Judge rules Blalock must remain in jail on felony murder charges

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Probable cause was found Friday by District Judge Grainger McIlhany to continue holding a Pampa man on a charge of felony murder in the death of a 13-year-old boy.

An estimated 50 people attended the application for writ of habeas corpus hearing in 223rd District Court. McIlhany presided over the hearing in place of District Judge Don Cain, who is out due to an illness.

The writ was filed by Robert Kimberly Blalock, 33, who has been in Gray County Jail since his arrest on May 23. The writ was filed to make the state show probable cause for the continuation of holding Blalock. Blalock has not been indicted by a grand jury.

McIlhany also denied lowering the $50,000 bond of Blalock at the conclusion of the hearing, moved to the Gray County Courtroom due to air-conditioning problems in the District Courtroom.

Blalock is charged with throwing a Molotov cocktail into the front windows of the residence of Paulette Noble and her two children on May 21. The incendiary device caused a fire, during which 13-year-old Dale Noble died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Testimony presented during the hearing indicated that one motive in the case was revenge.

Paulette Noble testified that she had purchased a vehicle for her oldest son, Terry, from Blalock last year for $500. By the next day, she said they had discovered the vehicle was faulty and did not run properly. She said she attempted to receive her money back, but Blalock refused.

Noble then filed a lawsuit in Justice of the Peace Court and on Nov. 20 was awarded a judgment for $2,450, including $900 in attorney's fees.

She described Blalock's actions in the court on Nov. 20 as "arrogant."

"He cursed several times in the courtroom," Noble said.

After numerous unsuccessful attempts to collect the money, Noble said her attorneys, John and Mike Warner, filed a turnover and show cause order on May 18, and the hearing was set for June 7.

On May 21, the same day as the fire, Precinct 2 Constable Chris Lockridge testified he served Blalock with the civil papers about 4:35 p.m. at Blalock's residence.

Noble also said she saw Blalock within three blocks of her residence about 6:30 p.m. May 21 as she was taking her son to baseball practice. She said he was "driving slowly and appeared to be looking for something."

Noble also said two people saw Blalock in a vehicle on her block that evening before the fire, which occurred about 11 p.m. at 1340 Terrace.

A key witness in the case, Teresa Rodriguez, testified that she and Blalock's daughter and estranged wife, Mitzie, were friends of hers and that she saw Blalock on the day and evening of May 21.

Rodriguez said she was shown the civil lawsuit papers that day and said Blalock made a comment to her about the papers.

"He said he wasn't worried about it because he was going to get revenge," Rodriguez testified.

Around 8 or 9 p.m. on May 21, Rodriguez said she returned to where Mitzie Blalock was staying on Russell Street and saw Blalock with a glass container filled with gasoline and a red rag in the opening of the bottle.

"He was standing up sticking this long metal thing into a glass bottle with a red rag ... It (the bottle) had a handle at the top," Rodriguez said.

She said the bottle was filled with gasoline because she could smell it. "He was sticking the rag down in it."

Being shown pictures of the top of a bottle with a red shop rag in it that was found in the Noble's residence following the fire and what a fire official said started the fire, Rodriguez said, "The top of the bottle is the same. The top of the bottle was just like that and the red rag is the way it was."

Rodriguez also said she had been called by Blalock's daughter on Thursday and asked not to incriminate her father in any way.

"I told her I was just going to tell the truth. She said to say he was working on his truck the whole time," Rodriguez said.

Following evidence presented in the hearing and on the defense's motion to reduce the bond, District Attorney Harold Comer told the court, "The state opposes any reduction on the bond ... In the state's way of thinking he (Blalock) has violated every principle of human decency ... He's taken the life of a 13-year-old boy."

Comer said the future safety of the Noble family should also be considered and said the $50,000 bond was not an unreasonable bond for the nature and circumstances of the offense.

Defense attorney James "Rowdy" Bowers said Blalock was a "poor boy" and couldn't raise the money needed for a $50,000 bond, but could get the funds for a $30,000 bond. He also added that there is still the presumption of innocence and that it was possible Blalock had already lost his job because he had been in jail so long.

Bill Waters elected to board of directors at Citizens Bank

Bill W. Waters was recently elected to the Board of Directors of Citizens Bank & Trust Co., announced Larry Orman, president and chief executive officer of the Pampa bank.

Waters is a longtime Pampa attorney and civic leader who played a key role in the acquisition of the new state prison for Pampa.

In announcing the new director's election, which occurred July 17, Orman said, "We are very pleased to have Bill Waters on our board. He is an outstanding citizen and business leader. He represents the city extremely well across the Panhandle and throughout Texas. We know he will bring leadership and a strong commitment to serving our board and the customers of Citizens Bank."

Waters, a resident of Pampa since 1934, served in World War II. After college and graduation from the University of Texas Law School, he has practiced law here since 1949.

He served four years as Gray County attorney and 14 years as district attorney. He was president of the Texas District and County Attorneys' Association in 1965.

Returning to private law practice in 1968, Waters has also served on the Board of Directors of the State Bar of Texas. He is currently on the nine-person Professional Ethics Committee appointed by the Supreme Court of Texas. Included in his professional honors are being a Life Fellow of the Texas Bar Foundation and a Fellow of the American Bar Foundation.

Locally, Waters has been very active in the development and growth of Pampa. Since 1968, he has been a trustee of the M.K. Brown Foundation and has served as its chairman since 1974. He is a trustee and secretary of the Gray-

Bill W. Waters

Pampa Foundation.

Waters is president of the Pampa Industrial Foundation, which spearheaded the efforts to acquire the state prison. He is a director of the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce. For his civic achievements, Waters was named 1989 Citizen of the Year for Pampa.

As the newest member of the Citizens Bank Board, Waters joins Orman and members Rex McKay and John Lee Bell. Recently, Harold Courson, John Cluck and Carl Ellis were elected to the board following their approval by state bank regulators.

Courson is a Pampa native and an independent gas and oil producer. Cluck is chairman of FirstPerryton Bancorp, parent company of Citizens Bank since May 1990. Ellis is president of the parent company.

Citizens Bank & Trust was chartered in 1940 in Pampa and recently celebrated its 50th anniversary. The bank has total assets of $67 million.

Trinidad coup leader threatens to blow up government hostages

By ALISTER HUGHES
Associated Press

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP)

The black Moslem leader of an attempted coup in this Caribbean nation threatened Saturday to kill government hostages, a churchman said. One report said 22 people died in the coup attempt.

The report of deaths in Friday afternoon's takeover of the Parliament building and subsequent fighting came from the Barbados-based Caribbean News Agency. Officials gave no casualty figures, but the Red Cross issued an urgent call for blood donations.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Anthony Pantin said the coup leader, Abu Bakr, told him the prime minister and the other officials captured Friday "are wired up with explosives."

Pantin said on state radio the threat was relayed in a 25-minute telephone conversation with Bakr, who threatened to blow up the captives and himself if government troops mounted an attack on the rebel-held television station.

The Moslem rebels fired automatic weapons in storming the Parliament building, seizing Prime Minister Arthur N. Robinson and several Cabinet ministers.

Police in the former British colony of two islands off the Venezuelan coast imposed a curfew until Sunday afternoon, and the acting president declared a state of emergency.

The acting president, Joseph Emmanuel Carter, put the 5,000-member army and 1,500-member police force on alert. President Noor Hassanali was in London.

Acting Foreign Affairs Minister Edden Shand, who was released by the rebels Saturday after being held with other government hostages in the Parliament building, made a statement on radio opposing any foreign military intervention.

He said this was "the unanimous

Waterfield says changes needed in S&L regulations

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Republican congressional candidate Dick Waterfield of Canadian said Friday that Congress must stop partisan finger-pointing and make some substantial changes in laws regulating the savings and loan system.

Prior to an address at the Kiwanis Club meeting at First Methodist Church, Waterfield said, "The whole bunch of them is at fault on the S&L thing."

Waterfield said attention to Neil Bush, the president's son, and his involvement in one S&L scandal has diverted attention from the real issue.

"I think Neil is a victim," Waterfield said. "That's not to say that what he's done is right. I'm not saying one way or the other. It's just that he happens to be the son of the president and probably if he wasn't, he would just be one of many board members across the country of S&L's that fell."

Waterfield said, "I saw one thing that was kind of funny (in the media) in which they said he (Neil Bush) wasn't qualified to serve on the board. I think that's funny because we've got a lot of people serving on different boards and what does qualify them to be on a bank board or an S&L board or whatever?"

Instead of spending valuable time "playing politics" in Washington, Waterfield said legislators should "get down to making sure this doesn't happen again or we ought to turn the whole bunch of them out."

"They have got to tighten up the regulations and ... shut the ones down that are in violation," Waterfield said. "There has been nothing done to prevent (the widespread financial troubles of thrifts) from happening again and that's scary."

Waterfield said he believes investors in S&L's must have their deposits protected, but that he would favor the closing of thrifts that are insolvent, rather than the current bail-out program.

"I don't think they are a sacred cow," Waterfield stated. "They either make it on their own like we've done in the banking business or they go under. I serve on the board of a bank and there wasn't any way we could have done what the S&L's have done."

"It tells me a lot of congressmen and members of the administration looked the other way because there was a lot of money being passed around up there."

Waterfield said he is at odds with the president over Bush's reversal of campaign promises of "no new taxes."

"I was very disappointed and I told President Bush that when I was in Washington," Waterfield said. "I didn't think he needed to do it. He could have hung tight and made Congress cut the spending; that's what I wanted him to do. I have varied from his program and am not with him on this thing."

Waterfield said as long as taxpayer dollars are being used for "ferries in Samoa and $20 million to look after the arts and that kind of thing," he could never support tax hikes.

"These kind of expenditures are silly and I could not ever support a tax increase as long as that kind of spending is going on," Waterfield said.

He termed it "sad" that conservative legislators are having to push for a balanced budget amendment. The most recent attempt to get such a measure passed was rejected in Congress by seven votes.

"I can't imagine why they can't balance their own budget when you and I have to," Waterfield said. "I would have to support a hammer on them just because they can't hammer themselves."

Waterfield, 88th District state representative, is challenging Democratic incumbent Bill Sarpalius of Amarillo for the 13th District seat in Washington.

Groups say air pollution control bill is being weakened

AUSTIN (AP) — Lobbyists for the chief polluting industries are working behind the scenes in Congress to weaken proposed changes in the Clean Air Act, the Texas land commissioner and environment and health groups said Friday.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and the groups said the lobbyists and their friends in Congress are trying to delay passage of the legislation for quick wheeling-and-dealing that will gut the bill as the congressional session draws to a close.

"We are literally choking our children to death on dirty air," Mauro said at a news conference on the one-year anniversary of when the bill was introduced. "We can tolerate foot-dragging no longer."

"Our sick planet can't wait while our politicians have lunch with lobbyists," said Bridgid Shea of Clean Water Action.

Ms. Shea knocked President Bush's position on the bill, saying, "Where is George?"

"Mostly what we have heard from him on the Clean Air Act is whining and complaining about what it will cost to industry. He needs to start looking at what it will cost to human beings and the environment," she said.

Wade Thomason of the American Lung Association of Texas said deaths and health problems from air pollution cost the country from $5 billion to $90 billion annually.

Ms. Glen said American citizens did not appear to be in danger. Trinidad's lush island of Tobago is a popular vacation site for American and foreign tourists.

An administration official said troops were surrounding the Parliament building, where some of the captured government officials were apparently being held. Others were captured in the state television station, which was taken over by the rebels.

Coup leader Abu Bakr went on government TV Friday evening after his followers seized the station and said the government had been taken over.

Bakr, a former policeman in his mid-40s, heads a group of about 250 followers called Jamaat al-Muslimeen, Arabic for the Moslem Group. The group has been linked with Libya.

The rebels, who burst into the Parliament building Friday, took Prime Minister Arthur N. Robinson and members of his Cabinet hostage. But the education minister, Clive Pantin, said Saturday the government remained in control.

"The government of Trinidad and Tobago has not fallen," said Pantin, speaking on government-run Radio 610. "The cabinet members are in command and taking the necessary decisions to ensure the peace and well being of all."

He said two ministers and four civilians had been released, but the exact number of people being held was unknown.

The Barbados-based Caribbean news agency CANA said three people had been killed. The agency reported eyewitnesses saw two bodies in front of the Parliament building and said a reporter saw the body of a woman in front of the building.

In Washington, a State Department official said it appeared the insurrection was limited to the television station and Parliament building. The television station is located in northeastern Port-of-Spain about two miles from the Parliament building and the main police station.

Red Cross President Daniel Samaroo, speaking on government radio, made an appeal for blood donors. He said the Health Ministry had asked for Red Cross help because the city's medical services could not cope with the number of wounded. No precise number of wounded was given.

Government radio said the main police station burned out of control for hours after an explosion as the coup bid began Friday.

Losing bid offered independent check of Hubble mirrors, documents reveal

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In bidding to make the Hubble Space Telescope mirrors, Eastman Kodak planned independent tests that could have detected before its launch the focusing flaw that now cripples the $1.5 billion orbiting observatory, a company official says.

Eastman Kodak planned to team with Itek Optical Systems to make two primary mirrors for the space telescope, according to documents released Friday by NASA in response to a Freedom of Information petition.

The companies were to cross-check the accuracy of their mirrors to assure they were of the correct prescription and then one of the mirrors would be used on the telescope.

NASA officials, however, awarded the contract in 1977 to Perkin-Elmer. The Danbury, Conn. firm, now known as Hughes Danbury Optical Systems, ground the mirrors itself and used its own personnel and equipment to check the mirror prescriptions.

Perkin-Elmer's winning bid was $64.28 million. Kodak's proposal was for $99.79 million.

Through overruns and delays, the cost of the Perkin-Elmer contract climbed to an eventual total of $451 million.

The Hubble Space Telescope was launched in April and has been found to have a focusing flaw in either the primary or secondary mirror. This error, NASA officials have said, means the telescope is now able to capture images that are only about half as clear as those planned.

Dick Wollensak, a vice president of Itek, which is now a subsidiary of Litton Industries, said that the losing Kodak-Itek bid called for a so-called "end-to-end" test that would have detected any flaw in the mirrors before the telescope was launched.

"We weren't going to build those things and then not test them after they were assembled," he said in a telephone interview. "Between Kodak and Itek, there were facilities to test the assembled optical system without a major modification."

NASA officials have said that the completed Perkin-Elmer optical assembly was not tested because it would have required a test facility that may have cost more than $100 million.

As a result, the telescope was launched into space without ever being optically tested as an assembled unit. The focusing error was not discovered until the telescope was in orbit.

Wollensak said the Perkin-Elmer design did not allow for the primary mirror to be tested after it was placed into the assembled telescope.

He said the instrument was designed to work in zero gravity and the gravity of Earth caused the glass to sag slightly, which would have changed the focus.

Kodak and Itek, however, had developed a way to prevent the sag and thus test the mirrors as an assembled unit, Wollensak said.

Wollensak said he believes cost was a major factor in NASA selecting Perkin-Elmer to make the Hubble optics.

"NASA had developed their own version of what it should cost and that was lower than the Itek-Kodak bid," Wollensak said. "They felt that the Perkin-Elmer bid was low, but they thought that the difference between the NASA expectation and the Perkin-Elmer bid would cover the overrun."

As it turned out, the final, actual cost was seven times more than the Perkin-Elmer bid.

Wollensak said the Kodak-Itek bid would have avoided many of the problems that led to the Perkin-Elmer overruns.

A NASA committee investigating the flawed Hubble telescope plans to return to Perkin-Elmer's plan in Danbury on Aug. 15 for two more days of testimony and a review of documents and equipment related to the flawed optics.

The committee met for two days last week in Danbury and an engineer who was there said it may take weeks to find the precise mistake that caused the flawed focus.

The engineer, who asked for anonymity, said the investigation is "like looking for a bookkeeping error. It will go on and on."

Chopper crashes kill 7 soldiers in Arkansas, Arizona

FORT CHAFFEE, Ark. (AP) — An Army Blackhawk helicopter crashed in dense woods, killing five soldiers and injuring eight others, authorities said Saturday.

In southern California, meanwhile, a Marine Corps helicopter crashed Friday night in the desert while on a training mission, killing two Marines and injuring three others, authorities said.

In Arkansas, the Army UH-60 helicopter, known as a Blackhawk, crashed late Friday night in a remote, densely wooded area of Fort Chaffee, just south of the Oklahoma border, said Fort Chaffee spokesman Cecil Green.

The chopper had been participating in night training maneuvers, Green said. He said initial reports indicated five soldiers died and eight were injured. Conditions of the survivors and names of the victims were not immediately released.

In southern California, a UH-1N Huey helicopter assigned to Camp Pendleton, Calif., crashed in the Chocolate Mountain Bombing Range, about 55 miles west of the Marine Corps Air Station at Yuma, Ariz., said Marine Lance Cpl. Lisa Rodriguez.

The names of the two Marines killed were being withheld until relatives could be notified, Rodriguez said.

The three injured Marines were in stable condition at Yuma Regional Medical Center, Rodriguez said. Kris Ozuna, a nursing supervisor at the hospital, said their injuries were being evaluated.

There's no joy such as Moving Day

Moving Day. Bah humbug.

We recently decided to buy a place of our own, get out from under monthly rent payments and join the wide world of happy home owners who love to say, "Oh, so you're still a renter" and then turn up their noses.

Unfortunately, that meant moving, which is what we've spent the last week doing. If "moving" just meant picking up and going, like the word implies, it might not be so bad.

But moving means digging out all the crap you had stuck in ten thousand nooks and crannies because you didn't know what to do with it but couldn't quite bring yourself to throw it away. Then, as you sit there staring at all this garbage, you are faced with the same dilemma that caused you to stick it in the nook and/or cranny to start with.

"Caryl, I'm gonna go ahead and toss all these old bows and sacks and baskets and stuff you stuck in the back of the guest room closet three years ago," I announced down the hall to my wife, who was rummaging in a similar mess of her own.

"No!!!" came the cry as she bolted to where I was. "I'm saving those. Don't you dare throw them away."

"Saving them for what?"

"Just saving them."

"Oh. Kind of hoping they might become rare and valuable, huh?"

"Those baskets would be cute to put Christmas presents in, and then I could put the bows on them and wrap them with cellophane and they would be really darling."

"That's what you've been saying for two Christmases and haven't done it yet."

"Just pack them and be quiet," Caryl said, leaving in a huff. "Oh," she added, "I went ahead and threw away all those old magazines you had stored under the stairs. They were ..."

"You what???" The Life magazines and the old Newsweek's? I bought those at that second hand store in Des Moines that summer I was up there. I've been keeping those for over 10 years."

"Yes, I know. The question is, 'Why?' Plan to finally sit down and catch up on your reading ... from 1959?"

"They might be valuable one day."

CAF move proceeding quickly

MIDLAND (AP) — Efforts by the Confederate Air Force to turn a vacated aviation business here into a world-class tourist attraction are proceeding quickly, officials said.

The CAF wants to open its Midland facility Dec. 7, 1991, the day the nation ceremonially salutes the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Construction on the former Windecker Aviation facility at the Midland International Airport, the new home of the CAF, could begin this fall, said Midland architect Jim Rhotenberry.

Rhotenberry is a partner in the firm of Rhotenberry Weller Architects & Planners, the architects CAF chose to design and plan a $4 million facility.

Midland will house the CAF museum, hangars, offices and gift shops on a 42.7-acre airport site that was leased to the CAF for 50 years at a cost of $1 per year.

The CAF voted in April to relocate to Midland from Harlingen. It has a fleet of more than 140 World War II aircraft.

Off Beat By Bear Mills

"You're probably right. They cost a dollar when they were new and you bought them for 25 cents each 20 years later. At this rate, in another 20 years they will be worth at least three or four cents a piece."

Another problem with moving, one for which women must unavoidably take the blame, is finding room for all their clothing and shoes.

"Boy, look at this big closet," Caryl said of the walk-in off our new bedroom. "This is great."

"It sure is," I told her. "I thought it was the guest room. Finally, I'll be able to keep my clothes in our bedroom closet, too."

As it stood, Caryl's clothes and shoes took our closet, the guest closet and a good portion of the one under the stairs. I got the closet in the hall; me and the Christmas decorations.

