Miami ISD approves budget cuts

By J. ALAN BRZYS
Staff Writer

MIAMI — After lengthy discussion complicated by the recently passed school finance reform plan, school board members voted Monday night to slash approximately $100,000 in current school costs from the proposed 1991-92 Miami Independent School District budget.

Budget cuts are expected to be realized in professional and para-professional salary cuts, teacher attrition, one-time budget items and other "as-needed" areas.

School board members, during the five-hour session, questioned the viability of establishing a school budget while facing uncertain demands placed on school districts by the Legislature's school finance reform plan.

The Miami ISD is one of 37 school districts funding a planned lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the school finance reform bill. The lawsuit is expected to be filed Friday in Travis County District Court. School board members Charles Byrum and Ken Gill are expected to represent the MISD in Austin Friday.

Byrum, at the beginning of the marathon session, was elected president of the board to replace Charles Clark, who remains on the board.

The board spent nearly three hours in open session discussing how to establish a 1991-92 school budget without affecting the quality of education.

In a consensus board opinion, MISD faces raising the tax rate in the coming years to maintain quality education and comply with state-mandated requirements.

Schools Superintendent Allan Dinsmore opened budgetary discussion by outlining areas of possible cuts.

Dinsmore suggested across-the-board cuts for professional and para-professional school staff amounting to $18,000, which would show residents that teachers and school personnel "are willing to do their part" to maintain a quality school program. Dinsmore would take a $1,000 cut.

He said approximately $26,000 could be saved by not replacing a teacher who recently resigned, and approximately $28,000, spent on computer equipment, band uniforms and other items for the current year, could be saved because they were one-time expenditures.

Dinsmore also pointed out that $23,000 could be saved by eliminating a custodial and a secretarial position.

Board member Tom Henderson said he'd like to see the school cafeteria become a "paying proposition."

The annual operating cost of the cafeteria is $80,000 and revenue received is $40,000, accounting for a $40,000 deficit.

Dinsmore said, "We'd have to double the revenue to make the cafeteria pay."

After lengthy discussion concerning areas to be cut, Trustee Steve Hale summed up the options and said, "I screamed for cuts, but I don't know where the line is."

Newly elected board member Tom Grantham said the "line is going to move," and added, "I think there's safety where you (the board)

School reform challenge to be filed Friday

AUSTIN — A lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of recently passed school finance reform legislation is expected to be filed Friday in Travis County District Court in behalf of a consortium of school districts.

As of this morning, 37 school districts have pledged support to the Budget Balanced Schools Association litigation fund, according to Roy Harris, BBSA president. He said pledges "are coming in every day."

Harris, who is also superintendent of Pringle-Morse Independent School District, said in a telephone interview this morning that the Association's attorney will be filing the lawsuit Friday in behalf of the school districts.

"We're challenging the constitutionality of it (the Legislature's plan)," said Harris.

"We (representatives of the schools) are meeting with the attorney (Jim George) Friday," said Harris. "All will be finalized at that time."

The association is acting as an administrative vehicle for the school districts which are challenging the school finance reform plan passed by the Legislature in April, according to Harris. The individual school districts are expected to be named in the suit.

The plan, described as the Robin Hood approach to financing, calls for money from wealthy school districts to be distributed to poor districts.

It would cost the state $1.3 billion over two years and shift hundreds of millions of dollars in local property tax from wealthier to poorer school districts.

The Texas Supreme Court twice had unanimously ordered lawmakers to reform the school finance system.

Area school districts contributing to the litigation fund include Canadian ISD, Kelton ISD, Miami ISD, Allison ISD, Lefors ISD, Pringle-Morse ISD, Highland Park (Amarillo) ISD and Grandview-Hopkins ISD.

All school districts participating except one are contributing $10,000 each toward legal fees which have been estimated at $200,000.

At a BBSA meeting held April 30 in Austin, it was decided legal action would be pursued if a minimum of 28 school districts — a majority of the 54-member Association — committed by May 15 to financing the action. Thirty-three schools had committed to the legal action as of May 10.

Several school districts not belonging to the BBSA also have joined in the lawsuit, according to Harris.

"We've had some inquiries from other schools ... asking if they could participate," said Harris. He explained that some of the non-BBSA schools indicated they feared retaliation if they joined in the litigation.

The list of members of the BBSA litigation fund also includes Carroll ISD, Crane ISD, Crockett County CSD, Denver City ISD, Glen Rose ISD, Groesbeck ISD, Hunt ISD, Iraan-Sheffield ISD, Loop ISD, Matagorda ISD, Palacios ISD, Refugio ISD, Seminole ISD, Sterling City ISD, Sudan ISD, Sunray ISD, Tatum ISD, Wellman ISD, Westbrook ISD, Whiteface CISD, Wink-Loving ISD, Plemons-Stinnett-Phillips CISD, McMullen County ISD, Dawson ISD, Austwell-Tivoli ISD, Port Aransas ISD, Hawkins ISD, Laga Vista ISD and Andrews ISD.

The sentencing ended a three-month trial that could have political repercussions in South Africa, where the ANC and the government are negotiating on the future of the country and its apartheid policies.

Nelson Mandela said today he was confident his wife would successfully appeal the decision. He said he always believed she was innocent of assault and that she did not know people were being held at her home.

"The last word in this regard has not been spoken," the black opposition leader told college students in Stellenbosch near Cape Town.

Mandela, already under fire from hard-liners, may now find it even more difficult to continue his efforts to reach accommodation with the government. Mrs. Mandela is a leading radical in the ANC, and her supporters are likely to spurn talks with the government following a verdict they will see as politically inspired.

Lefors hires city marshal; council members sworn in

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

LEFORS — Lefors City Council unanimously voted Monday during a regular meeting to hire a night watchman with the Shamrock Police Department as the new Lefors city marshal.

In other business, three council members — Wendell Akins, Derl Boyd and Pat Seely — took the oath of office. And Lefors ISD Superintendent Ed Gilliland made a plea to the council to help in the fight to save the school.

Max Kellison, 49, was hired as the new city marshal. He said this morning in a telephone interview that he plans to accept the job, which will begin June 1.

Kellison said he has 6 1/2 years of law enforcement experience, most of that in Oklahoma.

Twenty applications for the $1,600 a month job were received with seven applicants being interviewed, Mayor Gene Gee said.

Gray County pays $1,000 of the salary with the city of Lefors picking up the remaining $600. The city also supplies a radio and a light bar. The city marshal provides his own vehicle, his uniform and other equipment.

Kellison was born in Hollis Okla., and graduated from high school in the Ron community, north of Hollis. He became a certified law enforcement officer in Oklahoma in the mid-70s. He has worked as a truck driver for about 10 years before going to work for the Shamrock Police Department a year and four months ago.

He graduated April 13 from the law enforcement academy at Amarillo College and holds the basic certificate from the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education.

Kellison said he applied for the Lefors city marshal job because he likes a small town and wanted a chance for advancement. "I had been through that part of the country quite a bit and I liked it. I also don't like big (police) departments and never have."

Kellison is married to Ruby; she is currently employed as an X-ray technician at Shamrock Hospital.

They have one son, Tim, 12, at home. Kellison also has a son, Max Jr., who resides in Shamrock, and a daughter, Suizette Close, who resides in Enid, Okla.

In unrelated business, the votes from the May 4 election were canvassed and accepted. One vote was thrown out, due to a person living outside the city limits voting. However, the vote did not change the outcome of the election, Gee told the council.

Incumbents Akins and Boyd were re-elected and Seely was elected to take the position formerly occupied by longtime councilman Ben White, who chose not to seek re-election.

Gee said of White, "I'd like to give a special thank-you to Ben White for the time he's spent in service of Lefors."

Speaking on the welfare of the city of Lefors, Gilliland said he is pushing for the city and school getting together and sponsoring a work day and clean up day for Lefors. He said the clean up is the first step to take to try to correct the overall problem facing the city and its school system.

Because Lefors ISD is considered a rich school district, the new school finance bill would shift some of the district's money to poorer school districts. Gilliland said he can keep the school open under the new finance bill for two more years, with a number of budget cuts, including trimming $129,000 from the 1991-92 school year's $1.1 million budget.

Lefors ISD is one of 37 school districts as of late Monday that had voted to contribute $10,000 each in an attempt to fight a legal battle against the new school finance bill — Senate Bill 351.

"Senate Bill 351 has been called a devil. We know what she looks like and we know she's not any good for the most part. It's going to close a lot of schools in the state of Texas. Some will shut down immediately. Others can stay open one, two three years or more. We're fighting for our survival."

Gilliland said that one way for the Lefors ISD to stay alive is to get 300 students enrolled. Lefors schools now have 150 students.

Lefors council continues trash collection talk

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

LEFORS — Lefors City Council talked trash Monday night.

The issue of closing the landfill and discussing who will take over the collection of residents' solid waste has been talked about at several meetings in recent months.

At Monday's meeting, Councilman Larry Fulton presented a challenge to the City Council regarding trash collection.

Fulton is of the opinion that the city can take over the trash collection business and make money with the operation and cost the residents less than if a private contractor was to take over the collection.

There has been a proposal from

BFI, a private contractor, to bring dumpsters into the city and charge a set rate of $10.50 a month per household. A landfill fee of $2.50 per household would likely be kept on the bill as well, no matter who collects the trash.

Fulton said he would volunteer his time, gasoline, equipment and work to demonstrate to the city how a trash collection system could work. He said he would get the program running and do all of the collection for a 60-day period. The city would handle the billing of the city residents, the collection of the money and paying the city of Pampa to dispose of the waste in its landfill.

To avoid a conflict of interest, because he sits on the council, Fulton explained he could not receive any payment for collecting the trash or setting up the program.

He said he talked to an attorney with the Texas Municipal League who said there should be no conflict of interest as long as Fulton received no payment for his services and did the project on a volunteer basis.

"The city's not going to be out anything (during the two-month trial period). If it's a flop, I'm going to flop and not the city," Fulton said.

In the councilman's proposal is an incentive for residents who separate recyclable items, including plastics, glass, tin cans and aluminum cans.

Winnie Mandela sentenced to six years in jail on kidnapping conviction

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A judge today sentenced Winnie Mandela, wife of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, to six years in jail after finding her guilty of kidnapping and being an accessory to assault.

Justice M.S. Stegmann rejected defense requests for a suspended sentence but later freed her on bail while her attorneys seek permission for an appeal. The judge, who convicted her Monday, said today that she showed a "complete absence of compassion."

Two co-defendants were also convicted in the case.

About 300 people outside the courthouse reacted angrily to the sentence. They shouted ANC slogans and waved banners saying, "Stop harassing our mother Winnie Mandela!" Riot police with two armored vehicles moved in, but there was no immediate confrontation.

The sentencing ended a three-month trial that could have political repercussions in South Africa, where the ANC and the government are negotiating on the future of the country and its apartheid policies.

Nelson Mandela said today he was confident his wife would successfully appeal the decision. He said he always believed she was innocent of assault and that she did not know people were being held at her home.

"The last word in this regard has not been spoken," the black opposition leader told college students in Stellenbosch near Cape Town.

Mandela, already under fire from hard-liners, may now find it even more difficult to continue his efforts to reach accommodation with the government. Mrs. Mandela is a leading radical in the ANC, and her supporters are likely to spurn talks with the government following a verdict they will see as politically inspired.

Stegmann sentenced Mrs. Mandela to five years in jail for the four counts of kidnapping and one year in jail for being an accessory after the fact to assault. The sentences are to run consecutively.

Mrs. Mandela and co-defendants stared blankly at the judge as they stood in the dock to hear the sentence. The packed courtroom was hushed as the judge delivered the verdict.

"There has been no indication that any of you feels the slightest remorse," Stegmann told the defendants.

Saying that liberty is one of life's most precious possessions, he added, "It seems to me the three of you cannot have been unaware of the weakness of your victims."

The defendants abducted four young men from a Methodist Church home in December 1988 and beat them at Mrs. Mandela's home in the black township of Soweto, prosecutors said. One of the victims, 15-year-old Stompie Seipei, was killed after the assaults.

After the judge read the sentence, a woman in the court cried out, "Mother of the nation! We love you! We are with you, Winnie!" Mrs. Mandela is often called Mother of the Nation by her followers.

The judge sentenced co-defendant Xoliswa Falati to six years in jail — four years for kidnapping and two years for assault. He also rejected defense pleas for a suspended sentence for Ms. Falati.

A third defendant, John Morgan, received a one-year suspended sentence for kidnapping.

Nelson Mandela, was in prison during the 1988 kidnapping. He had spent 27 years in prison, serving a life sentence for plotting sabotage to overthrow the white government. He was freed in February 1990 after worldwide pressure on the government to release him.

The judge agreed to release Mrs. Mandela on $70 bail while her attorneys sought permission from the nation's attorney general or Court of Appeals to have the verdict and sentencing appealed. It could take months for a decision on whether to grant permission, during which time Mrs. Mandela can remain free on bail.

