Authorities arrest man's wife

Shooting victim's spouse to return to Midland on attempted murder charge

■ Investigation linked Nancy Malkiewicz with attempted murder of her husband, reports say.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The wife of a shooting victim was arrested late Friday evening just outside of Houston and charged with attempted murder.

According to Midland sheriff's reports, Nancy Malkiewicz, 40, was linked to the shooting of Midland resident Stanley W. Malkiewizc. He was shot multiple times Thursday night while standing in the driveway of his residence at 6008 Farm to Market Road. Malkiewizc remained in "extremely critical condition" at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center late Saturday night.

Sheriff's reports said an investigation linked Ms. Malkiewizc with the attempted murder. "She and her husband bought the house in Midland a couple of months ago, and she had gone to Houston to register the kids in school," Painter said.

The Malkiewicz' two daughters, a junior and senior in high school, elected to finish out their school years in Houston, even though their father, a geologist, transferred to Midland with EXXON two months ago.

On Friday, evidence establishing probable cause linking Ms. Malkiewizc with attempted murder was forwarded to the Montgomery County Sheriff's Department, and a warrant was issued by Judge Keith Jobe. The Midland Sheriff's Department was assisted by the Midland County district attorney's office in the complaint.

"We still don't have a motive," said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter late Saturday night. "The victim didn't have any knowledge of any trouble (with his wife)," Painter said.

Malkiewicz was reported to have exchanged a few words with an unknown man about 9 p.m. Thursday night when the man opened fire with a small caliber weapon. The suspect is described as awhite male, 25-30, 150-160 pounds with short black hair and a black moustache. He reportedly fled the scene in a dark colored mid-sized vehicle.

Malkiewicz sustained damage to internal organs and had a right kidney removed. His family has requested that

County cracks down; jury duty no-shows face steep fines, jail

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

No-show jurors in Midland County could be facing a stiff fine or even jail time if they fail to appear when they are summoned for service, according to 318th District Court Judge Dean Rucker.

"We have noticed more and more people in greater numbers are not showing up and aren't sending their cards in," Rucker said.

Beginning immediately, if a county resident has been summoned for jury duty, that person had better make plans to show up, the judge said.

Otherwise, persons will be brought before the judge by the sheriff and may be held in contempt of court and fined as much as $1,000 for failing to appear for jury duty.

'We have noticed more and more people in greater numbers are not showing up and aren't sending their cards in.'

— Judge Dean Rucker, 318th District Court

In recent months, the number of people who have failed to appear for jury service in Midland County has dramatically increased, Rucker said.

This has caused county officials to consider stronger measures to ensure compliance with the jury summons,

"It has become increasingly difficult to estimate the number of persons who will appear for a jury week," said District Clerk Vivian Wood. "Just this month, I sent out summonses to 400 people and 111 of them failed to show up."

Rucker said that since the first of the year, the no-show rate has been as high as 39 percent of those summoned for jury duty.

Judge Jody Gilles of the 142nd District Court said it isn't fair for the administration of justice to fall upon the shoul-

City plan strives to meet federal drainage regulations

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A near-completed master drainage plan for the city will propose a course of action to comply with imminent federal regulations, suggest and prioritize improvements to deal with existing problems and set directives to prevent future drainage mistakes.

"As the city grows we want to make sure we have a master drainage plan, similar to the city's comprehensive plan in that it's a guiding document for all future development so we don't perpetuate existing problems and don't create additional problems," Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler said.

The engineering firm of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper was commissioned by the city about three years ago to create the drainage plan. The cost to date is about $725,000; sophisticated modeling and hydrology studies have contributed to that expense, officials said.

The city did not have a master drainage plan in place previously. The main driving force to develop a plan was federal environmental mandates that Midland inevitably will be required to obey.

"When the city reaches a population of 100,000, we'll fall under federal guidelines which will require us to account for all storm water runoff," Hackler said. "We have to have a plan in place when we hit that mark."

Midland is expected to reach that population within five years; some officials estimated that may occur by 1997.

Whenever it happens, the city must deal with the water runoff caused by rain hitting oil- and gas- dotted roadways. The

Without reserve

Deputies provide 10 years of invaluable service

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

For 10 years, the men and women of the Midland County Reserve Deputies have patrolled the county, offering their expert assistance while putting their lives on the line.

All of this and more at no cost to the taxpayers.

"They're a tremendous asset to us," said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter. "They provide a tremendous savings to us by adding extra personnel on the street or where we need them at a critical point and without the expense to taxpayers."

Reserve Commander Bill Strickland has been a reserve deputy since the group's inception. He has been the commander since that time as well.

There are presently 23 reserve officers who donate their time. Of those, three are women. The reserve officers come from all walks of life, Strickland said.

He said the reserves started working in the jail in communications and from there have branched out to work in all phases of the sheriff's office.

"It is a resource that we can draw on that is strictly volunteer. They provide their own time and they can work with us in every facet of the sheriff's office," Painter said.

The reserves work on everything from patrol to serving warrants. Last week, reserve officers assisted the constable's office in serving warrants.

"We're available to assist any law-enforcement agency in the county and we have even helped in Glasscock and Martin counties," Strickland said.

The reserves help in a variety of ways. One reserve serves as a bailiff in district court one day each week, and others help with teen court.

"We are available most of the time, days, nights or weekends ... there isn't much in the sheriff's office that we don't do," Strickland said. "When they put us on the street in a patrol car, we can do everything that a deputy can."

British U.N. peacekeepers load gear on a truck, Saturday on their way to U.N. Headquarters in Zagreb, Croatia. Nearly a hundred British peacekeepers left Gorazde ending their mission in the last U.N. "safe zone."

Croatia, Serbs begin truce on shaky ground

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — Just hours into a truce with rebel Serbs, Croatia's president warned Saturday that he was willing to send his troops back to war to regain the last scrap of Serb-held land.

"I would like it to happen by peaceful means," Franjo Tudjman said. "But if that proves impossible, there would be ... new tombs."

The land, known as eastern Slavonia, lies along the border with Serbia, and is the only remaining Serb holding in Croatia after this month's stunning government offensive.

The two sides signed a truce for the region Friday, and it went into effect at noon Saturday. It was meant to end skirmishes and reduce tensions that have persisted since Croatia recaptured most of the land the Serb rebels had taken in 1991.

U.N. officials said the truce appeared to be holding.

But chances of a lasting peace in eastern Slavonia were shaky. The region was predominantly Croat until 1991, when it was captured by the Serbs. The Serb majority now favors joining Serbia.

Rebel official Milan Milanovic said Friday that the Serbs would accept the temporary status of a U.N. administered zone only if they could hold a referendum on whether to join Serbia.

Croatia is not likely to agree to that, and Tudjman said he was ready for more war to regain eastern Slavonia.

"What has remained in Serb hands, we shall liberate in the coming months, through negotiations or through force," he said aboard a train to Knin, the former rebel stronghold which fell to the government three weeks ago.

He was greeted in Knin by thousands of people. He asked then what he could do for them, and they screamed: "Vukovar, Vukovar," a town in eastern Slavonia held by the Serbs.

"Of course Vukovar," Tudjman said. "If needed, by military force."

But he indicated an invasion was not imminent. "We will give it some thought for three to four months before we move."

The rebels seized a third of Croatia in a 1991 rebellion after Croatia declared independence from Serb-led Yugoslavia.

They had the backing of the powerful Yugoslav army then, but Yugoslavia, eager for the lifting of international sanctions imposed for fomenting war, did not intervene during the recent Croatian army offensive.

But eastern Slavonia borders on Serbia, and if Croatia tries to take it by force, the Yugoslav army may not sit that one out.

Yugoslavia sent long columns of tanks toward the region this month in an apparent warning to Croatia not to attack. It did not, and the tanks did not cross the border.

Fear of volcano outweighs that of tropical storm

ST. PETER'S, Montserrat (AP) — Dorothy White has no doubts God can save Montserrat from the wrath of Tropical Storm Iris looming 140 miles to the southeast. She's less sure when it comes to the volcano smoking eight miles away in the same direction.

White, 76 and blind, first felt the rumblings of the Soufriere Hills 59 years ago, when she was only 16. For the last month, she has relived her youthful nightmare.

"My innards haven't stopped shaking since it started," she said, holding her left side as if to steady herself. "When I was a young girl it scared me with its rumbling, but it wasn't ready to explode. Now it's ready."

The volcano has not had a full-scale eruption in thousands of years, but it began spewing steam and ash July 18. Authorities evacuated the southern half of the island this week after the volcano blew its third vent, shooting steam and ash 7,000 feet into the sky and plunging the capital, Plymouth, into darkness for 25 minutes.

White, who was evacuated from a Plymouth nursing home, sat Saturday on the edge of a military cot in St. Peter's School, the temporary home she shares with 33 other elderly people.

She was quietly singing a hymn to herself.

"I trust in the Lord," she said. "I know he's going to keep us from the troubles of that storm. What I'm afraid of is the volcano."

Scientists say a lack of sulfur dioxide in gas samples from the volcano indicate pressure may be building. They warn it could erupt at any time.

On Saturday, Gov. Frank Savage reported its emissions had increased, and a swarm of at least 31 minor earthquakes indicated increased activity.

Some 6,000 people, two-thirds of this British colony's population, were evacuated this week from southern Montserrat, moving to the northern part of the island, which is just 11 miles long and seven miles wide.

In efforts to calm the fears of a population crowded into homes, schools and churches in the north, Chief Minister Reuben Meade reminded them that no one has died in a Caribbean volcanic eruption since 1902.

He was referring to the eruption of Mt. Pele, which buried St. Pierre, then the capital of Martinique, and killed all 30,000 people there — except for a prisoner confined to a dungeon. Politicians had ignored scientists' warnings to evacuate.

"The probability of dying from volcanic activity in Montserrat is significantly less than being shot in New York City," Meade said.

More than 1,500 people fled the island by airplane this week. Some 7,000 remained, and they tried to make the best of their condition.

At Salem village, a huge party spilled out of Sam's Bar onto the street and continued until dawn Saturday, with people rocking to soca, calypso and reggae music.

Later, workers erected a huge tent, preparing for a special evangelical service. Near a golf course, a couple married Saturday posed for photographs under the brilliant scarlet blossoms of flamboyant trees.

Five years of anarchy wear down streets of Kinshasa

By Beth Duff-Brown
Associated Press

'Zaire doesn't work anymore. the money doesn't have any value. The ministers aren't paid. It's the worst of the worst right now.'
— Gov. Bernardin Mungul-Diaka

KINSHASA, Zaire — There's not one garbage truck to pick up the trash of Kinshasa's 6 million people. Most of them can no longer afford a bottle of beer. Even the governor hasn't been paid in six months.

"I'm embarrassed and miserable to be the governor of Kinshasa. I don't even have one garbage truck. Not one," said Gov. Bernardin Mungul-Diaka, throwing up his hands in disgust.

Japan donated 30 garbage trucks to clean up the streets of Kinshasa, one of the most volatile and vibrant cities in Central Africa. The trucks disappeared into Zaire's whirlpool of corruption, reportedly ending up with friends of dictator Mobutu Sese Seko.

Mungul-Diaka just shrugged when asked where they were.

"Zaire doesn't work anymore. The money doesn't have any value. The ministers aren't paid. It's the worst of the worst right now," said the governor, a former political prisoner who later was Mobutu's prime minister for four weeks.

ZAIRE IS well into its fifth year of anarchy, since Mobutu reneged on an April 1990 promise to hand over control to an elected government. Western donors cut off aid after rioting by unpaid soldiers in 1991 killed hundreds of people.

The United States pulled out its ambassador two years ago, not long after the French ambassador was shot dead during riots.

And the interim legislature, the High Council of the Republic, just announced general elections would be postponed yet another two years.

Though some people in power hold great hope for the latest in a string of prime ministers, reform-minded Leon Kengo wa Dondo, plenty of Kinshasans are fed up with all politicians, right and left.

"Those political men," snorts Armand Diheka, a 25-year-old pharmacy clerk. "We're sacrificed just like that."

Diheka, trained as a computer programmer, proudly pulls out his crumpled university diploma from behind the counter at the Grace of God Pharmacy, where he works for $35 a month.

THAT'S NOT a bad salary, more than most doctors and teachers earn working for the government. But it's still not enough to splurge on a Primus beer, which runs about $1 a bottle.

That same dollar will buy 5,000 to 6,000 zaires, the inflation-ravaged currency bearing Mobutu's picture. But don't bother — many Zaireans, from taxi drivers to hotel keepers, will accept only dollars.

"We've changed governments again and again and nothing has gotten better," said Rose Mapele, 35. She has been selling rice, cup by cup, year after year, at one of Kinshasa's hundreds of unnamed street markets sandwiched between piles of garbage and crumbling buildings.

"The country must be led by someone who is honest and must have a heart for the people," she said.

Mobutu has ruled his 42 million people with terror and ethnic patronage since 1965, five years after Zaire gained independence from Belgium.

While the rest of the country struggles, the reclusive former general lives in splendor in a palace in Gbadolite, more than 600 miles east of Kinshasa.

ONCE AMONG the richest men in the world — his land oozes diamonds and gold, copper and cobalt — Mobutu's financial reserves are said to be slipping as surely as his control over Zaire.

Yet his archenemy, ousted Prime Minister Etienne Tshisekedi, was only able to attract about 5,000 supporters to a recent rally of his Union for Democracy and Social Progress, the largest mainstream opposition group.

Most Kinshasans have better things to worry about than political meetings.

They must bring their own medicine to the grimy central hospital. Rats scurry from burning debris on the sun-scorched streets, where trucks plunge into gaping potholes. Soldiers lurk on nearly every corner, waiting to shake them down for money or favors.

And most Kinshasans got the message when 12 opposition supporters were killed by anti-terrorist police during a march to the People's Palace several weeks ago.

"In a context of general cynicism and daily desperate struggle for survival, who wants to really run big risks on behalf of something that's highly uncertain?" said Crawford Young, professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin-Madison and an expert on Zaire.

"THE CAPACITY to mobilize people around the expectation that you really have something that would miraculously transform the horrible situation that they face — I think that that kind of millennial hope of 1960 is just gone."

While Mungul-Diaka, the Kinshasa governor, laments his city of lost hope, he lives in incongruous splendor in a villa overlooking Kinshasa. Women in identical robes imprinted with his visage greeted a foreign journalist and led the way to a cavernous salon with Persian carpets and plump couches.

THOUGH IMPRISONED by Mobutu from 1972 to 1975 for his opposition activities and then exile, he now preaches "cohabitation" between all political persuasions and calls for immediate elections.

"If we leave this country alone for another 24 months ... it'll be too late. It'll be like another Rwanda."

Down the hill from the governor's mansion is the black-market district of Matonge, where stacks of zaires are traded at rates that fluctuate by the hour.

The country's trademark music of high-pitched, rapid-fire guitars radiates from some of the only well-stocked storefronts in the city.

Couples, who can't afford to do much else, take the time to linger and flirt.

But not Diheka, the pharmacy clerk, who says with embarrassment that he still lives with his parents.

"To have a wife on top of it all? It's just too expensive."

U.S. businesses press for lifting of Cuba embargo

N.Y. Times News Service

A growing number of American businesses have for the first time begun pressing Washington to reconsider the trade embargo against Cuba, complaining that it forces them to stand by as foreign competitors lock up an attractive emerging market.

A handful of corporate executives have spoken out publicly against the embargo in recent months, and others have testified before Congress. But most of the pressure has come in private meetings with Clinton administration officials.

The emergence of a fledgling private-sector lobby against the Cuban embargo adds an influential new element to a debate in which economic interests have taken a back seat to political ideology.

"Pressure is growing," a Clinton administration official said, speaking on the condition of anonymity. "Businessmen are expressing interest in a transition in Cuba and complaining that all the deals down there are being cut by foreign competitors. There's a very high degree of business interest in Cuba."

So far, Clinton administration officials have responded only by restating long-held positions, as when Alexander Watson, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, recently came under questioning on Cuba after giving a pep talk on hemispheric trade to an audience of corporate executives at the State Department.

"The Europeans and the Asians are knocking on the door in Latin America," Watson warned. "The game is on and we can compete effectively, but it will be a big mistake if we leave the game to others."

Eric Williams, managing director for Latin American sales for Federal Express, asked, "Do your comments on free trade apply to Cuba?"

"No, no," Watson said. "That simply can't be, not for now."

John D. Tessier, a Connecticut consultant who specializes in Latin America, waded in. "Isn't there some incongruity on our policy toward the Communist world?" he asked. "Why do we have one policy toward North Korea, another for Vietnam, another for China, but complete coldness toward Cuba?"

"Cuba is a special case," Watson responded. "This administration will maintain the embargo until major democratic changes take place in Cuba. Then, and only then, will the United States respond with carefully calibrated steps. And that's where we are."

Perhaps the most outspoken critic of the embargo among corporate executives has been Dwayne O. Andreas, chairman of Archer Daniels Midland, the giant grain processor in Decatur, Ill.

"Our embargo has been a total failure for 30 years," Andreas said in a June interview with CNN. "We ought to have all the Americans in Cuba doing all the business they can. It's time for a change."

Jose Cardenas, a spokesman for the Cuban-American National Foundation, the powerful anti-Castro lobby, acknowledged that business interest in Cuba had increased. "There are always a few people who are willing to make a buck — and the moral ramifications be damned," he said.

Chance of thunderstorms today

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a slight chance of afternoon thundershowers, a high in the lower 90s and southeast winds 5-15 mph, and a less than 20 percent chance of rain, according the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with possible isolated showers and thunderstorms, a low in the upper 60s and a less than 20 percent chance of rain.

Monday's forecast calls for partly cloudy with possible isolated showers and thunderstorms, a high of 90-95 and a less than 20 percent chance of rain.

After an overnight low of 69, Saturday's high reached 94, compared to the record high for that date of 103 set in 1964. The record low was 56 set in 1966.

STATE

Occasional scattered showers interrupted up the heat, haze and humidity that dominated weather patterns across Texas Saturday.

In West Texas, skies were partly cloudy to cloudy everywhere except the Panhandle, where sunshine prevailed. Some storms were heavy enough to prompt flash flood warnings.

Showers and storms in some areas kept temperatures in the 80s, but most of the state's readings crept in the 90s with generally light winds.

A gray haze settled over much of North Texas, and showers developed in areas across the region as temperatures heated during the day. Among those showers were some isolated thunderstorms.

Showers also developed along the coastal plains and the Rio Grande Valley.

As usual, the highest reported temperature came at Laughlin Air Force Base near Del Rio, which had an afternoon high of 100 degrees.

Chances of storms mixed with balmy, hot conditions are expected to continue today for most of the state.

NATION

Flooding caused by heavy rain in the Southeast forced a handful of people to evacuate Saturday in South Carolina, while showers and thunderstorms stretched from the Plains across the Great Lakes.

The remnants of Tropical Storm Jerry spread heavy rain across southeastern Georgia, parts of Florida and South Carolina. Parts of Georgia got nearly 6 inches of rain Friday plus at least an additional 3 inches on Saturday.

Flooding around Orangeburg, S.C., had washed out some 20 roads, authorities said.

Some people had to leave a mobile home park flooded by up to 4 feet of water. The Red Cross set up a shelter at a local school, said city emergency director John Smith.

No serious injuries were reported, he said.

The same weather system also was expected to spread showers and thunderstorms across parts of Mississippi and Alabama, and northward through North Carolina and eastern Tennessee into southern West Virginia.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered along a line extending from the western Plains across the upper Midwest into the Great Lakes.

The strongest storms developed over Wisconsin, and thunderstorms also spread rain across parts of western Kansas and the Nebraska Panhandle.

In the Northwest, cool air and a few scattered showers moved into parts of Oregon and Washington.

Seaplane crashes into restaurant, kills five

NEW SHOREHAM, R.I. (AP) — A seaplane crashed into a restaurant and exploded Saturday while trying to land near an island beach, killing five people and forcing customers to dive for safety.

The single-engine plane was heading toward the waters off Block Island's Fred Benson State Beach when it crashed into a car in front of G.R. Sharkeys on the island and slammed into the restaurant.

The plane exploded, causing a fire that destroyed the single-story, wood-frame building, which also housed a gas station. The plane narrowly missed the two gas pumps.

"It was like the whole world exploded," said Corrie Heinz, a bartender at a tavern across the street from Sharkeys.

Christopher McGinniss, a gas station attendant, said he shouted at people eating on an outside deck at the restaurant to get out of the way. They fled and the plastic chairs and tables on the deck melted, he said.

McGinniss and three other people were in the restaurant at a counter when the plane crashed, but it was unclear how many customers were on the deck. The restaurant can seat about 50 inside and 25 outside.

"I just finished paying for a hamburger when the thing came in. Three seconds later it exploded. It was awesome," said Kyle Jorgenson, who was visiting from Connecticut.

'I just finished paying for a hamburger when the thing came in. Three seconds later it exploded.'

— Kyle Jorgenson, who was visiting from Connecticut

Four people died immediately in the 1:15 p.m. crash, New Shoreham Police Chief William McCombe said. They included the pilot, two of his three passengers and the person in the car.

The other airplane passenger, who had third-degree burns over 90 percent of his body, died Saturday night at a Providence hospital, officials said.

McCombe said the plane had taken off from East Hampton, N.Y., and was carrying three men and a woman. He did not have any further details.

Witness Gene LaParle was in the water with his 3 1/2-year-old daughter when the plane touched down only about 20 feet away, then skipped off the water and disappeared over a hill.

"I thought it was going to hit me," he said. "I could see the faces of three people inside. They were wide-eyed. These guys were scared. I saw them plain as day. It was horrible."

Peter Wood, editor of The Block Island Times, was at the scene minutes after the crash. "It looked like a war zone," he said.

Two men in the restaurant saw the plane coming and dove for safety, he said.

"One hurled himself into the bathroom and another dove out the front door," Wood said.

Richard Tretheway, an owner of Sharkeys, was in the kitchen when he heard the crash. "I thought it was a brawl out front," he said.

Tretheway said he tried to go to the front but was shoved backward by customers trying to flee.

The plane apparently was trying to land about 300 yards off shore, beyond a breakwater, witnesses told Wood. It touched down once, bounced and the pilot apparently tried to abort the landing. The plane skipped off the water, went over some power lines on shore and slammed into the car.

The restaurant and gas station are about 100 yards from shore in New Shoreham, the island's only town.

JURY: County begins crackdown on no-shows

ders of the few people who show up to perform their civic duty.

"We understand that there are things that may prevent a person from being able to serve on a jury on any particular week.

"All that a person needs to do is let us know in advance of the date that person is to appear. The worst thing one can do is to fail to appear," Gilles said.

Those who fail to respond to the summons may be arrested by the sheriff and brought before a judge to explain their absence. If the judge is dissatisfied with the excuse, the person may be held in contempt and fined, Rucker said.

The fine could be between $100 and $1,000.

"We are not looking to punish people, who, for circumstances beyond their control are unable to come to the courthouse. We are simply attempting to have sufficient numbers of jurors for trials and provide for the orderly and efficient disposition of our dockets," Rucker said.

Nationwide, more Americans are evading jury duty, Rucker said.

"The widespread failure to respond to jury-service summonses is delaying trials and trying the patience of lawyers, judges and court administrators around the country," according to an Aug. 9 Wall Street Journal report.

The publication cited numbers from across the country in which increasing numbers of people are failing to show up for service.

The failure of the prospective jurors to show up delays jury trials or prevents judges from trying as many cases as they plan to in a given week, Rucker said.

"It is important for our citizens to respond to the jury summons. With the addition of the new district, there is a greater demand for juries," said 385th District Court Judge Willie DuBose.

"If only a few people show up for jury service, it jeopardizes our ability to begin all of the jury trials set for that week," DuBose said.

"Nothing is more important to the litigants in a jury trial than to try that case before a jury of their peers," said 238th District Court Judge John Hyde. "If jurors don't appear, it denies people this fundamental right and it undermines the court's ability to move its docket."

It is more difficult now for persons to avoid being called for jury service. Previously, the pool of jury candidates was drawn solely from registered voters; many people didn't register in order to avoid being summoned.

Now, under Texas law, persons who have a valid Texas driver's license or personal identification card issued by the Texas Department of Public Safety are eligible for jury summons.

DRAINAGE: Master plan for city nears completion city will be required to attend to the water before it flows downstream, and in some cases, treat the water, officials said.

"This is going to be a serious (monetary) burden to Midland when we reach that threshold," Hackler said.

Perhaps more visible than the environmental measures will be actions that deal with existing drainage predicaments and curtail flooding problems in the future.

"We don't want to create another Wadley Avenue," Hackler said.

Suggested improvements — prioritized — may include such measures as replacing bridge structures, widening channels to provide more water storage and maintenance of drainage systems.

Engineers anticipate that some improvements will reduce the city's flood plain and therefore provide relief from flooding and make some areas more conducive to development. Areas outside a flood plain escape the necessity for flood insurance, potentially have higher property values and if developed, contribute more to the city's tax base.

But for the flood plain boundaries to be altered — in addition to physically changing the flood plain — the lines must be recognized on paper by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). And that has been described as an uphill battle by engineers and city officials.

The problem with getting FEMA to recognize flood plains is largely because federal agencies subject the entire nation to the same standards despite vast geographical differences, local officials said. And a flat Midland presents a unique situation when it comes to flood plains, officials added.

"I think we'll have to jump hurdles which I don't think we should have to jump," Hackler said.

While the city jumps hurdles with the federal government, it will also confront some high financial hurdles to fund drainage improvements.

A wish list of improvements over many years and compliance with future environmental regulations has been estimated at $60 million.

Funding could come from the city's existing process of issuing certificates of obligation, implementation of a storm water utility fee or use of money from the general fund.

Raising taxes is a possibility but highly unlikely because of the current City Council's disposition toward taxes and is not an "equitable approach" to financing drainage work, Hackler said.

DEPUTIES: Reserve force provides invaluable service

(From 1A)

Each reserve officer must meet state standards regarding education requirements and must be a certified peace officer.

"Reserves have to meet the same standards as a regular peace officer; the difference between the two is one gets paid and the others don't," he said.

"They even pay for their own training as regular peace officers. I certainly couldn't do without them," the sheriff said.

Additionally, the reserve officers provide all of their own equipment — from the badge and uniform they wear to the training they receive, as well as the firearm and radio they carry. The total cost to the reserve is usually around $1,000. A reserve fund helps alleviate some of those costs, Strickland said.

Strickland said the county has 35 spots for reserves; only 23 are filled currently.

He said anyone can apply for a position, but it usually takes about two years to complete the 560 hours of classroom education required.

Strickland said being involved in law enforcement was something he had always wanted to do.

"This is more enjoyable because it relieves some tension from my everyday job," Strickland said. "And it is something different from regular volunteer functions."

Reserve Officer Kris Hoban said he, too, had always wanted to be involved in law enforcement. Hoban joined the reserves in 1992.

"As a reserve I give something back to the community ... plus, it's good people to work for," Hoban said.

Rochell Buck is one of the three female reserves.

"I have a real strong interest in this line of work. I think it is important for children to see that women can do the different things in different areas that are traditionally thought of as man's work ... it is possible to do the things they want to do," Ms. Buck said.

"I was sworn in February of 1992. One thing I think is great about the reserves is they are so supportive of one another and they do what they can to help each other and back each other.

"I used a week's vacation last year to go through the instructor's course to help the others get their certification since they all have full-time jobs. There is no fund to help them go to school, so I got my training to help them," she said.

"It can get a little taxing, and you can get hurt out there, although none of our reserves have gotten hurt seriously," Strickland said. "We can take any call or assist other officers."

In 1994, reserves made 95 arrests in the county, most of those for driving while intoxicated, Strickland said.

Strickland said one of his proudest moments as a reserve came when he was patrolling down Business Highway 20 eastbound toward Midland and a pickup passed him traveling about 100 mph.

He said he began to pursue the vehicle, which wound up crashing near a nightclub.

"It was gratifying to pull a drunk off the street so he can't hurt anyone," Strickland said.

Strickland estimated the reserves have donated almost 64,000 hours during the past 10 years, which resulted in a savings to the county of approximately $510,000.

"The only cost there is to taxpayers is for the fuel and maintenance of the vehicle," Strickland said.

Earlier this month, the Midland County Commissioners' Court designated the week of Aug. 26-31 as Midland County Reserve Deputy Week.

In the resolution, the commissioners stated:

"The citizens of Midland and Midland County have indicated a desire to express appreciation and approval of the many accomplishments of the Midland County Reserve Deputies and for their unselfish contribution of the time serving and assisting the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

"By this action, let it be known that we have faith in the ability of today's reserve deputy(sic) as they help enforce the laws and preserve peace in our community."

ARREST: Officials charge man's wife

the full extent of his injuries be kept private.

Sheriff Painter said he expected Ms. Malkiewicz — being transported from Conroe in Montgomery County by two deputies — to arrive at the Midland County Detention Center today.

According to sheriff's reports, bond is suggested at $500,000.

Talk of corruption, fraud snarl plans for Amazon radar

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — A jetliner vanishes in the Amazon jungle. Drug smugglers fly through undetected. Gold miners poison rivers with impunity.

Brazil wants to put an end to all of that by building a $1.4 billion radar network that would peer behind the curtain of mystery obscuring 2 million square miles of jungle.

Construction hasn't begun, and already accusations of corruption, fraud and even CIA dirty tricks are swirling around the project.

The Amazon Surveillance System, to be built by Raytheon Corp. of the United States, would use satellites, radar and infrared sensors on planes and at 13 stations on the ground.

A plane that crashed in 1989 wasn't found for four days, highlighting the need for radar tracking. And nationalists want to keep other countries, drug cartels or guerrillas from taking control of the giant no man's land.

Radar stations would be built across the states of Para, Amazonas and Rondonia, which cover most of Brazil's vast northern wilderness.

Raytheon says its sensing system could help protect the environment by pinpointing wildfires and even measuring the mercury dumped into rivers by wildcat gold miners.

"It will be like looking at the Amazon through an enormous magnifying glass," said Brig. Gen. Marcos Antonio de Oliveira, head of the armed forces committee coordinating the project.

But work on the radar system — known by its Portuguese initials SIVAM — hasn't even begun and already it is under attack from all sides.

A lobbying campaign by President Clinton revived fears of U.S. designs on the Amazon's riches.

"If Raytheon builds this system, you can be sure the CIA and the White House will get privileged access to data on the Amazon," said Sen. Eduardo Suplicy, a leading opponent of the project.

Rogerio Cezar de Cequeira Leite, a physicist at the University of Campinas, near Sao Paulo, said Brazil didn't even need to hire an outside contractor. At least 12 Brazilian companies can build the system, although it might take them longer, he said.

"If the purpose of this is national security, why should we risk leaking classified information to the United States?" he asked.

At the 1992 Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, Raytheon pitched SIVAM as an "environmental monitoring system" to help Brazil preserve its wilderness.

Raytheon says the system also could help Brazil map its natural resources. Trillions of dollars worth of hardwoods, oil and gas, uranium, gold, iron, bauxite and other minerals lie untapped in the Amazon.

"How can you make decisions to protect the Amazon if you don't know what's going on inside it?" said James Carter, vice president of Raytheon, in a telephone interview from the company's headquarters in Bedford, Mass.

Data from 13 radar stations, six mobile radars and eight airborne sensors would be sent to three data processing centers in the jungle and to a command center in Brasilia.

"The growth capability of the system is infinite," said Bob Young, a Raytheon manager. "All you need do is add sensors and software."

South Africans seek to cope with bloody past

PIETERMARITZBURG, South Africa (NYT) — Sibongile Hadebe's husband was shot dead on his way home from an African National Congress meeting here one evening in 1992, killed with a single bullet aimed neatly below his ear.

There was not much of an investigation, let alone an arrest. But now Mrs. Hadebe, like thousands of others who lost husbands, brothers or children under South Africa's brutal apartheid system, wants her questions answered and, if possible, the killers held accountable.

More than a year after the country's first all-race elections, South Africa is still preoccupied with its history, struggling to set up a mechanism that will expose and put to rest more than three decades of torture, disappearances and murders carried out in apartheid's name.

Unlike a foreign enemy in a war, most of South Africa's executioners live nearby and continue in their jobs or on their pensions — a bitter pill for their victims' survivors.

Some say one of their greatest fears is that they might unknowingly meet over dinner or a drink the man who killed or tortured a loved one — that he would know, but they would not. Others, like Mrs. Hadebe, who is struggling to raise six small children on her income as a nurse, say they resent the possibility that the killer might be living comfortably, perhaps on the government payroll.

"When I think about that, it brings out all this anger and hatred," Mrs. Hadebe said. "I want something done."

There can be no doubt that sorting through the past will be one of the most emotionally wrenching and politically difficult tasks of the new Government. Last month, President Nelson Mandela signed legislation establishing a Truth and Reconciliation Commission. But because the law leaves unresolved issues like how much money will be spent on the commission and who will preside over it, questions remain about what it can accomplish.

So far, it is not even clear whether the commission, which officials hope to have in place in two to three months, will take up cases like that of Mrs. Hadebe's husband, or whether it will focus on more notorious cases like the killing in 1977 of Steven Biko, the leader of the Black Consciousness movement who died of a brain hemorrhage after a police interrogation.

Decade of women: 20 years later, progress is in name, not in deed

EDITOR'S NOTE — At the last U.N. women's conference, governments made sweeping promises to improve the lives of women. A decade later, little has changed. Officials of 150 countries at the U.N. Women's Conference in Beijing on Sept. 4-15 will be under pressure to keep those promises and set an agenda to cope with daunting challenges facing women into the 21st century.

By Edith Lederer
Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam — Nguyen Thi Kim Thu is learning the fine points of cooking hamburgers. Phi Thi Phuong Anh is tackling word processing. Nguyen Thi Van Nam is struggling with English grammar.

They're hunting for a place in Vietnam's growing private economy. Studying at Hanoi Women's Union No. 2 boosts their chances — 70 percent of its graduates find work.

The U.N. Women's Conference in Beijing will hold up women like them as an example to women around the world. But jobs and a decent life remain only a dream for millions of the world's poorest women.

Nearly 20 years after the United Nations optimistically declared a "Decade of Women," many countries haven't kept their promises of equality and opportunities.

The Beijing conference will try again.

"What we're hoping for in Beijing is action," said Gertrude Mongella, the conference secretary-general. "We are not going to be the same as men. But we want equal opportunities and equal standing before the law."

Since the first U.N. women's conference in Mexico City in 1975, women have made some important gains on paper.

A U.N. treaty on eliminating sex discrimination has been signed by 133 countries. The 1993 World Conference on Human Rights declared that women's rights are human rights — and must be protected.

The 1994 U.N. population conference in Cairo said women should have access to modern birth control and the right to choose whether to become pregnant. Woman are also living longer and are better educated.

But equality remains far off, and in many cases conditions are getting worse.

Women account for 70 percent of the world's 1.3 billion poor. Eighty percent of the world's refugees are women and children. Women are typically paid 30 percent to 40 percent less than men for doing the same job.

One-third of wives in developing countries are physically abused, according to the charity Oxfam. The number of women in parliaments has dropped from 15 percent in 1988 to 11 percent in 1994.

"We are going into the 21st century with concentrations of wealth ... side by side with the feminization of poverty," said Nolene Heyser, executive director of the U.N. Development Fund for Women, created at the first women's conference.

In Hanoi, about 35 percent of young children are malnourished because their impoverished mothers have to return to work and can't breast-feed them, said Dr. Khong Ngoc Am, director of the Maternal and Child Health Center of Hanoi.

Since International Women's Year in 1975, women have been trying to figure out how to close the enormous gender gap.

In 1985, at the last conference in Nairobi, governments promised that by 2000 they would enforce equal rights for women, outlaw slavery and prostitution, enforce a minimum age for marriage, punish the killing of baby girls and give all women access to education, maternal health care and family planning.

Yet many countries haven't carried out such proposals of three previous world conferences.

Medicaid cuts take toll on working poor

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Since President Clinton's plans for universal health care coverage collapsed a year ago, another million Americans have lost their health insurance, a trend the Clinton administration and some private analysts say would be almost doubled by Republican proposals to rein in Medicaid spending.

Estimates of the number of uninsured Americans now run as high as 43.4 million, more and more of whom are from the working poor. The rate at which the ranks of the uninsured have been growing has increased slightly but steadily in recent years, to a current annual rate of 1.2 million, by the latest estimates.

But administration officials say that Republican plans to cut projected Medicaid spending by $182 billion during the next seven years could deprive as many as nine million additional Americans of Medicaid coverage by 2002.

While that projection could be labeled as partisan because it is part of the administration's preparation for the budget battle that will open when Congress returns after Labor Day, a number of outside groups and analysts agree that Medicaid's sparing growth in recent years has acted as a brake on the rising number of the uninsured. Cuts in the program, which provides health coverage for low-income Americans, could well lead to an increase in the number of people without health coverage, they say.

Congressional Republicans contend that by transferring federal money directly to the states with reduced regulation, they can expand the number of people served while limiting the growth in spending. "We're going to change Medicaid," said Rep. Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., who is the vice chairman of the Commerce subcommittee on health, which oversees Medicaid. "We think by changing it, knocking out some of the dual federal-state bureaucracy, we can expand it."

Republicans also fiercely contest Democratic descriptions of their Medicaid plans as cuts. Under the budget resolution passed by the House and Senate this summer, Medicaid spending would increase to $124.3 billion in the fiscal year 2002. That would be up from $89.2 billion in the current fiscal year, which ends on Sept. 30, but well below the $177.8 billion that the Congressional Budget Office projects would be needed in 2002 to maintain existing levels of service for everyone who meets the eligibility standards in current law.

Dole returns gift from gay group

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Scrambling to enhance relations with conservatives, Sen. Bob Dole's presidential campaign said Saturday that it was returning $1,000 from a gay Republican group.

The campaign said it had accepted the June donation by mistake, and would never have taken money from an organization that supports positions Dole opposes, like allowing homosexuals in the military.

But correspondence produced Saturday by the president of the group, the Log Cabin Republicans, showed that Dole's national finance chairman had sought the group's help in raising money as recently as May.

The returned donation is the latest sign that Dole is intensifying his year-long drive to court conservative Republican groups in the aftermath of his humbling tie with Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas in an Iowa straw poll last weekend.

Nelson Warfield, Dole's spokesman, said that the campaign had accepted the donation from the Log Cabin Republicans, a nationwide organization with more than 40 chapters, only because of "a financial screw up."

"It's our policy that we won't accept contributions from groups that have a specific political agenda that's fundamentally at odds with Senator Dole's record and his views," he said.

But Richard L. Tafel, the president of Log Cabin, said he had dealings with several senior Dole campaign officials who had solicited his organization. He also said he prominently wore a Log Cabin lapel button as he discussed AIDS budget allocations with Dole at one of the senator's fund-raising events.

Tafel made available a letter he received from John A. Moran, the Dole finance director. "Per our discussion," Moran wrote, "I am attaching a list of upcoming Dole for president fund-raising events. Senator Dole and I would appreciate any assistance you could give us in turning out your members at each event. I am looking forward to working with you." The letter, dated May 24, closed, "With all good wishes. Cordially, John."

Asked about the letter, and other conversations between Log Cabin and the campaign, Warfield said, "That communication was not authorized."

Wilson takes on front-runner, critics in bid for president

Wilson is anchoring his campaign on a 'not just talk but action' pitch centered on five issues he believes will give him conservative appeal: fighting illegal immigration, repealing affirmative action, tough anti-crime views, welfare reform and state budget-cutting.

WASHINGTON (AP) — California Gov. Pete Wilson's formula for winning the White House begins with two risky calculations: Bob Dole will falter, and most social conservatives will look beyond his support of abortion rights.

After that, the plan is a bit more conventional.

The Wilson strategy is pegged on wounding or actually beating front-runner Dole in New Hampshire, winning Arizona and then taking several early New England primaries for momentum heading into bigger battles in Florida and the across the Midwest.

These appear to be lofty hopes for a candidate who started organizing later than most of his rivals, keeps losing his voice, is well back in national polls and is even a distant second to Dole in his home state of California.

But as Wilson prepares for a seven-state tour this week that he is billing as his formal campaign kickoff, he and his aides make the case that Dole is vulnerable — and that Wilson is best positioned to step in because of his experience as a governor taking action on the issues at the heart of the GOP campaign.

"The front-runner's dilemma is there is no way to go but down," said George Gorton, Wilson's campaign manager.

It was Gorton who directed Wilson's comeback last year against Kathleen Brown, the telegenic state treasurer who at one point led Wilson by more than 20 points. Like Brown then, Wilson said Dole's big lead now is based on name identity and general goodwill among the electorate.

When voters begin focusing on issues instead of names, "that is when we begin to change the polls," Wilson said in an interview. "That is my history."

Wilson is anchoring his campaign on a "not just talk but action" pitch centered on five issues he believes will give him conservative appeal despite his history as a GOP moderate: fighting illegal immigration, repealing affirmative action, tough anti-crime views, welfare reform and state budget-cutting.

"I am not just the first (among the candidates) to publicly address these issues, I am the only one who has done something about them," Wilson said.

A glaring omission is abortion, where Wilson's position that the "government has no business making so intensely personal a decision" puts him at odds with the Republican Party platform and social conservatives ascendant in GOP affairs.

If he wins the nomination, Wilson promises to try to remove the anti-abortion plank from the 1996 platform. But his reluctance to make that a central campaign theme has raised questions about how much of a fight he would wage.

To critics, it is also evidence of Wilson as chameleon, a politician all too willing to bend or change his views to fit with the times. "The man is flip-flopping like pancakes," says Jesse Jackson, the two-time Democratic presidential candidate who has been sparring with Wilson on affirmative action.

A fair amount of criticism has also come from Republicans, mostly from conservative activists long estranged from Wilson. But some has also come from past supporters angry that he is breaking a pledge not to seek the presidency in 1996.

Whatever the source, the image of Wilson the waffler has taken hold in some quarters.

At Ross Perot's recent United We Stand America meeting in Dallas, for example, Edward Thomas Jr. of Connecticut , a registered Republican, said he was "enormously impressed" by Wilson's speech.

But Thomas encountered California United We Stand members later and was told to "beware of him because he talks out of both sides of his mouth. They said he was just another politician."

Firefighter tame blaze; evacuees go home

EASTPORT, N.Y. (AP) — Evacuees were allowed back home Saturday as exhausted firefighters cleaned up a wind-driven forest fire that had threatened high-priced beach resort communities.

Authorities said the 6,000-acre blaze looked like arson, and critics asked why promised federal airplanes to bomb the fire with water didn't arrive until Saturday.

The sky was bright blue Saturday, minus the thick billows of smoke that clouded eastern Long Island for two days. Bulldozers had been used to create a dirt ring around the perimeter of the 5-mile by 1 1/2-mile fire zone.

Nonetheless, officials balked at declaring the fire contained, because of the slight chance that it could flare up again without warning in the midst of million-dollar real estate. The area has not had rain in 19 days.

"It's amazing that we've lost over 6,000 acres at this point, and we've not had a single fatality," said Gov. George Pataki. Some 40 firefighters suffered an assortment of minor injuries.

However, the blaze feeding on tinder-dry pines and oaks some 70 miles east of New York City had destroyed one home and a lumber yard, damaged seven other homes and a train station, and shut down railroads and roadways.

Shortly after noon Saturday, some 400 evacuated Westhampton residents got permission to return home. Some had spent two nights sleeping in high school gyms or even their cars.

One of the returnees was Edward Terchun, 77, owner of the house that was destroyed.

"It's affecting me emotionally, financially," said Terchun, who also owned three of the damaged houses. "And there's the stress from worrying whether your tenants will be homeless."

One of his tenants, Betty Zera, found one thing that survived the flames that severely damaged her house: her only picture of her father.

Companies donate games, fitness equipment, TVs, movies to O.J. jurors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For leisure-oriented businesses, the O.J. Simpson jury is a natural market: adults cooped up for hours on end with nowhere to go.