Then we began to move and, by some magical process that men will surely never understand, Caryl's clothing began to expand to fill our new, larger spaces.

"Uh, Bear," she said, her clothing covering our king-sized bed to the point I wondered if it were really still under there, "I think you may have to find another place for your things."

Every time I move it occurs to me that no matter how big your house, you still won't have enough room for all the stuff you own. It is apparently in violation of some law of nature that Newton discovered but forgot to write down.

So, no matter how much you try to fight it, the stuff will win. It's a rule.

I'll try to remember each morning as I go out to our storage shed to get dressed.

DA office completes forfeiture of house in drug-related case

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

The district attorney's office on Friday completed its first seizure and forfeiture of a house connected with the commission of a felony drug crime.

The house at 716 E. Denver Ave. was the subject of a drug raid on Nov. 21 by Gray County Sheriff's deputies.

Because of the seizure and forfeiture, the sheriff's and district attorney's office will split $4,340.50. A set of scales was also forfeited.

District Attorney Harold Comer filed the "Notice of Seizure and Intended Forfeiture" on the residence shortly after the drug bust. The law on the seizure of real property connected with the commission of any felony drug crime, or any first- or second-degree felony became effective on Oct. 18.

Seized in the drug raid at the residence of J. Cruz Ortega, 58, was 2 pounds, six ounces of marijuana, a set of scales, drug paraphernalia and $1,340.50 in cash.

Ortega pleaded guilty Friday to the third-degree felony of possession of marijuana and was sentenced to five years probation.

At the time of the filing of the seizure and forfeiture notice, Comer commented, "I want to give notice to those dealing drugs in this county that this is going to be an added cost of doing drug business in this county."

Money derived from the sale of real and personal property seized will be used in the budgets of law enforcement officials and the district attorney's office. However, it cannot be used for salaries.

Comer drew up an agreement between his office and the sheriff's office concerning any proceeds received from forfeitures. The agreement calls for a 50-50 split of the proceeds.

The Denver Street house had been appraised at $3,000.

Comer said to District Judge Grainger McIlhany on Friday, "The state has agreed to take the cash rather than the home."

Ortega testified that he had lived at the residence for 18 years. Ortega's son had posted a $4,000 cash bond for his release following Ortega's Nov. 21 arrest.

The $3,000 for the house was forfeited out of the $4,000 cash bond posted.

Are you one of the 7 out of 8 who have not prepared a will?

When you die you must leave behind everything for which you have worked and saved. The question is, "TO WHOM?" If you have a will, you have already instructed the State, attorneys and judges to act according to YOUR wishes. But if you don't have a will, the State will simply distribute your estate according to law.

Without a Will you let the State determine the disposition of your assets, the welfare of your spouse and the guardianship of your children. Probate costs, taxes and fees increase. What's worse, you rob yourself of the privilege of continuing stewardship through designated gifts.

DON'T MAKE THE MISTAKE OF THINKING:

- only wealthy people need a will
- that drawing a will is too complicated
- or that it is too expensive.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our Opinion

Good, clean citizens pick up their litter

One of the more recent projects in the past few years gaining wide citizen involvement in Pampa has been the development and embracement of the Adopt-A-Park program. Currently all of the city's more than 30 parks have been adopted, with "adoptees" ranging from individuals to families; from clubs, churches and civic organizations to business and industry groups; from Boy and Girl Scouts and high school students to older citizens engaged in careers or enjoying their retirement years.

We have nothing but praise for those willing to accept the responsibility of cleaning up the parks — parks that belong to the citizens. Others have gone beyond the duties of cleaning up others' litter and have initiated programs to provide needed improvements, such as the new basketball court and playground equipment installed at Prairie Village Park under the auspices of the Cabot Corp. employees group. And others have proposed beautification projects for the lands under their responsibility.

Such individuals and groups show a concern for their city and for its beautification, going beyond mere words to put some action — and some hard work, at times — into their belief that the parks belong to the citizens and that the citizens have some responsibilities regarding the appearance of the public's parks. The city's Parks and Recreation Department and Clean Pampa Inc. are to be commended for providing an opportunity for citizen involvement on a voluntary basis.

Unfortunately, there are too many others — young and old — who seem to feel that since the parks are public lands, then the responsibility for their care and upkeep must belong to someone else. Consequently, with either personal laziness or deliberate arrogance guiding their actions, these residents (somehow the term "citizen" does not seem appropriate) continue to drop candy wrappers, cans, bottles, soiled disposable diapers and other items within sight of the many trash receptacles distributed throughout the parks. In the past, such action was often excused by the thought that "that's what the Parks Department employees are paid for," ignoring the fact that the employees also have other duties and picking up trash just added to those duties, and to the costs borne by taxpayers. Now, though, such careless residents are leaving trash for others to pick up, others who volunteer to do so because they really do care for their city.

Others — and these must be guided by deliberate arrogance, and a disregard for the costs incurred to taxpayers — find it necessary to vandalize items in the parks: playground equipment, trees, bridges, lights, picnic tables and benches. Replacement and repair of those items do not come free: it's another burden the taxpayers must shoulder, and that group includes those uncaring enough to commit the vandalism.

The volunteers in the Adopt-A-Park program have shown their willingness to share in the responsibility for the care and appearance of the public's parks. It's time other residents also accept their responsibilities and clean up after themselves and take care of their property in the parks — just as they do in their own homes.

Arsonists inflame with racism

Sometimes I wonder if there is an ounce of principle left in politicians and bureaucrats, or whether the whole lot of them are hustlers, charlatans and quacks. "There you go again, Williams," you say, "beating up on the honorable men we elect to our federal, state and local offices."

Here's my beef; you tell me if I'm off base. Many unemployed people take what is known as the General Aptitude Test Battery (GATB) at their local employment office. The GATB scores are given to employers seeking to match workers with open employment slots. That seems reasonably fair, but Robert Holland of the Richmond Times-Dispatch discovered a dirty secret, completely hidden from public view.

If a test-taker gets a raw score of, say, 300 points on the test, his percentile rank, reported to the employer, depends on his race.

According to official GATB conversion tables, if the test-taker is black, the employment office reports his having scored in the 79 percentile, meaning he can do the job better than 79 percent of all people doing the work. If the test-taker is Hispanic, the employment office reports him as scoring in the 62 percentile. Finally, if the test-taker is white or Oriental, the employment office reports him in the 39 percentile.

Few employers know about this process. For that matter, hardly anyone knows about the racial weighting of examinations — not even the test-takers. It is a special dirty secret of politicians and bureaucrats who have hidden this atrocity from the public.

It took a bit of slick footwork, by Holland to bring it to the surface. It is practiced not only in blue-collar jobs, such as bus drivers, cement masons and machinists, but also professional jobs, such as accounting, chemical engineering, nursing and, for all we know, it could be the way doctors and airline pilots are hired.

Blacks and Hispanics do score lower than whites and Orientals on achievement and aptitudes tests. But I am not one to chalk this up to racist excuses, such as cultural bias or inherent inabilities; there's just too much contrary evidence.

A recent article in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette reported that Pittsburgh's all-black Vann Elementary School students routinely outscore the district's middle-class white students on the California Achievement Test.

Vann students have all the sociological excuses for failure except one, their principal Mrs. Doris Brevard, who demands excellence from teachers and students. Her methods often conflict with the edicts of the school district, but her results are beyond question.

Test score rigging is a despicable practice that saves the education establishment from embarrassing questions like: How come this youngster, whom you've given a high school diploma, can't pass a ninth grade test? Rigging saves civil rights establishments embarrassing question like: How come you support teachers' unions when their operations destroy black youngsters' career chances?

And, there's more: The Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1990, now making its way through Congress and to the White House, will broaden this practice and eliminate employment testing altogether in many occupations. It will simply abandon the back door process and make racial quotas the law of the land. As such it will supply additional kindling to an already highly combustible atmosphere of racial conflict.

Blacks must recognize the political instability of these practices and repudiate them. When it becomes politically expedient, supporters among white politicians and liberals will disavow these practices with a vengeance. Other whites should repudiate them on moral grounds and not allow the arsonists to inflame and exploit their frustrations with official racism.

Pedaling down memory lane

I was thinking about my bicycle. It was red. When I rode it down a thousand dirt roads with no names and even five miles to the lake, I was the wind. Or at least a large Greyhound bus.

A couple of things prompted such thoughts. One is that bicycling has become an adult thing now.

Grown people pedal by my house on a regular basis. They have bicycles that appear to be expensive.

They also wear helmets and tight fitting cyclists' outfits. A uniform wasn't necessary during my bicycle period.

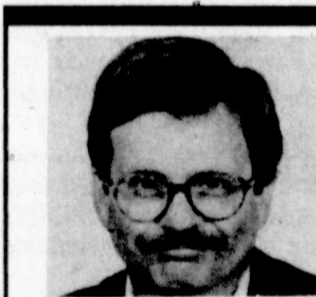

And then there's the Tour de France, the world's most important bicycle race, a three-week race over 2,112 miles. Every morning, I picked up my newspaper and it informed me who was leading.

According to the newspaper, the participants headed toward the Pyrenees. The only good thing about pedaling a bicycle up a mountain, I suppose, is you can look forward to coasting down the other side.

I got my red bicycle when I was 9, thanks to my grandfather, who was a janitor at my elementary school. A kid today probably would be embarrassed if his grandfather was the janitor at his school.

I wasn't. My grandfather was in his 60s when I was 9 and in the fourth grade. But he was still a tall, muscular man that dogs followed.

He told silly jokes to my classmates and passed out an occasional stick of gum with the warning, "Don't chew it until school's out."

Lewis Grizzard

Some heeded the warning; most didn't. My grandfather also farmed 12 acres and helped out at the railroad depot, and his days were full, up to an April afternoon 30 years ago when we found him slumped behind his tractor, holding his chest.

He died a week later. My grandfather got up at 5 each morning and walked in the cold and dark to school. Each room was heated by a coal-burning stove.

He would go down in the coal bin under the school and, with a wheel-barrow, he'd haul up the coal for the fires. When we arrived three hours later, our rooms would be toasty and comfortable.

In the afternoon, he would return to the school and clean the wooden floors and throw out the trash.

That's how I got my bicycle. We all used Blue Horse paper and notebooks.

Each Blue Horse product had a label with a point value on it. The more expensive the product, the more points the label was worth.

You could save Blue Horse labels, and when you got enough points, you could send them in and Blue Horse would send you back a prize.

If you saved 25,000 points, you got the grand prize, a bicycle.

Most of my classmates didn't save Blue Horse points. They threw their labels into the trash and my grandfather would go through each wastebasket and pick out the labels.

He started saving Blue Horse points when I was 7. Two years later, he counted one day, and he had 25,000 points.

We bundled the labels together with rubber bands and mailed them. Two weeks later my red bicycle came.

My grandfather held on to the back of the bicycle until I learned to ride it without adult assistance. It was a big day in my life.

I rode my bicycle until I was 14. Then it wasn't cool to ride a bicycle anymore, so one day, I climbed down off it for good and started counting the days until I could get my driver's license.

It is very unlikely I will take up adult cycling.

But as they pedal by my house and the racers head towards the Pyrenees, the memory of a precious old man comes back and touches me at midlife when I find myself looking back more often than I look ahead.

By George, let's tax the rich, then!

By VINCENT CARROLL

George Bush, you're no Abraham Lincoln.

Few presidential press conferences in recent years have witnessed a moment of such surpassing hubbub as when Bush the Prevaricator invoked Lincoln the Emancipator's theory of leadership to explain why he had betrayed 49 million voters and agreed to raise taxes.

Of course, Lincoln hiked taxes in his day, too, but he did it to support an army charged with keeping the union together. Bush, a man of dime-store dreams, agreed to raise taxes merely in order to hold together a "budget summit" of foot-dragging politicians.

Now the vital question becomes who will pay for the president's mendacity. Will it be the average fellow hoisting a six-pack off the shelf, the commuter filling his gasoline tank, the poor tobacco addict in line for another carton of Camels?

Quite possibly it will be all three, since every list of likely tax targets seems to mention alcohol, gasoline and tobacco. Yet why should an already heavily taxed middle class be forced to ante up still more to save Washington? There happens to be a much better place to locate additional revenue: in the bank accounts of the president's establishment friends.

Yes, it's time to soak the rich, and here are two good reasons why:

1) They asked for it.
OK, so they haven't exactly begged for higher taxes on themselves. Wealthy, they are. Masochistic, they're not. Nevertheless, surveys of corporate leaders have consistently revealed a large portion of the nation's highest-paid executives itching to see taxes raised on the rest of us.

The same attitude apparently typifies the high-fliers of the financial markets, who showed their appreciation of the president's decision to chuck his no-tax pledge by pushing up the stock market nearly 20 points on the very next day.

Poetic justice alone demands that they sup on the stew they helped prepare.

2) They can afford it.

In 1981, the highest-paid corporate executive made $5.7 million. By last year that figure had jumped to nearly $54 million (we're talking about annual incomes, hard as it is to believe). And while in 1980 the average chief executive officer could expect to make 40 times the income of an average factory worker, by 1989 that same CEO was pulling down 93 times as much.

But let's not pick on CEOs alone. At least they run companies that create America's wealth. As Kevin Phillips recounts in his new book, The Politics of Rich and Poor, the real action in recent years has been in finance and law. Michael Milkin's estimated take of $500 million may have surprised even some of his peers on Wall Street, but annual earnings of $40 million or so among such wheel-dealers are not uncommon.

Meanwhile, there are many more lawyers than CEOs making six- and seven-figure incomes today. Phillips reports that trial lawyer Joseph Jamail pulled down $450 million in 1988 alone.

Rather than taxing beer, gasoline and cigarettes, how about taxing extravagant luxuries? Slap a 1 percent tax on furs, cars costing more than $50,000 and similar toys of the rich. And cap mortgage-interest deductions for the second and third homes.

The truth is that Uncle Sam doesn't need more revenue, if only Congress dared to trim unjustified spending. But if we can't stop higher taxes altogether, we might as well shove them onto the few people who might not miss the cash.

Optimists thank Pampa for support

To the People of Pampa:
Thank you. Thank you for the support you have given to the Optimist baseball and softball programs this year. We had more than 850 young people play on 53 baseball and softball teams. We had about 400 games scheduled on our five fields. We had between 200 and 250 volunteers serve as managers, coaches, umpires, team mothers and league officials. Many others helped with practices and worked on the fields and in the concession stand.

Over 25,000 manhours have been involved. A lot of the work has been done by Optimist members. However, we have depended heavily on many non-members to help clean up the ball parks during their team's clean-up week, to help out umpiring in a pinch, for coaching and for getting the fields ready to play.

After every season we evaluate to see if we can do a better job of serving the youth of our community. We have appreciated and heeded many positive suggestions that have made to us over the years.

The cost of the Optimist programs on a yearly basis for our youth activities has exceeded $100,000 for several years. We believe the youth of Pampa are well worth it. This year our budget for baseball was $65,000. This is more than $1,000 per team and amounts to $76 per player.

We bought 400 new pairs of pants this year at a cost of approximately $4,000. Next year we hope to replace other sets of pants that need replacing. We purchased 100 dozen baseballs. We spent almost $24,000 on baseball and softball equipment, more than double the budgeted amount. We were forced to cut down in other areas even though it was needed. We pay royalties to the Little League and the Babe Ruth organizations. We carry medical insurance on each player. We pay insurance on our property. Utilities and phone bills average about $800 for each month of the year. Last year we spent over $10,000 sending all-star teams to tournaments. We do not have a final total yet for this year.

We have appreciated the fact that all but about 100 of our families contributed a $20 playing fee. We have never turned a player away for not being able to pay the fee. The playing fees are very important because they pay for about 25% of the program. The community responded again to our coupon book project. We grossed over $15,000 and netted about $11,000. Our concession stand this year again grossed over $20,000 with about half going toward the funding of our programs. The team sponsors' fees raised almost $10,000. Fence signs brought in another $2,000. The fund raising activities allow us to keep our playing donation requests down.

Plainview families pay $35 per player. Other communities pay $50 or more.

At the beginning of every season we swallow hard and wonder where the money will come from for our programs. Many years we have thought about cutting back, but each time the community has come through so that we can continue to offer a quality program to our youth. It has been my privilege to spend about 500 hours working in the baseball program since the first of April. I have been impressed with the character and dedication of our young people as they play and strive to do their best. The future leadership of our community is in good hands.

I believe the combination of parents, community, players and Optimist members has created one of the finest summer baseball and softball programs in this nation. I am honored to have been a small part of that effort for the last 17 years.

Our membership is open to men and women who are interested in young people. Our dues are $50 a year. We pay $5 for each meal we eat at meetings. As we turn our thoughts to football and basketball, we will need many members of the community to work with us so that these programs can again be successful.

It is my privilege to be the manager of the 11-12 Bambino All-Star Team that represents Pampa as the West Texas State Champions in the Bambino Regional Tournament in Fort Smith, Ark. These young men have had 27 practice sessions during the past three weeks so that they will be able to do their best in representing you. This experience for these 16 young men would not have been possible without the solid backing we have received from the community.

Thank you, Pampa, for your support. We will do our best to make you proud of us as we try for a berth in the Bambino World Series.

Pampa swim team asks for support

To the editor:
This letter is in response to the proposed cancellation of the Pampa High School swim team.

The many young and talented swimmers of this program have brought home numerous trophies, including second place at the district for the past two years. Our swimmers continually hold their own against the bigger 5A schools. Our swimmers consistently set new school and district records.

About 20 to 30 young, energetic students are the backbone of the team. They swim without the recognition of their peers, no kudos at pep rallies and limited school support. These youngsters show their dedication to their chosen sport through their time and effort.

When the funding for swim parkas was non-existent, the team on their own time organized and carried out their own fund-raiser. When was the last football fund-raiser? The Swim-A-Thon proceeds purchased the parkas. These parkas are considered basic equipment by other school swim teams. Other equipment, such as swim caps, suits, goggles and tote bags, are furnished by the school. This equipment has not been updated since the inception of the program in 1974.

The decision to drop this program is wrong. As for the swim program not having a feeder program—where are the feeder programs for wrestling and golf? Swimming is a sport that can be enjoyed all through life, no matter what the age, the sex or physical build; but more importantly, it is a potentially lifesaving skill. Everyone should know how to swim.

The school administration was extremely callous in its handling of the issue. The students were contacted last week by the high school counselors and were told the program was non-existent and that they must change their schedules. No explanations or forewarnings were given to the students or their parents. It came as a complete shock to the students, who had spent the majority of their summer practicing for the upcoming swim season.

The decision was completely secretive. The school board and The Pampa News were not contacted by the athletic director. In fact, my mother contacted The Pampa News in her quest for further information.

I feel sorry for those students who were looking forward to participating in the program and for those students who had dedicated their high school sports career to the sport.

If Pampa can get behind a prison, then surely it can support its local high school. The support and interest in the team are there; please help preserve the Pampa High School swim team. Write letters of support to the Pampa High administration or sign the petitions currently going around. Only we can save the program. If you have any questions regarding petition locations, please call me at 665-8708 or 665-4150.

Save the Swim Team.

VFW post building nears completion

To the editor:
It's always fun to be the bearer of good tidings, and this update is definitely good news.

The VFW's new post home is nearly complete and it truly looks great. Several of our members have put in many, many hours of hard work and it really shows. We hope to have our open house this next month, and I really want to encourage everyone to come on out and see what has been accomplished by some very hard-working, dedicated men right here in our town. We'll be advertising the time and date of the open house, so keep a close watch for that.

Also, for all those individuals who have been asking about the flag burning T-shirts the VFW had on sale on the 4th of July, we have 100 more shirts and will start selling them immediately. You can contact me or any of the VFW members to get one.

As I have mentioned in the past, our post attempts to have available for loan wheel chairs and other medical equipment. At this time we are in real need of wheel chairs. All ours have been loaned out, and we have received several requests for them very recently. This is a nice service we enjoy providing for the people of Gray County, but we need the equipment to make things work.

I mentioned earlier that our VFW post would be operational very soon. However, at this time we are still in need of several items. Our biggest present needs are an ice machine and soft drink cooler box. These items will help get our club facilities started off on the right foot. If someone has these items for sale or would like to donate them, we would like to hear from you as soon as possible.