Carson commissioners review policies for ranchers to dispose of dead cattle

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

PANHANDLE — Carson County Commissioners Court on Monday reviewed proper procedures for ranchers to dispose of dead cattle.

Commissioners said there is a problem with cattle being left to rot on the side of public roads.

County Judge Jay Roselius reminded the court that any rancher with dead cattle should immediately notify Hereford By-Products for removal of the carcass within 24 hours.

However, the court was told that if the animal had not been removed within that time period, it becomes the responsibility of the owner to secure proper disposal.

Commissioners pointed out that legal action could be taken against livestock owners who leave dead cattle near roadways for county disposal.

Discussion of the issue was preceded by a rise in the number of dead animals being left beside county and state roads, officials said.

In other business, commissioners agreed to accept bids for repair of 4,000 feet of asphalt road in Precinct 1, located in Groom.

They also discussed future repair of damaged asphalt in Precinct 4, which includes White Deer.

Roselius asked commissioners to prepare a list of the number of signs needed for upcoming naming of county roads.

The plan, which is set to correspond with a new 26-county 911 emergency system, will number or letter all unmarked county roads for quicker service by emergency responders.

Commissioners also appointed Jean Cox to the War Memorial Board, which coordinates usage and rules for the War Memorial Building, located in Panhandle.

The facility is used by a variety of civic organizations, charities and other groups for meetings and special activities.

Cox replaces board member Agnes Howe, who recently died.

The court also approved a request by Paul Fields to cross a county road with irrigation pipe in Precinct 1.

Commissioners also read a letter from District Attorney David McCoy regarding the use of drug seizure money in the 100th Judicial District.

McCoy told the court the money will be used for equipment in the DA's office and a variety of different training seminars.

Roselius and the court agreed to set their next meeting for Friday, May 24, since the regular meeting schedule would call for the next date to fall on Monday, May 27, which is Memorial Day.

Miami

and its budgets) have been."

"When you cut a salary, it's gone forever," said Grantham. He suggested it would be more advantageous to cut piecemeal than by cutting an entire salary made available by the recent resignation of a teacher.

Clark said, "I'm for cutting as small an amount as we can."

Thompson said, "We know we've got to trim the fat somewhere. We know we're going to have to raise taxes."

Board member Ken Gill said, "We need to show support to our taxpayers." Gill said he was in favor of making cuts "where we can," but insisted it is important to maintain a quality educational program.

A teacher in the audience said she would not mind the teacher salary cuts as long as the cuts were "proportional." She said teachers would not be happy if the cuts were not proportional.

After a two-hour executive session, the board voted unanimously to make the approximately $100,000 budget cut, which would be made through teacher attrition, non re-occurring budget items, salaries and other "as needed" areas, according to Dinsmore.

In another unanimous decision, the board agreed to personnel salary cuts.

"Most teachers will take a $540 cut, but with the step increase mandated by law, they will be making more," explained Dinsmore. "It's strictly across-the-board on instructional contracts."

Dinsmore said all para-professionals, including aides, secretarial and custodial staff and bus drivers, will be cut $270 per year.

"The superintendent's salary will be cut $1,000," said Dinsmore of his salary.

The board will review teachers' proposed budgets at a special session called for 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Lefors ISD school board to hold meeting tonight

LEFORS — Lefors Independent School District Board of Trustees will meet in regular session at 7 p.m. today and discuss several items affecting the next school year and also elect officers of the board.

Four people — incumbents Charlie Sullivan and Garrel Roberson and newcomers Ron Turpen and Nora Franks — will be sworn into office following the May 4 election and canvassing of the votes at a special meeting last week.

Other items on the agenda include discussion of the 1991-92 school calendar and 1991-92 Region XVI contracts. The County Education District and its impact on the 1991-92 school year will also be discussed.

Lunch prices for the 1991-92 school year will be discussed as well as transfer students for the next school year.

The board is also scheduled to go into closed session to discuss personnel assignments for the 1991-92 school year.

Other items on the agenda include: approve minutes of previous monthly meetings; approve and pay monthly expenditures; amend the 1990-91 budget; accept resignations of professional personnel; and the superintendent's report.

The meeting, to be held in the elementary school library, is open to the public.

Trash

"I think it's real important we find something to do with glass, plastics and tin. The markets are good enough to start utilizing other than to transfer ours to another landfill," Fulton said. "As far as I know, no where in the Panhandle is it being done (on a citywide basis)."

"The only way I can prove it to you that it will work is to actually do it," Fulton told the Council of why he was presenting the challenge of collecting the trash and trying to get a recyclable program going.

"One of our goals should be to eliminate the need for a landfill no matter whether here or Pampa," Fulton said. "It's cheaper to take recyclable items to Amarillo (and receive money for them) than to take them to the Pampa landfill (and receive no money)," he said.

For the city to collect its own trash and for the program to work, the city must first close its landfill and establish an ordinance making it illegal to burn because the city of Pampa landfill prohibits dumping of burned trash.

The City Council heard from a representative of the Texas Health Department at an earlier meeting this year of the importance of closing the city's landfill. New federal regulations could be implemented at any time that would make keeping Lefors' landfill open a disaster, officials said.

If the city closes the landfill before the federal regulations go into effect, it will still have to monitor the landfill for five years as well as abide by a number of other regulations. If the city waits until the federal regulations are implemented before closing its landfill, it would likely be required to monitor the landfill for 30 years and abide by numerous more stringent and costly regulations.

Mayor Gene Gee, agreeing about the urgent need to close the landfill said, "It's gone beyond our capability to keep that landfill open."

Gee also worded a motion, which was made by Derl Boyd and seconded by Pat Seely to place on the next agenda to initiate the procedure to close the landfill, draft and adopt an ordinance banning burning and accept Fulton's challenge as a feasibility study for the trash removal process.

Police arrest two on drug charges

Two people were arrested late Monday morning during a drug raid on a room at the Coronado Inn, Pampa police revealed today.

Christopher Turlington, 18, who has no known address, and Jennifer Leah Cox, 22, 1105 S. Dwight, were arrested during the raid, which occurred at 11:50 a.m.

Deputy Chief Ken Hall said police received a Crime Stoppers tip notifying them drugs were being used in the room.

After securing a search warrant from Justice of the Peace Bob Muns, police entered the room and reportedly found a small quantity of marijuana in the possession of Turlington, as well as drug paraphernalia on the person of Cox.

In addition, Cox was also charged with criminal mischief following an inspection of the room by Coronado Inn management.

Police said the room was registered in her name and suffered up to $750 damage during the time the couple were checked into the hotel.

Cox was also arrested on two warrants for assault stemming from previous complaints filed against her by local citizens.

Both remained in city jail through press time today awaiting arraignment.

Congressman seeks to put Pantex plant under independent board

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Albert Bustamante is seeking to put the Pantex nuclear weapons plant under the oversight of an independent board in an attempt to remedy worker safety problems and improve chances for expansion.

"Pantex has a tremendous (safety) problem that we need to address," Bustamante said in a recent interview.

The San Antonio Democrat said he would offer an amendment to defense legislation on the House floor this month to put Pantex, the nation's only final assembly point for nuclear bombs and missile warheads, under the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board.

Bustamante said improving safety at Pantex by putting it under the board's jurisdiction may also help the plant win thousands of jobs from the DOE's Rocky Flats plant near Denver as part of a reorganization of the nuclear weapons complex.

Bustamante, a member of both the House Armed Services subcommittee on defense nuclear facilities and the Government Operations subcommittee on energy, said he hoped the Energy Department would "cooperate" and no longer resist putting Pantex under the board's jurisdiction.

Energy Department spokeswoman Debbie Smith said Monday that the agency had no immediate comment on Bustamante's plans.

Pantex was excluded from the board's oversight when it was established by Congress in 1988, for security reasons and because health and safety problems had not surfaced, the General Accounting Office said in a recent report.

The GAO, however, said Congress may want to reconsider the decision because of persistent health and safety problems at the plant.

GAO's investigation found Pantex has one of the worst occupational safety records in the DOE weapons complex, while a DOE team had earlier uncovered significant deficiencies in the plant's radiation protection program.

"The best thing is for it to come under the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board," Bustamante said.

"The big problem is worker safety, and we're concerned about that, especially if we're going to attract Rocky Flats (missions)."

According to Texas officials, Pantex could pick up 2,000 to 10,000 jobs by taking over duties from Rocky Flats.

An expansion at Pantex could also mean up to $2.2 billion worth of construction at the Panhandle facility, according to Rep. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo.

Sarpalius and Texas Attorney General Dan Morales have also endorsed placing Pantex under the safety board's jurisdiction.

"Oversight by the (board) will ensure the necessary independent external oversight of Pantex and will thus ensure that current and future Pantex operations be carried out in a safe and environmentally sound manner," Morales said recently.

And in light of the GAO report, Morales said, "it clearly appears that Pantex no longer deserves its special exempt status from oversight, oversight which would do much to protect workers and others at Pantex."

Pantex, with approximately 2,500 workers, is the Amarillo area's second-largest employer.

Evidence of problems at the World War II-era plant first surfaced in late 1989, when a DOE team of experts said it had found significant health, safety and environmental deficiencies.

The experts concluded Pantex would be unable to respond effectively to emergencies involving releases of radioactive material, and that the plant was not adequately monitoring its impact on the underlying Ogallala aquifer. The Ogallala is practically the only source of drinking water for Texas' largest irrigated farming region.

Since the "Tiger Team" review, DOE and the Pantex contractor, Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Co. Inc., have taken action to improve safety guidelines and training for radiation staff, GAO said.

Committee OKs bill for King's birthday

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards said she backs legislation to honor slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. with a full state holiday.

"I'm totally in support of that. I always have been," Richards said.

"I think it would be very foolish for us to lose conventions and events here as a consequence of not doing that. But even before that was an issue, I supported that as a holiday," she said.

The House State Affairs Committee unanimously approved a bill Monday that would substitute Martin Luther King Jr. Day for Columbus Day as a full, paid holiday for state workers.

Rep. Ron Wilson, House sponsor of the bill, has said there would be an effort to bar the Super Bowl from Texas if the measure does not become law.

National Football League owners are considering awarding the 1995 Super Bowl to Houston, New Orleans, Miami or Tampa. A decision is expected next year.

Phoenix lost the right to host the 1993 Super Bowl after Arizona voters rejected a state holiday honoring King. State Affairs Committee Chairman Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, said lawmakers were not influenced by the threat of losing the Super Bowl.

Currently, Texas makes King's birthday an optional state holiday, combined with Confederate Heroes Day. A bill to create a separate King holiday has passed the Senate.

Under Wilson's bill, King's birthday would be observed on the third Monday in January in Texas, coinciding with the national holiday. The bill would maintain Jan. 19 as Confederate Heroes Day.

Deleting Columbus Day, observed the second Monday in October, would prevent any increased cost to the state, said Wilson, D-Houston.

Absentee voting starts in Alanreed ISD runoff

ALANREED — Absentee voting by personal appearance is under way in a runoff election for a three-year term on the board of trustees between Dick H. Bode and Billy Riley.

Registered voters in the Alanreed Independent School District who want to vote in the runoff can vote absentee in person on weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. through May 28 at the school business office.

Applications for ballot by mail should be mailed to Superintendent Billy B. Adams, Box B, Alanreed, Texas 79002. Applications for ballots by mail must be received no later than the close of business on May 24.

Regular voting for the runoff between Bode and Riley will be from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on June 1 at the Alanreed School cafeteria.

Concealed handgun bill approved by state Senate

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — With Congress considering a law to make it more difficult to buy a handgun, the state Senate went the other direction, passing a bill that would allow Texans to carry concealed handguns.

"Maybe the rest of the nation is out of step with Texas," the bill's sponsor, Sen. Gene Green, said Monday.

But Green, D-Houston, said there is no relation between his bill and the federally debated Brady bill, which would require a week-long waiting period for handgun purchases.

Green says the concealed handgun bill would give law-abiding citizens a chance to fight back at crime.

"People are scared to go outside their homes. This would give the people the ability to go through the training, satisfy the requirements and still be able to protect themselves," he said.

But Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, a former policeman, said the measure would lead to more violence.

"A handgun is generally an instrument of death. To let just anybody have a pistol is a serious problem. It subjects a lot of people to needless dangers," he said.

Lyon, a policeman for five years in Mesquite, said law enforcement groups opposed the bill, and noted the Senate was debating the measure the same day a memorial was held at the Capitol for law officers killed in the line of duty.

The bill goes to the House, where Green said it stood a good chance of passage.

Gov. Ann Richards said she was undecided about the measure. "I don't know what the rationale is. I'll be happy to look at it."

"Any bill has to say to me 'It's going to make Texans better off, in their health, their safety, their education or their workplace.' I don't know whether this bill meets that standard," she said.

Lyon attempted to amend the bill to make applicants for a concealed handgun take a psychological test, but that effort failed 13-16.

