Faces Virtual Insurrection...

Schweiker Defends Reagan's Social Security Proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker today defended the Reagan administration's embattled Social Security plans, saying the financially shaky system needs more than "stop-gap and Band-Aid approaches."

Schweiker, chief architect of the Reagan package, told a hostile House Select Committee on Aging that the proposed cuts "are aimed at resolving the most serious crisis in the 46-year history of the Social Security system."

But in a sharp rebuke to the proposals announced nine days ago, the Senate voted 96-0 Wednesday to assure older Americans that their Social Security benefits would not be reduced if they retire before age 65.

Schweiker said, however, that prompt action to restore Social Security's financial health is imperative.

"It has become clear that stop-gap and Band-Aid approaches will not work," he said, and cited the urgent need to correct "excessive incentives built into the system to claim benefits early, penalties for continued work effort, and overemphasis on the social adequacy or welfare aspects."

He said the only alternatives to benefit cuts would be to raise the payroll tax, which he said would be unfair to workers "and a serious drag on the economy," or to inject general revenues into the system, which he said would require increasing other taxes.

Schweiker said the proposal to give 62-year-old retirees only 55 percent of full benefits — instead of the current 80 percent — would not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1982, and would affect "no one who will be 62 or over before next January." He also said that workers who wait until they were 63 and eight months old to retire would still get 80 percent of benefits under the plan.

The administration is encountering a virtual congressional insurrection over its Social Security plan. Wednesday's rebukes by the Republican-controlled Senate and by House Democrats came even before the administration could make its first official pitch to Congress in defense of the cuts.

The House committee's chairman, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., opened the first congressional hearing on the plan today by blasting the Reagan proposals, saying, "The magnitude of these cuts is staggering."

Contest Judges Visit Hermleigh

HERMLEIGH—Judges in community improvement competition visited Hermleigh yesterday, but the outcome of the regional judging will not be known for another day.

The judges were scheduled to visit Imperial today, and following the stop there, they are expected to announce a regional winner.

Hermleigh had one honor bestowed yesterday, however. A home improvement certificate was presented to the community after the judges observed the number of new homes and the improvements to residential property in the community.

Competing for regional honors are Hermleigh, Follet and Imperial. The contest is sponsored by the Texas A&M University Extension Service and electric utility companies of the state.

Here for the Hermleigh visit yesterday were Tim Shaunty, area resource development specialist from College station; Bill Gunter, district extension agent from Lubbock; Nancy Brown, clothing specialist from College Station; Jack Jones, regional development specialist from College Station, and Dennis Fisher, economist for small business from College Station.

Measles Vaccine Probed

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — National experts have been asked to find out why dozens of area residents fell victim to a measles outbreak, even though they were vaccinated against the virus after 1968.

Scientists from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta were asked to study the discovery that almost half of El Paso's recent measles victims had been immunized with a post-1968 vaccine that should have been effective, a local health official said Wednesday.

Counties Under Scrutiny

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Purchasing records from six more Northeast Texas counties have been requested in an investigation of an alleged kickback scheme that already has led to indictments against 11 people.

U.S. Attorney John Hannah sent letters to the county auditors of Gregg, Harrison, Marion, Upshur, Wood and Camp counties asking for records of all purchases of road machinery and supplies for the last five years.

Hannah's letter requested the names and addresses of all salesmen who have sold such items and estimates of how much business each has done with each county.

Compromise May Be Near On Tax Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, after sending signals that it was not "locked in concrete" on its multiyear tax cut, is nearing agreement on a compromise 25 percent cut in personal tax rates over three years, congressional sources say. The first reduction would come Oct. 1.

There was no immediate comment from the White House on the latest indication that it was softening its position on the size and shape of its proposed 30 percent, three-year tax cut.

House Democratic Leader Jim Wright, who has held several strategy sessions with White House aides, told reporters today that a compromise seems close at hand. He predicted that any agreement would include a multiyear tax cut, to please Reagan, and more tax relief for middle-income families than the president proposed, to gain support of Democrats.

There was no any indication of how the administration proposal would do in Congress, where the original tax cut plan has been called inflationary.

Wright emphasized that any compromise submitted by the White House would have to carry the full endorsement of Reagan.

The SDN Column

The late Boyce House, who became famous for telling Texas stories, said "You can always tell a Texan, but you can't tell him very much."

This characteristic, which House capitalized upon to produce a newspaper column and books, became quite well known during World War II as many Texans who had never been outside their home county before were suddenly shuffled to other states and even into foreign countries.

So it was that many regional traits were thrown together, and in most cases, those with the biggest voices prevailed. And it was said in many a military unit that nobody could out-talk a Texan.

Every section of the counry has its own peculiarities, or perhap customs would be a better word. This may puzzle people from other areas until they understand.

For example, there has been some discussion among newcomers from the Northeast who have recently moved to Dallas about the local custom of drivers stopping their cars while a funeral procession goes by.

It seems that this isn't done in Yankeeland.

If they think Dallas goes overboard on this, they should have moved to Galveston. There is one of those Boyce House type stories about the man in Galveston who was late for an appointment, but was being delayed by a funeral procession. Finally, he switched on his car lights and joined it. After proceeding several blocks to a street where he wished to turn off, he was in the process of doing so when a motorcycle policeman objected.

"Back in line pal; you joined the line—it's your funeral."

He wound up at the cemetery where the policeman made him remain for the entire service.

Then there's the story about the Texan who was about to wed a girl in another state. When he sought a marriage license, the clerk said, "Okay, but where is the bride-elect?"

