Government not obliged to pay for abortions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government does not have to pay for most abortions wanted by women on welfare, a closely divided Supreme Court ruled today.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices upheld as constitutional the so-called Hyde amendment, a congressional restriction on Medicaid spending for abortions.

The government has been forced to pay for most Medicaid abortions requested since last February when the Supreme Court refused to postpone the effect of a federal trial judge's striking down the Hyde amendment, named for its original sponsor, Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill.

Now, Congress can resume withholding such money.

About one-third of the more than 1 million legal abortions performed in the United States each year since 1973 have been for women on welfare. For the 31 months it was in effect, the Hyde amendment reduced the number of Medicaid abortions to fewer than 2,000.

Attached to the budget for what used to be called the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the amendment was first passed by Congress in 1976. Various versions of it have been enacted for each fiscal year since then.

The spending restriction for fiscal year 1978, upheld by the court today, barred Medicaid spending for abortions unless a woman's life would be endangered by childbirth, in cases of promptly reported rape or incest, or when two doctors said childbirth would cause "severe and long-lasting physical health damages to the mother."

Congress last year agreed on an even more restrictive spending ban, eliminating the "severe and long-lasting physical health damages" wording.

Writing for the majority, Justice Potter Stewart said the spending restriction — imposed even for some "medically necessary" abortions — does not run afoul of the Constitution nor Title 19 of the Social Security Act, the Medicaid law.

SCHMIDT IN MOSCOW — Soviet Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, right, stand on the Moscow airport tarmac Monday upon the arrival of the German head of government. Schmidt and Brezhnev will confer two days in the Kremlin.

Iran expels Soviet agent

By the Associated Press

The Iranian government has ordered the expulsion of the first secretary of the Soviet Embassy in Tehran, the official Iranian news agency reported today.

The Soviet diplomat, Vladimir Galvanov, was arrested in the Iranian capital last week as he was exchanging "anti-Iranian Republic documents with a foreigner," said the report by Pars, the news agency. Tehran Radio described them as "intelligence documents," but neither report gave further details.

In Cairo, Egypt, a reliable source reported that deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi underwent a one-hour operation at a military hospital today for removal of water and pus that accumulated in his lungs as a result of pneumonia.

The pneumonia was contracted as a complication of chemotherapy treatment of the ex-shah's cancer. He was readmitted to the Maadi military hospital Friday.

In Tehran, an Iranian official backtracked today on his threat to put U.S. Marine Michael Moeller on trial on charges of having had sexual relations with a young Iranian woman — even if the other 52 American hostages are released.

"We will not try Michael Moeller if the parents of the seduced girl forgive him," said Ali Akbar Parvaneh, a Justice Ministry investigator in charge of the case against the 28-year-old sergeant from Loup City, Neb. Moeller is accused of seducing and having sexual intercourse with a 23-year-old student identified as Amaz A., who was hanged by her brother in March after telling him she was five months' pregnant. In the Islamic Republic of Iran, having sexual relations with an unmarried woman is a crime and carries a jail sentence of up to 10 years.

Rodeo labeled one of best ever

Officials with the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo felt like this year's extravaganza was one of the best ever.

Skipper Driver said today that attendance was up over last year's, adding that an official total crowd count is still in the process of being completed.

A total of 350 cowboys competed for between $6,000 to $7,000 in prize money. A Greenville cowboy proved the most successful of the group.

Sandy Kirby won $900 by tying with Lee Newman of Weatherford in the bull riding competition and placing in third in the bare back riding event.

Other winners included Jack Himes of Big Spring, bareback; Cody Lambert of El Paso, saddle bronc; Willard Moody of Wynnewood, Okla., calf roping; Gerald Rogers of Crane, steer wrestling; Bing Crosby and Freddy Mason of Cristoval team roping; Sharon Youngblood, of Lamesa, barrel racing.

Deadly twister hit Big Spring in '73

'Tornado season' ends today

By STEVE HERSHBERGER

Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Stevens were watching television around 7:15 p.m. Sept. 5, 1973, in their mobile home located at the Chaparral Park in northwest Big Spring. The couple's two children, Lisa, 3, and Wendi, five months, were asleep in their room.

Five minutes later, a vicious storm with winds up to 110 miles per hour came roaring down the Snyder Highway and slammed into the mobile home park, crushing 17 homes and damaging 50 others. Among those destroyed trailers were the Stevens'.

The mobile home park was the first to catch the impact of the storm, as the wind tunnel moved in a diagonal direction to the southwest part of Big Spring, leaving a path of torn roofs, down telephone and power lines and uprooted trees.

The results of the storm were heavy. The Stevens' two children were dead on arrival at Medical Center Hospital. A total of 29 were injured and the city was afflicted with $1.5 million in property damage.

The wind storm hitting Big Spring that late summer day was a tornado, which is a rotating column of air spinning around a vacuum.

Today is the last day of the "tornado season," which runs from April to June. The season is a designation for a time when tornadoes are most likely to occur in the five-state area of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska — the so-called tornado alley. Although tornadoes have occurred in all 50 states, the frequency of twisters in this five-state area has the United States the unfortunate distinction of being the "tornado capital of the world."

In the "alley," from April to June, warm air flowing northward from the Gulf of Mexico collides with cold, dry winds blowing south from Canada. National Wildlife magazine reports. These elements give rise to the violent thunderstorms that spawn tornadoes.

"Erupting from a cumulonimbus, or thunder cloud, this funnel is made of condensed water; in effect it is a cloud itself," National Wildlife reports. When the cloud reaches the ground, it picks up dirt and debris which makes it turn black in color.

The great destructive power of the September 1973 tornado came from the high, twisting velocity of its winds.

Scientists do not know why tornadoes form in some clouds and not in others. The reason for this ignorance is due to the fact that most twisters are short-lived and seldom travel more than 15 miles.

Tornadoes spin in a counter-clockwise rotation. Most fizzle out in less than half an hour.

"But occasionally," reports National Wildlife, "twisters come in bunches over a long period of time." This phenomenon has happened three times during this century.

(1) March 18, 1925 — seven tornadoes ripped across a 437-mile area of Missouri, Illinois and Indiana. The largest of them covered more than 200 miles and killed nearly 700 people.

(2) March 18, 1965 — a massive siege of 37 twisters covered 853 miles in six states. Some 800 people died and property damage surpassed $300 million.

(3) April 3-4, 1974 — the greatest tornado eruption in the nation's history occurred. In a 16-hour period, no fewer than 148 twisters struck in 13 different states east of the Mississippi River. A total of 300 people were killed and damage amounted to upwards of $500,000,000.

Meteorologists predict that in the heart of "tornado alley," the probability of a tornado striking in a specific location is about once every 250 years.

"But," National Wildlife says, "tornado patterns do not fit mathematical models." This is evidenced by Oklahoma City being hit 32 times by twisters since 1892. Codell, Kan., was gouged three years in a row — 1916-1918 — on the same day, May 20.

Texans brace for more scorching temperatures

By the Associated Press

Texans braced for another week of scorching days and sweltering nights as weathermen offered no hope of relief from a relentless heat wave that already may have contributed to the deaths of 34 persons.

Temperatures soared to new records across the sun-baked state Sunday. Wichita Falls recorded a 112 reading that shattered a 56-year-old record by six degrees.

The mercury soared to 108 at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, 106 at El Paso, 104 in Lubbock and Abilene and 103 in Waco.

Medical examiners say six persons have died of heatstroke and that 28 other deaths in the state are potentially heat-related.

Twenty-four persons died of heat-related causes during a heat-wave that scorched Texas in July 1978.

The searing heat wave has exacted its heaviest tolls among the elderly and poor.

In Dallas County where 30 of the heat-related deaths were reported, the ages of the dead varied from 6 months to 103. The infant was the only victim under 50.

"With elderly people, there are natural defense mechanisms are not in as good a working order as the same mechanisms would be in younger persons," said Vanesa Ernst, an investigator for the Dallas County Medical Examiners office.

"When the weather is like this, the body is not as capable of reacting well to other factors. So their defense mechanisms will break down further because they are overtaxed by the heat," she said.

She said many deaths can only be referred to as potentially heat-related because medical technology has not given investigators tools to prove heat contributed to death by causing other medical "breakdowns."

Water system leaks reported

Holes continued to turn up in the city's water system over the weekend.

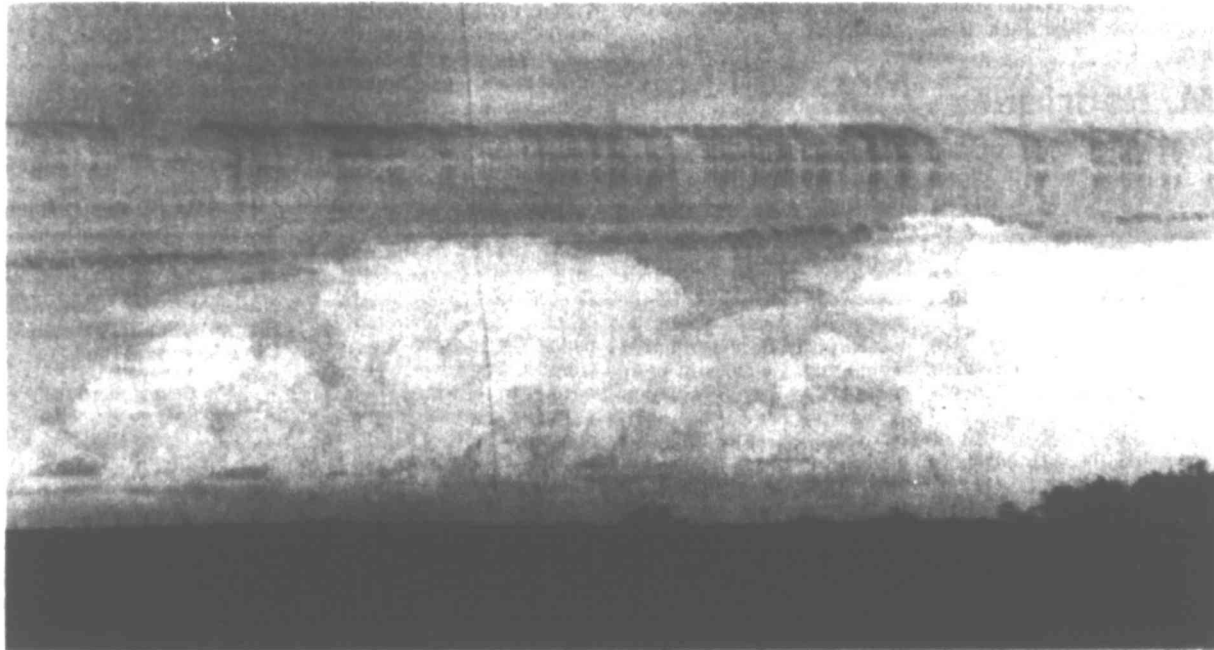

The city water department has been deluged this month with a record number of trouble calls in regard to its water distribution system. As of last weekend, over 500 complaints had been lodged, and the problem has not abated, said Gene Smith, superintendent of utilities.