Dozens of companies have been donating exercise equipment, electronic games, televisions and movies to help the sequestered panelists pass the time.

The only hitch: The amusements cannot make even oblique reference to the double-murder trial or anything else "too controversial."

The example, the instruction manual for a "Draw Today" portrait kit contains photographs of many famous people, but "O.J. Simpson is NOT among them," the court was assured by Ross Sarracino, president of Walter Foster Publishing Inc. in Tustin, Calif.

The prohibition against controversial material also made for some tame cinematic offerings.

"We actually started watching 'Carlito's Way' and they pulled it. Some murder scene," said Jeanette Harris, who was kicked off the panel in April.

Donors haven't received many rewards in return, other than prompt thank-you notes from Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, who's sort of camp director to the remaining 12 jurors and two alternates.

But publicity has been beside the point for many gift-givers.

"In all honesty, we didn't tell anyone we were doing it," said Marc Rosenberg, public relations director for Tiger Electronics in suburban Chicago. He sent 16 copies of the hand-held electronic brain teaser "Lights Out," which challenges players to turn out a series of lights in the fewest possible moves.

Although most gifts were unsolicited, concern for the jurors' mental and physical health did lead the judge to pursue loans of fitness equipment, videos and yarn for crocheting, said Jerrianne Hayslett, a spokeswoman for Ito.

"There were a lot of jurors that complained that they had to have this, and had to have that," Harris said. "They would complain about the athletic equipment and not being able to go out and run when they wanted to."

Two kinds of stationary bikes, a treadmill and a stair-stepper were loaned by LifeFitness, based in Franklin Park, Ill., because chief executive officer Augie Nieto found Ito's request compelling.

"It was strictly to help the jurors out. It seemed sincere," said Judy Sullivan, Nieto's assistant. After the trial ends, the company will donate the equipment, valued at about $8,000, to charity.

NordicTrack of Chaska, Minn., furnished a cross-country ski machine, a treadmill and a home gym, valued together at about $2,500.

When Ito learned jurors were squabbling about television viewing, he turned to Paul "The King of Big Screen" Goldenberg, owner of Paul's in La Habra, Calif.

Goldenberg responded with two 45-inch Mitsubishi sets, valued at about $6,000, that he'll eventually give to a boy's club.

Clintons mark 75th anniversary of women's suffrage, defend trip

GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, celebrating the 75th anniversary Saturday of the constitutional amendment that gave women the right to vote, said her trip to communist China will be "about giving a voice to women."

She and President Clinton said the U.N. conference will be an important forum to promote women's rights in the United States and around the world. Violence, health care, political freedom and economic opportunity are still relevant issues to women 75 years after they got the right to vote in America, they said.

"If women and girls don't flourish, families won't flourish. And if families don't flourish, communities and nations won't flourish," the first lady said.

The president, who joined his wife at the commemoration, said the international gathering in Beijing next month "is true-blue to families," a pointed retort to conservatives who have complained that the meeting agenda is anti-family.

Mrs. Clinton, who plans to address the meeting Sept. 4-5, accepted the invitation to attend on Friday, one day after China released human rights activist Harry Wu. Chinese authorities convicted Wu, a Chinese-American, of espionage and had sentenced him to 15 years in prison.

Critics have said that the first lady's high-profile visit rewards China for detaining a U.S. citizen. The Clinton administration also has been accused of coddling China, an emerging economic power, despite its human rights abuses.

On Saturday, Wu told San Francisco radio station KCBS from his home in Milpitas, Calif., that the first lady's trip was a mistake.

Chinese officials will interpret her attendance as meaning, "Even if we did arrest Harry Wu...whatever we did is OK," he said.

Wu suggested that to avoid the appearance of sanctioning China's treatment of dissidents, Mrs. Clinton must openly denounce such actions while there.

She could "openly, frankly say we are concerned about the human rights situation in China," he said. "I hope so. But I don't think so.

"Mrs. Clinton has her own concerns, like, I don't know, politics."

In her first expanded remarks on the visit, Mrs. Clinton said the conference "is a celebration of women. It's a celebration of family."

The U.S. delegation "will try to focus attention on the challenges and burdens women face trying to improve their lives," she said.

With the peaks of the Teton Range as a backdrop, the president said the delegation has been attacked "because the almost addictive, almost narcotic drive among some elements in our society to take every single issue and use it as cause of division among our people."

Clinton said he will appoint an interagency task force to implement the recommendations that come out of the conference.

The 19th Amendment, which gave women the right to vote, was ratified 75 years ago Saturday.

"Women do have the right to vote but unfortunately, many women in our country today do not exercise that vote," Mrs. Clinton said.

Rose Shockley, president of the Wyoming League of Women Voters, said many women "have become apathetic citizens. Today, I'd like to challenge all the women of our nation to remember the ideals and the work of the suffragettes."

Back to school: 1,000s of public schools quietly reform themselves

By Sally Streff Buzbee
Associated Press

When they head back to school this fall, second-graders at Barclay School in Baltimore will start off with the basics — writing in cursive, reviewing spelling, drilling in math.

Fifth-graders at Westwood Elementary in Lake Charles, La., will get extra reading and math help from employees at a nearby factory, volunteering on company time.

And teen-agers in the Queens borough of New York City will walk into four small high schools, created from one.

Far away from the national headlines over low test scores, guns and ideological battles, thousands of public schools are quietly reforming themselves — raising expectations, reaching out to parents and the community and slashing bureaucracy.

Talk of school reform has been bandied about ever since the 1983 "Nation at Risk" report warned of a "rising tide of mediocrity" in America's schools.

There have been hundreds of proposals; many of them steeped in controversy.

SHOULD THE federal government establish education standards — or is that the business of state and local governments? Should public school students be given tuition vouchers — funded by taxpayers — to allow them to attend private school? Would private companies do a better job running schools than local governments? Should teachers be judged by how their students perform and be paid accordingly? How much control should parents have?

Other ideas have proved less divisive — getting back to basics, magnet schools and corporate partnerships.

Here is how three schools found success.

It's what many people remember when they think of school.

Memorizing spelling words, state capitals and poems. Drilling on multiplication. Writing essays over and over until they are perfect.

"Highly structured, with high expectations," said Gertrude Williams, principal of the Barclay School in Baltimore.

IN THE five years since Barclay adopted the strict, back-to-the-basics curriculum, the standardized test scores of its mostly poor, inner city Baltimore students have jumped.

"It's just magnificent what these children are doing," said Williams.

"In plain terms, it's stunning," said Sam Stringfield, a Johns Hopkins University researcher.

In the 1980s, Barclay was a school of frustrated teachers and students who weren't learning. The problem, Williams believed, was a fuzzy, frequently changing city curriculum.

Teachers weren't sure what to teach. Each fall, they weren't sure what their class had learned the year before.

"What happens when everyone does his or her own thing is — maybe Teacher A does an excellent job. But Teacher B slides. And so when you get those kids the next year, it's hard. You don't know where they're at," Williams said.

"We had fifth- and sixth-graders struggling to spell 'cat' — really."

A friend invited her to see the private, affluent Calvert school and its college-prep curriculum. "I remember most the sense of calmness," Williams says. "They were sitting in class, writing beautifully."

BACKED BY a private foundation, teachers and parents, Williams proposed partnering with Calvert and introducing its curriculum into her public school.

But the school district's central office balked.

"They told me it was a 'rich man's curriculum,' " Williams said. "And I told them, I did not want a poor man's curriculum."

It took five years and countless political battles before Williams received permission in 1990 for her 550-student school to proceed.

Even then there were struggles. Some teachers considered the new curriculum too rigid. Some critics still argue rote learning will stifle children's creativity.

Even supporters, like parent JoAnn Robinson, acknowledge Barclay's method may not be for everyone.

But she and other parents believe in it, and that is the most important thing, Robinson said.

"This was a case of the people who knew these kids choosing what they felt was best, and then fighting for the right to do it," Robinson said. "Everyone feels a real ownership."

Seven years ago, the schools and the business community in Lake Charles, La., were not exactly on the best of terms.

Business leaders felt school officials were wasting money. They worried children weren't getting the skills they'd need in the working world.

Teachers, in turn, felt underappreciated and underpaid. They worried about proposals to funnel public money to private schools.

THEN THE local teachers union joined the local Chamber of Commerce. "And we started talking," said Principal Sheryl Abshire.

Now, Lake Charles is a model of the type of business-school partnership every community hopes for, but few accomplish.

"They've become our biggest champions," Abshire said.

At Westwood Elementary, 25 workers from nearby Vista Chemical volunteer one hour a week on company time to tutor children who need extra help. Sometimes, the volunteers — many of them young men — spend their lunch hours, too.

"So many of our kids today, they lack any male role model in the home," Abshire said. "They really latched on to those guys."

Lawsuit puts spotlight on separation of church, state

SAN ANTONIO — A San Antonio lawsuit over a church's demolition plans is about to bring national focus onto the relationship between church and state in a pluralistic society.

A decision is expected soon in a federal appeals court and is expected to affect church-state relations all over the nation.

The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of San Antonio sued the city of Boerne last year under the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 after the city prohibited demolition of an old parish church because its mission-style facade lay inside Boerne's historical preservation district.

Boerne is located about 20 miles northwest of San Antonio.

The archdiocese claims the growing St. Peter's Parish needs a new sanctuary but plans to keep the old facade. The city claims that would violate its architectural integrity.

"We're not in the business of preserving buildings. We're in the business of serving people, and we need to be free to respond to their needs," Archbishop Patrick Flores said.

In March, Senior U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III declared the religious freedom act unconstitutional in the San Antonio case; however, other federal judges have upheld it.

The law requires government agencies to demonstrate a compelling public interest before they can interfere with religious practice — a high standard of proof that was discarded by the U.S. Supreme Court in a 1990 decision that allowed Oregon to prohibit the use of peyote in American Indian religious rituals under its general anti-drug laws.

More than 60 religious bodies ranging across the theological spectrum have joined the archdiocese by filing briefs asking that the 1993 law be upheld.

"Many people believe their religious freedom has been infringed upon, the largest group being evangelical Christians who have attempted to have the state acknowledge their religious traditions," said J. Gordon Melton, director of the Institute for the Study of American Religion in Santa Barbara, Calif.

"They feel threatened by the discontinuance of long-established practices which have been reexamined in light of contemporary religious pluralism," he said, adding:

"Small, relatively new religious groups believe they haven't been accorded the same privileges as the more established groups."

The First Amendment's guarantees of religious freedom and disestablishment of any official state religion have been called the genius of American democracy, but applying them has been a major challenge, several church-state experts said.

Among today's church-state issues:

— Public educators are pressured to allow students more freedom in practicing their faith in school and to teach them about the role religion has played in U.S. history.

— Many parents want tax assistance to send their children to religious schools since they pay taxes to support the public schools they don't use. Critics say that would violate the First Amendment.

— Church leaders discussing the moral relevance of political issues are told that religious tax exemptions disqualify them from engaging in public debate.

Melton said the Supreme Court generally seems more sympathetic to claims under the Free Exercise Clause and less so to those under the Establishment Clause.

A major source of the tension is that the Founding Fathers couldn't foresee the diverse situations in which the First Amendment would be applied, said Derek Davis, director of the J.M. Dawson Institute of Church-State Studies at Baylor University.

"Public education, for example, was virtually unknown to them. To predict what they would have done on all those issues is impossible," Davis said.

"The best we can do is to glean the principles that came out of the religion clauses and do our best to apply them," he said.

Even the U.S. Supreme Court, which referees the resulting disputes, has shifted on some issues because of changing circumstances and composition of the court, Davis said.

"For example, the early Mormon cases outlawing polygamy in the 19th century were decided by a conservative court.

"Reading the Free Exercise Clause literally, polygamy should be protected, but the court said religious freedom isn't absolute.

"But if polygamy had come up in the 1960s, when religious freedom was being emphasized, those cases might have been decided differently," Davis said.

Davis applauded the president's effort to help clear up confusion among educators on what religious expression is permissible in public schools and what isn't.

"They need a lot of help. Many religious people believe it's necessary to use every avenue possible to help children become more religious.

"I don't want to communicate to children that religion isn't important. It is.

"But do you really want government teaching children religion?" Davis asked. "That's not its business."

He added that with many opportunities available in society to practice faith, it's not necessary for schools to make children religious.

"It's unfair to say the Supreme Court is preventing the American people from being religious," Davis said. "We need to educate the educators, not to pass an amendment."

But Kenneth Craycraft, a church-state scholar at St. Mary's University, said the religious freedom act "guarantees individuals the right to express themselves religiously — which I'm not sure is threatened — but does nothing to protect the right of religious authorities."

He said the First Amendment is hostile to traditional revealed religions and their claims of authority over their members, and the 1993 act doesn't change that.

"It's difficult for religious authorities to have any meaningful role in the public arena," which is problematic for any religious institution that sees itself as divinely instituted and teaches that religious faith has public policy and political implications, Craycraft said.

He said Christianity by nature claims that its members' first duty is to God. "I don't think there can be a Christian nation in a legal sense because Christianity must remain free to criticize the government when they believe that government is wrong," Craycraft said.

But he said Americans have always been religious and many Christians become politically active, hoping to make government reflect traditional Christian religious and moral values.

Craycraft said secularists in government seem unable to understand this deep religious commitment most Americans have.

"Every theologian I know predicted that the Branch Davidian siege in Waco would end in a conflagration, and it did," Craycraft said.

Some Los Angeles lawyers suffer through hard times

LOS ANGELES — At O.J. Simpson's trial, defense attorneys wear European-tailored suits, often get shuttled around in chauffeur-driven cars and chat up movie stars at black-tie charity events.

But across Los Angeles County, many more private criminal defense attorneys are driving Chevys and Fords, dining at the courthouse cafeteria, and dipping into the savings accounts for next semester's college tuition for the kids.

Experts say a variety of adverse conditions — the recession, a drop in crime, the formation of a second public defender's office and the tightening of public purse strings for accused criminals — have made the '90s one of the worst decades in memory for criminal defense attorneys.

Attorneys are working out of their homes or dropping fees. Some are retiring. Others are switching to the civil side, where work is more plentiful and lucrative.

"Given the choice, I'm sure they'd rather do criminal law, but they've got to pay the bills," said Peter Giannini, co-chairman of the Los Angeles County Bar Association's Indigent Criminal Defense Appointments (ICDA) Committee.

"A lot of attorneys are practicing out of their homes," he said. "They don't have offices, they don't have secretaries. They do their own typing. They're really living from hand to mouth."

It's estimated that there are about 1,000 lawyers in Los Angeles County who do strictly criminal work. There are subtle markers that there is a thinning of the herd under way.

■ This year, 70 attorneys have dropped off the county bar's ICDA Committee list, from which judges select counsel for indigent defendants in cases that public defenders cannot handle.

■ In many instances, the fees that attorneys charge for privately retained cases are going down. Several years ago, a lawyer would handle a DUI case that did not go to trial for $1,500 to $2,000. Now, some attorneys will do the same work for $750 to $1,000.

■ In the San Fernando Valley area of Los Angeles, there has been a 10 percent drop in new membership in the local Criminal Bar Association, which now numbers about 60 lawyers, paying $50 a year in dues.

Leaving your children alone at home can be major decision

CAN YOUR CHILD STAY HOME ALONE?

Is your child ready to be left alone after school? As summer winds down and after-school arrangements beg to be made, many parents are struggling with this question.

In June, Massachusetts state Rep. Evelyn Chesky of Holyoke proposed a bill that would make it against the law to leave a child younger than 14 home alone. As the Democrat's bill was being worked on in committee last month, she conceded that 12 was a more realistic age.

That may be, but parents know age alone is not the issue; we can all name an 11-year-old who is capable of taking care of herself and a 14-year-old who is not. It is development, not chronology, that legislators should consider, and that's something we need to convince our children of, too.

They are the ones who usually fuel the discussion in a family by announcing, sometimes as young as age 8, "I can take care of myself." Whether your child is eager to be more grown up, responding to peer pressure or anxious to help the family out, her desire to stay alone should be your starting point.

"No child should be asked to stay alone who doesn't want to be left alone," says psychologist Mick Coleman, author of "Home-alone Kids" (Lexington Press, 1989). While parent and child may both eagerly anticipate this sign of independence and maturity, and while it is indeed an important milestone, self-care is not something to be rushed.

"Most children will tell you they are ready long before they are," says Michelle Seligson, director of the School-Age Child Care Project at the Center for Research on Women at Wellesley College.

To help determine readiness, here are some questions to ask yourself and your child:

—Does he have a history of responsible behavior? Of anticipating and avoiding danger? Children who tend to be irresponsible or erratic may not have the confidence to know, for instance, when it's appropriate to call the police. Psychologist Christine Todd, who researches the impact of self-care on children's emotions, has known children who have called the police because they couldn't find their shoes. On the other hand, she asks: "Will he call if there's a real problem, or be worried he'll get into trouble for calling?"

—Does she tend to be argumentative? Have a hard time following rules? "If she needs supervision to follow directions or complete a chore, how well will she be able to follow a schedule?" asks Coleman, who is an associate professor of child and family development at the University of Georgia.

'To child should be asked to stay alone who doesn't want to be left alone.'
—Mick Coleman, psychologist

—Does he tend to be fearful? Panic when routines are disrupted? If so, what about the inevitable night you're late because you got caught in traffic? Boston University psychologist Neil Colan tells of a girl who was home alone during an electrical storm. When the power went out, she knew where the flashlight was, but the batteries were dead. "She had the presence of mind to call a neighbor who was able to bring over batteries," says Colan.

—Is she an introvert or extrovert? A very social child who typically has difficulty entertaining himself may feel isolated, lonely or bored. "That makes him more likely to respond to temptation — inviting friends in, leaving the house — or to just be plain miserable," Coleman says.

—What is she missing out on? Children of all ages need peer friendships and spontaneous play to maximize social development. "Are there other times when she gets this?" asks Seligson.

—How physically strong and/or coordinated is he? Todd was sure her 10-year-old daughter was physically able to take care of herself until she asked her to open a storm window and she couldn't. "You need to think about what skills might get called upon in emergencies," says Todd.

The problems that crop up

Colan, who leads self-care workshops, tells parents to talk with their child about the many things that could go wrong.

"Parents don't want to do that," he says. "They worry about frightening a child." In fact, he says, such di STORY IN scussions make a child feel more competent. He recommends posing such problems as: "What would you do if you heard a strange noise? If you come home and the front door was ajar? If a stranger comes to the door and says your parents sent him? If you smell smoke? If you need to reach me and can't?"

In studies where latchkey children have been asked about problems they've had, they most frequently report difficulties with siblings, acccording to Todd, who is an associate professor of child development at the University of Illinois.

"Just because your 12-year-old is ready to be home alone, doesn't mean he's ready to be home alone and responsible for one or two other children," she says. "The younger child is often left feeling unprotected and unsafe." On the other hand, she adds, "It depends on the relationship. If they generally get along and are respectful of each other, it could be OK."

When siblings are close in age, leaving one in charge of the other can backfire, says Coleman. "Jealousy flares, fights erupt." He recommends putting each child in charge of himself, but working as a team: "Each has an individual schedule to follow, but one child might be in charge of snacks and the other in charge of the dog."

Safety, of course, is a big issue in self-care. Colan tells parents to look at the house through your child's eyes, and to take nothing for granted — "'This is the electrical box, don't touch it.'" As you do a walk-through with your child, you can get a sense of his comfort level with the house. "If he won't go into the basement or attic with you, he's not ready to be left alone," says Colan.

But safety is not only a matter of knowing what to do when.

Rankin — Rankin rancher-auctioneer Bud Poage will put the old Mule Train tavern-museum's antiques, artifacts and assorted memorabilia up for auction at 1 p.m. today.

The occasion will also be an opportunity for old friends of the late owners, J.C. Carroll and his wife Georgia, to gather. The auction is being held at the request of Carroll's stepson, Teddy Gene Johnson./See story on Page 3B.

Woman acquitted

LONGVIEW (AP) — After deliberating 20 minutes, jurors have acquitted a 34-year-old Tyler woman who said she killed her husband after suffering years of abuse from him.

After Gregg County jury found Shirley Lynn Wood innocent of murder Friday in the Dec. 19, 1993, death of Bryan Lee Wood, she sobbed and her relatives leaned across the courtroom railing to hug her.

During a two-day trial, Ms. Wood told of repeated beatings, threats, injuries and humiliation at the hands of her 34-year-old husband.

Quilts honor AIDS victims

■ Designing the panels in a group is therapeutic for some, including Gracie Hanson, the mother of Lance Craig Hanson, who died at age 31.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

It's not unusual for people to begin collecting mementos of loved ones when they realize they are dying. A more difficult task however, is taking those items and trying to arrange them into a memorial quilt panel in such a way that a permanent testimony to a loved one's life is captured on fabric.

"My brother asked for a panel some time after he told us he had AIDS," said Midlander Linda Kunz. "We talked about it, and he said, 'You don't have to wait until I'm dead to do this.' But now that he's gone, it's hard to do. It's so painful," she said, smoothing over swatches of fabric depicting a pot of geraniums, a gray cat, and a piano keyboard she has painstakingly replicated to actual size — all things that speak about some area of her brother's 40-year life. "He was a musician. He had a grey cat and he raised geraniums," Ms. Kunz said. "All that he asked was that his panel be colorful, and that it be made by someone who loved him."

For Gracie Hanson, it's taken three years for her to begin designing the 3-by-6-foot panel on which she will try to create an artwork that will honor the essence of her son, Lance Craig Hanson, who was raised in Stanton and died at age 31.

"It helps to be doing this in a group. Lance died three years ago and I've been trying to do this ever since," Ms. Hanson said as she stenciled her son's name onto her panel and decided where to put an 8-by-10 photo — that had been transferred onto fabric — of a smiling clean-cut man, who appears much younger than his 31 years.

Ms. Kunz and Ms. Hanson worked with a few oth-

Woodcarver Jimmy C. Stewart poses next to his latest handiwork — his own face carved in a tree in front of his residence. The life-sized statue has attracted quite a bit of attention in the neighborhood of 4305 Princeton.

Woodcarver's statue is ode to his empty nest, children

By Katherine Poteet

It looks suspiciously like Abraham Lincoln, complete with a beard, top hat and tails, but it is really Jimmy Stewart.

OK, not THAT Jimmy Stewart.

The life-sized statue that graces the lawn at 4305 Princeton actually is the likeness of the man who lives at the residence — Jimmy C. Stewart.

But the carving, with one hand waving grandly to curious motorists, has no political or social message. It is, quite simply, Stewart's ode to an empty house.

"When my wife and I married 20 years ago, we combined families," he said. "We have six children. And, the last is a senior at Baylor Medical College in Dallas this year. This is my way of saying good-bye to my children."

The work began in April 1994, shortly after Stewart decided to cut down the elm tree.

"Like most elms, it had elm beetles and it was crowding the oak tree," he said. "And, as I cut it, I noticed one branch sticking

Breast-implant victim battles for her health

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Carol Ann Prewitt is in a desperate quandary. She is not alone. Yet, in a more personal sense, she is. For it is her life that she seeks to preserve and to make whole and healthy again.

Carol Ann Prewitt

Mrs. Prewitt is among the 440,000 ailing American women who, following breast-implant surgeries, joined in a class-action lawsuit against manufacturers of the implants.

After years of battling chronic fatigue, insomnia, headaches, breast pains, hardening of breast scar tissue, chronic inflammation of the right breast, depression, panic attacks, memory loss and self-doubt, the 48-year-old former fitting model, national garment sales representative and hairdresser has cause to believe that her afflictions are linked to the gel implants.

"It's coming to a grand finale," she said of the lawsuit, which is shrouded in uncertainty, and her health, which is tenuous.

The silicon-gel implants, banned by the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in favor of saline-filled implants, may not be the transgressor once declared by the FDA. But it still is not approved for remarketing.

Earlier in August, FDA Commissioner David Kessler said that there is "reasonable assurance that silicone-gel implants do not cause a large increase of traditional connective tissue disease."

Meanwhile, Mentor Corporation and McGhan Medical Corporation, manufacturers of saline breast implants, are sponsoring clinical studies on breast implants. And the American Cancer Society, Y-ME, the National Alliance of Breast Cancer Organizations, the National Coalition for Cancer Survivorship and the Susan G. Komen Foundation are involved in breast implant clinical

Teacher's memory triggers recollection of school days

When word arrived the other night that my first-grade teacher, Mrs. Wright — who seemed ancient even back then, back then being 1958 — had died, my mind quite naturally raced back to the halls of Highland Elementary School, a marvelous old two-story brick structure, located at the corner of Quincy St. and 11th St. in what is now a slightly decaying residential area in my hometown of Plainview, population 20,000 or so, and birthplace of country singer Jimmy Dean, who is probably better known these days for his folksy sausage commercials than his one hit single, "Big Bad John."

Ott

During the 1950s, officials at Highland Elementary School had their own way of practicing segregation.

The rich kids were assigned to Mrs. Thompson's room. Those from middle-class families went to Mrs. Shaw's class. And Hispanics, along with poor white kids, automatically headed for Mrs. Wright's room.

I never thought the Otts were poor, but apparently I was mistaken because there I was on that first day of school surrounded by a bunch of brown faces that appeared every bit as worried and lost as mine did.

But like with most situations in life, everything turned out just fine. I got through the year without being emotionally scarred, made lots of new friends and even learned a few Spanish words, several of which I later discovered were not intended to be spoken in mixed company.

Still, the thing that sticks in my mind after all these years is the building itself.

As a child it stood before me like a giant fortress, an intimidating stucture that represented a place I didn't necessarily want to be, especially on those first few days following a summer vacation.

Now, some 37 years later, the old schoolhouse still stands. It is part of my ritual to drive past the building each time I am in Plainview, a tour of sorts that includes the old family homes, the courthouse, a vacant lot, which is still vacant, where the neighborhood kids played baseball, and, for some reason, an old downtown drug store where my grandfather would take me during his visits from Georgia.

But it is the school building that rekindles the most memories.

As I slowly circle the block where it is located, mental pictures of each of the six classrooms where I was assigned dance across my brain. It is as though time has gone in reverse. The chalkboards, the desks, the corner where I was occasionally told to stand, the bulletin boards that displayed our rather tacky artwork. I can see them all.

Funny how the mind works.

My first two years at Highland were spent in rooms located on the ground floor, but then, as I was er women Saturday morning at a come-and-go workshop hosted by Midland Area AIDS Support at First Presbyterian Church. MAAS representatives provided beige panels, fabric paints, fusible webbing and all of the materials to make panels. They also provided tissues and emotional support for those still grieving.

QUILT: Family, friends honor their loved ones with panels

"In designing a quilt panel you really focus on what you truly cherished about someone. And then you realize the enormity of your loss," said MAAS member Nancy Brewster, who is a fount of ideas and is skilled with fusible fabric and an iron.

"Some people have spelled out a name using ties the man used to wear. Others sewed in dinner napkins from restaurants they had visited all over the world. Others incorporate old T-shirts or jeans into panels," she said.

A book featuring photos of quilt panels included a panel made for a toddler who died of AIDS contracted through a blood transfusion. The panel — sewn together with baby blankets and stuffed animals — appeared to be a child's rumpled bed.

Ms. Kunz said her biggest challenge will be creating a spectacular sunset. "My sister gave me that idea, reminding me how Ward (Patton) enjoyed sunsets."

Ms. Hanson chuckled over her dilemma of having to render a drawing of a Corvette for her son's panel. "I have to fit it in here with red roses, a chef's hat — Lance was a great cook — and words from Amazing Grace.'"

Judy Warren, MAAS executive director, began working on her brother's panel Saturday. "You would think with all the talking I do about him (Larry Yates) to groups and people, that this would be eaiser to do, but it's not," she said. "It's amazing how AIDS impacts our lives and families."

Ms. Warren said the workshop, one of several scheduled throughout the year, provides "closure for people. It's a part of grieving and healing."

Panels made in the workshop will be displayed during First Presbyterian Church's annual World AIDS Day service, Dec. 1. Following a January 1996 dedication ceremony the panels will be sent to San Francisco to be sewn into the national NAMES Quilt project.

Additional panel making workshops are set for 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Sept. 30 and Oct. 21 at the church.

POLICE REPORTS

Friday

Vandalism: Donald Thurman reported at 6:25 p.m. that a rock had been thrown through a window at 4619 Comanche.

Burglary of a vehicle: Warren Fannie reported at 6:52 p.m. that silverware had been taken from a vehicle at 1412 Chestnut.

Vandalism: Don Sanders reported at 6:56 p.m. windows of a vehicle had been shot out while he was driving in the 900 block of South Midkiff Road.

WOOD: Carver plans to add finishing touches to statue

(From 1B)

out. Then, I got this idea."

Using a chainsaw to do the heavy cutting and carving tools for detailed work, Stewart worked on a life-sized statue that bears his face and body in a tuxedo and tails.

The branch that stuck out has become his hand waving goodbye to his six children; the other hand, which was carved as a fist tucked tight to his body, is Stewart's way of saying "Yes! I've survived," he said.

"However, I do have one daughter that got her feelings hurt because I was waving goodbye to her," he said. "So, for her, it is waving hello."

Stewart plans on adding finishing touches to the carving, including more detailing in the face and staining the tuxedo.

He said the work attracts attention.

"We have people drive by, nearly running into the neighbor's cars," he said. "They are really interested if I am out carving. Some have even stopped and taken their picture with it."

Stewart's rather large project did not surprise his wife Marion, who has kept a scrapbook of the carving's development.

"He has done interesting things before," she said, leafing through the scrapbook until she comes to a picture of a woodcarving bearing the image of former Gov. Ann Richards.

"When he (Jimmy) saw Ann sitting on this motorcycle, he decided to do a carving of her on a hog," she said, referring to the Texas Monthly issue with the former governor's picture on it.

Stewart's work not only impressed competition judges, but Ms. Richards herself, who sent Stewart a letter expressing her delight with the carving.

Stewart said his love of wood carving began when he was in his teens.

"I always had a pocket knife in my back pocket," he said. "Plus, I was influenced a lot by my dad, who loved to paint. I just like to create things."

For now, his largest creation will remain in his yard for the next several months.

Oh, and he is planning one more addition to the statue.

"I'm going to put a boomerang on the bottom, next to the feet," he said. "Because, kids always come back."

IMPLANTS: Woman joins class-action lawsuit for compensation studies.

Since the early 1960s, more than one million women have received silicone-gel breast implants for reasons ranging from cosmetic enhancement to breast reconstruction following mastectomies and other surgical procedures.

Leakage of the implants and the introduction of foreign matter into the body is suspected of causing numerous ailments.

Even if the class-action lawsuit stands, there now is not much money in reserve to go around. The $4.25 billion in the original global settlement would figure out to less than $10,000 for each of the 440,000 claimants. Depending on severity of the injuries, the women were to be paid from $105,000 to $1.4 million.

Mrs. Prewitt is without a lawyer to represent her in the litigation.

"Believe me, if you weren't sick before you got in (to the class-action lawsuit), you were afterwards."

Compounding her grief is the high cost of implant removal: $12,000 to $17,000. "Mine is under the muscle, so it's major surgery." Her most recent implants, in 1990, cost $6,000.

One of the many defendants, Dow Corning, has filed for bankruptcy.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Prewitt, who is seeking removal of her silicone implants, said that a physician versed in immune disorders suggested that she had "four or five years" to live if the implants were not removed. But he offered no guarantees if they were removed.

"I still have hope," Mrs. Prewitt said. "There is nothing that can compensate you for that. I'm trying to search for the truth, trying to be unbiased. But a lot of women are sick, and the country certainly is going to be hurt" economically and through the loss of women in the workforce and in healthy states.

"We were in a half-million-dollar income bracket," she said of her and her husband, a former building contractor. "It has caused me to lose my business — one in Odessa and two in Midland. I'm not unlike the other women in the United States. I've talked to a lot of women in support groups, and we all are experiencing the same thing."

More and more women may be "getting their surgeries through welfare, and guess who is going to pay for that? Us (taxpayers). I'm not too far from that myself."

Mrs. Prewitt's life with breast implants began in 1974 when she, then a new first-time divorcee in Northern California, at age 27 decided to have breast implants for cosmetic and self-esteem reasons. She had given birth to two children, her breasts were stretched from the pregnancies, and she was concerned about her appearance, her appeal to men and her dateable status.

At that time, 21 years ago, she still held on to her American idealism.

"I feel like I am as American as apple pie."

Born in New Mexico in 1947, Mrs. Prewitt was the daughter of a banker and a housewife. She is part American Indian — Cherokee — and English.

"I believed in my country. I believed in America. I thought I lived in the biggest, best country, and I was proud of it." And she had married her "childhood sweetheart." The marriage ended in divorce.

Her mother had advised her against the implants: "'Don't do it, because you'll get cancer.'"

But her San Francisco surgeon assured her that "It's the most natural thing to your body" and that any resultant scar tissue could be safely removed.

"I never gave up," Mrs. Prewitt reflected. "I was always a survivor."

And in 1974 she had determined "to get better and better and better" in her appearance. "What were you going to do? Raise your children on welfare?"

No. Rather, Mrs. Prewitt earned her real-estate license, maintained

OTT: First school has certain special meaning like old house about to enter the third grade, it suddenly occurred to me that I had been assigned to Mrs. Long's room, which meant one very important thing — I would now be required to climb the stairs every single day, just like "the big kids."

I was in heaven.

Every 8-year-old should have the opportunity to attend class on the second floor of an old school building, especially one that features large windows overlooking the playground. If the student is fortunate enough to have a desk that is situated close to one of those windows he can spend hours daydreaming about baseball instead of listening to the teacher talk about whatever it is third-grade teachers talk about.

For an 8-year-old, it doesn't get any better than that.

Just as the house in which you spent your growing-up years will always be "home," your first school takes on a special meaning, too. The others have their own personalities and conjure up fond memories as well, but when you think of "school" in the truest sense, it is that first one that immediately springs to mind.

So it is with Highland Elementary.

I'm just sorry Mrs. Wright, bless her heart, had to die in order for me to enjoy a sentimental journey.

PRESIDENTIAL HONOR GUARD DISHONORED BY DRUGS

Bill Wilson

At age five, Bill Wilson's parents separated and he was passed around from relative to relative, attending a different school in a different city for seven years. He became connoisseur of wine although he rarely paid over 98 cents for a bottle, and established himself a "wine-o". The gang he belonged to became so deadly he decided it would be better to die for his country than for the gang. So, November of 1966, Wilson entered the U.S. Marine Corps, and within six months after boot camp was sent to Vietnam. Here, he turned to drugs to make the horrors of war, and the ever present fear of death bearable. After Vietnam he went to Washington and became a Presidential Guard for President Johnson and President Nixon.

Wilson's drug habit continued right into the White House, though he was assigned to the Marine Corps Silent Drill Team, the most precisioned military rifle team in America. After thirteen months, he was demoted and transferred to Camp Lejeune for a drug related incident. At Lejeune, he went on a Caribbean Cruise which enhanced his drug usage by allowing him to get the best drugs in the world. He left the Marine Corps in 1970, a well matured junkie and alcoholic becoming involved in violence and crime to support his habit. He lived in abandoned houses, cars and slept in parks. After nearly eight years of this, a friend told him of Teen Challenge, where he went and was "Biblically Born Again". This began a new and exciting life with Christ, who called him to preach and teach His word.

Bill Wilson will be speaking at Midland Christian Fellowship, 200 Baldwin, on Sunday at 10:30 am and 6:00 pm; and Monday through Wednesday at 7:00 pm. For more information, call 685-1981.

Auction to clear memorabilia from Mule Train tavern-museum

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

RANKIN — The dirge will be sung again, at least in the hearts of many sentimental folks, at 1 p.m. today when Rankin rancher-auctioneer Bud Poage puts the Mule Train's antiques, artifacts, and assorted memorabilia and stuff up for sale and disbursement.

The occasion, too, will be a gathering of old beer-drinking and teetotaler friends of the laid-to-rest proprietors of the old historic Mule Train, the late tavern and museum, just west of Rankin.

The place has been boarded up for years.

Life of the old rustic Mule Train began in 1956 when J.C. Carroll, a cowboy, ranch-hand and oil-field driller, and his wife, Georgia, built the rock tavern-museum to claim their independence.

More than two decades later, the Mule Train's slow death began in 1978, when the colorful and gentle storyteller, Carroll, died in his 54th year. His sweet wife kept the place going, remarried to become Georgia Carroll Bishop, and died in 1986.

Her son, Teddy Gene Johnson, is clearing out the estate.

"He (J.C. Carroll) was a life-long friend of mine," said Poage, who will be auctioning off the items at the request of Johnson, who was Carroll's stepson. "He had a big heart."

Nancy Poage, the Upton County treasurer, recalled the Mule Train's old holiday hospitality when Carroll and Georgia, particularly on Thanksgiving and Christmas, would prepare feasts for neighbors and travelers "who didn't have a place to go."

Peggy Sue Garner, the former Upton County judge and former Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission commissioner, named Carroll among Upton County's many legends and "characters."

The enterprising Carroll "certainly was a character" and a smart fellow, recalled Midlander Joe Salman, who grew up with Carroll in Rankin, a ranching-oil-field-farming community about 55 miles south of Midland.

"He was a jack of all trades; there wasn't any doubt about that," Salman said. "He was something else; that's just about all I can say."

Carroll, who was a spinner of tales and a collector of oil-field and ranch debris, discards, and old tools, equipment and other "things" that evolved into collectibles and antiques, and Georgia built the old Mule Train out of native rock. They lived in an old tin-decked house about the length of a railroad car.

"He used to herd cattle and work on ranches," Salman recalled. "Of course, he worked in the oil fields for years. That's where he got most of the stuff to build that Mule Train. He just did everything."

Back in the Great Depression, "when nobody had any money to do anything" but "everybody had a cow so that they could have milk and stuff and make their own butter and all that business," Carroll would make "two bits or 50 cents" by grazing cattle along the railroad's right-of-way, Salman recalled.

"I helped him do that some," Salman said.

Carroll was born in 1923.

Salman noted that Carroll once "decided to wear a tie everyday" in his overalls on his rustic chores.

"And he got a bunch of ties from his brother," Salman recalled, "and old J.C. would be out herding cows and, by God, wearing a tie. He was a character."

Melvin "Big Mac" McEwen, who also grew up in Rankin and graced the old Mule Train, recalled Carroll as a "pretty good craftsman" who "laid the rock" for the tavern.

"He never referred to it as a honky-tonk," McEwen said. "He didn't want it to be called a 'beer joint' or anything derogatory. He had the coldest beer in the country" and "pickled pigs' feet and pickled eggs." And McEwen remembered the time Carroll "picked up a wheelchair at a rummage sale, so he wouldn't have to walk" too much when he was working in the tavern-museum. "He was quite a thinker, JC was,"

McEwen used to worked on rigs on which Carroll was the driller.

And McEwen reflected on those Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays when the Mule Train played host to friends and strangers alike.

"J.C. knew how to cook it all," McEwen said. "Sometimes he would have all wild game: wild turkey, quail, deer. People would come from Iraan, Rankin, Big Lake, Sheffield, McCamey, Crane, Midland, Odessa and have a rip-roaring time."

On holidays or any day, Carroll maintained order in the tavern-museum.

McEwen said that one time an Odessa fellow spent some time in the Mule Train and became inpatient because "he didn't think a fight would ever start.

"J.C. ran a pretty tight ship," McEwen said. "He maintained order. If anybody ever got out of line, he'd shush them, calm them down."

Of Carroll and his wife, Georgia, McEwen said that they "were a real team. They were inseparable."

LAWSUIT: Breast implants were not panacea

(From 2B)

a garment showroom in the California Apparel Mart and wholesaled exotic cars.

A child of the late 1940s and the 1950s, Mrs. Prewitt "basically believed in the American family. The man is the breadwinner. The woman takes care of the children and the home."

But after she "got out into the world and started dating," she "realized that most men, young men in their 20s, did not want a built-in family with a woman who had mileage on her from babies" and raising children. "And they certainly didn't want a woman who couldn't support herself and her children. I found this out and I was going to improve myself. I can fill these breasts back out."

Mrs. Prewitt reflected on her decision: "Let's be honest. A man is attracted to you by the way you look; don't kid yourself. They (men) will not come over and talk to you because of how smart you are. If they don't know you, they are attracted to you by the way you look, period. It's a natural phenomenon. I knew that then."

The surgery and implants filled out her breasts from a 32-B to a 32-C cup size.

"It was enough to build the breasts back up and pull out the stretch marks, which means you feel pretty good, except it never made me feel good," Mrs. Prewitt lamented. "I went from one surgery to another."

But the implants were not the panacea that she had envisioned.

The right breast implant failed to set right, and the scar tissue hardened "like a rock."

All told, she had three full breast implants and four implants on the problem-prone right breast.

The right-breast implant was replaced in 1978 and again in 1979, 1982 and 1985. During that time, a fiance whom she then thought was the "love of my life" left her because of the imperfection.

Rather, "he was a jerk," Mrs. Prewitt discovered. "He didn't want somebody with a hard boob."

The middle implants had included some saline implants, but most were gels.

The women's liberation movement had long set in.

"You were supposed to get out there and do something with yourself," Mrs. Prewitt said. "I didn't have the education for it, and I didn't have the time to get the education because I had the kids to feed." She was a beautician by training but didn't like the work, mostly because of her allergies.

During the 1970s, the 5-foot-5 Mrs. Prewitt was a fitting model who "used to wear a perfect size 5 — ankles, breasts, waist, everything. "I'd stand there, and they'd fit clothes on me."

In a subsequent career in the 1980s, she was in wholesale sales of designer clothes to department stores from Los Angeles to New York to Dallas and traveled extensively.

"I felt exhausted all of the time."

And the man she was to marry didn't "seemed like the 'right' man. He cared about my children, and he cared about me. But he wanted me to work — to make

Texas women march to honor 75th right-to-vote anniversary

AUSTIN (AP) — Several hundred women — and a few men — marched to the state Capitol Saturday in celebration of the 75th anniversary of women's suffrage but were told that full equality has not been achieved.

Austin author Liz Carpenter, former press secretary for Lady Bird Johnson, led the crowd in a rousing "Hip, hip, hooray!" in honor of the day the 19th Amendment to the Constitution became law, granting women the right to vote.

"This day we remember the remarkable women of the suffrage struggle and their great story of 1920. Today we stand on the shoulders of those fantastic suffragettes," said Ms. Carpenter, 74, who was born just days after the victory.

She praised her feminist predecessors, but said the battle for equality has not yet been won.

"The vote was all we got. We ... still are struggling to get equality under the Constitution," Ms. Carpenter said. "All of our battles are hard-fought, and they have heartbreaking disappointments and then breathtaking victories, from suffrage to the Citadel."

She urged women to "reach across the aisle of politics" in the fight for equal rights.

"Depending upon each other, on women being there for each other, is what makes the difference," Ms. Carpenter said.

Women of all ages and political affiliations, some dressed in vintage dresses covered with the traditional yellow sashes of suffragettes, attended the anniversary ceremony.

"We are all here to celebrate a milestone in women's history," said Texas first lady Laura Bush.

Republican state Sen. Florence Shapiro, one of four women in the 31-member Senate, said she believes women have made strides in government and in other arenas.

"We look back at the past and we see how far women have come," she said. "Women are involved in all areas, whether it be the business arena, whether it be involved in family life."

Texas was the first Southern state to ratify the amendment and the ninth nationally, and Texas women played an important role in the fight. Their efforts are honored in "Citizens at Last: The Woman's Suffrage Movement in Texas," an exhibit that opened in the Capitol Saturday. The exhibit bears the name of the book written by suffragist Ruthe Winegarten.

Texas women began working for the right to vote after the Civil War. They sent representatives to the Reconstruction Convention of 1868 and persuaded a delegate to introduce a women's suffrage resolution, but it was defeated 4-1.

From 1893 to 1913, suffragists organized three statewide groups. Other, smaller associations followed.