At this time our country faces the most serious threat we've ever encountered, that being unfair trade policies of foreign competitors and unchecked invasion by millions of illegal aliens. Unfortunately, our first line of defense is the U.S. Congress and they seem content to let the problem grow ever worse. We as voters need to take our government back from the professional politicians and bureaucrats.

How are negotiations going on cable TV?

Greetings, Editor:
Hey, kids, guess what—it's been over four months since the public hearing over the cable service issue. Ya know, by now, with "pit bull" watchdog approach, I thought we would have found out some stuff. But maybe the pit bull got caught by the pound.

There's around 700 people, including myself, who signed petitions wanting our MTV! Hey, Mr. Peet, ya do remember me handing you them, don't ya? Even though the majority was high school students, 700 is a little more than a few, isn't it? Ya know Pampa does have a future now, with the prison that's going to be built and other stuff. But to keep people happy, they need entertainment, so they won't have the old same stuff, different day routine. Some entertainment is good for some people, while others want it banned. But it's up to individuals what they want, and I want my MTV!

So, could there be some information on what is going to happen? Just remember, I and around 700 people want our MTV!

Now, there's some other stuff I would like to clear the air with. Ya know, about a month ago, a person, remaining anonymous, wrote about Radio Station KGRO/KOMX, telling everyone to write the FCC and stuff, right? Well, I found out that they assume I'm the one that wrote it, right? WRONG! About a year ago, I did write the FCC and the editor because of the same problem, KOMX has more than one place on the dial. Ya know it must be true now since an anonymous person also complained.

I just want to let KGRO/KOMX know I'm not the one who wrote about a month ago, because you know I would have signed my name, right? I did last time, right! So clear all of the cigarette smoke out of your little studio and don't assume anymore, OK?! I really don't like your station anyway, but it wasn't me... this time.

Until next time, see ya ...

Boy's pet cat shot

To the person that shot my cat:
I'm an 8-year-old boy. My cat's name was Bonkers. I found her in the front yard; she was shot. I helped my dad bury her today. We were very, very sad because we loved her. I know when I grow up, I will never do anything that awful.

Gunmen fire on crowd of mourners

LINDEN, N.J. (AP) — Seven people attending a burial for a New York gang member were shot Saturday by four gunmen who posed as flower-bearing mourners before opening fire with submachine guns, police said.

At least eight other people were trampled in the panic that followed the gunfire at Rosedale Cemetery in this city just south of Newark, and were being treated at hospitals for cuts and bruises.

A 20-year-old man who was among those shot was flown by helicopter to the trauma unit of University Hospital in Newark. The others' wounds were not considered life-threatening, hospital officials said.

Police Capt. Raymond Beckman said the funeral was for an Asian man he identified only as a member of a New York City gang called Bom to Kill.

About 100 people were attending the funeral when the gunmen fired, then fled, Beckman said.

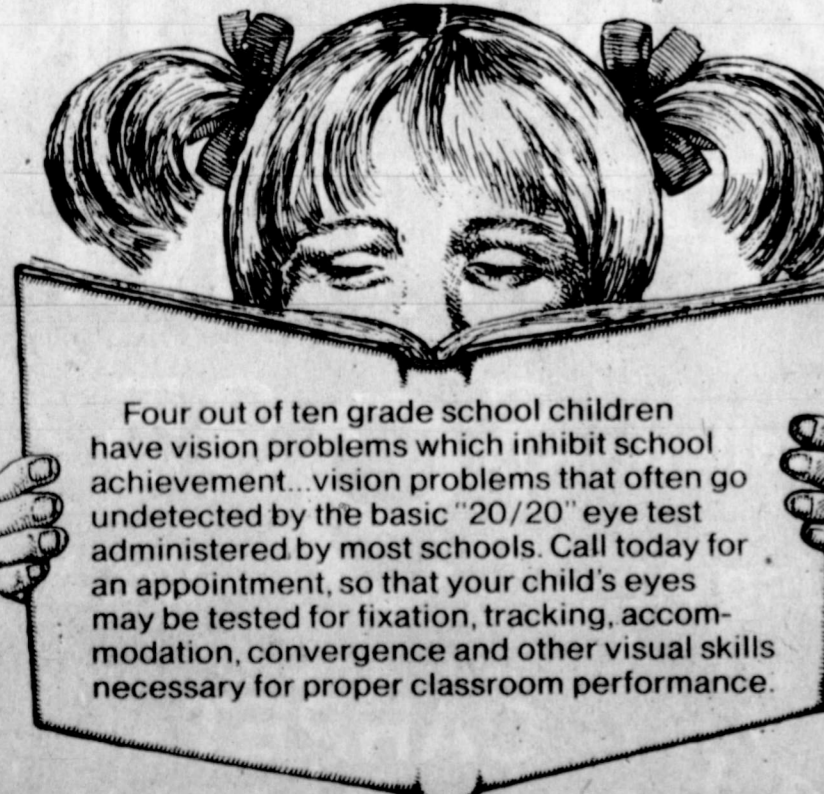

"As they walked by the casket with a bouquet of flowers, they dropped them and opened fire on the mourners," the captain said.

Three of the gunmen fired Uzi submachine guns and the other used a shotgun, Beckman said.

Four out of ten grade school children have vision problems which inhibit school achievement...vision problems that often go undetected by the basic "20/20" eye test administered by most schools. Making plans for the upcoming Democrat barbecue are, front row from left, Precinct 4 Justice of the Peace R.C. Parker, Tri-County Democrat Club Vice President Lois Robertson, Gray County Precinct 2 Commissioner Jim Greene and Margie Prestidge, Precinct 2 Justice of the Peace candidate; and, back row from left, Jim Osborne, Gray County judge candidate; Elaine Cooper, Gray County treasurer candidate, and Mike Helton, Precinct 2 constable candidate.

Democrats plan candidates barbecue

The Tri-County Democrat Club and local Democratic candidates are making preparations for a barbecue on Aug. 11 with residents invited to come out, eat barbecue and meet the candidates.

Flyers advertising the event have been printed and are being distributed. Anyone interested in attending the event can contact any of the local candidates for free tickets to the barbecue, hosted by the Tri-County Democrat Club.

The event is scheduled to begin at 5 p.m. at the Clyde Carruth Livestock Pavilion (the Bull Barn at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Grounds) on Highway 60 East in Pampa.

The barbecue is free and will include "all the fixin's" including barbecue, cole slaw, beans and potato salad, but donations will be accepted, club officials said.

There will be an auction of political memorabilia and crafts. Door prizes will be given away.

According to Brenda Moody, co-publicity chairman, the event will be an opportunity for area voters to meet and visit not only with local but also state and area-wide Democrat candidates.

Candidates who are scheduled to be in attendance include current officeholders State Rep. Warren Chisum, Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter, Gray County Precinct 2 Commissioner Jim Greene, Precinct 4 Justice of the Peace R.C. Parker and U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpalus.

Other candidate hopefuls also planning to attend include Elaine Cooper, Gray County treasurer; Kent Sims, 31st District judge; Margie Prestidge, Justice of the Peace, Precinct 2; and Charles Baird, Justice, Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 4.

Due to scheduling conflicts, some of the local and statewide candidates sending their regrets include Lee Waters, 223rd District judge; Gene Kelly, Justice, Supreme Court, Place 1; Bill White, Justice, Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 3; and Oscar Mauzy, Chief Justice, Supreme Court.

"The candidates are looking forward to the opportunity to eat some good barbecue and visit with the people of the Panhandle area," Moody said.

East German coalition government avoids collapse over pending union

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's government averted collapse Friday after its second-biggest faction agreed to remain in the coalition that will dissolve the country in December.

The Social Democrats had threatened to resign from the coalition government of Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere unless a dispute over united German elections was reached.

They agreed to remain in the government after de Maiziere appeared to back away from a demand that East Germany remain a separate country until after united German elections are held on Dec. 2. Under that plan, the German states would hold separate elections for the same Parliament and then formally unify.

The Social Democrats had demanded that East Germany dissolve itself Dec. 1 and merge with West Germany so a single all-German election could be held the following day.

The seemingly trivial dispute over whether East Germany should dissolve Dec. 1 or Dec. 2 — and whether the two Germanys should vote as one country or two — could help determine which political factions get seats in Parliament.

De Maiziere and other Christian Democratic leaders had said earlier that single elections could be held after unification takes place. The Social Democrats on Friday trumpeted their success on the issue.

But de Maiziere appeared to qualify that again in an interview published Saturday in the West German newspaper Die Welt.

De Maiziere said unification could be formally voted on by East Germany's 400-member Parliament before elections, but actually take place afterward.

In the interview, de Maiziere also said single German elections are "not possible."

Democrats on the issue, resigned from de Maiziere's seven-party governing coalition Tuesday over the dispute.

But the decision by the Social Democrats to remain in de Maiziere's coalition averted a crisis that threatened to seriously complicate the process of unification.

Because the Social Democrats remained, de Maiziere's government still controls the two-thirds Parliament majority needed to unify with West Germany.

A Christian Democrat deputy party chief, Horst Korbella, said the Social Democrats' decision to remain in the government has "made a breakthrough possible."

De Maiziere's conservative Christian Democrats had advocated separate elections so smaller East German parties could have a better chance of winning seats in a unified Parliament.

De Maiziere has said special accommodations should be made to ensure that smaller East German parties have a voice in a big new all-German Parliament.

But a lower limit on representation also would help the archconservative German Social Union, a key political ally of de Maiziere's Christian Democrats.

The Social Democrats believe the lower election representation limit would hurt them by allowing smaller leftist groups to get in Parliament and splinter their constituency.

De Maiziere is still pressing to lower the minimum percentage of votes a party needs to get in Parliament.

Under West German law, parties need 5 percent of the total German vote to be represented in Parliament. No minimum is required in East Germany.

Golfers should learn to care for course

To the editor:

I am so proud of our Hidden Hills Golf Course. This is from one who helped try to get a golf course on the old airport where Red Deer Street is today (date 1946), and in 1953 we tried again south of town; no luck.

I then said I would never hit a ball on a Pampa municipal golf course. Surprise! I am nearly 70 and I play on a course. It is a beautiful course, and we have a wonderful pair of pros to run it.

Now comes the SAD part; I see many players who must not know how to repair a divot, or a ball mark. (Please watch Tom Watson on TV or ask our pro.) To show you why we must repair these, it takes three to four weeks for a divot to grow back if you leave it, and about four days for one to grow back if you replace it and step on it. A ball mark on the green takes two weeks to grow back, but if it is properly fixed, you can't tell it was ever there.

Please help me to keep our golf course looking new and unused. Treat HIDDEN HILLS course like a new baby. (PAMPER it for PAMPA.) Thank you. See you on the course.

To the person who stole spare tire ...

To the editor:

To the person that stole a spare tire, gas can, water cooler and ice chest out of the back of a two-tone Chevrolet pickup: I don't wish them any back luck or anything such as that, but if they use the spare tire, I hope it blows out and breaks their neck. The ice chest and water cooler weren't any good, anyway.

As for the local police, if they would spend more time on patrol instead of on the telephone, coffee shops or in the bars watching people, they could catch more of the people that steal from someone else.

P.S. The gas may have water in it, as it was left open while I was watering the lawn.

Not all teen-agers can attend R movies

To the editor:

We're going to get right to the point. You have to be 17 or older to see an R-rated movie. We are concerned teen-age citizens, ages ranging between 13 and 16; therefore, we can't see any R-rated movies.

We know very few teen-age citizens that would go to watch an animated G-rated movie or that are allowed to go and watch the remaining three R-rated movies. But the real question is, what choices are left for the teen-age citizens of Pampa?

And 'P' for poison

To the editor:

I sure feel sorry for the cops in this town. If they can't handle a few unruly teen-agers, what are they going to do when we get a prison? When the families of the convicts move to Pampa to be close to their loved ones!!!

I think that folks should have kept the corks in the champagne bottles. I see another P in the pod, for poison, 'cause that's what's going to happen to Pampa when those families move in.

God help our law officers!

Barry not testifying in trial; prosecutor says defense witness lies

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marion Barry's drug and perjury trial will go to the jury this week without jurors hearing the mayor defend himself or face questions from prosecutors.

After the defense closed its case Friday, prosecutors alleged in rebuttal that a defense witness lied when giving testimony that undermined a cocaine possession charge against Barry.

Barry didn't testify, saying he wanted to avoid the attacks.

"It would have been good Perry Mason drama, L.A. Law drama, but I'm not about Perry Mason drama," the District of Columbia mayor said after the day's session. "My spirits are high; my defense is on course."

In the rebuttal, the government introduced a document showing that city employee Clifton Roberson wasn't even working at the time he said he accepted a job application from an admitted drug dealer.

The dealer, Lydia Pearson, had said she went to a city office on Sept. 7, 1988, and handed a job application to the mayor, along with crack cocaine.

Roberson had testified it was he, not the mayor, who met with Pearson that day. Roberson said he got the application from Pearson, that Barry was nowhere in the vicinity and that there was no crack.

But Roberson was laying a gravestone for his father's grave at the time he said he was taking the application, according to a document prosecutors found in city files.

The document notifies Roberson that he was absent without official leave.

Testifying Friday at Barry's trial, city worker Darcelle Walker recalled that Roberson had been "upset" over the incident, for which he was docked two hours' pay.

Defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy suggested that Roberson was absent in the late afternoon, rather than the morning when the job application was turned in.

Roberson is an assistant to longtime Barry aide Anita Bonds, who has sat throughout the trial at the mayor's side, assisting his defense.

Outside the courtroom, Barry said he believed Roberson had been at work when Pearson left the application.

"I know I didn't take it," Barry said of the job application. After the defense rested its case Friday, Walker was one of four rebuttal witnesses called by the government to attack Barry's defense.

As part of its rebuttal case, the prosecution also called Delois Mise. She testified that she saw Barry bodyguard, police officer James Stays, snort cocaine at a 1985 party. Stays had testified for the defense that he never saw Barry use drugs on a March 1988 trip to the Virgin Islands. Stays denied that he himself had used drugs at the 1985 party. Mundy said he wants to recall Stays next week before closing arguments.

Police sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the department planned an internal investigation of Stays as soon as the trial is over.

Filmmakers seeking to nix X rating for movies

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dozens of the nation's top filmmakers, convinced the film rating system makes no sense, are asking the Motion Picture Association of America to overhaul its cinematic score sheet.

"It doesn't work," said Barry Levinson, the Oscar-winning director of Rain Man and other hits. "It's a poor system to begin with."

Levinson is among 31 prestigious filmmakers who signed a petition that was delivered Tuesday to the MPAA. Other signers included Francis Ford Coppola, Paul Mazursky, Spike Lee and Sydney Pollack.

A New York state judge, while upholding the X rating of Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down! on July 19, criticized the rating system. Judge Charles Ramos said it borders on censorship and if not reformed may face legal challenges.

Many directors and producers say the X rating amounts to a kiss of death at the box office because it is synonymous with hard-core, graphic, sexual films. It should not be used to label mature-themed films of higher artistic ambition, they say.

An A rating, these filmmakers suggest, should be created for non-pornographic adult films.

"The X rating has come to represent pornography," said Harvey Weinstein, the co-chairman of Miramax Films, whose releases include Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down! and another X-rated movie The Cook, The Thief, His Wife & Her Lover.

"The X rating of Midnight Cowboy and A Clockwork Orange is now confused with the X rating of Debbie Does Dallas."

Wayne Wang, the well-regarded director of the recently X-rated feature Talk Is Cheap ... But Toilet Paper Is Expensive, said, "We tried to make a film to comment on violence and pornography and we are told that we are violent and pornographic ourselves.

"The world is changing. And the rating system should change with it."

Jack Valenti, president of the MPAA, said last week he intended to meet with some of the directors petitioning for the change. But he maintains that the rating procedure works.

"If you add another category, you're asking the rating board to make judgments about artistic integrity," he said. "Trying to decide which film about bestiality and incest is artistic and therefore deserves an A rating and which film about bestiality and incest is not artistic and therefore deserves an X rating is impossible."

Valenti said the X rating is not equivalent to pornography. "It means it is an adult film." No reasonable parent, he said, would let children see the films the MPAA rates X.

He said parents are happy with the work of the 11-member ratings board. Richard Heffner, chairman of the MPAA's classification and rating administration, said the identities of the film raters are kept secret so they won't be unfairly pressured. But he said all are parents.

Heffner said the number of films getting a "tentative X" rating from the board has been consistent. In the past, he said, filmmakers drawing these preliminary marks would edit their movies to earn an R rating. This year, he said, several directors refused to recut their works. More X ratings resulted.

The trade newspaper Daily Variety, in a column by Laurence Cohn, defended the rating system, saying filmmakers should accept the rating "and run with it."

Shapiro-Glickenhau is releasing its film Frankenhooker without a rating because the MPAA ratings board ruled it too harsh for an R.

"Frankenhooker is a much less explicitly gruesome film than Total Recall, which got an R," said James Glickenhau, president of the independent film company.

Peru's president takes office as economic crisis deepens

By BARRY LYNN
Associated Press Writer

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Government helicopters flew over the capital and thousands of policemen and soldiers patrolled city streets before the inauguration of Alberto Fujimori as the country's new president.

Fujimori succeeded President Alan Garcia Saturday afternoon amid escalating political violence and a rapidly worsening economic crisis.

Despite the security measures, rebels late Friday blew up two electrical towers to black out most of the city for the second consecutive night.

Earlier in the week guerrillas fired two rocket-propelled grenades at the Presidential Palace. Recent fighting in the country's Andean mountains and Amazonian jungle has left hundreds dead.

The violence prompted the heavy security for Saturday's ceremony, which was to be attended by a U.S. delegation headed by Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos.

Peru's economy has become increasingly unstable in the days leading up to Fujimori's swearing-in to five-year term.

Many banks have run out of money and workers cannot cash their checks. People must wait hours to buy rationed gasoline and bread. The dollar's value jumped more than 75 percent in one week.

Daily inflation topped the 6 percent mark by the end of the week, according to the private economic firm Cuanto. Until last week daily inflation had been running at about 1 percent.

Key to reversing the economic collapse will be what Fujimori says upon taking office, analysts say. Confidence in his government will quickly evaporate if he does not soon offer detailed plans to combat the crisis, they say.

But the new president will have little to work with. The government is bankrupt and paralyzed by strikes. Four of five people lack steady work. The country is $20 billion in debt. Peru's main export is coca, the main ingredient used to make cocaine.

The Peru Fujimori inherits also suffers from a severe drought that has wiped out crops and drastically cut urban water supplies. Hydroelectric plants run at half capacity and the daily blackouts that result have greatly slowed industry.

Politically, Fujimori's small Change 90 party is nearly isolated.

Since his landslide victory over novelist and free-market advocate Mario Vargas Llosa June 10, Fujimori has cut many ties with the left and center-left parties that supported his campaign.

The change comes as the Maoist Shining Path and the pro-Cuban Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement have stepped up attacks.

Texas Instruments pushes education through advertising

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Texas Instruments Inc. will undertake a $1 million-a-month advertising campaign next month urging parents to get involved in education, and suggesting company products as good tools to give their kids a head start.

"Our children and students face significant challenges in becoming successful, competing players in tomorrow's world," said Texas Instrument vice president Gary Rado. "Because of these changes, our newest generation must be our smartest generation to compete globally.

"We want to demonstrate TI's support of education and of the vital role that America's teachers have in educating our children," Rado said.

"However we also want to point out that America's teachers can't do it alone, they need the help of America's parents."

The ads, which will run for 11 months in major magazines and newspapers, also suggest students could use the help of Texas Instruments' calculators and Learning Path line of educational aids, such as Listen & Learn, Speak & Spell and Speak & Read.

The announcement comes less than a week after Texas Instruments reported a 90 percent drop in quarterly earnings and warned it could lose money in the next quarter.

The ads each carry titles reflecting educational conditions in other countries or shortcomings in the United States.

For example, the first ad is headlined, "There is no illiteracy in Japan." Others are "The West German school year is two months longer than ours," "Saturday is school day in Korea," "A third grader spends an average of 900 hours in class. And 1,170 hours watching television" and finally "America's teachers need America's parents."

The ads also tell how Texas Instruments products have helped improve classroom performance in some studies. The products are pictured at the bottom of the ads.

Some of the ads note the products "support the curriculum guidelines of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics."

