National prayer day

Hundreds gathered on the Midland City Hall lawn Thursday to recognize the National Day of Prayer.

A midday service of prayer included ministers and lay persons from a variety of local churches encompassing many faiths. Prayers asked for guidance for local and national leaders as well as harmony among the races.

In recognition of the event, Mayor Carroll Thomas has issued a proclamation recognizing the importance of prayer to establish peace and harmony during troubled times.

"The heartfelt wishes, thoughts and prayers for peace offered by all Americans will help our cities, states and nation to secure peace for this and future generations," the proclamation says.

Endeavour blasts off

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — NASA's gleaming new shuttle, the Endeavour, blasted off on its maiden flight with seven astronauts Thursday and raced toward the rescue of a stranded communications satellite. The weather went NASA's way at the last minute, and the black and white spaceship rose from its seaside pad at 7:40 p.m. atop a pillar of fire and smoke. Endeavour, the replacement for the destroyed Challenger, passed through a cloud and into a clear evening sky as it swung out over the Atlantic Ocean and thundered into orbit. Rain had fallen on the launch pad just a few hours before, but the dark clouds kept moving and the feared thunderstorms and hail never arrived./12C

Film festival opens

CANNES, France — One day after her death, film legend Marlene Dietrich was the dominating presence Thursday at the star-studded opening of the 45th Cannes Film Festival.

Stone

The festival, which has drawn an estimated 40,000 fans and film-industry figures to this Riviera resort, was declared open by actress Catherine Deneuve.

Sharon Stone, the smoldering blonde in "Basic Instinct," the erotic thriller which opened the festival, remembered Dietrich as the ultimate "celebration of femaleness."

Bush tours riot-torn city

President expresses 'horror,' offers hope

By Rita Beamish
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — President Bush walked the streets of Los Angeles' riot zone Thursday, expressing horror at the destruction and shame over the racial animosities that helped trigger it. But he declared, in a voice shaky with emotion, "Los Angeles is going to recover. This is a great city."

Bush left his motorcade to inspect the ruins of a shopping center. He shook his head and grimaced at the charred remains of a row of washing machines and dryers in what was once a laundromat.

"This is just wanton lawlessness," he later commented.

The acrid smell of smoke still filled the air.

Dereke Carr, manager of a supermarket that was saved from destruction by its sprinkler system, talked solemnly and privately with the president in the wreckage of his store. Bush later said Carr had told him his own employees had joined in looting the store.

"Horror and dismay" was what he felt, Bush told reporters during the tour.

Television stations were asked not to broadcast Bush's inspection tour live so as not to tell potential troublemakers of his whereabouts — a precaution underscoring worries the violence may not have run its

Highway 191 underpass lanes open

By Debbie Lincecum

Where Andrews Highway meets Loop 250, traffic was speeding through a newly completed underpass Thursday.

But a few other drivers stayed on the frontage roads at the intersection, seemingly unaware the main lanes were open. Using the access roads may require a stop at a traffic light.

"Some people are still going through the lights, but they don't need to. Through-traffic can use the main lanes now," said Lynn Passmore, resident engineer for the Texas Department of Transportation's Midland office.

Lanes through the underpass — at the start of State Highway 191 to Odessa — were opened gradually this week. Workers spent Thursday installing new signs and painting stripes.

The underpass is part of a $10.4 million construction project that will complete the main lanes of Highway 191. Its finish is set for late summer.

Passmore said the Midland side, originally expected to be open by the end of 1991, was slowed by problems with some sub-contractors on the job.

1789 pay-raise amendment gains approval

LANSING, Mich. — It was neck-and-neck at the finish line. But it took 203 years to complete this race. Michigan lawmakers on Thursday edged out New Jersey in the decisive vote for an constitutional amendment to restrain congressional salaries.

Now the question is whether there's any legal force to something that took that long to ratify, that was forgotten for decades at a time.

The amendment, to bar Congress from giving itself a midterm pay raise, was ratified by New Jersey lawmakers a few hours after Michigan's approval.

The idea was proposed by James Madison in 1789; Maryland was the first to ratify it, on Dec. 19 that year. When the Michigan House ratified it, that state be-

Nixon notes paint Perot as 'insider'

■ Former presidential adviser says Texas businessman isn't outsider he claims to be.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former Nixon aide Peter Flanigan remembers Ross Perot as quite different from the man who now declares himself a political outsider. White House logs show Perot met or talked more than 40 times in the Nixon years with Flanigan, who says the Texas businessman was "the ultimate insider."

Nixon

Nixon administration documents reviewed by The Associated Press in the National Archives say the White House also provided VIP treatment to Perot and his family and intervened with government agencies in matters involving his computer company and taxes.

"The guy was an amazing operator," Charles Colson, Nixon's former special counsel and a Watergate conspirator, said in a 1988 oral history interview included in the documents. "I don't know

King verdict moves ahead of McClure story in ratings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rodney King verdict and subsequent rioting in Los Angeles was the third most-closely watched news story in the eight-year survey history of the Times Mirror Center for People and The Press, the organization said Thursday.

The story moved ahead of the 1987 rescue of Jessica McClure from a well in Midland, which was followed by 69 percent of those surveyed.

According to its latest survey, 70 percent of those interviewed followed the King verdict and rioting "very closely."

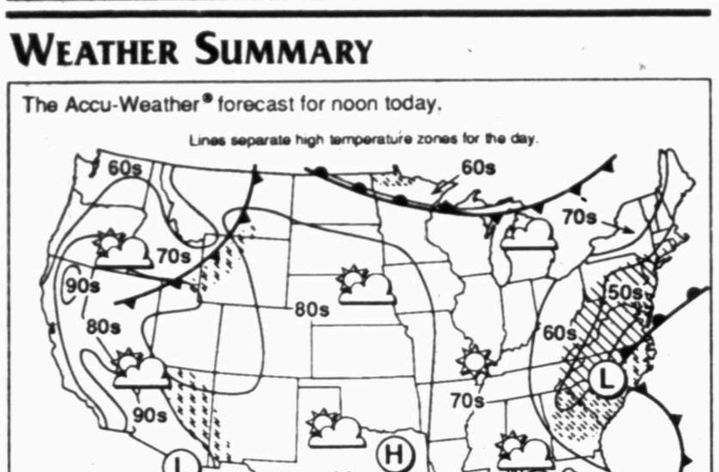

That put the King story far ahead of other recent news events, including reports on the U.S. economy, which have been closely followed by 39 percent of those interviewed.

Temperatures breeze to 80s

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-80s and southeasterly to southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 50s.

Saturday is expected to be partly cloudy with isolated afternoon thunderstorms and a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 50, Thursday's high was 80 compared with the record high for that date of 106 in 1989. The record low for today's date was 41 in 1984.

STATE

It was mostly sunny and warm across Texas on Thursday with light southerly breezes. However, afternoon thunderstorms rumbled across Far West Texas and the Big Bend region.

Winds were generally from the south to southwest at 10 to 20 miles an hour.

High pressure in Northeast Texas produced mostly fair skies and temperatures climbed into the 70s.

However, lows early Thursday dipped into the 40s for unseasonably cool readings.

The forecast for North Texas was for fair skies with increasing cloudiness Saturday. Highs Friday were to be in the upper 70s to mid-80s followed by lows in the lower 50s in the east to the lower 60s. Highs Saturday in the lower to mid-80s.

Forecasters said South Texas would be partly cloudy to the west and south through Saturday with a slight chance of showers or thunderstorms Saturday. Elsewhere, fair skies were expected today with partly cloudy conditions today night and Saturday. Highs today and Saturday were to be mostly in the 80s with lows in the 50s and 60s.

NATION

Temperatures plummeted to record lows Thursday from Texas to Massachusetts, and more than 3 feet of snow covered the mountains of western North Carolina.

Rain fell over much of the rest of the Southeast and over parts of the West.

Record lows, according to the National Weather Service, were 45 at Baton Rouge, La.; 31 at Calico Rock, Ark.; 43 at Columbia, Miss.; 39 at El Dorado, Ark.; 33 at Fayetteville, Ark.; 27 at Gilbert, Ark.; 44 at Hattiesburg, Miss; 37 at Holly Springs, Miss.; 48 at Houston; 50 at Lake Charles, La.; 41 at McComb, Miss.; 45 at Mobile, Ala.; 42 at Natchez, Miss.; 42 at Newton, Miss.; 35 at Oxford, Miss.; 35 at Ozark, Ark.; 46 at Pascagoula, Miss.; 41 at Poplarville, Miss.; 47 at Port Arthur, Texas; 44 at Shreveport, La.; 43 at Waco, Texas, and 42 at Yazoo City, Miss.

The readings at Baton Rouge and Mobile eclipsed records that had been on the books since 1898.

In the Northeast, Boston tied its record of 37.

On the other hand, by early afternoon Billings, Mont., had warmed to a record high of 86, the weather service said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BUSH: President walks through L.A. riot zone course.

But the president also offered hope. In a speech to an interdenominational congregation in the Mount Zion Missionary Baptist Church in the heart of the riot area, he predicted the city would overcome its immediate pains.

"We are embarrassed by interracial violence and prejudice; we are ashamed," he told ministers, civic leaders and parishioners. "We will do our level best to see that it is eliminated."

His voice quavered. Everyone in the congregation joined hands during a lengthy prayer. The president grasped the hand of Gov. Pete Wilson, standing beside him.

Bush called for a commitment to family strength and faith in God and "teaching kids right from wrong," declaring: "Government can't do that."

"As Los Angeles comes back to its glory, all of us must ask ourselves what we can do to help," he said.

Bush's tour took him through riot-battered parts of Koreatown and the impoverished south-central part of the city. In some downtrodden areas, entire blocks were burned.

In Koreatown, one of the hardest hit areas, onlookers stared in sullen silence as the motorcade passed. Children waved but adults did not.

Korean business owners urged Bush to speed federal aid to help them rebuild and voiced concern about tensions between their community and black Americans.

"Talk doesn't do anything. We need action. We don't need promises," one tearful woman told Bush.

"It took us 25 years to build Koreatown," said a man. "We saw that go in flames right before our eyes. . . . We came to this country with nothing, and we're confident that were going to rebuild our community, and we would like your assistance."

Bush replied, "My heart aches for those who have lost their jobs. But this community is strong." He said federal aid was coming quickly and assured them "the American dream still lives."

Bush met with local businessmen at the Crenshaw Town Center, a mall that went up in flames on the first night of the rioting in the aftermath of the acquittal of four police officers in the videotaped beating of motorist Rodney King.

With a security perimeter around the area to protect him, the president had no opportunity to meet neighborhood residents who might have once washed clothes at the laundromat or shopped at the Boys Market or the burned-out Thrifty and Payless shoe stores.

At another stop, the southwest police station, Bush told officers he wanted to "get to the cause of the unrest."

He said he shared "the sense of outrage that the people, honest people in the community feel."

In yet another meeting, the president told black leaders the Justice Department will follow through on inquiries into whether any civil rights were violated — "the rights of Rodney King or anyone else."

"Justice will prevail," he assured the leaders.

Bush said his visit had no political motives. He said he was not here to score partisan points or lay blame.

Democrats have accused him of ignoring the underlying grievances of a desperate community and of trying to blame Great Society programs of the 1960s.

Housing Secretary Jack Kemp, who accompanied Bush, called for a cease-fire among Republican and Democratic leaders.

"If we just point fingers, we're going to lose the moment," Kemp said.

Some in the neighborhood took hope from the presidential visit.

"It makes people think he's really interested," said Geraldine Burke, a crosswalk guard at a school near the church Bush visited. She said she hoped Bush would "really change things."

John Mack, president of the Los Angeles Urban League, who was among those meeting Bush, said the value of Bush's visit will "boil down to what he actually does. The time has long passed when this community can afford just a show and tell."

Carr, the manager of the Boys Market, told reporters he had told Bush he should make a return visit to the area.

"These people need to know they're not overlooked," he said. "We don't want to be forgotten."

NUMBERS: Tax figures reflect cautious economy

hilarating boom in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

By 1983, though, bankers, particularly loan officers, wildcatters, investors and newcomers to the oil business were sure that oil, already high in the market place, was heading to a spectacular $40 a barrel and certainly much more.

They were mistaken.

Banks, including Midland's First National Bank, faltered and took a crashing nose dive. Not even the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) could, or would, save it.

The market, glutted with oil, balked. Prices plunged. Eventually, in 1986, prices dropped to less than $10 a barrel, headed upward, then back down, and struck pay dirt — into the $30s — briefly as the 1991 Persian Gulf War headed to a climax.

Prices dropped and rose several times before settling around $20 or $21 a barrel.

Ms. Shuffield looked over a prime barometer — Midland County's vehicle registration count.

After the peak of 108,221 registered cars, trucks, motorcycles and other vehicles in 1985, the count dropped to 101,944 in 1986 and to 96,399 in 1989.

Last year, the count eased up to 98,167.

"This office is a great monitor of the economy," said Kathy Reeves who, in 1993, is to succeed the retiring Ms. Shuffield as the Midland County tax assessor-collector.

Last year, Ms. Shuffield collected more than $8 million in taxes and fees toward fueling the county's general fund.

The county's 1991-'92 fiscal-year budget includes an estimated $21.7 million in resources and $18.5 million in expenditures.

Ms. Shuffield, who yearly computes the county's effective tax rate, noted that the Auditor's Office collects the county's half-cent sales tax.

The 1991 sales-tax revenue is budgeted at $4.8 million. Sales-tax revenue is estimated at $5.8 million in 1992, although the funds are expected to be down due to lagging retail sales.

"We can tell if sales in the stores are going up or down" by watching the sales-tax revenue, Ms. Shuffield said.

Ms. Reeves, in noting the consumers' current cautionary spending, said that "right now (during the presidential election year) people are kind of scared. I think that is typical in history," Ms. Reeves said. "Buying is conservative prior to a presidential election." The people, she said, "really don't" want to make financial commitments.

Ransom note for Exxon leader doesn't convince police

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — A group calling itself the Rainbow Warriors sent a ransom note demanding money after the disappearance of an Exxon executive, but law enforcement officials say they aren't convinced.

Morris County Prosecutor W. Michael Murphy Jr. said investigators hadn't verified that any group is holding Sidney Reso, president of Exxon Co. International, which is based in Florham Park.

"Absent a current photograph and or voice recording this office cannot reach the conclusion that Mr. Reso is in the custody of any particular group," Murphy said.

Reso vanished the morning of April 29. His car was found idling in the driveway of his suburban Morris Township home after he left for work.

A law enforcement source who spoke on condition of anonymity said investigators hadn't determined whether the note came from a kidnapper or a prankster.

The note ordered authorities to "have a lot of money ready. . . . Instructions will follow."

Exxon spokesman Jim Morakis said he didn't know if the report was true or not. The FBI referred questions to Murphy.

The Rainbow Warrior, a ship of the environmental group Greenpeace, was sunk in 1985 by French security agents and replaced with the Rainbow Warrior II.

Greenpeace officials disavowed any involvement in the disappearance.

"This tragic allegation does a real disservice to legitimate environmental organizations working to protect our global environment," said Steve D'Esposito, Greenpeace executive director.

SING: Gatlin Brothers to put road behind them

(From 1A)

They've been on the road since June 1976, Gatlin said, and today's performance at Billy Bob's Texas in Fort Worth "very well could be" the last one the brothers will perform at the honky-tonk they helped open in 1981.

Oh, they might be back later in the year, Gatlin hedged, and there's the pair of Fort Worth Symphony Pops performances they'll be doing in the fall. But that's it, mind you, the bus stops here.

"Let all these young fellas go out and do that for a while now," Gatlin said, laughing.

It was big news last year when Gatlin and brothers Steve and Larry announced they were quitting by the end of this year, and that lead singer Larry was going in immediately for throat surgery, which was successful. The boys had been singing together for 38 years, and it was all over.

"There was a time when that looked like that might happen," Gatlin said. "We told the guy (the reporter who broke the story) that we weren't going to work together anymore.

"We decided this awhile back, and about two or three days after we made the announcement, this Branson thing came around."

The "Branson thing" is the Gatlins' brand-new complex on the Missouri hamlet's famed Highway 76, scheduled for a June or July '93 grand opening.

"It'll have a 1,000-seater and a 3,500-seater (theaters), with a 10-story hotel and two restaurants," Gatlin said. "We're calling it The Summit, because it's at the top of a hill overlooking the Ozarks.

"Maybe it'll help explain that we're going on to other things," Gatlin said, adding that the brothers plan a wholesale move of their families and offices to the Branson area.

Those "other things" include a couple of Broadway plays for Larry, his original "Alive and Well, Livin' in the Land of Dreams" as well as a possible role in "The Will Rogers Follies."

Rudy said he plans to busy himself with record and television production, and Steve — well, "he's a management-type guy," Gatlin said laughingly.

As for right now, "we have a new album out (their 23rd, appropriately called 'Adios') and we have options" on their current label, Liberty.

A new single, "Pretty Woman Have Mercy," has just been released.

election were watched very closely by 32 percent of the respondents, making that the third most-closely followed topic. The fourth involved Supreme Court deliberations about the legality of abortion restrictions in Pennsylvania, followed closely by 28 percent of those responding.

The only stories followed closely by more people than the King verdict were the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger in 1986 and the 1989 San Francisco earthquake. According to past Times Mirror studies, 80 percent of those survey closely followed the Challenger incident, while 73 percent paid close attention to the earthquake.

The fifth most-watched story, placing it behind the baby Jessica rescue, was the end of the Persian Gulf War in March 1991, which came in at 67 percent.

The Times Mirror survey began in 1986.

The current study also showed that while nearly four in 10 Americans also paid close attention to the economy, the percentage of Americans closely following stories about the economy is now at its lowest point since October 1991.

The survey results were based on telephone interviews conducted among a nationwide sample of 1,301 adults, 18 years of age or older, between April 30 and May 3, 1992. It had a margin of error of plus or minus three points.

take place just west of the new underpass. Frontage road traffic will be required to stop where West State Highway 158 goes under Highway 191. Now, cars on Highway 158 stop there.

"We're expecting now that the main lanes are open, there won't be as much traffic on the frontage roads," Passmore said. "So they are going to stop." But stop signs on 158 at the intersection may remain up for a day or two for safety reasons, he said.

"We're hoping to avoid some accidents," Passmore said. "It's been kind of a problem area."

The new underpass is a start, but Highway 191 construction is still evident.

About a mile and a half west of the new underpass, motorists confront "road closed" signs and must leave the main lanes. Along the way, cars share the frontage road with supply trucks for the construction, and working vehicles kick up clouds of dust.

Odessa's end of the highway, meanwhile, should be complete by early June, paving the way for a completed link within a few months.

"We may have a few kinks to work out — you usually do in these projects," Passmore said. "Sign-wise and traffic-wise, there may be a few changes, but we don't expect anything major. And we hope people will use those main lanes now that they're open."

NOTES: Fomer Nixon aide calls Perot 'insider'

anybody in the whole four years I was at the White House who was able to muscle himself in quicker into the president's own confidence."

In an interview with the AP, Perot insisted his contacts with the Nixon White House were limited 99 percent of the time to his widely publicized efforts to free American prisoners of war in Vietnam.

But White House memos say that in private meetings with Nixon, Perot offered $50 million for a public relations effort in 1969 that included plans to buy a major newspaper and the ABC television network. He pledged another $10 million in 1970 to create a pro-Nixon think tank, the documents say.

Nixon accepted both offers, but Perot never delivered, according to the documents.

Colson, assigned to work with Perot on the think tank, later concluded the offer was "one of the most effective con jobs I ever saw in the White House."

"He never put up a nickel. He parlayed that offer ... into access, which ended up costing him nothing," Colson said.

Flanigan, a Nixon economic adviser, says the image of Perot as an outsider is "nonsense."

"He knows how to play every instrument in that band," Flanigan said. "He was the ultimate insider."

Perot steadfastly denies making the monetary offers, insisting Nixon aides would sometimes solicit him with "fantasyland numbers ... and beautiful and strange ideas. And I always made it very clear to them I wasn't interested."

When asked why the offers showed up in the documents, he said: "I can't control what people scribble on pads."

In 1971, the documents say, Nixon encouraged Perot to invest in a failing Wall Street stock brokerage, duPont Glore Forgan, and Perot did so, for $55 million. The firm eventually went bankrupt and closed.

Perot, who founded computer giant Electronic Data Systems Corp., said he reluctantly made the purchase only after Nixon aides "got down on their hands and knees" and insisted that saving the firm was necessary to avoid a financial disaster on Wall Street. Perot said his total investment was closer to $60 million.

The AP reviewed dozens of Nixon-era documents in the National Archives that detail Perot's complaints, offers and requests as well as White House efforts to appease one of its "financial angels."

The documents say that between 1969 and 1973 Perot requested and received at least three private meetings with Nixon, attended eight White House social events and sometimes had contact with the White House as frequently as once a week.

Such White House attention is legal and routine for major supporters, and there is no indication in the documents that Perot traded money for favors.

A six-page memo prepared for Nixon chief of staff H.R. Haldeman by White House deputy Gordon Strachan in 1972 recounts a series of Perot complaints and requests and administration responses. It said the White House:

■ Intervened with the Internal Revenue Service after the agency questioned Perot's deduction of a political contribution to Nixon's 1968 campaign on his corporate tax return. "The administration was modestly helpful" in reaching a settlement.

■ "Tried to intercede on Perot's behalf" after EDS lost a data processing contract for Medicare claims in California. The Strachan memo said the loss of the contract, valued at $1 million, was "a legitimate complaint" but the administration "became involved too late to turn it around without inordinate flak."

■ Helped release a $400,000 payment that the Social Security Administration was withholding from Perot's company, alleging it had overcharged the government for processing of Texas Medicare claims.

1789: Doubts arise whether ratification will count came the key 38th state to approve. The state Senate had approved it in March.

"James Madison can now rest a little easier," said state Sen. John Kelly, who led the Michigan ratification effort. "It shows there's a message from the heartland of America that the abuses of Congress have to stop. This one has been a long time in coming."

