Land mine explosion kills U.S. soldier in NATO-led peace mission

■ President Clinton expresses sympathy to family, says death won't affect peacekeeping effort.

Associated Press

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A land mine explosion killed an American soldier in northern Bosnia on Saturday, the first member of U.S. forces to die in action since the NATO-led peace mission began.

The American was killed north of Tuzla, headquarters for U.S. forces, when he apparently stepped on a land mine. He was the first U.S soldier to die in Bosnia and the ninth alliance soldier to die since NATO began deploying to the Balkans in December. Another American soldier died in January at a logistics base in Hungary, apparently of natural causes.

The soldier, whose name was withheld pending notification of next of kin, was wounded at 3:45 p.m. (9:45 CST) at a checkpoint near the town of Gradacac, 25 miles north of Tuzla, said an Army spokesman, Lt. Bill Donovan.

"We believe he was on foot" and manning the checkpoint, Donovan said. He said the soldier was pronounced dead at the 212th mobile Army surgical hospital nearby.

President Clinton was briefed about the death during a campaign stop in New Hampshire. Asked by a reporter whether the accident gave him second thoughts about the Bosnian mission, he said: "No, not at all."

"I told the American people before it started, the place was filled with mines," Clinton said, noting that other allied soldiers had been killed in land mine accidents.

In a statement, Clinton extended sympathy to the soldier's family.

"They should know that he died in the noblest of causes — the pursuit of peace. ... We will continue to take every precaution to protect American troops as they continue to perform this critical mission of securing and enduring peace in Bosnia."

In another incident, two British soldiers got facial cuts when their vehicle was hit by rounds of sniper fire in Ilidza, a Serb suburb of Sarajevo, Staff Sgt. Christopher Lethhiers of French air force said.

The soldier's death came as opposing armies complied with a Saturday deadline to withdraw from territories that, under the peace treaty, must be handed over to their former enemies. But the Morning snow surprises city; many residents keep warm by staying in

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

Midlanders may have broken two records Saturday night. One may have been the overnight low; the other may have been the high setting on electric blankets.

Many residents were caught off guard Saturday morning when they looked outside and saw snow and ice.

But other than moans from motorists, the cold weather didn't cause too many problems on local roads and highways, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety. No roads were reported closed in the area and there was not a higher-than-usual number of accidents.

It seems most residents were playing it safe, and warm, by staying inside.

But those who did venture outside shivered and stomped while fueling at local service stations. Inside, the attendents were thankful their stations had self-serve pumps.

Committee, public meeting to focus on ways to fight vandalism, graffiti

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A mayoral committee to address vandalism is in the formative stages, and a public meeting to discuss ways to combat the problem has been scheduled for 7 p.m., Feb. 15 at the City Council chambers in City Hall.

"We've had all this vandalism and graffiti ... and it continues to bother me," Mayor Bobby Burns said. "The only way to get it fixed is to get the community involved."

The Mayor's Commission on Vandalism and Graffiti is being set up in response to a recent rash of criminal mischief incidents.

Last weekend, more than 20 cases of vandalism or criminal mischief were reported to police.

That same weekend, vandals hit the La Promesa shrine of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church. That incident followed three other defacements of

Preliminary studies show Midland can't afford mass transit

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Preliminary reports on a mass transit study indicate the price for public transportation appears cost-prohibitive in Midland.

On Friday, Houston-based L.K.C. Consulting Services — commissioned to do the study using state-distributed federal funds — presented initial findings to Midland and Odessa city officials, according to Jerry Tschauner, director of planning for the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

Four transit possibilities, along with operational costs and projected ridership, were outlined. Midland representatives requested more information on a paratransit system, basically a demand-response bus service for the elderly and disabled.

The preliminary study showed that an

Local champ to compete in Westminster Dog Show

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

Jake, a 5-year-old golden retriever owned by Midlanders Keith and Kim Cain, will compete at the Westminster Dog Show at New York's Madison Square Garden Friday and Feb. 11.

The show is the canine equivalent of the Miss America pageant.

The Cains, who also own four other golden retrievers, are avid competitors in local dog shows. Their dogs don't all compete, but all of them are pets for the couple and their three children.

This is Jake's first time at Westminster and Mrs. Cain thinks their chances are good. Over the past year, Jake has beaten many of the dogs entered in the golden retriever category.

"Jake has matured, and we really like the judges picked to choose the best of goldens," Mrs. Cain said.

The judges will look at height, weight, bite, coat and structure. They also will look at movement and gait.

At Westminster, Jake will compete against the top 40 golden retrievers in the country for best of goldens. If he wins, he will go on to compete for

Hong Kong widows pressure Britain for passports

By John Leicester
Associated Press

HONG KONG — James Kotwall had time enough just to scribble a goodbye note to his wife and children before his Japanese captors put him to the sword in World War II.

"This is my last message of farewell to you all. I am to be sentenced to death ..." says the note, dated Aug. 31, 1944. "Do not feel sorry for my death. I die with love in my heart for my family, my country, relatives and friends."

More than half a century after the Hong Kong-born businessman of Indian descent was beheaded at age 38 for spying for the British army, his widow, Doris, has her own battle. She and 27 other women are fighting to be granted citizenship by Britain, the country their husbands served in war.

These old and ailing women are the most prominent among the groups in Hong Kong pressuring Britain for citizenship before it hands its prized Asian colony back to China on July 1, 1997.

Although few in number, they represent a moral dilemma that is muddying Britain's effort to make a dignified exit after 156 years of colonial rule.

For the colony's people, the citizenship issue has become a litmus test of Britain's commitment to Hong Kong after it passes back to Chinese rule. For many people, London's response has been unimpressive. To some, it is disgraceful.

Anyone born in Hong Kong once had the right to full British citizenship, but the government in London gradually took away those rights, including the right to live in Britain.

Fearful of a flood of refugees seeking to avoid Communist rule, Britain has ruled out granting citizenship to Hong Kong's millions. Instead, after bitter legislative debate, London opted in 1990 to offer passports to only 50,000 key families, selected largely because of their professional skills.

At least most of Hong Kong's nearly 6 million ethnic Chinese, including the war widows, will be able to get passports issued by Hong Kong's post-1997 government. But ethnic minorities fear the possibility of becoming stateless, because China generally grants citizenship only to ethnic Chinese.

Gov. Chris Patten has defied his government by saying publicly that the 3.7 million people who hold British travel documents should have citizenship, too. He says that is especially true of the old women because most don't actually want to move to Britain, but rather desire only "the symbol of a British passport."

Shy and reclusive, the war widows have left the campaign to their champion, Jack Edwards, a 77-year-old Welshman who was captured by Japanese troops in Singapore in 1942 and sent to slave in a Taiwanese copper mine. He has lived in Hong Kong since 1963.

He recently showed a reporter around a cemetery where Kotwall and other victims of Japan's 3 1/2-year occupation lie buried.

Walking from grave to grave, Edwards recalled the French, Chinese, Indian, British, Canadians and others who are remembered with stones marked: "Buried near this spot."

Stray dogs sniffed at the silent graves and a young couple cuddled under a tree. "These men would have liked that," Edwards said, smiling. "That's what they gave their lives for — so we could live in freedom."

But his face reddened when he began talking about passports. Standing by Kotwall's gravestone, Edwards pointed out the words "HE GAVE HIS ALL IN THE CAUSE OF FREEDOM" carved below the British emblem of a unicorn and a lion.

"These are the very same coat of arms which are on the passport," Edwards hissed through clenched teeth. "The hypocrisy of it. The country he died for will give him a piece of stone with its coat of arms, but won't give his widow a passport."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Kotwall, 79, waits and hopes. In her small apartment, she keeps the certificate that the British government gave her commemorating her and her husband's wartime sacrifices.

"This entirely voluntary service ... will always be remembered with deepest gratitude," it says.

Government's promise ends miners' strike

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russian government promised Saturday to pour $2.2 billion into the coal mining industry, ending a two-day strike and resolving — at least for the time being — a potentially damaging, election-year labor dispute.

A parallel strike by 880,000 miners in Ukraine continued, and leaders of Russia's Union of Coal Industry Workers said they would strike again if the government reneged on its promises.

"We'll wage a political strike," warned Gennady Mikhailets, a deputy head of the miners union. "And our demand will be the government's resignation."

Confronted by Russia's largest and most powerful union, the government quickly gave in to the miners' demands for back wages and bigger subsidies for the ailing state-owned industry.

"We're doing everything we promised," Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin said Saturday as he left for a vacation in the southern city of Sochi.

He said the Finance Ministry had already begun disbursing back wages.

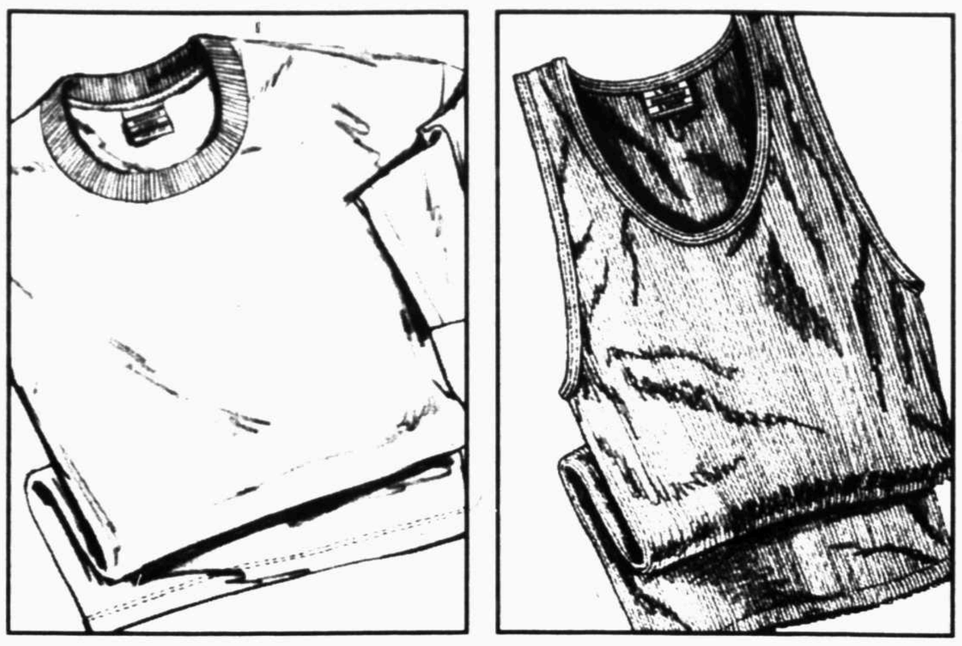

Russian and Ukrainian miners went on strike Thursday, in the largest walkout in the former Soviet Union since its 1991 collapse. That year, a nine-week coal miners' strike helped propel Yeltsin to the presidency and force Mikhail Gorbachev from power.

Yeltsin is expected to run for a second term in the June 16 presidential election and a long miners' strike could cripple his campaign. Once considered allies, miners now resent Yeltsin for closing mines, slashing state subsidies and failing repeatedly to pay wages on time.

The decision to end the strike came in a narrow 6-5 vote during an overnight meeting of the miners' union, and miners in many Russian regions were back at work Saturday, said union chief Vitaly Budko.

"We expect all miners to stop the strike," he said.

He said most of the promised $2.2 billion would come from the federal budget, but nearly $500 million would come from foreign loans.

And move faster is what most Midlanders hope this arctic mass will do as it heads east. Temperatures in the Permian Basin will rapidly increase starting Monday, according to a forecaster at the National Weather Service. By the end of the week, temperatures are forecasted to be in the 70s.

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies and warmer with a high near 40 and winds coming from the south at 10-20 mph, according to a forecaster.

Tonight should be mostly clear with a low in the mid-20s.

Monday is expected to be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 13, Saturday's high reached 25, compared to the record high for that date of 80, set in 1988. The record low was 10, set in 1972.

STATE

Texas skies were fair to cloudy Saturday, but one factor remained constant: the cold.

At 3 p.m., highs ranged from 7 degrees in Amarillo to a relatively-balmy 57 in El Paso.

Galveston's low of 25 early Saturday broke the 1951 record of 27.

It was sunny Saturday in North Texas, but snow flurries fluttered in West Texas, south Central Texas and East Texas.

Winds across the state were northerly from 10 to 20 mph except southerly at 5 to 10 mph in the Panhandle.

The North Texas forecast is for sunny skies today with highs in the 30s. It will be partly cloudy tonight with lows from 16 in the east to 32 in the west. Monday will be partly cloudy and much warmer but windy in west and central portions. Highs will range from 52 in the northeast to 66 in the southwest.

South Texas is rebounding from a hard freeze with highs today in the 40s. Skies will be fair to partly cloudy. Tonight will be clear with lows from the upper teens to near freezing. Monday will be partly cloudy and warmer with highs in the 50s and 60s.

Forecasters said West Texas will be partly cloudy and warmer today. Highs will be from near 30 in the north to 70s in the Presidio Valley. Tonight will be partly cloudy and cold with lows in the teens to 20s, followed by warmer readings Monday.

NATION

A snowstorm raced across the East on Saturday, leaving more than a foot of snow, and temperatures fell to record lows across the middle of the nation.

By afternoon, only snow showers persisted across the central and southern Appalachians into New England.

Overnight snow accumulations included 18 inches in Delaware, 13 in Maryland, 12 on Massachusetts' Cape Cod, 12 in New Jersey, 16 in Virginia and 15 in West Virginia.

Afternoon temperatures were still below zero across the northern Plains and upper Midwest.

Temperatures fell to record lows in the single digits and below zero in Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

The lows of -27 at Dubuque, Iowa; -36 at La Crosse, Wis.; -29 at Madison, Wis.; -19 at Peoria, Ill., and -12 at St. Louis, Mo., rewrote entries that had been in the record books since 1886.

progress toward peace was marred by a dispute over Serb police remaining in Sarajevo suburbs.

As part of the peace agreement, Croats and Muslims on Saturday signed documents giving them control of Serb suburbs in Sarajevo. But Serb police remained in place despite the protests of the Bosnian government.

All over Bosnia, by midnight Friday, Muslims and Croats were to take control of territory given them under the peace treaty. Serbs were to do the same. Such transfers have been relatively unproblematic because most residents already have left areas being handed over to their former enemies.

But while thousands of Serbs fled their five Sarajevo suburbs, tens of thousands remain. Officials who hope to preserve the city's ethnic diversity want the Serbs to stay, and they are reluctant to scare the Serbs with a sudden change in police or other overt signs of a power shift.

Full transfer of authority is to be finished by March 19. Aides to Carl Bildt, a former Swedish foreign minister implementing the transfer, said the deadline would be met even in Serb-held parts of Sarajevo.

Western officials said all parties agreed with the decision to keep Serb police in the suburbs. But Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic clearly was unhappy, saying his government wanted international police to take over.

"The presence of Serb police ... is illegal," he told reporters. "We do not agree with that."

Bildt aide Michael MacLay suggested the government had agreed but was blaming Bildt for a decision that is unpopular with its constituents.

A plan to include patrols of international police has been suspended, in part because there are not enough officers available. Of the 500 due to be in place in Serb-held sectors of Sarajevo, less than 50 have arrived.

Serb police at Grbavica, a southern Serb-held district, were permitting people from the government side to cross over Saturday after checking documents. Bosnian police said 1,300 people crossed from both sides since Friday, when most travel restrictions were lifted.

At a news conference with U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher, Izetbegovic also said his side would soon release the last five war prisoners it holds.

Christopher pledged strong U.S. support for the search of the thousands of civilians presumed to have been massacred during the war. He said Assistant State Secretary John Shattuck would soon go to Ljubija and Omarska, both purported mass grave sites in northwestern Bosnia.

Other officials also were visiting some of Bosnia's killing fields. Manfred Nowak, the top missing persons expert for the U.N. Commission on Human Rights, inspected the Ljubija mine near Prijedor in northwestern Bosnia, where war crimes victims are believed to be buried.

Land mines hidden in the coal pits will delay excavation of the bodies, but digging could begin in April, said Nowak, whose mission is to help trace the 27,000 missing in Bosnia's war.

U.N. human rights envoy Elizabeth Rehn was scheduled today to go to the region of Srebrenica to investigate survivors' reports of massacres by Serbs last summer.

Up to 7,000 bodies may be buried around Srebrenica, U.S. officials say. Bosnia has an estimated 300 mass graves.

churches during the first weekend of January.

And two weeks ago, 29 cases of vandalism — from smashed car windows to spray-painted property — were reported.

But such destructive rampages are not new to Midland.

In early December, police officials said more than 200 incidents of vandalism had occurred since Halloween. And early in the summer of 1995, the city suffered a rash of vandalism attacks with 160 reported incidents in May and June.

"We're still seeing the problem and it's not going away," Burns said.

The mayor said he hopes to enlist the help of three groups concerned with criminal mischief: an anti-graffiti program being developed by the community services division of the Midland Judicial District Community Supervision and Corrections Department; Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs (NABD); and a select committee of Project Awaken, a juvenile delinquency task force formed by a special grand jury a few years ago.

"I thought we could all get on one page and work together," Burns said.

The public also is asked to join these groups, local officials and law- enforcement representatives to seek solutions to the growing problem.

The solution, in part, rests with having neighbors looking out for neighbors, people watching their kids and the community assuming responsibility, Burns said.

Police Sgt. David Garcia said community involvement can be vital in catching the perpetrators.

"It takes the effort of citizens working with the police to help bring it to a conclusion. We can't do it alone," Garcia said. "It gives us more eyes and ears out there to come up with leads."

HONORS: Local dog to compete in Westminster show

best of all sporting breed dogs. A win in sporting breed will give him the chance to compete against all best-of-breed categories for best-of-show.

The only requirement to enter the Westminster show is that the dog be a champion. Dogs achieve that status by winning points in other dog shows.

The cost to compete in the Westminster show is $35, in addition to the costs of flying the dog and hiring a handler to show the dog. The Cains' handler is Shirlee Murray.

A money prize is not given for being the best at Westminster; the only award is a ribbon. It's really more of an honor to win at Westminster, Mrs. Cain said.

"You would have to do a lot of breeding to turn a win into a profit," Cain said.

The Cains breed their goldens once or twice a year and sell the puppies for about $500 each. The money is mostly used for feed and competition fees.

The Cains first got interested in competing in dog shows about nine years ago when Mrs. Cain got their first golden retriever. She became involved in the local dog obedience club, but the dog died shortly after that.

Next came Jake, but getting him was a fluke, Mrs. Cain said.

After her first dog died, she wanted another golden retriever. She became aware of a litter of puppies from a field dog and a show dog and told the owner that she was interested in a puppy to compete for show. The owner gave her the dog with the best head.

"Now that I know a lot more about the breed, we consider ourselves very lucky," Mrs. Cain said. "You look for a lot more than just the shape of the head when looking for a dog to compete for show. But Jake was our ugly ducking who turned into a swan."

Jake showed traits of his mother who was in field competitions. Field dogs are trained to retrieve birds, and how they look is not important in judging. But as Jake grew, the traits of his father become apparent.

When Jake was 15 months old, the Cains began entering him in competitions — mainly in obedience. In obedience competitions the dog is judged on its ability to sit, stay and heel. Later he was entered in field competitions and in the past year and a half, in show competitions.

"Jake is a multi-purpose dog. Most dogs in competitions are trained or groomed in only one field," Mrs. Cain said.

The Cains are proud of Jake, who will get the chance to be on television if he wins best of golden retrievers. The USA network will air the best of sporting breed competition on Feb. 13.

7.0 earthquake kills at least 210 people in southwest China

BEIJING (AP) — A powerful earthquake ravaged a mountain city in southwestern China, killing at least 210 people and injuring more than 3,000 others, authorities said today.

The magnitude 7.0 earthquake in the Yunnan province struck at 7:14 p.m. (6:14 a.m. EST) Saturday near Lijiang, a tourist area about 1,300 miles southwest of Beijing, the Central Seismology Bureau said.

As of noon today, 210 people were known dead, said Chen Jie of the provincial government office. She said more than 3,000 people were seriously injured.

The extent of the disaster wasn't immediately clear. Wang Ze, also of the provincial government, said rescuers searched for victims throughout the night. The provincial vice-governor went to the area today to investigate.

There were no reports of foreign tourists killed or injured, Wang said. Guests at the hotel in Lijiang were moved into tents to guard against aftershocks, he said.

The airport in Lijiang remained open. Officials planned to evacuate some of the seriously injured people to hospitals in Kunming, the provincial capital, a 35-minute flight, Wang said.

The area in northwestern Yunnan is not heavily populated, but the earthquake's destruction covered parts of three counties — Lijiang, Zhongdian and Heqing — the state-run Xinhua News Agency said.

Water and electricity were knocked out, and communication was cut off from Zhongdian city, the center of an autonomous region of ethnic Tibetans, Xinhua reported.

The hardest hit area, Lijiang County, is in the northwestern corner of Yunnan about 85 miles east of the Burma border. It is the capital of the Naxi people, a local ethnic minority of 275,000 people.

A magnitude-6.5 quake hit another Yunnan town in October, killing 51 people, injuring more than 800 and seriously damaging almost 200,000 buildings.

A magnitude-6 quake can cause severe damage and magnitude 7 is considered a major quake, capable of causing widespread, heavy damage.

1-year-old becomes seventh person to die on Texas' icy roads

Associated Press

A 1-year-old boy from Ireland, in rural Central Texas with his parents for a family wedding, became the seventh person to die on Texas' icy roads.

But the arctic air mass that produced the coldest nights this winter is on its way out, said Lori Bovitz, meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Fort Worth.

"The end is in sight," Ms. Bovitz said Saturday. "It'll slide south. ... We'll continue to warm up through the next few days."

Kevin Sheehan of Limerick, Ireland, was killed and his twin brother, Gerald, was injured when the car in which they were riding hit a patch of ice, went off the road and overturned, said LaSondra Shelton, spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Unstrapped, Kevin was thrown from the car. Gerald was in stable condition Saturday. Their mother, Ann Marie Sheehan, 28, was treated and released at a local hospital. The driver, Amanda Burch of the Houston suburb of Webster, was not injured.

Six other people died in highway wrecks since Thursday, and city police reported fatal weather-related accidents in San Antonio and the Dallas suburb of Cedar Hill.

The temperature at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport fell to 14 early Saturday, tying the record set for the date in 1985.

Temperatures warmed only to the 20s across much of North Texas Saturday despite sunny skies that turned much of the week's snow and sleet to slush. State highway officials in Central and South Texas continued to urge residents to stay off the icy roads.

Some light snow was reported in parts of West Texas and the Panhandle, where the mercury stayed in the single digits.

In Central Texas, light snow and icing conditions caused three major overpasses in Austin to remain closed on Saturday, but no significant weather-related traffic accidents had been reported since Friday, according to David Matustik, a spokesman for the city's Emergency Operations Center.

"The snow has caused roads to worsen early in the day," Matustik said. "But now that it's the weekend, people are not out driving and things are fairly routine."

Sharon Lavender of the Waco Police Department said despite some light snow, traffic was back to normal.

"It's real cold, but we haven't had any accidents since Thursday, when we had 65 between 7 a.m. and 3 p.m.," Ms. Lavender said.

In San Antonio, authorities were recovering from a record number of accidents over a 24-hour period that ended Friday night.

"The expressways are open and functional today," said San Antonio police Detective Richard Slater. "We had 1,068 accidents over a 24-hour period ending Friday night."

Charles, Diana reach divorce settlement, tabloids say

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles has agreed on a financial plan to support Princess Diana after a divorce, including $1.5 million a year for expenses and $9 million for a London house, a tabloid reported Sunday.

The heir to the British throne and his wife, who separated in 1992, have not said they are divorcing. But after weeks of legal negotiations, the couple reached a financial settlement for a divorce, according to an unattributed report in The Mail on Sunday.

Independent confirmation of the report was impossible. But in the past, tabloids have been accurate in many of their reports on the couple's marital problems.

The settlement includes $22.5 million in investments to yield the annual income needed to maintain the princess in her present style, the newspaper said.

Lawyers estimate Diana needs at least $1.5 million a year, after taxes, to cover expenses including her clothes, her staff and their subsistence, the report said.

Queen Elizabeth II sent letters to Charles and Diana in December saying it was time to divorce. Charles immediately agreed. But the princess has said she was considering her decision.

TRANSIT: Studies show city cannot afford system

eight-vehicle, Monday-through-Saturday paratransit system would serve about 29,000 riders annually with a yearly operating cost of $446,000, Tschauner said. The majority of the operating costs — $311,000 — would be paid for with available federal dollars and a small amount — about $31,000 — would be generated by fares, he said.

Those figures coupled with start-up costs, including the buses, don't appear favorable in Midland's financial horizon, according to Mayor Bobby Burns.

"I have a hard time seeing how we'll be able to do it because of start-up costs between a quarter and three-quarters of a million dollars and a net operating loss ranging from $100,000 to $300,000 (a year)," he said. "We don't have the funds to do it. Even with the federal funds helping us it's real expensive."

Meanwhile, the consultant is studying the possibility of a fixed route system that includes West Odessa and a fixed route with a pulse-time transfer (a hub-like system) for the city of Odessa. A shuttle service between Midland and Odessa and the airport also is being studied.

Final findings by the consultant are tentatively scheduled to be presented to representatives of Midland and Odessa in March, Tschauner said.

Peacetime: Now private war begins for soldiers, civilians

By Brian Murphy
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The ghosts come at night.

She's cowering in her house, back in the farthest corner and calling for her father. The sound of boots crunching on gravel grows louder. She can see the Bosnian Serb soldiers — their faces covered in ski masks.

"Daddy, help. The ghosts," she yells. Then she wakes up, shivering from reality: Her father was killed in Rogatica in eastern Bosnia, her house destroyed, her sister raped.

Mirsada — a slim 12-year-old who likes red nail polish — worries each day about bedtime. That's when the ghosts come.

A 15-minute drive away in an apartment building gutted by artillery, an old Bosnian Serb woman hangs out a dress on the line. A snowflake lands on her hand and she watches it melt.

"I feel like winter," says Irena Slavinovic. "Dead like winter."

The battlefields in Bosnia may be quiet but there is little peace in the hearts and minds of those who waged war, witnessed war and fell prey to it. Another fight — without bullets or shells — is just beginning.

It's fought by children forced to learn about death when they should have been learning the alphabet. It's soldiers bewildered by free time or too callous for silly everyday rituals. Widows and rape victims try to piece together scrambled lives. Everyone peers into the future and tries to make plans for the first time in 3 1/2 years.

There have been no hug-and-kiss celebrations as the new year unfolds under a peace plan that appears to be working. It wasn't that type of war. The soul of a nation was blasted full of holes and that takes a long time to heal.

"It took a few minutes to sign a peace plan. It will take a lot longer for people to get used to it."

"How can I start making plans again?" Jasmina Dervisovic mutters comments like that as she looks for something to burn. Wood for the stove is the immediate objective. The future will just have to wait.

"Look, Mom. Is this OK?" asks her 14-year-old son, Ahmed, holding up some cardboard boxes.

"Good boy," she says. "But don't forget we need wood."

Her family fled their village near Zepa in eastern Bosnia last summer just ahead of the Bosnian Serb army. Her husband and oldest son stayed behind to fight. She has no idea where they are. "Dead? Captured? I don't know," she says, never taking her eyes off the ground along what used to be a perilous shooting gallery on Sniper Alley.

Dervisovic and her son zigzagged with other refugees to Sarajevo. They found an abandoned apartment. No heat, but a wood-burning stove. Now, there's just one job each day. "Wood, wood, wood," she says. "Food, food, food."

Peace means only that you can hunt for wood without risking your life. Her home — if still standing — is in the Serb-controlled area under the peace plan. She refuses to move or try a new life until she knows the fate of her husband and oldest boy. If it takes a month, fine. A year, even two? "Then it will have to be that long," she says

She kicks a lump in the snow. Wood? No, a metal pipe.

"There are many people who have no concept of the future. It's not normal, but it's normal in Bosnia," says Salih Rasavac, director of Sarajevo's Corridor project, which has offered psychological counseling since December 1993 from an apartment whose windows are covered with plastic sheets.

Amir is puzzled by the question. He repeats it himself: "What do I want to be when I grow up?"

"I never thought about it," says the 15-year-old who has two pieces of shrapnel lodged in his calf. "I didn't see myself doing anything but becoming a soldier. I was already practicing shooting."

In a counseling center, children are asked to draw a tree and put their favorite things on the branches. One girl adds a sun and writes "mir" — peace — inside. On one branch, she writes in giant letters: "I want to see my best friend." Underneath the tree roots, she scratches "dead," "dying," "grenade."

Counselor Rasavac estimates more than half the children in Bosnia display signs of post-traumatic stress disorder: insomnia, nightmares, loss of appetite, short attention span.

The refugee children all make the same things with the Lego blocks: homes and guns.

"They remember things like a best friend killed, a brother or sister hit by a sniper. It's amazing sometimes," Rasavac says. "You'd expect tears. But many children have this very cold feeling. Maybe the tears will come later."

AIDS blood scare taints Ethiopians' Promised Land

By Hillary Appelman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Ever since she was a child, Yafa Sahalu remembered hearing about Israel.

"Jerusalem is the dream," said Yafa, who came here with her family during the first airlift of Ethiopian Jews in 1985. "God promised us we would go."

Years of hardship failed to dim the luster of the Promised Land. But the revelation that Israel's blood bank was secretly throwing away Ethiopian donations for fear they were contaminated with the AIDS virus stunned the Sahalus and the rest of Israel's 56,000 Ethiopian Jews.

The rejection of the blood struck a nerve far deeper and more painful than the myriad other slights the Ethiopians have felt in Israel. It touched upon their very Jewishness, the one thing they clung to through centuries of exile.

"I was accepted in Israel," said Nathan Sahalu, Yafa's husband. "I was invited to their weddings. I danced with them. I laughed with them. Now, even if I'm invited, I'm not going. Something is not the same."

A protest last weekend by an estimated 10,000 Ethiopians deteriorated into rock-throwing that injured more than 70 people, stunning other Israelis, who had stereotyped the Ethiopians as a quiet, cheerful people.

The medical argument — that Ethiopians have a higher incidence of AIDS than the rest of Israeli society — did little to shake the Ethiopians' conviction that the blood policy was racist.

'People tell me that Ethiopians have HIV. I get on the bus, everyone's staring at me.'
—Yafa Sahalu
Ethiopian immigrant

"We are blood brothers with all the Jewish people," pleaded a sign at the protest.

The violence came at a difficult time for the government of Prime Minister Shimon Peres, who faces general elections amid stirrings of discontent from other ethnic groups left out of Israel's economic boom.

In its wake, Peres promised to look into the problems facing the Ethiopian community — from education to housing to suicides in the army.

"We have kept quiet for a long time," protest leader Muski Shibro-Zivan wrote in Israel's Maariv newspaper. "We want the real problems to be addressed."

Nathan and Yafa Sahalu, on the face of it, are a success story among Israel's Ethiopian immigrants.

They walked across the desert to Sudan, where they lived for a year in refugee camps before coming here during Operation Moses, Israel's covert airlift that rescued 7,500 Ethiopian Jews from severe famine and drought.

Fourteen thousand more arrived in Operation Solomon in 1991, during Ethiopia's civil war.

After living five years in temporary housing, the Sahalus moved into a spacious apartment in Neve Yaacov, a new neighborhood in northern Jerusalem, aided by a government grant that covers 85 percent of their mortgage.

Nathan, a thin 41-year-old with short-cropped hair and a white knitted skullcap, works in a factory that makes aluminum window frames.

Yafa, 31, is a hospital aide. She has brown eyes and an easy smile, and tucks her hair under a soft blue velvet hat in keeping with observant Jewish tradition that requires married women to cover their hair.

They speak fluent Hebrew, and their six children play with Israeli friends.

They escaped the isolation in segregated communities that faced many Ethiopians. While Israelis sometimes called them "cushi" — a derogatory word for blacks — they said they never felt discriminated against here.

Until now.

"The way I feel is, I'm nothing," said Yafa, gesturing with her hand as if she were throwing away a piece of garbage.

She said she worries her children will branded with the stigma of AIDS and that she gets bad feelings at work from people she had thought were friends.

"People tell me that Ethiopians have HIV," she said. "I get on the bus, everyone's staring at me."

Masala compared the blood rejection to the debate after the first Ethiopians arrived over whether they were really Jewish.

The cries of racism have forced Israelis into self-examination over how they have treated the Ethiopians, after years of patting themselves on the back for their rescue.

"Suddenly, it turns out that what has been described as a major success story is not," said Eytan Gilboa, a political science professor. "This is like a vote of no-confidence in society."

U.S. warns China of sanction due to trade violations

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Despite concerns about Washington's already tense relationship with Beijing, the Clinton administration has warned China that it risks the imposition of stiff economic sanctions in the next few months because Beijing has ignored previous warnings and continues to violate a key trade agreement signed a year ago.

The warning, made after a series of White House meetings in recent days to reassess the administration's China policy, comes despite considerable concern from some officials that prompting a confrontation over China's piracy of American software, music and videos could harm Washington's effort to defuse growing tensions between China and Taiwan.

Those officials also fear that the trade dispute could hamper American efforts to convince the Chinese that they must end their crackdown on dissidents and stop the sale of missiles and other military hardware in South Asia and the Middle East.

But in the end, Clinton's economic and trade advisers, led by Mickey Kantor, the trade representative, convinced the White House that American credibility with China and other trading partners around the world would be jeopardized if Beijing is permitted to flagrantly ignore its agreement to close more than 30 compact-disk factories — some apparently controlled by the Chinese military — that are exporting millions of dollars worth of illegal copies of American products.

Kantor has warned China that the sanctions could be as large as 100 percent tariffs on more than a billion dollars in Chinese imports. But White House officials, still nervous about how hard to press Beijing, say they will not determine the exact nature of the sanctions, or their timing, until completing the negotiations that begin in the coming week.

Three months ago, Kantor issued a less specific, public threat of sanctions against China in hopes that Beijing would act against the factories making the pirated copies. Unsatisfied with the response, he went back to the Chinese on Wednesday to insist that time was running out.

Some aides to Clinton concede that election-year politics may color the decision over how hard a line to take. There is growing concern in the White House that Clinton's policy of "comprehensive engagement" with China — and the decision two years ago to extend China's favorable trade benefits independently of its human rights record — has shown virtually no results.

The issue of China's piracy is particularly potent in California, the most critical state in the November election. Hollywood has lost millions of dollars because of the illegal replication of movies and music, and many of the plants that once churned out compact disks have converted to much more lucrative products — illegal copies of computer software.

Kantor, a longtime political operative in Southern California and Clinton's former campaign manager, is close to many of the executives in that industry.

On Wednesday, in a speech carefully reviewed by the National Security Council and National Economic Council, Kantor declared to the U.S.-China Business Council, a private group that represents American businesses in China, that the United States will "take decisive action if China does not meet its obligations." And he warned, "We will not wait forever."

In other forums, Kantor has said Washington would impose a larger sanction than the one it threatened a year ago but suspended when China agreed at the last moment to sign an accord promising a crackdown on the piracy of American products. Several China experts have warned that in China's view the threat of sanctions is an attempt by the United States to "contain" what is fast becoming the world's second superpower.

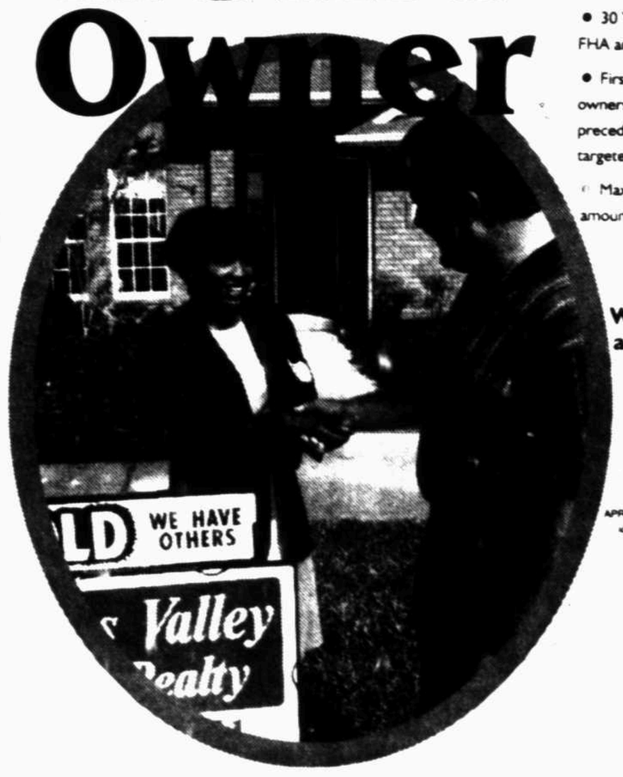

But Kantor has argued the opposite: that China will only respect American toughness — on Taiwan, human rights and other issues — if Washington does not back down when it comes to enforcing previously negotiated agreements.

"You hear the argument a lot that we should not be retaliating now," said Gregg Mastel, a China scholar at the Economic Strategy Institute, a Washington trade and economics think tank. "But it is clear that the Chinese are testing our credibility on intellectual property. They don't want to crack down on this gravy train, but they will do it if they fear it threatens their lifeline: exports."

Family doctors slow to use ulcer discovery: Cause is bacteria, not stress

By Daniel Haney
Associated Press

Arlene Ozburn got an excellent medical tip from a friend at work: Maybe her ulcers were caused by a bug.

Her HMO doctor pooh-poohed the idea. Weight was the problem, he said. Or maybe stress. He put her on Tagamet, the standard acid blocker.

It took two years of pain, two years of nagging, before Ozburn's physician gave in and had her checked for ulcer bacteria. A specialist quickly found the culprit — a germ called Helicobacter pylori — and gave her antibiotics.

"I felt better within a couple of days," said Ozburn. "I could not believe the difference."

She was cured. The ulcers were gone for good.

"Why do they put people through hell when there is this treatment?" Ozburn asked.

It's a question many ulcer sufferers are asking.

The discovery that bacteria cause stomach ulcers is one of the most amazing medical breakthroughs of this generation. Yet it is only slowly, grudgingly working its way into routine practice.

At some time in their lives, one in 10 Americans will have an ulcer. And like Ozburn, they almost certainly will come away from a doctor's visit with a prescription for the wrong medicine — one that may hold the disease at bay but not cure it.

Ozburn is a secretary in the veterinary department at the University of Arizona in Tucson, and she was lucky enough to know a professor who'd heard of the ulcer microbe. Like her, many others read in the newspaper or hear over coffee that there is a cure for their misery.

Digestive disease specialists say this is turning the treatment of one of humanity's most common afflictions upside down. Over and over, ulcer patients like Ozburn tell their disbelieving family physician the correct diagnosis and demand the right medicine.

"The thing that is most striking is that patients are more and more aware of this," said Dr. Gary Falk, a gastroenterologist at the Cleveland Clinic. "The patients come to the clinic, say they have a history of ulcer disease and want advice on this H. pylori stuff. But their doctor has not checked them for it."

The reason? There are several. But probably none is more important than the revolutionary nature of the discovery itself. It has meant doctors have to forget just about everything they learned in medical school about stomach ulcers.

Stress doesn't cause ulcers. Neither do coffee, spicy food or too much stomach acid. No, most ulcers are caused by H. pylori, a spiral-shaped bacterium that burrows into the lining of the stomach and duodenum. People may bear all the stress the world can heap upon them, but unless they are infected with H. pylori, they won't get ulcers.

Ulcers are an infectious disease, just like pneumonia or strep throat. And that means two weeks of the right pills can make them go away, probably forever.

It turns out that about half of all U.S. adults are infected with H. pylori. Most don't get ulcers. But when ulcers do occur, the bug is probably responsible for 80 percent or more. The only major exception is ulcers triggered by aspirin and some other pain killers.

"One thing is very simple," said Dr. Amnon Sonnenberg of the Veterans Affairs hospital in Albuquerque, N.M. "If you have an ulcer, then you should have antibiotic therapy. No gastroenterologist has the slightest doubt about this."

However, most people with ulcers don't see gastroenterologists, who specialize in digestive diseases. Instead they take their bellyaches to a general internist or family practitioner.

Sonnenberg estimates these primary care doctors are using antibiotics to cure about one-third of their ulcer patients these days. Instead, the front-line treatment remains the tried and true, acid-blocking drugs like Tagamet, Zantac and Pepcid. These medicines will heal an ulcer — temporarily. But in time, they often come back.

Even if family doctors have heard about using antibiotics for ulcers, many say they don't know enough about diagnosing the infection and choosing the drugs to cure it.

The experts are still arguing over the right combination of medicines. Perhaps 10 or 15 different mixtures are making the rounds. Even though all of them work, no one can say which is best. Many involve three different prescriptions and require taking about 15 pills a day.

One reason doctors feel unsure about this is because the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has not yet endorsed a particular combination of antibiotics for ulcers. And until that happens, drug companies cannot advertise — or even talk to doctors — about using their medicines to cure ulcers.

Temperatures continue to break record lows; snapped power lines leave many with no heat

Associated Press

Chicago's record low temperature of 19 below zero Saturday didn't faze Patrick O'Connell, standing out of the wind while he waited for a train.

"After all, this is why we live in Chicago. It's kind of exhilarating in a way," said O'Connell, 52, who was out waiting for a train. "It's something to pit yourself against."

Records for overnight low temperatures were rewritten Saturday from Utah, where Salt Lake City fell to 12 below zero, to Indiana and south into Alabama, where Huntsville posted a low of 7.

In the Black Hills of western South Dakota, the temperature dropped to 45 below at the little town of Rochford. Saturday's coldest reading in Minnesota was 47 below zero at Embarrass, something of a relief after the town of Tower fell all the way to 60 below zero on Friday.

Hundreds of thousands of people were without power Saturday because of the cold and because of ice breaking power lines.

At least 33 deaths had been blamed on the cold, snow, ice and rain over the last week.

"It isn't a lot of fun," Wayne Sharp said of putting up with the severe cold in a house with only a wood-burning stove for heat.

"We shut off about four rooms and kind of live in the living room and the kitchen," said Sharp, who runs a small dairy farm about 20 miles east of Valentine, Neb. And while his family was cold, he said his cows were irritable, with frostbitten teats.

Freezing rain put a slippery glaze of ice on highways, trees and power lines across the lower Atlantic Coast states as far south as the northern third of Georgia on Saturday.

In western North Carolina, snapping power lines left nearly 300,000 homes and businesses without electricity.

