The product is advertised on its label as containing "lean beef — only 5 percent fat." However, the first step in preparing the food is "rinse beef under warm running water for 15 seconds to remove excess salt." Which means the meat may not have much fat, but evidently it does contain much salt.

Preparation was easy. After rinsing the beef, the cook cuts it into small pieces and sets it aside; simmers the packet of sauce mix and one cup of milk; adds the beef to the sauce mixture and simmers on low heat (stirring frequently) until it thickens, about five minutes.

In addition to toast, the mixture can be used on rice, noodles or baked potatoes, the label claims.

The product label gives no nutritional information, but the ingredient listing shows the beef really does have a huge amount of salt — salt is listed second in the beef ingredients, followed by sorbitol, sodium erythorbate and sodium nitrite.

While the taste-test revealed the creamed chipped beef was not nearly as horrendous as its reputation, the dish wasn't all that good, either.

The teenager liked it at first then decided the beef was OK but the sauce was not. The adult found it to be better on baked potatoes (in small portions) than it was on toast, but the young children refused to touch it because it looked like they wouldn't like it.

It's actually not a bad change-of-pace quick meal, but it does look funny and brown gravy would probably make it taste better.

Catalog shopping popular trend

New York Times News Service

Shopping by mail is popular during the holiday season — and year-round.

Total mail order sales in 1983 were $44.4 billion, according to Roberta Maneker of the Direct Marketing Association in New York City.

The Federal Trade Commission suggests taking these steps when ordering by mail:

• If you are unfamiliar with the company, check with the Better Business Bureau in its area, with the nearest postal inspector or with the F.T.C. in Washington, to see if complaints against the company have been filed.

• Read all the fine print in the catalog, including the refund policy.

• Send a card, independent of the one you include with the gift, notifying the recipient that a package is on its way. This way, you will hear if the gift does not arrive.

• Before ordering perishables, make sure that someone will be at the other end to receive it.

• When ordering by mail, specify delivery date desired. Usually prices for prepaid food are for the continental United States only.

The Federal Trade Commission has leaflets on mail-order shopping. To receive free copies, write to Public Reference Branch, F.T.C., Sixth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20580.

Holiday turkey prices are up

Hospital payment information for the elderly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is changing its method of making Medicare payments, in a move designed to save money but which may prove confusing for some.

To help the elderly — and their relatives — understand and cope with the changes a new booklet, "Knowing Your Rights," is available.

Published by the American Association of Retired Persons, the booklet discusses the new payment methods, how patients can protect their rights and the appeals process if needed.

Also included is a patient checklist of important things to consider before and during hospitalization. The 16-page booklet is available, at no charge, from AARP Fulfillment, 1909 K St. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20049.

Camp raid broke legal commandments

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I wish you had gone a bit further in your criticism of the terrorist raid on the children's camp reported by "Angry in Richfield, Minn."

First, there is the criminal matter. Two men displayed guns, apparently threateningly. This is (in California, at least) a crime — brandishing a firearm. Children were shoved and cuffed. This is battery. The threat with a loaded gun is assault. Subjecting children to assault and battery is child abuse. Two girls were taken from the others and shots were fired. This is kidnapping. Not allowing the other children to leave is false imprisonment. Some children did escape and left the area unsupervised. This, given the responsibility of the camp, which staged this farce, is child endangerment. The fact that it was planned makes the entry of the armed men into the children's sleeping quarters burglary. There may be others, but I count eight crimes for certain.

The second point is one of civil law. Since the father was "surprised," I assume neither his prior assent nor that of his child was attained. If that's the case, he and his child have direct cause for civil action against each of the "terrorists," the camp director, the camp itself, and the church that sponsored the event for each of the crimes listed, even if the district attorney doesn't bring criminal charges.

Third, the lesson the children will learn from this episode: It is all right to engage in criminal behavior and terrorism in the name of Christianity. I really doubt that this is what Christ had in mind, and I can find no scriptural justification for such an attitude, though there are many Scriptures that seem to argue to the contrary.

I realize that this letter is long but, if you print it, it might encourage other "Christians" to think again before they do something similar. Sign me — LEGALLY SPEAKING

DEAR ABBY: Please print the enclosed item from your column. I used this idea and it worked wonders.

"Dear Agnes: Now that it's almost Thanksgiving, I'm thankful for relatives like you with whom I can be perfectly frank!

"For years our families have been exchanging Christmas gifts. At first they were modest little toys for the kids, and some inexpensive doodad for the grown-ups. Somehow, it got out of hand, and every year the gifts became more costly.

"Let's face it, the spending, shopping, gift-wrapping and delivering have become a chore, so let's knock off buying presents for the adults, and just send gifts to the youngsters this Christmas. I will if you will, OK?