On March 26, 1918, Texas women were granted the right to vote in the party primaries. Within 17 days, 386,000 women had registered to vote. Two years later, that right was expanded to all elections.

Andi Meza, 3, adjusts her sash as she prepares to march in a parade celebrating the 75th anniversary of the right-to-vote for women in Dallas Saturday. The participants wore purple sashes in honor of the event.

On Saturday, the U.S. Postal Service presented Mrs. Bush a new stamp honoring the women's suffrage movement. Ms. Carpenter urged the audience to use it to "stamp out every remaining vestige of discrimination against women."

"Address the envelope, stamp it and write the letter," she said. "The fight goes on, my friends, and we go on with the fight."

El Paso landmark store to close after 93 years

EL PASO (AP) — El Paso was a dusty border city with a U.S. Army horse cavalry base, a railroad hub, a smelter and about 20,000 residents when The Popular department store first opened its doors in 1902.

El Paso now is a city with a population approaching 600,000. The one-time cavalry base, Fort Bliss, is the largest air defense center in the West. It is a major international gateway between the United States and Mexico with an increasingly diverse economy.

And on Nov. 6, The Popular will close its doors after 93 years in business.

Store officials announced Friday that Dillard Department Stores Inc. will buy The Popular at Bassett Center effective Nov. 6. The Little Rock, Ark.-based department store giant took over all Popular credit accounts Friday.

Sears Roebuck and Co. will take over The Popular store at Sunland Park Mall the same day.

The two remaining Popular stores, the landmark store downtown and the NorthPark Mall branch, will close their doors forever.

Store officials said the closings will mean layoffs of 600 employees, although Dillard's and Sears may hire some of those workers.

Financial details of the sale to Dillard's and Sears were not disclosed.

"The Popular is one of only a handful of family-owned department stores still operating in the United States," said Edward Schwartz, The Popular's chief executive officer and grandson of co-founder Adolph Schwartz. "We wish we could remain as we are for another 93 years, but the realities of change demand otherwise."

Sears' district general manager Ken Voight said: "We look forward to growing our business here." Dillard's officials said they could not comment until next week.

Like other border retail stores, sales at The Popular were hurt by Mexico's peso devaluation this year.

However, the currency crisis that forced more than 50 smaller stores out of business this year was not a factor in The Popular's decision, said Rick Alvarado, the company's executive vice president and chief financial officer.

Popular sales are down 25 percent to 27 percent from last year, and about 20 percent of its regular customers are from Mexico, he said.

Schwartz said the time was right for the move.

"This was a complicated transaction which involved a lot of careful planning, but one which came at the right time and made good business sense," he said.

Schwartz said about 40 shareholders, most of them Schwartz family members, unanimously agreed to end the family's involvement with the stores.

Over the years, the store had attracted loyal patrons from Mexico's interior, Southern New Mexico and West Texas.

"It was a good store that enjoyed a great deal of prestige for many years but it failed to modernize," said Nora Yu Hernandez, vice president of international trade for the Mexican National Chamber of Commerce in Ciudad Juarez, just across the Mexican border from El Paso.

"It has survived worse peso devaluations in the past, so their closing has more to do with competition in the retail sector. We see this phenomenon more often in Mexico, where industry change is much slower than in the United States," she said.

The news shocked shoppers and shop workers, alike.

BREAST: Woman has learned compassion for terminally ill

(From 3B)

money. I tried. It was hard."

By 1985, she had moved to West Texas "to escape the hustle and bustle" of California and married Wendell Prewitt in 1986.

Then, in 1990, she had her last silicon-gel implants in El Paso. Mrs. Prewitt said that she had requested saline implants then; the surgery and implants were successful cosmetically and medically.

Still, Mrs. Prewitt said that her symptoms continued: insomnia, panic attacks, headaches and more. She sought advice and treatment from so many physicians that she was prompted to comment on a recent medical-information form about her hobbies and activities: "Paying doctor bills."

In her battles with breast implants, Mrs. Prewitt said that she "learned compassion for the ill" and especially for "the terminally ill."

For Mrs. Prewitt, her initial breast implants in 1974 were based on her hopes that "I'd get a better job or I'd meet a better person. I guess I relied on my looks, because I didn't have much else (skills and education) to rely on. I just wanted to be married" and live in a modest house "with a white picket fence — the American dream."

State restores funding to nine substance abuse treatment centers

AUSTIN (AP) — A state agency has restored funding to nine of 35 substance abuse treatment centers identified in an audit last month as possibly misspending more than $20 million in state money.

Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse officials said Friday the funding to the programs was reinstated because each has guaranteed it will repay the state if an ongoing investigation confirms that grant money was misspent.

"This is a way to make certain the state is protected but at the same time to get these providers back on line to serve their clients," said Jerry Neef, the agency's executive assistant.

Neef said the programs have not been cleared of misusing funds and that the drug and alcohol abuse commission believes all nine programs had questionable spending.

However, officials of the three Austin programs on the reinstatement list said the amount they owe the state will be small, compared with the amounts commission auditors initially identified as questionable.

Bill Perkins, executive director of Greenbelt Transportation in Austin, said his company ultimately will reimburse the state about $4,000. That is one-tenth of what state investigators initially said was owed.

Perkins said the investigation smeared his reputation.

Midland women receive highest recognition in church youth program

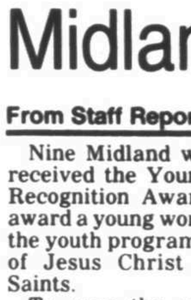
From Staff Reports

Nine Midland women recently received the Young Womanhood Recognition Award, the highest award a young woman can earn in the youth program of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

To earn the gold medallion, which symbolizes the award, each young woman completed two personal goals in seven value areas each year for four years after turning 12 years of age — a total of 56 goals in all. The values represented by these goals are faith, devine nature, individual worth, knowledge, choice and accountability, good works and integrity.

The final two years of the six-year personal progress program include completing four 20-30 hour value-related projects, two of which must be service projects and often include volunteer work at such places as Casa de Amigos, the Permian Basin Food Bank, Christmas in April, MARC, Meals on Wheels, Keep Midland Beautiful and Parents Anonymous.

The young women are:



Carroll

Melissa Carroll, daughter of Quinn and Margaret Carroll, is a graduate of Lee High School where she was active in band and orchestra and was flag corp captain. She also has served in youth leadership positions at church. Her projects included machine quilting, interior decorating and composing a musical arrangement for violin. She plans to attend Ricks College in Rexburg, Idaho.

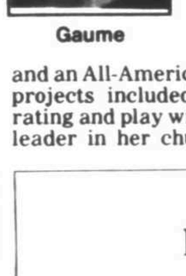
Dangerfield

Afton Marie Dangerfield, daughter of David and Pam Dangerfield, is a 1995 graduate of Lee High School where she was active in photo journalism and a member of the yearbook staff, choir, senior girls and Project Graduation committee. She has been a church youth leader and will attend Texas Tech this fall, majoring in mass communications. Among her projects were producing a video and conducting a camp for girls.

Douglas

Henrietta Ladeu Douglas, daughter of Frankie Mae Douglas, is a 1995 graduate of Lee High School where she was active in choir and wild life recreation and was the recipient of art and drug-free awards. She also has served as a youth leader at church. Her projects included genealogy/family history and art work.

Michelle Gaume, daughter of Pat and Joleene Gaume, is a 1995 graduate of Midland High School where she was a student council representative and a member of Senior Girls. She is a Texas Scholar and senior academic award recipient. Her projects included a financial management study, family relationships and a memory book. She will attend Texas Tech this fall.



Gaume

Nichole Gaume, daughter of Jack and Beverly Gaume, is a 1995 graduate of Lee High School where she was active in drama, a member of the National Honor Society, a Texas Scholar and an All-American Scholar. Her projects included interior decorating and play writing. She was a leader in her church youth program and will attend New Mexico State University this fall with a major in theater arts.

Gaume

Gray

Heather Gray, daughter of Ken and Sherrie Gray, is a 1995 graduate of Lee High School where she was active in band and a member of Texas Scholars and the National Honor Society. She has held leadership positions in the church youth program and this fall will attend Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, with a major in nursing. Her projects included cross-stitching, crocheting and home canning.

Susan Janette Griffin, daughter of L. Royce and Suzanne Griffin, is a Lee High School graduate where she was active in orchestra, drama and chorale. She was a member of the National Honor Society and recipient of Academic Letter and Health Department awards. She was a leader in the seminary and youth programs of her church and is attending Brigham Young University this fall. Her projects included quilting, first aid and compiling a book of her own poems.

Johnson

Sarah Rene Johnson, daughter of Brent and Sharon Johnson, is a 1995 graduate of Lee High School where she was active in band, color guard and photo journalism. She has been a leader in her church youth program and will attend Midland College this fall. Her projects included crossstitch and compiling a cookbook.

Christina Swiney, daughter of Carol Bradley, is a 1995 graduate of Lee High School where she was active in HECE. She has held leadership positions in her church youth program and is planning a pre-dental major at West Texas A&M University in Canyon. Her projects included a memory book and hand-quilting.

Swiney

In addition, all nine women were graduates of the church's early-morning seminary program.

Two adult youth leaders who also received the award were Mrs. Rusty (Lynne) Arnold and Mrs. Ed (Julie) Durrett, both of whom have four children and have served in the youth program for two years, along with completing two years of required goals.

Mrs. Durrett now serves as a youth seminary teacher.

Fuhrman tapes may have major implications

Whatever effect the Mark Fuhrman tapes have on the O.J. Simpson jury, they have major implications for the Los Angeles Police Department. If Fuhrman's recorded remarks portray him as a racist, lawbreaking cop, he stands to lose much of his credibility — and so does the department that employed him.

Judge Lance Ito is deciding whether any of the tapes and notes of the detective's interviews with a would-be screenwriter can be introduced as evidence to discredit the detective's damaging testimony and fortify the defense claim that Simpson is being framed. Police officials, complaining that the tapes have a demoralizing effect on the force, have quickly begun listening to those tapes also.

Deidre Hill, who heads the police commission, has forthrightly denounced "descriptions of alleged behavior that cannot and will not be condoned by this board." One of Fuhrman's accounts is said to resemble a 1978 brutality case that involved 16 officers, including Fuhrman. Fuhrman is heard boasting of routine gatherings of police officers to celebrate beating up citizens, and speaking of planting and fabricating evidence as though numerous colleagues had been involved.

Plainly a comprehensive view of what the tapes do portray remains elusive until Judge Ito decides which tapes and transcripts are admissible and which can later be made public. Only then can it be clear how much the detective was exaggerating the misbehavior to impress the screenwriter and how widespread are the practices he brags about.

Accounts of racist attitudes and epithets, and assertions that police have used unnecessary and even unjustified lethal force, are indeed disturbing to a department struggling to emerge from the Rodney King beating and other scandals. But the tapes may well have their positive uses. As Police Chief Willie Williams told his force the tapes show that "it's time to stand up and take back the image of the LAPD. Tomorrow we go out and tell the world the LAPD is a proud, proud law enforcement organization."

Williams, whose attempts at reforming police disciplinary processes and other measures have met with resistance, especially from the police union, said that any police officer who harbored racism must leave the force promptly. He pledged to press further to root out racist cops, as urged in 1991 by the special commission headed by Warren Christopher, now secretary of state.

Aside from morale, there is a vital law enforcement interest at stake. A police force already discredited in many minority communities is now in danger of losing its most important murder case in years, severely testing a jury on which minorities predominate. If one detective's racist words and attitudes prove decisive in losing the Simpson case, law enforcement will have paid a heavy price indeed. Those payments could continue as long as the LAPD falls short of cleaning up its act.

U.N. leader might rethink hired aides

UNITED NATIONS -- As Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali marks the United Nations' 50th anniversary, his peace-keepers are under fire around the world, and his political allies are caught in a different kind of cross-fire on Capitol Hill.

That's because the U.N.'s bloated bureaucracy has become a tempting target for its critics in Washington. It appears that the world's premiere peace-making operation could use a good personnel office.

Anderson

Boutros-Ghali has certainly surrounded himself with some bright and capable people. But their effectiveness has been hampered by colleagues who have found themselves on the wrong side of history, but the right side of Boutros-Ghali.

At various times in his tenure, Boutros-Ghali has employed people whose resumes might have disqualified them from almost any other reputable organization in the world. They are diplomats from disgraced regimes who are unemployed and in search of good pay and a secure home. There have been enough of them since Boutros-Ghali came on board in 1992 to warrant internal snickering here that the secretary general is running a Retired Diplomats Protection League.

The only explanation, defenders of Boutros-Ghali say, is that the former Egyptian diplomat believes diplomats are not responsible for the sins of the regimes they once represented. U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard told us that that was a fair characterization of Boutros-Ghali's thinking and added: "The main thing is that this is an international organization and you don't select your senior personnel on the basis of a moral judgment about the country they come from."

The most curious of this lot has been Ismat Kittani, an Iraqi whom Boutros-Ghali has not been able to do without. Kittani was Saddam Hussein's U.N. ambassador for many years, which should be damning enough. Kittani defended Iraq's invasion of Iran. Worse, Kittani -- a Kurd -- turned his back on his own people and defended Saddam's use of poison gas against his countrymen.

In 1992, Boutros-Ghali tapped Kittani as his special representative to Somalia. The envoy soon quit after pleading poor health -- and was appointed to the easy new post of special representative to Tajikistan.

In January 1994, he was promoted to senior adviser to the secretary general, a job so special that few know what he does. The arrangement infuriated American U.N. ambassador Madeleine Albright. And we've obtained a private cable she fired off to U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher complaining about it.

All the while, Kittani continues to draw his pension from Saddam Hussein's Iraqi Foreign Ministry.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Cactus fans get lesson in terminology

The members of the Cactus and Succulent Society of America are an easygoing bunch. They clasp to their bosoms (figuratively, of course) strange botanical specimens that only a mother could love. It takes a lot to get them upset — say, someone overwatering a Pachypodium brevicaule. (A pachypodium, from the Greek for "thick foot," resembles an elephant's foot, though the elephant's foot is daintier.)

Safire

But these amiable folk have been bristling lately. An eminent German botanist at the University of Heidelberg, Werner Rauh, had set out to demonstrate in an American lecture that cactuses (the preferred plural in Webster's New World) have thorns, not spines. Cactophiles here were aghast. Thorns? But cactuses have spines, not thorns!

Inquiries, objections, and amplifications from the United States and Europe began trickling into the Cactus and Succulent Journal (U.S.) and the society's newsletter, as well as computer bulletin boards. German and American botanists differ, it seems. The pointy projections that Americans call spines are known to Germans as Dornen. But, botanically speaking, Dornen translates into English as thorns. Correct! said the German contingent — cactuses have thorns; it's roses that have spines (Stacheln).

The ensuing debate has been surprisingly spirited, with pro-thorn and pro-spine factions bolstering their arguments not only with science but with atrocious puns. (Opponents were "spineless" or "stuck" on "splinter" issues.) The Cactus and Succulent Journal finally weighed in last fall with a scholarly article reaffirming the standard wisdom among American botanists: a spine is a modified leaf (which is what cactuses have); a thorn is a modified branch. The society's newsletter politely cut off further discussion. On this continent, cactuses have spines, Heidelberg or no Heidelberg. (And roses, by the way, have prickles, outgrowths of the epidermal layer, the journal said.)

A tempest in a flowerpot? Perhaps not. Our bottomless capacity to feud over terminology is as old as language itself. "The use of a word is one of the best membership badges in a tribe or society or subgroup," says Steven Pinker, director of the Center for Cognitive Science at MIT, and the author of "The Language Instinct." Within a group, a common word serves as a bond, he says, so when people use words differently, "the ground erodes under their feet. The whole medium of communication is compromised." People do get emotionally attached to words — even scientific ones. What middle-aged dinosaur aficionado can view the new Apatosaurus on display at the American Museum of Natural History and not think wistfully of the Brontosaurus that used to be? Brontosaurus (Greek for "thunder lizard") lost its name because findings in paleontology identified it as a dinosaur that had been discovered earlier, Apatosaurus ("deceptive lizard"). Betraying not a whit of sentiment, Mark A. Norell, a paleontologist at the museum, says: "That's the way science works." (As for Stegosaurus and Triceratops, he adds, they're "safe for now.")

Our use of names to identify who's in and who's out is something that Mark Aronoff, a professor of linguistics at the State University of New York, at Stony Brook, calls "the shibboleth phenomenon." A verbal slip, he says, can betray an outsider, like the stranger who orders a Turkish coffee in a Greek restaurant.

"Us versus them" nomenclature has seldom been as vigorously argued over the years as it has been among British and American bird watchers. (Americans prefer the term birders; in Britain they're twitchers.) The two groups often call the same bird by different English names, and sometimes use the same name for different birds. What's more, Americans recognize families of birds — like cuckoos, wrens, swallows, and so on — but give each individual species its own name. The British, however, have tended to give the best-known species the group name — THE cuckoo, THE wren. Kenneth C. Parkes, senior curator of birds at the Carnegie Museum of Natural History, in Pittsburgh, says this is "one British usage that many Americans have found ludicrous."

But some American names appear equally ludicrous to the British. "Why do you call the Connecticut warbler the Connecticut warbler when it hardly ever occurs in Connecticut?" says Mark Beaman, a British author and ornithologist. (The offending warbler is found mainly in south-central Canada and parts of northern Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan. It so happens, Parkes explains, that the first specimen was collected in Connecticut as the bird was passing through on migration. The English "are not innocent of the same kind of thing," he adds. "Their Kentish plover is sure as heck found way outside of Kent.")

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Seruice.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Aug. 27, the 239th day of 1995. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on Aug. 27, 1945, American troops began landing in Japan following the surrender of the Japanese government in World War II.

On this date:

In 1770, the German philosopher Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel was born in Stuttgart.

In 1859, Col. Edwin L. Drake drilled the first successful oil well in the United States near Titusville, Penn.

In 1883, the island volcano Krakatoa blew up. The resulting tidal waves in Indonesia's Sunda Strait claimed some 36,000 lives in Java and Sumatra.

In 1892, fire seriously damaged New York's original Metropolitan Opera House, located at Broadway and 39th Street.

In 1894, Congress passed the Wilson-Gorman Tariff Act, which contained a provision for a graduated income tax that was later struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 1908, Lyndon B. Johnson, the 36th president of the United States, was born near Stonewall, Texas.

In 1928, the Kellogg-Briand Pact was signed in Paris, outlawing war and providing for the peaceful settlement of disputes.

In 1962, the United States launched the Mariner 2 space probe, which flew past Venus the following December.

In 1967, Brian Epstein, manager of the Beatles, was found dead in his London flat from an overdose of sleeping pills.

In 1975, Haile Selassie, the last emperor of Ethiopia's 3,000-year-old monarchy, died in Addis Ababa at age 83 almost a year after he was overthrown in a military coup.

In 1979, British war hero Lord Louis Mountbatten was killed off the coast of Ireland in a boat explosion linked to the Irish Republican Army.

Ten years ago: The space shuttle Discovery blasted off from Cape Canaveral, Fla., on a seven-day mission that included the launch of three satellites, and the retrieval, repair and redeployment of another.

Five years ago: Fifty-two Americans reached freedom in Turkey after they were allowed to leave Iraq; three young men originally in the group, however, were detained by the Iraqis. In Washington, the State Department ordered the expulsion of 36 Iraqi diplomats.

One year ago: The State Department said the United States and Cuba had agreed to resume talks on Cuban migration with the hope of stemming the flow of refugees headed toward Florida.

GEORGE F. WILL

Washington whine list: Not much has changed

WASHINGTON--The Georgia politician was in high gear and high dudgeon: "Our government in Washington now is a horrible bureaucratic mess. It is disorganized, wasteful, has no purpose, and its policies--when they exist--are incomprehensible or devised by special-interest groups with little or no regard for the welfare of the average American citizen."

And:

"We've developed in recent years a welfare government. ... We've seen evolved a bloated, confused, bureaucratic mess. The American people believe that we ought to control our government. On the other hand, we've seen government more and more controlling us."

Will

Lyrics by Speaker Gingrich? No, the Georgian who unleashed those anti-Washington salvos was Jimmy Carter, campaigning--successfully--in 1976. The political archaeologist who unearthed these shards of rhetoric, Pat Moynihan, did so to demonstrate that the 1994 elections were important not as the beginning of something but as the intensification of a familiar theme.

Today's president says (to reporter Richard Reeves, in the current issue of Washington Monthly), "I share a lot of this sort of populist skepticism about Washington, which is one of the things that is frustrating to me when I identify with it, just because I can't cut through the fog that often surrounds us now and touch the American people." Speaking of fog, the president who used the word "but" 62 times in this year's State of the Union address should not be surprised that people wonder where he stands. However, he is not the only one in Washington whose words do not seem to suit his aspirations.

Wayne Gretsky, asked the secret of his success in hockey, said, "I always skate to where the puck is going, not to where it's been." The continuity of political rhetoric since Carter contrasts sharply with the discontinuity of events, which suggests that the political class is to some extent skating to where the political puck has been.

During Carter's years there was much talk about democracies being "ungovernable." The principal cause of this was inflation, the government's failure to preserve the currency as a store of value. Inflation, the great radicalizer of the middle class, prepared the ground for conservatism's critique of government's moral standing rather than just government's performance.

Lawrence B. Lindsey, a Federal Reserve Board governor, recently spoke of the "great fervor, at times approaching a religious conviction" of those who argue that "money represents a covenant between government and people. In this view, destroying the value of a currency takes on a deep significance verging on immorality with respect to government policy. To adherents of this view, inflation is a form of theft."

In the 1970s, inflation, then called "public enemy number one," was considered democracy's systemic disease. The fear was that democracy causes inflation (politicians constantly respond to the public's demands for benefits, and never have to respond to demands for taxes to fund them) and democracy cannot fight inflation (because fighting it involves inflicting short-term pain for long-term gain and democracy cannot do that). So democracies would pile up debts and then devalue the debts with inflation--a form of slow-motion repudiation.

Two decades later the record suggests that American democracy is better than that. It is because the public is not ruinously foolish and because the government is stronger than pessimists assumed. Yes, stronger. Which brings us to the deficit. Politicians treat it as "public enemy number one," which may be another instance of the political class skating to where the puck used to be.

The Congressional Budget Office projects a deficit this year of $161 billion, the smallest deficit as a percentage of gross domestic product--2.3 percent--since 1979, when the deficit was 1.7 percent of GDP. One reason it was so low in 1979 was that the income tax system had not yet been indexed, so raging inflation gave government a windfall through "bracket creep"--a constant, silent tax increase.

Economic growth is better and public spending is slower (the former perhaps partly because of the latter) than had been expected. Granted, the deficit is projected to begin rising sharply in a few years unless medical and retirement programs are restrained. But perhaps they will be.

Status quo pervades our political system

What a selection we are apparently blessed with in the political arena coming up for 1996. While all these political choices are great, and selection possibly will be difficult, the most difficult obstacle politicians must overcome to be elected will be voter apathy. Is it really voter apathy or is it the system-stretching the elections throughout the year? We are confronted with all sorts of elections, all of them important. But why must each choice require a separate trip to the polls? A special election for this, one for that, ad infinitum.

Seldom do I hear a remark by a politician or political party that makes much sense, nor do I endorse hardly any of them. But H. Ross Perot did make sense when he suggested we hold elections on Saturday and Sunday! To carry his idea a little further, why not consolidate every proposition and every office to be filled to coincide with the primary election early in the year, and the general election in the fall of the year, but both of them on Saturday and Sunday while almost everyone has free time and would like an outing with their family to boot. Go vote, then shopping, have a meal out and make it an enjoyable day.

Of course this would require an election in itself, and most politicians would be anti-change, because they would prefer to be voted in by their special-interest group. And to put it where it really is, this proposition would be too practical even to be considered. As is the tax reform situation. Don't rock the boat. Status quo has worked for decades — why should we change now?

Residents should have say on airport

It is amazing how quickly elected officials, such as the Midland City Council members, forget who put them in office and why. One council member was overheard saying, "It doesn't make any difference what the public wants, they elected us to make decisions." Sad as this statement is, it prompts the question, "Are the decisions that our council make based on what is good for the community for which the public has no knowledge, or because it sounds like the right thing to do or because there are some political and personal gains involved?"

Somewhere in the above question fits the matter of the new airport. From the recent articles precipitated by Tom Dollahite, I believe that Dollahite has done his homework and opened some serious issues as to how the City Council is going to fund this project without taxation and why in fact do we really need a new airport? The City Council with all its wisdom should seek the public's reaction on this matter. Write your council member and ask for an airport referendum.

Medicare can't afford congressional 'fix'

Most older Americans are unaware that Medicare is in danger of financial collapse. I urge you to run stories alerting senior citizens in our community about this crisis.

Congress must not "fix" Medicare as they have in the past. Simply cutting spending in Medicare will lead to rationing. Get government (especially the federal government) out of everything. Don't encourage it!

I support the position of The Seniors Coalition to give me the option of innovative free market choices in health care or allow me to stay on Medicare if I want to. Please call their Washington office at 1-800-273-9009 for more information on their solution to the crisis.

'Neglect' wasn't only thing that killed SWC

The article about the demise of the Southwest Conference ("Cause of Death: Acute Neglect," Sports page 1, Sunday, Aug. 20) makes the statement, "SWC schools started to cheat and some got caught... ." Although this statement is correct, it falsely gives the impression that all the SWC schools resorted to playing outside the rules. The sad truth is that all SWC schools, with the notable exception of Rice University, have been either suspected or proven guilty of violating the rules of the NCAA.

It wasn't "neglect" that resulted in the ruin of the conference. Your article falsely gives the impression that the SWC teams unanimously and simultaneously decided to disband the conference. Actually, UT and A&M assassinated the SWC when they decided to follow Arkansas' lead and abandon the conference. Baylor and Tech caught a ride with them, and the rest were left to fend for themselves.

It's possible that every former SWC school will benefit from the shake-up. We'll know in a few years. In the meantime, when we reminisce about what a great lady the Southwest Conference once was, let's give credit for her destruction where credit is due.

Readers' views on: The Bomb

Japanese children will now know truth

Last week, for the first time in 50 years; the prime minister of Japan, Tommiichi Murayama, apologized for Japan's actions in World War II. A group of Japanese scholars has insisted that Japan fought in self-defense. Realizing that this false truth was being taught to Japanese school children, that the whole story of World War II was not being taught and that demonstrations were going on in America in protest America's role in dropping the A-bomb, the prime minister decided to come forward and apologize for Japan's true role in the war.

The prime minister went a step further by promising to educate the children of Japan as to what truly happened in World War II and Japan's true role in it.

I think that the children of Japan should know what really did happen in World War II because we don't want more hatred to develop between our countries. Most of the American A-bomb protesters do not know about the "Great Battle Never Fought," which was a plan that involved our invasion of Japan. In this plan, over 600,000 American troops from all divisions of the armed forces were going to invade Japan. The only alternative to the invasion was to drop the A-bomb, which may have saved 600,000 American lives, two of which were my grandfathers, Jim Nelson and Jim Gotcher.

The Japanese children did not know these facts because they have been taught only that 210,000 Japanese died at American hands and that Japan had no fault because they fought only in self-defense. They were not told of Japan's initial invasion of America's Pearl Harbor, which caused the Americans to enter World War II and eventually led to their bombing of Japan. Now, they will know.

Activists should rethink position

Have you noticed that most, if not all, of the activists against the dropping of the A-bomb were not born at the time of its use? And did the activists stop to think that they may not be here today if the two bombs had not been dropped?

One more statement before closing on this subject. To all who object to the use of the two bombs, think on this for awhile. "If there hadn't been a Pearl Harbor, there wouldn't have been a Hiroshima."

The above is a quote from a bumper sticker given to me by another member of the 509th Bomb Group.

Midlanders should treat elderly better

I disagree with the recent articles in your paper about how great Midland is to live, work and retire. Anyone who believes all that about us needs to come outside and look around. Don't forget to set the alarm as you leave.

First, make a few phone calls to some doctors and medical clinics and ask them if they take new Medicare patients. Ask a senior citizen how hard it is to find a new doctor if his doctor retires. You will start to see my point right away.

We have police in our schools. Gang activity is on the rise. Vandalism and spray painting is rampant. Drive around town, fellow Midlanders, and see what your children are writing on the walls.

People used to care about their neighbors, but not anymore. We have people that think the whole world wants to hear their stereo, and it doesn't matter if it bothers anybody else. The local disc jockey says "Crank it up loud, it doesn't matter what the neighbors think." Park by the Dennis the Menace park for an hour, and count how many times you hear a boom box going off in a passing car. The disturbing the peace law is a Texas law and not a local city ordinance.

My point is this. The elderly of Midland deserve a better deal than they are getting from the rest of us. The constitutional right of "the pursuit of happiness" includes the right to live out their last years in peace and security at home. They bought their homes years ago, and now they cannot afford to move just because their neighborhood is beginning to deteriorate.

There are neighborhoods in Midland that are fighting to get control of their own property. If you — Midland — let it happen to the rest of us, then you are next. Take care of things now, before you lose control. The best way to fight graffiti is to paint over it as soon as you can get some paint.

Education board hurts MC funding

I was distressed to read recently in the Reporter-Telegram that Midland College is being forced to ask for a tax increase.

I believe the roots of Midland College's shortfall lie in Austin. I feel the reason for the shortfall is twofold. One, Midland College by law receives formula funding from the state of Texas; however the Legislature only funds 80 percent of the state's formula. Two, South Texas has received huge increases in funding for higher education in the past several years. This overspending in one area of the state is, in my opinion, a major factor in keeping the Legislature from funding 100 percent of the state formula.

Fiscal liberals on the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, our two major university systems and fiscal liberals in the Texas Legislature have continued to push for overspending in South Texas since 1992. They have done this not withstanding an Oct. 6, 1993 Texas Supreme Court decision that held that South Texas had historically not been underfunded in higher education.

Two other situations do not bode well for Midland College. One, Gov. George W. Bush recently did not oppose the confirmation of a number of Ann Richards' Democrat appointees to the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board. By doing this, he gave control of the board to liberal Democrats. In my opinion, these liberal Democrats are dedicated to overspending in South Texas. Two, Gov. Bush recently turned down a request from former Gov. Bill Clements for the appointment of Clayton Williams, Jr. to the A&M System Board of Regents. I believe Claytie would have been against overspending in one area of the state to the detriment of other parts of the state.

In my opinion, as long as Austin overspends for higher education in South Texas and the Legislature does not fund at the 100 percent state formula level, places like Midland will continually be forced to raise taxes to support their community colleges.

Gun licensing law needs to be repealed

The time has come for all good Texans, who want to carry a concealed weapon, to line up and pay out your hard earned money for a right you already have. Oh yes you do! Just face the eternal truths.

Do away with governments completely, even the Constitution of the United States and what rights do we have? Would I as an individual, under these circumstances, have the right to tell you that I have decided that you must have a license to carry a concealed gun? That you must hire someone to instruct you in the use of a gun and then pay me $200 for that license? Renewable on receipt of an additional $200 every year? How about me telling you that you must carry a concealed weapon, namely a loaded pistol, like it or not. You got it! Of course not.

When we create government, we can delegate to that government only those rights we have in the first place. Since we, acting as individuals or collectively, do not have the right to force you, my neighbor, to obtain a license to carry a gun or to not carry a gun, concealed or not, please explain to me where our legislators get the authority to pass such laws.

You can not, and they can not. We can not give that which we do not have. It is just another way to get your money and register your fun at the same time. They must believe they are endowed with wisdom and authority to do whatever they decide is best for us just because they were elected to office.

I am fed up with governments telling me what I can and cannot do without any authority whatsoever. How about you?

If you are as tired as me, then make copies of this letter and mail them to your senator and representative and send copies to your family, friends and associates in all parts of the state and ask them to do the same. This will instruct them to repeal this law as well as the other one passed back in the 1800s that took away our right to carry guns anyway we saw fit. This present law was designed to negate that law.

We can help 'can pickers', recycling

There are people who walk the alleys and streets picking up aluminum cans to earn money. Most of us use a lot of those cans. Most of the empties end up in the dumpster. I collect my empty aluminum cans in a plastic bag and when it is full, I hang it on a nail on the alley fence.

Today, I was sitting by my picture window when a "can picker" collected my cans. He waved at me. We all could help a friendly "picker" and recycle more cans.

America needs clear policy, objectives on Bosnia

By Michael D. Kaufman

Recently, the Reporter-Telegram carried two editorials on the same page concerning the Bosnian situation — one arguing for U.S. intervention and one against it. Coincidentally, one of the leading news articles that day outlined the confusion that Americans have about the whole issue. That's not surprising considering the range of information and opinions we've been exposed to recently: We should intervene. We shouldn't intervene. We should end the arms embargo. Ending the embargo will cause us to send in U.S. troops. U.S. troops are already there. U.S. troops shouldn't be under U.N. authority. U.S. aircraft are already flying missions under U.N. authority. U.N. diplomacy is the only chance for peace. The U.N. isn't effective. Cross this line and we bomb. OK, then cross this line and we really bomb. OK, then cross this line....

What are we really trying to accomplish in Bosnia? So far, our national leadership has failed to outline clear and coherent U.S. national interests and objectives in the conflict. We can't head in the right direction because we haven't figured out where it is we want to go.

Michael D. Kaufman, Lt. Col. USAF (retired), is president of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Air Force Association.

Kaufman

At any point in time, dozens of wars, border clashes and civil insurrections are raging in the world. Atrocities occur daily. That fact is tragic, but it doesn't make the United States responsible for each crisis. The determining factor for U.S. intervention cannot be the moral concerns alone, for if that were true, we couldn't help becoming involved in almost all of these situations. We have neither the resources nor the manpower to do that, even as the world's only remaining "superpower." So while we should always seek the moral high ground, the ultimate test of whether or not we should intervene is whether or not we have a distinct national interest in the conflict. So far, we have not heard such a national interest clearly articulated for Bosnia, although a credible case might possibly be made.

Once the national interest is determined, the political and military objectives must follow. And once the military objectives have been determined, military leaders should be allowed to use their expertise to determine how to obtain those objectives. How quickly we seem to have forgotten our military's considerable capability since it was so ably demonstrated only four years ago. We could do it again if necessary. But for now, this force cannot be effectively brought to bear on the situation, because there is no national direction.

The responsibility for determining our national policy on operational matters lies logically and historically on the executive branch and the president. Certainly, consultations with congressional leaders and military and foreign policy experts are in order. But the responsibility for tying it all together is still ultimately the president's. That's why he, rather than the chief justice or the speaker of the house, is the commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

One of the keys to our tremendous success in Operation Desert Storm was the leadership displayed by President Bush. He provided the political leadership necessary to articulate our position to the nation and the world. He laid out clear objectives to the military and then allowed the military leadership to determine how to run the war. This was unlike the Vietnam War, where poor national leadership resulted in public confusion and a prolonged, objectiveless war run by politicians instead of military. In military jargon, we would call this a "lesson learned."

Unfortunately, the lesson doesn't appear to have been learned after all, because our Bosnian "policy" is much more reminiscent of Vietnam than it is of the Gulf War. Sadly, our current chief executive has not voiced a definitive strategy on Bosnia, but rather seems to react to events as they occur. His opposition to the Vietnam War as a youth was no doubt partially due to a failure of the national leadership of that time to clarify and express credible objectives. How unfortunate and ironic it is that he now appears to be following that same failed path. Until his administration introduces a coherent Bosnian policy, we can accomplish no more than we have thus far, and we will continue to put American military personnel in harm's way for no discernible purpose.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702.

Hunters take aim to benefit Midland Christmas In April

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Sarah Simerka runs the trap and keeps score for David Harrison during a "shoot-out" Friday that was for the benefit of Christmas In April.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

STANTON - The message was clear: "Think Gun Safety."

And the purpose of the third annual West Texas Shoot-Out was equally clear out on the Windwalker Shooting Clays field: Get ready for the bird-hunting season, enjoy your companions and benefit Christmas In April.

"A lot of them (the shooters) are bird hunters, just guys who like to get out, get warmed up for the bird season," said Chuck Cole, BJ Services' coordinator of the West Texas Shoot-Out to benefit the Midland-based Christmas-In-April program.

Funds raised by the all-volunteer Christmas In April go toward repairing and rebuilding houses of the low-income elderly and handicapped. Since its founding in 1973, Christmas-In-April volunteers have repaired or rebuilt 3,800 houses, including 269 in the past year.

"This is a lot of fun" — shooting or shooting at four-inch clay pigeons - disks — flung into the sky from 90-foot and 37-foot towers, said Cole.

"In this particular sport, you can hone your skills," Cole said. "It's totally unpredictable," which coincides with the take-off flight of birds fleeing the aim of shotgun-armed hunters. "The guys out here have been extremely safe, nothing stringent, just basic gun safety."

Cole said that BJ Services has been "real happy doing what we do to help" support Christmas In April. The West Texas Shoot-Out "basically" is BJ Services' Christmas-In-April project. However, BJ Services has within its ranks employees who work on Christmas-In-April housing projects through their churches.

Shooters in the team sport shoot-out on Friday numbered approximately 140, including 30 BJ Services' employees and 110 representatives of their customers — major and independent oil-and-gas companies.

The international BJ Services specializes in oil-well acidizing, fracturing, cementing and sand-controlling.

Christmas In April made its money, $2,455, at the shoot-out by selling practice shots — six for $5 — and $2 tickets for drawings for a Remington 12-gauge shotgun, donated by J&W Services and Equipment Company, and six all-cotton hunting vests, donated by BJ Services.

"Everything is 100 percent for Christmas In April," said Bobby Trimble, Christmas In April's president, who helped operate Windwalker's practice range clay-disk launcher.

Windwalker Sporting Clays is owned by Midlander Ralph Cramer, who plans an Oilmen's Shoot-Out in October.

The shoot-out's prizes, the shotgun shells and the clay disks were donated to benefit Christmas in April, which operates on a $225,000 annual budget, Trimble said.

Shooter Hal Lee observed that the day's event was a "well-organized sport, and it's certainly for a good cause."

Lee, who works for Meridian Oil, got a 50 percent kill in six practice shots.

"If I can shoot that way all day," he said, "I'll be happy."

BJ's Doyce Haney, who blasted five out of six clay disks on the wing, said that the West Texas Shoot-Out's benefit is "great — absolutely."

"I think it is a wonderful support for a needy group," said Roy Doty, who is BJ's representative in Eldorado.

Michael Thomas was pleased to participate in the benefit.

"I don't think you can beat it," he said. "Having fun is one thing, but if you can help someone, that just adds to it."

Commented Trimble: "If it benefits Christmas In April, it benefits the community."

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

Old 33 LP collection likely to be hit at annual Friends of the Library sale

Sandra Wegner
County Librarian

There are no longer 33 LPs available for checkout at the downtown library, 301 W. Missouri. They have gone the way of the 78s and 45s.

The Friends of the Library started the phonograph collection in October 1967 and, at its peak, numbered close to 3,000 records. By the mid-'70s the library began acquiring audio cassettes. CDs came on the library scene in the mid-'80s.

No doubt, the library's old LPs will be a major attraction at the Friends of the Library sale in October. As people realized that the LP collection's days were numbered, the library had several offers from people wanting to buy them. Everyone gets a fair chance at the Friends' sale. This is another good reason to attend the sale on the first night.

The Friends of the Library sale will be the third weekend in October, beginning on Thursday night, Oct. 19 through Sunday, Oct. 22.

In the meantime, prepare to empty your overloaded shelves and closets as the Friends have set Sept. 25-29 as the last big push to gather used books, LPs, CDs, videos and audio cassettes before the October sale. The Friends' book drop will be open for your donations every day between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. at the corner of Colorado and Ohio.

A new set of storytimes for 3-to-5 year-olds has been scheduled for September and October at the downtown library. Parents may pre-register their child beginning Sept. 5 until all openings are filled.

Children may attend either all Tuesday or all Wednesday morning sessions. The storytimes begin Sept. 12 and will continue for five weeks. Programs start at 10 a.m., last about 30 minutes and are free. The Children's Department at 688-8991 can provide more information.

No name is as important as one's own name, and that is the theme of the first fall craft program for children over 6 years of age in the Kaleidoscope Room at the downtown library. The program is free. Craft supplies are provided Saturday, Sept. 16, at 2:30 p.m. for boys and girls to make their own "name" wall hanging.

The libraries have tallied the statistics on the summer reading program of 1995. Of the 1,397 children who registered, 24 percent read at least 25 books. Over 260 received certificates. Fifteen children received additional prizes for having read the greatest number of books. Those children read between 140 and 170 books each.

Over 1,500 children and parents attended programs.

The libraries, downtown and Centennial Branch Library at Midland Park Mall, will be closed Sept. 3-5 for the Labor Day weekend.

A Guide to the John & Rosalind Redfern Genealogical Research Center is now available for family researchers at the downtown library. Describing resources under the headings of Local Records, Periodicals, Books, Microfilm, Texas Records and Computer Databases, the brochure acquaints users with the varied materials of the genealogical collection.

Out-of-town visitors boost the economy and the genealogical collection is helping to draw people to Midland and to the downtown area. Between Aug. 1-18, researchers who signed the center guest book were from Alpine, Andrews, Big Spring, Borger, Floydada, Lubbock, Odessa, Rotan, San Angelo, Seminole and Stanton. Out-of-state visitors listed California, Kansas, Oklahoma, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Tennessee as their residence.

Movie gives astronaut's son new view of Apollo 13 adventure

By Diane Richbourg
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

CORPUS CHRISTI — James "Jim" Lovell Jr. commanded Apollo 13, the 1970 mission rocked by an explosion, forcing the crew to forgo a moon landing and simply fight to return home safely. All his 4-year-old son, Jeff, understood was that his dad wouldn't be bringing him a moon rock.

Jeff Lovell, who now lives in Corpus Christi, has grown up hearing first-hand accounts of Apollo 13 and read his father's co-authored account in "Lost Moon."

With the release of the summer hit "Apollo 13," Jeff Lovell can witness the events of the mission as never before. It has been, the 29-year-old said, an exciting and sometimes moving experience.

At the Hollywood movie premier of "Apollo 13," Lovell watched actor Tom Hanks' portrayal of his father looking out the window of the damaged craft and dreaming of walking on the moon. It's a dream Jim Lovell never saw realized.

For Jeff Lovell, it was the most emotional part of the film. "My sister-in-law was sitting next to me giving me Kleenex," Lovell said. "My Dad would trade all this in, as he would say, to walk on the moon."

"All this" has been publication of "Lost Moon" and its renaming as "Apollo 13" for softcover to coincide with the release of the movie.

Lovell, who moved to Corpus Christi in March as a pharmaceuticals representative for Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories, is thrilled about the movie.

> 'It's great for me to be able to relive this because I was so young (when it happened).'
> — Jeff Lovell, son of astronaut James 'Jim' Lovell Jr.

He's become the family historian on recent events. He tapes televised interviews of his father and others involved with the movie and makes frequent stops at the bookstore to buy magazine or newspapers for his scrapbooks, he said.

Since the premiere, Lovell has seen the movie three more times. He's pleased, he said, with its authenticity and is enthusiastic about its potential to boost interest in the space program.

"It's great for me to be able to relive this because I was so young (when it happened)," Lovell said.

Lovell watched some of the filming and met Miko Hughes, the 8-year-old actor who plays him, on the set.

The film was easier for Lovell to watch than for his mother, Marilyn, he said. She wasn't sure she wanted to relive the agonizing days spent waiting to see if her husband and his fellow crew members, John Swigert Jr. and Fred Haise Jr., would return from the troubled mission alive.

An explosion on the spacecraft resulted in a loss of electrical power and oxygen, forcing them to skip the moon landing and find a way to get home. Among other problems, it was possible the astronauts wouldn't have enough oxygen to survive the rest of the flight, that the craft wouldn't be on course to re-enter the Earth's atmosphere or be able to withstand the extreme heat of re-entry.

The initial euphoria for the safe return of the Apollo 13 astronauts quickly waned, Lovell said.

