Slaton Entertains Basket Ball Teams

Friday of last week the boys and girls basket ball teams of Tahoka took cers for Slaton at which place a double header game was to be played with locals. The Tahoka boys won revenge from the Slaton squad, for the drubbing administered July 2nd, to the tune of eight to six. A clean snappy game, was the verdict of those who witnessed it.

Less lucky were the girls, in that they failed to get a game. When the two teams played in Tahoka the second of July, the Slaton bunch promised a return game for the ninth. Wednesday one of the Tahoka team designated for that purpose, called a representative of Slaton's team and was informed that unless advised otherwise, by wire, for the tahoka team to be there Friday. The wire never came, and as is always the case, Tahoka was Johnny on the spot. Arrived in Slaton, there was no one to meet Tahoka's team, and they were forced to rustle a place to change into their uniforms. Arrived at the grounds, they found a part of Slaton's team there in uniform, but were informed that there would be no game. No reason was given. A pow wow followed in which our girls offered to play anything Slaton had, even going so far as to offer to allow them to fill out their lineup with boys. There was absolutely nothing doing. During the course of the chin game, one Slaton girl answered the query of "Did they have enough players?" with "Yes, such as they are." But such as they had they seemed a little shy of pitting against Tahoka's winning team.

Yes, Tahoka paid their own expenses too. Makes us think about that story of the fellow that sat on the dime. How does it go?

METHODIST REVIVAL GOOD

The Methodist meeting begun Sunday at eleven by pastor Ledger assisted by Alfred Arnfield of Lamesa, is progressing nicely. Fairly good crowds attend the eleven o'clock services and large crowds are present at the night services.

Monday a petition was circulated asking the business men to close from ten to eleven o'clock each morning. Most of the firms signed it.

E. L. Howard manager of the Star theatre, closed after the Tuesday night program for the remainder of the week with the exception of the Saturday matinee and night program.

Why spend extra time and money preparing fruit punch for your home use? Parkhurst has it ready made, properly blended, needing only ice and plain water to prepare it for use. 46 h

We understand that a Slaton merchant was in town this past week, looking for a building in which to install a stock of goods.

Ed. Henderson, wife and two daughters left Tuesday morning for Canyon, where the girls will re-enter school. They made the trip in his car.

The citizens of O'Donnell will be host to the surrounding country at a barbecue and picnic the 23rd of this month.

Haggart Released On $2,500 Bond

The mandate from the Court of Criminal Appeals at Austin in the Haggart case has been returned and was received by District Clerk Skillman yesterday. According to the law in the case, Haggart, who is charged with a serious offense against a thirteen year old girl, was released as soon as the mandate had been received on his old bond. The amount was $2,500.

The Heggart case will probably come up for retrial in the fall term of court. The new trial was granted on account of some alleged irregularities with regard to the admission of testimony.—Amarillo Daily News.

At the time of his arrest, about a year ago, Haggart was engineer on the Slaton-Lamesa branch line, and was taken into custody at the latter named town. On his first hearing he was found guilty and sentenced to life imprisonment.

A party composed of Bob Forrester and family, Mr. Cobb and wife of Wilson, Messers and Mesdames S. N. and F. E. McDaniell, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Scott, Roscoe Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Rose and Clay Hughes of Tahoka, spent Saturday night and Sunday at the railway tank north of Post City. They report few fish but a fine time.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Rutledge and daughter, Ruth, of Amarillo, came down the latter part of last week, and are visiting at the home of Mrs. Rutledge's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Ramsey. John Raymond Ramsey of Plainview, came in Monday evening for a several days visit, and the family are having a reunion.

Ed Redwine, is this week in attendance at the State Sheaff's convention at Waco.

MAY COME BACK TO TAHOKA

The rumor comes to Tahoka from people intimate with the family, that W. E. Porterfield, an ex merchant of Tahoka, will return to Tahoka this fall and again engage in the mercantile business.

He has just closed out his mammoth stock in Post City, and will spend the summer in the north and on the Pacific coast. During the time he will take in the exposition.

Mr. and Mrs. Garret and Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Renshaw of Sterling City, came in Sunday to attend the funeral of Robert Elton Henderson. Gwing to motor trouble they did not arrive until after the body had been interred. They returned home the first of the week.