"It's been years since we've had a bad one like this," said George Flowe, a Duke Power Co. employee working to restore power in North Carolina's Mecklenburg County.

Snow blew through much of the East overnight. At least 17 inches had piled up since Thursday in southern West Virginia, with 13 in Maryland. The snow closed New York City's Kennedy airport for a couple of hours early in the morning, affecting only cargo flights.

The snow didn't amuse Marie Hammond of Bishopville, Md.

"We've cleared the driveway four times in the last 24 hours, I'll put it that way," she said.

Farm bill: Senate compromise is start of new struggle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators have taken the first steps toward writing a bipartisan farm bill, but big struggles remain before Congress can sprout final legislation.

Despite some partisan name-calling, Republicans and Democrats also are feuding within their own parties over what should be in the farm plan. Democrats kept a farm bill from reaching the House floor last week. But Republicans who oppose the sugar, dairy and peanut programs as anti-consumer — and anti-manufacturer — didn't help either.

The conflicts and contradictions seem endless.

The basic compromise taking form in the Senate will be viewed as no reform at all by the House, where an overhaul of basic programs was first proposed.

But the House can't label its overhaul as pure, either. Despite a major change in how corn, wheat, cotton and rice growers are supported by the government, basic laws that protect sugar, peanut and dairy farmers from low prices remained intact.

The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., says only "policy rubble" will occur if lawmakers tinker too much with the core program changes.

Under the House plan, payments to farmers would drop about 20 percent over seven years. Farmers would be guaranteed payments every year regardless of crop prices, and with more freedom to plant what they wanted without risk of losing payments. Nor could the government force acres to be idled as a condition of getting payments.

Senate Republicans and Democrats are tinkering in a big way, building a hybrid of old and new, further complicating a program already criticized as being beyond the ken of farmers and bureaucrats alike.

Senate Republicans say they are just holding their noses to get something passed. Once the House and Senate pass bills, negotiators will "work out the trash," said Andy Fisher, spokesman for the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Farm-state Democrats dislike the Republican plan, they say, because it cuts the link between prices and subsidy. They don't think farm spending should be cut at all, and they want a form of loan-based subsidies that could raise government spending, but target the money to small and medium farms.

They attack the basic Republican plan as welfare for farmers, big ones especially. Then they criticize the proposal for wiping out the permanent law, with roots in the nostalgia-evoking New Deal, that serves as the underpinning for subsidy programs.

F-14 pilot is hero to waitress who saw crash

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Waitress Chena Hill reached one quick conclusion after watching an F-14 Tomcat's dreadful descent into a cluster of Nashville homes.

The pilot was a hero.

Navy investigators may take months to determine why Lt. Cmdr. John Stacy Bates' fighter crashed after takeoff Monday.

They spent the week at the crash site, collecting pieces of the $35 million jet in boxes to be reassembled in their search for the cause.

Hill, 24, serving breakfast at the Waffle House on Monday morning, watched as the fighter jet circled over a tightly packed area that encompassed busy Interstate 24, a dozen apartment complexes, several motels, more than 10 office buildings and an elementary school. It seemed barely a couple of hundred yards away, she said.

Although the wing tips were see-sawing back and forth, Hill thought the pilot had enough control to eject.

But Bates, 33, didn't leave his plane, which crashed into a front yard and plowed through the home of Elmer Newson, 66, and his wife Ada, 63. The Newsoms died, along with a visitor, Ewing T. Wair, 53; Bates; and his radar officer, Lt. Graham Alden Higgins, 28.

"You could tell these people were trying to keep from hitting a populated area. They could have ejected," Hill said. "I think this man should be recognized not for wrecking this plane but for saving hundreds and hundreds of lives."

The first solid reports from on-scene investigators may bear Hill out.

"To be honest with you, we don't see any attempts at ejection. And that's very initial," Rear Adm. Skip Dirren, commander of the Naval Safety Center, said Thursday.

"When you look at an ejection seat, you can see whether things have been pulled to commence ejection. And on initial investigation, we don't see that," he said.

Bates, based at Miramar Naval Air Station in San Diego, had spent the weekend with his parents in Nashville, where they had gone backstage after a Grand Ole Opry show that featured Emmylou Harris, Bill Monroe and Marty Stuart.

When Bates said goodbye Monday morning, he told them to check his takeoff on their way home to Chattanooga.

Many to celebrate Reagan's birthday without The Gipper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On Ronald Reagan's 85th birthday Tuesday, House Speaker Newt Gingrich, retired Gen. Colin Powell and 500 others will celebrate the milestone at the restaurant where Reagan proposed to his wife.

But Reagan, who would call the occasion "the 46th anniversary of my 39th birthday," won't be there.

It's the latest agonizing sign that Alzheimer's disease may be taking a toll on Ronald Wilson Reagan, the nation's 40th chief executive.

Known as Dutch, The Gipper and The Great Communicator, Reagan is only seen these days by a few friends, staff and family.

The public hasn't seen him since he disclosed 15 months ago in a letter that he has Alzheimer's disease and he was beginning "the journey that will lead me into the sunset of my life."

The Reagan family wants the world to remember the avuncular, witty Reagan rather than a man with a memory-sapping disease.

"President Reagan is not comfortable attending large public events any longer," said spokeswoman Joanne Drake, who faithfully relays upbeat information about Reagan.

Daughter Maureen Reagan said a few months ago her father and the family are "very well aware" of his Alzheimer's disease, an irreversible neurological disorder that destroys the brain's memory cells.

Reagan and former first lady Nancy Reagan decline interview requests.

Fast forward: Glimpse of brave new world after telecom overhaul

WASHINGTON — After a historic update of the law, the brave new world of communications could gobble up local phone companies, breed fierce competition for customers, and give Big Brother a peephole into computer conversations.

The bill revamping the 1934 Communications Act was approved this week by Congress and is expected to be signed into law by President Clinton.

It would let local, long-distance and cable companies into each others' businesses, deregulate cable rates and allow media companies to expand their holdings more easily. It also would restrict smutty material on computer networks and television.

Though seismic change won't happen overnight, customers should brace for it.

Mergers, joint ventures and more informal alliances among local, long-distance and cable companies are expected as companies seek to acquire resources they need to offer customers one-stop shopping.

"It is entirely conceivable we'll see some combinations among the seven regional Bell companies," said Robert Sachs, a senior vice president of Continental Cablevision, the nation's third largest cable company. "But the probability is that two or three companies will come together. It won't be a re-creation of AT&T."

Local phone companies or cable systems might be gobbled up by long-distance companies. Or MCI, Sprint or AT&T might team up with a Bell company, analysts say. Sprint and a trio of cable companies — Tele-Communications Inc., the nation's biggest, Comcast Corp. and Cox Communications — are already in an alliance.

"The ones that form the right relationships will be the ones that survive," said Nate Davis, MCI's senior vice president of operations.

In time, people will no longer make distinctions among types of companies — like local, long-distance and cable, executives predict. They'll just think of them as providers, offering a diverse menu: telephone, television, computer connections, cellular, paging, and other mobile services.

"I'd be willing to bet Aunt Tilly will have a lot more choices, but when she will have more choices depends on where she lives," said Jeff Ward of Nynex, which provides local phone service to New York and parts of the northeast.

People living in New York, Illinois and California are expected to be the first to have multiple phone and cable providers. People living in rural areas will be among the last.

The advertising wars among AT&T, MCI and Sprint for long-distance business will pale in comparison to the jockeying by all the new companies competing for communications and entertainment dollars.

At stake is a big chunk of the $700 billion telecommunications industry where consumers have been accustomed to buying phone service and cable separately.

Ironically, the bill that takes away many longstanding legal and regulatory barriers for business also erects an unprecedented one for computer users.

To shield children from smut, the bill would outlaw for the first time the transmission of sexually explicit and other indecent materials to minors over computer networks. Violators would be fined up to $100,000 and could face jail terms.

The American Civil Liberties Union and computer user groups vow to challenge the provision in court. But the Christian Coalition and other supporters say it's needed too to protect children.

Some of the things federal regulators have deemed indecent for broadcasters are explicit references to nudity, sexual intercourse, urination and breast size.

How would the government find out if you sent a minor a nude picture electronically?

A computer access provider might monitor your electronic conversations and report you to the police.

In many ways, Forbes emerges as 1996 version of Perot

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — The most dynamic figure in the presidential race is a wealthy outsider who burst upon the scene, rose quickly in the polls and talks incessantly about economic reform. Shades of 1992?

In some respects, Steve Forbes is emerging as a 1996 version of Ross Perot.

While there are some telling differences between the two unorthodox candidates, in many ways the meteoric rise of the Forbes publishing heir has parallels to the Texas billionaire's 1992 run.

Furthermore, Forbes seems to be picking up much of the old Perot vote, at least within the Republican Party.

And, rather than feeling pique at Forbes' surge, Perot is hopeful that the Forbes phenomenon will work to his advantage down the road, re-energizing his own base, according to those familiar with Perot's thinking

Perot has said he has no immediate plan to run again. But the Reform Party he is creating seems custom made for only him.

"Forbes has been able to legitimately portray himself as an outsider. That is the strongest political current in the country. It was in 1992 and I think it is in 1996," said Jim Squires, a former top adviser and spokesman for Perot in 1992.

"He also has the same advantage Perot had — that, in being wealthy, people automatically assume you can't buy this guy. And that was very helpful to Perot and it's very helpful to Forbes."

The two have other similarities. Both come across as a bit eccentric. And both Perot and Forbes get testy when pressed hard about personal matters, as Forbes has done in refusing to disclose his income tax returns.

"He (Forbes) is too defensive, just like Perot. And he also has that phony smile. That's going to be a problem for him," Squires said.

While both Perot and Forbes have focused on economic overhaul, they come at it from different directions. Perot advocates balancing the budget and has not proposed tax cuts, which tend to increase the deficit.

Forbes' central proposal is for a 17 percent flat tax, which many economists suggest would seriously increase the federal deficit.

Even so, Forbes seems to have struck a popular chord, just as Perot did four years earlier. And Forbes is surging in the polls, either closing the gap with frontrunner Bob Dole or, in some polls, actually creeping ahead of the Senate majority leader.

Forbes and Perot may have different economic prescriptions, but the symbolism remains the same, suggests Bill Kristol, a former top aide to former Vice President Dan Quayle and now publisher of the Standard, a conservative journal.

"It's become politically correct for conservatives to support Forbes," Kristol said. Forbes is a less threatening, steadier political maverick than the volatile Perot, added Kristol.

For the Perot loyalists, "Forbes is the appetizer. Perot is the main course," said Kristol.

To a large degree, Forbes' sudden popularity is a measure of general GOP disenchantment with Dole and the other Republican contenders — and the widely held notion that Dole would have a hard time beating Clinton in the general election.

GOP pollster Frank Luntz, who has advised both Perot and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, contends the Forbes voters are "a little bit better educated and a little less angry" than the average Perot backers four years ago.

O.J.: Nicole padded abuse journal to void prenuptial agreement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson claimed in deposition testimony that his slain wife abused drugs and left false journal entries about spousal abuse as part of a scheme to void their prenuptial agreement.

Simpson never took the witness stand at his murder trial in the deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, where he was acquitted of all criminal charges.

Under five days of questioning by Daniel Petrocelli, the attorney for Goldman's father in a wrongful death lawsuit, Simpson tried to explain his ex-wife's journal entries.

Petrocelli asked whether Ms. Simpson "would write notes to herself or journal entries about your beating her when that didn't occur?"

"Yes, that's correct," Simpson responded.

"Because she wanted me to tear up my prenuptial agreement," Simpson said, "and I gather her lawyers and her came up with that as a scheme."

City to remember Julianne, victims

Girls' parents, legislators demand sentencing laws for sex offenders

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — The parents of four murdered schoolgirls including Amber Hagerman and Polly Klaas assembled in sad solidarity at an Arlington community gathering Saturday to call for tougher laws for sex offenders.

"It's time for us to put our foot down as a society and say 'No more Ambers, no more Pollys,'" said Marc Klaas, whose twelve-year-old daughter was kidnapped from her bedroom in Petaluma, Calif., during an October 1993 slumber party.

More than 200 people turned out Saturday morning despite icy roads and below-freezing temperatures to hear Klaas, Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas, several state legislators and others call for sentencing laws mandating life without parole for sex offenders convicted

One year after her death, Midlanders will pause to remember the tragically short life of Julianne Powell, while honoring all childhood victims of violent crime.

The life of the spirited 10-year-old was cut short Feb. 10, 1995, at the hands of a neighbor.

Midlanders are invited to gather 11 a.m. Saturday at the Midland County Courthouse lawn for a ceremony to remember the smallest and youngest victims of crime — the children.

A live oak— donated by Turf Specialities — will be planted and guest speakers will be featured. The speakers include the Rev. Bill Clark, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church and president of the Midland Association of Churches; District Attorney Al Schorre or prosecutor Teresa Clingman; County Commissioner Henry Goulet; and Juluis Brooks, mayor pro tem.

A variety of victims' rights advocates will be present as well.

"This memorial will be to remember Julianne and to recognize all child victims of crimes," said Martha Weaver, education director at the Midland Rape Crisis Center.

The public is invited to attend.

Julianne's murder was one of the most highly publicized cases in Midland's history. The 10-year-old was raped and murdered by Henry Lopez Ortiz, a neighbor at an apartment complex.

Ortiz was found guilty of capital murder and sentenced to life in prison.

Following Julianne's murder a candlelight vigil for victims was held on the courthouse lawn.

Later, a garden was dedicated to her at Santa Rita Elementary School, where she went to school, and a tree was planted in her memory at Dennis the Menace Park.

Saturday's ceremony is coordinated by the Permian Basin Shelter for Battered Women and Their Children, Midland Rape Crisis Center, Crisis Intervention Unit of the Midland County Sheriff's Department, Survivors of Homicide support group and the Court Appointed Special Advocate Voices for Children.

IHOP to come

Midland will be getting an International House of Pancakes restaurant later this year. Interdoc Corp. of Abilene, an International House of Pancakes franchise owner which also owns the Odessa restaurant, expects to close on the purchase of one of two sites next week, according to Leon Dollah, a company official. Once purchase of the land has closed, he said, construction will begin within two months and take 90 days to complete.

Girl gives birth

HOUSTON — A 14-year-old girl who was the subject of an intense search last month after running away from a shelter delivered her baby son Saturday in a Houston hospital.

Adela Quintana gave birth to a 6-pound 13-ounce son about 1:30 p.m. at LBJ Medical Center, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Family District Court Judge Mary Craft ruled last month that Miss Quintana will remain in state custody until a study evaluating possible homes for her and the baby is complete.

Midland pilot joins Texas Aerospace Commission

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland pilot Norma Webb has been named to the nine-member Texas Aerospace Commission, which focuses on bolstering and promoting Texas' aviation and aerospace economy.

"What we are all about is attracting aviation-related industry to Texas as an economic development in economically helping Texas," Mrs. Webb said.

The commission, which is appointed by the governor, is a policy-making body that was established in 1987 and re-established in 1989. The members serve six-year staggered terms.

The agency's mission is "to promote the aerospace and aviation industry of Texas by building working relationships between government, academia, and industry," according to documents furnished by Amy Kennedy-Reynolds, TAC's liaison to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"The Texas Aerospace Commission believes in the economic resource potential of the aerospace and aviation industry for Texas," according to the TAC's mission statement.

In being named to the commission, Mrs. Webb joins the company of fellow aviation enthusiasts, including vice chairman Walter Cunningham of Houston, who was an astronaut in the Apollo program during the late 1960s; and Dr. David Carr, an Austin dentist and former pilot.

Others serving on the commission are William Juett of Amarillo, Bryon Sehlke of Austin, T.C. Selman of Angleton, and Ronald Bliss, James Royer and Lee Kaplan, all of Houston.

"We would like to foster more aerospace activities out in the West Texas area," said Carr, chairman of the commission.

Teams say 1st Resolution Run, Fitness Fair was fun, good thing

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The upshot of Midland's first Resolution Run and Fitness Fair on Jan. 20 was to carry on with the event next year and turn it into a West Texas tradition.

"From the feedback, everybody had fun, and that's the name of the game," said Thomas Schneider, a marathoner who was coordinator of the half-marathon relay race in which 31 four-person teams competed. Each runner ran 3.275 miles.

The fastest team in the 13.1-mile run was The Road Kills, which ran the route in one hour, 13 minutes and 26 seconds at an average pace of about five minutes and 35 seconds per mile.

"It was a lot of fun," said Al Steel, the Road Kills' 38-year-old team captain. "It was a good format."

Steel said that fellow runners "had nothing but good things to say about it — what a great time they had. They want to make it an annual event."

On the Road Kills' team were Steel, 38, of Odessa, Nori Carcieri, 41, of Denton, Tim Newell, 36, of Albuquerque, N.M., and Ben Moturi, 47, of Denton. Moturi, the team's anchor, was a runner on Kenya's 1984 Olympic team in Los Angeles. Three of Road Kills' runners — Steel, Carcieri and Newell — have qualified to compete in the 100th running of the Boston Marathon, set for later this year.

The race's fastest women's team, the Thirty Somethings, finished the course in one hour, 27 minutes and 47 seconds for about a six-minute, 40-second per-mile pace.

Midlander Christie Lammers, who was the team's leader, said that she definitely will return next year to run in the Resolution Run '97.

"It was really good. It was a lot of fun," Ms. Lammers, 39, said of the 1996 race. "More people will come next year. Everybody that came enjoyed it and will tell their friends. It was a good race."

On Ms. Lammers' Thirty Somethings team were Kathleen Liebert, 38, of Midland, and Mary Jo Rapine, 35, and Mar-

After lifesaving transplant, parents wait for son's recovery from damage

HOUSTON (AP) — Now that 16-year-old Robbie Mooneyham has a new liver, the wait is on to see how well he can recover from the damage caused by his diseased organ.

The Cypress Creek High School sophomore was on the brink of death before he received the transplant Friday.

He was listed in critical but stable condition Saturday night at Hermann Hospital, said spokeswoman Lisa Lagrone.

Mooneyham's original liver had stopped functioning and his brain was swelling in the hours before the new liver, which originally was headed for a patient in Galveston, arrived at the hospital for the five-hour surgery.

"We needed a miracle, and believe it or not, it happened," said Joel Mooneyham, the boy's father and an auto mechanics teacher at Cypress Creek.

Dr. Patrick Wood said there's a good chance Mooneyham has no brain damage, but there was no way to be sure until he comes out of his drug-induced coma.

Doctors had kept Mooneyham comatose to protect his brain. The medication was stopped Saturday morning, and it was hoped that Mooneyham would become lucid this weekend.

"Hopefully, he'll wake up, open his eyes and say hello to his parents," surgeon Howard Monsour said.

The parents said they expect a complete recovery.

"I don't feel like God would have allowed it to go this far and then it turned into a tragedy," Frieda Mooneyham said.

Wood said Mooneyham could recover enough to continue playing football. He

Learning Latin might be easier than investment language

Ott

One of the more interesting aspects of growing older is that at some point in your life — usually somewhere between the ages of 35 and 45 — you come to the rather nasty conclusion that the time has finally arrived when you need to make what little money you have accumulated over the years to begin — and I quote — "working for you."

So you invest.

Which means you have to learn a new language, both the written and spoken version.

Learning Latin might be easier.

Before entering this exciting new world of high finance, your way of handling money was relatively simple. You received your paycheck, deposited it in your checking account and wrote checks until there was no money left. Hopefully, this unfortunate occurrence would coincide with the arrival of your next paycheck.

Then the process would repeat itself.

Now all of that has changed.

Realizing that you might indeed live past the ripe old age of 65 and believing the horror stories about Social Security eventually running out of cash, you say to yourself, "Gee, I'd better have a little something stashed away for my later years."

So you begin looking around for ways to make those few dollars you do have multiply. Yes, sir. You decide now is the time to become one rich son of a gun.

After all, you've heard the stories. If a young person would put 8 percent of his salary into a 401K-type program, he could be a millionaire by the time he retires.

Hallelujah.

All you've got to do is learn how to invest.

The first thing you do is begin reading — or at least pretending to read — the Wall Street Journal and other similar publications. This, of course, will automatically make you a very dull person. It will also provide you with just enough information to become truly dangerous. But, hey, you have to start somewhere.

Then you begin picking up a few key phrases here and there, followed by actually learning what those phrases mean and using them in real sentences.

Here's an example. "I have 20 percent of my money invested in the Managed GIC Fund, which, of course, provides a competitive yield while maintaining principal stability."

OTT: Don't quit your job, you ain't one rich son of a gun just yet

(From 1B)

Or, you might say, "Personally, I prefer the Growth and Income Fund because it invests in stocks that appear to be undervalued in the marketplace, and thus can be expected to have less down-side price volatility than stocks in general."

If necessary, stand in front of the bathroom mirror for hours at a time, repeating those kinds of sentences until they become second nature to you.

Having done that, you are finally ready to make the big leap. You have calculated that you have x-number of dollars to play with, and now you must determine how that money will be invested ... your company 401K plan, IRAs, CDs, the stock market, savings bonds, or an old-fashioned savings account.

It's your choice.

But the bottom line is this: once you make your decision, the real fun begins.

That's because every so often you will get something in the mail that will tell you how much richer you are today than you were three months ago.

It will become a true highlight in your life.

Indeed, it will be with great anticipation that you rip open the envelope, excitedly estimating in your mind just how much closer you are to becoming a millionaire.

After all, the stock market has been going through the roof, and you're heavily invested in it. So you quickly unfold the enclosed piece of paper and begin reading.

Duh.

That's right. You don't understand a word you read.

So you contact an expert, a person who actually SUBSCRIBES to the Wall Street Journal.

He interprets the data for you.

The bottom line?

Don't quit your job. You ain't one rich son of a gun just yet.

CRIME: Citizens favor toughening of sex offender laws

(Fr[illegible] 1B)

of a second felony offense.

The meeting at the junior high school gymnasium in Arlington was the latest in a series of gatherings spurred by the Jan. 13 abduction of nine-year-old Amber Hagerman.

A witness told police he saw Amber dragged screaming off her bicycle in an abandoned grocery store parking lot a few blocks from her grandparents' Arlington home. Her nude body was found less than a week later in a creek bed, her throat cut. Police have no suspects.

"We want to make sure that the children in our area are protected," said Randal McKinney, 39, whose daughter was in Girl Scouts with Amber. "It's a shame that you can't go ride a bike and not get picked up and abducted and never seen again."

Many audience members expressed anger that current laws mandating disclosure of convicted sex offenders' identities are not being uniformly enforced or followed. Some said they even wanted to see a "one strike" law that would put sex offenders in prison for life after one conviction.

"I'd like, once you've done it, you're out of here," said Noelle Bullock, 31, of Fort Worth.

When the moderator asked audience members whether they favored the death penalty for child molesters, they jumped to their feet, clapped and cheered.

The community outrage following Amber's kidnapping and death echoes the outcry heard in California after Polly's death.

That notorious case prompted several get-tough measures, including California's "three strikes" law that mandates 25 years to life in prison for anyone convicted of a felony after two serious or violent prior felonies.

The suspect in that case, Richard Allen Davis, 41, has a history of kidnapping, rape and robbery and was on parole at the time of Polly's death. The "three strikes" law doesn't apply to him since it was passed after the crime. A judge is expected to be assigned to the case Monday.

Texas sex offender laws were strengthened after seven-year-old Ashley Estell of Dallas was abducted from a Plano park and killed in 1993. The man convicted of her murder had a record of sex offenses.

Sponsored by state Sen. Florence Shapiro, R-Plano, "Ashley's Laws" mandate a sentence of 35 years without parole for anyone convicted of a first-degree felony sex offense if that person has two prior felony convictions.

Among other provisions, the laws also require that information about pedophiles being released into the community be published in local newspapers and made available to the public upon written request.

Amber's parents, Donna Whitson and Richard Hagerman, attended Saturday's meeting but did not address the crowd.

"The more voices that are heard, the better the chances of these laws being changed," Ms. Whitson said after the meeting. "We're not gonna lay down until these laws are changed."

Among the speakers at the meeting was Patsy Day, founder and executive director of Victims Outreach in Dallas. Day's 14-year-old daughter, Jennifer, was abducted from a Dallas doughnut shop in 1985 and her body found three days later. The crime was never solved.

The audience included Arlington resident Toni Rhodes, mother of Maggie Rhodes, who was a five-year-old kindergartner when she was kidnapped and killed in Arlington in 1988. Jackie Barron Wilson was convicted of the slaying in 1994.

Saturday, Ms. Shapiro said she would like to see the law making murder of a child under the age of six a capital offense extended to the murder of any child. She also backed a "two strikes" law.

"You offend a child once, you offend a child twice — and you're in life in prison without parole," Shapiro said to solid applause.

Aggravated robbery

Midland police are investigating an aggravated robbery that happened Saturday at the Town and Country convenience store at 2100 S. Midkiff Road.

Most of the damage was kept to the one bedroom. Fire officials suspect a space heater caused the fire. Jack Nichols and his two children were not at home at the time of the fire.

The cost of damage is unkown. The owner had no insurance, according to County Fire Marshall Dave Little.

Report: Magic Johnson plans 12-screen movie theater in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Magic Johnson's return to the NBA has sparked the Los Angeles Lakers. His next entrepreneurial venture could help rejuvenate an inner-city neighborhood in Houston.

A letter of intent has been signed by Johnson's business managers to build a 12-screen movie theater at the Northline Mall, the Houston Chronicle reported in its Saturday editions.

Johnson, who this week resumed his playing career with the Los Angeles Lakers after retiring in 1991 following his disclosure that he had the virus that causes AIDS, opened his first Magic Johnson Movie Theaters in the riot-scarred South-Central neighborhood of Los Angeles last June.

The joint venture with Sony Theaters has been a big hit, both at the box office and for the community.

Ticket sales rank it among the top five theaters in the nation, according to a survey by Entertainment Data, and area retailers say their business has picked up.

Johnson wants to have the same impact in other communities, including Houston, Atlanta, Chicago, New York and Washington, said Marc Pascucci, a spokesman for Johnson's theaters.

Pascucci, who said a deal will soon be signed in Atlanta, said Houston is seen as an especially good choice because not many new theaters have been built lately.

Sony could help with the Houston venture because it has six theaters in Houston.

But Pascucci would neither confirm nor deny that Northline was the chosen location. "I can't comment on that deal. We don't deny it. We don't comment on pending locations," he said.

jory Stewart, 37, both of Lubbock. Three of the runners, Ms. Lammers, Ms. Liebert, and Ms. Stewart, are running in the Boston Marathon.

Ms. Rapine is an ultra-marathoner who races in 50-mile foot-races.

"It's fun. I love it," Ms. Lammers said of running, which she has been doing for 17 years. Her initial motivation to run was "just to lose weight — about 20 pounds. And then I just loved it. I'd run every day. But I don't have any problem with my weight any more. I can eat whatever I want — pretty much."

Midland City Councilman Berry Simpson, who directs races and runs marathons, said runners run and compete for reasons beyond simple exercise.

"We say we do (run for exercise), but there are lots of easier ways to get exercise," Simpson said. "Hardly anybody will do any exercise just for fitness sake. If it doesn't catch your attention or imagination, or if it's not fun to you, at some point, you are not going to keep doing it. If it's not fun, you are going to quit."

And to Simpson, racing is fun.

"I try to get people out to races as much as I can, because that's the fun part. If they are out there jogging everyday and doing the hard work, they need to get to the fun part — the race."

SAVE: Transplant recipient's chance for recovery is good, doctors say was a fullback on his school's sophomore team. Mooneyham also played the drums, bass guitar and trumpet in his church's band.

"If they recover the way we want them to, there really isn't much in the way of limitations," Wood said. "My guess is he'll have more limitations put on him by others."

Mooneyham has a 90 percent chance of surviving a year and an 83 percent chance of surviving five years, doctors said.

Doctors still aren't sure why Mooneyham's liver began deteriorating three weeks ago, but Wood said there was some indication it was a viral infection.

Virus-fighting cells were found in the biopsy on the dead liver.

"Something was making his liver very unhappy, and his body was fighting that," Wood said.

Life Gift arranged for the liver donation and was to be the go-between for the Mooneyhams and the donor's family should they choose to have contact. Whether they meet is up to the donor's family.

The liver originally was headed to a Galveston hospital, but Dr. Tom Braughn of the University of Texas Medical Branch called Wood and offered it for Mooneyham.

"His patient was not nearly as sick as Robbie," Wood said. "He was willing to give it to Robbie, and he would expect us to do the same thing."

tion round in which members of the audience participate in the bee.

Teams participating last year were Texas Commerce Bank, Mobil Oil, Exxon, Texaco, Arco, Bank One, Texas Instruments, Parker & Parsley, Chevron, Midland College — sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram — and a United Way team — sponsored by Norwest Bank Texas.

A maximum of 12 corporate teams will compete this year. The difference in the corporate bee and traditional spelling bees is that team members may confer on each word before spelling. Study books, identical to those used in the Reporter-Telegram's Annual MISD Spelling Bee, will be provided to all team members.

Company representatives wishing to register a team or obtain more information should contact Midland Need to Read, 685-4572.

All costs of the annual event are underwritten by the Reporter-Telegram in order that total proceeds can go directly to Need to Read, the city's literacy council and United Way agency that provides tutoring for more than 200 adults lacking reading skills.

Police arrest, charge six fraternity members in alleged hazing incident

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — Six members of a Stephen F. Austin University fraternity were arrested after an alleged hazing incident.

The members of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, including five officers, were arrested Thursday, said university Police Chief William Hill.

Charges also were filed against the fraternity as an organization, he said.

Arrested and charged with hazing were president Rocky Sanders, vice president Clay Leveritt, treasurer Jason Hendrix, secretary Brady McGuinness, ritualist Sean O'Donohoe and member Michael Engstrom.

They were released after posting $1,500 bonds.

The alleged incident occurred around Jan. 20.

"We were given a set of photos taken at a party thrown by a group ... on a farm outside of Nacogdoches," said Hill. "The photos showed activity we believed to be hazing."

Harold S. Haller
President Harold S Haller & Company

"We are living in prison, under tyranny of the prevailing style of interaction between people, between teams, between divisions. We need to throw overboard our theories and practices of the present and build afresh."
—Dr. W. Edwards Deming The New Economics

Many companies are finding that adoption of the Deming philosophy is a matter of economic survival. Gaining knowledge of his methods is an essential first step in organizational and personal transformation.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram and Dr. Harold Haller present six unique workshop sessions to capture the content and spirit of the famous four-day seminars of the late Dr. W. Edwards Deming. If you have always wanted to attend a four-day Deming seminar, but could not get away for four consecutive days or if the cost seemed too prohibitive, this seminar is the solution.

In this series, Harold Haller, Ph.D. outlines the theory and explains the meaning of Dr. Deming's management principles. Participants learn ways to improve quality and productivity as they are guided through a series of unique videotapes, demonstrations and tutorials. Dr. Haller facilitates discussions following each tape, engaging participants in working group assignments related to each tape and discussion session.

Attend any single session! Learn more by attending the entire series! This series consists of six (6) stand-alone, yet integrated sessions that occur one day, every other month. You will gain from a single session. You will learn much more by attending the complete series.

AVIATOR: TAC seeks to build space-related industry, pilot says

mer Texas attorney general and speaker of the Texas House of Representatives — said West Texas would be well-suited for aircraft experimentation and that abandoned U.S. Air Force bases could be developed into sites for aviation-related research.

Mrs. Webb said TAC will seek to build space-related industry, so that "Texas will remain the forerunner" in space technology and exploration.

NASA is "really excited about having a functioning commission. We've got a real big mission in trying to retain what we have (in aerospace) and then grow," Mrs. Webb said.

Some Southern states, such as Alabama and Florida, "are becoming extremely competitive and are wooing some of our aviation-related industry to their states," she said.

As a West Texan, Mrs. Webb's interests in aviation and aerospace include expanding aviation, promoting aviation-aerospace studies in the classrooms, and in developing aviation-related jobs. Those would include the manufacture of airplanes, aircraft parts and avionics, and the repair, maintenance and renovation of aircraft.

Mrs. Webb, an artist and businesswoman, is a private pilot. She is a former teacher and director of communications and fund-raiser for the Confederate Air Force in the early 1990s.

Mrs. Webb said Gov. George W. Bush has mandated that in 1996 the TAC focus more on "aviation-related types of economic developments in the communities."

"And he wants to see some of it happen in West Texas and get aviation-related curriculum into our colleges and universities," Mrs. Webb said.

Midland College offers courses in aviation technology at Midland International Airport.

Another example of promoting aviation in West Texas would be showcasing the CAF, which maintains and flies World War II aircraft, and the American Airpower Heritage Museum at the airport.

"It is important for the Texas economy that we retain our aviation-related and aerospace-related industry and that we seek ways to make them increase in Texas," Mrs. Webb said.

FARM & RANCH

Ranchers, farmers hope for good 96

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The old saying speaks of eternal hope among West Texas cotton farmers and ranchers.

"This is next-year country," noted Hoot Leonard, a Midland rancher who has retired from farming cotton that had been his upbringing and fare for decades.

His hope, like that of other ranchers who are beset by dry conditions and low cattle market prices and like cotton farmers who are moaning over the drought-like weather and assaults by the boll weevil and the beet army worm, is that agricultural conditions will improve in 1996.

"We will live over it," Leonard said optimistically. "I moved over here (to Midland County) in the early 1950s - droughted-out over in Martin County - and rented an irrigated farm in 1953."

That was during the seven-year drought of the 1950s.

"We didn't have boll weevils back then, but we had leaf worms, cabbage loopers," recalled Leonard. "For several years in the 1950s, it didn't rain enough to plant a crop. The land was fresh and new, and they sure made some excellent irrigated crops back then in the 1950s. In spots, somebody would make a crop."

Midland is mostly dryland farming - without irrigation.

To make things "right" in 1996, ranchers simply are requesting the obvious: good ground-soaking rains to produce tall and protein-rich grasses and a health market.

To start with, cotton farmers want, and would demand it if they could, prolonged freezing cold weather. After that, they would order a solid snow to blanket the farmland, generous spring-planting rains, particularly in April, May, and June, adequate rainfall throughout the growing season, bumper cotton crops, and money-making and debt-freeing cotton prices.

"We never give up hope, but it doesn't look really bright," admitted Leonard. "The rangeland is really getting in bad shape. You can see the dust a long time before you can see the cows coming."

The farmland is about in the same shape.

But that could change in 1996 if a prolonged hard freeze were to kill off large populations of the hibernating boll weevil; if heavy snows were to fall and bring deep moisture into the dry soil; if spring rains were to bring in more moisture for planting; if timely rains fell in the growing season; if hailstorms and windstorms were not to damage crops; if infestations by the boll weevil, bollworm, beet army worm, and aphids were minimal; if beneficial insects such as the lady bug, the praying mantis, and the lacewing were in effective numbers; if a bumper crop were produced, and if cotton prices were high and profitable.

> "A good freeze would knock the [boll weevil] population back where it may be closer to tolerable," > Doug Paxton, Entomologist

"We've got to have a cold winter and a hard freeze for a week continuously - not to get up above freezing - (in order to crippled the boll--weevil population)," said Midland farmer-rancher J.D. Crawford, who has survived droughts, hailstorms, and slumps in the market. "They (boll weevils) use up their body fat (in an attempt to survive the freeze), and then they don't have enough strength to survive," said Crawford, who has lived in Midland since 1932.

And the old Midland country's rangeland this year "is the worse I've seen since the 1950s," Crawford reflected. "Everyone is trying to sell their cattle off instead of trying to hold them. They are keeping their turf better (than in years past). Ranchers now are managing it. They are just biting the bullet and selling the (older) cows" at 20 cents a pound. Last year, the market price was double that - 39 to 40 cents.

"We didn't get enough moisture to grow any winter grass," he noted. "The turf is not dead yet. There's one place I only got seven inches of rain" so far this year.

The average Midland rainfall is an official 15 inches but only 10.46 inches have been gauged so far in 1996 by the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Area-wide, the rainfall has been spotted.

A gauge of 1995's meager cotton crop is in the output of the Midland Farmers Cooperative cotton gin, which this year is ginning about 5,250 bales.

"No rain, the boll weevil, the army beet worm, and hail" all combined to make severe inroads into the 1995 harvest, noted Delton Stone, the co-op's manager. "If you don't make any cotton, it makes no difference how much it is a pound."

But 1995 won't be the worse season for Midland County, which usually has about 30,000 planted-in-cotton acres. (Not all Midland County cotton is ginned at the co-op.) The co-op's 1983 yield was just over 2,700 bales. The gin processed 22,616 bales in 1979's bumper-crop year, which was a "next-year" crop.

In 1983, the 10-year average was 13,300 bales.

The gin processed 12,000 bales in 1985 but ginned about 18,000 bales in 1992. Overall, Midland County produced 28,900 bales in 1992. Midland cotton is also ginned by Stanton and Midkiff gins.

In recent years, production has been declining.

Several years of mild winters have aggravated the insect problem.

Without an extended hard freeze day and night, "we are really going to be in trouble next year," asserted Midland farmer Ervin Baumann. "The boll weevil, he's out there in the pastures and fields right now waiting to come out next year. He's hibernating." The cold could kill the weevil pretty well out.

And the cold could make inroads into the leave-eating beet army worm, which is a moth in its adult stage.

And it was the beet army worm which wrought havoc and devastation on cotton crops in the Concho Valley in the San Angelo area and in the Rio Grande Valley.

"They stripped the stalks," Baumann said of fields in the Ballinger area. "They (farmers) didn't put a (cotton) stripper in the field."

Nemesis of the 1995 West Texas cotton crop is a combination of low rainfall and a series of mild winters which were conducive to a mushrooming of boll weevil and beet army worm populations, according to Dr. Charles Allen, a district entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX)'s in Fort Stockton.

"Six mild winters in a row is why we are having major problems," Allen said. "It was the beet-army worm's year, and it would have been with or without the (boll-weevil) eradication spray program.

Within the agricultural community, there is talk that the intense aerial spraying of the boll weevil killed off large numbers of beneficial insects, which then failed to stop the beet army worm's progressive. "The eradication program probably did cause the problems to escalate," Allen suggested.

"I've just heard a lot of people say 'It just wasn't a good cotton year,' " said Allen. "There were a very few beet army worms (in the Midland area), and I don't think they hurt the crops that much."

But the San Angelo area's cotton crop was stripped by billions of the beet army worms.

Allen said that the beet army worm moths were blown into the San Angelo area from South Texas and Mexico by hurricane winds, which at mid-summer stalled over the Concho Valley. Moths reproduced, and their worms attacked the young plants.

Midland's poor cotton crop is "more weather-related," Allen said. "It just wasn't a good cotton year. The boll weevil "took some of the crop" but most damage was from lack of rainfall and a rainstorm, which took out about 2,500 acres of cotton in Midland County.

"More than anything else, it (the beet army worn) put the fright in us," Allen said.

Midland-based TAEX entomologist Doug Paxton noted cotton's damage by hail, drought-like conditions, and a "fair amount" of beet army worm damage and much more boll-weevil damage.

"Usually, we will get a good overall rain," Paxton said. "But this year, all we got was little spotty rains here and there. Those that got rain kept getting rain. Those that didn't, never saw very much. It was weird year for rain; it didn't go very far.

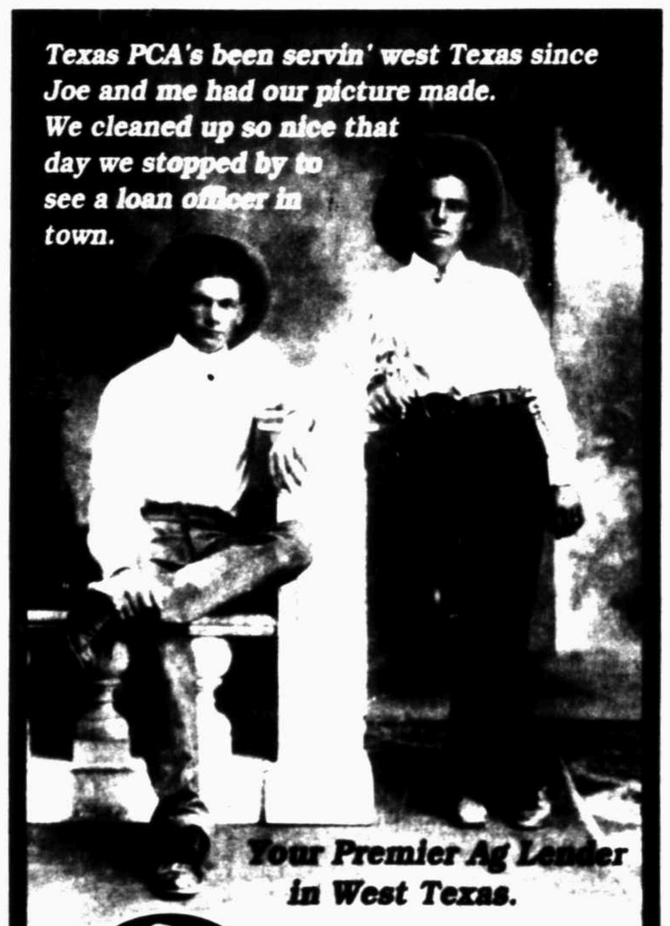

"This was a bad cotton year, anyway, because it was so dry," said Paxton, who noted that a good freeze would "knock the (boll-weevil) population back where it may be closer to tolerable - closer to manageable."

Dennis Wallace of the United States Department of Agriculture's Farm Service Agency in Midland observed that Midland's cotton "crop went to hell in a hand basket.

"We didn't have any rain to speak of ... for the third year in a row. The crop is steadily getting worse every year: No moisture during the winter. No moisture during the growing season. It's just a bad situation for agriculture farming and ranching. Even the irrigated crops are down."

The crop is "off by 50 percent at least," he said. "If we don't get some rain pretty quick, it's going to be even worse next year. A foot of snow would make everybody feel a lot better.

"It's just as bad for the ranchers," Wallace said. "They haven't had any grass growing for two years to speak of. And the cattle market has just been going down, down, down."

Producers vote on sheep referendum

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midlanders who were involved in the production, feeding or importation of sheep or sheep products in 1994 are eligible to vote in the Feb. 6 U.S. Department of Agriculture's referendum on a proposed Sheep and Wool Promotion, Research, Education and Information Order.

Sheep-and-wool producers may register for the referendum and vote in-person in the Midland County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) according to Earnest Kiker, TAEX agricultural agent for Midland County.

If the referendum is approved, the sheep-and-wool promotion program would be funded through mandatory assessments.