"What do you mean, bride-elect?" the Texan said. "There wasn't any election. I appointed her."

resisting budget cuts

As the special interest groups who may be affected by proposed Reagan budget cuts resist their possible return to honest employment, it has not been surprising to see them fighting back, using whatever means are at hand to protect their places at the public trough. Most of them have extensive resources at their disposal.

Each public agency has a Public Information Office, consisting of a number of professional writers and publicists whose primary job is building public support for bigger appropriations for their agencies. More films are made in Washington than in Hollywood, and most of them are directly or indirectly designed to tell the people that the government is doing a dandy job and ought to have more money.

These professional people are adept at the planted story, the heart-tugging example of the person who just doesn't know how he or she will survive (or continue to help those less fortunate) if this or that budget cut is actually made. Their fulltime job is to find the kind of stories that might attract reader interest or sympathy and then point them out to media people. Of course, in the vast panoploy of federal programs, they are going to find some. Some agencies even provide pre-written, type-set stories with pictures or illustrations for low-budget newspapers or magazines.

Sometimes wire service reporters allow these stories whole, culling their prefab quotes from one side and passing them along as news. Sometimes these stories make their way into newspapers.

Thus in recent weeks we have seen what appeared to be a routine feature story on a "creative" food distribution program in Detroit headed by an "imaginative, shrewd Catholic priest," which wonderful program, we learn in the middle, may be threatened by Reagan budget cuts. A story based on an interview with a doctor who is chairman of a peer review program (obviously an interested party) begins: "Doctors' groups are moving to thwart, or at least modify, a Reagan administration proposal to kill a program that evaluates the work of physicians." The peer review program is widely criticized in the medical community, but only one doctor is quoted, without noting his obvious self-interest in the matter.

A story suggesting that a project to publish the papers of Washington, Jefferson the Adamses and Franklin "is threatened by funding cuts proposed by the government they created" doesn't tell us until the end that what is really happening is that the project will have to compete with others for less money, decisions haven't yet been made about its continued funding, and it has been going on since 1943.

Some people have fears that if they step out of the house they'll be run over by a car, hit by a Mack truck or be struck by lightning. They stay home to be safe.

But it seems that the very people who are always afraid of what might get them on the outside are the ones who get it on the inside.

There was the lady who wouldn't walk out of her front door because she was afraid something would kill her. A tree limb fell on her house one day collapsing the roof and killing her instantly.

Another lady was electrocuted with her curling iron. Statistics show that home is the most dangerous place to be. That's where most accidents happen.

In this part of the country, whenever a spring storm kicks up many people's eyes turn to the sky to watch out for funnel clouds. Anyone who has ever been through a tornado can't keep out the thought of another striking sometime.

In some places people continually check the water level everytime it rains — because they've been flooded out before. In places like California, people worry about earthquakes.

It doesn't matter that a person has lived through a flood, earthquake or tornado without injury; there's that fear that something will sneak up and kill them while their not looking.

A few years ago, I went to take out a home insurance policy. The agent assured me the policy covered all natural disasters that might possibly occur. He said it covered wind and hail, fire, theft, tornado, you name it.

However, hailing from California, I had to ask: "What about earthquake damage?" He had a good laugh over that one.

"Ma'am," he said, "We just don't have earthquakes in West Texas." I felt foolish for asking — till two weeks later when we had an earthquake. Granted, it was a small earthquake, but an earthquake nontheless. If there is one earthquake, there is always the potential for more in the same place.

The thing that bothers me now is that the guy also assured me that since I live on a hill, flood damage was something I need never worry about. I wonder...

commentary

donald f. graff

Perfect foresight is given to no one — not even Charles de Gaulle, the late French leader's own firm opinions on that subject to the contrary.

If it were, France would probably not be in the fascinating (or alarming, depending upon the politics of the observer, French or foreign) situation that it is as a consequence of Socialist Francois Mitterand's presidential victory.

It is not the coming to power of a Socialist after a quarter of a century of center-right domination in France that, as such, is so jolting. After all, the party took a prominent part in the political jockeying of the early post-war years, notably under the leadership of one-time Premier Guy Mollet.

But back then it was one of the crowd, a player among many in the multi-party political games o. the Fourth Republic in which parliment was predominant and power so fragmented that no single social ideology could dominate all others.

This is the Fifth Republic, designed by de Gaulle specifically to transcend factionalism and prevent revolving governments. The presidency dominates, and it is on paper the most powerful elective office in any major democracy. It was tailored to the purposes and personality of de Gaulle himself, and it is questionable whether he ever seriously envisaged that its powers might fall into the hands of someone whose concepts of what France should do and what it should become radically deviated from his own.

Fracois Mitterand is such a someone. A survivor of the Fourth Republic's games, he reappeared in the politics of the Fifth with only one purpose: to establish a credible leftist alternative to the center-right domination of France that de Gaulle sought to institutionalize.

Mitterand is only partway home, however. There's still parliament, which was created unequal and assumed disposed to go along with a president on the big issues if not always the minor details. But the deputies do possess some powers that, should they be brought to the point of outright mutiny against a president, could give him real trouble. If one side were not prepared to make concessions, the consequences could be government paralysis and even a constitutional crisis opening the way for a Sixth Republic.

Mitterrand, inheriting a center-right parliament elected in 1978, intends to avoid that situation by calling a new election in June, two years ahead of schedule.

But what if the French, having second thoughts about what they have done in the presidential election or as a result of a realignment of political factions, do not give him a leftist majority?

Election returns can be analyzed to the point of meaningless abstraction. But it would appear in the French presidential vote that Mitterrand's victory was at least as much the result of the electorate being turned off by incumbent President Valery Giscard d'Estang and his record of being turned on by the dour Mitterrand and his program.