The amendment reads: "No law, varying the compensation for the services of Senators and Representatives, shall take effect until an election of Representatives have intervened." Members of Congress currently are paid $129,500 a year.

Legislatures of three-quarters of the states must ratify a proposed amendment to the Constitution for it to go into effect.

Both the Michigan and New Jersey legislatures had the proposal on their agendas Thursday in an effort to become the state that would put the total over that mark. The New Jersey Assembly passed the bill 69-0 late in the afternoon; the Senate had earlier passed it 37-0. On Tuesday, Alabama and Missouri became the 36th and 37th states to ratify the measure.

New Jersey Assembly Speaker Chuck Haytaian said he was "sorry New Jersey wasn't the 38th, but we'll be proud to be the 39th. It's good government."

"We all know that the wheels of government often turn slowly. But two centuries is too long to wait, even by government's standards," said the amendment's sponsor in New Jersey, state Sen. Joseph Bubba.

Indeed, some raised doubts about whether the ratification will count, whether the amendment is so old that it's a legal dead issue. The question could wind up in the U.S. Supreme Court.

"This is the first step in a long process. I hope that the bureaucrats and naysayers will not try to steal this victory from the American people," said U.S. Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio, who led the national effort to resurrect Madison's measure.

The first Congress placed no deadline for ratifying the pay-raise amendment. Nowadays, Congress sets such deadlines.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley declined to speculate Thursday on what Congress might do if the issue lands in its lap. He said he favors the idea behind the amendment but added that to allow an amendment to be ratified over a period of more than 200 years runs counter to current practice.

The last time Congress gave itself a pay raise, the House complied with the spirit of the Madison amendment. A bill enacted in November 1989 included a roughly 30 percent raise, to $125,100, which did not take effect until the next Congress was sworn in in January 1991.

The 1989 bill included a raise only for the House because the Senate feared political fallout. However, in July 1991 the Senate acted to give itself a catch-up raise, effective immediately.

Madison, the principal architect of the Constitution, believed there was "a seeming indecorum" in the power to raise one's own pay.

The very first Congress agreed and sent his proposed amendment to the states on Sept. 25, 1789, along with 11 others. Ten of the 11 were ratified in a little more than two years, becoming the Bill of Rights. The 11th, which concerned the number of people who should sit in the House of Representatives, was never passed.

Six states ratified the amendment from 1789 to 1791. There it sat until 1873, when Ohio became the seventh ratifier. Then nothing happened until 1978, when Wyoming joined. More than two dozen others did so between 1983 and 1991. Then last year, a fresh drive for ratification became a "class project" for 35 of Congress's 43 freshmen.

Now that the 38th state has taken action on the pay raise amendment, the issue goes first to the chief of the National Archives, Don. W. Wilson.

Wilson could delay promulgating the amendment while seeking guidance from Congress, issue a conditional certificate of ratification, or issue a final certificate proclaiming the amendment ratified.

A conditional certificate, according to a National Archives legal memo, would allow Congress to determine whether the amendment has retained its original effectiveness despite the passage of time.

Then, if Congress chose to ignore it, the dispute would go to the Supreme Court. And regardless of what Congress might do, anyone could raise challenges on either side.

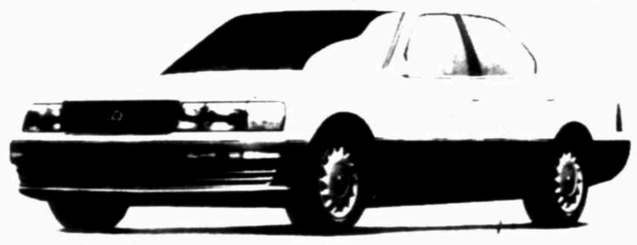

The Supreme Court has said previously that it's up to Congress to decide the deadlines for states to ratify constitutional amendments.

Afghan defense minister, rebel chief negotiate truce

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Afghan Defense Minister Ahmed Shah Masood vowed Thursday to prevent fundamentalist guerrilla chief Gulbuddin Hekmatyar from launching another bid to gain power.

Masood and Hekmatyar agreed to halt two days of heavy fighting in and around Kabul with a three-day truce while they try to work out their differences. The cease-fire agreement between the long-time rivals expires Saturday.

Masood engineered a string of military victories that toppled the Communist regime last month. Afghans had hoped the truce might lead to peace for the first time since a Marxist coup 14 years ago triggered the civil war, which took an estimated 2 million lives.

But negotiators had their doubts. And Masood made no attempt to appear conciliatory. His comments added to fears a truce may break down and reignite fighting for the capital.

"Perhaps for a short time, Mr. Hekmatyar will be able to use his rockets and kill more innocent people," Masood said. "But I assure you that soon we will push him so far back that his rockets won't reach the capital."

At least 73 people were killed and nearly 400 wounded earlier this week when Hekmatyar's forces bombarded this city of 1.5 million people with rockets fired from the hills south of the city.

Hekmatyar made three demands for joining the Islamic government — the removal of interim President Sibghatullah Mojaddidi, early elections and the expulsion from Kabul of a militia made up of northern Afghans.

Masood rejected the demands.

Negotiators said Hekmatyar had softened his position on the interim government and elections, but refused to budge on the demand that militiamen led by Gen. Abdul Rashid Dostum return to northern Afghanistan.

Dostum, who once supported ousted President Najibullah but switched sides earlier this year, played a major role in the rebels' victory.

"These forces cooperated to bring the collapse of the regime and to neutralize threats and attacks on Kabul," Masood said.

Military experts say Masood cannot afford to lose the Dostum militia, because it has done most of the fighting against Hekmatyar's fighters and is the backbone of his military forces.

Meanwhile, there were reports that three key members of Najibullah's Watan (Homeland) Party were allowed to leave the country. All were said to be ethnic Tajiks, as is Masood.

Their departure came a day after the interim government announced the establishment of a "people's court" to try members of the former government for their roles in the civil war.

Najibullah is believed to have been in hiding in Kabul since his fall more than three weeks ago, and many rebels and former government army officers want him tried as a traitor.

NATO formulates new peacekeeper policy

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The NATO allies are nearing a decision to allow use of their soldiers as peacekeepers in European conflicts, which would mark an unprecedented change in policy, diplomats said.

It would reverse past policy that has limited NATO forces to crises on alliance territory and would give the the 16-nation, Western military alliance a new role in the post-Cold War era.

The decision — which presumably could affect European policy toward the conflict in Yugoslavia — may come at a NATO foreign ministers meeting in Oslo, Norway, on June 4-5, the diplomats said Wednesday.

Diplomats said there was general agreement that troops of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization could be sent on peacekeeping missions mounted by the 51-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

But they said extensive debate would still take place over the practical details of providing troops for the CSCE, which seeks to keep peace and promote human rights in Europe and North America.

"In principle, there is a strong disposition among the allies to do what they can to support CSCE policies when they are made," said U.S. Ambassador William H. Taft IV.

He said the United States was "well-disposed toward the idea" that NATO resources should be available to the CSCE, though many questions needed to be answered before a final decision was made.

Dutch Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek initially raised the idea.

France has expressed no objections in principle but wants more information about how it would work, diplomats said.

Peacekeeping missions of 10,000 to 15,000 soldiers could be sent to future trouble spots in eastern Europe. The CSCE is trying to solve the ethnic conflict between the former Soviet republics of Armenia and Azerbaijan, as well as the conflict in what is left of Yugoslavia.

Non-NATO nations, such as Poland, Hungary or others in eastern Europe, also could offer soldiers if the force were organized through the CSCE, which includes all European nations, former Soviet republics, Canada and the United States.

German public worker unions accept offer

BONN, Germany (AP) — Leaders of Germany's public worker unions accepted a government wage offer Thursday, heralding the end of an 11-day strike that had crippled mass transit and left garbage piled on the streets.

The government proposal of a 5.4 percent increase outpaces inflation, but is just over half what workers had demanded.

The union rank-and-file must still vote on the government offer, but the largest union, the 2.3-million member OeTV, said it recommended acceptance.

The strikes by 400,000 public-sector workers in western Germany wreaked havoc on bus and rail transit, postal deliveries, garbage collection, day care, airline service, car rentals and even theater productions.

In his irritation over the strikes, some of the largest in Germany since World War II, Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Thursday he wondered whether the German worker had lost the legendary industriousness that allowed the nation to rebuilt from the ashes of World War II.

Even larger strikes, in the private sector, could be coming. IG Metall, Germany's biggest metalworkers' union with 3.6 million members, has been staging warning strikes throughout the week to push for pay raises. The metalworkers are threatening a full-blown strike if negotiations fail.

The public sector unions walked out partly because of frustration over the spiraling costs of German unification that workers in western Germany must bear.

But some commentators said the wage hikes would leave German taxpayers holding the bag.

"After all the inconvenience, garbage, traffic jams, closed kindergartens, and missed appointments, now we as taxpayers must pay even more than we would have before the strike," the ZDF television network said.

The government had for two weeks offered a 4.8 percent increase.

Rudolf Seiters, the interior minister, said that after factoring in all aspects of the complicated agreement, the average wage increase would actually be 5.12 percent.

But others said extra vacation pay and one-time supplements would push the increases above 5.4 percent for the lowest-paid workers.

The increases for lower-paid workers were retroactive to May 1. For others, the increase would be effective June 1. The offer includes a one-time payment of $454 for lower and middle wage-earners and $363 for senior workers, with no supplement for the highest-paid employees.

The postal union said it would not end its job actions until an actual contract was signed, but Monika Wulf-Mathies, chairwoman of OeTV — which represents bus drivers, streetcar and subway employees, garbage collectors, school janitors and nurses — said the union was suspending its strike.

Rail workers also ended their walkout immediately.

"For railway workers, this strike was worth it," said Rudi Schaefer, chairman of the federal rail union.

German workers' salaries are already relatively high — upper-level public works supervisors are paid up to $4,800 a month, a senior nurse can make about $2,500, and a garbage truck driver earns about $2,200.

But taxes and living costs are high, and many western Germans resent the hefty taxes imposed last year to finance the rebuilding of depressed eastern Germany.

The strikes did not affect eastern Germany, where public sector contracts are set separately from their western German counterparts.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl, meanwhile, complained that Germans have lost their drive for hard work, a trait that was crucial in the rebuilding of western Germany after World War II. Germans currently work an average of 37.7 hours a week, compared to 39 for the French and 40 for Americans.

"When we have the shortest work week of the seven industrialized nations ... but keep our machines running the shortest time, that just won't do," Kohl said in Berlin.

The first strike-related injury was reported earlier Thursday. Union leaders said a picketing woman in Troisdorf, near Duesseldorf, was slightly injured when she was hit by a carload of strike-breakers trying to get to their jobs. It apparently was an accident.

Serb forces take control of key section of Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serb forces reportedly took control of a key area of northern Bosnia-Herzegovina on Thursday as the federal army began withdrawing some of its forces from the republic.

Heavy fighting broke out Thursday evening around Ilidza, an eastern suburb of Sarajevo held by the Serbs. Serbs and Muslims fought mortar and machine-gun battles. Raging fires cast an eerie orange glow in the sky.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic called for an immediate cease-fire in Bosnia after meeting U.N. Undersecretary-General Marrack Goulding.

"No one in Bosnia is innocent," Milosevic said in Belgrade, capital of the new, smaller Yugoslavia comprising only Serbia and Montenegro.

"An immediate and unconditional cease-fire should be established from all sides."

Milosevic, who appears to be trying to head off U.S. and European sanctions against Serbia, acknowledged that paramilitary forces from Serbia had fought in Bosnia, but said that had stopped.

"Serbia will not allow itself to be discredited because of irresponsible individuals and groups."

Serbian media said leaders of Bosnia's Serbs and Croats agreed in Graz, Austria, to cease hostilities. Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said on Serbian TV that Serbs would seek talks with Bosnia's Muslims.

Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency quoted army sources as saying the army would complete its partial pullout from Bosnia by May 19.

While the army command is withdrawing all troops who are residents of other republics, 80 percent of the troops in Bosnia are Serbs of local origins — and they will remain behind.

Bishop resigns, reportedly had affair

N.Y. Times News Service

DUBLIN, Ireland — In a development that has dominated news coverage and discourse across Ireland, one of the country's most prominent and popular bishops has resigned, reportedly because of his relationship with a woman living in the United States.

The 65-year-old Bishop of Galway, Eamonn Casey, who has been known as a champion of the poor in Ireland and the Third World, announced his resignation unexpectedly in a statement on Wednesday night.

He said that after a trip he made to the Vatican his resignation for "personal reasons" had been accepted by Pope John Paul II and that he would now do missionary work.

The bishop did not elaborate, and has not commented subsequently on reports in newspapers, on radio and on the two national television channels that the reason for his resignation involved a woman in Connecticut to whom he had paid at least $115,000 in 1990 and other money periodically since the 1970s, when the two met while he was bishop of Kerry.

The woman and the bishop, the reports said, had both retained lawyers, who had met with each other in recent years. But there was no explanation for the timing of the bishop's resignation, which does not affect his status as a priest.

"The bishop has not elaborated and we are not going to elaborate," said a spokesman at the Catholic Press Office in Dublin. "These are allegations."

Nevertheless, no discernible effort to deny the reports was made by the press office, the Conference of Bishops, which represents the country's 35 bishops, or Casey, and the belief was widespread among officials and the public that the bishop had had an affair with the woman, who was not identified, and that she had had a child.

"It is understood the claim was by a woman in the United States who has had a child," the Irish National Radio said, according to The Associated Press.

None of the reports gave the source of their information, but such accounts have credibility here because Irish news organizations are forced to be cautious under libel laws that lean heavily in favor of people claiming they have been defamed.

The primate of Ireland, Cardinal Cahal Daly, said only that the bishop had made "a very positive contribution" to the church in this country, where 95 percent of the people are Roman Catholic.

The bishop is well known in the country for compassion and for controversy. In the early 1980s he castigated the United States for supporting a repressive regime in El Salvador, and he refused to meet President Ronald Reagan on his visit to Ireland.

He is known for his work among the poor and homeless in London in the 1960s, where he helped establish a shelter. In 1986 he apologized to his diocese after he was found guilty of drunken driving in London.

He has a reputation as a conservative in such matters as abortion, divorce and contraception, but is not a preacher of hellfire for Catholics who disagree.

He advocated a "yes" vote in the 1983 referendum that produced a constitutional amendment that appeared to have outlawed abortion in the country. He has not been outspoken in the current national debate on the issue.

Officials and political analysts said that the church's image would be damaged in the raging debate over Ireland's restrictions on abortion.

The country has been divided over the issue since a Supreme Court decision in February appeared to broaden the grounds for legal abortion in Ireland, where there is no divorce and the distribution of condoms is strictly limited.

In the decision, the court overruled an order prohibiting a trip to Britain for an abortion by a 14-year-old girl who said she had been raped. Confusion stemming from the decision has left both sides in the dispute unsure exactly what the law is.

Mandela moving to white suburb

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — African National Congress President Nelson Mandela is moving from the black township of Soweto to a home in Johannesburg's white suburbs, a spokesman said Thursday.

ANC spokesman Saki Macozoma refused to say where the new home was other than in the city's plush northern suburbs.

Mandela and his wife, Winnie, recently announced their separation. It is expected she will remain in the lavish home she had built on a Soweto hillside while Mandela was in prison.

Yeltsin creates independent armed forces

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin signed a decree Thursday creating an independent Russian armed forces and appointed himself commander-in-chief.

Yeltsin had resisted forming a separate Russian armed forces after the Soviet Union collapsed last year, preferring a unified military under the command of the Commonwealth of Independent States.

He changed his mind last month when Ukraine declared unilateral control over the Black Sea Fleet, and when it became evident that most former Soviet republics would form their own armies.

Yeltsin's decree, which takes effect immediately, declares that the armed forces "will be used to safeguard the freedom and independence of Russia, its sovereignty and security," according to the ITAR-Tass news agency.

Creation of a Russian armed forces will likely diminish the authority of the commonwealth military command, whose workings already are strained by the Russian-Ukraine battle for control over the Black Sea Fleet and the Crimean Peninsula, where the prestigious 300-ship armada is headquartered.

The former Soviet military had about 3.7 million servicemen, mostly draftees. Yeltsin has said the Russian armed forces will eventually be made up of about 1.5 million volunteers. He said they'll be answerable to an as yet unnamed civilian defense minister.

Until then, the decree states, soldiers will be drafted into the service and volunteers will continue serving on a contractual basis.

Marshal Yevgeny Shaposhnikov, the commonwealth military commander, told the daily Izvestia that 700,000 soldiers will be retired to the reserves by 1995, but that troop reduction will not be completed until the end of the century.

Dietrich to be buried May 16

PARIS (AP) — Marlene Dietrich's sultry gaze seemed to appear on every streetcorner in Paris on Thursday a day after her death at age 90.

Her portrait adorned the front page of most French newspapers, which paid homage to "the legend of the century" in pages of photographs and reminiscences. Her uplifted face was the central image of the official poster of the just-opened Cannes Film Festival.

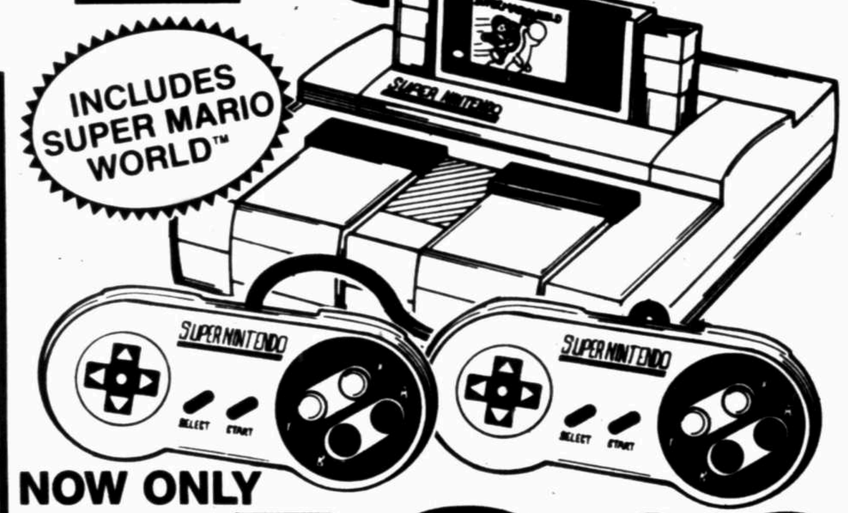

Dietrich's remains were to be flown home to Berlin in a German military plane for burial on May 16, alongside her mother, the news agency Agence-France Presse said.

Her body, draped in a French tricolor, was removed from her chic Right Bank apartment building on Wednesday. She was taken in a gray hearse to the Mont-Valerien funeral home in Nanterre, outside Paris.

A memorial service was scheduled for next Thursday at the Madeleine, the imposing Greek-style church facing the Place de la Concorde and the National Assembly in Paris.

Dietrich is survived by her daughter Maria Sieber Riva and four grandsons who live in the United States — Michael, Paul, David and Peter, who was with his grandmother when she died.

Gossip about vampire replaces Filipino election as hottest news

By Robert H. Reid
Associated Press writer

MANILA, Philippines — Filipinos will choose a new president and thousands of elected officials next week. But in the squalid barrios of the capital, the big news is there's a vampire on the loose.

For weeks, the slums of Manila's Tondo district have been abuzz with rumors that a "manananggal," a supernatural creature similar to a vampire, has been terrorizing the area.

According to Filipino folklore, a "manananggal" (pronounced Mana-NANG-gal) appears as a woman who can cut her body in two. The top half flies around at night searching for babies to devour.

The top half must return before daybreak to rejoin the rest of the body and move around like regular folks.

Occult activities, including faith healing, fortune-telling and rampages by spiteful ghosts, enjoy a wide following in the Philippines and are often taken seriously.

No one knows how the latest rumor got started, but it was picked up by most of the tabloids, which titillated readers with the demon's latest exploits.

Soon, the manananggal had replaced the May 11 presidential election as the hottest topic of gossip in local public markets, where housewives and vendors trade stories.

"It's scary," one housewife told a vendor in the crowded Divisoria market as she paid for fresh fish. "That's why I don't sleep alone at night."

The largest circulation tabloid, People's Journal Tonight, even published what it said was an interview with Martina Santa Rosa, who purportedly battled the demon last week.

"She attacked me," Ms. Santa Rosa said. "I was just lucky I was able to get free. I saw half of her body. It was naked. She had long, scraggly hair, long arms, nails and sharp fangs."

The newspaper reported that the woman's account was "corroborated" by her neighbors. One, Alfonso Bernardo, insisted the account was true.

"We saw it fly away from her house," he told the newspaper.

On Wednesday, about a dozen young men, accompanied by a television crew, barged into the home of Teresita Beronqui to investigate rumors that she was the dreaded manananggal.

ABS-CBN television showed a terrified elderly woman trying to explain that she was not the manananggal. Actually, she said, she herself had been attacked by the demon. As proof, she showed that her foot was missing several toes.

"But vampire experts in the neighborhood said the woman was lying," the TV reporter told a nationwide audience.

That was followed by an "explanation" from an unidentified expert that the woman was indeed the manananggal and had already changed back into human form, albeit without some of her toes.

To resolve the mystery, the reporter, Cesar Soriano, produced a dried tail of a stingray and asked the woman to touch it on camera. Manananggals, or so the experts say, are repulsed by stingrays' tails.

The woman touched it to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Archaeologists find world's oldest obelisk

SAKKARA, Egypt (AP) — Archaeologists have discovered the world's oldest known complete obelisk, dedicated to a long-forgotten queen who in her time was so beloved and famous that she became a goddess after death.

A twin obelisk, broken in three pieces, was also unearthed.

The obelisks were dedicated to Inty, a wife of Pharaoh Pepy I, Egypt's ruler almost 4,300 years ago. Her name was lost in antiquity. But inscriptions near the obelisks speak of Inty's ascension into godhood after she died, and excavators found eight offering tables in her honor.

The green limestone obelisks stand 7 feet, 3 inches. They adorned the entry to a funeral temple leading to Inty's pyramid. The French-Egyptian team discovered the pyramid's ruins earlier but lacked Inty's name until they found the temple's remains and the obelisks.