Domestic producers and feeders would be assessed one cent per pound on sales of live sheep and two cents per pound on sales of greasy wool.

Importers would be assessed one cent per pound on imported degreased wool and wool products.

For the order to go into effect, the proposals must be approved either by a simple majority of voters or by voters who account for two-thirds of the sheep-and-wool production represented in the referendum.

Ballots will be counted by the USDA's Farm Service Agency.

Copies of the referendum rules, the proposed order, and additional information is available in the Midland County TAEX Office. The telephone number is 687-1351.

Lon Hatamiya, who is administrator of the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service which has oversees federal research and promotion programs, noted that importers of "only" raw wool would not be eligible to vote in the nationwide referendum.

Frostbitten ears

AP Laserphoto

A cow tends to its three-day-old calf on John Robert Ray's farm in Platte County, Mo., Thursday. Bitterly cold weather may cause difficulties as cattle give birth on wind-swept fields. With temperatures expected in the double digits below zero, young calves run the risk of losing the tips of their ears.

The way the West lost

Associated Press

FORT WORTH, — It was a match between two heavyweights at yesterday's Stock Show Rodeo.

In one corner was Terry Don West, the second-place finisher in last year's world bull riding title race. West's quest was to stay in the ring for eight seconds atop National Finals bull Wild Red Man.

But within the first three seconds, the stalwart spinner had West on the ropes. As West was bucked off, his hand caught in his riding rope.

Wild Red Man flung the Henryetta, Okla., cowboy like a rag doll for several seconds before the rodeo clowns distracted the animal, allowing West to free his hand.

"I feel like someone beat the dog out of me," West said of his wild ride during the Southwestern Exposition and Livestock Show Rodeo's matinee performance at Will Rogers Memorial Coliseum. "I feel like I got whipped up on my legs. The only thing that is not sore are my ribs. That's because I had on a vest on."

After West's ride, announcer Bob Tallman used the massive Lamavision instant-replay screen to show fans how West's protective vest prevented him from being hooked by the bull's large horns.

"Just watch how that vest is helping him out," Tallman told the crowd of about 4,000.

Within minutes, paramedics whisked West into the Justin Sportsmedicine room, a training facility inside the coliseum. It was a familiar place for West, who last year rebounded from several leg injuries to come within $3,200 of wresting the title from Jerome Davis of Archdale, N.C.

The title race came down to the last bull at the National Finals Rodeo two months ago in Las Vegas. West might have won if he had stayed healthy during the regular season.

"I went to 43 rodeos and competed only four months," said West, noting that most world-class competitors enter at least 80 meets. The Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association allows competitors to enter up to 125.

"The key for me will be to stay healthy," West said of his chances in 1996.

West, who earned $132,133 last year, has stayed on some of the sport's toughest animals, including Bodacious, the PRCA's top bull in 1994 and '95.

At the Stock Show Rodeo, West tied for fourth in the first go-round with a score of 85 atop Sammy Andrews' fast spinning High Voltage.

Wild Red Man was a comparable match, but the bull had West's number yesterday. The bull whipped West down inside his spin. Bull riders dub that type situation as "getting in the well."

West escaped with a twisted ankle. After receiving medical treatment, he threw his rigging bag over his shoulder and limped to the next rodeo.

Injured 22-Year-Old Bull Rider Listed In Critical Condition

Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — A 22-year-old rodeo rider whose skull was fractured by a bucking bull was in serious condition Wednesday night, a hospital spokesman said.

Jeremy Janous, a second-year pro from San Marcos, had been in critical condition Tuesday after undergoing emergency surgery at Harris Methodist Fort Worth Hospital.

Janous was injured Monday night during the second go-round of the bullriding competition at the Southwestern Exposition and Livestock Show and Rodeo in Fort Worth's Will Rogers Memorial Coliseum.

Janous, who has about $6,500 in career earnings, was riding Gunslinger, billed as one of the top bulls in the nation, when the animal took a high jump and slammed the top of his head into Janous' forehead.

The rider was unconscious before he hit the ground.

West Texas Expo Center

West Texas Expo Center is a non-profit organization that will provide facilities for recreational and competitive events in the West Texas area. The facility is designed for a variety of family oriented activities, including horse and livestock shows, rodeos, fairs, educational seminars, trade and craft shows, art exhibits, concerts, and a Western heritage Museum. An added benefit to the community will be the substantial increase in commerce through tourism.

Use of the facility will be donated to the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center's Equestrian Program. Presently the Cerebral Palsy Center has to discontinue its equestrian program during the winter months. The West Texas Expo Center will enable the CP Center to have a year-round equestrian program, conduct expanded programs for more children, offer indoor activities and playday competition with peers, and invite similar types of programs for area, regional and state competition.

The Western heritage Museum will have appeal to all citizens who love the American West. Various pioneer ranching families in the area will display their comprehensive collection of artifacts. Exhibits, photographs and multi media material will contribute to the education of our youth and help all of us realize that the spirit, values and issues that shaped the American West can be an integral part of the future.

Would you like to purchase a brick to be used in the construction of the West Texas Expo Center? For a donation of $100 or more, you may designate the inscription. Buy a brick for yourself or as a gift for a friend.

Family fulfills Texan's final wish: go into eternity — Cadillac style

HESPERIA, Calif. (AP) — Victor Ajax Browning Sr. wore his favorite jogging togs and red corduroy cap, a smile was on his lips, a seat belt across his 83-year-old body. He was driven in style in his baby blue Cadillac.

Only thing was, Victor Ajax Browning Sr. was dead.

"That's the best he's looked in a year," his grandson Victor "Shane" Browning told the Victorville Daily Press in a story published Saturday.

"I am dead serious — no pun intended."

His granddad rubbed elbows with President Lyndon B. Johnson and even drank vodka in Red Square. When he died in his Wimberley, Texas, home Tuesday, Victor Ajax Browning Sr. wanted to go out in style.

His final wish was to be a passenger in his beloved 1990 Cadillac Seville and to be driven the 1,000 miles to his California cremation. So Browning's son, Victor Browning Jr., and grandson drove his propped-up body 20 hours to a relative's home in Hesperia on Thursday.

On Friday, family members gathered to laugh and drink and remember Browning one more time before taking him to a Victorville crematorium.

"Granddaddy would want us here drinking a beer, eating food and remembering the good times," said Elliotte Fajardo, who runs his own mortuary service in Victorville. "That's how I want to go."

Browning, an insurance executive and bond underwriter before retiring, had a lifelong love of Cadillacs and high style inspired his final wish. For the last two years, he insisted that his dream ride to eternity be fulfilled, although his wife was initially opposed. Vic Jr. said his father reminded him 100 times.

In April, Browning was gravely ill following bouts with diabetes, leukemia, heart surgery and several strokes. Many family members came to terms with the inevitable before Browning died in Wimberley.

After picking up the embalmed body and required documents, Vic Jr. and Shane headed off on their four-state journey. The trip along Interstate 10 was anything but morbid, according to the two Brownings, both Texans.

'Granddaddy would want us here drinking a beer, eating food and remembering the good times. That's how I want to go.'

— Elliotte Fajardo

"This wasn't a time for mourning for us. It was a time for us to do what granddad wanted us to do," Shane said. "We'd be having a conversation among ourselves, and we'd turn around and say, 'Hey, granddad, what'd you think of that?' And dad and I would laugh, because you'd almost expect him to lift that cap up off his eyes and say, 'Give me a beer!'"

After passing through Texas, New Mexico and Arizona without a hitch, the Brownings got caught up in a Border Patrol check point outside Blythe, California.

The Border Patrol agent "sticks his head in and looks at granddad and says, 'How ya doin' sir?' I said, 'Oh, he's asleep.'

And he said, 'Damn, he's sleepin' pretty hard.' I said, 'He's been sleepin' ever since Texas. (The agent) didn't have a clue."

The story sent family members bursting out in hearty laughter.

Browning made his fortune in insurance and counted Lyndon Johnson among his clients and golfing acquaintances. With wealth came a taste for the finer things. Browning bought his first Cadillac in 1942.

On Saturday, the family planned to toast Browning during a service at Fajardo's home. A recording of Frank Sinatra's "My Way" was selected fo, the service. Afterward, his ashes will head back to Texas aboard his beloved Cadillac.

"I think we as Americans are conditioned to be mournful and sorrowful of a passing to the extent that it becomes a detriment to our lives," said Fajardo. "Sure, there needs to be a time for sorrow. But at the same time, we need to celebrate."

Complaint accuses seven car dealerships of fraud

AUSTIN (AP) — Seven car dealerships in Austin, Houston and Angleton could have their sales licenses lifted for allegedly defrauding consumers and creditors since 1989, according to the Texas Department of Transportation.

A formal complaint filed with an administrative law judge names Apple Toyota, Apple Dodge and Chevrolet Country in Austin; Apple Chevrolet, Greenspoint Dodge and Greenspoint Isuzu in Houston; and Apple Chevrolet Oldsmobile in Angleton, south of Houston.

The TxDOT complaint alleges the agencies and Jack Apple Jr. of Houston violated the Motor Vehicle Commission Code and Deceptive Trade Practices Act. The complaint accuses Apple and persons reporting directly to him of directing the fraudulent activities.

Apple declined comment on the allegations. But His attorney, Tom Albright of Austin, said Apple and the dealerships deny knowledge of wrongdoing and will detail their positions in written responses to the administrative law judge within two weeks.

"There are a lot of dealerships, and the dealerships have so many different sales people," Albright said. "Management's job is to try to have the procedures in place and to try to catch it and let people know that there is a zero tolerance policy for it.

The state is seeking a civil penalty of at least $1 million or a maximum of $10,000 a day per violation of the Motor Vehicle Commission Code.

The state seeks to suspend or revoke the dealerships' sales licenses and to bar individual violators from holding any interest in new motor vehicle licenses or dealerships for at least five years.

"We are just as earnest at this point as the commission to find out if this is isolated with one or two or three or four or five different salesmen out of a cast of several hundred," Albright said. "Then you act swiftly to take care of the problem."

The complaint states that the dealerships submitted false and forged credit applications to potential creditors on behalf of car buyers, forged buyers' signatures on sales contracts and altered terms of sales contracts after they had been signed.

Albright said if a "housecleaning is necessary, it certainly will be done."

Artist wins case over banned art

AUSTIN (AP) — An artist's victory in federal court against the city of Austin's decision in 1993 to ban a nude sculpture from an exhibit is being hailed as a victory by advocacy groups.

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin of Austin ruled last week that artist David Swim's rights were denied when the city barred him from displaying his plaster sculpture, "The Heart," in a 1993 city-sponsored exhibit.

Swim was awarded court costs as well as $15,000 for mental anguish related to the exclusion of his sculpture.

City spokeswoman Michelle Middlebrook-Gonzales said the city will appeal the decision.

David Mendoza, executive director of the advocacy group National Campaign for Freedom of Expression, said the judgment has positive implications nationally, "especially for incidents where art in public places that depicts the human body is under attack.

"The judgment sends a message that artists have First Amendment rights, and art depicting the human body is not obscene," Mendoza said.

The case stemmed from January 1993, when the exhibit's director Martha Peters planned the show, "Unconventional Visions." Swim was invited to contribute a work of his choice.

Lubbock swarms to see Swoopes' return

■ Texas Tech's Michi Atkins steals some spotlight from former Lady Raider by scoring 32 points in loss to USA Women.

LUBBOCK (AP) -- It was Texas Tech's home court, but it was Sheryl Swoopes' night.

The former Tech All-American had a big homecoming as she scored 19 points and grabbed six rebounds to lead the USA national women's team to a 98-61 win over the No. 7 Lady Raiders.

It was the Brownfield native's first return to the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum court she ruled in 1991-93. She did it before a capacity crowd of 8,215 fans that gave her a 30-second standing ovation when she was introduced.

"I don't think it was that hard," she said about the homecoming to the court 35 miles northeast of her hometown.

"It was something I was excited about and looking forward to. I'm glad it's over. ... We are all tired and need a break," she said.

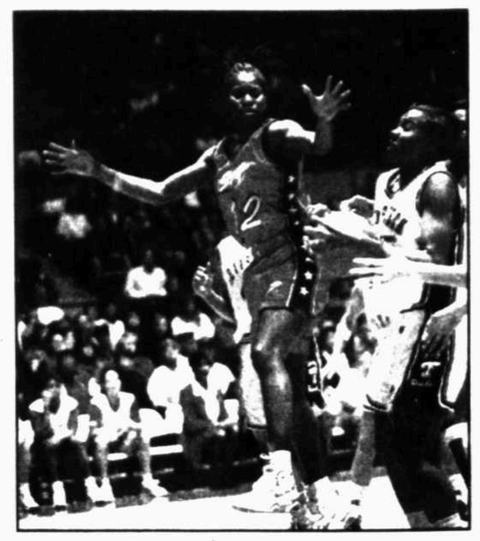

The nationally televised exhibition was the last stop in the USA team's tour of college venues. The win was the 20th in a row for the all-star team as it prepares for the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta.

The USA team had six players in double figures as USA coach Tara Van Derveer and Tech coach Marsha Sharp substituted freely. All 11 USA Team players scored, while nine of Tech's 14 players scored.

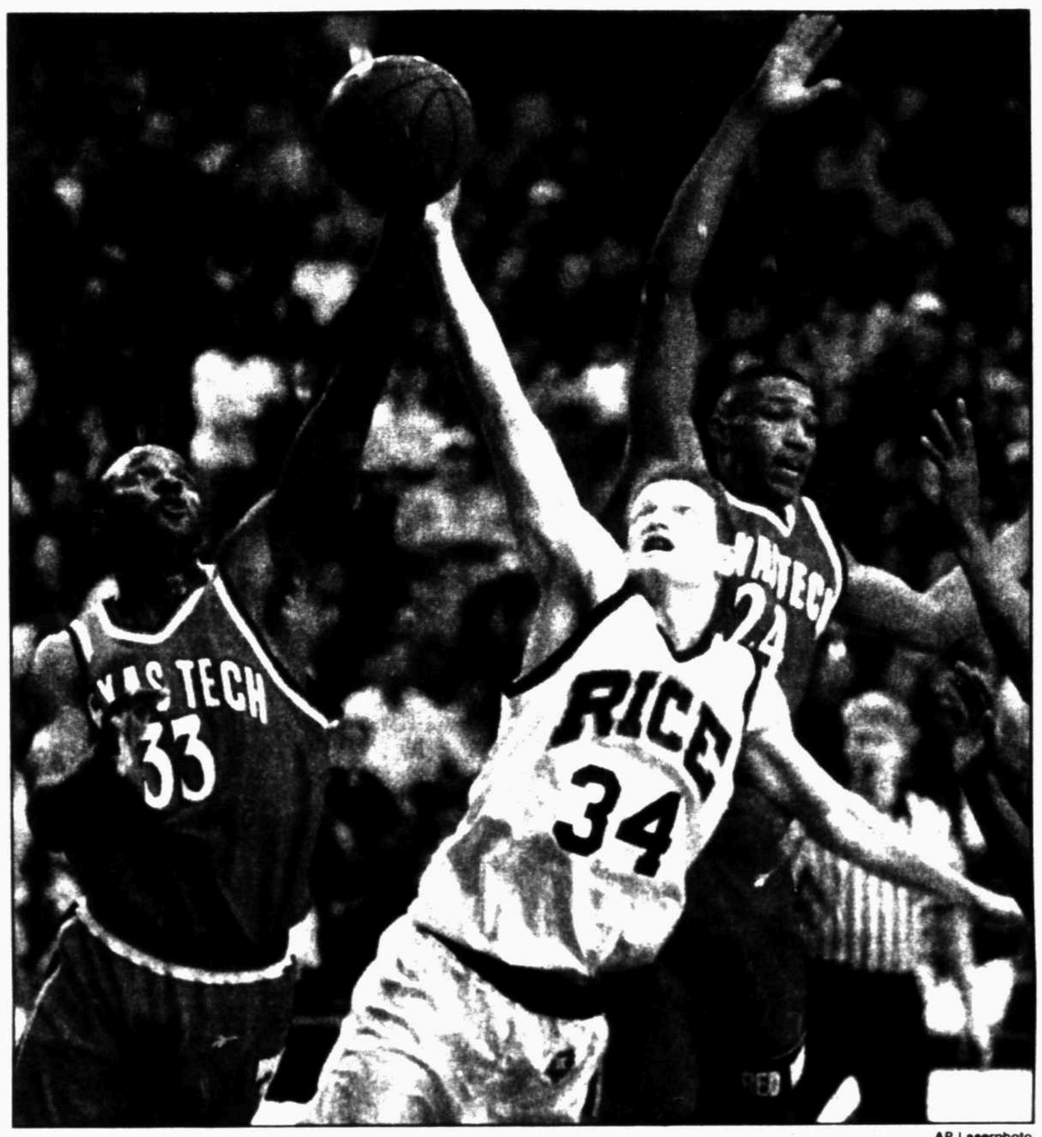

"We had a goal to keep Team USA under 100 points and for us to score over 60," said Tech's Melinda White.

HOUSTON — The Rice Owls weren't ready for No. 15 Texas Tech's opening charge and they still haven't solved Jason Sasser.

Sasser scored 27 points Saturday night as the Red Raiders tied a school record with their 11th straight victory, 79-57 over the Owls.

Rice (11-8, 3-4 Southwest Conference) had to finish the final 9:07 without coach Willis Wilson, who was ejected after his second technical foul.

"Texas Tech is as good as any team we've played," Wilson said. "Kansas is a great team and Texas Tech is in that class. They know how to seize opportunities."

Kansas beat the Owls 83-63 on Dec. 7 and the Red Raiders won just as convincingly after an 18-2 charge early in the game.

"Jason Sasser, we have not been able to solve the mystery of how to defense him," Wilson said. "He sets things up for the rest of the team. He sets the tone of the game."

Tech (18-1, 7-0) beat the Owls for the fifth time in a row.

The Owls made a mild run to start the second half.

Shaun Igo scored 11 of his 19 points in the first 10 minutes of the second half as the Owls cut Tech's 43-26 halftime lead to 54-42.

Seconds later, Wilson was ejected and the Red Raiders quickly ran off 10 straight points to establish control of the game.

"I'm not sure that technical should have been called but I'm not going to comment about the officials," Wilson said. "I've never been kicked out of a game and I've always prided self in controlling emotions."

Tommy McGhee led the Owls with 22 points but the Red Raiders delivered a big blow early when they came shooting 3s to spurt from a 6-6 deadlock to a 24-8 lead with 12:34 to go in the half.

MVP's agent busy before final gun of Super Bowl

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Scott Casterline had been back in Dallas for about 12 hours. The night before, he was in Arizona hosting a Super Bowl party. Now, he was at home watching the big game on TV.

Casterline, an agent, was enjoying the close game. He was especially happy because one of his favorite clients, Larry Brown, was playing well. It was Brown's last game under his current contract, so the better he did, the more money they both would make in the near future.

Late in the fourth quarter, Brown made the play of his life. He snagged his second interception of the night and returned it 33 yards, sealing what would be a 27-17 victory for the Dallas Cowboys.

Now Casterline was really happy. He knew immediately that he and Brown would be making even more money.

"After the second interception, I threw on my suit and flew back to Phoenix."

Holmgren's NFC squad has significant offensive edge in year-end game with AFC

The Associated Press

HONOLULU — Mike Holmgren won't admit it, but he's got a significant advantage as coach of the NFC team in Sunday's Pro Bowl.

Although he's had only five days to put together a game plan, the Green Bay Packers' coach has a bunch of players familiar with the offense — right down to the terminology.

For starters, there are his own players, quarterback Brett Favre and tight end Mark Chmura. Or, he could go to a bunch of San Francisco 49ers in quarterback Steve Young and receivers Jerry Rice and Brent Jones. Philadelphia running back Ricky Watters can be included in that group, too.

All are products of the "West Coast offense," which Holmgren helped design while an assistant with the 49ers.

"You don't have to spend a few hours getting everyone used to the terminology," Holmgren said. "We even have guys in the offensive line who are familiar with this system."

'Seahawk Central' eerily quiet as relocation battle rages

By Jim Cour
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — It was eerily quiet at the Seattle Seahawks' headquarters on Saturday. The doors and gates were locked and it looked like nobody was home.

Like baseball's Seattle Pilots, who moved to Milwaukee after the 1969 season, the NFL Seahawks may become just a memory if owner Ken Behring can move his franchise with 10 years remaining on his lease.

The league isn't expected to put up any fight to keep the Seahawks in Seattle although the league's owners, including Behring, voted to make Los Angeles the league's territory when the Raiders and Rams left last year.

Seattle's biggest pro football battle — pitting King County against Behring — is in the courts. The county filed a lawsuit on Friday after Behring announced he was moving the team he has owned since 1988.

The county contends Behring has to keep the Seahawks in Seattle because the team has a lease through the 2005 season to play in the Kingdome.

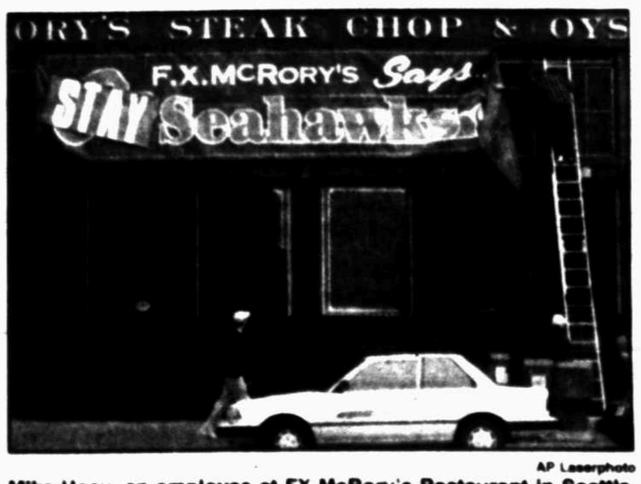

Superior Court Judge Dale Ramerman issued a two-week temporary restraining order barring Behring from selling the team to an out of state owner. The order also prevents Behring from making new contracts that would interfere with the team's ability to play home games in the Kingdome and transferring assets or equipment necessary for the club to play its home games in Seattle.

So the Seahawks won't be moving anything for at least 14 days.

Meanwhile, Dennis Erickson was vacationing in Hawaii, wondering if he was going to be coaching in Los Angeles or Seattle next season. He came back to the Northwest to coach after winning two national championships at University of Miami.

Behring, a millionaire developer from California, doesn't have many friends left in Seattle. He returned to California Friday night after learning his home in

Longhorns blast Houston, 83-60

The Associated Press

AUSTIN (AP) — Reggie Freeman scored 17 points, leading five players in double figures, as Texas broke open a close game in the second half and defeated Houston 80-63 Saturday.

Texas (12-6, 5-2 Southwest Conference) moved into a second-place tie with Houston (10-8, 5-2) in league play. Texas Tech led the SWC at 6-0 heading into a game against Rice Saturday.

After a seesaw first half, Texas raced to a 51-41 lead early in the second half before Houston inched to within 59-55 on a free throw by Galen Robinson with 4:59 to play.

Texas went on a decisive 7-2 run fueled by four free throws by Lamont Hill and a 3-pointer by Freeman to take a 66-57 lead with 3:11 left.

Houston, which became increasingly erratic on offense as the game wore on, could muster only two free throws by Kirk Ford as Texas extended its lead to 75-59 on a free throw by Kris Clack with 48.8 seconds to go.

Texas used its balance on offense to overcome shooting just 40.6 percent from the field. Hill scored 16 points; Sonny Alvarado had 13 points and 10 rebounds; Clack had 11 points, five rebounds and five assists; and Brandy Perryman added 10 points.

Houston, which shot 52 percent from the field, was led by Kenya Capers, who had 19 points. Ford added 18 points and Tim Moore added 10 points and 10 boards.

Texas used its in-your-face trapping pressure on defense to swing the game in its favor in the second half. The Longhorns converted 25 Houston turnovers into 37 points, while Houston was only able to turn 13 Texas turnovers into 16 points.

The first half was a seesaw struggle with eight lead changes. Texas took a 20-15 lead with 11:30 left in the half.

■ SWC Roundup

But Houston went on a 14-2 run aided by four points apiece from Capers and Ford as the Cougars shut down the Longhorns with suffocating man-to-man defense. A 3-pointer by Damon Jones gave Houston its biggest lead of the first half, 29-22, with 7:36 left.

Texas reeled off a 12-3 run punctuated with a 3-point play by Chico Vazquez and a 3-pointer by Perryman to help the Longhorns go up 34-32 with 2:28 left in the half.

Freeman hit a 3-pointer as time expired to give the Longhorns a 41-37 lead at intermission.

Texas A&M 62, SMU 58

COLLEGE STATION — Dario Quesada scored 20 points and pulled down five rebounds as Texas A&M edged visiting Southern Methodist.

The Aggies improved to 10-9 and 2-6. The loss dropped SMU to 6-13 overall and 2-5 in the Southwest Conference.

Texas A&M hit 45 percent of its shots from the field, while Southern Methodist hit 48 percent.

But A&M hit six 3-pointers in the second half after holding a 28-27 advantage at intermission. The Aggies made half of their 14 3-point attempts for the game, including three by Derrick Hart.

SMU was led by Jay Poerner's 13 points, while Troy Matthews added 11.

The Mustangs out-rebounded A&M 35-24, and was led by Jabari Hearn, who had nine rebounds.

Texas 82, Houston 68

AUSTIN — Vanessa Wallace tallied 23 points to tie a career high and lead Texas to an win over visiting Houston.

Wallace was one of three double-digit scorers for Texas (11-7, 6-1 Southwest Conference), who rode 53 percent shooting from the field to a 42-28 halftime lead. Houston (10-9, 3-4) managed only 39 percent during the period.

Erica Routt added 18 points for the Lady Longhorns, and Amie Smith added 16 points and a team-high 10 rebounds.

Pat Luckey had 19 points and a team-high 10 rebounds for Houston, while Tanda Rucker added 18 points.

Sonics nip Rockets in OT behind Payton 3-pointer

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Gary Payton had 32 points and his 3-pointer with 7.6 seconds left in overtime Saturday night sealed Seattle's 104-103 victory over Houston, the Sonics' seventh victory in a row over the Rockets.

The Sonics, whose 33-12 record is the best in the Western Conference, trailed by at least 10 for most of the game, but finally took the lead with 3:45 to go in the fourth quarter when Hersey Hawkins — one of six Sonics in double figures with 22 points — hit a pair of free throws after Sam Cassell fouled out.

The score was tied three times in the final five minutes and neither team was able to go ahead by more than three points.

With the score 92-92, Mark Bryant's layup attempt rolled out with 36 seconds to go. Detlef Schrempf then missed a 3-pointer for Seattle with 17.7 seconds left, and Clyde Drexler missed a 3-pointer as the clock was expiring in the fourth quarter.

Timberwolves 105, Mavericks 96

DALLAS — Isaiah Rider scored 26 points and Tom Gugliotta had 22 points and a career-high 20 rebounds to help Minnesota snap its five-game losing streak.

Jason Kidd had 26 points and Popeye Jones added 21 points and 13 rebounds for the Mavericks.

Christian Laettner added 20 points for the Timberwolves, whose five-game loss streak was their third of the season. They also lost seven in a row early in the season.

Celtics 100, Heat 99

MIAMI — Dana Barros rattled in a 17-foot jumper with 0.8 seconds left, giving the Boston Celtics a 100-99 victory over the Miami Heat on Saturday night despite a career-high 45 points from Alonzo Mourning.

The Celtics snapped a four-game road losing streak and beat Miami for the third time this season. Boston is 6-1 against the Heat in the last two seasons.

Rookie Eric Williams scored 18 points and Boston's reserves outscored Miami's 50-6. Kevin Willis had a career-high 21 recounds for Miami, but he sat out the entire fourth quarter.

Trail Blazers 96, 76ers 85

PHILADELPHIA — Rod Strickland scored 18 points and Portland's reserves had 46 points as the Trail Blazers snapped their three-game losing streak.

The Blazers bounced back from a 16-point loss at Washington the night before when they began a four-game road trip. Gary Trent and James Robinson came off the bench to score 17 points each and Arvydas Sabonis had 10 points.

Vernon Maxwell had 20 points for Philadelphia, which lost for the 10th time in 11 games.

Kings 94, Pistons 85

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Mitch Richmond had 11 of his 34 points in the fourth quarter and Sacramento began a four-game road trip with a victory over Detroit.

It was a rare road win for the Kings and a rare home loss for the Pistons. Sacramento had lost nine of its last 11 road games, and Detroit had won six of seven at home. The Kings have won only two of their last 10 games on Detroit's home court.

Richmond led all scorers, Walt Williams added 15 points and Tyus Edney had 14.

Cavaliers 111, Bucks 88

MILWAUKEE — All-Star reserve Terrell Brandon scored 19 of his 23 points in the third period and Cleveland raced past Milwaukee.

Brandon's big quarter kept the Bucks from making a run after they fell behind 60-41 at halftime. Milwaukee had a miserable second period in which it allowed Cleveland's reserves to score 20 points in a game-breaking 31-12 run.

The Cavs won their ninth straight from the Bucks, including four consecutive at the Bradley Center. Cleveland, which beat Milwaukee 81-71 Wednesday night, is 3-0 against the Bucks this season.

No. 9 Georgetown 70, Notre Dame 53

LANDOVER, Md. — Allen Iverson had 27 points and seven rebounds as the Hoyas rolled to a victory over cold-shooting Notre Dame. Iverson was 10-for-18 from the field, including a running 40-foot shot at the buzzer that gave the Hoyas a 15-point halftime lead just as the Fighting Irish were starting to find some offensive rhythm.

LOS ANGELES — Bob Myers scored a career-high 20 points on a day UCLA needed its reserves to pull out a ragged victory over Oregon State, the worst team in the Pac-10 Conference.

From there, the Raiders took advantage of Rice's cold shooting for their halftime lead. Rice shot only 37 percent in the first half and the Raiders hit 51 percent from the field and held a 6-3 edge in 3-point baskets.

Texas Tech's 11th victory tied the school record set by the 1984-85 team.

"This is one of the best games we've played this year on the road," Tech coach James Dickey said. "We play much better when our defense and defensive board game goes well. That gives us a chance to run.

Van Degveer was impressed. "I may look at Atkins for another spot on the team," she said.

Tech out-rebounded USA 35-31, but the effects of USA's superior size, speed and quickness were evident from the start as it built a 56-23 halftime lead, then opened it to 86-38 with 7:53 left in the game.

The 17-2 Tech team lost 30 turnovers to nine by USA. The national team shot 55 percent from the field for the game to Tech's 50 percent.

New privacy law cuts information

Until Jan. 1 of this year, hospital officials and the news media maintained for decades a delicate balance between a patient's right to privacy and the public's right to gain information about individuals who end up in a hospital — whether for treatment of an illness, major surgery or as a result of injuries suffered in an automobile accident, fire, shooting or natural calamity.

That delicate balance was largely shattered when the provisions of Senate Bill 667 took effect Jan. 1. Now when an individual is admitted to a hospital, that person is given the choice of whether information about him is released to those requesting it or whether no information is given out — including whether he is even a patient at that hospital.

The new law is making it difficult in some instances for the news media to provide information to the public about patients, but the media is not the only "victim" of the new legislation. Hospital officials at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center in Midland say the new law is causing a hardship for employees because, unlike in the past, when relatives, friends or acquaintances call to get a condition report on a patient, no information can be released unless that person has given his consent. In fact, unless the patient has signed an authorization-to-release-information form, hospital employees cannot deliver flowers, put through telephone calls or release any information to anyone.

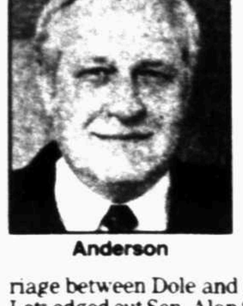

While we recognize the importance now being attached to privacy in this nation, this law was not well thought out and will cause a tremendous hardship on many people, not to mention the impact it will have on the public's right to know.

If hospital officials will take the time to explain to patients the ramifications of not signing the information authorization form, then perhaps information about patients can still be made available to the public. Otherwise this new law will keep thousands of people in the dark concerning information about their loved ones.

No. 2 Lott eyes Dole's Senate leadership

WASHINGTON — The Senate Republican cloakroom is abuzz with rumors of palace intrigue.

Anderson

There is growing speculation that ambitious Majority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., the Senate's second-in-command, has his eyes on the majority leader's job held by Bob Dole. As a result, behind-the-scenes relations between Dole and Lott have grown increasingly distrustful in recent weeks.

The shotgun marriage between Dole and Lott began in 1994, after Lott edged out Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., a Dole loyalist, by one vote for the No. 2 job. Defying early expectations, there's been calm for a year.

Dole diehards are now complaining that Lott has distanced himself from the majority leader on several key issues and blindsided him on others. Lott's supporters counter that Dole has often kept his deputy out of the leadership loop, while personalizing honest policy differences.

"I think it's clear that Lott is salivating," one Republican senator close to both men told us. "The problem is that Lott is displaying his ambition to be majority leader, and his impatience to wait."

Dole told us in a recent interview that he won't "address anonymous sources," adding that "as far as I know we get along fine." But Dole conceded there could be some "presidential politics involved in this."

Many senators are not so sanguine. One GOP senator in Lott's camp called the recent turn of events a "very troublesome thing."

"From my perspective, Trent believes that his success depends on his loyalty to Bob Dole. Yet he knows that Bob Dole is not willing to put full confidence in him. ... I think (Lott) is somewhat frustrated because I don't think he sees that good will being reciprocated by the leader."

Sources say Dole was livid with Lott during the debate over whether to send American troops into Bosnia. Dole supported the deployment, while Lott chose the politically easy route of opposing the mission. Dole quickly became furious at what he felt was Lott's grandstanding — going on television to criticize the mission without the courtesy of consulting him first.

A group of Republican senators had just finished a meeting in Dole's office last December when a reporter asked Dole if he knew that Lott had just denounced the mission on television.

"Dole, of course, was very cool," said one Republican who attended the meeting. "But Dole was really steamed because Lott just blindsided him ... I think that exacerbated things very dramatically."

Says Dole: "I don't think he really ever took an a oath that he was going to support the leader on everything." In a sense, Lott did take an oath. Seeking to allay concerns that he would push a more confrontationally conservative agenda on Dole, Lott vowed back in 1994 that "there won't be a separate agenda. I'm going to ride shotgun for the leader."

The latest fracas was sparked by freshman Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa., a Lott loyalist, who drew the ire of his colleagues by suggesting that Dole would face a challenge for the Senate's top spot if his presidential bid failed.

Lott, who did not return our repeated phone calls, lamely sought to distance himself from Santorum's remarks and claimed the thought hadn't crossed his mind. But colleagues recall the way he sandbagged Simpson for the assistant leader's job, and see a pattern. Weeks after reassuring Simpson that he had no plans to challenge him, Lott entered the race.

Lott's supporters theorize that Dole, not Lott, may be engaged in a power-play to anoint his own successor: Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., chairman of the Republican Policy Committee.

"I think some of it is that Dole would prefer to see Nickles and doesn't really trust Trent," said this Lott ally. "I think Dole perceives a philosophical gap and doesn't want to give Trent any traction."

Dole, Forbes matchup heats up early innings

WASHINGTON — What Red Smith said of baseball is also true of presidential politics: it is dull only to the dull.

Will

Bob Dole, he of the voice as flat as Kansas, is almost proudly prosaic, but for him this February is freighted with meanings only a poet could capture. Steve Forbes, revealing a split political personality, is running as someone untainted by political orthodoxy but he is employing today's orthodox nastiness with a remarkable ruthlessness and sometimes a brassy dishonesty.

Forbes is public-spirited, but is not quite as he fancies himself--the carrier of the torch of Reaganism. Yes, he stresses optimism and economic growth. But he shreds Reagan's famous "11th Commandment"--thou shalt not speak ill of fellow Republicans. Consider this from a Forbes radio ad attacking Lamar Alexander: "Lamar claims he's an outsider, but collects $295,000 a year from his politically connected law firm that lobbies for special interests in Washington. ... He won't change Washington. He'll fit right in."

That is not Reagan's tone of voice. And Reagan's tone expressed the essence of Reaganism, which was not just an economic policy but a basic stance toward life, including a temperate attitude about the importance of politics and the temptations of power. Forbes' tone is that of a man so tempted he will scorch the earth.

In his unprecedented spending against Dole, Forbes says Dole "canceled" a vote on term limits, although Forbes knows that Dole rescheduled the vote at the behest of term limits supporters. Forbes accuses Dole of voting to increase congressional pensions, whereas Dole voted to reduce them.

Dole has lived a life of pain bravely born and of resentment unattractively nursed. (His 1988 Iowa campaign theme: "He's one of us," was encoded resentment of George Bush, born to an easier life. Imagine infantryman Dole's gall at finding the likes of Forbes in the path of his last march.) Now Dole will either be broken or magnified by the media's piling-on concerning the contrast between President Clinton's State of the Union address and Dole's response.

Never mind the substance of the two speeches: Dole, stressed conservative themes that Republicans believe, Clinton stressed conservative themes that Democrats will forgive him for pretending to believe. Regarding style, Dole is the last presidential candidate who entered politics before politics became a television show, and probably is the last candidate who will get this far without making television his friend. Dole must make a virtue of necessity, saying: Look, if people want as president a version of a talk show host, they already have one. Phil Donahue's torch has been passed to a new generation of political feelers of other peoples' pains.

Were it not for a miscalculation in New Hampshire eight Februaries ago, Dole probably would be finishing his second presidential term. Yet for months he has been urged to make the same miscalculation by moving away from conservatism. Been there. Done that.

After trouncing Bush in Iowa in 1988, Dole soared into the lead in New Hampshire, which would vote eight days later. The day after Iowa, Dole's speech to New Hampshire's legislature featured a conservative flourish: He wrote a personal check to the Nicaraguan Contras. Then the "moderates" in his campaign prevailed.

He began talking about having "fixed" Social Security (with taxes), about child care, the environment, the goodness of Gorbachev. His lead vanished as Bush unleashed a barrage of negative advertising. During a debate two days before the voting, Dole refused a challenge to sign, there on stage, a no-new-taxes pledge. Mari Maseng, his press secretary then (she now is his campaign communications director and wife of this columnist), says he refused because, without a table, he was physically unable to sign with his injured arm, and because people trying to boss him around get his back up.

Election night, when Tom Brokaw asked Dole if he had anything to say to Bush, Dole, knowing he had missed his chance to knock Bush out, replied, "Stop lying about my record." Dole thought he and Brokaw were chatting during a commercial break, but they were on the air. Television has never been Dole's friend.

Today Dole resembles the 39-year-old Grover Cleveland Alexander entering the seventh game of the 1926 World Series to pitch in relief for the Cardinals, bases loaded with Yankees, needing a strikeout, Tony Lazzeri up. Dole, too, is late in a great career. We shall soon see how late.

Lazzeri ripped a line drive into the left field seats, just foul. Then Alexander struck him out.

Sheik shows he only understands wrath

Before he was sentenced to life in a federal prison this month (January), Sheik Omar Abdul-Rahman sought to portray his trial as simply the latest outrage in America's war on Islam.

The cleric, a political exile from Egypt, is deluded by a false sense of his own importance and a twisted interpretation of history. The United States has no quarrel with Islam, only with evildoers who pervert its teachings to justify committing mayhem against U.S. citizens.

That is exactly what Abdul-Rahman and his cohorts were plotting: a day of terror bombings that would have shaken New York City to its very foundation.

Don't feel sorry for the blind and ailing sheik as he begins his life sentence. Judging from his parting shot ("God will make America disappear from the face of the Earth"), the sheik understands only wrath, not mercy.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Feb. 4, the 35th day of 1996. There are 331 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1789, electors unanimously chose George Washington to be the first president of the United States.

On this date:

In 1783, Britain declared a formal cessation of hostilities with its former colony, the United States of America.

In 1801, John Marshall was sworn in as chief justice of the United States.

In 1932, New York Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt opened the Winter Olympic Games at Lake Placid.

In 1938, Thornton Wilder's play "Our Town" opened on Broadway.

In 1941, the United Service Organizations, or USO, came into existence.

In 1945, President Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Soviet leader Josef Stalin began a wartime conference at Yalta.

In 1948, the island nation of Ceylon — now Sri Lanka — became an independent dominion within the British Commonwealth.

In 1974, newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was kidnapped in Berkeley, Calif., by the Symbionese Liberation Army.

In 1975, more than 22,000 people died when a severe earthquake struck Guatemala and Honduras.

In 1977, 11 people were killed when two cars of a Chicago Transit Authority train fell off elevated tracks after a collision with another train.

In 1983, singer Karen Carpenter died in Downey, Calif., at age 32.

In 1987, pianist Liberace died in Palm Springs, Calif., at age 67.

Ten years ago: President Reagan, in his fifth State of the Union address, proclaimed "a Great American Comeback" from years of economic woes, and told a joint session of Congress that America was "growing stronger every day."

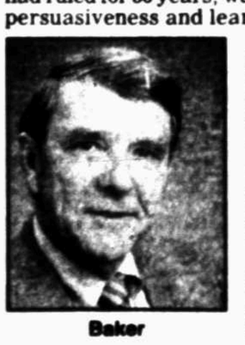

Five years ago: Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani offered to hold talks with Iraq and the United States in an attempt to mediate an end to the Gulf War. President Bush sent Congress a $1.45 trillion budget for fiscal 1992 containing a deficit of $280.9 billion.

One year ago: A standoff between the United States and China escalated into a trade war, with each country ordering stiff tariffs against the other.

We should look beyond television news borders

Thousands turned out the other day for the burial of Lesotho's King Moshoeshoe II on top of Night Mountain. The king, who had ruled for 36 years, was known for tolerance, persuasiveness and learning.

Baker

Such is the news from Donald G. McNeil Jr., who covered the funeral for The New York Times. The huge crowd that climbed that muddy mountain in drenching rain testifies to the king's popularity.

The depth of American isolationism may be judged from the lack of media coverage of this burial. The passing of any politician known for tolerance, persuasiveness and learning these days is a sad event, like the death of a member of an endangered species. Surely it deserves a minute or two on the networks. Well, 20 seconds anyhow.

Tolerance, persuasiveness and learning are three things glaringly absent right now from our own assortment of politicians competing for the American kingship. Instead of tolerance, persuasiveness and learning, these gentlemen specialize in swinishness.

Shouldn't we all be embarrassed about this? They are, after all, presumably giving us, the people, what we want. Or are they? Perhaps it is the media appetite for debased conduct that makes them behave so badly.