That program, calling for nationaization of 11 key industires, resembles more those of Britain's post-war Labor governments than it does those of the more pragmatic Socialist parties in other countries of the Continent. France is already well-acquainted with nationalization — Renault, the major auto maker, is government owned. But the possibility of so much more, and the questionable British example, may sway votes.

Then there are the Communists. Mitterrand is feuding with their leadership, but their votes were crucial to his victory and they are now demanding government positions. Short of a clear Socialist majority, which would appear unlikely, the alternative is a coalition with center parties to give a Mitterrand government a dependable parliamentary base. But that would necessitate compromises in the Socialist program, which Mitterrand might have difficulty selling to his ideological constituency.

It undoubtedly will become even more complicated by June when the French will clarify what they have actually voted for in the presidential election and pass judgement of sorts on the Fifth Republic. The present system of government was designed primarily to perpetuate power rather than facilitate its transfer. But the latter is now the challenge it must meet.

If it is successful, Charles de Galle may be proved even more prescient than anyone but himself might have believed possible.

harnessing the ocean

Fascinating among the energy options is the production of commercial quantities of electrical power by harnessing ocean waves.

It seems such a shame -- all that powerful movement out there going to waste.

Some of the contraptions tested are cumbersome, costly, vulnerable to storms...

But we are getting there.

For example, right now off the coast of England is a project, called the Cockerell raft, that's so simple one wonders why we didn't think of this a long time ago.

The answer is that when oil was $2 a barrel there no incentive. Oil at $40 a barrel is making many of yesterday's dreams come true.

The Cockerell raft is named for Sir Christopher Cockerell -- who invented the Hovercraft.

All it is is a raft -- a floating pontoon raft -- hinged in three sections. The hinged sections undulate with the movement of waves. The up-and-down movement operates hydraulic cylinders which power an alternator.

The movement of the sea thus produces electricity.

Cockerell anticipates within 10 years a string of giant rafts anchored off the western coast of Scotland, each producing two megawatts of electrical energy.

American inventors -- watching this experiment -- are already improving on the concept.

A Duluth, Minn. man named Peter Borgren has patented two devices which promise improved efficiency.

A San Jose, Calif. inventor, James Ekstrom, has 20 patents on components which he says can "double the output" of offshore wave machines by also utilizing water currents and wind.

Mr.Ekstrom -- rather than constructing rafts or barges -- would adapt already constructed and unused Navy vessels, linked by cables.

Heretofore emphasis has been on harnessing tides.

Waves, however, contain a hundred times as much energy per square foot per unit time as do tides.

The problem has been the destructability of storms at sea.

Inventor Ekstrom, with his utilization of Navy ships, believes his system will withstand any storm.

Perhaps optimistically, he projects selling electrcity from this source for six cents per kilowatt hour -- within two years!

Westinghouse engineers calculate that if we could save one-tenth of one percent each kilowatt hour we would save $500 million a year.

With stakes that high, Rube Goldberg deserves a try.

DEAR ABBY: You said, in defense of divorce, "I think it's more important to save people than marriages. And often, in an effort to save a marriage that isn't worth saving, people have destroyed themselves and/or each other."

I disagree. After 29 years and three grown (and left-home) children, my wife walked out. Her reason: "I want to do my own thing in my own way."

By your logic, Abby, she saved one person (herself) and ruined four (our three sons and me).

One son stood in our home and said, "I am the product of a broken home and I always will be." Then rivers of tears streamed down his face.

Need more be said?

M. IN OHIO

DEAR M.: Yes. Much more. It's difficult to understand how your wife could "ruin" a husband and three grown (and left-home) children by walking out after 29 years.

Every day thousands of people who are "left" by death and/or divorce manage to survive. It's not the end of the world. And if your son is going to blame whatever inadequacies he has or may have in the future on being "the product of a broken home," he will never be a man — no matter how tall he grows.

DEAR ABBY: After reading about the "genius" who found a system to beat the crap tables, I nearly died laughing.

The gambling establishments have special red carpets they roll out for "system" players.

The only ones who have the edge on the house are "blackjack counters," and once they are known, they are barred from playing blackjack.

Systems for craps are as good as systems for horses. There aren't any that work. Take it from one who knows.

I.S. (BEEN AROUND)

DEAR I.S.: As my father used to say, "If a man with money tells the casino owners in Vegas that he's figured out a way to beat the crap table, they'll send a plane for him."

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the woman who has had it with baby sitters. I happen to be a 15½-year-old baby sitter and I want her to know that not all sitters go through all the drawers, smoke pot, try on clothes, talk on the phone, entertain their friends and eat everything they get their hands on.

Here are a few of the things some baby sitters have to put up with:

Kids who won't mind.

Kids who scream and fight with their brothers and sisters.

Pets who make a mess on the rug.

Parents who go out and don't say where they are going or when they'll be back.

Parents who say they'll be back by midnight and don't get back until 2 a.m.

Adults who drive the sitter home and are in no condition to be driving. (They're drunk.)

People who don't pay the sitter and run bills for a couple of months. And by the way, I'm paid $1 an hour and I'm glad to get it.

Thanks for letting me tell our side of it. Sign this . . .

Reagan's Son Makes Debut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another Reagan has had his debut in the nation's capital.

This time, however, it was Ron Reagan, the son of the president.

President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, slipped out of the White House amid tight security Monday night to see their 22-year-old son perform with the Joffrey II ballet troupe at George Washington University's Lisner Auditorium.

"You were great," the president told the dancers. "This is only my second trip to George Washington University. I enjoyed this one much more." Reagan was rushed to the university's hospital March 30 when he was wounded in an assassination attempt.