"Apollo 13 was kind of a dark chapter of NASA," a near disaster after the public had come to think of trips to the moon as unremarkable.

But Lovell equates the successful return of the crew aboard the command module Odyssey with the accomplishments of Apollo 11, the mission that delivered Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin for America's first moon walk in 1969.

His father wrote "Lost Moon" with Jeffrey Kluger to tell the true story and was convinced an historically accurate movie would make a great human story, Lovell said.

Most details of the movie are accurate, Lovell said, though some artistic license was taken. The astronauts did drive Corvettes, he said, but the tiff between Haise and Swigert, a well-respected member of the crew, at the height of tension on the craft didn't happen, he said.

Two days Hanks spent at Jim Lovell's home on Horseshoe Bay resulted in some realistic touches, Lovell said. "Unfortunately, all the kids were forbidden to go and gawk."

For instance, Lovell noted the scene in which his father was surprised to see his mother show up before the launch and greet him from across the ropes.

As he walked away, he turned and said, "You can't live without me."

That's something his dad always said, Lovell said, and Hanks probably ad-libbed it.

And Jim Lovell did hide the world behind his thumb. "He actually did that while on Apollo 8," the first manned American mission to orbit the moon, in 1968, Lovell said.

After circling the moon, the astronaut put his thumb to the window, hiding his view of Earth. "He said, 'It's amazing that I can put all that technology and all that history, everything we've ever known, behind my thumb.' "

Orbiting the moon on two Apollo missions was as close as Jim Lovell came to realizing his dream of walking on it.

A test pilot at Naval Air Station Corpus Christi in 1953, he retired from NASA in 1973 and now runs Lovell Communications, traveling the country as a speaker on crisis management, physical fitness and teamwork.

When Jeff Lovell decided what direction to take his life, he figured his interests to be architecture and advertising, not physics or being an astronaut.

He graduated from Southern Methodist University and worked in advertising in Chicago and Houston before moving to Corpus Christi with his wife and two daughters.

But with the excitement created by "Apollo 13," he's rethinking his early decision not to follow in his father's footsteps.

If Lovell had to make the decision today about becoming an astronaut, he said, "I would go in a second."

Community comes together, pitches in to help comatose accident victim

By Louise Popplewell
Victoria Advocate

TIVOLI — When Adelphia "Nina" Lynch arrived at Victoria Regional Medical Center last Thursday night, she likely was unaware that her hometown had given its heart to her.

Lynch, 52, a lifelong resident of Tivoli, has been in a coma for the last six weeks in Mobile, Ala. A stranger in that city, there were no visitors to sit by her side at the hospital.

Lynch was in a car accident on July 10. Her five-year-old grandson, Robert Lynch III, was killed. While she lay helpless so far away, her neighbors in this small Refugio County community of 800 rallied in her behalf. Lynch was one of theirs and they wanted her home.

"My husband and I wanted to do something. I've known Nina all my life. She was my neighbor, a pleasant neighbor. We knew the family was in dire need of funds to get her transported here from Alabama," said Linda Duenez, a school secretary.

In short order, a barbecue was planned by members of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, "but not only for the church — for everyone," Duenez said.

"The barbecue ... we were overwhelmed. We thought we would make maybe $1,000," she said. But after selling some 700 plates — and running out of potato salad, bread and beans — because everything was donated, the church handed the family $5,100.

Another $1,000 came from members of Tivoli's First Baptist Church.

"Everyone knows Mom," said Lynch's daughter, Lavenia Diaz. "Everyone here came together like one big family. They have just been so generous."

Lynch left Tivoli on July 9 with her son Robert Lynch, his wife and their three sons. The happy beginning of a three-week Florida vacation at her son's home in Naples ended early the next morning.

After the wreck, "Robert ran to his Mom and said, 'Don't die on me Mom. I just lost my son, I can't lose you too,'" Nina's niece, Iris Cole, revealed.

Although Diaz and her husband flew to Mobile to be with her mother and brother soon after the accident, they could not stay. And that was painful.

The family worried. How would they pay to bring the woman they loved back to Texas? Where would they find a hospital to accept her as a patient and a doctor to care for her when she was so far away?

After knocking on many closed doors, the family found Victoria physicians Richard Sawyer and Don Wendt. They accepted Nina as a patient and Victoria Regional Medical Center was willing to allow her to be transferred there.

Sharon Andress, VRMC's chief operations officer, said the hospital was happy and willing to accept her. However, because of the level of care Lynch will require, her stay at VRMC is expected to be brief so the family has made arrangements for her to be cared for at Retama Manor in Victoria.

"Once she's here," Diaz said, breaking into tears, "I just can't believe it. It's just so hard ... being so far away. She will be 31 miles from me. I'm going to be there and be with her every day."

While the future remains a question, Diaz said her mother's condition is a big question.

"They're not very optimistic in any way. With a head injury they can't tell me. They've seen people wake up and others have been in coma for many years," she said.

Remembering the folks who willingly came forward to help, Diaz is quick to praise the staff of Refugio County Emergency Medical Services.

"Even before I had any money, they were willing to go get her," she said. "They said they would work out a plan so I could pay them."

But the offer was not necessary. An ambulance from Mobile is bringing Lynch home. The cost, about $6,000, Diaz said.

"A broken heart can never be mended completely. Ours never will be with the loss of little Robert," said Iris Cole.

"But Regional and the community has helped mend ours. Bringing my aunt home means everything to us. It's given us back a mother, an aunt, a sister, a friend, a neighbor and a woman very much loved and cared for by the community," she said.

Pig farmer saves orphaned potbellies from fryng pan

By Jon McConal
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

CHICO — Homeless potbellied pigs have found a hog heaven near this town, north of Bridgeport.

The abandoned pigs owe their new lives to Terry DeGaw, who has established Serenity Springs Sanctuary. It may be the only place in Texas that specializes in taking in homeless potbellied pigs. It now is home to 36 pigs whose owners dumped them.

Helping her is Laura Deerinwater, a friend. She talked while DeGaw tended to Spam.

"The other pigs have been picking on him," Deerinwater said. "So he goes to the end of the pasture and just stands there and doesn't drink water."

That's bad for anyone in the summer, and particularly bad for pigs.

We watched as DeGaw brought Spam to the shade and water near the headquarters of the sanctuary's 20 acres. Deerinwater nodded at Harley, a 6-week-old pot-bellied pig.

"Everybody thinks they will stay that size," she said. "They don't, particularly when their owners overfeed them."

Overfeeding results in pigs that look like Hamlet. His belly dragged the ground.

DeGaw is loaded with information about the pigs that come from Vietnam and became the rage a few years ago.

"They are the third-smartest animal," she said. "And they are cute."

That's evidenced by Pixie, a white pig that performs an amazing array of tricks.

DeGaw, 51, told how her lifelong love for animals caused her to start taking in stray cats and rabbits in Dallas. Then a call from an animal shelter came about a potbellied pig. She couldn't say no.

One pig led to another.

"I soon had 24," she said.

That's when she decided that Dallas was not the best place for potbellied pigs. So she and Deerinwater, 49, who met her as a result of a story about her animals, began looking for a place in the country.

"We found this. And, a funny thing, it once was a pig farm," said DeGaw.

They moved here in April and opened the nonprofit animal reserve and rehabilitation facility. Though they specialize in pigs, they do take in other animals.

Like a blind goat, rabbits, dogs and a cat that has four-and-a-half legs.

Tech scrimmage

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech head coach Spike Dykes said he was pleased with the Red Raiders on Saturday in their first scrimmage of the preseason, although quarterback Zebbie Lethridge played sparingly and tailback Byron Hanspard not at all.

Lethridge ran 64 yards for a touchdown and completed 8 of 18 passes for 163 yards. Hanspard is nursing a groin injury.

Junior Matt DuBuc, filling in for Hanspard, took a screen pass 52 yards for a touchdown and rushed 8 times for 40 yards.

Defensively, linebackers Zach Thomas and Marcus Coleman, cornerback Tracy Hart and defensive ends Anthony Armour and Allen Wallace came up with big plays. Punter Brad Cade averaged 48 yards on eight attempts, and Stacy Mitchell returned a kickoff 98 yards.

Jarel Greaser connected on 4 of 5 field goal attempts.

The Raiders open their season at Penn State on Sept. 9.

A&M-Tulsa moved

DALLAS — Kickoff for the Sept. 16 game between Texas A&M and Tulsa has been changed to 12:07 p.m. so it can be regionally televised.

The game, scheduled to be played at Kyle Field in College Station, was to have had a 4 p.m. kickoff.

The Southwest Conference Raycom Game of the Week throughout the season will be determined after the College Football Association announces its telecasts for a particular weekend.

Dave Barnett will do play-by-play. Color commentator will be former Baylor head coach Grant Teaff.

Teaff is now executive director of the American Football Coaches Association.

Rebels impressive in scrimmage

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

VAN HORN — A good performance in a football scrimmage can bring mixed emotions. On one hand, you don't want to get too excited because it is not a regular season game, but in a way you still have to be somewhat satisfied.

That is what Midland Lee head coach John Parchman is thinking after Lee's play against El Paso Eastwood on Saturday.

"Overall, I have to feel comfortable with the way things are going," said Parchman after his team's two touchdown to nothing win. "We will always will be behind where I want us to be, but we are going in the right direction. We feel thankful and glad to be still getting better."

The scrimmage was set up to give both teams an opportunity to run 30 plays (in 15-play intervals) for the first and second teams. So a low score of 2-0 is deceiving of what Lee, especially the first teams, really did.

Lee's first-team defense started the game out against the Eastwood's first-team offense, but the El Paso school found out quickly it was overmatched. Lee's Jon Norman intercepted a pass on the Troopers' first play. Lee continued to be just as stingy on the next 14 plays, allowing one first down and keeping Eastwood virtually silent on the ground.

Lee's first team offense was just as solid as its defenisve counterpart on defense. The Rebels got the ball, marched to three-straight first downs and ended the drive with a long touchdown run by Alex Strambler. For the first 15 snaps, Lee netted five first downs on 9 running plays and six passing plays. The score put Lee up 1-0 and showed the power of Lee's ground game.

"We saw some things offensively," said Parchman, whose offenses racked up 16 first downs on the day. "The offensive line came off the ball better.

"I see improvement in areas where we needed improvement on. That was the offensive line play in particular and establishing some type of inside running game. We did that."

Taiwan takes Little League World Series

By Michael A. Giarrusso
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Three years after officials took the Little League World Series title away from the Philippines for using ineligible players, the Far East is dominant again.

Taiwan won its 16th Little League championship Saturday, beating Spring 17-3 in the second-most lopsided final ever. The team from Tainan, a city of about 200,000, may have gone on to break the record of 21 runs scored by another Taiwan club in 1987, but the game was called after four innings because Little League introduced a 10-run mercy rule this season.

"All you can really say is 'Wow!'" said manager Don Turley of Spring, a suburb of Houston. "That is the most awesome Little League team in the world bar none."

Chih Hsiang Lin threw a four-hitter and had two homers, including his sixth of the series to break a 24-year-old record.

Shortstop Chia Ming Cheng hit Wardell Starling's third pitch over the left-field fence to lead off and Lin hit a two-run homer later in the first to make it 3-0.

"I think I came out flat and struggled," said Starling, who was in the infirmary with a 100-degree temperature Friday. "We were the best in the United States, what more could you ask for?"

Starling got a small ounce of revenge in the fourth inning during Spring's only rally. Christopher Conway and Michael Cepeda singled, and Conway stole home to make it 17-1. Starling then hit a 250-foot home run to center.

The three runs were the most scored against Taiwan since its national tournament.

Taiwan's last title came in 1991, the year before the Philippines forfeited. After that, Little League began more strictly enforcing rules regarding over-age players and restricting the size of the pool of players that a team could be chosen from.

New season, new attitude

The practice field at Andrews High School did not open up and swallow the entire Mustang football team last season. But that was about the only misfortune the squad avoided.

Andrews charged into 1994 as a top-ranked team coming off a region quarterfinal appearance and an 11-2 record. Before the year ended the Mustangs had dropped eight games, used four different quarterbacks, lost their top running back and had several players quit the team.

Some Mustangs admitted this summer that last year's seniors were an unruly bunch that sabotaged head coach Mike Lebby's first season. If nothing else, team unity and discipline should improve drastically this year. That and eight starters back on defense give Andrews a chance at substantially improving on last year's 2-8 finish and challenging for a playoff spot in District 4-4A.

"Last year's attitude was joking around, people goofing off," senior defensive tackle Chisum Moore said. "It was a bad attitude from day one. People thought they knew more than the coaches."

That outlook came mostly from the seniors, according to Moore.

Wolverines steal Classic from Virginia

■ No. 14 Wolverines pull out last-second, 18-17 victory in Pigskin Classic over the 17th-ranked Cavaliers.

By Harry Atkins

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — The play of the century lasted less than a year, although it seemed like a lifetime to Michigan. And the Wolverines were overjoyed to replace it with a miracle of their own.

Freshman quarterback Scott Dreisbach lofted a 15-yard scoring pass to Mercury Hayes for an 18-17 victory over Virginia as time expired in the season-opening Pigskin Classic on Saturday.

It was the greatest comeback in Michigan history and gave Lloyd Carr a winning debut as coach.

For the 101,444 fans in Michigan Stadium and millions more watching on television, the final play of the game will likely always be contrasted with the Hail Mary pass from Colorado quarterback Kordell Stewart to Michael Westbrook.

That 64-yard touchdown, in the south end zone, gave Colorado a 27-26 victory. It sucked the very breath out of the Wolverines. They were never the same after that, stumbling to their second straight 8-4 season.

"I've been on the losing side of some of those games and I know how he feels and I know how George Welsh and his players feel," Carr said.

The 14th-ranked Wolverines, starting a freshman quarterback for the first time since 1976, trailed 17-0 before rallying to beat the 17th-ranked Cavaliers.

"It's never over until it's over, and it wasn't over," Welsh said. "If we had gotten a first down, it would have been over."

Brice interception seals Cowboys' win over Oilers

■ Late turnover the only tochdown scored as Dallas comes away with a 10-0 win in its preseason finale.

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Alundis Brice's interception late in the fourth quarter gave Dallas its only touchdown as the Cowboys defeated the Houston Oilers 10-0 Saturday night in an exhibition game in the Alamodome.

Brice, a rookie cornerback from Mississippi, caught a pass by Will Furrer intended for Chris Sanders on the Oilers' 23-yard line with 2:28 remaining and ran it in for the score.

Earlier, with 2:16 left to play in the third, Brice caught a long pass by starting Houston quarterback Chris Chandler also intended for Sanders.

The Cowboys were using the game to take a look at backup players and to give Dallas starters a rest. Troy Aikman, Michael Irvin and Emmitt Smith remained on the sidelines the entire game, not even wearing pads.

The Cowboys also scored midway through the third quarter on a 23-yard field goal by Chris Boniol, culminating a 40-yard, 11-play drive that included seven carries and a pass reception by top Dallas draft pick Sherman Williams.

Williams had 26 carries for 45 yards. Gary Brown was the Oilers' leading rusher with 26 yards on seven carries.

Houston was poised to score early in the fourth after a 33-yard gain on a pass from Furrer to Sanders that moved the Oilers to the Cowboys' 27.

Five consecutive carries by Rodney Thomas got the Oilers to the 2-yard line. Then a fumble by Furrer turned the ball over to the Cowboys as Jim Schwantz made his second fumble recovery of the game.

All week Oilers coach Jeff Fisher said he was having to make up for last week's lost preseason game, which was cancelled because of field problems in the Astrodome.

Starting quarterback Chandler played most of the game until Furrer came in with six seconds left in the third quarter. Chandler completed 11 of 24 pass attempts for 122 yards. Rookie quarterback Steve McNair didn't play.

ANDREWS: Team getting closer together

(From 1C)

"That group (of seniors) above us, they were more of individuals instead of leaders," Moore said. "So it was kind of hard for coach Lebby to come into a crew that didn't really respect him."

The Mustangs said some players put themselves above the team last year.

"Some of us played as individuals and some of us pulled together and it was real hard for some of us to fight against our own teammates," senior defensive end Brian Valenzuela said.

Lebby said the team started out with 24 seniors and had about 15 or 16 by the end of the season. Chace Gore, a linebacker who had led the team in tackles and sacks in '93, was dimissed from the team before the season began. Others defected as the year went on.

"There were so many crazy things that happened," Lebby said. "We played four different quarterbacks during the course of the year because of injuries. Our best running back played one game all year due to an ankle injury, and we had a few discipline problems. You add all that up and it's tough.

"Plus being picked where we were to start the year (No. 10 in the state inTexas Football) ... that just wasn't correct ... You look at all the excuses, but we just didn't have a very good football team."

But the Mustangs appear to have a new outlook this year to go along with their new gold helmets.

"We're ten times closer together compared to last year," said senior linebacker Mark Kidd, the only returning all-district performer on the team. "That really happened in spring. Everybody just started clicking together."

"It's a whole different attitude this year," Moore said, and Lebby agrees.

"It's night and day," Lebby said. "After a year in the system, which wasn't a lot different from before I came, the kids' attitudes (are much better)."

Moore promises this year's senior class won't remind anybody of last year's.

"We're going to let the coaches coach, but we're going to take care of the team attitude-wise and people-wise." Moore said. "If someone's not at practice we'll get on to them before the coach will, probably."

Lebby even blames part of '94's failures on himself.

"As far as the coaching, we didn't do a very good job of coaching. You look back and say, 'What if I would have...?" Lebby said. "But I know we did right when we had to discipline some players."

The Mustangs might struggle some on offense, at least to start the year. But defense is a different story. Eight players return with only two ends and one defensive back needed to be replace. The unit allowed only one team to score more than 25 points last year despite an offense that didn't give it much rest.

How strong can the defense be?

"As strong as we want to be," Moore said. "We have a lot of returning people that have been playing for three years and have playoff experience. Me and Valenzuela and Mark (Kidd), a lot of us know what it takes, we know how to lead."

Moore will move from linebacker to tackle. Andrew Allbright and Loran Long join Kidd at linebacker. Felipe Ortiz is the free safety with Misael Gomez and Justin Strickland the other returners in the defensive backfield. Savino Hernandez mans the other tackle spot and junior Frank Lopez plays end. Senior Jim Bob Cloud is the newcomer in the backfield.

The offense returns one player. But that unit may have needed rebuilding anyway. Hit by injuries, it averaged only 13.8 points a game last year.

"Last year we were just horrible on offense," said offensive tackle Michael Brooks, a 6-1, 270-pound senior, the only returning starter.

Lebby at least partly agrees.

"We had no consistency," the Mustang coach said. "We had to change to the 'I' and one back, do everything we could to move the football."

The Mustang's wishbone offense will be junior oriented, Lebby said, with junior Marcus Bueno and senior Dewayne Wilkins competing for the quarterback spot. Kidd and Allbright will play halfback along with juniors Caleb Waller and Trine Leal. Junior Brandon Yandell is the fullback.

Probable starters in the offensive line are Brooks, Chris Dulin, Raul Rodriquez and Ryan Glenn.

"It was tough but we survived," Lebby said of last year. "We didn't lose any of our young kids. They hung in there."

And for that, they should be hanging in there a lot better on Friday nights this fall.

Mustangs looking for redemption after disastrous 1994 campaign

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — Last year for the first time since 1987 the Andrews Mustangs suffered through a losing season. They came into the year picked to win District 4-4A and limped to a 2-8 finish.

But the Mustangs say they're more unified this year. And the thing that may bond them together the most is the desire to keep last season from happening again.

"From what I hear it's all, We're not having what we had last year happen again no matter what," senior defensive tackle Chisum Moore said. "We will do whatever it takes. It's a lot more commitment (this year)."

Senior lineman Michael Brooks said losing eight games was not the kind of season this year's seniors are used to.

"Last year was awful," Brooks said. "The worst we'd ever done before that was in the seventh grade when we were last or something."

Andrews went 4-5-1 in '87. Defensive end Brian Valenzuela believes '95 won't be another losing campaign because of team togetherness.

"We're more together now than we ever were last year," Valenzuela said. "And it can only get better."

But not all was bad about '94. Even with only two wins, the Mustangs still had an outside shot at the playoffs leading into the last game of the year. And first-year coach Mike Lebby said the community stood behind him.

"The people in this town have been wonderful and I don't feel a lick of pressure because we're going to do what we think is right," Lebby said.

The team also had some discipline problems and Lebby had to follow W.T. Stapler, who had decades of experience and a state championship to his credit.

"It was a little bit tough coming in last year," Lebby said. "I do feel a lot more comfortable (now)."

And if anything, the 2-8 record only inspired Lebby, his staff and players to work toward this season.

"As soon as the season was over we went to work for this year," Lebby said. "And we're ready to play. We're ready to get after it."

And ready make sure there are no instant replays of 1994.

Foreman-Tyson in works?

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Promoters Don King and Bob Arum, bitter enemies when it suits them, met on live television Saturday and agreed happily to try to make a fight between former heavyweight champions Mike Tyson and George Foreman for next March.

Although there are numerous factors standing in the way of such a fight, both men said it was the fight the public wanted.

"George just wnats to fight one more time," Arum said on "The CBS Sports Show." "We'd love it to be Mike Tyson."

King promotes Tyson, and Arum has been Foreman's promoter. Tyson is scheduled to fight Buster Mathis Jr., on Nov. 4. Foreman, who has said he will retire after one more fight, is tentatively scheduled to meet Michael Moorer in March.

"We're going to see if we can make a big finale for George, if that's possible," King said.

Foreman has said he would like to fight Tyson, but not if King is involved in the promotion. King said he was confident that could be worked out. There are more difficult problems.

Time Warmer and it's pay-per-view arm, TVKO, holds rights to Foreman fights. KingVision-Showtime Entertain TV hold pay-per-view rights to Tyson. Foreman also has contractual obligations to Moorer and Main Events, which is run by promoter Dan Duva.

"But where there's a will there's a way," Arum said. "And there's no guy in boxing, and I say this really with respect, that can make things happen and has a way to make them happen better than Don King."

LEE: Rebels score twice in scrimmage

(From 1C)

Lee's next score came on the second time the first-team offense took the field. Midway through its second set, John Thurman, who completed 7 of 11 passes and had others dropped or called back due to penalties, hit Antwan Alexander with a bomb down the center of the field.

Alexander, who bobbled the ball momentarily, held on and raced to the end zone to complete the 70-yard touchdown play. For Parchman, getting the passing game going was key, especially if opponents key on the run during the season.

"We felt like we could throw the ball," said Parchman. "You're going to have to go against other teams on Friday night and adapt against what they are giving you."

The defense did reign supreme over what was a smaller, slower Eastwood team, which is ranked as a district favorite in 5-2A.

Lee's first-team defense allowed only three first downs. Overall, Lee gave up seven first downs for the game, kept the ball out of the end zone and had some big hits in the process.

One worry for Midland Lee was that they did not get in the work for its second and third stringers. Parchman had expected Eastwood to bring three groups, but when two showed up, it meant that Lee could not get all the players the time they needed.

"We anticipated them bringing three groups," said Parchman. "In the second go around, we had to turn our third group, and they needed some work. That kept our second group from getting the reps they needed."

Midland Lee will again travel to Van Horn for its second scrimmage of the year. The Rebels will take on El Paso Socorro Friday at 7:30 p.m. The Rebels will open the 1995 season on Sept. 8 against El Paso Irvin.

That game is at 7:30 p.m. in Midland.

The Rebels first District 4-5A game in 4-5A is Sept. 29 against the Midland Bulldogs at 7:30 p.m.

Will Clark of the Texas Rangers slides into Kansas City Royals' second baseman Keith Lockhart trying to break up a double play attempt during the third inning of their game at Kauffman Stadium in Kansas City.

Tewksbury curbs Royals

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bob Tewksbury, in his first start since a rib injury sidelined him July 23, held Kansas City to seven hits through six innings as Texas romped to a 10-3 victory.

Every Texas starter had at least one hit. Mickey Tettleton, who homered, Craig Worthington and Benji Gil each had two RBIs.

Tewksbury (8-4) had been on the disabled list with a stress fracture in his left rib cage and was activated Friday night. Handed an 8-1 lead after three innings, he gave up three runs, struck out one and with customary precision, issued only one walk.

Dennis Cook pitched three innings of hitless relief for his second save.

Appier (13-8), who pitched two hitless innings in the All-Star Game and was 11-2 at one point this season, lasted only 2 1-3 innings in one of his worst outings in two years.

■ AL Roundup

Indians 6, Tigers 2

CLEVELAND — Charles Nagy struck out a career-high 12 batters, ending his string of three bad starts, and Eddie Murray stole home as Cleveland beat Detroit.

Cleveland has won seven of its last eight games, improving baseball's best record to 75-35. The Tigers have lost 11 of 12 games at Jacobs Field since it opened last year.

Nagy (11-5) struck out at least one batter in each of the first seven innings, including three while runners were on third base with less than two outs. The 12 strikeouts surpassed his previous best of 10, achieved twice in 1992, and were the most by any Cleveland pitcher since 1991.

Blue Jays 3, White Sox 2

TORONTO — Shawn Green homered to tie the game and Paul Molitor hit a broken-bat single to win it in the ninth inning as Toronto rallied past Roberto Hernandez and Chicago.

Jimmy Rogers (2-2) pitched the ninth for the win.

Athletics 11, Red Sox 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Stan Javier had three RBIs and Oakland used a six-run third inning to defeat Boston.

Todd Stottlemyre (12-5) allowed four runs and nine hits in seven innings, striking out nine to increase his season total to 156.

Brewers 7, Twins 6 (10)

MILWAUKEE — Pinch-hitter Dave Nilsson singled home the winning run with two outs in the 10th inning and Milwaukee beat Minnesota for its fourth straight victory.

The Brewers, who blew a 6-2 lead in the ninth, remained 1 1/2 games behind Texas for the wild-card lead.

Maddux sets National League record as Braves down Cubs

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Greg Maddux tied a modern major league record with his 16th straight road win, pitching a seven-hitter Saturday as the Atlanta Braves beat the Chicago Cubs 7-2 for their sixth straight win.

Maddux (14-2) eclipsed the National League record of 15 straight road victories and now shares the major league record with Denny McLain (1968), Cal McLish (1958-59) and Richard Dotson (1983-84).

Maddux, a leading candidate to win his fourth straight Cy Young Award, has not lost a road decision since June 27, 1994 at Montreal.

Mets 7, Padres 6

NEW YORK — Rookie Bill Pulsipher came within one out of his first major league shutout before San Diego scored six runs in the ninth inning and lost to New York.

Pulsipher (5-6), a 21-year-old left-hander who has become the ace of the Mets staff since his callup in mid-June, won his fourth straight start but lost his shutout when Archi Cianfroco hit a two-out RBI single in the ninth.

■ NL Roundup

Phillies 9, Dodgers 4

PHILADELPHIA — Lenny Webster, playing in place of injured Darren Daulton, had three hits and two RBIs as Philadelphia Phillies used an eight-run fourth inning to beat Los Angeles 9-4.

Sid Fernandez (5-1) won his fifth straight decision. He allowed three runs and five hits in 5 1-3 innings, striking out six and walking none.

Giants 2, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Matt Williams hit a tiebreaking home run in the sixth inning, leading rookie Jamie Brewington and San Francisco past Montreal.

Brewington, who gave up a home run to Rondell White in the first inning, combined with three relievers on a four-hitter.

Mark Carreon went 4-for-4 with a double to extend a career-high 10-game hitting streak for the Giants.

Reds 7, Pirates 6

PITTSBURGH — Frank Viola blew a five-run lead in his first start in 15 1/2 months, but Reggie Sanders continued his big series with a homer and go-ahead RBI single and Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh.

Viola lasted 4 2-3 innings in his first appearance since requiring reconstructive left elbow surgery last year, but couldn't hold a 5-0 lead and was lifted in the Pirates' tying three-run fifth.

Marlins 6, Astros 2

MIAMI — Willie Banks pitched seven strong innings night to win for the first time in his past 11 decisions, and Florida handed Houston Astros its ninth consecutive loss.

The Astros' losing streak is their longest since 1983, when they started the season 0-9. The Marlins extended their club-record 12-game home winning streak.

Cardinals 5, Rockies 4

DENVER — Danny Sheaffer hit his first career grand slam night to cap a five-run ninth inning as St. Louis rallied to beat Colorado.

The loss dropped the Rockies one-half game behind the Philadelphia Phillies for the National League's wild-card lead.

Panthers defeat Giants

The Associated Press

CLEMSON, S.C. — Things looked familiar Saturday for the Carolina Panthers and the New York Giants. The Panthers won again without a great rushing game, and New York quarterback Dave Brown was injured again.

The expansion Panthers used two second-half field goals by John Kasay to rally for a 6-3 victory, giving them a 3-2 record in an exhibition season in which their offense didn't produce a single rushing touchdown.

With the remnants of Tropical Storm Jerry enveloping the region and dumping heavy rain on Clemson's Memorial Stadium, the contest turned into a barrage of dropped balls and other miscues.

The Giants appeared to have more trouble with the conditions. They had seven fumbles and were penalized 12 times. The result was the first loss since November for New York, which closed the 1994 regular season with seven consecutive victories and won its first three exhibition contests this year.

The Panthers' only long drive of the day set up a 24-yard field goal by Kasay that tied it with 14:52 left in the game. Backup quarterback Jack Trudeau completed 6-of-9 passes for 79 of the drive's 87 yards.

The Giants had one good chance the rest of the way, moving the ball to the Carolina 24 with five minutes left.

But after one fumble, three false-start penalties and one for an illegal formation, the Giants found themselves punting from their 43.

The only scoring of the half came when Giants linebacker Michael Brooks intercepted Frank Reich's pass, setting up Brad Daluiso's 37-yard field goal.

Chiefs 17, Vikings 13

MINNEAPOLIS — Linebacker Tracy Rogers returned a fumble for a touchdown on the first play from scrimmage and Kansas City went on to beat Minnesota.

The Chiefs (3-1) also got a 1-yard touchdown run from J.J. Smith to hand Minnesota (2-2) its first home exhibition loss in eight games since Dennis Green became head coach in 1992.

Inconsistent in limited action through the first three exhibitions, the Vikings' first-team offense was pathetic in its final tuneup before the Sept. 3 opener at Chicago.

Rogers 14-yard TD return on the first play gave Kansas City a 7-0 lead.

49ers 17, Seahawks 7

SAN FRANCISCO — Steve Young made only a cameo appearance, leading two scoring drives in less than a quarter of work, and the San Francisco 49ers beat the Seattle Seahawks 17-7 Saturday night in an exhibition finale for both teams.

Young, who completed six of 10 throws for 103 yards, left the game with 1:58 to go in the first quarter. Many of the other regulars soon followed him.

San Francisco (3-2) was already without five injured starters, including both offensive tackles. The injured players, with the possible exceptions of fullback William Floyd (knee) and right tackle Harris Barton (calf) are expected back by next Sunday, when San Francisco opens defense of its Super Bowl title at the New Orleans Saints.

Seattle (2-2) hosts Kansas City in its opener under new coach Dennis Erickson.

Rick Mirer played the first half for the Seahawks, completing 7-of-16 for 121 yards before giving way to John Friesz.

Mirer threw a 36-yard touchdown pass to rookie Joey Galloway, the second time the two have hooked up for a score in the preseason.

Galloway, the Seahawks' top pick, streaked past Eric Davis and Mirer lofted the ball beautifully, allowing his receiver to make the catch in full stride. The score midway through the second quarter pulled the Seahawks within 10-7.

But the Seahawks hurt their chances to score with three turnovers. Then after getting inside the 49ers' 5-yard line in the final seconds, the Seahawks were turned away by a goal-line stand.

Elvis Grbac, who relieved Young, threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Nate Singleton with 14:55 left.

Singleton is expected to see more playing time as the 49ers' third receiver during the absence of top draft pick J.J. Stokes, expected to miss the first month of the season with a broken bone in his right hand.

Brent Jones caught three passes for 68 yards during San Francisco's opening series, which Young finished by throwing 14 yards to Jerry Rice for a touchdown 2:49 into the game.

final three possessions, got the ball back with 2:35 remaining. And they needed it all as they drove 80 yards in 16 plays.

Michigan had just 12 seconds left when Dreisbach dove for a first down at the Virginia 15. Three incompletions later, there were only four seconds left when Dreisbach took the fourth-down snap and looked left.

"There were four seconds left and I knew I had to put the ball in the end zone, especially because the linemen were yelling at me to throw the ball in the end zone," Dreisbach said. "I was going to go to Amani Toomer, but Virginia rotated their coverage. So, I looked across to Mercury Hayes and he was wide open."

Dreisbach lofted a high, arching pass that has hauled in between defenders Paul London and Ronde Barber in the back corner of the end zone.

"The players in the locker room told me that it's not all me," a dispondent Ronde Barber said. "There's 10 other guys on the field. It's not the end of the world."

Hayes barely kept one foot in bounds as he caught the ball. The crowd roared after field judge Collin McDermott pointed his finger emphatically inside the line, and then raised both arms to signal a touchdown.

"My goal was go make sure I was in bounds and catch the ball," Hayes said. "I was stutter-stepping to stay in bounds, but I was really concentrating on the ball.

"I knew it would be the last play. I caught the ball and then a whole bunch of guys jumped on me, so I knew it was over."

No extra point was attempted.

Carr, who took over as coach when Gary Moeller was forced to resign last spring following a drunken outburst at a restaurant, was mobbed by well-wishers, players and fans who swarmed down on the field.

"The poise that we displayed and the execution under pressure was really something beautiful to watch," Carr said.

It turned out to be a record day for Dreisbach. He completed 27 of 52 attempts for 372 yards with two interceptions and two touchdowns. In the fourth quarter alone, he completed 12 of 24 for 236 yards, including two spikes to stop the clock.

"We work on our 2-minute offense every practice," Dreisbach said. "So, today was just like another practice. Signal in the play, run to the line, and execute."

Driesbach's 52 pass attempts broke Michigan's single-game record of 47 by Dick Vidmer in 1966 against Michigan State. His 372 passing yards broke Todd Collins' school record of 352 against Minnesota in 1994.

Hayes had seven catches for 179 yards and two TDs.

"To be up 17-0 in the fourth quarter, it hurts to let it get away," Virginia safety Percy Ellsworth said. "I haven't solved Mercury Hayes yet. He's a great receiver and he took the game over in the fourth quarter."

DALLAS: Preseason schedule finished

(From 1C)

Backup Dallas quarterback Jason Garrett hit his first seven passes and completed 9 of 13 for 65 yards.

The first half was a scoreless affair, though the final two minutes offered a few fireworks.

With 1:32 remaining in the half, the Oilers' Todd McNair fumbled on the Houston 39 after catching a pass by Chandler. The Cowboys' Darren Benson recovered on the Houston 41.

Then, on the Cowboys' next play, Sherman Williams fumbled and Eddie Robinson recovered for the Oilers at the Houston 44.

Dubbed the "Governor's Cup," the game was the final of the preseason for both teams. Alamodome attendance was 52,512.

The Cowboys finished the preseason 2-3; the Oilers were 0-3.

Spring still proud of team

By Terri Langford
Associated Press Writer

SPRING — There are no losers in this woodsy, working-class home to Little League's national champs, the Northwest 45 All-Stars.

"They played a heck of a year," said Randy Tomplait, 37, as he watched Spring's 12-year-old heros fall 17-3 to Taiwan on Saturday in the championship game of the Little League World Series.

About 200 residents of all ages crammed inside the R&R Sports Bar & Grill, festooned with red and blue balloons, to watch the game on 25 screens, cheering throughout the heartbreaker.

"They've got the heart, the guts and the parents behind them. They've got everybody behind them. These little fellas can play," said Carmen Anderson, 44.

Spring quickly fell behind 6-0. Spring had just one hit until the fourth and final inning, when Christopher Conway and Michael Cepeda singled. Conway stole home and Wardell Starling, the losing pitcher, then hit a home run to center to make it 17-3.

Starling's homer had the whole bar on its feet cheering, despite the fact that the blast just narrowed the final margin. The game was called after four innings because Little League introduced a 10-run mercy rule this season.

"All I wanted was one," said Gail Walker who was with her two daughters watching the game. "That was a great ending."

Residents in this town of about 20,000 have been on a cloud ever since the Northwest 45s became the best Little League team in America on Thursday by beating Yorba Linda, Calif., 3-1.

"It's real exciting. Even if they don't beat the 20-year-old Chinese, it's icing on the cake," said Joe Gomez, 33, referring to East Asia's reputation for using older, ineligible players.

Taiwan's championship was its first since 1991. After the Philippine team was forced to forfeit for using ineligible players in 1992, Little League banned Taiwan and three other countries for a year and promised to make sure that all players on a team were from the same region and the correct age.

After the loss, there was no mourning or sour grapes from fans.

"It's not too bad," reasoned Gomez. "We pick our all-stars from 200 kids. They pick theirs from 200,000."

As the Spring players shook hands with the Taiwanese victors on national television, Spring fans back in Texas began making plans for an all-star homecoming. The team returns to Texas at 9:15 p.m. Sunday.

"These kids have been winning since they were 9 years old," said Ken Shockley, director of the Northwest 45 Sports Association. "This year they took it all the way."

Little League dad arrested

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — A sympathetic judge gave a Texas man a break on local burglary charges, allowing him out of jail in time to watch his son play on Saturday in the Little League World Series championship.

Brian Wayne Bartlett, 38, whose son Brandon is the left fielder for the Spring team was arrested Wednesday afternoon by state police on burglary, theft and receiving stolen property charges.

He was committed to the Lycoming County Prison in lieu of $25,000 bail and missed seeing Spring win the U.S. championship on Thursday.

But in a case that might have taken a minimum six to move through the court system, Bartlett's case was complete in two days.

He waived his preliminary hearing and Friday afternoon and pleaded guilty Friday before Senior Judge Charles F. Greevy.

During the proceeding, Greevy, who has seen most of the series games this week, filled in Bartlett on what he missed.

Bartlett said that his decision to travel to Williamsport from the Houston area had cost him his job. He said his boss refused to give him time off to attend the game and then fired him when he said he would go anyway.

Bartlett was arrested Wednesday after he wandered into an open room at the Days Inn in Loyalsock Township, where he had been staying with his wife.

The room was the general manager's, who found Bartlett in the room and called the police.

banned in 1993 and an uncharacteristically sloppy Taiwan team went 1-2 in the series last year.

"The circumstances in Taiwan are different compared to what they were five years ago," said manager Tzyy-Tsan Wang, who coached Taiwan to the 1990 title. "At that time, you must bring a World Series championship back home.

"Now the pressure is not as great on the kids."

Taiwan, which won its first title in 1969, holds the record for largest margin of victory in a final with a 21-1 thrashing of Irvine, Calif., in 1987.

Lin hit a three-run homer in the fourth to break the record of five in a series owned by former major leaguer Lloyd McClendon of Gary, Ind., and Wen-Hsiung Lin (no relation) of Taiwan.

Lin's six homers came in five games, while McClendon and the other Lin played just three. McClendon hit his homers in five at-bats.

In the first three innings, Lin held Spring to just one hit, a bunt single by Brandon Bartlett. Turley said he tried to speed up his players' bats so they could hit Lin, who was throwing around 70 mph.

"We tried to shorten up our swings to where we were actually going to just throw the barrel of the bat up the middle of the field and try to put the ball in play," he said. "We didn't execute that very well. Actually, in the fourth inning we did. That's the old, 'Too little, too late.'"

Labonte wins Goody's 500

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Terry Labonte, trying to hold off hard-charging Dale Earnhardt in heavy traffic, won the rain-delayed Goody's 500 on Saturday night while sliding backward across the finish line at Bristol International Raceway.

Earnhardt, who had several other run-ins during the long night, slammed into the rear of Labonte's car, sending the leader spinning at the end of lap 500.

"Dale caught me and gave me a little shot in the back," Labonte said. "I stayed in the gas and just beat him across the line."

Earnhardt, who pitted during the last caution period on lap 390, used his fresh tires to charge from ninth on lap 429 to second on lap 487. He nearly caught Labonte, who was slowed on the final lap by several lapped cars racing each other for position.

"Those guys didn't show any respect for the leaders," said Labonte, who picked up his third victory of the season and 16th of his Winston Cup career.

The start of the 500-lap race on Bristol's .533-mile concrete oval was delayed 89 minutes and the race was further slowed by a race-record 15 caution flags for 105 laps.

Angels fall to Wichita in series finale

Staff Report

WICHITA — Wichita starter Kris Ralston allowed two earned runs in seven innings of work here Saturday as the Wranglers beat Midland 5-3 in Texas League play. Ralston got his ninth win of the year with seven strike outs and the help of a Wrangler offense that scored its runs on only seven hits.

Midland starter Jeff Schmidt walked seven Wranglers in five innings and took his 11th loss of the year against four wins. Schmidt allow all five of the Wichita runs, four of them earned.

The Angels took a 2-1 lead with a run in the fifth. But Wichita came back for two runs in both the fifth and sixth frames. The Angels got shutout relief work from Steve Renko and Mike Schooler over three innings to no avail.

Midland moves on to its last series of the regular season today in San Antonio. The Angels' Korey Keling (8-5) will be on the mound for the first of a five-game set, beginning at 6 p.m.

Rate & Credit Policies

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations

The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments

Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsibilty, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads

The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsibilty in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsiblity for the omission of an ad.

Announcing a Public Hearing Regarding Proposals for HIV Health and Social Services Projects

Public Health Region 9 of the Texas Department of Health (TDH) will hold a public hearing
August 31, 1995
9:00 a.m.
Texas Department of Health
2301 N. Big Spring, Ste. 300
Midland, Texas 79705

The purpose of this public hearing is to allow local comment on proposals submitted to the TDH from agencies and organizations within the 17 counties of the Permian Basin. These proposals request funding to provide treatment, health and social service programs for persons with HIV infection. Citizens are encouraged to attend the public hearing. Written and oral comments will be accepted at the hearing.

Written comments may also be mailed to the TDH directly. These will be accepted until 5:00 p.m., August 31, 1995, and may be mailed to

Casey S. Blass
Director
HIV/STD Resources Division
Texas Department of Health

APPRECIATION

Perhaps you sang a song, or sat quietly in a chair;
Perhaps you sent beautiful flowers if so, we saw them there.
Perhaps you sent or spoke kind words, as any friend can say.
Perhaps you were not there at all,
just thought of us that day.
Perhaps you prepared some tasty food, or maybe furnished a car.
Perhaps you rendered a service unseen near at home or from afar.
Whatever you did to console the heart,
We thank you so much - Whatever the part.

NOW HIRING FOR OUR NEW KENT KWIK ON BRIARWOOD!

KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

AVIS LUBE

Why join TEAM KENT?

What turns you on about your job? For most people, these thoughts focus on several different areas. How does your current job stack up against TEAM KENT?

SALARY

Our minimum starting salary is $5/hour. Manager trainees can start at $300 a week or more (depending on experience.) We also give you a SIGNING BONUS ($200 for full-timers and $100 for part-timers) at the completion of your first week!

SECURITY

Our company offers stable employment year-round. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) at your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to tailor-make a schedule that meets your needs! Our Kent Kwiks are open 7 days a week, with most open 24 hours a day. Our Avis Lubes are open daytime hours only.

BENEFITS

We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement, and a profit sharing plan. There are also incentive programs available that allow you to earn extra money on a quarterly basis!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

95% of our Managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. We offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you come into one of our Kent Kwiks or Avis Lubes!

SO HOW DO WE MEASURE UP?

Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With Kent, the chances are very high that you could be running one of our locations, making in the mid to upper $20's, plus bonuses! If all of this interests you, the first step is to pick up an application at any one of our Kent Kwiks or Avis Lubes, complete it, and bring it to our Midland area office (3314 No. Loop 250) between 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. Monday - Friday. If you live in Odessa, we take applications at 809 So. Crane Hwy. On Tuesdays at 9 A.M. and Saturdays at 10 A.M. You will then take a battery of tests and questionnaires which give us the information we need to determine if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and a drug test is required. Relocation within our operating areas may be available.