The stories that dominated American media the day of King Moshoeshoe's funeral showed an intense concentration on the trivia of American politics.

Mrs. Clinton had appeared before a grand jury and had nothing of consequence to say about it afterward. This didn't prevent TV, both network and local, from rerunning the story of her courthouse visit until even the cats begged for mercy.

Senator Dole, the Republicans' likeliest presidential nominee, was being savaged by agents of various other Republican candidates for cutting a poor figure on television.

President Clinton, having performed well in a television event before Congress, was being hailed as the shrewdest politician since Franklin Pierce. Why? He had put on a good show without committing himself in the slightest to what President Bush called "the vision thing."

(No letters, please, arguing that Franklin Pierce was no political wizard. Anybody who could parlay Pierce's qualifications into four years as president must have had pure political genius.)

Most of this stuff must have seemed minimally interesting if not downright boring to the vast audience beyond Washington. What's striking is what a tiny, enclosed, isolated world America must seem to the majority who say they get most of their news from television.

Washington has become the navel of an American news industry dominated by television. When the news deals extensively with a president's television skills and the lack of same in an important politician like Bob Dole, what we have is a navel contemplating itself.

Why this bondage to Washington news? It is probably because television's cost cutters have done away with many of the networks' old news bureaus.

As a result when a story breaks that's too big to be ignored, TV reaches into its Washington bureau for a top-drawer reporter, like James Wooten of ABC, who can handle more than the daily Washington humdrum.

Someone will say, as some tiresome someone always says: "This is the future, Buster. You might as well get used to it."

To which I reply with the closing line of a poem by e.e. cummings:

"listen: there's a hell of a good universe next door; let's go."

This universe includes people and countries we have never heard of, like King Moshoeshoe II of Lesotho. What a clever man he must have been.

In Lesotho's high green mountains (quoting McNeil again), it rains and rains, and the mountains are full of water for which South African farmers on parched lands below are desperate. Lesotho stays independent and earns millions selling its water to the bottom of the mountains.

Bet you didn't know that. It's just one of the things, believe it or not, going on in the wonderfully wide rest of the world. Lot more interesting than the same old malarkey about some Washington politician's television style, isn't it?

LETTERS

Troops serve noble cause in Bosnia

Three letters printed Jan. 21 complained about President Clinton's decision to send American troops to Bosnia.

Does John Wilson really believe that Clinton improves his chances of getting re-elected when he does something opposed by "the overwhelming majority of Americans" (to quote Terry Pafford)? He will be helped only if it turns out his decision was a good one. I trust you also label Phil Gramm, Newt Gingrich and Pat Buchanan draft dodgers. How would he define "something that truly threatens the American people?" How does he know his definition is right?

Did K.E. Berry read the strict terms under which we agreed to help in Bosnia? Did loved ones feel better when Ronald Reagan and George Bush took responsibility for all the soldiers killed as a result of their military actions? How does he define America's "vital interest?" How does he know his definition is right?

Does Pafford really think the men who wrote the Constitution, fresh from winning a revolution against their foreign government, had any idea how small the world would become or how strong America would become in 200 years? What I like best about the Constitution is the way it leaves so much room for us to change and grow as we and the world change; it rarely needs amending. On what grounds does he base his beliefs about how the writers of the Constitution might have viewed our century? How does he know his beliefs are right?

I doubt any of these men wrote similar letters when Reagan sent troops to Lebanon and invaded Grenada, or when Bush overthrew the Panamanian government and went to war with Iraq and sent troops to Somalia. It's by no means obvious to everyone that any of these military actions saved Americans from threats or were in our vital interest. The virtues of every military action ever engaged in are debated anew by each new generation and there will be no end to that debate. As for me, I'd much rather send troops to save a peace treaty than for any other purpose. If soldiers are to die, let them at least die for a noble cause.

Community's support is overwhelming

Recently, Odessa Crime Stoppers, Inc. made a plea to the citizens of the Permian Basin for information involving the tragic homicide of 2-year-old Bradon Graves. The response we received from concerned citizens who were touched by this senseless crime was overwhelming. In my tenure as administrator and board member of Odessa Crime Stoppers, I have never seen the community open their hearts with such great compassion to assist Crime Stoppers in our attempt to bring justice to this little boy and the outpouring of concern for Bradon's family.

We would like to give special thanks to the individuals, organizations and businesses who helped us in our endeavor. The Crime of the Week was produced and aired by KOSA-TV. Videographer Demitri Lotovski, reporter P.C. Douglas, Randy Lynn and Jon Uzzel all contributed to this production in a very special way. The Crime of the Week and related articles also were published in the Odessa American, Reporter-Telegram, Monahans and Stanton newspapers, Thrifty Nickel and T.V. Times. KWES and KMID continuously aired stories relating to the case. KNFM, KGEE, KRIL, KCDQ and KCRS aired the radio segment continuously for several weeks. Inspector Richard Pate of the Ector County sheriff's office designed and produced posters featuring a photograph of Bradon. The Sandhills Quarterhorse Rodeo Association and the Ector County Coliseum allowed posters to be displayed throughout the entire rodeo. Lusky's and Wood's Boots also allowed us to display posters in their businesses during this time. The Monahans Police Department and more than 50 businesses volunteered to help us by also hanging posters.

The death of Bradon is a hard one to deal with and even harder to accept. Ector County Sheriff's Department Lt. Carl Rogers of Metro Homicide viewed the entire home video, wrote and recorded the Crime of the Week with a great deal of emotion.

In a time when it seems like everyone is too busy to care about what happens to someone else, it is very encouraging to see our community react in this manner. We would like to commend and thank the citizens of the Permian Basin for all your help.

Although this homicide is still unsolved, investigators believe the case will be solved and there will be some justice for this little 2-year-old boy who touched many people in life and in death.

Bilingualism doesn't prevent success

It is a popular opinion that because we are in the United States where English is the dominant language, the primary concern of the educational system should be with the English speakers. Bilingualism is a gift and some of the students who enter our educational system with limited English have the potential to achieve high academic success. Unfortunately, a growing part of the population will not realize their potential, in part, because of that opinion.

English is not necessarily a prerequisite for learning in other content areas. Many of our academic languages are universal. Assigning a child to one classroom until English proficiency occurs is sentencing the child to academic failure. Personal communicative language takes approximately two years to acquire and academic language, a minimum of five years. The limited English speaker begins his academic career behind the English speaking student; if he is to "catch up," he must attend regular academic classes to prevent falling further behind. This will enable him to learn some concepts while acquiring academic language. The "ideal" situation would be to provide instruction (or tutorials) in his native language to make the content more comprehensible, and eventually, the student will transfer this knowledge to English.

If the student is allowed to maintain and enrich his first language while learning English, the notion of not only "catching up," but surpassing his English speaking peers is not far-fetched. Proficiency in a second language is largely determined by the proficiency of the first language. Learning a second language at the expense of the first language can be detrimental to academic success.

Paper's coverage does disservice

It was unfortunate enough that Texans had to bury former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough this week. But to add to the distress of the loss, the Reporter-Telegram buried the story of the eminent senator's death on page 4C of Sunday's edition (Reporter-Telegram, Jan. 28).

Your decision to place the obituary of a U.S. Senator from Texas beneath, among other items, an account of a soup cook-off was grossly inappropriate. Yarborough, the only U.S. senator from the South to vote for the 1964 Civil Rights Act, was an important figure in Texas history. It is a disservice to your readers, young and old, to deny his death the front-page coverage it deserved.

President, Congress need to work together

Everyone wants a balanced budget, however the NCRs (No Compromise Republicans) want to balance the budget at the expense of the poor, young, elderly, middle class, minorities, environment, everyone and everything, except the rich.

The NCRs demanded that President Clinton produce a budget using Congressional Budget Office figures that would balance the budget in seven years. When he did, they wouldn't accept it.

During the Reagan years, this country was put further in debt than all the previous administrations combined. Congress knew where the country was headed over the past 15 years and did what? For one thing, voted themselves huge pay increases and retirement income. Does anyone think Congress will lose one cent of their income in any budget?

Corporations have become much more capitalistic, with mergers, downsizing and relocation of factories to Third World countries. While millions of employees have been laid off or forced to accept lower paying jobs, CEOs' incomes have risen astronomically. To a large extent, this happened at the expense of the ordinary workers. Approximately half of this nation is in a declining standard of living, while just trying to hold onto their jobs in which income isn't even keeping up with inflation. Congress and the president need to concentrate on producing decent jobs. Then less people will be on welfare and committing crimes, more taxes will be paid, and the deficit reduced.

A small percentage of rich have nearly 50 percent of the wealth in this country. The middle class is shrinking, and eventually such an environment will produce only rich and poor. Does anyone want that? In the midst of crisis, the NCRs' majority in Congress proposes a tax cut for the rich. Also a flat tax, which also will be a tax cut for only the rich. Taxes of the middle class will have to rise, as the rich will see their taxes reduced an average of more than 30 percent. A tax cut for the wealthy is not justified. No tax cut for the wealthy until the deficit is gone.

Congress and the president need to work together to solve the country's problems, not create more.

Readers' views on: Race for sheriff

Opponent makes undignified attacks

In regard to the upcoming election for the sheriff of Midland County, I was appalled to read the blast against Gary Painter. His opponent seems to be going too far out of his way to push Painter into the mud with accusations and statements that seem to be so undignified for a man that wants votes from the citizens of Midland. He already has stated that he has had no experience in law enforcement but is willing to learn. The first thing he will learn is that no public official can please everyone and will make some mistakes.

I know Painter to be an honest hard-working sheriff that has done a lot for Midland. He also has saved the taxpayers a lot of money. Pushing Painter into the mud will not make his opponent any taller than he is, or any better. Midland is a fast-growing community that needs an experienced man for sheriff. May the good Lord bless and keep Painter and forgive his opponent.

Pilot experience won't make sheriff

Mrs. Velma Sanders' advice that any concerned citizens contact the Midland County sheriff's office for information regarding the allegations made by Gary Painter's opponent was well-received by this writer. I did just that, and more. As for Mike Kaufman's claims that Midland County's cost per jail bed is higher than those of surrounding counties, I offer this evidence: Ector County has a different budgeting system. They break the cost of housing an inmate into different line items. For example: cooks, food, medical attention and the guards required by the state are all under different line items on the Ector County budget.

In Midland they are all under line items also, but what Kaufman has done is lump all of the line item costs in Midland and singled out specific categories in Ector County. That method would make it appear that Painter's cost per jail beds would be much higher, when in reality the costs for housing inmates are about the same statewide.

Did I mention that Painter did his best to be in compliance with the state law that requires one jail guard for 48 inmates? The Commissioners' Court, knowing the jail standards, still cut his jail staff by two. Keep this in mind folks: They took that action even after being sued by the state with a judgment telling exactly how many guards were required. It is also interesting to note that Kaufman is concerned about how many narcotics offenders who Painter arrested actually got jail time as opposed to those who got probation or went free. Someone needs to tell him that the sheriff can only arrest them; he is not the prosecutor, the judge or the jury.

One more thing, Kaufman's being a fighter pilot no more qualifies him to be sheriff than Painter's experience as sheriff qualifies him to be a fighter pilot. Think about it.

Kaufman can put office back on track

Mike Kaufman is an excellent candidate for sheriff — a strongly qualified manager and a gentleman of the highest character and integrity. Kaufman believes the mission of the sheriff's office is to fight crime. I am convinced he can accomplish the mission through good management. He proposes to use the resources of the sheriff's office in the fight against crime, and not for activities against political adversaries, such as stings and baseless "investigations."

Kaufman has the ability to work with other law-enforcement agencies to develop a coordinated and efficient attack on crime throughout the county. Kaufman has the ability to motivate a team of deputies to work together in carrying out the mission. Kaufman will be accountable to the electorate in executing his job, and although there can be disagreements, he will work in harmony with other county officials.

It's time for a change. Kaufman believes in term limits, and so do I. Term limits should begin at home, particularly when it's time to get the sheriff's office back on track.

Kaufman fulfills duty to challenge sheriff

Since retiring from a 30-year career in federal and municipal law enforcement and returning to the town where I grew up, I have been watching events in my hometown with a degree of deliberate detachment. I have been hoping against hope that my hometown was somehow different from most of the places where I have worked, and places where the cops, the governments and the judicial system appears to have forgotten from whence they came, for whom they work and who they have sworn to protect and serve. In spite of several incidents that have raised alarm as to the level of competence in the sheriff's office and other elements in the county and city governments, I have remained silent.

I watched as grand jury findings and recommendations were studied into oblivion by a committee loaded with people who had every reason to maintain the status quo. I continued to watch as thousands of taxpayer dollars were given to lawyers in order to get a judge to referee contests between the sheriff and the Commissioners' Court. As an ex-helicopter pilot I watched, almost amused, as the sheriff tried to justify helicopters and why he needed to personally learn to fly at our expense.

I came very close to violating a promise to myself, my family and my Lord and running against the sheriff myself. Fortunately for me and the people of Midland County, Mike Kaufman has refused to ignore his duty and has come forward to challenge the sheriff.

As citizens of this country we are duty-bound to insure that those elected or appointed to serve us do so with candor, courage, competence, consistency, compassion, courtesy and commitment. Any performance short of that is grounds for immediate and permanent termination from public service.

Men like Kaufman are sent to serve for many reasons. One reason is to inspire others. I must thank him publicly for shaming me to answer the call to return to duty and serve my community once more. My first service will be to help get Kaufman in office and Gary Painter out!

SPEAKING OUT

Is increased crime cost of political correctness?

By R.C. Holley

R.C. Holley is a retired rancher who has lived in Midland since March, moving from Flatonia. He previously ranched in New Mexico.

In the news recently was the story of 9-year-old Amber Hagerman being abducted while she and her younger brother were out riding their bicycles. A man in his 70s saw the kidnapping but was unable to help, although he was able to give an account of what happened; he was too far away to describe the kidnapper. Reading about that disturbs me a lot. Why can't we stop some of the rape and murder of our women and children? Are we sacrificing them on the alter of political correctness?

The politically correct tell us society is to blame for the failure of each of us to reach our full potential and a criminal is the product of his environment who only needs to be rehabilitated. But I see no evidence that prison or social therapy rehabilitates anyone. It even seems that those who have been in prison come out worse than when they went it.

The evidence shows that some people are mean; they were born mean. Can't we agree that the only way to deter them is to make the punishment fit their crime? It is the fault of society when a criminal keeps preying on society after he has been put in prison. Criminals are people who have never learned self-discipline; for whatever reason they take what they want, when they want and wherever they want. All that holds them back is their physical abilities. This is the fault of society for not making the penalty for crime tough enough to discourage repeat offenders. The politically correct claim punishment does not deter and we can't intimidate criminals with fear. They use the death penalty for an example. Really? They are also the ones that insist on endless appeals; if death came within six months it would be a deterrent.

I see on TV that raging hormones are to blame for many people's inability to control their passions. For all of you men who are 60 years old or older, did you ever go out with a girl whose father scared the raging hormones out of you? Did the fear of punishment deter you?

Could it be that child molesters and rapists are not properly motivated? Let's talk among ourselves and forget about the experts; listening to them is what got us to where we are now. Their solution is "criminals need more love." OK, let them love the criminals. In the meantime let's talk to each other, just us common folk. Perhaps between us we can rediscover the common sense that our forefathers had in abundance.

The Constitution of the United States calls for a speedy and public trial. There is no reason for taxpayers to support whole panels of lawyers in a trial, nor is there any reason for endless appeals that benefit the lawyer more than the defendant. Let us use the evidence on hand, and if the accused is found guilty, let's sentence him to tough sentences, or death, and allow one reasonable appeal, then carry out the sentence. If we would do that, the death penalty would suddenly become a deterrent. Other changes we should make are: Habitual criminals are put away for good, no parole. Sexual offenders should be castrated then put in prison for a long enough term to deter them or their friends from committing the same crime. Social scientists say castration is barbaric; do they think rape and murder of women and children is civilized?

The judicial system is not without blame either; judges have been making laws by judicial fiat — and that is not in their job description. We must stop that illegal practice while we can. All of our laws must be made by the states except those the Constitution of the United States has charged Congress with making. If we will insist on the federal government returning to the states what the Constitution gives to the states then we can hold our political leaders responsible, and our political leaders will respond to us. We can then stop the runaway crime in our neighborhood.

SEATTLE: Fans behind county executive in quest to halt move

(From 1C)

Danville was the target of a bomb threat. KING-TV reported. Sheriff's investigators checked out the home, but no bomb was found.

Some Seahawks fans have thrown their support behind county Executive Gary Locke, who is trying to keep the Seahawks in town. At a packed restaurant near the Kingdome Saturday, they chanted "Gary, Gary, Gary" when he made an appearance.

Locke refused to confirm a report by The Seattle Times that county officials had set up meetings with Behring representatives and billionaire Paul Allen on Saturday and Sunday to discuss whether the team might be sold.

Telephone calls to Peter von Reichbauer, a member of the Metropolitan King Council, went unanswered Saturday. Von Reichbauer has been a strong Seahawks' supporter and is considered the most open line of communication in Seattle to Behring.

But Behring, 67, has steadfastly said he doesn't want to sell the team. His 40-year-old son, David, has been president of the team for the past three years.

Allen, who co-founded Microsoft in suburban Redmond with Bill Gates, is already involved in pro sports in the Northwest as owner of the NBA Portland Trail Blazers. He lives on Mercer Island, a Seattle suburb.

"I know Mr. Allen has said that he's interested in buying the team," Locke said at the rally. "It depends on the price and if Mr. Behring is really willing to sell."

Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., helped broker a deal that kept Jeff Smulyan from moving the Seattle Mariners to Tampa, Fla., in 1992. The Mariners now have some local owners and are getting a $320 million outdoor stadium in 1999.

"We will be very happy to see the backsides of the Behrings," Gorton said. "But they are not depriving us of football along the way."

"Even if we keep Mr. Behring in town, it's not going to be a good situation in terms of an owner who doesn't like the community and the community not liking him," Locke said at Saturday's rally. "So the true stability and good future of football requires that we have local ownership of the team."

Behring plans to open an office in Anaheim, Calif., and has told some Seahawks employees to report to work there next Friday, a source said.

Behring hasn't said where he intends to have his team play in Los Angeles next season, but he reportedly wants to play at least one year in the Rose Bowl.

At the Seahawks' headquarters in Kirkland, all the employees have been told to stay home for at least a week, a source said.

Eventually, the moving vans will have to come if the Seahawks are leaving. But Behring doesn't want to repeat those infamous moving van scenes when Robert Irsay took the Baltimore Colts to Indianapolis in 1984.

"No, he doesn't want that," the source said.

Behring bought the Seahawks in 1988 for $80 million and $19 million in existing debt. The team is now estimated to be worth between $160 million and $200 million, including $40 million of debt.

The Seahawks reportedly have been losing money the past three seasons during the NFL's new era of free agency and the league's salary cap. In 1994, Behring reportedly lost $6.5 million, the most of any franchise in the league. He may have lost that much money in 1995.

AGENT: "We got aggressive early ... I'm glad we did," says Casterline

(From 1C)

Casterline said.

Voila. The Super Bowl wasn't even over and the selling of Larry Brown had already begun.

Within hours, Brown was chatting with Bryant Gumbel and Joan Lunden on national morning TV shows. A date was quickly set for him to yuk it up with David Letterman. By the time Brown returned to Dallas on Monday, another half-dozen promotional spots were scheduled in New York and Washington.

"We got aggressive early on and I'm glad we did," Casterline said. "We need this week to do it because of the timing."

The MVP's traditional trip to Disney trip was out because the amusement park had picked which players it wanted before the game, regardless of who turned out to be the top star. No matter. Quicker than you can say Magic Kingdom, Casterline had so many offers that he was turning things down.

"We're talking about (endorsing) several products and service companies, all kinds of things," Casterline said. "But we're not going to go overboard. We're going to be selective. We want Larry's image to help them and them to help Larry."

Other dividends also came quickly, like Casterline being bumped into first class by American Airlines when he told them why he was flying back to Arizona last Sunday night.

During the flight, the plane's captain came out to greet him. He asked Casterline to pass on his congratulations to Brown and Casterline let the fan do it himself. Using the telephone on the plane, Casterline called Brown in his hotel room an hour after the game.

"The captain was real excited," Casterline said. "Somehow, they hooked it up so everyone on the plane could hear Larry talk. The people went crazy."

Now it's up to Casterline to get other NFL teams to go crazy over Brown.

It shouldn't be too difficult. Every year the Cowboys do well other teams get into off-season bidding wars in hopes that signing Dallas players will somehow bring them the same good fortune.

In recent years, it's made even richer men out of Ken Norton Jr., James Washington, Jimmie Jones and Jim Jeffcoat — all defensive starters for the Cowboys who fled for larger paychecks.

Now it's Brown's turn.

His current contract, which was signed after his third season and was worth $500,200 this year, expires Feb. 16. If the Cowboys don't re-sign him before then, he'll be available to any NFL team.

Expect plenty of teams to have Casterline's phone number programmed into their speed dial by Feb. 15.

Both Casterline and Brown say they won't necessarily be swayed by the highest bidder.

"I've been very fortunate to be on a winning team in Dallas," Brown said. "I want to continue to enjoy the game, and not necessarily get caught up in the money."

With that in mind, Casterline has been doing his homework since August. He looked over all the teams, their needs, Brown's wants and came up with a game plan. About every three weeks, he and Brown have updated the charts.

"We look at organizations' strength, consistency, commitment to winning, track record, coaches and schemes, then we think about whether Larry fits," Casterline said. "All these factors have to come together."

The most important factor may be supply and demand. Plenty of teams need secondary help and if they want proven, quality defensive backs they'll be after Aeneas Williams, Troy Vincent and Brown.

"I felt like over a month ago Larry became the No. 1 UFA (unrestricted free agent) candidate based on the things around him," said Casterline, whose 45-player NFL client list includes 14 defensive backs.

"Secondly, the other top UFA guys like Aeneas, there's a good chance he'll re-sign in Arizona. And they'll probably overpay to keep him."

Should Williams go off the market, while possibly setting a new ceiling on cornerback salaries in the process, things really could go Brown's way.

"Look at what happened to Eric Allen last year. The Saints really needed him, so he got $3.2 million," Casterline said. "The same can go for Larry Brown."

Another thing to consider is the number of former Cowboys coaches around the league. Dave Wannstedt, Dallas' defensive coordinator when Brown broke in, is in Chicago, ex-offensive coordinator Norv Turner is in Washington and, of course, Jimmy Johnson now runs the show in Miami.

"If they come calling, I'm sure we'd listen, just like we'll listen to everyone else," Casterline said. "We're going to match it all together and we'll find the perfect situation."

It's not likely to be Dallas, though.

First of all, there are other, more crucial veterans for Cowboys owner Jerry Jones to re-sign, such as Pro Bowl safety Darren Woodson.

Also, the Cowboys have a strict salary table that dictates how much each position gets. Cornerbacks are among the better-paid defensive players, but with $4 million already tied up in Deion Sanders and Kevin Smith for next season, there's not much left for Brown.

Still, Casterline is going to give Dallas the first chance.

"I'm going to share with them the kind of dollars we're looking at and what we need to do," Casterline said. "If they're into it, we can probably do it within an hour."

An hour sounds about right. That's as long as it took to make Larry Brown a star, so it might as well be all it takes to make him financially set for life.

PRO BOWL: Familiarity NFC team's advantage

(From 1C)

"If they're comfortable running it, then you have a better chance of producing some good plays and still stay within the offensive rules of the Pro Bowl."

Holmgren's AFC counterpart, Ted Marchibroda of Indianapolis, doesn't disagree.

"Any advantage helps in a game like this," he said. "The key is not to get too complicated. We want to have some fun out there and showcase the guys the best we can."

But Emmitt Smith had some fun this week making Holmgren squirm a little by playing the role of a recalcitrant player.

It goes back to Smith's first Pro Bowl appearance.

With the game on the line, Holmgren, at that time a 49ers assistant, pulled the rookie in favor of a more experienced running back.

When told that Holmgren promised equal distribution this time around featuring a certain Dallas Cowboy, Smith laughed and said, "No, no, no. I haven't had a good talk with Mike yet, but I think he knows my intentions.

"They can use all the running backs they want, but this one right here has carried it over 500 times this year and that's enough for me."

After letting that sink in — and as Holmgren recovered from the gag — Smith said he'd give it his best shot.

And Holmgren was quick to make it clear he wouldn't skip Smith.

"I made that mistake once and I'm not about to make it a second time," Holmgren said. "He hasn't let me forget it and every time he's played against a team I've been involved with, he's pounded the living daylights out of us."

Injuries have kept him out of the Pro Bowl the past two years, but Smith promised to make up for lost time.

"I'm feeling pretty good. I'm glad the season is almost over. What we accomplished this year with all the trials and tribulations that went on away from the field make it that much better."

Ferrari leads Rolex after nine hours

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A misty rain turned Daytona International Speedway's road circuit treacherous Saturday night as a Ferrari World Sports Car held the lead in the Rolex 24 Hours race after nine hours.

A series of spins and crashes, as well as a blazing car fire, brought out a series of full-course caution flags after darkness fell on America's premier endurance event.

The worst of the accidents came in the seventh hour when a pair of GT-1 Porsche 911 Turbos tangled on the high-banked portion of the 3.56-mile road course.

The car driven by sports car veteran Bill Adam rolled onto its roof, while the entry driven by John O'Steen, running third overall, was able to continue to the pits for repair and held its position. Adam was not injured.

Irv Hoerr, driver and team manager of the Oldsmobile Aurora GT-1 team, also escaped injury when the car he was driving caught on fire in the infield portion of the track and was gutted.

After nine hours, the pole-winning Ferrari 333SP of Gianpiero Moretti of Italy, Didier Theys of Belgium and Frenchmen Bob Wollek and Max Papis had covered 252 laps and held a four-lap lead over the Oldsmobile Mark III that started on the outside of the front row and was being shared by South African Wayne Taylor and Americans Jim Pace and Scott Sharp.

Actor Craig T. Nelson, from the television sitcom "Coach," talks to an unidentified crew member after Nelson pulled his driving shift in the Screaming Eagle Racing Ford during the Rolex 24 Hours race.

There were several leaders in the early going but, by the fourth hour, the top two cars had put some distance between themselves and the rest of the 75 starters in the season-opening race for Exxon's WSC Series.

The Porsche with O'Steen, five-time Daytona winner Hurley Haywood and David Murray driving, was another three laps behind, followed by yet another GT-1 Porsche, this one piloted by Bill Farmer, Greg Murphy, Robert Nearn and Alex Tradd, trailing the third-place car by four laps.

In fifth, two more laps back, was the team car of the one that burned, an Aurora shared by Charles Morgan, Rob Morgan, Joe Pezza and Jon Gooding.

The biggest field in recent years started the twice-around-the-clock International Motor Sports Association endurance race at 1 p.m. EST.

Rick Sutherland, driver of a WSC Chevrolet Courage C-41, said, "It really looks like an L.A. freeway out there."

"With the pace that's going to be set today, this is going to be a real test of equipment," said Andy Evans, whose WSC Ferrari, started third by Mauro Baldi of Italy, had to make a 30-minute stop after Baldi had an off-course excursion and slipped far back in the field. "Nobody is being conservative. It's like a 24-hour sprint race."

The National Weather Service was forecasting clearing skies overnight and much colder temperatures, dipping as low as the mid 30s overnight and getting no higher than the low 50s on Sunday.

The race began two hours earlier than in the past, giving the teams a longer period of to get into a race rhythm before dark. But that also means less time on Sunday to make up for any problems during the night.

"Those two hours shouldn't really make any difference, but it really does feel different to start so early," said Haywood.

The field includes cars in three IMSA divisions — WSC, GT-1 and GT-2, with speed differentials approaching 50 mph on the straightways.

Alphabet Soup warms track, upsets Soul of Matter for $304,900 purse

N.Y. Times News Service

ARCADIA, Calif. — Watch what you say about Alphabet Soup, because the grayish 5-year-old likes to prove people wrong.

Saturday, he made liars out of his trainer and the nation's best track announcer.

Before the $304,900 San Antonio Handicap, trainer David Hofmans leaned on a rail near the Santa Anita receiving barn and speculated that the muddy racing surface was not Alphabet Soup's kind of track.

"It could be a little wetter. It's Soul of the Matter's kind of track," Hofmans said, naming the even-money favorite.

Those two horses staged matching rallies, Alphabet Soup and Chris Antley swooping past leaders Dare and Go and Patio de Naranjos from the outside and Soul of the Matter and Gary Stevens surging through at the rail on the second turn.

■ San Antonio Handicap

Stevens rode more confidently in the stretch, while Antley slashed away with his whip 17 times from the quarter pole home. Twenty yards from the finish, Soul of the Matter took a short lead. And announcer Trevor Denman proclaimed, "Soul of the Matter is going to get there!"

But Alphabet Soup took off again and got there first by a neck.

"He was beaten, I thought," Hofmans said.

White Sox Sign free agent Tapani

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox, looking to strenghten their starting rotation, signed free agent Kevin Tapani to a one-year contract Saturday.

The right-hander, who turns 32 this month, was 10-13 as a starter for the Minnesota Twins and Los Angeles Dodgers last season. He is 79-65 with a 4.10 ERA in seven major league seasons.

"We've been looking for a veteran-type pitcher who can go out there and give us some quality innings and Kevin gives us that. He's got a World Series win and a championship ring," Chicago general manager Ron Schueler said.

The Chicago Cubs, Colorado Rockies and Kansas City Royals were among teams interested in Tapani's services.

Tapani's best season was 1991 when he was 16-9 with a 2.99 ERA on the Twins team that won the World Series.

Sanchez Vicario in Pan Pacific finals

The Associated Press

TOKYO — Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and Iva Majoli won three-set semifinal round matches in the Pan Pacific Open and will play for the title Sunday.

Sanchez Vicario, No. 3 in the world and third-seeded in the tournament, beat fellow Spaniard and second-seeded Conchita Martinez 6-4, 5-7, 6-4.

Majoli, who upset top seed Monica Seles in the quarterfinals Friday, rallied to defeat 15-year-old Martina Hingis of Switzerland 3-6, 6-3, 6-0.

Sanchez Vicario and Majoli reached the semis at the Australian Open last week.

"I think it's going to be a different match. Probably (Majoli) hits harder (than Martinez)," Sanchez Vicario said of the final. "I will just try to play my game and aggressively like I've been doing in this tournament."

Majoli overcame a slow start against her doubles partner Hingis.

Hingis dominated the first set, serving five aces, but fell apart in the second set.

"Today, I was a little tight at the beginning," said Majoli, a Croatian, "but later I started to play the way I did yesterday. Hopefully, I can continue to do so tomorrow."

The turning point, Hingis said, came when she was leading 2-1 and 40-love on her serve in the second set. Then, Majoli won five straight points to get a break point.

Majoli had taped her thighs after pulling muscles in her right leg in a match Wednesday against Brenda Shultz-McCarthy of the Netherlands. She said she suffered a similar injury during the semifinals match Saturday, this time on her left leg.

During the second set, Majoli was given a three-minute break to have her left thigh taped by her trainer. After the treatment, she won the second and third sets.

Stern blasts Johnson critics

NEW YORK — NBA commissioner David Stern, admonishing players opposed to the return of Magic Johnson, said the only way to eliminate their fears would be through widespread testing for the AIDS virus.

And that makes no sense, he was quoted as saying in Saturday's New York Post.

"This is not Salem," Stern told the newspaper. "This is the United States. This is the NBA.

"We are not going on a witch hunt."

Stern refused a request for an interview with The Associated Press.

Johnson, who tested positive for the AIDS virus in 1991, returned to the NBA Tuesday and was a sensation in his comeback, with 19 points, 10 assists and eight rebounds against the Golden State Warriors. In his second game, he had 15 points and three rebounds against the Chicago Bulls on Friday night.

After Johnson announced Monday that he was ending his 4 1/2-year retirement, some players, including Charles Smith of the New York Knicks, Armon Gilliam of the New Jersey Nets and Vernon Maxwell of the Philadelphia 76ers, expressed concern about playing against him. They said they were worried about the cuts, scratches and bleeding that can occur in an NBA game.

Olympic 100 champ injured

BIRMINGHAM, England — Linford Christie hobbled off the track with a suspected groin injury Saturday after breaking down in a 60-meter race. Having cruised into the final, the Olympic 100-meter champion was moving well and leading when he suddenly pulled up 20 meters from the finish.

As Michael Rosswess went on to win and retain his British AAA indoor title in 6.68 seconds, Christie, who had clocked 6.59 in the semifinals, sat down at the trackside to receive treatment from coach Ron Roddan. He later left without commenting.

Christie, who suffered a hamstring injury while trying to defend his world championship at Goteborg, Sweden, last year, has vowed not to defend his Olympic title at Atlanta this summer although impressive recent runs in Australia have raised doubts about his decision.

Collins can concentrate on managing

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

1996 Team Preview — Houston Astros

HOUSTON — Terry Collins finally gets to manage the Houston Astros with baseball his only concern.

No players strike, no replacement players, no sleepless nights and no major holes to fill as the Astros move closer to the beginning of spring training.

City leaders have heeded owner Drayton McLane's warning that he needs to average 30,000 attendance to keep the team in Houston nd not ship it off to Virginia after this season.

McLane has invested heavily in a marketing campaign that features television spots from former President and Mrs. George Bush, Clyde Drexler and Hakeem Olajuwon.

All-star second baseman Craig Biggio elected to stay in Houston, ignoring the lure of free agency, and was aided by first baseman Jeff Bagwell, who agreed to restructure his contract to keep Biggio.

Collins literally worried himself sick last season. Now all he needs to do is win a pennant.

Collins has a decision to make in left field, how to replace reliever Dave Veres and he must also hope that starter Darryl Kile recovers from the worst season of his career.

"We feel our pitching rotation is intact," Collins said. "For the two years I've been here, we've felt all along that it's good enough, it's strong enough. We j ist have to get Darryl going again. That's the key."

Kile, who pitched a no-hitter in 1993 and was second on the staff with nine victories in 1994, slumped badly last season. He finished with a 4-12 record, a career high for losses, and a 4.96 ERA.

He made four starts in Class AAA Tucson, where his ERA was a gaudy 8.51.

Collins also is sticking with Greg Swindell, who was taken out of the rotation last September. Swindell's ERA has not been below four in his three seasons in Houston and jumped to 4.47 last season.

The Astros have several young pitchers ready to make the leap, but Collins has been swayed by experience.

"We're in a situation where we think we can contend," Collins said. "You are going to contend with the veteran guys. We've got Doug Brocail, Donne Wall and some young guys. You don't want to put added pressure on the younger guys."

Collins' major pitching problem will be replacing the 72 appearances and 103.1 innings pitched by Veres, who was traded to Montreal for third baseman Sean Berry.

"The biggest area of hope is that Anthony Young (acquired in the off season) can fill that role and one of the keys also will be the health of John Hudek," Collins said. "We think he's fine but until we get in a game situation where he's letting it go, that's the only way to determine anything."

Hudek was the Astros' closer until he had surgery last July to remove a rib that was causing circulation problems in his pitching arm.

The Astros are set in the infield with Biggio, Bagwell, Rick Wilkins catching, Orlando Miller at short, Berry at third and with Derek Bell in right field and Brian Hunter in center field.

Left field is the only position Collins can't pencil in one name — it could be two. He may platoon Derrick May and James Mouton, which would not be all bad because it would get another lefthanded batter in the lineup.

"I have no problem platooning," Collins said. "Derrick did a tremendous job for us and we know that Mouton brings great footspeed and he's coming around offensively.

"We've got one left-hander if Wilkins plays and you face some quality right-handers. It would be nice to have a lefthanded hitter somewhere in the lineup."

Pebble Beach soaked, could be shortened

The Associated Press

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Jeff Maggert's one-stroke lead midway through the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am just might turn out to be a final-round lead.

Saturday's third round was postponed after heavy overnight rain on the Monterey Peninsula left standing water on many greens and flooded some fairways, making Pebble Beach, Spyglass Hill and Poppy Hills unfit for play.

And while it's possible the tournament would be extended to Monday, it's likely it will be shortened to 54-holes.

"We can't say that yet," said PGA Tour official David Eger. "We are prepared to play Monday."

But the weather forecast for Sunday was not good, and the already soaked courses can take no more water. At least three rounds have to be played for the event to be considered official money.

"It is really, really wet," Maggert said. "They are going to have to have some cooperation from Mother Nature to get this in."

Spyglass and Poppy Hills were in the worst shape.

"They simply were not playable," Eger said. He said the 11th and 16th fairways at Spyglass were under water and that many tee boxes were flooded.

That meant that Sunday's round — if it's played — could be the final round. But the players might not know it when they tee off. It would be a safe assumption, though.

The Saturday tee times and course assignments will be used on Sunday, creating a logistical mess. Maggert tees of at 8 a.m. at Spyglass and will finish well before many contenders.

"It will be a good 2 1/2 hours after I finish before the other guys get done," Maggert said. "I hope we get it in. I haven't won since 1993, and I need to get out there on Sunday and have a chance to win. I need the test."

Maggert, who shot a 68 Friday at Pebble Beach, was the midway leader at 8-under-par 136, a stroke ahead of Davis Love III, Loren Roberts and former champion Steve Jones.

Eight more golfers were at 138, including Tom Watson, Nick Faldo and the hottest player in the world right now, Phil Mickelson.

Hale Irwin saves par on the No. 9 hole on Saturday in the Royal Caribbean Classic but he faltered on No. 18 as Rick Acton took over the lead.

A staggering 13 more were three strokes behind at 5-under-par 139.

If the tournament is shortened to 54 holes, Watson and Mickelson suddenly find themselves going into the final round with a chance to do something rare.

Mickelson is trying to win his third consecutive start and Watson is simply trying to win.

If Mickelson, who won at Tucson, skipped the Bob Hope, and won at Phoenix last week, wins here he would be the first player to capture three consecutive starts on the PGA Tour since Nick Price in 1993.

Watson is trying to win his first tour event since 1987. The 46-year-old winner of eight major championships has been in contention several times after 36 holes in recent years, but his putting stroke simply has not held up on the weekend.

The last tournament shortened to 54 holes on the PGA Tour was the Walt Disney last year. The Deposit Guaranty in 1994 was the last 36-hole event.

Royal Caribbean Classic

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Rick Acton, playing in his first Senior Tour event, shot a 4-under-par 67 Saturday to take a one-shot lead heading into the final round of the Royal Caribbean Classic.

Acton moved to the top of a leaderboard that includes Hale Irwin, Raymond Floyd and Bob Murphy. A club pro from Seattle, Wash., Acton has a two-round total of 135 at the Links of Key Biscayne course.

Irwin, the first-round leader, shot 71 and trailed Acton by one stroke.

Murphy shot a second consecutive 68 and joined Irwin at 136. Floyd (68) and South African Simon Hobday (66) are two strokes back at 137.

John Schroeder, who closed with four birdies on the back nine en route to a 67, and Mike Hill finished at 138.

Acton is bidding to become just the fifth player to win in his Senior Tour debut. Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Gary Player and George Archer won their first senior events.

Irwin started the day with a two-shot lead and appeared to be in command of his game, having fired a 64 in Thursday's pro-am and a 65 in the opening round. But he slowly fell off the pace. A bogey at No. 11 chopped his lead to one shot, and Acton birdied No. 14 to tie for the lead.

Acton and Irwin, playing in the final group, were tied for the lead on the 18th hole. Irwin 3-putted from 45 feet to hand the lead to Acton.

Heineken Classic

PERTH, Australia — John Daly and Ian Woosnam were tied for the third- round lead in the Heineken Classic after Woosnan matched the course record with a 65 on Saturday and Daly shot a 67.

Daly and Woosnam have 54-hole scores of 205, 11-under-par.

Woosnam, winner of last week's Johnnie Walker Classic in Singapore, had eight birdies and a single bogey on the tight 7,101-yard layout at The Vines resort.

British Open champion Daly kept his driver and woods in his golf bag for the third straight day. His round comprised six birdies and one bogey.

Frenchman Jean van de Velde and Irishman Paul McGinley were one shot behind the co-leaders after van de Velde carded a 67 and McGinley a 69.

David Carter of England was at 208 after surging up the leader board with a 66, while second-round leader Wayne Smith of Australia dropped back to 209 after a 3-over-par round of 75.

Woosnam is aiming for his first back-to-back titles since he won the Monte Carlo and Scottish Open titles back in 1990.

Greg Norman had a 75 and was out of contention at 216.

The tournament is part of both the European and Australasian PGA Tours.

Weather hampers World Cup downhills for women, men

The Associated Press

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) — Germany's Katja Seizinger took the lead in the women's overall standings with her second World Cup victory in as many days, and Picabo Street never had a chance to get even.

Seizinger dominated the first of two scheduled women's downhills, beating her American rival by a half-second Saturday. Street was then left waiting at the starting gate in the afternoon when officials stopped the second race because of fog just after Seizinger had taken the lead.

"I understood the decision to stop because the conditions were constantly changing," Street said. "I was mad because I made a big error in the first race and wanted to correct it in the second race."

Seizinger, collecting the 22nd victory of her career and fifth of the season, moved past Austria's Anita Wachter in the overall. Seizinger, who won the super-G on Friday before claiming victory for the 11th time in a downhill race, now has 982 points to 891 for Wachter.

"I am just interested in the overall World Cup title now," Seizinger said. "Last year, I was ahead by 350 points and you know what happened."

Seizinger was gradually overtaken by Vreni Schneider, who won the title in the last slalom of the year at the World Cup finals in Bormio, Italy. She beat Seizinger by six points.

"I will never forget it," Seizinger said.

In the completed downhill, Seizinger skied the 9,430-foot course in 1 minute, 41.70 seconds. Street was second, in 1:42.19. Third was Isolde Kostner of Italy, clocked in 1:42.24.

Street came down 23rd, posting a time more than a second faster than any previous finisher. Seizinger came down four skiers later.

"It was a good surprise to be so good on the gliding sections," she said. "It you look at the results, I was the best skier on that part. I didn't know I would be able to do so well there."

In the second race, Seizinger, the 11th starter, took the lead with a run of 1:16.44. She supplanted Heidi Zurbirggin, clocked in 1:16,88.

Street was the next racer in the starthouse. She waited about 20 minutes before the race was canceled because of poor visibility.

The race was not rescheduled with a super-G set for Sunday.

Street still leads the downhill standings with 460 points. Seizinger is second with 325.