The site is part of large pyramid field for at least three of Pepy's queens. They were buried alongside their pharaoh in south Sakkara, a royal cemetery on desert ridges 20 miles south of Cairo.

The obelisks are small compared to those erected by later pharaohs, but Egyptologists said their discovery provides rare clues into one of ancient Egypt's best-known but least-understood symbols.

Large or small, obelisks have a mystical aura. A true obelisk is a four-sided single piece of stone, tapering gradually as it rises and ending in a small pyramid called a pyramidion.

The ancient Egyptians who created them considered obelisks to be sacred to the sun god.

But few obelisks survive. Dozens were taken from Egypt. They decorate the banks of the Thames in London, Italian and French avenues, even New York's Central Park. Pollution has erased many of their messages.

Cooperative effort restarts recycling

Midland businessmen who've been waiting for enough interest in recycling locally to justify their use of recyclable products should be interested in a three-way partnership formed here that makes use of the products feasible for various firms.

The partnership — which involves the City of Midland, Keep Midland Beautiful and Butts Recycling — will allow businesses to begin recycling white copy paper, newspaper and aluminum.

The partnership revitalizes a recycling effort launched in years past.

Jeff Higgins, chairman of the Business & Industry Committee of Keep Midland Beautiful, noted that since the recycling partnership has been worked out businesses may now purchase recycled products on which they can realize a cost savings with the assurance that their recyclable containers will be picked up for future use. He also noted that the city will bring a recycling dumpster to businesses that request one.

Higgins also noted that residents are being encouraged to bring their recyclable items to special recycling dumpsters located at schools and fire stations. Higgins said residents are asked to bag recyclable paper and aluminum separately.

The recycling partnership is the result of much hard work by numerous individuals, but one who deserves particular notice is Jack Burns, the city's assistant utilities director, who worked out additional collections by the city of recyclable refuse.

This particular approach — blending the interests of Keep Midland Beautiful, government and private industry — is a novel way to solve the problem of giving the recycling effort a boost. Using recyclable materials, of course, is another way of protecting our environment, an important cause for all people.

Now we hope Midland businesses and residents will join the recycling effort and make it successful!

Election needs substance

The victories by George Bush and Bill Clinton in (the) Pennsylvania primary virtually assure that candidates Bush and Clinton will receive their respective party's presidential nomination. So on to the general election we go.

What will be important for each candidate — as well as for Ross Perot, assuming he is successful in getting on enough ballots — is securing a mandate. If there is a single factor that explains the deep anger manifested in this year's protest vote, it is that voters wish to have some problems solved.

This doesn't mean that voters are not interested in this year's electoral contest. But neither do voters seem to attach the same importance to the "gamesmanship" of winning an election that party officials, campaign aides and the Washington press corps all too often do.

To secure the mandate needed to govern successfully, the next president must have a clear message. This means talking issues with the American people during the fall campaign and presenting an agenda for dealing with the problems that challenge our country.

The candidates must continue to talk about such issues and present their plans, even though detailed presentations occasionally bore some campaign strategists and TV types. But the American voters should not be underestimated. This year they are demonstrating that gamesmanship is not their interest; responsible governing is. Strategists should take that message to heart during the general election.

Bankers defend Congress

The American Bankers Association and the Independent Bankers Association of America have come to the rescue of members of Congress who are in hot water because of checks that bounced at the House bank.

Floyd Stoner, an ABA lobbyist and former aide to two Democratic congressmen, helped put together a letter blaming bad banking practices for many of the members' overdrafts.

For its part, IBAA personnel admit frankly that they want Congress to ease banking regulations that were strengthened in the wake of the savings and loan debacle.

"We hope Congress would take this and see that whole institutions — and whole industries — should not be ruined by the sins of the few," a spokesman said.

Need we say more?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, May 8, the 129th day of 1992. There are 237 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 8, 1945, President Truman announced in a radio address that World War II had ended in Europe.

On this date:

In 1541, the Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto discovered the Mississippi River.

In 1846, the first major battle of the Mexican War was fought at Palo Alto, Texas, resulting in victory for Gen. Zachary Taylor's forces.

In 1884, the 33rd president of the United States, Harry S. Truman, was born near Lamar, Missouri.

In 1886, Atlanta pharmacist John Styth Pemberton invented the syrup for a beverage that came to be known as Coca-Cola.

In 1958, Vice President Richard M. Nixon was shoved, stoned, booed and spat upon by anti-American protesters in Lima, Peru.

In 1962, the musical comedy "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" opened at the Alvin Theater in New York.

JACK ANDERSON

Smugglers use 'cambiamos pesos'

ALONG THE MEXICAN BORDER — To the untrained eye, they look like only taco stands, restaurants, supermarkets, mobile homes and small dilapidated buildings. Their neon signs flash, "Cambiamos Pesos" — "We exchange pesos." And for years they have provided personalized financial services for residents of border communities.

Anderson

"There's a need for them," explained one El Paso, Texas, money exchanger. "When people have to exchange their dollars to go buy that special dress or if they have an emergency and the banks are closed, we are here for them."

But, according to law enforcement sources, many of these one-time mom and pop organizations have become the preferred banks for narcotics smugglers.

Without these non-bank financial institutions here and elsewhere, drug dealers might not be able to disguise their identity and distance themselves from the $100 billion in illicit narco-dollars generated nationally.

A recent government study argues that among the estimated 1,000 casas de cambio (the local name for currency exchange facilities) doing business along the border from Texas to California, as many as 80 percent may be engaged in money laundering. One casa alone has been linked to laundering more than $50 million in a six-month period.

They are almost completely unregulated and unsupervised by federal and state authorities. These non-bank institutions are supposed to comply with federal anti-money laundering statutes but many don't and get away with it.

Tragically, those that do often go belly up, unable to compete with the narco-backed casas. The legitimate casas that have survived say the laundering has given their business a bad name, and complain about the belated efforts by authorities to crack down on their crooked competitors.

Casas de cambio became a laundering haven for smugglers after the passage of money-laundering control legislation in 1986. The new law held banks criminally culpable for failing to file reports on cash transactions over $10,000. Drug smugglers who once could waltz into bank lobbies and unload cash-stuffed suitcases with no questions asked now had to look elsewhere.

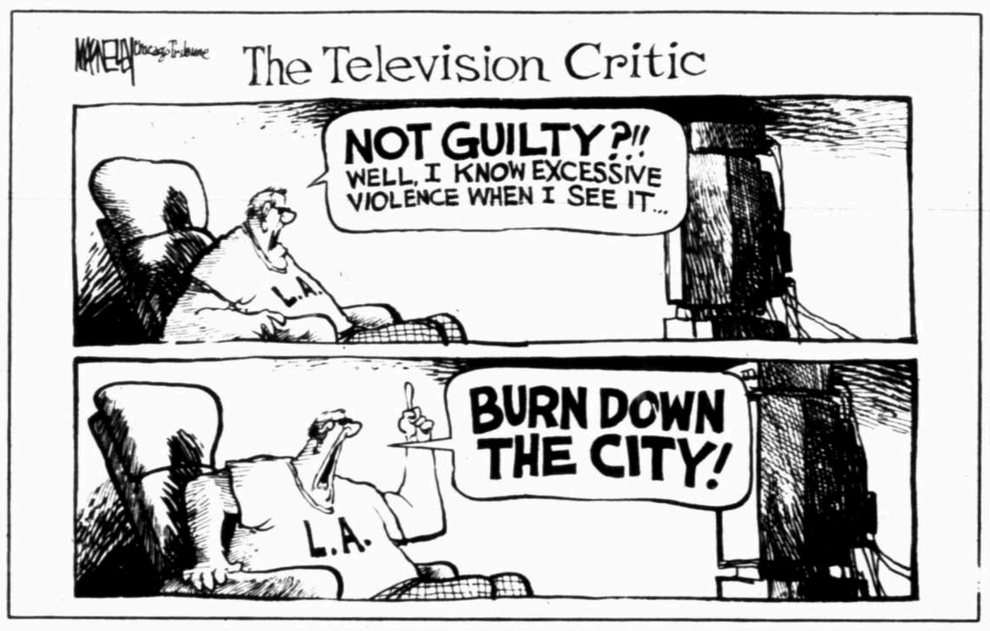

Some of these institutions filled the void eagerly. Handling the illicit transactions garnered them up to $1 million annually in profits. Their businesses boomed and so did their services. With reserves in local bank accounts, some casas de cambio looked more and more like banks by providing services ranging from check cashing and wire transfer to selling money orders and traveler's checks.

Although they remain elusive to law enforcement, the methods and mechanics driving casas de cambio are well-documented. Senate investigators recently heard how one of the most basic transactions unfolds.

A drug dealer needs to deposit $100,000 into a bank account without arousing suspicion. He brings the cash into a casa de cambio. An exchange house employee then drives the money through Customs across the border into Mexico. Cash amounts over $10,000 leaving the country must be reported — but the law is seldom enforced.

Once the border is crossed, the driver simply makes a U-turn and re-enters the United States. First he fills out Customs forms declaring the money as having been derived from legitimate business deals in Mexico. At that moment, the deed is done — the money has been "laundered," and is safe to deposit in any U.S. bank account.

CHARLEY REESE

Faulty thinking is pervasive problem in world

If you want to make sense of the world, you have to learn to recognize faulty thinking and fallacious arguments because you live in a world in which faulty thinking and fallacious arguments are as prevalent as flies.

Reese

A lot of it is faulty on purpose. That kind of deliberate faulty thinking is put out by groups engaged in propaganda. Certain techniques, however, are common to all groups.

Anecdotal evidence is most common. That's where people use the particular to imply they have proved something about the general. Say, you want to blacken the reputation of some group. So you find an extremist and you quote some outrageous statement he has made and then say, "See, those people are (fill in the blanks)." The Israeli propaganda machine specializes in this technique, using statements by extremists to depict the entire Arab world as crazed terrorists.

But our own Congress also specializes in it as does practically every group in America with a lobbyist in Washington, which includes just about everybody but the American people themselves.

Congressional hearings are often nothing more than a staged play version of using the anecdotal to prove the general. Carefully selected witnesses provide anecdotal evidence of whatever general problem the politicians are pretending to be interested in at the hearing. Mrs. Smith from Hog Hollow got sick and couldn't find a doctor, therefore there is a great shortage of doctors. Valid inductive reasoning, I should add, goes from particular to general, but only after there are lots and lots of particulars — not a small number.

No one is more addicted to trying to prove a general premise with anecdotal evidence than journalists. The formula for most journalistic articles, like features or magazine articles, is anecdote-anecdote-generalization. A variation is anecdote-anecdote-speculation in general terms.

One of the most laughable of modern phenomena are political and polemical books purported to be well-researched because they are footnoted. When you look at the footnotes, however, you find a long string of newspaper citations, as if some statement appearing in a newspaper were indisputably true. Newspapers in fact are full of lies and falsehoods because we frequently quote the statements, speeches and reports of liars and idiots who nevertheless occupy important positions.

If newspapers and TV had to meet scholarly or scientific standards in establishing the truth of everything they print or broadcast, most newspapers would be the size of a postcard and news broadcasts would be measured in nanoseconds.

If this talk about propaganda, strikes you as academic, just remember that the definition of sanity (Karl Menninger's definition anyway) is to be more or less reasonably in touch with reality.

Thus when people, for their own reasons or because of their own mistakes or stupidity, created a distorted or false picture of reality in your head, they are inducing insanity in you. They are making you vulnerable. They are depriving you of your ability to make decisions in your own interest. They are trying to enslave you mentally just as people once enslaved others physically.

Your mind is your most important asset because the mind is the chief survival tool (along with the opposable thumb) of homo sapiens (that's us). Thus people who play games with your mind are enemies. They have decided you are disposable cannon fodder in whatever propaganda war they happen to be waging. Just as you wouldn't consider someone who blinded or crippled you as friendly, you should not consider people who lie or mislead you as friendly either.

You can be as logical as a mathematical formula, but if the data fed you is faulty, your logic will lead you to wrong conclusions. So heads up and stay alert.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Country needs moral reformation after riots

Rome — anyway, a large chunk of it — was sacked last week by the barbarians, but many of the Romans didn't notice. They were too busy trying on the latest fashions in sackcloth and ashes.

Murchison

The two most arresting features of the Los Angeles riot were:

- Customers destroying the businesses on which they and their neighbors depend, and
- The larger society apologizing for having indirectly precipitated this bizarre and costly behavior.

Concerning Los Angeles, white America is attempting a death-defying moral straddle. On the one hand: Oh, naughty, naughty, it's b-a-a-a-a-d to riot and loot. On the other hand: Oh, but what a terrible jury verdict in the Rodney King case!

The president of the United States, whose re-election campaign, not too coincidentally, is flagging, typifies this approach. He's dead-set against violence, and, what's more, he thinks the King decision so "hard to understand" he is having the case investigated at the federal level.

A sense of proportion would show us that weighed against 50 deaths, 9,000 arrests, and half a billion dollars in property damage, a possibly (not conclusively) mistaken jury verdict is a flyspeck. You can't compare or correlate the two factors. Because, nonetheless, many do so, a couple of bad things are coming our way.

The first is the public lynching of the legal system. We are creating a climate in which conscientious juries will hesitate to convict a member of a minority group who is perceived as a martyr, a persecuted victim. One of the King jurors, interviewed anonymously on Los Angeles television, indicated that he might have voted differently had he known what chaos the verdict would set off. In Mr. Bush's investigation, the political pressure will be on the government not only to accuse but to convict.

What a wonderful opportunity for slick defendants, or anyway their slick lawyers. Threaten, or merely hint of, riot and disruption. The jury will hear. It will remember Los Angeles and start to whimper. This is jury-tampering of the most scandalous sort.

A second bad thing coming our way is a national search for irrelevant solutions. We are admonished that a "resurgence of white racism in America," as the black columnist Carl Rowan puts it, is the real culprit in Los Angeles. Let's root it out. Let's not have less affirmative action, let's have more; not cheaper government social programs but more expensive ones.

"Racist" is today's great conversation-stopper, as "communist" was the Joe McCarthy era's. Whites flinch from it, as from a bullwhip. Please, please, don't call me that!

Variant kinds of racism go unremarked. The looters didn't show much desire to have white cops and firemen over for cocktails. For Korean merchants the looters reserved a special fury. I should ask, parenthetically, isn't it time our society showed some concern over the well-being of these honest, hard-working, lovable people, the Koreans, who prosper in the black ghettos only to arouse their customers' wrath when they prosper too well?

However, all this merely reinforces the view of a world upside down and inside out. Queried by the Los Angeles Times — why are you doing this? — a looter explained: "It's not stealing. The jury did us wrong." Such people's moral sense is drawn up like a mummy's flesh.

Know what this country really needs? It needs a thorough and complete moral reformation, commencing now. It needs families that teach moral values and classroom teachers allowed by the courts to reinforce those values. And churches that refrain from clamoring over maldistribution of income so as to teach the moral law: declining ridiculous excuses like, hey, you've got your morality, I've got mine, where's the problem?

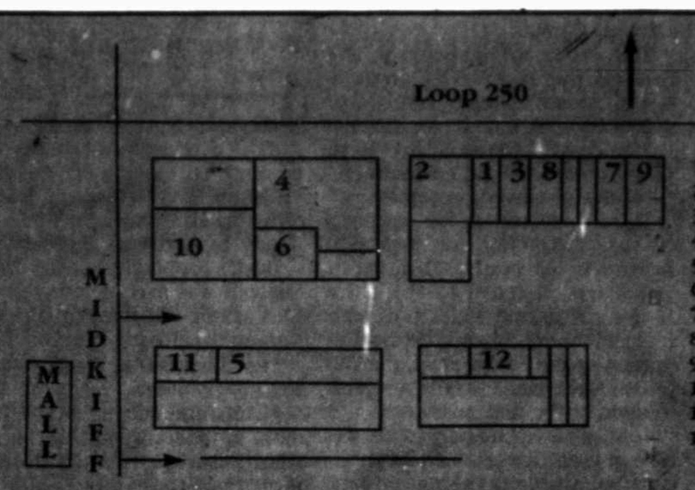

Race doesn't, or shouldn't, come into moral matters. Between good, honest, hard-working people of whatever race there's no qualitative difference. Among barbarians and vandals of whatever race — same thing.

House votes to restore funding for 1 Seawolf submarine

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Hoping to save thousands of jobs, the House voted overwhelmingly on Thursday to restore one of two Seawolf nuclear submarines President Bush wants to eliminate from the budget.

The unusual spectacle of House Democrats defending an expensive military program that the White House opposes reflects an emerging realization that military cuts are accompanied by pink slips and angry constituents. And more specifically, the 412-to-2 vote represented a victory for the New England delegations, which carefully lined up allies over more than three months to preserve the submarine scheduled for manufacture by the Electric Boat Division of the General Dynamics Corp. in Groton, Conn.

The vote to preserve the Seawolf, part of a $5.8 billion package of budget changes, came after a 266-150 vote against an alternative measure proposed by Bush that would have halted manufacture of the new submarine.

The administration has contended that $1.8 billion for each submarine is too costly. The stealth vessel was designed to track the Soviet submarine fleet, but with the cold war's end and the disintegration of the Soviet navy, the Defense Department says it now is a weapon without a mission.

Politics played heavily in the debate in both Houses, with Republicans pointing out the need for a line-item veto, and Democrats asserting that they and not Bush are the true budget cutters.

■ More national news / 12C

"The president's alternative was pushing our people off the cliff," said Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn. "You need a long-term industrial policy to deal with conversion."

Bush's proposal to phase out the Seawolf was part of four separate bills asking Congress to take back money it already appropriated.

The Senate this week rejected Bush's proposals, restoring both Seawolfs and cutting $424 million more in federal spending than the administration proposed. Bush has threatened to veto the Senate version if it becomes law, in part because it cuts $1.3 billion in research for the Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars."

Before Bush can veto the measure, Senate and House conferees will have to reconcile their different approaches to cutting appropriations. One senator who hopes to save both Seawolfs said he hoped a compromise could be reached by which the two would be built over several years, to limit annual spending on the project.

The House only addressed three of the four administration proposals on Thursday, approving a different mix of cuts than did the Senate. It cut $734 million from domestic programs and $124 million in foreign aid. To partially balance the restoration of spending on Seawolf, the House cut $73 million from the MX missile and $130 million from the Cruise missile program.

Storm dumps snow in N.C. mountains

MOUNT PISGAH, N.C. (AP) — A winter-in-May storm left more than 3 feet of snow Thursday on higher peaks of the southern Appalachians, stranding some tourists but attracting others.

Thirty-nine inches of snow had fallen by late afternoon atop Mount Pisgah, standing 5,749 feet high 20 miles southwest of Asheville, the National Weather Service reported. And more was on the way, the agency said.

The storm stranded people staying at The Pisgah Inn, on the Blue Ridge Parkway 700 feet from the top of the mountain.

"We've got plenty of employees, plenty of supplies, a backup generator and cellular phones so we won't get cut off from the world," said Bruce O'Connell, the hotel's general manager. "We're ready. Let it snow. Let it keep coming."

He said inn workers were plowing the 3.5 miles of parkway to the nearest state road, but state transportation workers trying to meet them got stuck.

O'Connell said his 51-room inn was half full when the storm hit.

"Some people are afraid to leave, other people don't want to leave and other people want to come up to see the snow," he said.

Colleges sign pact for business assistance

■ Three college presidents sign pact with UTPB small business center.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

Permian Basin education leaders took pens in hand Thursday, forming an alliance to share support for local businesses.

The educators, presidents of Midland College, Odessa College and Howard College in Big Spring, signed agreements with the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's small business development center.

"We're going to bring into clear focus the expertise that's available in our entire region," said David Daniel, president of Midland College.

He was chosen Thursday to chair the Permian Basin Consortium for Higher Education — a plan for sharing of resources and information between the area educational institutions. The leaders met at UTPB's Center for Energy and Economic Diversification.

Economic development is the first goal, as presidents agreed that their institutions would draw from UTPB's programs and share their own.

"We are working together," Daniel said. "It cuts down on duplication and we get a bigger bang for the buck, more resources."

Deana Lusk, associate dean of instruction for MC, said plans are in the works for joint seminars, sharing of technical resources and seeking funding as a group.

"Where it's to our benefit to collaborate, we'll do it," Ms. Lusk said. "Times are hard. We can't afford to duplicate services."

Ms. Lusk and Camille Duchesne, director of continuing education, will be MC's liaisons with UTPB.

Corbett Gaulden, director of UTPB's division of business administration, described a philosophy he calls "economic self-determination."

"Economic development happens because the people that are going to get developed make it happen," he said. Small businesses will be the focus, Gaulden said, because most job creation occurs in a small business environment.

"We're going to get on each other's turf a little," he said of the participating colleges. "But we've agreed to get on each other's turf and make this happen."

Daniel said the consortium would serve two purposes, one being the alliance for economic development. The other, he said, is to provide a structure for communication between the colleges — ultimately for the benefit of students.

"Rather than going our own way and doing our thing, we chose to come together ... maximize our resources," Daniel said.

In effect, Midland College's business and economic development center has become a satellite of UTPB's program, Gaulden said. He said students and others seeking help will have more information to draw from.

"It won't reduce what (the colleges) have to offer, it will add to what's there." Gaulden said. "Help is more direct and quickly available."

MC student nurse wins fellowship

By Myra Lee Salcedo

When Midlanders are sweltering in June, Cindy Gill will be heading for the cool mountains of Austria.

The Midland College nursing student — one of 50 Fuld Fellows in the United States — will attend the Seventh International Conference on Cancer Nursing in Vienna, Austria.

More than 300 students nationwide were nominated for the fellowship. The New York-based Helene Fuld Health Trust selected the 50 fellows.

"The Helene Fuld Health Trust is the largest private charitable trust devoted solely to supporting nursing education," Ms. Gill said.

A former special education teacher, Ms. Gill, 38, is embarking on a second career. The mother of three children — ages 12, 9 and 6 — said she had originally intended to get into the nursing profession after her children entered college.