HOMES

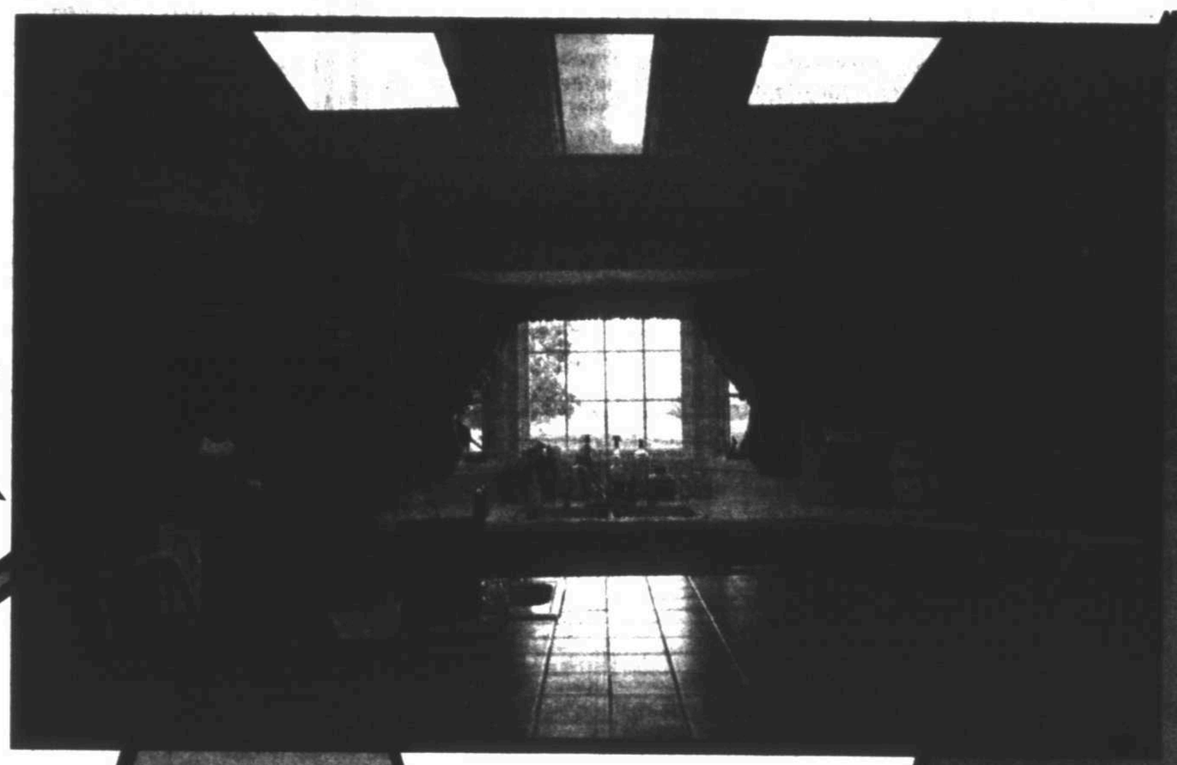
WELCOME HOME



Set on a spacious two-and-a-half acre lot in the prestigious Saddle Club Ranch Estates, this is a very large and elegant family home that features a number of unique aspects. Sure to please even the most jaded of home seekers, this is a family home that is easily adaptable to the needs of children both young and old.

The floor plan is very flexible in order to accommodate the changing needs of families. Some rooms, such as the playroom on the ground floor and the upstairs suite have been designed to be used as nurseries or playrooms. Other child orientated features include split 'stable' doors: a great help in controlling the wanderings of toddlers.

Listed for $295,000, this is an extremely impressive property that was custom built to a very high standard. Design elements such as the sunken den, high vaulted ceiling in the master suite and hardwood floors in the halls are testimony to the attention that has been paid to the design and construction of this home.

Attention to detail has not been spared on the practical elements of home life either. For example, the oversized utility room offers color coded laundry chutes and hampers: white clothes in one chute, colored in another.

The open combination of formal dining and living works very well as it is a large, bright room with picture windows overlooking the patio and garden. Convenient features such as a serving hatch through to the kitchen help to make entertaining a breeze. The other formal room with its plush decor and view over the half-moon drive through its bay window is perfect as an extra sitting room or as a music room.

With five bedrooms and three-and-one-half bathrooms, there is plenty of space for family and guests.

This is a large house set on a large plot of land which has been used to good effect. The second floor deck, reached by an iron spiral staircase, surveys the rear of the house which faces onto the patios and the two paddocks.

For more information about this exclusive property which is located at #2 Dunblane, either stop by the open house which is scheduled between two and four o'clock this afternoon, or contact the listing agent.

Roberta Aldridge of Langston Realtors is representing the property and she can be reached at 683-3424.

Helpful hints

Develop a green thumb without getting your hands dirty.

You don't need a green thumb to plan a beautiful garden: these days you need a computer. An increasing number of homeowners are turning to computer software programs to help them plan their landscaping and give their homes the desired 'curb appeal' so often mention by realtors. Newly created computer programs allow the homeowner to select plants that will thrive in the given climate.

Vicky Garrett
Chaparral
Realtors

Programs include information on best planting procedures and care, as well as the ability to see what your garden will look like in five years.

Two of the most popular programs are: LandDesigner (in Boulder, Colo. 1-800 336-3127) and 3D Landscape (Palo Alto, Calif. 1-800 242-4546).

The software is available on both CD and diskette, and some landscape and nursery stores are beginning to carry such programs, as do some bookstores and software stores.

Energy efficient Resource offers free info.

Interested in saving energy and recycling? An excellent resource for free information comes from the Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy Clearinghouse (EREC). They have an extensive library of free brochures covering such topics as passive solar home design, energy efficient appliances, home heating options, recycling, weatherization materials and techniques and other subjects of interest to the homeowner.

To receive a list of fact sheets and brochures that are available call 1-800 363-3732 or write to EREC, P.O. Box 3048, Merrifield, VA 22116.

Wealth in your home

According to Webster, the definition of wealth is "valuable and large material possessions."

Kay Sutton,
Kay Sutton
Realtors

Most Americans gain wealth through the ownership of real estate. How?

Many people do not realize that when they make a monthly payment on their home or other real estate, they are contributing to their own wealth. A portion of the payment goes to pay off the principal - the money borrowed to make the purchase. So you might say that the home functions much like a savings account, with the big advantage of getting a place to live in the bargain.

The house is likely to increase in value as time passes, adding to the 'account'. Over a period of years, this acquired wealth - known as equity - may become substantial. When you decide to sell your home, your equity could help you to buy that 'dream house' you've always wanted.

Owning a home can help you achieve your financial and lifestyle goals. In addition, there is no feeling quite like the security you feel knowing you own your own home.

Whether you are buying or selling, or just have real estate questions you'd like answered, call your local realtor.

This antique Little Black Sambo doll is displayed with his tiger, umbrella and book.

Text by Linda Anderson Photos by Joe D. Williams Design by Elizabeth Edens

Steven Porterfield, owner of The Cat's Meow where he houses his Doll Museum, is shown with some of his treasured antique dolls that are a part of the museum.

Dolls have been part of the world of children almost as long as parents have been. Dolls — these small human-like figures — come in all sizes, ages, shapes, races, cultures and creeds, and are perfect for cuddling, telling secrets to and loving unconditionally.

"The earliest known doll-like figures are wooden images found in Egyptian graves dating from about 2000 B.C.," according to information from the World Book Encyclopedia. These figures probably were not toys, however, but instead "were religious figures, not playthings. The Egyptians believed they could enjoy life after death ... They buried these dolls with the dead to provide them with servants in the afterlife." The encyclopedia also shows a Greek doll from about 400 B.C., which is made of clay and is one of the oldest dolls still in existence.

Children's dolls came into being later, the World Book went on. "Doll-like figures have existed since ancient times. But dolls used mainly as toys for children probably were uncommon in most societies before the 1700s."

The dolls in Steven Porterfield's Doll Museum are not quite that old, but for the most part they are antique. To be classified an antique, a doll has to be at least 50 years old, he said, and about 100 of his dolls qualify, since they date from the 1850s to the 1920s.

Please see DOLLS/2E

Although Barbie dolls are not old enough yet to be considered antiques, Steven Porterfield of The Cat's Meow has several in his Doll Museum. Barbie dolls are collectibles and can be very valuable.

Surprise party honors Abbott's 70th birthday

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

Surrounded by family and longtime friends and neighbors, Gene Abbott celebrated his 70th birthday recently.

McKnight-Harrison

The surprise party, held around the Abbott pool, was arranged by the seven children of the honoree and his wife, Rachel.

The party planners were Jack and Terri Abbott of Houston, Carol and Gene Shumate of Roswell, N.M., Patty and Tim Hodgens of Midland, Jan and Tom Matchus of Midland, Harland Abbott of Kansas City, Mo., John and Shailette Abbott of Austin and Mike and Sarah Abbott of Midland, asisted by the Abbotts' seven grandchildren.

Guests enjoyed delicious finger foods, an open bar and dancing to Big Band music arranged by Llano Entertainment of Lubbock. The tables were colorfully decorated with balloons and citronella candles.

Among the 100-plus guests were Gene's former University of Oklahoma roommate, Bill Lokey, and his wife, Lee, of Fort Worth; Rachel's siser, Margaret Furstenburg of Houston; her brother and his wife, Bob and Betty Jones of Houston, and former Midlander Mike MacCurdy of Dallas.

A native of Niagara Falls, N.Y., Gene has resided in Midland for more than 40 years. He is owner of Abbott Building Co.

TO CELEBRATE the engagement of their son, Bryan DuBose, and Natalie Cromer, Gloria and Judge Willie DuBose entertained with a reception last weekend at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

The wedding will take place on Dec. 16 in Sulphur Springs.

Assisting with the party were the DuBoses's daughter, Denise, and her husband, Mark Hammett of Austin.

Guests enjoyed an array of mouth-watering delicacies, and decorations featured flowers in crystal stemware. Background music was provided by Charlotte (Mrs. Jake) Whitaker at the piano, and Allison (Mrs. San) Smith, flutist.

Out-of-town guests included the bride-elect's parents, Lou Ellen and Charles Cromer of Sulphur Springs; the prospective groom's aunt and uncle, Beth Ann and John Spraberry, and his cousins, Stacia and Kyle Peterson, all of Lamesa, and former Midlander Fay Daugherty (Mrs. Jason) Wallace of Amarillo.

Among Midlanders spotted in the crowd of 250 were Nancy and Bill Milner, Sue and Jim Brusenhan, Cherry and Bob Crawford, Kathleen and William Hernandez, Shane Stokes, Anabel and Willis Schmidt and Robbie (Mrs. Roy) Davidson, with her daughter, Diane Claiborne, and granddaughter, Shauna Claiborne.

ALL THE CHILDREN, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of Betty and Clark Matthews gathered at their home on Aug. 11 to surprise and honor Clark in an early observance of his 90th birthday.

The event was arranged by the Matthews's daughter and son-in-law, Kay and Bill Shoemaker of Midland, and their son, Clark J. Matthews II of Dallas.

Grandchildren and great-grandchildren present were Pam Koenig and Matthew of Dallas, Dan Shoemaker of Midland, Susan Shoemaker of Austin, Christy and Thad Stammen of San Diego, Calif., Trish and the Rev. Richard Williamson and Jennifer, Trevor and Megan of Houston.

The Matthews consider Helen (Mrs. A.J.) Hill of Dallas and formerly of Midland a family member and were happy to have her join them for the occasion.

A highlight of the day for Clark and Betty was meeting their fourth great-grandchild, Megan, for the first time.

WHEN LORA SPARKS and Dan Harvick cut their portions of the cake at their recent wedding reception, they used a beautiful etched sword, which belonged to the bride's maternal grandfather, the late Gordon Hawkins. It has been a family tradition for 40 years for all the family wedding cakes to be cut with the sword.

The couple were married on July 21 in the Greenwood Church of Christ, with the reception following at the church and hosted by the bride's parents, Kathleen and Paul Hamels.

In a special addition to the ceremony, the bride's six-year-old daughter, Haley Sparks, received a ring to recognize her inclusion in the new family.

Pre-nuptial festivities included a bridal shower in June given for Lora by Christie (Mrs. Duane) McBride and Cindy (Mrs. James) Pyle in the McBride home. The newlyweds will be honored this evening with another shower at the Greenwood Church of Christ.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted at the church by the groom's parents, Kay and Bill Harvick, and his grandmother, Willie Grace Rankin.

Demi Turner plays with her rare munchkin cat in her Austin home. The cats have extremely short legs due to a bred genetic mutation. A controversy has developed over whether or not it is cruel to breed this type of cat.

Fur flies among feline fanciers over low breed

By John Davenport
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Short in stature, but long on status, the hot new feline fad is an itty-bitty kitty called a Munchkin.

But the arrival of the kangaroo-legged critters has spawned a cat fight of near cataclysmic proportions.

Fans of the Munchkins ordinary except for super-short legs due to a nature-produced genetic difference say the stubby tabbies with a ferret's gait, low-slung body and frisky attitude are the cat's meow.

Foes contend they're just genetically flawed mutants and say the cat world is going to the dogs.

Demi Turner of Austin thinks her Munchkin named Tucker is "pussitively" wonderful.

"He looks like a cross between a rabbit, a ferret and a cat," said Turner, 19. "Kind of like a low rider."

TURNER GOT Tucker two years ago from family friend Marion White, who disputes charges that Munchkins are shortchanged in the personality or intelligence departments. They're also neither short-tempered nor short-lived, she adds.

"They're intelligent, good companions," claims Tucker, an Austin cat breeder. "And a little kookie."

MUNCHKIN MANIA got off to a slow start in 1983 when a Louisiana woman found a pregnant black female cat living under a pickup. In Blackberry's first and subsequent litters, she passed the trait on to about half of her kittens.

One of Blackberry's sons, Toulouse LeCat, was given to Kay LaFrance, who with a Calico named Praline established a colony of short-legged cats on LaFrance's Louisiana plantation.

LaFrance had a hard time giving away the short-legged progeny, unaware that her shortsightedness would cost her financially.

Word of the unusual critters reached Dr. Solveig Pflueger, chief of genetics at Baystate Medical Center in Springfield, Mass., who asked LaFrance for a couple of cats to help in her studies of human birth defects.

The former San Antonio woman took a liking to her two subjects as did daughter Sigrid Smith. When the first litter was born, Sigrid named one of them Munchkin the Mushroom launching the name for a new breed.

Pflueger said her daughter wasn't aware of the "Wizard of Oz" munchkin connection. She based the nickname on a common term of endearment around their house.

"But it fit," Pflueger said.

Although there are only about 400 recognized Munchkins nationwide, she said, probably more exist.

It's just that their owners don't know it.

"I get calls from all over the country from people saying, "I always wondered ...'"

She explained that a Munchkin results when a naturally occurring domestic cat breed undergoes a minute, spontaneous change in its genetic heritage that only affects the long, tubular leg bones.

The normal cat backbone is not affected.

"This is one of the most common mutations occurring in cats," she said, adding that a Munchkin gene will produce kittens with the same short legs.

THE GROUND-HUGGERS come in a wide variety of colors and both short and long coats.

Breeder Terri Harris of Florida jumped on the Munchkin breeding bandwagon and has supplied them all over the world, charging $450 and $1,500, depending on whether the kitten has papers.

Currently, she is selling "as many as my cats will put out" and still has a waiting list of 63 buyers.

Pflueger is hoping to introduce Munchkins to San Antonio through a friend she met at a local cat club while going to medical school at University of Texas Health Science Center from 1977 to 1985.

But her friend wants one that will win at cat shows and Pflueger has yet to come up with "a top of the line cat that's going to bring home ribbons."

NOT EVERYONE is caught up in the Munchkin magic, though.

Some members of The International Cat Association, headquartered in Harlingen, are caterwauling over the board of director's 7-4 vote last September to allow the cats to compete in the new breed and color class.

Katherine Crawford of New Orleans considered the breeding of what she calls "freaks of nature" such a catastrophe that she resigned as a TICA show judge.

Foes of the felines point out that Munchkins can't jump as high.

Pflueger counters that the cats are able to maneuver like a road-hugging car and are equally adept at climbing.

"And some people don't necessarily want a cat that can jump up on a table," she adds. Laurie Bobskill of West Springfield, Mass., president of the International Munchkin Society, says a Munchkin's charm isn't all physical.

"They're natural clowns," she said, explaining that they love to bound, do pirouettes, play tag with one another and sit up on their haunches like a prairie dog.

"Some cats are recognized for their beauty and grace," she said. "Munchkins offer comic relief.

They're just a hoot ... You're laughing at something that's cute and knows it."

DOLL: Love gives dolls special value

(From 1E)

Another 100 or so of the dolls in his museum — Barbies of all hair colors and styles who date from 1960-65 — aren't really antique, but they are collectible.

The museum, which is located in Porterfield's business, The Cat's Meow on Andrews Hwy., are to be seen, not bought. "The dolls in the museum are not for sale," he said. "They are just my collection."

Porterfield's fascination with dolls has been life-long. "When I was a child I used to hand-sew doll clothes for my sisters," he said. "I made money when I was in college by making reproductions of dolls."

Today, he is much more fascinated with the real thing, not reproductions, and spends a lot of time restoring these antique dolls to their original state. "I love antique dolls," Porterfield said. "When I restore and repair them, it's like I get to restore a little bit of history."

RESTORING THEM involves some research. "There is so much information on dolls (available). Once you know the company who made it, you can get an idea of the styles (of clothing) and wigs and things that were used at that time."

One of his favorite dolls is a French fashion doll from the 1870s who was made not only to display fashions, but was "made as a toy as well — a very expensive toy," Porterfield said. "When she was new she probably cost about $8, which was a month's wages for the average person in those days. She is worth $4,000 today."

Another favorite is a Frozen Charlie doll from the 19th century, a china doll who is called by that name because his joints don't bend. The girl dolls in this line were named Frozen Charlotte. Smaller versions of Frozen Charlies and Charlottes were made to be played with in the bath tub, Porterfield said.

Through the centuries, all kinds of materials have been used to make dolls, including corn husks, clay and wood. Some of the antique dolls in Porterfield's collection have leather or cloth bodies and china or porcelain heads. Even then, these dolls were made with joints that moved.

'What is most important is the original body and head.'

— Steven Porterfield, owner of The Cat's Meow and the Doll Museum

"In the 1880-90s, they did composition bodies where all the joints moved," he said.

COMPOSITITON DOLL bodies were "actually made of ground wood putty," said Porterfield said, which gave the dolls hard bodies, rather than soft ones like those made from cloth. "After World War I, they started making (doll) heads in composition too."

Other materials used to make some of his dolls are papier mache, china and porcelain. "Bisque is (a kind of) porcelain," Porterfield said. "China is just like porcelain except is has a glaze on it."

Another kind of doll was more homemade. "Old dolls (heads) sometimes were made out of tin." Porterfield said. "Their bodies were rags or whatever mother could make." These dolls were cheap to make and easy to repair — if her head got broken or dented, you could just go down to the local feed store and buy another head for your doll; if her body was dirty or torn, mom could make a new one.

In the late 1940s, dolls began to be made of hard plastic. About 12 years later, he said, companies began making dolls out of vinyl, which is still in use today.

When restoring an antique doll, Porterfield said, "I re-cover (damage) rather than replace. Most of mine have the original cloth or leather bodies.

"It's better to have what they had instead of replacing, even if the wig is a little threadbare, because if you replace, you lessen the value. The more original a doll is, the more valuable it is."

But because antique dolls are very old, "there aren't very many that are completely original."

Porterfield is not alone in his fascination with dolls. Collecting is a way of life for some, he said. "Doll collecting is one of the fiercest competitions. I've watched women fight over a doll. I've watched men do the same thing.

"I always felt there's enough to go around."

Potential collectors — whether for fun or for profit — are advised to first, know what appeals to them. Collecting dolls, Porterfield said, "depends on what you like. ... If you are collecting new dolls, buy what you like. Good quality and good craftsmanship should be considered when buying a doll."

Estate sales and antique shows are good places to look for older dolls, he added. And the advice of an expert or two is always welcome, especially for newcomers in the doll-collecting field.

But never forget, Porterfield said, that dolls were made to be played with. While antique dolls may be too fragile or too valuable to be used as toys today, the fact that children of 150 years ago played with them only makes them more precious.

"Shelf dolls" who have never known a child's love don't seem to have the same appeal as dolls who have been played with, he said.

And new dolls — even expensive ones — need children. "Oh, sure, children are going to take off things, cut off their (the dolls') hair, which will make them less valuable later on," he said, but "once a doll gets a certain age, you're not going to worry" about missing hair or accessories. "What is most important is the original body and head. Once a doll is 80 or 90 years old, its value is still there as long as it is as original as possible."

In the meantime, children of all ages need to play with dolls, no matter what they cost. Love gives dolls value that money can't buy.

...MIDLAND PALETTE Club Art Center will present "Chalk Talk" by Peggy Bingham 7:30 p.m. Sept. 11 at the art center. At 9:30 a.m. Sept. 12, Ms. Bingham will give a demonstration in oil at the center, and will conduct a workshop in oil that afternoon.

Ms. Bingham, of Meadow, is known for her "Chalk Talk" programs and her works in oil, watercolor, pastels and wearable art.

All interested persons are invited to attend these programs. Reservations should be made by Sept. 6. For more information or price of attending the workshop call 694-0516 or 689-9680...

...CENTERS FOR Children and Families is offering a new service for parents. Heartline, a free telephone information and referral service at 520-2282, is open 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Staff members of the organization will be available at that number to help with parenting assistance. Types of assistance include information on child development, how to help children deal with hurt feelings, effective communication, positive discipline, tools to help build self-esteem and information on parenting teenagers. Heartline is operated in conjunction with the centers' Parents Anonymous program...

...LEE HIGH School Football Booster Club will host the 1995 Meet the Rebels night 7 p.m. Thursday at Lee Fieldhouse. New head coach John Parchman and the coaching staff, as well as the 1995 Rebels, will be introduced. Cheerleaders, Dixie Dolls and the Rebel Band will be on hand.

Lee Youth Center will serve chili, beans, potato salad, iced tea and ice cream sundaes. Cost will be $5 per person. Tickets will be available at the door. Spirit items also will be available for sale.

For more information call 699-4008 or 685-4768...

...MIDLAND AREA Exxon Annuitants are planning a Sept. 23 trip to Fort Stockton. Included will be a tour of the St. Genevieve wineries, a catered lunch in the community center and a visit to the Annie Riggs Museum. Cost will be $25 per person, for both members and non-members. The trip is open to the public. Reservations will be on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information call 694-1187...

...PETROLEUM MUSEUM will have fall docent training classes 9:30 a.m. Sept. 7 at the museum. All interested persons are invited to attend. Classes will feature museum study, guest speakers and tour demonstrations. The museum, which is visited each year by more than 12,000 students from Midland and the Permian Basin area, works closely with the Midland Independent School District curriculum. The museum is dedicated to telling the story of the oil and gas industry and has special emphasis on Permian Basin history. For more information call 683-4403...

...BALLET MIDLAND will sponsor two workshops, presented by the Fort Worth Dallas Ballet, beginning at 10 a.m. Oct. 7 in Midland. Questions about growing pecan trees answered

By Deborah A. Benge-Frost

Without a doubt the pecan tree is one of the most popular shade and nut trees grown in Midland County. Almost every residential street has a pecan tree somewhere, and possibly several. Pecans are great for shade and they produce one of the best nuts ever created, but they do have several little problems that you may have encountered. These are some of the problems and questions that commonly occur at this time of year.

Benge-Frost

Q: OK, it's started again. That sticky stuff that makes life on my patio miserable. It happens every year about this time and leaves all the chairs, tables, patio and even the grass shiny, wet-looking and sticky. What can I do to stop this mess?

A: The problem is common to pecans and is caused by aphids. Aphids are small-bodied insects that feed on the bottom side of leaves. As they feed, they excrete a shiny, sticky substance called honey dew. During late summer, populations build up so that the honey dew becomes a real nuisance. Control of aphids is very difficult with dissapointing results. Chemical control gives such poor results, that you may want to consider spraying trees with an insecticidal soap. These seem to give just as good if not better control without killing beneficial insects or causing harmful drift.

If you decide to spray a pesticide, a commercial pest control operator will be able to provide better coverage and control than a homeowner trying to spray a large tree.

If you are considering planting a pecan in your landscape, don't plant it near your drive, patio, entrances or other outdoor high traffic areas. Planting in the landscape where the difficult aphid problem won't present a messy honeydew problem is best.

Another consideration for avoiding aphids, would be to plant the pecan variety called "Pawnee," which seems to have a natural resistance to severe aphid problems.

Q: Help! My pecan tree is dropping lots of nuts. Large, green pecans are dropping at an alarming rate. When I cut into the pecans, they are brown, rotted looking and watery. What's happening and what can I do?

A: What you are experiencing is called "August Drop" of pecans. Pecans shed about 25 percent of their nut crop every year. Most of the drop occurs earlier in the season when the pecans are small, and usually goes unnoticed. At this time of year, pecans are in what's called the "water stage" and the nuts are more vulnerable to stress or shock. A stress at this time will accentuate the August drop.

The typical stress situation is insufficient water, but widely flucuating soil moisture levels, too much water, poor drainage or low soil oxygen levels in the soil can do the same. It is very critical that at least an inch of water be supplied to pecan trees each week during August and September and up to shuck split. If trees are growing in turf grass, apply enough water for the grass and the tree. Be sure to apply water to the dripline area of the tree, not just the base of the trunk.

Other types of damage that accelerate August drop are hot, dry blowing winds, insect damage (especially stink bug), and/or a heavy crop load.

Q: I've had a problem with my pecans that seems to get worse with each year. Someone told me I've got a worm in the shuck and that August is the time to spray for it. Is this right? If so, what should I use to control the pest?

A: If you've got pecan shucks that don't open well in the fall, shucks that stick to the pecan shell or leave a rough, black patchy area on the shell, or you've seen a worm in the green shuck, then you've got Hickory shuckworm. This can be a very damaging and persistant pest.

Mid- to late August is the time to spray for Hickory shuckworm. Timing of spray is critical for control. An even more accurate indicator of spray time is half-shell hardening, which usually occurs during mid- to late August. Slice through the pecan with a pocket knife to determine where the shell has hardened. The hardening begins at the blossom end and progresses toward the stem end.

If you have a serious shuckworm problem you can spray with Bt (stands for Bacillus thuringensis, which is very safe), diazinon or sevin (might make an aphid problem worse). Good spray coverage is essential for controlling this damaging generation of the shuckworm.

Good clean up of leftover shucks in the fall, winter and spring will help reduce next year's shuckworm population.

Q: A limb on my pecan tree has dropped all of its leaves and keeps trying to leaf out with pale, poor new growth. What's going on?

A: There's a couple of things you might consider as the problem. One is a possible herbicide damage. If your tree is situated in the backyard, by a fence line, driveway or other structure where a soil sterilant could have been used, that may be the culprit. Alleys, fencelines, cracks in pavement or asphalt, caliche driveways and outbuilding foundations are commonly treated with long residual herbicides to control weeds. Even if the tree isn't situated near these areas, the extensive lateral roots of a pecan will grow much beyond their dripline into treated soil areas, showing up on that side of the tree as yellowing or defoliating leaves.

Another cause for leaf drop is stress. A combination of zinc deficiency, heat stress and water stress can cause limbs to defoliate and attempt to leaf out poorly. Spraying trees with foliar zinc sprays early in the growing season will help correct the zinc deficiency, and regular deep watering in the drip line of the tree can help reduce this type of stress-related problem.

Q: How can I find out more about taking care of my pecan trees?

A: The Texas Agricultural Extension Service is an excellent source of information on pecans. We have many publications, but one particularly helpful is "Home Nut Production — Pecans B-5001." Another source of information is the annual Permian Basin Pecan Seminar sponsored by the Permian Basin Pecan Committee. This seminar will not be held this year, because Odessa just played host to the State Pecan Show, but it will be on track for 1996.

Another good source of information is the Midland Pecan Growers Association that meets once a month and sponsors several educational programs on pecan culture.

For an extensive reference, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service has recently updated a publication called "Texas Pecan Profitability Handbook." For details on ordering this book call your local county Extension office.

These are just some of the problems and questions that are commonly asked this time of year. If you have a question concerning pecan culture, give your County Extension office a call.

Annual hardware trade show features the latest in gizmos and thingamajigs

By Barnaby J. Feder
N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — It's not as glitzy as a consumer electronics show, not as mouthwatering as the annual gatherings of the supermarket or restaurant industries, and not as much fun as a toy fair or sporting goods convention. But the annual trade show of the hardware industry is hard to beat for sheer variety.

This year's show, which ended its four-day run at the cavernous McCormick Place convention center on Aug. 16, attracted more than 2,600 exhibitors with 250,000 products.

They ranged from age-old basics like hammers to the latest in remote-controlled entertainment, lighting and security gizmos.

The official claim was that some 1,300 new products made their debuts at the show, but that total included minor design and packaging changes.

Some of the true novelties were prototypes kept in back rooms so that manufacturers could preview them for buyers without tipping their hands to the knock-off experts.

Here's a highly arbitrary review of some of the products a visitor hiking the 12 2miles of aisles could have encountered.

FULL-SPEED-AHEAD AWARD

■ Black & Decker's small family of cordless tools using the interchangeable Versapak battery unit has experienced a population explosion.

The new 3.6- and 7.2-volt cordless products are four drills (one of them variable speed), another flashlight, two new screwdrivers, an air broom, two trimmers, a detail sander, a small shop vacuum cleaner and a multipurpose saw capable of cutting PVC pipe, plasterboard and wood up to two inches thick.

Black & Decker also introduced two units that can charge four of the 3.6-volt Nicad batteries simultaneously, a step up from the two-port Versapak starter kits.

The batteries and chargers are sold separately from the tools. Black & Decker says that plenty more Versapak products are in the pipeline.

CASEY'S-SECOND-CHANCE AWARD

■ Rubbermaid, the heaviest hitter in plastic consumer products, struck out when it tried to get into children's toys during the 1980s. Its second shot at the market has begun with a racy sled it displayed here along with its mind-boggling variations on the theme of plastic container, from bird feeders to giant storage sheds.

The purple sleds, with either neon green or pink accents, are expected to retail for under $30 and, the company warns, will go too fast for any child under 7 years old.

HARD-ACT-TO-FOLLOW AWARD

■ After entertaining journalists at a press conference with a snazzy magic show, Yenkin-Majestic Paint introduced its Diamondhard paints, which it says are the first water-based enamel paints that will adhere to any surface without a primer while producing better gloss and color retention than oil-based paints.

The company says that it stumbled on its formula — a mixture of acrylic resins — two years ago while searching for the paint industry's Holy Grail: a high-performance alternative to oil paints.

Yenkin's show proved the hand is quicker than the eye, but is this "the paint to replace all other paints," as Yenkin claims?

If retailers follow Yenkin-Majestic's recommended prices, it will cost consumers about $10 a quart or $32 a gallon to decide.

The paints are just becoming available in Midwest stores, but the company says they will be in selected hardware stores and building-supply chains nationwide by the end of the year.

THE-CHILDREN-SHALL-LEAD-THEM AWARD

■ A tie. Rhodes American, a steel-wool manufacturer, has adapted baby wipes for the messy painter with its Oops! Swipes line of tear-off, pre-moistened towel-ettes to clean up spills and spatters. The consumer-size wipes, which measure 8x5-inches and have been available since early this year for $3 to $4 for a package of 30, are now being supplemented by a larger Propack for painting contractors.

The Hunter Fan Co., having enjoyed some success this year with a children's ceiling fan featuring the comic-strip character Snoopy, its first product based on a license, is planning to woo adults with fans based on designs licensed from Pfaltzgraff, the venerable Pennsylvania tableware designer. The fans, with cases and decorative work based on the Folk Art, Yorktowne, Tea Rose and Hopscotch china patterns, are expected to retail for $129 to $149.

WHO'S-ON-FIRST AWARD

■ Models of owls and other predators are just part of a huge array of products aimed at scaring away mice, squirrels, pigeons and other varmints. Rice Lake Products of Minot, N.D., had already designed a weather-vane perch for its plastic owl so that it would move enough in a slight breeze to frighten many pests.

But it expects this year's addition, a lifelike screech, to keep familiarity from breeding contempt.

The battery-powered cry, which was actually taped from a hawk, is emitted every few minutes during the day. The photocell-activated screech stops at night.

Owls by the half dozen are available directly from the company for under $100 apiece (800-BUY-OWLS), but customers can expect to pay up to $150 for one at retail outlets. In the pipeline: a peregrine falcon with the same screech, which the company hopes will send pigeons flying.

Bear in mind this is a market niche, one of many at the show, where anything that is even partly effective is hailed as a brilliant innovation.

Annual Fort Davis festival planned

Staff Reports

FORT DAVIS — Twelfth annual Friends of Fort Davis National Historic Site Restoration and Preservation Festival has been scheduled for Sept. 2 at Fort Davis.

The day-long event, beginning at 9 a.m., will include crafts demonstrations, 19th century children's games, firearms exhibit, barbecue, 1884 baseball game, melodrama, silent auction and military demonstrations and drills of the 1880s presented by "living history" groups from Fort Davis andn Fort Concho National Historic Landmark in San Angelo.

Visitors will have the opportunity to use a new self-guiding interpretive brochure that involves using clues to help solve the "mystery of the talking walls."

The festival is the main fund-raising activity of the Friends of Fort Davis NHS. Proceeds will benefit funding projects at the fort for which government funds are not available.

All festival activities will take place on the grounds of the fort. No admission will be charged.

Experts advise, the sharper the edge, the safer the knife

By Edward R. Lipinski
N.Y. Times News Service

Everyone has cutting tools around the house. There are knives and scissors in the kitchen. Chisels, planes and saws are in the workshop.

The tools will cut better and be safer to use if the cutting edge is sharp. Sharpening tools is not difficult to learn. It consists of wearing away some of the metal to form an acute angle on the cutting edge.

Essentially that is an abrasive cutting process using abrasive papers, stones, files or strops. It consists of two distinct stages. The first is grinding. That involves wearing away the metal to reduce the main thickness of the blade. Honing, the second stage, wears away discrete amounts of metal to give the blade a fine edge.

For occasional sharpening use coated abrasives. Abrasive papers are sandpapers with aluminum oxide or silicon-carbide grains bonded to a paper or cloth backing. They are inexpensive and come in a variety of grits from coarse to fine. Place abrasive papers on a flat surface and use a lubricant like oil or water. The lubricant controls the cutting action, or how much is worn away, and it floats away the particles.

MOST PEOPLE find that bench stones are better than papers because they last longer and are easier to hold in place. Bench stones are rectangular blocks of abrasive material. They are man-made or quarried. Besides the well-known oilstone, waterstones and diamond stones are also available.

Oilstones are available as natural stone, aluminum-oxide or silicon-carbide composition stones. Natural oilstones are quarried in Arkansas — they are often called Arkansas stones — and are graded as hard, or fine, and soft, or coarse. The soft stone cuts faster but leaves a rough cutting edge. It is necessary to hone the cutting edge with a hard stone.

Man-made oilstones like aluminum oxide and silicon carbide are cheaper than natural stones but they leave a coarser edge. Here again it is necessary to polish the edge with a hard natural stone.

As the name implies, oilstones require oil as a lubricant. Natural stones are porous and quickly soak up the oil. For that reason manufacturers recommend immersing the stone in a pan of oil for a few hours before use. This is not necessary with man-made stones.

Some manufacturers offer a special oil, but most people use motor oil or machine oil. In general, the thicker the oil, the slower the cutting action. It is possible to customize the viscosity of your cutting oil by thinning it with kerosene. The cutting oil will collect the metal particles as they are removed. These can collect in the stone, so wipe away the oil frequently and recharge the stone with fresh oil.

Many woodworkers do not like oilstones. They feel that the oil collects on their tools and stains and contaminates their projects. They prefer to use waterstones. Since water is less viscous than oil, the stones cut faster than oilstones. These stones are also available in natural or man-made compositions. Man-made stones are designated in grit sizes ranging from 100, or coarse, to 8,000, or ultrafine.

BEFORE USING a man-made waterstone, soak it in water for about 10 minutes. That is not necessary with natural waterstones. Keep the stone wet during the sharpening operation.

It is possible to create a very sharp and polished edge on a tool by starting with a coarse stone and progressing to an ultrafine one. These stones have a fast cutting action, but they also wear down quickly.

Usually this wear creates an uneven or "dished" stone surface. Therefore, it is often necessary to flatten or "true" the stone's surface by grinding it on a piece of medium-grit silicon-carbide paper with water [illegible]

Diamond "stones" are not really stones at all. Instead they are flat steel plates with microscopic diamond crystals bonded to them. They are also called diamond plates or honing blocks.

Because the diamond particles are incredibly hard, the stone's surface receives little wear and remains virtually flat and true indefinitely. They require no lubricant although it is a good idea to add a little water periodically to wash away accumulations of metal particles.

Diamond honing blocks are manufactured in grit sizes from 600, or coarse, to 1,200, or fine.

BENCHSTONE ARE positioned on the workbench. The tool to be sharpened is then stroked across the surface of the immobile stone. For some tools like axes, handsaws and garden tools it is easier to lock the tool in a vise and dress the edge with a hand-held stone or a file. Hand-held stones are called slipstones.

They are available in the same materials as benchstones. They are also available in a variety of sizes and shapes to fit the contours of any possible cutting edge.

Files come in a variety of cuts and shapes, although small triangular and flat files are probably the most useful for sharpening tools.

After grinding and honing with a stone, you can produce a razor-sharp edge on a tool by stropping. Most people are familiar with the leather strop used by barbers to sharpen straight razors. Similar strops of cowhide or composition material are available for the workshop.

Gloria McFarling talks to her 4-year-old daughter, Amy, about leaving home for school in Waco. Mrs. McFarling says it's important to convince children that school is a fun and educational experience, not a punishment.

Going-to-school jitters common with young children

By Mia B. Moody
Associated Press

WACO — Your child has been going to school for a week now, but he still cries each time you drop him off. Sound familiar? It's not uncommon.

The back-to-school jitters are something that almost every young child experiences during the first few weeks of school. It's hard for youngsters to leave familiar surroundings behind and adapt to new environments.

It's the parents' role to stay calm and make the transition as comfortable as possible. To do this, honesty is the best policy, said Laura Middleton, parent of a 4-year-old son and a teacher at Waco Montessori School.

What works for her son, Brent, is letting him know exactly what to expect, she said. It's important to mention school casually without harping on it. Let the child know you will not be separated forever, Middleton said.

"I tell Brent, 'I'm going to work, but I'm coming back'," she said.

Once you get to school, make the goodbye short and sweet, she said. But don't duck out when the child is not looking. Say something like, "Goodbye, I love you and I'll be back."

It is also important to be positive, said Gloria McFarling, a nurse at Waco Christian School. Let children know that school is fun and educational and don't use it as a punishment.

Nutrition is another important factor, McFarling said. If children eat before they go to school, they have one less worry.

"Children interpret hunger in different ways," she said. "If their tummy hurts, they may associate that pain with going to school."

McFarling said parents should also make sure their children get enough rest at night. If they wake up grumpy, that's a sign that they need to go to bed earlier.

Grumpiness will only complicate the transition from home to school, she said. Children are easier to get dressed and off to school if they have had enough sleep.

Betty Murphy, a principal and a teacher at Waco Christian School, said parents of children who are really having a tough time adjusting to school may try sending a favorite toy or stuffed animal with the child.

It is not as traumatic for children if they are able to sit with something with which they are familiar, she said. They can also discuss the day with their special friend once they get home.

Murphy recommends that parents tell children what time they are going to come back and stick to it. If children are too young to tell time, parents can give them a frame of reference such as a few minutes after nap time or right after lunch.

Parents of excessive criers should remember that it is usually not as bad as it seems, Murphy said.

"Parents who stand outside the door and look in on the child through two-way mirrors, will discover that they usually stop crying as soon as they leave," she said.

'Legendary' cars from Depression years on display

By Herbert Muschamp
N.Y. Times News Service

Depression? What Depression? Some people breezed through the 1930s in magnificent style. "Moving Beauty," a show now on view at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, rolls out the legendary automobiles in which the rich rode out hard times. Bugatti. Lagonda. Bentley. Voisin. It's comforting to know the crash didn't force everyone to hit the road on foot.

There has never been a used-car lot quite like this one. Other museum shows have related cars to the history of painting; this show presents the automobile as art in itself.

Restored, repainted, polished to a high showroom gloss, the 50 cars, which will be on view through Oct. 15, are presented like mixed-media sculptures.

Organized by Pierre Theberge, the director of the Museum of Fine Arts, "Moving Beauty" plays it pretty but dumb. It doesn't offer much perspective on the wider cultural or social significance of the car.

Nor are there any reminders of highway fatalities, respiratory ailments, ruined landscapes or other unfortunate consequences of the automotive age.

Not all the cars date from the 30s. The show starts off with some early examples of the horseless carriage, like the fabulous blimp-shaped Alfa 40/60 Ricotti from 1914. And there is a sampling of car-of-the-future prototypes designed by Pininfarina.

But the 1930s was a golden age, when the sensation of covering ground was new, when gridlock lay far in the future and automakers outdid themselves to create cars in the image of freedom.

Roland Barthes once wrote that the Citroen sedan was the 20th century's cathedral. If so, then "Moving Beauty" offers an ambitious display of liturgical design.

But to my eye, these cars are a throwback to beliefs far more primitive than those embodied at Chartres or Notre Dame.

They are far too erotic to be encompassed within the realm of medieval piety. Rather, they summon up the archaic worlds of Greek temple sculpture or Babylonian fertility cults.

The eroticism of these objects is hermaphroditic. They've got all that boy stuff, like speed, torque and muscle beneath the hood. But then all the gadgetry gets packed into some surprisingly girlish figures.

The incomparable Talbot-Lago T150 SS of 1938 is a six-cylinder metal Wonderbra on wheels.

In contrast to today's cars, which seem to want to look all the same, the cars of the Golden Age are remarkably diverse.

The 1929 Auburn 8-120 Speedster, a boat tail painted a startling shade of pumpkin, seems to take its visual cue from yacht design, while Count Carlo Felice Trossi's black Mercedes-Benz SSK, completed in 1932, could be a mobile bomb.

What most of them have in common is the desire to achieve an aerodynamic effect; in this religion, redemption comes in the form of speed.

Filippo Tommaso Marinetti, the Italian Futurist poet, once wrote that "a racing automobile is more beautiful than the 'Victory of Samothrace.'"

Well, not quite. But the "Victory of Samothrace" didn't come with a rumble seat.

Midland College class on popular music, culture covers Motown to Madonna

■ Dr. Larry Griffin says American popular music has become "international" and can be heard anywhere in the world.

By Shawna Loyd

Do you know what Doo-Wop is? Have you ever heard of The Turtles? How about the factors influencing music of the 60s?

The answers to these questions and more can be found in Rock Music-Recent American History, a new course at Midland College this fall.

According to Dr. Larry Griffin, Division Chair of Fine Arts/Communications, it is only right to offer a course that examines the impact of Rock & Roll music on society. "The history of this music offers important information on the development of our culture," Griffin said. "You can go anywhere in the world and hear American Rock & Roll—in English." Griffin also notes the global ramifications of Rock & Roll. "American popular music has become international," he said.

Instructor Michael Jordan said the class will deal with Rock & Roll as "a function of the society it grows out of. This music reflects the social change, stability and instability of the 50s and 60s," Jordan said. "The women's movement, battle for civil rights, Vietnam—its all there in the music."

The class will examine the history of popular music from the Rhythm and Blues of the 40s to mainstream modern rock and alternative music styles such as Rap, Gothic Rock and Alternative American rock. "I want to look at where it all fits," Jordan said. "We will work with a wide definition of popular music that will be all encompassing."