Shirley M. Frye, president of the teachers' group, had no qualms about her organization's mention in the advertisements.

"TI has been most supportive of mathematics education," she said in a telephone interview from Phoenix.

"There is a profit motive there as well, but the approach used by TI has been one that made us feel that they are coming to us with more than just a dollar sign," she said.

Last year, Texas Instruments contributed $7.2 million to various educational programs, from local day care centers to funding university research.

Texas Instruments said it will spend $1 million a month from August through next June to place the ads.

Last week, Texas Instruments said its second quarter earnings fell from $106 million to $11 million because of high development costs and low prices for semiconductors, the Dallas-based company's main business.

Digital products, which include the educational lines, are TI's smallest business segment.

Three physicians join mental health facility

AMARILLO - Three physicians have moved into the Panhandle area to practice at Cedar Creek Hospital, a mental health facility at 9th and Coulter streets.

Dr. Ronald Goldberg is Cedar Creek's medical director. Before moving to Texas, Dr. Goldberg spent 17 years practicing general psychiatry in New Orleans and Covington, La., with additional work in the clinical administration of psychiatric hospitals.

Dr. Goldberg graduated with honors from Tulane University in New Orleans where he completed triple majors in chemistry, anthropology and music. He completed his medical degree at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School at Dallas and served his internship at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago.

Though he treats people of all ages, Dr. Goldberg's special interest is in emotionally disturbed adolescents and children suffering from attention deficit disorder.

Dr. William Freund is the clinical director of adult psychiatry at Cedar Creek. Dr. Freund graduated from Virginia Military Institute and earned his medical degree from Medical College of Virginia. Dr. Freund also established an inpatient adolescent service at the Kenosha Memorial Hospital and participated in the establishment of an adolescent unit at St. Luke's Hospital where he served as medical Director. Dr. Freund specializes in several areas ranging from depression in children and adolescents to anxiety and mood disorders in adults.

Dr. June A. Powell is director of the women's program and addictive disorders at Cedar Creek. She is a board certified psychiatrist. Before moving to Amarillo, Dr. Powell practiced psychiatry in New Orleans and Midland where she was also director of the adult program at another psychiatric hospital. Dr. Powell received her medical degree from the University of Mississippi and was chief resident in psychiatry at Bowman Gray - Wake Forest University School of Medicine in Winston Salem, N.C. She also served on the faculty of the department of psychiatry and neurology at Tulane University School of Medicine.

Horizontal drilling inspires new scams among con artists

By MARIA HALKIAS
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS (AP) - Con artists have trailed the oil business since Spindletop days.

During the 1980s, the oil and gas depression put many of the unscrupulous living off the industry's honest coattails out of business.

But now they're back. Equipped with a new boom to lure unsuspecting investors, Texas authorities are investigating seven companies that are using recent successes with horizontal drilling techniques as a hook.

A Bexar County (San Antonio) grand jury is ready to hear one case under investigation, said John Morgan, director of enforcement of the Texas State Securities Board.

"Anytime something legitimate gets a lot of press, promoters of fraudulent schemes are right behind them," Morgan said. In the past six months, the peddling of phony interests in oil leases that allegedly will be drilled with horizontal techniques has become a problem, he said.

Other states and Canadian provinces have called Texas regulators complaining about people based in the state - many in the Dallas area - who are soliciting funds illegally. Several hundred investors across the nation have been taken for at least $6 million, authorities say.

The state of Georgia has one investigator spending most of his time in Texas gathering evidence on operators that have solicited Georgia residents, said Robert Hooks, director of business regulation in Georgia's Office of Secretary of State.

One case under investigation involves a small group of Georgia residents fleeced of $1 million, Hooks said.

The state agency conducts investor awareness seminars that include the warning "stay away from the J.R. Ewing wildcatters who call on the phone," he said. "But we keep getting too many of the same stories of the retired schoolteacher who just lost her life savings."

The victims represent a wide range of the population, from educated professionals such as doctors and lawyers to people who can't read a prospectus, Morgan said.

The phony companies are typical boiler room operations. Offices are equipped with bare desks and telephones. Employees work from lists and attempt the hard sell with all sorts of flamboyant representations, Morgan said. Many of the operators are back from the early 1980s, when oil prices were fetching top dollar and investors were easy pickings.

Senate-passed farm bill keeps supports, increases environmental protection

By DIANE DUŠTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A farm bill that keeps major support programs and increases environmental protection is the most progressive agricultural law ever passed by the Senate, the Agriculture Committee chairman says.

The $54 billion measure, setting farm policy and spending for the next five years, was approved Friday. The House version is expected to pass this week, followed by a conference committee to iron out any differences between the two versions.

"It's the most progressive farm bill I've seen come out of this body," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who guided the bill to the final 70-21 vote after taking a strong interest in seeing environmental provisions strengthened.

The bill establishes price-support programs for commodities and sets policy for nutrition programs, agricultural exports, soil and water conservation, agricultural research and extension work, food inspection and other responsibilities of the Agriculture Department.

Among the environmental breakthroughs in the bill is a ban on the export of agricultural chemicals illegal in the United States.

The bill also establishes standards for use of the phrase "organically grown" and lays down new policies designed to protect wetlands and forests.

Significant additions to the bill included sanctions against Iraq and limits on loans that could be made to the Soviet Union.

The House and Senate both voted Friday to use the farm bill against Iraq by cutting off U.S. loan guarantees the country uses to buy American wheat, rice, lumber, cattle and commercial goods such as tires and machinery.

The Senate voted to restrict loans to the Soviet Union by preventing lending institutions from offering credit at a lower rate to the Soviets than to farmers, unless the funds are used to buy U.S. agricultural products.

Among those voting against the Senate bill was Sen. Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., a member of Leahy's committee, who said the price support structure in the measure would drive many farmers in his state out of business.

Leahy and the committee's ranking Republican, Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, said budget negotiations would lead to cuts in farm subsidy spending.

Despite seven days of debate, which sometimes lasted late into the night, the bill emerged from the Senate virtually the same as when it went to the floor, said Leahy.

The big expense in the bill is in price supports, which assure farmers of a certain level of income even if market prices are low.

The Bush administration was never happy with the amount the Senate sought to spend on support programs and threatened a veto before floor debate if the costs weren't brought down. Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter suggested that Congress wait until a budget summit agreement was reached before acting on the bill.

"I have no intention of seeing the bill finished in conference until there has been a summit agreement," Leahy said.

Lugar said the bill was structured to allow for cutting what was necessary without tearing apart major programs.

Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said the bill followed the philosophy of the law passed in 1985. But he added: "The problem with the 1985 farm bill was that it cost about $80 billion in program outlays. We no longer have $80 billion to spend."

He said the spending projected by 1990 bill might have to be pared back as much as $2.5 billion a year.

Final Senate approval of the bill came after compromises and speedy approval of dozens of amendments that had held up progress for days.

One of the stickiest disputes was between Great Lakes and Gulf Coast senators about the amount of food aid to foreign countries that should be shipped out of Great Lakes ports.

Sens. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and John Breaux, D-La., agreed to a formula that limits the Great Lakes to 240,000 tons of food aid cargo annually and allows them to use less costly foreign ships that fly an American flag and use American crews.

HIGHLIGHTS OF SENATE FARM BILL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The farm bill approved by the Senate carries an estimated five-year cost of $54 billion and sets policy for almost every program directed by the Agriculture Department. Here, at a glance, are the major provisions of the legislation.

- The bill:
- Freezes target prices at $4 a bushel for wheat; $2.75 a bushel for corn, $2.61 for sorghum; $2.36 for barley; 73 cents a pound for cotton and $10.71 per hundred pounds for rice.
  - Oats would be set at $1.55 for 1991, with an increase each year of 10 cents up to a maximum of $1.85.
  - Freezes milk prices at $10.10 per hundred pounds.
  - Continues the sugar price support at 18 cents a pound.
  - Establishes a loan rate for soybeans of $5.50 a bushel, but gives the agriculture secretary the option of reducing it to $5 if surpluses rise to a certain level. It also establishes a loan rate of 9.7 cents for sunflower seed, canola, flax and safflower.

- Establishes new grain quality standards.
- Limits payments to wool and mohair producers to $250,000 a year.
- Phases out the government's support program for honey producers.
- Reorganizes the crop insurance program.
- Prohibits export of pesticides banned from U.S. farm use.
- Requires farmers to keep records of pesticides they use.
- Authorizes $250 million to be spent over five years to help farmers learn how to use fewer chemicals.
- Sets the first national standard for use of the "organically grown" label on food.
- Protects about 80 million acres of fragile wetlands from destruction by farming and allows farmers to restore some wetlands by selling the federal government a conservation easement.

• Sets up the first public-private partnership to protect 25 million acres of private forests and aims at protecting another 482 million acres of private forests through conservation easements and other incentives.

• Creates rural development programs designed to stimulate the economies of small towns where consolidation of farms is causing loss of agriculture-related jobs.

• Calls for 20 percent of the money used for agricultural research by 1993 to go toward finding industrial or other non-food uses for farm products.

Preschool molesting case ends in mistrial

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The longest and costliest criminal case in U.S. history ended when jurors deadlocked in Raymond Buckley's retrial on charges he molested three girls at McMartin Pre-School.

The judge declared a mistrial, and prosecutors said they would not try Buckley a third time, closing a case that began seven years ago.

Amid initial allegations involving more than 100 children and suggestions of satanism and animal torture, the case prompted national concern over molestation.

"I think there is reason to say 'enough' at this point," District Attorney Ira Reiner said after Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg declared a mistrial Friday.

"There has been a mighty effort and there is no verdict," Reiner said.

The judge set a hearing for Wednesday to dismiss charges against Buckley, 32, who spent five years in jail. The case cost Los Angeles County more than $13.5 million.

"We gave it our best shot," said the trial prosecutor, Deputy District Attorney Joseph Martinez.

"These kids cannot be McMartin kids for the rest of their lives. It's been a horrible experience," Martinez said.

Buckley said he believed it had been a witch hunt from the outset: "It was Salem revisited," he said. "It was McCarthyism one more time."

Raymond Buckley

were innocent."

The saga began in August 1983 when a mother reported to police that her young son had been molested at the Manhattan Beach preschool.

Hysteria followed after police asked parents to check their children for signs of molestation.

Hundreds of parents reported their children were victims and tots were rushed to therapy center for interviews. Therapists decided more than 100 probably had been molested.

Children gave investigators accounts of "naked games," satanic rites and animals tortured to frighten the youngsters into silence.

Seven defendants were arrested and charged with molestation: Buckley, the only male; his mother, sister and aged grandmother, along with three other women teachers.

Reiner dismissed charges against all defendants except Buckley and his 63-year-old mother, Peggy McMartin Buckley, after an 18-month preliminary hearing.

The Buckleys were accused of molesting 11 children during a five-year period.

A jury in January cleared Mrs. Buckley of 12 charges and absolved her son of 40 charges but deadlocked on 13 counts against him.

Reiner decided to retry Buckley on eight counts involving three girls.

Defense lawyer Danny Davis, asked if the parents would ever accept Buckley's innocence, said: "I don't think they can."

Buckley said he wouldn't start making plans for the future until charges are officially dismissed. But he said with a smile, "I'll have to get a job now."

Broyles coasts to second straight title

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Lamesa's Jake Broyles coasted to a five-stroke win and his second consecutive Tri-State Senior Association title Friday at the Pampa Country Club course.

There was no catching Broyles, who came from six shots down in Wednesday's first round to take a three-stroke lead after 36 holes Thursday. Broyles carded a two-over par 73 Friday for a three-round total of 219.

Lubbock's Dick Alexander - Broyles' playing partner in the final round - was in second place after 36 holes, but he fell behind by as many as nine strokes Friday.

"Dick made a couple of errors early in the match and that gave me a cushion," Broyles said. "I figured I could win it if I didn't completely blow up."

Alexander, who finished in the runnerup spot at 224, had consecutive bogeys on No. 3 and 4 to fall five shots behind Broyles in the final round. He still finished the day with a respectable four-over par 75 after registering a pair of birdies on the back nine.

Pampa's Elmer Wilson had Friday's best round, a two-under 69 for a total of 225 to take third, just a stroke behind Alexander.

Wilson made quite a comeback after trailing the leader by 10 strokes after two rounds. Wilson put together four birdies on the front nine and had a two-under par 33 at the turn. Alexander's birdie on No. 18 was all that prevented Wilson from going into a playoff for second.

"I had a good round, but it just came a little too late," Wilson said.

The 65-year-old Broyles joins a select group of Tri-State champions. Broyles, J.R. Brown of Amarillo and Red Gober of Austin are the only players to win four Tri-State titles. Brown won in 1955, '57, '59 and '62 while Gober's titles came in 1944, '45, '46 and '48. Broyles' won in 1983, '86, '89 and '90.

"This tournament was a lot different than last year," (Broyles won last year's tournament by a stroke) Broyles said. "In fact there was a lot of difference between the final round and the second round this year. I didn't play as aggressively as I did on Thursday, but I didn't have to. I gave away six or seven strokes on terrible putting in the first round, so I knew I had to come back and be more aggressive if I was going to get back into it."

It was a different Broyles who came out swinging Thursday after an opening round of eight-over par 79 put him six strokes down. Broyles put together a string of four birdies and never bogeyed a hole in shooting a four-under par 67 Thursday.

"I put in a lot of hours on putting in between rounds. I didn't have much confidence in my putting after that first round and I knew I needed the practice," he said.

Broyles' final round wasn't spectacular, but it was solid. He didn't have a birdie, but was close to the hole on most of his putts. His only two bogeys came on No. 11 and No. 17.

When Broyles did get into trouble, his irons and putter came through for him. When his tee shot on the No. 3, 326-yard hole landed on the left side of the rough between two trees, Broyles made a nice recovery shot that landed in the bunker in front of the green. He chipped out 12 feet from the hole and knocked in the putt to save par. Don Matheson of Fort Worth

Arlington Stadium open for Ryan's fans Tuesday

By ARNIE STAPLETON
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON — Home fans will get a chance to come out the Arlington Stadium and see Nolan Ryan go after his 300th victory after all.

No, the Texas Rangers haven't changed their plans to have Ryan start Tuesday night in Milwaukee.

But they did announce Friday that they'll allow fans to watch Tuesday night's game on the huge Diamondvision screen in center field.

ESPN is broadcasting the game nationwide.

Seating will be on a first-come, first-serve basis in the field box and mezzanine areas, the team said. Admission is free, but parking will be $3.

Fans entering the park will receive a "Nolan Goes for 300" ticket stub, and Arlington Stadium's quirky "Dot Races," a computerized race between red, yellow and green dots and a fixture during the seventh inning stretch, will be run each inning.

Nolan Ryan 300 Win T-shirts and the Nolan Ryan commemorative 300th victory program also will be on sale.

And, of course, concession and souvenir stands will be open. Vendors will work the crowd, which officials said could easily reach 20,000.

The field will be lighted and the scoreboard will keep track of the game. Everything but the players.

"Heck yes," said Craig Fishner of Arlington, "I'll go. That's great.

It'll be a lot of fun. I'm going to call some friends. We'll make it a party."

Fishner had purchased tickets to Thursday's home game with Toronto in hopes that the Rangers would delay Ryan's next start until the team returns from the road trip.

But the Rangers announced Thursday that Ryan wouldn't miss a turn in the rotation and go for 300 against the Brewers.

"This takes some of the sting out of it," Fishner said. "I bought four tickets for $9 each" to Thursday's game. "I got up early, waited in line, then they said he'll go in Milwaukee. I said, 'Shucks, I should have gotten tickets for the fifth.'"

Ryan's next projected start after Tuesday would be Sunday, Aug. 5, against the Blue Jays at home.

There were fewer than 2,000 tickets remaining for that game late Friday, said Rangers ticket manager John Schriever. All were $4 bleacher seats.

He said ticket sales for each of the four games against Toronto were brisk with fans hoping for a change in the rotation.

Three ticket windows were open with steady business Friday, but not nearly as hectic as it was Thursday morning when local newspapers speculated that Ryan might not go for his 300th victory on the road, Schriever said.

He said the team is still telling fans that the date of Ryan's next home start isn't a sure thing.

"Anybody that asks — and they all are — we just tell them that we're not certain, but it looks like Sunday."

Johnson confident Cowboys can pull off winning season

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Last year it was owner Jerry Jones who was overwhelmed by enthusiasm in his first NFL experience.

"We'll win more games in the first quarter of the season than Tom Landry did all last year (three)," the Arkansas oilman popped off.

Of course, the Cowboys had a miserable season under rookie NFL coach Jimmy Johnson, going 1-15 with a 13-3 upset of Washington in RFK Stadium the only saving grace.

Now in 1990 it's Johnson shot full of confidence for the coming season.

He's said he'd be disappointed if the Cowboys didn't have a winning season and that translates to 9-7.

"We have a chance to win every game we play and we couldn't say that last year," said Johnson. "We're faster, bigger and overall more talented."

The Cowboys opened up their purse strings to pursue Plan B free agents, like Kansas City and Green Bay did the year before to make marked improvement in their teams.

Wide receiver Dennis McKinnon was obtained from the Chicago Bears and running back Terrence Flagler was snapped up after the world champion San Francisco 49ers left him unprotected.

"We have significantly improved this team," Johnson said. "A year ago we were excited because it was our first season, even though we knew it would be difficult. This year our coaches and players are excited because they believe we will be better."

Last year Dallas was a clearing house for waiver wire cuts and try-outs.

"This season we'll have a lot more continuity," Johnson said. "The bulk of our personnel with us in summer camp will be with us the majority of the season."

Johnson has run a tough, hard-hitting training camp in jalapeno hot Austin, which averages about 20 degrees warmer than Thousand Oaks, the California site where Dallas held pre-season camp for 27 years.

Running back Keith Jones, a Plan B acquisition from Cleveland, and wide receiver Mike Williams, a Plan B pick from Detroit, have already been hurt in scrimmages.

Asked if there was perhaps too much contact, Johnson grew defensive.

"We'll taper off the contact maybe in December or January," Johnson said. "Once the season started last year, I was told that in professional ball you don't have contact like that. So we stopped contact."

"But we lost more games than I want to think about so at mid-season we started contact again, and our defense really started to improve. I will not make the mistake this year that I did last year in stopping contact when the season starts."

The '90 Cowboys will be a team without stars now that Ed "Too Tall" Jones has retired.

Quarterback Troy Aikman is perhaps the best known Cowboy and he has yet to win an NFL game.

Steve Walsh, who took over when Aikman broke a finger, beat the Redskins.

Their duel for the starting job will continue through the season but Walsh admits his starting chances probably hinge on Aikman's health.

"The competition really isn't wide open," Walsh said.

The Dallas defense is unsettled, although third-round pick Jimmie Jones is expected to help in the line once he reports to camp. Veteran strong safety Bill Bates, slow but a tough hitter, could have trouble making the team as Johnson goes to youth.

Offensively, top pick Emmitt Smith of Florida has been a holdout but Johnson has liked what he's seen of Flagler and free agent Timmy Smith. Smith set a Super Bowl rushing record but was let go by Washington because of a weight problem.

"We are vastly improved at running back and wide receiver," Johnson said.

Just how good will the 1990 Cowboys be? Owner Jones won't predict.

"I learned my lesson last year," he said.

Prospective cross-country runners to meet on Wednesday

Pampa High School cross-country coach Mark Elms has called a meeting for 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 1, for all prospective runners.

Anyone interested in competing in cross-country this season should meet at the high school athletic building at the above date and time.

Cowboys Trade

AUSTIN (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys obtained running back

Lorenzo Hampton from the Denver Broncos on Friday for a conditional middle to late round draft pick.

Coach Jimmy Johnson said the Cowboys made the move because negotiations with No. 1 draft pick Emmitt Smith had broken down.

"Negotiations have become totally unrealistic and (owner) Jerry (Jones) has been more than fair," Johnson said. "It should be easy negotiations. All the players around him in the draft have signed."

Johnson added, "We'd love to have Smith as part of the Cowboys but we can't sit around and wait."

Hampton signed with Denver in March under terms of the NFL's Plan B free agency. Hampton rushed for 1,949 yards and 22 touchdowns through five seasons with Miami.

He caught 123 passes for 954 yards and six touchdowns. Hampton also averaged 21.1 yards on 96 kick-off returns.