"We worked all the time this weekend trying to get to the worst of the leaks, and we were back at it this morning," said Smith, today.

In addition to "a multitude of small calls," two major leaks occurred in the system over the weekend, said Smith.

On Saturday, a 14-inch pipe split four miles out of town toward Moss Creek Lake. Water to a number of customers in the area was shut off most of the day, said Smith.

Another split occurred in an eight-inch, cast iron pipe near 506 Birdwell on Sunday. Although Smith said he was not sure how many residents went without water, a number of residents in the area east of the break reported going dry from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. that day.

Sudden storms rip through Maryland

BALTIMORE (AP) — A sudden storm at the end of a sultry afternoon spawned a tornado in Baltimore's crowded children's zoo, capsized boats in Chesapeake Bay, injured dozens of people and left thousands of homes and businesses without electricity.

Five people were reported missing in boating accidents after the Sunday storm, including two who had been on a rubber raft that capsized. A search was to resume today, and officials would not say that the missing were presumed dead.

Officials said at least 34 people were injured across the state. About 4,000 people were crowded into the Baltimore Zoo for special ceremonies when the tornado touched down in their midst at closing time.

"It got dark all of a sudden and then it hit," said Peggy Clement, a city resident who was among those sent scurrying for shelter by the violent weather.

Carol K. House said it was fortunate that she and the three children with her couldn't reach her auto.

"If we hadn't been blown into the Hippo House, we'd be in the morgue now," the 27-year-old Baltimore woman said after learning that her car had been demolished when a tree fell on it.

A larger than usual crowd was at the zoo in Druid Hill Park because of a widely publicized appearance by the comic book character "Spiderman."

Five people were injured at the zoo, including one child struck by flying glass. Zoo director Steve Graham said no animals escaped, but several birds were killed when a tree fell on top of them.

Hospitals in Baltimore reported at least 22 injured, including eight hit by debris from an overturned stage at a German festival in the city's waterfront area.

TORNADO CAPITAL OF THE WORLD — The U.S. has the unfortunate distinction of being struck by far more twisters than any other country — between 600 and 1,200 yearly. This map shows the average number of tornadoes that have hit each state annually during the past 25 years. The figures in parentheses are the average number of tornado-related deaths each year during the same period. As these statistics show, the greatest potential for casualties is not necessarily where the largest number of storms occur. Mississippi, for instance, has had the second highest number of deaths in recent years, even though nearly a dozen other states have been hit by more twisters. The chart at right depicts when tornadoes are most likely to strike.

County escapes tornado this year

Big Spring escaped a tornado during 1979. Interestingly the counties surrounding Howard County had sightings of a twister.

According to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, Martin County had two twisters. One of these twisters hit in the vicinity of Klondike and another on the Howard and Martin County lines near Lomax.

Mitchell County was also struck by two storms, one of these touching down on the eastern portion of the county on the Nolan County line. The other struck in the central part of Mitchell County.

Luckily Howard County has escaped a twister this year and went through the tornado season without a storm, but the possibility of a cyclone touching down are likely any time during the year. The 1973 tornado hit in September.

Theodore Fujita, a meteorologist with the University of Chicago, said, "If you look at a world map for places that are likely to have tornadoes, you look for areas where warm moisture can move inland onto a continent from tropical waters, uninterrupted by mountains."

History shows that cyclones having touched down in West, Central Texas have been less than friendly.

—May 14, 1923 — on an early Monday morning a tornado originated in Howard County, southwest of Big Spring and moved eastward to Mitchell County. The twister struck thickly settled country around the Colorado River, tearing up windmills, fences, trees and telephone poles.

—April 8, 1922 — A tornado hit Rowena, a small town east of San Angelo. A total of seven were killed and 52 injured.

The storm killed 23 persons and injured another 100. Total property damage was $50,000.

—March 13, 1953 — a twister roared the towns of Haskell, Knox City and Joplin, killing 13 and injuring "scores."

—May 11, 1953 — a tornado touched down in northeast San Angelo, leaving 11 dead and 159 injured. Property damage amounted to $3,299,000.

The same day of the San Angelo twister, the most disastrous tornado ever to hit Texas touched down in Waco. A total of 114 were killed and 597 injured in the Waco tornado. The tornado struck the downtown business district and several residential areas, destroying hundreds of homes and buildings.

—April 3, 1964 — seven are killed and 111 injured in tornado hitting Wichita Falls. Property damage amounted to $15,000,000.

—May 11, 1970 — 26 are killed and 500 injured. Property damage amounted to $135,000,000.

—April 16, 1973 — a twister roared through the Panhandle towns of Plainview and Pearsall. The results are five killed in Pearsall and two in Plainview. Property damage in Plainview amounted to $2.4 million.

—April 10, 1979 — This day is known as "Terrible Tuesday." The worst tornado of 1979 struck the north Texas town of Wichita Falls on this day. For 20 minutes in the late afternoon, Wichita Falls was gouged by violent winds rotating at more than 200 miles per hour.

A total of 45 people were killed in this city of 100,000. Property damage amounted to $400 million.

The National Severe Storms Laboratory offers this advice if a tornado touches down: go to the basement or innermost room of the house or building, away from windows. Cover yourself with pillows and mattresses. If you are in a car, get out quickly and lie in a lot spot, a ditch or culvert if possible. In the Wichita Falls storm, 25 of the 45 people killed were in automobiles; 16 of these 25 had gotten into their cars, hoping to escape.

Four felons on way to Huntsville today

Four men convicted of felonies in 118th District Court were taken to Huntsville today to begin serving sentences in Texas Department of Corrections units.

Roy Rogers Lusk, 1804 Hearn, received a five-year sentence when he entered a plea of guilt to forgery June 23.

Hugh Farrell Riera, El Paso, entered a guilty plea June 18 to credit card abuse. He received an eight-year sentence.

George Carroll McElfresh, Franklin, La., pleaded guilty to probation violation June 20. He received a five-year sentence. He was arrested June 12.

Henry M. Ortega, 817 NW 6, received a five-year sentence when he pleaded guilty to burglary and criminal trespass June 18.

Howard County Sheriff's Deputy William Shankles will stop to pick up David Frank Morgan in Eastland on suspicion of probation violation and J.D. Parker in Abilene on suspicion of contempt of court.

Fay Matthews, a co-owner of the store, was able to get a license plate number on the getaway car. She also noticed a woman in the vehicle.

Police said $599 in cash and a 22-caliber pistol was found hidden in the car. A 1977 Monte Carlo, Bond of $50,000 each was set by a Martin County justice of the peace for the two men and women. They were brought back to Lamesa later Friday. The two men were confined to City Jail. The woman was taken to the Dawson County Jail.

Three accused bandits nabbed

LAMESA — Two blacks who allegedly robbed Matthews Food Store of approximately $600 here Friday evening were later stopped north of Stanton by a Texas Highway Department trooper.

Tommie Brown, 28, and David Brewer, 26, both of Lubbock, have been charged with aggravated robbery along with Dana Prince, 18, of Midland. The robbery was reported to Lamesa police at 7:10 p.m. The arrests were made 35 minutes later.

THE SURGEON GENERAL HAS DETERMINED — Smoking was nearly dangerous to the health of Jesse Martinez, Luther, 11:45 a.m. Sunday. According to reports, Martinez dropped a lighted cigarette onto his lap while driving along the 100 block of S. Birdwell. Attempting to locate the butt, Martinez lost control of his car, which flipped over an embankment and came to rest in a section of Beal's Creek. Luckily, Martinez was uninjured in the accident.

Continued fair, hot weather for Texas

By the Associated Press

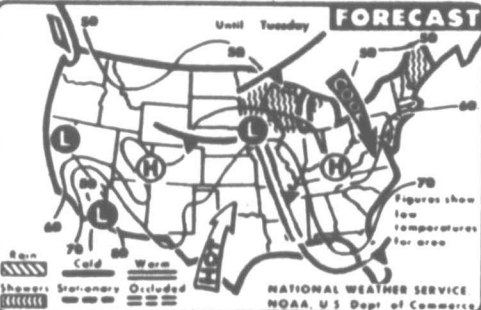

Fair skies prevailed over north and West Texas today, with partly cloudy skies over the south and along the coast. Predawn temperatures ranged from a low of 63 at Marfa to 85 at Del Rio. Temperatures over the remainder of the state were in the 70s and 80s. Southerly winds prevailed at 5 to 15 mph.

The forecast called for mostly sunny and continued hot weather through Tuesday. Isolated late afternoon thunderstorms were predicted in the mountains. Afternoon highs were expected to reach the upper 80s and low 90s along the coast, and the mid 90s to 112 over the north and east.

FORECAST

Mowers just can't cut it when it comes to safety

Some lawn mowers just can't cut it when it comes to safety. But even mowers with safety features can be dangerous if operators are careless, tired or in too much of a hurry. Working within inches of a blade whirling at approximately 230 miles per hour is no time to be careless, the Texas Medical Association (TMA) says.

The United States Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) says good lawn mower design can help prevent accidents that cost about $253 million and about 77,000 amputated fingers and toes, cuts and broken bones yearly.

Among its recommendations, the commission says a walk-behind lawn mower should have a foot guard in back and a deflector shield to shoot debris downward when a grass-catching bag is not being used.

To further prevent injuries, TMA urges mower users to take special care to avoid injuries to hands, feet and legs, which the CPSC says are the most common places hurt. These precautions include shutting off the mower completely before unclogging the discharge chute or blades and making sure that feet and hands are clear of the blade area before starting the motor.

Other important precautions include mowing across a slope instead of up and down it. This moving method will help improve mowing control and footing for walk-behind mowers. Riding mowers should move up and down the slope for better stability.

Footing also can be treacherous on wet grass. No only does it increase danger, but wet grass is harder to mow, clogs the mower easier than dry grass does and increases the chance of shock for electric mower users.

One of the major hazards electric mower users face is being shocked because a cord is cut even slightly. Mowing the area nearest the electric outlet first and then working away from it, keeping the cord behind at all times, helps decrease this danger.

TMA says injuries to other parts of the body often occur when small objects hidden in the grass suddenly are hurled with deadly force by a mower. An iron bolt hitting a pregnant woman in the stomach, a piece of wire puncturing a man's gallbladder and an object cutting a boy's neck artery are just a few of the cases doctors have treated.

Halfway House meeting Tuesday

Big Spring Halfway House board of directors will meet Tuesday at 4 p.m. at the Halfway House, 901 W. Third.

The board will review the budget and hear halfway house reports.

Board members will be appointed, bill payments will be reviewed and minutes read of last meeting.

