A Titanic Task

Reagan set for another big victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic-controlled House, swayed by President Reagan's long-distance lobbying blitz, is all but certain to approve his stringent budget cuts and smooth their chances of final congressional passage.

The bruising floor fight that left losing Democrats grumbling about "pork barrel politics" and an "imperial" presidency set up the win-or-lose showdown Reagan wanted on a single package of more than $5 billion in revisions to a $37.8 billion spending-cut bill supported by Democratic leaders.

It was to come today in a series of House votes likely to amount to little more than rubber-stamp ratification of the Reagan program.

But when the House convened today, Democrats were still combative.

Majority Leader Jin Wright, D-Texas, told a boisterous House that a substitute package of cuts Reagan's allies were set to introduce contained "one or two sneaky provisions."

He complained that the measure had not even been printed yet, but he noted that a version circulated Thursday showed the Office of Management and Budget would be allowed to set the legal definition of the "poverty level," which affects how many people qualify for a number of welfare programs.

"How many more jokers are in this deck," Wright asked as he was drowned out by cheers from the Democratic side and boos from the GOP side of the House.

Reagan reaped expected Senate approval of a $39.6 billion budget-cutting package to his liking just before midnight Thursday. The vote there, in a chamber ruled by Republicans, was 80-15 and came after Senate leaders worked out a bipartisan agreement to head off a threatened filibuster by Democrats.

Reagan's budget director, David A. Stockman, said today that Thursday's House vote was "the test of fire in terms of party loyalty"and whether the coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats would splinter."

As to the charge of "pork barrel politics," Stockman told reporters:

"When you deal with the entire budget of the U.S. government, obviously there are things along the margin that have to give way, if necessary. In some cases, I suppose we would be willing where people have been helpful on the budget to make some changes along the margin."

And, while he said, "There's no reason for anyone to conclude that the president made any deals on the phone," he added that "there was a great deal of talk among the members about how they might help each other out later."

Differences between the House and Senate versions still will have to be ironed out in a conference committee — perhaps an easier task if both bills bear the basic Reagan cuts.

"I've never seen anything like this in my life to be perfectly truthful," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

Just hours earlier, O'Neill acknowledged that "as of yesterday we had the vote won" and he could count only 15 Democrats going with the Republicans.

"These are the times that try men's souls and make no mistake about it," the Massachusetts Democrat said after the first and most critical of several parliamentary votes which went Reagan's way Thursday.

The vote was 217-210. Reagan, who conceded later that "24 hours ago our defeat seemed almost certain, won the support of 11 Democrats whom he personally wooed.

The parliamentary victory crushed the Democrats' strategy of splitting Reagan's cuts into six parts in an effort to strip away the politically protective cover provided by voting on the president's program as a whole.

To Grimm, it's no fairy tale

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jack Grimm wants to find the Titantic. He sets sail to the North Atlantic Sunday. This is not the first curious ambition for this self-described "ordinary, plain, average" Texas oilman.

By JOE STROOP
Associated Press Writer

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — So who is this guy, anyway?

He made millions in the Texas oilfields and uses his money to look for Noah's Ark, the Loch Ness Monster, Big Foot and — if he leaves Boston harbor Sunday as scheduled — the Titanic? And his name is Grimm? Must be a fairy tale of some sort, right?

"I consider myself ordinary, plain, average," oilman Jack Grimm said with a straight face and a serious tone of voice. But if he means it — if it is not a tongue-in-cheek assessment — he is the only one who thinks that of himself.

For 11 years Grimm has been making headlines with his unusual adventures, but the 56-year-old wildcatter's taste for the unusual really began before then — when he got married, he and his wife spent their honeymoon prospecting for gold.

Texas Topics

The first of his escapades to reach the public eye was his financing of a 1970 expedition up Mount Ararat in Turkey to look for the remains of Noah's Ark.

The trip did not locate the ark but did result in a movie, "The Search for Noah's Ark," that enjoyed a limited run in theaters and drive-ins as well as a couple of showings on network television.

Next he entered the 1975 World Championship of Poker at Las Vegas, Nev. Much was made of his ouster from the tournament, as he went bust — dropped $10,000 — in one hand of Hold 'Em.

"What nobody mentions is that I had won nearly $10,000 the day before," Grimm said, insisting he just about broke even, except for picking up a nickname he despises to this day.

"Please don't call me 'Cadillac Jack,' " he begged a reporter who had spent the day with him in Abilene.

After the poker stint, Grimm announced in 1975 he was financing a search for the legendary Loch Ness monster, the prehistoric reptile supposed to be living in a lake in Scotland. Grimm had bought some special film for the Noah's Ark expedition and, since he had some left over, decided to use it in the hunt for "Nessie," too.

The next year he paid his own

Habib flies home during politicking

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saying the danger of war between Israel and Syria has receded, U.S. peace envoy Philip Habib flew back to Washington to take a breather from his shuttle diplomacy while Israel elects a new parliament and Arab leaders hold a summit meeting.

"I believe all concerned want to see tensions reduced as it it evident that the immediate danger of military action that existed when the crisis arose almost two months ago has receded," Habib said in a statement as he left Beirut Thursday.

Deputy White House spokesman Larry Speake said in Washington that "diplomatic efforts will continue when Habib consults with President Reagan." He did not elaborate but said Habib would return to the Middle East in early July.

Israel holds its national elections next Tuesday and the Arab League's mediators on the conflict in Lebanon will meet in that strife-torn country July 4. Both events will sideline Habib's efforts to defuse the Israeli-Syrian missile crisis.

Reagan dispatched the retired State Department troubleshooter to the Middle East after Syria moved Soviet-made anti-aircraft missiles into eastern Lebanon and Israel threatened to destroy them if Syria didn't pull them out.

The missiles are still in eastern Lebanon, and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin is still threatening to destroy them. But Habib in his statement thanked Arab and Israel leaders for a cordial welcome and said, "The restraint on the part of all remained indispensable."

As the U.S. envoy left, the Lebanese government radio reported artillery exchanges between Syrian troops and Lebanese Christian militiamen in the east Lebanese city of Zahle were subsiding. The Christian radio station said six Lebanese were killed and 40 were wounded in Zahle Wednesday night and Thursday.

A special Arab League mediation committee, trying to work out a formula to restore peace between the Syrians and the Christians, appealed to both sides to stick by the cease-fire they agreed to June 9.

Syria maintains 22,000 troops in Lebanon under an Arab League mandate to police the armistice that ended the 1975-76 civil war between the right-wing Christians and an alliance of leftist Lebanese Moslems and Palestinian guerrillas. The Syrians began attacking the Christians in Zahle on April 1, charging that they were building a military road for Israel to use in an invasion of Syria.

The Christians charge that the Syrian force in Lebanon and turned into an army of occupation. Syria reportedly has agreed to accept troops from other Arab countries in the peacekeeping force to make it more acceptable to the Christians.

In another development, the United States, Egypt and Israel agreed on the creation of a multinational force to patrol the Sinai Peninsula after Israeli completes the return of the war-won desert wilderness to Egypt in April.

Israel is returning the Sinai under tetms of its U.S.-sponsored peace treaty with Egypt.

Royalty owners say fight's still on

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Royalty owners haven't given up their fight for an exemption from the windfall profits tax, according to the group's national president. In fact, the push is just starting.

Jim Stafford with the National Association of Royalty Owners said in a telephone interview Thursday from El Paso that royalty owners don't want to settle for less than a 1,000 barrel exemption.

Legislation in a Senate committee for such an exemption failed this week by a 15-5 vote. That committee, however, approved a $2,500 permanent exemption for royalty owners.

"We're not pleased with that $2,500 exemption; it's like tossing us crumbs to shut us up," noted Stafford.

The turning point will come in the House of Representatives after the summer recess, and Stafford named Congressman Kent Hance as the man who is spearheading legislation to favor royalty owners. Hance, a Democrat from Lubbock, represents the 19th Congressional District which winds from the Panhandle down to Midland.

Hance, according to Stafford, is sponsoring legislation that would allow the 1,000 barrel exemption. Already the former Lubbock attorney has obtained 212 co-sponsors, "and that's a record for that bill."

And Rep. Jim Jones of Oklahoma has scheduled a press conference for July 6 to pledge his support of the legislation.

His headquarters in Ada, Okla., Stafford said he is traveling around the United States to publicize the royalty owners plight with the windfall profits tax and to solicit support.

The 2½ million royalty owners in the country combined efforts last fall to get Jimmy Carter out of the White House, "and they felt they had bought themselves a president (Ronald Reagan). But there's been budget troubles," said Stafford, and the royalty owners are no longer on the top of the priorities list.

But with publicity, there has been some noticeable change on the part of various congressmen, Stafford noted. "Dan Rostenkowsky of Illinois is beginning to soften his attitude. He didn't realize there were so many royalty owners in Illinois."

Stafford explained a comment made recently by the president in connection to his budget and tax cuts. In a meeting with some senators a $1,000 credit was mentioned. But Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, "raised heck and said he couldn't take that back to the people in his state. There was then an agreement for a $2,500 credit. But Bentsen asked if the White House would object to a 1,000 barrel exemption, and Reagan said if it came across his desk he wouldn't oppose it."

Stafford added that Treasury Sec,

United Way to go for $1.35 million

The United Way of Midland, Inc., campaign for 1982 will go after a record $1.35 million, the board of directors decided Thursday in its monthly meeting.

Leading the drive will be campaign chairman George W. Bush and vice chairman Joe Kloesel.

"This year's goal represents a 16 percent increase over last year's goal," said Bush. "But it is a realistic reflection of Midland's growth and the growing needs United Way agencies have experienced during the last year. Knowing the generosity and community spirit of Midlanders, I think we will be successful in meeting this challenge."

Two new agencies have been approved for admission to the United Way and will be included in the funding package for 1982. These are Midland Rape Crisis Center and the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Children.

Currently, 18 agencies are receiving funding under United Way this year, based on the 1980 fall campaign.

Following the board meeting, United Way agency directors met and projected an allocation of $37,000 for the Rape Crisis Center and $13,000 to the Center for Battered Women.

For the Rape Crisis Center, this represents 69.7 percent of its annual budget; and for the Center for Battered Women, this is 9.6 percent of the annual budget.

All allocation figures are based jointly on agency requests and recommendations of United Way volunteer panels which review each agency's operation twice a year. In addition, the recommendations are subject to appeal by the agencies and will not become final until after the fund-raising campaign.

Besides adding the two agencies to the 1982 roll, the board decided to phase out funding of the Midland and Lee Youth Centers. The board voted at its April meeting to decrease support of this organization by half for 1982 and to eliminate support in 1983. The decision came after studying an allocations committee report. Youth center directors accepted the decision as an indication they had grown beyond dependence on United Way funding.

Youth Center board members indicated they would investigate other sources of funds and possible new activities for the centers. For the past four years, United Way funding has accounted for about 12 percent of the centers' budget.

"By making these changes," remarked Bush, "the United Way has demonstrated its continuing responsiveness to the community's wishes. Our campaign goal also reflects Midland's growing needs, and I feel certain people will respond to those needs generously."

Fenimore pleads guilty to largest bank robbery

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A 34-year-old man has pleaded guilty to the largest bank robbery in U.S. history, but he still refuses to help authorities find his two accomplices in the $3.3 million heist.

Douglas Bruce Fenimore pleaded guilty Thursday to the April 22 robbery of the First National Bank of Tucson, Ariz., under a plea bargain granting him immunity from prosecution in several other major cases in which he is a suspect.

But U.S. Attorney Roxanne Conlin said the plea bargain was no signal that Fenimore, of Des Moines, was cooperating in the search for two other men sought in the Tucson case.

"Mr. Fenimore still isn't talking to us," Ms. Conlin said.

Three or four heavily armed robbers wearing Halloween and stocking masks overpowered a bank janitor in the early morning hours of April 22 and then waited until the First National Bank manager showed up. They threatened to kill both men unless the manager opened a vault where cash from the bank's other local branches was kept overnight.

Neither the bank manager nor the janitor was injured as the robbers made off with the $3.3 million.

Fenimore also pleaded guilty earlier this month to two federal charges in connection with the $500,000 robbery of a jewelry store in Walnut Creek, Calif., and a $1.5 million jewelry robbery in Phoenix, Ariz.

David Lee Grandstaff, 38, and Douglas Wayne Brown, 34, both of Des Moines, were indicted along with Fenimore in the Phoenix jewelry robbery, but still are at large. A fourth man is serving a jail term for the May 1980 heist.

Brown also was indicted in the Walnut Creek case.

Ms. Conlin said officials now believe they have recovered all the money Fenimore got from the Tucson robbery. Federal prosecutors said they have recovered $950,000 since Fenimore's arrest June 3.

In his appearance Thursday in U.S. District Court, Fenimore admitted all the cash recovered came from the Tucson bank.

He faces up to 45 years in prison and a $30,000 fine when sentenced Aug. 4 by U.S. District Judge William C. Stuart.

Police arrested Fenimore when he surrendered after a wild chase through the Des Moines suburbs. Investigators said they believed he had returned to see his two children.

The agreement frees Fenimore from prosecution for several robberies in which federal officials said he is a suspect, including a $110,000 Denver bank robbery in January and armored truck robberies here in 1976 and 1978. Officials believe from $250,000 to $500,000 was taken in the latter case, but haven't estimated the value of the 1976 haul because mostly checks were taken.

Ms. Conlin said federal officials also have recovered about $800,000 in jewelry.

Woman allegedly raped, stabbed at residence

Police investigators this morning were looking for a man who allegedly raped and stabbed a 19-year-old Midland woman early today in the bedroom of her Midland residence.

The woman told police officers she believed the man gained access to her home through a front window. She said he came into her bedroom, struck her over the head several times with an unknown object and then raped her.

The assailant also stabbed the woman several times in the back, in the living room of the home, wiped blood off the knife blade against the couch, threw down the knife and left through the residence's front door, the woman said.

Officers questioned two men at the scene, one of them the woman's boyfriend. The boyfriend said he had left the woman's house at 1:45 p.m. and had not returned. The other man said he had left at 4:45 p.m., returned at 7:15 p.m., left at 7:20 p.m. and not returned.

When police arrived at the woman's blood-stained residence they reported finding a trail of blood leading from the front door to the middle of the living room, through the hallway to two bedrooms and throughout the bedrooms.

The woman was treated for multiple stab wounds at Midland Memorial Hospital's emergency room about 4:30 a.m. today and released.

No arrests had been made in the case by early this morning and the investigation was continuing.

Police also are investigating an incident early this morning in which a 41-year-old Midland man was shot in the leg.

According to police reports, Billy Don Ramson had just walked out of RV's Barbecue when he heard several shots fired and ducked back inside. He told police he stayed inside several minutes and then went to the Koko Lounge, 1811 E. Front Ave.

While at the Koko Lounge, someone told him he had been shot in the leg, Ramson said, so he proceeded to the emergency room. Hospital officials notified police. Ramson was treated and released at 3:08 a.m. for a wound from a small caliber weapon.

A fight among several individuals at the Executive Lounge parking lot, 3803 W. Wall Ave., early today sent at two men to Midland Memorial Hospital.

A 22-year-old Midland man was treated and released for a bruised chest at the emergency room and a 37-year-old Midlander was admitted to the hospital for treatment of a deep contusion to the forehead, according to a hospital spokesperson.

Police reports indicated a fight broke out at the parking garage about 1:30 a.m. today and the two men were severely beaten. The 22-year-old reportedly told police he was struck in the chest with a piece of 2-by-4 lumber.

A 34-year-old Midland man was taken into custody for questioning by police, reports indicated, but no charges had been filed by early this morning.

A five-vehicle pileup at the intersection of Thomason Drive and Wall Avenue at 6:55 p.m. Thursday sent one Midland resident to MMH with minor injuries.

Police said the accident occurred as Victor M. Lozano, 27, of Crane was driving his pickup west on Wall Avenue and was involved in a collision with a car driven south on Thomason Drive by Mark L. Pitts, 23, of Midland.

After the collision with Pitts' vehicle, Lozano's pickup also struck vehicles being driven east on Wall Avenue by John R. Taylor, 33, of Andrews, Arlon E. Perkins, 56, of Odessa and Mark T. Wellen, 27, of 702 W. Nobles Ave.

Pitts was the only person to require medical treatment. He was treated and released at the hospital emergency room.

And his big year was last year, which contained two major announcements.

First, he was going to be spending money to search for the sunken ocean liner Titanic which went to the bottom of the North Atlantic after ramming an iceberg in 1912.

Second, he was commissioning noted sculptor Robert Berks to carve a 40-foot high, 200-foot long panoramic bas-relief into the side of a mesa he owns outside Abilene. The work would be a pictorial history of the Old West as told from the point of view of the buffalo.

"This will last longer than the pyramids," Berks said of the work during a groundbreaking ceremony earlier this year.

"I bet you came here thinking all this stuff I do is just half-baked, didn't you," Grimm said as he held up a model of the Titanic. "Like I work on whims — just wake up some morning and say, 'Hey, let's go look for the Titanic.' Well, I put a lot of thought and research and time into these things.

"I look on them as business ventures. Each one is a business venture designed to be successful — to make money. They're not off-the-cuff larks."

The search for Noah's Ark, for example, resulted in a movie — "The Search for Noah's Ark," which was not a box-office smash but "made money," Grimm said.

His Titanic search, cut short last winter by foul weather off the coast of Newfoundland, is scheduled to begin again when the research ship Gyre, with Grimm on board, leaves Boston. And if he finds the hulk, a book and a movie are waiting in the wings for near-immediate release.

"Maybe I differ from a lot of other people by doing these projects when someone else would just dream about them but...would be embarrassed about saying, 'I'm gonna go climb Mount Everest,' or something," he said. "But once you start one of them, people say, 'Oh, boy, that's a great idea, I wish somebody would go do that.'"

Grimm said many of his associates in "conservative" enterprises, such as oil and gas exploration, also have interests in his more exotic projects, such as the Titanic expedition. And they, he said, do not consider him eccentric, strange or whimsical.

"There are others involved in these things, geologists and engineers, friends and associates of mine. Do you think that they would have the same whims that I do? No, they wouldn't. I think they enjoy participating in these things because there's a chance they'll get their money back, maybe make a profit. And maybe it is on the order of looking for a gold mine, but they're business ventures."

But why such out-of-the-way projects? Why not investments in the silver market, like Dallas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt, a longtime friend? Or a baseball team, like fellow oilman Eddie Chiles?

Basically, his answer is that he considers the potential reward worth the risk, just like oil drilling but a lot more fun.

"If I do find the Titanic — and I will — if we found Big Foot, or the Loch Ness monster, nobody would think we're silly. When you confirm the existence of something, you've got the support of everybody. And until you do confirm it, or make these discoveries, people share with me the excitement of looking for them. It's a great search.

"I get to go do these things, take part in these adventures, but I always try to share them with the public, with the average man, because he would love to go do them, too. He dreams about them, but he hasn't had the opportunity."

Rattlesnake Squadron to host air show

PYOTE — The Confederate Air Force's Rattlesnake Squadron will host an air show replete with World War II warbirds from light trainers to fighters to attack and medium bombers here Saturday.

"It'll be a big show," promised Col. Paul Erdmann, leader of the CAF's Desert Squadron. The show will be hosted by the Rattlesnake Squadron of the CAF's West Texas Wing.