Johnson also announced that running back Keith Jones may need surgery for possible knee ligament damage suffered in a scrimmage.

"Doctors believe Keith should have surgery but he's flying back to Dallas for a second opinion," Johnson said.

White Deer Rodeo completes second night

WHITE DEER — Friday's cowboys and cowgirls had all they could handle with the stock of McCloy Rodeo Co. during the second night of the 31st Annual White Deer Amateur Rodeo.

No riders could stay aboard McCloy's saddle broncs for the required eight seconds, so the competition was still wide open in that event entering Saturday night's final performance. The rodeo was still under way Saturday at press time, so final results were unavailable.

Carr Vincent of Amarillo vaulted into the bareback riding lead with a score of 73 on Friday. John Elfers of Beaver, Okla., was seven points back at 66.

Only one contestant, Regina Lewis of Hereford, managed to latch her calf in the breakaway roping. Lewis finished in 4.465 seconds to emerge as the leader in that event, then took third in barrel racing with a time of 17.881.

Edi Williams of Wellington won Friday's barrels, sprinting the clover-leaf course in 17.233 seconds. Canadian's Kelly Flowers topped his steer in rapid fashion, clocking 4.230 seconds to take over the No. 1 bull-dogging spot.

A trio from Pampa was the only finisher in the double mugging. Jim Richardson, Joe Coutts and Jimmy Don Baggett posted a time of 41.186 to win Friday's competition.

Jimmy Cates and Marty Nicholson, both of Briscoe, will be hard to beat in the heading and heeling. The team-roping pair finished in 7.171 seconds, almost six seconds ahead of second-place ropers Marty McCloy and Brent Lewis of Morse.

The Mataska brothers of Petrolia dominated Friday's bull riding. Jody Mataska came up with a 75 marker, followed closely by Himey Mataska with a 71.

Below are results of Friday's competition.

Arkansas will announce future plans by Aug. 15

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Negotiations are over and the University of Arkansas will announce by the start of fall football drills Aug. 15 whether the university will jump to the Southeastern Conference, UA Athletic Director Frank Broyles said Friday.

Meanwhile, an Alabama newspaper reported Friday that Arkansas and Florida State have accepted invitations to join the SEC.

Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles and Florida State athletic director Bob Goin both denied that the SEC had made any such invitation, but Broyles said whether the Razorbacks join the SEC is now "up to us."

UA and SEC officials have been talking since late May, when the SEC began courting Arkansas for inclusion in its expansion plans.

Arkansas has been in the Southwestern Conference for 76 years. Broyles said after a mid-July meeting of SWC officials in Dallas that it was still highly likely that Arkansas would remain in the SWC. At any rate, the earliest Arkansas would leave would be the fall of 1992, he said then.

But any decision probably would come quickly, he said.

Friday, in a telephone interview from his office, Broyles said:

"Our discussions with the Southeastern Conference have ended, and it's up to us to decide what we want to do. There are no negotiations going on. We don't expect any more meetings to be held. We're just sitting here evaluating our position as to what is best for the university over and above athletics."

Asked how it is up to Arkansas to decide if an official invitation to join the SEC has been extended, Broyles said: "You're going to have to talk to the chancellor. He's making those decisions."

UA Chancellor Dan Ferritor was not in his office Friday and was not expected back until Monday, spokesman Jim Treadway said.

UA officials had planned an announcement for sometime in September but advanced the timetable, Broyles said, because of strong support among school faculty, student groups, administrators and others for a decision before school starts.

"And (football coach Jack) Crowe very much wants to speed it up before players report and not have it clouding the season. We have to take that into consideration," Broyles said.

The Alabama Journal quoted an unnamed source, identified as a "highly ranked SEC official," who confirmed that the two universities would join the SEC, bringing the number of SEC teams to 12.

"I don't think Arkansas will announce it this week, but I look for it to be announced by next week," the newspaper quoted the source as saying. "It's up to Florida State President Bernard Sliger whenever he wishes to announce."

The Journal story said SEC Commissioner Roy Kramer met with FSU officials earlier this week to make the deal final. FSU's athletic director issued a quick denial.

"If the story is we have accepted an invitation to join the SEC, that's false. Nothing could be further from the truth. We have not been extended an offer, nor have we accepted one," Goin said.

Donald Zacharis, president of Mississippi State University and president of the SEC, told Tupelo, Miss., television station WTVA that Florida State has not been issued a formal invitation.

Landry to enter Hall of Fame next Saturday

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — When Tom Landry is inducted into the Professional Football Hall of Fame next Saturday, no current member of the Dallas Cowboys will be there to congratulate him.

The Cowboys will be working out at St. Edward's University not too far from where Landry played in college at the University of Texas. And no player on any of his Super Bowl teams is left on the roster with the recent retirement of Ed (Too Tall) Jones.

Owner Jerry Jones and coach Jimmy Johnson, who replaced Landry, will be working hard at improving the Cowboys from their 1-15 ledger in 1989 and won't make the trip to Ohio.

Travis County is still Landry country. He has a house on the 18th fairway at the Hills of Lakeway and is in the Longhorns' Hall of Fame.

It's ironic that the Cowboys' first Texas training camp is in the town that helped make Landry's name. There's been no announcement of a ceremony in the Dallas training camp.

Roger Staubach, the quarterback for so many of Landry's successful Super Bowl teams, will do the honors of introducing Landry.

"It was kind of tough making the decision," Landry said. "But I realized that it's the players who put you there. Since Roger retired, we have developed a strong friendship. We have become great friends."

Landry's firing still hangs heavy as he awaits his induction into the Hall of Fame.

"It (the firing) could have been handled a little better," Landry said. "It wasn't. You can do what you want when you buy a team. Let's see if they go on to be successful. If they don't, then somebody else will move in."

There has been no drive to put Landry in the Cowboys Ring of Honor and he's not sure he'd go if invited.

"I'm not sure about that," he said. "I don't know how I'd react."

Landry, only the fifth modern-era coach to be elected, said "as the day builds toward induction, it's getting to be exciting."

Asked if old stoneware would break down with a good cry, Landry said "I doubt it. I'm not that emotional. But I'll be very appreciative."

Landry coached the Cowboys 29 years, through the 1988 season. His regular season career record was 250-162-6 and his record including playoffs was 270-178-6.

The ceremonies begin at 10 a.m. in Canton, Ohio. Landry is familiar with them. He inducted Sam Huff, Lee Roy Jordan, and Staubach into the hall. Landry has been involved in a variety of pursuits that ranged from an autobiography to a speechmaking tour to television commercials.

"We're doing a lot of different things and they are interesting," Landry said. "There's always life after football."

Deputy and scrambler telephone keep Secretary Baker advised

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It took three refueling stops for Secretary of State James A. Baker III to get to Indonesia on his 30-year-old U.S. Air Force jet. But as slowly as he treks through four nations in Asia, he is only an electronic holler away from his command post at home.

Baker's plane has parallel telephone and printed message systems, both equipped with scramblers for confidential conversations and sensitive exchanges. They nearly always work.

A couple of weeks ago, while stretching his legs at the airport in Shannon, Ireland, while the jet was refueled, Baker was taken aback by reporters whose editors had just told them of the deal West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl had struck in Moscow clearing the way for German unification.

The terms reached with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev surpassed anything Baker expected to see accomplished when he got to Paris for six-nation talks in Germany. "Terrific, terrific," Baker told reporters, recovering quickly.

An AP news analysis

"The fact of the matter," Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger said Wednesday, "Baker should have had a heads-up. The guy at the airport who had the information missed connections with Baker because Baker was taking a walk."

Eagleburger, who takes over as acting secretary of state when Baker is abroad or on vacation, is only a telephone call or an electronic message away from the jet or from the headquarters Baker establishes when he reaches his destination.

"It works," Eagleburger said in an interview. "I suppose if they are off at a dinner in Paris and something develops it is going to take longer to get in touch. But it works. The communications on the plane are fantastic."

"He doesn't leave the State Department behind," said another U.S. official. "There is a sort of constant back and forth. And yet there is a tendency not to overburden him."

Last December, as President Bush, Baker and Brent Scowcroft, the president's national security assistant, flew together on Air Force One to Malta for a summit meeting with Gorbachev, army rebels mounted a coup in the Philippines. The future looked bleak for U.S.-backed President Corazon Aquino.

She prevailed after two U.S. jet fighter planes from Clark Air Base provided air support for government troops, buzzed rebel positions and otherwise made sure the dissidents knew on which side Washington stood.

During the crisis, Eagleburger was in the State Department's Operations Center, the guarded communications hub. Vice President Dan Quayle and Robert Gates, the former CIA official who is Scowcroft's deputy, were at the White House.

"We had a hookup, and then the vice president was on the telephone with Baker. That's an example of where we were able to make decisions based on where the powers were — namely, on the airplane," Eagleburger said. "We didn't have to wing it from here. The communications were fine."

Battleship Texas now docked at San Jacinto park

LA PORTE (AP) — The Battleship Texas is moored at the San Jacinto Battleship Park after a $13 million facelift.

The nation's only remaining dreadnought ship and the only surviving combat vessel to have served in both world wars sailed down the Houston Ship Channel from Greens Bayou Thursday with about 60 former crewmen and another 150 journalists and dignitaries aboard.

"This is really a great day. It makes me feel proud to be a Texan!" said former crewman Beuron Boyd, 76, of Houston, as the "Mighty T" was greeted by about 750 people at its berth.

The restoration work so far has been funded by a $5 million Navy grant and by a variety of private donations, among them collections from Texas school children and an aluminum can recycling project.

The refurbishing, which already has taken 19 months, will continue for several years, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife officials.

"We have no real time limit on the ongoing work. The big push was to get the restoration under way. We've succeeded," said Robert Miller, chairman of the Battleship Texas Advisory Board.

The Texas left its berth about eight miles from Houston on Dec. 13, 1988. Since then, officials have completed a $2 million new free-floating berth and landscaping project at the battleground park.

The vessel itself was transferred first to Todd Shipyards Corp. in Galveston for structural repairs of the hull and ship exterior. Restoration crews installed guns and mooring attachments and replaced 350,000 pounds of steel on the ship's main deck and hull — left rusted and leaky from the fuel oil, mud and silt of its old shallow berth.

On Feb. 23, the ship was moved to The Port at Greens Bayou on the Houston Ship Channel, where crews began installing a wooden deck expected to be completed by the ship's scheduled Sept. 8 public grand opening.

"I last saw her during a reunion in 1984 and it needed a lot of repairs then," said Charles Hamadik, a crewman who came from Solon, Ohio, for last Thursday's event.

The 34,000-ton vessel, commissioned in 1914, sports a fresh Navy blue paint job designed to reflect the camouflage colors it carried into battle in the American invasions of Iwo Jima and Okinawa during World War II.

"They worked so hard to get the right color. But we were never that dark," recalled Donald Penner, 71, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who handled ammunition aboard ship from 1942 to 1945. "We were a lighter battleship gray."

"We matched it to a Navy specification book," TPW spokeswoman Sue Moss said of the shade. "What they are remembering is a color faded by summer. After this summer the ship will look about the same as it did in World War II."

Texas Army National Guard plays hosts to civilians during field exercises at Fort Hood

The Pampa News got an invitation along with community leaders, employers and other media members from across the state to join the Texas Army National Guard at Fort Hood as soldiers took to the field during annual exercises on July 18.

When publisher, Louise Fletcher, asked who would like to cover the assignment, I knew it would be a hardship on me to be around all those men, but I volunteered to go.

Loaded down with two cameras, four rolls of film and a bottle of insect repellent, I managed to share a ride to Amarillo with Bill Hallerberg and Rod Gross with IRI, Brian Vining with First National Bank and Jerry Wright, city commissioner, to catch our flight for the day's outing.

Our transportation was a C-130 Hercules - a troop carrying plane, the "no frills" type. Our Guard escort for the day told us that the plane would hold 64 men in full gear comfortably. "Comfortably" wasn't what I would call American Airlines first class but with a vivid imagination the cot bottom seats and nylon webbing back braces could but one in mind of a modified hammock. We flew to Lubbock to pick up another load of guests and on to Fort Hood, headquarters for the 49th Armored Division, located between Gatesville and Killen.

We were given name tags to wear. (Mine read Kayla, Vining's read Grian and Robert Dixon's read Dison. We're in the Army now.) Ear plugs, provided in abundance, were a must on the flight. I got to thinking about all those old WWII movies I've seen where guys are flying in a plane preparing to jump over enemy territory and they are carrying on a low conversation - another bit of Hollywood fluff.

By the time we arrived about 10:30 a.m., my 5:30 a.m. breakfast had completely digested and I was grateful for the cookies and fruit drink the Guard provided us before our first briefing - a welcome and slide show singing the praises of the Texas Army National Guard.

Our first tour was the maintenance garage where several armored personnel carriers (APCs) and a big tank were displayed for visitors to crawl in and around. Hallerberg pointed out the 105 millimeter gun turret on one of the big tanks and told me that it was probably one that had been made at IRI. I thought this was fascinating since I had no idea what IRI did anyway.

Next we loaded up on a bus and drove to the helicopter pads to catch our next means of transportation. I had flown in a small helicopter at the Oklahoma State Fair once, so I thought I knew about helicopters. Boy, was I wrong. The media got to ride in the Huey, a helicopter designed to carry six to eight people and get in and out of an area as quickly as possible.

The Huey has side doors that open wide on both sides of the helicopter, exposing four to eight people to the open air. The video people loved it. I knew in my heart that I would not fall out of the plane but the muscles in my spine weren't so convinced and I sat the whole ride with my back plastered to the back of the seat. I did manage to get a couple of pictures while flying, using a telephoto lens, an amateur photographer's dream come true.

On our first stop in the field, we met with assault team members who were going to demonstrate field artillery fire after lunch. Lunch in the field consisted of MRE's, meals-ready-to-eat, or as they are better known - C rations. My luck of the draw was corned beef hash. Others in our group got to sample chicken and rice, chicken ala king, ham slices, pork patties, and a couple of "I'm not sures".

We were informed that each meal consisted of about 3,000 to 3,500 calories each. I consider 2,000 calories a day an added three pounds per week so it gave me a new respect for the kind of physical exertion these guys must experience in the course of one day.

In my "brown bag lunch," besides the main entree, there were crackers (thick, dry, unsalted), grape jelly, an oatmeal cookie (thick, dry, fiber), a dry package of grape drink and cocoa mix (to be mixed with canteen water), a mixed fruit bar (could be eaten dry, but not advised, or reconstituted in water) and a package of assorted salt, pepper, chewing gum, matches and paper, toilet (that's what it reads on the outside of the package). A special thanks and my gratitude to the hosts for providing us with the luxury of cold tea and fruit drink.

We ate lunch outdoors in an open sided shed with waist high tables to stand up and eat. All during lunch I noticed a lone soldier sitting in the shade and apparently just waiting. I finally went over to him to see if he was being punished for something and he told me he was the medic. Hopefully he won't see any action during his two-week stay, even if he has to do a lot of sitting and waiting.

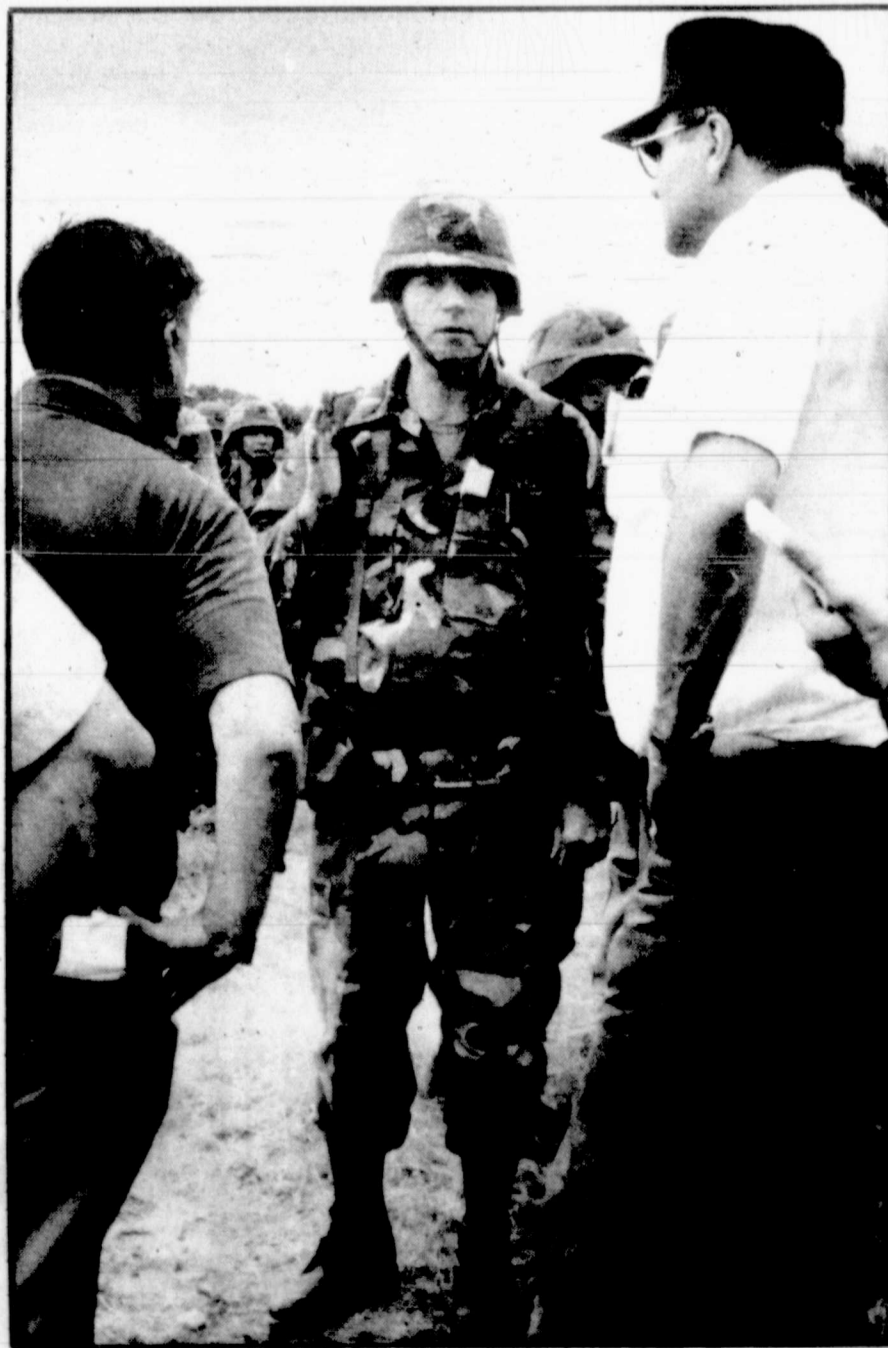

After lunch, media people loaded up in the APCs complete with helmets (insert ear plugs) and rode to the firing range to watch a demonstration of artillery fire from the 50 millimeter gun on top of an APC.

The rest of our party rode in transport trucks to the observation tower a few miles away. I don't have much to report about being so close to the firing of live ammunition. I don't think I recovered from bouncing around in the APC enough to register what was going on until it was all over.

I do remember hearing that every fifth bullet was a tracer bullet so that aim could be adjusted to target.

After the demonstration we were taxied back to the helicopters to move on to our next demonstration.

Peeler - Wiggins

Kathryn Peeler of Pampa and Bill Wiggins of Wheeler were united in marriage on July 21 at the Westside Church of Christ in Pampa with Bill Morrison, preacher of the Church of Christ in Wheeler, officiating.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Leon Peeler of Pampa. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Billy Wiggins of Wheeler.

Matron of honor was Mary Fuller of Columbus, Ga. Bridesmaids were Karen Hutcherson, Amarillo and Kim Fry of Happy, both sisters of the bride.

Best man was Sid Whiteley of Friona. Groomsmen were Paul Hartman of Canyon and Cody Wiggins of Wheeler.

Seating guests were Gaylon Fry, Happy; Larry Trevino, Canyon; and Todd Moore, Canyon. Phillip Wiggins of Wheeler was the candlelighter and Missy Schafer of Canadian registered guests. Vocalists were Kathy Smith and Cory Coon, both of Pampa.