"This idea isn't original. I got it from Dear Abby's column. It makes a lot of sense, doesn't it? Love, Your Cousin Sue"

DEAR ABBY: With reference to the people whose uncurtained bathroom window caused their neighbors much concern: I read somewhere about a family that built a new home and ordered a floor-to-ceiling one-way glass window for their bathroom. Well, they found out much later that it had been installed wrong-side out! — MARY F. COLE, HOUSTON

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90028.)

Experiments conducted for chili burn remedies

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Scientists will be dunking hands in vegetable oil and cool water in an attempt to find out which readily available home remedies actually relieve chili burns.

The 24 female volunteers will be asked to dip their digits in a slurry of chopped chili for a fixed period of time, said Dr. William Troutman, director of the University of New Mexico Poison and Drug Information Center.

"Then one hand will be placed in a cool-water bath and one hand in a container of vegetable oil," he said. "Then they will be periodically evaluated as to which one is providing superior relief of discomfort."

The majority of chili burns occur in the fall when the harvest comes in and people begin roasting the vegetable.

Chili pepper pungency is determined by the amount of capsaicin, an alkaloid that burns people with sensitive skin.

The center has received many suggestions for soothing fiery fingers.

"Vinegar and sugar and honey and, well, you can name it and somebody has recommended it," Troutman said.

Hospital payment information for the elderly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is changing its method of making Medicare payments, in a move designed to save money but which may prove confusing for some.

To help the elderly — and their relatives — understand and cope with the changes a new booklet, "Knowing Your Rights," is available.

Published by the American Association of Retired Persons, the booklet discusses the new payment methods, how patients can protect their rights and the appeals process if needed.

Also included is a patient checklist of important things to consider before and during hospitalization. The 16-page booklet is available, at no charge, from AARP Fulfillment, 1909 K St. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20049.

DEAR ABBY

Camp raid broke legal commandments

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I wish you had gone a bit further in your criticism of the terrorist raid on the children's camp reported by "Angry in Richfield, Minn."

First, there is the criminal matter. Two men displayed guns, apparently threateningly. This is (in California, at least) a crime — brandishing a firearm. Children were shoved and cuffed. This is battery. The threat with a loaded gun is assault. Subjecting children to assault and battery is child abuse. Two girls were taken from the others and shots were fired. This is kidnapping. Not allowing the other children to leave is false imprisonment. Some children did escape and left the area unsupervised. This, given the responsibility of the camp, which staged this farce, is child endangerment. The fact that it was planned makes the entry of the armed men into the children's sleeping quarters burglary. There may be others, but I count eight crimes for certain.

The second point is one of civil law. Since the father was "surprised," I assume neither his prior assent nor that of his child was attained. If that's the case, he and his child have direct cause for civil action against each of the "terrorists," the camp director, the camp itself, and the church that sponsored the event for each of the crimes listed, even if the district attorney doesn't bring criminal charges.

Third, the lesson the children will learn from this episode: It is all right to engage in criminal behavior and terrorism in the name of Christianity. I really doubt that this is what Christ had in mind, and I can find no scriptural justification for such an attitude, though there are many Scriptures that seem to argue to the contrary.

I realize that this letter is long but, if you print it, it might encourage other "Christians" to think again before they do something similar. Sign me — LEGALLY SPEAKING

DEAR ABBY: Please print the enclosed item from your column. I used this idea and it worked wonders.

"Dear Agnes: Now that it's almost Thanksgiving, I'm thankful for relatives like you with whom I can be perfectly frank!

"For years our families have been exchanging Christmas gifts. At first they were modest little toys for the kids, and some inexpensive doodad for the grown-ups. Somehow, it got out of hand, and every year the gifts became more costly.

"Let's face it, the spending, shopping, gift-wrapping and delivering have become a chore, so let's knock off buying presents for the adults, and just send gifts to the youngsters this Christmas. I will if you will, OK?

"This idea isn't original. I got it from Dear Abby's column. It makes a lot of sense, doesn't it? Love, Your Cousin Sue"

DEAR ABBY: With reference to the people whose uncurtained bathroom window caused their neighbors much concern: I read somewhere about a family that built a new home and ordered a floor-to-ceiling one-way glass window for their bathroom. Well, they found out much later that it had been installed wrong-side out! — MARY F. COLE, HOUSTON

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90028.)

Experiments conducted for chili burn remedies

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Scientists will be dunking hands in vegetable oil and cool water in an attempt to find out which readily available home remedies actually relieve chili burns.

The 24 female volunteers will be asked to dip their digits in a slurry of chopped chili for a fixed period of time, said Dr. William Troutman, director of the University of New Mexico Poison and Drug Information Center.

"Then one hand will be placed in a cool-water bath and one hand in a container of vegetable oil," he said. "Then they will be periodically evaluated as to which one is providing superior relief of discomfort."