From Dance Platform To Pulpit

To start a contribution list to build a public tabernacle in Tahoka to be used for any and all public gatherings of a moral character, Paul Miller donated to the committee, the dance platform which has been located just north of the Hotel St. Clair. The committee were canvassing the town the first of the week to raise sufficient money to complete a tabernacle, by using the lumber in the old dance platform.

We need the tabernacle all right. The committee have the offer of the lease of a lot on the corner of Alley and Harper streets for five years free of all costs. With the donation of lumber already made, and the offer of the two lumber yards to split the bill and sell to the committee at cost, there is no valid reason why within the next few days, Tahoka should not have a public tabernacle under construction.

MILL GETS WATER AT 84 FEET

Tuesday morning Frank King finished the well on the block south-east of the depot, upon which the Snyder Oil Mill company are erecting their Tahoka plant. Frank informed the News man that he struck a good flow of water at eighty-four feet. The company may put down another well to assure plenty of water for all purposes.

Tom Higgins, of the firm of Higgins & Riddle dray men, tells us that he has a contract to haul six car loads of material for the oil mill people to be used in the erection of the buildings to house their plant at this place.

The company has completed its office building and work on the main building is being pushed.

The annual convention of the Colorado to Gulf Highway Association will be held in July 29th and 30th. Tahoka is on this road and should have a representative at this meeting.

If you haven't tried the South American Drink, El Mati, served at the Parkhurst fountain, well you have one more pleasant surprise in store for you. 46 h Elmhr Coughran, wife and two small children of Marfa, Texas, came in on the Tuesday evening train to visit Mrs. Coughran's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Ketner.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Thomas made a flying trip to Lubbock Tuesday.

W. C. Cowan of five miles of Tahoka, was in town Monday collecting the bounty on a sack full of rabbit scalps.

C. P. Gentry, this week sold his residence in the south part of Tahoka, known as the Whipp place. Consideration is unknown. He will probably build again in the near future.

Plans Exhibited For Court House

There are tacked up in the corridor of the court house, a couple of blue prints of the court house proposed for Lynn county, should the bond issue to be voted upon the 31st day of this month, carry.

The maximum figure of either of these plans would be $42,000, $18,000 less than the limit of the bond issue.

Go, view these plans, and you will have some idea of the structure contemplated by our county fathers, if the citizenry see fit to authorize the construction of a new temple of justice.

While we favor the issuance of bonds for the erection of a courthouse and jail combined, we do not wish to influence any one to do anything they will regret later; but listening to a couple of voters discuss the bond issue pro and con, we overheard a little favorable argument that struck us as being very forceful. The supporter of the issue made the statement that a jail was a necessity, and the other admitted the fact. He also stated that the county needed a safer place for the deposit of county records, and his companion acquiesced. By calculations based upon figures submitted by architects, it would cost $14,000 to construct a jail adequate to the permanent needs of the county; it would cost another $2,500 or $3,000 to provide a suitable depository for county records, that would fulfill the present demand for "safety first." "Then" said he, "why not multiply by two and a half and build the jail and vault together, and have the court house too. For we will have to build it in a very few years at the outside."

Pretty good logic, it appears to us.

There has been called to meet at Amarillo, on Wednesday July 28th, at 2 p. m. representative farmers, merchants, feed buyers and hardware men, for the purpose of launching a maize and kaffir corn educational and advertising campaign. Experiments by successful feeders have proven maize and kaffir to be the equal of corn for feeding purposes, yet it brings not more than half the price of corn. These two crops being the main stay of the Plains country, it is to our mutual interest to educate the people who spend more money on corn for the same amount of fattening qualities, to the adaptability of maize and kaffir for the same purpose. The object of the campaign is to make the maize and kaffir markets steady, and bring these products into more direct competition with corn for feeding purposes.

Double Funeral Sunday Afternoon

The citizens of Tahoka were called upon Sunday to participate in the sad co-incidence of laying to rest Robert Elton Henderson, son of Tahoka's first postmistress, and Mrs. Mary A. Walker, mother of Tahoka's present postmaster. It is the first time in the history of the town that two people were buried the same day.

Hurt last winter in a foot ball game, Hobert Elton had never recovered his normal health. Later some disease growing out of these injuries took hold of him, and for the yas six months love, skill and wealth have allied themselves against the Destroyer, but to no avail.