After the ceremony reception was held at the Gray County Annex. Servers were Kathy McIntire, Pampa; Tracy Nagel, Canyon; Madelyn Caldwell, Canyon; Tammy Whiteley, Friona; and Tammy Moore, Canyon.

The bride is a 1986 graduate of Pampa High School. She is a senior education major at West Texas State University.

The groom is a 1985 graduate of Wheeler High School and a 1990 graduate of WTSU. He is employed with the Plemons-Stinnett-Phillips Consolidated Independent School District. The couple will make their home in Stinnett.

Living with fiance reveals generation gap

DEAR ABBY: I am very tired of hearing parents complain that their adult children are "living with someone." I am currently living with my fiance, and I am having the same problem with my parents.

I was a model child. I never missed a curfew or sneaked out of the house. I was an honor student in high school as well as being involved with varsity athletics, choir and my church. In college, I excelled as well. I have never touched drugs — not even as an experiment — and my parents have never been called to the police station to pick me up for any reason.

I have a great job and so does my fiance, and we are both well over 21. Do my parents ever tell me how proud they are of me for my accomplishments? No! Every time we speak, they remind me of how much they disapprove of our living together. My fiance and I are going to be married soon, and didn't start living together until we became engaged. (By the way, there is no baby on the way.)

Abby, I think all parents of children like me should thank God that their children are alive, healthy, drug-free and succeeding in their careers. I almost wish I had done some major drugs in the past so that when I told them that I was living with someone, they would have said, "Is that all — we're happy you aren't doing drugs anymore!"

I think today's parents focus too much on premarital sex. We could be doing worse things — namely drugs. Sign this ...

SOMEBODY'S DAUGHTER

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR DAUGHTER: Congratulations for having been a model child as well as a decent, drug-free adult.

The problem here is the generation gap. Your parents are uncomfortable with the knowledge that you are enjoying all the pleasures of marriage without the benefit of clergy. The fact that you will be married "soon" doesn't make it any more palatable. They imagine that "everyone" (their friends and relatives) knows that you are "living in sin" — and they can't handle it. If you are as adult as you claim to be, you will tune out your parents' disapproval, continue to be their loving daughter, and judge them not for their condemning attitude.

***

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl. About two years ago, my mother sent for your booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." At the time I thought: "What do I need this dumb booklet for? I know everything I need to know!"

A couple of months ago, while cleaning out my drawers, I came across the booklet and read it intently for the next hour. A lot of things you mentioned, I still didn't know anything about until I read it. You were so straightforward and direct, you really got through to me.

Since last year was my first year of high school, I didn't know much about drugs, and never even thought of having sex. Last month, my boyfriend (now my "ex" boyfriend) asked me to have sex with him. I flat-out turned him down. Then another boy asked me to get "high" with him one day after school. Thank God I had the strength to say no. Your booklet showed me the real dangers of sex and drugs, and how to say no to both.

The last two pages, "A Letter to Parents," telling parents what their teen-agers want from them, was really, really great. Even my mother liked it. Thanks, Abby.

YOUR FRIEND FOR LIFE
IN MOLINE, ILL.

DEAR FRIEND: Thanks for a great letter. It made my day, my month, my year.

***

DEAR ABBY: I am a young man about to get married for a second time. (My first wife and I were divorced.)

My question: Can I use the same wedding ring twice? The ring belonged to my mother, who passed away. My father gave it to me, and I used it for my first marriage. After the divorce, she gave it back to me.

My ex-wife and my fiance are good friends. Please advise.

WEDDING RING

DEAR WEDDING RING: It's more than just a wedding "ring" — it's a family heirloom. Tell your fiance the history of the ring, and ask her how she feels about it. The decision should be hers.

***

DEAR ABBY: I clipped this item from the death notices of my local newspaper:

"The family of ( ) requests that in lieu of flowers, donations be made to help defray funeral expenses. Please send donations to ( )."

Abby, in my opinion, that request is the height of tackiness. What do you and your readers think?

SAN ANTONIO READER

DEAR READER: I think that request is the height of sadness. I do not consider a plea for help to defray funeral expenses "tacky." Being poor is no disgrace.

Livestock Project News
I realize the Gray County and Top O' Texas Stockshows are not until January of next year; however, its time that we begin to start making some decisions as to what type of livestock you may want to show.

I'll just briefly remind you of some of the on feed deadlines. Steers must be on feed by Sept. 12, lambs by Oct. 12, and pigs by Nov. 1. The rabbit show will consist of three different types of meat rabbits; Fryers, Roasters, and Stewers. Only the Roaster will be eligible for the sale, and must be on feed by Oct. 7.

If you would like more details on any of the above livestock project, please call the Extension Office and I'll be more than happy to assist you in any way possible.

Those of you interested in showing at the Tri-State Fair in Amarillo Sept. 17-22, need to enter by Aug. 13, at the Extension Office.

Mr. & Mrs. Ray Christenson

Christenson Anniversary

Ray and Elsie Christenson will be celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary on Aug. 3 with a reception at New Beginnings Retreat, 15 miles west of Dumas, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Elsie Harris married Ray Christenson on Aug. 28, 1950. They have lived in Pampa for seven years. Mr. Harris has been involved with the ministry for 42 years and the couple are members of the Assembly of God Church.

They have four sons: Tim Christenson, Estes Park, Colo.; Dan Christenson, Fox Island, Wash.; Van Christenson, Seattle, Wash.; and Wendel Christenson, Pampa. The couple have four grandchildren.

Recycling seminar planned

Texas Panhandle residents who buy food and drinks packaged in aluminum and tin cans, glass jars and plastic bottles can learn how to recycle those items—and others—at the area's first Regional Recycling Seminar.

Regional Recycling Seminar, sponsored by Keep Amarillo Beautiful, will begin at 8:30 a.m., Saturday, Aug. 4th in Amarillo Garden Center auditorium. The event is free and open to the public, according to Anne Amerson, public awareness chairman of Keep Amarillo Beautiful.

"Recycle is the verb of the 90's," said Amerson.

"Local interest in recycling—as a civic project and fund raiser—has doubled. Our area now has recycling centers for aluminum, steel, tin, glass, plastic and paper products. At Regional Recycling Seminar we'll distribute free recycling center directories and pamphlets about what and how to recycle."

Auditorium seating for the free recycling seminar is limited. Advance registration may be made by contacting McGuire at Amarillo Garden Center, 1400 Streit Drive, Amarillo, TX 79106 or by telephoning 806-352-6513.

Parental tips for helping children learn to read

Learning to read is an important part of childhood. For many children it seems to just come "naturally," while for others it is an ongoing struggle. Parents can help their children acquire reading skills in a number of ways:

*Let your children see you read so they will have a model to follow.

*Provide a comfortable, special reading area and a variety of books, newspapers and magazine.

*Take your children to the library to get library cards, to check out books, and to listen to films and stories. Most libraries will allow children to have library cards as soon as they can write their names.

*Read store and road signs, package labels and license plates.

*Reward the child's reading achievement with a trip to the library, the purchase of a new book or praise about how well the child is doing.

*Write down your child's story as he or she tells it so that it can be seen in print. The child can draw pictures to illustrate the story. Save the story and read and savor it together.

Give your kids bookcases (a cardboard carton covered with contact paper will work) where they can store books.

*Play readers theater (each individual has a part and they read aloud together), act out stories, present puppet shows of favorite books.

*Give books as birthdays and holiday gifts.

*Show pictures and ask what might happen next; being able to predict what will happen next is an important reading skill.

Famous tulips

NEW YORK (AP) — A white tulip developed in Holland has been named after screen star Audrey Hepburn.

The new tulip was called Audrey Hepburn as a tribute to the actress' career and to her longtime work on behalf of UNICEF, according to the Netherlands Flowerbulb Information Center.

Other celebrities who have had Dutch tulip bulbs named after them include Bing Crosby, Madame Curie and presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy.

Homemakers' News
Donna Brauchi

*Read to your children every day. Sometimes let them choose the books. Read your old favorites or those that teachers or librarians recommend. Once your child can read on his own, you need to continue reading at a higher level.

*Talk about the books you read together. Ask questions about the story: Where did the story take place? Which of the characters are you most like and why? What happened first, second, last? Why did you like this story? How does it make you feel? Think of a question to ask me about the book.

The single most important activity that parents can do to assist their children in reading is to read to them throughout childhood and especially, during preschool years.

The benefits are greatest if the child is an active participant, engages in discussions about stories, identifies letters and words and discusses the meaning of words.

Army

I moved over from the Huey to the Chinook to give someone else the experience of the open-air ride. The Chinook is a large helicopter with two large rotary blades that go in sync like the blades on a mix master.

I set directly over the trap door, where a hoist is located, which was opened for ground viewing and circulation of air. After having experienced the openness of the Huey, I wasn't the least bit anxious about leaning over and watching the ground as it slowly moved farther and farther away from us. The tail of the helicopter was also kept open.

Our next stop was a visit to troops in the field and a demonstration of TOW (Technical Optic Wire), a large artillery weapon system.

Soldiers demonstrated how the weapon is assembled away from the tank, fired, dismantled and reassembled on the tank in 15 seconds. The wire guided missile system allows the operator to change the direction after the missile is fired. One officer explained to the crowd that the TOW is controlled by a joy stick, much like the one used in video games.

I met Rex Peoples, superintendent of McLean schools, and Ken Sweatt, superintendent of Groom schools at this stop. Peoples has been in the Army Reserve and National Guard for 32 years. Sweatt has been on active duty for three years. It was my impression that serving in the National Guard has lots of good benefits, at least for these two men.

After another pause for liquid refreshments and cookies under a camouflaged awning, we loaded up the helicopter to visit another group of soldiers who demonstrated assault techniques, more personal than the artillery fire demonstration.

The Guard team came charging up in an APC and the assault team ran out firing their weapons and proceeded to take an unknown objective somewhere in the trees. Afterwards the soldiers introduced themselves to the crowd. Employers got an opportunity to visit with their employees and anyone who wanted to also got a chance to ride in the APC (I just watched). It appeared that the drivers left no bump or hill untraveled and at top speed.

For most of the day the sky was overcast and reasonably pleasant. Humidity was high and a few times when the sun peaked through the clouds I got a real taste of what those guys experience with the heat in that part of Texas. Whew! Hot and sticky, and I was in short sleeves.

Back at the base, a special presentation was made to Douglas O.V. Rives, the mayor of Shamrock, making him an honorary sergeant major. Rives served 36 years in the Guard and many of the men he had trained were there to share in his honor.

The flight home, most everyone tried to catch 40 winks except for Hallerberg. He sat up with the pilot and watched the flying process.

It was a very interesting day and I fell in love several times. I saw what the National Guard wanted me to see and was reasonably impressed.

And yes, if invited, I'd go back again - this time with my phone number written across the back of my shirt.

Mule and donkey show at Fair

The 1990 Amarillo Tri State Fair, scheduled for Sept. 17-22, will feature four days of horse and mule events.

For the first time at the fair on Monday, Sept. 17th, a mule and donkey show will be held in the Bill Cody Horse Arena beginning at 10:00 a.m. The show will feature classes for mules and donkeys of all ages that will compete for prizes in mule and donkey pleasure, trail, pole bending, barrel racing, coon mule jump, single and multi-hitch driving and saddle horn pull.

Summer gardening tips from Lubbock specialist

The following information was provided by Dr. Roland Roberts, Extension Vegetable Specialist from Lubbock.

"Heat wave" hardly does justice to what our plants and we have been through this summer so far. Three solid weeks of 100-degree weather in June put plants, water systems and gardeners under extreme stress. We can look forward to a long late summer and fall with much better temperatures.

Iron deficiency is showing up in many landscapes and gardens. Extreme heat in June has made the interveinal yellowing of leaves more severe than usual. Iron treatment of soil and plants is helpful. Iron 138 chelate is the most effective iron source for our region.

By mid-July, make your last planting of pintos, French horticultural and any other beans you intend for dry harvest. Allow time for maturity, drydown and harvest before fall rains come. Sow seed of broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cabbage and cauliflower by mid to late July. We have enjoyed continuous harvests of Green Comet and Packman broccoli right through the hundred degree weather.

Carrot, snap beans, parsnip, turnip and rutabaga can go in any time until about the first of August. Succession of quick maturing Chinese vegetables can be planted now and on into early September. The same goes for lettuce.

For Horticulture

If your annuals look "stressed out" beyond reasonable rejuvenation you can start over. Replant with potted transplants of: ageratum, dwarf fibrous-rooted begonias, coleus, impatiens, cosmos, marigold, petunia, periwinkle, portulaca, and zinnia just to name a few.

Some kinds will come from seed but time is too short for a long period of bloom enjoyment before frost. Nurseries are taking fall gardening more seriously and continuing to stock good plants, in pots and paks. Impatiens thrive in shade with good indirect light.

Many people are discovering the virtues of vinca (periwinkle). Hot weather tolerance, continuous blooming, bright clear colors, pastels, and whites are among its virtues. Vinca seems to thrive on heat. You might say it is fireproof-almost. Vinca does best in full sun.

You might like to try a new kind of plant, that grows very well on the High Plains. Look for Firebush plants in the nurseries. A plant of Firebush given to us by Jerry Parson, Extension Vegetables Specialist in San Antonio, grew very well for us. Firebush will behave as an annual here - it is not cold tolerant - but is well worth the expense for the spectacular display of blooms it presents all summer.

Sow seed for a fall crop of sweet corn. Bodacious or similar super-sweet variety planted by mid July will produce super quality corn in early September to October. Fertilize soil preplant with only nitrogen if your soil is already high in phosphorus. One cup of urea (45-0-0) per 100 square feet filled in is good enough to start the crop. Sidedress with same amount again when the corn plants are 6 to 8 inches tall. Super sweet varieties stay in prime quality for up to 2 weeks.

Severe winter injury to Bermuda grass turf is widespread. Bare patches and weak growth are common complaints. Adequate irrigation and nitrogen fertilization are important to encourage regrowth. Before top-dressing lawn with nitrogen, irrigate. Then apply nitrogen at the rate of one pound of the element per 1,000 square feet of lawn. To get this rate of nitrogen, apply slightly over two pounds of urea (45-0-0) per 1,000 square feet every month until early September.

Intensely hot and dry weather stresses vegetables plants and favors spider mites and aphids. Mites start and proliferate on the underside of oldest leaves nearest the soil whereas aphids multiply quickest on tender growing tips at the top of plants. To test for mites, tap a suspect leaf on a white or very dark surface.

Light colored specks that move are mites. Washing leaf surfaces and rose buds with a moderately forceful stream of water is often enough to dislodge aphids and mites. If you need to spray to control these insects, first scare the bees and other pollinators, lacewings, tiny wasps, lady bugs and other beneficials off plants by tapping branches. They'll return when the spray has dried and is less toxic to them.

Add additional layers of mulch to your vegetable garden all summer. Grass clippings make good mulch. Collect them in plastic bags. Close bag tightly. Compress by kneeling on bag. Place bag on full sun driveway or patio and leave it there for a full day or until it gets very hot in bag. Heat kills seeds and rhizomes that could become weeds. Spread clippings on soil between the row.

Cancer society fundraiser brings in $6,000

The Colorado-in-Texas weather that cooled the heat of summer also allowed the good times to roll last week. Here's the good news straight from the shoulder.

The fund-raiser outdoor western barbecue dinner last Saturday evening to benefit Gray-Roberts American Cancer Society was the largest party to date held in the home of Bob and Faunce Mack. Jo Scoggin served as general chairman for the event attended by approximately 220 people. Early contributions were made by Don Babcock, Citizens Bank and Trust, Hoechst Celanese, National Bank of Commerce and Titan Specialties.

Polly Benton, quiet and ever so talented, designed the cover of the invitations and made western leis for the hostesses to wear. Dyers catered the food, Your Laundry & Dry Cleaners furnished table cloths, Watson's Feed and Garden Center the flowers, First Baptist and St. Matthews Episcopal Churches the tables, Big Brothers/Big Sisters the game tables and 4-R Supply helium for the balloons.

Debi Mack, artistic as can be, enlisted the help of her house guests to put up decorations of red, white and blue, big fluffy bows, bouquets of balloons as accents for two flags previously flown over the State capitol. Her house guests were Florian Van Laar, Lex Werkheim, and Philip Van der Stam of Holland, Eileen Whittenman, La Jolla, Calif.

Phoebe Reynolds, pianist, and Katrina Hildebrandt, flutist, showed the diversity of their talents in dinner music with western and folk tunes. Cindi Epperly, accompanied by E.P. Simmons at the piano, sang for the crowd.

Wayne Stribling of Wayne's Western Wear furnished clothes for a style show modeled by Chris and Mark Alexander of Lubbock and Dallas, Epperly, Seth Stribling, Misty Roach and Brandi Linderman. Jackie, Carolyn, Thurston (featured fiddler) and Wallace played music for poolside dancing.

Lilith Brainard was in charge of games, June Ivory the beverage tables. Buster Ivory made signs for valet parking, courteously taken care of by Alex Hallerberg, Reeves Prater, Swasey Brainard and R.D. Others responsible for the smooth running gala were Priscilla Alexander, Dot Allen, Andrew Mitchell, Ed Brainard, and Joveta Young.

The party netted approximately $6,000 for the Cancer Society. Special bouquets of compliments to Bob, Faunce and Debi for so generously sharing their beautiful home in good community causes. It's that kind of community spirit that makes Pampa the best place on earth to live!

Peeking at Pampa By Katie

hosted a family reunion in an atmosphere of family love to celebrate Mark's 29th birthday. First there was golfing, then dinner and a big birthday cake.

Attending were Billy and Wilma McMinn, Chris and Donna of Canadian, Clint and Tracy of Amarillo, and Wilma's parents Billy and Elsie Earles of Lefors. Mark is happy as a client of the Pampa Sheltered Workshop and employee of Cabot Corp., R&D. He and his dad enjoy playing golf together at every opportunity. Belated birthday wishes, Mark!

Attention friends of Linda and Paul Pinkham. They are now living in Jacksonville, Fla. - happy and doing well. Paul is a former Pampa News reporter.

Grandparental congratulations to Janice and Floyd Sackett on the birth of their first grandchild, Lindsey! Janice was gone in a flash to exercise her grandmotherly privilege of spoiling the wee one.

If Janice and Floyd are yardsticks of good measure, grandparenting has to be a wonderful state of being! Parents are Paula and Ed Sackett and they live in Florida. Paula's dad, Ken Allison, formerly of Pampa now of Florida, took the day off from his job at Wal-Mart to greet little Lindsey.

Congratulations accompanied by tears to Dr. Harry Griffith, who accepted the position of school superintendent of the Goose Creek School District at Baytown.

In serving in the same capacity here he shared his leadership abilities wherever he was needed - in the community, church, as president of Rotary Club.

As an administrator he received state-wide and even national recognition as a top-notch leader. His wife Sally will be missed in the school system, particularly the Zan Walker, youth director at Central Baptist Church, arranged a youth mission trip in Rangely, Colo. Matt Ammerman, summer assistant youth director, accompanied the group of 10 adults, four children and 32 youth. He is the son of Bethel and J.B. Walker and will be a junior at Wayland Baptist University in Plainview.

Lou Ella Clemens was honored at an 80th birthday party at First Baptist Church last Sunday hosted by her children, Brian of Indiana, Dwain of Idaho, David from San Antonio and Wanda Newkirk of Grand Junction, Colo. Belated birthday wishes!

Ed and Rosie Myatt, Norman and Martha Sublett recently represented Pampa at the 55th Annual National Lefthanded Golf Tournament held in Kelowna, British Columbia, Canada. Norman placed fifth in the third flight of the senior division.

The Subletts got to visit with their grandchildren Corey and Jill Sublett, Ashley and Benjamin Hannah and parents in Seattle prior to the tournament. Both couples report that Spartan apples, Ranier cherries, beautiful golf courses and friendly Canadians contributed to a memorable trip.

See you next week, Katie.

Guitarist has fun making up song titles

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Guitarist Leo Kottke has made 22 recordings since 1969 — his new one is titled That's What — and many people know him from radio's Prairie Home Companion.

Kottke, his wife and two children live in Wayzata, Minn. "I met my wife in Minnesota, got married there. It's a very convenient place for Mary because I'm gone so much. She has a lot of friends and family there. It's convenient for me because it's in the middle of the continent. I've been there far longer than anywhere else I've ever lived.