If delegates turn away from Carter

Mondale would receive most votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale would have substantial support among Democratic National Convention delegates if the party were to turn away from President Carter as the party's nominee, an Associated Press survey of delegates found.

And that's bad news for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, whose only hope for the nomination rests on Carter's being so unpopular that the delegates would look for another candidate.

As of now, Carter remains the overwhelming choice of the Democratic delegates. The survey found Kennedy has failed to encourage significant defections from the Carter camp among the 3,383 delegates who will meet in New York City in August.

Even on the preliminary battle that is the key to the Kennedy challenge — an effort to free all delegates to vote for whomever they please — most of Carter's delegates remain unwavering by the opposition camp's arguments.

The Kennedy campaign goal is to change a lot of delegates' minds over the next six weeks. Kennedy aides say the country's continuing economic woes and further slippage in the polls by Carter will help the Massachusetts senator's cause.

The survey, based on interviews with 2,077 of the 3,383 delegates, of course, represents the opinions of delegates over the past few weeks.

Kennedy would be the leading choice of delegates if Carter was no longer a candidate, the survey found. But Mondale would be a strong second, with a large block of delegates undecided.

Kennedy would be the choice of 779 delegates under those circumstances. Mondale would be second, named by 464 delegates.

But 756 delegates were not sure how they would vote or would not say. Carter would still get the votes of 69.

A key finding of the survey was that Kennedy did not get the support of many Carter delegates. He picked up only 8.5 percent — 114 — of the 1,335 Carter delegates interviewed, while Mondale was the choice of 452 of the Carter delegates.

According to the AP count of all the delegates, the president has the support of delegates casting 1,961.6 votes, while Kennedy trails with 1,235.4. A total of 114 votes are uncommitted. A total of 1,666 votes are needed to win the nomination. Most delegates cast one full vote, but some cast a fractional vote.

Thus, the Kennedy campaign must strip several hundred delegates away from Carter to win the nomination. The AP survey found Kennedy has not had

Family night

Tuesday at 'Y'

Tuesday night is Family Night at the YMCA from 6:30 p.m. until 9 p.m. It is open to the public with no charge. As the name indicates, this event is for families only: children must be accompanied by a parent.

Activities will include racquetball, swimming, volleyball, ping pong and some organized games (Hug Tag) that can be played by all ages. The purpose of this event is to allow families an opportunity to enjoy a recreation time together. Single parent families are encouraged to participate.

A newsletter will be handed out to participating families. It will include articles on important issues concerning today's families and some ideas on how to strengthen family relationships.

The new executive director of the YMCA Bob Cappel, and his family will be the "Y" for those who would like to meet him and share ideas on where they would like to see the "Y" in the future.

For further information call Jerry Zambrano at the "Y" at 267-8234.

Sweetwater residents thank the Lord for rain

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) — A sparse crowd — one-fifth of them preachers — turned out Sunday to thank the Lord for rain. Five hundred people had prayed a month ago for an end to the six-year drought.

The Rev. Orval Brantley, one of 20 ministers conducting thanksgiving services on the Nolan County courthouse lawn, compared the no-shows to the Biblical thankless lepers, adding, "The situation serves to emphasize the spiritual vacuum that obviously exists here in Sweetwater."

The five-inch rain that fell two weeks ago furnished the parched town with a two-month supply of water. Less than 9,000 acre-feet remain in the city's lakes. Peak capacity is 52,000 acre-feet.

Pressure put on to halt dog fights

An animal rights organization called the Animal Protection Institute insists that dogfights are still going on in rural areas of Texas.

The API has long had a standing offer of $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction in dog-fight cases.

CONVICTIONS COME hard in most such cases, especially where arenas are set up in remote areas because likely witnesses often prove unwilling to talk. The bouts themselves are usually staged in deepest secrecy — even the participants may not know the time and location until the last moment. Nathan Detroit's floating crap game didn't move with the regularity that dog fight promoters do.

Two years ago, in the town of Ben Wheeler (located between Dallas and Tyler), promoters bragged a little too much about a "national fight" booked there. The people involved told other people and soon the authorities got wind of the canine caper. The result: 235 people were arrested, some from as far away as New York and Canada.

Increased pressure is being put on national, state and local authorities for a crackdown on the people who would sadiistically send two dogs against one another in mortal combat. The people are legion who brag about having seen at least one such bout.

In a radio talk show held not long ago, an investigator for the API and the lady host expressed mutual horror over the sickening spectacle of animals tearing each other apart. Many of the listeners who called in proceeded to point to the "romance" of the he-man sport, ridiculing the sensitivities of the principals on the show.

They could do so, because they were assured their views would remain anonymous.

API officials insist they will follow up on any valid piece of information about dog fights, if receiving such complaints. A spokesman for the organization explained: "Dogfighting isn't going to stop unless we can convince the average citizen that he should help to make it stop."

It's rare for breeders of dogs trained to fight in the pits to match their animals in the same areas in which they are raised. The safest way is to take them half way across the state. That's part of the shadow operation which helps keep the dog-fighters safe to fight again.

API, ACCORDING to its president, Belton P. Mouras, is of the opinion that the incidence of dog fighting has picked up in recent months, perhaps a spinoff from television attention given the so-called sport and a rash of startling dog fight photos which have been printed in various magazines.

Mouras says it is a misguided loyalty which serves to protect the major operators in the endeavor, adding:

"The same cruelty which rends the bodies of these dogs also has a rotting effect on the brains of every defendant. You can't hoot and whimper for a dog to tear another dog's heart out without turning into some kind of ghoul, no matter how cool and tough and heroic you're picturing yourself."

The mailing address of API is Box 22505, Sacramento, Calif., 95822. The agency's telephone number is (916) 442-1921.

Haig at State

Evans, Novak,

WASHINGTON — Unraveling of the Western alliance is the justification given by Ronald Reagan's national security advisers for making Gen. Alexander M. Haig the leading prospect to become secretary of state in a Reagan administration.

Reagan's foreign policy team, headed by Richard K. Allen, sees a major asset owned by Haig in any future dealings with Western Europe: intimacy with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt developed by Haig during nearly five years as supreme commander of NATO.

REAGAN IS ALARMED at signs of a breakdown in the alliance, most lately President Carter's sharp letter to Schmidt on the eve of the Venice summit. Restoration of strength and harmony, particularly between the U.S. and West Germany, is Reagan's first step to any workable Western strategy in dealing with the worldwide Soviet offensive.

Therein lies Haig's allure as Reagan's instrument to make the industrialized, democratic world whole again. In the words of one high-level West German leader: "Naming Haig secretary of state would do more to revive the alliance than any single step I can think of."

It is the Reaganite thesis that Europe is the key to Western survival and that Schmidt is the key to Europe. That thesis, shared by many American foreign policy experts outside the Reagan camp, assumes a big Schmidt victory in the October election.

This points toward Al Haig as a natural Reagan agent for rebuilding the alliance. During Schmidt's last visit here, a March 6 dinner given for the chancellor by banker David Rockefeller in his Manhattan townhouse was conspicuously marked by a long, private chat in the library between Schmidt and Haig. When Haig underwent heart surgery at Houston Presbyterian Hospital in early April, Schmidt sent him a personal letter urging a speedy recovery.

To Schmidt, Jimmy Carter has been an uncertain partner with a disarming tendency toward sudden policy swerves that have left Western Europe numb and angry. Reagan is unknown in Europe; Haig at his side would provide reassurance. Arriving unhunted in Brussels in Nov. 1974, for his NATO assignment fresh from duty as Richard Nixon's White House chief of staff, Haig shed the Watergate taint quickly. In a few months, he had become a rallying point for the Western alliance.

The one impediment to Haig, however, could be Watergate. One Reagan insider told us "some stuff" on a White House tape, not available to the public, could hurt the general by revealing his reaction when Nixon first briefed him on the Watergate scandal. If this actually showed Haig knowing more than he later admitted, it would be fatal. But nobody is claiming this, and the tape may never be played publicly.

BUT REAGAN'S ADVISERS think Watergate is outweighed by Haig's assets. Haig, Kissinger's lieutenant on Nixon's National Security Council staff, could be a bridge between Reagan and Kissinger. Under no circumstance will Kissinger be invited into the Reagan administration; nevertheless, Reaganites do not want an open rift with him.

Reaganites also credit Haig for his connection with the old East Coast Republican establishment, or what is left of it.

Hypothermia: Problem that plagues elderly

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please mention hypothermia in your column. I understand that there are many victims of this, especially among senior citizens. — E.B.

Hypothermia is defined as a drop in body temperature to less than 95 degrees. This can have serious consequences, especially, as you note, in the elderly. Recently in Britain it was found that almost 4 percent of elderly patients admitted to hospitals had temperatures below 95 degrees.

Hypothermia is especially dangerous in the elderly because their bodies have less ability to produce heat. This is easily explained. When the body surface becomes cold, the blood vessels of the skin clamp down as more and more blood is retained in the warmer interior to protect vital organs. This keeps the internal body temperature from dropping too low. But there is another little-known fact, as we cool, muscles shiver, and this muscular activity actually generates heat. The elderly have smaller muscle mass and hence cannot make up for heat loss by shivering as easily as can younger persons.

The first telltale sign of hypothermia may be fatigue, incoordination and confusion. If the body temperature continues to drop, coma may result. An unconscious person is subject to hypothermia, and for this reason they are covered with a blanket to preserve body heat.

Hypothermic patients should be cared for promptly. Besides warming with blankets and warm packs, some advocate placing the person in a tub of water at a temperature between 90 and 106 degrees Fahrenheit. If the symptoms are severe the warming should be done in a hospital. However, too rapid warming can lead to a drop in blood pressure, so it is best to take the simple (blanket and warm packs) approach and seek professional help promptly. There may be abnormal heart rhythms in the hypothermic person.

Hypothermia is often an unrecognized problem. It was one reason so much concern was expressed during the recent fuel oil crunch. The elderly should plan on to be adequately clothed when cool weather arrives. If they are living alone, friends and relatives should check to see that their living conditions are such that they are getting enough warmth.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I would appreciate it very much if you would write on an unpleasant subject — hemorrhoids. I have had this for some time and have had barium enema X-rays, and they were negative except for some diverticulosis. Is there no remedy for the tightening of the lower bowel? I am 82 and this is very annoying. I am in good health otherwise and am on no medicine. — Mrs. R.R.

A change in the size of stool is a significant event. Very narrow stools can indicate growths in the colon. You did the appropriate thing — consulted your physician. The tests ruled out the possibility of growths.

If your stools are very thin and hard, it may mean you are not getting enough fiber in your diet. Whole bran is an excellent food that will provide this. It helps hold water in the bowel and prevents the stool from drying out and becoming hard and thin. I would certainly give that a try.