> "Rock & Roll is a function of the society it grows out of. The women's movement, battle for civil rights, Vietnam—its all there in the music.
> —Michael Jordan, Music Instructor

According to Jordan, popular music can be traced back to medieval times. "The scales, patterns and lilting compound rhythms of medieval Europe influenced Scottish music which in turn, influenced early American folk music. These elements along with the African influence are very present in popular music," he said.

Jordan said that much pop music is a reaction against tradition. The antisocial sentiment expressed musically is representative of the frustration and anger with big government, and disappointment with technology and progress. "In the 19th century, many believed that progress would make life bearable—a utopia. It didn't. Music, unlike visual art, is produced to attract certain demographic groups, such as teenagers. It is more commercialized and it responds to the tastes of the public," Jordan said.

"We are excited to be able to offer this class," Larry Griffin said. "Artists Buddy Holly and Roy Orbison were from West Texas—this area is full of Rock & Roll heritage."

Rock Music—Recent American History will be offered 9:30-10:50 a.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays and 5:30-6:50 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays. For information call 685-4624.

ANDREA HOUGHTON

Reading mentor sees bright future for children

■ The following is an excerpt from one of the winning entries in the Abell-Hanger Essay contest about the value of volunteer work for MC students.

In my first year at Midland College I was fortunate enough to receive the Abell-Hanger Scholarship. When I found out that I was required to do 40 hours of community service to qualify, I knew right away what I wanted to do. I am going to school to become an elementary school teacher, so of course I wanted to be a reading mentor. I thought it would be the children who would be learning something, but I also learned a valuable lesson. Like the children, I learned that I too can accomplish anything if I do not give up.

On the first day I was so nervous about meeting the children that I arrived 20 minutes before I was supposed to. I entered the building through the large double glass doors and the first thing that came to mind was my own elementary school days. My heels clicked as I walked down the hall towards the office and I knew I was no longer a child. Mine was the same sound that I had heard from my teacher's heels as they walked down the corridors.

I finally reached the room where I was to meet the first child. I quietly poked my head into the room and smiled at the teacher. She came over to introduce herself to me and then she introduced David. He was just a little guy with big brown eyes. It was still warm outside so we went out to the playground and read Harry the Dirty Dog. After listening to him read I knew how fulfilling this task would be for me.

It was no longer community service—it was a girl destined to be a teacher meeting with her first real student. I went to Anson Jones every day for an hour and read with three children for 20 minutes each. The biggest joy I received from this experience was seeing the children progress and knowing that I had helped them a little bit along the way. I saw determination in their eyes, heard frustration in their voices, but they never quit trying. I decided to complete all my volunteer time at once.

When the day came for me to say my good-byes, it was hard. I told the children to keep reading at home with a parent or anyone. I saw a future in them that was bright, an intelligence waiting to burst out. I am 100% sure that I want to be an elementary teacher and nothing can stand in my way. I now have that same determination and frustration that I saw in the children, but I will not quit either.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Information for Sunday pages must be in the Lifestyle Department office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published only of winners, not runners-up or contestants. These announcements will be published on a space available basis.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and with anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required.

A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements.

Portrait photographs of the bride only or photos of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements.

A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements. Anniversaries photos must be relatively current.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted.

The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

Photos can be picked up in the Lifestyle Department after publication, or a self-addresses, stamped envelope can be enclosed for the photo to be returned by mail.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and articles.

GEYSERVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Peter Seghesio stood on a ridge overlooking Home Ranch, his family's 240-acre vineyard nestled in Alexander Valley in the heart of Northern California wine country.

He pointed to an area planted to Sangiovese grapes, a varietal introduced to the valley by his great-grandparents in 1895.

"We're celebrating our century-old family tradition and the Alexander Valley's great bounty," said Seghesio, a fourth-generation vintner. "We've so much to be thankful for."

The Russian River flooded twice last winter, putting his land under several feet of water.

"Fortunately," he said, "flooding occurred while vines were dormant, and receding waters deposited top soils that enrich grapes. We expect a great harvest."

To celebrate the centennial, the Seghesios are making special wines, and they've converted Chianti Station, one of Home Ranch's original buildings, into a museum. On display are family photos and documents and heirlooms. The museum and winery tours are open by appointment.

On the outskirts of nearby Healdsburg is Simi Winery, the oldest in the valley. It has scheduled tours year-round of its ultra-modern processing plant and old-fashioned cellars. The tours end in the tasting room with sips of Cabernet Sauvignon, Chardonnay and Sauvignon Blanc.

Founded in 1876 by Giuseppe and Peitro Simi, the winery has been owned by Moet-Hennessy since 1981.

ALEXANDER VALLEY'S soil and mild climate are ideal for grapes. The valley, 20 miles long and five to seven miles wide, is recognized as a distinct Viticultural Area and was given its own appellation in 1984. Much of the annual harvest is processed by local vintners. The rest is sought by other California wineries.

Both Seghesio and Simi wineries are members of Alexander Valley Winegrowers, an association of 26 independent wineries. The group encourages wine tours throughout the year but especially during the harvest.

Taste the fresh-crushed grape juice that is 24 percent sugar, compared with 8 percent for watermelon. Learn how grapes are cut during the coolness of night, carried in three-ton gondolas to huge vats for cleaning and crushing, then barreled for fermentation.

"We expect a nice, long harvest this year, from September through November," says Dale Goode, co-owner of the Murphy-Goode Estate Winery known for its Fume Blanc and Chardonnay. "The vines turn to a blaze of color as soon as the grapes are cut, and with fruit ripening over several months, it'll be a spectacular show.'

In addition to sipping wine and drinking in the scenery, tourists can enjoy camping, hiking, canoeing, fishing and hot air ballooning.

Accommodations await at the Healdsburg Inn On The Plaza and numerous bed and breakfasts.

Visit the Healdsburg Public Library. Its world-famous collection of books and documents trace wine and wine-making from ancient to modern times. Tour the Healdsburg Museum's display of Pomo Indian artifacts and historical memorabilia.

In addition to buying wine, shopping opportunities abound in antiques, gift and clothing shops around Healdsburg's central plaza and park.

IN GEYSERVILLE, two eateries are musts. Micky's Cafe, the local breakfast place, is busiest and best at around 6 a.m., while Catelli's The Rex, an Italian bistro with home cooking, is where local vintners go for supper. Both are on the town's tiny main street, Geyserville Avenue, along with the general store, post office and Isis Oasis, a storefront offering spiritual renewal.

On Oct. 21, take part in the Alexander Valley Winegrowers' day-long, valley-wide harvest festival entitled "From the Ground Up." Tickets are $20 per person in advance, $25 on the day of the event. Admission includes special vineyard tours featuring barrel samplings, vertical tastings, food and wine go-withs and seminars at participating wineries.

Study shows overeating may be linked to chemical in brain

By Malcolm Ritter

NEW YORK (AP) — Dieters may be driven to overeat because of low amounts of a key chemical in the brain that suppresses appetite, a study suggests.

Serotonin is made in the brain with a building block called tryptophan, which the brain gets from the bloodstream.

The new study suggests that dieting shortchanges the brain on tryptophan delivery, reducing the production of serotonin.

The shortfall in serotonin could give dieters the urge to overeat, said researchers at Littlemore Hospital in Oxford, England. The researchers describe their study in the journal Nature.

Twelve healthy women were tested before and three weeks after starting a diet of 1,000 calories a day.

The women had lower levels of tryptophan when dieting. In addition, structures in the brain that respond to serotonin were more sensitive, suggesting there was less serotonin available.

In a dieter, the brain senses that those structures, called receptors, aren't getting enough serotonin and tries to fix the problem by creating urges to eat, said study co-author Dr. Elizabeth Clifford.

Drugs that suppress appetite by acting on receptors are already in use, but scientists may be able to find better ones, she said.

Sarah Leibowitz, a neurobiologist at The Rockefeller University in New York, who studies how the brain controls appetite, said there may be more to why dieters feel an urge to overeat than serotonin production.

Animal studies show that restricting food also alters many other brain systems, Leibowitz said, and more research is needed to find out how important each system is in producing eating urges.

Clifford agreed.

"We're just at the beginning of understanding about the control of appetite, and it's probably a lot more complicated than we realize," Clifford said.

ENGAGEMENTS

BEAL-BEDRICH

Gary and Dianne Beal of Hobbs, N.M., announce the engagement of their daughter, Shannon Lee of Houston, to Kelly Allen Bedrich of College Station, son of former Midlanders Curtis and Molly Bedrich of Houston. The wedding is planned for 2 p.m. Dec. 16 at First United Methodist Church in Hobbs.

Miss Beal is a 1988 graduate of Hobbs High School and a 1992 graduate of Texas A&M University, where she earned a bachelor of business administration degree in accounting. She became a certified public accountant in 1994 and is a senior accountant with Price Waterhouse LLP in Houston. Her fiance graduated from Midland High School in 1988 and cum laude Texas A&M in 1992 with a bachelor of business administration degree in finance. He is a graduate student at Texas A&M, scheduled to graduate in December with a master's degree in management information systems.

ANNIVERSARIES

Brumleys celebrate 65 years together

E.G. "Slick" and Winnie Brumley of Midland celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary with a family luncheon Wednesday in their home. Hosts were their daughters and sons-in-law.

Brumley and the former Winnie Mae Spraberry were married Aug. 23, 1930, in Mount Zion, La. They have two children — Mrs. Herbert Hall of Midland and Mrs. F.E. Luckett of Enid, Okla. — as well as seven grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren.

The couple has lived in Kilgore, Big Sandy, Seminole, Andrews, Pecos, Snyder, Colorado City and Midland in Texas, and Hobbs and Artesia in New Mexico, as well as Israel and Brazil. They were forced to leave Israel at the beginning of the war over the Gaza Strip.

Brumley was in the oil well drilling business. He and his brother owned a water well drilling company in Shreveport, La., for two years, and a country store/service station in Atlanta for a few years.

Mr. and Mrs. Brumley retired in 1982 and moved to Midland. They are members of Alamo Heights Baptist Church. Brumley is a member of "Rock and Roll" Bowling League.

Legend in entertainment field lives role of outsider

By Jim Koch
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Elia Kazan is a study in contradictions. His achievements on stage and screen have helped define the American experience for a generation, yet for the last 30 years his abiding interest has been in his own Mediterranean heritage.

The director has received two Academy Awards, a Tony Award and a Kennedy Center Lifetime Achievement Award but still considers himself an outsider. He guards his privacy zealously yet has written a scathingly revealing autobiography.

Kazan's New York home (he has another house in Connecticut) is a four-story town house on the Upper East Side, indistinguishable from the multifamily dwellings that surround it.

The contradictions continue as one approaches Kazan's home. An iron fence at the street and a door-size security gate at the front entrance are less than welcoming, but inside the atmosphere is warm and cordial. Kazan, dressed in slacks and a white polo shirt, calls from the top of the stairs to suggest that the second-floor living room would be a much cooler place in which to talk on this sultry August afternoon.

His vigorous manner and youthful appearance belie the fact that his 86th birthday is two weeks from Thursday. Aside from slight deafness in one ear, he appears to have weathered the years remarkably well. Indeed, he is still capable of delivering a bone-crushing handshake.

THE ROOM has been decorated by Kazan's third wife, Frances (he has been widowed twice and has four children, including the screenwriter Nicholas Kazan; another son, Chris, died in 1991). It is bright and airy, with light green lacquered walls, comfortable couches and chairs and several pieces handed down by Mrs. Kazan's family, including a Regency desk and a cabinet filled with elegant figurines.

Kazan's influence can be noted in several intricately woven carpets (his father was a rug merchant) and a wall-size bookcase — broken only by a fireplace — whose volumes represent the director's wide-ranging intellectual interests.

Sitting in the room in anticipation of a dinner date with the Kazans is Julian Schlossberg, Kazan's friend of many years and the producer of the new documentary "Elia Kazan: A Director's Journey," which is to be shown on Aug. 31 at 8:05 p.m. ET on the American Movie Classics cable channel. It is part of an Elia Kazan marathon that is to begin at 6:30 a.m. and feature nine of the director's most famous films, including "A Streetcar Named Desire" (1951), "East of Eden" (1955), "A Face in the Crowd" (1957), "Gentleman's Agreement" (the 1947 film for which he won his first Oscar) and "America America" (1963).

"Did you see 'America America' "? Kazan asks. "It's a beautiful film. I'm proud of that film. I'm proud of a lot of the things I did. Why not?"

DISCUSSING THE theme of that movie (which was based on the first of his seven novels), a theme that he has continued to explore in his latest novel, "Beyond the Aegean," published by Alfred A. Knopf last year, Kazan says: "As I got older, I got more interested in my past. And my grandfather — how he got into this country, how he made enough dough to come here and what he did when he got here. And a whole bunch of my relatives who are here.

"When you see the whole collection of them — I've got one picture which you can see upstairs if you're curious enough — you'll see how Old World they are and how unprepared they are. It's a big thing when you come from another country and don't speak the language."

Kazan was born in Constantinople, Turkey, to Greek parents in 1909 and came to this country when he was 4.

He gazes reflectively toward the window and says: "There's a schoolyard across the street where the kids from the neighborhood — black kids, Latin American kids — go. One thing I noticed was that people from another society — say, Latin kids — their parents spend more money and more time dressing their kids up. They're trying to make the kids feel proud of the way they are. It's a beautiful thing to see.

"A lot of critics refer to me as an outsider, and I suppose I was, wasn't I?" he continues. "Being a foreigner, being an immigrant. I mean I wasn't in the society. I was rebellious against it. And even when I was successful, I remained an outsider. It became my nature."

THE SAME could be said for many of his characters — not only the Greek immigrant in "America America" but also the genteel Blanche DuBois thrust into the earthy urban New Orleans of "A Streetcar Named Desire"; the bumbling, citified Tennessee Valley Authority agent come to relocate the simple mountain folk in "Wild River" (1960); the young black woman passing for white in "Pinky" ('47), and of course Terry Malloy, spurned by his fellow dock workers for testifying about union corruption in "On the Waterfront."

"On the Waterfront," which earned Kazan his second Academy Award, in 1954, "meant a lot to me," he says.

"I got a feeling I was speaking for a lot of people who were not on top of the society," he adds, "whose parents were not rich or established. I was speaking for the underdog."

He also recalls the initial reaction of the star of the film, Marlon Brando. "He saw the preview, and he was sitting right in front of me. And as soon as "The End," he got up, didn't look at me and walked out. It hurt my feelings. I think that's as good a performance as any male actor gives." Brando won an Oscar for his portrayal.

Kazan sighs ruefully as he considers the career of Brando, whom he first brought to prominence in the 1947 stage production of "Streetcar." "He should have been our American Olivier," he said, "but he just sort of got less and less able, less and less good. It's a sad story."

A FOUNDING member in 1947 of the Actors Studio, the influential Method-based training ground, Kazan has guided 21 performers to Oscar nominations in his films, 9 of whom were winners. Discussing James Dean, whom he directed in "East of Eden," Kazan says, "He was loaded with talent but he had very little training."

"He was ready to do anything to be good," he continues. "And then later he got feisty. But he was always very talented."

Of Montgomery Clift, whom Kazan first directed on the stage in "Skin of Our Teeth" in 1942 and on film in 1960 in "Wild River," he says, "He was much sounder then than he was later." In "Wild River," he says, "he wasn't as good as he should have been."

With the exception of "Streetcar," Kazan never directed the film versions of his stage successes like "Death of a Salesman," "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" and "Tea and Sympathy." When asked why, he says: "There's a reason, but it doesn't sound good. When I get done with it, I don't want to repeat it. It's not a living thing for me."

Sounding "good" is not something Kazan is very concerned with, as anyone who has read his 1988 autobiography, "Elia Kazan: A Life" (Anchor/Doubleday), can attest. "I try to say, 'Don't hold anything back,' " he says. "Just say everything and see what happens."

CERTAINLY, KAZAN is no stranger to personal criticism, most notably for naming names before the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1952. The controversy has dogged him for years and has contributed to a critical backlash against his work in some quarters. When told that it seems to be subsiding, Kazan scowls darkly and makes an obscene gesture.

"You know what this means?" he says angrily. "It means I don't want any favors. I was content the way it was. I can get along all right with you liking me or disliking me. I'm OK I do my work, and that's what I feel is important for an artist — that he does his work in his way with his vision and he doesn't pay a lot of attention to the reaction. And I don't. I never did.

"On my worst day, when I was being attacked by all sides, I didn't care. I don't live by what people are saying about me. The only way we're ever going to be known is by our work, not by somebody boasting about us."

He continues in more subdued tones: "You're looking at a man who is essentially content. I'm proud of my films. I think about a dozen of them are very good, and I don't think there are films as good on the subject or the feeling. Writing my own work means more to me than I can get out of somebody else's work, and some of the stuff that I did turned out all right.

"I get along. I live modestly. I have a nice house. I can go to the country once in a while. I have a few friends. I'm happy with my wife, and I love my children. We talk on the phone all the time, so we keep the connection going. I love my work.

"The only thing I really hope for in my life right now is maybe two more subjects that I want to write about — or for one that I might even make a film about — that mean a lot to me."

KAZAN RISES and leads the way to the office at the top of the house, where he writes his novels on a manual Royal typewriter, to show the pictures of his family, taking the two flights of stairs quite easily. Indicating a photograph of his grandfather and other family members taken approximately a century ago, Kazan points out the fezzes on the men's heads. "Look at that," he says. "Now you're talking about the other world. That's the world I come from."

There is another world in evidence, indicated by the framed posters of Kazan's theatrical successes outside in the hall and the snapshots of his famous collaborators that cover the walls. Yet it is obvious that Kazan feels a sense of trespass at having revealed this highly personal space. "It's a private room," he says. "I don't want you to talk about it."

But in another contradiction, he himself has written about the room. In "A Life," Kazan writes: "The walls of my office in New York are covered with photographs — snapshots, mostly — of my family and close friends. If someone were to offer to replace them with corner-to-corner Picassos, I wouldn't make the swap. The photographs of the people in my life fill me with memory and emotion."

For fashion designer and family, showpiece is their fantasy home

By Ava Van de Water
N.Y. Times News Service

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Interior designers frequently peek in closets to get an idea of their clients' flair for style. But there's no need to find the closet in Italian fashion designer Gianni Versace's South Beach manse. His over-the-top style is splashed throughout the sprawling estate, recently transformed from a dilapidated apartment complex.

Casa Casuarina is now an 18,000-square-foot showpiece with 16 bedroom suites, large media room, copper-domed observatory, two-story library, a full basement and a domed shower that bathes eight.

Virtually every portion of the house got Versace's personal attention, including the roof, where areas for sunbathing even have music and hand-held showers for cooling off.

Although it was touted for its lavish decoration when it was built in the late 1920s, Casa Casuarina became a victim of neglect by the 1980s. By 1991 it was targeted for demolition — and then Versace came to town.

IT ONLY TOOK minutes for Versace to fall in love with South Beach — and cancel his flight to Cuba for a planned two-week vacation, according to Vogue magazine. And it took only slightly longer to find a place he could call home. In April 1992, the crumbling Casa Casuarina became his — for $2.95 million.

"His idea of his Miami Beach house was a fantasy — it was an escape for him and his family," said Peter Hawrylewicz, whose Miami Beach firm Hawrylewicz Robertson Architecture & Design, oversaw the renovations and designed the addition. "I think that's how he sees Miami Beach . . . He wanted whimsy — lots of whimsy."

Originally a 24-unit apartment complex, Casa Casuarina was built for Santa Barbara landscape architect Charles Boulton and Alden Freeman, grandson of the treasurer of Standard Oil.

The building, which included a flamboyantly decorated penthouse that Boulton and Freeman kept for themselves, was inspired by the Santo Domingo home of Christopher Columbus' son Diego. They named it for The Casuarina Tree, William Somerset Maugham's 1926 collection of short stories about a group of British expatriates living in Borneo.

"The original structure is very asymmetrical and whimsical," Hawrylewicz said.

ALTHOUGH INTERESTING architectural features were saved, such as plaster reliefs in the interior courtyard, original woodwork, bell tower and observatory with copper dome, new elements retain a fanciful approach. Stained glass windows, ceiling frescoes and mosaic floors are prevalent, and period pieces, which are scattered throughout the house, are upholstered in Versace's new vividly colored fabrics — plums, lime greens, fuchsia, intense gold.

"Every room is sort of a barrage of color," Hawrylewicz said.

Each of the 16 bedroom suites has an entirely different feel — partly because Casa Casuarina also is home to Versace sister Donatella and her family, and Versace's brother Santo and his family — but also because it's in keeping with a feeling of fantasy.

The building, which included a flamboyantly decorated penthouse that (Charles) Boulton (landscape architect) and (Alden) Freeman (grandson and treasurer of Standard Oil) kept for themselves, was inspired by the Santo Domingo home of Christopher Columbus' son, Diego. They named it for The Casuarina Tree, William Somerset Maugham's 1926 collection of short stories about a group of British expatriates living in Borneo.

For example, one of his nieces, who is about 8 years old, has an Italian Gothic motif in her bedroom, plus beds that pull out of the wall for sleep-overs with girlfriends.

"HE WANTED almost a Cinderella castle approach," Hawrylewicz said.

The bedroom of another niece, however, has a very classical approach, with Roman arches, columns and a mosaic.

Versace's own bedroom has a long, oval domed ceiling and a mixture of wood furniture, including a grand Empire bed. "You almost need a stepladder to get into it," Hawrylewicz said.

Although the transformation from apartment complex to home involved a small army of designers, artisans and architects (including Palm Beach architect Jeffrey Smith early on), the leader was the late Terry Scott, a Palm Beach designer who died of AIDS in 1993. Also collaborating on the project was Palm Beacher Sybil de Bourbon Parme, Scott's friend who, among other things, took Scott to France to point out interesting features of Versailles.

AFTER SCOTT'S death, former Palm Beacher Wallace Tutt, an attorney-turned-builder, took over as project manager. Tutt encouraged Versace to buy the Revere, a 61-room hotel bordering the property to the south. Versace did (for $3.7 million) and the Revere was leveled — despite protests from some locals who wanted it preserved. In its place went a garden, swimming pool, terrace and 6,100-square-foot addition that includes two guest suites, a two-story library (Versace has lots of books), a gym, two-car garage and the notable eight-person shower with inlaid mosaic and granite columns.

It also has a full basement, an engineering feat in South Florida.

"We had a lot of pumps working around the clock for weeks," Hawrylewicz said.

The changes also got the attention earlier this year of the Florida Trust for Historic Preservation, which gave Versace an award for his restoration and addition.

Although Versace is still tinkering with the interior design, Hawrylewicz says the project is complete — for now. "We're all finished — until he buys the property to the north," he said. "We've made allowances for that."

"I went because they were affordable. I stayed because they're wonderful."

I first went to Planned Parenthood because I really couldn't afford a gynecologist. I was young. And nervous. And didn't know what to expect. But now I can afford to go anywhere. And you know what? I still go to Planned Parenthood.

From my very first visit, I felt they sincerely cared about me. They took the time to know me and answered all my questions in plain talk. Every time I go, they're as kind and understanding as ever.

I also feel their medical staff is professional, knowledgeable and very up to date. They're extremely sensitive to a woman's special medical concerns, and everything is kept confidential. I'm glad they offer such a wide range of services. As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is like family and will always be an important part of my health care.

Hot-air balloon brings anti-drug message, memorial home to children

By Randy Dotinga

SAN MARCOS, Calif. (AP) — When he visits schools, churches and community groups with his hot-air balloon, Pat Murphy brings a message — and a memorial.

"I tell kids to stay away from drugs," said Murphy, president of the San Diego Balloon Association. "There's too many things like this in life to experience. You can get plenty high off a hot-air balloon."

He dedicates his visits to the memory of his stepson, Adrian Marshall, who was murdered in Vista last year after slipping in and out of drug abuse for years. Murphy said he hopes to inspire children to avoid a similar fate.

One of his recent hot-air balloon spectacles was at Paloma Elementary School, where he topped off a lesson that touched on everything from geography and math to science and art.

As about 100 students looked on in awe, Murphy and a handful of teachers and students took brief rides in a medium-sized hot-air balloon that was tethered to the ground.

Wide-eyed students were impressed by the balloon's size and the loud, blowtorch-like whoosh as burning propane heated the air inside the balloon.

"This was awesome, I had no idea it was going to be this big. It's about 150 feet tall!" said 11-year-old James Raylek.

Ellis Twine, 10, carrying a tiny camera, found he needed a wide-angle lens. "I tried to take a picture, but couldn't make it fit," he said.

Teacher Michelle Petitte invited Murphy to the school as part of a hot-air balloon program for fifth- and sixth-graders.

Students are studying geography and distances by imagining that they are flying over the country in a balloon.

In her classroom, hot-air balloons made of construction paper hang from the ceiling. On the wall are pictures students have drawn of hot-air balloons traveling over different sections of the country.

"Geography can be very flat to teach, but this allows them to experience it in real life," Petitte said. "They're excited about learning."

Murphy, a San Marcos native who lives in Carlsbad, said he volunteers about six times a year to bring his balloon to schools and community groups.

Paloma Elementary teachers took up a collection of $100 to pay for the balloon's fuel.

"The young kids like the bright colors and the noise, while the older kids are more interested in the fact that you can fly one of these at 14 if you have a pilot's license," said Murphy, who works at a testing lab at Hewlett-Packard.

Murphy said he mentions his anti-drug message and the death of his stepson when appropriate, depending on the age of his audience.

Marshall died in July 1994 in Vista, after being shot. The crime remains unsolved.

But Murphy aims not to be too serious: "I try to keep it uplifting," he says with a grin.

No-fat Blueberry Chutney brings versatility, good taste to mealtime

Associated Press

In this chutney recipe, blueberries are combined with yellow onion, minced garlic, fresh ginger and Madras curry powder. The chutney can be served as a sauce with grilled salmon or Ahi tuna, or served over grilled pork or poultry.

The recipe is the creation of Greg Higgins, owner-chef of Higgins in Portland, Ore.

When properly refrigerated, blueberries stay fresh for 10 to 14 days, if left unwashed. And blueberries can be enjoyed year-round if kept frozen. Just freeze unwashed blueberries in freezer bags.

BLUEBERRY CHUTNEY

4 cups fresh blueberries
1 large yellow onion, finely chopped
¼ cup white-wine vinegar
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup raisins
2 tablespoons minced fresh ginger
2 tablespoons minced garlic
2 tablespoons Madras curry powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons chopped fresh mint

In a medium-sized, noncorrosive saucepan, combine all the chutney ingredients except the mint. Bring to a low boil over medium heat.

Reduce the heat; cook gently until the onions are tender and the chutney has thickened, about 25 to 30 minutes. Stir often to avoid scorching. Remove from heat; allow to cool before adding the mint. Makes 2 cups chutney.

Crown colony holds to tradition

By Jennifer Merin

HONG KONG (AP) — Tea time is any time for the Chinese in this crown colony, but the British hold firmly to the traditions they learned back home.

For a taste of both, consider afternoon tea, English style, at the legendary Peninsula Hotel, and traditional Chinese tea at Fook Ming Tong Tea Shop in the nearby Ocean Terminal Shopping Arcade.

Both infusions are served hot, but similarities end there.

Tea has been popular in England since the 1700s, but it wasn't an afternoon ritual until the 19th century. It has been served in the classic English style at the Peninsula since the hotel was founded in 1928.

Silver tea service and gold-rimmed porcelain cups shimmer against white linen on the tables. A three-tiered silver plate is laden with salmon and cucumber finger sandwiches, pastries, fruitcakes, puff pastries, petit fours and scones. Devonshire clotted cream and strawberry preserves are spooned from small silver bowls.

Toby Yan, the hotel's tea manager, says 15 types of tea are available. Among the favorites are Ceylon, Earl Grey, Darjeeling, Jasmine, Orange Pekoe and English Breakfast.

Tea-drinkers linger for several hours, sipping and nibbling their way to contentment. The tariff is about $15 per person for the full service.

Tea leaves steeped in water go back to around 3000 B.C. in China. According to legend, Emperor Shen Nung drank it by chance when leaves from a nearby bush fell into a cup of hot water. He pronounced it an elixir that cured thirst and conquered sleepiness.

Tea brewing and service were soon a ritual of refined tea blends in specially sculpted pots.

At the Fook Ming Tong Tea Shop, Kuong Sung Chun presides over some 20 types of teas for sampling and sale. Each is stored according to grade in rows of red and gold canisters.

Kuong sits at a low table in the back of the shop behind a tray of dozens of small teapots, some shaped as flowers and fruit, others sculpted in curves and angles. Each about the size of a softball, they are reserved to brew a specific tea to avoid contamination of subtle flavors.

While afternoon tea, English style, is more of a social occasion, the traditional Chinese tea shops are limited to the business of tasting to buy. Samples are served in thimble-size porcelain cups from a tray or low low stools. The brews are often so strong that a little goes a long way.

Kuong says the tea leaves are sorted not only by place of origin but by size, color and method of processing. Black tea leaves are crushed and fermented, then dried. Oolong teas have partially fermented leaves that are steamed, leaving them a greenish-brown. Green teas are steamed, preserving their original color.

A waiter and his victuals at the Peninsula Hotel in Hong Kong, where afternoon tea, British style, has been a tradition since the hotel opened in 1928.

In the home, the Chinese serve tea for pleasure and relaxation. In addition, Chinese herbalists recommend it for medicinal purposes. Many believe that Long Jin, a green tea, helps to prevent cancer; Ti Guan Yin, a dark green oolong tea, aids weight loss; and Pu Er, a black tea, helps digestion.

Depending upon type and grade, loose tea costs about $7 to $20 for 37.5 grams, which is about 1¼ ounces. Earthenware teapots, as decorative as they are functional, start at about $15, and canisters at about $10.

IF YOU GO:

The Peninsula Hotel is on Salisbury Road, facing Star Ferry Terminal. Afternoon tea is served daily from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. Fook Ming Tong is in Shop 124, Deck Level, Ocean Terminal, about three blocks to the right. The shop is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Atlantic City: Have to see it to believe it

By Bud Collins
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — If I saw the movie of the same name, with Burt Lancaster and Susan Sarandon, do I need the place itself?

"Atlantic City? Absolutely," my Jersey friend and authority, Picker, had urged. "How can you play Monopoly with real feel if you haven't experienced Boardwalk? Or St. James Place and Park Place, Atlantic and Vermont avenues? They're all here, in Atlantic City.

I don't like Monopoly.

"But you love oceans, I happen to know. And this is Vegas with an ocean. The Atlantic at your doorstep," he persisted.

I don't like Las Vegas.

"OK, OK. But how about the Taj Mahal? Why go all the way to India, maybe catch some strange disease, just to see an old grave? Right here we got a 21st-century update: the Trump Taj Mahal Casino Resort smack on the Boardwalk. Bigger, brighter — plus with craps tables ... roulette ... blackjack ... lots. At that other Taj — where? Agra? — they probably think 'snake eyes' is an optometrist for cobras. It pales by comparison."

THE ORIGINAL Taj is supposed to be pale, Picker. It was built that way in the 17th century.

Pity that Shah Jahan, the builder, didn't copyright the name.

"Pity he didn't put in a casino," a practical Picker said, sounding disappointed. "You're harder on the come than a hard-6, which you probably think is an incorrigible first grader."

Ah, then I'm making my point, huh?

"Yeah, but don't be such a snob. Atlantic City — political conventions ... Miss America ... riches within reach — is a true slice of Americana. You gotta take it in."

'Atlantic City. — political conventions ... Miss America ... riches within reach — is a true slice of Americana. You gotta take it in.'

— Picker, who lives in New Jersey

Like a slice of seven-layer cheesecake sprinkled with jimmies and floating in creme de menthe. But he's right. You wouldn't want to miss it. And you won't miss it when you leave.

"I'm sorry Gaudi missed it," says friend Aurelio, referring to the Catalan architect, Antonio Gaudi, from whose name and style the word "gaudy" sprang.

"Gaudi's stuff would be too conservative here," advises Picker. He suggests a promenade along the celebrated Boardwalk, a wide seaside sidewalk of herringbone planking that stretches more than 3 miles and is flanked on the inland side by high-rise heaven for high-rollers: a brazen lineup of casinos and hotels whose conformation and decor amount to fireworks display-cum painted lady makeup in concrete.

LOW AND moderate-rollers are welcome, too, of course. Designer boutiques are offset by 99-cent stores and the Sand Flea flea market; excellent restaurants, by hash houses and fast-feeders like Ace of Spuds. It's Everyman's gambling hell, where formal wear means shorts and T-shirts.

Not for the town's king and queen, though. "I am Cleopatra," says fetching, ebony-haired Carmy Diamond a bit huffily when I inquire the identity of slinkily-gowned herself at a hotel called Caesar's. "And this is Julius Caesar," she says, introducing her historic roomie-for-a-while, a toga'd Arnaldo Leggi. "And," says Leggi, "I am a genuine Italian, the only sort who should play this part." Definitely. There has to be something genuine around here.

BACK OUTDOORS, the Boardwalk is for gamblers, too, as well as gambolers. We're dodging roller-bladers, bicyclists, joggers, roller chairs (the local version of rickshaws) and kids engaged in taffy-pulls with the very-stretchable, originally-made-in-Atlantic City saltwater candy. What an extraordinary juxtaposition of the carefree and the carefrantic. On one side, the simple joys of the beach, edged by the frothing, refreshing Atlantic. On the other, steps away, the countless plunges taken on dry land in the castles of chance.

There's Jennifer Scott, a pusher — of roller chairs — who claims to be the first woman in the business, integrating these ambulatory cabbies 18 months ago. Shoving the two-seated three-wheelers along the Boardwalk, she has made mighty gains and losses on a regimen that upstages Weight Watchers.

"I've lost 10 sizes — that's right, from size 18 to size 8 — and nearly 50 pounds since going to work here," says the pioneering Scott, a single mother who has put her legal (child advocacy) career on hold on the boards. "But it's good, hard work and long hours. More than 100 miles of pushing a day.

"It costs me $200 a week to rent the chair, but I can net $1,000 in a good week. My goal is to reach size 5."

Aurelio says, admiringly, "Would you settle for a hard-6?"

PRESENTLY WE reach Trump's Taj, a subtle blend of Arabian Nightsmares and Disney Gothic.

"Wonderful. An architectural triumph," observes Aurelio. "The French have Chartres Cathedral, and Trump trumps them with Chlock Cathedral. This mirrors his taste in women — a style you could call bimboesque."

Wherever we stroll, T-shirts bloom on racks. My favorite:

I'VE USED UP MY SICK DAYS — NOW I'M CALLING IN DEAD

Casinos should supply one to every slot machine athlete, plus a coroner to check all of them periodically. Obviously many are in the grip of rigor mortis, gripping handles, pushing buttons through some sort of reflex action, faces unchanging, winning or losing.

But the slots gurgle the unending sounds of music to their ears — bells, buzzers, metallic coinfalls, electronic boo-boopa-boop lullabies — that may someday awake some of the seated and standing dead.

"No experience needed to play these games," chimes in Picker amid the chimes. "That's the beauty of it. Immediate starting roles for the aleatory athletes in whatever lineup."

"Do the survivors get AC letter sweaters?" wonders Aurelio.

"Great idea," says Picker. "Hey, don't forget to send your mother a postcard. Did you know that picture postcards, like saltwater taffy, began here?"

I KNEW we could be thankful to Atlantic City for something. I buy a postcard and address it to kindly Picker, adding this message: "Having a good time. Wish I weren't here. Send money — or bus ticket out."

Airline clubs provide respite from 'the masses'

By Jennifer Merin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Amid the cacophony of the Los Angeles airport is an otic oasis where even the hiss and gurgle of the cappuccino machine seem intrusive.

Welcome to United Airlines' Red Carpet Club. Sink into a leather armchair and sip a cappuccino, hot cocoa, espresso, mochaccino, decaf or tea. There are juices and soft drinks if you prefer.

Watch the news or eavesdrop on a talk show on televisions with volume turned low. Or read from a selection of magazines and newspapers. If you must work, faxes, PCs and phones are at the ready.

Access to the club, one of several retreats operated at major airports by airlines, is available to anyone willing to pay.

Fees vary. In general, airline club comfort and convenience aren't cheap. Initiation fees range from $25 for TWA's Ambassadors Club to $100 for United's Red Carpet Club, Delta's Crown Club and American's Admirals Club. In addition, annual membership fees range from $125 at TWA to $275 at United and American. Spousal add-ons are $75 to $100, and lifetime memberships are available.

These clubs aren't perks for frequent flyers, but if you're a frequent frequent flyer and have earned elite status, most airlines will waive the initiation fee. United will drop the $275 membership fee to $150 for frequent flyers in its Mileage Plus Premier and Premier Executive program.

One-day memberships are available at United, $25, and American, $50. And Northwest's World Club has a 30-day membership for $30.

Amenities at the clubs are similar. In addition to those mentioned, many offer snacks and gratis or discounted alcoholic beverages; provide free local calls, copying and message services; and will rent private conference rooms for $25 to $60 an hour.

All U.S. carriers have clubs at Boston, Los Angeles and New York's La Guardia airports. Most are in place at New York's JFK, Newark, Chicago's O'Hare, Washington's National and San Francisco. Many have outposts at Dallas/Fort Worth, Denver, Kansas City, and Miami.

But only American Airlines has clubs in airports in San Jose, Calif.; Austin, Texas; and Bogota, Colombia. USAir lounges are in place in Indianapolis; Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse, N.Y.; Greensboro and Charlotte, N.C., and other medium-size cities.

In addtion:

- American's Admirals Club has 31 facilities at 27 airports in U.S. cities and 14 in Canada, the Caribbean, South America and Europe.
- Continental's Presidents Club has 12 facilities on the U.S. mainland. Clubs in Honolulu, London's Gatwick Airport and Paris' Orly Airport serve complimentary alcoholic beverages.
- Delta's Crown Club has 39 locations in the United States and Canada, plus 42 in Latin America, Europe and Asia. Free alcoholic beverages are served in all lounges. A valid airline ticket must be presented for entry.
- Northwest's World Club has facilities in 15 U.S. airports, plus 10 locations in Europe and Asia. Alcoholic beverages are free. International First Class and Business Class passengers may use club lounges free on travel days but are allowed no guests.
- TWA's Ambassador Club has lounges at 16 domestic airports plus Frankfurt, Germany; Rome and Milan, Italy; Gatwick in London and Charles de Gaulle in Paris.
- United's Red Carpet Club is in 18 domestic airports and 14 destinations in Europe, Latin America and Asia. International First Class and Business Class passengers have club privileges on travel days, but no guests are allowed.
- USAir Clubs are in 21 U.S. airports. Transatlantic business class passengers may use gateway airports club lounges gratis on day of travel.

Trip-cancellation insurance becomes more 'user friendly'

By Betsy Wade
N.Y. Times News Service

The "pre-existing conditions" clause, a bane to consumers who buy trip-cancellation insurance only to find that they cannot collect benefits when they are unable to travel because of illness, appears to be on the way out.

Most insurance companies are following the example of Mutual of Omaha, which announced in May that it would waive this restriction for clients who buy their policies immediately on making deposits for tours or cruises.

Trip-cancellation and trip-interruption insurance is important to people who buy expensive cruises or tours, because emergencies, particularly health emergencies, may make it impossible to take a trip that has already been paid for.

The old pre-existing conditions clauses generally held that claims to recover payments on the basis of illness of a traveler, a family member or a traveling companion were invalid if the illness "manifested itself" — or some similar phrase — in the 60 days before the insurance was bought. Often enough, this meant denial of a claim made, for example, because someone's heart condition flared up. One big company estimated that 6 percent of claims were denied on the ground that the conditions were pre-existing.

THE COMMERCIAL Union Insurance Co. in Boston is among those that have dropped the pre-existing conditions clause. It acted last month. Carroll B. Smith, vice president for custom products, said the exclusion of people with pre-existing conditions was a source of misunderstanding and of complaints to state insurance departments.

"It is something we have been thinking about for some time," he said, "and when Mutual of Omaha dropped it, it pushed us off the dime."

The companies dropping the pre-existing conditions clause have not raised their prices, but all have set one condition and sometimes more. These are manageable, and the possibility of buying trip-cancellation and trip-interruption insurance will be welcome in families where such chronic illnesses as diabetes, heart trouble and arthritis add difficulties to scheduling travel. Estimates of how many travelers buy such insurance range from 15 to 70 percent, depending on the cost of a trip, the penalties for cancellation and the age of the travelers.

The major requirement for waiving the pre-existing conditions clause is that the insurance be bought within one day of the first deposit for a trip. If it is bought after that, it retains the exclusion.

AS AN EXAMPLE of a problem the 24-hour purchase requirement creates, assume that a couple is buying a 15-day cruise at $3,550 a person, for a total of $7,100. In this price bracket, one insurance company charges a per-person premium of $199.

The cruise line requires a deposit of $500 a person; full payment is due eight weeks, or 56 days, before departure. This couple puts down the deposit and buys an insurance package immediately. If they cancel after that but more than 60 days before departure, the cruise line's rules say they forfeit $200 a person.

This loss would be covered by the insurance, but the benefit is almost exactly equal to the premium. It is this aspect of the new provision that makes an officer of one insurance company characterize it as "not ideal."

The value of the change, however, appears in the period after the full payment is made — in this case, 60 days before departure. If illness should force a cancellation, the $199 premium would bring a refund of the $3,550. The "loss" would then be only the premium.

The companies have not all printed new application forms, and some are using stickers or inserts to call attention to the change.

BECAUSE OF the one-day purchase requirement, the easiest thing to do is buy the insurance from the travel agent who sells the cruise or tour. But the protection provisions on default of agents or tour operators do not cover the default of the organization selling the policy. So if a traveler has anxieties about the financial stability of the travel agent and the coverage cannot be bought elsewhere, a credit card should be used for the trip deposit, which will provide some protection if the travel agent defaults.

Since not all travel agents are authorized to sell all brands of travel insurance, a client seeking a particular policy should ask the travel agent to get in touch with the company ahead of time. Sandy Bolz, a marketing official for the Noel Companies' Travel Guard, said that despite agents' sales efforts, customers who in the past have bought coverage by telephone direct from her company have usually done it at the last minute. If they do this now, they will still be subject to the pre-existing conditions clause.

Mutual of Omaha Companies' Cruise and Tour Insurance is underwritten by Omaha Property and Casualty Insurance. The insurance must be bought within 24 hours of the initial deposit and must cover the full cost of the trip, with a limit of $20,000. A policy with several types of coverage for a cruise priced from $1,501 to $2,000 costs $99 a person; for a tour of the same price, $107. A mail-in form is on the flier, or calls can be made to (800) 228-9792.

THE C.S.A. CO. in San Diego dropped the exclusion clause for three of its policies last month. The underwriter is the Commercial Union Insurance Co. Coverage, for the full amount of the cost of the trip to a maximum of $20,000, must be bought by the end of the next business day after the initial deposit. A policy for a cruise costing $1,501 to $2,000 would be $97 for a family or those sharing a cabin; for a tour, the premium is 5 percent of the cost. Applications may be phoned to (800) 348-9505 or faxed to (800) 336-6409.

Globalcare Insurance Services in Lynnfield, Mass., also sells a Commercial Union policy, Economy Plan for Cruise and Travel. It also requires purchase the next day, for the full amount of the trip, up to $20,000. Coverage for a family or people sharing a cabin on a cruise for a trip costing $1,501 to $2,000 is $110. Applications may be telephoned to (800) 779-1017 or faxed to (800) 336-6409. The Commercial Union policies are not available in Texas, South Carolina, Kansas and Connecticut.

Travel Guard's Cruise and Protection Plan dropped its exclusion June 1, but at the moment only travel agents can sell such policies, according to Ms. Bolz. Its underwriter is the Continental Casualty Co. of Chicago. The premium for a policy with varied coverage for a trip costing $1,501 to $2,000 is $109. Information: (800) 826-1300.