The show will get under way at 11 a.m. Saturday at the old Rattlesnake Bomber Base, whose mission was training crews of the B-17 Flying Fortress and the B-29 Super Fortress in World War II.

About 30 American, British, Canadian and German aircraft from the 1939-45 period and replicas of Japanese aircraft will be in the show, according to Col. Kale Webster, leader of the CAF's West Texas Wing.

The show is being coordinated by Col. Joe McShane III, leader of the Rattlesnake Squadron.

The show will be preceded by a pilot briefing at 10 a.m.

Aerial feats will include aerobatics by Col. Robb Satterfield in the North American P-51 Mustang and by Col. Howard Pardue in the Vought F4U Corsair.

Approximately 30 warbirds from the CAF's West Texas Wing and the New Mexico Wing are to participate in the show.

Aircraft scheduled to be in the show are the P-51 Mustang, F4U Corsair, P-40 Warhawk, several AT-6s, the A-26 Invader, the B-25 Mitchell, the Messerschmitt Me. 108, the De Havilland Chipmunk, the Hawker Sea Fury, T-34 Mentor, the TMB, FM2 Wildcat, Vultee BT-13 Vibrator, the PT-17, PT-19, PT-22, and PT-26, and replicas of Japan's Zero fighter and Val divebomber.

Col. Jack Morgan and Col. Don Luttrell will narrate the show.

Pyote is about 15 miles west of Monahans and off U.S. Highway 80.

Oxley wins congressional seat

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — With a victory margin of only 378 votes, Republican Michael Oxley claimed Ohio's 4th District congressional seat and began laying plans for a hasty swearing-in. But his Democratic opponent says the fight isn't over yet.

Oxley squeaked past Democrat Dale Locker in voting Thursday. He told supporters at a victory rally his staff already was checking to see how quickly he could move to Washington.

The Findlay state representative said he was anxious to lend his support to President Reagan's budget proposals.

According to unofficial final returns, Oxley won 41,904 votes to Locker's 41,526.

Second session signup nearing end

Only five more days remain to preregister for Midland College's second summer session, according to registrar Dee Windsor.

Early registration figures at the end of the first week are running just about even with the count for the same period last year, Windsor said.

Persons wishing to take one or more credit courses during the second summer term are encouraged to visit the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building. Pre-registration hours are from 7 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday of next week and the same hours on Tuesday, July 7. Midland College will be closed for its observance of Independence Day on Monday, July 6.

Students who pre-register receive a time permit that allocates specific times to report for registration, which will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m. on Wednesday, July 8. Classes for the second summer term begin July 9 and conclude on Aug. 13.

For specific information regarding the academic courses being offered during the second term, persons may call 684-7851, extension 166, or come by the college's Administration Building.

Royalty owners seek exemption

retary Donald Regan agreed with the president that the White House could handle such a measure.

But to get that legislatien before Reagan, it will take 18 hour days of lobbying in all the states, according to Stafford. "But I don't think we will see anything until after July."

Stafford, who had been in Eunice, N.M., Tuesday to talk with royalty owners and in El Paso on Thursday, said his national organization lists 5,000 individual members. State affiliates in 49 states up that number to 30,000.

Texans' homeowners insurance rates to rise Sept. 1

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — After five years without an increase, Texans' homeowners insurance rates will rise on Sept. 1, and owners of $75,000 houses can expect to pay anywhere from $7 to $47 more for their policies.

The State Board of Insurance ordered homeowners increases averaging 6.1 percent on Thursday, but with a wide variation among the three rating territories.

Rates for other kinds of property insurance also will go up, with renters hit the hardest. When all categories are combined, the increase averages 7.2 percent, meaning $75.5 million a year in additional premiums.

The all-category increase would have been 11.4 percent if the board had not directly recognized insurance companies' investment income for the first time. Because the board plugged investment income into the rating formula, the premium dollar includes only 2.28 cents instead of the customary nickel for profit.

"The record clearly shows that rising costs indicate a need, even with the consideration of investment income, to increase the maximum rate," said Bill Daves, board chairman.

Insurers had sought increases averaging 11.3 percent.

Daves said 80 percent of the property insurance in Texas is written cheaper than the standard rates set by the board. He expressed worry that companies were competing too hard for premium dollars to invest in today's high-interest money market. Some companies deviate as much as 35 to 40 percent below board-set rates, he said.

Daves said the board planned to take a tougher line toward rate-cutting and would require more information to support company requests for deviations.

The homeowners increase will be 1.6 percent in the Seacoast Territory, 10.2 percent in the large Central Inland Territory and 1.8 percent in the North-Northwest Territory.

Fire insurance rates will rise 5 percent, statewide, but will drop 16.9 percent for homes.

Tenant homeowners rates will rise 25 percent in all territories.

Farm and ranch owners rates will increase an average of 13.6 percent.

Extended coverage rates will drop 0.1 percent on the coast but rise 15.8 percent in the Central Inland Territory and 7.8 percent in the North-Northwest.

The Seacoast Territory covers the two tiers of counties along the Gulf of Mexico and includes Houston, Galveston, Corpus Christi, Beaumont, Port Arthur, Orange, Texas City and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

In the North-Northwest Territory are Lubbock, Amarillo, Wichita Falls, San Angelo, Abilene, Midland and Odessa.

Most of the state is in the Central Inland Territory, which includes Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Austin, Waco, El Paso, Texarkana, Paris and Laredo.

Homeowners premiums on $75,000 brick veneer houses will increase by $7 in Houston; $11 in Corpus Christi; $15 in Abilene, Amarillo, Lubbock, Midland, San Angelo and Wichita Falls; $44 in El Paso and San Antonio; and $47 in Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth and Waco.

On a $50,000 house, the premium will rise $5 in Houston; $8 in Corpus Christi; $11 in Abilene, Amarillo, Midland, San Angelo and Wichita Falls; $31 in El Paso and San Antonio; and $44 in Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth and Waco.

Insurers collect over $1 billion a year in property insurance premiums in Texas, with $646.2 million coming from homeowners policies.

Daves warned that the board's treatment of investment income should not be taken as a precedent because the board had not finished its study of how best to recognize investment earnings when setting rates.

In fact, the board voted for a higher profit factor than its staff had recommended, resulting in a larger increase than the state agency's actuaries had proposed.

At a hearing in May, the staff recommended a 6.2 percent total increase, including a 5 percent homeowners raate hike.

Local homeowners can expect average increase of 1.8 percent

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Homeowners in Midland can expect an average increase in their homeowners' insurance rates of 1.8 percent under the new insurance rates approved by the State Board of Insurance Thursday.

For the North Northwest Territory, the rating area including Midland and surrounding counties, the increases in tenant homwoenrs coverage comes to 25 percent, with the increases for farm and ranch owners' coverage coming to 16.4 percent.

Statewide, fire rates changed as follows: dwellings, down 16.9 percent; farms, down 14.4 percent; cotton, up 1.0 percent; and all other classes, up 25 percent for an average 5.0 percent.

Extended coverage classes for the North Northwest Territory show the following: frame construction, up 12.5 percent; brick, up 8.8 percent; wind and storm resistant classes, up 9.1 percent; dwellings, up 4.6 percent; farms, up 13.3 percent; and not otherwise classified, up 13.8 percent, for an average 7.8 percent.

The changes are to take effect Sept. 1.

SBI gives as an example of changes a one-year policy on a brick veneer, owner-occupied home, with a 1 percent deductible on the extended coverage portion of the policy, located in Midland.

For $25,000 coverage, the change is from $215 to $216.
For $50,000 coverage, the change is from $430 to $432.
For $75,000 coverage, the change is from $645 to $648.

Nun finds girl's body

NEW YORK (AP) — The naked, scorched and battered body of a 14-year-old girl who had been missing for a week has been found by a nun in a walk-in freezer at a closed nursing home.

Police said the girl, Debra Stewartson, ran away from home June 19 after an argument with her parents about moving. The family had moved to Manhattan from New Jersey about two years ago.

The girl apparently was sexually attacked, badly beaten and strangled before being set afire inside the basement freezer at the former MOUNT Carmel Nursing Home, police said.

Child says he never saw Mettier except in courthouse

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Six-year-old Timmy White peered over the top of the witness stand at the man Kenneth Parnell insisted was the little boy's kidnapper.

"Uh-uh," Timmy said Thursday. He hadn't seen the man before, except in the courthouse.

Parnell, charged with snatching Timmy as he walked home from a kindergarten party on Valentine's Day last year, had testified Wednesday that Henry Mettier Jr., 27, forced Parnell to hide the little boy in Parnell's one-room cabin.

Mettier testified Thursday before the Alameda County Superior Court jury considering the kidnapping charges against Parnell that he had neither talked to nor seen Parnell before observing him at the trial. He said he was in Mill Valley, 100 miles away, at the time of the abduction.

Mettier first appeared at the trial to hear testimony by 16-year-old Sean Poorman, son of Mettier's girlfriend, Christine Poorman Morehead.

After Mettier appeared in court, Parnell testified Mettier said unless Parnell helped him kidnap a small boy, he would harm Steven Stayner, then 14, whom authorities say Parnell kidnapped seven years earlier.

Parnell said Wednesday he refused to help Mettier. but he testified that Mettier kidnapped Timmy and forced Parnell by renewed threats to hide Timmy for a while in Parnell's cabin.

Poorman testified Monday he helped Parnell kidnap Timmy in return for $50, some whiskey and marijuana. Poorman is on probation for his admitted role in the abduction.

Parnell also has been charged with abducting Stayner, but no trial date has been set.

Stayner, saying he didn't want Timmy to go through an ordeal like his, brought the child to police 16 days after he was abducted.

Timmy testified without looking at Parnell, who jotted notes with one hand and clutched a second pen with his free hand. But after Judge M.O. Sabraw announced the day's recess, the child walked through the courtroom and shot a glance over his shoulder at Parnell, who showed no emotion.

Timmy described, as Stayner did earlier this week, how the two boys waited outside Parnell's cabin in the rain three times trying to hitchhike to Ukiah while Parnell was at work. The fourth time they succeeded.

Fannie Mae accepts adjustable mortgages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal National Mortgage Association is opening the door for banks and savings and loan institutions to sell a broad range of adjustable-rate mortgages.

The FNMA, commonly known as "Fannie Mae," said Thursday it will buy some adjustable-rate mortgages with rising loan principals as well as those with fluctuating monthly payments.

Fannie Mae, a quasi-governmental agency, is the nation's largest purchaser of home loans and its guidelines were eagerly awaited by primary lenders such as mortgage companies and savings and loan associations.

An adjustable-rate mortage would have an interest rate tied to a specific separate rate — such as six-month or one-year Treasury bills — and the homebuyers' interest rate would rise or fall to keep pace. Adjustments would be made at set intervals.

Under loans with growing principals, known as negative amortization, a lender might keep monthly payments stable when prevailing interest rates rise by adding the difference to the total amount of the loan.

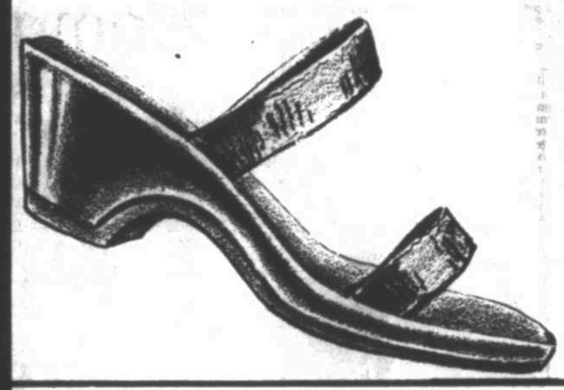

Fannie Mae's guidelines include eight separate plans with adjustment periods ranging from six months to five years. Officials said they would consider other plans on a c$se-by-case basis.

Fannie Mae chairman David O. Maxwell said the broad guidelines were adopted because "the working of the market is preferable to the arbitrary imposition of one of two types (of loans) by regulators or investors."

Controller's deal may not fly

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tentative settlement that averted a strike by the nation's air traffic controllers may never get off the ground, some controllers say.

If the proposed contract fails to win ratification, the government and the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization would have to return to the bargaining table, and the threat of a walkout that could ground half the country's commercial air traffic might loom again.

The PATCO executive board was reported meeting today at an undisclosed location, possibly throughout the weekend. At the top of the agenda was the question of whether to endorse the tentative agreement, scheduled to be mailed out for ratification next week, and whether to try to sell it to the union's nearly 15,000 members.

Results of ratification voting were not expected before mid-July.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis told a congressional hearing Thursday that the government will not budge from its contract package, saying "that's all we have to offer."

Union president Robert E. Poli agreed to the $40 million wage and benefits package after a lengthy bargaining session that began last Sunday and stretched into Monday. He later called it "a good package for us," considering present economic conditions.

The government said the package would give controllers a 6.6 percent increase in wages and benefits above the 4.8 percent pay increase that all government employees will get this year.

Union officials say a major reason Poli accepted the government's offer was the union's failure to get strike approval from 80 percent of its membership. The union sought such a majority to make sure it had enough backing for a strike that would have been illegal.

Air controllers, as government employees, are barred by law from striking.

In the voting late Sunday and early Monday, while negotiations were still under way, about 75 percent approved a strike.

Since the tentative pact was signed, the union's Washington headquarters has received hundreds of critical phone calls, letters and Mailgrams.

"They're angry at themselves for not going with a strike vote," as well as angry over provisions in the contract, said Marcia Feldman, a union spokeswoman who disclosed plans for the executive board meeting. She said the anger has not been aimed at Poli or the union's leadership.

Supreme Court upholds draft for men only

By KEVIN M. COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any military draft is likely to remain a men-only affair under a Supreme Court ruling that women may be exempted since they are ineligible for combat anyway.

"The fact that Congress and the (president) have decided that women should not serve in combat fully justifies Congress in not authorizing their registration, since the purpose of registration is to develop a pool of potential combat troops," Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court.

The high court's decision Thursday — viewed as a major defeat for women's rights — went far beyond upholding a congressional act requiring the registration of young men only.

By acknowledging the scope of congressional power over national defense issues and military affairs and "the lack of competence on the part of the courts" in these areas, the Supreme Court practically foreclosed specific challenges to the draft and combat issues.

Women in the Navy and Air Force are banned from combat by law. The Army and the Marines both have policies restricting women from combat duty.

Congress refused a request last year by former President Carter to require draft registration of women as well as men. All-male registration was revived last July 2 for the first time since 1975, and more than 5 million men have signed up.

Eleanor Smeal, president of the 140,000-member National Organization for Women, called the ruling "a tragic setback for women's rights."

"It's an absolute perpetuation of a lie," she said. "You have a male tribunal telling us again that it's OK to discriminate against women — even though it hurts men, it hurts women and it hurts the nation."

The court's 6-3 decision Thursday overturned a lower court finding that the 1949 Military Selective Service Act was unconstitutional because it fostered sex discrimination against men. The government's appeal focused only on the registration provisions of the act, since there has not been a draft since 1973.

"Men and women, because of the combat restrictions on women, are simply not similarly situated for the purposes of a draft or registration for a draft," Rehnquist wrote.

He added: "The Constitution requires that Congress treat similarly situated persons similarly, not that it engage in gestures of superficial equality."

Even dissenting Justice Byron R. White assumed that there was no question about the constitutionality of excluding women from combat. But, disagreeing with the majority, he said the armed forces could not rely on "women volunteers to fill all the positions for which they might be eligible in the event of mobilization."

Reaction to the ruling and its implications was predictable.

In Los Angeles with President Reagan, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the decision "is consistent with the Republican Party platform. It is consistent with the will of Congress ... (and) generally in line with the president's views."

Reagan, however, still is not ready to announce a decision on what he will do about registration, Speakes said, adding that a Pentagon commission is studying military manpower problems and will make recommendations to Reagan.

In a terse statement, the Defense Department said it was "pleased that there will be no disruption of the current Selective Service System."

Phyllis Schlafly, the outspoken opponent of the Equal Rights Amendment, praised the ruling. "The court recognized that the American people simply will not tolerate the drafting of their daughters," she said.

Bruce Ennis, legal director for the American Civil Liberties Union, said the decision was somewhat "disingenuous."

Haig sorry over flap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. returned to Washington early today from a two-week Pacific tour "sorry and disappointed" about two aides' reported criticism of United Nations Ambassador Jeane K. Kirkpatrick.

In his 27,000-mile trip to Hong Kong, China, the Philippines and New Zealand, Haig sought to fashion an Asian policy for the Reagan administration that includes closer relations to China, while strengthening ties with America's traditional friends and allies.

In China, he announced that the administration had cleared the way for the possibility of weapons sales to the communist government.

But Haig's return was overshadowed by newspaper reports quoting two of his top aides as saying the secretary was unhappy with Mrs. Kirkpatrick's handling of the U.N. resolution condemning Israel's bombing of a nuclear reactor in Iraq.

Panel receives WIPP update

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy could have done more to keep New Mexico officials abreast of progress on the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, a DOE officical says.

But Raymond Romatowski, acting undersecretary of the federal agency, told a legislative committee Thursday that the DOE has tried to work closely with the state on the nuclear waste repository project near Carlsbad, N.M.

Romatowski was one of several state and federal officials to appear before the Radioactive Waste Consultation Committee for a briefing on the status of the WIPP.

But his words and those of state Attorney General Jeff Bingaman were chosen carefully because of a pending lawsuit brought by Bingaman against the DOE and the U.S. Department of the Interior over the defense-related project.

U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga is scheduled to hear arguments July 6 on Bingaman's request to halt work on the projeut pending a full consideration of the states concerns.

Rep. James Otts, D-Eddy, committee chairman, said at the outset of the meeting that committee members would not ask questions related to the lawsuit.

"We don't want the court to accuse this committee of fouling up its case," Otts said.

At the heart of the lawsuit is whether the federal government has met its legal obligations to the state in moving ahead on the project.

Bingaman contends the federal government failed to get the state's consent before proceeding with initial construction at the site, refused to sign an enforceable agreement for consulting with the state and failed to prepare an adequate environmental impact statement.

Vet says Congress ducking Agent Orange

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — States must take the lead in helping Vietnam War veterans who blame their medical problems on Agent Orange because Congress is ducking the issue, says a leader of the veterans' movement.

David Christian, a U.S. Department of Labor official in Pennsylvania and executive director of the United Vietnam Veterans Organization, praised Texas' new Agent Orange law.

"I charge federal legislators with losing the war and today with losing the social war by taking a halfhearted approach. The states are telling them how to get their act together," Christian told a news conference Thursday.

Agent Orange, a defoliant used in the war, is suspected of causing cancer and genetic damage, including birth defects in children born to veterans.

Texas' law is aimed at collecting case-by-case data in the State Health Department about illnesses and genetic problems blamed on Agent Orange. It also authorizes the attorney general to help veterans get their military and medical records.

Christian, a former Green Beret captain, praised Texas' new law for providing a way to get information.

"It is extremely, extremely important because this raw data is going to be ... the mechanism that moves the federal government," he said.

"If the S.O.B.s want us to bring in our data, we will parade the 10,000 to 20,000 boys from Texas, the 10,000 to 20,000 boys from Pennsylvania and the 10,000 to 20,000 boys from California," Christian said.

Christian wants Congress to establish a legal presumption that if a Vietnam veteran displays certain symptoms, he is entitled to federal help.

With Christian were Dan Jordan of Austin, president of the Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans, and state Rep. John Cordisco of Pennsylvania, sponsor of an Agent Orange bill.