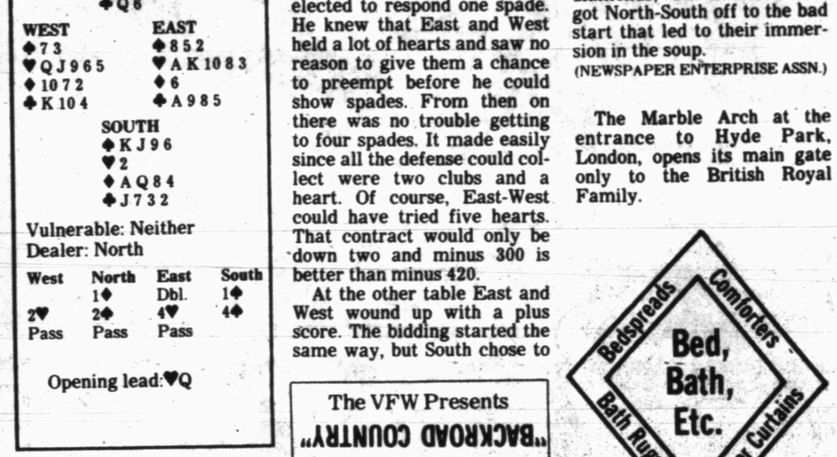

The only other time the president has seen his son dance was March 15 in New York City.

The 16-member Joffrey II Dancers is the "farm team" for the Joffrey Ballet.

Capuchins, the small monkeys that once collected coins for organ-grinders, are now being trained to help handicapped people. The monkeys learn such tasks as locking doors, turning on lights, and pushing elevator control buttons.

FHA MEMBERS AND SECRET PALS—The Snyder High School chapter of the Future Homemakers of America visited the residents of Snyder Nursing Center on May 13 with desserts the girls had made. The purpose of the party was to reveal the names of secret pals that they have had at the center this year. Pictured in the foreground are Linda Reese, Julia Hamby and Myrtle Watkins, all residents of the center. FHA members standing are Emily Craig, Pam Gray, Delia Tovar, Patsy Casas and Teka Eicke. This is just one of the many activities planned for the residents during Texas Nursing Home Week. (SDN Staff Photo)

FHA Members Visit Center

Members of the Future Homemakers of America Chapter, Snyder High School, planned and participated in a Revealing Party for residents of Snyder Care Center on May 12.

During the past school year, the FHA members have had secret pals at the center, remembering them with cards and visits.

The chapter members revealed their identity on Tuesday by presenting each resident with a parfait dessert resembling a flower pot. Each flower was decorated with the residents' names and their secret pals' names. The girls assisted in serving the desserts and visited with the residents.

The party, given in conjuction with Texas Nursing Home Week, concluded Snyder High School's FHA activities for the school year. FHA members attending were Emily Craig, Pam Gray, Delia Tovar, Patsy Casas, Teka Eicke and FHA advisors Carolyn Limmer and Carolyn Derouen.

You don't have to redouble when you have a good hand opposite partner's suit opening which has been doubled.

Here is a hand from an IMP match to illustrate this point. The bidding in the box took place at table one. South elected to respond one spade. He knew that East and West held a lot of hearts and saw no reason to give them a chance to preempt before he could show spades. From then on there was no trouble getting to four spades. It made easily since all the defense could collect were two clubs and a heart. Of course, East-West could have tried five hearts. That contract would only be down two and minus 300 is better than minus 420.

At the other table East and West wound up with a plus score. The bidding started the same way, but South chose to redouble.

West bid the same two hearts. North passed. East jumped to four hearts and South tried five diamonds. The defense collected three tricks for a delightful 50 point plus.

We don't blame the redouble entirely for this debacle. North might well have tried two spades over two hearts and South might also have bid four spades rather than five diamonds, but the redouble got North-South off to the bad start that led to their immersion in the soup.

Fast Death Sparks New Bombings

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The death of IRA hunger striker Raymond McCreesh early today sparked a new round of firebombings, hijackings and street skirmishes in Roman Catholic west Belfast.

McCreesh succumbed on the 61st day of his fast, becoming the third imprisoned Irish Republican Army guerrilla to starve himself to death this month in a campaign for political prisoner status.

Women banged dustbin lids and blew whistles — the signal used to warn their menfolk of army raids — to spread the news of McCreesh's death in the early morning darkness, as they had after the deaths of Bobby Sands on May 5 and Francis Hughes on May 12. Other women huddled in small groups reciting the rosary.

More than 300 rioters besieged the heavily fortified police-army base in the New Barnsley quarter, police said. At least 50 gasoline bombs were lobbed at the base, while troops fired fusillades of plastic bullets at the attackers.

Reports from the turbulent New Lodge district said a young girl was badly injured by a police plastic bullet, but there was no immediate word of other casualties.

Several thousand troops in armored vehicles and police officers in bullet-proof vests sealed off much of west Belfast, keeping the violence from spreading into Protestant neighborhoods.

Mobs of young Catholics, many of them masked, hijacked more than a dozen cars and trucks and set them on fire, police said. Other vehicles were used to barricade streets.

British army and police patrols came under "heavy attack" from gasoline bombs in a half-dozen districts of west Belfast, a police spokesman said.

McCreesh, 24, died at 2:11 a.m. today — 9:11 p.m. Wednesday EDT — authorities at Maze Prison reported. A spokesman for the IRA's political wing, Sinn Fein, said he expected another IRA man would take McCreesh's place in the protest.