He said the amendment would have taken the "wild, wild West" out of the proposal.

He said assassins Lee Harvey Oswald and Sirhan Sirhan, and attempted assassin John Hinckley would probably have been able to get a handgun under the measure.

But Green said the legislation has safeguards. License applicants would have to undergo gun training, and their past would be checked by the Texas Department of Public Safety. The review, he said, would take about four months.

Lyon managed to add an amendment that would require a handgun license applicant to prove to the DPS that they needed to carry a concealed gun because they are in more danger than the general public.

Green said he accepted that amendment to avoid a filibuster of the bill by Lyon. Green said that any person who uses an automated teller machine at night would be eligible for a handgun under the amendment.

The Senate voted 23-7 to bring the bill up out of order, and then passed the measure on a non-record, voice vote.

To be eligible for a license, a person would have to be 21 years of age and would have to be a lawful resident of the United States and a resident of Texas.

County to discuss redistricting

Plans for redistricting in Gray County is one of eight items on the agenda for the regular meeting Wednesday of the Gray County Commissioners Court.

Other items on the agenda include receiving bids for paving the road to the prison site and discussion of the procedure for notifying other fire departments of fires occurring in Gray County.

A proposal to lease office space to the Soil Conservation Service is also on the agenda, as is the consideration of transferring two hanger leases at Perry Lefors Field.

Routine items of paying salaries and bills, considering transfers and receiving the treasurer's report are also listed on the agenda.

The Commissioners Court meets at 9:30 a.m. in the second floor courtroom of the Gray County Courthouse. The meeting is open to the public.

MIAMI — Nearly 200 students, parents and teachers Monday night attended the Miami Independent School District annual band banquet.

Band director Dena Kidd presented awards during a ceremony held in the school auditorium following the banquet. Kidd congratulated band members for the success they achieved throughout the year, especially in UIL competition.

Lori Goodman and Ashlee Flowers were recipients of the prestigious John Philip Sousa Award, traditionally presented to upperclassmen in recognition of superior musicianship, leadership, dependability, loyalty and cooperation.

The David Tucker Memorial Award, given to outstanding girl and outstanding boy in the high school band, was presented to Tandy Thompson and Greg Kauk.

Honored as outstanding band members were Robbie Morris and Jim Simmans, marchers; Lori Goodman, woodwind; Ashlee Flowers, brass; Dee Ann Locke, low brass; and Carla Goodman, percussion.

Certificates of recognition to band members who demonstrated exceptional leadership and devotion were presented to Ashlee Flowers, Lori Goodman, James Hill, Carlo Lapka, Dee Ann Locke, Robbie Morris, Robin Rankin and Tandy Thompson.

Hugh Baxter, Julie Sullivan and Shantelle Wheeler were honored as junior high All-Region band members.

High school All-Region band selectees were Janet Byrum, Ashlee Flowers, Carla Goodman and Lori Goodman.

Selected as outstanding fifth grade band members were Niki Butler, woodwind; Erin Locke, brass; Angel Dunsworth, low brass; and Levi Lunsford, percussion.

Named as outstanding sixth grade band members were Christy Kennon, woodwind; Trent Mayberry, brass; Steven May, low brass; Danita Kauk, percussion; and Jody Mears, most improved.

Others band students honored included fifth graders Jennifer Bonnell, Niki Butler, Melanie South and Kelley Jo Whaley; and sixth graders Travis Blasingame, Jennifer Light, Steven May and Jared Neighbors.

State lawmakers attack prison overcrowding

AUSTIN (AP) — A plan to build prisons for 14,000 more inmates sailed through legislative committees, while lawmakers also attacked the prison overcrowding issue on the federal level.

The House on Monday approved a bill that would allow the prison system to exceed the current 95 percent limit, which has been set because of a federal court order against prison overcrowding.

Rep. John Culberson, R-Houston, said the bill would give the state flexibility "in light of the overcrowding of the county jails and in light of the tremendous public safety crisis that we're in the midst of."

The number of inmates could be increased if agreed to by the state criminal justice board, governor and attorney general.

The bill also would establish the maximum capacity for each prison unit, set up a procedure for allowing the units to exceed capacity and prohibit certain inmate housing situations such as tent housing.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance and House Criminal committees approved a plan to build 14,000 more prison beds, and limit state responsibility for accepting inmates from county jails.

The bill's author, Rep. Mark

Stiles, D-Beaumont, said the measure would cost from $400 million to $500 million.

Funding for the bill will be worked out during a July special session when lawmakers return to write the 1992-93 state budget, Stiles said. The state faces an estimated budget deficit of $4.6 billion.

The proposal would provide $11 million to solve immediate jail-crowding problems in county jails, and $40 million for counties establishing alternative sentencing programs.

The plan is aimed at settling lawsuits by several Texas counties over the cost of housing state prison inmates. A state district judge has ruled that the state must pay 12 counties for a backlog of thousands of prisoners, while a U.S. District Court has ordered the state to pay Harris County for housing state prisoners. The state is appealing both decisions.

Gov. Ann Richards said Texas needs more prisons, but added the problem is whether to build them with current tax dollars or loans backed by the state.

"My preference is bonding. I think the speaker (House Speaker Gib Lewis) prefers to take it out of general revenue, but one way or another it has to be done," she said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Blessed, it seems, are the capitalists

Pope John Paul II's new encyclical on economics might be summarized, "Blessed are the capitalists, for they provide food, shelter and medicine to everyone, especially the poor." Named Centesimus Annus (The Hundredth Year), it commemorates the 100th anniversary of Pope Leo XIII's encyclical Rerum Novarum (Of New Things), the first modern papal statement on economics.

What John Paul II's new encyclical does most remarkably is to develop the idea, implicit in his statements in recent years, that capitalism is the only moral economic system because only it preserves and promotes human freedom. Centesimus condemns socialism, which "controlled every aspect of economic life and restricted the free initiative of individuals." John Paul, of course, helped drive socialism from Central Europe.

The pope's many travels have shown him the true misery of poor people across the world, but have also shown him societies where the poor are being lifted up, such as South Korea and Mexico. These developing societies are, without exception, capitalist or moving toward it.

Pope John Paul II writes approvingly of "the legitimate role of profit." He rejects the "Welfare State" because it dulls human initiative, and imposes an "inordinate increase in public agencies ... dominated ... by bureaucratic ways of thinking" supported by "an enormous increase in spending."

John Paul has some criticisms of the abuses of capitalism. He calls for a stronger injection of morality into the system, leading to a "New Capitalism." He attacks capitalists whose workers are "humiliated and their dignity offended." This is not just "morally indefensible" but it also hurts "the firm's economic efficiency." He criticizes those who practice the "idolatry" of the market.

Even in his critique, John Paul suggests a deeper understanding of the nature of a free-market economy than some of its secular champions, like those radical followers of Ayn Rand and others who, having rejected the West's religious heritage, bow down to worship Mammon. A free market does, indeed, offer the possibility of great material benefits; but freedom is indivisible; economic freedom makes possible the political and personal freedoms that allow men to make moral choices, allow them to fulfill their transcendent natures. Freedom is a seamless garment, as John Paul II clearly understands.

How would John Paul II's encyclical work if it were enacted in America? The pope is telling Americans that statism—the idolatry of government—is immoral and violates freedom. Our welfare state should be radically scaled back, protectionist barriers removed, the government ejected from almost every area of life. Almost all the powers and functions of government would be given back to "the intermediate groups" of family, church, private charitable institutions, and so on, leading to "a society of free work, of enterprise and of participation."

Rights vs. human imagination

When two beluga whales show up on the shore of Lake Michigan, in a handsome facility designed to educate and inspire, the general reaction is bound to be one of celebration. Celebration is not going on among animal rights activists, who see in Chicago's new Oceanarium at the Shedd Aquarium not a heroic effort to make a display of living creatures as informative, humane and reverential as possible, but simply a hideous structure containing "jails for whales."

The British historian Thomas Macaulay said that the Puritans hated bearbaiting not because it gave pain to the bear but because it gave pleasure to the spectators. The same disdain for anything that appeals to ordinary human beings lurks in the small but noisy campaign against the Oceanarium, which opened to the public the last weekend in April.

An innovative building with a glass outer wall that gives the audience the impression of a seamless connection between its tanks and the lake, it houses dolphins, sea otters, penguins and seals—as well as the beluga whales, which are distinctive in their un-whalish size (about 14 feet long when fully grown) and in the arctic white color they develop by maturity.

I suppose someone might find the young Elizabeth Taylor unattractive, but only someone who finds all women unattractive. Likewise, it is impossible to dislike this facility without disliking it on principle.

It is not small, cramped, dirty, commercialized or undignified, unlike many zoos and marine parks. On the contrary, it could have been under the supervision of the Sierra Club, so fervent is it in cultivating respect and understanding for these creatures and their habitat.

Surrounding the water is an evocative replica of a Pacific Northwest rain forest. Exhibits explain the animals' physiology and behavior. The tanks in which the whales and other mammals live were designed to be not only spacious (3 million gallons) but stimulating, with a network of pools and tunnels that allow them to vary their scenery or to retire from view when they choose.

But no amount of education or care can satisfy animal rights groups, which object to the facility for one reason alone: It houses captured animals. One group says the whales and other mammals have been "sentenced to a lifetime of miserable confinement and early death ... Shedd's proposed captive-whale circus is not only disgusting but a monstrous crime!"

Shedd officials say the whales live longer in captivity than in the wild. Whether the confinement makes them miserable is unknowable. That leaves the crucial question: Are such exhibits inherently immoral?

They are if you think animals have individual rights, or if you think the harm they suffer from such displays outweighs any possible benefit they offer human beings. But if zoos and aquariums amount to an unconscionable injustice, so do almost all of the other uses people find for the lower species, from eating meat to riding horseback.

The Oceanarium has been picked for protests not because it is usually oppressive—the protests ignore the adjacent aquarium, which contains far more captive creatures—but because its residents are more lovable than other victims of supposed human exploitation. However, the animal rights agenda goes far beyond liberating a few whales and dolphins.

Critics snort at the need for such facilities, dismissing them as sterile sites for frivolous entertainment. Dale Jamieson, a philosophy professor at the University of Colorado, writes, "Couldn't most of the educational benefits of zoos be obtained by presenting films, slides, lectures and so forth? Indeed, couldn't most of the important educational objectives be achieved by exhibiting empty cages with explanations of why they are empty?"

As George Orwell said, there are ideas so absurd only an intellectual could believe them. Even if you could get people—people besides animal rights crusaders, that is—to visit Jamieson's ostentatiously empty cages, you couldn't teach half as much in 10 lectures as in one glimpse of an actual whale. People visit these places because they want to see something real with their own eyes.

The experience goes beyond mere education to something more intangible. People exposed to whales only through PBS documentaries preaching environmentalist dogma may learn a political commitment to such creatures, but they aren't likely to be enchanted by them. A child who grows up having visited only empty cages is not more likely to appreciate the beauty and mystery of wild creatures—or of life.

Like Orwell's vision of the world of 1984, a society cleansed of zoos and aquariums would be ideologically purer than ours. Like his, it would also be a drab monument to utopian zeal and a cemetery for the imagination.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, May 14, the 134th day of 1991. There are 231 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 14, 1948, the independent state of Israel was proclaimed in Tel Aviv as British rule in Palestine came to an end. The United States immediately recognized the new Jewish state.

On this date:

In 1787, delegates began gathering in Philadelphia for a convention to draw up the U.S. Constitution.

In 1796, English physician Edward Jenner administered the first vaccination against smallpox to an eight-year-old boy.

In 1804, the Lewis and Clark expedition to explore the Louisiana Territory left St. Louis.

In 1904, the first Olympic games to be held in the United States opened in St. Louis.

In 1942, the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps was established.

Heavy reading in Sunday paper

I was in Florida recently and bought a Sunday paper. Sunday papers are high on my list of favorite things, right up there with doctors who say, "Everything seems normal to me." You can savor a Sunday paper.

No need to rush through it as is often necessary with a weekday paper.

I've been known to read as many as three different Sunday papers.

Takes me half the day.

But I'm better off for it. I can speak intelligently to any current issue, and I get three separate editorial stances telling me how I should think.

But there are a couple of annoying trends I've been noticing in Sunday paper.

The one I bought in Florida was a perfect example. First, the darn thing was about the size of a Buick and weighed about as much.

I was in a hotel and had to summon a bellman with a cart to take it up to my room for me.

Sunday papers are getting larger and larger and are weighing more and more, and unfortunately it's not an excess of news that seems to be the cause.

It's all those advertising fillers that fall out of your Sunday paper when you open it and get all over the floor.

I know enough about the business end of newspapering to know newspapers must have advertising to survive, but why can't they spread those fillers over a week's time and not cram them all in my Sunday paper?

There were 11 advertising fillers in the paper I bought.