Diverticulosis (bowel outpouchings) should not contribute to your stool size. However, many feel that diverticulosis results from lack of fiber in the diet, so the bran might help in both your situations. Inflammation of the pouches is called diverticulitis, and that can cause changes in the stool. However, when there is such inflammation a person usually has severe abdominal pain, which you do not report. If that happens, contact your doctor promptly.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I read some time ago that a person having bad teeth and not having them extracted could end up with a number of health problems. Is it possible that this condition could cause headaches and loss of appetite? — G.P.

Bad teeth can and are the seat of many health problems. For instance, the upper molars are located just beneath the maxillary sinuses. Infection in the roots of those molars can spread to the sinuses. Abscesses in teeth of the lower jaw can cause infections of the jawbone. Sinusitis or infections of the bones of the head can cause headaches. Chronically infected teeth can affect general health, as can any infection. Loss of appetite certainly could be one manifestation. Certainly it is worth the time to have a complete dental checkup.

"You Can Stop Sinus Trouble!" is the title of Dr. Donohue's booklet explaining what sinus trouble really is and what can be done about it. For a copy write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am 19, and my friends think I am happy. But on the inside I am empty and unhappy. Why am I this way? — C.J.

DEAR C.J.: You are this way because all of us are empty and unfulfilled as long as we are apart from God. God created us. He did not do it by chance. He did it for a purpose. His purpose was that we love Him and serve Him, and have fellowship with Him every day. But when we leave Him out of our lives we are empty. We have a spiritual nature — we are not just physical or mental beings alone.

Ther problem is that we have left God out of our lives. We have tried to be happy without Him, and that is not really possible. We try all kinds of things to fill the void inside and find happiness, but eventually all those things prove false. Many centuries ago King Solomon, the wealthiest man of his time, tried to find happiness. He tried everything from alcohol and sex to learning and philosophy. And yet he found he could never fill the emptiness he felt inside. "I denied myself nothing my eyes desired... Yet when I surveyed all that my hands had done and what I had toiled to achieve, everything was meaningless, a chasing after the wind." (Ecclesiastes 2:10-11).

What is the answer? There is a wonderful truth I want you to know — God loves you! He loves you so much that He wants to forgive you of your sins and restore you to a personal relationship with Him as His child. That is why Jesus Christ, His Son, came into the world — to make it possible for us to be saved and restored.

My prayer is that you will turn to Christ and invite Him into your life by faith. He has promised to come into your life and, when you truly turn to Him, you will discover the joy and purpose in living.

Thanks, but no

Around the rim

Andrea Cohen

A few times I've been asked if I went nuts when I started working two nights a week as a cocktail waitress. With certain exceptions like Friday night when the same order spilled three times before I got it to the table, the answer is no.

This column, and my heart goes out to Charlie, Mary (happy birthday), Joe, Tony, Janie, Alicia, Ginger, Klye and (heaven forbid) Casey. If you know these names in one big package, you are probably a regular at the Lamplighter. They go through all the time what I go through some of the time.

I suppose you have to be employed there to understand why we all stick around. There is no answer except that probably each of us is a little more insane than the next. It may be Joe's back rubs at 2 a.m., our only fringe benefit. It certainly isn't his jokes.

And it certainly isn't the speed the band gets the staff's requests played, except for Charlie's, for obvious reasons and Mary's, who makes their drinks.

And it certainly isn't Casey's morbid sense of humor.

And it definitely is not the people who stand in the aisles while the waitresses try to get through the maddening mob.

There are certain things a person learns when she starts waitressing in a club like that.

The biggest is how to perform the great balancing act. We know that you think that we are all being quite glamorous as we march through the aisles to your table. Actually, what we're really doing is figuring out the best way to get from point A (the bar) to point B (the table) without having everything going over on the heads of various persons on the way.

THE SECOND THING we all learn, and fast, is that the Lord did not give us legs to walk with. He gives them to us to kick chairs out of the way as we walk to point B while we carry a tray of 11 drinks in one hand and a pitcher of beer in the other hand. (See previous paragraph.)

The third thing we learn all too quickly is to go from the tried, true and polite "excuse me" to "get the h... out of the way" as we contend with the previous two paragraphs.

We have also learned about the person who insists on getting his drink from the bartender at precisely the place the waitresses are weaving in and out doing the great juggling act. We scream quite a bit. (That area takes up five percent of the entire bar. Please use the other 95.)

As much as Mary may think otherwise, we do not encourage an overload of Bloody Mary orders. We try to keep her happy.

You'd think that we all try to keep Charlie happy. Not so. We keep Tony happy. Because when we keep him happy, he keeps her happy, who in turn keeps the rest of us happy.

Charlie only has one bad habit. If she would just say no when we ask her for something it wouldn't be so bad. But she has this horrible habit that makes you feel awfully guilty. For instance:

ME: Charlie, can I have the night off?

HER: (With big sad eyes) Well, if that's what you REALLY want.

This is where the guilt sets in. ME: Oh, it wasn't important. I'm sure the surgery can be put off a few months.

Influence peddling

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Twice within a year, the White House was explicitly warned that it is a crime to buy political support with the taxpayers' money. The first admonition was ignored, the second was quietly

I've already detailed the way Jimmy Carter played Lady Bountiful with federal grants to key states and localities shortly before crucial primaries and caucuses. This deliberate use of government largesse to beat back Ted Kennedy's challenge came despite a clear warning in March 1979, from White House Counsel Robert Lipshutz that such grantismanship was illegal.

IT IS A CRIME, Lipshutz wrote in a memo to the White House staff, for "anyone with grant-making authority to use that authority in order to affect the nomination or election of a candidate." In the same memo, Lipshutz wrote: "It is also a crime for anyone to promise employment... in return for political support for a particular candidate."

The latter part of the warning was so openly brushed aside in the parceling out of Census jobs this year that even Justice Department attorneys became alarmed. They informally warned the White House and the Census Bureau last March that their systematic politicizing of the Census recruitment process might violate the criminal code. The hiring procedure was then quietly modified.

That caught the Justice Department's eye was the White House system for doing out temporary census-taking jobs. One Census Bureau memo, dispatched to all the bureau's regional directors last Jan. 25, stated baldly: "Throughout the recruiting process, preference will be given to candidates recommended by the political party of the incumbent Administration."

This blatant battle cry for a return to the spoils system was followed by specific instructions. The memo indicated the specific government form on which "all recommendations from Democratic sources should be listed," and reminded the regional directors that they were responsible for "seeing that applicants who were recommended" were clearly identified.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT investigators found that job applicants with political referrals were indeed given preference in the scheduling of job interviews after initial tests were passed. The interviews were often mere formalities; putting politically referred applicants at the head of the line meant that they were virtually assured of landing one of the limited number of jobs.

In mid-March, the Census Bureau revised its Jan. 25 memo, deleting the offensive paragraph and the other references to political preference. The agency also modified the way in which job interviews were scheduled.

A White House attorney told my associate Tony Capaccio the Census Bureau "decided to make the change out of an abundance of caution" to "show that it was operating within all the applicable laws."

by underlings, was far advanced even by 1936, according to FBI files which have just surfaced.

The prestigious Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia — the oldest advertising club in the country — invited Hoover to appear at a weekly meeting and accept a silver medal. He immediately ordered his G-men to the scene to check out the situation.

The agent-in-charge of Philadelphia wrote the boss that the club's reputation was "splendid." But he advised that Hoover hold out for the club's annual gold medal, awarded annually to the most outstanding American.

"A silver medal, while it carries considerable weight, in my frank opinion, does not do justice to the Director," the agent-in-charge wrote. Hoover readily agreed. But poor Edgar never was offered Poor Richard's gold medal.

GRANT GAMES: The Carter White House continues to punish congressional supporters of Sen. Ted Kennedy's presidential bid. Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., a staunch Kennedy man, recently helped the city of Sioux Falls get a $1.8 million grant from the Housing and Urban Development Department. But HUD officials called Rep. Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., to let him make the announcement. Daschle hadn't worked on the grant, so he notified McGovern. When a McGovern aide called HUD for confirmation, an agency official denied the grant had been made. Not until the McGovern man identified Daschle as the source of his information did the embarrassed HUD official confirm that the grant had indeed been made.

CORRECTION: In a recent column, we said Sen. Donald Stewart, D-Ala., had received $11,500 from the American Family Life Insurance Co. Political Action Committee.

Dear Editor:

For the past year many of our U.S. Embassies throughout the world have been the targets of terrorism. It is ironic that one of our Embassies should also serve as a refuge of freedom for two persecuted families. This month two Soviet Christian families will have lived in a small basement room in the U.S. Embassy for two years. The Doschenks and Chmykhobos families' only desire to worship God in freedom and peace. They have undergone 20 years of beatings, prisons, labor camps and having their children taken from them. All of this because they are Christians.

Recently a letter signed by 50 United States Senators was sent to Lenoid Breshnev in behalf of the families requesting that the Soviet Union allow them to leave the U.S.S.R. I commend our Sen. Lloyd Bentsen for being among those who joined in sending this letter and am proud of our country for its example of concern for humanity which it has exhibited on behalf of these two families.

On the light side Effort to set record fails

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — This is the story of the little train that couldn't.

After 12 hours in an empty shopping mall, a group of 45 people gave up their weekend effort to top the 501-car world record for the longest electric train.

They tried 30 to 40 times to keep their train moving long enough to qualify for the record, but the curves and slight slope of the Northland Mall proved to be too much to overcome.

"Certainly, there's a certain amount of disappointment," said Stewart Roberts, who got his first model train 26 years ago at age 5.

"But there was so much positive that came out of the whole thing. Everybody had a really good time," he said. "We all got to know each other. That's the best thing I got out of it."

Roberts and company were trying to snap a 2-year-old record set by the New Jersey Model Railroad Club. They had little trouble getting the project in motion — they had 25 engines — but ran into problems keeping the specially made silver-and-blue boxcars on the tracks.

"First we tried with 1,000 cars, then reduced periodically," Roberts said. "The best luck we had was with a 670-car train that went just over 500 feet."

"But the 500 feet was not enough under the rules," he said. "To qualify, the train has to traverse its own length. We probably were about 140 feet short."

"It was a beautiful sight. It ran about seven minutes. The 1,000-car trains were even more spectacular."

Sheriff even sells police dog

AMITE, La. (AP) — Sheriff Frank Edwards, facing a staggering budget deficit as he leaves office, has put his department's property on the auction block — and even the drug-sniffing police dog has to go.

Ed Layrison, the new sheriff for Tangipahoa Parish, will have four bare walls and an empty parking lot to look at when he takes office on July 1.

Edwards on Sunday sold off patrol cars, trucks, lights and sirens, radios, pistols, office equipment and even a machine gun.

There was only one bidder, however, and Douglas Bell of Amite offered to pay $65,000 for the lot. He's the sheriff's cousin.

Layrison already has signed contracts for new radios and uniforms for the deputies.

"The way it looks to me, I'm going to have no assets and no budget," a glum Layrison said in a telephone interview from his home. "It's comical to just about everyone but me."