"It seems as if it is going to go on and on and on until the Brits make a move," the Sinn Fein spokesman said. "We are surprised that Raymond McCreesh lasted so long."

The British Northern Ireland Office, which administers the province, said McCreesh "took his own life by refusing food and medical intervention for 60 days." The statement echoed those issued after the deaths of Sands and Hughes.

The dead man's body was taken from the Maze an hour after his death and driven to Daisy Hill Hospital in Newry, about 10 miles from the McCreesh home, for an autopsy. As dawn broke in McCreesh's hometown of Camlough in South Armagh, villagers hung black flags from upstairs windows.

In 1978, three American balloonists dropped the Double Eagle Two into a French wheat field to complete the first transatlantic balloon crossing.

U.S. Stands Alone On Baby Formula Balloting

W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The United States stood alone today when the World Health Organization formally voted 118-1 to approve a code aimed at curbing excessive marketing of baby formula as a substitute for breast feeding.

The United States was joined by Chad and Bangladesh in casting negative votes Wednesday in a committee representing all WHO members. But Chad and Bangladesh joined the majority today.

The roll call was punctuated by applause when the delegates from Chad and Bangladesh voted today, reversing what they said were positions taken mistakenly the day before.

"Instead of saying yes, I said no because of the procedural maneuvering" preceding Wednesday's vote, Bangladesh representative M.A. Haleem told the assembly today.

Chad announced its vote today as yes, "with a capital Y."

Thailand, Romania, Samoa, Malawi and Yugoslavia also told the assembly Wednesday's procedural motions were confusing and led them to abstain rather than cast votes for the code.

Abstaining in today's plenary roll call were Japan, South Korea and Argentina.

A Kuwait representative, Dr. Ali Al-Saif, termed today's vote "a landmark in the history of health."

Supporters of the code say breast milk is far safer than manufactured foods in countries where the formula is often mixed with polluted water; where bottles are inadequately cleaned and exposed to contamination; and where there is no refrigeration.

The guidelines spelled out by the code would:

—Ban direct advertising of breast milk substitutes.

—Prohibit distribution of free product samples.

—Require wording on product labels that acknowledges the superiority of breast-feeding and warns about health hazards posed by improper preparation.

—Keep companies from paying staff commissions and bonuses on sales of infant formula.

The American decision to stand alone against the code was based on arguments that the code presented potential challenges to constitutional provisions on laws against restraint of trade.

U.S. Ambassador Gerald Helman, after Wednesday's vote, said, "We have serious concerns about this organization's involvement in commercial codes, and this is a central basis for our inability to support" the measure.

Two officials of the Agency for International Development in Washington resigned in protest over the American stand. They were Drs. Eugene N. Babb and Stephen C. Joseph.

The first performance of Verdi's opera, "Otello," was given Feb. 5, 1887, at La Scala in Milan.

TIA's Newest Offer Rejected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As expected, Continental Airlines has rejected a $14-a-share offer from Texas International Airlines, which already owns almost half of the Los Angeles-based carrier.

"Your offers are well below the real value of Continental (and) we believe this is simply not the right time to sell the company," Continental Chairman Robert Six and Continental President A.L. Feldman said in a letter sent Wednesday to TI Chairman Francisco Lorenzo.

"Our stockholders have the best opportunity to realize the full potential of their investment if we pursue business programs we now have in place," Feldman and Six said.

There was no immediate comment from Texas International on the action by Continental's board of directors. The Houston-based carrier already owns 48.5 percent of the stock of Continental, the nation's ninth largest airline.

Continental's management has endorsed a plan for the company's employees to purchase control of the carrier by foregoing an estimated $180 million in future pay raises. TI has challenged the employee purchase plan in federal court and a hearing is pending.

Six and Feldman, who have traded various charges with Lorenzo as the tender fight progressed, claimed in the letter that a merger between Continental and TI would create a financially weak firm.

"It would be a company so heavily burdened with debt that it would be unable to sustain any serious adverse economic circumstances," Six and Feldman said, adding that they intended to proceed with the employee purchase plan.

"The employe stock ownership plan presents an exciting opportunity for Continental and its shareholders," they said. "The board intends to proceed with consideration of the employee stock ownership plan. We believe it is clearly in the best interests of our shareholders, our employees and the public."

Pair Held After Affray At Club

Two subjects were taken into custody late last night by city police following a fight at the 250 Club. Pat Smith, manager of the club, received a cut above the eye requiring several stitches during the affray.

The arresting officer, Keith Ward, had his glasses broken when trying to break up the scuffle. A 27 year-old man was taken into custody and charged with public intoxication, resisting arrest and aggravated assault. A 26 year-old man was also charged with public intoxication.

Felony theft charges are expected to be filed today against a 20 year-old man in connection with the theft of a cyclone fence from 1912 Ave. R. Sgt. Ed Neeley is investigating the case.

In other activity Wednesday evening, officer Bill Armstrong investigated a criminal mischief report at 3709 Ave. U. In that, a house being handled by Jack and Jack Realtors had a screen door damaged and paint poured on the floor. Estimated damage is $30.

Early Thursday morning, a 20 year-old male was picked up for driving while intoxicated, misdemeanor.

Direct Deposit For State Workers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State employees could have their paychecks deposited into their bank accounts electronically under a bill passed by the Legislature on Tuesday.

The House accepted Senate amendments, 137-9, sending the measure to Gov. Bill Clements' desk for signature.

Sponsors hope the bill will reduce the payday crowding at banks in cities with large concentrations of state employees.

An employee's check would be deposited electronically only upon his or her written authorization.

CINDY MADDOX | VALERIE WELLS | DORCAS PERKINS | CINDY GOLTL | JACKIE BRIGGS

Cushing Names Tri-Captains, Says...