"I was born in Athens, Georgia. I was there a year and a half. I didn't put down my roots."

The title of a Kottke album released last year was My Father's Face. Kottke says it refers to the experience of seeing your father in yourself as you get older. "It is disturbing and comforting at the same time."

On That's What, his fourth album for Private Music, one tune is titled "What the Arm Said" and one is "Czech Bounce."

He says: "I have a lot of fun with titles. I have to find something that actually means something to me."

"I have discovered that I need to restrain my gift for metaphor. There are some tunes I love that I hate to play because I might have to tell you what I call them. You run into publishing problems if you try to retile them."

On That's What, Kottke performs on three cuts on a six-string electric bass. Two tunes are recorded with six trombones.

"I don't have any particular allegiance one way or the other to an acoustic or electric instrument," he says. "I do prefer a volume that is painless. After being in the Navy, I can't handle really loud stuff."

"I joined the submarine service when I was still in high school. I was basically done in by a submachine gun, by a guy standing next to me.

"They'd call all the non-rated men topside, throw out three light bulbs, and we'd try and shoot them out of the water. I don't think a light bulb has ever been sunk in the North Atlantic by an American sailor."

"I was discharged because I lost some hearing. I'm certain during the war it was not cause for discharge. Anything particularly loud puts me through the roof."

"I can tune the guitar. I seem to be pretty functional. Each ear tends to compensate for the other. I'm not completely out in any frequency. I hear a ringing; that's a permanent condition. What I'm fortunate with is it's a steady tone. I know of people who hear a siren or thunderings and crashings."

Kottke usually performs alone. "I go out with other people now and then principally to eliminate some of the solitude of traveling by myself. I love to go out with somebody I like to listen to." Last year, he toured with country singer Lyle Lovett, whom he'd met four years before.

"He was opening for me at a club in Dallas. There was a silence that comes over a room that's different from just the quiet of listening."

It had a focus and an intensity. I could feel that from inside the dressing room. I stuck my head out and got my first glimpse of Lyle. He has become a good friend."

At first, Kottke wrote songs. "Then around about 1967 or '68 I finally started writing the things I'd been looking for all those years — instrumentals. I knew they were there. I hadn't been able to turn one up yet."

"I remember the tune, 'Ojo.' I had a particular problem with it. It had to do with the way the thumb relates to the fingers and I solved it. I knew I had the tune and that that had been in the way all those years. It was the physical key to writing the way I wanted to write."

"Ojo" is still one of my better pieces. It's a title I made up and I found out a few years ago it actually is a medicine man's curse. It means 'cave eye.' I don't know what that is, but I don't want it. It sounds kind of forlorn."

The Public Broadcasting Service did a special on Kottke. "I thought it would be simple. Be yourself. It doesn't work that way. I found out you have to remember who you are so that you can act like yourself. Something would happen that was spontaneous and they would ask me to do that again."

Kottke hasn't had a big hit. "I'm not sure I'd want one," he says. "Loudon Wainwright has written all these great songs. He has to sing about a dead skunk in the middle of the road every night."

Bill Cosby

'Ghost Dad' reunites Cosby with his 'old buddy' Poitier

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Cosby is back on the big screen, hoping to erase the memory of a disaster that could have submerged a less durable career.

The new film is Ghost Dad, a comedy-fantasy that marks a reunion with his old buddy, Sidney Poitier. The last, unmentionable movie was Leonard, Part 6, which ranks with Ishitar and Howard the Duck among the most infamous bombs of recent times.

Here for interviews for the opening of Ghost Dad, Cosby was asked if the wounds of Leonard had healed.

"They're healed but there's calluses on them," he replied soberly.

Ghost Dad, the comedian said, was well worth sacrificing his vacation from his television series, The Cosby Show.

"Working with Sidney was wonderful. Flying (by wire as a ghost), mugging. One of the scenes when I read it, I just put the script down because I enjoyed it."

The scene shows the ghostly Dad emerging through the telephone receiver of his daughter's obnoxious boyfriend and throttling him.

"I have four daughters," Bill mused happily. "Just to be able to do that, I'd give up my vacation."

Ghost Dad materializes during an early summer dominated by high-budget, high-tech movies. Cosby sees that as an advantage.

"Between Total Recall and Another 48 HRS., and then you get Gremlins and Witches, in there is this breath of fresh air that's sort of on the line of Honey, I Shrank the Kids (last summer's surprise hit). I think we're going to do very, very well."

Working with director Poitier was joyful though hazardous, Cosby related.

"He put me on the wires, hauled me up four stories and called lunch. He left me there for an hour. Now, I had not been naughty. I hear a noise, and up was coming a bucket with my lunch."

"I'm going to get him. It's going to cost me a lot of money, but I'm going to get him. I'm going to get a movie and star him in it. On a Friday, I'm going to put him on wires and pull him up four stories. I'm going to yell 'wrap,' and he'll be up there all weekend."

The Cosby saga is well known: his Philadelphia childhood, college athletics, discovery by Carl Reiner in a Pittsburgh comedy club, starring in I Spy, the huge success as TV star, stand-up comedian, author and spokesman for products.

Does he ever worry that he is being spread too thin?

"Yeah, if I do bad work," he said. "That's why I have to protect myself. The only way to protect myself is to do what I feel is funny. If I give the slightest inch to mediocrity, then people will believe that I'm overexposed. If you keep doing good stuff, and you keep delivering, you're OK."

Folk singer Odetta to give benefit concert in Amarillo

AMARILLO — Odetta, a force in American music for over 40 years, will perform at Will Rogers Elementary School, 920 N. Mirror, in Amarillo on Saturday, Aug. 4, at 8 p.m.

The concert is sponsored by Red River Peace Network and the Peace Farm to benefit peace and justice causes in the region.

Odetta, born in Birmingham, Ala., wanted to sing opera but, being black, she felt she would never get into a company. She began studying American folk music at 19 when she discovered that there "was some fantastic stuff labeled folk music."

She describes American folk music as "a blend of all people's music." As an interpreter of folk music, she sings work songs, game songs, children's songs, gospel and blues — songs that she feels come from our basic emotional needs outside our daily routines.

Odetta's music also supports social movements. She participated in the Civil Rights March in Selma, Ala., and in the 1963 and 1983 marches on Washington, D.C.

In addition to her music career, her dramatic credits include The Crucible, The Effects of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds and New Orleans. She will be in director Spike Lee's newest film, with the working title Love Supreme.

Tickets are available prior to the concert through the Peace Farm, 1-335-1715, for $5 or at the door for $6.

New energy taxes would hurt farmers, rural residents, group says

WASHINGTON (AP)—A move to impose energy taxes as a way of trimming the federal budget deficit would severely hurt farmers and small-town people, says the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association.

Rural electric systems operate at cost and are owned by their customers, said Bob Bergland, executive vice president of the association. Any price increase caused by energy taxes would be paid by consumers.

"Rural consumers can't escape," Bergland said Tuesday. "They are the equity owners of the electric systems which provide electricity to them."

Bergland, who was secretary of agriculture in the Carter administration, joined natural gas and electric utility leaders to protest any move by the Bush administration to raise money by imposing new energy taxes.

One type of tax that has been suggested would base the tax on the amount of carbon in the fuel. Coal, petroleum and natural gas would be taxed, but nuclear, hydroelectric and solar energy would not because they contain no carbon, an air pollutant.

Still another plan would base the tax on the amount of energy, measured in British thermal units, or BTUs, that a fuel contains. The BTU tax would apply to all fuels.

Bergland, whose member co-ops serve more than 25 million people, said the rural economy has "taken severe shocks" the last decade through droughts, floods, falling commodity prices, plummeting land price and a sharp decline in federal funding for rural areas.

"Energy taxes will unfairly penalize rural areas which already have higher electricity rates, either by driving up the price of fuel used to generate electricity or by taxing the selling price of electricity," he said.

A joint statement protesting the use of energy taxes was signed by Bergland; George Lawrence, president of the American Gas Association; Tom Kuhn, president of the Edison Electric Institute; and Larry Hobart, executive director of the American Public Power Association.

"The burden of broad-based energy taxes will fall unevenly across consumers and income classes, among industries and across regions of the country," the statement said. "This is unfair and inequitable taxation."

BTU and carbon-content taxes were described as "inherently regressive." Such taxes were said capable of raising at least $14 billion a year.

"Heating, lighting, cooking and water heating are not luxuries but essentials," the statement said.

"Lower-income families already pay three to four times more of their income for energy than the average American family."

MANMADE

A man made this beautiful little waterfall and improved his part of a little stream that ran by his house. Another man on another stream threw trash in the water and let weeds grow up around it so that the beauty of the creek was obscured. Man fashions many things out of that which God has created. Beauty or ugliness can result from our decisions as to what we will do with divine raw materials. Dedication to God and the desire to emulate Him usually makes the difference in what we do with what God has provided. Let God find you in His church.

Religion roundup

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) - United Methodist clergy are "consistently more liberal" than lay members, according to research by the denomination's general council on ministries.

It found among those not attending the denomination's last governing conference, 62 percent of the laity and 25 percent of the clergy consider the Bible the "literal word of God," while only 26 percent of the clergy and 26 percent of the laity who were conference delegates did so.

Response to that question was found to be an indicator of responses on 45 other issues surveyed in the 9 million-member denomination.

"We have heard for years that the local church appeared to be more conservative" than elected delegates, said the Rev. Mearle Griffith of the council's research office. The data seemed to substantiate it.

Sixty-nine percent of non-delegates said they are more conservative than the general conference actions. Greatest degree of agreement was found with the conference statement that "homosexuality is incompatible with Christian teaching."

NEW YORK (AP) - A National Council of Churches delegation to El Salvador, which met with governmental officials including Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani, expressed gratitude for an "apparent new openness" toward churches.

But that appraisal was tempered with reports of some continuing harassment of church workers and human rights abuses.

CINCINNATI (AP) - Roman Catholic Archbishop Daniel Pilarczyk and other leaders of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops may meet this fall with members of a group of Roman Catholic homosexuals, according to a spokesman.

The conference is considering whether to grant the request of the homosexual group, Dignity-USA, for a meeting, Pilarczyk spokesman Ray George said. Pilarczyk of Cincinnati is president of U.S. bishops.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Therefore, prepare your minds for action; be self-controlled; set your hope fully on the grace to be given you when Jesus Christ is revealed. (1 Peter 1:13 NIV)

For almost a year, I have been planning to redecorate our most recently vacated bedroom. I didn't know what colors I wanted to use so I couldn't work up much enthusiasm for the job. But I finally found a bedspread that "beckoned to me"; I brought it home and put it on the bed, and that fired me up. I could just see what the room would look like when I got through with it, and I couldn't wait to get started.

But when the paint was bought and sitting in the corner, and repairs needed done, and the curtains needed shortened, and everything had to be moved out, and the strewn mess had to be tolerated, my enthusiasm waned. The vision turned into hard work, and I turned into a whiner. To top it all off, our house rule of: thou shalt not fix anything without messing up something else in the process... held true, and I was left with a carpet cleaning job, also.

However, the work finally got done, and the room is clean and beautiful, and the finished job is worth all the hard work and aggravation.

God's work on Earth is plagued by worker dropout. We Christians get preached to, pressured, and begged to take spiritual leadership roles in our churches, homes, and communities; but, unenthused, we resist. Then God calls us direct, and we have a spiritual awakening, a mountain top experience, a soaring of spirit! All of a sudden, we are fired up. Energized by visions of God's grandeur, we can't wait to jump in and get the job done.

But when the work is laid out in front of us, and other workers must be recruited, and past damages must be mended, and time must be made, and we must live with the inconvenience, our enthusiasm wanes. The vision turns into hard work, and we turn into "at-risk" whiners.

The plain truth is, good intentions are not enough in God's service. His glory is not brought to full effulgence by agreeing while "under the influence" to do his will. What adds the splendor is our faithfulness to carry through with the agreement, even when we don't feel like it.

"Sold-out" to our commitment, we can work knowing the completed job will be clean and holy, a brilliant flash of God's glory!

World of Biosphere II nearing completion for crew of eight

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

ORACLE, Ariz. (AP) — Three and a half years after breaking ground, one of the most daunting environmental undertakings is nearing its debut.

Call it Biosphere II. Its namesake, Biosphere I, is Earth itself. Within its 2 1/4 acres under glass are ecologically distinct areas like those of Earth: rain forest, savannah, ocean, marsh, desert, agriculture and human habitat.

Also inside will be sufficient plants and animals to allow the system to support itself and eight humans. It will recycle its air, water and wastes.

The $30 million private project is kicking into high gear on a 2,500-acre ranch northeast of Tucson, where glaziers worked through the Arizona heat to place robotically produced double-laminated glass into a geodesic frame of enameled steel to enclose the project.

A crop of wheat waves in the intensive-agricultural area. The biosphere's 25-foot-deep ocean sector is filled, complete with coral reef. Plants are taking root in its desert and marsh.

Biosphere II has been called a neo-Noah's Ark, a super greenhouse, a miniaturized global environment, a space colony prototype, a giant terrarium, a look into the 21st century, a planet-in-a-bottle.

Space Biospheres Ventures, financed by Texas entrepreneur Edward P. Bass, is developing it in an attempt to replicate Earth's conditions in a completely enclosed, distinct ecosystem that will support life, an experiment that will be both laboratory and prototype.

It will afford a chance to study ways of addressing pollution and mismanagement of natural resources; it also will serve as a possible prototype for living in space. The commercial and economic spinoffs could be tremendous.

Late this year, four male and four female "biospherians" will join 3,800 species of plants, bugs and other animals for a two-year stint behind its airlocks.

The biospherians will be selected around mid-September from among 14 candidates, all single and with the program for at least three years.

"Every candidate has been responsible for some major area of design or construction for Biosphere II, so they've already had to be working together under what I would assume to be greater amounts of pressure than they would expect they would find in Biosphere II overall," said spokeswoman and candidate Kathleen Dyhr.

There have been at least three short-term tests of people locked into a much smaller test module: one for three days, one for five days and one for three weeks. All have been preludes to the big show, testing systems and monitoring equipment and human reactions.

Scientists have telescoped conditions that exist naturally over hundreds or thousands of square miles. Species will be interdependent: plants providing oxygen and food for humans and animals, whose carbon dioxide and wastes will benefit the plants.

The ecological areas, known as biomes, include an Amazonian rain forest; a tropical savannah with grassy plants from South America, Australia and Africa; a 2 million-gallon ocean started from Pacific saltwater, accompanied by coral reef from the Caribbean; an Everglades marsh; and a Baja California-style high-humidity desert.

Inside the biomes, thousands of sensors will measure everything from microbes in the soil to light and carbon dioxide levels and even flow rates of water through pipes and the ocean salinity.

Temperatures may reach the mid-90s, but some of the air supply will be kept cool in the complex's basement, allowing for a mix and circulation without constant resort to refrigerated air, Ms. Dyhr said.

Temperatures will not change between biomes, but the air flow is designed to gain humidity as it moves toward the rain forest.

In the complex labs, gas chromatographs will measure ozone, carbon monoxide and other concentrations in the air; water from the ocean and the fresh- and salt-water marshes will be analyzed similarly.

The air will be recirculated, forced up from underground vents through soil bed reactors in the agriculture biome, aerating the soil. In turn, the air will be cleaned.

The biospherians will be pioneers in a new world, but that does not translate into primitive living conditions.

Each will live in a separate, two-level apartment with such gadgetry as computers, VCRs and phones. They will receive mail and newspapers electronically and will see current movies.

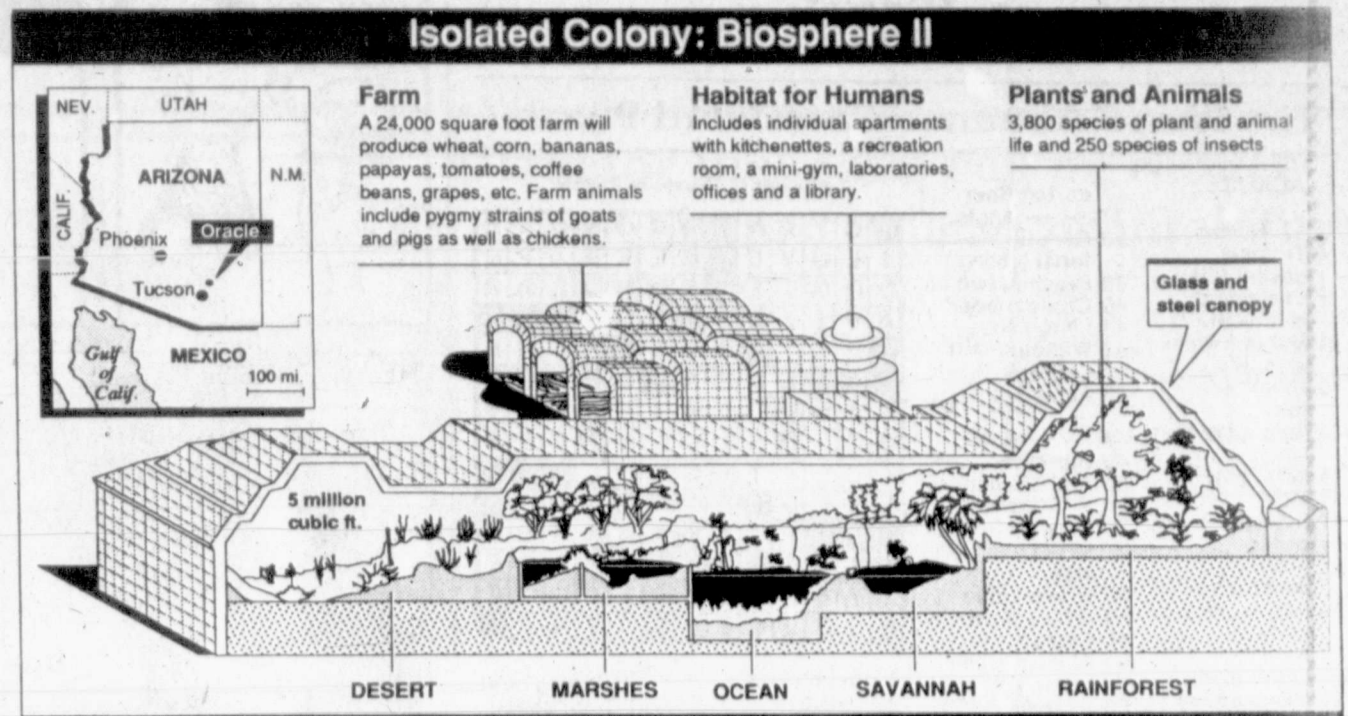

There will be two extra guest apartments; central kitchen and dining room; library and small observatory; a medical lab; offices with videophones; tissue culture lab; woodworking, electrical and machine shops; sewing room; recreation center with exercise facilities and meeting room.

The biospherians will raise more than 100 crops from rice to figs, barley to papayas, sorghum to teas. Rain forest coffee trees will provide for an occasional klatch.

Rice and an African fish called tilapia will be raised. The fish will eat algae and plants in its tanks, excreting waste that is digested and converted by microbes into nutrients for the rice and algae. The water will be recycled to feed other crops growing in soil.

The biospherians also will raise African pygmy goats, Vietnamese potbellied pigs and jungle-adapted chickens.

Should anyone become ill, not to worry.

"The medical lab will be as complete as on a space shuttle," from X-ray and EKG machines to an operating or examining room table, said Dr. Roy Walford, a gerontologist and pathology professor at UCLA, medical consultant for the project and a biospherian candidate.

The only probable reasons for a biospherian to leave would be a serious medical emergency, death of an immediate family member, or a major collapse of the environmental system.

So, how will eight people fare together in an enclosed world?

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

ORACLE, Ariz. (AP) — So, you say, what will happen when they lock four men and four women inside this fancy fish bowl?

How, indeed, are eight "biospherians" going to fare in the sealed compound with five adjacent but contrasting environments, called biomes, as well as an intensive agricultural complex.

How are they going to react as they shepherd 3,800 species of plants and animals that will provide food and air while all wastes are recycled within Biosphere II?

And in getting along with each other?