The doctors of Canyon, where the family were staying for school purposes, being unable to benefit the boy, his parents came to Tahoka and placed him under the treatment of the family doctor, J. H. McCoy. Rallying for a time, the family took hope for his recovery, but it was not to be. As a last resort the A carried him to Fort Worth, and every doctor in and around there was called at different times in consultation of observation; but each and every one admitted himself to be baffled. As a last resort, one of the most eminent specialists of spinal diseases of the nation, was called, and he was powerless to aid. And then death ended the struggle. The body was prepared for burial and shipped to Post City. The relatives from Tahoka, and two sisters, who were in school at Canyon State Normal, met the father and mother, and the corpse, and came to Tahoka Saturday night in autos.

Funeral services and interment were made at the Tahoka cemetery Sunday even about six-thirty.

Robert Elton Henderson, only son of W. E. and Fanny Henderson. Was born June 28th, 1900, in Sterling City, Texas. With his parents he moved to Tahoka in the spring of 1903. For she past three years has been a student in the West Texas State college at Canyon City, Texas. At the time of his death he was fifteen years and eleven days of age. He leaves besides his mother and father, two sisters, grandfather and grandmother, and several aunts and uncles to mourn his loss. He was a dutiful son, stood high in his classes and was well liked by his school fellows. Had he lived, it was his intention to become a civil engineer.

Saturday evening on the stroke of seven, the last fleeting breath was drawn, and the spark of life went out of the mortal body of Mrs. Mary A. Walker, mother of J. B. Walker, postmaster of Tahoka.

Mrs. Walker came to make her home with her son here, nearly a year ago, and has practically been an invalid the entire time. A sufferer of acute diabetes, there was no hope in the world for her recovery, but with the natural reluctance to give up our loved ones, every effort was put forth to prolong her life. Last fall the doctors gave her up and all her children gathered to say good bye, but the hand of death was stayed and they returned to their homes. It was the last time that most of them ever saw her. Besides her son, J. B., with whom she was living, Mrs.

Contract Awarded Wire Shook Bldg.

Two Amarillo firms were yesterday awarded the contracts for the handling of the materials and expert labor for the electric work on a large new business block which is being erected in Tahoka, Texas, by A. D. Shook of that city. Mr. Shook was in the city in connection with the deal.

The house is to be two stories and is to contain, on the ground floor, four modern store rooms. The second floor will be given over to business offices. The building will require quite a large amount of electrical work. The contracts were awarded to the Nunn Electric company and the Finklea Electric company.—Amarillo Daily News.

Mr. W. B. Finklea arrived in Tahoka Tuesday to superintend the work.

While in the main the above account is correct, information from the best sources is to the effect that the south part of the first floor will be given over to the Ed Meers furniture store, while the north part of the ground floor will be occupied by the offices, lobby, dining room and kitchen of a hotel. The upstairs will be cut into rooms. From the same source we learn that this hotel will be furnished handsomely throughout. There will be two baths on the second floor with lavatory and toilet in connection. D. A. Parkhurst has the contract to paint and paper the building.

Hatchett of Jones county, who has been here some three weeks was the only other one of the children at her bedside when death claimed her.

Mrs. Mary A. Walker, nee Bostic, was born in Pleana, Alabama, in 1853. Was the mother of ten children, six boys and four girls: C. M., and P. A. Walker of Oklahoma; J. E. Walker of Elsbore, Texas; S. A. Walker of Sayre, Texas, and J. B. Walker of Tahoka. Mrs. Castleman of Breckenridge, Texas; Mrs. Day and Mrs. Kinabe of Oklahoma, and Mrs. Hatchett of Jones county. Her husband died about five years ago in Alabama, after which she broke up housekeeping and has lived with her children since. She was a devout christian.

Funeral services were held at the Baptist church by Rev. J. E. Nicholson Sunday at five p. m. and interment made in the Tahoka cemetery immediately afterward.

NEW FOUNT AND PICTURE SHOW

C. P. Gentry purchased the soda fount of the McGill drug store and has installed them in the building between Mrs. Roberts' restaurant and Carter Bros.' store. He stated to a representative of the News that he intended enlarging and improving his place of business right away.

He also informed us that he had received the bill of lading for a motor driven six projector for a moving picture theatre to be installed some where on the south side of the square. He figures on erecting a building just west of the Jim Gamble garage. He will receive his light from a 150 kilowatt dynamo driven by a nine horse two cylinder gas engine. Does not figure to begin operations before the summer series of meetings are over.

NOTICE AND PUBLICATION OF ORDER OF COMMISSIONERS' COURT DECLARING RESULT OF LOCAL OPTION ELECTION.