Travel Insured's Travel Insurance Pak dropped its exclusion Aug. 16. The underwriter is Travelers Indemnity of Hartford. The premium for a policy on a trip costing $2,000 is $110 a person. Information: (800) 243-3174.

WORLD ACCESS will drop the exclusion from its Access America policy on Sept. 1, said Beth Godlin, senior vice president. The underwriter is B.C.S. Insurance Co. Information: (800) 284-8300.

Robin Levine, executive vice president of the Berkely Group on Long Island, which designs insurance for cruise and tour companies to sell under their own names, as well as freestanding policies, said her company was looking at the issue.

Museums kick off Route 66 historical exhibits

By Angie Bluethman

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Route 66 is a far cry from what it once was, but its legend keeps growing as museums statewide showcase the road's history and popularity.

Visitors will be able to get their kicks on Route 66 by touring nine satellite exhibits and a new museum presented by the Oklahoma Historical Society.

Old pictures, memorabilia and even bricks that once lined the famous road are on display or will be on display when all the exhibits are opened.

The road that carried passengers from Chicago to Santa Monica, Calif., was populated with vintage cafes, hotels, restaurants and tourist attractions — a sharp contrast to the road today.

Now Oklahoma's brown and white signs and a few historical markers help travelers find their way on Route 66, which was "The Mother Road" or the "Main Street of America."

"A lot of people come in just for Route 66," said Edmond Historical Society Museum director Brenda Peck Green. "I think it's a really big draw," she said.

The Edmond museum, a Chandler museum and the Arcadia Round Barn all opened their exhibits on Aug. 5.

In Edmond, classic cars, old music and a taste of Route 66 restaurants such as Wide-A-Wake Cafe and Royce Cafe sent visitors back to a simpler time.

Route 66 extended 397 miles through Oklahoma from the Kansas border to the Texas Panhandle from the 1920s through the 1970s. It was designated a U.S. highway in 1926.

The display features old pictures, memorabilia and even bricks from the road, mostly collected by Edmond residents.

"It just slowly came in. We're hoping even for more," Ms. Peck Green said.

The museum also sells Route 66 memorabilia including T-shirts, magnets, books, videos and afghans.

"I just have a fascination just like the rest of the world," says Ms. Green, who has done research on Route 66.

The exhibits were planned in conjunction with the new Oklahoma Route 66 Museum in Clinton, set to open Sept. 23.

"It's going to be a really big weekend," said Emily Stratton, executive director of the Clinton Chamber of Commerce.

Ms. Stratton expects about 5,000 people to attend and said the museum opening has the potential to be the biggest event Clinton has ever had.

"There's an enormous interest in this."

The overall Route 66 project has been funded with $816,187 under the federal Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act through the Oklahoma Department of Transportation. The Oklahoma Route 66 Association in Clinton raised $250,000 in matching funds.

"It shows the local people really are supportive of this and really back it all the way," Ms. Stratton said.

Other satellite sites set to open by the end of October include Sapulpa, Miami, Claremore, Yukon, El Reno and Elk City.

Project director Sandy Stratton said all the exhibits will remain in place for five years.

"Some of the things we had in our collections. We've done some purchasing. People have really been cooperative and pretty wonderful," she said.

"The board of directors in early 1992 were looking at museums to see where the holes were in our interpretation of our history."

She said Route 66's popularity became more obvious to the board and noted that people come from all over the world to follow it.

Ms. Stratton said the goal of the project is "to promote the heritage of Oklahoma and Route 66 relationship with Oklahomans."

Jack Cutberth, a former Clinton barber, was the executive secretary for the national and state Route 66 Association.

Cutberth spent all his time promoting Route 66, traveling up and down its trail.

His widow, Gladys Cutberth, often accompanied him and also served as his secretary.

Mrs. Cutberth said she and her husband collected many artifacts, "never thinking it would be valuable to anybody."

And now she has found a home for the collection in the Clinton museum.

AT WIT'S END

Mistakes may outshine nobility in person's life

By Erma Bombeck

I was thinking the other day if actor Hugh Grant was acclaimed as giving the best performance of Hamlet in the history of Shakespeare, he would still be remembered as the guy who turned the back of a limo into a bad career move.

Bombeck

Obituaries have a way of focusing on the most humiliating part of a life. A person may have won two Pulitzers, a book award and a Nobel Prize of literature, and the first paragraph of his death notice will refer to a photo taken with telephoto lens of him and a topless starlet in Greece.

Ed Flanders was a fine actor for decades. Know what his obituary said? "He ended his regular appearances as Dr. Westphall on NBC's 'St. Elsewhere' by dropping his pants and mooning his fictional boss." Like that's all we'd remember.

Mention Roseanne and the reaction is instant: grabbing her crotch and singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" off-key at a baseball game.

Julius LaRosa's career as a singer turned cold when Arthur Godfrey said he wasn't humble.

Jackie Mason didn't work for years after Ed Sullivan interpreted his finger signals as obscene.

The big difference for the LaRosas and the Masons is that today's public is not only forgiving, it will elect you president if you are caught with your clothes off.

The royal family was considered boring until recorded whispers between the future king and the girl (What IS her name?) with a bad permanent began to surface. O.J. Simpson has become a cottage industry.

Movie studios no longer protect the reputations of their stars. That is because bad publicity works for them. Every time a "name" checks into the Betty Ford clinic, his or her asking price for a movie increases.

I watched a Phil Donahue show one afternoon when the guest was David Duke, former Ku Klux Klanner who said he would never live next to a black person. The audience greeted him with loathing and disgust. After Duke said to them, "We have all made mistakes and I have too" (he was running for office), the audience turned. They empathized with a bigot. Maybe people have begun to set standards no higher than the ones they set for themselves.

I'll tell you where I'm coming from. I still haven't gotten over Ingrid Bergman fooling around with a married man on "Stromboli." My heroes and heroines are dwindling. I'm down to Mother Teresa and Mister Rogers.

Floral prints in summer styles make transition for autumn wear

By Anne-Marie Schiro
N.Y. Times News Service

Floral prints are a natural for summer and this year they have taken off like weeds. But they won't stop blooming come autumn.

Flowers cropped up rather unexpectedly in the fall collections of Prada and Comme des Garcons, so it's a good bet flowers will be cheering us all year round.

Many of the summer florals now in stores should make the seasonal transition easily, especially those with dark backgrounds.

Henri Bendel has black-ground dresses in crepe, satin and georgette ($150 to $200), and georgette skirts with miniprints ($109) or oversize blooms ($128).

There are also satin bias-cut long skirts with blossoms on a white ground ($150) and drawstring pants with roses on white rayon ($89).

Saks Fifth Avenue's black-ground florals include a short slip dress by Ralph Lauren ($350) and long dresses under the store's private label ($134).

A beige-on-red short dress by Anna Sui is $254 and long sleeveless dresses in white-ground florals by BCBG are $170.

Slip dresses in pale summery shades by Michael Kors are $134 at Bergdorf Goodman.

DEAR ABBY

Woman wants to find logical reason why she manages to get lost on regular basis

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on vacation. She left behind some of her favorite columns from 1980.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a grown woman with a good husband, two wonderful children and a full, busy life. I do a lot of driving and always allow myself time for getting lost.

Van Buren

Even if I have been there before, I get turned around and have to stop and ask for directions. Sometimes I have to stop and ask for directions two or three times.

I am a careful driver and I am considered fairly intelligent, but I have absolutely no sense of direction.

My husband says I get lost because I lack self-confidence and I set out expecting to get lost. Can that be? Are there others like me? Have you any suggestions? — GETS LOST A LOT

DEAR GETS LOST: Don't be ashamed. Some of our brainiest people get lost a lot.

Recommended solution: When you start out, have written instructions on how to get where you're going. Should you get lost, stop at once and ask for help. (And be sure to listen carefully, so that you understand the directions.)

Also, always take the phone number of the place you're headed for in case you want to call and ask how to get there. If that fails, carry a compass, a Bible and a survival kit.

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married woman (22) and Mike is a wonderful, healthy, robust, masculine man of 25. We've been married a little over a year, and I have a problem I can't ask anyone else about. It has to do with sex.

Mike has a big appetite for sex, but I am not complaining. It's his timing that bothers me. He always wants to make love on Sunday morning before Mass.

Abby, I know that love within marriage is not a sin, but for some silly reason I just hate to go to Mass right after having had sex. Lately I have been putting my husband off. But I feel guilty about that.

Do you think I should postpone the lovemaking until after Mass? Or should I keep telling myself I have no reason to feel guilty about it, and just try to get over that feeling?

What's wrong with me? — MAGGIE IN MANHATTAN

DEAR MAGGIE: Your problem is rooted in the notion that sex is sinful. You grew up believing it, and even though you're married and there is nothing to feel guilty about, you're still programmed to equate sex with sin.

Talk to a priest, or a psychiatrist. (Try the priest first. It's cheaper.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married 29-year-old woman. I recently changed jobs, and my problem is my supervisor.

He's a conceited, middle-aged married man who fancies himself to be quite a fox. He keeps asking me to go out with him.

I told him no from the start, but he kids me about it every day, and I go along with the kidding, pretending it's all in fun, but I know he is serious.

Abby, I don't want him for an enemy, so how can I get him to leave me alone without insulting him? — REDHEAD

DEAR REDHEAD: Tell him that you have a very tender conscience, and if you were ever to see him outside the office, you would surely break down and tell your husband — and HIS WIFE. That should cool him off.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Tackling media

"Street Level Videos" tackles the subject of Media Influence during its second hour-long program, airing locally on KPEJ, Fox 24, at 9:30 p.m. Sept. 3,

We've done "Media Influence before and unfortunately were not tough enough," said Jon Lindgren, the show's host and producer. "We brought up some issues and soft-stepped a little bit. I knew some of the people I interviewed. Because they are a positive influence in the community we didn't get on the negative, "so, two years later, we're doing it again and it should be a very positive show even though we are revealing some of the negative things that we are subject to through the media.

The show will deal with some of the subtle things that may influence people," Lndgren said.

He cited as an example the pressure those in middle and low income households may feel to buy clothes and shoes that are more expensive than their budgets may allow.

"Because your kids are sold on it, you almost have to go broke to buy what they want for school, like $100 tennis shoes.

The program will be centered around education.

"We want to reveal some of the negative influences that are taken for granted," Lindgren said. "Like 90 percent of all relationships on television are not married relationships unfortunately.

Media Influence marks the second segment in the talk show's first season as an hour program. The first program was "Bullet Proof Teens."

"In that program, I interviewed teens who had shot people, who had burned down houses, who have raped and stolen — very serious crimes," Lindgren said. "I'd say about 50 percent of those kids were simply influenced by someone else."

In preparing the program, Lindgren said he realized that "today, parents have less influence on their kids.

Threads of the past

Adrianne, 5, and Alex Montgomery model their mother Sheryl's patterns for the magazine "Sew Beautiful."

"I don't think I've ever sewn a pattern the way I was supposed to. I'd get something in my mind, and I never could find a pattern to go with it so I started drafting my own."

Midlander Sheryl Smith Montgomery's passion for heirloom sewing was fueled by the delicately designed antique clothing she saw in the shop windows in her hometown of Birmingham, Ala.

"I would see a lot of heirloom-sewn garments especially in antique stores," recalled the designer, who, as the daughter of missionaries, has lived in South America, Central America and the Caribbean. "I always loved fine needle arts. I was fascinated with it. I wanted to learn how to do it, especially after my daughter was born. I wanted her to have the garments I had seen so many places."

Mrs. Montgomery began creating her own designs because she couldn't find what she wanted already available.

"I don't think I've ever sewn a pattern the way I was supposed to," she said. "I'd get something in my mind, and I never could find a pattern to go with it so I started drafting my own."

Today, this mother of three designs patterns for heirloom sewn clothes. "They're like garments you'd find in your grandmother's trunk."

Her latest creation, "Adrianne's Pieces de Resistance," has been published as the featured pattern in the 1995 Fall Back to School issue of the magazine, "Sew Beautiful." This combination jumper and sundress pattern is modeled by Mrs. Montgomery's daughter, Adrianne, 5, on the back cover of the magazine along with another of Mrs. Montgomery's designs, "Alex's Windowpanes," a pattern for boys modeled by her son, Alex. Of the latter design, Mrs. Montgomery said, "You want a toddler to look like a toddler. Not an 8-year-old preppie or a kid at a ball park."

In addition, Mrs. Montgomery said, "One of the designs running in next year's Back to School issue is made for little boys. It's an heirloom sewn garment that looks like a little boy but isn't a T-shirt and blue jeans."

A trunk showing of Mrs. Montgomery's design, "Montgomery Methods," will be held from 1 to 3 p.m. Sept. 16 at the Needle Nook, No. 12 Imperial Shopping Center. At that time, she will be signing copies of the magazine's Fall and Holiday Issues.

"Creating a design on fabric is definitely an art form," Mrs. Montgomery said. "It's all geared to art — picking colors to complement a fabric or a person." For example, some "children like tailored clothes," while others like clothing with ruffles "and full of flounces."

A member of the Tumbleweed Chapter of the Smocking Arts Guild of America, Mrs. Montgomery teaches heirloom sewing locally and regionally at Rachael's Fine Fabrics, Lubbock.

"I love teaching," said Mrs. Montgomery, "and I teach all aspects — smocking, shadow embroidery, heirloom sewing by sewing machine, cutwork by hand and by machine" as well as "other French sewing techniques."

Many of her students are mothers of either young children or school-age children and grandmothers, Mrs. Montgomery said, "The ones in between are smocking for dolls. That's become big business, doing heirloom sewing for dolls, which includes French hand sewing and French sewing by machine."

She and other members of the Tumbleweed Chapter of the Smocking Arts Guild of America encourage people to learn the techniques. "There's an art to these techniques. The smocking arts guild promotes the art and teaches it so that it doesn't become lost."

When this designer dresses her own children - including Aaron, the newest arrival born at the end of June - in smocked garments for special occasions and for church, they don't go unnoticed.

"People will stop me and say, 'Oh, did you make that?' or 'Where did you get her dress?' At the Celebration of the Arts booth, people stop and gawk at the clothing. Everyone wants us to make them one, but it's hard to get them interested in making them."

Even for beginners, there are "things that are easy to learn but look like a million dollars," Mrs. Montgomery said.

In today's fast-paced world, it's easier to encourage people to learn the techniques on a sewing machine, Mrs. Montgomery said.

"French sewing by machine is very popular. French hand sewing — very few people are interested in that. We're hoping to revive that, too. That's the lost art (hand sewing techniques). Sewing machines are wonderful, and I teach on them constantly, but if you know how to do it by hand, you can duplicate it on a machine.

"I like to learn both ways," she said. "Some people prefer the fast and easy way. I don't want to see handwork die out. Some things can't be duplicated by machine because they're so much prettier by hand."

Although Mrs. Montgomery started in the business of designing clothing before she became involved with the Tumbleweed Chapter of the Smocking Arts Guild of America, she credits the organization with providing her with invaluable knowledge and help.

"We have gotten a grant every year from the Arts Assembly of Midland, which allows us to bring in national teachers, well known in heirloom sewing," Mrs. Montgomery said. "That's where a lot of us have learned the techniques we could not have learned except by reading books."

The Tumbleweed Chapter meets at 7 p.m. every third Monday of the month at Grace Presbyterian Church. Visitors are welcome and may attend two meetings before deciding they want to join or not.

Before designing clothes, Mrs. Montgomery worked as an editor with Caribbean Christian Publications, a division of the Baptist Spanish Publishing House.

Then, she had her own desktop publishing business. At the time, she and husband, Malcolm, a pharmaceutical representative, were living in El Paso.

"I was very successful with it," said Mrs. Montgomery, whose daughter was born in El Paso. "When he was transferred to Midland, I had to make a decision whether to continue that business or not. I was six months pregnant. I didn't know whether I wanted to go through those deadlines again.

"I'd been doing my drafting and designs for myself and my daughter for a while. Why not get in the business? I wanted something new and different."

She became a published designer when she sent in a pattern to Sew Beautiful several years ago. She had worked up the design while nursing Alex.

"I'm one of those people who can't sit still," Mrs. Montgomery said. She laughed.

Her first published pattern ran in Sew Beautiful's 1994 Back to School issue.

"From that pattern I wondered, "Why don't I do my own pattern and market it directly to the public?" I designed one for girls and one for boys called Windowpanes. After I got those on the market, I had to make a decision whether I wanted to do that as a full fledged business - traveling and marketing those patterns.

Her third pregnancy made the decision for her. Her patterns will again be featured in Sew Beautiful in three more publications - 1995 Holiday, 1996 Back to School and Spring 1997 issues.

"Right at the time I needed to make a crucial decision, I found I was expecting my third child. I believe that was God answering for me. I'm a full time mother. I don't want to change that."

SHOW: Christian program to tackle media

(From 1F)

And It's not because the kids aren't listening. It's because the parents don't have time or make time to influence them.

"Street Level Videos" has become known in the Midland-Odessa area for its coverage of issues affecting modern youth, ranging from AIDS and teen sexuality to teen violence and family communication. The program makes itself pertinent to area residents by going on the streets to get interviews and comments about the subject being discussed.

The move to a prime-time slot on Sunday and the increase to an hour format as opposed to a 30-minute slot demonstrates the popularity of the talk show, Lindgren said.

"The program has a good audience, not just teens but adults, too. We found that our viewer is someone who tuned in once and just keeps watching. The aspect I think keeps them there is the personal testimony that we include in every show.

Arbitron and the Nelson Rating Book have indicated that most of the audience is adult, said Lindgren, who also hosts KPEJ's Kids Club. "We think it's the parents. We're able to interview teenagers and get information out of them that parents just don't get out of their kids, especially if they are problem kids. So, when they tune into our show, they yet a response that sometimes surprises them."

In addition to the interviews, the show features Christian music videos.

"The music is very popular. People are buying it, and it's good. It's not just the whooping and hollering, they have to have talent."

Part of the program's appeal is, Lindgren said, "It's a good clean show. I think the people in this community are very hungry for good clean shows, and when one comes along, they latch on. And it just so happens it's 'Street Level Videos.'"

For four years, the program, which has its own sponsors, has performed well at the different times it's aired, said Lindgren, who lives in Odessa.

"When we aired at 12:30 p.m., according to Arbitron, we had a 2.7 rating and came in second place behind NBA Basketball with a 2.8 (Both local market share ratings.) In 1993, 'Street L Level Videos' achieved a three rating on Sunday night at 10 p.m. against the news, which matched Arsenio Hall's three rating running against the news weekdays. (Both local market share ratings.)"

The opinions expressed on "Street Level Videos" are not necessarily those of the station, KPEJ Fox 24, which, Lindgren said, "Does provide a lot of the air time and production."

The show is "a paid program. The advantage is that if we decide we want to give our own opinion, it does not necessarily reflect the station's opinion. If I feel that the best answer is to turn your life over to God, well then, that's my opinion. If they want to argue, they can call up and argue with me."

Those working on "Street Level Videos" are volunteers. They're not paid staff. Hosts for the hour program include Lindgren, Paige Moore, Chelsie Austin, Eric Twilliger and Nora Ravera.

For the first time, "Street Level Videos" will air outside the Permian Basin. The programs will be seen a month later in such markets as San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Waco, Albuquerque, N.M., Shreveport, La., Nashville, Tenn., and Scottsdale, Ariz.

In its 30-minute format, the show included interviews and videos. Now the program, which will air once a month instead of weekly, also features drama.

"It's excellent," said Lingering "Our drama team consists of all of us. The dramas we have planned are funny, and they're fun."

"Street Level Videos" actually began in 1983 under the leadership of John Cope.

"I assisted him in promotions and, for the first three years, we had a Christian concert program that brought in Christian concerts to our community, said Lindgren. "It was probably the first positive music for teens that the community ever heard. When the economy went down, "Street Level Videos" was on hold. That was about '86."

Cope and Lindgren moved out of the area. When Lindgren returned in 1991, he accepted the job with KPEJ, Fox 24, because of the opportunity to do a half-hour Christian program.

Since that time, Lindgren said "'Street Level Videos" has become a household name."

The program features local ministries and has benefited non-profits in several ways. Those involved with the program have produced commercials and PSAs for non-profits. Also, this season marks the program's third year of involvement in feeding families at Thanksgiving in conjunction with Lowe's Marketplace. In addition the show has clothed hundreds through Servants of the Poor.

In our past seasons, we highlighted non-profit organizations in the community. The program actually benefited the non-profits like Midland Habitat for Humanity, the Special Olympics and Loved Ones of Prisoners. We'll continue to do that.

"We consider "Street Level Videos" to be an outreach that benefits the community," said Lindgren, who is production manager at KPEJ, Fox 24. "We really don't have our own ministry, our own headquarters. We pull from what's available in the community and display it on television."

"Street Level Videos" utilizes outside professional advice.

"If we talk about depression we don't use our own counselors, we use professional counselors. We don't depend on our own education or our own knowledge to communicate truths. So, every program will have a professional in the field that we are talking about.

To be called a Christian organization Lindgren said, "You should consider what the Word asks us to do when it comes to sharing the gospel of Jesus Christ and that is to meet needs. To feed the hungry, clothe the naked and shelter the homeless, Matthew 25:35. That's what we hope to do through our show.

"When we include teens in that, it's hopefully providing them information that can help them make a clear decision about their own lives.

"The only time it makes a difference for criminals is when they make a decision from the heart. Why not share the gospel? It makes a difference. They have to come to a turning point, and a lot of times can't do that unless you touch their hearts. So that's what we hope our show does. It touches the heart."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Children learn arts

All God's Children, a new fine arts school in Midland, is offering First Threatre Classes for children in kindergarten through sixth grade. Classes meet one hour a week for sixteen weeks, August 27 through December 12. Registration is ongoing. To receive a complete schedule of classes and registration form for First Threatre Classes call Rene at 520-3312.

All God's Children is dedicated to making the arts and arts education available to all people of Midland. The tuition for classes is based on the families' ability to pay. The tuition amount for one class ranges from $75 to $1. Discounts are also available to families enrolling more than one child.

First Theatre Classes provide children an opportunity to creatively explore their world while having fun. Classes use fairy tales, folk stories, and classic children's literature as a springboard for acting. Games and activities teach the creative use of voice and movement, the understanding of characters, and the exploration of senses and emotion. The students act out the stories making up dialog and action themselves.

The Instructor for First Theatre classes is Rene Brister Chambers. Ms. Chambers has over nine years professional experience teaching young people acting and creative drama.

For more information about First Theatre Classes or All God's Children call Rene at 520-3312.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, AUGUST 27, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Burning ambition and a desire to succeed against all odds, add up to great accomplishments. November is the ideal time to plunge into a daring career or business venture. December could bring a special love into your life. Settle in at home for the holidays; family ties can wither if neglected. An exciting travel offer could have you packing your bags early in 1996. Let your romantic partner know that a separation is strictly temporary. Phone often.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: Nobel Peace Prize laureate Mother Teresa, actress Barbara Bach, legendary movie mogul Samuel Goldwyn, singer Martha Raye.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your sense of fair play is aroused by something that happens today. What you do behind the scenes will greatly influence events. Do not expect others to guess what you want.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Once you get better organized at home, everyone will have more time to relax. Complaints from family members slow to a trickle. Widening your social circle gives you a better perspective on your life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Fill your lungs with fresh air, then exercise. Greet the coming week refreshed, ready to take on any challenge! A romantic interlude creates a wonderful feeling.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An inspirational talk helps siblings resolve some of their differences. A flirtation appears to be blossoming into true love. Trust your heart. Practice what you preach when dealing with teen-agers.

LEO (July 23-Aug.22): A computer gets a real workout, coming up with answers that will please your family. Get to know someone really well before embarking on a serious romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.22): A trip could open the door of opportunity to someone who is out of work. A confusing situation can be quickly cleared up with a phone call. A church program provides valuable assistance. Repay favors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your sense of adventure may not be shared by your mate. Perhaps everyone should agree to do their own thing today. Give some thought to how you can make a business dream come true.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Throw a challenge back to someone who is trying to pass the buck. You need to follow through on a tough decision. Curb a tendency to spend money on impulse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hurt feelings need to be dealt with in a positive manner. Friends need more information in order to give you helpful advice. New financial backing is possible if you lay your cards on the table.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.19): A love-hate relationship may be developing between parent and child. Loosen the apron strings before a permanent split occurs. Send out invitations now to avoid being disappointed by refusals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A temporary separation will make your heart grow fonder. Romance may seem more topsy-turvy than it really is. Be constructive when analyzing someone's work. Having to redo a project is irritating.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The emphasis today is on teaching a young person to be responsible. Emphasize the need for obeying safety regulations. Spending more time with parents will show you the best way you can help them.

GOREN BRIDGE

PLAY OR DEFEND?

Both vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH

♣ A K

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
2♣	Pass	2◇	Pass
2♠	Pass	3♣	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♣ Study this layout. Would you rather play or defend four spades after the lead of a low club?

South's two clubs was artificial and forcing and two diamonds was probably a negative response. After the natural rebid of two spades, three clubs by agreement was a second negative, so South settled for game in spades.

Suppose you choose to play. You have three possible heart losers and a trump, but you can try to ruff a heart in dummy. In some circumstances, the defenders won't be able to return a trump without sacrificing their trick in the suit.

If you lead a low heart to the second trick, you can be defeated, because that situation doesn't exist. East can win the heart and shift to a trump, the finesse loses and West returns a trump. Eventually you will have to surrender two more heart tricks in addition to the two tricks they have already banked.

However, that doesn't mean that you should defend. Instead of a low heart, a stronger line is to lead the king of hearts at trick two! West can win and return a trump, taken in hand. When you now exit with another heart, if East wins the defender doesn't have a second trump to return, so you will be able to ruff a heart. If instead, West wins, another trump return will cost the defenders their trump trick and anything else permits declarer to ruff a heart. Either way the defenders collect only three tricks. Since West will have the ace of hearts 50 percent of the time, good technique triumphs.

Oscar G y Grupo Sol closes out this year's festival with a dance at the MAC building beginning at 8 p.m. Sunday, September 3.

In addition to the music, a parade and the 5K 'Run for the Lights' are scheduled for Saturday morning in downtown Marfa.

The place to be Saturday and Sunday afternoon is the courthouse lawn for food and game booths, arts and crafts and more entertainment including local talent and folkloric dancers from Mexico.

For more information and concert tickets, call or write the Marfa Chamber of Commerce, Box 635, Marfa, Texas 79843; (915) 729-4942.

Prints at museum

Color wood block prints by one of America's best and most innovative printmakers of the first part of the 20th century are at the Museum of the Southwest in Midland now through October 1.

Gustave Baumann: Hands of a Craftsman, Heart of an Artist presents 60 works including color wood block prints, gouache sketches, and selections from the artist's notebooks.

The exhibit is organized by the Museum of Fine Arts, Santa Fe, N.M., from its extensive collection of Baumann prints and archives. Local sponsorship by Texaco.

For more information call the museum, 683-2882 or 570-7770. Public hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Students register

ODESSA — The Permian Playhouse is registering students in Theatre School for the fall semester.

The school begins Sept. 28. The students' chance to show off will be as cast members in the kaleidoscope Company production of "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever!" Performances are Dec. 2-3 and 9-10.

Students will need to be present at rehearsals Nov. 27-30 and Dec. 1 from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Cost for theater school per semester is $50 for children of Playhouse members and $65 for non-members' children. A reduction is made when enrolling two or more children of the same family. Scholarships are available based on need.

For more information call the Odessa theater Monday through Friday between noon and 6 p.m. at 1-915-362-2329.

Rehearsals start

ODESSA — Rehearsals have started for the Broadway musical hit "Fiddler on the Roof," which will open the 1995 Main Stage Season at the Permian Playhouse here Sept. 22.

Nearly 60 people auditioned for parts in the musical. Directing the production is Christopher J. Olsen, former Kaleidoscope Company director. Janet Walker, assistant choir director at Permian High School, is the musical director. Choreography is by Judy Coleman, Coleman Academy, Midland.

"Fiddler on the Roof" will run through Oct. 8. For more information call the Playhouse, 310 W. 42nd St., 1-915-362-2329. Tickets go on sale to members Sept. 5 and to non-members Sept. 11.

Presentations set

ODESSA — An arts collaboration between the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, The Globe of the Great Southwest, Permian Playhouse, the Presidential Museum and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin centers around Russian culture.

The time period of the works involved extends from early 19th century to the present. A symphony concert, "Russian Masterworks," in September, paintings and sculpture by Russian dissident artists, the musical "Fiddler on the Roof," two one-act plays entitled "An Evening with Chekov" which features two comedies "The Marriage Proposal" and "Crosspatch," a Russian film series and an exhibition exploring U.S.-Russian relations over 200 years are all intended to enhance public understanding of Russian culture.

The presentations began the first of July with an exhibition of Soviet photography from 1974-1990, "The Soviets," loaned by Abilene photographer Bill Wright, who collected the prints from Soviet photographers while visiting the Soviet Union in 1988. The exhibition remains at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University, through Aug. 26.

The other events begin in September.

Auditions held

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech University Center's Programs Ideas and Issues Committee will hold auditions for its upcoming production of Harvey Fierstein's play, "On Tidy Endings," from 5 to 9 p.m. Sept. 8 and 1 to 5 p.m. Sept. 9 and 10 in the Coronado Room at University Center, Tech campus.

The play, which is part of the events that will take place during AIDS Awareness Week Oct. 2-7, will run at 8 p.m. Oct. 3, 4 and 7.

Parts are available for two women, a male and an 11 years old boy. The play deals with the death of a loved one to AIDS.

For more information call Sara Solloway, UC Activities, 1-806-742-3621.

Exhibition set

AUSTIN — The oldest surviving Lone Star Flag, Sam Houston's pistol, the Texas Declaration of Independence, Mexican General Santa Anna's spurs, Bigfoot Wallace's Buckskin jacket, the 1845 Texas State Constitution and other icons of Texas history may now be seen at the Capitol Complex Visitors Center, 112 E. 11th St., here, in a special exhibition entitled "Celebrating 150 Years of Texas Statehood: 1845-1995."

The exhibition traces early Texas history and explores the complex process by which Texas became a state 150 years ago. Guest curator James L. Haley, an author and Texas historical living here, has written an interpretive text that addresses all the major issues related to Texas' becoming the 28th state on Dec. 29, 1845, including annexation, politics, slavery and the Mexican War.

Like all exhibits at the Visitors Center, the statehood exhibit is free and open to the public during the center's regular hours, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays. The Visitors Center is closed Sundays and Mondays. It is located in the 1856-57 General Land Office Building, the oldest state government building in Texas, on the southeast corner of the capitol grounds. The exhibit closes Dec. 30.

Concert scheduled

The Hampshire County Youth Orchestra of Hampshire, England, will be presented in concert at 8 p.m. Wednesday at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Members of the orchestra live in the county of Hampshire which lies midway along the south coast of England, Winchester the county town being 70 miles southwest of London. One of the larger English counties, it has an area of around 1,300 square miles and a population of 1.3 million.

The 104 players between the ages of 11 and 19 are drawn from some of the 100 secondary schools within the county.

The orchestra is on tour in Texas and Maryland through Aug. 28.

Festival set

KERRVILLE — The fourth annual Kerrville Wine & Music Festival is set for the three-day Labor Day weekend, Sept. 1-3, at Rod Kennedy's Quiet valley Ranch.

Each succeeding celebration of winemakers and songwriters has grown in attendance and the 1995 festival is expected to top the previous three.

Wines will be served and tasted from a dozen of Texas' best known wineries and songwriters and their bands will perform from Tennessee, California, New York, Iowa, Massachusetts and Texas.

Popular Texas performers include Shake Russell and Jack Saunders, Christine Albert, Cafe Noir, Betty Elders, Kimberly M'Carver, Michael Elwood and Beth Galiger, among others. The East Texas bluegrass band, Hickory Hill, will be celebrating the 15th anniversary of its first get together at a Kerrville Bluegrass Festival in 1982.

The must unusual appearance will be Czechoslovakia's most popular folk quintet, Zalam A Spol, whose six CD's earn them 140 concerts a year. Their last two albums sold 200,000 copies.

The Sunday winemakers picnic will feature the wines of fall Creek Winery with six matching courses prepared by 1995 Chef of the Yea, Bruce Auden of San Antonio's Restaurant BIGA.

Wine panels will sample Texas wines with Mexican food and Texas Merlots. A dozen wine booths will be manned by Texas wineries.

For more information about this fall festival, which is co-sponsored by Southwest Airlines and Whole Foods Market, call 1-800-435-8429 or write producer Rod Kennedy, P.O. Box 1466, Kerrville, Texas 78029. Camping at the ranch is included with three-day tickets and available for a small fee for single nights. A three-day ticket is $45 with an additional $50 per person for those making winemaker picnic reservations.

Fall Exhibit set

POST — The Caprock Photographers will hold its 11th annual Fall Exhibit at the Algerita Arts Center here the first week in November.

Entries will be accepted at the Algerita Arts Center from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Nov. 1. Also, a drop-off station in Lubbock will be set up at Armadillo Camera, 3824 50th St., between 4 and 6 p.m. Oct. 30.

Judging the exhibit will be Butch Phillips.

Tickets on sale

LUBBOCK — Tickets are on sale at Lubbock Select-A-Seat locations for the West Texas premiere of "Les Miserables."

This mega-award winning Broadway musical is set for eight performance Nov. 7-12 at the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium. It is being presented by Cameron Mackintosh by special arrangement with Civic Lubbock, Inc.

The musical, which is based on Victor Hugo's classic novel, "Les Miserables," has won 32 major awards internationally.

Written by Alain Boublil and Claude Michel-Schonberg, the $4.2 million production coming to the Municipal Auditorium is one of the most costly and elaborate Broadway shows ever mounted for touring and replicates the Broadway production in its entirety, said a release from Civic Lubbock, Inc. This production has set attendance records, selling out in virtually every city it has visited since premiering in Tampa, Fla., in November of 1988.

Ticket prices, including all fees, range from $28 to $53. Performance times are 8 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday and 2 p.m. for Friday and Sunday matinees. For additional ticket information call 1-806-770-2000.

To charge tickets by telephone call 1-800-735-1288. Visa, Mastercard and Discover are accepted. For group reservations of 20 or more call 1-806-794-0328.

For mail orders send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: "Les Miserables" Tickets, c/o Civic Lubbock, Inc., 1501 6th St., Lubbock, Texas 79401.

Listings accepted

The Arts Extension Service is accepting craft fair listing for the 1996 edition of "Fairs and Festivals."

AES offers festival producers an opportunity to reach thousands of potential exhibitors, buyers and journalists who use "Fairs and Festivals" to find crafts events. "Fair and Festivals," now in its 21st edition, is an annual directory that lists contact and key application information, locations and descriptions of more than 1,000 festivals through 27 states in the northeast and southeast United States.

Producers of events that offer crafts people a market place to sell their work are invited to contact the Arts Extension Service to request a Sponsor Packet sent to them. The 1996 edition includes a new Preview published in early October 1995, and lists events with deadlines up to March 1, 1996.

To be listed in the book, the deadlines are Sept. 15 for events held January through July 1996; and Oct. 20 for events held July through December. Listings received after the preview deadline still have until Sept. 15 to be listed in the book. Illegible submissions, press releases and publicity brochures are unacceptable.

"Fair producers receive free promotion that will reach thousands of people who use 'Fairs and Festivals'," said a release from the Arts Extension Service.

To be listed in the book, request a Sponsor Packet from the arts extension Service, Division of Continuing education, 602 Goodell Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, or call 1-413-545-2360.

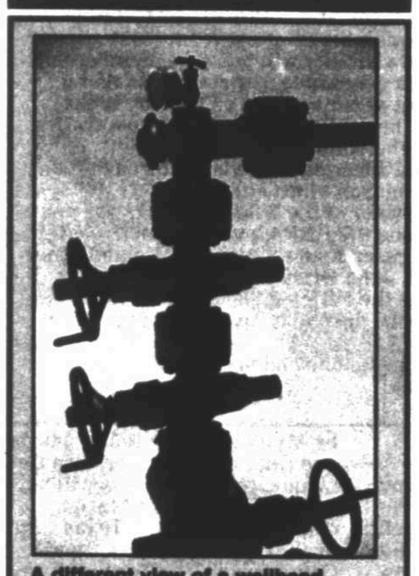
OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, AUGUST 27, 1995 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING



A different view of a wellhead.

Drilling slumps

Drilling activity slowed in the Permian Basin for the week ended August 18, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The Permian Basin fell five rigs to 113 for the week. A year ago the count was 104.

Nationwide, the rig count rose five to 744 for the week but remains below the year-ago count of 772.

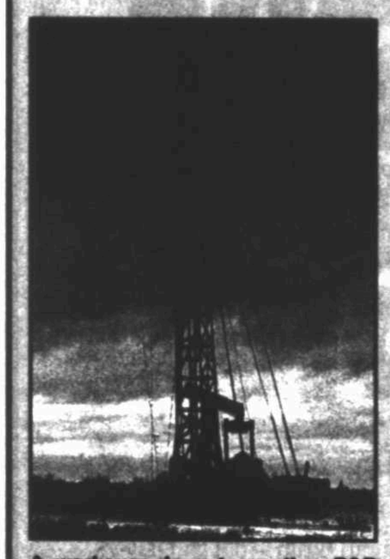
Coda buyout

DALLAS -- Coda Energy, Inc. has entered into a letter of understanding with Enron Capital & Trade Resources Corp. whereby ECT or its affiliates or designees would acquire all of the common stock of Coda at a price of $8.00 per share in cash through a merger. The parties anticipate that approximately 24,600,000 shares will be outstanding as of the time of the merger.

Among other things, the proposed merger would be subject to and conditioned upon the execution of a definitive merger agreement, approval by holders of a majority of Coda's outstanding shares of common stock, the receipt of all necessary consents and governmental approvals, and the sale of Coda's gas gathering and processing subsidiary, Taurus Energy Corp. on terms acceptable to ECT.



A workover rig puts another P&P back on pump.

Prices improve

Prices showed some improvement during the week on news domestic supplies were tightening, increasing tensions in the Middle East and expiration of the September contract for delivery of West Texas Intermediate.

Prices, however, retreated to last week's levels by late in the week on the New York Mercantile Exchange. October contracts for WTI closed at $17.86 late in the week, the posted price at $16.25 a barrel.

Completions drop

WASHINGTON - The number of oil wells, natural gas wells and dry holes completed during the second quarter of 1995 declined 9 percent as compared to the same quarter a year ago, the American Petroleum Institute reported.

According to the API's "1995 Quarterly Well Completion Report: Second Quarter," 4,645 oil wells, natural gas wells and dry holes were completed during April, May and June, compared with 5,127 wells completed in the same three months a year ago. The overall decline for the quarter was due primarily to a 38 percent decrease in exploratory well completions - oil wells were down 26 percent, gas wells 54 percent, and dry wells 34 percent.

A West Texas pumpjack strains to keep U.S. production from sinking into steeper declines. Energy experts say U.S. must adjust energy policy soon to prevent the downfall of the U.S. dollar at home and on the world market. National security is also listed as a concern with present energy policy.

Experts say energy policy must be corrected

Increasing imports, declining production could mean economic crash

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Two top U.S. energy experts have called for Congress to put U.S. energy policy back on the front burner because of the dangerous implications of foreign oil imports.

Former Deputy Secretary of Energy Bill White, in his first appearance before an audience since leaving the Department of Energy on August 14, told members of the board of directors of People for an Energy Policy (PEP) that three points were crucial to America's growing dependence on foreign oil imports while domestic production continued to decline.

Unless the trend toward foreign dependency is stopped, White said the erosion of the U.S. job base would continue and long term prospects for the dollar and national security would be in jeopardy.

"The average person in the oil and gas business understands that oil imports are the largest component of chronic trade deficits, and could cause America to lose control of the dollar, but these issues are very difficult for the public to grasp," said White, who told PEP board members they should brings such issues to the public's attention.

Milton Copulos, President of the National Defense Council Foundation, who also spoke to board members noted that the U.S. must increase domestic oil supplies because it cannot always expect to fight all its wars on level ground in the shadow of Saudi Arabian refining capacity.

"American forces won a quick war in Kuwait only by relying on Saudi Arabian refined products that were conveniently nearby in almost perfect staging areas, but in future engagements we won't always have the advantage of closely situated fuel supplies." He said that modern armies were an enormous gas hog, that a modern armored division of 17,500 men required twice as much fuel as two field armies or 200,000 men in World War II.

Copulos said he was worried that the U.S. was too dependent on a region where Kuwait recently elected a 30 percent fundamental parliament, and Larry Strahan, president of PEP, said the U.S. should take note that the Saudis would not permit the U.S. to fly over their territory when U.S. troops were sent to the Persian Gulf.

"That decision delayed troop movements by six days," Strahan said. " We need to take note of what's going on. We are told Saudi Arabia is our friend and repre-

Bush

It may be two months away, but preparations are already underway for the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's annual meeting, set for October 26-27.

Texas Gov. George W. Bush will keynote the concluding President's Reception and Banquet. The banquet will mark the first time the event will be held in conjunction with the Permian Basin Petroleum Pioneers' biennial reunion.

The meeting's theme, "Back to Basics '95: The Three Es - Environment, Energy and Education" will be addressed by a number of industry and government leaders.

"We're trying to show how all three focus and work together," said Bob Kiker, executive vice president of the PBPA. "We have to have a blend of environment, energy and education and they all work in a triangle and support each other. We need to educate people about the environment and about energy and we need to start a grassroots movement from the elementary schools on up."

At the October 27 kick-off breakfast - being held at the Petroleum Club - members will be addressed by U.S. Senator Pete Domenici, Texas Railroad Commissioner Charles R. Matthews and Bill LeMay, director of the New Mexico Oil Conservation Division.

Also at the breakfast, Don Lyle, editor of Hart's Oil & Gas World will present the "Best of the Permian Basin Awards" in five categories.

Tennis event good for business

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

A Midland tennis tournament is rapidly becoming one of the oilpatch's largest and most prestigious social events, drawing hundreds of tennis-playing oil executives from Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado, and New Mexico.

Approximately 230 tennis players from throughout the U.S. are expected to take part in the Sixth Annual Southwest Oilman's Tennis Tournament September 20-23 in Midland.

Tom Ragsdale, chairman of the event, said that altogether about 600 will participate in social and tournament events. Ragsdale, who has played frequently in the Houston Oilman's Tennis Tournament (HOTT) in Houston said the Midland event was patterned after the Houston tournament which has a long waiting list.

"HOTT got so big and the waiting list so long that they have now started another tournament called the World Oilman's Tennis Tournament (WOTT)," said Ragsdale. Another oil country tennis tournament is the Southern Oilman's Tennis Tournament (SOTT) in Louisiana.

Attendance and participation at the tournaments are by invitation only, and serve a vital interest to the oil industry according to Ragsdale. "Through these competitive events and the associated social events, members of the oil industry get to know one another in a friendly and relaxing atmosphere and develop more business contacts."

"I really think SWOTT stimulates business activity and that is what we

DOE reports offshore finds help reserves

■ Large offshore finds in the Gulf of Mexico have helped improve domestic reserves.

By The Associated Press

Large offshore oil and natural gas discoveries in the Gulf of Mexico have played a major role in a rise of U.S. gas reserves and have stemmed a decline in domestic oil reserves, the U.S. Department of Energy says.

Natural gas reserves grew 1.4 trillion cubic feet in 1994 and oil reserves declined 500 million barrels, according to the report released Monday.

The United States currently has gas reserves of 163.8 trillion cubic feet of gas, a 6.6-year supply, and oil reserves of 22.4 billion barrels, about a 3.4-year supply, the report said.

The U.S. consumes about 19 trillion cubic feet of natural gas per year, and 6.6 billion barrels of oil annually.

The key gas find was Shell Offshore's Mensa, 130 miles southeast of New Orleans.