Exceedingly well, according to predictions. It's unlikely, all agree, that any of the eight crew members to be selected later this year in this $30 million private experiment, will suffer withdrawal or confrontation under stress.

"They're so highly motivated in the first place, I would not be surprised to see the whole thing go through without a hitch, personnel-wise," said Robert B. Bechtel, an environmental psychologist at the University of Arizona.

"My guess would be that they would probably have somewhat fewer problems than you would normally encounter in the classical isolation experience," said Mary Connors, a psychologist and division staff member at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center near Sunnyvale, Calif., who until recently was acting branch chief of its Crew Research and Space Human Factors Branch. "They just have more options."

The biospherians will be physically separated from the outside world, or Biosphere I, but they will not be isolated, said John Rummel, a life sciences physician at NASA. Nor are they likely to suffer sensory deprivation or claustrophobia in the main compound, which measures 2 1/4 acres.

They'll have video teleconferencing and worldwide phone contact, television, VCRs and computers in their plush apartment complex and office-labs area.

And they will have unusual options if they want to get away from each other. The biospherians will be able to stargaze from their own rain forest or ocean beach.

Experiments in long-term situations where small groups of people live in harsh climatic or environmental extremes, such as in the Antarctica or underwater, usually are viewed in terms of "isolation, confinement, deprivation and risk," said Connors.

But crew members will be allowed to leave through air locks if health or family emergencies necessitate, eliminating the sense of risk, she said.

Roy Walford, a pathologist, nutrition specialist and the only physician seeking one of the eight slots, says he thinks the biggest problem might be overwork.

A community and rural health family practitioner associated with the University of Arizona who has developed a close relationship with the candidates will watch from the outside and provide an informal yet objective assessment.

Walford and Biosphere spokeswoman Kathleen Dyhr, also hoping to make the crew, said each candidate has worked on the project for at least three years.

Ms. Dyhr said the selection process uses no psychological testing. Rather, such factors as ability to work together, problem-solving skills, willingness to accept other views and professionalism are keys.

Will there be romance? Will the crew be celibate? Views range from "who cares" to unlikely to probable.

"I would suspect that they would get into a familial relationship rather than a couples relationship ... more like siblings act," Connors said.

Bechtel said, "How could you avoid it? But on the other hand, they're in a fish bowl."

"Let's just put it this way," Dyhr said. "There's nothing really that a corporation can do about what their employees do after 5 o'clock. We live in a free country and for the most part people do whatever they want to do."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A pleasant surprise may be in store for you today pertaining to a situation about which you've been rather negative. Your fears could turn out to be merely misdirected imagination. Major changes are ahead for Leo in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The recipe for success today calls for equal parts of imagination and elbow grease. After you have formulated your plans, turn the venture over to your muscles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There's a possibility you might start out with rather conservative objectives today, but then suddenly something grander and more promising might peak over the horizon to cause you to switch targets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you should have two powerful attributes going for you. They are your optimism and your practicality which you will be able to mold into an effective force for something productive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A situation over which you have small influence can still be utilized to your advantage today. Instead of trying to call the shots, be extra supportive of the one who does.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your greatest benefits today are likely to come from involvements you have with friends with whom you share a mutual interest. However, the gains you derive will not be of a material nature.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Don't be afraid to elevate your sights a bit at this time where your ambitious aims are concerned. Conditions are very favorable for pulling off something big.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Spare no efforts today in trying to create good will with people with whom you have commercial arrangements pending. The proper type of PR investments will yield dividends.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Conditions in general are a trifle unusual today and at first glance it might appear you are luckier for another than you are for yourself. In the final analysis, the reverse may be true.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You might have a chance today to take a relatively small opportunity and transform it into something meaningful. However, it won't be accomplished unaided.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There could be a market today for something you have or do that does not provide your primary source of income. Don't be greedy, but on the other hand, don't give away the store for free.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Lady Luck will be a willing ally today in developments where you are expending your best efforts. Don't let difficult endeavors intimidate you. Roll up your sleeves and give it your all.

CORN
Spider mites in corn are rapidly increasing. Some fields have reached the economic threshold and are being treated. In other fields the mite infestations are practically nonexistent. Stressed corn most often has the heaviest infestations. Check individual fields to determine the need for treatment.

Dr. Tom Archer has developed a table to determine the economic injury level for Bank's grass mite in corn. Both percent leaves infested and percent leaf area damaged have to be determined.

Any size mite colony represents an infested leaf. Determine number of leaves infested and divide by total leaves per plant to determine percent leaves infested. On the table, cross reference between control cost per acre and estimated market value per acre. If the percent infested leaves that you determined exceeds the first number, then continue to next step, which is to determine percent leaves are damaged.

On each infested leaf, estimate percent of total leaf area showing damage. Total the percent leaves are damaged on each plant and divide by number of leaves in order to determine the percent leaf area damaged on that plant. This needs to be done at several locations throughout the field. If the overall leaf area damage exceeds the second number that you previously cross-referenced, a miticide application is justified.

Copies of this table are available in the Gray County Extension Office.

Above average temperatures have contributed to an earlier second flight of southwestern corn borer moths. Moth emergence has been observed in most corn growing areas on the South Plains. Second generation southwestern corn borer eggs should soon be evident on area corn.

TEST SOILS NOW FOR WHEAT

Gray County farmers should take time in the next few weeks to collect soil samples from those fields which will be planted to wheat this fall. We are seeing a lot of dryland fields respond to fertilizer, so I certainly believe a soil test for $10 is a good investment.

We have seen excellent yield results on some dryland fields which have been fertilized. Nitrogen can be the limiting factor on many dryland wheat fields. Having an adequate supply of nitrogen in soil is like money in the bank. When moisture conditions are good, the plant can take advantage and really respond to the available moisture supply.

Small grains which are grazed naturally require more fertilizer than ungrazed grain because of nutrients removed by grazing. About 30 to 40 pounds of nitrogen are removed in forages grazed by stocker cattle for each 100 pounds of beef produced per acre. This nitrogen, less some recycling, must be replaced to provide adequate nutrition for grain production after livestock are removed.

A soil test is still the best way to determine fertilizer needs. How much of given nutrients to apply depends on the level of that nutrient in the soil, residue levels, cropping history, available moisture, grazing practices and general management.

A general "rule of thumb" says that wheat requires about 2 pounds of nitrogen per bushel of grain produced. Therefore, a 30 bushel yield would remove about 60 pounds of available nitrogen per acre. A soil test will determine the amount of residual nitrate-nitrogen in the soil and reduce nitrogen recommendations by that amount.

Producers who have not yet made a final decision to plant wheat this fall, but wish to leave the door open to plant sorghum or corn next spring, can submit a soil sample now and request fertilizer recommendations for all cropping alternatives. Resulting fertilizer recommendations then can be used to assist each person in making cropping decisions.

Extension Service Soil Testing Laboratories at Lubbock are ready to assist wheat producers in making these economically important decisions.

Automated laboratory procedures and computerized integration and reporting of soil test results have improved speed and precision. Soil test recommendations will be no better than the quality of the soil sample analyzed; therefore, it is important to collect soil samples which are truly representative of the field being tested.

To take a soil sample, remove the top inch and collect soil samples to a depth of 6 inches. Soil sample bags and detailed instructions for sample collection are available at the County Extension Office.

Heat puts flame out in henhouse

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - The heat is on in the henhouse, but the flame is out.

Chickens don't like to mate in high temperatures, when they also become sluggish eaters, says Frank Jones, a poultry expert at North Carolina State University.

That means layers aren't laying as often as they do in lower temperatures and the birds that are supposed to gorge for slaughter are taking their time about it, said Jones and Holly Farms spokesman Gordon Miller.

"They're subject to a lot of the same stresses we are as humans," Jones said. "That means there will be less mating. They don't really feel like eating."

Turkeys react the same way to summer heat, which has been in the 90s in North Carolina, the nation's top turkey producer and the No. 4 chicken producer.

The state is expected to sell more than $1.5 billion worth of poultry this year.

Miller said consumers may end up getting burned. If the heat continues, fewer birds could be on the market in time for Thanksgiving and Christmas and fewer eggs could drive up prices.

Perdue Farms Inc. spokesman Steve McCauley doesn't believe that higher prices are a given. He said that since the heat is an annual summer ailment, most growers are prepared.

"Typically, if a flock is affected, it's because something went wrong - fans broke, alarms didn't work," McCauley said.

Hereford winners

Two Miami youths took honors recently at Texas Junior Hereford Association events held at the West Texas Fairgrounds in Abilene. In top photo, Christi Breeding, right, of Miami shows the grand champion heifer, B&C Ms Domineer 9571, during the Texas Junior Hereford Classic. With her are Lucinda Pullen, left, 1989-90 Texas Hereford Queen of Rockwall, and Joel Cowley, judge, from Texas A&M University. Christi also returned to the winner's circle with the reserve champion prospect steer, which weighed 865 pounds and was the runnerup in the heavyweight class. In bottom photo, Chad Breeding, center, was on the winning senior team of the livestock judging contest at the Texas Junior Hereford Association Field Day, held in conjunction with the Classic. With him are his team members, Jeff Bradenburger of Eden, left, and Scott Myers of Lakeview. Hosting this year's event were the West Texas, Rolling Plains, National Anxiety 4th and Concho Hereford Associations. B&C Cattle Co. of Miami was one of the companies featuring consignments for the Texas Hereford Association Futurity Heifer Sale.

Insect Scout Clinic scheduled

PANHANDLE - An Insect Scout Clinic will be held beginning at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday in Panhandle at the Square House Museum Educational Building.

Information concerning identification of insects, proper scouting techniques and economic thresholds will be discussed, according to Danny Nusser, Carson County Extension agent.

Sorghum, corn and wheat pests will be emphasized. Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension entomologist, will conduct the training.

Nusser said anyone interested in attending this meeting is welcome regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Italy leading kiwifruit producer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Kiwifruit is a native of New Zealand and is named after the country's national bird, the flightless kiwi.

But a trade report by the Agriculture Department says Italy is expected to become the world's leading producer of kiwifruit.

Italian production was 210,000 metric tons in 1989, up 75 percent in just one year, said the report by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service.

That has caused a significant decline in prices, despite rising domestic consumption.

Exports have increased sharply, too, the report said. Other European Community countries are major buyers, led by West Germany.

Tractor fuel costs can be reduced to help improve farm profitability

Reducing farm tractor fuel costs is an often overlooked aspect of increasing profitability.

"Regardless of farm size, reducing tractor fuel consumption can show significant returns relatively quickly," said Ken Crossman, salesman of Crossman Implement Co. in Pampa.

According to Crossman, there are several ways to reduce tractor fuel consumption.

"Implement a farming system that reduces the number of tillage or seedbed preparation trips," Crossman suggested. "Depending on the field operation, each trip requires one-half to one gallon of fuel per acre."

"Also, make sure the tractor is matched to the job or implement," he added. "An oversized, or undersized, tractor will waste fuel."

Combining operations and operating the tractor at full load enhances fuel efficiency, he said.

"One-half gallon or more of fuel per acre can be saved because a tractor is more efficient when operating at full load," Crossman noted. "Two trips over the same acres with a partial load requires considerably more fuel than one trip fully loaded by combining two field operations." Crossman also recommended shifting to a higher gear and "throttling" the engine back when pulling light loads.

"The average tractor requires one-third more fuel when pulling a light load with the throttle wide open than it does when shifted up a gear or two and the engine speed slowed," he said. "But be careful not to overload the tractor with a reduced engine speed and higher gear."

Another fuel-saving tip is to select the proper tire size and match tractor ballast for proper wheel slippage.

"Ideally, 10 to 15 percent wheel slippage provides for the best combination of maximum pulling power at the least fuel usage," he said. "Excessive slippage can waste as much as two gallons of fuel per acre."

Finally, Crossman suggested, keep the tractor in top running condition.

"Follow a strict maintenance schedule and have the dealer give the tractor a periodic service and performance check," he said. "A poor running tractor can waste up to 25 percent of the fuel it's using."

Names in the news

ASBURY PARK, N.J. (AP) - It may take a while to know if Bruce Springsteen's new son was "Born to Run," but he certainly was "Born in the U.S.A."

Patti Scialfa, the rocker's girlfriend and a backup singer in his E Street Band, delivered the 7-pound, 9-ounce boy at a California hospital, Barry Slott, a lawyer for The Boss, said. The boy is Springsteen's first child.

Slott said the child was born sometime since Tuesday, but he did not know the boy's name or the hospital.

Springsteen, 40, and Scialfa, 38, were linked romantically after she joined his E Street Band as a backup singer in 1984. Like Springsteen, Scialfa is a New Jersey native.

Springsteen married model-actress Julianne Phillips in 1985. They divorced in 1989.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Hard-hitting reporter Sarah McClendon, who has covered every president since Franklin Roosevelt, says she's not letting up now that she's turned 80.

"I'm not quitting because I have a lot of questions I want to ask George Bush," she said. The Tyler, Texas, native got congratulations from President Bush and a host of other Washington figures Thursday at a birthday party.

In her nearly 50 years of reporting from Washington, Ms. McClendon has become well known for asking presidents tough questions.

She said her favorite president was fellow Texan Lyndon Johnson, even though he once prodded four newspapers to cancel her service.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Director Francis Ford Coppola, working on The Godfather, Part III, also is apparently working his way out of his money problems.

He agreed to settle a debt dispute with a developer and asked a judge to dismiss his personal bankruptcy case and the bankruptcy filing of one of his companies, the Los Angeles Times reported, citing court papers.

As part of the settlement of an $8 million debt, Coppola, who hopes to complete The Godfather, Part III in time for Christmas release, is to make a payment in August to Canadian real estate magnate Jack Singer and more payments through 1992.

Robert Chapman, Singer's lawyer, said aspects of the settlement are still being negotiated.

In January, Coppola filed for protection from creditors for himself and his Zoetrope Productions.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - For Matthew Broderick, working with Marlon Brando was the highlight of filming The Freshman.

"He's a role model for everybody in the business," Broderick said. "No matter who they think is their role model, that person probably had Brando as a role model. All roads lead to Brando."

Broderick, 28, stars in the film as a student who gets hustled out of his possessions as soon as he arrives in New York to attend film school.

The chase for the thief leads to a meeting with Brando's character - a shady guy who bears an uncanny resemblance to a certain Don Corleone of The Godfather.

Broderick's credits include the hit Ferris Bueller's Day Off, WarGames and the Oscar-winning Glory.

NEW YORK (AP) - Entertainer Ben Vereen, who blamed the 1987 death of his daughter in an auto accident for pushing him into using drugs, admits now he had been a drug abuser since the 1960s.

"Sometimes what people really need is a good hug, so they know they are loved. We didn't understand love. Instead, we bought into drugs," Vereen said in this week's issue of Parade.

Vereen said his drug use became worse after his daughter Naja was killed, but another daughter, Malika, forced him to see what the drugs were doing to him, and he wound up in a treatment center.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Carlos Santana, the rock singer-guitarist known for the song "Black Magic Woman," says a higher power is pointing him South.

"Lately, I've pretty much been getting a fax message from inside my soul that I should go South. The Lord has put my mind in places South - South Africa, South America, the southern United States," he said.

"That's where people's hearts seem to be the hardest. The Lord wants me to take my message of peace and harmony there. I'm going where things most need to be plowed."

During his 20-year career, he has recorded 26 albums and has had hit songs such as "Evil Ways." His latest album, Spirits Dancing in the Flesh, contains references to spirituality and the emotions of love, joy and peace.

Attorney General's Office continues crackdown on porno in the Valley

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

PHARR (AP) - The state of Texas now owns about $75,000 worth of allegedly obscene materials, including explicit magazines such as Nazi Lust and an assortment of rubbery sexual devices.

They were officially forfeited to the state as part of the Texas Attorney General's office's yearlong participation in a crackdown on sexually oriented businesses in the city of Pharr.

Officials seized the items in raids last year at the Dolar Video store in Pharr. They were finally forfeited to the state in a municipal court hearing Thursday morning.

Last week, the adult film Femmes on Fire had just begun Thursday afternoon when a raid led by Assistant Attorney General Al Alvarez managed to close the Texas Theater in downtown Pharr - at least for the day.

Alvarez, based in McAllen, said the city asked the state for assistance in fighting businesses he said violate "community standards" of obscenity.

City officials were concerned, Alvarez said, about the type of businesses moving into the Lower Rio Grande Valley city, apparently because of its prominent location at the intersection of U.S. 281 and U.S. 83.

Alvarez also succeeded in closing three massage parlors in Pharr earlier this year. He said that discouraged a fourth parlor from opening in the city.

One parlor owner pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor of operating the business without a license required under the state Massage Therapists and Establishments Act. Another parlor owner has a trial pending.

Alvarez said the state does not normally get involved in fighting sexually oriented businesses, but is authorized to help cities enforce laws.

Lt. Jesse Medina, with the Pharr Police Department, said he asked the attorney general's office to get involved because his department does not have enough officers for vice operations.

"In fact, I think we're a small city with big city problems," Medina said. "The attorney general's office has taken the bull by the horns and helped us deal with this problem."

Pharr has a population of about 25,000.

The attorney general's office originally became involved with the Dolar Video case last year under state consumer protection and food and drug statutes after learning it was selling an illegal chemical, known as poppers, which is sniffed to produce a brief high.

During raids to seize the chemical, isobutyl nitrate, officers observed the magazines, videos and sexual devices. They obtained warrants to seize them as allegedly obscene.

Alvarez said the state probably will burn the magazines and shred the inflatable, life-size dolls, artificial sexual organs and other devices.

Officials must use guidelines set by the U.S. Supreme Court that require obscenity to be measured by community standards. Some of the materials seized in Pharr, might not be considered obscene in larger cities, Alvarez said.

"In terms of Pharr, and it's probably representative of the Valley, this material's going to be found obscene," Alvarez said.

Officers went into the theater Thursday afternoon with a warrant to seize two specific items: the film Femmes on Fire and a magazine titled Deep and Dark. Medina said after officers take inventory of the other titles at the theater, he planned to obtain warrants to seize every other video and magazine there.

Second quarter GNP up only 1.2 percent, government reports

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. economy, continuing to skirt a recession, posted weak growth at an annual rate of just 1.2 percent from April through June, the government reported Friday.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product, the country's total output of goods and services, was propped up entirely in the second quarter by a big buildup in business inventories.

Other major components of the economy, from consumer spending to business investment and housing construction, suffered declines during the quarter.

The 1.2 percent GNP increase in the second quarter followed a revised 1.7 percent increase in the first quarter and a barely discernible 0.3 percent advance in the October-December period last year.

This string of weak quarterly growth rates is raising concerns over whether the current economic expansion, which has lasted a peacetime record of almost eight years, is in danger of toppling into a recession.

Friday's report offered little comfort on that score, given the fact that the only strength came in the restocking of store shelves and backlogs.

In the face of falling consumer demand, those higher inventories could force production cutbacks and job layoffs in the second half of the year, one of the classic ways a recession begins.

In one encouraging sign, inflation slowed markedly in the second quarter, with a GNP price measure dropping to an annual rate of increase of 3.9 percent, down from a 6.6 percent rate in the first three months of the year. One-half of the improvement came from a slowing in food prices.

The Bush administration is counting on the Federal Reserve to come to the economy's rescue by switching its attention from fighting inflation to worrying more about keeping the recovery alive by lowering interest rates.

In addition to reporting on weak economic growth in the just completed second quarter, the government sharply revised down its estimates of past growth.

It reduced the growth estimate for every quarter in 1989 and trimmed growth for the entire year to an annual rate of 2.5 percent, down from an earlier forecast of 3 percent.

The revision meant that the U.S. economy in 1989 grew at its slowest pace since an actual decline of 2.5 percent in the recession year of 1985.

The government blamed the big downward revisions on mistakes that overestimated wages and salaries in 1989 by $57.9 billion.

Faced with the weaker growth in downward revisions in past growth estimates, the Bush administration was forced to lower its own economic projections for this year and dramatically boost its estimate of the federal budget deficit for 1991.

The need to trim the deficit to $64 billion from a projected $169 billion was a major factor forcing President Bush's recent reversal on tax increases.

The administration is now projecting the economy will grow at an annual rate of 2 percent this year, but to meet even this lowered expectation will require growth in the second half to average 2.9 percent, a pace far higher than most private economists believe is possible.