Cordisco said he and others are trying to form a coalition of lawmakers from many states who will push for Agent Orange bills and lobby Congress on behalf of veterans.

Cordisco said Rep. Larry Shaw, D-Big Spring, sponsor of the Texas bill, had helped find witnesses to testify on behalf of the Pennsylvania bill.

"The Veterans Administration has ignored the problem. It's up to the states to lead the charge and document the problem," Cordisco said.

Group opposes guest worker programs

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Guest worker programs that would allow Mexican nationals to hold temporary jobs in the United States would result in "white slavery," says the Texas state chairman of a Mexican-American group.

"We are against any new bracero program because no matter what you call it, it's still a bracero program," said Manuel Casanova of Laredo. "The owner pays them minimum wage, but he charges them rent, buys their groceries. By the end of the program, the bracero has nothing.

"That's why we're talking about white slavery," he said.

Casanova said such programs are opposed by his group — the American GI Forum — because they violate the basic human rights of the worker.

Rather than start a guest worker program, "They need to have more of an open border and better relatin with Mexico so we can have a better immigration policy," he said.

President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo recently discussed the possibility of a guest worker program in a meeting in Washington, D.C.

Casanova's remarks came Thursday during a news conference at the GI Forum's 33rd state convention here. The group, which now has members in 33 states, began in Texas as a lobbying group for Mexican-American veterans. Since then, it has broadened its scope to include social issues facing Hispanics and other minorities.

Casanova, a Vietnam veteran himself, said the group feels that the Reagan administration has demonstrated "insensitivity toward the Vietnam veteran" in proposed budget cuts that would reduce veterans programs.

He said he was pleased that Congress recently voted to retain a special readjustment and job placement program for Vietnam veterans despite administration recommendations that the program be cut.

On other issues, Casanova said his group supports single-member voting districts and bilingual education.

The GI Forum and the League of United Latin American Citizens combined forces in a lawsuit that earlier this year led to a court decision mandating bilingual education in Texas schools.

Carpenters ratify new pact

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — About 10,000 Northern California carpenters ratified a new two-year contract with 300 homebuilders Thursday night.

The International Brotherhood of Carpenters members in 46 counties had returned to work Tuesday when a tentative agre3ment was reached with the Northern California Homebuilders Conference.

The new pact calls for a raise of $1.60 an hour, to $16.95, in 12 Bay area counties and raises of 70 cents an hour in the other counties.

One of the main sources of contention, a schedule that gives the workers every other Friday off, remains, however. It is to be studied by a union-homebuilder committee.

Larry Bee, executive director of the union, said the vote was 3,976 to 2,462.

The strike had halted millions of dollars worth of housing projects.

Governor, House leaders closer to agreement

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — After months of haggling, Gov. James R. Thompson and legislative leaders say they are close to an agreement on a plan to rescue the Chicago-area mass transit system.

Thompson and legislative leaders huddled for an hour Thursday night over the governor's billion-dollar proposal for higher taxes.

After the meeting in the governor's Capitol offices, both sides said they were close to agreeing state sales and alcohol taxes should be increased to provide cash for the ailing Regional Transportation Authority.

But the House and Senate leaders didn't say whether they could sell the governor's program to other lawmakers in the General Assembly.

The RTA ran out of money in May, and only an advance of more than $23 million in June sales tax receipts kept most buses and trains in the Chicago area running this month.

The Republican governor and House Minority Leader Michael Madigan said at the meeting Thursday there was disagreement between Chicago city officials and Thompson over how much the RTA needs to operate through 1983.

Madigan and Sen. James Philip said Thompson gave those attending the meeting a proposal to raise about $1 billion over three years.

A healthy addition

Formal dedication ceremonies Saturday at the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center officially will mark the realization of a long-awaited dream for residents of Midland and the surrounding area.

The effort to obtain the center — and the sophisticated cancer treatment equipment it houses — truly has been community-wide, involving hospital officials and employees alike and members of the general public.

The center has not come into existence without its share of controversy, specifically the flap with Odessa officials over the acquisition of a 6-Million Electron Volt linear accelerator. The efforts of hospital officials, combined with a strong dose of community involvement, virtually have assured the machines for the Tall City.

Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center thrusts Midland into the West Texas forefront of medical service. The Allison facility brings to the residents of the Midland area rare services they previously have been forced to travel hundreds of miles to receive.

No small measure of gratitude must be given to the memory of the late Helon Y. Allison, whose original $2 million donation helped to make the facility a reality. Allison Center was constructed in memory of her husband, James N. Allison Sr., and her son, James N. Allison Jr. Others, too, contributed to the construction effort, but it was largely through Mrs. Allison's generosity that the facility was assured.

Construction of the center, incidentally, was never in question. The controversy centered only around particular pieces of equipment. Primarily, the fracas brought into question the quality of care the facility would be able to provide. Now that the questionable equipment is practically assured, the level of medical service available from the center will be surpassed by few facilities.

Realization of this dream is a highlight in the Midland medical community's life. The facility came about as the result of untiring effort by many good and public-spirited Midlanders.

But all Midlanders and those from the surrounding area will reap the benefits.

Protecting workers

The Supreme Court has ruled that there can be no compromise in an employer's duty to protect the health and safety of workers against major hazards in the work place.

By a 5-3 vote, the justices rejected the argument by the textile industry that the Occupational Safety and Health Administration must show that the workers' health benefits justify the employers' increased costs in complying with agency rules.

The ruling in a case involving exposure to cotton dust, blamed as the cause of brown lung disease, will have an impact on other industries vulnerable to charges of exposing employees to dangerous conditions.

Few will quarrel with the words of Justice William J. Brennan Jr., emphasizing the court's concurrence with Congress that the costs of eliminating health hazards were properly part of the cost of doing business.

The Occupational Safety and Health Act has been a matter of controversy for 11 years.

Businessmen have complained, often with justification, some OSHA rules are frivolous, costly and unnecessary. Those rules should be changed or eliminated.

The goals of the act are not frivolous. They are intended to create a healthful, safe environment for the American worker.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ex-CIA agents didn't 'sell-out' to Qaddafi

WASHINGTON — Every man has his price, the cynics say, and Libya's dictator, Muammar Qaddafi, has enough petrodollars to buy just about any man he wants.

Jack Anderson

But two former CIA explosives experts resisted the temptation to make some easy money from Qaddafi. Their story is worth telling because it is apparently unique: They may be the only ones among many former CIA and Green Beret specialists approached by the Qaddafi regime who told him to get lost. And they did it on principle, refusing to let their expertise be used in Qaddafi's systematic campaign of assassination and terror.

They are named in secret government files, but I have been asked to protect their identities. So let's call them Smith and Brown.

Qaddafi's "master terrorists," ex-CIA agents Ed Wilson and Frank Terpil, had hired a former CIA ordnance expert, John Harper, to go to Libya and make tiny explosive devices that could be hidden in ashtrays, coat hangers and similar harmless-looking objects. During a demonstration of sophisticated timers, one failed to work and a Libyan officer was blown up accidentally.

Despite this mishap, Harper later wangled another contract out of Wilson — for $100,000, according to the government's star witness against Terpil and Wilson, ex-CIA man Kevin Mulcahy. Harper flew back to Libya, Mulachy told my associate Dale Van Atta.

On the way in from the airport with a Qaddafi aide and a chauffeur, the car struck and killed a pedestrian. The two Libyans casually dumped the body into the trunk, saying they'd take care of it later.

On another occasion, Harper rashly carried two cans of explosives — "enough to blow London off the map" — through Heathrow Airport, using a diplomatic passport. This unnerved Wilson, who decided Harper needed replacing.

So Wilson went head-hunting in the Washington area, and looked up Brown in Alexandria, Va. Brown had retired from the CIA after 17 years' experience training others to fabricate, identify and disarm explosive devices used by terrorists.

The two ex-spooks met in the Holiday Inn at Tyson's Corner, Va., a longtime CIA hangout, on Sept. 3, 1976. According to secret Justice Department files, "Wilson appeared quite desperate to hire an explosives expert as his current man in Libya, John Harper, had fallen flat on his face." Brown had known Harper as his contact when he needed materials for his CIA work.

"Wilson told (Brown) he wanted someone to train individuals in the fabrication and use of explosives in Libya," the secret files state. "Specifically, he was interested in camouflage devices such as lamps, bricks" and other objects. He pointed to his briefcase and said it contained a number of miniature timers.

Brown told Wilson he wasn't interested in the job because he "didn't want to do anything with Col. Qaddafi." Wilson persisted. He promised Brown complete authority in selecting trainees, a $90,000 tax-free salary deposited in a Swiss bank, a house, car, chauffeur, laboratory — even a percentage of the dollar value of materials used to make the explosive devices.

Brown tried to pump Wilson. What, he asked, would he really be doing for Qaddafi? "You know, the Colonel may sometimes have some young colonels or some officers or something that are getting out of line that he wants to send a present to," Wilson replied, according to the secret files.

Rebuffed by Brown, Wilson next called on Smith, in Sterling, Va. Wilson said something about clearing land mines in Libya, and again mentioned Harper, who, he said, was having "emotional problems."

Smith "decided as soon as he heard Qaddafi and Libya that he wasn't going to work for Wilson, but he wanted to hear Wilson's offer," the files state.

At one pont, Wilson showed Smith an electronic firing device packed in a small prescription bottle with a piece of Styrofoam. Smith recognized it immediately. It was "similar in design to (one) which has been used by the Palestine Liberation Organization in terrorism actions throughout Europe ... far too sophisticated" to be suitable for clearing mines. He told Wilson nothing doing.

TIME IS MONEY: As a big-volume purchaser, Uncle Sam is entitled to discounts on certain standard government supplies — like photographic materials. But a recent audit showed that the General Services Administration lost $500,000 in discounts last year because of failure to process offers from photographic suppliers within specified time limits.

Of 31 offers received, 25 were still being processed four months after the deadline. A spokesman for the GSA told my reporter Jan Taylor that the unstable price of silver had led suppliers to hesitate on price commitments, and that was why the contracts hadn't been signed.

But the audit blamed inadequate planning and training, insufficient information and poor documentation for the delays. The division concerned was also understaffed, the auditors concluded, noting that two contract officers were responsible for contracts totaling nearly $90 million.

The taxpayers lost more than discounts: When federal agencies can't get their photo supplies from GSA, they have to do their own purchasing. The additional manhours it took to process such purchases cost one agency alone $8,800 per week.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, June 26, the 177th day of 1981. There are 188 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 26, 1945, the charter establishing the United Nations was signed in San Francisco by 50 nations.

On this date:

In 1284, legend has it that the Pied Piper of Hamelin, Germany, lured 130 children from the town and they were never heard from again.

In 1844, President John Tyler married Julie Gardiner in a secret wedding in New York.

And in 1944, Allied forces captured Cherbourg, France from the Nazis during World War II.

Ten years ago: there was around-the-clock pounding by American bombers and helicopter gunships around Vietnam's demilitarized zone.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Dear Mr. Principal — As my youngest child departs the eighth grade for the fast lane of high school, I want to thank you and your colleagues for the education I've received. I thought I learned all the dirty words in the Marines.

●

For my youngest, there will be no more pasting leaves on the windows in autumn and sticking paper snowflakes on the windows in winter. At least, not until college.

●

I'll miss that annual ritual of "Meet the Teachers" Night at the opening of each school year. Especially the Phys. Ed. instructors. They were stunning in their hostess gowns, evening bags, sneakers and whistles.

●

But, of all the memories, the most touching was the sixth-grade drama club's production of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

INSIDE REPORT:

Actions show Israel's interests don't override those of U.S.

WASHINGTON — Self-inflicted damage following the destruction of Iraq's nuclear reactor has personified Prime Minister Menahem Begin as a potential threat to Israel's indispensible relationship with the Reagan administration, arousing anguish among Israel's strongest U.S. backers.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

An additional irony for Begin is that astute diplomacy by U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick has now put the U.S. and Iraq in tandem, a defeat for Begin's strategy of keeping the U.S. and the Arab world split. The anguish about Begin was typified by an unlikely source when Sen. Paul Tsongas told State Department officials testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week that "a distinction" must now be made between Begin and Israel. Tsongas has a 100 percent pro-Israel voting record.

The anti-Begin backfire is raising for Israel the specter of partial separation from the U.S., its only benefactor. Even before the prime minister's perfectly executed order to destroy Baghdad's nuclear facility, President Reagan privately expressed contempt for Begin's attack on West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt last April. The invariably polite Ronald Reagan found Begin's language unbecoming a head of state.

Far more harmful are Begin's unproven justifications for the raid, undermining Israel's credibility in the Reagan administration. His government's formal explanation of the raid asserted that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had said the reactor "was being built against Israel alone." A full retraction had to be made. The formal government statement said that "no foreign expert was hurt" in the raid, another provable misstatement.

Begin then zeroed in on Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, one of Reagan's closest friends in the administration. Within hours of Weinberger's persuasive argument at the secret June 10 National Security Council meeting for a strong American response to the raid, Begin had been informed. The spectacle of a foreign leader attacking one of Reagan's Cabinet chiefs for advising the president at an NSC meeting did not set well in Reagan's White House.

Behind the scenes, Ambassador Kirkpatrick was pulling off her diplomatic feat: persuading Iraq to tone down its Security Council resolution to a level acceptable to the U.S. The unwitting catalyst of that achievement for both the U.S. and Iraq (which has long desired closer relations with Washington) was Menahem Begin himself.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick could not have pulled off her coup without preliminary groundwork by two of the closest friends the U.S. has in the Arab world: Saudi Arabia and Egypt. President Anwar Sadat, cut out of the Arab community ever since the Camp David accords, privately encouraged the Saudis immediately after the Israeli raid to send this message to Iraq's Saddam Hussein: Go easy on the U.S. and Ronald Reagan. They argued that Israel's offense should be exploited to tighten, not weaken U.S.-Arab links. The Saudis had similar hopes.

When the Arab foreign ministers met in Baghdad following the raid, Saddam Hussein was impressed by the arguments of Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud. Saud warned that in the aftermath of the raid Begin would use the expected harsh anti-U.S. Iraqi reaction to further weaken Iraq's standing in this country. Don't let that happen, Saud argued; exploit Begin's exposed position to strengthen the U.S.-Iraqi link.

Other Arab leaders sang the same song. If Iraq accepted the veiled Israeli implications tieing the U.S. into the raid, and blamed the Reagan administration, the old familiar cycle would be repeated, with U.S. TV networks and the press gorging on Arab infamy. Saddam Hussein bought that package. His June 8 statement attacking Iran and "the Zionist entity" for the raid ignored the fact that U.S.-supplied F-16s were used to destroy his nuclear reactor.

It was Ambassador Kirkpatrick's unenviable assignment to sit for long hours with the Iraqi foreign minister and hammer out the compromise. Behind the scenes, she had sympathy and support from some leaders of the American-Jewish community who know that long-term U.S. relations in the Arab world can make or break President Reagan's attempt to build an American-Arab regional defense system for the Persian Gulf.

In succeeding, Mrs. Kirkpatrick not only preserved but actually strengthened those relations. Her success notified Prime Minister Begin that Reagan's fidelity to Israel can not be used to subvert the infinitely higher consideration of America's own national security.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans' moral values show a gap

A life insurance company which contracted for an in-depth survey of American's attitudes and moral values was somewhat shocked to discover that there is a sizeable gap between the moral values of the people and of their leadership, which is defined as public officials, academic persons and the members of the news media.

Charley Reese

It doesn't surpise me at all, for I have lived in both "worlds" all my life. As a journalist, I work with leadership types in the media and in public life, but I have always socialized with plain people like myself. I rarely socialize with fellow journalists and never with public officials. If I'm forced to break bread with a politician, I consider it work; not a single one of my personal friends is among the "important people" although they are all important to me and are, in my opinion, people of great merit.

Over the years, I have seen the gap grow, partly because the university system which feeds the leadership mills more often than not no longer reflects the value of the people who send their children to it, partly because leadership types tend to socialize with each other and thus reinforce each other's values.

On the whole these values are secular, not religious; cynical, not idealistic; materialistic; and, in terms of economics and politics, collectivist and internationalist, not capitalist and patriotic. Leaders tend to believe there are no idealists, only cranks; no honest or brave people, only cowards and fools; and increasingly, as the gap between them and the plain people has grown, they have tended to look upon ordinary people in much the same way the old aristocrats looked upon peasants — at best, as children, and at worst, as people too stupid to be even worth consideration.

The value gap is one of the most significant factors in our times. In the past, the great majority of the people had thought that they, not the minority leadership, were in the minority. Every time they picked up a publication or turned on the television, they were presented with a value system out of kilter with their own. Feeling isolated, most of them believed there was nothing they could do to change things.

Today, however, these people are beginning to realize that they are the majority, not the minority, and that political power rests with them. Furthermore, they are beginning to develop a new leadership which does reflect their own values. I think we are approaching an earthquake change in American cultural and political life.

For the most part, the leadership, like the old French aristocrats, are unaware of what's about to happen. They misread the evidence. They think the phenomenal success of "Star Wars" is just escapism (actually it's an appeal to idealism); they think Ronald Reagan was elected because Jimmy Carter was inept; they think the rebirth of religion is only a wart on the nation's psyche.

There will be a battle. The leadership still controls most of the levers, but the people have begun to realize that it does not hold those levers with an iron grip.

One encouraging sign is the many of those spineless opportunists, who spend their lives testing the winds, are beginning to slither across the side of traditional American values — home, family, church, God and country.

Iran executes eight rebels

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Government firing squads executed eight presumed Kurdish rebels at dawn today in the Kurdish town of Ushnuiyeh, Tehran Radio said.

The radio said the eight were "counter-revolutionaries" and members of illegal armed groups, accused of rebelling against the Islamic Republic of Iran and "firing on defenseless people in the region."

Their deaths raised to 52 the number of people reported executed so far this week.

It was not clear if today's executions were related to Wednesday's attack by independence-seeking Kurdish rebels on a funeral procession in the Kurdish stronghold of Mahabad, 30 miles southeast of Ushnuiyeh.

Six mourners were killed in the attack and the city's governor and six revolutionary guardsmen were wounded. They were burying a local dignitary killed Tuesday by Kurdish rebels, the state radio said.

After the attack, authorities in Tehran charged that the rebels have joined leftist groups in an "anti-Islamic counter-revolution under the pretext of supporting (ousted President Abolhassan) Bani-Sadr."

However, there was speculation the Kurds were using the turmoil spawned by Bani-Sadr's impeachment and ouster to further their campaign to break the Tehran government's hold on the Kurdish-populated provinces of Kurdistan and Azerbaijan in northwestern Iran.

Boston building collapses suddenly

BOSTON (AP) — A 100-year-old, three-story building in East Boston collapsed suddenly, leaving a pile of rubble, but there were no serious injuries.

Police Sgt. Harold Prefontaine said there was no explosion and no fire. "It just collapsed as far as we know," he said. One witness said the Chelsea Street building fell in less than two minutes.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Soviets keeping mum on treatment

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recall reading some time ago about an athlete who had been paralyzed in an accident, and who went to the Soviet Union for treatment which he said was not available in the United States. Do you know if the treatment used in the Soviet Union has been perfected and, if so, whether it has been adopted in this country? — Terry

Dear Terry: I believe the person to whom you refer suffered a spinal cord injury. The Soviet Union has stopped public discussion of the treatment provided, which in part included the use of enzymes and physical therapy, and apparently no longer offers it to Americans. The reason for the Russians' change in attitude may be found in the comments of officials of the National Institutes of Health, who have reported that patients who underwent the treatment showed little improvement.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My three-year-old son had a seizure that my doctor said was related to a fever he had at the time. The episode was very upsetting and it still bothers me when I think of it. The doctor prescribed some medicine that he says should prevent further seizures, but I'm still very concerned. I would appreciate any information about these seizures and their significance, particularly about what they mean in terms of the future. — Mrs. N.Y.