The State of Texas) Notice is County of Lynn,) hereby given that the Commissioners' Court of Lynn County, Texas, made and entered its order in Vol. 1, pages 452 and 453, of the Minutes of the Commissioners' Court of Lynn County, Texas, on the 16th day of June, A. D. 1915, declaring the result of the local option election held in Lynn County, Texas, on the 5th day of June, 1915, which said order is in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

"The State of Texas) Whereas, County of Lynn,) in accordance with an order heretofore made by this court and after due notice thereof had been given as is required by law, an election was duly held in the several voting precincts of Lynn County, Texas, on the 5th day of June A. D. 1915, to determine whether or not the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited in said Lynn County, Texas; and,

Whereas, on the 16th day of June A. D. 1915, at a regular term of this court, the returns of the aforesaid election were duly canvassed and the votes cast in said election duly counted by this court, and returns and votes showing that there were cast in said election 241 votes and that there were cast in favor of the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors in said Lynn County, Texas, 188 votes, and that there were cast in said election against the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors in Lynn County, Texas, 53 votes.

It is therefore ordered, adjudged and decreed by the court that, there having been cast in said election a majority of the votes in favor of the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors in Lynn County, Texas, the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be and is here-

CHICKEN THIEF LEAVES HORSE

Tuesday night about eleven-thirty, a chicken thief entered the coop of S. S. Ramsey in North Tahoka. Being just a little careless, an old hen gave up the squawk, and as the boys of the family happened to still be up, business immediately picked up.
The chicken thief quit the flat, not even bothering to take away the horse he rode up there, and which he left tied to the fence.

The sheriff's department was notified, and the horse put up.
Wednesday morning, Mr. Talbert, who lives down by the railroad track south of the depot, was hunting his horse and upon inquiry of the sheriff's department learned that such an animal was held at the Ramsey home.

Mr. Ramsey has been loosing chickens off and on for some time, but Tuesday night's affair is the nearest they ever came to paying their respects to their nocturnal visitor.

This the 21st day of June A. D.

one regulate the actions of a

One drink of whiskey may not make a man drunk, it depends on the man. But one drink leaves an appetite for another, and a few drinks maseat the reasoning pow-the maniac, but you can remove the cause of his insanity. An

STOMACH TROUBLE

FOR FIVE YEARS

Majority of Friends Thought Mr. Hughes Would Die, But One Helped Him to Recovery.

Pomeroyton, Ky.—In interesting advice from this place, Mr. A. J. Hughes writes as follows: "I was down with stomach trouble for five (5) years, and would have sick headaches so bad, at times, that I thought surely I would die. I tried different treatments, but they did not seem to do me any good. I got so bad, I could not eat or sleep, and all my friends, except one, thought I would die. He advised me to try Thedford's Black-Draught, and quit taking other medicines. I decided to take his advice, although I did not have any confidence in it. I have now been taking Black-Draught for three months, and it has cured me—haven't had those awful sick headaches since I began using it. I am so thankful for what Black-Draught has done for me." Thedford's Black-Draught has been found a very valuable medicine for derangements of the stomach and liver. It is composed of pure, vegetable herbs, contains no dangerous ingredients, and acts gently, yet surely. It can be freely used by young and old, and should be kept in every family chest. Get a package today. Only a quarter.

The White Terror

CHAPTER V.

When the Clock Struck Ten!

THE doctor endeavored to reassure the millionaire about his daughter.

"If you send her to a sanatorium where she will have outdoor life, proper medicine and nourishing foods she will get well. That is what the Everytown Anti-tuberculosis society would recommend. This is as yet but an incipient case."

Then the physician gave Boyd a peculiar glance. There was something on his mind that he had long wanted to discuss with the father of his patient.

"Above all, Mr. Boyd," he said determinedly, "do not let her take any of your Sacc-Ozone."

Boyd's face flushed.

"Do you think my business is a scheme to obtain money under false pretenses? Do you really mean to insult me, to accuse me of a felony?"

"The man of science waved his hand deprecatingly.

"No, I do not mean any insult, but as your family physician it is my duty to tell you that your daughter will die if you administer any Sacc-Ozone to her or any other of a hundred or more of these so-called 'Sure Cures.'"