The majority of chili burns occur in the fall when the harvest comes in and people begin roasting the vegetable.

Chili pepper pungency is determined by the amount of capsaicin, an alkaloid that burns people with sensitive skin.

The center has received many suggestions for soothing fiery fingers.

"Vinegar and sugar and honey and, well, you can name it and somebody has recommended it," Troutman said.

American suffers concussion in Vietnam

AP Laserphoto

Capt. Paul Bethke, of Lombard, Ill., examines a piece of aircraft wreckage at a crash site near Hanoi, Vietnam.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — One of the Americans searching for the remains of four missing U.S. airmen in Vietnam was struck in the head by a backhoe and suffered a concussion, a spokeswoman for the search team said today.

Capt. Virginia Pribyla said Capt. Charles Callaway of Richmond, Va., was treated and kept overnight at a Hanoi hospital, then flown to Clark Air Force Base in the Philippines.

She said he was in "good shape" when he arrived at the U.S. base and that he soon would return to his home base in Honolulu.

A 12-member team from the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center in Honolulu is searching side-by-side with Vietnamese workers at the village of Yen Thuong near Hanoi, where Vietnam says a B-52 bomber was shot down on Dec. 20, 1972.

Vietnamese officials say four U.S. airmen were on the plane and believed killed.

The Americans used a metal detector to pinpoint areas for digging with the backhoe, then laboriously picked through the red dirt for remains.

As of Wednesday, they had discovered almost 20 bone fragments and pieces of what they said was an airplane.

The project is the first joint U.S.-Vietnamese excavation to account for some of the 1,797 Americans missing in action from the Vietnam War.

The excavation began Tuesday and is scheduled to be completed Nov. 28.

Callaway is an explosives disposal specialist. A replacement, Tech. Sgt. Stephen Smith, was flown in to take his place, the spokeswoman said.

Ms. Pribyla, who left Hanoi for Bangkok on Wednesday, maintains frequent radio contact with the search team in Vietnam.

Emergency evacuation of thousands from town near volcano just drill

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — An emergency committee ordered thousands of people to evacuate a town near the Nevado del Ruiz volcano in a surprise drill that the town's mayor said even he thought was real.

The mayor, Joel Hartman, said in an interview on the Caracol radio network that thousands of people were still in the hills surrounding Mariquita early today, fearing a new eruption, because the army had not given the order for them to return.

Sister Carmenza Ordonez, night supervisor of Mariquita's hospital, told Caracol in an interview that despite her protests soldiers ordered all the patients evacuated Wednesday, including seriously injured children.

Although the director of the National Emergency Committee, Victor Ricardo, told Caracol he had ordered three towns evacuated in the drill, there was no indication the order had been carried out anywhere but Mariquita.

Mariquita has been swamped with refugees from nearby Armero, a coffee-growing town that was buried last week in an avalanche of mud loosed when a small volcanic eruption melted the mountain's snowcap.

Hartman told Caracol in a live interview that because the town is only 17 miles from the volcano, people were scared when the evacuation started.

The town normally has about 17,000 people but the population has swelled to 25,000 with the arrival of Armero refugees.

Hartman said the evacuation was made under the pretext that the volcano might erupt.

"We were meeting with army officers who are running things here," he said, when "a communique from the national emergency commitee ordered an evacuation."

Caracol and another national radio network, RCN, interrupted their broadcasts of a soccer game to report the evacuation order. They quoted military sources as saying the emergency was real.

The radio networks said the three towns to be evacuated were Mariquita, Honda and Guayabal.

But Ricardo later said in a live interview on Caracol that the third town was Ambalema, not Guayabal. He did not say whether Honda and Ambalema actually were evacuated, nor did he say whether the towns' officials and residents had been told there was not real emergency.

The radio stations said they could not reach Guayabal by telephone and efforts by The Associated Press also were fruitless. Caracol reported it contacted a man at a hotel in Honda who said that town had not been evacuated.

Darrell Herd, head of the U.S. Geological Survey team monitoring the volcano, told reporters in the capital that scientists monitoring the volcano had issued a statement warning of a continued risk of increased volcanic activity.

But he said, "I don't know why this evacuation was ordered."

The volcano has continued to spew smoke and ashes, and an international team of scientists detected a series of tremors inside the three-mile-high mountain Tuesday.

The president of the national Red Cross, Carlos Martinez, told Caracol: "The National Emergency Committee came up with the idea of simulating an evacuation in order to avoid future complications if this situation is going to go on." He was referring to continued activity inside the volcano.

Irish prime minister looks forward to U.S. aid in Northern Ireland

By MARCUS ELIASON

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald, who signed an agreement with Britain giving the Irish Republic a formal role in Northern Ireland, says he looks forward to aid from the United States and other nations to build support for the accord.