Men's World Cup

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany — Dense fog on the Kandahar course forced organizers to call off the World Cup downhill and postpone the men's race for 24 hours. With the downhill rescheduled for today, a super-G originally scheduled for today will be held Monday.

After a sudden thaw softened the track for Friday's downhill, the weather turned cold again but it also brought fog to the course, postponing the last downhill before the World Championships that start Feb. 12 at Sierra Nevada, Spain.

Death of wrestler Schultz just one of many potholes for U.S. Olympic team

By Larry Siddons
AP Sports Writer

The road to Atlanta has been littered with potholes so far for athletes and officials trying to put together the U.S. team for this summer's Olympics.

While it may have been the most tragic, the shooting death of wrestler Dave Schultz last week was only the latest in a series of blows against a squad that is expected to dominate the medals count on its home turf.

A failed drug test by a teen-age swimming star, the death of a beloved leader, a nasty spat over ethics in the race to be the next USOC president, even the arrest of a canoeist as he practiced in a storm-swollen river — all these incidents and more have diverted attention from preparations for the Games, now just six months away.

They can't ask for a mulligan and start over, so America's Olympians are trying to concentrate on their tasks, while watching out for the next explosion.

"We're stressing to our athletes, coaches and administrators, 'Keep your eyes focused on the goal,' and that's Atlanta," U.S. Olympic Committee executive director Dick Schultz said.

That message, he said, would be underscored when U.S. team leaders of each sport meet in the Olympic city Feb. 16-18 to review logistics and other preparations for the Games.

"These things you can't predict. A lot of it goes with the territory," Schultz said. "But you need to have a disaster plan in place so that when things happen you can deal with them quickly and keep your attention from drifting."

This certainly is not the first time outside events involving U.S. athletes have captured the spotlight in the run-up to the Games.

Back in 1936, swimmer Eleanor Holms was kicked off the team for drinking and shooting dice on the ocean liner to Berlin. Two full teams — figure skaters in 1961, boxers in 1980 — were killed in plane crashes. Before the 1992 Games, hurdler Butch Reynolds and track's world leaders warred in court over drug tests; two years later, skaters Tonya Harding and Nancy Kerrigan captured headlines after Kerrigan was attacked by thugs linked to her archrival.

When the sideshow seems about to take over the center ring, it's time to get back to basics, officials said.

"You tell the people that the distractions are not why they are on the team. You tell them you are on the team because you are an athlete and you have a great talent," said Harvey Schiller, president of Turner Sports and USOC executive director during the Harding-Kerrigan affair.

"You try to direct their attention back to the sport."

In recent months, need for such direction has been almost constant.

Fighter learns from mean streets

NEW YORK (AP) — Lonnie Bradley yearns to stand out in the rough, tough world of boxing, to be more than a face in the crowd, which was what he was the day he almost died on the mean streets of Harlem.

Bradley, then 18, had gone to a hip-hop club five blocks from where he still lives with his mother, Blanche, at 151st Street and Seventh Avenue. Teen-agers from all over the city had gathered at the club.

"Some guys came in to stick up the whole place," Bradley recalled.

Suddenly, there were gunshots and Bradley ran, but he stopped about a block away.

"There were more shot outside the club," he said. "It was like the OK Corral."

While standing in a crowd, his arms crossed on his chest, Bradley was struck in the left elbow by a stray bullet.

"I ran home," Bradley remembered. "I didn't want to go to a hospital and have them call my mother and get her all excited. It was a hollow-point bullet. I was operated on to clean the fragments out of my elbow."

Bradley was lucky.

"If my arms hadn't been crossed, I would have been hit in the heart," he said.

It was about this time that Bradley resumed boxing, a decision that led to a fine amateur career and a promising pro career in which he has won the fringe WBO middleweight title and compiled a 22-0 record, with 18 knockouts.

Bradley will make a title defense Tuesday night against Randy Smith, 16-1-3 with six knockouts, at the 26th Street Armory in lower Manhattan. The bout will be televised on USA.

"I started boxing when I was 8 and I did it until I was 13 or 14 when I then stopped to concentrate on basketball," said Bradley, who was a 5-foot-11 point guard in high school. "But there were no scholarships for basketball, and I went back to boxing."

He became a top amateur, winning a National Golden Gloves championship, three New York Golden Gloves titles and reaching the semifinals of the 1992 Olympic trials. His record in open competition was 72-5.

AVIS LUBE

DALLAS isn't the only team in Texas that is a winner!

Our minimum starting salary is $5 hr. Manager trainees can start at $300 a week or more (depending on experience.) We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We also have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement, several bonus plans, and a profit sharing plan!

Training Camp is just like the Cowboys!

We get issued a uniform (minus the pads), and we run you through pushups, tackling, blocking (o.k., it's a little different.) 95% of our managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. We offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you drive into one of our Avis Lubes!

What's a "season" at Avis Lube really like?

After training camp, you'll have the knowledge to perform total fluid maintenance on almost any car, as well as minor repairs. You'll have the critical skills necessary today to give exceptional customer service, dealing in public relations, and developing personal leadership. Who knows -- you might have fun too!

So what about the "Off Season"?

What "Off season"? AVIS LUBE offers stable employment year-round. We are one of the largest fast oil change companies in the world, and the biggest in West Texas. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) with your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to tailor-make a schedule to fit your needs. Our locations are open from 7:30 A.M.-6:30 P.M. Monday through Saturday, and on Sunday from noon to 5. Full-timers work a five day week!

Join the Avis Lube Team now!

Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With Avis, the chances are very high that you could be running one of our locations, making $20,000 plus bonuses! If all of this interests you, the first step is to pick up an application at any one of our Avis Lubes, complete it, and bring it to our Midland area office (3314 No. Loop 250) between 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. Monday - Friday. If you live in Odessa, we take applications at 809 So. Crane Hwy. On Tuesdays at 9 A.M. and Saturdays at 10 A.M. You then will take several tests and questionnaires which assist us in determining if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and a drug test is required. Relocation to one of our other cities of operation may be a possibility.

Charming, subtle reflections

"To an open house in the evening
Home shall men come
To an older place than Eden
And a taller town than Rome"

G K Chesterton

A master of the kind of English detective mystery that features an inquiring priest and a guilty butler, G.K Chesterton had much to say on the subject of houses. They were often the settings for his dramas, and the idea of home as sanctuary was a common undertone to his intriguing puzzles.

4315 Country Club certainly has the potential to be a charming family home. Stuffed with features such as an elegant brass and brick fireplace in the family room, and boasting radically different aspects like the kitchen table, there is plenty to see in this property.

The aforesaid kitchen table is probably the most unusual feature in the house. Built-in to the kitchen wall, half of the diners sit in the family room and half in the kitchen. An unusual space saving device, the table provides the focal point in these two rooms.

Listed by American Realty at $72,000, this is a sizeable three bedroom family home with two bathrooms and two living areas.

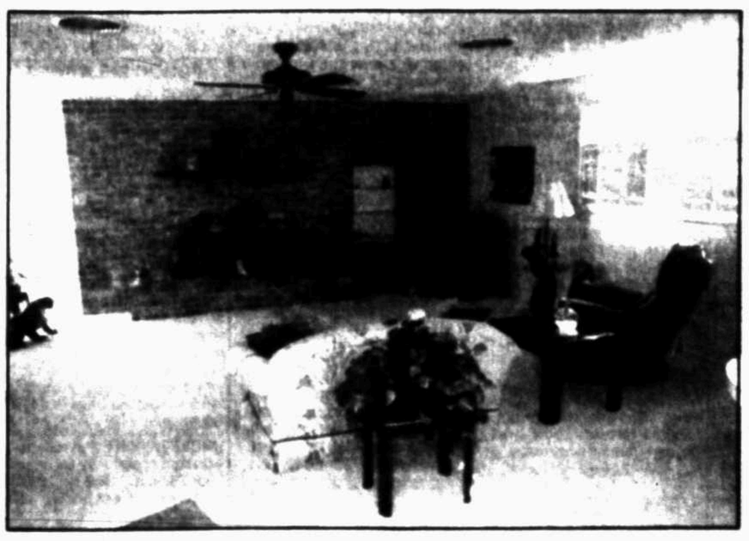

The family room, which leads out onto the wrap-around yard with built-in barbecue and children's play area, also opens out into the open-plan dining room. This large space shares features with the formal living room. The most noticeable of these is the mirrored wall in each room which helps to lighten and enlarge the spaces.

Recently remodeled, the property has had a new roof installed within the last year and offers a high level of decor throughout.

There will be an opportunity to view this house this afternoon between three and five o'clock. The open house will be hosted by the listing agents,Julian Rubio and Roscoe Martinez, who will be on hand to answer questions.

For more information about t. s house, or to arrange an alternative appointment to view it, call 520-7577.

A plethora of windows and mirrors, coupled with a pale, stylish decor helps to open up this family home and create a light, pleasing ambience.

The right time is now

Ask any Realtor when the best time to sell a home is, and they will answer, "Now is the best time."

Pine

One may think this to be overly optimistic and that there is a best time or season in which to sell a home. Real Estate is an industry of immediacy. Although many home owners have bought homes during the spring and summer, a decision to buy rarely has anything to do with the actual season. Timing, for example, is often linked to children's schedules. Many families are reluctant to uproot their children while schools are in session and will wait until school is out.

In addition, many home owners have leases to finish out so that they do not have both rent and mortgage payments at the same time.

It takes time to find the right house, so even though buyers do not want to move until a certain date, they will start looking months in advance.

Since the beginning of the 1990s, the predictable cycle of spring and fall selling seasons has begun to shift due to changes in traditional lifestyles of families and changing work habits.

Many agents do as much business in December as they do in June. There may not be as many buyers in the market, but the ones that are will be serious about what they are looking for.

So what is the best season to list your home for sale? All of them: Spring, summer, fall and winter.

This story was submitted by Norma Pine, of Chaparral Realtors.

Anniversary thanks

"A Realtor's service to buyers and sellers relies on well trained, knowledgeable assistance from many other real estate related businesses," said Kay Sutton, owner of Kay Sutton, Realtors. These include lenders, title companies and many other independent professionals, from builders through all-home inspectors.

Sutton

"Today, successful home transactions are seldom concluded with a simple handshake and a promise," said Mrs. Sutton.

Kay Sutton, Realtors opened one year ago and the firm began helping buyers and sellers coordinate the home sale elements.

If, as a buyer or seller, you thanked a Realtor who changed your stress into success on one or more transactions, then you can appreciate the gratitude your Realtor has for the assistance of other professionals in the real estate industry.

Kay Sutton, Realtors wishes to acknowledge and thank all of the conscientious professionals who have helped to make the firm's first year of service possible.

Students get creative

Painting an old milk stool, fashioning "fat cats" out of papier mache, designing a tablecloth, and fitting mosaic tiles together to form an eagle and crest were just a few activities keeping students busy at Hillcrest School last week. Hillcrest students are preparing works of art to enter into Museum of the Southwest's Student Spring Art Show.

"Last year the students made a life-size bull out of chicken wire and papier mache," said Lyn White-Giesler, pointing to a snorting black bull balancing on its front legs with hind legs kicking in the air.

Hillcrest is a private school that offers individualized attention to students with dyslexia and attention deficit disorder. "Some of our students have been told in the past that they were slow or lazy," Ms. White-Giesler said. "But when they come to Hillcrest they realize that isn't true. The problem is that they learn differently."

Ms. White-Giesler, Hillcrest development director, said participating in the museum's art contest is a self-esteem builder for the students.

"We have our own art show and bring the parents in to see what the students have made," said Hillcrest teacher Sherry Hunter. "Our students did real well last year in the watercolor category."

Ms. Hunter's second- and third-graders were given the project of making papier mache "fat cats."

"We gave them the project, then just let them go," Ms. Hunter said.

The project attracting the most attention at the non-profit private school, however, is a mosaic being crafted from broken bits of tile.

Eighth-grader Trey Roye placed broken bits of tile in the shape of an eagle's crest while fellow eighth-grader Corey Madrid broke tiles into smaller pieces with a hammer. The students chose white marble for the eagle's head and blue for the crest. Eighth-grader Richard Rowland is also helping design the mosaic.

"We have been wanting a mosaic eagle for awhile to hang in the lobby. We made transparencies of the school logo of an eagle and the students are doing the rest," said teacher Paula Coulter. She said some "artistic differences" were discussed at length when students didn't agree over the color of tile to use for the eagle's eye.

"But the eagle is turning out nicely," she said, noting students will later apply grout to finish the mosaic.

In another classroom, ninth-grader Charlie Schoch painted several coats of bright yellow on the seat of an old milk

Koenig

Loader improved

LARAMIE, WYO. — Former Midlander Jason Koenig recently participated in the first annual Mechanical Engineering Senior Design Symposium at the University of Wyoming in Laramie. Koenig helped to design an improved paintball feeding system for paintball guns. His team constructed a magazine feed that eliminates the chopping of paint balls, a common problem in most gravity fed systems.

Boards honored

AUSTIN — Governor George W. Bush has proclaimed February as School Board Recognition Month. The month of recognition has been called in order to focus on the function an elected board serves in communities and schools.

"The local board of education is a uniquely American institution that has made the public schools both flexible and responsive to the needs of communities, the state, and the nation, while keeping alive the fundamental ideal of representative government," Bush said.

LHS concert set

The Lee High School Orchestra has planned a night of two-stepping entertainment for Friday. The event will feature the orchestra in concert with Jerry Dugan at 8 p.m. in the LHS auditorium. Admission to the concert is free. Dance tickets are $8 in advance or $10 at the door. Door prizes will be given away at the dance. Tickets can be purchased at Luskeys in Midland or Odessa and from any Lee High Orchestra student. Call 694-0561 for ticket information.

AIDS workshop offers education

"We all have unanswered questions about AIDS ... Unanswered questions will never be answered if they are not asked."

Midland Area AIDS Association

When it comes to education about AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) even people diagnosed with the disease sometimes are lacking in knowledge of it, according to Judy Warren, executive director of Midland Area AIDS Support, Inc.

In order to offer education to the community — and an opportunity to provide support for people with AIDS — MAAS will host its first "AIDS Education and Care Team Workshop" March 2. The day-long workshop will be offered from 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas St.

"Several organizations that offer services to people with AIDS will be on hand to answer questions. We plan to offer thorough information and history on AIDS," Ms. Warren said.

She said the emphasis of the workshop is two-fold, "to offer AIDS education and to set up Care Teams. The teams consist of a group of 8 to 15 people who will offer services for local people living with AIDS.

"This workshop is designed for everybody — teachers, Sunday school teachers, nurses, mothers, fathers, grandparents, young people or even people who are living with AIDS," Ms. Warren said.

THE WORKSHOP will feature guest speakers, including Dr. David Snyder who will address "What Occurs in the Body" for people infected with HIV; Les White of Big Spring, the AIDS coordinator with the Veterans Association hospital, speaking on "Natural History and Disease Progression;" and the Rev. Jerry Hilton, pastor of First Presbyterian Church speaking on "Biblical Responses."

Sharon Dove with the Foundation for Interfaith Research and Ministry AIDS Care Team Program in Houston will talk about developing Care Teams. The Care Teams originally were developed to help persons with Alzheimer's disease.

"We are really hoping to get a response from churches," Ms. Warren said. "We would like churches to have a representative at this workshop to find out how they can help, but we would like to talk to any individual interested in being a part of this new vital ministry."

In addition to the guest speakers, Les White will conduct two separate classes for people living with HIV or AIDS on Nutrition/Complimentary Therapy and Opportunistic Infections and Their Symptoms.

"Oftentimes, people who have AIDS aren't even informed of all the symptoms and infections they might experience. We assume people know what to do, and they don't," Ms. Warren said.

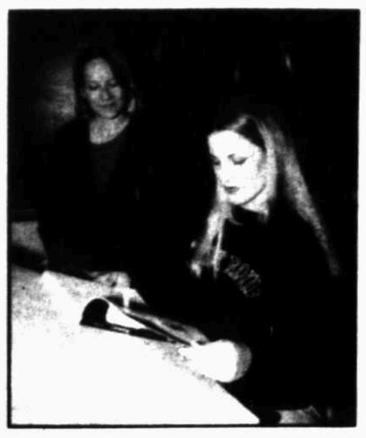

The MAAS executive director said the workshop will offer "a great opportunity for young people asking questions, and for churches to learn what they can do to help people living with HIV or AIDS."

The March 2 workshop will be conducted in First Presbyterian Church,

Center puts Midland back to work

One-stop program helps workers, employers

By Shawna Loyd

Layoffs, down-sizing, corporate restructuring, retraining, training–no matter what it's called, career changes are traumatic, but the stress of job hunting can be reduced when workers find the assistance they need to find the job they are best suited for.

Midland College has joined with six other local agencies to assist The Midland Workforce Center, a "one-stop" program designed to help job-seekers find employment.

The program was developed to make job transitions for area residents easier and more efficient, for employees and employers.

Along with Midland College, other agencies involved with Midland Workforce Center during its first year are Texas Employment Commission, Job Training Partnership Act and Quality Workforce Midland County Housing.

Coordination of community assets is what has enabled the center to work so well. "We are able to assess the needs of the job seeker or employer and provide services either here at the center or through referral to our agency partners," Field Office Manager W.C. Wilson, Jr., said.

"We try to provide whatever our clients need to reach success, whether it is day-care, employee training workshops or small business information and guidance," he said.

The six entities are among the 21 agencies involved in coordination of consolidation of job placement activities as mandated by the Texas Legislature.

The initial six partners were targeted by the United Way Midland Introspective Network for Employment Committee (MINE). The task of this committee was to assess the community's employment barriers and opportunities. The center received a $100,000 Capacity Bu.lding Grant on March 30, 1995 which allowed for a Worker Adjustment Career Center, or career transition center to be established.

> "We are here to make sure the needs of the clients are met."
> —Rita Nell Diffie, Director of Special Populations and member, Workforce Advisory board

According to Cookie Wetendorf, center coordinator, the mission of the center is to help job-seekers make well informed decisions about career choices. "We provide screening, testing, resumé assistance, and many other services," Wetendorf said.

Wetendorf notes that services offered by the center are identical to short-term outplacement services offered by large corporations during workforce reductions. "The difference is corporate outplacement services are available for a short time. We are here all the time and will continue to serve long into the future," Wetendorf said.

Along with assistance to dislocated workers, workers seeking a first job or better job can benefit from the services offered by the center. "The agencies involved with the center provide valuable resources for the job seeker and the employer," Wetendorf said.

Some job-seekers are potential employers or entrepreneurs. The Workforce Center also has that information to help them. According to Wetendorf, one of the most popular programs at the center is the Small Business Owner training seminars held in conjunction with the Midland College Business and Economic Development Center. "Since last fall, more than 80 individuals have attended the seminars and 15 have gone on to draw up business plans with the help of BEDC counselors," said Camille Duchesne, dean of the MC South Facility and Workforce Center advisory board member.

Wilson praises the agencies involved for making such a difference to job-seekers. "The health sciences division at Midland College is one of the most successful training programs for our clients," he said. "The placement wage for registered nurses is as high as $15 per hour."

Rita Nell Diffie, director of special populations at Midland College, contributes the success of the Workforce center to the cooperative efforts of the agencies involved. "We are here to make sure that the needs of the clients are met, whether it is career counseling, day care or financial aid information. We want to insure the success of the clients," she said. Diffie notes that cooperation between agencies allows them to direct people to the source of assistance that would best suit their needs. Diffie serves on the advisory board of the Workforce Center.

According to Wilson, another reason the program works so well is community spirit. "Midland is unique. There is a strong community network that supports client success," he said.

"Our biggest challenge is letting people know we are here and the benefits we offer to both employers and employees," Wilson said.

The goal of the Workforce Center is to work toward a shorter amount of time that clients are unemployed. "We want to help them think through their options and assist them in making good choices by providing as much information as possible," Wetendorf said. "Good advice equals a good outcome," Wilson added. "Everyone wins."

Job Opportunities

Cookie Wetendorf, director of the Midland Workforce Center assists Katherine Vargas with a computer-aided job search. The system Vargas is using includes job listings from around the state and is only one of the services available to the job-seeker.

Continuing Education classes begin Feb. 12

Events highlight depth, diversity of offerings at Midland College

■ A first-time visitor to Midland says "you can feel the influence of Midland College everywhere," pointing out what many citizens take for granted—that Midland College is at the heart of many community activities.

Former Midland College tennis player "Boba" Svetkova has traveled the United States since helping to lead the MC team to two national championships in 1991 and 1992.

Coombes

Even though the tennis program no longer exists, Boba, a native of Bulgaria, still considers Midland "home"—so much so that she brought her parents to spend this Christmas in Midland.

After visiting Midland College for the first time, Boba's parents, Blagovesta and Stephan, praised Midland College's exceptional facilities and beautiful campus.

But, Blagovesta made another important observation: "Midland College is the epicenter of the community because it has so many activities and it gives opportunities to so many people," she said. "You can feel the influence of Midland College everywhere."

Sometimes visitors to Midland can see more clearly what Midlanders take for granted—a college that is at the heart of the community. Two examples of the depth and diversity of the college's offerings occurred last week.

MC held a formal opening of the Industry Training Center, a new classroom and training facility designed to help break down the barrier between business and industry training needs and the traditional classroom.

The day after the announcement, news of the center had reached Austin where an MC administrator received congratulations on the college's achievement from several people while waiting in the airport.

The Health Sciences Continuing Education department added to the positive note later in the week by presenting Humorist Loretta LaRoche, who delivered the message "lighten up" and live longer.

What's the connection between serving industry and 500 people laughing (mostly at themselves) through a three-hour seminar? The answer is Midland College's philosophy of serving the community. Staying at the "epicenter" of the community is just where the people at Midland College want to be.

Elise Coombes is public relations director for Midland College.

Group seeks Care Team members

Staff Reports

Sometimes it's the little things that matter the most to people who are seriously ill — having someone pick up a prescription, cook a meal or buy groceries.

Midland Area AIDS Support (MAAS) is developing a program of Care Teams. The teams will consist of eight to 15 people and will serve various people living with AIDS in the Permian Basin. The function of the teams will be explained at the 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. March 2 workshop at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas.

According to MAAS Executive Director Judy Warren, there are about 100-150 in the Permian Basin area who have been diagnosed with AIDS.

"We hope to start with one team from this workshop," Ms. Warren said. "Team members can run errands, cook a meal, pick up some food, and do other things for people which are non-medical."

She said MAAS will provide ongoing classes for Care Team members.

"People can be on a team and offer to do things mornings only, evenings only, on week days or weekends, any time they can help," Ms. Warren said. "And with 8 to 15 people, any member can feel free to say 'no' if something doesn't fit into their schedule."

Sharon Dove, coordinator of the AIDS Care Team Ministry in Houston, will attend the Midland workshop and help participates to organize a Care Team.

HILLCREST: Students dabble in arts stool. "When I get enough coats of yellow on it, I'm going to paint the 'Have a Nice Day' happy face on it," Schoch said.

"When the students are finished we will have our own art museum set up for a couple of days," Ms. Hunter said. "We will invite parents to come and view the artwork."

All students in the school — which operates kindergarten through ninth grade — are working on entries for the contest.

"The art activities are very multi-sensory and hands-on," Ms. White-Geisler said. "That is the kind of activity we emphasize for children with learning differences. Seeing and doing makes a difference for them. For example, rather than just pointing to a word and saying: 'This is a noun,' it's better to have a student take a piece of string and wrap it around an object that is a noun."

Ms. White-Geisler said students absorb lessons better when employing various senses, rather than just the auditory or visual. Then there is always the element of fun in creative activities that can't be discounted.

"I like the creative projects the best," Schoch said. "We usually work on plays, but painting the furniture has been fun."

Ms. White-Geisler said, more than fun, some of the projects will be functional. Old school furniture will have a new contemporary look and the eagle mosaic will hang in the school entryway.

"We decided to go for functional this year," the Hillcrest development director said. "Especially after the contest last year, we suddenly had a life-size bull and didn't know where to put it." She said the bull won an honorable mention in the sculpture category. "It may not have been the best entry in the sculpture category, but it certainly was the largest," she said laughing.

HELPING YOUR CHILDREN SUCCEED IN SCHOOL

Before you send your children back to school, make sure their health won't stand in the way of their success. That means seeing that they get adequate sleep, eat right and have no hidden problems that might interfere with their school work.

REGULAR CHECKUPS. Children should see a doctor once a year until age 6; every two years after that.

EYESIGHT. Have your children's eyes checked at birth, at 6 months and at 3 years of age. After that, periodic checks are usually enough, unless a parent wore glasses as a child or there is family history of pediatric eye disease.

HEARING. Children who are easily distracted or have trouble paying attention should have their ears checked. If that's not the problem, it could be a learning disorder.

HYPERACTIVITY. Children who are fidgety, can't sit still for long, are easily distracted, talk loud and often, can't wait for their turn or are impulsive or bossy should be checked for a possible attention deficit disorder.

GOOD NUTRITION. Successful school days start with a good breakfast. And good eating habits learned in childhood are likely to stay with children and make them healthy adults.

ADEQUATE SLEEP. Regular nighttime rituals, such as a bath and a story, can condition your children to fall asleep faster. When they do have trouble falling asleep, try a back rub - or give them a slice of turkey or a glass of milk, both of which contain chemicals that can trigger sleep.

IMMUNIZATIONS. Protect your children from potentially disabling or fatal diseases by making sure their shots are up to date.

If your child complains of tummy aches or other ailments, there may be no physical problem at all. Instead it might indicate a reluctance to go to school. Talk to his teachers about other possible problems.

Hearts Crafts

Listen up, kids — Valentine's Day is only 10 days away. And nothing says loving more to your mom, your grandmother or even your Aunt Matilda than a homemade, crafted Valentine made with your own two loving hands.

If you can get permission to go to the Children's Department of the Midland County Library at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, you can join in "Let's Make Pop-Up Valentine's," this month's Saturday crafts program. The class is free and supplies are provided.

If you can't make it to library, there are some Valentine's crafts you can make at home, but they may require the help of an adult. One of them is sure to please some loving, sentimental relative or friend. And they are easy too.

Items needed for the Heart Snatcher Mobile are 16-20 gauge copper or brass wire (available at many hardware or craft stores), all-purpose adhesive glue, wire cutters, pink and red tissue paper, Elmer's glue, scissors, clear nail polish or clear spray paint, needle and thread, and of course, some grown-up to help (a grown-up who will not spoil your Valentine's Day surprise).

First, use the wire cutters (or let the grown-up do this part) to cut a 12-inch piece of wire and bend it into a heart shape. (If you want to make hearts in different sizes, cut the wire in different lengths.) Cross the ends of the wire together at the top of the heart and glue the ends of the heart together with the adhesive glue and let it dry. Use the wire cutters to clip off the extra ends of wire if necessary.

After the heart frame is made and the adhesive glue is dry, rub Elmer's glue all over one side of the wire and place it glue-side down on a piece of tissue paper (making sure all of the heart touches the paper). Let it dry.

Trim off the extra tissue paper around the heart with the scissors, and then put two coats of clear nail polish on each side of the heart, one side at a time. (Let each coat dry before putting on the next coat.) (Or instead, you can spray each side of the hearts with two light coats of clear glossy finish spray paint, letting each coat dry before applying the next coat.)

Make several of these hearts in different sizes and Relatives love to get pictures of their loved ones, and Valentine's Day is the perfect time to give a photo in a hand-made frame (framing page).

Midland Opera Guild gets down to business

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

The Midland Opera Guild began the new year with a luncheon recently at the home of the president, Theresa (Mrs. Ray) Poage.

McKnight-Harrison

Serving as hostesses with Theresa were the other guild officers, Jane (Mrs. Robert) Ward, Em (Mrs. Glenn) Carnett and Peggy (Mrs. Manton) Jones.

After a baked potato and salad luncheon, the membership got down to the business at hand.

Plans were made for a reception following the opening event of Midland Opera Theater's 1996 season. Andrea Huber of Heidelberg, Germany, will be presented in concert on Feb. 12 at Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Building. She is the sister of Midlander Jami (Mrs. Mark) Owen, who is well-known on the local arts scene.

In other business, the success of the guild's recent fund-raising project was noted. The group manned the train ride for children at Midland Park Mall during the Christmas season.

Among the guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Owen, president of MOT's board of directors; Suzanne Martin, Lucy (Mrs. W.D.) Lee, Nancy (Mrs. Buddy) Anguish and Lora (Mrs. Lee) Jones.

THE MIDLAND WOMAN'S CLUB opened the doors recently for its annual Mexican Fiesta. The clubhouse in Hogan Park was festively decorated with colorful paper flowers, candles and a large pinata in center place over the stage.

Two seatings were held, an 11:30 a.m. luncheon and a six o'clock dinner, with delicious Mexican food served at each. Those attending the evening event had the added pleasure of entertainment by The Mayor's Fourum, a barbershop quartet composed of Thane Akins, Bill Shaner, Sam Carter and Bill Southerland. They sang many old, familiar songs, beginning with "Daddy Sang Bass" and ending with our personal favorite, "An Irish Blessing."

Among those seen in the dinner crowd were Jean and Pat Thomas, Victoria Chapple with her daughter and son -in-law, Toya and Charles Moncrief, Minnie German, Shirley Jones, Wanda and Ed Franke, and our son, Tim Harrison, who is serving with the Army Rangers at Hunter Army Air Field, Ga.

GREAT SOUNDS emanated from Midland's new Jazz Restaurant a recent Sunday afternoon when the West Texas Jazz Society held a jam session in conjunction with its annual meeting.

There was a full house, and many of the jazz aficionados came early to eat lunch or stayed late for supper. Before and after the meeting, music was provided by The West Texas Jazz All Stars, who include local musicans Neal Goates, Robert LaCroix, and Mark Lowe. Lynn Childress came down from Lubbock and sang several songs by request. She will be remembered by many longtime Midlanders, who heard her perform at The Pub, which was located on Missouri Street and was razed to make way for a parking lot. Other featured guest artists also came in from Lubbock.

THE MIDLAND ZETA TAU ALPHA Alumnae Chapter met recently for a luncheon in the home of Colleen (Mrs. Mark) McLane.

A special guest was Alumnae District President Mrs. Ann Haun Folsom of Eastland. She presented a slide show and explained the new ZTA pledge program. Ann was the Big Sister of member Jeni (Mrs. David) Wood while they were sorority sisters at Texas Tech.

Members received the news of two new members at Southwestern University in Georgetown, Rebecca Nix and Kim Macferran, daughter of member Joanie (Mrs. Sam) Macferran.

Among the 30 alumnae present were local chapter president, Jane (Mrs. Gary) Garlitz, Jane (Mrs. Steve) McCoy, Peggy (Mrs. Robert) Nash and Mrs. Donna Fields, collegiate province president, who recently moved to Midland.

Co-hostesses for the luncheon were Janet (Mrs. Joe) Andrews and Iris (Mrs. John) Foster.

MAKING HER SECOND appearance before the Midland Country Club Ladies Association, Dallasite Valere Althouse presented a program, entitled "Name Dropping," in which she related experiences with many of her celebrity clients. Mrs. Althouse is a lecturer, astrologer, counselor and psychic, and she has worked with such famous personages as Lady Byrd Johnson and her daughters, Lynda Byrd and Lucy; Princess Grace, Phyllis McGuire and Wayne Newton.

For 28 years, Valere was the weekly lecturer at The Greenhouse, a spa in Arlington, where she continues to do counseling and programs when she is in town. She also leads seminars throughout the United States and Europe and has conducted research both here and abroad in the field of psychic phenomena. With her husband, Larry, a United Methodist minister, she has co-authored two books and written for various publications.

Valere's talk was preceded by a luncheon featuring Chicken Wellington, Tomato Aspic and Cheesecake topped with strawberries. Hostesses for the social hour beforehand were Louise (Mrs. Garland) Lang, Charlene (Mrs. John) Younger and Phyllis Grimland.

Spotted in the audience were Pat (Mrs. Lloyd) Innerarity, Sandy (Mrs. David) Sledge, Mary Steedman, and the new Ladies Association president, Ellen (Mrs. Stephen) Helbing.

The Ommegang Pageant in Brussels is an annual event celebrating the entry in 1549 of Emperor Charles V. This year, the re-creation of the medieval feast is to be an especially grand occasion marking the 300th anniversary of Grand'Place.

Europe is in celebratory mood

By Jennifer Merin

EISLEBEN, Germany (AP) — In this ancient mining town in the foothills of the Harz Mountains, Martin Luther lived and died and, as a religious reformer, changed the course of world history.

This year, Eisleben is the hub of activity marking the 450th anniversary of Luther's death — at age 92 on Feb. 18, 1546. A host of other anniversaries will be marked in Europe throughout the year, including the advent of Hungary 1,100 years ago.

For Luther, there are special tours through historic and scenic towns including Eisleben, his hometown; Mansfeld, where he spent his youth; Erfurt, where he attended university; Leipzig, which he frequently visited; Wittenberg, where he worked for 36 years and where he is buried.

Also, Torgau, where Luther drew up the Torgau Articles, part of the Augsburg Confession; Augsburg, where the Protestant confession of faith was first stated; Worms, where he defended his theses before the Imperial Diet; Eisenach and Coburg, where he hid; Magdeburg, where he preached; and Nurnberg, which in 1524-25, became the first free city to introduce Reformation.

Beginning in mid-February, the calendar of events includes church services, concerts, theater performances and seminars offering insight into Luther's life and ideology and the history and culture of the Reformation.

On Feb. 16-18, church services and concerts in Eisleben and other cities will mark Luther's death. From April 14-21, a re-enactment of Luther's journey from Wittenberg to Worms is scheduled. On June 14-16, Eisleben's Historic Old Town Festival will feature food and drink, song and other entertainment from Luther's day.

And on Sept. 9, Eisenach plans a church music and jazz festival intended to build a bridge between Martin Luther and Martin Luther King.

The Martin Luther celebrations are among several important historical events worthy of tourist stops in 1996, a banner year for anniversaries in Europe, including the origins of Austria and Hungary.

Austria celebrates 1,000 years as Austria. It was in 996 that Holy Roman Emperor Otto III bestowed on the Bishop of Freising part of the Danube valley west of Vienna now known as Neuhofen an der Ybbs. The land grant was called Ostarrichi, or Eastern Lands. The name stuck, as Osterreich, or Austria.

Austria's millennium events include comprehensive exhibitions. "Ostarrichi-Austria, 996: Men, Myths, Milestones," is on view in Neuhofen an der Ybbs and St. Polten throughout the year, focusing on the origins and history of the nation. "The Message of Music: 1,000 Years of Musical History," Feb. 12-June 30 in Vienna, pays tribute to Mozart, Strauss, Beethoven, Haydn, Schubert and other great composers who lived in the city. On display will be musical instruments, original scores and other memorabilia.

"The Danube: The Course of a Life," at Schotten Monastery in Vienna will run from May through December. The exhibition will cover the history and culture along the river from its source in the Black Forest to its mouth in the Black Sea. Other exhibits focus on renowned Austrians, the equestrian tradition, the great abbey at Melk, and "The Hunt in Art," an art exhibition devoted to hunting at Hermes Villa, the royal hunting lodge in Vienna.

Hungary celebrates its origins of 1,100 years ago, when nomadic Magyar tribes led by Arpad arrived in the Carpathian basin and conquered the lands we now know as Hungary.

Commemorative events begin in March with a series of exhibitions at the 200-year-old Hungarian National Museum in Budapest and organ concerts in the 1,000-year-old abbey at Pannonhalma. In April, artist Arpad Feszty's vast circular mural depicting Hungary's history will be displayed at Opusztaszer. From Aug. 20-26, there are historical parades, street fairs and other festivities in and around Buda Castle in Budapest.

Also during the year, Belgium celebrates the 300th year of Brussels' Grand'Place with special editions of the annual Ommegang Pageant on July 2 and 4, and the Carpet of Flowers on Aug. 15.

Exhibitions in Italy will celebrate the 300th anniversary of the birth of painter Giambattista Tiepolo, and in Spain they mark the birth 250 years ago of the artist Francisco Jose de Goya.

Scotland, meanwhile, will remember Robert Burns on the 200th anniversary of the poet's death with a memorial procession and concert at Dumfries on July 21; exhibitions at Edinburgh's Royal Museum from June through September plus myriad dramatizations, recitals and a traveling fair.

Author describes life with AIDs

By Carol Deegan

Associated Press

In 1992, Mary Fisher attracted national attention with a moving speech to the Republican National Convention. Fisher had contracted the AIDS virus from her ex-husband. She was HIV-positive.

She did not fit the stereotype of someone with AIDS. Fisher told the convention: "We may take refuge in our stereotypes, but we cannot hide there long. Because HIV asks only one thing of those it attacks: Are you human?"

Fisher's new book, "My Name Is Mary: A Memoir" (Scribner, $24), is a compelling, readable account of Fisher's life, before and after HIV/AIDS.

A stepdaughter of Michigan businessman and GOP fund-raiser Max Fisher (who adopted her), Mary grew up in the world of philanthropy and politics, working in the Advance Office for President Gerald Ford. After leaving her White House job, Fisher concentrated on her art.

Desiring a "normal" life, Fisher married artist Brian Campbell in 1987. She writes: "Six months into the marriage, I concluded that whatever else this was, it wasn't normal."

Nonetheless, she bore a son, Max, and adopted another son, Zachary, two years later. The marriage ended in divorce a short time later.

In July 1991, Campbell tested positive for HIV/AIDS.

"It hadn't occurred to me, even for an instant, that I was seriously at risk," Fisher writes. "If I weren't, could Max be? And Zachary? He was adopted. He would be OK. Wouldn't he? I sat silently, staring into the uncertain and suddenly anxious future, pondering it all." (Max tested negative.)

When Campbell was tested for AIDS, his T-cell count was only 45. As Fisher explains, AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — is the name for the later stage of being HIV-positive. A T-cell count under 200 is one definition of having AIDS, as opposed to merely being HIV-positive. If you live long enough, AIDS will eventually reduce your numbers to zero. At that point your body has little surviving immune system.

"If you are HIV-positive, you're on the road to AIDS. And you can't get off that road. You finish it when AIDS finishes you," Fisher writes.

Brian Campbell died on June 20, 1993. Tennis star Arthur Ashe, a friend of Fisher's, had died several months earlier. Elizabeth Glaser, who also addressed the 1992 Republican National Convention, died in 1994. Fisher writes, "I saw the pattern I now live: we are infected, we'll soon be dead."

Fisher, 47, lives in the Washington, D.C. area with her sons. Since the Republican convention, two collections of her speeches have been published, and she has continued to pursue her work as an artist.

"My Name Is Mary" is a love letter to Fisher's family and friends, especially her sons, who are the focus of her life. It is also a source of strength and comfort for those who know Mary through her words and speeches:

"Those who fear death, who dread illness, who suffer terror in the night: Listen closely, and you will hear Him calling you — by your name. For all you who hear the call of their names, there is the promise of grace and peace. I know this promise, as surely as I know that my name is Mary."

HEARTS: Crafts make perfect gifts

colors. If you want, join the hearts by threading the needle (you might want to use white, red or pink thread) and gently poking it through the nail polish-coated heart at the top of the heart. Gently join the top of one heart with the bottom of another until all the hearts are strung together. At the top of your string of hearts, make a large loop so your heart mobile can be hung in a window or on a wall.

Here's another one from ZIA — Decorated Pencils (not pictured) which can be found on the internet at (http://www.zia.com/holidays/valentine/crafts/craft4/):

To make this festive pencil, you will need scissors, embroidery floss in at least three different colors, a ruler, 15 or so small beads (size 6; check craft stores) and two large beads, tape, a sharpened pencil (or more if you want to make more than one), and craft glue.

First, the beads — cut a piece of embroidery floss to about 4 inches long and tie a double knot in one end. String some beads on the floss, beginning with a small bead. When you are finished stringing beads, tape the end of the floss on the pencil, right under the metal band that holds on the eraser.

Cut a 5-foot-long piece of embroidery floss and tape one end to the top of the pencil, right on the tape that is holding on the string of beads. Wrap the floss around and around the pencil about 10 times, using it to cover up the tape.

String a small bead on the floss so the bead sets on the pencil, and keep wrapping the floss around the pencil. About every 10 times the floss is wrapped around the pencil, slide another bead on it and continue wrapping. When you get to the end of the floss, tape the end to the pencil and do the same thing with another color of floss and some more beads. Be sure that, when you are wrapping the floss around the pencil, you use it to cover up the tape used to hold the end of the floss to the pencil. (NOTE: To make striped bands, you can wrap two colors of floss around the pencil at the same time.)

When you get to the bottom of the pencil, glue the end of the floss in place and let it dry. Trim off the ends of the floss. If you want to sharpen the pencil, unstick the end of the floss and unwind it a little bit, sharpen the pencil, wind the floss back, glue it back down and trim off the extra floss.

Relatives always love pictures of their loved ones, so for Valentine's Day, give a photo of yourself in a frame. Or, if a purchased frame is a little steeper than your allowance money allows, make the frame yourself.

Nothing shows off your own sweet face than a picture frame made by your own two hands to place your photo in. ZIA gives the directions for making these Framing Mats (http://www.zia.com/holidays/valentine/crafts/craft2/).

Items needed are scissors, wrapping paper with designs you want to use, framing mat (it's a precut piece of cardboard design to fit in picture frames — check craft stores), colored tissue paper in similar shades such as reds, pinks and oranges (this is for Valentine's Day, after all), plastic sheet or waxed paper, water-based glue and finish (such as Gloss Mod Podge), which craft stores usually have.

First, cut the designs out of the wrapping paper, after making sure they will fit on the front of the framing mat. Rip the tissue paper into pieces about 1x1-inches big. (HINT: Since it's for Valentine's Day, try making some heart-shaped designs too.)

Spread waxed paper all over the surface you are working on (table, etc.) to protect it. Hold the mat in one hand while brushing lightly with the water-based glue and finish with the other one. Working with one corner of the mat at a time, cover every side of that corner with the glue and finish while holding the mat gently to make sure it doesn't bend.

Place a 1x1-inch piece of tissue paper on the wet corner of the mat, wrapping the paper around the edge and then brushing the tissue paper with more glue and finish to keep it in place. Place another piece of tissue paper down, covering part of the first piece and brushing the glue and finish on top of the second piece. Continue doing this until the wet corner is finished, and then repeat these steps until the whole mat is covered with the pieces of tissue paper.

Put the tissue paper-covered mat down on a piece of waxed paper and let it dry at least an hour or until it is completely dry. Immediately rinse the brush with water to clean it.