Among these were one advertising department store clothing, one trying to sell me pots and pans and sheets and pillowcases, and another from some sort of place like K mart.

It was trying to sell me everything from underwear to insect repellent.

If it's massive ads I want to read, I'll simply sit down with a cup of coffee and leaf through the Sears and Roebuck catalog.

Annoying trend No. 2 is that I'm having a difficult time locating the sports section in today's Sunday papers.

I still read the Sunday paper or any other paper as I always have. First, I glance at the headlines on the front page.

If there's not one that says, "World Ends Today," or "Killer Bees on Outskirts of Atlanta" or "Income Tax Repealed," I turn to the sports section.

But good luck finding it.

There's the A section for the main news, then a B section for local news; C, the business section; D, the editorial section, and then it's supposed to be E for sports.

The problem is that in the middle of all that, as was with the case with my Florida paper, you run into seven advertising fillers, and an H section on buying homes that mysteriously has found its way between the D and E section.

By the time you finally locate sports, the paper is spread out all over the kitchen table, advertising fillers are all over the floor and you're exhausted.

I realize I have more time than usual to locate sports in a Sunday paper, but it shouldn't be like searching for a downed aircraft in a Rockies blizzard.

I talked with my own publisher about this, and he said, "Everything seems normal to me."

So I guess nothing's going to change.

I've given up, incidentally, on trying to find out where they hide the Jumble puzzle these days.

Coverage of rape misses the point

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Frankly, this is a subject I'd just as soon not get into. No matter how you call it, someone will demand your hide on a Ritz cracker.

But the publication by several news organizations of the name of the woman who says she was raped by William Kennedy Smith is just too important not to talk about. It is a departure from the practice most members of the media have traditionally adopted—which is to not publish a victim's name. But is it fair to publish the accused's name and not the accuser's? We don't play favorites in other types of crime. Why only in cases of rape?

When we take a look at the history of the treatment of rape victims in our culture and in our courts, the reason behind keeping a rape victim's identity private is pretty clear.

First, in many instances where women have been raped, the men in their lives—their husbands, fathers, boyfriends—have looked at them as "damaged goods," as though an exclusivity that they valued is now gone. This is not a way these men chose to feel, but it is still a terribly unfair and tragic consequence to the victims.

Second, defense attorneys in rape trials have tried to paint rape victims as tramps who, if they weren't actually asking for what happened to them, were so immoral that one more sexual incident wouldn't matter. Many victims have been too afraid to prosecute, choosing instead to try their best to put the incident behind them rather than put themselves and their families through the ordeal of a rape trial.

Although practices and laws that shield rape victims from publicity show admirable sensitivity to victims, they ignore the fact that women can, and do, sometimes fabricate rape accusations. And while the women accusing someone of rape is protected in the media, the accused is on parade from the moment of the accusation to the final disposition of the case. His background and family are fair game for the media, long before he is proven guilty or innocent.

So what should we do now about publishing alleged rape victims' names? Recognizing that we need to rethink our policies, common sense tells us not to do what The New York Times did in the case, which was to profile the woman with a history of her so-called indiscretions over the past few years. More than a week after the article appeared, The Times printed an apology, but by then the damage was done.

Bob Reichblum, news director of WPLG-TV in Miami, summed up The Times story well when he told The Washington Post, "It says, 'She asked for it.' My goodness, she has peach walls. She goes to bars. She gets speeding tickets ... The implication at every turn was this is someone who was a free-floating, loose woman and maybe she was putting herself in jeopardy."

In many accounts I've read of the alleged rape, I haven't read anything about the color of William Kennedy Smith's walls or gossip about his barhopping. Neither do I want to know. None of that information would give me any kind of idea of whether he committed the rape or not. Is this what we call protecting the public's right to know? Devoting ourselves to creating portraits of alleged victims and criminals that allow us to make subjective judgments about what kind of people they are, rather than concentrating on what the evidence shows?

USA Today Inquiry Editor Barbara Reynolds makes a strong point when she argues that refusing to publish names of rape victims adds to the mystique of rape, and keeps it "behind closed doors and tolerated as part of a macho culture." She calls on the media to stop attempting to try the case in the press, and instead to focus on the crime and campaign for tougher sentences for rapists.

This is our job. If you take a look at the way the press has historically handled rape, we haven't tallied up a much better score than the judicial system.

Bush nominates Robert M. Gates for CIA director

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today he will nominate deputy national security adviser Robert M. Gates to succeed William Webster as director of Central Intelligence.

It is the second time Gates has been nominated to head the CIA. He was chosen for the post by Ronald Reagan in 1987, but the White House withdrew his nomination in the face of congressional doubts over his role in the Iran-Contra affair.

"I know Bob Gates and I know him to be a man of honor," Bush said. He said the nomination demonstrates that he has "no qualms at all" about Gates and no concerns about opening up the Iran-Contra period to a new session of congressional review.

Gates said, "If confirmed, I look forward to doing my best to more fully develop what is already the best intelligence service in the world."

Gates is a specialist in Soviet affairs and a veteran of the CIA.

"I know Bob will maintain a strong and responsive" intelligence agency, Bush said. He praised Gates' work at the NSC — a key period for Gates given the opposition to his 1987 nomination.

"He's a good man and I'm proud to send his name" to the Senate, Bush said. Bush said he was optimistic about chances for confirmation or his role in the Iran-Contra period.

Since Webster's resignation last week, the White House has been testing sentiment towards Gates on Capitol Hill. Bush apparently is convinced that Gates' performance in the years since, and the passage of time, would clear the way.

David Boren, chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said Monday he expected Gates would face some stiff questioning about his Iran-Contra role. Nonetheless, the Oklahoma Democrat predicted Gates could win confirmation.

"We've had consultation with the people on the Senate Intelligence Committee and so far I'm very pleased with how they have gone," Bush said.

Gates was deputy director of intelligence at the CIA at the time of the Iran-Contra affair and was Reagan's initial choice to replace William Casey as director of Central Intelligence. His name was withdrawn because of questions about his knowledge of the Iran-Contra affair and his role in preparing misleading congressional testimony for Casey about the arms-for-hostages deal.

When Gates was nominated in 1987, several senators complained he should have been more aggressive in speaking out against the deal, particularly after learning that money made on arms sales to Iran had been illegally diverted to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Robert M. Gates

After his nomination was withdrawn in 1987, Gates kept his job as No. 2 at the agency until Bush named him as his deputy national security adviser and moved him to the White House in 1989.

The president, a former director of the CIA himself, said Gates would not routinely sit in Cabinet meetings but would take part in any sessions where intelligence was necessary for decisionmaking. He said that was the role when he headed the CIA. Casey had Cabinet status under President Reagan.

Gates, a native of Kansas, received his BA degree from the College of William and Mary in 1965, his Masters Degree in History from Indiana University in 1966, and his Doctorate in Russian and Soviet History from Georgetown University in 1974.

He joined the CIA in 1966, serving as an intelligence analyst, an arms control expert and as one of two Assistant National Intelligence Officers for Strategic programs. In 1974, he was assigned to the National Security Council staff.

After nearly six years at the national Security Council serving the Nixon, Ford and Carter administrations, Mr. Gates returned to the CIA in January 1980. He subsequently was appointed to a series of administrative positions and served as National Intelligence Officer for the Soviet Union prior to his appointment as Deputy Director for Intelligence in January 1981.

Gates was sworn in as Deputy Director of Central Intelligence on April 18, 1986. He in effect ran the agency that year because its director, William Casey, was dying of a brain tumor.

Judge reverses L.A. police chief's suspension in taped beating aftermath

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge reversed the 60-day suspension of Police Chief Daryl F. Gates over the videotaped beating of a motorist, resolving — at least for now — a struggle inside City Hall for control of the Police Department.

Superior Court Judge Ronald Sohigian on Monday upheld a City Council maneuver aimed at reversing the suspension handed out by the Police Commission.

The judge reached his decision after several days of arguments on the powers of the City Council measured against the authority of the civilian Police Commission, whose members are appointed by Mayor Tom Bradley.

Bradley said he was "shocked and dismayed" by the ruling and expects the Police

Commission to appeal.

"The decision cuts the heart out of the City Charter," the mayor said. "It has to be challenged."

Gates — who had returned to work within days of the April 4 suspension under a temporary court order — said he was delighted by the ruling.

"The Board of Police Commissioners did what I thought was improper. ... There was no due process and I challenged that," the chief said.

The commission wanted Gates' out of office while the beating of Rodney King by police during a March 3 traffic stop was investigated. But the City Council agreed to reinstate Gates if he dropped a lawsuit challenging his suspension.

Sohigian concluded the City Council had the final say because the matter involved a lawsuit and the City Charter gives the council dominance in matters involving litigation. Unless there is an appeal, the ruling permanently reverses the suspension.

The beating, captured on videotape by a bystander, has led to several investigations and an examination of police brutality nationwide.

It also prompted calls for the resignation of Gates, who has civil service protection and cannot be removed by the mayor.

In a different courtroom Monday, the four police officers charged with assault and brutality in the case told a judge why they want separate trials.

"Each defendant is now in the position of pointing the finger at the other," Judge Bernard Kamins said. He made no immediate decision.

The trial of Sgt. Stacey Koon and Officers Laurence Powell, Theodore Briseno and Timothy Wind is on hold while the judge rules on several motions and Koon recovers from pneumonia.

Rescuers remove injured passengers from the jackknifed coach following a head-on collision of two trains Tuesday near Shigaraki, Japan.

At least 38 dead in Japan after collision of two trains

By K.P. HONG
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — A train packed with tourists collided head-on with another passenger train in western Japan today, and police said at least 38 people were killed and 401 were injured.

Japan's worst rail accident in 19 years occurred on a 10-mile-long single-track line called the Shigaraki Highlands Railway in Shiga prefecture, near the ancient capital, Kyoto, and 230 miles west of Tokyo.

The front cars of both trains buckled on impact. Television footage showed one car jackknifed up into the air. Rescuers climbed ladders to reach the top of the wreckage.

Passengers were pinned between mangled seats, and rescuers used power saws and ropes to remove survivors from the twisted cars. Emergency crews carried away bloodied passengers on stretchers and on their backs.

"All of a sudden, I heard a thunderous bang and felt a tremendous shock in the back, and there were people screaming all over," a passenger in his 60s said in a televised interview.

"I didn't feel any brakes," said another unidentified passenger interviewed on television. "We just hit with a loud noise."

A farmer said he heard the crash at his home a mile from the accident site.

Most of the passengers on one train were tourists going to a world pottery festival in the town of Shigaraki, police said.

It was not known if any foreigners were killed or injured.

Police said the injured — including many people who were seriously hurt — were being treated at seven hospitals and clinics.

Local railway officials said a signal failure might have been responsible for the crash. Chief Cabinet Minister Misoji Sakamoto said the government sent investigators to the scene.

A three-car express of the West Japan Railway Co. from Kyoto, packed with about 500 tourists — 240 percent of normal capacity — was headed to Shigaraki.

At 10:35 a.m., it collided with a four-car local train from Shigaraki en route to Kibukawa, the other end of the highlands railway. About 100 passengers were on the local train.

It was not immediately known how fast the trains were going when they collided. Rail officials said the maximum speed limit on the highlands railway is 50 mph.

The officials said the trains were supposed to have passed each other at a 100-yard-long siding about a mile and a half from the accident site.

But because of the apparent fault with the signal, the local train left a nearby station 10 minutes later than scheduled and the other train failed to wait at the siding, the officials said. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

The accident site is on the curving foot of a mountain covered with a dense forest.

The highlands line belonged to the former Japan National Railway, but was converted to private operation in 1987. The siding and extra signal were installed this year to handle the special trains to the pottery festival.

During the Nara period (710-794), one of Japan's imperial palaces was located in what is now Shigaraki. The city currently is known for its tea cultivation and its 12-century-old pottery. The pottery festival there runs from April 20 through May 26.

The city of 14,000 people is 10 miles east of the southern tip of Biwako, Japan's largest lake, and about 40 miles east of Kyoto.

Scientists identify gene that may have schizophrenia role

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Scientists say they have identified a gene that may predispose some people to schizophrenia.

A particular variant of the gene showed up in people with the mental illness far more often than one would expect by chance, researchers reported Monday.

That variant may predispose some people to schizophrenia, or it may lie very close to some other unknown gene that does so, they concluded. But they cautioned that the finding could also have nothing to do with schizophrenia and could just be a result of how the study was done.

The work was presented at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association by Alan Sanders and colleagues at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Schizophrenics show such symptoms as delusions, such as thinking they are somebody else or suspecting others are trying to harm them, hallucinations and thought disorders, in which they may shift between topics without realizing they are making no sense.

The exact causes of schizophrenia are unknown, but prior studies show that genes seem to confer susceptibility.

"This is the kind of lead that we need to help give us some more clues, some things to search for" to understand the genetic contribution to the disease, said Dr. David Shore, assistant chief of the schizophrenia research branch at the National Institute of Mental Health.