Edwards was unavailable for comment.

He ran up the deficit under a state law which allowed him to borrow up to 75 percent of his anticipated revenues. According to a 1978 audit, Edwards was running the department more than $239,000 in the red.

Layrison was in court to block the sale, but District Judge Brent LaFrecche allowed it.

Anderson won't be only 'other name' on ballot

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. John Anderson's recent visits to Texas should remind voters there may be other choices for the next U.S. President than Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan.

Ever hear of Andrew Pulley? Ed Clark? Barry Commoner?

What about a feminine presidential candidate, like Dieder Griswold?

Some of those may be on the Texas general election ballot.

And still other names will be on the ballot, outside the Democratic and Republican columns, seeking election from Texas to Congress or the Legislature.

Anderson told supporters in Austin he felt certain of getting the 40,719 signatures of qualified voters by July 14 that would put him on Texas' Nov. 4 ballot as an independent candidate for president. He has similar hopes in at least 40 other states.

In fact, Anderson urged backers to turn in considerably more than 41,000 signatures as early as July 4th to allow time for expected testing in the courts.

Anderson's campaign has been following instructions of Secretary of State George Strake, a Republican, and allowing Democrats who voted in Texas' Democrats non-binding presidential poll May 3 to sign Anderson's petitions.

Attorney General Mark White, a Democrat, said this is illegal, and Anderson's signers should not include anyone who voted Republican or Democratic on May 3.

Supporters of President Jimmy Carter fear Anderson's name on the ballot could siphon off Democratic votes, particularly among college-age voters where Anderson has directed much of his campaign.

But whether Anderson makes the Texas ballot or not, there likely will be several third parties qualified, which only have to produce 26,000 signatures of non-Democratic or Republican primary voters.

Three such parties making active campaigns are the Citizens Party (with Commoner for president), Libertarians (Ed Clark) and the Socialist Workers (Andrew Pulley). The Secretary of State says these three parties are "timely filed" and only have to produce the legal petitions.

A number of other third parties made preliminary moves toward the Texas ballot but did not complete the process. However, if they produced enough legal signatures they likely could get a court order to appear on the ballot. These include the Workers World Party, whose presidential candidate Dieder Griswold was in Austin, San Antonio and the Rio Grande Valley last week.

Veterans Preservation Movement Party, the Third World Assembly, the Confederate Party, the Peoples Party and the Christian-Bull Moose-Fighting Tiger Party which is headquartered in the Philippines.

In 1976, Eugene McCarthy got 20,118 votes as an independent and the American Party polled 11,442. The Socialist and American Party candidates got 15,000 votes in 1972.

And in 1968, George Wallace got 584,269 Texas votes as an American Party candidate, probably keeping Richard Nixon from taking Texas as Hubert Humphrey did by a narrow 39,000 votes.

Libertarians also have David Hutzelman, Houston, known as "The Sunset Kid," running for the Texas Railroad Commission.

Bonilla re-elected

LULAC to publish voters guide for '80 elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ruben Bonilla, unanimously re-elected president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, says the Hispanic organization plans to publish a voters guide for the upcoming presidential election.

The Corpus Christi, Texas, attorney said the non-partisan publication would be the first guide on Hispanic issues put out in a national campaign.

Each presidential candidate would be asked to respond to a list of questions considered important in the Hispanic community.

Bonilla said his re-election to a second one-year term as LULAC president could be considered a mandate on the increased political profile the organization has adopted.

LULAC calls itself the nation's oldest and largest Hispanic organization, with about 100,000 members.

Bonilla's supporters ousted the incumbent, more traditional leadership in a tough fight last year at the national convention in Houston.

They produced the same "Bonilla's Bees" caps that were evident in past campaigns, but there was little need for their use before Bonilla's unopposed re-election Sunday.

He told delegates that LULAC never would be able to return to the days when its social clubs and educational scholarships were more important than social activism.

"We have changed from a polite, socially oriented organization," Bonilla said. "This organization will no longer tolerate political indifference or turning back the clock."

He said a top target is further expansion from the organization's largely Mexican-American base in Texas and the Southwest to include Cuban-American and Puerto Ricans throughout the country.

In a move billed as a boost to their national visibility, delegates selected Detroit over El Paso, Texas, as the site for the 1983 national convention. More than half of the eligible voters were from Texas.

Next year's convention will be in Albuquerque, N.M.

At Bonilla's urging, delegates voted to "chastize" President Carter for not appearing at the convention and to call his absence a slighting of the Hispanic community.

Vice President Walter Mondale appeared as the convention's keynote speaker Friday, the day after Carter returned from his eight-day European trip.

Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan and Sen. Edward Kennedy did not put in appearances at the convention either. Independent presidential candidate John Anderson received a warm welcome Saturday.

Bonilla had drawn criticism from some members of the non-partisan organization for endorsing Carter before the Texas Democratic primary.

He later told reporters, however, it would be "politically immature" to withdraw the endorsement in retaliation for Carter's decision against appearing at the LULAC convention when Reagan is in the race.

"Ronald Reagan is the greatest threat to Hispanic equality in this country," Bonilla said.

Although the organization's constitution limits a president to two one-year terms, Bonilla said one of his brothers or his wife may run next year if the LULAC move to activism appears in danger of weakening.

BEFORE, DURING, AND AFTER — The Baker Hotel in downtown Dallas goes down, kicking up a cloud of dust during a 15 second implosion Sunday. The 55-year-old building was demolished to make way for a new office building. The hotel was the light-roofed above and to the right. The controlled explosions also leveled the two 10-story buildings in the left foreground. The 225-foot tall smokestack was also brought down.

Billowing dust marks fall of landmark hotel

DALLAS (AP) — Demolition experts detonated a series of closely-timed explosions that brought the once-elegant Baker Hotel tumbling down beneath a billowing cloud of dust.

About 2,000 persons cheered in downtown Dallas on Sunday as the 55-year-old Dallas landmark was reduced to a 50-yard high heap of dusty rubble.

Linear-shaped charges implanted cut through steel columns and load bearing walls just before noon, leveling a city block that included the 18-story, L-shaped hotel, two 10-story buildings and a 225-foot-tall concrete smokestack.

Ballrooms where Tommy Dorsey played and suites where presidents Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon had slept make up just a small part of the estimated 65,000 truck yards of debris.

The 586-room hotel took less than 15 seconds to collapse. It was demolished to make way for a new Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. building.

The hotel, built in 1925, was closed after the site was included in two full blocks purchased by the telephone company in July of 1979.

Adoptive parents deserve first allegiance

By Robert Wallace, Jr., Ed. D.

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Copley News Service

Dr. Wallace: I'd like to respond to Julie, the adopted girl from San Mateo, Calif., who loves her adoptive parents very much and who did not want to find her natural mother because she did not want to bring pain to her adoptive parents or possibly her natural mother.

As a woman who gave a child up for adoption, I would like to tell Julie how touched I was by her letter and by her obvious devotion to her adoptive parents. It is probably safest for her to assume that trying to find her natural parents could be traumatic for them as well as her adoptive parents, but she should also be aware that her natural parents might be thrilled to see her.

Since I gave up my baby for adoption, many things in my life have changed. That decision long ago altered my life considerably, but I believe that all the things that happened to me then, and since then, have helped to make me a stronger person today.

There are many things I would like to explain to the child I gave up. I'm also extremely curious about her.

In the event that my daughter should ever wish to find me, I've made it as easy for her as I can. I've written a letter to her, in care of the adoption agency that handled my case, telling her how she can reach me. The agency has placed that letter in her file, and should she ever inquire, I've asked that the letter be given to her.

It is also possible to register with ALMA (Adoptee's Liberty Movement Association, P.O. Box 154, Washington Bridge Station, New York, N.Y. 10033). For a nominal yearly fee, they keep all the vital statistics regarding the adoption in their computer and can match up children and parents at the touch of a button.

Julie, you know best how seeking your natural parents would affect your adoptive parents, and your first allegiance should be to them, because they are your real parents.

But please don't assume you would be hurting your natural parents by trying to find them. Some of us would like to be found. — Margaret, Santa Barbara, Calif.

Dr. Wallace: I'm in 7th grade and on my last report card I received two D's. I tried very hard and brought the two D's up to C's but I got a D in another class.

Because of this new D, my parents have grounded me for the rest of the school year. Do you think this is fair? — Brad, Astoria, Ore.

Brad: If you were not grounded for receiving two D's, then you should not have been grounded for receiving one even though it was in another class.

In fact, a little encouragement and praise might have been in order.

Dr. Wallace: I was really touched by reading about the girl who jumped off a bridge and tried to commit suicide because she thought nobody cared about her. Miraculously, she lived and wrote to you saying that if any readers felt unloved, that she cared and loved that person and so did God.

I'm so glad she survived to tell her story because I also felt nobody loved me and was seriously thinking of suicide. When I opened the newspaper and read your column, I cried and didn't feel alone anymore.

It's beautiful to know that someone loves you even though they don't know you. Today I feel a lot better. — Ally, Seattle, Wash.

Ally: You will never know how much your letter affected me. Today I feel a lot better.

Send questions to Dr. Robert Wallace, TwEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. For Dr. Wallace's teen booklet, "Happiness or Despair," please send $1 and a 28-cent stamped, large, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Wallace, in care of this newspaper.

Ms. Spruce is world traveler

Mrs. Beatrice Spruce of Lakenheath, England, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen C. James, Sterling Rt., has recently returned home from vacationing in Greece.

Mrs. Spruce is the mother of Tony Burgess, 1103 Mulberry and Gary Burgess, Sterling Rt., and is a graduate of Big Spring High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Spruce are presently living in Lakenheath, Eng. with two other children, Teresa and Randy Mainord. Having lived in England and Germany for five years, Mrs. Spruce has traveled in 14 countries, the fulfillment of a long time dream made possible by her husband being in the air force.

Always interested in art, she has seen the "Pieta" in Rome, the "Mona Lisa" at the Louvre in Paris, Michelangelo's "David" in Florence, Italy, and the ruins of the Acropolis in Athens, Greece and considers these very special experiences.

Other places of interest visited were William Shakespeare's birthplace at Stratford-on-Avon, Winston Churchill's home at Blenheim Palace near Oxford, England; the famous Gutenberg Bible in Mainz, Germany; Anne Frank's house in Amsterdam, Holland and King Ludwig's three castles in Bavaria.

Mrs. Spruce said when asked to choose her favorite place, "It's a toss-up between the magnificent Cathedral in Cologne, Germany and the tiny picturesque island of Hydra in the Greek Islands."

The Spruces are planning a visit to the "Military Tattoo" in Edinburgh, Scotland in August. Mrs. Spruce will visit Spain by air in the fall.

"Traveling is very educational and I've had a fantastic time," said Mrs. Spruce.