"I was halfway to getting my master's degree in special education when I decided to change careers," she said. "I decided life is too short to wait. I had always wanted to be involved in nursing and was majoring in medical technology before I got married."

Ms. Gill has made oncology nursing her specialty. "But I am interested in a broad range of nursing, and don't want to be limited to oncology. I have enjoyed all of my rotation work, including pediatrics and OB-GYN (obstetrics-gynecology)."

Amendment's passage fulfills legislative aide's ambition

Gregory Watson holds a copy of the original Bill of Rights.

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press writer

But not discouraged. And Thursday, the Michigan Legislature became the key 38th state needed to put into effect the amendment that bars Congress from giving itself a midterm pay raise.

AUSTIN (AP) — Ten years ago, Gregory Watson argued in a college government class paper that an amendment to the U.S. Constitution that was proposed in 1789 was still pending before state legislatures.

Watson received a grade of C. "The professor told me this amendment could not pass. I was disgusted," he said.

But not discouraged. And Thursday, the Michigan Legislature became the key 38th state needed to put into effect the amendment that bars Congress from giving itself a midterm pay raise.

Since writing that paper, Watson, an aide to state Rep. Ric Williamson, has spent much of his spare time prodding other state legislatures to adopt the amendment.

He listened to the Michigan vote over the telephone by calling the office of that legislature's clerk.

"I feel sheer joy," he said. "I was born in Michigan, and I'm particularly delighted that they passed the amendment."

He also feels protective about the measure — an amendment authored by James Madison, the principal architect of the U.S. Constitution and, later, the nation's fourth president.

"If anyone else told you that they dreamed it up, they are a liar," Watson said of efforts to add it to the Constitution.

Madison believed there was "a seeming indecorum" in the power to raise one's own pay. He said any raise voted by Congress should not take effect until after the subsequent House election.

While researching his government paper at the University of Texas-Austin, Watson stumbled onto Madison's idea. At that time, Watson said, members of Congress had just voted themselves a special tax break.

"It struck me that that was a very sneaky backdoor pay raise, and I felt that it was time to do something," he said.

Over the years, Watson, now 30, wrote state lawmakers across the nation, urging them to introduce the resolution through their legislatures. He estimates about a year of his life, and $5,000 of his money has been spent on the project.

"In April 1983, the first success story was in Maine. Then in April 1984, it was Colorado. Then it began to snowball," he said. Texas ratified the amendment in 1989.

Now the question is whether there is any legal backing to an amendment that took so long to ratify.

Watson has no doubts.

"My position is the amendment has been ratified today," he said.

Only a member of Congress can challenge it in court, and Watson wondered aloud which congressman would file such a lawsuit.

As far as his dubious former government professor, he said, "I don't know where she is now. But it proves those academicians are badly out of touch with the real world."

FULD: Nurse earns fellowship trip to Austria

(From 1B)

Ms. Gill experienced caring for a cancer patient first-hand when her mother died of cancer 11 years ago.

"My mother's illness made me see the difference that good quality nursing care makes if someone is terminally diagnosed," she said.

During her mother's illness, Ms. Gill heard about a Hospice organization that was being formed in Midland.

"I got involved and donated tons of time because I believe it's possible to help someone live nobly until they die," she said.

Ms. Gill said her mother "would be pleased I'm pursuing the goals that I've set for myself. She told us to always keep challenging ourselves, and my brother recently finished getting his Ph.D."

As part of her Fuld Fellowship, she also received funds to attend the National Student Nurses' Association annual convention in Phoenix, Ariz., last month.

"Attending the convention in Phoenix made me realize that this is a big deal. I'm really honored," Ms. Gill said.

She said excelling at Midland College is par for the course. "Students here have a 100 percent passing rate on the registered nurse state exam," she said. "The biggest challenge of going to the college's nursing school is performing up to its standards. It's been the hardest thing I've ever done, but probably the most rewarding."

Ms. Gill will receive transportation, lodging, and a stipend for meals and personal expenses for the Vienna conference.

Gay activists shred books, toss pages at Anita Bryant

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Gay activists sharply criticized singer Anita Bryant at a Houston bookstore, tearing out pages from her new book and tossing them at her.

Several members of Queer Nation on Wednesday lashed out at Bryant for her stand on homosexuality while she was autographing her book, "A New Day," at The Baptist Bookstore on Almeda-Genoa.

"You're a vile person and anything but a Christian," activist Brian Bradley said as he tore pages from the book. "And this is what we think about your book. This is what we think of your religion. This is what we think of you as an individual, and you are getting nowhere with your hatred."

Bryant's book deals in part with her professional and personal struggles since supporting a referendum in Florida in the 1970s opposing legislation to require hiring homosexuals as teachers in private religious schools.

As Bryant listened calmly, Bradley tossed some of her book's pages, with some of them landing on Bryant's arms and body.

She didn't respond until the activists expressed outrage about what they said were Bryant's recent comments and concerns about "the innocent victims of AIDS."

"We are all innocent victims of AIDS," said Bradley, who says he is HIV positive. "I am an innocent victim."

Bryant, who some describe as a fundamentalist Christian, then asked, "Is promiscuity a sin?"

Bryant's book deals in part with her professional and personal struggles since supporting a referendum in Florida in the 1970s opposing legislation to require hiring homosexuals as teachers in private religious schools.

The activists responded, "AIDS is not a moral issue, it's a health issue."

"I'm not here on a referendum," Bryant replied. "I am here to sign my book. Would you give me that right?"

Bradley asked, "Will you give us our rights as human beings?"

Bryant said activists have manipulated the media and she again was a victim.

Before the confrontation, Bryant signed Bradley's copy of her book. He requested it be dedicated "To Queer Nation," but she said she never uses the word "queer."

She then agreed to dedicate the autograph "To Q.N." She also wrote "with love in the Lord" and noted Philippians 4:13, which reads, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

About 10 activists were in the store. Most had exited when police, responding to a call, arrived.

DRUGS: Squad goes to Andrews

(From 1B)

About 6:30 p.m., Task Force officials executed a search warrant in Andrews County and seized one gram of cocaine and a 1949 GMC pickup truck. A 25-year-old Andrews' man, Alexie Martinez Mauz, was arrested for possession of the drug.

Wednesday's drug busts came on the first day the Task Force received a drug-sniffing dog — which paid for itself that day, officials said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Suspect jailed

Staff report

ODESSA — A 38-year-old man was arrested Thursday afternoon after being accused of robbing a store and taking a woman and her two children hostage, police said.

Donnie Eugene Blaylock, charged with aggravated robbery and aggravated kidnapping, remained jailed Thursday pending an appearance before a judge, officials said.

Police said a man, acting as if he had a firearm, robbed the Serv-All Superette, 810 Custer Ave., at about 3:05 p.m. of an undetermined amount of money.

After fleeing the store, the man allegedly jumped in a 1978 Dodge station wagon kidnapping the occupants, 34-year-old Elizabeth Faye Richey, her son, Ariel Richey, 2, and 1-year-old daughter, Hadassah Richey.

Police said the man then drove the car letting the mother and children go at Third Street and Harless Avenue.

The man later abondoned the car at the Cactus Motel on Second Street, forced himself in a room and held Theresa Jo Barnett, 36, against her will, police said.

The woman managed to escape to police outside, officials said.

Topless bar sign under attack

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Depending on who's looking at her, the 22-foot-high exotic dancer standing outside Bob Dumas' nightclub is either pretty — or pretty disgusting.

A likeness of a scantily clad dancer has been a landmark outside Legs nightclub for the past nine years. But when Dumas changed signs recently — it now features a redheaded woman grasping the front of her pink bikini bra — a furor erupted.

The mayor's office has received 70 complaints from residents of Corpus Christi and San Patricio County and at least one citizen took her objections to the City Council.

"That's a disgusting sign," Lily Wilkinson of nearby Sinton told the council. "I just feel like that sign is sending a dreadful, horrible message to our young people."

Dumas can't figure out what's going on.

"This is the prettiest girl I've ever had," he said. "It's not anything worse than these suntan billboards you see. It's not anything worse than you see on TV."

City and state officials are checking out the sign, but so far they say it doesn't appear to violate any zoning ordinances or other regulations.

Police determined it doesn't violate any obscenity or public lewdness laws, said vice squad supervisor Lt. Emilio Sanchez.

The State

Judge postpones hearing for McDuff

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal magistrate cancelled Thursday a detention hearing for paroled killer Kenneth Allen McDuff, eliminating the former death row inmate's chance at freedom before facing federal charges.

"He's not going anywhere. He's staying without bond and, under the federal system, there are no conditions which would allow him to be out," said Bill Johnson, the U.S. attorney for the western district.

U.S. Magistrate Dennis Green said federal officials in Kansas City, Mo., already filed the necessary charges against McDuff when he was in their custody Monday through Wednesday.

McDuff, 46, is charged with distribution of LSD and firearm possession by a felon.

Late Wednesday, he was arraigned in McLennan County for the Feb. 24, 1991, murder of 22-year-old prostitute Valencia Joshua, said county detective Richard Stroup.

Ironically, McDuff asked Green Wednesday to waive the detention hearing because, his attorney said, he did not want media attention.

Waco attorney Dwight Goains, who also was appointed to represent McDuff in the county charge, said Thursday he is surprised by the attention his client has received.

Goains said he began gathering evidence Thursday for an arraignment he expects will be held next week.

"I've already talked to my investigators and we're going to get to work. Now I've got to get all my evidence together and get my motions together and decide which way I'm going to go," he said.

Professor: Crime shows distort reality

By Mede Nix
N.Y. Times News Service

Convicted killer Kenneth Allen McDuff's mug shot didn't appear on a post office wall. But it did appear on "America's Most Wanted," a member of a growing TV-show genre praised by police but criticized by media analysts.

Shows such as "America's Most Wanted" and "Unsolved Mysteries" are reality-based, featuring re-enactments of crimes or mysterious or heroic events. Police say the shows take criminals off the streets, but others say the re-enactments blur the lines between fiction and truth.

"So far, we've found these shows to be very successful," said Gerald Anerberg, head of the National Association of Chiefs of Police. "Police officers like them because they help catch criminals and they often put the officers in a better light."

But Allen Caruba of New Jersey, a former broadcaster who now studies media trends, said reality shows fail to inform the public about the causes of the problems they see on television.

"What a show like this does not tell the public is that how prisoners like this are being let loose in society," Caruba said. "They often create excessive fears while distracting and diverting us from reality of life in America. So we are suddenly surprised to discover a riot in Los Angeles or that the savings and loan industry is at the point of collapse."

Despite their popularity, a Texas communications teacher said that the shows are confusing and that he has noticed a trend in TV news toward more dramatic and less informative coverage.

"On balance, these shows are not the end of civilization," said George Rhoades, associate professor of communications at the University of Texas at Arlington. "But I think it confuses, because reality becomes mixed with fiction. Often the TV version becomes reality for people."

James Breslin, a spokesman for "America's Most Wanted," said his show is nothing more than entertainment, with a purpose.

That purpose is to capture criminals like McDuff, who was apprehended Monday in Kansas City, Mo., to become the show's 208th success story out of 469 re-enactments since 1988, Breslin said.

"I think people are fed up enough that they are willing to call in," Breslin said. "They are tired of the regular sitcom-drama fare. And there has always been an interest in crime in this country."

A man called police after he watched a tape of the show over and over to make sure the man he knew as garbage worker Richard Fowler is McDuff, who was condemned to die for killing three Fort Worth, Texas, teen-agers. His sentence was commuted to life in prison after the Supreme Court overturned the death penalty in 1972. He was paroled in 1989.

McDuff is a suspect in the slayings of two Waco, Texas, women, and police want to question him in the disappearances of several other Texas women.

"Our view is that we help solve crimes," said Tim Rogan, coordinating producer of "Unsolved Mysteries," which was first broadcast in 1987. "We try not to be sensationalistic, but paint an accurate picture."

Added Marlene McCurtis, spokeswoman for "Rescue 911": "People in general are a little voyeuristic. They like reality, or what is perceived to be reality. And this type of show is cheap to produce. It's formula TV. Once you have one on, it's easy to reinvent the wheel."

Linda Lowrance, director of special programs at the National Victim Center in Fort Worth, said the shows are also helpful to victims' families.

Girl, 15, gets 22½ years in slaying try

HOUSTON (AP) — A 15-year-old girl sentenced to 22½ years in prison for trying to kill a grandmother may have to serve only about two years of the term.

The girl, who was not identified because she is a juvenile, was sentenced Wednesday in the attempted capital murder last October of Juanita Baird, 63. She was accused of being hired to kill Mrs. Baird in a scheme allegedly devised by the woman's daughter and grandsons.

After serving time in the Texas Youth Commission facility until she is 17½, she will be returned to State District Judge Robert Lowry's court for a hearing, prosecutors said.

If she has stayed out of trouble, Lowry could decide to release the youth on parole until she is 21. But he also could send the girl to an adult prison to finish her sentence.

The girl became the fifth youth sentenced in the case.

Three of Mrs. Baird's grandsons, ages 13 to 17, were sentenced to 15-year terms after pleading guilty to charges. A 14-year-old who was also hired to kill the woman was sentenced to 20 years by a juvenile court jury.

Attempted capital murder charges are pending against Mrs. Baird's grandson, Joseph Wilson, 18, and the woman's daughter, Barbara Wilson, 41.

Testimony during the other cases suggested that Mrs. Wilson may have launched the plot by encouraging her sons to kill their grandmother. But an exact motive has not been revealed.

The 13-year-old son testified that they first got another teen to sneak into Mrs. Baird's home to commit the murder. Testimony suggested he entered the house, but then became frightened and fled.

The 13-year-old grandson said he then enlisted the help of a 14-year-old friend, who in turn brought the girl into the scheme.

Gallery shows 'vessel' in clay

Staff report

Six artist's interpretations of "vessel" in clay form will be on exhibit at Gallery 1114 beginning Saturday and continuing through June 18. The show opens Saturday with a reception for the artists from 7-10 p.m. At 2 p.m. Sunday there will be a gallery talk by John Harmon and a poetry reading by Larry Griffin.

Harmon, co-founder of Gallery 1114 in 1982 and ceramics instructor at Midland College, will be showing a group of small vessels which define space.

Salt vapor glazed porcelains and polychrome earthenware vessels by gallery member Carol Bailey and raku Frankenstein pots by gallery member Boyd Harris also will be featured at the show.

Ricky Chou's series of teapots in tree form were created "with tree always in mind" after seeing trees cut down and wanting but not being able to save them.

Bob Grant's electroplated porcelain forms explore the vessel as a container for ideas and John McBurney's architectural and natural forms emphasize color and surface texture.

Gallery 1114, located at 1114 N. Big Spring, is open 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Wednesday-Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. Sunday. The public is invited to all Gallery events.

Jordan earns Bess Truman award

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — The Bush Administration's contention that federal programs of the 1960s and 1970s caused the recent riots in Los Angeles is ridiculous, a former Texas lawmaker said.

"'I know I've been here 20 years, but I haven't done anything,'" Barbara Jordan said, mocking Republican leaders' statements. "Now, that's true."

Jordan, who in 1972 became the first Southern black elected to Congress since Reconstruction, spoke to about 300 people Thursday at Truman High School in Independence, where she received the second Bess Wallace Truman Award.

In her careful, measured speaking style, Jordan said people long for leaders of substance who consider the responsibilities of leadership before seeking office.

Jordan, 56, said Harry Truman wrote that presidents cannot always be popular.

"Wouldn't he be appalled today to see the President of the United States yielding and bending to every wind that blows," Jordan said. "Popular opinion is not a reliable tool for government."

Truman, the 34th president, faced what Jordan called life-and-death decisions for the nation, many in the first six months of his administration.

"It took President Bush three years to know we were in a recession," she said to applause and laughter.

Harry and Bess Truman defined values needed for public service: honesty, optimism, courage and fairness, she said. Some people still possess those qualities, but "are they in public service or public office?" she asked.

Margaret Truman Daniel presented the award during the week commemorating the 108th anniversary of her father's birth.

Mrs. Daniel said she had talked at length with Jordan, now a professor at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas.

"She is one of the most brilliant and exciting people I have ever met," Mrs. Daniel said. "She is tops in this country or any country you could think of."

U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor received the first Bess Wallace Truman Award two years ago.

Judge rejects school tax collection bar

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal judge Thursday again rejected an order to stop collection of this year's school property taxes, an action that may move to New Orleans the next round in the fight over Texas' public school finance system.

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin of Austin denied a request to halt the collection of the taxes and refused to set a trial date on the case brought by several taxpayers.

Jim Keahey, attorney representing the taxpayers, said he would appeal to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. The attorney general's office also will appeal findings Nowlin made against the state, said Assistant Attorney General Toni Hunter.

Last week, Nowlin held that continued collection, of what has been determined by the Texas Supreme Court as an unlawful tax, violates the federal Constitution.

But he said an injunction against future collection of the taxes was not proper "at this time." He said it could have a disastrous effect on school children.

Keahey said that ruling addressed only a requested temporary injunction, and so he asked that Nowlin schedule a trial on a request for a permanent injunction blocking collection of 1992 taxes.

But Nowlin dismissed Keahey's motion as moot.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis said the attorney general should immediately appeal Nowlin's declaration that the state has violated the U.S. Constitution.

They said the order may become final and unappealable, if an appeal is not filed by next Monday.

"In that event, the 1992 CED (county education district) taxes would be uncollectible, unless taxpayers made voluntary payments," Bullock and Lewis said in a letter to Attorney General Dan Morales.

FAMILY MATTERS

Mother's Day brings feelings of confusion, pain, guilt

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I need some help on what to do about Mother's Day. My mother was not your "Brady Bunch mother." She was critical, negative and self-centered. She was always too busy with her own interests to be involved with the children. All the time she said (and still says to this day) that she was a wonderful mother. Yes, she did some things for my brother and me, but she made us feel like we "owed her" for all those little things. Everything that she did do would have a "guilt price."

May

I don't want to go on and on about her. I have reached some level of peace with her by mostly avoiding her. Each Mother's Day I'm faced with the dilemma of her expectations (a card and a telephone call), my feelings about her, and "Honor your mother and father." I spend hours at the card shop trying to find a card that just says something simple like "Happy Mother's Day" and not anything emotional. What can I do to feel better about all this? GUILTY

DEAR GUILTY: Resolving apparently unreconcilable feelings, religious teachings and social mores can be very difficult. Robert Fulghum shares the following story of a sermon he delivered one Mother's Day while becoming aware of his own feelings about his mother: "One memorable Sunday I said for all those who had wonderful mothers or who thought motherhood in general was just wonderful, I would like to say, 'WONDERFUL.'

But if this isn't you, then I gave a kind of moot quiz — asked some questions without asking for a show of hands.

1. How many of you find yourself involved in hypocrisy of the most uncomfortable kind around Mother's Day?

2. How many really don't like — or even really hate — your mother, or hate being the mother you are?

3. How many really don't like or even really hate your children?

4. How many don't really know your mother at all?

5. How many of you find Mother's Day painful, especially when it involves thoughts and memories of such matters as adoption, abortion, divorce, suicide, rejection, alcoholism, alienation, abuse, incest, sorrow, loss and words like stepmother, mother-in-law and unspeakable obscene references to motherhood?"

He reports that the congregation sat very still. He looked at them in his pain and they looked at him in their pain. There is no easy answer. Protect yourself; do what you believe you must. Dr. Paula Caplan's book, "Don't Blame Mother," may be of help in addressing your relationship with your mother.

One definition of honor is to show respect. Given your mother's treatment of you while you were growing up, sending a simple card is "honoring her."

DEAR FAMILY: I have a precious 9-year-old daughter. We live in a Christian home and we have taught her from birth about God's love and we have showed her in many ways of our love.

The problem is she is so self-conscious of every possible thing — clothes, shoes, socks, hair, face and even her legs. She has a few problems with kids at school and the neighborhood, mostly because of jealousy.

She takes thing so personally. My husband and I work with her constantly on her attitude as well as building her up on her qualities. She is very loving (when she thinks there is nothing to worry about), she is sensitive to others who are less fortunate, etc. She has always been stubborn, but we excused it as part of her personality and also inherited from both sides of our families. I see areas where it is hurting her in her relationships with others and with herself.

Discipline has not worked too well. We've spanked or we have grounded her from fun things and we've sent her to her room for "time outs." She never realizes what she has done. It is always someone else's fault or she has a reason! I feel guilty because I want her to be happy, to have many friends, and to most of all feel good about herself.

Evidently I haven't done too well because she feels none of these things. I've read every book I can find on raising children, building self-esteem, etc. Do you have any wisdom for us? Have I got a problem or is this normal? TIRED

DEAR TIRED: Parenting is one of the most difficult jobs there is. You have read many books on the subject, and still find it very difficult.

I agree with you that it is very important for your daughter to experience herself differently. Dr. Stephen Glenn emphasizes the importance of perception in his book, "Raising Self-Reliant Children." Among the seven significant building blocks, four deal directly with perceptions and two others with intrapersonal and interpersonal skills.

I do not have any specific words of wisdom for you. When parents have tried as hard as you and your husband have, and experienced undesired outcomes, professional help may be the next step. Other issues may be at work here that are beyond simple parenting technique. I encourage you to seek family counseling through your minister or a professional counselor.

Speedo ad swims against current

By Fred Bayles

BOSTON (AP) — Here's a recipe for a political ad:

Take one candidate in a Speedo swim suit. Marinate him in a pool for three hours. Stir in the right "voice" along with flattering still photos, video and the appropriate music. Shake down to 30 seconds.

The Paul Tsongas ad titled "Swim" began last August with a concept: Tsongas swimming would be a good metaphor for the man and his candidacy. Producers Fred Woods and Mike Shea said the ad portrayed the former Democratic candidate as a determined outsider "not afraid to swim against the current." It also sought to dismiss doubts about Tsongas' recovery from cancer.

"It was different and it was genuine," Shea said. "Swimming was something he did every day. It showed this is a guy with guts and determination."