When the mat is dry, put the designs cut from the wrapping paper down on it and brush them with the glue and finish to keep them in place. (HINT: If you use too many layers of the glue and finish, the color of the tissue paper will smear so be careful.) Let the mat dry.

After it's dry, use the mat to frame a favorite picture — maybe a school picture to give to your favorite Valentine.

These crafts are relatively simple, inexpensive and quick to make, which is a good thing since Valentine's Day is only 10 days away.

Silk shantung makes shiney comeback in resort, spring collections

By Anne-Marie Schiro

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — After several decades in disfavor, old-fashioned silk shantung — that shiny slubbed fabric that takes color so beautifully — has made a strong comeback in resort and spring collections.

A shantung shirt or dress can spiff up a resort wardrobe, and a shantung shell can make a wool suit look like spring.

Henri Bendel has black and white checked sleeveless shantung shells, $98, to add snap to a suit, and Jill Stuart's sleeveless pink shift dress, $168, to give a lift to the spirit.

Saks Fifth Avenue has Ms. Stuart's boxy jacket in lilac, teal, white or black shantung, $222, with matching slim pants, $165, and Tricia Turk's bow-trimmed sleeveless shell in fuchsia or black, $90, with matching cigarette pants, $140.

Isaac Mizrahi's oversize shirts, as beach cover-ups or tunics, come in pink-and-white-striped shantung, $535 at Saks, as well as in white, turquoise or lavender, $495 at Bergdorf Goodman.

Best time for pruning varies from plant to plant

By Deborah A. Benge Frost

Ever give your wandering wisteria a good pruning and shaping, to be rewarded with a few scant flowers? What an ungrateful vine, after such good care and treatment! What could have happened? It could be that the pruning and shaping came at the wrong time.

Benge Frost

Almost all flowering and fruiting plants can be kept vigorous, productive and beautiful through annual or occasional pruning. Many of us have encountered a grape vine or Lady Banksia rose gone wild with a mass of canes that made it difficult to tell what was what.

Besides avoiding a massive mess of tangled wood, pruning can keep your fruit and flowering wood close to the main trunk where it's easier to thin, spray and pick. Some landscapes have a limited amount of space, so pruning is essential to keep it in bounds and within the space.

Some gardeners have a very specific shape or purpose for a plant, so pruning can help get the plant to that point. For example, a Carolina yellow jessamine can be used as a frame for a front entrance, and pruning can help with the shaping of that plant.

Before you prune, you need to find out when is the best time to prune a particular plant. The key is knowing if its flower buds come from previous season's wood or current season's wood. Each plant is different, so you'll need to do some literature research or observe your plants to discover this fact.

If a plant flowers on last year's wood, prune carefully with that in mind during the dormant season. This is typical of fruit trees.

If the plant is a flowering ornamental, it can be pruned right after it finishes flowering.

If a plant flowers on current season's wood, it can be pruned during the dormant season without any risk of destroying its ability to produce flowers or fruit.

Here are some examples of some flowering or fruiting plants that need pruning:

VINES

■ Campsis radicans, trumpet vine, is a beautiful but very aggressive deciduous vine that flowers in the summer with brilliant red-orange, trumpet-shaped flowers. Once it is established, the previous season's growth should be pruned back to just above its origin, sparing two to three buds of last year's growth.

■ Gelsemium sempervirens, Carolina yellow jessamine, is a delightful evergreen vine that blooms in late winter and early spring with clean, bright yellow, bell-shaped blooms. Once established, this vine should be pruned immediately after flowering. If it is greatly overgrown, it will withstand heavy pruning.

■ Wisteria sinensis, Chinese wisteria, is a gorgeous hardy deciduous vine that blooms in spring and has purple, pea-shaped flowers that hang in a long cluster.

Train wisterias while they are young to get the desired shape — free-standing tree, wallclimber or trained over a porch, doorway or arch. After they are established, last year's growth should be cut back to within inches of its origin, sparing two to three buds.

■ Lonicera japonica, Japanese honeysuckle, needs no introduction. A hardy, common and much-loved plant, it has fragrant white and yellow slender flared flowers.

Pruning can be done in late winter or after the peak flowering. If it has become a mass of tangled stems, prune hard in early spring before new growth.

Cut off all branches several inches above ground, pruning out the deadwood.

SHRUBS

■ Abelia grandiflora, glossy abelias, are broadleaf evergreens and sometimes deciduous shrubs with bell-shaped white and light pink flowers during summer and fall. These shrubs bloom on current and older wood, but the newest branches will flower the heaviest.

Maintain the delightful arching shape and heavier flower by taking a third of the oldest stems out at the crown during the late dormant season or just prior to bud break. Depending on the vigor of your plants, this can be done once a year or when needed.

■ Buddleia davidii, butterfly bush, is a beautiful summer flowering shrub. If winter cold doesn't prune this plant to the ground, cut it to just a few inches above ground to encourage lots of vigorous new shoots.

This plant obviously blooms on new wood and will bloom heavier if it is pruned heavily each year.

■ Rosa sp., roses are such a vast group that it is hard to make generalizations about them. Close observation will reveal when flowering occurs, on what wood it occurs and how often it flowers, which will indicate when to prune and how.

Roses that bloom only once and in spring or early summer generally need pruning after blooms fade.

Some ramblers, one-time blooming climbers, shrub roses and antique roses need to be pruned after peak flowering.

Ramblers and climbers need the oldest canes that have finished blooming removed to encourage new, vigorous cane to grow.

■ Spirea sp., bridal wreath spirea and a few of the other spireas, need to have the oldest shoots removed as soon as the flowers fade but while the plant is still young. As the shrubs become well established, the oldest wood should be removed in late winter.

Flower buds form on previous season's wood, so severe pruning during the dormant season will ruin your flower show.

■ Chaenomeles sp., flowering quince, needs to be trained while it is young to develop a desired framework of branches; otherwise it will become a thicket of branches that hide the beautiful late winter blooms.

After the desired shape is achieved, the bush can be pruned to thin out crowded branches. Last year's growth should be cut back by one-third.

Since flower buds are set on wood that is one year old and older, pruning can be done in dormant season or right after flowers fade. Cutting branches in the tight bud can be brought inside your home to force into bloom indoors for a pretty floral display.

TREES

■ Carya illionoinensis, pecan, is a familiar nut tree that drops its leaves and nuts in the fall and winter. This plant has male flowers located on 1-year-old wood, while female (nut producing) flowers form on current season's growth.

It is critical that young trees are trained to have a central leader and well-formed permanent scaffold branches to serve as a strong framework for this long-lived tree.

After trees have reached maturity, removing crossed, damaged, diseased and crowded wood is the main reason for pruning.

For more information about care and pruning of pecan trees, attend the Pecan Tree Pruning Demonstration at 2 p.m. Feb. 10 at 2010 Rankin Highway in Midland. Included will be discussion and demonstration of pruning practices on young and more mature pecan trees.

For more information call Midland or Ector County Extension offices at 687-1351 or 335-3071.

■ Cercis texensis, redbuds, are small, deciduous, very useful ornamental trees. These trees are covered in small magenta-colored blooms in early spring on wood that is at least one year old.

Blooms that occur on older wood arise from buds that function similarly to the fruiting spurs of a pear or apricot tree.

The tree requires very little pruning, other than some training while young and removal of any dead, damaged or crowded wood from older trees.

■ Malus, crabapple, is a small spring-flowering tree that is mostly ornamental, even though some produce an edible fruit.

Young trees need training to develop the basic framework of a single trunk or multi-trunk shape. As trees mature they need periodic thinning and removal of diseased, damaged or tangled wood.

Cut branches can be forced to bloom early for an indoor display.

Many other flowering shrubs, vines and trees are common to our landscapes.

If you have a question about these or others check your garden books or call the extension office for more information.

Fort Davis hosts new exhibit in honor of famous 'Buffalo Soldiers'

Staff Reports

A new exhibit entitled "African Americans in the Military: The Buffalo Soldiers" is on display in the Visitor Center at Fort Davis National Historic Site.

The exhibit highlights the accomplishments of soldiers of the 9th and 10th U.S. Cavalry regiments and the 24th and 25th U.S. Infantry regiments during their stay at the Fort. Buffalo Soldiers were stationed at Fort Davis from 1867 to 1885.

During their 18 years of service at Fort Davis, the Buffalo Soldiers compiled a notable record of achievements. They constructed roads and telegraph lines, escorted government wagon trains, survey parties, and freight and mail coaches along the San Antonio—El Paso Road.

They scouted hundreds of thousands of miles in search of the elusive Comanches and Apaches.

In 1885, when the last of the Buffalo Soldiers left Fort Davis, peaceful travel and settlement prevailed in much of the Trans-Pecos region.

In addition to the visitor center exhibit, a small exhibit is on display in the auditorium. Concentrating on the life of the everyday soldier, the exhibits feature a number of cavalry and infantry accouterments. A Model 1974 clothing bag, stenciled with a "25" to denote use the 25th Infantry, is just one of the items featured.

Copies of numerous "site bulletins" dealing with various aspects of the history of the Buffalo Soldiers are available free to the public.

A display of publications relating to the history of the African Americans who served in the Civil War and the Indian Wars has also been set up in the Visitor Center.

Visitors to Fort Davis NHS in February also will have the opportunity to register for a set of nine 9x12-inch Buffalo Soldiers Prints by Frederic Remington. The set is entitled "Images of African American Cavalry Campaigning in the American West." Four sets of the prints, one each week, will be given away.

For more information about Black History Month activities at Fort Davis NHS, please call the Fort at (915) 426-3224.

Re-vaccination for pneumonia studied

By Dr. Robert S. Holzman
Associated Press

An old warning about the dangers of a second vaccination to prevent bacterial pneumonia has been challenged by a new study.

Standard medical reference books say that re-vaccination for pneumococcal pneumonia — the kind caused by a bacterium, rather than a virus — isn't recommended because the side effects are too severe.

The new study, done at Fitzsimmons Army Hospital in Colorado, found that the side effects of re-vaccination were not any different from those of the original vaccine shot.

It's a finding that could affect a very large number of Americans ranging from children with kidney disease to the majority of older people, as well as those with heart, lung and other chronic diseases.

Pneumococcal vaccine is recommended for healthy adults over the age of 65. In addition, it's given to people who are more than usually vulnerable to bacterial infection, such as children with kidney disease, persons who have had their spleens removed, transplantation patients who are taking anti-rejection drugs and people who are infected with the AIDS virus.

One reason for re-vaccination is that an older vaccine, which was in use until about eight years ago, protected against only 14 of the strains of pneumococcus that cause pneumonia. A newer vaccine protects against 23 strains.

In general, the protection can wear out over a period of years. And in some people, the first shot doesn't take.

Any pneumococcal vaccine is likely to give the recipient some mild side effects, such as a sore arm. Some people may suffer inflammation, aching joints and fever. One theory has been that a second shot would cause those reactions and more — enough to put a person in bed for a while.

But the Colorado study of 151 individuals who got a second shot found those fears to be unwarranted. The side effects weren't that severe.

This new study opens the door for a revision of thinking about vaccination against pneumonia, a change that could have beneficial results. Indeed, the newest recommendation is for vaccination every seven years.

Dr. Robert S. Holzman is Associate Professor of Medicine at New York University School of Medicine.

The couple lived in Johnston County, Okla., where Ingram was self-employed and served eight years as county treasurer. They moved to San Diego in 1951, where he worked for Teledyne Ryan until his retirement in 1970. After Ingram retired, the couple moved to Midland.

Men's fashions begin to loosen up, but they're doing it with caution

NEW YORK (AP) — Men are beginning to loosen up a bit about their clothing choices, but they're doing it with caution.

"Our survey for 1996 confirms the image of the American male as someone who only accepts new ideas slowly and surely. Aside from a few rare blips, he always nibbles at new ideas — such as active streetwear, colorful formal wear, denim dress shirts — before taking a big bite," says Jack Herschlag, executive director of the National Association of Men's Sportswear Buyers, which does an annual tracking of menswear trends.

"Heading into 1996, he shows a keen appetite for the dressy-casual middle ground in fashion. It will serve him around the clock, seven days a week, for most business and social occasions."

Predictions of men's choices include suits and sportcoats softly constructed to work with either shirt-and-tie combinations or casual tops like sportshirts or turtlenecks. Dress-casual slacks and shoes will be preferred, as will interesting vests, ties and other accessories, according to the NAMSB.

The organization's Fashion Futures report came up with these findings:

- More knitted fabrics where wovens have been used traditionally; a knit sportcoat is an example.
- The bush coat. This favorite comes and goes from year to year. This year it comes.
- The V-neck, but not limited to sweaters. Look for it on T-shirts and patterned knit tops.
- Bold prints, in a break from traditional neutrals and neat patterns.
- Banded collars on suits and jackets, following their success on shirts.
- Shaped or "waisted" suits, an alternate to soft dressing.
- Plastic fabrics and finishes that are reflective, translucent or transparent.

The survey points to the return of the dandy, Herschlag notes. This fellow dotes on elegant, refined clothing in the tradition of Beau Brummel.

DEAR ABBY

Peace Corps volunteers do lots of giving, little getting

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A heartfelt thanks for mentioning the Peace Corps volunteers in your New Year's Day blessings. This is something I have never heard before, and I was in the first Peace Corps group in Honduras in 1962.

Van Buren

Those of my peers who are trained to go to other nations and subjugate or kill the inhabitants there are offered many inducements or rewards, such as government assistance in schooling, home loans, health insurance and care, Veterans Administration hospitals and point preference on tests for government jobs.

I have no problem with this. However, to my knowledge, none of these rewards are offered to returning Peace Corps volunteers, those of us who were trained to understand and love the people of other lands and to offer them our friendship.

In a Christian country that supposedly espouses love for all mankind, what kind of statement does this make about our true attitude toward others? — KENT D. MYRICK, PHOENIX

DEAR KENT MYRICK: It's shameful. A brief history of the Peace Corps:

In January 1960, Sen. Richard L. Neuberger of Oregon and Congressman Henry S. Reuss of Wisconsin asked Congress to study the possibilities of a youth corps program. Later that year, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota proposed that Congress create a Peace Corps.

Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts used the proposal for a Peace Corps in his 1960 presidential election campaign. He declared, "There is not enough money in all America to relieve the misery of the underdeveloped world in a giant and endless soup kitchen, but there is enough know-how and knowledgeable people to help those nations to help themselves."

Kennedy was elected president in November 1960. He established the Peace Corps in March 1961. The first volunteers started training at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N.J. Sargent Shriver (Kennedy's brother-in-law) was the first director.

More than 80,000 Americans have served as Peace Corps volunteers.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Lost in Kansas City, Kan." — the person with no sense of direction — really hit home with me. The phrase "directional dyslexia" is a great way to describe someone who suffers from this problem.

I have had it for as long as I can remember. I'm a schoolteacher, and my friends make fun of me, saying things like, "I can't believe you went to college." They don't realize that lacking a sense of direction has nothing to do with intelligence or education.

It is frightening to have no idea which direction is correct. I have gone to the same mall for 20 years and still can't pinpoint where a particular department store is. I can drive the same route many times and never know whether to turn left or right.

My solution is to always have my cellular phone with me. It has come in handy many times. I have one very understanding friend I call. She stays on the line and gives me directions until I arrive at my destination.

Please, Abby, urge your readers to have a little compassion for those of us with no sense of direction. — NO LAUGHING MATTER, FORT LAUDERDALE

DEAR NO LAUGHING MATTER: Your suggestion to carry a cellular phone so you can get directions is a good one. If your Good Samaritan's line is busy, you could also call the business you're trying to find. Some enterprising salesperson may be willing to guide you to your destination. Also, a compass for your dashboard may be helpful.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has plenty of money. In fact, she's obsessed with it. We keep telling her to spend it and enjoy life, but she doesn't listen. It's like money is her god.

The topper came on my daughter's birthday. My mother sent her a card with nothing in it! I never thought she'd be so tight she'd deprive her grandchild. Believe me, $10 wouldn't have hurt her at all.

Since talking to her only makes her angry, if you print this letter maybe she'll see it, recognize herself and wise up.— UPSET IN DULUTH

DEAR UPSET: Please keep in mind that no one is obligated to give birthday gifts. Gifts are voluntary. Many grandparents cease giving gifts when children fail to send thank-you notes.

For an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person, order "How to Be Popular." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Tribute to Barbara Jordan: A woman to remember

By Erma Bombeck

I suppose a fair number of people remember Barbara Jordan, who died Jan. 17, for the commanding way she spoke — measured words that came from her lips like the Gospel. She handled words the same way Frank Sinatra handled lyrics. Her style was impressive. But I hope the majority of people remember Barbara Jordan for what she said.

Bombeck

I would like to say the two of us had a long history of friendship. I'd be bragging. I spent one afternoon in her office on the University of Texas campus in Austin along with Liz Carpenter (former secretary to Lady Bird Johnson).

For me, meeting Barbara culminated years of watching her rise to national prominence. I remember in 1966 when she became the first black woman in Texas history to be elected to the state senate, one of her soon-to-be contemporaries said, "We can't have a woman in here. We don't even have a bathroom for women." Barbara said, "Build one."

When the women's movement was begging to be taken seriously, I stood in the back of an auditorium in Austin and was mesmerized by the simplicity of her rhetoric. One afternoon in Austin when Liz and I were hanging out (being with Liz is like taking a stress test), I said, "You know who I've always wanted to meet? Barbara Jordan."

Before I could take a breath, Liz had called Barbara at the university, where she was teaching a class on political ethics that was so popular that students entered a lottery to get in. "We're on for lunch," reported Liz. "Let's stop by for some sandwiches and cookies."

As we spread the lunches over the professor's desk, I asked, "Are there any left?"

"Any what?" she asked.

"Political ethics. Do they exist or have they become extinct?"

Her face brightened and she assured me they did indeed exist. She had faith that youth would know the difference between right and wrong. We talked a long time about where the country was headed, and she was optimistic about those who would guide it into the next century.

I observed this woman who had presidents, governors and power brokers from every walk of life call her for advice. She seemed so focused and serious. I ventured, "What do you do for laughs?"

She seemed speechless at the question. "I guess you would say I get my joy from being around these young people."

In retrospect, I hadn't even thought that the woman I was talking with had leukemia and multiple sclerosis and used a wheelchair and a walker to get around. She lived out her own prophecy. "I never intended to become a run-of-the-mill person."

Barbara and I would have shared a birthday on Feb. 21. On that day, I will sit and reflect on the woman who couldn't think about the roll of the dice, the disappointments and the fear of dying. She was too busy living.

Hamburgers wonderful at midnight

By John Owen
N.Y. Times News Service

There ought to be a law regarding truth in advertising.

Matter of fact I think there is a law, but it is recited by the same guy who explains the fine print in new-car lease arrangements at 465 words a minute on TV.

But I'm not talking fast cars right now. I'm talking fast food.

There ought to be a law requiring national burger, pizza and chicken chains to show us exactly what we are going to see and eat when we visit one of their outlets at 11:30 p.m., the same hour they are airing many of their TV ads.

All of us have salivated over the video victuals, often a mammoth burger patty dripping with hot juices, being shoved into a freshly baked bun along with Cheddar cheese, crispy bacon and with half the annual produce of the local Pea Patch.

Wow, does it look good. And do you know who is serving up this delicacy in the national TV ads? It is either a white-haired gentleman who also happens to be the CEO of the national chain, or it is the vivacious valedictorian from Hollywood High.

That's the TV image.

The reality? The counter clerk working the late-night shift can't locate the cheeseburger button on the cash register. When the order is finally relayed to the chef, he either plunks a patty on a conveyer belt and then watches it disappear for three minutes inside some infernal machine that also vulcanizes tires, or (in the case of a rival chain) the cook cremates the burger on a grill until a bell rings indicating that the meat has achieved the critical mass of a hockey puck.

At 11:30 p.m., pepperoni slices at a pizza parlor have been sitting under the warming lamp so long they could be marketed as fiberboard siding. The portions of aged rooster delivered at the chicken shack have a deep-fried coating that shatters into a million pieces upon contact with a bicuspid.

If TV hucksters are going to promise heaven, they are going to have to answer for hell.

I'm an expert on Hades, or at least I was when I worked the sports beat and often headed back to a hotel after a game, at an hour when room service was no longer being offered. When you are about the only customer in the place, except for three strong-armed bandits and four winos, you pay attention to what is happening on both sides of the grill. What I saw wasn't pretty.

If you are looking for "pretty," as in "pretty good," try these burgers at home.

MIDNIGHT BURGERS

2 pounds lean ground beef
6 slices bacon
6 green onions including tops, minced
1 teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons chili sauce
3 tablespoons cold tomato juice

Pan fry the bacon, remove from the pan and crumble. Drain off all but one tablespoon of the bacon fat and saute the onions for 1 or 2 minutes. Dump the meat into a large bowl. Add the bacon, onions and all the other ingredients. Mix well, form into 8 patties and chill for at least an hour before cooking on grill or barbecue.

If you are cooking for two at 11:30 p.m., you might want a somewhat more elegant snack. You might call this one:

McPASTA

¼ pound smoked salmon
1 cup cream (or low-fat evaporated milk)
1 tablespoon green onion, chopped
2 tablespoons white wine
Salt, pepper
1 cup frozen peas, thawed
Penne pasta to serve two, cooked

Put half the salmon into a blender along with 2 tablespoons of cream and the green onion. Lean on the button until you have a puree. Heat the wine in a skillet, add the rest of the cream and the salmon puree and simmer (don't boil) until it is hot and thick. Add salt and pepper if needed. Stir in the peas and let heat for a minute.

When the penne is done, drain quickly and dump it into the skillet. Stir once or twice then serve up into 2 large bowls, scattering over the top the rest of the smoked salmon, crumbled.

MOT opens season with laughter, drama

Music and drama blend with laughter when Midland Opera Theater presents soprano Andrea Huber at 8 p.m. Feb. 12 in Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

"There will be a lot of humor with her performance because it will be more like a one-woman show," said Jami Owen, MOT president. "It won't just be singing, exiting and entering the stage. It will be talking in between — letting the audience know why a certain song or aria has been important in her life. And she's had a funny life."

Ms. Owen knows well. The soprano is her sister. "She's such an actress," Ms. Owen said. "She won the Irene Ryan Award, which is an acting award for college students. She went to Manhattan School of Music on that scholarship, which eventually led her to Europe by way of Dallas."

Ms. Huber lived with her sister in Dallas while she continued her studies. "Through her teacher in Dallas she went to Europe and auditioned and was placed under contract by an opera company, where she stayed for five years," Ms. Owen said.

That was almost 11 years ago. Today, Ms. Huber still lives in Germany.

"Now, she's well known enough that she can just do guestings," Ms. Owen said. "She's like the operetta queen. Of course, that's the German demand, that the opera and operetta stars look the part and sound the part."

Ms. Huber's performance marks the opening of MOT's 1996 season.

"Our theme this year is 'Experience the Opera,' so we hope to bring different types of opera experience to people," said Kate Beal, MOT secretary

One of the best-known con artists in musical history occupies the Globe Theatre stage Feb. 9-25 when the Odessa theater presents "The Music Man."

Most theater goers know the story of Professor Hill, who comes to a small Iowa town to con the residents into giving him money to produce a band. "Of course he doesn't read music or conduct," said director Carlene Wadley, a private vocal coach in Odessa.

Professor Hill, better known at the Music Man, gets caught in his own web. "This time he falls in love with the town's old maid librarian, Marian," Ms. Wadley said.

When "The Music Man" opened on Broadway Dec.

Ellie Murphy's life suits her perfectly. Now 10 years old, she's spent six years living with her widowed father, Max. Happily. Then he remarries and everything changes.

"She is dealing with the typical wicked stepmother attitude — the new mother can't be good, she's all bad, and Ellie is really very unwilling to give her a chance," director Elizabeth Cleveland said of the leading character in Suzan Zeder's "Step on a Crack."

The drama, presented by Permian Playhouse's Kaleidoscope Company, will be on stage at the Odessa theater, 310 W. 42nd St., Feb. 10-18. Curtain for the four performances is 2:30 p.m. For ticket information, call the Playhouse between noon and 6 p.m. Monday

At right, Max, played by Gabriel Van Amburgh, and the Voice of the play, Stephanie Chambers, play baseball with Ellie, played by Marisol Caballero in Kaleidoscope Company's "Step on a Crack" at the Permian Playhouse. At far right, Ellie Murphy, played by Marisol Caballero, wins an award as Singer of the Year in a daydream with imaginary friends Frizbee, played by Derek Reznik, and Lana, played by Lauren Jackson.

OPERA: MOT to open with laughter and assistant publicity chairman. "People that have never been to the opera before can come and experience little tidbits of opera."

"In the case of our first concert with Andrea, people will hear the most popular arias that opera has to offer," Ms. Owen said.

Next up on the season is the New York City Opera's performance of "La Traviata" set for 8 p.m. April 9 in Midland High School Auditorium.

"After we contracted with the New York City Opera last year they became our centerpiece for this season," Ms. Owen said. "They travel with approximately 50 people so you'll see musicians on stage, the orchestra and also singers in costume."

Although New York City Opera travels with its stages, the company will not be setting them up here.

"There's no theater with big enough wings for the sets," Ms. Owen said. "In fact, Tom Johnson (MOT president in 1995) measured every single stage in this town."

"Every inch," Ms. Beal said interjecting.

"Every centimeter," Ms. Owen added. "They have to have a certain amount of swing space. The sets are so massive. They will fit on stage, but they couldn't move them on and off and have any room to move in the wings. They're used to traveling on the East Coast where there's lots of large stages and halls."

"When I moved to Midland two years ago, I was impressed by the cultural offerings in the community — opera being one of them."

— Kate Beal
MOT secretary and assistant publicity chairman

Midland Opera Theater presents soprano Andrea Huber at 8 p.m. Feb. 12 in Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

"La Traviata," Verdi's best known piece, is, Ms. Owen said, "so easy to listen to. It's very appealing. I think people will truly enjoy hearing these young singers present his work."

"We said in our brochure that people who love music and love drama are going to love 'La Traviata,'" Ms. Beal said.

"It's the combination of both — music and drama," Ms. Owen said.

The season closes with Santa Fe Opera Quartet's performance in costume at 8 p.m. Sept. 17 in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

"These singers are from the apprentice program in Santa Fe," Ms. Owen said. "They study the entire summer and then tour for two weeks. The Santa Fe program is highly touted. Many singers want to participate in this, but there's just a limited number of spots."

While they're here, the Santa Fe Opera Quartet also will sing arias, duets and quartets for Midland sixth-graders during MOT's education program. Following their performance for the students, quartet members will answer the sixth-graders' questions.

"Inevitably, some enterprising kid will ask how much money do you make," Ms. Owen said. "And, inevitably, the tenor says I make the most. That always has happened. And, it's pretty much true."

This season, MOT tickets are $10 for Ms. Huber's performance, $15 for adults and $10 for seniors and students for "La Traviata," and $10 for the Santa Fe Opera Quartet.

Patron tickets are $100 per person. Patron members receive preferred seating at all events and are invited to exclusive pre-performance parties.

To purchase tickets, make check payable to Midland Opera Theater, P.O. Box 4504, Midland, 79704. Please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope and which show is being attended. For more information call 684-4101.

MOT is operated by an all-volunteer board.

"When I moved to Midland two years ago, I was impressed by the cultural offerings in the community — opera being one of them," Ms. Beal said. "Midland, for the size that it is, is fortunate to have opera right at its doorstep. The Midland Opera Theater works hard to continue bringing quality entertainment, and I enjoy being a part of bringing new and exciting events to Midland."

A common bond the board members share is, Ms. Owen said, a "deep appreciation for opera... The melodies will make you weep. They're exquisite."

It's not necessary to be well-versed about opera to enjoy the art form, Ms. Beal said. "I don't have any opera background, but I've always had an interest in the arts. The best way to learn about any art is to get directly involved. You don't have to be some educated musician to appreciate opera. Even the uninitiated can enjoy it. Once people have been exposed to it, they learn to love it and will do anything to get tickets."

MUSICAL: Globe presents "The Music Man"

(From 1G)

19, 1957, it was heralded as one of the best family-type shows presented in Manhattan for several decades. The Critics Circle named it the best musical for the season, giving it preference over "West Side Story." Robert Preston, who had played professor Hill, made the role famous in film with the 1962 movie.

"It's just another fun family show," Ms. Wadley said.

Midland Community Theatre has presented "The Music Man" twice — 1963 and 1979. Permian Playhouse's production was in September of 1973. The last presentation of "The Music Man" was done in 1988 by the Globe, which was also its first production of this musical.

"When you are on the program committee of some place like the Globe, you take a look at what the Midland theater has done and the Permian Playhouse," Ms. Wadley said. "All of us try to not overlap or do exactly the same thing in same year. And we make sure a period of time passes before we redo them."

The musical will be on stage at the Globe, Odessa College campus, at 8 p.m. Feb. 9-10, 16-17, 23-24 and at 2:30 p.m. Feb. 25. For the Feb. 25 matinee performance all tickets are $5 a head plus two cans of food for the Permian Basin Food Bank.

For reservations call 1-915-332-1586. Tickets are $8 for adults and $6 for seniors and students. Groups rates for 15 or more are $5 per person. "If they get a large group, we give them a special deal," Ms. Wadley said.

The cast of about 45 also has a crew of 10 to 15. "All ages from little kids to adults," Ms. Wadley said.

The cast comes from Odessa, Monahans, Big Spring (Donny Wheeler) and Midland. Those from Midland are Kate Nanney, Larry Elkins, Gene Smith and David and Patricia Stover.

Musical director is Tim Wadley, who also is on stage as Marcellus.

"It's the show that made '76 Trombones' famous, and it has some children in the cast and delightful dance," Ms. Wadley said. "It's a musical in the true style of the old musicals. Big opening number and closing number for the first act, second act... It's the old style of musical comedy. Lots of comedy in it."

The hardest aspect of staging a musical like "The Music Man" is stage movement. "Just like any musical, it has so many different people on stage at any one time," Ms. Wadley said. "It has lots of children and dance. Some directors don't like having to move all those people around at one time. But, I've done it a lot, so it's just an enjoyable challenge for me."

PLAY: Kaleidoscope Company to perform comedy

through Friday. 1-915-362-2329.

The story deals with the changing family structures in today's society as viewed through the eyes of a child.

"To deal with all this she creates imaginary friends — Frizbee, the clown, Lana, a movie star, and then her alter ego, Voice, who is the little red devil on our shoulder," Ms. Cleveland said. "Throughout the play, when things get too difficult to deal with, she slips into her fantasy life with her imaginary friends. These fantasy sequences create the humor of the play."

The sequences also present a challenge. The hardest part of effectively staging "Step on a Crack" is, Ms. Cleveland said, "Making the fantasy sequences work. They're a little bizarre. A lot of fun, but definitely bizarre."

Another challenge in the script is executing smooth and effective scene changes.

"Trying to make the transitions between scenes work is difficult," Ms. Cleveland said. "It takes place in a home, a bowling alley and, when she runs away, just the streets, not even a particular street. So you're trying to make very complex scene changes with very little scenery."

The play appeals to all ages, Ms. Cleveland said.

"The young kids will enjoy the imaginary characters. They're fun. They're funny, and they bring a lot of lightness to the play. And I really think teenagers will relate because so many of them have experienced the situation Ellie's in. Adults will enjoy it also because they'll get to see the children's side of what a new step-parent can be like."

The Kaleidoscope Company, the Playhouse's youth performing troupe, has enjoyed working on the drama.

"The kids love it," Ms. Cleveland said. "Suzan Zeder is a playwright out of Austin and really her plays very much touch issues that children deal with. Since a number of the cast members have step or have had stepparents, it's an issue that's very close to their hearts."

Cast members include Marisol Caballero as Ellie, Gabriel VanAmburgh as Max, Betsy Cooper as his new wife, Lucille, Lauren Jackson as Lana, Stephanie Chambers as Voice and as Frizbee, Derek Reznik, a junior at Midland Christian and a member of the football team that won state. All live in Odessa.

Is the stepmother a wicked witch?

"No," Ms. Cleveland laughed. "Ellie can't see that she isn't. She can just see this woman is taking what she thinks is all the love her father has to give. She can't believe that her father would love both of them.

"Ellie's very vivid imagination leads her through many different and exciting adventures, as she makes the realization that all stepmothers aren't wicked and that perhaps a new stepdaughter requires as much adjustment as a new stepmother does."

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Put your organizational skills to work on behalf of a good cause. You were meant to be a leader! Persistence helps you find a lasting solution to a financial problem. Outgoing and enthusiastic, you find it easy to win your peers' support. Your popularity continues to rise month after month. Be wary of fair-weather friends. Choose a mate or partner who will be a staunch ally if the going gets tough. Together you will accomplish great things.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actress Ida Lupino, hockey player Denis Savard, singer Alice Cooper, feminist Betty Friedan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Romance could have you floating on cloud nine. If you decide to take a hand in someone's affairs, be careful not to exert too much pressure.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Instead of attempting to conduct business today, tend to the needs of someone confined to a hospital or nursing home. Your words of support and encouragement will be a real tonic!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take advantage of the quiet atmosphere at home to catch up on your letter-writing. Correspondence with people who live overseas could result in an invitation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make this a family day. Do everything you can to develop greater rapport with your loved ones. Asking meaningful questions will net some revealing responses.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Extra personal effort is required now. Lay your cards on the table if you need a favor. By employing extra tact, you can avoid petty squabbles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be more tolerant in your personal relationships. A critical attitude could snuff out a romance before it has really caught fire. Show patience when dealing with children.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A candid chat clears the air, allowing you to reach a new understanding with a relative. You have a sixth sense about what people need emotionally. Be compassionate and forgiving when dealing with teens.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A busy week lies ahead. New business developments will keep you on the run. Do not be surprised if you find you are attracted to an older person. You have a lot in common!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your company is very much in demand. You will have to juggle a busy work-and-social schedule in the days just ahead. An important relationship could be tested by the arrival of a newcomer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Influential people think your ideas are "first rate." Adopting a more confident approach will help you move up the ladder of success. Greater financial rewards and new prestige are within your grasp.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not let a restless mood make you spend or eat too much. Buy only what you really need, not everything that strikes your fancy. A romantic relationship offers a new challenge.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Organize your schedule to reflect your priorities. Some special advantages come your way; you benefit both materially and spiritually. Touch base with old friends. A long-time love relationship needs extra nurturing now. Show tenderness.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣

When you are not playing for coin of the realm, you can afford to take the sort of chances you would never consider at rubber bridge. This hand is from a team event. The player in the North seat judged, correctly, that the North-South team were trailing late in the match, and needed to create some action.

Actually, North leap's to the no-trump game is not as crazy as it might appear. Give South either the king or jack-ten in North's long suit, increasing the feasibility of making five tricks in the suit, and nine tricks could come home in comfort. Unfortunately, South held the worst possible holding for this type of adventure.

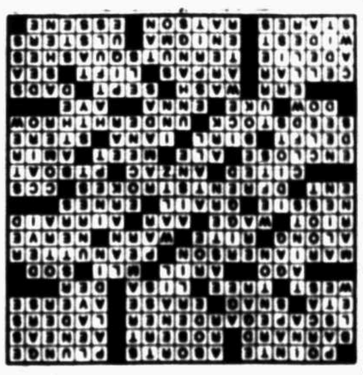

West led the jack of clubs, and declarer could count only five fast tricks. To get home, the diamond suit would have to provide four tricks and the spade finesse would have to succeed; all in all, about a 9 percent chance!

First, is there any point to a holdup at trick one after East covers with the queen? Not really — West will surely have an entry to hand in some suit even if clubs are 5-2. So go ahead and win the ace of clubs at trick one.

How can you make four tricks in diamonds? You must find the suit splitting 3-3 and the king with West. Even then, you must manipulate the diamonds carefully — dummy does not have a side entry to the long cards in the suit.

Declarer was up to the challenge. At trick two South led a low diamond and ducked! The defenders completed their book by cashing three club tricks, ending in West, and the queen of hearts was returned, won in the closed hand. Declarer cleared one hurdle when a diamond to the queen held. Next came the diamond ace, and prospects really perked up after both defenders followed, allowing two long diamond tricks to be cashed. A spade to the queen now delivered the fulfilling trick, and a miraculous game was in the bag.

Fund drive set

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale has started its annual fund drive seeking contributions to the 1996-97 symphony programs.

The orchestra is in an enviable position, said MOSC staff member Tim Young. "The annual fund drive is beginning at a time when the organization is in a stronger financial and artistic positions that it has been for several years."

Under the leadership of Robert Hunt, newly appointed music director and conductor, the Symphony Orchestra and Chorale have been playing to capacity crowds and several concerts in 1996 are already sold out. However, like most orchestras, ticket sales represent only a part of the organization's total budget.

"A large portion of the symphony budget must continue to be raised through private and corporate contributions that are crucial to the orchestra's continued success," Young said.

This year, the orchestra's fund-raising goal is $145,000, about one

OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1996 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING

A rig drilling an infill well near Seminole.

Drilling slumps

Drilling activity slumped during the week ended January 26, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The Permian Basin rig count dropped 10 rigs to 104 for the week, just below the 107 recorded a year earlier.

The national rig count dropped 13 rigs to 703 for the week. A year ago the count was 731.

Among major producing states, Texas posted the largest drop, five rigs. The biggest gain was California, Kansas and Wyoming, two rigs each.

Caltex holdings sold

DALLAS — Caltex Petroleum Corp., a joint venture between Chevron Corp. and Texaco Inc., has sold its 50 percent stake in a Japanese oil refining partnership.

The closing date for the transaction valued at approximately 200 billion yen, or $2 billion, will be April 1.

Nippon Oil Co. had agreed in December to buy out Caltex, 44 years after pairing with the venture to form Nippon Petroleum Refining Co. Ltd., which operates two oil refineries in Japan with a combined capacity of 550,000 barrels a day.

The decision to sell its stake made Caltex the first major U.S. oil concern to withdraw its capital from Japan.

A big jack bringing up deeper production.

Prices weaken

Prices slumped early this past week when Iraq and the United Nations set a date for talks on allowing Iraq to sell oil on the world market to raise funds for humanitarian needs.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, prices slumped as low as $17.45 a barrel on worries of oversupplies, rebounding to $17.71 late in the week on reports of lower crude supplies.

The posted price was $16.25 late in the week.

Pentair buys Midland pump manufacturer

■ Acquisition could add vitality to Midland firm, add employees and foreign sales..

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

A Midland pump manufacturer has been sold to Pentair Industries, of St. Paul Minnesota, a $1.6 billion company, in a move that could bring new vitality and more employees to the Midland operation, or it could send the pump company packing to Ohio.

Aplex Industries, a longtime manufacturer of plunger pumps for the oilfield and industry announced this week that it would be acquired by F.E. Myers Co. of Ashland, Ohio, a subsidiary of Pentair, a mixed industrial company.

Aplex, which employs 40 at its Midland facility at 2045 Loop 250, will continue to operate under the Aplex name as a wholly owned subsidiary of F.E. Myers.

"Overall this should be a positive move for Aplex and for Midland," said Tom Eustace, a business consultant who help finalize the acquisition.

Eustace said with the financial resources of F.E. Myers, Aplex would be able to increase sales and add employees. He said there were no plans to relocate the company.

Oilpatch applications for Aplex pumps include: saltwater disposal, closed hole drilling and water injection. In recent years the company has developed a number of industrial applications that include directional drilling under roadways for utilities and the manufacture of units for flushing out sewer mains of municipalities.

'Overall, this should be a positive move for Midland.'
— Tom Eustace, business consultant who helped finalize deal.

The pumps are sold internationally and last year orders went to China, India and Japan, and are used for water desalination in the Middle East.

Fred Lavander, president of F.E. Myers said Aplex, which does approximately $6 million annually in sales, could increase international sales because F.E. Myers sells to 78 foreign countries.

"Together we should significantly increase the foreign market," said Lavender. He said the Aplex line would compliment the F.E. Myers line.

F.E. Myers, is 125 years old, manufactures pumps used in fresh water and waste water systems, and has over 600 employees.

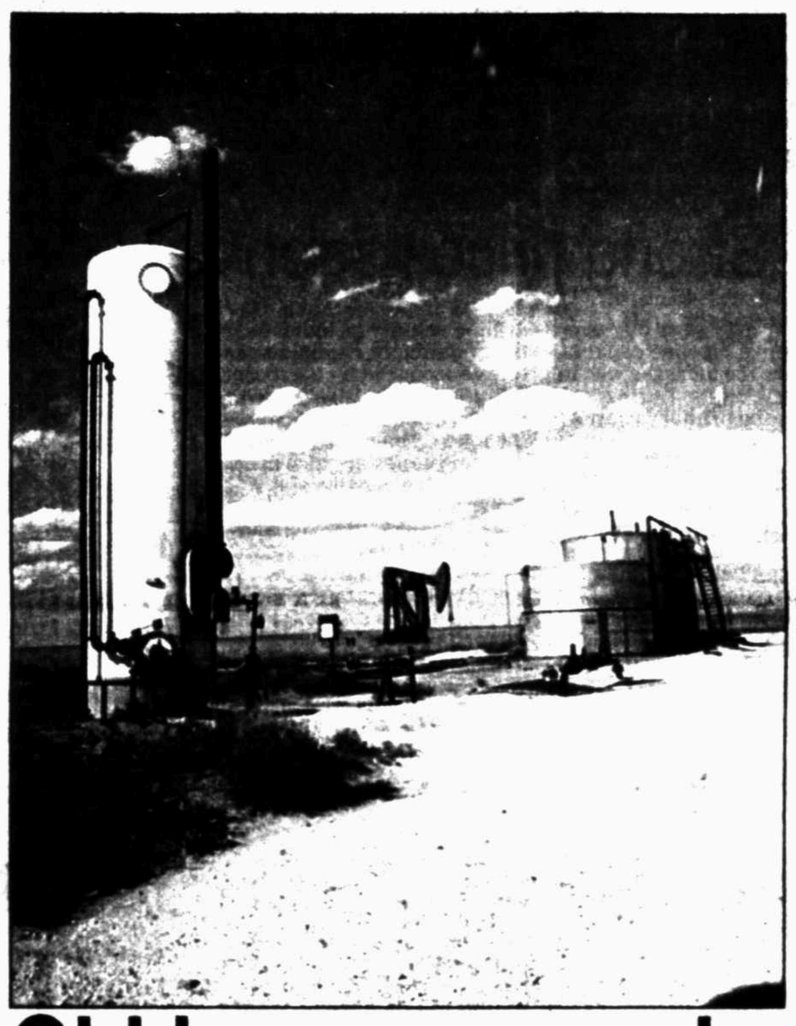

Aplex was founded in the 1970s, with Doug Herron as one of the principal founders. It was involved in building and servicing plunger pumps for natural gas and water disposal and injection systems.