In an exclusive interview with The Associated Press, FitzGerald also insisted that Belfast, capital of the British province, be the site of the Anglo-Irish secretariat foreseen by the agreement.

FitzGerald, 59, spoke Wednesday, on the eve of the Irish parliament's vote on the accord he signed last Friday with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. FitzGerald aides said they expected approval by the 166-member Dail, or parliament.

In brief, the accord signed by FitzGerald and Mrs. Thatcher:

— Gives the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic Irish Republic a formal consultative role in running British-ruled Northern Ireland.

— States that Ireland cannot be united unless a majority in the north, where Protestants outnumber Catholics 2-1, agree.

— Maintains the status of Northern Ireland as part of the United Kingdom.

FitzGerald was interviewed at the state broadcasting studio where he had been questioned earlier by Protestant and Catholic students from Belfast — part of his effort to sell the accord to inhabitants of Northern Ireland, plagued by years of bloody sectarian strife.

American aid, FitzGerald said, would help win support.

"It's a very important backup. It must help people to see the positive benefits of the agreement," he said.

It was too early to mention figures, FitzGerald said, and warned against raising false hopes that the aid would solve of all Northern Ireland's economic problems, including its 21+percent unemployment rate.

But he said he believed "it is likely that there will be significant aid from the United States and other countries."

Protestants attack top British official

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestants angered by an agreement between Britain and Ireland grabbed Britain's top official for Northern Ireland and tried to drag him to the ground as he entered City Hall, police said.

Northern Ireland Secretary Tom King was not hurt in the incident Wednesday.

King arrived at City Hall for a luncheon in a bulletproof limousine. About 30 protesters banged and kicked his car when it stopped at the building and blocked the main entrance.

Police said one protester grabbed King by the neck and tried to knock him to the ground before police intervened.

Among those who attended the protest was the radical Protestant leader, the Rev. Ian Paisley, who called King "a yellow bellied coward."

King, who is a member of the British Cabinet, later described the incident as a "display of hooliganism" and branded his attackers thugs. Police said they had arrested one man but did not identify him.

Also Wednesday, leaders of Northern Ireland's Protestant majority filed suit in High Court in London challenging the legality of the agreement. The court was to rule today whether to allow a judicial review.

WORLD in brief

Legal glitch could invalidate election

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Hondurans vote for a new president Sunday, but a legal controversy could leave them without a leader when the term of President Roberto Suazo Cordova expires Jan. 27.

Suazo Cordova, who has led this U.S. ally in Central America for nearly four years, is barred by the constitution from seeking re-election.

Yet, it is unclear which of two election laws will take precedent in deciding his successor, and the two laws are likely to lead to opposite results.

Top officials have been reluctant to make a ruling, raising fears that the lack of a clear winner could throw this country of 4 million into violence.

Honduras has had 17 coups, revolutions or assassinations of leaders since independence in 1838. During the same period the country has had 69 governments and 14 constitutions.

Bishop speaks out

LONDON (AP) — An American bishop who opposes the ordination of women told fellow Anglicans in the Church of England Wednesday that the demand for woman priests in the United States "could die out."

Robert E. Terwilliger, assistant Episcopal bishop of Dallas, was applauded by a packed meeting of clergy and laity when he said the divisions in his church over its ordination of 600 women priests won't force him to quit, despite his "great sadness" over the issue.

"It is a glorious, great church fight, and there is no fight like a church fight. In the history of the church, these were the moments of divine breakthrough," Terwilliger said.

He predicted the demand for women priests in the United States "could die out — there is such a thing as a dead letter, even in Christendom."

Researchers warned

PARIS (AP) — The French Academy of Medicine warned against pre-mature claims of medical breakthroughs, implicitly rebuking doctors who have claimed "spectacular biological results" from a new treatment for AIDS.

The academy represents the French medical establishment but has no powers.

Its statement Wednesday warned against "according credibility to certain (treatments) whose scientific justification is uncertain and which have not stood the test of time."

A team of doctors at Laennec Hospital in Paris announced Oct. 29 that they had seen spectacular results in two AIDS patients treated for just eight days with cyclosporine, a drug that normally is used to prevent rejection of transplanted organs.

The Academy of Medicine statement said the value of any new treatment could not be judged without prolonged, controlled experiments.

Report termed 'lies'

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe on Wednesday denounced an Amnesty International report that accused his regime of torturing its opponents and holding them in jail without charge.

"It amounts, in our opinion, to a heap of lies. And I am not prepared to carry out an investigation into what I know to be an untruth," Mugabe told the National Assembly.

Meanwhile, Zimbabwe's auditor general charged in his annual report that fraud, corruption, theft, bribery and maladminstration are increasing in the nation's civil service and organized crime is recruiting key personnel.

Mugabe said he had respected Amnesty International in the past, "but it would appear it is