The 30-second spot was written and polished while an appropriate background was found: the unglamorous pool at Tufts University.

A film crew shot Tsongas from every conceivable position, swimming toward the camera, swimming away, from the side, from overhead. Dark trunks were chosen over flashier colors; Tsongas swam the butterfly, a stroke that emphasized his shoulder muscles.

"He was in the pool about three hours, until his fingers started to turn to prunes," Shea said.

Other shots showed Tsongas in a Senate committee with Sen. Warren Rudman, a popular New Hampshire politician. Newspaper headlines charted Tsongas' political victories. The final visual showed Tsongas surrounded by microphones and reporters after announcing his candidacy.

Tsongas never spoke. The authoritative narration was done by Al Gates, "a big voice from New York," Shea said. Gates read his part in a New York studio.

A final touch: an uplifting score written by commercial songwriter David Grimes.

Total production cost: $15,000 to $20,000.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Music therapy can be helpful to elderly

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: Can music therapy help seniors who are withdrawn and isloated?

ANSWER: Numerous doctors, therapists and patients believe so, as music therapy is gaining widespread credibility as therapy for frail or seriously ill seniors. They believe that it can make a difference between isloation and interaction; withdrawal and awareness; and chronic pain and comfort. Music therapy is currently being used on seniors who suffer from Alzheimer's and Parkinson's diseases, stroke, depression and other disabling conditions. Its value to Alzheimer's patients is becoming increasingly important, as often the only link to their forgotten emotions and memories is music. New studies indicate that healthy seniors can also benefit from music therapy as well. By helping to keep them alert and creative, their quality of life is both enhanced and improved.

Edwards

QUESTION: My Social Security checks are direct deposit. What if my bank closes?

ANSWER: As long as your financial institution is covered by federal deposit insurance, you have no need of concern. In most instances involving bank failure, the FDIC has been able to find another bank to acquire the failing one. Usually the bank opens the next day as a branch of the acquiring institution and your money is immediately available to you. In the case where there is no potential bank buyer, Social Security, if time allows, will contact depositors whose checks are on direct deposit and ask their preference of an alternate banking choice. Or the FDIC will ask other local banks to accept upcoming direct deposits and then notify depositors as to which bank has received their accounts. At this time depositors so desiring may change banks. If a bank fails after a deposit is credited to an account, all the money in the individual's account is treated the same. The FDIC will provide the depositor a check for the full amount of the account up to the $100,000 insured level, providing another bank does not take over within three or four days.

QUESTION: My father is 73 and has taken sleeping pills for over a month. Are they addictive?

ANSWER: Numerous physicians warn that seniors taking sleeping pills for more than a couple of weeks may become addicted to the drug. In fact, research indicates seniors may be especially prone to sleeping pill overdose, since many have difficulty sleeping.

More than 1 billion sleeping pills are sold annually. Most of these are various forms of benzodiazepines. Taken in moderation, these will not present a problem. However, those who use them should be careful, since many varieties can be physically addictive, requiring higher dosages over time, for the same effect.

Studies indicate that numerous seniors have difficulty with sleep, not because of aging, but as a result of pain from arthritis, boredom or other causes. The danger of abuse becomes a reality when seniors look to a sleeping pill instead of dealing with the direct cause. If your father starts experiencing confusion or becomes lethargic, contact your physician.

Skin can be 'fragile'

Associated Press

If you are over 65 and the backs of your hands and arms bruise easily, more than likely it's due to "fragile" skin. This condition usually is not caused by poor diet or vitamin deficiency, but more often by sun, aging and sometimes by the use of cortisone creams or tablets. If this condition exists, even a slight blow can cause bruising. Fragile skin is a permanent condition, but it is not generally a sign of a more serious disorder.

Murder trial sparks write-in campaign in support of doctor

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was horrified to read in the Wilmington, Del., paper that Dr. Jack Kevorkian was ordered to stand trial for first-degree murder for helping two terminally ill women commit suicide in Michigan last year.

Van Buren

Please send me names and addresses where I may write to protest this injustice, and if you feel as strongly as I do in this matter, then please ask your readers to write. Why don't the states go after the drug pushers — not God's angels? Thank you. — CLAIRE H. MATHES, NEWARK, DEL.

DEAR CLAIRE: Letters of protest can be addressed to: Richard T. Thompson, Prosecutor, 1200 N. Telegraph Road, Pontiac, Mich. 48053 — or to the Legislature of the state of Michigan (or both). I'm sure they will be interested in public opinion about a subject in which so many have a passionate and personal interest.

DEAR ABBY: I was delighted to read the compassionate remarks of the New York dentist who said he always tries to work out solutions to financial problems with his patients by either reducing his fee or allowing the patient to pay whatever he can afford over a period of time.

But that's not the way it works in Florida! I am an instructor at Brevard Community College, and just before Christmas I contacted the Brevard County Dental Society, asking that they extend the Christmas spirit to one of our students — a single parent, on the dean's list — who is struggling to become a teacher. She works at home doing electronic assembly so that she can mother her three youngsters. She always smiles, but her wisdom teeth are hurting and she needs to get them out, but hasn't the money to pay "up front," as the dentists here demand. She did offer to make monthly payments.

I explained this to the person who took my call at the Dental Society. An appointment was set up. I was ecstatic!

But when she went there, the dentist noticed that she smoked, so he told her it would cost $1,600 — to be paid in advance! When she said that she couldn't pay $1,600 in advance, she was told, "If you can afford to smoke, you can afford to pay in advance." What do you think? — DEPRESSED IN MELBOURNE, FLA.

DEAR DEPRESSED: I think the dentist who decreed that if she could afford to smoke, she could afford to pay her dentist bill in advance, should be hauled up before the county and state dental societies and dealt with accordingly. If there is not a penalty for such unprofessional conduct, there should be.

DEAR ABBY: On behalf of my sister-in-law, Myrtle, I submit the following limerick in retaliation for the one about the old lady named Myrtle who bought herself a new girdle:

There was a fat lady named Abby
Who sat on her cute little tabby.
The cat took a chunk
Out of Dear Abby's rump
Now Abby's not nearly so flabby.

— SUSAN BLACK, LUMBER BRIDGE, N.C.

This one's for everybody, from teens to seniors! To purchase Abby's new booklet, "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It," send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Graduation dress gets a barely passing grade

By Erma Bombeck

The class of 1992.

They look so egalitarian all lined up in their matching robes and in their mortarboards that were never designed to fit human heads and should have come with staples.

Bombeck

But it is what's underneath the robes that is important. Next to their bodies they are wearing weeks of tears and decisions, their mothers' exhaustion, their fathers' uncaring, their grandmothers' disapproval all rolled up in a dress or suit they will wear once and discard.

It is not easy picking out an outfit to wear under a robe.

If it's a dress, it can't peek out the bottom and show. People will see it!

It has to be worn with matching shoes, and it has to be something that you can get out of quickly after graduation and slip into something comfortable.

Every year in this country, millions of dollars are spent on these special trappings that have a limited viewing life.

One mother wrote last year that she let her daughter do the preliminary shopping for her graduation dress.

She came home and reported she had found a one-in-a-million bargain. The dress had been $150 and was marked down to a hundred.

Actually, it had to be altered, but that was only another $38. It needed jewelry so it wouldn't look so plain if the graduation gown should happen to be cut low. Since it was an unusual color, the shoes would have to be dyed to match.

Special underwear would be required, as it was off the shoulder and you wouldn't want to pin the bra or slip straps. It cried for matching hosiery at $4.50 a pop.

At graduation, the anxious parents climbed into the bleacher seats in the stadium to watch the parade of graduates.

The girls who had never walked on anything but asphalt or wall-to-wall carpeting, or worn anything on their feet other than Nikes, Adidas or flipflops, wobbled unsteadily on the heels dyed to match the mystery dress. On the wet stadium field, their heels sunk into the mud.

She strained to find her daughter. "Only an astronomer's telescope could have helped in making our child materialize," she wrote. "Out of the hundreds who weaved down the aisles, they looked like drones."

Actually, it's a ritual she should have been used to. She had been through her daughter's graduation from pre-school, kindergarten, sixth grade and now eighth grade. She still had junior high, high school and college commencements ahead of her.

It could be worse. Think how long it would take to buy a graduation dress if it showed.

Creosote ties safe for vegetable beds

Creosote-treated ties are safe for use in raised vegetable beds, according to a study completed in San Antonio.

Kiker

Calvin Finch, horticulturist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, worked with San Antonio Master Gardeners and researchers at the Southwest Research Institute in testing soil around these beds.

"No creosote components were found in the soil we tested," Finch said. "If we had found creosote in the soil, the next question would have been, do the vegetables take it up. But we did not find any."

Creosote, or coal tar, is a wood preservative and is highly toxic to wood-destroying pests. The safety of the ties has been questioned because of the migration of creosote into other substances, he said. Creosote has components that have been described as carcinogens, he said.

Soil samples from five raised-bed vegetable gardens ranging in age from 1 to 15 years were obtained from several sites around Bexar County. The samples were taken 4 inches deep and 2 inches from the tie. At least two of the gardens had ties that appeared to be bleeding creosote or sap from the wood, Finch said.

"We picked that sample because it was close to the tie and within the active root area of the plant," he said.

A sample of liquid creosote and a piece of new tie were obtained from Union Pacific to serve as standards. The materials were then analyzed to a sensitivity of 660 parts per billion by Southwest Institute laboratories.

No creosote was detected in the soil, Finch said.

This year he plans to do a demonstration on landscape timbers because there is a question about whether anything leaches from the timbers. Wood products experts familiar with the timbers feel there are leachates, but there is no definitive research on the subject, he said.

U.S. may once again allow Nicaragua to export meat products

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has proposed that Nicaragua be restored to the list of countries eligible to export meat products to the United States.

Nicaragua was removed from the list in 1989 because USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service employees were unable to make on-site reviews there "since their personal safety could not be assured," according to a news release.

In April 1990, Nicaragua requested that it be restored to the list of eligible beef-exporting countries.

"Since then, we have conducted a thorough review of the country's inspection system and believe it to be at least equal to the U.S. system," said Dr. Donald L. White, associate administrator of the food safety service.

The proposal to relist Nicaragua was published recently in the Federal Register. Public comments on the proposal should be sent to USDA by next Friday.

If Nicaragua's eligibility is restored, that country would export an estimated 23.3 million pounds of beef products to the United States. That represents about 0.06 percent of the total U.S. meat production, White said, and would have little if any impact on domestic producers.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The creation of "designer grains" to boost the value of cereal crops was the focus of a workshop this week in St. Louis.

"There is a large, untapped potential to use genetics to add value to both the feed and food produced from some of our most basic grain crops," said Charles F. Murphy, national program leader for grain crops at USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

About 40 scientists specializing in plant genetics and animal and human nutrition are to attend the workshop.

They will explore the possibilities of genetically designing corn, sorghum, barley and oats for specific uses.

The workshop also will lay the groundwork to change feed grains to increase their value for human and animal nutrition, said Robert R. Oltjen, ARS associate deputy administrator for animal sciences.

"There is tremendous potential to add value to grain crops prior to harvest," Oltjen said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agricultural Marketing Service is proposing to raise classing fees charged to cotton growers and fees charged to the industry for other related services.

Under the proposal, grower-fee classification services would be $1.92 per bale, an increase of 19 cents from last year. Grower fees have been $1.73 per bale since 1989, the Agriculture Department said in a news release.

"USDA is proposing certain other fee increases for other cotton classification, fiber testing services and for practical forms of cotton standards," the release said. "These increases are necessary because of higher costs for rent, utilities and mandated salary increases."

Nets deny reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The New Jersey Nets continued Thursday to deny reports that coach Bill Fitch will be fired with one year left on his contract.

The New York Times reported Thursday that Fitch, who coached the Nets to their first playoff berth since 1986, will be replaced because management thinks Fitch has lost control of the team.

"Whether it was his fault or not, it was apparent that Bill had lost control of the team," an unidentified management source told the newspaper. "Actually, the problems go back to last season, but everyone realized that something had to be done."

Nets spokesman John Mertz said Thursday the Nets have not changed Fitch's status.

"Bill Fitch is under contract with the New Jersey Nets to coach the team," Mertz said. "No decision has been made to change his status."

The Nets finished 40-42 last season and were eliminated by the Cleveland Cavaliers in the best-of-5 first round in four games.

Players Chris Morris and Derrick Coleman defied Fitch on several occasions this year regarding substitutions and Fitch received a lot of criticism for his handling of first-round draft pick Kenny Anderson.

Former Detroit coach Chuck Daly and former Atlanta coach Mike Fratello are rumored as leading contenders for the Nets job if it should open.

Wranglers hammer Angels

Painter holds Midland hitless through six innings

■ Wichita evens the five-game series with Midland behind the strong outing of Wrangler starter Lance Painter.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

For anyone interested in the good and the bad, the pretty and the ugly, the sublime and the not-so-sublime of minor league pitching, Thursday night was a night to behold.

Check these numbers from Wichita's 10-5 win over Midland at Angels Stadium:

■ Wichita starter and winner Lance Painter (4-1) threw six innings of no-hit ball, but walked the lead-off Angel in three consecutive innings.

■ Midland starter and loser Phil Leftwich (0-1) walked the bases full in the fifth inning before giving way to reliever Marvin Cobb.

■ Cobb yielded a bases-loaded triple to the first Wrangler he faced, and then threw three wild pitches in 2⅓ innings.

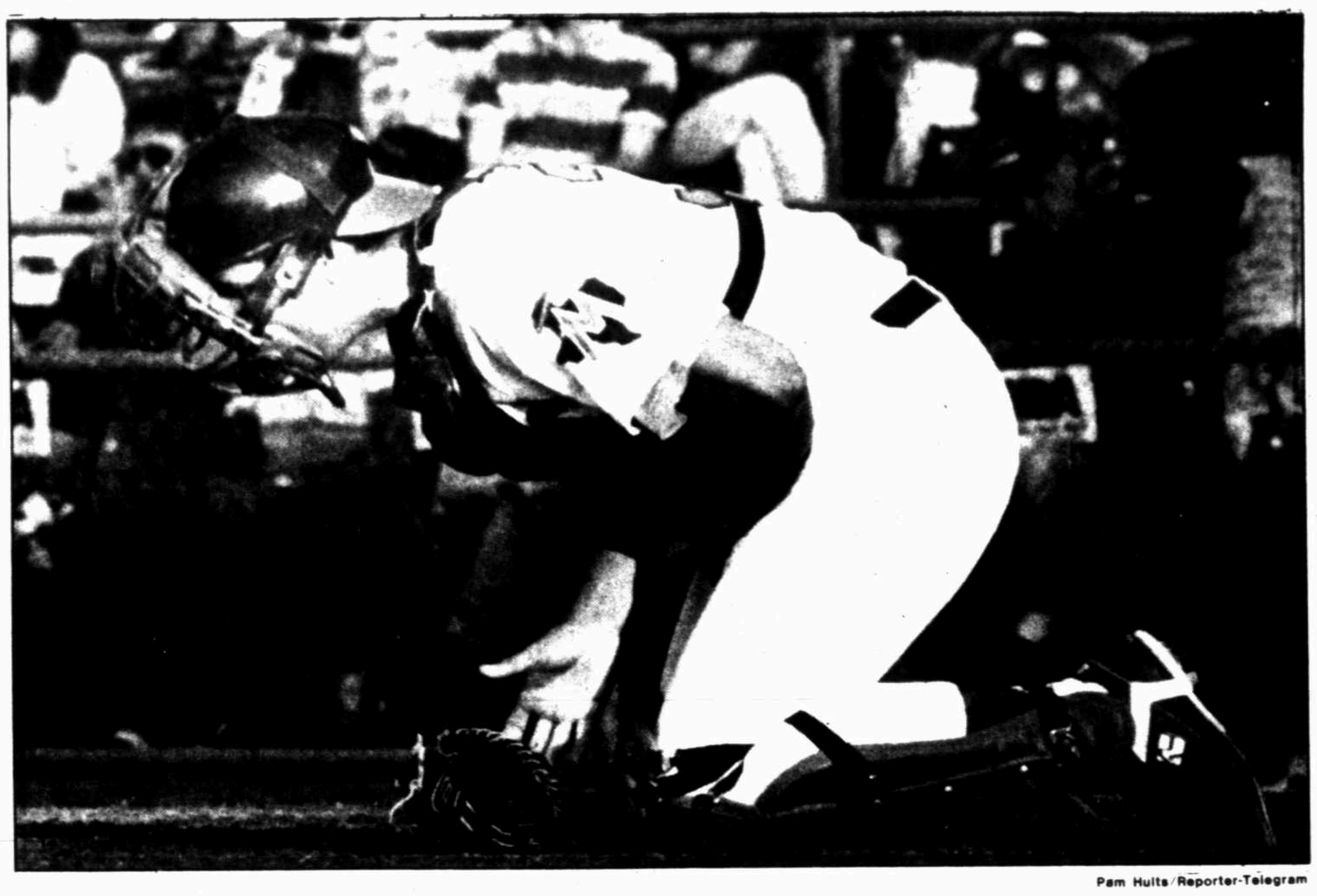

■ Midland closer Clemente Acosta, who has struggled this season with a 5.40 ERA through 8.1 innings pitched, came on and threw two innings of no-hit relief.

Painter and Leftwich breezed through the first three innings. The game was ony 45 minutes old before Wichita broke a scoreless tie in the fourth when right-fielder Tim McWilliam hit a two-run homer. Later in the inning, Mark Giezeke connected on the first of his two straight triples and scored on a single by Matt Witkowski.

Wichita scored four more in the fifth when Leftwich walked Darrell Sherman, J.D. Noland, McWilliam and Paul Gonzales. Cobb then gave up Giezeke's second triple as all three runs scored putting Wichita ahead, 7-0.

The Wranglers tacked on two more in the sixth and a 10th run in the seventh.

Midland actually scored its first run before putting up its first hit after a series of miscues in the sixth.

Pam Hults/Reporter-Telegram

Midland catcher Fausto Tejero shrugs off the pain of getting hit by a ball during the Angels game Thursday night against Wichita. The Wranglers ultimately defeated the Angels, 10-5.

After John Edmonds walked to open the sixth, Rod Correia reached on a fielder's choice. Following Ray Martinez' pop out to the second baseman, Walt McConnell hit into a fielder's choice, but after Correia was forced at second, Wichita shortstop Ray Holbert overthrew the relay to first, allowing McConnell on safely. Painter quickly retrieved the errant throw, wheeled and threw home but overthrew the catcher, allowing Edmonds to score and McConnell to reach second. Jeff Kipila grounded out one pitch later to end the inning.

The strange sixth saw the Angels score an unearned without benefit of a hit or RBI.

Ironically, it was Painter's error that allowed the run to score. Still, he had a no-hitter going, although he said he felt himself slipping.

"I knew I had a no-hitter going," Painter said. "I was just trying to put that behind me.

"I think I started getting the ball up. I'm not the kind of pitcher that walks five batters like I did tonight. I almost felt like I had too much control."

Two starts ago in Wichita, Painter threw 8⅔ inning against the Angels, allowing only four hits and three walks. After seeing both outings, Midland manager Don Long is impressed with the 25-year-old pitcher.

"I thought he threw the ball better in Wichita," Long commented. "He did a good job tonight, but he had more com-

Nelson Piquet hospitalized after wreck

■ Three-time Formula One champ sustains multiple fractures in first Indianapolis bid.

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Nelson Piquet, a three-time Formula One champion but an Indianapolis rookie, sustained multiple fractures to his lower legs and feet in a crash Thursday during practice for the May 24 Indianapolis 500.

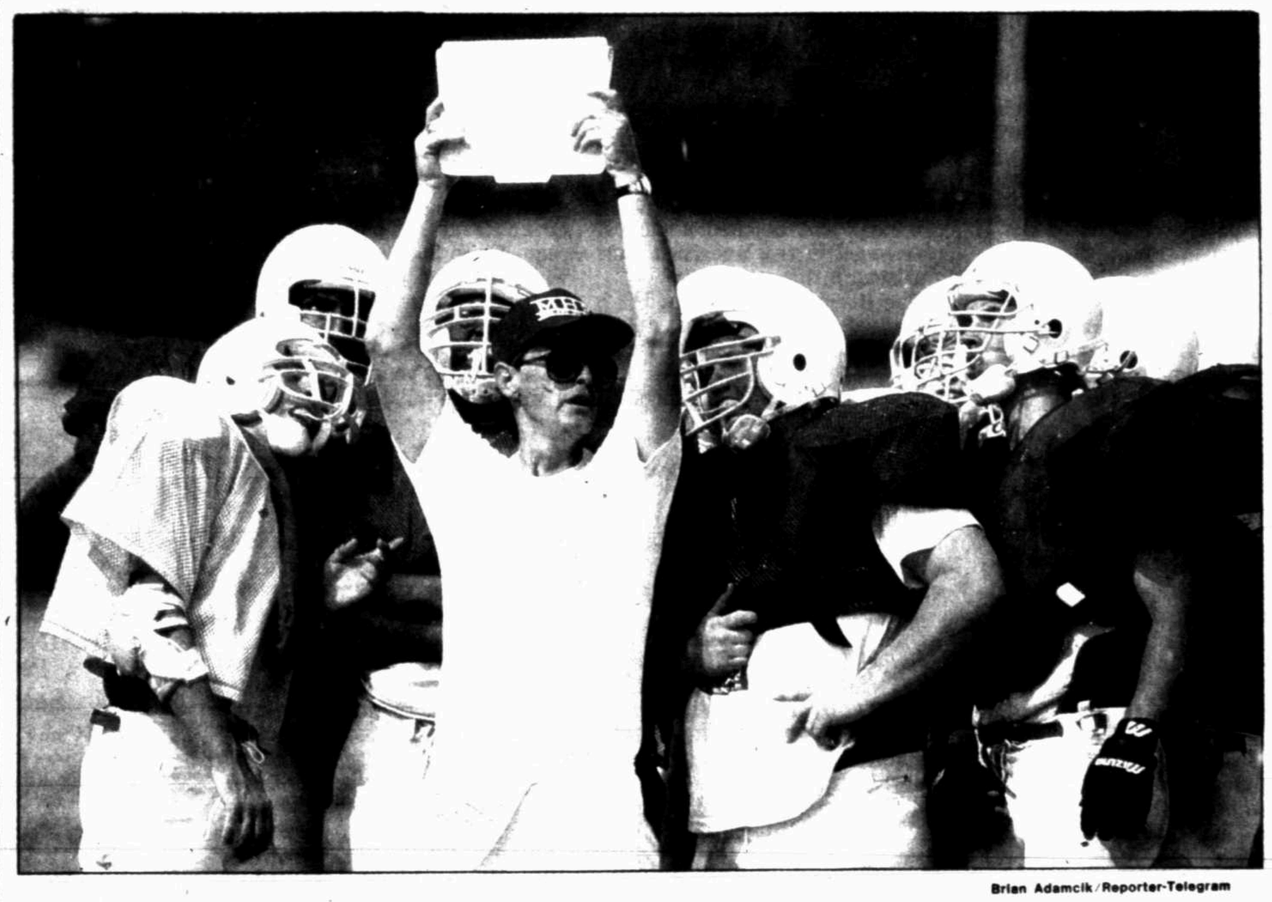

The Brazilian was taken to Methodist Hospital where Dr. Terry Trammell, an orthopedic specialist and director of medical services for the IndyCar series, was scheduled to operate later Thursday.