Lavander said Barney Luttrell, vice president of sales and marketing for F.E. Myers for the past 17 years, will assume control of Aplex as well as marketing for the combined companies.

"It will be six months before we know which way were are going to go with the company, or where we will do what. Some Ohio operations may come to Midland. We like Midland."

TO UNITIZE OR NOT TO UNITIZE

The variety of signs on this lease gate not only point out the increased activity of the Permian Basin, but how lease interests are divided many times over. While this particular lease is not involved in unitization efforts, state-assisted unification has once again developed as an issue in Texas. Finding a formula that will provide interest owners with a full range of protection, while facilitating unitization is the objective of a Permian Basin Petroleum Association Committee. Without the ability to formulate secondary and tertiary units, many leases like the one at the left would be plugged out.

Old issue comes back around

■ Unitization is getting a second look and consideration from surprising sectors.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

An old issue is getting a second look and some positive reception in the Permian Basin.

Back in the late seventies and early eighties, the issue of "forced" unitization was making the rounds. It was soundly rejected by the independent sector of the oil industry, partially because of the "forced" description, and partially because it was pretty much a program being pushed by major oil companies. The Permian Basin Petroleum Association was one of those who came out strongly against "forced" unitization.

But today, unitization, riding under a new banner "state-assisted unitization" is getting a second look, and strangely enough the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and the independent sector are the ones giving it the once over.

Three months ago the association formed a committee to look into the possibility of some form of state-assisted unitization and on January 23 delivered a report to the Texas Railroad Commission, letting the agency know that the study was in progress.

Proponents say the concept of being forced into a unit is no longer as onerous as it once was for two reasons:

One, the fractionalization of mineral ownership and production interests has become worse than being forced to join a unit and has reached a point where it threatens to paralyze the oil industry and prevent many waterfloods and CO_2 floods from being formed.

Second, many of the properties once owned by majors are now owned by independents, who are more frugal operators than major oil companies.

"If we don't find some way to remedy the fractionalization, it could mean that millions of barrels of oil

Analysts agree natural gas has reached a crossroads

■ Natural gas prices will be sharply improved over 1995 and may have reached a new level.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Cold weather gripping the nation has had its expected warming effect on natural gas prices.

News stories have been almost constant for weeks about the bitter cold gripping much of the nation and natural gas futures have set numerous record highs on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Many reports note gas in storage is at least 25 percent below year-ago levels.

Chris McGill, director of gas supply for the American Gas Association, notes that storage is just part of the supply equation, with domestic reserves and Canadian imports supplying the rest of the nation's gas.

He pointed out that this year's weather pattern is significantly different from last year, when storage companies expected a cold winter, put 1.3 trillion cubic feet of gas in storage and ended up with too much unused.

"Everyone's learning to use storage facilities in this new gas supply environment," he said, adding that "we went into this season with just slightly less in storage than last year. What's really been different is the weather pattern."

A year ago producers suffered through the second warmest winter in 100 years, dropping prices to an average of $1.47 at the wellhead. Today the nation is experiencing a normal winter season and analysts are predicting wellhead prices will average $2 and, said one, there's a 50 percent probability natural gas prices will be at their highest point in 10 years.

"What's driving prices is supply demand," said David Garcia, financial analyst with Principal Financial Securities Inc. in Houston, part of The Principal Financial Group. "It looks, according to my arithmetic, like we are finally getting close to the point where there isn't anymore natural gas without drilling for it. All efficiencies have been realized through storage, transportation and the onset of modern technology. These effects seem to be in the system we've sweated out the excess of the late 1980s and now we're at some sort of breakpoint."

Midlander Robert Anderson of The Anderson Companies said the winter of 1994-95 was an anomaly created by the warm weather and agrees with Garcia that the industry is at a crossroads.

"Clearly the deliverability numbers, the reserve numbers, indicate that we're not replacing our reserves while demand continues to grow at a modest rate. I fully expect gas prices to continue to increase at a rate exceeding the rate of inflation," Anderson said.

Anderson noted that storage withdrawal rates are at all-time highs and have been all winter, and he predicted that large industrial natural gas customers who went into this heating season with less storage gas than a year ago, will run short and be forced to buy heavily on the spot market.

Indeed, he said, a swing producer selling gas on a daily basis could, in the next few days, find a market in the $7-8 per thousand cubic feet range.

In addition to meeting supply and demand, Garcia said, drilling activity is also playing a part in supporting prices.

"Because exploration and production companies have a philosophy of living within their cash flow, lower product prices mean a lower drilling budget. It's important to note that because of the low prices there was less drilling for natural gas in 1995. That's important because, typically 15 to 18 percent of the natural gas in the U.S. comes from wells drilled in the preceding 12 months, what I call flush production."

Said Anderson, "What happens in 1996 may translate into increased drilling activity in 1997 if trends continue."

Added Garcia, "In my opinion, prices will be significantly higher. That's not to say 1997 prices couldn't be lower, but we are moving to some sort of new base level where it's going to be necessary for producers to go out and do sufficient drilling to generate new supplies which, according to my arithmetic will be required in the 1996-97 heating season."

ISSUE: Unitization still debated

(From 1H)

would go unproduced in the Permian Basin," said Jim Henry, who is heading a committee of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association to look into the possibility of state-assisted unitization for secondary and tertiary projects.

To not unitize and put many of the Permian Basin's mature fields on waterflood and tertiary would result in the loss of a great opportunity, said Henry.

Henry said it now takes almost 100 percent of interest and royalty owners in a field to form an oil and gas producing unit, and that makes it almost impossible to form a unit.

"Many operators give up, because the hassle and cost of bringing all the owners together and unitizing a field — especially a small field — is not worth the time and expense."

Henry said a state-assisted unitization agreement might call for unitization to take place when 75 percent of working and royalty interest owners agree to unitize. At that point, the other 25 percent must agree under the same formula, provided the TRC finds their rights have been protected.

"You would still have to get 75 percent, but it seems like last 25 percent hardest to get," Henry said.

The Texas Railroad Commission would be the arbitrator for unitization agreements and disputes, and that there would be a provision for removing the operator of a unit in cases of gross mismanagement.

Budge McDonnold, also a member of the study committee, said there would have to be a number of protections, before most producers would endorse such a plan.

McDonnold also noted that it may be necessary to drop CO2 projects from the unitization agreement and stick with waterfloods, because many independents are still fearful of being forced to join a CO2 project, where expenses and profitability could easily get out of line.

"There is some fear that interest owners could be forced into a CO2 floods, which would be used as guinea pigs in expensive experiments."

McDonnold said there were many ways a unit operator could get to working interest and royalty interest owners, if they chose to and that all the loopholes would have to be identified and monitored.

"Some major oil companies and large independents with warehouse operations can manipulate prices and literally force you out of business. Interest owners can also be disadvantaged in the construction of pipelines and the marketing of oil or gas. I never had a major oil company operate for me that I didn't try to buy out."

McDonnold said there used to be a gentlemanly code in the oilpatch to not hold out joining a unit to just mess up a unit, but that is not the case any longer. "There are some operators who will not join a unit, just to mess it up." He said they wanted a free ride or no ride.

Henry said these people should not be allowed to nullify a good project. "If you do not get 100 percent control over a unit, you just can't do it. You can't have a non-participant in the middle of a unit."

Henry said having a provision to mandate unitization would be a win-win situation. "More oil will be produced; more jobs created; more taxes collected. If we don't get some of the smaller fields unitized, it will be a missed opportunity."

Henry pointed out that he had been working, off and on, to unitize one field for waterflood for over 10 years. The field has 70-80 operators, averaging a tenth of a percent to 20 percent ownership. Unless it is put on waterflood, Henry said the field would just continue to lumber along until it is plugged out.

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association says it had taken no official position on the matter of state-assisted unitization, and would have to present the matter to its board before it could take an official position.

"We are still looking at it. Some support it. Some oppose it. We would like to know what the concerns are of those that oppose it and how they can be addressed," said Bob Kiker, executive vice president PBPA. He said the number one opponent to the concept appeared to be the Bass family of Fort Worth, who objected to tertiary projects being included.

Kiker said he had called several sister associations in Texas and had found no formal opposition to state-assisted unitization, even though association executives acknowledged that a few mom and pop organizations were bound to be opposed to it because it is still equated to "forced" unitization.

"We hear about the rights of the minority. But what about the rights of the majority?" asked Jim Henry.

Kiker said PBPA had conducted a survey to ascertain the level of interest for state unitization, and found the issue very low on a list of priorities. "Tax reform was the number one concern. State unitization was five or six on the list."

Texas Railroad Commissioner Carole Rylander said the Commission would not take a position, but had offered the full cooperation of TRC staff to help study the issue. If and when state-assisted unitization is enacted, the Railroad Commission will be the policeman for the legislation.

Gas sales to jump 5 percent

By N.Y. Times News Service

Washington — The American Gas Association predicts a 5 percent jump in U.S. natural gas demand during 1966 and says gas provided most of the muscle for this year's increase in total energy consumption.

Natural gas sales in 1995 were expected to total 22.2 quadrillion British thermal units, a 3.7 percent increase from 1994's 21.4 quads. Total energy use during the year is forecast to increase 1.4 percent to 86.88 quads from 85.66 quads in 1994.

Increased use of natural gas use in utility and nonutility electricity generation and a reduction in oil-fired generation are the primary reasons natural gas demand is likely to grow 5 percent in 1996 to an estimated 23.48 quads, said Michael Baly, AGA president and chief executive officer.

One quad is roughly equivalent to 1 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

"The robust growth in natural gas demand this year has happened in spite of 1995 being a slightly warmer-than-normal year," Baly said. "Since 1986, natural gas demand has increased about 32 percent, at a rate of about 3 percent a year, and we expect that trend to continue."

"One major increase in gas use in 1995 came in the electric generation sector," Baly said. "During the first eight months of 1995, oil consumption by electric utilities, largely in dual-fuel gas/oil power plants, dropped 41 percent compared with the same period in 1994. Gas use went up by about 8 percent."

A December 1995 report by the White Plains, New York-based National Economic Research Associates Inc. also sees increased gas use for electricity generation.

NERA said natural gas consumption for electricity generation increased about 25 percent in the past two years and it expects such growth to continue for the next 10 years.

"If electricity demand increases in line with our forecast ... and half of the (added) non-utility power generation is gas-fired, then by the year 2005 the U.S. will consume about 10 trillion cubic feet of natural gas a year, 85 percent more than current consumption by electric utilities and non-utility generators," said Marion B. Stewart, editor of the NERA report.

Stewart, who expects consumption to remain stronger than originally forecast, also forecasts consumption in the U.S. will reach 21.6 Tcf this year, 4 percent more than in 1994.

"Industrial gas use rose more than 6 percent during 1995 ... with gas consumption by electric utilities soaring 13 percent," Stewart said.

NERA predicts total gas sales will rise by an additional 2 percent in 1996 and projects a 5 percent increase in prices.

"Even under relatively optimistic conditions regarding the ability of gas drillers to add reserves in the lower 48 states and Western Canada, we see the need for real (inflation adjusted) wellhead prices to rise above $2.50 (a million British thermal units) by 2005 in order to provide adequate stimulus to gas exploration and development," Stewart said.

"Even at that price, however, it seems likely that gas will remain the fuel of choice for most generators, particularly in regions of the country where siting concerns and pollution control have high priority."

Key Energy completes financing

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — Key Energy Group has completed a $35 million term loan and credit facility for Key Energy Group Inc. and WellTech Inc.

Under the terms of the new financing, a bank group led by CIT Group/Credit Finance Inc. each company may borrow up to an aggregate of $17.5 million. Approximately $25 million of the proceeds will be used to replace existing high interest debt with the balance remaining for working capital and other corporate purposes.

Upon consummation of the merger, the indebtedness to CIT will become indebtedness of Key, as the survivor of the merger, and certain of Key's operating subsidiaries.

The company also announced that it has filed a Registration Statement on Form S-4 relating to the shares of common stock, a $.10 par value per share, to be issued in connection with Key's proposed merger with WellTech Inc. The merger is subject to certain conditions including shareholder approval.

Key has called a special meeting of stockholders in lieu of annual meeting for March 15, 1996 and has fixed the close of business on Feb. 15, 1996 as the record date for the special meeting.

Key Energy Group is a diversified energy company specializing in drilling, well servicing and production of oil and natural gas in the Permian Basin of West Texas. Upon the completion of the merger with WellTech the company's well service operations will be expanded to Oklahoma, East Texas, Michigan, Appalachia and Argentina.

A registration statement relating to these securities has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission but has not yet become effective. These securities may not be sold nor may offers to buy be accepted prior to the time the registration statement becomes effective. CROSSROADS: Strong prices seen

(From 1H)

The factors in his arithmetic include such statistics such as that from the Energy Information Agency that 79 percent of utility generation capacity added in 1974 was fueled by natural gas, a trend he expects to continue. Or, from the American Gas Association, the fact that natural gas was the fuel of choice for 67 percent of new single family homes built in 1994.

Or this fact: "For the better part of a decade, from 1986 through 1994, natural gas imports from Canada showed a healthy year-over-year increase, as a function of pipeline capacity. Last year the increase was in the low single digits. During those years the primary source of increased natural gas supplies was imports from Canada, and that growth has definitely slowed. We now have a general picture of rising demand and at least one substantial supply factor increasing but at a snail's pace compared to past years. Again we're faced with drilling - to get natural gas out of Canada, more pipelines are needed and that's not on the horizon. What is on the horizon is a higher level of drilling activity as indicated by the preliminary capital expenditures announced by the majors."

For his part, Anderson said there are not enough pipelines to the Rocky Mountains and additional pipelines are also needed to move New Mexico and West Texas gas eastward to take advantage of Gulf Coast and Eastern Seaboard markets.

According to the AGA's McGill, the association's long-term outlook to 2010 is that the current demand level of 21 trillion cubic feet annually should increase to close to 26 TCB by 2010.

Exploration Co. details Glen Rose well

SAN ANTONIO — The Exploration Co. has tested significant quantities of gas from its Paloma "B" No. 2-112 in the Glen Rose formation in Maverick County, Texas. The well flowed at rates up to 2,467,000 cubic feet per day and 30 barrels of condensate per day through perforations from 5,590 to 5,610 feet. The well has an absolute open flow potential (AOF) of approximately 20,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

"This well is approximately 3/4 of a mile south of the Paloma No. 1-107 which had an AOF of 44,000,000 cubic feet per day and still produces at a rate of over 1,250,000 cubic feet per day although it has produced in excess of 800 million cubic feet of gas," said James E. Sigmon, The Exploration Company's president. "Every well drilled in this zone enhances our geologic model giving us more confidence in the outcome of drilling using our 3-D seismic to locate these prolific patch reefs." The Exploration Company owns a 15 percent working interest in the Paloma "B" No. 2-112 but has at least a 60 percent interest in the remaining 50,000 acres in its leasehold.

Sigmon also announced that TransTexas Gas Corporation's option to drill a deep Jurassic test on its Maverick County, Texas, leasehold expired as of Dec. 31, 1995. The company believes that it will be able to find other industry partners who will participate in the testing of the Jurassic under its leasehold and is currently pursuing these efforts.

The Exploration Company is a natural gas enterprise with interests in Texas, North Dakota and Montana. The company also provides alternative fuels technologies including fuel supply, refueling stations and engine conversions through its alternative fuels division, ExproFuels.

The Exploration Company is publicly traded on NASDAQ under the symbol TXCO.

Transco, PECO to developLNG facility

HOUSTON — Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. and PECO Energy Co. have signed a letter of intent to evaluate, develop, own and operate a liquefied natural gas (LNG) facility. The two companies will work together to locate the facility in Transco's northern market area, which encompasses southeastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and New York.

The facility will be designed in accordance with market interest, but initial plans call for LNG storage capacity of four billion cubic feet (Bcf) with a vaporization capability of 400 million cubic feet per day. The preliminary estimated cost for the project is $125 million.

Subject to negotiation of a final contract, endorsement by the companies' respective boards, and regulatory approvals, construction is planned to begin within two or three years. The facility would be completed in time to provide winter peaking service for customers on Transco's pipeline system beginning in 2001. A Transco subsidiary will serve as operator.

"LNG storage is increasingly the most cost-effective method of satisfying our customers' ever-growing demand for peak-day requirements," said Cuba Wadlington, senior vice president and general manager, Transco. "And like two of our most recently announced projects, this project allows us to work closely with our customers to satisfy that need."

Robert J. Patrylo, PECO Energy senior vice president, Gas Services Group, said, "PECO Energy believes that market area storage services, as embodied in this project, provide an attractive and economic means in which to meet our future gas supply requirements. The ability to have access to this supply will provide our growing customer base with assurance that we can continue to fulfill our commitment for reliable and economic service in the future."

For further information on this project, potential customers should call Paul Gredell at 713/439-2197 or Jamie Craddock at 713/439-2541.

Transco, one of The Williams Companies, owns and operates a 10,000-mile natural gas pipeline system that extends from the Gulf of Mexico to New York City. Williams' companies include the nation's largest-volume system of interstate natural gas pipelines; one of the nation's largest natural gas gatherers and processors; a full-service energy marketing and trading group; a Midwest petroleum products pipeline; a national business-telecommunications equipment sales and service company; and a nationwide fiber-optic video services provider.

PECO Energy is a Philadelphia, Pa.-based utility that serves 1.5 million electric customers in southeastern Pennsylvania and supplies natural gas to more than 380,000 customers in the suburban Philadelphia area. It owns and operates a 1.2 Bcf LNG storage facility in West Conshohocken, Pa., and a two-million gallon propane storage facility in Chester, Pa. PECO Energy, through its natural gas marketing subsidiary, PECO Gas Supply Company, is a member of the East Coast Natural Gas Cooperatives Inc.

Hughes Resources buys three pipelines

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Hughes Resources Inc. has acquired three additional pipeline systems in Ritchie County, W.V.

These pipelines, which aggregate 65 miles of gas gathering systems, were acquired from an unrelated Canadian corporation. This acquisition will greatly enhance Hughes Resources' pipeline system and its ability to carry natural gas to the purchasers in West Virginia.

The transportation of natural gas promises to be a major profit center for Hughes Resources as its Energy Division continues to follow an aggressive growth by acquisition policy.

The consideration for this purchase is the assumption of $150,000 in debt and the issuance of 2,250,000 shares of common stock giving a total purchase price of $1,725,000 while the pipelines' estimated replacement value is $3.6 million.

Parallel announces three gas discoveries

PARALLEL PETROLEUM CORP. has announced the completion of three discovery wells, one in Wharton County, two in Jackson County.

In Wharton County, Parallel completed the No. 1 Cox & Perkins Lange in a new Eocene Yegua gas zone, representing the seventh consecutive Yegua sand success in the past 10 months.

The well was tested on a 10/64-inch choke and flowed 2.2 million cubic feet (Mmcf) of natural gas per day and 296 barrels of condensate per day (bcpd). Flowing tubing pressure was 6,025 pounds per square inch (psi), with a final shut-in pressure of 6,054 psi. Test production was from perforations made selectively at 9,313 to 9,454 feet in the downdip Expanded Yegua sand.

The Lange No. 1, which is scheduled to come on-line in early February, will commercially produce at significantly higher rates than it tested--with stabilized flow rates expected to be 8 to 10 Mmcfd and 1,000 to 1,200 bcpd.

When the Lange No. 1 and three other recent Yegua discoveries reach stabilized production rates, expected within about a month, the 10 wells should produce at a combined rate of approximately 28.5 Mmcfd of gas and 1,600-plus barrels of oil per day.

Two natural gas discoveries were completed in the Frio formation in Jackson County, onshore the Texas Gulf Coast.

One of the well's flow rate ranged from 268,000- to 657,000-cubic-feet-per-day. The other had calculated open flow rates of 6.2 million- and 6.1 million-cubic-feet of natural gas per day from two zones.

Parallel owns nearly 12 percent working interest before payout and 15 percent thereafter in the two wells. The operator is privately held Allegro Investments, Inc. The other interests are owned by individuals.

Pennzoil posts loss of $305 million for 1995

HOUSTON — Pennzoil Co. reported a net loss of $305 million ($6.60 per share) for 1995, reflecting $297 million in one-time, after-tax charges for adoption of a new accounting standard and other nonrecurring items.

This compares with a net loss of $289 million ($6.27 per share) for 1994, after $317 million of after-tax nonrecurring charges, including charges associated with the resolution of Pennzoil's tax dispute with the IRS.

Excluding nonrecurring charges, Pennzoil's 1995 adjusted loss was $8 million (17 cents per share), compared to 1994 adjusted earnings of $28 million (61 cents per share).

For the fourth quarter of 1995, Pennzoil reported a net loss of $28 million (60 cents per share), primarily resulting from severance charges associated with a previously announced cost-reduction program and a refinery fire.

Excluding $37 million in after-tax, nonrecurring charges, fourth quarter 1995 adjusted earnings were $9 million (18 cents per share).

This compares to an adjusted loss of $7 million (15 cents per share) for the 1994 fourth quarter.

Pennzoil's annual revenues amounted to $2.5 billion for 1995, versus $2.6 billion in 1994. Fourth quarter revenues were $608 million in 1995, versus $657 in 1994.

Fina reports record income before change

DALLAS — FINA reported record net income, prior to an accounting change, of $142.6 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1995, up 40 percent from 1994. After the effect of the accounting change (FASB 121), 1995 net income was $104.4 million, or $3.35 per share, compared to 1994 net income of $102.0 million, or $3.27 per share. Revenues of $3.6 billion increased 6 percent from 1994, primarily due to higher refined products and chemicals prices and increased Downstream volumes.

FINA reported fourth quarter 1995 net income of $22.3 million, prior to the accounting change, compared to net income of $35.7 million in fourth quarter 1994. The accounting change resulted in a net loss of $15.8 million for the quarter. Revenues of $861.8 million were relatively unchanged from the same period in 1994.

Coastal results grow 36 percent in quarter

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp. said that its earnings per share grew by 17 percent in 1995, reporting net earnings of $270.4 million, or $2.40 per share, compared with $232.6 million, or $2.05 per share, the year before.

A strong fourth quarter in which earnings grew more than 36 percent contributed to the year-end results. Coastal reported fourth-quarter net earnings of $111.4 million, or $1.01 per share, compared with $81.8 million, or 74 cents per share, in the same period a year earlier.

Combined, operating profit for 1995 increased to $751.0 million, compared with $733.6 million in 1994. For the fourth quarter, operating profit was $227.5 million, compared with $222.0 million in the same quarter a year earlier.

Tesoro reports results best in over a decade

SAN ANTONIO — Tesoro Petroleum Corp. announced 1995 net earnings applicable to common stock of $54.6 million, or $2.18 per share, compared with $13.0 million, or $.56 per share in 1994. Operating profit reached $105.9 million, compared with $64.4 million in 1994. These results represent the company's best performance in more than a decade, and were achieved despite very difficult industry conditions that prevailed through most of the year.

The 1995 results included an after-tax gain of approximately $33 million ($1.34 per share) from the sale of certain interests in the Bob West field in south Texas, partially offset by charges of approximately $5 million ($.21 per share) for employee terminations and restructuring and $3 million ($.11 per share) for the early extinguishment of debt. The 1994 results included an $8.5 million ($.37 per share) refund from the resolution of a refining and marketing tariff issue, partially offset by a $5 million ($.21 per share) charge for the early extinguishment of debt. Excluding the gain on sale of Bob West field interests, 1995 results were the best in five years.

Occidental reports net income for quarter

LOS ANGELES — Occidental Petroleum Corp. reported net income of $7 million (a loss of $.05 per share) for the fourth quarter of 1995, compared with break-even earnings (a loss of $.06 per share) for the fourth quarter of 1994. The fourth quarter 1995 results included a $132 million pretax charge relating to the previously announced reorganizations of the oil and gas and natural gas transmission divisions. Sales were $2.4 billion for the fourth quarter of 1995, compared with $2.5 billion for the same period of 1994.

The reorganization of the oil and gas division, for which a charge of $95 million was recorded, is expected to result in annualized savings of $100 million. Approximately 15 percent of this charge is to provide for estimated losses on disposition of assets as part of the reorganization. MidCon's reorganization, for which a $37 million charge was recorded, is expected to recognize annualized savings of $50 million.

Valhi earnings increase to five-year high

DALLAS — Valhi, Inc. reported 1995 net income of $68.5 million, or $.60 per share, up from net income of $11.6 million, or $.10 per share, in 1994. The company's fourth quarter net income was $25 million, or $.22 per share, compared to $4.7 million, or $.04 per share, in 1994.

Operating income of $258 million in 1995 was up 36% on a 14% increase in sales to approximately $2 billion (% comparisons to 1994 pro forma results). Fourth quarter operating income increased 12% to $62 million while sales increased 14% to $485 million. The Company's improved sales and earnings were driven by higher titanium dioxide pigment ("TiO2") prices at NL Industries. Average TiO2 prices for the fourth quarter were 14% above last year but 1% below the third quarter of 1995. TiO2 sales volumes in 1995 were below the record levels of 1994 (down 7% in the fourth quarter and 3% for the full year) as demand softened in the second half of 1995.

Williams earnings improve sixth straight year

TULSA, Okla. — The Williams Companies, Inc. reported record financial results for 1995, a year in which it was reshaped and its assets doubled. It is the sixth consecutive year of improved performance.

Excluding the $1 billion after-tax gain on the sale of a portion of its telecommunications business — which is reported as income from discontinued operations — the company reported unaudited 1995 income from continuing operations of $299.4 million, or $2.76 per share on a fully diluted basis.

This is an 82 percent improvement over 1994, when the company reported income from continuing operations of $164.9 million, or $1.52 per share.

Including the gain, Williams reported 1995 net income of $1.3 billion, or $12.48 per share on a fully diluted basis, compared with 1994 net income of $246.7 million, or $2.32 per share.

For the fourth quarter of 1995, the company reported unaudited net income of $77.5 million, or 69 cents per share on a fully diluted basis, compared with net income of $75.4 million, or 76 cents per share, during the same period of 1994. Fourth quarter 1995 results were reduced 24 cents per share by a $41.4 million pre-tax write-off of a coal gasification project.

Noble Drilling revenues fall 7 percent in 1995

HOUSTON — Noble Drilling Corp. reported operating revenues of $328.0 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1995, a 7 percent decrease from operating revenues of $352.0 million for 1994. Operating income for 1995 was $11.4 million compared with operating income of $18.2 million in 1994. Net loss applicable to common shares for 1995 was $5.6 million ($0.08 per share) compared with net income applicable to common shares of $8.8 million ($0.11 per share) in 1994. The 1995 net loss applicable to common shares of $0.08 includes the $0.02 per share cost of the first quarter payment made in connection with the conversion of shares of the company's $2.25 Convertible Exchangeable Preferred Stock. This payment was accounted for as a reduction to net earnings applicable to common shares for purposes of calculating the net loss applicable to common shares.

While operating revenues declined in the fourth quarter of 1995, operating income improved. Noble Drilling reported operating revenues of $84.2 million compared with $87.4 million for the fourth quarter 1994, a 4 percent decrease. Operating income for the fourth quarter 1995 was $8.5 million, a substantial improvement when compared to $0.3 million in the 1994 comparable quarter. Net income applicable to common shares for the fourth quarter 1995 was $2.8 million ($0.03 per share) compared to the 1994 fourth quarter net loss of $4.7 million ($0.06 per share). The 1994 fourth quarter net loss applicable to common shares includes aggregate restructuring charges of $3.7 million, or $0.05 per share.

Apache tests deep gas wells, Texas workover

HOUSTON —Apache Corp. announced the completion of three natural gas wells in the Anadarko Basin in western Oklahoma's Caddo County. The new producers were completed in various zones of the Deep Springer formation at depths below 17,000 feet.

Following fracture stimulation treatment, the School Land 1-16 flowed into pipeline at the rate of 10.6 million cubic feet (MMcf) of gas with 240 barrels of condensate per day through a 16/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 6,800 psi. Perforations are in 70 feet of pay at approximately 18,200 feet in the Lower McComas zone, the deepest of six intervals which have indicated production.

Due to high flowing pressures and productivity, near-term production will be from the deepest zone only, and the shallower intervals will be completed at a later date. A combined 236 feet of pay has been identified in the uphole zones. Apache, the operator, obtained an additional 17 percent interest in this lease as part of a $198-million property acquisition in the third quarter of 1995, bringing the company's total working interest to approximately 87 percent.

About one and one-half miles to the northwest, the Apache-operated Weber 1-2 began producing into pipeline at the rate of 4.6 MMcf of gas per day from the Upper McComas zone at approximately 17,900 feet. The flow rate was gauged on a 12/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,600 psi. The well, which was fracture-treated, also indicated potential production in 38 feet of net pay in the shallower Britt sand at approximately 17,000 feet and will be tested in that zone at a later date. Apache's working interest in the Weber 1-2 also was augmented by the above-referenced 1995 acquisition, increasing from 33 percent to the current 48 percent.

Two miles to the north, the Theresa 1-26 is flowing into pipeline at the rate of 8.2 MMcf of gas per day through a 12/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 9,800 psi. Production is being commingled from the McComas and Wamsley horizons. Apache obtained its 19 percent working interest in the well through the previously mentioned acquisition. The Theresa 1-26 is operated by Tulsa, Oklahoma-based Sanguine Ltd.

Apache is currently drilling two other wells nearby, both of which are targeted to test the Deep Springer formation below 17,000 feet. All 20 of the Deep Springer wells in which the company has participated over the past three years have been completed as producers.

In the Texas Panhandle in Hemphill County, Apache completed a fracture stimulation treatment on the Fee 37 3, an Upper Morrow producer, increasing daily production to 10.1 MMcf of gas and 380 barrels of oil from 3 MMcf and 100 barrels.

The company is now evaluating adjacent acreage to determine the possibility of drilling an additional well. Apache obtained a 100 percent working interest in this lease through the third quarter 1995 acquisition.

Kelly Oil receives equity investment by Contour

HOUSTON — Kelley Oil & Gas Corp. announced an agreement with Contour Production Co. for a $75 million equity investment by Contour in two stages.

The first stage of the investment provides for Contour's purchase of 48 million newly issued common shares at $1.00 per share, representing 49.8 percent of Kelley Oil's voting power after the investment.

Under the second stage, Contour will commit to purchase an additional 27 million newly issued common shares at the same price at the earliest time that the investment can be made without triggering redemption rights by holders of Kelley Oil's public debt, but not later than the stated maturity of the debt.

Kelley Oil also announced a large anticipated loss for 1995.

Ralph P. Davidson, Chairman of Kelley Oil, said "We explored a number of alternatives to address the company's liquidity constraints, capital availability and management needs. We believe this is the best available transaction for stockholders." Fair Colvin, President and CEO of Kelley Oil, added "This transaction will also allow the company to continue the drilling operations needed to reestablish production and reserve growth."

Upon closing, John Bookout will become Chairman and CEO of Kelley Oil. Mr. Bookout is the Chairman of Contour and previously served as CEO of Shell Oil Company. He will name other permanent senior executives of Kelley Oil upon closing, expected to include Dallas Laumbach, William Rankin and William Albrecht. Mr. Colvin said "In addition to Mr. Bookout and the talented new management team taking on a leadership role with Kelley Oil, principals of Contour will have a majority of the seats on our board after the initial investment."

Mr. Bookout said "We are pleased with this investment and our business plan for Kelley Oil." Contour was formed by Bessemer Holdings, L.P. and Mr. Bookout to make energy investments with a goal of creating a significant independent company. "We are committed to this goal and believe our major equity position and management role in Kelley Oil will provide excellent opportunities," he added.

Kelley Oil has reported production and cash flow declines that have contributed to liquidity constraints and have limited its access to capital prior to its agreement with Contour. Kelley Oil expects to take a year-end write-down of proved properties under FAS 121 and an additional noncash impairment charge against unproved properties, which together could increase total losses for 1995 to $100 million or more.

The company would have to substantially reduce drilling without an immediate equity infusion. The extent of the impairment charges and related losses could be even greater without the Contour investment. Because Kelley Oil's board believes the delays involved in securing stockholder approval for the transaction could jeopardize Kelley Oil's financial viability and the transaction is conditioned on its ability to close expeditiously, the company is foregoing stockholder approval procedures for the transaction in reliance on an exception granted by the NASD under the Nasdaq listing requirements.

Subject to closing conditions, including satisfactory completion of due diligence by Contour and the establishment of a new credit facility for Kelley Oil on satisfactory terms, the parties will seek to complete the first stage of the investment by the middle of February. Kelley Oil will provide its stockholders with a notice describing the transaction in more detail and the bases for the decision to omit a stockholder vote.

Smith Barney Inc. acted as Kelley Oil's financial advisor for the transaction.

Kelley Oil & Gas is an independent exploration and production company with oil and gas properties located primarily in Louisiana. The company's common and preferred stock are traded on the Nasdaq National Market.

Abraxas Petroleum invests in Calgary firm

SAN ANTONIO - Abraxas Petroleum Corp. announced a $3 million investment in a Calgary-based privately held Alberta corporation which will in turn invest the proceeds in new shares of publicly traded Cascade Oil and Gas Ltd. Following the share purchase, Abraxas will own approximately 52 percent of the public entity, which will have an estimated net asset value in excess of $5 million.

Cascade has existing oil production in excess of 100 barrels of oil per day, predominately in southwestern Saskatchewan with minor interests in Alberta. In addition, the company has 12,000 net acres of undeveloped leases, some of which represent offset development opportunities in their main operating areas in southwestern Saskatchewan.

The recapitalized entity will use a portion of the funds to develop existing Cascade properties. The remainder will be available to either further develop existing properties or to take advantage of numerous acquisition/exploration opportunities currently available in western Canada.

Apache to proceed with China exploration

HOUSTON — Apache Corp. and XCL Ltd. (have jointly notified China National Oil and Gas Exploration and Development Corp. that they have elected to proceed with the second exploration phase (May 1, 1996, to April 30, 1998) under the Production Sharing Contract covering the Zhao Dong Block, Bohai Bay, People's Republic of China. At least two additional exploration wells must be drilled during this period.

The parties soon will commence drilling the F-1 exploration well using a land rig from an onshore surface location. The first exploratory well of phase two will follow. Under an agreement concluded May 10, 1995, Apache is obligated to pay for 100 percent of XCL's share of costs to drill and test these wells. Additionally, the parties will drill the first appraisal well for 1996, the D-2, this spring. This well will appraise the D-1 discovery well, which was drilled in July 1995.

With respect to development of the "C" Field, a development plan will be furnished to CNODC by March 31, 1996. To date, three successful wells, the C-1, C-2 and C-3, have been drilled in that field.

David W. Biegler, Chairman of EEX will reassume the position of Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. Gary J. Junco remains President and Chief Operating Officer of the company.

TransTexas to commence Lodgepole drilling

HOUSTON — TransTexas Gas Corp. announced that it intends to commence a four rig drilling program, as operator, in the Lodgepole area of North Dakota in early February.

The company had previously reported its first successful Lodgepole well, the RG No. 1-10, in which it had a minority working interest, on January 26. The four new drilling locations are based upon 3-D seismic and other geophysical data accumulated from the company's first 3-D seismic survey of 62 square miles. The company is conducting three additional seismic surveys and four others are underway in conjunction with other operators active in the area. This complete program totals over 250 square miles in a prospective area of carbonate Lodgepole reefs.

Three proposed drilling locations are located in the 3-D survey area of 62 square miles, approximately 11 miles south-west of the producing Eland Lodgepole field, in an area in which the company and its partners own up to a 72 percent working interest. A fourth planned drilling site is situated in a 93 square mile 3-D seismic survey area of 80 percent working interest, including 24 square miles encompassing the City of Dickinson and approximately 3 miles north of the Conoco Dickinson Lodgepole unit.

The company said that it believed the extensive 3-D seismic surveys and success from the initial drilling program represented an opportunity to enhance the value of its Lodgepole interests.

Comstock gets financing for Black Stone

DALLAS — Comstock Resources, Inc. announced that it has received a commitment from its banks to provide financing which would enable Comstock to complete its recently announced acquisition of Black Stone Oil Company and the interests of additional working interest owners in certain producing oil and gas properties and undeveloped oil and gas leases located in East Texas for total cash consideration of approximately $103 million.

The First National Bank of Chicago and Bank One, Texas N.A. have committed to provide a $175 million credit facility to refinance Comstock's existing bank debt of $71 million as well as provide funds for the $103 million acquisition. First Chicago will serve as administrative agent and lead arranger with Bank One serving as co-agent and co-arranger.

Comstock will be acquiring interests in 18 producing oil and gas wells. Comstock estimates that proved oil and gas reserves attributable to the interests to be acquired are approximately 92 billion cubic feet of natural gas and 5 million barrels of oil, as of Jan. 1, 1996, the effective date of the acquisition. The acquisition is expected to close on May 1, 1996 and is subject to the parties executing mutually agreeable purchase and sale agreements and clearance by certain governmental authorities.

Benton awarded Venezuela exploration block

CARPINTERIA, Calif. — Benton Oil and Gas Co. has expanded its presence in Venezuela with a successful bid in the recent Venezuelan Exploration Round.

Benton (with a 30 percent interest) along with partners Louisiana Land and Exploration (35 percent) and Canada's Norcen Energy Resources (35 percent) won the right to explore and develop the 526,000 acre Delta Centro block, located in northeastern Venezuela in the state of Delta Amacuro. Delta Centro was one of 10 exploration blocks, expected to contain light and medium crude, auctioned over the past week by the state-owned oil company, Petroleos de Venezuela SA (PDVSA). The BentonLouisiana Land-Norcen consortium will pay PDVSA 41 percent of pretax profits once production begins.

The work program for the Delta Centro block includes the acquisition of 1,300 kilometers of seismic data and the drilling of a series of exploration wells. Plans are to conduct a 3-D seismic program in 1996 and drill an initial exploration well during the first quarter of 1997. Under PDVSA's guidelines, the consortium will invest $50 to $60 million over the next five years in exploring the tract. According to PDVSA estimates, the Delta Centro reservoir could contain as much as 820 million barrels of recoverable oil and could yield output of up to 160,000 barrels of oil per day (BOPD).

Apache reports successful Egyptian well

HOUSTON — Apache Corp. along with its contractor-partners Phoenix Resources Company Inc. and Global Natural Resources Inc., announced the successful Qarun A-7X development well.

The producer's 314 feet of net oil pay is the thickest yet encountered in the five successful wells drilled thus far in the Qarun field. The A-7X will be put on production in the second half of 1996 via the SUMED pipeline. Plans call for drilling nine more development wells in the field this year.

Apache and Global each hold a 25 percent contractor interest in the field. Phoenix is the operator, with a 50 percent interest.

Apache Corporation, with operations in North America and abroad, is one of the nation's larger gas and oil independents.

BOTTOM LINES

ICO Inc. revenues grow 8 percent in quarter

HOUSTON — ICO, Inc. reported operating results for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1995, the first quarter of its Fiscal 1996.

For the quarter, ICO reported net income of $1,500,000, or $0.11 per common share after preferred dividends of $544,000, on revenues of $21,751,000, compared with net income of $1,205,000 or $0.08 per common share after preferred dividends of $544,000, on revenues of $20,235,000 in the first quarter of Fiscal 1995.

Sylvia A. Pacholder, president and chief executive officer, stated "Led by strong growth in both corrosion control services and international product sales, ICO's first quarter 1996 revenues increased 8 percent compared to the first quarter of 1995."

Earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization increased 17 percent to $2,552,000 from $2,176,000 in the same quarter of fiscal year 1995, and pre-tax income increased 29 percent to $1,589,000 from $1,235,000.

Rowan Companies sees improved profitability

HOUSTON — Rowan Companies, Inc. reported that improved business conditions should result in a profitable 1996.

During a presentation to the New York society of Security Analysts, C. R. Palmer, chairman and CEO commented, "It is not possible to accurately forecast the financial results for Rowan due to the volatile nature of the offshore drilling business, but it is possible to establish realistic goals based upon specific assumptions of dayrates and utilization. Our expectations for 1996 are for consolidated revenues to approach $550 million, resulting in net income near $50 million.

We expect first quarter 1996 revenues to be up about $50 million from the first quarter of 1995 with net income approaching $2 million, up from a $21.7 million loss last year. Our long-stated goal is to return to prosperity - and I believe we are on track."

Cabot revenues decline 10 percent in 1995

HOUSTON — Cabot Oil & Gas Corp. announced a 10 percent decline in total revenues for the year ended December 31, 1995 which, when combined with significant non-recurring charges for the year, resulted in a reported net loss applicable to common shareholders of $92.2 million, or $4.05 per share compared with a net loss of $5.4 million, or $.25 per share for 1994. Without non-recurring items totaling $74.9 million, the net loss applicable to common shareholders for 1995 would have been $17.3 million, or $.76 per share.

Discretionary cash flow totaled $30.6 million, or $1.35 per share compared with $55.7 million, or $2.53 per share for 1994. Excluding the non-recurring items, 1995 discretionary cash flow was $36.9 million, or $1.63 per share. Non-recurring items include charges related to a reduction in force, the early adoption of a new accounting standard on asset impairment and a loss related to an uncovered gas price hedge, offset in part by a settlement of claims related to certain gas sales contracts.

For the fourth quarter of 1995, COG reported a net loss applicable to common shareholders of $5.4 million, or $.24 per share, compared to a loss of $3.2 million, or $.14 per share in 1994. Excluding non-recurring items, the fourth quarter of 1995 shows improvement from year-to-year with a net loss applicable to common shareholders of $1.9 million, or $.08 per share. Discretionary cash flow during the recent fourth quarter was $6.8 million, or $.30 per share versus $11.6 million, or $.51 per share in the 1994 quarter. Adjusting for non-recurring items, fourth quarter 1995 discretionary cash flow was $12.4 million, or $.55 per share, also an improvement from the fourth quarter of 1994.

Union Texas posts significantly higher earnings

HOUSTON — Union Texas Petroleum Holdings, Inc. reported 1995 earnings of $1.17 per share, more than 50% above the 76 cents per share earned in 1994. Net income was $102 million for 1995, versus $67 million in 1994.