By finding genes that predispose people to schizophrenia, scientists may be able to understand what goes wrong and devise new medications, said Shore. Eventually, an understanding of the genetics may point the way to prevention, he said.

Shore said the new work was promising, but she cautioned that so far, promising findings for locating schizophrenia genes have failed to be borne out by follow-up studies in other groups of people.

"That's why these kinds of leads are important," said Dr. Charles Kaufmann, a psychiatric geneticist at Columbia University in New York.

In the study, researchers examined several genetic sites in 55 people with schizophrenia or a related condition called schizoaffective disorder, and in 51 people with no psychiatric diagnosis. All were unrelated whites of northern European origin.

The genetic link came in a particular variant of a gene that tells the body how to make a substance called porphobilinogen deaminase. The body uses this substance to help detoxify a pigment produced by the liver.

People generally carry two copies of any kind of gene, and each may be a different variant. In the new study, the disease was more likely to have appeared before age 30 if both copies were the schizophrenia-linked variant.

Kaufmann noted that the gene is also implicated in a disorder called acute intermittent porphyria, which can cause psychosis, the loss of touch with reality also seen in schizophrenia.

'Sweetheart Swindler' scam may have bilked 200 women

By ANTHONY SHADID
Associated Press Writer

KENOSHA, Wis. (AP) — A man arrested for bilking a woman he dated may be the "Sweetheart Swindler" who left broken hearts and depleted bank accounts during a cross-country scam that involved up to 200 women, authorities say.

Investigators say the man identified as Robert J. Koch, 51, used at least 100 aliases and may be involved in fraud cases in 28 states from California to Pennsylvania over the last decade.

"He stays long enough to build up the confidence of the women, wines and dines them, talks about a wedding ring and then it comes time to show up and he's gone," Kenosha police Detective Kenneth Kopesky said.

Koch pleaded innocent last week in Kenosha County Circuit Court to charges of theft and forgery. He is accused of bilking a 48-year-old Kenosha woman out of $10,200 during a 10-day romance.

Koch had proposed to the woman and the two went shopping for a wedding ring before the woman gave him money she had drawn from her second-mortgage loan, authorities say.

The woman said Koch appeared sincere and seemed to have a pleasant personality.

"He wouldn't appeal to all women, but if it was the personality that appealed to you, you would think he was very friendly and very outgoing," said the woman, speaking on condition of anonymity.

When Koch was arrested March 29 in this southeastern Wisconsin town of 77,000 on the shores of Lake Michigan, he told police he was from Louisville, Ky.

"We thought he was just some guy that was caught trying to rip somebody off, not somebody that was notorious for fraud across the United States," Detective Albert Aiello said.

But shortly after the arrest became public the department began receiving calls from other police agencies who reported similar schemes.

Those calls resulted in arrest warrants being issued for Koch in Arlington, Va.; Columbia, Md.; and Kalispell, Mont., and by federal authorities in Dallas. An arrest warrant is also pending in Riverside, Calif.

Other charges may be forthcoming in Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Nevada and Iowa, Lt. Dennis Conradt said.

Kopesky said inquiries about Koch also have been made by authorities in Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, the District of Columbia, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Oregon, South Carolina, Utah, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Koch faces trial July 15 in Kenosha. He remains in the County Jail in lieu of $530,000 bail. Conviction on the Wisconsin felony carry a maximum of 20 years in prison and $20,000 in fines.

Soon after he was arrested, Koch scraped his fingerprints off on cement blocks in the jail cell. Police made prints when the skin grew back, but fingerprint checks with the FBI and Canadian authorities failed to verify his true identity.

"Neither we nor anybody else have any idea who he is," Lt. Milton Ayers said.

Police said they found 28 identity cards from seven states and Canada when they searched Koch's motel room in March. The aliases — including Dean S. Flower, Kenneth Luciano, Jesse Cuellar, David R. Coccarelli and Michael Hagepman — made it impossible to determine his true identity, they said.

Police believe Koch traveled between cities by bus, usually staying in one place for two weeks to two months. He would meet women either through "lonely hearts" magazine advertisements or through singles' gatherings, police said.

Investigators said he would tell the women he was widowed, wealthy and could take care of their financial needs. He later would propose to marry them before making off with $5,000 to $10,000, police said.

"He had a typical way of operating. ... They trusted him and he took advantage of them," said Detective Ralph Ross, a Columbia, Mo., investigator who spent 2 1/2 years on the case of a woman was bilked of $3,500 to $5,000.

Nepal prime minister loses seat to communist activist

By RAJU GOPALAKRISHNAN
Associated Press Writer

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A Communist activist has upset the interim prime minister in the race for the leader's home district, according to early results from the Himalayan kingdom's first multiparty elections in 32 years.

"It is a vote for democracy. It is a vote for independence. It is a vote for the alleviation of poverty," said Madan Bhandari, a 39-year-old leftist who lived underground for 12 years until last year's pro-democracy uprising.

Bhandari beat 66-year-old Krishna Prasad Bhattarai of the Nepali Congress by 27,372 votes to 26,621 in the Kathmandu constituency.

The result was among the few in from Sunday's elections for the 205-member House of Representatives. Ballots must be collected from 14,000 polling places, from sea-level jungles to the Himalayan villages. A finished count isn't expected before Friday.

The country's new constitution calls for the legislature to select a prime minister and government.

Bhattarai was named interim prime minister in 1990 after a violent, four-month democracy campaign ended 200 years of absolute monarchy. The same political upheaval allowed Bhandari to come out of hiding. He had been wanted since 1978 for inciting peasants to rob a government agricultural cooperative.

Raj Baral, a political science professor in the city's Tribhuvan University, predicted the Nepali Congress would win the largest number of seats in Parliament but did not know whether it could gain a majority.

In 54 districts where votes had been counted, the Nepali Congress trailed in 32 and led in 22, said Election Commission Secretary A.N. Raj Bhandari. The Communists led in 22 districts and smaller parties and independent candidates held the lead in the rest.

The Nepali Congress led Nepal's last democratic government, which lasted only 1 1/2 years before being dismissed in 1959 by King Mahendra. The monarch jailed the government's leaders, including Bhattarai, and banned political parties.

King Birendra, Mahendra's son, repealed the decree last year after demonstrations in which at least 200 people were killed. The Nepali Congress Party promised elections and adopted a new constitution that reduced the king to a titular monarch.

International observers praised Sunday's vote. However, new voting was ordered Tuesday at 37 polling stations because of vote fraud and violence. And police imposed an indefinite curfew in the eastern town of Taplejung after clashes between rival parties.

Supporters of rival parties also clashed Monday outside Katmandu's City Hall as ballot-counting began, prompting cane-wielding police to charge them. One person was injured, police said.

At least 25 people were reported injured Sunday in sporadic clashes between supporters of rival parties. But the violence was less than expected after a campaign in which nine people were killed and scores injured.

'F-X 2' debuts as No. 1 movie

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The special effects sequel F-X 2 debuted in the No. 1 box-office spot while the candid Madonna movie Truth or Dare opened to robust business in limited release.

According to figures released Monday by Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc., F-X 2 collected $5.5 million over the Mother's Day weekend. The film stars Bryan Brown and Brian Dennehy in a follow-up to the 1986 sleeper hit about a movie special-effects expert.

Playing on just 51 screens in North America, Madonna's Truth or Dare grossed an estimated $557,000. While it did not place among the Top 10, the film drew a strong per-screen average of $10,922. The backstage documentary will be shown on an additional 400 screens this weekend.

In second place behind F-X 2 was Switch, a comedy about role reversal starring Ellen Barkin and Jimmy Smits. It made $3.8 million in its premiere engagement. In third, down from first place, was Oscar, the Sylvester Stallone comedy netted $3.2 million.

One Good Cop, starring Michael Keaton, generated ticket sales of $2.1 million for fourth place. In fifth with admissions of $2 million was The Silence of the Lambs, pairing Jodie Foster with Anthony Hopkins, which has now grossed more than $115 million.

Out for Justice, Steven Seagal's martial arts drama, took sixth with receipts of $1.7 million. A Kiss Before Dying, with Matt Dillon and Sean Young in a story of love and murder, took seventh with a gate of $1.68 million.

The boarding school thriller Toy Soldiers was the eighth most-popular release, with proceeds of $1.66 million. Dances With Wolves was ninth on a gross of $1.44 million. The Oscar-winning Western has earned $167.5 million to date. Rounding out the list in 10th was A Rage in Harlem, featuring Robin Givens, which pulled in an estimated $1.4 million.

Here are the top movie ticket sales Friday through Sunday according to Exhibitor Relations Co., with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Figures are based on a combination of actual box-office receipts and studio projections where actual figures are not immediately available.

1. F-X 2, Orion, $5.5 million, 1,499 screens, $3,639 per screen, $5.5 million, one week.

2. Switch, Warner Bros., $3.8 million, 1,013 screens, $3,723 per screen, $3.8 million, one week.

3. Oscar, Disney, $3.2 million, 1,391 screens, $2,287 per screen, $15.1 million, three weeks.

4. One Good Cop, Disney, $2.1 million, 1,454 screens, $1,438 per screen, $6.6 million, two weeks.

5. The Silence of the Lambs, Orion, $2 million, 1,574 screens, $1,248 screen, $115.1 million, 13 weeks.

6. Out for Justice, Warner Bros., $1.7 million, 1,554 screens, $1,097 per screen, $34.3 million, five weeks.

7. A Kiss Before Dying, Universal, $1.68 million, 1,546 screens, $1,085 per screen, $11.5 million, three weeks.

8. Toy Soldiers, Tri-Star, $1.66 million, 1,358 screens, $1,222 per screen, $10.8 million, three weeks.

9. Dances With Wolves, Orion, $1.44 million, 1,358 screens, $1,058 per screen, $167.5 million, 27 weeks.

10. A Rage in Harlem, Miramax, $1.4 million, 549 screens, $2,550 per screen, $4.6 million, two weeks.

The Book Report

by
Janette Quarles & Ellen Malone
Lovett Library Staff

Staff picks for the month of May are:

Sliver by Ira Levin

The celebrated author of The Boys From Brazil, and Rosemary's Baby, returns with a riveting tale of psychological suspense. Manhattan's glittering Carnegie Hill district is the perfect place for Kay Norris. Successful and single, she looks forward to living in the high-tech "sliver" building. She never notices the man watching her unpack, the man watching her every move, the landlord who will make her wish she never made it to Carnegie Hill. Under the gleaming facade of his building lies the result of his demented will for absolute power and control.

Aspen Gold by Janet Dailey

In Aspen Gold, Janet Dailey sets her tale of hometown sweethearts in the playground of the wealthy. Aspen native Kit Masters, now a budding Hollywood starlet, has returned to her hometown to shoot a film—a career move that could make her a star. But the film's location could stop Kit's career in its tracks when she is reunited there with her childhood soulmate, Tom Bannon. Haunted by their past together, Kit must make a decision—to welcome the fame that is hers for the taking or forgive past betrayals and return to Tom.

Palindrome by Stuart Woods

After Liz Barwick, a beautiful young photographer, is beaten nearly to death by her husband, a star in the National Football League, she sues him for divorce, wins her case, and banks a large cash settlement. Trying to put all of the unhappiness behind her, Liz accepts a photo assignment on an idyllic island off the coast of Georgia and soon becomes romantically involved with one of the handsome twins who are direct descendants to the island's original settlers. Meanwhile, having drowned the lawyer who handled the divorce, Liz's ex-husband methodically plots his revenge on her as he closes in on his unsuspecting prey.

The Spy Wore Silk by Aline the Countess of Romanones

This is the third novel of espionage by the aristocrat author of The Spy Went Dancing and Thy Spy Wore Red. In a true tale of royalty and assassination set in 1971 Morocco, the Spanish aristocrat fights against the clock to prevent a second assassination attempt on King Hassan of Morocco. Teaming up with former OSS colleague and future CIA director William Casey, the Countess carries her search for the conspirators from the dark alleys of Marrakesh to the palaces of Casablanca.

Cape Cod by William Martin

A majestic, multi-generational saga from the best selling author of Back Bay. Combining elements of history, mystery, adventure, and romance, Cape Cod presents both the storied history of this beautiful area and of America itself. Beginning with the landing of the Mayflower, the narrative threads follow the fortunes of two families, the Hilyards and the Bigelows, tracing their passions, their adventures, and their conflicts through four centuries of American history. Linked by a mystery and a murder, the families struggle for possession of the Mayflower's captain's log, the one item that may resolve the long-standing conflicts.

Sleepwalking Through History: America in the Reagan Years by Haynes Johnson

This book reassesses the Reagan decade in all of its greed-imbued splendor and profiteering disgrace. Covering the principal players of the 1980's—from Oliver North to Jimmy Swaggart—Sleepwalking Through History exposes what went on in the United States during the eight-year presidency of the great Communicator. The Pulitzer Prize winning author discusses the decline of the nation's poor, the new religion of greed, the Iran-contra scandal, the collapse of the savings and loan industry, the debt crisis, and the hijacking of foreign policy by adventurers and fantasists.