Piquet, reported to be awake and alert, also came away with a concussion from the Turn 4 crash.

Piquet, 39, had been virtually flawless on the 2.5-mile track during a winter test session, the three-day rookie orientation and the first five days of official practice.

But the treacherous Indy oval bit him Thursday afternoon as he worked his way up to speed moments after his crew

Lee's Mills finds her day in the sun

The agony and ecstasy often produced by sports gives the rabid fan a roller-coaster ride of excitement. For the athlete who endures such treacherous rides through the currents of competition, agony is often the springboard for ecstasy.

Williamson

Sometimes athletes only find the trail leading to agony — never finding the handle for the gold cup. Some athletes are like the kid born with the silver spoon in the mouth, winning time after time with pure talent. They live on the mountain-top of sports.

But the most rewarding experience in sports can come for those who taste bitter defeat before landing in the sunlight of victory.

Such is the case for Midland Lee junior Tanisha Mills, who became the Region I champion in the 400 meters last weekend in Lubbock. It took a solid year of darkness to find the light of the sun, but it happened.

For Mills it's hard to forget the Region I track meet of 1991. Mills was a raw, but talented, sophomore then with the high hopes of youth. The dream of winning a state berth in the 400 was shattered in a third place finish that ended with Mills scraping herself off the track after a desperate lunge at the tape in a failed battle for second place — and that coveted state berth.

The physical scars from Mills' spill in 1991 would go away rather quickly, but now she faced that long road back, searching for the sun in a night run through the next year. It's on this road where athletes find what they are made of. Mills is made of championship stock.

Prior to the Region I meet, Mills refused to relive the pain of the 1991 crash and burn.

"I'm putting all that behind me this year," Mills would say. "I'm going on to new things. I'm not going to look back."

She had traveled the road. She was ready. Then it was time to produce.

On Friday in the Region I prelims, Mills won her qualifying heat by 13 yards, but went into Saturday's finals with only the third best qualifying time. Naturally, onlookers had some reasons for concern. There was a distinct possibility of another third place finish and more physical and mental scars to tote around for another year.

Mills seemed unconcerned, however.

"I feel good. This (winning her heat by a wide margin) helps my confidence. I'm ready," Mills said in quiet tones.

The Finals: Mills produces a career best 54.91 in a howling wind that would have canceled America's Cup. Mills wins by yards — not by inches.

"Last year is behind me," Mills said after the win. "I woke up and saw the wind. That made me happy. I felt I was stronger than some of the other competitors and this would help me."

So, Mills is moving on to something new — the state meet in Austin, May 16. Who knows what that experience will bring? The agony and ecstasy of sports can strike at any level of competition.

But for now, Mills is running under the sun. That road of night — with its twists and turns — has successfully been traveled again by another athlete.

Aguilera wild as O's halt Twins

BALTIMORE — Joe Orsulak scored the winning run on a wild pitch by Rick Aguilera, capping a four-run, ninth-inning rally that lifted the Baltimore Orioles past the Minnesota Twins 5-4 Thursday night.

Aguilera's wild pitch, the Twins' fourth of the game, gave the Orioles their eighth win in nine games and improved their home record to 12-2.

With the Orioles trailing 4-1, Glenn Davis opened the ninth with a single and Randy Milligan doubled. David Segui followed with an RBI single and was replaced with pinch-runner Mark McLemore. Sam Horn then hit a pinch single scoring Milligan, and Horn took second on the throw.

Orsulak ran for Horn and Aguilera issued an intentional walk to Brady Anderson to load the bases. Pinch-hitter Chito Martinez drove in the tying run with a ground out to second.

White Sox 7, Red Sox 6

CHICAGO — Donn Pall, Scott Radinsky and Bobby Thigpen pitched shutout relief as the Chicago White Sox rallied from a 6-0 deficit created by 10 walks in the first two innings.

It was the fifth straight win for the White Sox.

Joey Cora's sacrifice fly in the sixth drove home the deciding run after Boston's Matt Young had squandered a lead presented him by the wildness of Charlie Hough and Wilson Alvarez. Chicago pitchers allowed only six hits but walked 15 batters.

Pall (1-1) went 3⅓ innings, allowing two hits and striking out four; Radinsky went 1 1-3, and Thigpen retired one batter for his seventh save.

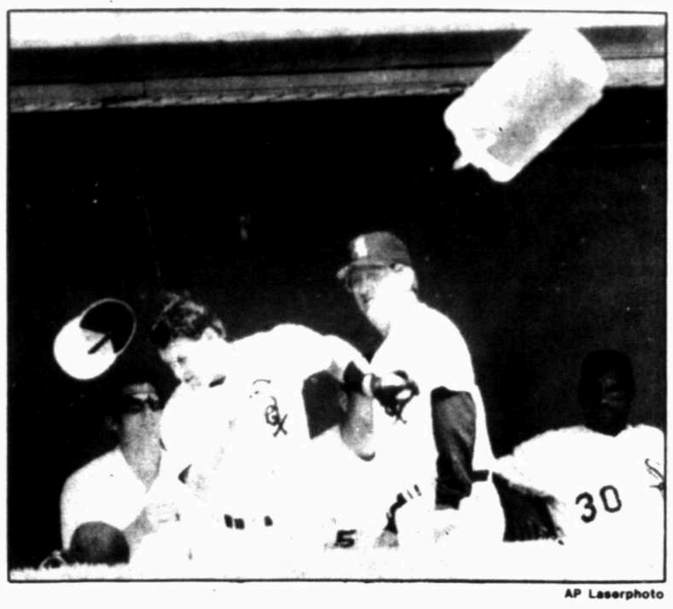

Hough lasted a third of an inning, walking home three runners and giving up one hit. Alvarez walked Tony Pena with the bases loaded to make it 4-0.

Athletics 6, Tigers 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bob Welch pitched seven shutout innings and home runs by Rickey Henderson and Mark McGwire helped Oakland complete a two-game sweep of Detroit.

Welch (1-1), the 1990 AL Cy Young award winner who endured his first sub- .500 season last year when he was 12-13, walked one and struck out none in notching his first win of the season.

He allowed five hits in his second start since returning from the disabled list. Jeff Parrett came on in the eighth and was tagged for a two-run homer by Mark Carreon, his third.

Steve Sax of the White Sox loses his hat while hurling a water cooler from the dugout after he was ejected in the first inning of Thursday's game against the Red Sox. Chicago went on to beat Boston, 7-6.

Royals 6, Brewers 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kevin McReynolds and Bob Melvin drove in two runs apiece and Curt Young recovered from a shaky first inning as Kansas City beat Milwaukee to hand the Brewers their fifth straight loss.

Young (1-1), who spent his previous nine seasons with Oakland and was making his first start in a year, gave up three hits and two runs on his first seven pitches. But he lasted 5⅓ innings, giving up 10 hits and three runs and running his career mark against the Brewers to 7-0.

Indians 8, Rangers 7

ARLINGTON — Rookie Kenny Lofton hit his first major league home run, a three-run shot in the fifth inning, as Cleveland sent the Rangers to their fifth straight home loss.

With the score 4-4, Junior Ortiz delivered an RBI single and Lofton hit loser Mike Campbell's first pitch into the right-field stands.

Trailing 8-4, the Rangers got a run in the sixth on Brian Downing's RBI single and added two more in the seventh on a run-scoring single by Kevin Reimer and Jack Daugherty's RBI double.

mand and located his pitches before."

Long said of Leftwich, his own starter who surrendered seven of Wichita's 10 runs in 4⅔ innings, "I didn't think he was throwing badly.

"Our pitchers have done a good job overall. I've got to give them some credit. We're going to continue to pitch well, but we're not going to be perfect."

Midland added three more runs in the seventh, two of which came on a triple by J.R. Phillips.

In the eighth, the Angels' offensive highlight of the evening came on a home run by Kipila, his league-leading eighth of the season. The homer — his third round-tripper in the last three games — was so well hit that left-fielder J.D. Noland didn't even move when he saw it coming and going.

Midland was riding a two-game winning streak entering Thursday's game. Had they won Thursday, the Angels would've broken out of an 18-day stay in the Texas League West cellar. Instead, in order to gain sole possession of third place over Wichita (12-15), the Angels (10-17) would have to win three straight to close out the series.

Rain stops U.S. clay games

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — For the second consecutive day, rain forced postponement of the singles matches in the $225,000 U.S. Men's Clay Court Championships.

With more rain expected Friday, organizers on Thursday moved four first-round doubles matches indoors to hard-surface courts at the Olde Providence Racquet Club.

Singles play is scheduled to resume Friday, with No. 2 seed David Wheaton scheduled to complete his first-round match with Jimmy Brown. The match was interrupted Tuesday night by rain showers that have not let up.

In Thursday's doubles matches, Stefan Kruger and Brad Pearce upset the third-seeded team of Wheaton and Jim Grabb 7-5, 6-1.

In the longest match of the day, Brian Garrow and Mark Woodforde came back after losing the first set to defeat Mark Keil and David Randall 6-7 (3-7), 7-5, 6-4.

In other first-round doubles action, second-seeded Steve DeVries and David MacPherson beat Matt Lucena and Bent-Ove Pederson 6-4, 6-3 and the Brazilian team of Ricardo Acioly and Luiz Mattar defeated Spain's Marco Aurelio Gorriz and Francesco Roig 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-4).

Baylor lines up candidates

WACO, Texas (AP) — More candidates for Baylor's vacant basketball coaching job could be brought in next week, says football coach Grant Teaff, who will assume athletic director duties next month.

The withdrawal of Western Kentucky's Ralph Willard leaves two candidates with interviews scheduled. They are Darrel Johnson of Oklahoma City and Louisiana Tech's Jerry Loyd.

The search committee gave its information on coaching candidates to Teaff Thursday. Teaff said he will look at the information over the weekend and decide which step to take next.

Gene Iba was fired March 27 as the Bears' basketball coach.

Cubs stomp Houston for third straight win

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa homered, doubled and scored twice and Andre Dawson had a pair of doubles and a single as the Chicago Cubs beat the Houston Astros 9-2 Thursday night for their third straight win.

Sosa led off the first inning with his first homer, then doubled and scored in the second.

Dawson doubled and scored in a four-run first, singled and scored in a three-run fourth and doubled in the sixth, leading to Chicago's ninth run.

Chicago batters treated Ryan Bowen (0-4) rudely, scoring five runs on five hits in one-plus innings. Bowen's ERA soared to 14.14 as a starter.

Mike Morgan (2-2), who allowed a pair of runs in the first inning, won his second in a row and went nine innings for the first time since last Sept. 24. He gave up seven hits and struck out two.

Houston is now 3-8 in its last 11 games, and is 1-7 on the road.

Jeff Bagwell's RBI single and Pete Incaviglia's run-scoring fielder's choice gave Houston a 2-0 lead in the first inning.

The Cubs bounced back in their half of the first, scoring on Sosa's homer, a wild pitch by Bowen and a two-run single by Doug Strange.

Mark Grace's second-inning single scored Sosa, who had doubled, and knocked Bowen out of the game. Derrick May's two-run single and an RBI single by Joe Girardi off Joe Boever made it 8-2 in the fourth.

Reds 4, Mets 2

CINCINNATI — Rob Dibble's sensational relief pitching and two RBI by Reggie Sanders made the New York Mets pay for shoddy fielding.

Dwight Gooden (2-3) allowed four hits and four walks over five innings, but took his second consecutive loss as the Mets committed three errors in the first three innings to help Cincinnati build a 4-1 lead.

They dropped a throw, booted a grounder and botched a pickoff play to let in two unearned runs and set up the other two.

The Reds' Chris Hammond (3-2) benefited from sensational defensive plays and good relief after allowing all three New York hits and both runs in 5⅔ innings.

Dibble came on for Scott Bankhead with the bases loaded and two out in the seventh and fanned Bobby Bonilla. He retired all seven batters he faced, striking out five, to pick up his fourth save.

The Reds went ahead in the first when Dave Martinez singled and stole second. Gooden then picked him off second, but Martinze reached third when Dave Magadan dropped Gooden's throw to third. Sanders followed with a sacrifice fly.

Braves 4, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Tom Glavine won his fifth game and Mark Lemke hit his fifth homer in 682 major league at-bats as Atlanta ended Pittsburgh's eight-game home winning streak.

It was only the second loss in 12 games for the Pirates this season at Three Rivers Stadium.

Glavine (5-1) joined San Francisco's Bill Swift as the only five-game winners in the National League. Jack McDowell of the Chicago White Sox leads the majors with six victories.

Glavine worked seven innings as the the Braves gained a split of their series with the Pirates, a rematch of last year's playoffs.

Mike Stanton, who struck out pinch-hitter Barry Bonds and Jose Lind with the bases loaded in the eighth inning, got his second save.

Glavine, who came into the game with 20 consecutive shutout innings, allowed a run in the first.

Giants 2, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Bill Swift became the National League's first six-game winner, staying perfect with a four-hit shutout that broke the Cards' four-game winning streak.

Matt Williams' two-run homer in the fourth off rookie Donovan Osborne (3-1) accounted for the only runs. It was the seventh homer of the season for Williams, who entered the game hitting .189 and the first given up by Osborne in five starts spanning 36⅓ innings.

Swift struck out four and walked one in while Osborne allowed seven hits and struck out ten in his eight innings.

It was the second shutout for Swift, who lowered his league-leading ERA to 1.29 after coming to the Giants from Seattle in the deal that involved Kevin Mitchell. He faced only 29 batters as the Cards hit into the three double plays.

Franco begins unique rehabilitation

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Julio Franco, the defending AL batting champ, will begin a unique rehabilitation program on his ailing right knee.

Douglas Kelsey said the Texas second baseman will be put into the "unloading" machine developed by the therapist five years ago to treat injuries such as Franco's bruised right knee.

"We have quite a bit of work ahead to get the program fine-tuned," said Kelsey, who spent Thursday examining the knee and outlining the procedure to Franco.

Franco will be loaded into Kelsey's hydraulic contraption in the first part of a two-step process.

Kelsey will begin by determining the maximum amount of weight to be exerted onto Franco's ailing knee, "the optimal loading zone." If too much or too little weight is added, the rehabilitation can be setback.

Once the zone is reached, the second baseman can begin simulating baseball-like movement.

"For example, he could move side to side. What we would do is mimic that for certain periods of time," Kelsey said.

Kelsey's goal is to get Franco's injured right leg to be able to handle as much of his body weight as the left side.

Right now, the left leg can take about 320 pounds of pressure, 120 pounds more than his actual weight of 203, while the right side is limited to 210 pounds.

"He ought to be equivalent to other side. When that will happen is the $64 million question," said Kelsey, who plans to test the leg's strength in seven to 10 days.

Franco also will undergo aerobic workouts to keep the rest of his body in shape.

Kelsey said he has asked Franco not to do any lower body exercises outside the therapists' supervision. He also has told him to avoid any activity which causes him pain.

"If it hurts to go upstairs, he's got to go a different way," Kelsey said.

Although the All-Star is on the team's 15-day disabled list, Kelsey said a return that soon "may be a little optimistic."

Kelsey said he developed the technique in 1987 and marketing began on it last fall. So far it is being used in several hospitals and private clinics around the country, he said.

Jockey Angel Cordero retires

Associated Press

NEW YORK — To horse players, he often was the Angel in the irons. Other times, he was a devil on horseback.

Nobody, but nobody, stirred bettors' emotions as did Angel Cordero Jr., who retired Thursday to become a trainer.

It was Cordero who held a sprinter named Bold Forbes together, literally, to win the 1¼-mile Kentucky Derby and the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes.

It was Cordero who was accused of everything but treason when he forced the Kentucky Derby winning filly Genuine Risk wide entering the stretch and won the 1980 Preakness on Codex.

When bettors won, Cordero was the consummate horseman. When he lost, he often was accused of dastardly deeds by people who couldn't get on a horse with a forklift.

"I loved the people even when they booed," he said. "Sometimes I lost my temper. When you get booed eight or nine times a day ... "

Cheer him or curse him, however, Cordero was a standout in a dangerous profession.

The record book shows he rode 7,076 winners, third only to the retired Bill Shoemaker (8,833) and Laffit Pincay (7,759 through Wednesday). Cordero's purse earnings of $164,571,847 were second only to Pincay's $165,158,943, also through Wednesday.

"Laffit called me last night — he was very sorry," Cordero — not always able to choke back tears — told a news conference at a mid-Manhattan restaurant.

Injury finally put the 49-year-old Cordero on the ground for good. By his reckoning, the Puerto Rican native was in 24 serious spills.

On Jan. 12, Cordero was involved in a four-horse, chain-reaction spill at Aqueduct. He suffered a broken left arm, three broken ribs and severe internal injuries that resulted in the removal of his spleen.

Doctors advised him to quit riding, at least for the rest of this year.

"I've always wanted to try training, and now is the time," said Cordero, whose second wife, Marjorie, a former jockey, is a trainer.

"There was always hope I'd come back to ride. It's not easy to quit."

Of Cordero's latest accident, Dr. Gary Walder, said, "The first 48 hours, it's been stated, and it's true, we thought he wouldn't be with us. Any further injury to his abdomen, and we don't think we'd be as lucky the next time."

"I'm sorry to be leaving the game of riding, but I'm happy to be staying with the game of racing," Cordero said.

"I hope I made everybody happy," said the man who rode his first race June 12, 1960, at El Comandante Racetrack in Puerto Rico and who rode his first winner in the continental United States at Aqueduct July 26, 1962.

Kentucky Derby wins on Cannonade (1974), Bold Forbes (1976) and Spend A Buck (1985) followed, plus a host of victories in major stakes, including the Preakness, Belmont and some Breeders' Cup races.

In 1988, he was inducted into the National Museum of Racing's Hall of Fame at Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

"Not only a great rider, but I never knew anyone else as good at getting off a horse and telling you not only about the race, but about the horse itself," said trainer D. Wayne Lukas, who will saddle Twilight Agenda in the Pimlico Special Saturday at Pimlico. "He had a marvelous knack for a horse and what it was capable of doing."

Jockey Angel Cordero Jr., who announced his retirement Thursday, celebrates after winning the 1985 Kentucky Derby aboard Spend a Buck.

His biggest thrill, Cordero said, was winning the Kentucky Derby, but his best ride may have been in the 1976 Belmont aboard Bold Forbes. His breeding suggested speed, and Bold Forbes showed a lot of that in winning the Kentucky Derby. But he was hard-pressed in the 1½-mile Belmont, and many observers felt it was only the work of Cordero that brought the colt home ahead of the pack.

The best horse he rode was Seattle Slew, although not when the colt won the Triple Crown. "He was probably one of the best horses we ever had," said the man, who also rode Affirmed, but not in the 1978 Triple Crown, and the great gelding John Henry. Good horses he rode were a dime a dozen to Cordero.

From a controversial standpoint, the No. 1 horse in Cordero's career was Codex. In the Preakness, on that colt, he forced Genuine Risk extremely wide turning for home and beat her by 4¾ lenghts. Some people even saw it as a sexist act.

Cordero got hate mail and threats. His car had to be searched before he left Pimlico.

"It was one of the worst nightmares of my life that I won the Preakness and didn't get to enjoy it until years later," Cordero said.

Right after the race, however, while Cordero was being escorted to the press box for an interview amid growing outrage, he wanted to stop for an ice cream cone.

Bulls bounce back, 86-78

NBA Playoffs

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bulls don't have to thank their lucky stars they beat the New York Knicks. Instead, they can thank B.J. Armstrong.

Armstrong's six consecutive points down the stretch stopped the New York Knicks' bid for a playoff stranglehold Thursday night as the Chicago Bulls evened the best-of-7 series at a game apiece with an 86-78 victory.

Michael Jordan scored 27 points, but he had just six in the second half and missed three of four free throws in the closing minutes before Armstrong hit two clutch baskets and then a pair of clinching free throws with 19.2 seconds remaining.

"It's something you always dream of," Armstrong said. "You don't know when the opportunity will come, but you have to answer the call. We worked hard for a 12-point advantage and you don't want to let it go on your home court. We have a lot of pride."

Jordan was both displeased and happy.

"I felt good physically, but disappointed with the way I finished the game," Jordan said. "I was totally out of synch in the second half. I wasn't there when the team needed me.

"But I'm very happy other players like B.J. covered up my mistakes down the stretch."

The defending champion Bulls held a 12-point lead early in the final period when the Knicks rallied behind Patrick Ewing, who scored 34 points in New York's series-opening 94-89 victory. He was held to four points for three quarters before finishing with 16 points and 16 rebounds.

"We didn't execute offensively and we had too many turnovers," Ewing said. "I'm disappointed because it was a game we could have easily won. They turned up the heat and we had too many turnovers."