For the fourth quarter of 1995, Union Texas reported net income of $24 million or 27 cents per share, compared to $17 million or 20 cents per share for the same period in 1994. Sales and operating revenues for the fourth quarter of 1995 totaled $214 million, level with the same period in 1994.

For the full year 1995, Union Texas said its earnings benefited from higher oil volumes in the U.K. North Sea, higher ethylene margins and sales volumes at its U.S. petrochemical operations, and improved oil and gas sales prices, partially offset by increased exploration expenses, higher interest expense and lower LNG volumes. During 1995, Union Texas had an expanded exploration program and, as a result, recorded about $77 million in exploration expenses versus $54 million in 1994.

Lomak acquires three properties

FORT WORTH — Lomak Petroleum Inc. executed definitive agreements regarding three oil and gas property acquisitions for $17.5 million of consideration.

The properties are located in Lomak's core operating areas of Appalachia and Texas, and are estimated to increase Lomak's existing production by over 5,500 Mcfe per day. In aggregate, the acquisitions are estimated to contain 20.2 Bcf of gas and 240,000 barrels of oil. The acquisition cost attributable to proved reserves averages 62 cents per Mcfe. All three transactions are expected to close prior to Feb 15th.

A portion of the Appalachian properties carry a premium price gas contract and include 40 miles of pipelines. Lomak will own in excess of 2,000 miles of gas gathering and transportation lines in the Appalachian Basin. The Texas properties include 13 undeveloped locations, five of which are scheduled to be drilled in 1996.

Mobil agrees to sell gas gathering assets to PanEnergy

FAIRFAX, Va. —Mobil Corp. and Houston-based PanEnergy Corp. announced that subsidiaries of the two energy companies have signed a non-binding letter of intent to negotiate the sale of Mobil's natural gas gathering and processing assets to PanEnergy.

Under the proposed agreement, PanEnergy would acquire about 2,600 miles of pipeline as well as Mobil's seven operated natural gas processing plants and fractionation facilities in Texas and Oklahoma. PanEnergy would also acquire substantially all of Mobil's equity interests in 17 additional gas-gathering and processing operations owned and operated by other parties in Texas, Utah, Louisiana and Oklahoma. Pending certain adjustments at closing, Mobil will receive about $300 million for its gas processing assets.

Mobil will process its equity gas production with PanEnergy. The transfer of Mobil's third-party gas contracts to PanEnergy would result in a reduction of about 25,000 barrels per day of natural gas liquids production to Mobil.

In a separate but related move, the two energy companies also announced they are actively negotiating the formation of an energy marketing joint venture between Mobil Natural Gas Inc., and PanEnergy's marketing unit.

Sakhalin oil reserves could dwarf North Slope

■ Rush for "black gold" delayed by legal and administrative questions.

By N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — The Russian parliament has given Western oil companies a green light to explore reserves in the Russian Far East that are almost three times the size of Alaska's North Slope fields, a move that could again turn Seattle into a major supply base for the Texas-based oil industry.

But a new rush for black gold still is a long way off. The first $15 billion project on Siberia's Sakhalin Island by a Western oil consortium faces myriad legal and administrative questions, as well as concerns among environmentalists. Drilling isn't expected to begin for several years.

Late last month, the Russian Duma approved a production-sharing agreement for development of oil and natural gas eight to 15 miles off the north shore of Sakhalin Island, where reserves are estimated to contain the equivalent of 40 billion barrels of oil. By comparison, the Prudhoe Bay oil fields on the north coast of Alaska contained 13.4 billion barrels before drilling there began.

Two consortiums of Western and Russian oil companies that already had obtained oil-drilling contracts from local authorities are now permitted to begin exploration, provided that 70 percent of the work is done by Russians, said Dinty Miller, director of the U.S.-funded American Business Center in Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk, the island's largest city.

"Things are finally going to get under way in earnest," Miller told a recent breakfast meeting of the Seattle-based Foundation for Russian-American Economic Cooperation.

Even though the production-sharing agreement was more nationalistic than Western oil companies had expected, at least one consortium has indicated it will drill for oil under its terms, Miller said.

The Sakhalin Energy Investment Co., made up of Marathon Oil and McDermott International of Texas, Mitsubishi and Mitsui of Japan and Royal Dutch/Shell from the United Kingdom and the Netherlands, has not yet announced when it will begin its $15 billion drilling project, he said.

A manager for the consortium, reached by telephone in Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk, declined to comment, saying his firm has not yet released its official position on the production-sharing agreement.

The plans reportedly include construction of a 600-mile pipeline to connect the fields in the Sea of Okhotsk near Nogliki with Korsakov, a port on the southern tip of Sakhalin Island. By comparison, the Alaska pipeline is about 800 miles long.

A large share of the technology and equipment used in the transportation, logistics, pipeline construction, drilling and crew accommodations is expected to come from the United States, said Rusty Devereaux, director of Russian projects for the Jore Group, a Seattle-based collection of cargo-handling companies that support oil operations in Alaska and Russia.

Together with supplies needed for about 5,000 employees and contractors who will be stationed on the island to build and operate the pipeline, drill for oil and provide numerous support services, the transshipment of equipment and housing will create an economic boom for the Puget Sound area, he said.

The Sakhalin Energy Investment Co. has not yet announced when it will begin its $15 billion drilling project.

— Dinty Miller,
director, American Business Center in Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk

"Seattle is the closest U.S. port to the Russian Far East," Devereaux said. "Our goal is to be the gateway to Sakhalin Island the way we are the gateway to Alaska."

Many questions surrounding the administration and taxation of the production-sharing agreement remain, however, Miller and Devereaux said.

And not everyone in the Pacific Northwest shares the two men's enthusiasm for the project on Russia's last frontier.

"That's very worrisome," said David Ortman, director for the Northwest office for Friends of the Earth. "All movement of oil has problems."

Ortman said a lack of money and grass-roots awareness in Russia means its scarce environmental laws aren't likely to be enforced rigorously.

In addition, the project may begin before Russian authorities have a chance to inventory Siberia's wildlife and set aside reserves for the protection of endangered species the way the United States preserved wilderness in Alaska, Ortman said.

"It's another case of a bunch of businessmen rushing in there and draining the patient before seeing what its condition is," he said.

Miller defended the oil companies' intentions.

"The last thing they want is an oil spill," he said.

Texaco chairman to retire, successor named

By N.Y. Times News Service

White Plains, New York — Texaco Inc. said Alfred DeCrane Jr. will retire as chairman and chief executive on July 1 and be succeeded by Peter Bijur, now a senior vice president.

Bijur, 53, will become a director of the White Plains, New York-based energy company immediately and serve as vice chairman until DeCrane's retirement. Bijur currently oversees Texaco operations in Europe, Latin America, West Africa, the Far East and Middle East.

DeCrane is retiring as he reaches Texaco's mandatory retirement age of 65. He has been with Texaco for 37 years, including nine as chairman and six as chief executive.

K N Energy to develop natural gas pipeline

LAKEWOOD, Colo. — K N Energy, Inc. has reached an agreement to acquire a major midwest crude oil pipeline owned by Amoco Pipeline Company.

K N plans to convert the pipeline for transmission of natural gas from supply-rich Wyoming to Midwest markets. The 850-mile pipeline extends from Riverton, Wyoming, southeast through portions of Nebraska, Colorado and Kansas, entering Missouri just south of Kansas City.

The total net cost of the project, including the purchase price and costs to convert the pipeline to natural gas service during the next nine to twelve months, is expected to be less than $150 million. K N Energy anticipates closing the purchase transaction by the end of the second quarter 1996.

Pipeline conversion and construction of new facilities is expected to begin immediately thereafter, and the pipeline is expected to be in gas service by early 1997.

The initial design capacity of 200,000 million British Thermal Units (MMBtu) may be expanded to 300,000 MMBtu with additional compression. The pipeline will access more than 5.7 trillion cubic feet (Tcf) of natural gas reserves in the Wind River Basin of central Wyoming and other producing areas in Wyoming. Natural gas available for sale in central Wyoming far exceeds current pipeline capacity in the area, and additional drilling projects are being planned by various producers.

K N earlier announced plans for an expansion of its existing Wyoming natural gas pipeline capacity. That project, which will accommodate an additional 47,500 MMBtu per day, is a natural fit with the Amoco pipeline agreement and will be pursued concurrent to it.

Vintage buys Conoco properties in Louisiana

TULSA — Vintage Petroleum, Inc. has reached an agreement with Conoco Inc. to purchase certain producing properties located in south-central Louisiana for $14.3 million in cash, subject to customary closing adjustments. The effective date of the transaction is January 1, with closing scheduled for January 31, 1996.

The properties acquired consist of interests in two fields located in Evangeline Parish and Arcadia Parish and are to be operated by Vintage. Current net daily production from the properties averages approximately 1,000 barrels of light, sweet crude oil, and 550 mcf of gas. Exploitation activities planned in an effort to increase production from the properties include workovers, recompletions and developmental drilling.

TransTexas Gas improves Lobo Trend results

HOUSTON — TransTexas Gas Corp. announced the results of its ongoing drilling program in its proven Lobo Trend acreage. During the current quarter of Oct. 1 through Jan. 31, the company employed 3-D seismic surveys it either performed with partners in the area, or acquired, to drill a series of more productive wells. These wells have exhibited improved production vs. a typical Lobo well that produces perhaps 3 million cubic feet of natural gas per day (MMcfd).

TransTexas attributes its success with these wells to both the use of 3-D seismic information and to improvements its fracturing division, DiamondFrac, has made in fracturing fluids and proppants to improve per-well production from its Lobo Trend properties. By increasing the production rates of newly drilled wells, the company improved Lobo production while simultaneously adding new production in its development areas of La Grulla, Bob West North, and Cuba Libre. During this quarter, average Lobo daily net natural gas production increased by 8 percent from 312 MMcfd in November to 337 MMcfd during the first 20 days of January. In 1996, the company plans to invest more than $200 million in its activities in south Texas and Lodgepole, N.D.

Acquisition of National-Oilwell completed

GREENWICH, Conn. - Duff & Phelps Inverness, an investment partnership based in Greenwich, Conn., has completed a management-led buyout of Houston-based National-Oilwell from Armco and USX for $180 million.

Duff & Phelps/Inverness and Greenwich-based First Reserve Funds are the primary equity partners in the new company along with National-Oilwell management. Senior debt financing for the transaction was arranged by GE Capital Services and Goldman, Sachs & Co.

National-Oilwell is a leader in the design, manufacture and sale of drilling rig components and the maintenance, repair, upgrade and refurbishment of existing drilling rigs. The company also designs, manufactures and sells centrifugal and multiplex reciprocating pumps and expendable pump parts. In addition, National-Oilwell is a leading distributor of standardized oil field supplies, oil field equipment and tubular products. The company's revenues for 1995 exceeded $550 million.

Joel V. Staff, chief executive officer of National-Oilwell will continue to head the company following the buyout.

Established in 1994, Duff & Phelps/Inverness is a partnership between Phoenix/Duff & Phelps and the Inverness Group.

Small producers win contracts easier

By Hillary Durgin
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — When a key customer asked TI Energy Services to take on a large pipeline project, its executives wondered whether they could live with the risk.

It was a highly unusual request. Liquid Carbonic Industries Corp. asked the small pipeline engineering firm to deliver the project at a guaranteed price.

"I felt very comfortable with construction costs, materials costs, engineering costs," says Billy Young, TI Energy's project manager on the line. "The thing in question was the right of way."

The 50-mile-long pipe route was in southern Louisiana, where the landowners are notoriously tough negotiators. And, adds Young, they could say, "Get lost."

The customer was looking for a way to nail down the cost, said John Nelson, president of Houston-based TI Energy. "We are willing to undertake a different approach to how we might tackle a job."

That attitude won 5-year-old TI Energy the contract.

While the company is relatively young, it has recruited industry veterans taking early retirement from bigger companies.

That experience gave the company the confidence to take on the project to build the 10-inch-diameter hydrogen line, and ultimately turn what could have become a multimillion-dollar loss into a job delivered on time and within budget.

TI Energy is among a growing stable of small energy companies that are winning new projects because they are willing to do business in nontraditional ways.

Their relatively small size allows them to make quick decisions and operate with an efficiency that some of the big boys lack.

Take Teco Pipeline Co. The small Houston pipeline operator recently jumped into the fray to build a natural gas line that is the longest natural gas line constructed in Texas in the last decade.

The company decided to build a 170-mile, 30-inch-diameter natural gas line before it had signed up enough customers to cover its investment. Typically, companies try to get subscribers for pipeline capacity in advance to assure they have the income to pay for their costs.

"That made it a risky pipeline," says Teco Pipeline Chairman Bud Treadaway, who helped found the firm 14 years ago. Still, "We were sure that the need was there."

They saw it as an answer to one of the industry's most pressing demands: the need to move natural gas from the West, where a gas glut has depressed prices, to the East, where strong demand has inflated them.

"We believe it, therefore we're going to do it," he explained.

Teco managed to find major gas companies to buy capacity on the line. It also won an agreement from Enron Corp. to team up in a joint venture to build a portion of the line.

As a result that line started moving gas earlier this month from the Waha hub — where several interstate pipelines interconnect in West Texas — to Katy.

The two projects represent turning points for TI Energy and Teco Pipeline. These small companies took a big leap up but entered a world where the stakes are higher as well.

Formed to manage pipeline construction projects in 1991, TI Energy has benefited from the downsizing of the pipeline and engineering businesses.

Some of its key employees joined TI Energy after leaving companies that include Brown & Root and Tenneco. The projects the firm takes on are jobs the big interstate natural gas or products pipeline once would have done, but today would rather outsource.

"The major oil and gas companies are doing business differently," Nelson says. "We're in the service business, so if these large corporations are reorganizing, as a service provider we should have more opportunities and we also should have more opportunities to attract more qualified people."

The hydrogen line project illustrates how TI Energy Services used the experience of its people to deliver a project to meet its customer's needs.

Headed by Billy Young, formerly assistant chief engineer at Tenneco, the project was designed to run from Port Arthur to Sulphur, La.

While TI Energy assumed tremendous risk in agreeing to provide a guaranteed price, the experience of Young and his team gave Nelson the confidence to back them.

"There were some anxious moments," Young says, recalling the landowner who changed his mind three times on the price he would charge for a right of way.

The terrain was difficult to navigate. Young encountered 240 pipeline crossings in the first eight miles of the pipe route.

With that project under its belt, TI Energy now has the track record to show when it goes after other big projects.

While TI Energy has benefited from the connections that many of its personnel have brought with them, that's also a double-edged sword. Because with more layoffs in the industry, many of those contacts are disappearing.

So the company recently hired a director of marketing and is working out an advertising budget to promote its work in trade journals.

Existing industries come first

Agri-Empresa is a local company that has expanded to six cities. It is owned by Steve Goree, above, and his father, Travis. Related story/2

The Chamber's Economic Development Department performs a host of tasks:

— slashing red tape for a local chemical manufacturer;

— suggesting employee training solutions to the owner of an electrical industry;

— maintaining an extensive database of local demographics; and — systematically contacting 3,000 prospective out-of-state manufacturers about relocating to Midland, then visiting the top 5 percent in person.

But there is a tight focus on the department's activities.

New money

"Other Chamber divisions — such as Membership/Communications — deal with all businesses across the board," said Mark Thomas, Chamber Economic Development manager. "Our department concentrates on basic industries, which mainly includes manufacturers," he said. "But it also includes the oil and gas extraction industry, because that industry also literally exports a product outside our economy and imports new money into our economy.

"Our primary goal is working with the basic industries that are already in Midland, helping them to stay here and expand if possible," he said. "Our second goal is recruiting new basic industry to our area. This two-pronged approach enriches the first layer of the economy, making it possible for the second layer — such as retail and local services — to also prosper."

Energy opportunities

Chamber staff and volunteers hold on-site visits annually with about 150 companies that represent about 90 percent of Midland's manufacturing-based employment.

Opportunities and challenges are assessed, and specific assistance or advice helps the company to be more successful.

"For the past five years, we've concentrated primarily on manufacturers," Thomas said. "Our next retention/expansion efforts will also include oil and gas companies."

Chamber is for those with a lot invested in Midland

By Marvin Wynn

Wynn

Unless you are a chronic joiner, you need a good reason to become a member of an organization.

If you are a petroleum geologist, you join the West Texas Geological Society to further your professional development.

If you hit the party tables too hard during the holidays, you join the local health club to trim up.

And if you have invested a lot in Midland — in dollars, labor, hopes or dreams — you join the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Why?

Because the Midland Chamber is the one organization that devotes full time and energy to promote commercial, industrial and civic progress for the Midland area.

If you're in business, your success often depends on the continued well-being of your community.

By joining the Chamber, paying annual dues and participating in as many programs as time allows, you'll become a part of the community. You'll make a difference.

Your participation — either as a paying member, a committee member or both — ensures all Midlanders will have a community of which to be proud.

You can participate in the Chamber and promote your business as well.

After-hours mixers, the Networking Breakfast and the annual Business Expo trade show are opportunities to meet other business people face to face. Remember, it's often who you know — and who knows you — that determines your business success.

New members receive benefits — including free advertising in this publication — that are worth several times their cash investment.

Chamber memberships are available year-round. But Feb. 12-22 is the Chamber's annual membership drive, and special incentives are available now.

Why don't you call us at 683-3381, or fax us at 682-9205. We'll be happy to explain more about the benefits to you, your business and your community as you join the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Marvin Wynn is Chamber president and CEO.

Agri-Empresa is far cry from owners' farming roots

By Bruce Partain

Travis Goree and his son Steve set out to raise cotton and corn, but they ended up growing something altogether different — two successful companies with offices in six cities.

Headquartered in Midland, Agri-Empresa and sister company Lonestar Distribution are a far cry from their agricultural roots.

"We're a farming family," Steve Goree said. "We began buying chemicals and fertilizer wholesale for our own use."

The potassium chloride Agri-Empresa began handling in 1978 for their farm also had applications in the oil patch, and the Gorees pursued that growing market.

By 1981, the oil business was in full boom and Steve Goree left the farm in Uvalde to set up shop in Midland. In 1985, he purchased a 20-acre site from the Midland Industrial Foundation, a non-profit entity managed by the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Buildings were constructed in 1989.

Agri-Empresa now has field operations in Carlsbad, N.M., and will soon open a warehouse in Houston. Lonestar Distribution selected a Midland site in 1990 and operates field offices in Hobbs, Abilene, Jacksboro and Vernon.

Agri-Empresa expanded product lines and now manufactures and/or packages sodium chloride, salt gel, white starch, yellow starch, soda ash, various clays, hydrated lime and lost-circulation materials.

Huge loads of bulk raw material are transferred from rail cars to gleaming white towers, then gravity-fed into large metal buildings that house bagging machines. Crews scurry about, stacking the bags and moving pallet-loads into waiting trucks.

Most of the products are used in the oilfield as drilling-mud components and well-completion chemicals.

"It's a high-volume, low-margin business," Goree said. "We process about 100,000 tons of product per year."

The two companies expanded both in facility size and work force over the past half decade, growing from about 40 employees in 1991 to 100.

While Agri-Empresa manufactures products, Lonestar Distribution stores and distributes materials to drilling locations and keeps a fleet of trucks humming.

Most of the trucks handle dry products, but liquid drilling mud can be produced on site and transported to a drilling rig if needed.

The Midland Chamber's Economic Development department assisted Agri-Empresa and Lonestar Distribution in several ways when the companies looked to expand.

The Chamber in 1992 helped resolve problems with an adjacent seven-acre property. An abandoned, burned-out building next to Agri-Empresa was not only an eyesore, but was caught up in bureaucratic red-tape with the Resolution Trust Corp.

"Also, the railroad was about to tear out that building's rail siding and we helped convince them to leave it in," said Chamber Economic Development Manager Mark Thomas.

A worker stacks sacks of hydrated lime at Agri-Empresa's warehouse.

Bruce Partain

With land problems cleared up, the Gorees purchased 54 adjacent acres, giving them plenty of operating and expansion space.

More recently, they purchased another 132 acres, with the intention of developing an industrial park.

Their first client, Party Station, has already constructed a large building.

Success is also showing in Agri-Empresa's new 8,000-square-foot office building, now taking shape just west of Loop 250 on West Industrial Avenue.

Looking more like a new steakhouse than an office building, the building's beautiful limestone and sandstone exterior reflects the family's background. More than a few passing motorists have swiveled their heads and wondered just what was being constructed.

"The rock is from our ranch near Coleman," Goree said. "My dad designed the building, and like everything else out here, we're building it ourselves."

ECONOMIC: Team looks to new businesses

(From 1)

Chamber President/CEO Marvin Wynn pointed out that "The evolution of the energy business toward alliances has created an opportunity for us. As the majors, especially, move toward consolidating their business with fewer suppliers, we want those suppliers to know the benefits of operating out of Midland."

Casting the lines

With the home bases securely covered, the Chamber's economic development team looks to recruitment of new basic industries into Midland.

Last April, the Chamber announced E.T.S.E., a California-based ceramics manufacturer, would be moving into the Midland Industrial Park.

"Initial estimates are 60 new employees," Thomas said.

E.T.S.E. should be up and running in Midland by the first half of 1996.

California has been a good target for Midland. "California is still a strong market for us, and we're adjusting as it changes," Thomas said.

"We're expanding the maximum size of our targeted companies from 50 employees up to 150 employees. Both inside and outside of California, we're targeting companies that have a high need for an uninterruptible supply of natural gas.

"Until Mexico's economy settles, our natural geographic advantage in relation to Mexico is not a super-plus, but down the line you'll see further NAFTA-related marketing."

Advance prospecting yields up to 3,000 companies a year that would find Midland a good fit.

"After initial screening, we draw up our top prospects and head to their locations for an in-person presentation," Thomas said. "Last year we made six marketing trips, visiting an average of 10 to 15 companies per trip. Right now, about 45 of those companies are considered true prospects and we'll pursue them in earnest."

Thomas said his department's challenge is to "know the product — Midland, Texas — inside and out, and be able to identify niche markets. Right now, I'd say we have a niche market opportunity in the automotive industry.

"With Jim Hall, Franz Weis, the Beals and Bill Kent, we have a true auto racing community here. Jacobs Electronics and Automotive Industries are already mass-producing automotive components here. I would bet that many Midlanders are unaware that the taillight assembly for the Ford Explorer is made right here in Midland. With that type of automotive clustering already here, it makes sense that others in the business would find Midland a good place to set up shop as well."

Who makes it happen

Wynn and Thomas are assisted at the staff level by Angela Latham, assistant manager, and Leticia Rendon, marketing specialist.

The work of the Chamber staff is augmented by a host of volunteers who assist with both the retention and expansion program and the marketing program. LuAnn Morgan of TU Electric, vice chairman of Economic Development, heads those volunteer efforts.

The economy

Studying business composition indicates economy's structure

By Kevin Skipper

Examining the business composition of our area gives us an indication of how our economy is structured and upon which types of businesses we depend for employment.

One way to do this is tally the number of businesses in various classifications, in this case using the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) scheme.

Tables 1, 2, and 3 show the number, percentage distribution, and cumulative percentage distribution of businesses, respectively, in each of 10 SIC categories or sectors.

Five geographic areas are presented: Midland County, the Odessa-Midland Metropolitan Statistical Area consisting of Midland and Ector counties, the Permian Basin region, the state of Texas, and the United States. Each category appears in descending numeric order according to the number of businesses in Midland County.

Service-oriented businesses constitute the largest group of employers in Midland County (2,491). This means that more than one in three businesses is comprised of those such as hotels, beauty shops, advertising and public relations agencies, auto repair shops, doctors' offices, schools, and business consulting enterprises. Service businesses also predominate throughout the metro area, Permian Basin, Texas, and the United States.

The next largest group of employers includes retail trade. In Midland, retailers make up nearly one in five (18.2 percent) businesses. Retail trade includes businesses engaged in selling merchandise such as garden supplies, building materials, general merchandise, groceries, vehicles, apparel, and furniture. This sector also includes restaurants.

Midland's retail industry comprises a somewhat smaller proportion of businesses compared to the other four geographic areas (where it equals over 20 percent).

Oil and gas extraction represents the third largest business sector in Midland County.

With 1,173 businesses, it comprises 16.3 percent of all establishments. This sector is the only one in which Midland County far outpaces the other four geographic areas as a percentage of businesses.

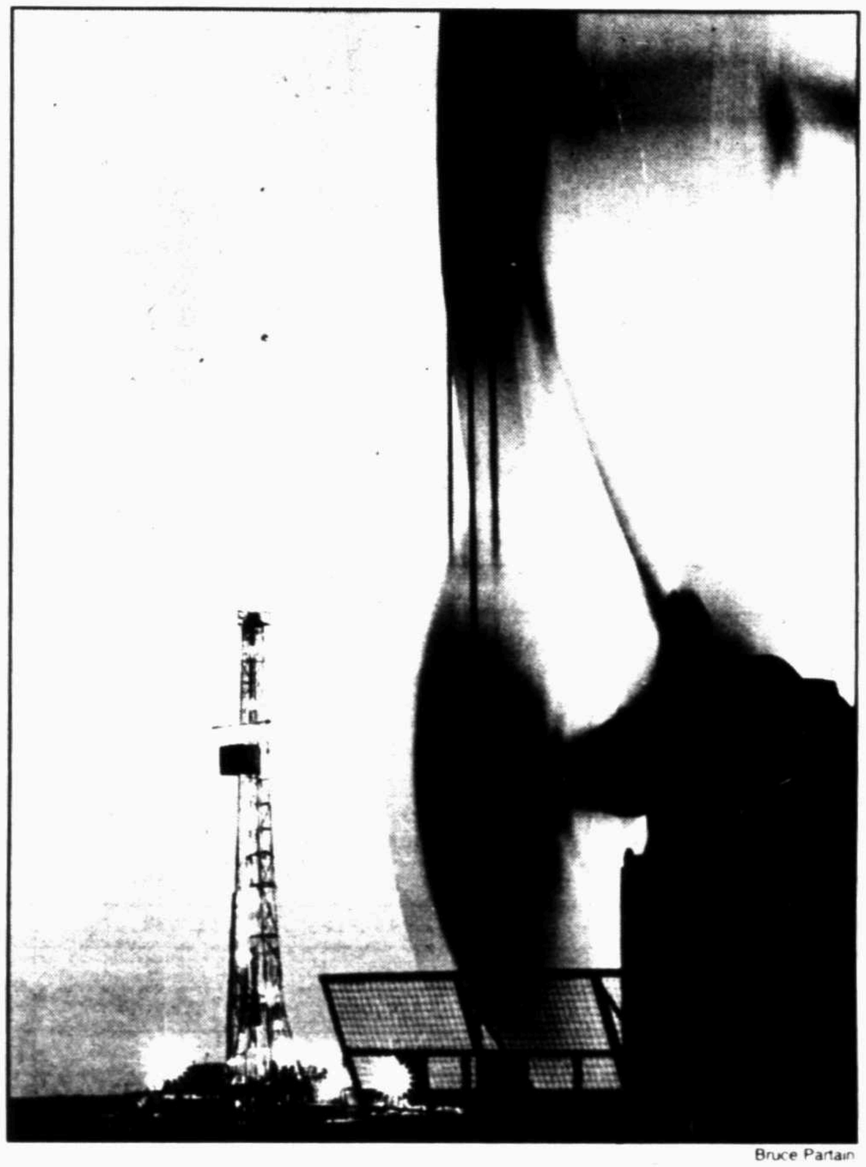

Within Midland-Odessa, the oil and gas extraction industry comprises 10.9 percent of businesses. Region-wide, the figure equals 9.0 percent. Throughout Texas, just 1.8 percent of businesses engage in this activity. And in the nation as a whole, fewer than 1 percent of businesses extract oil and gas.

About two-thirds of businesses in Midland County, the MSA, and region lie within these three largest categories of establishments (see chart).

The remaining seven sectors encompass the balance of establishments. Only in the state and United States does this balance include more than one-third of all businesses — a greater proportion than the remaining three geographic areas. What this means is that the number of businesses throughout Texas and the country is less concentrated in only a few sectors compared to our local area.

Examining numbers of businesses is only one way to compare economies. Numbers of employees is also important to consider. I'll examine those patterns in the coming months.

Carolyn Coleman is the information secretary for the Chamber and answers the thousands of phone calls that we receive each month. She is also responsible for fulfilling information requests the Chamber receives in the mail and keeping up with the Chamber staff.

Ms. Coleman joined the Chamber in July 1991 and you would be hard-pressed to find somone more dedicated to Midland.

She has two children, Cheryl & Clif, and three grandaughters, Amber, Ashley and Alli. She was raised in Pampa and has lived in Lawton, Okla.; Morris, Ill.; Liberal, Kan.; Abilene and Spearman.

Coleman

Best thing about working at the Chamber: "I feel that the information we give out is a service to our community and that I am returning all the good I receive from Midland."

Biggest challenge about working at Chamber: "Making the general public understand that the Chamber is not responsible for everything that takes place in Midland — good or bad."

Funniest thing that's happened while working at the Chamber: "A man called wanting to know where he could buy chocolate in bulk. He wanted to cover himself in chocolate and streak. Being careful not to laugh, I gave him some Chamber members' phone numbers who sold food in large quantities, hung up the phone and burst out laughing."

People would be surprised to know this about me: "I love auto racing. The best part is watching the car and motor being built and seeing it as a finished car."

Favorite way to relax: "Spending time with my granddaughters."

Biggest strength: "My belief that there is nothing a day can bring that God and I together can't handle."

I'm happiest when: "I am helping other people."

Other jobs I've held: Administrative assistant at Claydesta National Bank, administrative assistant for Williams Co. Accounting, and preschool teacher at Midland Christian School.

Perfect vacation would be: "Any time or place that my family and friends get together."

Biggest accomplishment is: "Surviving the death of my husband and raising two teen-agers as a single parent."

Favorite food: Peanut M & Ms.

Favorite kind of music: Country western.

Favorite singer: George Strait.

Rebecca Thomas

Rebecca Thomas is the assistant information secretary for the Chamber, backing up Carolyn Coleman on phones, assisting with visitors and fulfilling the many information requests the Chamber receives. She joined the Chamber in December 1993 and also assists with the accounts payable.

Mrs. Thomas and her husband, Rosco, have two daughters, Sarah and Stephanie. Mrs. Thomas worked for several oil companies and a CPA before coming to the Chamber. She has lived in Aspen, Colo., Odessa and Oklahoma City.

Best thing about working at the Chamber: "Meeting and visiting with all the people that call or come into the Chamber."

Biggest challenge about working at Chamber: "Unfortunately, people expect us to know everything about everything and, although we try, sometimes we just can't do that."

Funniest thing that's happened while working at the Chamber: "Not any one thing — we get a lot of calls wanting to know what's going on in Lubbock or Dallas and I think it's pretty funny to call the Midland Chamber for information about other towns."

Biggest strength: "My determination — if I decide to do something, I'm going to do it."

I'm happiest when: "I'm with my family."

Perfect vacation would be: "Spending the entire summer with my family on the beach — no worries and no work."

Favorite food: Chicken fried steak

Favorite kind of music: "Easy listening, country, rock — depends; music to fit my mood."

Volunteers are 'Banking on Midland' to recruit new Chamber members

A group of hardworking Chamber volunteers is kicking off the 1996 membership drive.

"Our theme is 'We're Banking on Midland,'" said drive chairman Joyce Reaves. "That means that we as business people are confident in Midland and our membership in the Chamber proves our commitment to our community."

Teams of volunteers will be calling on businesses from Feb. 12 - 22 about joining the Chamber. "We encourage business people to call us at 683-3381 first and find out about the benefits of being a member," Ms. Reaves said.

"We stress the benefits to the community first," Ms. Reaves said. "Because if Midland is to grow, we must have a strong Chamber working in economic development, the visitor industry and community development. Most business people want to be successful and give something back to the community where they earn a living. There are also direct benefits to the Chamber member, especially in small business networking opportunities.

'We stress the benefits to the community ... Most business people want to be successful and give something back to the community where they earn a living.'

— Joyce Reaves, membership drive chairman

"I'm sure many businesses also appreciate the free quarter-page ad they receive in the Midland Chamber Business Journal, published monthly by the Midland Reporter-Telegram."

In addition to Ms. Reaves, the drive's steering committee includes Terry Phillips, Debbie Bergen, Kathy Blackman, Dolores Higginbotham, Sara St. Clair, Gloria Bowens, Phyllis Stepp, Jeff Hansard, Grace Graham, Vicky Hailey, Michael Cowen, Dahna Hull, Brenda Riley, Ken Williamson and Clawson Pipkin.

President's Club Top Achiever

Bill Moler wins for December

Moler

Long-time Chamber volunteer Bill Moler of A-1 Office Service took the Chamber's President's Club Top Achiever honors for December.

In addition to his President's Club participation, Moler also is a veteran member of the M-Squad, the Chamber ambassadors. He also takes part in Confederate Air Force projects.

Also active as President's Club volunteers in December were Debbie Bergen with the CashBack Card, Grace Graham with Grace Graham Advertising, Brandi Hill with the Midland Chamber Business Journal, Kathy Churchill with Farmer's Insurance, community volunteer Francine Weaver, Dora Clardy with Bank One, Scott Foster with AT&T and Robert Curtis with CMI.

The President's Club is the Midland Chamber's volunteer committee for membership recruitment and retention. Each month volunteers meet to discuss their efforts to invite businesses to be a part of Midland's oldest continuously active business organization.

If you know of a business that would benefit from a higher profile in the community through Chamber membership, please let the Chamber know.

For more information about the President's Club or Chamber membership, call Jane Inskeep at the Chamber, 683-3381.

Business Journal offers several advertising opportunities, sales representative says

The Midland Chamber Business Journal offers several advertising opportunities, according to Brandi Hill, sales representative.

More than 30,000 readers receive the Business Journal the first Sunday of each month. An additional 1,500 to 2,000 Midland Chamber members have the Business Journal mailed directly to their office or shop.

Editorial material revolves around local business news, including the economy and Chamber of Commerce activities.

Advertisers can pinpoint their marketing in this business-to-business publication.

"Our Focal Point color ads are very effective," Ms. Hill said. "They are available in full page or half-page sizes. That's enough space to run a large photo and still provide details about the company's products or services."

Other less expensive ads are also available.

"We can design an ad to suit your budget," Ms. Hill said. "That means everything from a full page down to one of our business card ads."

Ms. Hill said that a new feature of business card advertising will be unveiled in the March Business Journal.

'We can design an ad to suit your budget ... everything from a full page down to one of our business card ads.'
— Brandi Hill

"We're creating a classified business card section," she said. "This makes it much easier for the reader to find the appropriate vendor."

One of the value-packed advertising opportunities is through a joint Reporter-Telegram/Chamber project.

"Businesses that join the Chamber for the first time receive a free quarter-page ad in the Business Journal," Ms. Hill said. "That's a super way for a business to gain exposure at virtually no cost."

For more information about advertising in the Business Journal, contact Brandi Hill at 520-0564.

Poems Ink

Custom poems for all occasions

Business people: I can write a custom message for the next batch of Seasonal Cards you send to your customers and I can write a Poem of Appreciation for your secretary for Secretary's Day.

*Everyone has special days in their lives that they celebrate. Birthday poems are nice anytime, but especially when it is a significant number (16, 21, 30, 40, 80, 90, etc.) *When was the last time you told a parent or grandparent how much you loved them or appreciated something they had done for you? A poem is a touching and permanent reminder. * How many years have you been married? Anniversary Poem.

*Valentine's Day * Mother's Day * Father's Day * Baby's Birth * Birthday * Anniversary * Wedding Day * Secretary's Day * Grandparent's Day * Thanksgiving * Christmas * EveryDay *

*Tell a friend how much you appreciate the friendship.

*Thank someone for doing something nice for you.

*Tell your child or children you're glad they're here.

*Tell your child's teacher thanks for a great year.

SIPES to host seminar for earth scientists

The Midland Chapter of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists (SIPES) will host a one-day seminar Feb. 28 entitled "How to Survive and Prosper as an Independent Earth Scientist."

The Small Business Development Center (SBDC) of the University of Texas will co-host the event, set for 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification (CEED).

Session II: Major Company Restructuring — Downsizing, Outsourcing, Asset Rationalization, etc.; What Does All This "Majorspeak" Mean to the Independent?

Session III: Environmental Consideration of Acquisitions and Divestitures; So the Cows are Starting to Glow in the Dark, Whose Ox gets Gored?

Session IV: Is there Really any Money Out There for an Independent that is Honest and Knowledgeable but All He's Got Going is a Winning Smile and the Yen to Win?

Cost is $60 a person. A social hour will follow the sessions.

Contact the SBDC at 552-2456 or David Griffin at 687-1042 for registration information.

'Finance Your Business' workshop is planned

The Networking Breakfasts for minority-owned, woman-owned and all small businesses continue to attract business people interested in buying, selling and learning how to be successful.

Special themes chosen for each month augment the breakfasts.

Four dates have been set aside to spotlight certain business sectors.

During other meetings, a speaker or expert panel addresses a topic of interest to the business community.

On other dates, a workshop follows the breakfast to help small business owners learn more about running a successful business.

A free workshop following the Feb. 20 Networking Breakfast is "Finance Your Business."

Featured presenter is Armando Garcia, senior loan officer with the Small Business Administration Lubbock office.

"We thank Mike Marshall and Bank One for their sponsorship of this workshop and to Karl Painter of the UTPB SBDC for arranging the event," said Bruce Partain, Midland Chamber communications manager.

"We were encouraged by the response to our first special event of 1996," Partain said. "Pat Swindle of Dual Connections and Margaret Livingston of the Texas Employment Commission did an excellent job as presenters in January at the workshop 'Hiring the Right Employee.'"

The networking breakfast runs from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m., and the workshop from 8:45 to 10:30 a.m.

All Networking Breakfasts take place at the Midland College Roadrunner Room, Scharbauer Student Center.

Cost is $5 for breakfast. The meetings are open to everyone.

The breakfast will still include opportunities for business people to identify themselves and meet purchasers.

Karl Painter at the UTPB Small Business Development Center is compiling the next edition of the Minority and Woman-Owned Business Directory.

"We are also including purchasing profiles of companies that wish to buy from these historically underutilized businesses," he said.

To be included in the directory, contact Painter at 552-2457.

The Networking Breakfasts and the directory are joint projects of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, the Citizens Coalition and the Small Business Development Centers of Midland College and UTPB.

Here's the 1996 Networking Breakfast schedule to date:

The Paper Clip: For every office's supply needs

Every office needs supplies, no matter how large or small the company. What makes the difference to every company, regardless of size, is where they purchase their supplies.

Price, service, inventory and personnel all make a big difference to consumers and The Paper Clip is an obvious choice for many.

Located at 1201 S. Big Spring St. in Midland, The Paper Clip has been serving local businesses since the early 1970s and they are commemorating their 25th anniversary this month.

To help celebrate their quarter century of operations, John Lewallen, the manager of The Paper Clip, is announcing a store-wide sale. "Everything, straight across the board, will be at least 25 percent off," he said.

The anniversary sale will cover their new and used business furniture inventory as well as the full range of office stationary and supplies.

With approximately 10,000 square feet of warehouse space full of used furniture such as desks, chairs and filing cabinets, local businesses have a superb choice of furniture at extremely competitive prices.

As well as offering a wide selection of used furniture, The Paper Clip is also an authorized dealer for the prestigious Hon line of office furniture.

Another area in which The Paper Clip excels is in hard-to-find items such as speciality folders, hardback post binders and legal accessories.

A full-service company, The Paper Clip prides itself on customer service, flexibility and professionalism. This ethos manifests itself in customer-friendly solutions such as business accounts and free delivery on all orders.

In addition to their in-house stock of computer supplies, hardware and accessories, The Paper Clip has the ability to fulfill virtually any order through its resources and connections with other companies and catalogs.

For more information about The Paper Clip and its wide range of products and services, call John Lewallen or the staff at 682-5251 or 570-6699 (metro line) or fax them at 682-3374.

Volunteer of the month

Gilkerson backs education program

Editor's note: Each month the Midland Chamber Business Journal will spotlight a person whose volunteer efforts for the Midland Chamber are exemplary.

The Chamber's Education Combination program has many supporters. Among the most perservering is G Ernest Gilkerson.

Gilkerson

For the past five years, Gilkerson has been like a rock for the program — ever-present and hard to wear down.

His dedication to the concept of a quality education for all students who want to learn has kept the program vital and have encouraged others to join in the concept that "It takes a entire community to educate a child."

Gilkerson served on the Chamber's board of directors, including a stint as vice chairman of Community Development in 1991-92.

He is a Univerity of Texas graduate with degrees in both business and law. A U S Army veteran, he is now president of Midland Oil and Gas Inc.

A Midlander since 1979, Gilkerson has served on the boards of First Christian Church, Hospice, Community and Senior Services, Teen Court, the Permian Basin Graduate Center and several MISD committees.

He lectures at the graduate genter on legal and land matters relating to the oil and gas business.

Gilkerson and his wife Victoria have two daughters and a son. He enjoys golf, travel and mountain camping.

Jaycees cook up spicy celebration

The hard-working, fun-loving Midland Jaycees have cooked up another spicy, musical and colorful Mardi Gras celebration.

Mardi Gras 96 is Feb. 15-18 at Midland Center and Centennial Plaza.

Thursday, Feb. 15

A new twist this year is the Duke's Party, 6:30 p.m. to midnight at Jazz - a Louisiana Kitchen, 2215 N. Midland Drive, No. 2A.

Cajun food samples, live jazz and all-night drink specials are scheduled.

Saturday, Feb. 17

Mardi Gras features one of Midland's largest parades, with more than 75 noisy, colorful entries —definitely a good alternative to Saturday morning cartoons. The parade beginning at 10 a.m., travels from Dennis the Menace Park via Wall Street, east to Centennial Plaza and Main Street.

The Cajun Cook-off takes place from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Centennial Plaza. Teams from across the area compete for prizes as judges determine who has the best West Texas Cajun food.

An arts and crafts show is set up from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Midland Center. There is no admission charged. At the plaza from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m., there will be continuous entertainment — including clowns, balloons and children's games. Food and drink are available.

Capping off Saturday is a 7 p.m. to midnight street dance at Centennial Plaza. Admission is $7.50 a person in advance or $10 at the door. Jazz, blues and rock are on the musical agenda and a large tent will be set up to ward off cool weather. Refreshments and beer will be available.

Street dance tickets are available at Midland Center, Regency Cleaners and Jazz.

Sunday, Feb. 18

The free arts and crafts show continues from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.