Disease may be controlled by medication

By NYU SCHOOL OF MEDICINE
For AP Newsfeatures

For many people who develop Paget's Disease, a fairly common chronic bone disorder, one of several drugs can often ease the pain and retard the disease's progress.

The ailment can cause pain, deformity, hearing loss and neurological deficiencies including loss of movement.

While the precise cause of Paget's Disease is not known, new research suggests that a slow-acting virus may be involved, according to Dr. Sandra Kammerman, an associate professor of medicine at New York University School of Medicine.

The disease can cause either excessive bone formation so that extra bone presses on other structures, or bone breakdown, causing the bones to become fragile.

Although Paget's Disease often runs in families, Kammerman said, people won't necessarily develop the disease just because a parent did.

Paget's Disease typically strikes older people whose ancestors were western European. As many as 5 percent of people over 40 may have the disease.

Paget's Disease can affect any bone in the body, particularly the skull, pelvis, spine and upper and lower parts of the leg.

The symptoms of Paget's Disease depend on which areas of the body are affected, and in many cases the disease progresses incredibly slowly—often with few symptoms. Many cases require no treatment at all.

However, the disease can respond to treatment in relieving pain and halting progress of the disorder.

The most common drugs given for Paget's Disease are calcitonin, which is given by self-injection, and disodium etidronate, which is taken by mouth. The drugs can often keep extra bone from forming.

A side effect of calcitonin in a small number of people can include redness of the skin. And disodium etidronate usually can't be taken for more than six months at a time because in repeated courses it can cause bone weakening, although improved versions of the drug being tested may be given for longer periods of time without added harm to the bone structure.

Dieting children face future problems

By RANDI HUTTER EPSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A quarter of girls as young as 9 wanted to diet to lose weight, according to a survey that showed that half of them were not overweight, a researcher said.

About 25 percent of the 84 9-year-olds and 86 14-year-olds wanted to diet to reduce their waists, hips, and thighs, said Andrew Hill, a behavioral scientist at Leeds University.

Hill said the findings were disturbing because rigid dieting by young people can stunt the physical and hormonal changes of puberty.

In a related study, Hill found that dieting 9-year-olds were eating 11 percent fewer calories than the recommended daily allowance for their age.

Hill presented his research at a meeting last month of the British Psychological Society.

A 1986 study in San Francisco found that of 500 girls in grades 4 to 12, almost 80 percent of 10- and 11-year-olds reported dieting to lose weight.

Richard Williams, a child and adolescent psychiatrist at the Bristol Royal Hospital for Sick Children and spokesman for Britain's Royal College of Psychiatry, said there has been an increasing recognition and incidence of eating disorders in children.

Children worried about appearance and dieting are more prone to eating disorders as teen-agers and adults, he said in a telephone interview.

Though it's hard to pin eating disorders on one cause, Williams said most of these children suffer from low self-esteem and in their search for role models, some choose thin models.

He advises parents pay attention to their children's self-esteem. "Adolescents need to be given quite a lot of support and positive feedback."

You'd better believe AIDS can be passed through sex

DEAR ABBY: Recently you ran a letter from "Helen in K.C." that raised the issue of whether or not to include AIDS as the cause of death in an obituary. One statement in that letter concerned me deeply, so I hope you will print this in order to correct the misinformation.

The sentence: "Due to ignorance, many people think AIDS is a venereal disease — which it is not."

Abby, I am the manager of the AIDS Education Project at California State University, Sacramento. Please advise your readers that AIDS is a sexually transmitted disease (the term "venereal disease" was phased out several years ago).

AIDS can be transmitted through an infected person by one of three ways: 1) sex (without protection), including penis to vagina, penis to mouth, penis to rectum, mouth to vagina, mouth to rectum, or sharing sex toys; 2) direct blood-to-blood contact, including sharing hypodermic needles, tattoo equipment, sex toys or razor blades; 3) infected mothers may pass the virus to their unborn babies during pregnancy, delivery or through breast feeding.

People who believe that AIDS cannot be transmitted through sex are operating without clear and accurate information. AIDS is a non-discriminatory, equal-opportunity sexually transmitted disease.

SUSAN FELDMAN,
CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY,
SACRAMENTO

DEAR MS. FELDMAN: The

sentence that concerns you concerns me even more because a crucial word was inadvertently omitted. The sentence, "Due to ignorance, many people think AIDS is a venereal disease — which it is not," should have read: "Due to ignorance, many people think AIDS is exclusively a sexually transmitted disease — which it is not."

DEAR ABBY: We are 28 third-graders at Sumter Christian School in Sumter, S.C. Sometimes Mrs. Tomlinson reads the class stuff out of your column. You said a lady wanted to name her baby after you but her husband wouldn't let her.

We think Abby is a beautiful name. We have 50 eggs in an incubator in our classroom. They will hatch out to be cute little baby chicks on May 10 and we will name one of our baby chicks Abby after you if that is OK with you. Could you please send us your picture that you have signed? We will put it on the wall next to the one Mrs. Bush sent us. Write soon, as we are out of school May 31. Thank you and goodbye. Sign this...

MRS. TOMLINSON'S

DEAR THIRD-GRADERS

Be kind to environment when cleaning paint tools

NEW YORK (AP) — If you plan to be a do-it-yourself painter this spring or summer, be kind to the environment when you clean up.

Ted Friedmann, president of the Environmental Coatings Council, offers these suggestions:

— Buy only as much as you will need, in addition to a small amount to save for touching up scuffs and scrapes. An accurate measurement of the area to be painted, with allowances for doors and windows, will help your paint dealer determine your needs.

— Store carefully. Keep unused paint in a dry place away from extreme heat or cold and away from open flames such as pilot lights for heaters. Lids should be tightly sealed. Keep out of reach of children and pets.

— If you have large unused portions in the original container with a legible label, give them to community organizations such as theater groups, day-care centers, churches and senior centers.

— Unopened cans of stock shades generally can be returned to paint dealers for refunds within a reasonable time of purchase.

— Know the type of paint you have — either alkyd, or oil-based, or latex, which is water soluble. When disposing of latex paint cans, small amounts of left-over paint may be dried out by leaving the lid open. Alkyd paint requires special disposal. Since it is flammable, never pour down sewers, household drains or onto the ground. Store with a tightly sealed lid for special collection days by your sanitation department.

Clean-up materials can be recycled, also. Allow turpentine, paint thinners and solvents to sit in a closed container until paint residue settles to the bottom. Pour off clear liquid and resal. Remaining particles can be dried out completely by adding an absorbent such as cat litter before disposal.

The Environmental Coatings Council, headquartered in Larchmont, N.Y., is a non-profit organization of paint manufacturers, contractors, retailers and raw-material suppliers in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Personal matters should not be delegated to surrogates today. You'll be much more effective at handling these critical endeavors.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This could be the time to bring in a second party to accomplish a feat you've been unable to do on your own. This means, however, that you must be prepared to share dividends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may find yourself in a very unique position today, bringing two unrelated factions together for something that could be mutually beneficial to all.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In order to achieve an objective you usually reach by rote, you may have to put a slightly different spin on your tactics today. Be imaginative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your greatest asset at this time is your popularity. Friends will be in a mood to do things for you that they wouldn't even think of doing for others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Two rewarding developments, each of which pertains to an involvement with a different individual, could unexpectedly occur today. You should be able to benefit from both.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You shouldn't have much difficulty today finding a solution to a problem that's been vexing you. Your prior frustrations may have come from having to choose between too many good answers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A number of important tasks that you've been putting off could be attended to today — if you apply yourself. If these are your priorities, productivity may amaze you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try to divide your time equally between two valued friends today, each of whom are bidding for your companionship. Being considerate will avoid hurting feelings.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Sometimes, our best results are attained by getting out of our own way. This could be true for you today. Let events run their course.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is a good day to focus your efforts on neglected phone calls or letters. There's a strong possibility that someone with whom you should communicate has exciting news for you.

Second-half surge lifts Pistons past Celtics

Conference semifinals all even at two games apiece

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — They are like ancient warriors, these Detroit Pistons and Boston Celtics. Big, slow and cunning. They battle from memory as much as from muscle.

They have fought one another so many times, in so many important games, there are no surprises. They slam and bang and grind on one another, as they did Monday night, until someone finds the strength and the will to win.

In Game 4 of their Eastern Conference semifinal, they were tied 53-44 at halftime. Then Mark Aguirre played his best game in a Detroit uniform, leading the Pistons to a 104-97 win that tied the best-of-7 series at two games apiece.

Aguirre, whose previous best was 32 points since coming to Detroit in a 1989 deal for Adrian Dantley, scored 20 of his 34 points in the second half.

But there were many heroes:

— Joe Dumars and Dennis Rodman each played a full 48 minutes for Detroit. Dumars scored 24 points. Rodman, who was named NBA defensive player of the year earlier in the day, pulled down 18 rebounds.

— James Edwards got the Pistons off on the right foot, scoring their first 10 points in the game.

— Vinnie Johnson, starting for the injured Isiah Thomas, scored 10 of his 12 points in the second half.

— Kevin McHale, playing 37 minutes in a reserve role, scored 28 points for Boston, often keeping the Celtics in the game with flurries of points that frequently slowed up Detroit scoring runs.

— Robert Parrish scored 12 points and pulled down 10 rebounds, despite fouling out after played only 23 minutes.

— Reggie Lewis scored 20 points for Boston.

"The key was that we did the job defensively," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said. "Those were two real good basketball teams going at it, old warriors who are very competitive. It was great basketball for any kind of purist who knows the game."

The Pistons are 5-0 in playoff games in which they have held opponents to under 100 points. They are 0-4 when allowing 100 points or more.

In the first three games against Boston, the Pistons shot just 37.2 percent and averaged 90.7 points. Detroit missed 28 of 85 free throws during those three games. But in Game 4 the Pistons shot 44.4 percent and sank 38 of 51 free throws.

And they did it without their floor leader, Thomas, who sat out the game with a sprained right foot.

"They are still a very dangerous team, whether he's in the lineup or not," Parrish said. "So that had nothing to do with it."

Indeed, the key was Detroit's 50-30 edge in rebounds, including a 15-3 advantage at the offensive end.

"It feels good when people say that we can't win without Isiah," Rodman said. "That's a lie. We've got a lot of people who can step up. If we keep on pounding and keep on going and wear them down, I think good things will happen."

"I think we can win, but we've got to focus, keep all this in mind."

The series returns to Boston Garden for Game 5 Wednesday night. Game 6 will be played Friday night back at The Palace. A seventh game, if needed, will be played in Boston on Sunday.

The Pistons, attempting to become only the third team in history to win three consecutive NBA titles, have reached the Eastern Conference finals the past four years.

"Now it's all even up," Boston coach Chris Ford said. "I'm not satisfied because I wanted to be up 3-1."

And he had every reason to think the Celtics could go home with a two-game advantage after routing Detroit 115-83 in Game 3 on Saturday. The Pistons shot only 33.3 percent and missed 19 of 36 free throws in that game.

"You can't dwell on a loss like that in the playoffs," Edwards said. "The playoff series is too short to think about a loss like that. We have to put that behind us and come out and play like we know how to play."

Like ancient warriors.

Celtics' forward Larry Bird tries to move closer to the basket, but is pushed by the Pistons' Mark Aguirre Monday night.

Ryan suffers shoulder injury in Rangers' win over Tigers

AL roundup

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Two outs from a possible victory, Nolan Ryan blew out his shoulder. One strike from a sure victory, Jeff Reardon blew it for Roger Clemens.

Ryan left Monday night's start against Detroit in the fifth inning, walking off the mound with a strained muscle in the back of his right shoulder.

The Texas Rangers won easily without Ryan, beating Detroit 8-1. But the injury may have blown a chance at a marquee matchup Sunday night in Texas: Ryan vs. Clemens.

"My attitude now is I'll know within the next 48 hours what we're dealing with," Ryan said. "I only hope to miss one start at the best."

Either way, Clemens will go into the game undefeated. But he's still 6-0, rather 7-0, because of Reardon.

Clemens endured an early 59-minute power delay at Boston and left after eight innings with a 3-2 lead. With two outs and two strikes in the ninth, pinch hitter Matt Merullo homered off Reardon to tie it, and the Chicago White Sox beat the Red Sox 4-3 in the 10th.

"He told us he was dead," Boston manager Joe Morgan said after Clemens threw 106 pitches. "But there's been weirder nights than this, that's for sure."

In other games, New York beat Oakland 6-3, Toronto topped Kansas City 4-2 and California defeated Cleveland 9-5.

Ryan's first game at Arlington Stadium since his record seventh no-hitter was supposed to be a celebration. Instead, it turned into a night of concern.