With 2:04 left, Ewing closed the Knicks to 79-78, but they didn't score again. Armstrong, who finished with 18 points, scored the next six points before Jordan's free throw finished it.

"We had a great opportunity to win this game but we couldn't convert or execute the last two or three minutes," Knicks coach Pat Riley said. "The pressure was out there tonight, but we just didn't handle it."

"Two tough games are good for us," Chicago coach Phil Jackson said. "We got scared a little when it got down to one point, but it's time for us to step up to playoff pressure."

Xavier McDaniel finished with 15 points for the Knicks. Horace Grant scored 14, but Scottie Pippen had just six on 2-for-12 shooting for the Bulls, who travel to New York for games Saturday afternoon and Sunday night.

The Bulls led most of the way after Jordan scored 17 points in the first quarter.

There were five ties early in the first period before Gerald Wilkins drew his second foul against Jordan and was replaced by John Starks. Jordan then scored the Bulls' next 13 points for a 25-20 lead. It was 27-24 at the end of the quarter.

■ More Sports/9C

Armstrong hit a 3-pointer to make it 30-24, but the Knicks scored the next eight points to take a 32-30 lead. Armstrong tied it as the Bulls began a 16-5 run that gave them a 46-37 halftime lead.

The Bulls limited the Knicks to 13 points in the second period and 17 in the third and forced a total of 16 turnovers in the two periods. Chicago took a 64-54 lead after three quarters and made it 66-54 at the start of the final period on a basket by Scott Williams.

Then came the Knicks' rally that Armstrong helped turn back.

WRECK: Piquet freed after 10 minutes

made some adjustments to the car on pit lane. Piquet did one lap under 150 mph, then turned a lap of 212.304 before the incident occured in Turn 4 his next time around.

The 1992 Lola-Buick V6 from Team Menard appeared to be solidly in the racing groove before the rear end suddenly slipped to the left, sending Piquet on a fast-looping spin into the outside concrete wall nearly head-on.

A slow-motion videotape replay showed something flying from the rear of the car just moments before it entered the turn, but Mike Devin, technical director for the sanctioning U.S. Auto Club, said it was only a small piece of aluminum from another car and "doesn't seem to have any bearing on the accident."

Speculation continued that the accident was caused by something breaking in the rear suspension of the car or by a deflating tire.

It took safety crewmen and track medical personnel nearly 10 minutes to remove Piquet.

Emerson Fittipaldi, the 1989 Indy winner and a fellow Brazilian, rode to the accident scene in a pace car, then went with Piquet to the hospital before returning to the track for further practice.

"It's a very tough situation," Fittipaldi said. "Nelson was doing so well at his first Indy. He was very excited to race here. It's just a shame. I kept telling him he was in good hands with Dr. Trammell."

Piquet turned a 228.571 mph lap, his best of the week, several hours before the crash.

His was the sixth crash since the track opened for practice.

Kenji Momota, a rookie from Japan, was released Thursday from Methodist Hospital after spending the night for observation following a crash Wednesday.

Four-time Indy winner and defending champion Rick Mears, who was injured in an accident Wednesday, was treated for a cracked bone in his left foot and a sprained right wrist and released Wednesday afternoon.

Mears' wife, Chris, said the driver's wrist was "fine" and that the speedway medical staff would remove the temporary splint from the injured foot and evaluate his ability to drive on Friday.

"The doctors only put it (the splint) on to keep down the swelling," she said.

Team Penske owner Roger Penske said he expected Mears to be back in one of the team cars on Friday and ready to qualify when time trials open Saturday.

Momota, who came away from his crash with a bruised right leg and an apparent mild concussion, also must be examined by the speedway medical staff before being cleared to drive.

Rangers take another step toward Cup

NHL Playoffs

PITTSBURGH — The New York Rangers took Mario Lemieux out of the playoffs, and they're now threatening to do the same to the Stanley Cup champion Pittsburgh Penguins.

Kris King put in a rebound of Paul Broten's long slap shot just 1:29 into overtime as the Rangers withstood 50 Pittsburgh shots and three blown two-goal leads to beat the Penguins in Game 3 of the Patrick Division finals.

King got the game-winner for the second straight game as the Rangers won their second in a row without team leader Mark Messier, who was again out with back spasms. The Rangers regained home-ice advantage by taking a 2-1 series lead with Game 4 set Saturday in Pittsburgh.

The Rangers blew leads of 2-0, 3-1 and 4-2 as Pittsburgh peppered goaltender Mike Richter with 50 shots despite playing without NHL scoring leader Lemieux, who is out indefinitely with a broken left hand suffered when he was slashed by Adam Graves in Game 2.

The Penguins outshot New York 50-32 despite an early 9-1 New York edge, but the Rangers got the one that counted.

Bruins 3, Canadiens 2

BOSTON — Vladimir Ruzicka scored the go-ahead goal on a rink-length dash with 4.6 seconds left in the first period and the Boston Bruins, playing without star defenseman Ray Bourque, went on to beat Montreal.

The win pushed the Bruins up 3-0 in their Adams Division final series.

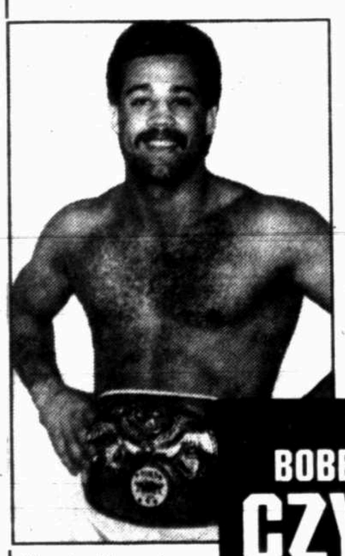

The Canadiens, who won the Adams Division championship in the regular season, were pushed within one game of elimination from the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Bruins, who have beaten Montreal in the Adams Division final in three of the last four years, can complete a sweep in Game 4 at the Boston Garden on Saturday night.

Ruzicka, a 39-goal scorer during the regular season, scored his third playoff tally on a power play, just three seconds before Russ Courtnall's slashing penalty was due to expire.

With perennial All-Star Bourque watching with a fractured right hand suffered in Montreal on Tuesday night, the Canadiens jumped to a 1-0 lead.

Prices slip

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished mixed Thursday in a market propped up by strong demand for home heating oil.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in June settled at $20.71 per barrel, down 6 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The price of oil has been falling most of the week, since crude hit its highs for the year on Monday then began backing off.

But traders said surprising strength in the heating oil over the last two sessions has prevented oil from falling too far.

Natural gas prices were mostly lower, with contracts for delivery in June settling at $1.484 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.2 cents.

OPEC steady

BRUSSELS, Belgium — OPEC nations held oil pumping steady in April, although they were still about a half million barrels a day above their spring output cap, according to the latest estimates.

Despite the overproduction by the cartel, crude prices have been stronger than expected, partly because of fears of an international embargo on Libyan oil sales.

In its report released Thursday, the International Energy Agency estimated the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' production at 23.5 million barrels a day in April, the same as in March.

Chain bankrupt

BOSTON — Child World Inc. which has struggled to stay out of bankruptcy court for more than a year, has conceded defeat, seeking protection from its creditors and announcing it would close 54 stores.

W. John Devine, chairman of the nation's second-largest toystore chain, said Thursday Child World was forced into bankruptcy because it could not persuade banks to maintain a $100 million line of credit essential for the stores' day-to-day operations.

Market slumps

NEW YORK — Prices closed narrowly lower on Wall Street Thursday, mimicking a drop in the bond market.

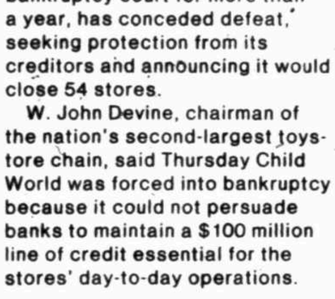

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 6.04 to 3,363.37.

Declining issues finished just ahead of advancers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Dollar recovers

NEW YORK — The dollar closed higher on worldwide markets Thursday after Germany's central bank decided against raising interest rates.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed down at 132.18 Japanese yen from 132.70 yen Wednesday.

Economic barometers increase

■ Fed's Greenspan said that while indicators show the economy is improving, 'we have a long way to go.'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economic barometers measuring unemployment, business confidence and sales at major department stores jumped in April, providing fresh evidence, analysts said, that the recovery will last.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said he saw various signs that the economy is improving but cautioned that "we still do have a way to go" before business activity returns to normal.

The reports Thursday came from government and private sector samplings of activity.

The Labor Department reported that the average number of Americans filing first-time claims for unemployment benefits dropped to its lowest level in 18 months for the four weeks ending April 25.

The decline to a four-week average of 409,750 came despite the fact that claims for the final week of the period rose by 11,000.

Analysts, who prefer to look at the moving average, said that over the last month there has been a significant downward movement in the number of newly laid-off workers. Before that, the figure had been stuck at the 450,000 level since last fall.

"The declines in jobless claims we saw through April seem to be indicating that the pickup in the economy is finally spreading to the labor market," said Samuel Kahan, an economist at Fuji Securities in Chicago.

In other favorable news, the nation's major retailers reported sales gains in April even though cold weather nipped into purchases of seasonal items such as air conditioners and lawn mowers.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc. said sales were up 26 percent over April 1991. Many other retailers reported performances that were almost as good.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce said its Business Confidence Index hit a record 63.3 in April, up from a 59.1 in the last survey taken in February.

The index, compiled from responses from 7,466 executives nationwide, showed that business optimism had tripled since December with business leaders more confident about the economy, sales prospects and employment opportunities at their firms.

The 63.3 reading was the highest since the chamber began the survey in May 1990. A reading above 50 is viewed as signalling an expanding economy while one above 70 denotes an economy expected to grow at a faster-than-normal pace.

"We anticipate this is not another false recovery signal like the one last spring," said U.S. Chamber President Richard Lesher, referring to the spring 1991 rebound, which fizzled in the summer.

Greenspan said he saw evidence of improvement for both the hard-pressed banking industry and for the economy as a whole.

"I would scarcely argue, however, that we are anywhere near back to normal," Greenspan said during an appearance before a bankers' conference in Chicago. "While I do expect that to occur within some reason-

OPEC's Subroto says he'll attend Earth summit

DALLAS (AP) — OPEC Secretary-General Subroto said Thursday he would attend the U.N. Earth Summit in Brazil next month but repeated the oil cartel's worry that the environmental debate is focused too narrowly.

"The problem of the environment is caused by poverty in the Third World," Subroto said at an conference of U.S. energy companies and investors sponsored by Southern Methodist University.

Improving the economic well-being of developing nations would slow population growth and environmental declines, Subroto said.

"Environmental policy should not be formulated in such a way as to retard economic advancement in the developing world," Subroto said.

Two weeks ago, the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries issued a statement urging more study of global warming, expected to be a key topic at the Earth Summit.

Some scientists blame a rise in the earth's temperature on the atmospheric effects of carbon dioxide emissions from the burning of fossil fuels.

OPEC has been invited to the Earth Summit as an "observer."

Subroto said the oil industry should "take the lead in the environmental debate."

"We cannot move in the oil industry unless the environmental credentials are accommodated simultaneously," he said.

But OPEC forecasts only a small decline in the role oil plays in the world energy mix during the next 25 years — from 48 percent to about 44 percent.

Use of natural gas and coal will each rise about 2 percent while coal, hydroelectric and other energy sources remain flat, Subroto said.

Oil prices will be influenced by the availability of capital to keep up explora-

Chamber plans annual trade show, Expo '92

Staff report

Staff members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce are preparing for Tuesday's Expo '92, the annual "business-to-business trade show" hosted by the chamber's Business Council.

More than 60 exhibitors ranging from electronics vendors to dude ranches, signmakers to office machine suppliers, will have booths in the Midland Center. The Expo begins at 9:30 a.m. with a ribbon cutting ceremony and doors open to the public at 10 a.m. Admission is free. The show closes at 7 p.m.

American prolongs cheap fares to Europe

NEW YORK (AP) — American Airlines, extending its newfound price-chopping ways, on Thursday prolonged a sale on summer fares to Europe.

Continental Airlines and USAir quickly matched American's move.

Other rivals were studying it, but some were clearly displeased with the move by American, which for months had railed against bankrupt airlines that cut prices — only to start slashing some prices itself this spring.

American began offering discount fares to Europe in March, then extended the deal in April. The sale was to have expired Wednesday night at midnight, but American reloaded the cheaper fares into the reservations computers, this time through June 5.

"It has been very successful in terms of interest and bookings," American spokesman Tim Smith said. He said

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor should leave high-cost brokerage

By Bill Doyle

Q: In October 1990, I put $37,000 of my simplified employee pension plan individual retirement account (SEP-IRA) into a mutual fund at a brokerage firm.

Doyle

On Jan. 22, 1992, I received a $78 invoice from the brokerage for a 1991 retirement plan fee. I phoned the broker and was told the invoice was a mistake and to ignore it. On March 13, I received a statement showing $82.85 of my fund shares had been redeemed for the $78 fee plus a $4.85 processing fee.

When I called the broker again, he said, "Sorry. This is a new rule. You have to pay two-tenths of 1 percent annually as a custodial fee."

I have other SEP-IRAs in two other mutual funds with another brokerage firm and my annual custodial fee is only $10. Would you recommend I sell the fund shares on which there is such a high fee and roll over to one of the other funds with the other brokerage?

A: You should get out of the high-cost arrangement under any circumstances. But it should not be necessary to go through a three-step process of redeeming the shares of that fund, rolling the money over to another brokerage and buying shares of one of the other two funds.

All three mutual funds you named in your letter have sales charges on the purchase of their shares. By doing what you propose, you would be hit with a commission when you buy shares through the other brokerage.

A trustee-to-trustee transfer would be a better move. The other broker can arrange for that particular account to be moved to his or her firm without a sales charge.

The unconstitutionally high $78 annual custodial fee is levied by the first brokerage — not the mutual fund. Several brokerages levy such charges, especially on customers who do not generate large commissions through active buying and selling.

Q: In 1989, my wife took a buyout from her job and retired. The company sent her an $11,500 lump-sum retirement plan distribution. On a broker's advice, the money was rolled over into an IRA and invested in a real estate limited partnership.

When my wife reached age 59½, we contacted the brokerage to arrange for her to begin withdrawing money from the IRA. We were told this could not be done because the limited partnership shares are no longer marketable.

Do we have any recourse against the brokerage for rolling over retirement money into an IRA that is illiquid? These days, I suppose everyone knows limited partnerships aren't very good investments.

A: Your last sentence is a contender for the title: "Understatement of the Century." Limited partnerships — LPs, for short — have been among the worst duds to come down the investment pike in decades. And real estate LPs were worse than most other types.

Besides not producing the income and capital gains touted by their promoters, there is no active secondary market for most LPs, where they can be sold at realistic prices. As a result, people such as your wife cannot get out without taking a huge financial beating. All this makes LPs unsuitable for IRAs and other retirement plan funds.

The broker did not follow the "suitability rule."

Your wife should take her ease to arbitration through the National Association of Securities Dealers, 33 Whitehall St., New York, NY 10004; the New York Stock Exchange, 11 Wall St., New York, NY 10006; or the American Arbitration Association, 140 W. 51st St., New York, NY 10020-1203.

Q: A client of mine went to his brokerage firm to withdraw $7,000 from his limited partnership. He was told there wasn't that much in the account. When he produced his brokerage statement, dated a month and a half earlier, listing his LP portfolio value at $100,000, he was told, "That was then. This is now."

What should my client do?

A: Go to arbitration, as mentioned above, and try to get it straightened out. Even the worst LP doesn't lose more than 93 percent of its value in a month and a half.

Microsoft sales and profits soar

By Bart Ziegler
Associated Press writer

REDMOND, Wash. — Like a mushroom colony nurtured by the Northwest's moist weather, Microsoft Corp. just keeps growing and growing and growing.

Sales and profits soared six-fold over the past five years. Its payroll, now topping 10,000, has been rising by 60 people a week. Buildings have sprung up so fast at its headquarters "campus" outside Seattle that even veteran employees get lost.

And Microsoft's domination of the personal computer software industry is so great that its products are found on about 90 percent of the world's PCs.

"It's the Standard Oil of our era," said Richard Shaffer, editor of the industry publication ComputerLetter.

But like that oil giant of the early part of the century, Microsoft's path may not be entirely paved with gold.

For one, the Federal Trade Commission is examining whether the company monopolizes the software industry. A government investigation led to Standard Oil's breakup in 1911, and Microsoft could face the same fate.

Microsoft also is battling a costly copyright infringement suit by Apple Computer Inc., though Apple was recently dealt a significant setback in the case.

Finally, erstwhile collaborator International Business Machines Corp. is dueling with Microsoft over the direction of personal computer software.

IBM is promoting a competitor to Windows, Microsoft's wildly successful product that makes IBM-type personal computers easier to use. And IBM's historic alliance with Apple last year was seen by many as an attack by the two largest personal computer makers on Microsoft's dominance of PC software.

But Bill Gates, Microsoft's co-founder, chairman and 36-year-old boy wonder, doesn't appear the least bit nervous.

In a recent interview, Gates expressed confidence that Microsoft would prevail in the Apple lawsuit and convince the government it is not monopolistic.

"They aren't certainly that high on my list of concerns," he said of the twin cases.

He also said Microsoft had little to fear in its competition with IBM, though he did not entirely dismiss the Apple-IBM alliance, aimed at creating a new PC software standard.

Microsoft's rivalry with the much larger IBM is a piece of computer industry irony. Microsoft's stupendous growth and dominance of the PC software market is largely a result of a decision IBM made 11 years ago.

IBM chose Microsoft's DOS software as one of three operating systems for the computer giant's first PC, introduced in 1980. An operating system is the base layer of software that controls a computer's internal functions, like storing files. It works with applications programs, which provide specific functions like word processing.

IBM promoted DOS more heavily than the other operating systems, and DOS went on to dominate the operating system market for both IBM PCs and "clones" of the IBM originals.

"It's not sufficient to be smart and a good software developer. You also have to have the right breaks. This was Microsoft's big break," said Rick Sherlund, a software analyst at Goldman, Sachs & Co.

IBM and Microsoft collaborated for years. They even worked together on an operating system to replace DOS, which failed to keep up with the tremendous surge in the power of PC hardware.

But IBM and Microsoft had a falling out over the new operating system, called OS-2. The original versions of OS-2 did not live up to billing and sold poorly, while Microsoft's Windows program took off after the company released an improved version in May 1990.

Seeing the astounding success of Windows — about 10 million copies of that improved version have been sold — Microsoft chose to stick with Windows as its future technology base rather than go with OS-2.

IBM stuck with OS-2. Part of the split was over pride, industry watchers say — IBM was tired of being beholden to Gates and Microsoft for the key software for its personal computers.

But for Microsoft, the split proved profitable. Not only does it own the rights to the hottest-selling PC operating system, but it dominates the market for Windows applications programs as well. Microsoft also plans to release by year end a more advanced version of Windows, called NT for New Technology, that will be a stronger competitor to OS-2.

IBM is not sitting still. It promises a marketing blitz for a much-improved version of OS-2 it started selling last month. And its venture with Apple is designed to produce an even more advanced operating system later this decade.

FARES: Move displeases rivals

(From 5C)

American was attracting business from people who might not otherwise have flown.

Delta Air Lines and Trans World Airlines were among those studying American's move. Other U.S. carriers that serve Europe — Northwest Airlines, and United Airlines — did not immediately return phone calls for comment.

Airlines typically match cheaper fares offered by competitors so they can avoid losing passengers.

Despite American's claim that it was doing well, executives at other airlines wondered why American would be slashing prices during the peak summer season if its bookings were really strong.

"We think there's been a pretty good demand for Europe this summer," Delta Air Lines spokesman Neil Monroe said. "We've been a little surprised at that type of activity. This is peak season and we're seeing pretty good loads."

An industry observer agreed American probably was not selling enough tickets.

"It appears that the bookings to Europe continue to be soft or that the public is not willing to pay the higher fares," said Tom Parsons, who publishes Best Fares, a newsletter based in Arlington, Texas.

American said its fares, which require a 14-day advance purchase, offer savings of up to 33 percent.

As an example, American said, an off-peak round-trip ticket from New York to London would be $448, while a peak round-trip ticket from Boston to Paris would be $548. The travel is good through Sept. 30, with prices somewhat higher from June 1 to Aug. 31 than they are during May and September.

able period in the future, we still do have a way to go."

Some economists are forecasting that the central bank will nudge interest rates down further on Friday if the Labor Department's report on unemployment for April proves disappointing.

Many analysts believe the jobless rate will remain stuck at a 6½-year high of 7.3 percent or perhaps go up to 7.4 percent. They believe a gain in the number of employed workers will be offset by an even bigger rise in the number of people looking for work.

For the week ending April 25, the number of Americans filing initial unemployment claims rose to 415,000 from a level of 404,000, where it had been for the previous two weeks.

But private economists preferred to focus on the decline in the four-week moving average, to its lowest point since Oct. 20, 1990.

Cynthia Latta, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill, said this improvement was the "best evidence we have had that the recovery is progressing."

The biggest drop in claims occurred in California, a decline of 6,907. Other big decreases occurred in Texas, Michigan, Virginia and Florida.

The state with the biggest increase in jobless claims was New Jersey, which had a rise of 3,837. Other states with large increases were Massachusetts, Tennessee, Illinois and Iowa.

tion and production, Subroto said.

"If capital is not available, the official increase of capacity that many countries have stated may not be reached," he said. "The consequence is supply may not meet demand" and prices would go up.

Up to $80 billion needs to be invested in OPEC countries in the next five years to keep up with world demand for oil, Subroto said. About twice as much is needed in non-OPEC countries.

"The industry must therefore present a compelling case to potential investors, who may otherwise be inclined to commit their funds to competitive sectors elsewhere in the world economy," he said.

Louisville was never aimed for Big West

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville never considered the idea of becoming a member of the Big West Conference in football despite published reports to the contrary.

Athletic director Bill Olsen said he was surprised to read last week that the university was among the schools involved in preliminary meetings on expansion of the Big West.