Dear Mrs. Y.: Your son apparently had a "febrile seizure" which, as the name suggest, is a seizure associated with fever. It usually occurs in infants or young children, from approximately three months to five years of age. While febrile seizures in most instances are relatively benign, they can be extremely upsetting to the family, as you well know. In addition, there is some slight risk of physical injury to the child at the time of the seizure.

Most children who experience a febrile seizure return to normal health after the event. Unless they receive some treatment, however, it is estimated that about 30 percent to 40 percent will have a second seizure. That is why your doctor prescribed the medication. Phenobarbital is the drug most often used, but others are available.

Soviets demanding vacation rights

By PATRICK MENEY
Agence France-Presse

MOSCOW — Soviet citizens are demanding new rights — to annual family vacations, now a rare privilege.

Usually husband and wife, working in different factories or offices, find they are given different vacation periods.

"We have been married for three years and we have a two-year-old child, but we have never been able to take a vacation together," a young woman complained recently in a letter to the Komsomolskaya Pravda, official newspaper of the Soviet Communist Youth movement. If an official publication publishes a letter on this kind of subject, it means the complaint expresses the view of many Soviet citizens and is therefore taken seriously by the authorities.

In this case the writer went on: "The government has so far not been able to solve this problem of family vacations.

The difficulty arises from the Soviet system itself, as factories and offices do not close for annual vacations as in many other countries. Workers are sent on vacation at dates seemingly picked at random or according to the needs of the business or industry.

The result is that summer vacations — usually a month in the Soviet Union — are often given to husbands and wives at diferent times. There is no doubt this is a nationwide problem, because 93 percent of women here go to work.

The Komsomolskaya Pravda letter writer said a large number of marriages failed because it was impossible for husband, wife and children to be together on vacation. One-third of all Soviet marriages end in divorce.

She asked: "What do you expect when the husband goes off to the sunny south on vacation by himself because his wife has a different vacation date? Even for our honeymoon, we were unable to go away together.

"We see each other only at weekends, and then we have to catch up on domestic chores."

There can be no doubt Soviet authorities are well aware of the problem.

For several years an experiment has been carried out at a factory in Kiev, based on Western methods in which the factory closes down in August and the entire work force goes on vacation at the same time.

The Soviet press has called the experiment a great success, with everybody happy and production increased. But it will be many years before it is adopted on a nationwide basis.

In the meantime, factory workers will have to go on jostling and maneuvering to get the dates that suit their spouses so they can have a family vacation together.

Scene of bank robbery

Chileans spellbound by real-life mystery

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — What began as Chile's biggest bank robbery and exploded into a case involving two grisly murders, a questioned suicide and the complicity of secret police agents has shaken the country's vast intelligence network.

It has also kept Chileans spellbound while they watch a real-life mystery as tangled as the plot of a good Agatha Christie novel unravel on the front pages of their daily newspapers.

Police say that on the night of March 10, in the desert town of Calama north of Santiago, a cashier and a guard in the local branch of the State Bank disappeared along with the equivalent of $1.15 million in pesos.

An all-points bulletin went out for Guillermo Martinez, 41, the guard, and Sergio Yanez, 24, the cashier. Capture seemed only a matter of time in heavily policed Chile, which stops drivers at numerous highway checkpoints and closely scrutinizes travel documents before citizens may leave the country.

But weeks passed and neither men nor money turned up. As the search went on, detectives realized certain aspects of the case didn't mesh.

For one thing, there was no evidence either man planned a getaway. Both left distraught families, and Yanez was said to adore his young wife and 3-year-old son.

Another factor was the loot. Chile's largest bill is 1,000 pesos, worth about $25; police estimated that $1.15 million worth of pesos would weigh 176 pounds.

On June 12 the case took a startling twist. Chile's secret police — known as The National Information Center (CNI) — issued a terse statement saying that two CNI agents had abducted the bank employees and stolen the money.

The announcement said the guard and cashier were taken into the desert east of town and shot to death. Dynamite was then exloded against the bodies. The remaining identifiable body parts were buried.

The announcement identified the agents as Eduardo Villanueva and Gabriel Hernandez, CNI chief in Calama. Police said Villanueva described leading the men into the desert on orders from Hernandez.

"First I shot Martinez in the head. Then I moved in closer and aimed at the teller. He asked me not to do it," police said Villanueva told them in his confession.

"He said, 'Please don't kill me,' then he started praying and I shot him. My major said they had to be eliminated," Villanueva told police, according to officers.

The CNI said the two agents led investigators into the desert where bits of bodies and clothing were recovered. A bale of money wrapped in plastic was found at the bottom of a ravine near the town of Arica.

"This double homocide has been completely cleared up," police pathologist Dr. Alberto Teke told the newspaper El Mercurio. Teke said all evidence dovetailed with the confessions made by the two CNI agents.

But threads of the mystery continued to unravel. Newspapers quoted police sources as saying the two agents had implicated CNI officials in Arica, including the head of the office there, Maj. Juan Delmas.

Police later confirmed Delmas disappeared just as they began looking for him. On June 16, the 36-year-old officer's body was found in a car nine miles south of Arica, a bullet hole in his right temple.

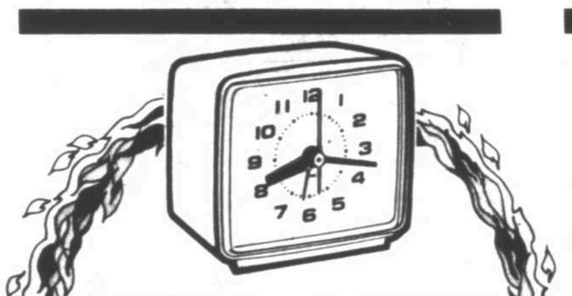

Officers said $333,000 of the missing money was found in the car.

But reporters in Arica created new headlines with some stunning details: They said that no bullet was found in Delmas' body or in the car and that he was lefthanded, making it unlikely he would have shot himself in the right side of the head.

Speculation grew that Delmas had been murdered. Then his body disappeared from the morgue. Officials first had no comment, then announced the body had been buried in Arica's cemetery. Reporters found the gravesite empty.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The magnificent, courageous Helen Keller was born on this date. Many new opportunities will come your way in the months ahead. The way you handle them determines how great your success will be and how much your finances will have improved by the end of the year. Romance follows an unusually smooth course although marital relationships continue to have their ups and downs. Be sure to explain your goals, intentions when asking for mate's support. Temper your boldness with caution, and your forcefulness with diplomacy! Otherwise, your associates may hesitate to follow where you lead. Avoid making risky investments in October, December.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Replace bad habits with good ones—employ greater self-discipline. Others will show you more affection and concern. Spruce up your personal appearance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A good day for discussing vacation plans with mate or romantic partner. You are at your best with people you know well. Be willing to make an intelligent concession.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An unexpected invitation could arrive. Show your appreciation for an acquaintance's thoughtfulness. Turn on the charm in a social situation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The weekend may find you engrossed in making complicated social arrangements. A mix-up in plans can be frustrating, but things will work out for the best.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some travel is indicated. Meetings with new people prove stimulating. Be alert to unusual social and business opportunities but avoid being too obvious about your intentions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Capitalize on a business associate's confidential suggestion. It could bring you new success! Singles should find romance very exciting this evening. Dress to impress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Reaching a private agreement with loved one makes domestic life more rewarding. A social encounter could provide you with opportunity to learn about a new lifestyle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get out of that rut and widen your social circle. You may decide to join a community group. Be cautious where romance is concerned. Guard your reputation!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day for reaching understandings with loved ones. You and your mate may need time alone to sort things out. Cancel recreational plans if necessary. It will be worth the sacrifice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You should be able to get family members to go along with your plans this weekend. Tend to home repairs early in the day—relax and enjoy yourself later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The weekend will work out much better than you think. Do not try to force others to do things that do not really interest them. Light exercise helps keep you feeling fit.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may have to divide your time between family duties and social obligations today. Do not take loved one for granted or you could lose out.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡	2 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

It is all very well to establish a winner in a suit by ruffing—but what if that winner then proves to be of no use to you? South found a neat way out of his predicament to land his contract of two spades.

West's distribution weighed against a takeout double at his first turn, so he contented himself with a two heart overcall. North had barely enough for a free raise of his partner's opening bid, especially since he had only three-card trump support. In the long run, however, it is wiser to bid with the North hand to prevent getting preempted out of the auction.

West led the king of hearts against two spades and, after taking a look at dummy, shifted to a trump—an initial trump lead might have been more successful. Declarer won in his hand with the queen and, since an immediate heart ruff would have left him in dummy with no quick entry back to his hand, he finessed the queen of diamonds. After cashing the ace of diamonds, he returned to his hand by ruffing a diamond with his low spade. West followed to the three diamond tricks with the K-J-10, so the table's nine of diamonds was now high.

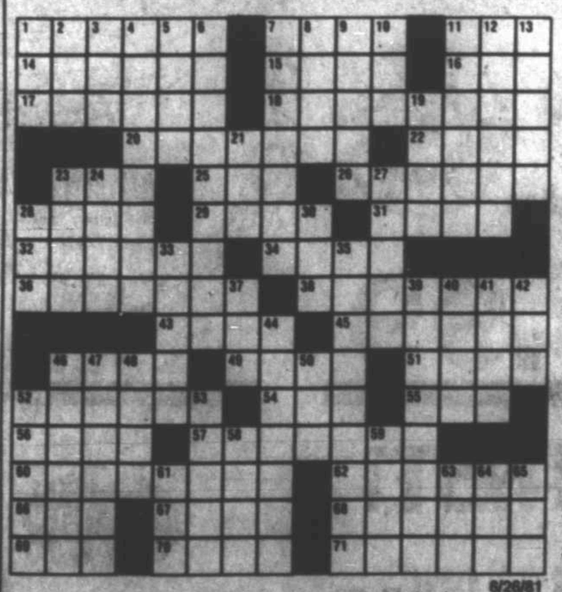

Declarer ruffed a heart in dummy and was tempted to discard a club from his hand on the high diamond. But he realized that West would ruff and, if he still had a trump to return, there might be no way to make the contract.

There was a sure way to eight tricks, and declarer took it. He ruffed his diamond winner in hand and then ruffed a heart with the jack of trumps. That gave him six trump tricks (four on crossruffs) along with two diamonds—just enough to get home.

Negligence claimed in drownings

GROESBECK, Texas (AP) — Negligent homicide charges were being suggested by special prosecutor Larry Baraka as a Court of Inquiry into the drownings of three black teen-agers who were in the custody of three law officers ended on the same day that one of the victims was buried.

Baraka, a Dallas attorney, said "there's definitely some gross negligence" involved in the deaths.

"I think from what I've heard so far I see some strong evidence for negligent homicide charges," he said.

But Limestone County Sheriff Dennis Walker, disagreed, saying, "I don't think there's anything to substantiate that (negligence charge.)"

"But I will wait before I comment on it. I think the officers did everything at the time to save the lives of the boys, and they were unsuccessful."

Carl Baker and Steve Booker, both 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, drowned after being arrested on drug charges during a "Juneteenth" celebration at Lake Mexia. Two Limestone County sheriff's deputies and a probation officer, who accompanied the youths in a 14-foot boat, swam safely to shore after the boat capsized about 40 yards from the shore about 11 p.m. Friday.

Three taken into custody

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Tough, extensive security measures during President Reagan's first trip to Texas since his election resulted in two women and a man being taken into custody after they allegedly made threats against the president.

One unidentified 49-year-old woman, who allegedly made a threat against Reagan to hotel security guards, was taken into custody about 5:30 a.m. Wednesday nearly six hours before Reagan was scheduled to address the U.S. Jaycees convention.

Bexar County Mental Health official Robert Pugh said the actions of the woman "indicated she could possibly pose a threat to the president."

She was involuntarily committed to San Antonio State Hospital at the request of the Secret Service after Night Magistrate Tony Jimenez rejected state charges against her.

Family gets $2.7 million

HOUSTON (AP) — The family of a 39-year-old man killed four years ago in a bizarre traffic accident has agreed to a $2.7 million out-of-court settlement in a suit brought against a California manufacturer.

Eva L. Armstead, widow of Albert Armestead, and her 9-year-old daughter Sherlyn Kai, will receive $310,000 cash immediately, and the victim's mother, Annie Wee Armstead of Huntsville, will get $17,000, their attorney, John Murphrey, said Thursday.

In addition, Armstead's widow will receive an additional $966,000 over a 35-year period, and his daughter will get $1.4 million over a 40-year-period, beginning on her 18th birthday, Murphrey said.

Wanted man in custody

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A man wanted in connection with the slaying of a 26-year-old Oakland, Calif., woman was in custody after a high speed chase with police through Amarillo.

James Anthony Pettaway, 30, was arrested late Wednesday after a six-minute high speed chase that ended when Pettaway's car struck a light pole, authorities said.

A warrant for Pettaway, who was believed to have been traveling in the South since March, has been issued by Oakland police for the slaying of Karen Taylor, 26, of Oakland, a police spokesman said.

Ms. Taylor died of multiple gunshot wounds. Police found her body in her home after being alerted by 17-year-old Michael Seals, who had also been shot, said Sgt. Alex Smith.

Randall County Deputy Tommy Platt was on a stakeout looking for someone else when he spotted Pettaway near an Amarillo motel. Platt said he asked Pettaway for identification, and when the deputy went back to his car to check the ID, Pettaway drove off at a high rate of speed.

Police read girl's diary

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Juvenile officers are looking through a diary for clues to the killing of a 10-year-old girl, whose body was found wrapped in a quilt under her mother's house.

Rose Anne Dobbins, the mother of slain Dawn Michell Stanley, gave the diary to city homicide and junvenile officers. The last entry was not signed, as the other entries were, police said, "as if she didn't finish."

"I just flipped through it the first time, because it wasn't all that important back then," said Capt. Bill Cox of the juvenile division. "I'm going to have to go back and look at real close now."

The girl's body, clothed in a nightgown and panties and bound in a blood-spotted towel, was found Wednesday in a crawl space beneath the house after her mother noticed an odor, officers said.

The child was strangled, a preliminary autopsy showed.

Three found dead in bar

PORT LAVACA, Texas (AP) — A 43-year-old man was in critical condition with gunshot and stab wounds following a shooting at a tavern that left two bar employees and a customer dead, a Calhoun County Sheriff's department spokesman said.

Deputies said Lennie York, 55, of Magnolia Beach, the tavern manager; Lark Saylor, 21, of Port Lavaca, a customer; and Marjorie Sheffield Matocha, 19, of the Port Alto area, a waitress, were killed.

In critical condition in Port Lavaca Hospital after surgery was Willard Baugh whose wife and son discovered the bodies about 6:30 a.m. when they went looking for her husband.

Theft ring shut down

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A theft ring operating mostly in Texas that might have stolen more than $800,000 worth of meat and refrigerator trucks has been shut down, federal investigators say.

"We believe we have broken up a gang which systematically stole refrigerated trucks and sold the meats they were carrying," said FBI Agent George Clow.

Agents have recovered stolen trucks and meat worth $264,000, Clow said. He said total losses are estimated at more than $800,000, and the investigation is continuing.

A federal grand jury in Dallas Tuesday night issued a 10-count indictment charging that Thomas Craig Misfeldt, president of Cherry Food Service, bought meat he knew was stolen and helped plan the thefts.

The conspiracy, which the indictment says began a year ago, called for four men to steal rigs loaded with meat while they were parked at truck stops. One of the men, alleged meat "broker" Steven Blevins also is under indictment.

Nethery found guilty

DALLAS (AP) — Jurors who found Steven Ray Nethery guilty of capital murder in the shooting death of a Dallas police officer were to return to the courtroom today to decide whether he should be put to death by injection or sentenced to life in prison.

Nethery, 23, was convicted Thursday in the February 23 shooting death of officer John McCarthy.

Autopsies performed in alligator pen

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A private pathologist says the lack of county medical facilities forced him to store bodies and perform autopsies at the local zoo's alligator pen.

Dr. B.B. Trotter of Clinical Pathology Associates said in a letter to Taylor County officials "the zoo has recently refused the transfer of these bodies to their location for autopsy." He urged officials to appropriate money for a morgue and medical examiner.

Trotter said he has performed two autopsies at the zoo in the past three years. He said the zoo was a step up from one occasion when he had to perform an autopsy on the garage floor of a funeral home.

Taylor County, with a population of about 130,000 located about 150 miles west of Fort Worth in Central Texas, has no public hospitals where autopsies can be performed and employs no full-time medical examiner. Under state law, an autopsy is required whenever someone dies within 24 hours after being admitted to a hospital or when death occurs under suspicious circumstances.

Zoo director Jack Joy said autopsies were performed in the zoo's alligator enclosure because it has a drain.

Trotter said Wednesday the private Hendrick Medical Center had allowed its facilities to be used for autopsies in the past, but several "incidents" involving corpses have discouraged hospital officials from continuing to provide the service.

Taylor County Sheriff John Middleton said in one instance, two bodies in an advanced stage of deterioration were kept outside while Hendrick officials were deciding what do with them.

Middleton said the rotting corpses fell into a street drain and gave off a rancid odor that permeated the area.

"It is becoming apparent that our city and county are in dire need of a morgue," Trotter wrote county officials in urging them to spend $100,000 for a morgue and full-time medical examiner.

Administrator Michael C. Waters said officials at Hendrick Medical Center "feel as though the county should consider a morgue as outlined by (Trotter).

Budget battle 'lost in wording'

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic leadership might have been successful in forcing a separate vote on various spending cuts requested by President Reagan if they had preserved the bill's original wording, says the chairman of the conservative coalition that provided the swing votes.

"I think it was a tactical error. I don't think there's any doubt that it cost them the decision," said Rep. Charles Stenholm of Stamford.

"The decision of the Rules Committee to rewrite the Gramm-Latta II amendments, I thought, was a costly decision."

Hoping to embarrass Republicans and conservative Democrats who had supported the president on the original spending bill, the House Democratic leadership tried to force a record vote on individual segments of Reagan's economic package.

But instead of forcing a vote against Social Security benefits, for example, as contained in the original bill, the Democratic leadership changed the wording.

"I think it was a mistake," House Majority Leader Jim Wright agreed later. "I understood it was going to be simply broken up into packages and offered for separate votes. As it was, it allowed a kind of side issue to develop as to whether the majority was trying to be fair and give the minority have a fair shot on their issue."

Texans accounted for almost a third of the 29 Democrats who rebuffed their leadership again and gave the president another major victory on his economic recovery program.

The Texas delegation voted 14-10 — including nine Democrats and all five of the state's Republicans — against an effort by the Democratic leadership to force a series of potentially embarrassing "yes or no" vote on segments of the administration proposal.

The final vote, which set the stage for the Reagan proposal to be considered in one package, was 217-210. On the initial budget vote several weeks ago, the president won 63 Democratic votes, including 38 from the Conservative Democratic Forum and 25 others.

Thursday, that dropped to 24 CDF members and four others, but Texas' total of defections remained intact. There was little gloating among the Texas Democrats, however.