Ryan had allowed only one hit, struck out four and walked three when he left after fanning Pete Incaviglia to start the fifth inning. Ryan left with a 2-0 lead and wound up without getting his 306th career victory.

"Three or four times a year, I experience this kind of thing and it's because of improper mechanics," Ryan said. "It's sort of like tendinitis. It stiffened up on me tonight.

"I felt like I would take a chance where I'd tear it and I'd be looking at a two months recovery period," he said. "I'd rather miss another start than miss an extended period of time."

John Barfield (1-0) relieved and retired seven straight batters for the victory. John Cerutti (0-1) started in place of Frank Tanana, who had a pulled hamstring.

White Sox 4, Red Sox 3

Clemens gave up two runs on four hits in the first three innings. But after the power delay, he shut out the White Sox on one hit for five innings.

Reardon was perfect on 13 straight save chances, including 10 this season. Merullo, batting for Scott Fletcher, hit his second home run on a 1-2 pitch.

In the 10th against Jeff Gray (1-3), Robin Ventura singled with one out, pinch runner Joey Cora stole second and Karkovics singled with two outs. Bobby Thigpen (2-0) was the winner.

Yankees 6, Athletics 3

Scott Sanderson stopped his former team and sent Oakland slumping out of New York.

The Athletics had won 16 straight games against the Yankees before losing three times in a four-game series. Jose Canseco had a rough night, getting into a nose-to-nose confrontation with a fan who taunted the star about his visit to Madonna's apartment last week.

Sanderson (4-1) won 17 games for Oakland last season. He gave up three runs on seven hits in seven innings against the Athletics and Lee Guetterman got his first save.

Hensley Meulens and Roberto Kelly homered for New York. Curt Young (1-1) started in place of Dave Stewart, who went on the disabled list last week for the first time in his career.

Angels 9, Indians 5

Luis Polonia went 5-for-6, scored three runs and drove in three as California won at Cleveland.

Chuck Finley (6-1) won despite allowing five runs on 10 hits in five innings. The Indians are the only team to beat him this season.

Nolan Ryan wipes his forehead before facing the next batter.

Benes, Daniels lead San Diego, Los Angeles to victories

NL roundup

By The Associated Press

Andy Benes had forgotten how to win. Kal Daniels had lost the RBI touch.

Both of them got back the good vibes Monday night in leading their teams to victory.

San Diego's Benes, a non-winner since last August, beat the New York Mets 5-2, getting relief help from Steve Rosenberg and Craig Lefferts. It was his first win in 14 starts, including seven losses and six no-decisions.

Daniels, in bed with the flu for nearly three days, recovered just enough to play for the Dodgers against Montreal. His two-run shot off Oil Can Boyd capped a four-run sixth inning that propelled Los Angeles to an 8-3 victory that ended the Expos' six-game winning streak.

Elsewhere, it was Philadelphia 3, San Francisco 2; St. Louis 1, Cincinnati 0; and Atlanta 5, Chicago 3.

Padres 5, Mets 2

Benes refused to bend in the face of his long non-winning streak. He did, however, tire in the seventh, when Howard Johnson had a two-run homer to make it 3-2.

But Benito Santiago clinched it with a two-run shot in the eighth.

"He's had a lot of misfortune," Padres manager Greg Gidycz said of Benes (1-4). "There was the chance again, where it was three balls and one strike, a three-run lead and, bang, a two-run dinger. One swing of the bat almost erases everything else he's done for the evening."

Not quite. The host Padres held on and Benes could leave the ballpark with a smile.

"The happiest part is that we won the game that I threw in. It was like every fifth day we lost the game and it didn't matter how the pitchers threw or how the hitters hit," Benes said.

Tony Gwynn had a two-run homer, his first since July 15.

Dodgers 8, Expos 3

At Los Angeles, the Dodgers scored four times in both the sixth and eighth innings. Daniels was aided by Chris Gwynn, Tony's brother, who had a three-run homer, and Eddie Murray with a two-run double.

"I'm still sick, but I played with it," Daniels said of having the flu. "My body's aching and my stomach's still messed up, but I got tired of sitting at home. They asked me if I'm OK and I said no, but I'll give it a shot anyway. And it worked out pretty well for me."

And for Ramon Martinez (6-1), who won his fifth in a row. He left in the eighth, when Montreal got all its runs, including a solo shot by Delino DeShields.

Phillies 3, Giants 2

At San Francisco, the Phillies blew a 2-0 lead with two outs in the ninth, then came back to win on John Kruk's homer in the 11th. They've won 13 of 18 against the Giants since 1989.

Kruk's homer was an opposite-field shot to left off Rod Beck (0-1). The Giants tied it off reliever Mitch Williams on Steve Decker's homer and Matt Williams' run-scoring double.

"I felt tonight when we came back that all the bad stuff is over," said Giants manager Roger Craig, whose team is 10-21, the worst record in the majors. "One key hit and one key play, and we lose. It's been like this for three weeks now. I feel bad for the guys, because they're battling their butts off."

Giants slugger Kevin Mitchell sustained a severe ankle sprain while trying to steal second base in the second inning. He is expected to miss at least three games.

Cardinals 1, Reds 0

At St. Louis, Ozzie Smith's solo single in the eighth won it. Ken Hill allowed two singles to Jeff Reed in eight innings and Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his league-leading 11th save in 12 opportunities.

Pinch-hitter Bernard Gilkey led off the eighth with a ground-rule double off Randy Myers (0-3) and Rex Hudler got an infield hit, diving into first ahead of first baseman Hal Morris. Smith followed with his single to shallow center that fell between second baseman Luis Quinones and center fielder Eric Davis.

Braves 5, Cubs 3

At Chicago, Tom Glavine pitched his third complete game, doubled home a run, stole a base and had three sacrifices. Terry Pendleton homered and Dave Justice added a two-run single in the eighth for hot Atlanta.

The victory was the Braves' third straight and 13th in their last 19 games as they surged to the top of the NL West. The Cubs lost their third in a row.

Glavine (5-2) allowed eight hits, struck out five and walked none. Andre Dawson hit a two-run homer with two outs in the ninth off Glavine.

Pistons' Rodman nabs NBA defensive honors

By ALAN L. ADLER
Associated Press Writer

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — It's the job nobody else wants to do, and for the second year in a row, it's the award nobody else could win.

Dennis Rodman, the Detroit Pistons' defensive specialist, was named the league's best at his craft Monday on a vote of sports writers and broadcasters from NBA cities.

Rodman received 51 of 96 possible votes, easily beating out San Antonio's David Robinson, who had 18 votes.

"There's a lot of good defensive players in the league," Rodman said. "It's just not their specialty. I don't think."

For the second consecutive year, Rodman had more than 1,000 rebounds during the regular season, including a career-high 326 off the offensive glass. His 12.5 average rebounds per game trailed only Robinson, who averaged 13.

In Game 4 of the Eastern Conference semifinals against the Boston Celtics on Monday night, Rodman had 18 rebounds, five of them off the offensive boards.

"I myself have to rate Dennis, if not the best defensive player I've seen, he's got to be in the top two," said veteran Gerald Henderson, Rodman's teammate for the last couple seasons.

Indy 500's first black driver completes final phase of rookie test

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The brief flurry of excitement along pit road was for Willy T. Ribbs, who stepped out of his 1990 Lola-Buick and began receiving the congratulations of everyone in the vicinity.

"Step 2 complete," team owner Derrick Walker said Monday following Ribbs' completion of the final phase of his rookie test on the 2 1/2-mile oval.

Now, Indy's first black driver can concentrate on trying to find the speed necessary to qualify for the May 26 race.

The former SCCA Trans-Am and IMSA GTO star ran 10 laps ranging from just over 200 mph to 204.8 under the watchful eye of several U.S. Auto Club officials and veteran drivers.

His performance was labeled "smooth and efficient."

Walker, former team manager for the elite Penske Racing team and general manager last year of the now-defunct Porsche team, is here with Ribbs, no sponsor and a limited budget. Most of that that reportedly is supplied by the driver's friend, comedian Bill Cosby.

"He's building up his confidence and getting that consistency, which is what you have to do," Walker said. "Willy's expertise is mainly in road racing and the ovals require an overhaul of your technique. It's a hurdle for him.

"But we're taking it a step at a time. Step No. 1 was getting here. Step No. 2 was getting past the rookie test. We don't have a sponsor ... we have to preserve our equipment and not push it over the limit. That's why we're totally ignoring speed and building the driver's confidence at this point."

"It's a long, painful process for everybody. You just have to blank out the supersonic speeds everybody else is doing and try to build a little each day."

Ribbs went through the USAC three-day Rookie Orientation Program here in April.

But Walker decided to switch from Cosworth to Buick power and the change took longer than expected. The finished car did not get onto the track until Thursday afternoon, and a clutch problem kept Ribbs from getting up to speed. On Friday, after some practice laps, Ribbs began his test run but was aborted by a broken valve spring.

He was not allowed to drive the car during the first weekend of qualifications because he still had not passed the test. But Didier Theys jumped into the car on Sunday to help set it up for Ribbs.

"I'm glad he drove it," Ribbs said. "He kind of reaffirmed what we felt was happening with the car. Right now, the car's doing better than I am because of my lack of experience on ovals."

Academic All-Stater

Senior Christa West, PHS basketball and track standout, has been named to the Texas High School Academic All-State Team. To make the All-Academic Team, a student-athlete must carry a 90 or above grade for all four years of high school. West's grade point average was 3.85. West was a starting guard for the Lady Harvesters for three years and was moved up to the varsity as a freshman. She was also a member of Pampa's 1600-meter relay team that qualified for the state track meet this year. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Dale West of Pampa.

Australian upsets Gilbert in Italian Open

By KEN SHULMAN
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Mark Woodforde has decided to let his racket do the talking at Rome.

"I had something to prove today," the tall, left-handed Australian said Monday after he upset eighth-seeded Brad Gilbert 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 in the opening round of the Italian Open. "I was pretty disgusted when I was not picked for the Davis Cup team that played France last week. And I wanted to show a few people in Australia that they shouldn't have left me out."

Woodforde was the only player to knock off a seed Monday. Jakob Hlasek, the No. 13 seed, fended off a strong challenge from Italian Paolo Cane to win 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, and No. 15 Alexander Volkov shook off a first-set tiebreak loss to defeat Holland's Jan Siemerink 6-7 (3-7), 6-3, 6-2.

The afternoon rains that hampered the women's tournament last week returned Monday afternoon and halted play for nearly four hours. When play resumed, Juan Aguilera of Spain defeated Australian Pat Cash 3-6, 6-4, 6-1. Nicklas Kulti of Sweden defeated Italy's Omar Camporese 7-5, 4-6, 6-4 in the night match.

Top seed Boris Becker will play his first-round match today, as will third-seeded Pete Sampras, the reigning U.S. Open champion. No. 2 seed Andre Agassi will play tonight.

Woodforde has never been ranked among the top 40 players in the world. Best known for his two wins over John McEnroe in 1988, the 25-year-old Australian's serve-and-volley game is hardly suited to red clay, and particularly to the damp, slow clay at Rome.

But along with wanting to prove the Australian Davis Cup staff wrong, Woodforde also needed to prove to himself that he could win on clay.

"I wanted to win this match very badly," he said. "In my last four tournaments on clay, I've gone out in the first round."

"Until Barcelona in April, I hadn't played on clay for two years. It takes awhile to adapt. I felt I was gradually piecing it together, but after four straight losses, you begin to lose your motivation. You try to keep on smiling, but it's hard."

Against Gilbert, Woodforde came on strong in the final two sets, following his well-stroked approach shots to the net where he hit winning volleys.

"It was rather strange at the beginning," said Woodforde, currently ranked 78th on the ATP Tour computer. "Brad was playing very short, and I wasn't sure whether he was nervous or whether he was trying to draw me in so he could have a target like he needs."

After losing to Gilbert in a perhaps overly-cautious first set, Woodforde decided to attack in the second.

"I made up my mind that I would pit my strength against his strength, my serve and net play against his passing shots," Woodforde said.

Leading 5-4 with Gilbert serving in the third, Woodforde had no doubt about his strategy.

"I knew that as soon as he gave me a chance, I'd be at the net," he said. "If he passed me, good for him. If not, I would win."

Woodforde came into the Gilbert match looking for personal confirmation and for public vindication. He left with both.

"It's great for your confidence when you beat a top 15 player," he said. Gilbert is currently 13th in the world. "It really picks up your mood."

"And I think that this is the best reply to having been left off the Davis Cup team. I want to win as many of my matches as I can now, to show them that they can't pass over me the next time our country plays."

Knight joins six others in Basketball Hall of Fame

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP)

In the end, Indiana coach Bob Knight, whose successes and excesses have illuminated the game, went gently into the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The gruffness was replaced with humility and his thoughts were of others Monday in this city where basketball began a century ago.

"More than anything else, when a coach is honored, it is a team honor," Knight said. "For all the people of all my teams, most of all the players, I'm very appreciative."