His voice rose to a high pitch, and he exclaimed vehemently:

"One of the chief processes in the cure of disease is diagnosis. How can a bottle of your Sacc-Ozone or a bottle of your celebrated Multikural diagnose a case of any kind? Have they the power of thinking and speaking? Did they ever study for years under trained professors and have the benefit of advice from the noted medical books of the world?"

Boyd's head hung in shame. He realized the truth of the doctor's words.

"Why, my dear man, the hospitals and the tenements of every great city are teeming with victims of patent medicines and are now in the last stages of their maladies. Don't you continue to be a party to legalized murder. The manipulations of the patent medicine lobby in Washington are responsible for as many deaths as the civil war."

"Thank you, doctor," was Boyd's answer. "I will do with Eleanor as you suggest. I will send her to Dr. Rankford's sanatorium at East Tarrytown."

In parting the physician decided to make one more strong appeal to Boyd's conscience while it was wavering between wealth and duty.

ARRESTED FOR JOY RIDING.

Earl (Curley) Wamock of Amarillo, a workman on the Normal, was sentenced Monday by Judge C. E. Coss to six months in jail and $100 fine for joy riding in R. L. Marquis' car a week ago Saturday night. The Marquis family returned from the Normal reception at midnight and put the car in the garage. At seven o'clock Sunday morning Mr. Marquis found the car missing. Sheriff Jennings was notified and within a short time discovered the car near the George Jones' home. There was considerable damage done to the car. A sack bearing the name of an Amarillo eating house found in the car brought out the facts that Curley had bought eight hamburgers at that place between two and three o'clock that morning. He was accompanied by other men and two women. Sheriff Jennings had him in jail by noon but he would not confess until Monday morning of this week.

The law under which he was sent to jail went into effect at midnight Saturday. The car was taken out a very few minutes later and Curley was in jail within 12 hours. This is the first known case in the state under which the law was applied.—Randal County News.

A. L. Lockwood is pilot of a Cadillac six these days.

The T-ranch has a gang busy now putting up sixteen windmills. Fourteen of these were destroyed in the recent storm that swept that section, and two that were worn out.

The moving gang are moving the barber shop of S. M. Clayton, about four feet west today. A building will go in between the barber shop and the office of Atty. C. H. Cain. We were unable to learn who will occupy this new building.

"Mythology tells us," he said, "that a sacrifice of twelve Athenian young men and women was made yearly to the Minotaur, a savage, half human beast owned by a rival king, to pay a certain indemnity. Such a cruel decree brought forth many heroes, eager to battle the terrible monster."

"Modern fact teaches us that a sacrifice of nearly a million men and women and children is made yearly to the 'great white plague, tuberculosis, to pay for ignorance and unsanitary conditions."

"Are we going to stand idly by and see this awful death toll go on?"

Boyd stared fixedly at the physician, then said in serious tones:

"You have handed me a very severe indictment. I will have your statements investigated."

Eleanor's fever rose slightly during the evening, probably because of a presentiment that had vaguely haunted her regarding Brand. She knew that Duncan and her father would not let him pass unscathed while the Clarion continued its crusade. The worryment finally oppressed her mind to such an extent that she reached over to an extension telephone on a table at her bedside. She would call up Brand. She must have a talk with him.

She was connected with the editorial room of the paper and asked for Brand.

Suddenly the girl's eyes extended in horror. She gasped convulsively.

"My God!" she shrieked and fell back in a faint on the pillow. The telephone and receiver fell clattering to the floor from her nerveless fingers.

At the same moment in his library, where he had been pacing restlessly up and down, Emmerson Boyd was seen to pause momentarily and throw up his hands with a horrified expression.

A terrible sound crashed over the city—crashed into his ears. He bolted toward the window. A great red cloud swept up from the direction of city hall square. He sank back weakly.

"What has Duncan done—heaven's what has he done?" he choked. "It must be murder!" The usually calm features of the magnate were blanched and tensely drawn as his guilty conscience applied the full measure of its torture.

The fatal hour of 10 had arrived, the hour set by Duncan to meet his criminal accomplices at the Clarion building!

Duncan and his two aids proceeded, wholly intent on the success of their foul task, that eventful night. They met at their rendezvous in the rear of the Clarion building just as the city hall clock pealed out the appointed hour. They finally decided on the most advisable place for their bomb. Duncan's two dupes left Duncan lurking in an alleyway and skulked craftily toward the back doorway of the Clarion building with the bomb.

Duncan awaited their return expectantly.

Much to his disgust, in a few minutes the men came rushing back with the bomb.