"It's not a pleasant time for any of us," said Stenholm, whose 47-member conservative coalition provided 24 of the 29 Democratic votes in support of Reagan's position. "It's difficult to go against the leadership of your party."

Rep. Charles Wilson of Lufkin, not a member of the CDF, again supported the president's program. He said he and Rep. Jack Hightower of Vernon, both former members of the Texas Legislature, agreed "that this was the toughest vote either of us had had to make since we voted to confirm Bob Bullock for the state insurance board in 1972."

For Wright, it was the second straight time he had seen mass Texas defections. He said he was "more than mildly disappointed."

As to the effect it will have on his hopes to eventually succeed Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill, Wright said: "I'm not sure how much it hurts, but obviously it doesn't help. But, that isn't important anyway."

Stenholm added, "If there's anything that's sincerely regretted by all nine of us, it's that our vote will be perceived as a slap at Jim. It's not intended to be."

Wilson said it was particularly painful for him to vote against the leadership.

"That's not the field I usually play on. I haven't, in my nine years here. If you'll look at the list of 29, you'll find I'm the most entrenched of them all in the Democratic Party, and I'm sure the speaker and Jim are simply outraged at me. This vote today cost me a lot."

Wilson and Stenholm were among six Texas Democratic congressmen who were at a party Wednesday night in Washington — sponsored by Texas Utilities Co. — when President Reagan reached them by telephone with his 11th-hour pitch for their support.

The president talked first to Stenholm and later to Wilson, Hightower, and Reps. Ralph Hall of Rockwall and Richard White of El Paso. Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas also was at the party, but was the only one the President didn't ask to talk to. Frost's intention of voting with the Democratic leadership was already clear.

Parties approach plan 'head on'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans solidly behind President Reagan's tax plan and House Democrats claiming to be "on the move again" with a program on paper are advancing on a collision course over who should benefit most from the largest tax cut in American history.

The Senate Finance Committee, voting 19-1 Thursday to give Reagan almost everything he wants and more, recommended that everyone get the same tax break, regardless of income. The House Democrats, meanwhile, unveiled the specifics of their plan favoring low- and middle-income Americans who suffer most from inflation and rising Social Security taxes.

Both plans would become effective Oct. 1. And both would give businesses and individuals the largest tax cut in history.

But Reagan's plan would give a typical family of four with a $10,000 income a $52 tax cut in 1982, compared with a $362 reduction in the Democratic version. A $20,000 family would get $275 in Reagan's bill, $345 under the Democrats'. The president would give a $2,802 cut to a $100,000 family, the Democrats $2,453.

Reagan, in Los Angeles, was described as pleased with the Finance Committee action. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan considered the vote "a good indication of solid support in the Senate. He thinks it speaks well for the future of the tax bill."

The major provision in Reagan's bill would cut personal tax rates by 25 percent over three years.

But Democrats say a three-year cut would worsen inflation. Their plan, unveiled Thursday, would cut rates an average of 15 percent over two years, but workers in the $15,000-to-$50,000 range would get a better break than others.

The Democratic substitute also would increase the zero-bracket amount — formerly the standard deduction — by $200 to $2,500 for single people and by $400 to $3,800 for couples; raise the maximum earned-income credit for poor working families $50 to $550 and boost the maximum child-care credit to $600 for one child and $1,200 for two.

Reagan and the Democrats agree on the need to lessen the tax penalty that hits many married couples when both spouses work. Reagan would allow the couple a special deduction of up to $1,500 in 1982 and $3,000 in future years; the Democratic plan would provide a deduction of up to $5,000 starting in 1982.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, called the Democratic bill "fairer to individuals than the president's proposal."

Senate panel calls for teen-age 'self-discipline'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation encouraging teen-agers to practice "self-discipline and responsibility in matters of human sexuality" is headed to the Senate floor.

The proposal, also urging unmarried teen-age mothers to give their children up to adoption, was approved without objection Wednesday by the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

Introduced by Sen. Jeremiah Denton, D-Ala., the bill authorizes spending $30 million a year through 1984 "to promote self-discipline and other prudent approaches to the problems of adolescent premarital sexual relations, including adolescent pregnancy."

Denton said it would continue adolescent pregnancy projects; provide services to adolescents to encourage "self-discipline and responsibility in matters of human sexuality;" encourage family participation in cases of teen-age pregnancy; promote adoption in such cases; and provide research about family planning programs.

"Prevention of adolescent sexual activity and adolescent pregnancy depends primarily upon developing strong family values and close family ties," the bill states.

In other action, the committee approved bills reauthorizing the Legal Services program, Head Start, the Older Americans Act, the Domestic Volunteer Service Act and the Developmental Disabilities Act.

The Legal Services bill would extend the program for three years and authorize $100 million to assist the poor. The House has voted to keep the program alive for two years but cut its funds by 25 percent and restrict the type of cases it can handle.

DEAR ABBY

Boss's wife isn't secretary's business

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A secretary recently wrote to say that while her boss was out of town, his wife came into his office and searched his deck. She asked if she should tell her boss about it. You replied: "I wouldn't."

What a fascinating answer! I assume you gave that response because the person who did the searching was the boss's wife. This leads to my questions:

If it were the man's mother, should the secretary have told him? What if it were his 25-year-old daughter? His 17-year-old daughter? Two men who claimed to be CIA agents, but flashed their IDs so fast the secretary couldn't read them? The boss's wife, legally separated?

I'd really like to know your thought process! — JOHN C. IN PASADENA

DEAR JOHN: The secretary asked me if I would have told the boss and I replied, "I wouldn't." My reasoning: I would not want to be responsible for the marital brouhaha that might ensue. Had the boss's privacy been violated by someone other than his wife, I would have had no hesitation about informing my boss. Was my answer correct? Not necessarily. But it was honest.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old girl, engaged to be married. My fiance and I went for our blood tests and mine came back positive for syphilis. Abby, I knew something had to be terribly wrong because the only person I've ever been with in my life is my fiance, so if I have syphilis I would have had to get it from him. But his tests came back negative! Abby, if I have syphilis, how come he doesn't have it, too?

We both took our blood tests over, thinking there might have been a mix-up at the lab, but mine came back positive again, and his came back negative.

How can this be? Help me, please — WORRIED SICK IN W. VA.

DEAR WORRIED: It is possible that you do not have syphilis, but that other factors are causing your tests to show a positive reaction.

Those who at some time in their lives have had malaria, scarlet fever, infectious mononucleosis, lupus erythematosus (and many other diseases) are apt to show false-positive for syphilis.

See a dermatologist or hematologist for a more thorough blood study. You will be given tests to rule out the false diagnosis of syphilis. Don't panic. Your case is not unusual.

DEAR ABBY: What does one do in an air-conditioned office when someone says: 'It's a little chilly — please turn down the air conditioner." (He turns it down.) Then a while later, someone else says, "Will you kindly turn up the air conditioner? It's too warm in here."

There are several people in this office and you can't please everybody. — COLD SHOULDERS IN VA.

DEAR COLD: Compromise and try to strike a happy medium, bearing in mind that no matter what you do, somebody is going to complain.

DEAR ABBY: I cannot understand why the grandparents of James Conklin-Campbell are so opposed to hyphenated names. Ancestors on both sides of my family tree have been adding their wives' maiden names to their children's surnames for generations and there has never been any confusion. — LARRY NALON-LYNAM-FARRELL-CALLAHAN-PUETZ-DESSTER-VON ROY-DE GROOT

Mortgage maze

Financial expert Jane Bryant Quinn explains how to understand the new "variable-rate" and "negotiable-rate" mortgages, in the current issue of "Woman's Day."

Quinn notes that the variable type rise and fall with general interst rates, whereas the negotiable type have a fixed rate for a certain period, and then are re-negotiated at prevailing rates.

Either of these rates could be cheaper than the standard "fixed rate" mortgages we've all been accustomed to paying. So, if you're in the house market, it might be a good idea to bone up on this new terminology.

Women in history

NEW YORK — A recent survey of history textbooks, conducted by The Feminist Press, in New York, shows that women's historical accomplishments are not being treated the way men's are, says a recent issue of "Seventeen."

Traditionally, history texts have ignored women and concentrated on men. A 1974 survey by the group found that on the average, out of each 500 to 800 textbook pages, only one page was devoted to women. When women were mentioned, they were stereotyped and, in general, treated lightly.

On the bright side, about one quarter of the new textbooks' illustrations depict women. The language used also shows considerably less bias, the survey's update says. No longer do you read exclusively about how "men" headed west and how "man-made" improvements raised the standard of living.

Camp traditions

Leap Frog—it's a universally popular game

Gayle Green samples ice cream which she made

Some good traditions just never end—such as Girl Scout Day Camp which ends a week of activities today at the Scout Program Center, 901 W. Dengar.

It may be the "same old stuff," but these traditions have survived because they're popular. There was lots to choose from in fun, games and projects, including sculpture, burlap crafts, puppets and cooking. And plenty of ice cream available to cool off in the hot sun

The Scouts (and any other youngster who wanted in on the fun) didn't forget their patriotism, either, arriving at 8:55 a.m. sharp each daily for the raising of the flag.

Today was to be just as full as any other, with a visit from an architect and a cartoonist, a demonstration by the Girl Scout Vaulting Team, and a chance to share a week of storing up memories.

It was also picture day, and each unit posed in t-shirts with a design on which they voted on earlier in the week.

At 1:15 p.m., they started winding down with clean up time. At 2:15, a moving ceremony, the "Silent Flag," was held and at 2:30 p.m. they slowly departed. Until next year.

Fireflies smart

Fireflies are pretty smart. They often speak in a visual Morse Code, a pattern of flashes that differs by species and by sex. A male flies around flashing his message and looks toward the ground until he spots a correctly-coded female response for mating, according to National Geographic.

Before research with fireflies can commence, somebody has to go out and catch the fireflies. The Sigma Firefly Scientists Club, a part of Sigma Chemical Co. in St. Louis, collected 3.2 million fireflies in 1980. The firm pays $1 a hundred with bonuses for big catches. The collectors use nets to make their catch.

Largest gallery

The world's largest art gallery is the Winter Palace and the neighboring Hermitage in Leningrad, U.S.S.R. It is necessary to walk 15 miles to visit each of the 322 galleries, which house nearly 3 million works of art and archeological remains.

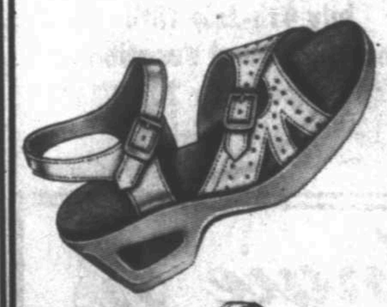

Scientist says weed can help gas shortage

Dr. Melvin Calvin, who won a Nobel Prize for his photosynthesis research, established that a common California weed could help the gas shortage. He said if the gopher plant shrub (Euphorbia lathyris) was farmed, the latex the plant yields could be refined into crude oil and gasoline. Refining would cost $30 a barrel, a price considered competitive recently.

Mona Lisa considered most valuable painting

The Mona Lisa, completed by Leonardo da Vinci in 1503, is considered the most valuable painting in the world. Legend says its subject was Mona Lisa Gheradini, whose husband disliked the painting and refused to pay for it, but it is more commonly believed that it portrays the Duchess of Milan. However, it has never been definitely established just exactly who the model was.

Vegetable processing methods

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

The pressure canner method is necessary for processing all non-acid vegetables in order to prevent possible spoilage and/or botulisum, according to Sharon Hillis, county extension agent.

She spoke to a group attending last week's food preservation seminar at Lee High School.

"Botulisum cannot be detected except in extreme cases, as the flavor, texture and odor are not necessarily affected," she said.

She advised the class not to taste vegetables from canned goods bought at the supermarket until the food has been heated.

"Even grocery-bought vegetables can be dangerous," she said. She cited a recent example in which she had bought a can of green beans.

"At first glance, there was no evidence of any problem," she said. "The juice was clear and everything looked o.k. But when I opened the can, the juice squirted up higher than normal.

"I then looked for a bulge in the can, and finally found a slight bulge at the bottom. Though the botulism was in its early stages, it was just as deadly."

Because she was determined to find the source of the problem, she examined the can carefully and, after tearing off the label, finally found a tiny hole at the side of the can where it had been improperly manufactured.

"Before tasting, bring both bought and home canned, low acid vegetables to a rolling boil; then cover and boil at least 10 minutes," she advised.

Here are other points she discussed for processing vegetables:

Pressure saucepans of adequate size and provided with an indicator or gauge, operating accurately at 10 pounds pressure, may be used for canning small amounts of vegetables.

PRESSURE CANNER

Three types of gauges are used on pressure canners—geared, gearless and weighted. The geared gauge may be repaired or adjusted when it is slightly out of order. It is easier to read than the gearless gauge which does not have markings to indicate each pound of pressure. Petacocks and safety valves control the escape of air or steam from a pressure canner.

KEEP PRESSURE CANNER IN SAFE WORKING ORDER

● Take off removable petcocks and safety valves and wash and dry thoroughly after each use. Occasionally soak these parts in vinegar to remove any corrosion. Follow manufacturer's direction for weighted gauges.
● Use toothpick, pipe cleaner or string to clean openings in lid of the canner. Clean ball and socket with silver polish.
● Wash kettle or bottom part of pressure canner thoroughly after each use. Use of a fine steel and soap as a cleaner except for enamel covered canners.
● Do not immerse lid in water. This may damage the dial gauge. Wipe with soapy cloth and then dry.
● To remove odors and stains, use one of the following mixtures and process at 5 pounds pressure for 5 minutes.

1. Juice of 1 lemon and 2 quarts of water.
2. Two tablespoons of vinegar and 2 quarts of water.
3. Handful of Irish potato peelings and 2 quarts of water.

● If the lid of a pressure canner that seals metal to metal is difficult to remove or steam escapes, grease the closing surfaces with saltfree fat such as vegetable oil.
● If the canner lid is equipped with a rubber gasket, keep lid and gasket clean and free from grease. If gasket leaks steam, turn gasket over, stretch gently and replace. If rubber has hardened, replace with a new gasket.
● Never add cold water to a hot canner. Guard against sudden cooling that might cause it to warp or crack.
● Store a clean, dry canner with crumpled newspaper inside to absorb moisture and odors. Wrap cover in paper and invert it on top of canner.
● Check the dial gauge on the pressure canner at least once each year ano more often if canner is used frequently or if lid is dropped or receives a hard knock. If the gauge is not registering correctly, food might be either underprocessed or overprocessed. A weighted gauge needs only to be cleaned thoroughly.
● When dial gauge has to be replaced, coat threads with an oil or graphite base plumbers paste to stop leaks.

SAFETY POINTERS WITH PRESSURE CANNER

● Never release steam suddenly
● Never remove the lid until steam has been released or until the pressure gauge registers zero.
● When removing the canner lid, lift the back side of the lid, thus permitting the heat to escape away from the face and arms.

HOW TO CAN VEGETABLES

Preliminary Steps:
Use either the hot pack, pack raw and steam or the one-step, cold pack method when canning vegetables.

Wash all jars and cans in hot, soapy water and rinse well. Jars and cans need not be sterilized when canning in the pressure canner.

Prepare and pack the vegetables according to instructions given for each.

PROCESSING IN A PRESSURE CANNER

1. Wipe off the sealing surface of containers. Close accordng to the type of lid being used.

2. Place the closed containers of hot food in the canner, which contains 1 1/2 to 2 inches of boiling water. If two layers are put in, stagger the second layer. Use a rack between layers of glass jars.

3. Place the lid on the canner and fasten securely. If the lid is fastened by clamps, tighten opposite clamps moderately at first. Then go back over the whole set to tighten each pair as much as possible (with fingers only).

4. Leave the petcock or vent tube open until the steam escapes steadily for 10 minutes so that no air will remain in the canner. Close the petcock or put on weighted gauge. Keep presure constant by regulating heat under canner.

5. Count processing time as soon as the pressure reaches 10 pounds or the adjusted pressure.

6. Keep a uniform pressure by adjusting the heat or by moving the canner carefully.

7. At the end of the processing time, remove the canner from the heat.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Number system pays off

DEAR HELOISE:
I number all containers I store leftovers in, using a permanent marking pen.

I fasten a lined sheet of paper to the side of my refrigerator with magnets. As leftovers are stored, I list the item by number on the sheet. The number on the lid coincides with the number on the attached list.

For instance, if the lid is numbered 1 and contains green beans, then the line numbered 1 has green beans written next to it.

Just be sure to check the list before planning the next meal. You'll find very few leftovers will be thrown out. — Mrs. Roberta J. Huff

FENCE PAINTIN'
Dear Heloise: You can easily paint a woven wire fence or picket fence with a paint roller.

Buy a deep pile lamb's wool cover sold for this purpose.

Just use as if painting a wall. — Ann Ruschak

+ + +

Perhaps if Tom Sawyer had had such a contraption, he wouldn't have been so anxious to trick his friends into doing his work for him. — Heloise

REFRIGERATOR ODOR
Dear Heloise: When I went on a two-month vacation, I left food in my refrigerator-freezer and turned the thermostat to low.

Instead of staying low, it went off! Well, the smell got so rank in the apartment that neighbors called a friend of mine to investigate. She discovered spoiled turkey, fish, vegetables and fruit.

She tried charcoal, washing with soda, vanilla, and everything else that was suggested. When I returned home, the smell was still unbearable.

Every appliance dealer I called told me my only recourse was to discard the refrigerator and purchase another one.

Finally some dear soul suggested putting fresh ground coffee on the shelves of the freezer and refrigerator.

I wrapped the coffee granules in cheesecloth and put some on each shelf. After two or three days the odor was gone and my appliance was like new again.

A miracle! — Mrs. Jacob DeBruin

+ + +

Perseverance paid off! Glad coffee was the answer to your problem. Now let's sit down and drink a cup. — Hugs, Heloise

A SOCK PARTY
Dear Heloise: As the mother of five, this has helped me a lot!

Every so often we empty all the sock drawers into a large pile. Then all the kids and a few of their friends have a sock party. They're paid two cents a matched pair with a popcorn treat afterwards.

It's amazing how many socks suddenly reunite, and my sock bill has decreased immensely. — Mary Germuth

+ + +

I've heard of sox hops, but a sock party seems to be a sign of the times.

Thanks for showing us another way of solving the missing sock syndrome as well as inflation. — Heloise

THE NOSE KNOWS
Dear Heloise: When my fisherman husband brings home a mess of fish to clean, we put the fish trash in a plastic bag, tie it securely with a twistie, properly mark the bag, and put it into the freezer.

On garbage pickup day, we put it out in the can. No smell, no curious animals, and certainly no trouble.

Just wish we had more time to fish... — L. Messick

Have any fishy ideas for fishermen? Send them along to Heloise care of this newspaper. She can't answer your letter personally but she's always fishing around in her mail looking for great tips to use in her column.

Drug film reveals horror of West Germany's youth problem

By HARRY TRIMBORN
The Los Angeles Times

BONN, West Germany — A 14-year-old girl with large, sad eyes shoots a massive dose of heroin into her arm and goes into a narcotic stupor as she sinks to the floor of the women's restroom in a West Berlin subway station.

The scene shifts to a small West German town surrounded by fields of snow glistening in the sunlight.

"This has been my story," the girl's soft voice is heard off-camera. "I was taken to my grandmother's house here and I found the courage to break the addiction. I wish everybody could find the courage."