Sophomores To Lead In '81-82

Cindy Maddox, Valerie Wells and Dorcus Perkins, three of Coach Joe Cushing's five returning players, have been named Western Texas College Dusters tri-captains for the 1981-82 season.

The three, along with Cindy Goltl and Jackie Briggs, make up the nucleus of next season's squad.

"Along with our five sophomores coming back we've had a truly outstanding recruiting year," said Cushing, who has already announced the signing of four recruits and is expected to release the names of as many as six others in the near future. "With the leadership exhibited by our sophomores, I feel this could possibly be the best team we've ever had here because were going to have more talent and depth than we've ever had."

Maddox, a 5-7 guard from Canyon, averaged 10 points, four assists and three steals a game for the Dusters last year, earning her stripes next to standout Stella Bickley, who will graduate.

"Cindy definately has the capabilities to be a major leader in the guard position for us next year," the coach said. "She also broke our assist record this year (with 158) but Stella holds the record because she had more (172). I really feel like Maddox will break the individual career and season assist records next year.

"We're going to move Cindy from wing to the point guard position for a while. She's been working real had at that in the offseason. She's highly competitive and a very tenacious defensive player. All the work she had been doing at point guard under Stella (during the offseason) has made her just that much better," Cushing added.

Wells is a 5-11 player from Amarillo who averaged 13 points, nine rebounds and three steals for the 1980-81 Dusters squad, and was named to the All-Region Tournament Team.

"Valerie will be one of our most valuable players next year in that she'll be able to play post or wing, which ever it calls for," said Cushing. "She's one of the best shooters on the team from the field and the freethrow line and her experience and leadership will be invaluable to us next year."

The other tri-captain, Perkins, is a 6-2 product of Lubbock Cooper, who came on strong near the end of the season.

"Dorcas has been one of the pleasant surprises in that she didn't make the transition to college play until late in the season, but came on strong near the end. She only averaged four points and five rebounds, but she was 10 of 10 from the field and two of two from the line for 22 points and 12 rebounds when we played Amarillo at Amarillo. So the possibilities that Dorcas could go as high as she wants to go next season are there," Cushing noted. "I don't see anything holding her back from playing major college ball at this point. She's definately going to be a fine ball player next year."

Also returning are Goltl, 5-5 from San Angelo Lake View, and Jackie Briggs, 5-11 from Lubbock Cooper.

"I think Cindy will really develop during her sophomore year," said Cushing. "She has already developed a great deal of knowledge and confidence and I feel like she'll contribute a great deal to our team next year. She's a very quiet, mature person who is serious about getting an education and about basketball.

"Jackie is also going to be a good ball player for us next year. She's been working extremely hard in the post position handling and passing the ball. She was bothered all year by a knee that did not require surgery, but kept her from playing 100 percent. With the summer, it (the knee) should get in better shape and she'll be ready to go full speed for us next year."

Western Texas competes in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

Sideline Glances...

The Gary System: Flopped Flip Wins

By BILL McCLELLAN

YOU CAN blame the loss of the flip on athletic director John Gary if you want to, but don't come down too hard on him - it's been a winning combination.

"We've never won a coin flip since I've been athletic director, but we've always won the (playoff) games," said Gary, who brought in the news that next week's best-of-three bi-district playoff series will begin 4 p.m. Tuesday in Snyder.

THAT MEANS that Lubbock Estacado gets home rights to a second and third game, if necessary, which will be held Saturday at Estacado Field. The second game of the series is slated for a 1 p.m. start. A third game - should it be needed - will follow immediately.

Officials met this morning in Post to determine the details of the series between the 20-7 District 2-4A champion Tigers and the 21-6 District 1-4A champion Matadors.

THE ONLY possible problem would be if weather prohibited play at Lubbock Saturday, since the UIL requires that the bi-district series be completed by midnight that evening. But Estacado is holding graduation Thursday and Snyder is holding its ceremony Friday, which left officials little other choice. Neither team wanted to play the series Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Wednesday.

Back to Gary.

SNYDER LOST the flip against Estacado in regional action last year, but defeated the Matadors in two games to advance to state. The Tigers had earlier lost a coin toss to Weatherford, their bi-district opponent that year, but won the series in three games.

Gary was also on hand when the 1979-80 basketball team lost flips to Weatherford and Borger, but managed to win both and reach state.

AND IF you're thinking 'what about last season's basketball game against Canyon' in which Snyder narrowly lost, forget it. There was no coin toss. So, does this mean Snyder will come out on top next week? Ask the man.

"Oh yeah, oh yeah. Yeah, yeah," Gary chuckled. "That means we're going to win."

IT'S NOT that we don't have faith, John, but somehow we get the feeling coaches Albert Lewis and Roland Herrera will go on with workouts anyway.

Playoff Series Begins Here Thursday At 4 p.m.

POST -- Game One of the best-of-three bi-district baseball playoff between Snyder and Lubbock Estacado high schools will be held 4 p.m. Tuesday in Snyder, officials determined here this morning.

Snyder lost the coin toss, which means Estacado will host Game Two at 1 p.m. Saturday, with Game Three - if necessary - to follow immediately after.

Both Estacado and Snyder easily sacked up respective district championships this season. Estacado, 21-6 on the season, was undefeated in district 1-4A play before losing its final game to Levelland. Snyder, 20-7, was 10-0 in 2-4A competition.

Snyder and Estacado last met in the 1980 regional playoffs. Snyder won both games to advance to state. With the district realignments, the pair will vie in bi-district competition this year.