"What's the matter?" he demanded. "Two coppers in sight!" they gasped. "Cowards! Fools!" snarled Duncan. "Give me that little toy!"

He seized the bomb and started on a run for the rear entrance of the building. Undiscovered he reached a gloomy hallway extending along a wall of the managing editor's office. Swiftly and surely he unwrapped the fatal missile and laid it against the sorbise. He pressed the little button that started the clock apparatus inside which would explode the dynamite in four minutes—plenty of time for him to escape in the gathering darkness.

Boom! Crash!

Walls rocked. Ceilings fell. Floors and furniture throughout the structure were blown to splinters and heaped in confused masses of debris.

Flames began to creep through the structure, and huge clouds of smoke rolled eastward before a rising wind.

Editor Cole and Matthew Brand, busily engaged in preparing additional reform copy for the next morning's edition, did not escape the effect of the miscreant's act.

A piece of wall struck Cole and knocked him insensible. Brand, struck down by falling plaster and cut by flying glass, reeled backward to the floor with a broken arm.

Police and firemen, soon to the scene of the catastrophe, took many bodies from the ruins. Brand and Cole and several other members of the staff were still breathing when dragged from the suffocating smoke.

One of the bodies found, which was to be silent forever, was that of the loathsome Duncan.

He had paid the price for his crime and cheated the law of its right to do it for him. The wages of sin is death.

Duncan's messenger of destruction had exploded prematurely by reason of defective mechanism.

Emmerson Boyd, appalled by the result of the conspiracy now that it was actually consummated, was prostrated at his home.

He was forced to drug himself in order to sleep. And in sleep grim specters pursued him, haunted his brain.

He saw a great graveyard. The tombstones were marked "Sacc-Ozone" and "Multikuroi," and skeletons and ghosts of men, women and children paraded before him. They pointed accusing fingers at him. They heaped curses on him. They wept. Then they would dance, jeering at Boyd in hysterical laughter. Sometimes he thought he could hear the rattle of arm and skull joints.

He awoke. A great transformation had transpired in the heart and soul of Emmerson Boyd. Penitent tears streamed down his cheeks. He knelt at his bedside and prayed to Almighty God for forgiveness. He would devote the remaining years of his life laboring for the welfare of Everytown.

The papers endeavored to connect him with the crime when one of the dead was recognized as that of Duncan. The accepted theory, however, finally was that Duncan was in the building to have another conference with Brand, if possible.

The editor and his backer, now in the city hospital, were found to be seriously but not fatally hurt. Their recovery was assured, and a bulletin to that effect issued by the hospital staff gave widespread joy among the public.

Eleanor, strengthened by the treatment of her physician, was soon able to be up and around for a few days and prepare to go to the sanatorium. She noticed that a great change had come over her father. He would sit in his library and gaze out of a window for long periods, evidently in a pronounced reflective mood, most unusual, she knew, for that big, active brain and body that for years had been almost superhuman in physical energy.

Eleanor sent for Brand to say good-bye before she left for East Tarrytown and to talk to him about the transformation in her father's attitude. She felt that she knew the reason for it. She wanted Brand to be informed on the subject, and now she felt instinctively that he and Brand could be brought together in friendly bonds.

Matthew, now able to superintend the rebuilding of the Clarion establishment, although with his arm in a sling, was sore in heart at Eleanor's trouble with her health, but overjoyed at her belief that he and her father could meet on a friendly basis. He knew that with the sincere co-operation of the manufacturer he could do worlds to fight the great white plague in most telling manner.

Brand found Eleanor's conclusions to be well founded.

It was a different Emmerson Boyd that now listened attentively to the enthusiastic humanitarian from the overbearing Emmerson Boyd who ordered the then despised "young reformer" out of his mansion.

"I tell you, Mr. Boyd," said Brand, walking up and down the library, his voice vibrant with enthusiasm, "if we work together with the doctors in this war on disease we can decrease the death rate not only in Everytown, but throughout the entire country. In a surprising manner. I am convinced from my investigations that we can save 500 lives a year in this city alone." Then he paused significantly. "But you know the most important thing that I have in mind that you could do?"

Boyd looked Matthew squarely in the eye. Then he swung around and directed his eyes out of the window. After a few moments he turned back to Brand.

Eleanor, a spectator of the drama, sprang forward and clutched her father's arm. She drew his head down to hers and kissed him tenderly.