THE SCENES are from a controversial film about one of West Germany's major social problems, teen-age drug use.

Proportionately, there is more drug addiction in West Germany than in the United States. Last year, 494 persons, some as young as 14, died of drug overdoses. This was a drop of 121 from the year before but government statistics show that the number of addicts, many of them youngsters, rose to 50,000 in 1980, up from 47,000 the year before.

MILLIONS have seen the film, "We Children of the 200 Station: The Life of Christine F.," which traces the true story of a teen-age girl as she becomes a drug addict.

The film opened here in late March to large audiences, and more have read the best-selling book on which it is based. Christine's story first appeared as a serial in Stern, a weekly general interest magazine.

Some people say that the film's scenes of the agonies of drug addiction and its portrayal of child prostitution, both male and female, to support the habit serve as a powerful deterrent to drug use.

HORST RICHTER, director of the Giessen University psychiatric clinic, maintains that the book and film dramatize a serious problem that West Germans have been reluctant to confront. Other specialists maintain that Christine's experiences repel most youngsters and that the book and film serve to "demystify drugs."

However, critics maintain that the film and book envelop Christine and her fellow addicts in an aura of glamour. There is an overemphasis, they say, on love scenes and sex involving Christine and her boyfriend, Detlef. This gives the film a tragic Romeo-Juliet quality that impressionable young people might find attractive, they charge.

THE YOUNG addicts are pictured as sensitive, generous and eager to help one another in satisfying their addiction. This created an impression of comradeship that, critics say, is not borne out by the facts. Addicts, they maintain, will go to any lengths to satisfy their craving.

"Junkies usually are only concerned with getting their own stuff, even if it means stealing from others," Heinrich Breuer, a drug therapist in Cologne said.

ULRICH EDEL, the film's director, fueled the feeling that the picture is basically a commercial venture, critics say, when he commented not long ago that "Christine is now a star of the young."

The film also dwells at some length on another star, singer-actor David Bowie, who is portrayed as Christine's idol.

Bowie is shown in a live performance, attend by worsipful and screaming teen-agers, in a West Berlin disco and the film makes a clear link between drug addition and the disco scene.

The subway station of the film's title is near the heart of West Berlin and the zoo, once considered the finest in the world. The station has become a favored hangout for drug addicts and pushers, alcoholics, pimps and prostitutes.

ADULTS RARELY intrude in the film. Christine's mother, who is separated from her father, is shown only in passing, even when she discovers her child's addiction. Critics say that the film shows none of the great distress that parents feel upon making such a discovery.

Christine and Detlef are shown in the agony of withdrawal, she in a T-shirt and bikini shorts that amply reveal her lithe young figure. Their effort to quit fails and the two young lovers sink deeper into addiction — until the final scene and Christine's redemption.

At film's end, Detlef is still an addict. Perhaps, some critics think, his fate will provide material for a sequel.

Lives reflected in TV commercials

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — There's some pretty good evidence — subjective though it may be — that TV commercials reflect life in America at least as closely as the programs they interrupt and surround.

"It's amazing to see how clearly our lives, between 1948 and now, are mirrored in television advertising," says Spike Jones Jr., who spent four months last year with his partner, Alan Burnett, looking at nearly 6,000 commercials.

The fruit of their work is "We'll Be Right Back," a 90-minute retrospective on the TV spot produced for Showtime, the pay-cable network. The program, which includes about 200 commercials in whole or in part, will be offered subscribers Monday evening and again June 26, June 28 and July 1.

"When we started," Jones says, "our purpose was to take more of a 'That's Entertainment' look than an in-depth survey of TV advertising. We were concerned with production values, entertainment aspects, all of the various fun things that commercials have to offer."

"We'll Be Right Back" is, indeed, fascinating entertainment, recalling as it does folk heroes of the past like "Speedy Alka Seltzer" and "The Marlboro Man," as well as largely forgotten methods of reaching the consuming public like product demonstration.

Though a 30-second spot may cost as much to produce as a half-hour TV show, mere entertainment — often the standard for the longer program — is not enough.

"I don't think a commercial becomes an art form until it solves some marketing problem," says Stan Freberg, the humorist and commercial-maker extraordinaire.

Freberg appears frequently throughout "We'll Be Right Back" to comment on matters as crucial to the TV ad as style and content. Avery Schreiber, himself no stranger to the TV commercial, and Christina Ferrare, are hosts for the show.

Jones, son of the famous bandleader, says he and Burnett began their search with the people responsible for the Clio awards for TV spots, and listed from their considerable archives the commercials they wanted to include by category — cars, for instance, or special effects, or product demonstration.

"Most of the advertisers we approached were responsive, and helpful in providing the commercials we were after," he says. "Oddly enough, a lot of them don't exist. They never felt two idiots would come calling, looking for a commercial they used in 1955."

Some advertisers refused to participate, and securing rights to reproduce some of the spots was, on occasion, even more difficult.

"Music clearance was particularly troublesome," Jones says. "In some cases, it would have meant paying every musician who participated in a spot.

"For that reason, we had to leave out some of the most wonderful commercial music ever written — Dr. Pepper, McDonalds, 7-Up."

The program includes selected foreign commercials as well.

It's at least mildly ironic that Showtime, which is viewer-rather than advertiser-supported, would examine the history of the TV spot.

"These people pay not to see you-know-what," Schreiber says at the start of the show.

Abstract expressionist's works looking for a place to hang

WESTMINSTER, Md. (AP) — A collection of paintings estimated to be worth as much as $75 million is looking for a home.

The 2,000 works by prominent abstract expressionist Clyfford Still, who died a year ago, have been kept at his secluded farm near here — but a provision of the artist's will seeks a museum to hold them.

The will stipulates that the paintings should go to any city that will build such a museum. It states that they should not be "sold, given or exchanged" and must be kept "in a place exclusively assigned to them in perpetuity for exhibition and study."

At least one city, Baltimore, is giving the offer some consideration. An aide to Mayor William Donald Schaefer said the city is recruiting sponsors for a Still museum.

According to the artist's widow, Patricia Alice Still, most of the 750 canvasses and 1,250 pastels have never been exhibited or photographed for publication.

Single paintings by Still, regarded by critics as a leader of the school of abstract expressionism, have recently sold for as much as $165,000, according to the auction firm Sotheby Parke Bernet Inc.

Art experts have said they do not know the value of the paintings in Still's private collection because none of them has been sold. But if each painting were valued at $100,000, the entire collection would be worth $75 million.

In New York, Metropolitan Museum spokesman Jack Frizelle said the Met couldn't do what Still is asking for anyone, including Rembrandt or Picasso. "We just don't operate that way. We have wings to accommodate private collections which include many artists but none for a single artist."

Frizelle said he doubts any major American museum or city would build a facility to house exclusively the works of a single painter.

He said Still was known as an eccentric recluse who held closely to his paintings and that his will reflects this. It would be much more reasonable to parcel out the finer paintings to museums who are interested, he said.

"No one would want 2,000 of these paintings and pastels in any one place. It would be too much," he said.

Frizelle said the $75 million estimate on the value of the Still paintings is "insane."

Movie star buried

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Actress Lola Lane, who died at the age of 75 after a long fight with inflammation of the arteries, has been buried in Calvary Cemetery.

The former movie star, who was buried Wednesday, died Monday at her Santa Barbara home, leaving Priscilla Lane as the only survivor of the actress Lane sisters.

Lola Lane was the first of the sisters to become famous in Hollywood. Rosemary Lane died in 1974, and a fourth sister Leota, a singer, died in 1963. Another sister, Martha, who did not choose a show business career, also preceeded Lola in death.

Born Dorothy Mulligan, the eldest daughter of an Indianola, Iowa, dentist, Lola sang professionally with her sister Leota in their home state. She wrote to songwriter Gus Edwards asking for an audition, and he launched her on a career as a follies performer and actress with the name Lola Lane.

The first of her 37 films was "Speakeasy" in 1929. She starred in a series of films with her sisters from 1938 to 1940.

She was married five times, to actor Lew Ayres, director Alexander Hall, yacht broker Henry Dunham, Roland West, and the man to whom she was married at her death, Robert Hanlon, a retired aircraft executive.

In addition to her husband and sister Priscilla, she is survived by four nieces and a nephew. A convert to Catholicism, she was honored by Cardinal Timothy Manning with a Pope Pius X medal in 1967 for her work with religious training for the retarded.

Bahais claim Iranians plan to exterminate members of faith

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The national assembly of members of the Bahai faith in Cyprus appealed to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim Thursday "to investigate a systematic plan to exterminate the Bahais in Iran."

The appeal was cabled to Waldheim in the wake of the execution of seven more Bahais in Iran earlier in the week, said a press statement by the Cyprus Bahai assembly.

The statement said the latest executions have raised to 40 the total of Bahais sent before firing squads by Iran's Islamic revolutionary courts since the overthrow of the monarchy.

"But many others have been assassinated and scores are in jail, facing the possibility of summary execution at any time," the statement added.

It went on to charge that "individuals have been dragged into the streets by mobs incited by local mullahs (Moslem priests) and killed when they refused to deny their faith.

"Homes have been burned, businesses destroyed and now their holiest shrine in Iran, in Shiraz, has been pulled down and official plans for a new road over the site have been initiated."

The statement added that earlier attempts to justify such actions on various false charges "have now given way to charges including membership of the Bahai faith."

The Bahais are a non-Moslem faith founded in Iran in the last century. It preaches universal brotherhood. Its headquarters are in Wilmette, Ill., and the religion's world center is in Haifa, Israel, where the founder of the sect, Bahaullah, died.

There are about 300,000 Bahais in Iran. The revolutionary government has charged many of those executed with being Israeli agents, presumably because Bahai funds are routed through the world center in Haifa.

Indians attack hotel

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Hotel guests smoking marijuana and cavorting naked on a Caribbean island's beaches so scandalized the local Indians that they attacked the American who had run the hotel for 14 years, a Justice Ministry source said.

Hotelman Thomas Moody, 52, of Pittsburgh, Pa., said 20 Cuna Indians attacked his hotel on San Blas Island, killed two National Guardsmen, shot him, doused him with gasoline and tied him to a tree.

Apparently none of the hotel's guests were hurt.

Moody was hospitalized in Panama City. Justice Minister Jorge Ritter said his account was "exaggerated" and Moody's license to operate the hotel would be revoked.

A spokesman for the Justice Ministry who asked not to be identified said most of the hotel guests were Americans "who smoked marijuana and walked naked on the beaches," and this "offended the moral standards of the Indians."

The national guard, Panama's army, said one guardsman was killed on the island Sunday while investigating Moody's report.

In the past year the Cuna tribe, which numbers about 20,000 in Panama, has asked to be sole proprietors of Panamanian tourist ventures in the Caribbean, the government said.

Air fares high in Europe

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Tourists looking for lower air fares within Europe this summer are going to be disappointed.

The cost of flying from city to city will remain sky high despite new court suits by low-fare advocates and gaudy advertisements of travel "deals" by major airlines.

"Airline fares within Europe are higher per-mile than ever and they're going to get higher," says Jean Aerts, a director of one of Belgium's largest travel agencies.

Here's an illustration: Sabena of Belgium and Alitalia of Italy, the only carriers permitted to fly regularly scheduled flights from Brussels to Rome, offered a rock-bottom fare of $270 this spring on a roundtrip ticket.

The fare, which carries a severe restriction against refund and must be paid at the time of reservation, is about 5 percent higher than the lowest fare offered last year. On July 1 it will go up an additional 5 percent.

THE MAN WHO REFUSED TO STAY DEAD!

Some Jews arrived in Lystra from Antioch and Iconium and turned the crowds into a murderous mob that stoned Paul and dragged him out of the city, apparently dead!

But as the believers stood around him, he got up and went back into the city! The next day he left with Barnabas for Derbe. After preaching the Good News there and making many disciples, they returned again to Lystra, Iconium and Antioch, where they helped the believers to grow in love for God and each other. They encouraged them to continue in the faith in spite of all the persecution, reminding them that they must enter into the Kingdom of God through many tribulations.

Paul and Barnabas also appointed elders in every church and prayed for them with fasting, turning them over to the care of the Lord in whom they trusted.

Then they traveled back through Pisidia to Pamphylia, preached again in Perga, and went on to Attalia. Finally they returned by ship to Antioch, where their journey had begun, and where they had been committed to God for the work now completed.

Upon arrival they called together the believers and reported on their trip, telling how God had opened the door of faith to the Gentiles too. And they stayed there with the believers at Antioch for a long while.

Broadcaster switches from network to local

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Marash left a lofty perch in network TV two months ago to return to local news and the promise of what he calls "the best little corner in broadcast journalism."

"My professional situation has never been remotely as good as it is now," says Marash, once again a correspondent and anchorman at New York's WCBS-TV after three years with ABC News, primarily as an investigative reporter for the network's "20-20" newsmagazine.

It was an extraordinary switch, from network to local news, apparently initiated by Marash himself, though there are signs ABC was not entirely satisfied with the arrangement either.

"I REALLY didn't like the life that went with being a roving correspondent," Marash says, "and it had begun to affect the kind of work I was doing."

Investigative reporting, he says, takes time, and ABC was more inclined toward quantity.

"What they want to do, and what '60 Minutes' has done to a fare-thee-well, is industrialize journalism. Roone would say to me," Marash recall of his boss at ABC News, Roone Arledge, "'Why do you want to go out and do the research yourself? Why do you have to be there every time the camera rolls?'

"In retrospect," he says, "I am astonished at the number of really pride-inducing stories I was able to do there. For all of the combat that was entered into, I am personally in their debt at '20-20.' And I feel I left ABC as I did Channel 2 the time before with no bridges burning.

"BUT THERE WERE problems," he says, "that I felt could be solved only by taking a job that would combine anchoring and investigative reporting, that would guarantee me the right kind of exposure — at a controlled pace and with the proper staff.

"Channel 2 has basically furnished me with that kind of staff, and that kind of platform," he says.

If the people at WCBS were happy to get Marash back, the local critics were ecstatic. "Dave Marash is the Dave Winfield of local TV journalism, a superstar of the first magnitude," wrote Newsday's Marvin Kitman.

Marash reportedly will make more than twice the $160,000-a-year he was paid at ABC, co-anchoring WCBS' "Eleven O'Clock Update" with Rolland Smith and providing at least nine documentary-style reports each year. The first, on political repression on the Caribbean island of Grenada, was broadcast May 16.

"WITHIN 72 hours of the decision to do the report on Grenada," he says, "the show was sold out, and eventually, it made money.

"I think the sales department is convinced," he says, "that Dave Marash on the air can make money. That's going to allow me to pursue stories more agressively within a wider spectrum of ideas.

"We're not going to ignore our local responsibility," he says of the mandate. "Though I would love to go to Afghanistan, I'm not going to commit the sin of Afghanistanism. The nice thing about working in New York is it offers a local perspective to almost everything in the world."

The film on Grenada, for instance, focused on the imprisonment there of a Brooklyn man, Antonio Clement Langdon.

Marash, with a degree in English literature from Williams College, began his professional career at a radio station in New Brunswick, N.J., while a graduate student at Rutgers University.

HE WORKED for WPIX-TV and radio stations WNEW, WINS and WCBS, all in New York City, before taking a job as the 11 o'clock sports man at Channel 2 in December 1972.

American ballerina ties for gold medal

By KEVIN KLOSE
The Washington Post

MOSCOW — American ballerina Amanda McKerrow, a 17-year-old with a smooth and lyrical style, tied for the first prize gold medal in the women's junior division at the fourth Moscow International Ballet Competition early Thursday.

McKerrow, a member of the Washington Ballet for the past year who has dreamed since childhood of dancing at the fabled Bolshoi, was the only one of the 13 Americans who entered the competition to make it to the finals. Awakened in her hotel room early Thursday morning with news of her victory, she reacted with delight and astonishment. "I can't believe it!" McKerrow had gone back to her hotel room before the winners were announced. Mary Day, the artistic director for the Washington Ballet who accompanied her to Moscow, called and said "Honey, we hit the jackpot!"

The competition is held every four years and is considered one of the two most prestigious in the world, along with the competition in Varna, Bulgaria. It is thought to be the equivalent of music's Tchaikovsky competition.

She shares her first prize with a Soviet ballerina, Natalia Arkhipova. The overall top prize for the entire competition, the junior and senior, men's and women's divisions, went to a young Soviet male dancer, Irek Mukhamedov.

McKerrow is pale and fragile looking, although the fragility is deceptive; behind it all, at odds with the giddiness more often found in someone her age, is an iron-willed discipline and an impressive store of self-confidence. She has known since she was 12 that she wanted to be a dancer. "I knew I wouldn't be happy doing anything else," she said in an interview earlier this year. "I'm basically kind of a shy person, but when I dance, I don't feel that way at all. I know some people have the kind of jobs that they start at 9 and leave behind them at 5, but I could never do that. I think about dancing all the time."

McKerrow, who lives with her parents in Rockville, Md., won her gold on the strength of flowing performances from passages from the Tchaikovsky classic, "Sleeping Beauty," and the more modern "Les Sylphides." She easily moved through the first round of competition doing the Aurora pas de deux from "Sleeping Beauty" with her Washington Ballet Company partner, Simon Dow, 25, and stunned the Bolshoi audience last week with a flawless and inspired performance of the "Chopiniana" from "Les Sylphides." Her performance drew eight curtain calls from one of the world's most experienced and partisan audiences. Dow was awarded the prize for partnership.

But McKerrow's fortunes were in doubt to the very last moment early Thursday when the 33-judge panel convened in the Beethoven Hall of the Bolshoi to announce its verdict on the competition, in which 126 dancers from 23 countries participated. McKerrow's final-round performance of the Bluebird pas de deux from the third act of "Sleeping Beauty" had been more subdued than her earlier performances.

Thursday morning, she said of that appearance, her debut in the role, "I was really tired when I danced yesterday. I thought everything went well, but I was quite tired." That was why she had gone to bed instead of waiting up into today to learn the jury's verdict.

Before the judges had convened, the official Tass news agency described McKerrow's dancing as marked by "spirituality, lyricism, and musicality." She is the first American-trained ballerina in many years to place so high in a major international competition, according to Day, her coach and mentor. Day, founder of the Washington company, said she decided early last spring to bring McKerrow to the Moscow competition because she felt the dancer "had something very special to be seen."

'A Taste of Honey' revived on Broadway

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "A Taste of Honey," which ran on Broadway in 1960, opened Wednesday night with Amanda Plummer doing a radiant job of acting in a role that doesn't even give her a chance to radiate.

The play is in the mid-size Century Theater on Broadway, moving there from a successful engagement off-Broadway at the Roundabout Theater.

Miss Plummer is the daughter of Christopher Plummer, who was in the audience, and Tammy Grimes, the latter now in "42nd Street." She is, at the age of 24 and looking about 15 in this part, a very accomplished actress. She and Valerie French, who plays her mother, Helen, do the best acting in the five-character play.

They live in a London slum and their relationship is bickering and yelling. Helen admits that when she has gone off for weeks with men, leaving her daughter alone, she never worried or thought about her. This relationship has scarred Jo somewhat; she tells a homosexual boy who moves in to take care of her that when she used to try to take her mother's hand, her mother would pull away. That has kept her from reaching out for or expecting much affection.