The winner will advance to regionals against either Burkburnett, the 3-4A champion, or 4-4A contenders Crowley or Everman. Crowley and Everman are slated to decide the 4-4A situation tonight, with the winner advancing to bi-district play against Burkburnett next week.

There will be no charge for Game One of the bi-district series at Moffett Field. Saturday's game or games - to be held at Estacado Field - will be $2 for adults and $1 for students.

Andretti Qualifies, But Back In Pack

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - For the second time in his last three Indianapolis 500s, veteran Mario Andretti will find himself starting Sunday's race at the back of the 33-car field.

A conflict between his Grand Prix driving schedule, which kept him out of the 1979 race, and his committment to drive Indy-style cars sent him to the rear of the lineup.

The 5-foot-6 driver was unable to qualify his own car for the race after rain washed out most of the opening weekend of qualifications. He had to drive for Alfa Romeo in the Belgium Grand Prix last weekend and his Indy car was qualified by old friend Wally Dallanbach.

Dallenbach, retired as an active racer since mid-1979, put the car in the middle of the third row. But race rules require the placing of a car at the back of the field when the driver who qualified it is replaced.

There is a way to get around the rule. Dallanbach could start the race in Pat Patrick's Wildcat and be replaced during a pit stop without penalty, but Andretti said no consideration was given to that possibility.

"Wally's retired. He just qualified the car absolutely as a favor to Pat, his friend and former car owner, and to me, just as a friend," Andretti said.

The Dwyer Brothers, racehorse owners of the 19th century, frequently bet $50,000 to win $1,000.

Detroit Dumps Rangers Again

DETROIT (AP) - Lance Parrish drove in three runs with a homer and a double, and Al Cowens had a key two-run single to back the five-hit pitching of Jack Morris as the Detroit Tigers captured an 8-4 victory over the Texas Rangers Wednesday night.

It was the fourth straight triumph and third straight complete game for Morris, 5-3. The Detroit right-hander struck out two and walked five.

Buddy Bell drove in all four Texas runs with a three-run homer in the fourth and a sacrifice fly in the eighth.

In the second, Detroit took a 1-0 lead when Texas starter Ferguson Jenkins, 2-3, walked Richie Hebner and Parrish before Tom Brookens singled home Hebner.

Houston Humbles St. Louis Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Rafael Landestoy walloped a two-out RBI double in the 11th inning, giving Joe Niekro and the Houston Astros a 4-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday night.

Landestoy's hit came off relief ace Bruce Sutter, 1-2, the third St. Louis pitcher. Niekro, 5-3, pitched the first 10 innings and scattered 10 hits while striking out eight. Joe Sambito pitched the last inning for the Astros, recording his third save.

Sutter retired Art Howe and Danny Heep to start the Houston 11th before Alan Ashby singled and scored on Landestoy's double.

Detroit May Trade Second Draft Pick

DETROIT (AP) - Detroit may trade its No. 2 pick in the National Basketball Association draft next month for an established player, or even a series of draft picks, says Pistons General Manager Jack McCloskey.

"We have talked deeply with six or seven teams and I'd say most of those discussions are still alive," McCloskey said Wednesday.

"This is the year I think we have a chance to take a big step. We won't accept two or three average players; we've got to get an outstanding player."

McCloskey said he expects the Dallas Mavericks, who won the coin toss between the two clubs and the right to pick first in the NBA draft, to snap up Indiana University guard Isiah Thomas.

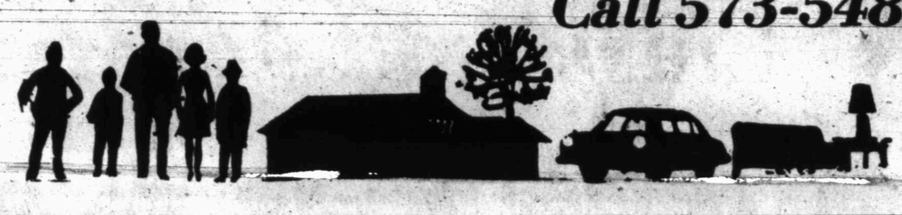

"If he's there when we draft, we'll certainly take him," McCloskey said.

Detroit and Dallas had the worst records last season.

McCloskey said if the Pistons retain their pick at the June 9 draft, the team probably will take Mark Aguirre of De Paul, or Buck Williams or Albert King, both from Maryland.

SOLAR SIZZLED—Tommy Crane, a student at Ira School, holds one of the solar cones that were made by students in Troy Lilly's science class. The class had a cook out one day last week and cooked hamburgers and hot dogs in the cones. The cones are made with cardboard and aluminum foil. The meat is wrapped in black-painted foil, dropped in the bottom of the cone and covered with a piece of glass. Dinner is served in about 10 minutes. (SDN Staff Photo)

Scholarship Will Honor Tana Springer

A memorial scholarship in honor of Tana Springer is being started at Western Texas College, Bob Doty, agriculture instructor, has announced.

Miss Springer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Springer, died May 16 from injuries received in an automobile accident near Abilene. She was a student at Texas A&M University and was on her way home at the time the accident occurred.

The memorial scholarship will be given to a girl planning to participate in rodeo at WTC. Persons wishing further information about the memorial fund may call Doty at WTC, 573-8511, extension 294, or at 573-8912.

Sample Of Food Taken

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Health officials were taking samples from an elementary-school cafeteria where about 60 young students ate a hot lunch before becoming ill.

Northshore Elementary Principal Lorraine Meister said the rash of after-lunch sicknesses Wednesday had "the classic symptoms of food poisoning," but she said officials won't know for sure until the health department finishes its tests.