"Father, do as Matthew says. I know what he means. Remember what the doctor told you. Do it, father; please do."

Emmerson Boyd thrust the girl gently away.

He stepped forward and grasped Brand's hand and shook it warmly.

"I will do what you want and what Eleanor desires and, after all, I guess what most of the public and the doctors would have me do."

His voice then took on a firmer tone. "I will try," he went on, "to read just my affairs so that I will not have to manufacture any more Sacc-Ozone and Multikuroi."

"Great, great!" cried Brand in pure exultation.

"Oh, daddy, I'm so glad," exclaimed Eleanor. "Now we can all be so happy together--then her voice saddened--"when I get well and come back home."

"You will come back safe and sound," said Boyd soothingly.

Then he looked meaningfully from one to the other. He was about to tell them something that he well knew they were most anxious to hear.

"I want to tell you, children," he said in tones of emotion, "that I withdraw all objection to your marriage. In fact, I command it."

He turned from them as Matthew took Eleanor into his arms.

It is one year since the eventful meeting between Matthew Brand and Emmerson Boyd, when Eleanor Boyd made peace between them. Eleanor has returned from the sanatorium thoroughly cured, and she has been the bride of Matthew Brand these six months.

Everytown promptly expressed its gratitude when its people read in the columns of the New Clarion this unexpected announcement:

CLEANING UP EVERYTOWN. NOTED MILLIONAIRE, EMMERSON BOYD, BECOMES A PHILANTHROPIST. WILL DEVOTE IMMENSE FORTUNE TO IMPROVING CONDITIONS IN OUR COMMUNITY.

Boyd's first step was to found a handsome sanatorium for the treatment of tuberculosis, which he endowed and turned over to the Everytown Anti-tuberculosis society. He tore down the old tenements of the Boyd corporation and put up rows of individual brick houses with latest sanitary improvements. He raised the scale of pay in the various departments and subsidiary companies of the Boyd corporation to give the men a living wage, and he reconstructed his different buildings to provide clean, healthful surroundings for his employees. Reading and lunch rooms in his factories were among the reforms he inaugurated.

In addition he bought a tract of seven acres on the outskirts of the city and presented it to Everytown as a park. "In memory," he said before the common council, "of my late beloved wife."

At the elaborate banquet given Boyd at the dedication of the Boyd sanatorium a popular toast was pronounced by Matthew Brand when he arose and said:

"Here's to the health of Emmerson Boyd, Everytown's great benefactor." "This demonstration has moved me more than I can tell," spoke Emmerson Boyd, rising amid the applause which greeted his name. "I am now convinced that the lesson of true happiness in this life is taught only by each individual following the dictates of his conscience."

He aroused still further favor when he said, waving a sheet of printed paper before him:

"I am going to urge the legislature to adopt the following amendments to the state labor law:

"First.—All factories shall be well lighted, well ventilated and kept clean. All gases, vapors, dust or other impurities injurious to health which are generated in manufacturing processes shall be as far as practicable rendered harmless.

"Second.—Adequate washing and sanitary facilities shall be provided.

"Third.—Hoods, suction pipes, fans or blowers shall be provided for the protection of persons using emery wheels or other apparatus which produce particles of dust injurious to the health of the employees.

"Fourth.—Suitable receptacles for expectoration shall be provided for in all factories.

The enthusiasm of the citizens rose to a still higher pitch when Brand said these words:

"I propose another toast, ladies and gentlemen. 'Here's to the decreased death rate of Everytown. It has fallen off 8 per cent in the last year, and during the next twelve months we believe it will go still lower. Also we should drink to the new Workmen's Compensation board, the Free Municipal Dispensary established through Mr. Boyd's influence and to the trained nurses brought to Everytown at his expense to work among the poor."

It was the new Emmerson Boyd who walked from the banquet hall, Eleanor and Matthew Brand.

"I never knew until the last year," said gravely, "how much has there is to be gained in work benefit your fellow townspeople will make Everytown the model of the country."

"Yes, father," Eleanor whispered softly. "I know you will, and you are doing just what mother have you do."

The timid old lady asked the baggage master if her parcel would reach "Frisco intact."

Said that official, "Let's see."

Thereupon, he threw it on the floor. Once, "That's for Chicago." Twice, "That's for Kansas City." Third, "That's for Denver." The fourth time, he dashed it on the floor with extra violence. The box broke. The contents were scattered about.

"You see, mum, it wouldn't reach."