But it hasn't scarred either of them deep down. When the mother leaves to get married, Jo tells her good luck and says it again to the closed door. The mother cares about Jo, too, when she thinks of her. Miss French dresses tacky-sexy for her part, but has such personal style she doesn't quite look tacky enough.

Miss Plummer has a technique of speaking in a very soft voice when she says something that is especially meaningful to her. She makes Jo unusually vulnerable by in that way telegraphing to other characters what ways she wants help or could be hurt.

Carter planning visit to China

Carter

ATLANTA (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter extended diplomatic relations to China in 1978 and later pledged to visit the country and meet with its leaders. But only now, after he's left office, is Carter finally making plans for the trip.

Carter's office said Thursday the former president and his wife, Rosalynn, will visit China from Aug. 24 through Sept. 3 and visit Japan from Sept. 3 through Sept. 8.

Carter is expected to hold a series of meeting with political and government officials in both countries. Before he goes, he'll be briefed by State Department officials, a courtesy granted to all former presidents who travel abroad.

Bradshaw

Silverman

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — An RCA spokesman says there is "absolutely no truth" to a report by TV Guide that incoming RCA chairman Thornton Bradshaw will dismiss Fred Silverman as president of NBC.

NBC has been in third place in the network ratings for several seasons.

TV Guide said Thursday it will report in its next issue, dated July 4, that dismissing Silverman will be one of Bradshaw's first acts after he takes office July 1 as chairman of NBC's parent company.

"Silverman's gone. He'll never come back as NBC president," the magazine quoted an unidentified "highly placed network source" as saying.

"We categorically deny it," said RCA spokesman Leslie Slote. "There is absolutely no truth to it."

TV Guide said in a statement that Silverman is vacationing in Hawaii and is expected back July 6. Silverman's contract, which expires December 1982, reportedly provides for a $1 million annual salary.

●

NEW YORK (AP) — Max Robinson, who came under fire when he reportedly accused ABC News of racism during a speech, will continue as the Chicago-based national anchor for ABC's "World News Tonight" under terms of a new contract, officials say.

ABC announced Thursday Robinson has signed a multi-year contract with the network for an undisclosed salary.

Several days after the speech, he issued a statement saying his speech had focused on "what I believe is a very serious problem in our society — the lack of communications between black and white America, and the resulting distortion in the way we see each other."

Are you right for the role?

Brooke Shields 'wasn't acting' in anti-smoking ads

Brooke Shields

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unlike her movie portrayals of a teen-age prostitute and a shipwrecked adolescent discovering sex, Brooke Shields says she wasn't acting when she filmed government-sponsored anti-smoking commercials.

Miss Shields defended her role Thursday in the anti-smoking campaign, originally sponsored but later canceled by the Department of Health and Human Services. But one congressman found her movie roles were of as much interest.

"There is a very high incidence of teen-age sexual activity and a high incidence of venereal disease," Rep. Don Ritter, R-Pa., told the 16-year-old actress. "These are problems faced by HHS. Films you have made conceivably have put you in a position as a sex symbol."

Ritter asked Miss Shields if a majority of teen-agers might regard her as a role model in areas other than smoking.

"Unlike roles where I portray others under the instruction of directors, doing the smoking commercials was not really portraying a role," she replied. "That was me saying it. I don't smoke and I never have except once when I had one cigarette when I was 9. I hated it."

Miss Shields testified at a hearing by the House Energy and Commerce Committee's subcommittee on oversight and investigations into a decision by the government to cancel the $68,000 anti-smoking campaign featuring Miss Shields.

The American Lung Association has charged that the Health and Human Services Department dropped the ads in response to pressure from the tobacco industry — a charge denied by HHS Secretary Richard Schweiker.

No government offiial appeaed at the heaings. But Davd Newhall III, the department's chief of staff, said in a letter to the subcommittee that the ads were canceled because they "used a slick, Hollywood-oriented fashion merchandizing concept to deal with a serious public health problem."

Miss Shields, better known for her appearances on behalf of jeans and hair products, is featured in the anti-smoking campaign expressing her distaste for the way cigarette smoke makes her hair smell and her disappointment with boys who smoke.

"I feel they would be effective because teen-agers look up to me." she told the subcommittee. "I am a teen-ager myself, and not only can I relate to other teen-agers, but I think they can relate to me."

After her testimony, a group of youngsters with autograph pads and pencils surged to the front of the hearing room. Rep. John Dingell, D-Mish., banged his gavel and demanded that they return to their seats.

Despite the government's decision to drop the campaign, the public soon may see Miss Shields telling them smoking is not "cool" anyway. Newell said the department will make the TV spots and posters available to the lung association "to prevent any waste of taxpayer money."

...And Randall withdraws his offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Tony Randall withdrew an offer to make public service announcements for the American Association of Blood Banks after the group asked about his portrayal of a homosexual, Randall's agent says.

Told in a telephone conversation that Randall planned to play a homosexual in a television show, an association official exclaimed, "but we don't even take blood from homosexuals!" John Springer, Randall's agent, said Thursday.

Springer said the member of his staff who spoke with the association official explained, "Tony Randall isn't giving blood. He is doing a free ad spot at your request to entice other donors. On the other hand, he isn't homosexual."

Lori Rose, the spokeswoman who spoke with Springer's office, denied she made the remark about not taking blood from homosexuals.

She said neither the Washington-based blood bank association nor its 2,400 institutional members have a policy against accepting blood from homosexuals. Potential donors are not asked about their sexual practices or preferences, she said.

"They are asked whether they had hepatitis," she said, adding that studies have found a higher rate of that disease among homosexuals.

Ms. Rose said she called Springer's office last week and spoke to Pat Story, a staff member. Ms. Rose said she inquired about Randall's plans to play a homosexual because "I'd heard conflicting reports about it, and I wanted to be in a position to respond to questions about it."

She said homosexuality is a "controversial issue" and she wanted to be informed about Randall's plans if he was going to be making ads for the association.

"Frankly, we're astounded by his (Randall's) reaction," said Gilbert Clark, the association's director of governmental relations. "They (Randall's agency) took it the wrong way. Obviously there's some sensitivity on his (Randall's) part."

An NBC spokesman who asked not 5o be identified in accordance with company policy said Thursday that Randall stars in a two-hour, made-for-TV movie that has a "very passing mention" that the character is a homosexual. The movie hasn't been aired yet.

The spokesman said Randall also is to star in a television series based on the movie, but he said the show would not be about a homosexual.

The comedy series, to be called "Love Sidney," is about a single man who is living with a woman and her young child. It is scheduled for broadcast in the fall but isn't in production yet because of the writers' strike, the spokesman said.

"It (the series) is not identified as being about a homosexual." he said.

Playboy won't get interview

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter may have granted an interview to Playboy magazine, but the folks at the Interior Department won't even tell that publication the time of day.

Douglas Baldwin, chief of public affairs at the agency, says he considers such magazines "skin books," not legitimate news publications.

The issue came up last Friday when A. Craig Copetas, a freelance writer working for Playboy, showed up for an interview with Kenneth Smith, assistant secretary for Indian Affairs.

Copetas says he was told by Carl Shaw, the public affairs assistant who had set up the interview, that Baldwin canceled the session because Interior Secretary James Watt did not want "his people talking to representatives of godless publications."

Shaw and Baldwin both deny that the term "godless publications" was ever used. Baldwin says religion had nothing to do with his action, which he says he took without consulting Watt.

Firm objects to monkeying with 'Tarzan'

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge who found that High Society magazine "besmirched, tarnished and debased" the image of Tarzan and Jane, has ordered the magazine's July issue recalled from distribution.

U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack issued his ruling Thursday as a preliminary move in a $3 million damage suit brought against High Society by Edgar Rice Burroughs Inc. of Tarzana, Calif.

The firm, named for the author of the Tarzan novels on which a long series of movies was based, owns trademark rights to the characters and claims it licenses their use only to those who will portray Tarzan and Jane as persons of high moral character.

Judge Pollack said High Society had no authorization to use the characters, and its 10-page article, "Monkeying Around With Tarzan and Jane," shows them "purportedly engaged in explicit sexual activities and conversation."

Clements foresees changes in redistricting program

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements say he is certain the special legislative session will change what he calls an unacceptable congressional redistricting plan despite "noise" from Texas' congressional delegation.

"The plan as put forward" in the regular session, which ended June 1, "was not acceptable, and the conference committee understood that," Clements told a news conference Thursday.

The House-Senate committee deadlocked over a proposal that included seats for three new congressmen, which Texas gains as a result of the state's population growth since 1970.

"I don't think there is any question whatsoever" that there will be changes in the plan in the 30-day special session, Clements said.

Clements was asked about Speaker Bill Clayton meeting in Washington on Wednesday with about a third of the 24-member Texas congressional delegation. Clayton expressed a "pretty good" reaction to a redistricting plan drawn by U.S. Rep. Martin Frost.

"I haven't paid much attention to the noise level coming out of the Washington delegation," he said.

He said redistricting has become nothing more than "an exercise at perpetuating the incumbents."

Asked if he might be willing to adjust his own position on redistricting, Clements replied, "I'm known for my flexibility."

Clements dismissed as "demagoguery" comments by black Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, that the governor "doesn't care"about blacks.

He said he still wanted a black district in Dallas that would offer a "positive opportunity" for minority representation.

Washington said Clements' had patronized blacks by giving as a reason for his veto of a state Senate redistricting plan the fact that it did not include a black Senate district for Dallas.

"It (the veto) was partisan politics, pure and simple," Washington told a June 19 news conference.

He said he could envision a cartoon of the governor "hiding behind the ragged clothes of the black people of Dallas. He doesn't care about them and never has."

Clements said, "I'm not in the least interested in what he has to say about my position in Dallas. Coming from him (Washington), it's nothing more nor less than demagoguery."

Asked if he planned to add veterans' land proposals to the five topics he has submitted for consideration by the special session, Clements said he "had no plans at this time" to open the session to other issues.

However, he said, "it could well be that I will open the call."

On other subjects, the governor:

— Said he does not think the federal government will locate a nuclear dumping ground in West Texas. "I personally don't think it will ever happen," Clements said. "I think it's a non-issue."

— Reiterated his opposition to a peacetime draft but said if the government reinstates the draft, "I would hope the draft would include women."

— Said Austin has not requested state funds to help the city recover from May and June flooding. Asked if he would consider such a request, Clements replied, "I would consider anything."

— Said he thought former President Carter's financial agrement with Iran to win the release of the 52 American hostages was "unconstitutionl." Several members of the U.S. Supreme Court questioned the validity of the agrement Wednesday, and Clements said, "I'm not surprised."

— Said he thinks the "lack of attention" the Border Patrol gives to illegal aliens crossing the Texas-Mexico border is "disgraceful."

— Said he and his wife, Rita, had made no firm vacation plans but would spend time in New Mexico and Virginia. "In this job," he said, "I've found I'm subject to call."

Hispanic leaders pledge to fight reapportionment

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — An Hispanic leader says he'll fight a reapportionment plan devised by Texans for a Conservative Congress that would split Corpus Christi and Nueces County into two Congressional Districts.

"We are serving notice as a member of the Speaker's Advisory Committee that any effort to dilute Hispanic voting strength in South Texas will be challenged legally at the close of the special session," said Ruben Bonilla, former national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

A member of the Speaker's Advisory Committee on Reapportionment harshly criticized the plan.

Bonilla, who was succeeded last week in Albuquerque by his brother, Tony Bonilla, as national president of LULAC, referred to the conservative group as "rich fat cat Republican contributors."

"This plan, supported by the conservatives, would gut the City of Corpus Christi and divide it along ethnic and racial lines," said Bonilla, also a member of the Speaker's Advisory Committee on Reapportionment.

"It would send Corpus Christi Hispanics to the border, literally, forcing them not to be a part of the community of Corpus Christi, but having (Rep. Abraham) Chick Kazen as a Congressman," he said.

The city and county currently fall in the district of Rep. William Patman, D-Ganado.

"This parochial posture is evidence of patron leadership Anglo-style," he said, calling the plan "an effort to rule with the iron hand and to excluded and remove Hispanics from the aura of decision-making."

Wealthy Corpus Christi attorney Hayden Head and Dallas restaurant magnate Norman Brinker helped organize Texans for a Conservative Congress. About 40 conservative leaders met last week in Dallas and named Victoria banker Zack Lentz and Amarillo attorney Wales Madden Jr. as co-chairmen.

Bonilla called the conservative reapportionment proposal "a malevolent scheme to promote selfish personal economic vested interests.

It has become so absurd that we have persons from Amarillo, Victoria and Dallas serving as members of a committee dictating to state officials what is best for Hispanics in South Texas."

"I for one, as past president of LULAC and a member of the Speaker's Advisory Committee, do not care about a rich fat cat Republican contributor telling Mexican-Ameicans what is best for us, particularly when they are outsiders to the South Texas community."

60s-style 'flower children' take over meeting of Galveston City Council

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — In a scene reminiscent of the 1960s, a band of long-haired hippies chanting peace slogans and passing out flowers briefly took over a city council meeting Thursday.

About a dozen young people, holding hands and chanting "Peace Now, Freedom Now," unexpectedly marched into the meeting hall and handed each stunned council member a purple flower. The motley group then entertained the council with a rousing chorus of the rock hit "Aquarius."

Before the "flower children" made their hasty departure, a young woman, saying she was acting on orders from her guru, tried to plant a kiss on Mayor Gus Manuel.

She missed and instead smacked Mayor Pro Temp Rudy Teichman, who said he didn't mind.

Council members later were told the intruders were cast in the Strand Street Theater's production of the popular rock musical "Hair," which opens here Friday.

Coalition campaigning against gas decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of labor and consumer groups is starting a campaign to block the Reagan administration from stepping up decontrol of natural gas prices, arguing such a move would wipe out 3.4 million jobs in the next four years.

The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition introduced a report on the projected job losses at a news conference Wednesday at AFL-CIO headquarters in Washington, and the giant labor federation said it, too, is behind the campaign.

Coalition President William Winpisinger, also head of the International Association of Machinists, said a speedup of decontrol would be a "cruel" policy that would almost double natural gas costs to consumers and result in layoffs or jobs not created because of the resulting drop in consumer spending.

"We sure ... won't be hoodwinked by big oil on this one," he said.

Most segments of the oil and gas industry have backed faster or immediate decontrol of natural gas prices. However, the American Gas Association, a distributors' group, has opposed it on grounds it could raise prices and could force consumers to switch to other fuels.

The administration has not said when it might propose accelerated decontrol, which President Reagan argued for during his election campaign. Under current law, prices for most natural gas would be decontrolled by 1985.

The coalition-sponsored study is based on price projections by the nonprofit Energy Action Educational Foundation, which found natural gas prices would rise 86 percent in the first year of decontrol.

By contrast, an earlier study sponsored by a gas producers' group favoring faster decontrol judged that immediate decontrol would result in a rise of little more than one-half percent in the Consumer Price Index in its year of greatest impact.

The Citizen-Labor study maintained faster decontrol would mean a shift of $260 billion from consumers and industry to oil and gas companies. Of this, $86 billion would be in increased costs to residential customers.

The coalition's Washington coordinator, Robert Brandon, said only the increase to homeowners was considered in the job study because it was the segment most easily measured.

The study found only three industries among the 157 it examined that would gain jobs from decontrol and all were connected with oil or gas.

It said because these industries used less labor than most, the loss of money for consumer spending by the nation's 40,000 families who heat with natural gas would translate to an averge net loss of 860,000 jobs per year for the next four years in layoffs or jobs not created.

Cutback reports denied in Saudi oil production

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Reports of a cutback in oil production by Saudi Arabia were denied today by "an authoritative official Saudi source," the Middle East Economic Survey reported.

The oil journal, which has very close links with the Saudi Oil Ministry, quoted its unidentified source as saying, "No decision has been taken to reduce the present level of production."

The Saudi denial was made in response to foreign reports that the Saudis had decided to make cuts because of a worldwide oil glut.

The Wall Street Journal reported Thursday, quoting unidentified oil industry officials in London, that the Saudis had decided to reduce output by nearly 450,000 barrels a day from the recent level of 10.3 million barrels a day.

Earlier this week, sources at the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna reported Saudi plans for a similar cut.

There has been no official comment from the Saudis, and an official of the Arabian American Oil Co., a consortium of four American companies that produces nearly all of Saudi Arabia's oil, said Thursday there had been no order to cut oil output.

The oil journal said confusion over Saudi intentions and the reports of a Saudi reduction in production apparently stem from the phasing out of "war relief" supplies — crude oil earmarked by Saudi Arabia for consumers on a temporary basis to compensate for the shortfall caused by the Iraq-Iran war, which broke out last September.

Norway cuts oil price

By The Associated Press

The Norwegian state oil company today said it cut the price of its North Sea crude oil by 10 percent, retroactive to last Saturday. The cut, which was expected, puts more pressure on African countries to lower their prices despite Tuesday's vow not to do so.

Haakon Lavik, a spokesman for Statoil, the Norwegian company, said the reduction will slice the average price of crude to just below $36 a barrel from $40.

"We reduced the price as a natural consequence of the present global price situation and the fact that the British state oil company also reduced the price for its North Sea oil to the same level last week," Lavik said. The British dropped the price to $35 a barrel.

While other companies that produce oil in the Norwegian section of the North Sea do not have to follow Statoil's lead, they are expected to do so before July 1.

Val Verde and Edwards schedule wildcat tests

Val Verde County drew locations for two wildcats and Edwards one in District 1 of the Texas Railroad Commission.

VAL VERDE COUNTY

Conoco Inc. will drill the No. 1 Wilma Carson, a 15,500-foot wildcat in Val Verde County, 3 1/4 miles southeast of the opener and lone producer in the Morrison, Southeast (Ellenburger gas) field and 11 miles northwest of Juno.

Location is 1,780 feet from the north line and 660 feet from the east lines of section 10, block C15 of the E.J. Hollum survey.

The Morrison, Southeast field opened November 1, 1968 and produces at 15,411 feet.

C.H. Wagner of Tarzan will drill the No. 1 Alan, a 5,400-foot wildcat, four miles southeast of Del Rio.

Location is 467 feet from the north line and 2,390 feet from the east line of section 22, block 3 of the I&GN survey, abstract.

EDWARDS COUNTY

Carmel Inc. of Houston will drill a 1,500-foot wildcat in Edwards County, 1 1/4 miles northwest of the Lula, Northwest field and seven miles northwest of Lula.

Location is 987 feet from the south line and 1,171 fet from the east line of section 70 block 3 of the HE&WT survey.

The Lula, Northwest field produces from the Devonian at 4,097 feet and the Strawn at 4,038 feet.

Two large oil companies halt trading for merger speculation

NEW YORK (AP) — Trading in the stock of Conoco Inc. and Cities Service Co., two major oil companies fighting attempts by Canadian interests to acquire their stock, remained suspended at the companies' request today amid speculation that merger talks are in progress.

Both companies refused to confirm or deny they were discussing a merger that would create the nation's seventh-largest oil company.

In similar but separate requests to the New York Stock Exchange before the start of Wednesday's trading, Conoco and Cities Service asked that trading be halted in their stock "pending an announcement."

There was no trading, and neither company offered any announcement Wednesday.

Conoco spokesman Vincent Robertiello said that an announcement was possible today, but refused to comment further.

The Wall Street Journal reported today that top officials of both companies were in New York on Wednesday.

Conoco — the nation's ninth-largest oil company, with interests in coal, chemicals and uranium — said last week that it was engaged in preliminary merger discussions with an unidentified company.