Classes were dismissed early after some of the children experienced nausea and hot and cold flashes.

More Grads To Get Jobs

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — The nation's largest employers expect to hire about 15 percent more college graduates with bachelor's degrees and about 10 percent more master's degree graduates this year than in 1980, a survey indicates.

The Northwestern University's Endicott Report, released Wednesday, said demand was down 25 percent, however, for recent graduates with bachelor's degrees in liberal arts and other non-technical areas.

The report also indicated that 25 percent of the companies surveyed expected business to improve this year, while 20 percent reported a downtrend.

Reagan To Make California Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will spend the Memorial Day weekend at his ranch in Santa Barbara, Calif., his first trip west of Indiana since the March 30 assassination attempt, the White House says.

Pope's Condition Is 'Noticeably Improved'

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II's condition has "noticeably improved" over the past 24-hours, his doctors said today after the pontiff began eating soft foods and took a few steps around his hospital room.

But John Paul's prognosis is still "guarded," which means doctors are not ready to predict a full recovery from the May 13 shooting.

Meanwhile, police transferred the pope's suspected assailant, Mehmet Ali Agca, from Rome police headquarters to a prison outside the city.

Agca, a Turk, looked haggard and unshaven and wore the same gray suit and open-necked shirt he had on when he was arrested eight days ago at the scene of the shooting in St. Peter's Square. He was handcuffed and a policeman held each of his arms.

Agca, when asked by reporters how he felt, said: "I am sorry for the tourists," an apparent reference to the two American women wounded along with the pope. The exchange was in English, and a Turkish photographer said Agca also said in Turkish, his native language, "I am sorry."

The suspect was driven to Rebibbia Prison, 11 miles east of Rome on the road to Tivoli, police said.

Ann Odre, 58, of Buffalo, N.Y., wounded in the chest in the attack, remains in "guarded" condition because of the fever, Dr. Federico Meneghini said. She is being fed intravenously but doctors hope she can return to a normal diet within the next 24 to 30 hours.

Rose Hall, 21, a resident of Wuerzenburg, West Germany, who was shot in the left elbow, will be released from the Santo Spirito hospital over the weekend, her chief Italian physician, Dr. Federico Meneghini, said. "She's itching to go back home," the doctor added.

The news agency ANSA reported Agca has told police he wanted to kill Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba and Maltese Premier Dom Mintoff. He has already claimed he wanted to assassinate Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, European Parliament President Simone Veil and U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim. Police believe he is throwing out the names in an attempt to confuse them.

Investigators say they are baffled by his testimony and are not sure whether he acted alone or was hired by someone to shoot the pope.

Today's medical bulletin on the pope's progress said that, "In the last 24 hours the clinical picture of the Holy Father has noticeably improved, confirming the substantial progressive stabilization of his general condition."

It said the pontiff has been started on a semi-solid diet and reported his temperature at 99.3 degrees, less than one degree over the normal reading of 98.6.

Dr. Luigi Candia, director of the hospital treating the pope, said the "guarded" prognosis might be lifted today but cautioned, "It is not something you can make a firm prediction on."

SHS Bands Set For Concert

The Snyder High School concert and symphonic bands will be putting on their final performance Friday at 8 p. m. in the high school auditorium. Admission charge is $1.

Those wishing to attend the concert are requested to come early or enter between numbers, as the concert will be taped and no one will be allowed to enter the building while the band is performing.

Women are not immune

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — We hear a lot about risk factors causing heart attacks. You have mentioned it in your column. What is the most important factor that increases your risk of heart attacks and strokes? I understand that women, at least until they are older, are free from heart disease, so does that mean I don't have to worry about risk factors but my husband does? Is there any real evidence that the risk factors are related to the amount of disease you have in your arteries?

DEAR READER — You have asked me a terrible question. It is like asking which is worse, cancer of the liver or cancer of the lungs. All of the major risk factors are very important in decreasing your chances of having arterial disease that can cause heart attacks and strokes.

The three big risk factors that you can do something about are cigarette smoking, high blood pressure and high cholesterol levels. One of the factors believed to be associated with a decrease in deaths at early ages from heart disease in the United States and a decline in strokes is the early detection and control of high blood pressure.

Don't think that women are immune to heart disease, even though they are less likely to have heart attacks during the childbearing age. Their risk is increased by the same factors as in men. And by the time many women reach the menopause, if they also have high blood pressure, smoke and are overweight, they may have a significant increase in the risk of having a heart attack.

To give you some hard numbers, I am sending you The Health Letter number 13-2, How to Measure Your Risk of Heart Disease. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. As it explains, studies have shown that the amount of fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries correlates well with your score on the risk factors.

Now, if I must single out one risk factor, it would be cigarette smoking. Heavy smoking alone accounts for an 8-year decrease in life expectancy in men. Some good studies suggest that the increase and decrease in heart attacks in the United States parallel the changes in smoking. Such a decrease in heart attacks has not been observed yet in other industrial countries and they have not had the decrease in cigarette smoking that has occurred in American men.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column on snoring and would like to make a suggestion. When I got married for the second time this was a severe problem. I solved it by buying a sleep machine. I placed the machine on the night table and soon I was no longer bothered by my husband's snoring.

DEAR READER — A very good suggestion. You used the principle of masking the noise. Any disturbing noise can be masked by other sounds. Have you ever noticed how much louder conversation is if the room is absolutely quiet?

There are a number of such sleep devices; some produce sounds of the ocean. A simple test is to tune your FM radio between stations and turn it up so the background noise is constant. That even helps people who have ringing and noises in the ears when they try to sleep. With a suitable level of constant noise in the background a person may not even notice someone snoring.