Engagement announced

Carlos Rodriguez, Big Spring, announces the engagement and approaching marriage of his daughter, Mary, to Joe Lopez Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lopez Sr., Big Spring. The couple will be married July 6 at 901 W. Country Rd., Odessa, with Manuel Valles, Justice of the Peace, officiating.

DEAR ABBY: May I comment on the letter from the Dallas woman who was upset because the tapes of her wedding were ruined when a baby cried?

I am a clergyman who has officiated at over 500 church weddings, and the lengths to which some people will go to put on a theatrical production in a house of worship for a simple exchange of marriage vows are appalling!

I once tied the knot at a wedding where $20,000 was spent for flowers alone. I later learned the bill for the entire wedding came to $100,000. (Incidentally, the knot didn't hold; the couple divorced three years later.)

I've officiated at weddings where cameras and sound equipment were so intrusive that I felt more like an actor playing a role than a minister. (At one point I was asked to "stop and start over again" because the audio wasn't working properly.)

I can understand wanting to preserve the beauty of an occasion with pictures, and I have no objections to movies taken outside the church, but to perform for the camera is, in my opinion, making a mockery of a sacred ceremony.

If you print this, please don't use my name, as I do not wish to be prematurely retired.

STILL PREACHING IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: I ache for the young woman who wrote to say that a crying baby ruined her wedding. The baby couldn't help it. It should have been carried out as soon as it started to whimper.

What disturbed me was the bride's unforgiving attitude. She wrote: "I find it hard to look at that child today — much less his mother. To make matters worse, they are now a part of our family, and I will be reminded of that episode every time I look at them."

Abby, some time ago you said that the person who cannot forgive but continues to bear a grudge harms only himself, for "hate is like acid eating away at the vessel that contains it."

MONTANA READER

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the bride who complained because a crying baby ruined her wedding reminded me of my own wedding. Only there was no crying baby — it was my mother-in-law! She cried and sobbed throughout the entire ceremony as though her heart were breaking. You could hear her all over the church. One would have thought her son was being sentenced to life in prison with no chance of parole.

ANOTHER WEDDING RUINED

DEAR ABBY: Our wedding wasn't "ruined" because of a crying baby, but it was sure the talk of the town. It was our baby.

The frontier life in a Chinese prairie outpost

SIZIWANG, Inner Mongolia (AP) — Mongolian "cowboys" in mule carts, and Chinese peasants on tractors ride along the dusty streets of this frontier town where billboards warn against brawling, prostitution and sorcery.

Siziwang, population 10,000, is a collection of mud huts and concrete boxes huddled on the edge of the grasslands.

It lies about 70 miles by jeep from Hohhot, capital of China's Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region, which has been open to foreign visitors for only a year.

This "wild west" settlement is the Chinese equivalent of an American trading post or a Klondike settlement — but without the romance of gold or the lure of saloons and dance halls.

Here the gold is in animals: horses, sheep, cattle and camels. This is the crossroads where herdsmen from the grasslands stock up on provisions, and peasants from the rock-hard prairie buy or barter their supplies. For many, the lights of Siziwang are the brightest they will see in their lives.

"Siziwang" literally means "king of four sons" and refers to the brother of Mongol chieftan Genghis Khan. The brother had four sons and ruled this region of nomadic tribes.

Today, however, Siziwang is primarily a Chinese settlement. The streets bustle with grizzled herdsmen, farmers and bright-eyed Communist Youth League members with red scarves around their necks, crisp white shirts and ribbons in their hair.

Just down the street from the popular and necessary public baths, "The 405 Murder Case," a B-grade political thriller, is playing at the only movie house in town.

In the muddy theater courtyard a cartoon billboard warns against the vices of frontier life: gang fights, rape, prostitution, pornography and superstitious practices.

"Don't molest women in public places," it warns. The punishment is seven years in prison.

"Don't engage in prostitution for profit," it orders. The cartoon shows a curvaceous woman in a green polka-dot dress. A man by her side holds up two fingers to passersby as if to say, "Two yuan."

The billboard also warns against engaging in superstitious practices. The penalties are stiff — up to five years in prison for the most serious cases — in an effort to protect gullible grassland rubes from being bilked by visitors taking advantage of their folk ways and ignorance.

At the bustling main intersection, buckboards of mules with jingling bells splash through the mud. Here and there a mule stands at a hitching post. The herdsmen don't come into town on prancing horses; more than likely they slump wearily in their mule carts or sleep against sacks of grain.

They stop at the local department store to buy anything from bedrolls to carved Mongolian pipes. The daily necessities resemble those in any Chinese department store.

At one corner of the intersection an entrepreneur spreads his wares on a red cloth in the dirt: more than 100 yellowed, rotted teeth. For a price between 75 cents and $1, he pulls teeth at a nearby clinic. He also sells veterinary potions.

Nearby a man sells embroidery samplers. Across the street, workers, farmers and herdsmen line up to have a local practitioner remove ear wax.

At the bus station, a notice of execution is posted on the wall, something routine in many parts of China.

The notice from the Supreme Court of Inner Mongolia describes the case of Sung Chuen Guang, 22, a railroad construction worker who was executed May 15.

Sung was convicted of a series of robberies and brutal assaults — one of them fatal — dating back years. Although he was arrested before and sentenced to reeducation through labor, he never reformed or curbed his lust for money, the notice says.

He was arrested for robbery Dec. 31, 1979. The intermediate Mongolian People's Court found that in eight months the culprit had stolen the equivalent of $206 in cash, coupons for 1,700 pounds of rice, two wrist watches, 30 articles of clothing, three transistor radios, one donkey cart and many cartons of "high class" cigarettes.

The court notice said that last December, Sung hit a shopkeeper on the head with a brick. The blow was fatal. Sung took the man's watch.

EDMUND G. BROWN JR. HUGH HEFNER

'Crying' incident resurfaces

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie believes people will never forget his emotional appearance — and what may have been his tears — before news cameras in the 1972 New Hampshire presidential primary, says his wife, Jane.

When Muskie was appointed to the top diplomatic post and the "crying" incident was resurrected, Mrs. Muskie said to him, "Won't they ever forget that? He said, 'No they won't.' Every time I go through Manchester (N.H.) I look the other way."

The Muskies' close relationship was at the heart of the emotional scene. Presented with a newspaper attack on his wife, Muskie denounced the newspaper before reporters. It was snowing, and at one point he wiped away what may have been tears or snowflakes. According to political analysts, the possibility of tears destroyed the then-Maine senator's chances for the presidency.

The Muskies have been married 31 years and aides call her "the sustaining force in his career."

Playboy Mansion and politics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was an unusual place for a political fund-raiser.

Supporters of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. explored the stone pool, the artificial cave with its whirlpool baths and the mini-zoo, housing everything from exotic birds to black rabbits, at a fund-raiser at Hugh Hefner's opulent Playboy Mansion West Saturday night.

For $75, some 200 supporters of the unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination got an hour-long tour around the 5½-acre estate.

Brown, who amassed a $150,000 debt in his campaign, was heard to say as he left the estate: "We've got to find more imaginative ways to get people to part with their money."

MARLENE DIETRICH GRETA GARBO

Two 'queens' not speaking

NEW YORK (AP) — Two legendary film stars will be neighbors in Paris for the July 4 weekend. But while Greta Garbo, 75, and Marlene Dietrich, 78, both will live on Avenue Montaigne, don't expect the two women to get together for tea.

The only time the two were together on film was "The Joyless Street," a German silent movie made in 1925. And they haven't spoken to each other in decades.

"Although there is no feud, they've never really liked each other," a close confidant told the New York Daily News. "In fact, when they were filming 'The Joyless Street,' Dietrich resented all the attention given to Garbo. Marlene was a star in Europe at the time."

"Later, they were stars at rival studios. Garbo was the queen of MGM while Marlene was the queen at Paramount. No feud. But there is a chill."

Groups to ask PUC to ban power shut-offs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two consumers' organizations say they will ask the Public Utility Commission to ban power shut-offs when such action would be harmful to health, like during this week's blistering heat wave.

"One-hundred degree plus temperatures throughout the state this month brings home the reality that electric service is a necessity and, in many cases, is vital to a healthful environment," said a joint statement from Texas Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN) and Texas Consumers Union.

"We want to ensure that no one goes without electric services during times like these just because someone is too poor to pay his or her entire bill."

The organizations said they would file a petition with the commission on Tuesday requesting it adopt rules which would prohibit electric utilities from cutting service to customers under certain conditions.

Dallas Power & Light said Friday, when temperatures there reached 112 degrees, customers with heavy bills

State vs. Vernon Eugene McManus

Murder case full of sex, sin

HOUSTON (AP) — The State vs. Vernon Eugene McManus is a legendary murder case even by Texas standards, with liberal dollops of sin, sex and more than surprising twists.

The cast befits the story: Vernon Eugene McManus — a football hero in the early 1960s at Baytown then at Lamar University, McManus displayed a penchant for women and a thirst for money that ultimately led him to Death Row.

Paula Cantrell Derese — nicknamed "Chicken Little," she was, by her own admission, a spoiled only child with two bad marriages behind her at age 26 when she first thought about killing her parents.

Don Smith — a hard-working attorney who claimed defending McManus left him broke, he found solace with McManus' wife in a Baytown motel less than a month after his client was convicted.

Regina McManus Smith — a stunning, poised blonde who denied any involvement with Smith during her former husband's trial, then moved in with and later married Smith after she divorced McManus.

Ben Milton Sharp — a self-described "drifter and con man" who told a grand jury he bilked McManus out of $12,000 by arranging for a bogus "hit man," then left town after feigning insanity when McManus became suspicious.

The story begins almost four years ago in Baytown, Texas, a largely blue collar community east of Houston.

Paula Cantrell Derese had gone to a rock concert and her father, Paul Cantrell, 51, and mother, Mary, 48, had gone to dinner and a movie with friends.

Paula returned home about 1:30 a.m. July 25, 1976, to find the bodies of her parents lying about eight feet apart in the blood-spattered den of their home.

Both had been strangled to death, before their throats had been slashed, a medical examiner ruled.

Police were baffled by the apparent lack of motive — there were no signs of forced entry, nothing was taken. The Cantrells were wearing the same clothes they wore to the movie, leading officers to believe the killer — or killers — were waiting when the couple returned home.

Four days later, a day after her parent's funeral, Paula Cantrell Derese confessed, telling police she had discussed killing her parents with McManus, then her employer.

She said she was afraid that her parents would try to keep her 3-year-old son if she went back to her second husband and that McManus had told her he could "arrange things."

McManus' price for the double homicide, she said, was one third of the estate and the same portion of a $100,000 insurance policy her father had recently bought.

Ironically, Paul Cantrell had not purchased the policy when he was murdered. He had taken it home to study it, telling his insurance agent, "I don't buy anything I don't see first."

A grand jury charged Paula Cantrell Derese and Vernon Eugene McManus with conspiracy to commit capital murder. She became the first woman to face the death penalty under the state's new death by lethal injection law.