Also inducted were point guard Nate "Tiny" Archibald and two big men — Dave Cowens, who played most of his pro career with the Boston Celtics, and Harry Gallatin, who starred for the New York Knicks during the late 1940s and 1950s.

Former NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien, who died last September; Boris Stankovic, head of the International Basketball Federation, and the late Larry Fleisher, who founded the NBA Players Association, were the other inductees.

While Knight's temper tantrums have made headlines, his sideline skills have brought him every honor a college coach can win — NCAA titles in 1976, 1981 and 1987, the NIT crown in 1979, the gold medal at the 1984 Olympics and five Coach of the Year plaques.

Foreign governments slow to pay U.S. for Persian Gulf War

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maybe the United States government, which is having trouble collecting on pledges to help pay for the Persian Gulf War, should get some advice from the United Way. Or the March of Dimes.

These charities, like professional fund raisers, churches and public television stations, all report better success rates on collecting pledges than the U.S. government is having in collecting from six nations that promised to help defray the costs of the war.

So far the government has received $36.8 billion, or about two-thirds, of the $54.5 billion the wartime allies pledged, according to Defense Department figures.

Of course, raising money with a telethon or a march or a church pledge drive is not exactly the same as negotiating with Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Germany, Japan or South Korea.

"It's a little different situation than what we run into every day," said Thomas Benjamin, president of Fund Consultants Inc. of Manassas, Va.

Still, members of Congress have been critical of America's allies for being slow to deliver their promised aid.

And fund raisers say they, too, would be unhappy with a fulfillment rate of two-thirds.

"I never heard of anything like that; 90 percent would be pretty unusually low," said Ronald Vallet of the Ecumenical Center for Stewardship Studies of the National Council of Churches.

John Weeks of the American Heart Association, which raised $6.8 million of its $155.7 million budget through telephone pledges last year, said about 75 percent of the money pledged is actually paid.

"There is nowhere near the slippage that our federal government has experienced in trying to pay for the war," Weeks said.

Bob Beggan, senior vice president of the United Way, which raises a much larger share of its money through pledges, said the rate of collection is far higher than what the government is experiencing.

"It depends on whether there are layoffs and the state of the economy and it also varies from community to community," Beggan said. "Take a Detroit with the volatility of the automobile industry. There are times when there are difficulties either with buying or collective bargaining that uncollectable rates of 15 to 18 percent would be expected. Other times it would be 5 percent."

WETA in Washington, like many public television stations, raises money by receiving phoned-in pledges during special pledge periods. It offers books and records as premiums.

Sue Richmond, senior vice president for membership, said the fulfillment rate ranges from 88 percent to 94 percent. The station sends four bills at three-week intervals.

Benjamin of Fund Consultants said that on pledges for building programs, usually paid over a three-year period, the collection rate is generally around 90 percent. Corporate contributors normally come through with 100 percent, he said.

How would he feel about a rate of two-thirds? "Probably, depending on the cost of the campaign, you would be losing money," Benjamin said.

A State Department official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the government expects to collect all of the Gulf War pledges, although differences over amounts, exchange rates and the value of payments in kind will be negotiable.

"We don't feel that any of them are purposely stiffing us," the official said. "Some of them are probably being a little bit slower than we would have liked, but that's because they are making their own kinds of decisions about what has to be paid first, and things like that, and we are working with them."

"They also fully understand the consequences in terms of public and congressional attitudes toward those countries if they don't pay up, and we think that's a pretty strong incentive as well," the official said.

Michele Kling of the March of Dimes said that organization held about 1,400 walks around the country in 1990 to collect money to improve the health of babies. Half of the contributions were prepaid and half were pledged. Of the pledged money, 90 percent was collected.

Each person who pledges receives up to four follow-up telephone calls or letters.

"If we don't collect the money after that, it's a loss," Kling said.

The walks are held in the last weekend in April.

Lee Ann Hamrick, communications director for the March of Dimes' National Capital Area Chapter, said premiums, ranging from a squeeze bottle to a vacation for two, are given to walkers who get all their pledges turned in by May 24.

"I would say we enjoy about an 85 percent collection rate," Hamrick said. "Some chapters do even better. It kind of depends, I guess, on how aggressively you go after people."

UN chief says anti-Zionism resolution is wrong

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar on Monday criticized as "wrong and unfair" the General Assembly's 1975 resolution declaring that Zionism is a form of racism.

The resolution marked the low point of the U.N.-Israeli relationship and has complicated efforts to get a Mideast peace process going.

Arab nations want a U.N.-sponsored Middle East peace conference, or at the very least they want the United Nations present. Israel refuses to attend such a conference.

It fears that Arab and other Third World nations will lobby the world body into acting against the Jewish state at the conference table.

The United Nations has a history of rebuking Israel, or trying to do so. Many of the reprimands were vetoed by the United States.

On Monday, Perez de Cuellar was asked if the 1975 resolution saying that "Zionism is a form of racism and racial discrimination" blocks a U.N. role in the mideast peace process.

"I think they are two different things," he replied. "The United Nations has to play a role because it is an international organization of which Israel is a full member country."

"As far as the resolution on Zionism is concerned, my position has always been that there was a wrong and unfair interpretation of what Zionism is," Perez de Cuellar said.

"Zionism was first of all the need of the Jewish people to preserve their identity and at the same time to try and get a state for their nation," he said.

"You cannot say that trying to get a territory for your nation is racism. For instance, the Kurds or the Basques in Spain are not racists. These are two different things which should not be mixed up," he said.

The General Assembly passed the contentious resolution on Oct. 3, 1975, by a vote of 72-35, with 32 nations abstaining.

Last year, Vice President Dan Quayle pledged the United States would lead a drive to repeal the resolution, but the effort was quietly shelved during the Persian Gulf Crisis.

The United States and other Western nations did not push the issue because they did not want to alienate Arab states essential to the anti-Iraq coalition, such as Saudi Arabia, Syria and Egypt.

The dissolution of the East bloc, which had supported the original resolution, offers a new opportunity to overturn it.

In April, Polish President Lech Walesa pledged that his country's U.N. delegation would work to overturn the "Zionism-is-racism" resolution, and diplomats believe most Eastern European nations would now vote against it.

Sergei Lavrov, the Soviet Foreign Ministry's director of international organizations, told reporters: "I don't think it was the best resolution of the U.N. I don't think its ideas can promote peace and stability."

"As to modifying it, and how to rectify it, we have to wait and see, this depends on negotiations," Lavrov said.

The United States plans to seek another repeal the resolution, "but we're not going to kill ourselves. We'll make a push, but not if we're going to lose," said a senior U.S. diplomat who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Doctor: Federal rules could increase costs of pap smears

By PIERRE-YVES GLASS

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — New federal pap smear rules enacted to improve laboratory procedures could also lead to higher costs for the test and decrease the number of poor women who have it done, an expert says.

In writing the Clinical Laboratory Improvement Amendment, which is to take effect this year when final criteria are approved, Congress tried to eliminate sloppy laboratory practices by state-contracted "pap mills," which critics say use poorly trained, overworked staff.

The regulations limit the number of pap smears a technician can inspect daily and require closer inspections. Technicians will be tested biannually, and those who fail face losing their jobs.

New rules were needed, but the Health Care Financing Administration, or HICFA, went too far when it drew them up, especially with penalties, said Cathy Cohen, head of the Washington office of the American Society of Clinical Pathologists.

"We consider that harassment. We have trouble recruiting as it is now," she said. "The law was designed to help improve the technicians, but the penalties take them out of the field. That's not what Congress intended."

A shortage of technicians will cause an increase in costs and a drop in testing that will lead to more cases of cervical cancer, said Dr. Marshall Austin, chairman of the cytology committee of the South Carolina Pathology Society.

Austin made his report in the February edition of CAP Today, the national publication of the College of American Pathologists.

"Ironically, cytology experts believe that by driving up costs (the regulations will increase the proportion of smears being read in large pap mill labs," said Austin, a pathologist at Charleston's Roper Hospital.

He predicted the cost of pap smears would rise by up to 300 percent, from the current $10 to $30. Since it is considered a preventive treatment, pap smear tests generally are not covered by insurance.

"Low-income women, if they have to choose between buying a bag of groceries and having a pap smear, they'll buy a bag of groceries," Austin said.

The pap smear is the only proven screening test that can reduce the death rate of cervical cancer by up to 70 percent, according to the American Society of Cytology.

High risk groups are minority, rural and poor women. With a large share of such groups, South Carolina has the highest average rate of cervical cancer in the United States, according to the Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control.

"I have to agree with him that the cost of the pap smear will increase, and by increasing it may be a deterrent for women who need pap smears," said Pat Ashton, lobbyist for the American Society of Cytotechnology.

Ms. Ashton, who has a contract with HICFA to inspect labs, said the problem arose out of that agency's overzealous interpretation of the law passed by Congress.

Congress wanted periodic — not biannual — testing of technicians, as HICFA's rules say.

"It's excessive. They don't lose their skills in six months time. They (HICFA) have made punitive damages for failing so extreme that if you fail the exam, you're basically out of work," she said.

But Rhonda Whalen, a Baltimore-based HICFA official who helped draft the rules, said failing the test may mean a technician is not "truly competent to review slides."

She said the rules reflect the law passed by Congress.

"We did the best we could in interpreting the law. What we came up with is the final regulations," she said. "Legislation was enacted because people were hurt. Misdiagnosis had resulted in deaths. Congress enacted standards in cytology, we followed through with rules."

Members of Congress have written HICFA, saying the rules are not what they had in mind, said Ms. Ashton, who is based in Raleigh, N.C.

"We're kind of in an impasse at the moment," she said.

None of the nation's three main pathology and cytology associations have endorsed HICFA's rules. But the experts agreed most professionals support proficiency testing, provided the program is reasonable.

Madonna shows off her new outfit as she comes out of the screening of 'Truth or Dare' at the Cannes Film Festival on Monday.

Madonna wows fans in France

By SALVATORE ZANCA
Associated Press Writer

CANNES, France (AP) — Frenzied cheers erupted from 8,000 of Madonna's fans as she made a coy striptease entrance Monday night at the 44th Cannes Film.

A salvo of camera flashes lit up the Palais des Festivals theater when the American singer arrived after 11 p.m. for the screening of her film, Truth or Dare: In Bed With Madonna.

Pulling up to the entrance in a white limousine flanked by a joggling cordon of French police, Madonna emerged in a stunning rose-colored kimono, her previously platinum-blonde hair hanging in heavy brown curls.

The singer-movie star accommodated a horde of photographers and fans by pausing to pose every few steps up the famed Palais staircase.

At the head of the stair, the kimono fell from her shoulders to reveal her outlandish white bra with breast cups shaped like missile warheads.

Members of the crowd, some who had been waiting 12 hours for her arrival, squealed in delight.

"How do you feel?" a French TV interviewer asked.

"Great. Happiness. Thank you," Madonna replied.

"What did you attempt to show?" the journalist pressed.

"The truth," Madonna said, turning to enter the Palais. A stampede of photographers chasing after her spilled the television interviewer onto the red carpet.

Madonna repeated her performance to a diminished but no less enthusiastic crowd when she exited the Palais two hours later. This time, she allowed the kimono to fall low enough to reveal a garter belt.

Her brief appearances ended a weekend during which the American superstar hid out at hotels, teasing fans and the news media with a buildup to the screening.

The documentary of her "Blonde Ambition" tour has already opened in the United States and took in more than $100,000 its first day on just nine screens.

Crowds at the main entrance of the Palais des Festivals started jockeying for position at noon. Hundreds of police fought to keep them under control. Minutes before her arrival, loudspeakers began belting out Madonna songs.

The out-of-competition film has been the most-talked-about entry during the 12-day festival that started last Thursday.

Madonna arrived Saturday at the exclusive Eden Roc hotel at nearby

Antibes, face masked by dark sunglasses and a bouquet of yellow roses.

She is reportedly staying in a $2,300, two-story suite with an outdoor fountain.

Blonde or brunette, Madonna-mania was the talk of the town. Fans spoke only of "Jour M" — M-Day.

Truth or Dare documents the singer's daily life during her tour last year.

Madonna attended a party Sunday given by Dino De Laurentiis, who holds the overseas rights to her movie. The film's director, Alek Keshishian, pop singer Tina Turner and jury president Roman Polanski also showed up.

Not risking a limousine, Madonna traveled in a boat along the coast from Antibes to Cannes. An identical decoy boat flummoxed speedboats full of photographers.

Once on shore, her phalanx of bodyguards threw one young fan off a motor scooter when he ventured too close.

If your car is cracked up, what about your body?

After an auto accident, you automatically bring your car in for repairs, but what about your body? Chances are, if your car was damaged, so were you.

Auto accidents frequently cause whiplash, back and neck injuries. A chiropractic examination will identify any injuries you may have sustained. In many cases, through chiropractic treatment, unnecessary pain — even surgery — can be avoided.