"I don't know where that came from," Olsen said Wednesday. "We didn't attend any meetings and we had no discussions. They did contact us, but we told them we had no interest. From a geographic standpoint, it makes no sense and we're better served being a major independent."

Olsen said Louisville plans to remain as an independent for the foreseeable future and is scheduling games into the 21st century.

Present members of the Big West are Pacific, Cal-Santa Barbara, Cal-Irvine, Long Beach State, San Jose State, Fullerton State, UNLV, Utah State and New Mexico State — with the University of Nevada coming aboard in the 1992 football season.

Schools expected to be approved for membership next week are Southwestern Louisiana, Northern Illinois, Arkansas State and Louisiana Tech.

Olsen said Louisville also recently rejected overtures from a new football alliance consisting of Cincinnati, East Carolina, Memphis State, Southern Mississippi and Tulsa.

San Antonio's triple-decker dome nearly done

By Rick Cantu
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Welcome to the Alamodome, a $177 million palace that soon will become the new home for David Robinson's Spurs, monster truck shows, and perhaps even Madonna.

Throw in the 1993 U.S. Olympic Sports Festival, a new football bowl game, Hulk Hogan, dance shows, Billy Graham, the Moscow Circus and professional hockey.

Hockey in San Antonio?

"We can dream, can't we?" said General Manager Carol Darby, whose dome will open April 1, 1993. "Even L.A. has hockey."

And San Antonio will claim one of the most versatile stadiums ever designed. Alamodome planners say the facility's mission is to offer something for everyone. The early returns appear favorable — the Alamodome is booked solid with conventions and sporting events through the year 2005.

The Alamodome will become the crown jewel of a Tex-Mex city that revels in tourism. The dome is a stone's throw from the Riverwalk and a short jog from the Alamo. One who walks through its unfinished corridors feels the triple-decker dome will carry the city through the 21st century.

And beyond.

"It's going to be the most state-of-the-art facility in Texas," said Russ Bookbinder, vice president of the San Antonio Spurs basketball team.

San Antonio sports officials can be excused for their unabashed enthusiasm. Construction of the dome is roughly halfway done. Architect Mary Burton said the Alamodome will be used for 24 types of events.

Yes, there appears to be something for everyone.

The San Antonio Sports Foundation, a group of 120 sports-minded citizens, spearheaded the effort to fund construction of the Alamodome. Their first major catch was the 1993 Olympic Sports Festival, which should anchor an impressive list of sporting events for the balance of the decade.

The Spurs will begin playing at their new home in the 1993-94 season. The San Antonio Riders of the World League of American Football likely will play a few football home games there next spring. The facility also will be used for high school sporting events, ice shows and pro tennis.

The key to the 65,000-seat stadium's versatility, Darby said, is the 12,000 retractable field-level seats. When the Spurs play, seats from one side of the stadium will be moved to courtside. When big-name NBA teams come to town — Chicago, Boston, Detroit — capacity will be 32,500. For most games, capacity will be limited to 20,000.

Darby sees unlimited potential for the Alamodome. Darby was the deputy stadium director at the Kingdome in Seattle before moving to San Antonio last May.

"The possibilities here are tremendous," Darby said.

The Alamodome will be unique in many ways. First, the building is rectangular. Second, the roof is lower than most dome stadiums. The Alamodome's metal ceiling stretches 170 feet from the ground, compared to 250 feet for the Houston Astrodome.

Dome critics contend that San Antonio, which recently was rejected for an NFL franchise, does not need such a large stadium. City officials said they will apply again, hoping the nation's ninth-largest city will be rewarded one in the next century.

The facility also is being criticizing for fouling off one major sport — baseball. The Alamodome will not be large enough to accommodate a baseball game. By constructing the building large enough for baseball, the price of the dome would have escalated by more than $24 million.

Also, San Antonio officials believe they had little chance to attract a major-league baseball team.

Baseball is not interested in expanding to cities that use domes, Darby said. The only way to get around that is to have a retractable roof, and that would have doubled the price. The only such stadium in baseball is the Sky Dome in Toronto, which came with a price tag of $490 million.

The Alamodome received a morale boost last week. The NCAA gave conditional approval of the city's bid to stage a bowl game. The first Alamo Bowl will be played on New Year's Eve 1993. The bowl already has signed a five-year contract to have the game televised by Raycom TV. The next major step is to gain a corporate sponsor to help with the minimum $750,000 payoffs each team receives.

The bowl will seek the best at-large teams it can sign next year. After that, there is speculation that the Alamo Bowl and Southwest Conference will strike a deal to have the SWC's No. 2 team represented at the game.

The Southwest Conference has taken a close look at the dome for other future considerations. SWC Commissioner Fred Jacoby said several SWC sporting events — ranging from football to indoor track — may be staged in San Antonio.

"We see a great deal of potential in that stadium," said Jacoby, who toured the facility last week. "And San Antonio is one of the largest markets in the country that does not have (an NCAA) Division I football program."

It did not take the SWC long to get involved. Houston and Texas Tech will play their 1993 football game at the Alamodome. Jacoby said Texas and SMU are discussing the possibility of moving their 1993 game to the Alamodome. The game currently is scheduled to be played in Dallas.

Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds is in favor of having Longhorns football games in San Antonio, but prefers not to move any Texas home games. There has been speculation that the Air Force Academy might play Texas in San Antonio, a city that boasts three Air Force bases.

FRIDAY, MAY 8, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Careful planning is the key to breaking new ground. Apply professional lessons learned in the past. A business boom is possible in August. Show real interest in a teen-ager's progress next fall. A family reunion brings great joy and an overdue reconciliation. A former co-worker or good friend lets you know about an unusual employment opportunity early in 1993. Show your appreciation in tangible ways.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: naturalist David Attenborough, actress Melissa Gilbert, comedian Don Rickles, President Harry S. Truman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Listen to a loyal friend's good advice and avoid making impulsive statements. Financial pressures begin to subside. Romance has its ups and downs but will improve if you are tactful. Be patient.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make the most of official and friendly connections today to advance your personal interests. You may have to dip into your financial reserves. Avoid making any large purchases or new commitments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may rank high on the list of people who wish to achieve success and wealth. Know who your true friends are. You have some competition where romance is concerned. Act confident.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Remain tranquil and let nature take its course. There appears to be little doubt that something wonderful is developing in the career or romance department.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are usually able to strike good bargains but will have to be shrewder than ever to do so today. Get together with the gang tonight and catch up on each other's news.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Contract signings and big decisions are best postponed. You must like as well as love your mate to make a go of marriage. This should be the determining factor in choosing a spouse.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An agreement can be reached today that will suit you from the ground up. Long-range work ventures appear promising. Travel to faraway places is favored. Spice up your love life!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It is easier to see eye-to-eye with your co-workers and friends today. Even large groups can be won over. You are able to obtain favors or financial help. Do not be greedy!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could be your own worst enemy, too preoccupied to see where you are headed. Large purchases are best postponed. Be more outgoing and sociable. A promising alliance begins to grow stronger.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may not want to go along with the crowd today. Where exactly do you stand? Be warmhearted and take more interest in other people — that is how good things happen!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friends and family members offer strong moral support or shrewd financial advice today. You can get what you want at a fair price. Raise your thinking to a higher, more spiritual level.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not curl into a ball after a rebuff; public support is mounting for your ideas! Social delights will keep you busy this evening. Take care you do not break the bank.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are serious-minded, down-to-earth and kind. Wise parents will help these industrious youngsters learn how to balance work with play; otherwise, they may be workaholics later in life. These Taureans find it easy to make friends with the opposite sex and may prefer them as business partners. Family ties are a top priority with these children.

3 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

There are some card combinations which recur regularly in different guises. Recognize them, know how to play them and save thousands of points over the course of time.

When South could not make a takeout double of two hearts, North gave up any hope of a spade contract. East-West, already stretched to the limit, were quite happy to sell out to an enemy partscore.

West led the king of hearts and declarer was looking at three sure losers in the major suits. To make the contract, therefore, South had to lose no more than one diamond trick. The obvious way to accomplish that is to draw trumps and hope diamonds break evenly—rather paltry odds of some 36 percent. However, the chance of a 3-3 split can be combined with the possibility of ruffing the fourth diamond in dummy. That requires finding the defender with two diamonds holding no more than two trumps, and some careful timing.

If declarer immediately cashes the ace and king of diamonds and leads a third round, the defense can prevail. East wins the third diamond, cashes the jack of hearts and leads a fourth round of diamonds and West can ruff higher than dummy. Drawing two rounds of trumps before leading diamonds is equally futile—East wins and removes dummy's last trump.

The winning technique is simple. After taking the ace of hearts, declarer should immediately duck a diamond. When South regains the lead, two rounds of trumps are drawn, followed by the ace and king of diamonds. If the suit breaks, declarer can draw the last trump. As the cards lie in the diagram, declarer can ruff his remaining diamond for the fulfilling trick.

Viewers pick Vivien Leigh, Harrison Ford to emulate

NEW YORK — A macho good guy, Harrison Ford as Indiana Jones, and a steel magnolia, Vivien Leigh in "Gone With the Wind," were tops among filmgoers who were asked which movie characters they most want to be.

Ford

Men of all ages included in a survey of 1,000 people chose Ford first, and women picked Scarlett O'Hara as their No. 1.

Women ages 18 to 24 ranked Linda Hamilton's muscled, gun-toting Sarah Connor in "Terminator 2" as their favorite. Men of that age group decided on the man himself, Terminator Arnold Schwarzenegger.

The recent MasterCard poll, released Thursday, asked respondents which movie title best described their lives. The top answer among men and women of all ages?

"It's a Wonderful Life," followed by "The Money Pit" and "What Have I Done to Deserve This?" in a tie for second.

The margin of error was 3 percentage points.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Reba McEntire and Pee-wee Herman joined dozens of performers in a Grand Ole Opry salute to ailing humorist Minnie Pearl.

McEntire

Pearl, 79, has not been on stage since a stroke last year caused paralysis to the left side of her body.

"I admire and respect her and consider her a longtime, close friend," said Herman, among those who performed at the Opry on Wednesday night.

McEntire saluted Pearl for paving the way for other women in comedy and country music.

"It scares me to think where we'd be if she hadn't come along," said McEntire.

Pearl was not present. In comments printed in the show program, she said:

"Tonight's show of affection and love has overwhelmed us and left us with our hearts so full of gratitude that words cannot begin to express our thoughts."

Among others who performed were Roy Acuff, Chet Atkins, Pat Boone, Glen Campbell, Roy Clark, Charlie Daniels, Amy Grant, George "Goober" Lindsey, Jim Nabors, the Oak Ridge Boys, Marie Osmond and Dwight Yoakam.

NEW YORK — After years of trying, Geraldo Rivera and his wife are going to have a baby.

Watchers of the "Geraldo" show have followed the couple's struggle with infertility. In November 1990, Rivera's wife, C.C. Dyer Rivera, appeared to discuss their plight.

On Monday, Rivera will broadcast a home video featuring his visibly pregnant wife as part of a program on the increasing use of home video.

"After six operations, three doctors and almost five years, it is my profound pleasure to announce that my wife is pregnant," Rivera told his studio audience Tuesday during taping of the show.

Rivera has a 12-year-old son from a previous marriage.

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Video stardom is forcing Gov. Howard Dean to renew a tradition: listing the governor's home number in the telephone book. Sort of.

Dean appears in a new Central Vermont Public Service Corp. video promoting Vermont as a friendly, down-home place to do business.

"Probably we're one of the few states in the union where you can look up the governor's address in the phone book and give me a call at night if you have a problem," Dean said on the tape produced by Vermont's largest electric utility.

Not quite true.

New England Telephone's directory assistance on Thursday produced a listing for a "Dr. Dean in Shelburne." Dean is a physician and an off-hours call to that number reaches an answering service.

The operator added: "And I have a residential listing in the vicinity but it's not published."

Dean's home number isn't impossible to find. Those who want to look it up merely have to know that his wife's name is Judith. There's a "J. Dean" in the Burlington-Middlebury phone book that rings at the Deans' home.

Dean said he would soon change the listing to "J. and H.," which he said would make it easier to find him.

NEW YORK — Talk show host Montel Williams is going East.

"We are going to be bringing the show to New York this summer," Williams said in an interview Thursday, confirming trade press reports that his Los Angeles-based, syndicated talk show was moving to the Big Apple.

"It's not because there's anything wrong with L.A.," he said. "It's just that we think we can compete a little bit better being here in everybody elses's back yard."

The Space Shuttle Eneavor lifts off from Launch Pad 39-B early Thursday evening beginning a seven day mission for NASA's newest orbiter.

Endeavour blasts into orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA's gleaming new shuttle, the Endeavour, blasted off on its maiden flight with seven astronauts Thursday and raced toward the rescue of a stranded communications satellite.

The weather went NASA's way at the last minute, and the black and white spaceship rose from its seaside pad at 7:40 p.m. atop a pillar of fire and smoke.

Endeavour, the replacement for the destroyed Challenger, passed through a cloud and into a clear evening sky as it swung out over the Atlantic Ocean and thundered into orbit. Rain had fallen on the launch pad just a few hours before, but the dark clouds kept moving and the feared thunderstorms and hail never arrived.

"We wish you a good voyage and we'll see you back at the dock," said launch director Bob Sieck.

Pierre Madon, a vice president of the organization that owns the errant satellite, congratulated NASA on "a perfect job."

"Tonight we saw the very best of America," said Daniel S. Goldin, NASA's new administrator.

Endeavour climbed to a 205-mile-high orbit in nine minutes. The flight began 34 minutes late because of bad weather at emergency landing strips in Africa and a last-minute computer problem.

The voyage was NASA's seventh space salvage mission and 47th shuttle flight. It restored the United States to full space-flying power; NASA was back to flying four shuttles for the first time in more than six years.

The $2 billion Endeavour was ordered after the Challenger exploded with seven astronauts 73 seconds after liftoff on Jan. 28, 1986.

Fifteen of the 18 students who won the orbiter-naming competition gathered at Kennedy Space Center for Endeavour's debut. The ship was named after an 18th-century British ship that explored the South Pacific.

"It's like a part of me going up with this shuttle," said Casey Craig, 13, an eighth-grader on Senatobia (Miss.) Middle School's winning team. "This is what it all comes down to, right here."

The shuttle carries a sliver from the sternpost of the original Endeavour.

Endeavour commander Daniel Brandenstein and his crew plan to rendezvous with the $157 million communications satellite at a slightly higher altitude, 220 miles, on Sunday, midway through the seven-day flight. The satellite has been adrift for two years; a rocket malfunction left it 22,000 miles lower than intended.

Ground controllers for the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization (Intelsat) waited until after the Endeavour reached orbit to start the 345-mile-high satellite on its gradual descent to meet the shuttle.

Astronaut Pierre Thuot, standing on the end of the shuttle's 50-foot robot arm, will use a special bar to pluck the slowly spinning satellite from orbit. Once the satellite is safe inside the open cargo bay, Thuot and spacewalking partner Richard Hieb will latch the cylinder onto a rocket motor.

Ground controllers plan to fire the 23,000-pound motor about four days after the astronauts release the satellite, sending it hurtling 51,750 miles from Earth — nearly a fourth of the distance to the moon. The satellite slowly will be lowered to its proper location 22,300 miles above the Atlantic.

Two more spacewalks are planned during the mission so astronauts can practice techniques for building space station Freedom and test self-rescue devices, including a bola rope, nicknamed "astrorope." NASA wants astronauts to be able to save themselves if they float away while working on the station.

Thomas Akers and Kathryn Thornton are assigned to spacewalk No. 2, and Thuot and Hieb will go back out for No. 3. Only one other American woman has ever walked in space, Kathryn Sullivan in 1984.

Each of the four designated spacewalkers has flown once before in space, but never performed a spacewalk. NASA wants to train as many people as possible in spacewalking before station assembly begins in late 1995.

The operator of the robot arm is Bruce Melnick, also a space veteran. The pilot, Kevin Chilton, is the only rookie on the flight.

Homeless man lay dead for hours in busy Boston plaza

BOSTON (AP) — When Joseph Bulens lay on the concrete next to City Hall, no one checked to see if he was breathing or felt for a pulse — not the commuters who passed or the man who read a newspaper on a nearby bench.

After all, Bulens was homeless. No one gave him a second glance.

He lay there dead for hours — in busy City Hall Plaza, in the heart of downtown.

"This shows that as long you have a roof over your head, who gives a damn about the other guy," said David Solomon.

Solomon was the one person who gave Bulens a second look. He was in his office on the ninth floor of City Hall on April 27 when he saw a homeless man splayed out on the plaza below.

Solomon was concerned until he saw a well-dressed man sitting on a bench just 10 feet away.

"I thought, 'He must just be asleep or that guy would do something,'" Solomon said.

But 45 minutes later, the man on the bench was gone and the homeless man remained. Solomon went to investigate.

"His hands had no color, they were pale," Solomon said. "His face was purplish pink. He looked like he'd been there for a while."

Solomon tried to get help from three passersby. No one would stop. Finally he chased down a police car.

"It's weird he would die on the plaza," Solomon said. "They're always having rallies for the homeless there."

The coroner said Bulens, 49, died of natural causes and had been dead two to four hours when he was found.

Friends said Bulens grew up in South Boston, known as Southie, a neighborhood where whites once battled blacks over school desegregation. He joined the Air Force but after his 16-year-old sister died he returned home to help support his family.

Later, his marriage went bad and in the 1960s he began to drink and became homeless.

Dirty, disheveled and drunk, Bulens was still liked.

"Joe Bulens would give you the shirt off his back," said Ken Smith, director of the New England Shelter for Homeless Veterans, where Bulens was often seen. "Even when he was inebriated, he was a pleasant guy.

"But he had a difficult time with his pain. He medicated himself with booze."

A 19-city survey last year by the National Coalition for the Homeless counted the deaths of 750 homeless people. More than half died outdoors.

Joan Alker, assistant director of the Washington-based coalition, was there when a homeless person was found dead outside the Justice Department last summer.

"It's a pretty chilling indictment when you have a dead body on a grate outside the Justice Department," Alker said.

Mayor Raymond Flynn said he had seen Bulens.

Flynn, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, said opening more temporary shelters isn't the solution to homelessness. The homeless "need their medication, they need psychiatric evaluation and help, they need job training,"

Thousands march at California capital

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (NYT) — Thousands of demonstrators marched at the state Capitol to protest the Rodney King verdict and to issue a warning that lasting peace will elude America's cities unless equal justice for all people is ensured.

The march and protest, organized by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, drew an estimated 6,000 people of all races and ethnic groups, and was marked by emotional and sometimes angry speeches, but no violence.

"We came to say, we can't take it no more," said Benjamin Hooks, NAACP national executive director. "We want peace and law and order. But law and order without justice is just old-fashioned racist dictatorship, and we ain't going to take that no more.

"If you want peace, you've got to have peace for everybody," he said.

Protesters chanted "Fired up, can't take no more," and carried signs with such slogans as "No justice, no peace." Others wore T-shirts bearing photos of Rodney King, and his question, "Can't we get along?"

California Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, D-San Francisco, fired up the large crowd, saying the acquittals of four Los Angeles Police Department officers in the King beating stung black Americans in a way similar to the assassination of civil rights leader Martin Luther King.

Brown asked white Americans to consider how they would react if a group of black police officers were seen on videotape savagely beating a white motorist, while other black officers idly stood by.

He asked whites to consider their reaction if the black officers' trial was moved to a black community and held in a courtroom where the judge, jury, attorneys, and members of the news media were all black.

"And that jury came back and said 'Not guilty.' Would you call that a fair trial? Would you call that justice?" Brown asked. "Can you understand how we feel? Blind bigotry begets blind rage, and there is no place in this country for either."

Assemblyman Curtis Tucker Jr., D-Inglewood, who chairs the Legislature's black caucus, said that he hopes Los Angeles never returns to normal, because the normal has always meant brutality and injustice.

"If it ever gets back to normal," Tucker said, "we will burn this whole state down."

Sacramento County Supervisor Grantland Johnson predicted that Thursday's march and protest will be the first of many which will come to characterize this decade.

"This is the beginning of the restoration of the civil rights movement of the 1990s," he said.

Brown, who currently is carrying a broad civil rights bill in the Legislature, which would make it easier for people who have been the targets of discrimination to be compensated, predicted that the protest will have a positive effect.

"You are sending a powerful message to the people who make public policy," Brown said. "It's a message they don't hear very often."

State executes Arkansas inmate

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A man who killed a state trooper was executed by lethal injection Thursday night after Gov. Bill Clinton denied him clemency.

Also Thursday, Texas executed an inmate for killing a store owner in a holdup 14 years ago.

Steven Douglas Hill, 25, the youngest of 35 inmates on Arkansas' death row, was pronouced dead at 9:10 p.m., eight minutes after he was injected with the drugs.

Clinton returned to Little Rock on Wednesday night to review his case, but denied the clemency request Thursday afternoon. The U.S. Supreme Court denied an appeal filed Thursday by Hill's attorney, Mark Cambiano.

Cambiano had taken the case to the Supreme Court after the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at St. Louis voted 8-1 Thursday to reject an appeal by Hill, condemned for the 1984 shooting death of an Arkansas State Police investigator.

As governor, Clinton has scheduled executions for 26 prisoners, of whom four have been executed. He has never granted clemency for a death row inmate.

"We do support the death penalty for cop killers, multiple murderers and drug kingpins," Clinton said earlier this year.

Death penalty opponents claim Clinton's stance on capital punishment is dictated by politics.

"He's not dying to be president, but he is killing to be president," said Carrie Rengers of the local chapter of Amnesty International.

A black, brain-damaged inmate was executed Jan. 24 in Arkansas, drawing criticism from death penalty foes and black leaders. A man who killed a police officer and a mass murderer were executed in June 1990.

About 25 people, including one person dressed as the Grim Reaper, protested Wednesday outside the gates of the Governor's Mansion in Little Rock.

Hill was an 18-year-old state inmate in 1984 when he and a fellow prisoner, Michael Anthony Cox, escaped while on a work detail.