Paula agreed to plead guilty to two lesser charges of murder in return for her testimony at McManus' trial in the spring of 1977.

Jury selection took seven weeks and McManus began questioning potential jurors at one point.

The day before testimony started, he fled, leaving behind a borrowed, blood-stained car.

Authorities were suspicious. One officer noted the blood was smeared, not spattered, inside the car. Later, they discovered McManus had used a hypodermic needle to draw out his own blood and smear it on the car seat.

The auto belonged to Betty Plaskett, who later was sentenced to five years probation for helping McManus escape.

Another woman, bar owner Dinah Strapps, apparently provided forged identity papers for McManus, but then helped law officers capture him by lying to McManus, saying she was carrying his baby when he called her.

"Oh Lord, I'll be proud of him (the baby)," McManus replied when Ms. Strapps told him of the baby.

Using the information Ms. Strapps received in phone conversation, authorities recaptured McManus a week later in Florida — in the company of another woman.

During the ensuing trial, Paula told jurors she had first met McManus when she was working as a secretary at Lamar University and he was an assistant football coach there.

They dated briefly, then McManus hired her as a secretary again several years later when he started a plywood firm with Vernon Olney, who was also charged with conspiracy to commit capital murder.

Olney is awaiting a second trial after his first trial ended in a mistrial.

McManus, Paula testified, arranged the killing and even told her he had struck her parents with a piece of pipe. He said "others" were involved, but did not say who they were or how many.

Convicted and sentenced to death, McManus began a series of appeals.

In his latest request for a new trial, now being heard in Houston, McManus contends he was not adequately defended because his wife was having an affair with Smith during the trial.

Smith and Regina McManus began living together in 1978 and were married in 1979 after Smith handled her divorce from her former husband.

Because of McManus' new charges, state District Judge I.D. McMaster suspended the attorney-client relationship between McManus and his former attorney and ordered Smith to reveal to prosecutors all of the communications he had with his former client.

McMaster said during the hearing it was the first time since a 1913 civil case that he could remember anyone suspending the cloak of confidentiality between attorney and client.

Smith balked at the order, saying he was willing to cooperate to a degree because of the nature of McManus' motion, but "deeply believes in the privilege of the attorney-client relationship."

During testimony last week McManus, now 36, took the stand and accused Smith of not only having an affair with Regina McManus Smith but of encouraging his abortive escape effort.

During testimony Friday, Smith denied he had urged McManus to escape. He also said his affair and eventual marriage to Regina McManus "might have hurt his feelings, but I never hurt him legally."

"I want him to have a new trial," Smith told prosecutor Corky Roberts, but adding that the new trial should be granted because of procedural errors in the original trial rather than McManus' latest motion.

He said he had no social involvement with Regina McManus until about a month after McManus had been convicted.

He said he met his present wife that night for a drink and then went with her to a Baytown motel room where he was staying.

Asked by McManus' attorney, Stanley Roberts, if he thought about McManus as he took Regina McManus into the motel room, Smith replied, "Their deal (marriage) was over with. I don't feel I was hurting him."

He said he spent a great deal of time with McManus from the time of his arrest until he went to death row. "I was his friend as well as his lawyer," Smith said.

He said he and Regina McManus began living together in August, 1978, about a year before the two were married.

Both Smith and his new wife say the night they spent in the motel in June, 1977, was not the beginning of their relationship.

"I fell in love with her, but not that night," Smith said.

Mrs. Smith testified Thursday that she "felt nothing" for Smith following their first night together.

She said her decision to divorce McManus came after he was arrested in Florida following his unsuccessful escape. "There was no point in trying to preserve a family relationship after that," she said.

Testimony in the hearing will continue this week and, when completed, be forwarded the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals for a final verdict.

City LL Tourney begins tonight

The Big Spring Little League City Championship Playoffs begin tonight, with second place teams in each of the four parks hosting an affair with a member of a third place team from another league.

The defending city champion Hawks, who perform in the regular season at the American League, are back to defend their title. They finished second in the AL this year, and will play host to the Stars of the International League. Winner of that tilt will face the Texas League champion Red Sox in the upper bracket.

In the other upper bracket game, the National League Rangers will play host to the Texas League Tigers. The Tigers won the city title two years ago, and finished third last season, so they are experienced playoff vets. The survivor of tonight's game will face the International League champion Comets.

In the bottom bracket, the International League Rockets will host the National League Devils. The winner of that contest will travel to play the American League champion Colts, who made it to the semifinals of last year's tournament.

The fourth contest tonight takes place at the Texas League Park, where that circuit's second place Cardinals will host the American League Falcons. Survivor of that match-up will then face the National League champion Yankees, who finished second last year in the city tournament.

All games are set for eight o'clock.

Navratilova, Evert advance in Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion Martina Navratilova overcame a shaky start to trounce Kathy Jordan 6-4, 6-2 today and reach the quarter-finals of the women's singles at the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Chris Evert Lloyd, seeded third, comfortably defeated Joanne Russell 6-3, 6-2. Evonne Goolagong Caley of Australia, seeded fourth, came back from 1-3 in the second set to beat Hana Mandlikova, the 18-year-old Czech, 6-7, 6-3, 6-1.

Wendy Turnbull of Australia, the sixth seed, ousted Lele Forood, an unseeded American, 6-0, 6-2. Navratilova trailed 1-3 in the first set to the 10th-seeded Jordan, the fifth-ranked American from King of Prussia, Pa., but staged a storming recovery.

Jordan held two points for a 4-2 lead, but served a double-fault and then completely misjudged a simple backhand volley.

That was the end of her challenge to Navratilova, who was winning her 18th straight singles match at Wimbledon. The loss of her service game drained the lanky Jordan of her confidence and energy.

Navratilova, 23-year-old Czech-born left-hander, took the first set in 34 minutes and raced to a 3-0 lead in the second before Jordan got her game back together. The champion was playing with fire and aggression, however, and was never again troubled by Jordan.

Greer Stevens, the No. 11 seed from South Africa, caused a minor upset by ousting Dianne Fromholtz of Australia, the No. 8 seed, 6-2, 6-2.

Louganis scores perfectly in Olympic diving trials

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Greg Louganis knows now what it feels like to bowl 300 or shoot 300 in golf like Al Geiberger did.

Louganis accomplished Sunday night in the U.S. Olympic Diving Trials what most divers only dream about — a perfect dive. And it came on the most difficult maneuver in his arsenal off the 3-meter springboard.

Louganis, who won the 1976 Olympic trials in the event but was sixth in the 3-meter at Montreal, unreeled a perfect reverse two and one-half somersault with pike that drew cheers from the standing-room-only crowd at the Texas Swimming Center and six 10s from the judges.

One judge gave the 20-year-old Louganis a 9.5, but the lowest and the best scores are thrown away so he received a perfect 50 on a dive that had a three degree of difficulty, which is as hard as it gets.

"I was very surprised to get six 10s," said Louganis. "It was the same dive I missed yesterday. I was surprised I could come back and hit it like this."

Over Cincinnati

Astros ride see-saw to 12-10 win

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston pitcher Nolan Ryan never could find the strike zone used by home plate umpire Lanny Harris Sunday, but the Astros finally discovered a way to defeat Cincinnati 12-10 in a hard-fought, emotional series finale.

Joe Morgan put the Astros ahead for good in the seventh inning with a two-run pinch-hit double. But by that time, both Ryan and Astros Manager Bill Virdon were out of the game following discussions with Harris concerning the strike zone.

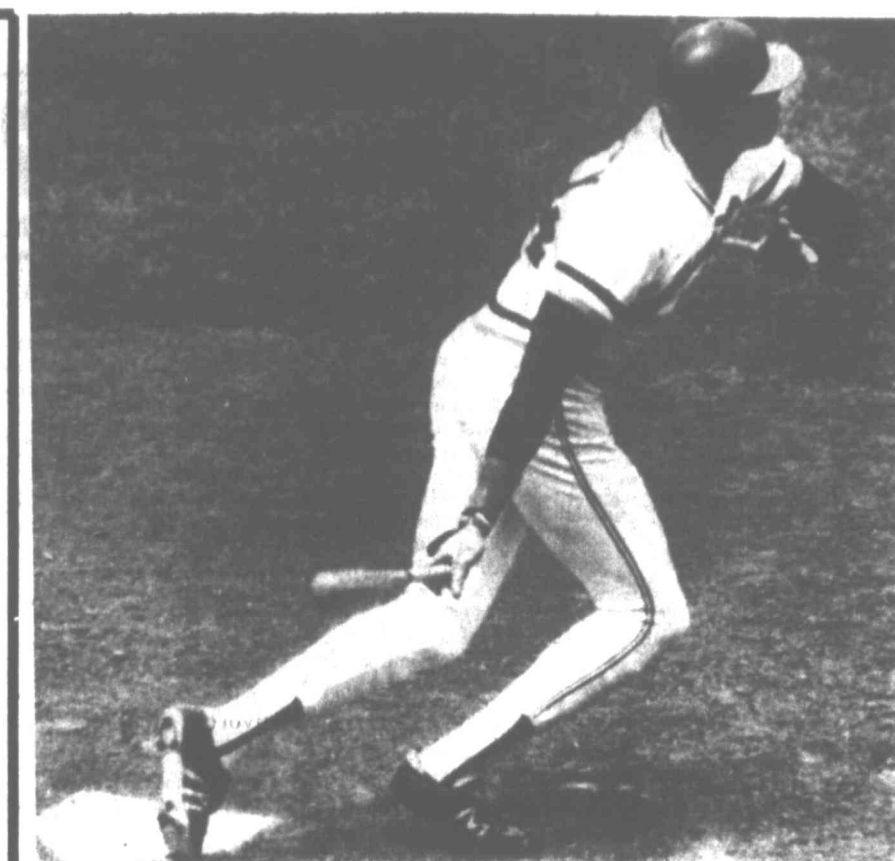

Ryan complained about Harris' calls periodically during the early innings. Then, in the fifth inning, Harris pointed his finger at Ryan and told him to go back to the mound. "I asked him where the pitch was and he wouldn't tell me," said Ryan, who did not figure in the decision. "I asked him again and he said something I didn't understand."

Harris said later that he had seen Ryan pitch several times before and he always complained of calls. "He tried to show me up by asking all the time," Harris said. "I made up my mind I wasn't going to put up with it."

Later in the fifth inning, Virdon came to the mound to remove Ryan from the game and Harris almost immediately headed for the mound. After a brief discussion, Harris ousted Virdon.

"He said something about balls and strikes," Harris said. "That's all there was to it. He was out of there."

THAT MAGIC SWING — Willie McCovey of the San Francisco Giants follows through Sunday during game against the Los Angeles Dodgers as he drives a double to center field in Candlestick Park in San Francisco. The soon-retiring McCovey was pinch hitting in the ninth and pushed the Giants to a 4-3 win as he drove home the winning run with his hit.