— Department of Energy report

Arthur Smith, chairman of John S. Herold Inc., a Connecticut oil research firm, said the reserve improvements are the result of "an intense level of industry effort in the Gulf of Mexico."

He said there is little hope of arresting the decline in oil reserves for a long period of time, but any slowdown would be welcome.

In 1993, oil reserves declined 788 million barrels and natural gas reserves were down 2.6 trillion cubic feet.

The improvement was due to two deepwater discoveries in the Gulf, the energy department said.

The Ram Powell find, by Shell Offshore and Amoco, added the equivalent of 271 million barrels of oil. The field in 125 miles east-southeast of New Orleans.

The key gas find was Shell Offshore's Mensa, 130 miles southeast of New Orleans. That discovery identified about 720 billion cubic feet of gas last year.

Southwest buys Espero Energy, forms subsidiary

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Southwest Royalties Inc. has acquired its second major oil property this year for a total of $16.4 million since the beginning of the year.

The company says it has acquired Espero Energy Corp. of San Antonio. The purchase includes oil and gas properties in 33 states and includes the 20,895 acre Esperanza Ranch in Crockett County and timberland near Jackson, Mississippi. The stock of the company was purchased and placed in a newly formed subsidiary known as SW Espero. Espero, which is traded on the NASDAQ, dates its roots back to 1930 and the Love Petroleum Co.

Oil and gas assets include 400 wells and net proven reserves of 3,340,000 equivalent barrels of oil. About 120 of the wells are in the Permian Basin. Purchase price for the reserves in place was approximately $2.40 per equivalent barrel.

Russ Hall, who grades the producing properties for development, said Southwest is now involved with in 2500 leases and operates 500 leases. With the acquisition the company now operates 1600 wells.

Hall, who was formerly with Nations Bank, said the company will now begin to grade the properties for financial, geological and mechanical risks. And would grade them on an A plus to C basis. He said the most common practice to capitalize on upside potential was the workover followed by drilling.

"We have hundreds of wells to drill, and we are now working on a strategy that will help us get those wells developed. "We have a limited amount of money to spend and want to spend it as wisely as possible."

Hall said the company was looking to buy other properties and looked at about one deal a day. "We are known as a company that looks at deals. We have a lot of industry contacts."

Polande begins building natural gas pipeline

WARSAW (Bloomberg) — Poland will begin building the first segment of a $2.5 billion gas pipeline linking Russia to Germany in October, Polish officials said.

The first 102-kilometer (63-mile) segment of the Polish portion is to be completed in mid-1996 and gas is expected to begin moving through the pipeline by the end of the year. The initial section is expected to cost about $150 million, said Kazimierz Adamczyk, president of the Russian-Polish joint venture Europol Gaz, which is building the pipeline.

The company is jointly owned by Russia's Gazprom, the world's biggest gas company, and Poland's state-owned oil and gas company, Polskie Gornictwo Naftowe i Gazownictwo. The joint-venture is responsible for financing the entire $2.5 billion cost of building the pipeline between Belarus and Poland.

Poland's government has granted guarantees for $300 million to $350 million of the project. Russia is responsible for the remainder.

A consortium of Polish banks or Polish and Russian banks would finance the initial segment, Adamczyk said at a press conference today. The company is talking to Western banks and major financial institutions about financing the rest.

The long-awaited announcement of the start of construction of the planned 665-kilometer (406-mile) pipeline through Poland means Russia can begin to diversify export routes for gas it sells to Western Europe, analysts said.

Russian exports to Western Europe have been held up in the Ukraine recently, because of problems getting the Ukraine to pay for gas and some unauthorized flows of gas to Western Europe by the Ukraine, said Jonathan Stern, vice president at Gas Strategies in London.

Currently, all Russian gas flowing to Western Europe travels through the Ukraine, Romania, Bulgaria, Slovakia and the Czech Republic.

Russia has "decided as a result of that that they need to diversify their export routes," Stern said. "If they are to meet their schedule, they need to get started right now."

Construction is a year behind schedule, but Polish officials said they're confident they can meet the 1996 deadline to allow 5 billion cubic meters (175 billion cubic feet) of gas to begin flowing through Poland next year.

The final legal hurdles to the pipeline project were cleared last week when the Polish Council of Ministers approved the Polish-Russian agreement negotiated in February. The Polish government also approved duty-free imports of equipment from Russia to build the pipeline.

The new pipeline, expected to be completed by 2010, will carry about 68 billion cubic meters (2,380 billion cubic feet) of gas per year. About 14 billion cubic meters (490 billion cubic feet) will go to Poland and the rest to Western Europe.

sents a safe and secure supply of oil, but recent events prove it is not the reliable source we thought it was. What if we went to defend Kuwait again, and Saudi Arabia would not give us the fuel because of fear of their neighbors?

Copulos called the Middle East a time bomb waiting to go off because of the strong anti-Western bias that pervades the region. "The notion that oil is just another commodity is based on the notion that economics is all that counts. But the Middle East is dominated by non-economic values, namely religious values." He said Iran was better off economically under the Shah, but that they are happier under the austere religious regime of the Ayatollah.

He said in addition to being very costly militarily, faulty policy decisions on energy could be very costly economically. He said the Arab Embargo of 1973, The Iranian Boycott of 1979 and the price collapse of 1986 had cost the U.S. over $2 trillion, or about ten times the deficit.

"Every dollar we lose in the domestic energy business to foreign oil equates to about $3.50 lost to the economy in related sales," said Copulos, who has been an energy advisor to the Department of Defense, Department of Energy and the White House.

Both White and Copulos are concerned that energy has become a non-issue in the U.S. "There is no such thing as cheap energy. It has to be bought with a price, and sometimes it is blood," said Copulos. He said America could not wait for another energy crunch to become involved with energy policy, but must do it now.

Marathon Oil Co. for best new technology, for developing a coiled tubing completion technique for its low-pressure marginal gas wells in the Permian Basin.

Permian Brine Sales Inc. for best environmental project. The company owns a 400,000 square foot cavern in the salt eight miles east of Big Spring, well below the water table and used to store drilling mud, kill fluids, tank bottoms, residue from reserve pits and other non-hazardous waste.

Union Royalty Inc. of Midland for best advanced recovery project for working out an innovative way of using advanced recovery to develop the El Mar field on the Texas side of the Texas-New Mexico border.

Midland Resources for best field improvement project for putting together an ambitious and far-reaching project that calls on the super computer resources of Los Alamos National Laboratory.

Conoco Inc. for best new well for its 3 Anna McClung 1, a Strawn well in the Pakenham field in Terrell County. This discovery well offset shallower Wolfcamp production, tested at 8.1 Mmcfd and 288 barrels of condensate daily with an estimated absolute open flow of 28 Mmcfd.

Following the breakfast, three speakers will address the "Three Es." Donald Hodel, former Secretary of Energy and former Secretary of the Interior will discuss the environment and energy. Ed Capen, former distinguished management advisor, Arco and consultant for exploration risk management, PetroRisk Partners Inc., will speak on energy and its relation to the trade deficit. Jerry Katz, director of the National Energy Educational Development project will address education.

The luncheon speaker will be Dr. Robert Kriegel, motivational speaker and author of the books "If It Ain't Broke...Break It!" and "Sacred Cows Make the Best Burgers."

The meeting concludes with the president's reception and banquet at the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center. The banquet will feature the address by Gov. Bush and honoring Petroleum Pioneer John P. Butler and the PBPA's 1995 Top Hand, John L. Cox.

Bush was elected the 46th governor of the state of Texas in November 1994 with 53.5 percent of the vote. Hew grew up in Midland and Houston and in 1975 founded Bush Exploration, a Midland-based oil and gas company. The company merged in 1983 with Spectrum 7 Energy Corp. and Bush ran the company until 1987 when it merged with Harken Energy. In 1989 he led a group of business partners in purchasing the Texas Rangers baseball team, serving as managing general partner until his election as governor.

The annual meeting will be preceded on October 26 by a day-long seminar on the environment, energy and education at the Holiday Inn Convention Center.

"We've expanded this first day to cover energy, environment and education in keeping with our theme," Kiker said. "We think we have a high quality professional meeting lined up."

The seminar will get underway at 7:30 a.m. with registration. Following welcoming addresses by Midland Mayor Bobby Burns and Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman, those attending will be addressed by Ralph Marquez, commissioner of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. The Texas City resident was appointed to the post by Gov. Bush in May and will serve until August 31, 1999.

Following Marquez will be Jennifer A. Salisbury, secretary of the New Mexico Energy, Minerals and Natural Resources Department, a position she has held since January.

Mary Miksa will address "Lobbying for Environmental and Business Issues" and Midland oilman Jim Henry will offer "An Independent's Viewpoint."

Following lunch, Jerry Smith with Phillips Petroleum will speak on "Media Training."

He will be followed by Railroad Commissioner Charles Matthews, who defeated incumbent Jim Nugent in the November 1994 election to become a member of the commission.

The seminar will conclude with a discussion of "National Performance Review" by Eric Kaarlela.

Association relocating offices to more accessible location

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Looking for higher visibility and traffic, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association has decided to relocate its its office.

After four years on the ninth floor of the Midland American Bank building, the PBPA will relocate to a ground floor suite in the Wilco building, 415 W. Wall, in the former Allega Travel location.

Bob Kiker, PBPA executive vice president, explained that the move was made to give the association more visibility and to offer more accessability to members.

"I'm hoping the increased visibility will increase membership and the new location is more accessible to members so that if they want to stop in and visit about an issue on the way to the Petroleum Club, they can," he said. "There's a lot of foot traffic on that sidewalk in front of the building."

He added that having the PBPA emblem visible through the glass entrance to the building won't hurt either.

He said Jack Wilkinson, owner of the Wilco building, was anxious to fill the space and made the PBPA a very attractive offer to relocate. And Kiker expressed appreciation for Midland American Bank and its president, John Grist, for being cooperative and understanding in letting the PBPA make the move.

The organization hopes to be open in its new home September 15.

The mailing address and telephone and fax numbers are expected to remain the same.

ARE THERE REWARDS FOR YOU IN CO_2 EOR?

OUR CO_2 SEMINAR MIGHT BOOST YOUR KNOWLEDGE AND YOUR PROFITS!

CO_2 EOR is paying big dividends for many in the Permian Basin – but will it work in your field? Our new CO_2 short course has many answers you're looking for. It's the second in a series, and will show you how to evaluate your own properties to determine their suitability for CO_2 flooding.

GET CRITICAL TECHNICAL AND ECONOMIC INFORMATION

In seven hours, you'll cover screening procedures and tools, plus valuable case studies in cost estimation and modeling. You'll learn analog techniques and screening methods developed by Shell and Mobil. Bring your own reservoir data and you can even put your new expertise to work on the spot – with our state-of-the-art screening software.

REGISTER NOW, ENROLLMENT IS LIMITED

Dates: Two sessions: Tuesday, Sept. 12 and Wednesday, Sept. 13
Time: 8:15a.m. to 5p.m.
Place: UTPB Center for Energy and Economic Diversification
1400 North FM 1788, Odessa (north of Midland/Odessa airport)
Sponsors:
- Mobil Exploration & Producing U.S. Inc.
- Permian Basin Petroleum Association
- Shell Western E&P Inc.
- The University of Texas Permian Basin Petroleum Industry Alliance

Cost: $75, lunch included. Reservations and advance payment required.

Note: This course will be tailored to the individual needs of attendees, so enrollment must be limited. Call 915-552-2430 today to make your reservation.

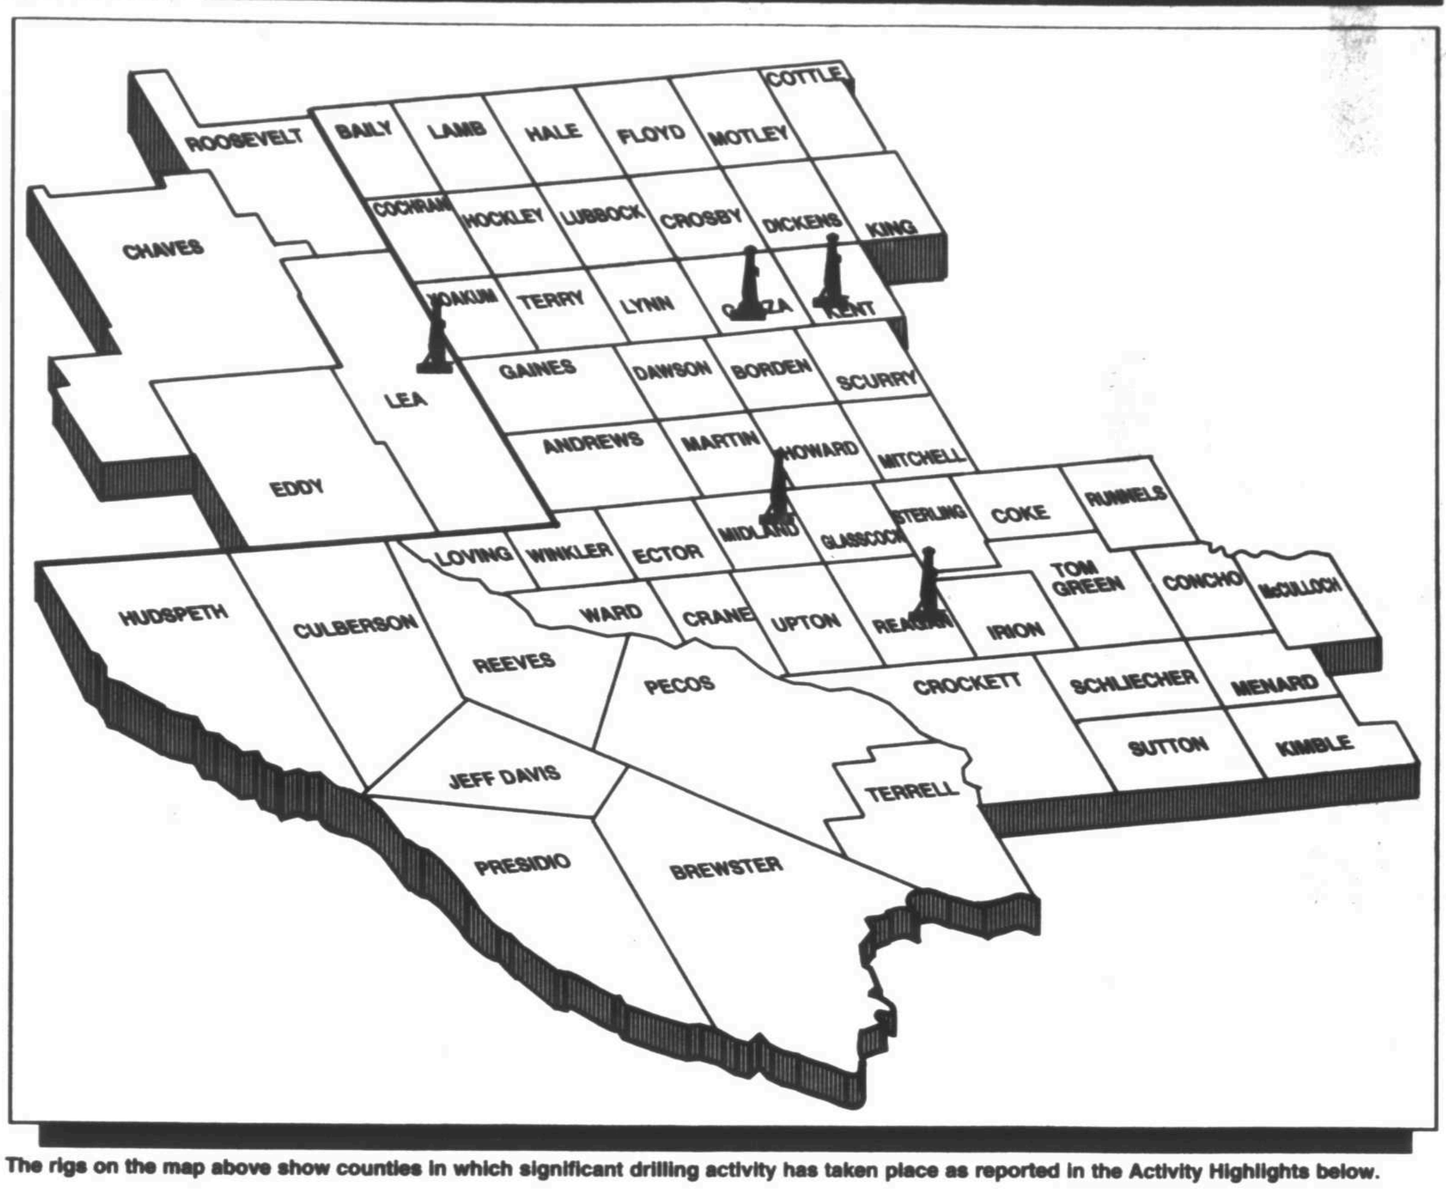
ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS



The rigs on the map above show counties in which significant drilling activity has taken place as reported in the Activity Highlights below.

Lea County yields Devonian oil discovery

Staff Reports

Lea County, N.M. has gained a Devonian discovery, a northwest offset to a Strawn discovery that opened the Garrett West field last October, 1.5 miles southeast of two depleted Knowles producers, 13 miles southeast of Lovington.

ANSON GAS CORP. tested the No. 1 Mary "33" to a calculated 375 barrels of 52.4 gravity condensate, 267 Mcfd and 93 barrels of water from Upper Devonian perforations 13,107 to 13,127 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,300 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe acid.

Permitted as a 13,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 13,212 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

On ground elevation of 3,710 ft., formation tops include the San Andres at 5,100 ft., Glorieta at 6,439, Tubb at 8,089, Drinkard at 8,293, Wolfcamp at 9,820, Pennsylvanian at 10,750, Strawn at 11,205, Atoka at 11,386, Mississippian at 12,252 and Devonian at 13,020 ft.

Surface location is 2,040 ft. from north and 2,310 ft. from west lines of Section 33, T16s, R38e. After logging, the wellbore was found to have deviated to a bottom hole location 280 ft. north and 13 ft. east of the surface location.

Spraberry pool opened in Garza County field

A new Spraberry pool has apparently been opened in the Happy field of Garza County, 10 miles south of Post.

PATTERSON PETROLEUM INC. completed the No. 7 Slaughter Unit to flow 110 barrels of 38.5 gravity crude, 24 Mcfd and 20 barrels of water on a 13/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 130 psi. The well flowed from perforations 4,904 to 4,960 ft., which had been acidized with 2,500 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Drilled as an 8,316 ft. explorer, the well reached total depth of 8,316 ft. and was plugged back to 8,215 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,287 ft.

Formation tops, on kelly bushing elevation of 2,406 ft., include the Spraberry at 4,894 ft., Strawn at 7,776, Mississippian at 8,110 and Ellenburger at 8,294 ft.

Location is 2,250 ft. from north and 700 ft. from west lines of Section 19, Block 2, T&NO survey, Abst. 249.

Murchison Oil extends Ellenburger in Kent

MURCHISON OIL & GAS INC.has opened new Ellenburger oil production in the Rojo Canyon field of Kent County, 3.5 miles north of Polar.

The No. 2 Wallace was tested for a calculated 168 barrels of 39 gravity crude and 40 Mcfd from perforations 7,695 to 7,744 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

Total depth was 7,762 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

The well topped the Strawn at 7,064 ft., Mississippian Limestone at 7,432 and Ellenburger at 7,667 ft. on ground elevation of 2,283 ft.

Location is 2,170 ft. from south and 1,530 ft. from east lines of Section 34, Block 5, H&GN survey, Abst. 1151.

Confirmer tested in Spraberry Trend

A confirmer has been completed in the Midland County portion of the Spraberry (Trend Area), 3.5 miles north of Spraberry.

PARKER & PARSLEY DEVELOPMENT CO. potentialed the No. 48 McClintic "E" to pump 36 barrels of 39.9 gravity crude, 31 Mcfd and 118 barrels of water from Spraberry/Dean perforations 7,189 to 8,703 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid and fractured with 143,500 gallons gel and 570,550 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Drilled to 8,761 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 8,720 ft.

The well topped the Upper Spraberry at 7,187 ft., Lower Spraberry at 7,840 and Dean from 8,530 to 8,665 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,695 ft.

Location is 3,080 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 9, Block 37, J.R. Ray survey 1084, Abst. 1084, SF 6322.

PARALLEL PETROLUM CORP. of Midland announces completion of a second Frio gas discovery in Jackson County onshore the Texas Gulf Coast.

The Allegro Investments Inc. Robinson Ranch ROB No. 12 was drilled utilizing data developed by 3-D seismic imaging and is the second located on a 3-D seismic survey covering an area of mutual interest consisting of approximately 26,000 acres.

A four-point test was conducted on the well, using choke sizes ranging from 3/64 to 6/64 inches. The open flow potential of the well was calculated to be 2.9 million cubic feet of natural gas per day. Flowing tubing pressures ranged from 1,642 to 1,585 pounds per square inch. In a 10-foot productive zone in the Frio sand, perforations were made from 4,192 to 4,195 feet. The operator, Allegro Investments, plans to produce the well at approximately 500 Mcfd.

A third well on the survey, the Robinson Ranch ROB No. 20 has been drilled and has logged more than 10 net feet of pay in a single potentially productive zone. The well is expected to be completed and tested within the next two weeks.

Parallel earlier announced completion of a discovery well in a newer and deeper Yegua gas zone in Wharton County, also onshore the Texas Gulf Coast.

The Cox & Perkins Mollnar No. 2 tested an open flow potential calculated to be 1.8 million cubic feet of gas and 35 barrels of condensate with a flowing tubing pressure of 5,625 psi on an adjustable choke. The production is from perforations made in an 84-foot interval from 10,665 to 10,749 ft. in the Downdip Expanded Yegua sand. A nearby wildcat well expected to begin drilling this week.

DEVELOPMENTS/6G

Tucker Drilling reports lower net income

SAN ANGELO - Tucker Drilling Co. Inc. reported net income of $434,000 or 21 cents per share for its first fiscal quarter ended June 30. For the same quarter a year earlier, the company reported income of $740,000 or 36 cents per share, including a gain on the sale of producing oil and gas wells in the amount of $295,000 or 14 cents a share.

Revenues were $5,567,000 in the quarter, compared to revenues of $5,080,000 for the same quarter last year.

Larry J. Tucker, chief executive officer, said contract drilling revenues increased 9 percent to $5,249,000 as average rig utilization increased to 62 percent from 56 percent. Oil and gas sales increased 32 percent to $318,000 due primarily to increased volumes from the continued development of the South Lake Trammel field.

Parallel Petroleum revenues down slightly

Parallel Petroleum Corp. announced that oil and gas revenues for the second quarter and six months ended June 30 declined slightly from year-earlier levels due in part to decreases in oil production and natural gas prices.

For the second quarter, revenues were $1.15 million compared to $1.26 million in the year-earlier period, and net income was $45,000 or less than 1 cent per share compared to $210,000 or 1 cent per share.

For the six months ended June 30, revenues were $2.3 million compared to $2.4 million in the same period last year. Net income was $135,000 or 1 cent per share, compared to $431,000 or 3 cents per share.

During the second quarter, the company produced 36,172 barrels of oil, down 22 percent from 46,151 barrels in the second quarter of 1994. Average prices received for oil increased by 19 percent to $17.78 from $14.96 per barrel. Parallel produced 346 million cubic feet of natural gas during the second quarter of 1995, up 6 percent from 327 million cubic feet in the same period a year ago. Average prices received for natural gas declined by 17 percent to $1.42 from $1.72 per Mcf. Expressed in terms of equivalent barrels of oil, second quarter production declined by 7 percent to 93,898 from 100,646 BOEs. Average price received per BOE declined to $12.23 from $12.48.

Larry C. Oldham, Parallel president, noted that results for the second quarter and six months reflect only minimal oil and gas revenues associated with the company's recent drilling activities, developed by 3-D seismic imaging, in the Frio and Yegua gas sands onshore the Texas Gulf Coast. The company has achieved nine successful wells out of 11 drilled recently in an area of mutual interest covering approximately 87,000 gross acres in Wharton and Jackson counties. Parallel's working interests range from 11 percent to 20 percent. Oldham added that the drilling successes will begin making significant contributions to revenues and cash flow during the third and fourth quarters of 1995.

Arch Petroleum reports income for quarter

FORT WORTH — Arch Petroleum Inc. reported net income of $435,000 on revenues of $16.8 million for the quarter ended June 30, 1995. Cash flows from operations before changes in working capital was $724,000. Arch reported a net loss of $170,000 on revenues of $25.5 million for the comparable period in 1994. For the six months ended June 30, 1995, the company reported net income of $156,000 on revenues of $30.9 million vs. a net loss of $420,000 on revenues of $43.0 million for the six months ended June 30, 1994.

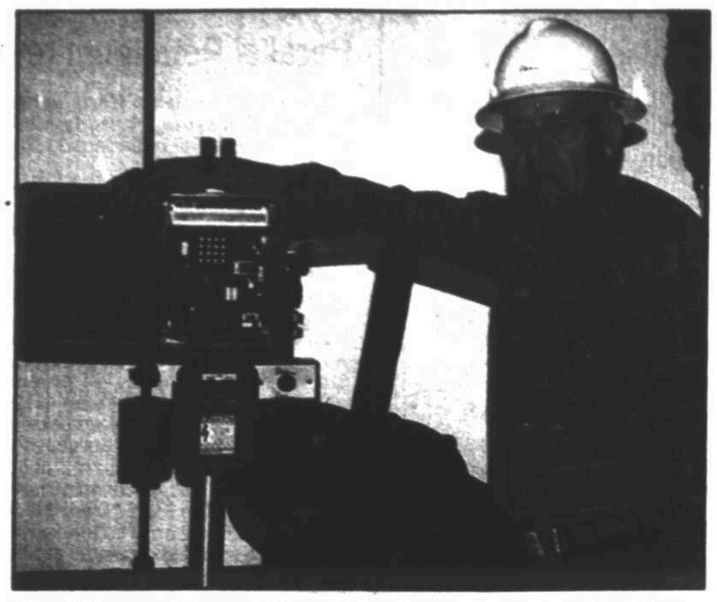
D-Jax celebrates 23 years of service, innovation

"All we've done is to see problems and find a way to solve them," said Dee Mills, founder and President of D-Jax Corporation in Midland. Mills said the company's recent Penny Pincher upgrade, shipped overseas for use on gas-driven engines, was the latest example of their problem-solving abilities.

He opened the company in August of 1972 as D-Jax Specialty Service, doing dynamometer and fluid level surveys and consulting. It was a family business with Mills' wife, Billie, working in the office. Then in 1974 sons Marshall and Joe were named vice presidents when D-Jax was incorporated. Marshall has since left to work for an oil company. In 1986 son-in-law Wayne Whitaker joined the D-Jax team as vice-president. Jim Pattillo came on board five years ago as sales manager.

Mills said his vision from the beginning was for D-Jax to be the quality service company in the oil field just as the Ajax engine was thought of as the best in the field.

His original idea for the Well Tender, the predecessor of the Penny Pincher, came to him long before 1972. In the mid 1950's he was a pumper for Amerada, maintaining the old gas-powered pumps. He noticed as the well pumped down to a fluid pound condition the engine would speed up.



Dee Mills uses this portable unit for demonstrations and training on the Penny Pincher pump off controller. The Penny Pincher is a lower-priced controller aimed at marginal wells.

After disengaging the clutch for a few minutes and then re-engaging, the engine would strain and almost die under the much heavier fluid load that accumulated during the down time. Then in a few more minutes, the well would pump down and begin to pound fluid, because the reservoir fluids were no longer sufficient to fill the pump barrel.

He saw two main problems with the fluid pound:

1. Power is wasted because it is not pumping fluids at optimum efficiency and

2. The force of the pounding creates more wear and tear on rods and other system components.

Mills then began to assess the problem by timing a well with a stopwatch over a 10-stroke cycle. At the same time, he used a dynamometer to document the well's downhole behavior.

After recording the elapsed time to the second decimal he would shut the well down, allow the fluid level to rebuild, then start the process over again. Unfailingly, the well would run slower after having been shut in.

He repeated the test all over the Permian Basin on wells of varying depth and production. He tested wells with differing motors and crank-arm geometry. He included every kind of unit that uses a reciprocating rod string, and the results were always consistent. This gave him his delta, or difference factor.

He was convinced of the need for a device that would know when there was enough fluid in the well to make production efficient. After about one year of research and development, including the patent process, D-Jax sold their first pump off controller in June of 1974.

In 1988, after several revisions and upgrades, the Well Tender was launched with its patented start-up alert that sounds a beeper 10 seconds before the unit goes back into motion. With the 1994 release of the Penny Pincher that warning time was increased to 30 seconds, making it even easier to avoid injury.

This year the Penny Pincher saw the addition of "Dictated Run Time," a newly patented program which cuts fluid pound up to 80% over other pump off controllers.

It should be interesting to see what improvements Mills and his engineer, Alton Teague, and Joe and Wayne come up with next.

Founded in 1972 by Dee Mills, D-Jax Corporation builds and markets dynamometers and pump off controllers worldwide. The company's phone number is 683-5710.

Reynolds Brothers expands staff

Reynolds Brothers Reproduction is proud to announce the addition of four new members to its growing team.

Anne Harris has been in sales in Midland since 1980 and is available to provide her expertise in all aspects of office supplies and office furniture sales.

THE D-JAX "Penny Pincher" Advantage!

The inexpensive "PennyPincher" Pump-off Control will: Greatly reduce your lifting cost on marginal wells. Increase the economic life of stripper wells.
The "PennyPincher" takes advantage of changing fluid entry levels. It will also: Reduce rod parts and tubing leaks caused by Pounding fluid. Cut energy costs by not operating a partially filled pump. Maximize production while minimizing costs.

Allcorn

KEITH H. MABERRY has joined Henry Petroleum Corp. as a senior petroleum engineer.

He will be responsible for the reservoir engineering analysis of Henry's recently acquired properties in the Sho-Vel-Tum field in Stephens County, Okla. He has a total 13 years experience as a production and reservoir engineer and was previously with Phillips Petroleum working primarily in the Permian Basin and Texas Panhandle in EOR operations.

Schlumberger Oilfield Services has appointed CHAD DEATON president of Dowell. A 21-year veteran of Schlumberger, he has held a number of management positions with Dowell in North America and Europe, including vice president to head Dowell's drilling fluids business when it was founded in January 1992. His most recent assignment was personnel manager for Schlumberger Wireline & Testing in Paris.

GARY A. ALLCORN has been promoted to senior vice president, finance for Sepco Industries, a distributor of rotating equipment.

Allcorn will oversee the management of the company's accounting, credit administration and human resource planning and continue as corporate secretary and member of the management team dealing with strategic planning.

He will also remain active as a member of Sepco's safety and environmental committee as well as serving on the steering committee of the company's "Total Quality Process."

MEETINGS

Gas producers host former FERC commissioner

Jerry Langdon will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting of the Natural Gas Producers Association. The meeting will be at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:45 a.m.

His topic will be "Natural Gas and the Electric Generation Market."

A graduate of the University of Texas at Austin, Langdon worked for HNG Corp., Houston Pipeline Co., Texas Oil& Gas Corp. and W. Wilson Corp. before forming Texas IntraMark Gas Co. Inc. and Langdon & Associates. In 1988 he was appointed to a four-year term on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission by President Ronald Reagan and renominated by President George Bush, serving on the commission until June 1993. Since leaving FERC, he has formed Energy Strategy Associates of Houston and Republic Gas Corp.

Microbial conference to be held in Plano

The Fifth International Conference on Microbial Enhancement of Oil Recovery and Related Biotechnology for Solving Environmental Problems will feature a one-day workshop for oil producers. The conference will be held at the Harvey Hotel in Plano September 11-14.

The workshop will cover cost-effective MEOR techniques and the resources available for their implementation The BDM-Oklahoma operates the National Institute for Petroleum and Energy Research in Bartlesville, Okla. for the Department of Energy.

Keynote speakers include Dr. Alan Sheehy, University of Canberra, Australia; Guido Horatiis, senior petroleum engineer, DOE, Washington, D.C.; Dr. Rebecca Bryant of BDM-Oklahoma; and Dr. Kerry Sublette, University of Tulsa.

Sponsors are BDM-Oklahoma, University of Tulsa and DOE's Bartlesville Project Office. Corporate sponsors include Phillips Petroleum Co., Texaco Inc., Conoco Inc., Kerr-McGee Corp. and University of Oklahoma.

New Mexico oil group plans annual meeting

The New Mexico Oil & Gas Association will hold its annual meeting October 1-3 in Santa Fe.

On Oct. 3, the members will meet in general session to discuss "Program Streamlining and Transfer Feasibility." Agency representatives will include Del Fortner, team leader, BLM, Washington, D.C.; Bill LeMay, director, New Mexico Oil Conservation Division; and Mike Pool, DM, BLM, Farmington. Greg Pensabene, natural resource and public land attorney from Washington will also be speaking as will independent producers and major producers.

Ray Powell, commissioner, New Mexico State Lands Office, will address the general session on state land affairs followed by Rich Whitley, DSD for resource planning, use and protection of the NMBLM.

Luncheon speaker will be Bob Armstrong, assistant secretary for lands and minerals, U.S. Department of the Interior. The luncheon will also feature presentation of BLM State Director's Awards to Gordon Chenault for northwest New Mexico and Santa Fe Energy Operating Partners Ltd. for southwest New Mexico.

The afternoon will feature breakout sessions on "What's Ahead for the Oil & Gas Industry." Topics include BLM Farmington District overview; Indian self-governance; Pit Closure Program status; State Historic Preservation Office and BLM Roswell District overview.

AGA to present NGV conference in October

The 13th annual National Natural Gas Vehicle Conference, sponsored by the American Gas Association, will be held Oct. 15-17 at the Los Angeles Convention Center. More than 1,000 participants are expected.

Sessions will cover such topic as NGVs in mass transit applications; liquefied natural gas vehicles; fuel quality issues; training NGV marketers; the status of NGV original equipment manufacturing; NGV performance evaluations; alternative fuel legislation and regulation; fleet operations; tank and engine technology; and NGVs and LUST - leaking underground storage tanks for gasoline.

Exxon unit, Mitsubishi consider building world's largest pipeline

By N.Y. Times News Service

Tokyo — Mitsubishi Corp. has joined a unit of U.S. petroleum giant Exxon Corp. and a Chinese company to explore the possibility of creating the world's longest natural-gas pipeline, the companies said.

The three will start a year-long study of the economic viability of running a 6,000-kilometer natural-gas pipeline across some of the most rugged terrain in the world, from the central Asian state of Turkmenistan to China's east coast.

From there, future undersea pipes would transport the gas to Japan and South Korea for sale, the Japanese trading company said in a release.

If the study concludes a pipeline is viable, construction could start somewhere between 2005 and 2010, with completion several years after, Mitsubishi said. The pipeline will likely be the world's longest, it said.

The companies are interested in the estimated 2.5 trillion to 3 trillion cubic meters of natural gas buried under the former Soviet republic. Japan in particular needs new sources because it is almost entirely dependent on imports for its energy requirements.

Japan imports almost all of its approximate annual consumption of the gas of 40 million cubic meters from countries including Brunei, Malaysia and Australia. Mitsubishi is the largest importer, bringing in 60 percent of Japan's needs a year.

A Mitsubishi spokesman said the Turkmenistan government is trying to diversify its markets for gas. The country currently exports to Russia, and is considering a pipeline through Iran to Europe as well as the one to Asia, the Mitsubishi spokesman said.

Mitsubishi, Exxon's Esso China Inc. unit and the China National Petroleum Corp. have been working on preliminary studies on the viability of the Asia project since 1992.

The new study, to begin in September, will focus on issues such as finding the extent of natural gas resources, routing the pipe, building costs, determining market sizes and demand and defining what work will be necessary to build the pipe if it is viable, the release said. No decision has yet been taken on what roles the three will take in the study.

Turkmenistan was a part of the former Soviet Union until 1991. The country, which is 90 percent desert, borders Iran and Afghanistan to the south and two other former Soviet republics in the east and north.

It is rich in oil and numerous minerals as well as natural gas.

Dresser posts quarterly profits up 19 percent

DALLAS (AP) — Profits rose 19 percent in the third first quarter for oilfield services company Dresser Industries Inc. on operating gains in drilling and production operations, the company said.

For the three months ended July 31, Dresser's profits were $45 million, or 25 cents per share, up from $37.9 million, or 21 cents per share, in the third quarter of fiscal 1994.

Revenue rose 20 percent, to $1.44 billion from $1.19 billion. Operating profits improved for Dresser's two largest segments, oilfield services and hydrocarbon processing, while dipping slightly in engineering services.

John J. Murphy, chairman and chief executive officer of the Dallas-based company, said Dresser's oil and gas customers are stepping up activity across the board.

"Currently, Dresser is benefiting from significant operating gains in its drilling and production operations. While our outlook in drilling and production continues to be good, our prospects in related markets further downstream have improved sharply as company-wide backlogs hit $3.8 billion," he said in a news release.

Hughes Resources acquires refinery

SAN DIEGO — Hughes Resources Inc. (Nasdaq: HURI) announced that it purchased, for common stock and assumption of debt, an oil refinery from an unrelated party.

This refinery was purchased for a total consideration of $5.25 million in exchange for common stock totaling 1.5 million shares with a total value of $2.25 million and debt of $3 million.

The refinery is presently not operating, but is completely operational and is expected to be opened as a blending facility. The company stated that it will require approximately $1.5 million to begin operations and to build an oil blending facility. Joint venture negotiations are under way to acquire this working capital.

The refinery is located in Louisiana on the Intracoastal Canal, and is sited on 10 acres in the vicinity of Lake Charles, La.

HALLIBURTON DECREASES WATER PRODUCTION
CASE HISTORY # 247

Location of job: Ector County, Texas

Type of job: Conformance Control

Customer Challenge: Decrease water production from Clearfork zone and lower the operating cost to return the well to an economical producer.

Halliburton's Solution: Customer performed multi-rate injectivity survey to determine the feasibility and the appropriate conformance placement technique. The technical advisor and customer utilized their "Team Association" to select and design a HYDROCHECK treatment (MATROL/MOC-ONE). Design specs were tailored through laboratory testing for down hole temperature and well conditions.

Major Obstacles: Using available data to minimize the possibility of unwanted placement of the conformance treatment into the upper oil bearing zone interval. On site chemical reactions were to match designs requirements based on laboratory analysis testing.

Job Details:

Formation	Clearfork
Rock Type	Dolomite
Perforations	5,302'-5,348', 188 holes
Porosity	8% (Dual Porosity sys.)
Permeability	10 md
BHST	110 °F
BHP	1,200 PSI
Casing	5.5"
Tubing	2 7/8"
Packer	Set at 5,250 ft
Tubing Land Plug	2 7/8"
Frac Gradient	0.68 psi/ft
Max. Allow. Surface Inj. Pressure	1,280 psi
Pre-treatment Prod.	15 BOPD; 1,324 BWPD

Job Procedure: Rig up Halliburton to perform HYDROCHECK treatment as follows:

- 2,000 gal 2% KCL Preflush
- 4,000 gal MATROL
- 420 gal Kerosene Spacer
- 650 gal MOC-ONE @ 13.1 ppg
- 630 gal Kerosene Spacer/overflush
- Dropped 2 7/8" tubing plug (with fishing neck)
- Displaced tubing plug w/840 gal filtered KCL

Shut well in over night to allow MATROL to fully complex and the MOC-ONE slurry to develop compressive strength.

Results: The job was successfully executed with no adherences to Halliburton Client safety guidelines. Water production was decreased from 1,324 BWPD to 292 BWPD. Oil production increased from an average 15 BOPD to 70 BOPD. Six months following treatment production stabilized at 70 BOPD, 250 BWPD. Electricity costs were reduced from $3,000 to $700 per month by converting pump size, reduction from Electrical Submersible Pump to conventional rod pump.

Customer Testimonial: Halliburton's HYDROCHECK system has been effective in reducing water production in fractured carbonate and dolomite reservoirs in five out of seven wells. The results were continually improved with better understanding of the problems encountered in the wells so that more suitable treatment solutions and placement techniques were utilized. Proper evaluation using existing well data and other means such as pump-in tracers, crossflow checks, etc., increase chances of success. Halliburton has addressed the need for expert advisory and design knowledge for a successful conformance control treatment.

UNIQUENESS OF JOB: The HYDROCHECK System for Conformance Control is an exclusive Halliburton treatment. The use of hydrocarbon based micro-fine slurries following the placement of a solution such as MATROL does not deteriorate the effective complexing of this polymer as a conventional water base slurry does.

FUTURE WORK: Conformance teams have been established with customers to identify potential applications of this technology. Combined efforts of the team associations are providing many concepts and problem resolutions for future success on Conformance Control problems. Many treatments have been performed and are being developed for technology transfer to resolve multiple problems associated with casing leaks, poor casing integrity, water injection sweep inefficiencies, and other Conformance Control aspects.

Chevron makes first sale of natural gas to Turkish company

SAN FRANCISCO — Chevron announced a limited sale of liquefied natural gas (LNG) to Boru Hatlari Ile Petrol Tasima A.S. (BOTAS), the state-owned gas company of Turkey.

Chevron Oil Trading made the spot sale for Chevron's share of up to five LNG cargoes to be delivered over the next eight months to the new BOTAS LNG receiving terminal at Marmara Ereglisi. The liquefied natural gas is produced from the North West Shelf Gas Project's LNG plant in northwestern Australia in which Chevron, through its wholly owned subsidiary, Chevron Asiatic Limited (CAL), holds a one-sixth interest.

Each of the six NWSGP participants individually sold their respective shares of the LNG cargoes to be delivered to Turkey. The LNG cargoes are valued at over (U.S.) $40 million, of which Chevron's share is one-sixth.

"Turkey is a new market for Chevron," said Al Caccamo, president of Chevron Oil Trading, "whose natural gas consumption is forecast to quadruple in the next five years." Caccamo noted that several spot cargoes of NWS LNG have been sold into Europe in the past, but that this is the first such sale into Turkey.

Kelley Oil concludes drilling wildcat

HOUSTON — Kelley Oil & Gas Corp. has reached total depth on its exploratory prospect, the School Board No. 1 well in Terrebonne Parish, Louisiana, without encountering commercially productive formations. Despite this disappointment, the company is otherwise pleased with the results of its drilling program in the first two quarters of 1995.

During the first six months, the company drilled 7 productive development wells in north Louisiana, continuing its 100 percent success rate since the beginning of 1994. Five of those wells were completed since the end of the first quarter and tested at daily rates ranging from 4.7 to 9.3 million cubic feet per day, with average initial production rates of 5.8 million cubic feet per day, representing a significant increase above average historical initial production rates in these fields. Management believes its year-to-date development drilling success in north Louisiana combined with an additional 12 wells planned for this area through the end of the year will enable the company to add reserves replacing its anticipated 1995 production from its north Louisiana operations alone.

"We have consistently stated that if the School Board No. 1 well was not successful, the company would allocate the remainder of its 1995 drilling budget to development drilling in north and south Louisiana," said David L. Kelley, Chairman and CEO of Kelley Oil & Gas. "With the increased capital expenditures in north Louisiana, we intend to employ four drilling rigs in this area through the end of the year. Furthermore, the company does not plan to pursue additional exploratory projects until the second quarter of 1996."

In addition to the favorable results achieved in north Louisiana, the company has successfully completed two development wells in south Louisiana since late 1994 including the sidetrack of the Fina Oil & Chemical No. 2 well, which recently tested at a rate of 5.1 million cubic feet of gas and 164 barrels of condensate per day.

Within the next six weeks, the company plans to begin drilling at least two lower risk development wells on south Louisiana acreage covered by its recent 3-D seismic survey.

Kelley Oil & Gas Corporation is an independent exploration and production company with oil and gas properties located primarily in Louisiana. The company operates through Kelley Oil & Partners, Ltd. and separate development partnerships in which it owns controlling interests. The company's common and preferred stock are traded on the Nasdaq National Market under the symbols KOGC and KOGCP.