Sets next sight for British Open

Trevino too much in Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Lee Trevino, with his second golf title of the season safely tucked away, has set his sights on the British Open.

"I'm looking forward to going into the British Open, because I'm going in as a winner," Trevino said after scoring a one-stroke victory Sunday in the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic.

And well he may. The Open is at Muirfield, on the east coast of Scotland. The last time it was played there, Trevino scored a one-stroke victory over Jack Nicklaus.

He will go into the British — his next start — with one of his more successful American campaigns well under way, his game in order, his confidence high and the unabashed respect of his fellow pros.

Trevino joined the tourists in 1967 and now has collected 24 American tour titles. The victory here, secured on a last round, 3-under-par 69 and a 272 total, 16 strokes under par on the rain-soaked Colonial Country Club course, enabled him to join the absent Tom Watson and Craig Stadler as the only multiple winners of the year.

He collected $54,000 from the total purse of $300,000 and immediately donated $5,000 of it to St. Jude's Children's Hospital, the charitable beneficiary of this event.

The big check pushed his winnings for the year to $285,743, the most he's won in any single season.

Purtzer, two shots back most of the way, birdied the final hole for a 67 and second at 273. Jerry Pate and 49-year-old Miller Barber were next at 275. Pate shot a 68 and Barber matched par 72.

Barber and Trevino shared the lead going into the last round and Barber quickly built a 2-stroke lead while the ominous clouds rolled in and thunder rumbled in the distance. Trevino, who was struck by lightning while playing in the 1975 Western Open, quickly sought shelter when the first bolt struck and a 56-minute delay was called.

After the delay, Trevino birdied three of the next four holes. When Barber hit it in the water and made double bogey on the 12th, Trevino was in front to stay.

"They got to birdie to catch me," he said. "I ain't gonna give it to 'em."

Despite win, Lopez-Melton needs practice

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton's reckoning, she still hasn't fully returned to the swing which propelled her to glory and money never before achieved by a Ladies Professional Golf Association tour pro at the age of 23.

"I'm going to go home this week and work on my game," she said Sunday after outdueling Pat Bradley with a 2-under-par 71 and 72 hole total of 283 in a $125,000 tour event at Locust Hill Country Club. "I need some practice with my short game especially on things like 50-yard sand wedge shots."

The tournament is named The Sarah Coventry.

Starting with a par-73 round, Lopez-Melton closed with a course-record tying 67, 72 and 71 to win for the second time this season and the 19th time in 65 tournaments during a short career. The $18,750 first-place money boosted her into fourth place in 1980 earnings at $100,671 — her third year in a row in six figures.

Bradley, who shot subpar golf for three days on the 6,206-yard, layout, triple-puffed on the last hole to wind up with 73-284 and finish second for the seventh time since she won her last tournament in 1978.

Kathy Whitworth, one of the most experienced players on the tour, and rookie Myra Van Hoose tied for third with 288s.

Whitworth, 40, the all-time LPGA money-winner, started the day 4-under and finished that way with a round of 73.

However, it was Van Hoose who scorched the field until a double-bogey-6 on the 331-yard 16th hole.

Marlene Floyd and Murle Breer tied for fifth with 2-under-par 290, first-day leader Cathy Sherk and Taiwan resident Ai-Yu Tu were tied at 291. Janet Alex and Jerilyn Britz wound up with par-292 and Vivian Brownlee and Lori Garbacz deackled in 11th place at 293.

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JULY 1, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Consider all aspects of your present life and figure out how you can make it more worthwhile and exciting in the future. Visit as many friends as you possibly can.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good day for making new contacts, provided you don't ignore those who have been important to you in the past.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use a more advanced system for handling information that is vital to your welfare. Relax at home tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study new projects that can bring you more security in future. Avoid a temptation to spend money foolishly.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan how to carry through with your obligations and get the best possible results. Take no risks in motion.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can easily improve the quality of your work by working harder. Engage in civic work and gain added prestige.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use more modern methods at regular routines and be more productive. Come to a better accord with loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Obtain important information you need from the right sources. Come to a better understanding with co-workers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) New interests can prove to be lucrative if you study them well. Private endeavors are fine to follow at this time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Come to a better accord with regular allies and make the future brighter. Express happiness with loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make some needed changes at work and get excellent results. Be sure to use extreme caution in motion at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Know what is of greatest importance to you personally and go after it in a positive fashion. Be more cheerful.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Forget business matters for a while and spend more time on home chores. Take treatments and improve your appearance.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who would do well in scientific pursuits and should be given the best up-to-date education you can afford. There could be radical changes in this life at an early age but much success will come later.

Pope arrives in Brazil today

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Pope John Paul II flew to Brazil today for a 12-day visit to the world's largest Roman Catholic country and a society divided by the political activism of the Brazilian bishops and their priests.

The pontiff was due in Brasilia, the capital, at noon (11 a.m. EDT) after an 11-hour flight from Rome. Making the first papal visit to Brazil in history, he was to tour 13 cities, open a national Eucharistic Congress of the 318 Brazilian bishops and celebrate masses attended by as many as 20 million of the country's 100 million Catholics, with many millions more watching on television.

It is John Paul's seventh foreign trip since he became pope 21 months ago and his longest — more than 7,500 miles — and most grueling journey.

The National Council of Bishops, which directs one of the most progressive churches in Latin America, expressed conviction that the pope would support its program of social and economic reforms for the millions of impoverished Brazilians. But the military-backed government and its conservative supporters in the upper and middle classes hoped he would forcefully restate the opposition to political action by the clergy which was one of his principal themes during his visit to Mexico 17 months ago.

The pope during that visit called repeatedly for improvement in the lot of Latin America's downtrodden and said church leaders should continue to fight for more equitable distribution of wealth and for human rights. But he repudiated politically militant priests, saying the clergy must stay out of the political arena and seek social justice through spiritual action.

The duties of the church, the pope said then, are "to preach, to educate individuals and collectivities, to form public opinion and to offer orientations."

The Brazilian church increased its struggle on behalf of the poor and oppressed after the army seized power in 1964. Since then the generals have defended a system which has produced rapid economic growth but which has also increased the power of the rich and reduced the economic share of the poor.

The Brazilian church has responded with vigorous support for the poor. It has organized tens of thousands of small grassroots groups called base communities to educate and politicize the peasants and workers. Catholic leaders supported striking metalworkers this year. The bishops produced several major position papers criticizing government policies and outlining alternatives.

New index measures tax rise

A new index confirms what many people have suspected for years: Taxes are rising faster than just about anything else — including prices.

The index was developed by the Tax Foundation Inc., a non-profit research group based in Washington, D.C. The foundation looked at average federal, state and local taxes over the years. It compared the increases in taxes with the increase in prices and in the real output of the private business sector.

The index shows that from 1967 — the year used as a base — to 1979, taxes more than tripled, rising by about 226 percent. During the same period, prices — as measured by an indicator called the Gross National Product price deflator — just about doubled, increasing by 109 percent. (The GNP price deflator is different from the Consumer Price Index, partly because it takes into account some of the changes in buying habits that occur during periods of inflation. While the deflator went from 100 in 1967 to about 209 at the end of 1979, the Consumer Price Index went from 100 to about 230.)

Looking at productivity, the foundation researchers found that the real output of the private business sector, in constant dollars, went up only 44 percent in the 13-year period that ended in 1979.

A look at per capita personal income figures from the Commerce Department shows that income hasn't kept pace with taxes. In 1967, per capita personal income was $3,153. It rose 176 percent to $8,706 in 1979.

The rise in taxes has been particularly sharp in recent years, the foundation said. From 1975 to 1979, for example, the tax index went up 65 percent — more than twice the 30 percent rise in the price deflator index and more than three times the 21 percent increase in output index.

The foundation is conducting more research to find out what types of taxes at each level of government — federal, state and local — are rising fastest. Preliminary studies indicate that the state and local taxes increased much more rapidly than federal levies during the late 1960s and early 1970s. After that, the foundation says, the trend was reversed. From 1975 to 1979, the index of federal taxes went up 74 percent while the index of state and local taxes went up about 50 percent.

An earlier foundation study, meanwhile, showed that the heaviest federal tax burden falls on residents of big cities and the surrounding suburbs. The foundation calculated that the federal, per-capita tax burden for the nation as a whole was $1,599 in 1977, the latest year for which complete statistics were available. Residents of the 266 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas — the country's biggest population centers — had a per-capita tax burden of $1,728.

Fourth of July Art Show scheduled at Snyder

SNYDER — The Annual Fourth of July Art Show will be held Wednesday through Friday at the Scurry County Barn in Towle Park. Paintings should be delivered Wednesday between 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. to the county barn and picked up Friday between 8 p.m. and 9 p.m.

The show will be open to the public Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Judging will be Friday morning.

The show also will be open to the public Friday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Trophies will be on display at that time.

Judging also will be held Thursday afternoon. The show will be closed to the public at that time. Judges' decision is final and any artist may enter.

There will be four ribbons for first second third and honorable mention. Also, trophies will be given to first place winners in each division; senior professional, senior amateur, and junior.

Divisions will include: Professional-Teachers (and or those who have won recognition in any outstanding state exhibition), Non-Professional Amateurs (or those who have not won recognition in outstanding state exhibitions), and Students (up to and including High School students).

Classes will consist of: Landscape, Still-Life, Portraits, and Contemporary. Both copy and original work will be accepted in their respective classes and judged as such.

Each artist may enter four paintings in each class. There will be an entrance fee of $3 per painting in Adult Class, $1.50 per painting in Junior Class. Artists will be allowed to price work for sale, with 10 percent of the sale price going to the 4th of July Art Show.

Insurance should be carried when desired by the artist, no insurance will be carried by the Art Show, but all possible care will be used in handling the entries. All work will be received with that understanding. All paintings must be matted or framed and wired for hanging. Paintings should not be over two years old and should not have won any awards in the past at this show. Each entry must have a card attached to the back with the name of the artist, address, division, and price (if for sale).

For further information, contact Pansy Ray at 573-6838 or Mrs. Melvin Lee at 573-2754.

Pink Puffers call meeting

The newly reorganized Pink Puffers, a support group for victims of emphysema and — or breathing problems and their families, will meet at 7 p.m., Tuesday in the classroom of Malone-Hogan Hospital.

The meeting will deal with ways of coping with breathing problems which normally occur during travel.

We feel that this is a timely topic now that vacation time is here," Ken Randall, chairman, said.

Swim recieves law degree

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech University's School of Law conferred Doctor of Jurisprudence degrees upon 124 graduates at 1980 spring commencement exercises.

Among them was Keith Dwight "Swim" — Big Spring. He received the B.S. degree from Texas A&M University in May 1977.

Houston attorney Leon Jaworski was featured speaker in the ceremony.