Cities Service is the 20th largest oil company, with interests in natural gas, chemicals and minerals.

Amendment failing

WASHINGTON (AP) — An amendment to exempt most independent oil producers and royalty owners from the Windfall Profits Tax was apparently killed today in the Senate Finance Committee.

The vote was 8-5 against the proposal of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, with seven votes still uncast by late morning. But aides to the Texas Democrat said the margin appeared too big to overcome.

Bentsen, in a five-minute talk before his colleagues, argued that his legislation would increase U.S. oil production by 204,000 barels a day by 1984.

Whatever became of Villaneuva?

Los Angeles Times

"Old placekickers never die, they just go on missing the point." —Lou (The Toe) Groza, circa 1966

The thing about Daniel Dario Villaneuva, who placekicked for the Rams and Cowboys for 13 years in the NFL, is that he almost always got the point. He still holds the record for the most points-after-touchdown without a miss for a season in the NFL, 56, in 1966. He made 97.9 percent of his PAT's in his career, second only to George Blanda and Tommy Davis. He still holds the Rams' record for the best punting average in a game (52.5) and in a season (45.5). He holds the Rams' record for the longest field goal (51 yards) and he poured through 496 points in his two-team career.

Danny Villaneuva is a historic figure for another reason -- he was the first Mexican-American to play pro football in the United States. Born in New Mexico, raised in Calexico, Danny was hired by the Rams out of New Mexico State in 1960 by the then-coach, Bob Waterfield, himself a placekicker. "They gave me a $250 'bonus' -- later deducted from my salary of $5,200 a year -- and took me to a high school field where I had to audition kicking off the side of a hill. I had to kick downhill lies, but I made 46 straight."

PLACEKICKERS ARE the loneliest football players in the land. Even on the practice field, they're isolated from the rest of the regulars. "You can always tell the placekicker on the team. He's the one eating alone in the coffee shop," Villanueva notes. The late Red Sanders once characterized the kickers' life as "a lot like flying across oceans -- hours of boredom punctuated by moments of sheer terror."

Not surprisingly, placekickers are not noted for their sense of humor. But Danny was. Son of a migrant (Methodist) preacher, a rare calling for a Mexican immigrant, Danny was fond of saying things like "I was traded to the Cowboys by the Rams for Tommy McDonald and a CARE package to Mexico." He once characterized the Ram attack as "the tango offense -- one-two-three, kick!" Says Danny, "I had to make 87 punts one year and 88 the next." The usual next reel in a scenario like this usually finds our hero tending bar in a place called "Between The Uprights" or "The Extra Point," but Danny decided that the rest of his life he was not going to be just somebody called in after somebody else made the touchdown.

"I retired on the way to the dressing room after the 1967 championship game in Green Bay. It was 21 degrees below zero and dropping." That was the game where someone cracked "Dallas won the toss -- and elected to go home." Danny had a good game. He kicked the field goal to put the Cowboys ahead of Green Bay, 17-14, until, with only 16 seconds left to play, the Packers pulled it out. "I remember Lombardi yelling over at me as I warmed up -- if you could call it that -- 'Mexicans don't like this weather!' And I yelled back 'Polar bears don't like it either.' I went into the locker room after the game and said 'What time is the next dog sled to Chicago?' And quit the game on the spot."

IN A WAY, you might say Danny Villanueva always had a "manana" complex. Only in his case, he was working furiously towards a different manana. He conducted a sports commentary in English for KMPC in Los Angeles and for KMEX TV in Spanish even while he was playing in Dallas. He did commercials for Coca-Cola, for Ford, and he made so many banquet appearances he frequently flew the "Red Eye" New York-to-Los Angeles trip after a game in the East, spent the day in a studio, then flew to Dallas in time for Tuesday practice.

Danny Villanueva today plays the full 60 minutes. President and general manager of KMEX, or Channel 34, the Spanish-speaking channel, he is vice president and general manager of Spanish International Communications Corporation, which owns seven television stations and is affiliated with 122 others. He is president of the L.A. Aztecs soccer team. He sits on 10 boards of directors, has an office on Park Avenue, a condominium in the desert, and he is to be commissioner of boxing for the upcoming 1984 Olympics.

HE IS THUS a top American corporate executive and he has the scars from three ulcer operations to prove it. But he may be the only executive in America who doesn't blame them on the pressures of the board room. Villanueva thinks he got his kicking the Rams out of trouble or, sometimes, into it. "You ever kick a field goal off an ice flow with Tom Landry glaring at you on one side and Vince Lombardi yelling at you on the other and 11 guys with frostbite taking it out on you? It's the hardest, hardest job in the world. You got to answer to a town, a team, a coach, a stadium, and 50 million nuts on TV."

Compared to that, running seven to 12 businesses, eating lunch out of a briefcase, running for a plane or the 1984 Olympics and televising World Cup Soccer is just a chip shot from the 10-yard line against the New Orleans Saints for Danny. Besides, in business, he points out, they sometimes blame the holder.

Hearns, Ray spar verbally

By HAL BOCK

HOUSTON (AP) — Thomas Hearns and Sugar Ray Leonard marched through a pair of potential minefields in the Astrodome and after they reached the other side, they began heaving verbal hand grenades at each other.

Hearns knocked out Pablo Baez in the fourth round to defend the World Boxing Association welterweight championship. Then Leonard, the World Boxing Council welterweight king, had to go nine gruelling rounds before stopping Ayub Kalule to win the WBA super middleweight title.

If either man had lost, it would have taken much of the gloss — and probably some of the money — off their Sept. 16 date in Las Vegas, a welterweight unification fight that is fast developing into a grudge match.

"I think he will try to pull the same stunt that (Roberto) Duran did the second time (against him)," Hearns said. "I say Leonard will quit and I say he will have a good reason to quit. You will know why."

Sugar Ray had an answer for that.

"I can't wait for September," he said. "I hope some day they can do a medical examination of Hearns and look in the top of his head. They'll find no brains.

"Tommy Hearns is a perfect physical specimen of an athlete. He has speed, power, reach and height. And he has no brains."

Both men did workmanlike jobs in Thursday night's stage-setters, Hearns stopping Baez in 2: 10 of the fourth round and Leonard finishing Kalule with just one second left in the ninth round of their fight.

"I was very surprised the fight ended that fast," said Hearns, who posted his 30th knockout in 32 professional fights. "I thought the fight would go much longer. Baez seemed like a good opponent for me."

Baez took some of Hearns' best shots early and kept coming back for more.

"He started well and I had a little trouble figuring him out," Hearns said. "Only my left jab was working and I wanted to use more left hooks. I had to work the jab to the body. It helped set up the shot I wanted to get in."

That was a big right hand. "It brought his head up and then I hit him with a hook," Hearns continued.

Baez sank to the canvas and struggled back to his feet. But referee Kenneth Morita decided that the game challenger had taken enough punishment and stopped the fight.

"It was more difficult than it looked," said Hearns.

Leonard didn't exactly have a cakewalk either. Kalule, making his American debut, showed that his 36 straight victories were no fluke. He slugged it out with Leonard, making a determined defense of his crown.

Cubs win 7-6 with 2 in 9th

BY TED BATTLES

Midland's Cubs have talked like a team that wanted a Texas League pennant all season. Now they're beginning to play like a team that wants one.

Talk about being on the brink of defeat. The Cubs trailed 6-5 with two out and none on in the ninth before rallying for a 7-6 win over the Amarillo Gold Sox before a Chamber of Commerce night crowd of 2,028 at Cubs Stadium Thursday night for their third win in four second half starts.

The Cubs have won eight of their last 11 and are 13-10 since George Enright took over as manager.

First baseman Jack Upton delivered the winning hit, a liner over a leaping Jerry DeSimone at second to score Mel Hall from second. However, it was a harmless looking two-out single that Craig Kornfeld plunked off the end of his bat into right that started it. That knocked Waco's Andy Hawkins out of the box just one out from victory. Lefthander Syd Church came in to pitch to Hall, who had hit his 12th homer earlier in the game, and he broke off two big curves for strikes before Mel tapped a single up the middle to move Kornfeld to second.

NOW IT was Corky Wyrick pitching and he got Javier Fierro to hit a sharp grounder to third baseman Dan Pupura, who had trouble finding the handle and then threw it away to allow Kornfeld to score from second.

That allowed Upton to bat. "It was a good pitch, low and outside. I've got to tip my hat to him (Wyrick)," said Upton. "The count was 2-0 and I was looking for a better pitch to hit. Then he threw me that. It was a good pitch." Good pitch or not, Upton hit it for a game winner.

It looked like the Cubs had lost it in the eighth when the Sox scored twice for a 6-5 lead. The Cubs were down 4-0 in the second when lefthander Norm Churchill relieved starter Mike King in the second. Three walks and an error left the bases loaded and one run in. Churchill, in his longest pitching stint since a complete game win against Shreveport May 23, blanked the Sox until the eighth and even then Amarillo didn't exactly shell him from the hill in disgrace.

A WALK, a bunt single by Aaron Cain and a sacrifice fielder's choice by Frank Castro set it up for John Stevenson's two-run double down the left field line.

Rob Blyth, on the shelf since June 9, came out of the bullpen with more trouble lurking at second and third and slammed the door with a three strikeout relief effort the rest of the way.

"That just typifies the way we've been playing," Enright said after the game. "But Blyth's performance was the high point of the night for me. The way he came through takes a little pressure off the other guys in the bullpen. And he didn't just go with his slider. He effectively mixed in his fast ball. I didn't want to bring him with the bases loaded to face Stevenson because he had been off a long time and I didn't want to risk walking in the run."

ENRIGHT added, "Shepston (Mike) saved us some runs in the second by blocking a lot of pitches behind the plate. He moves around back of the plate like a major league catcher."

It was a Hall homer in the third that started the Cubs on the way back from a 4-0 deficit. Mel's roundtrippers usually go to left or center, but Hawkins got this one in Hall's wheelhouse and he drove it to dead right.

Midland got two more in the fourth when Fritz Connally led off with a double and Carmelo Martinez saved the rally with a two-out homer to left, his 10th of the season.

After a walk to Kornfeld, Hall's single and an error let in another run in the fifth, Martinez put the Cubs ahead in the sixth with a single behind Randy LaVigne's double to make it 5-4.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—After three nights of sandbagging pitchers, Thursday's game was a complete turnabout. The Cubs repeatedly came up with big defensive plays behind Churchill, with Connally at third saving two hits in the sixth alone. Rookie Joe Carter robbed Dan Gausepohl near the wall in right-center after a along run in the ninth...Play of the night, however, belonged Amarillo shortstop Stevenson who skidded on his chin behind second to glove Shepston's hit bid and while writhing on his belly like a reptile, flipped it to Jerry DeSimone to start the double play...Churchill prefers the busy life of a reliever to that of a starter. "I used to goof around four days between starts, no I feel I'm in the game every night...Yea, I was getting tired, I hadn't gone five innings since May

MEET THE CUBS

Milner jogs to release hostilities

They call him Bull, Moose, Hoss and he has been all of them out of the Midland Cubs' bullpen, especially in Manager George Enright's hour of desperation. And, now, Scalp or Skinhead is a descriptive appellation applied to relief pitcher Timothy John Milner, a 6-1, 200-pound righthander out of Mokena, Ill.

With Rob Blyth, Tom Spino, Carlos Gil, Phil Nastu, Norm Churchill and Henry Mack all on the aching and ailing list at one time or another, when enemy bats threatened to win the day, the call for help has usually gone to knuckleballer Milner of late, so often, in fact, that he finally failed when Amarillo rallied for eight ninth run innings for a 13-8 win Tuesday night at Cubs Stadium.

NORM CHURCHILL, his lefthanded bullpen mate, takes out his pitching frustrations by beating on a golf ball the next day. Milner can't wait that long. After Tuesday's game, he was out jogging the streets for three miles at midnight, just trying to forget.

Since June 6, Milner has relieved in 11 games and when he wasn't relieving, he was on call, which meant he was throwing in the bullpen.

In a way, it's good experience for a guy who was a starter in his first two years of pro ball, a damned successful one at that.

Tim graduated from Lincoln Way High in 1975 where he played baseball and football, attending Illinois State University at Normal for 3 1/2 years.

Milner was 4-2 with a 1.74 ERA and 33 whiffs in helping I-State to third in the NCAA Mideast Regional. In 1978 he was 3-0 with a 1.75 ERA and in 1979 he was 5-5 with a 2.30 ERA.

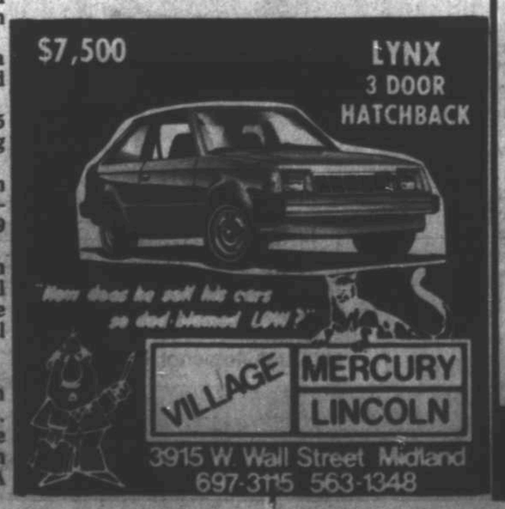

He got some valuable semipro experience with the Chicago AHEPA in the 1977 National Baseball Congress Tournament at Wichita and in 1978 he pitched for the Bloomington Bobcats in the Central Illinois Collegiate League.

IN 1979, he was the Chicago Cubs' 21st draft pick in the June draft and was assigned to the New York-Pa. league were he was 9-1, tied for second in complete games, six; tied for fourth in innings, 94, and eighth in ERA with 2:39. Last year, he moved up to the A Midwest League and was 12-8 2.37 with nine complete games and three shutouts, which doesn't sound like a guy ready for relief. However, Tim also had 146 strikeouts and only 60 walks in 175 innings, which meant he knew how to get the ball over the plate with something on it, an essential ingredient for one who must deal with baseball conflagrations in late innings.

Despite his later pitching successes, Milner still labels his greatest thrill as "pitching in the Connie Mack World Series at Farmington, N.M."

As for the conversion from starter to reliever, Milner doesn't know what prompted it. "All I know is that when we left Mesa, I was listed for long relief...now I'm short relief."

Which does he prefer? "I'll take the short relief. It means you are in every game, and if not in the game, throwing in the bullpen just in case." And this month, it means throwing almost every night.

Signs of progress seen

Baseball strike negotiations resume today

By Associated Press

Negotiations in baseball's unprecedented midseason strike were to continue today as the club owners' chief negotiator said he was encouraged following the longest bargaining session since the walkout of major league players began 15 days ago.

Management warned, though, that the spectre of a court suit brought in Philadelphia could impede any progress that might be made at the bargaining table, and the players' side in the dispute over free agent compensation said it was disappointed by the response to its latest counterproposal.

Common Pleas Court Judge Stanley M. Greenberg issued a preliminary injunction Wednesday in Philadelphia to prohibit insurance companies from beginning payment to baseball owners of $50 million in strike insurance. A hearing on the class-action suit, brought by the Major League Umpires Association, was scheduled today.

On Thursday, the two sides were in session with federal mediator Kenneth Moffett for about five hours — with Moffett alternating the parties between joint sessions and separate caucuses.

"There was lengthy dialogue and the exchange of some meaningful discussion," said Ray Grebey, director of management's bargaining group, the Player Relations Committee. "There is no agreement, and there still are some difficulties, but we are encouraged."

Much of Thursday's session was spent with the players' response to a proposal made by the owners on Wednesday.

The owners have been trying to institute a plan by which teams losing a premium free agent in the re-entry draft would, in return, receive a roster player from the club signing the free agent.

The players' plan would allow each team to protect a certain number of players while putting the rest in a common pool for free-agent compensation. Donald Fehr, chief counsel for the players association, said the players advanced four modifications of their proposal on Thursday, while still maintaining the pool idea.

They would:

—Allow a team to protect 36 players from its entire organization, including non-rostered minor leaguers.

—Stipulate that the re-entry draft take the same format it had last year.

Eastern, North Central to tangle

Eastern Optimists forged into the finals of the American Little League playoffs, but will have to win two games to take the title.

The Optimists emerged from the losers' bracket of the double elimination tournament to beat Mid City Angels, 10-8, Thursday on a grand slam home run by Tommy Yorkman.

The Optimists play North Central, still undefeated, at 5 p.m. today at the North Central LL park. If the Optimists should win, then a final playoff tilt would be played at North Central 9 a.m. Saturday to decide the City champion.

With runners on first and second and the Angels in front 6-5, Carlos Lozano was walked intentionally and then Gabi Bernal was walked unintentionally to force in the tying run and bring up Yorkman, who then delivered his big homer.

Joe Rendon got the pitching win for the Optimists, but Yorkman rode to the rescue in the sixth with one out, one run in and the bases loaded to close out the threat before it blazed out of control.

Teel Newman started for the Angels and Mike Rochard, relieving in the fifth, was tagged with the loss.

Scott Mowles had a double for the Angels, the game's only extra base hit besides Yorkman's homer. The Angels reeled off one double play when second baseman Bradley Taylor caught a pop up and fired to Jake Whalen at third to catch the runner off base.

What's the fan getting out of this?

Driving into Chicago one hot July day many years ago, the batting exploits of Ed Bailey, a catcher out of Strawberry Plains, Tenn., were being described over the radio as he systematically dismantled a contending Pittsburgh Pirates club.

In those days, back in the 1960s, one could go up to the Wrigley Field ticket office and get a box seat right behind the dugout even a half hour before game time.

The caliber of the Cubs hasn't changed a whole lot since then.

That's where we were the next day when the Baseball Annie showed up, equipped with a radio, as it turned out, so she could monitor the broadcasts and wave a threatening fist at the radio booth when she felt the Cubs weren't being properly boosted.

She knew all the players, even the enemy, and Bob Friend, the Pirates' starter that day, even stopped to kid with her.

THEN THE game began and Bailey strode to the plate. A dirge would have been appropriate for the all the response his appearance elicited. The lady with the radio wouldn't have it.

She stood up, turned around toward the stands and addressed all of us, "What's wrong with you fans. He hit two homers, a triple, double and batted in eight runs yesterday. Give him a hand."

Above the polite applause a gravel voice nearby wanted to know, "That was yesterday, what's he done today?"

Calloused and inhuman as the query may be, it's an even more pertinent question as owners and players haggle over free agency while the guy who pays for it all sits by, helpless as he watches his game, whether he realizes it or not, sold down the river.

The players are guaranteed financial solvency and security for eternity by merely making the majors. The owners are making so much money, they squander it like they were getting it from Washington. While, the owners weep of poverty, financial ruin, it's all the figament of their accountants' fertile imagination, a tax shelter, I think they call it.

FREE AGENCY, the bone of contention in the current baseball dispute, has been bonanza for the player and a toy for the big spending owner, but it's also brought about a dilution of his favorite pasttime for the poor, loyal slob in the $3 bleacher seats out in right field.

The quality of the game is going down as the bucks go up. Absenteeism climbs and incentive goes down in direct proportion to the length of the increasing duration of the player's contract, so surveys show.

As it turns out, for the fan who asked, ball players aren't being paid for what they do today, but what they did five years ago. The Cleveland Indians are still paying Wayne Garland for a 20-win-season he had for Baltimore in 1975 when he was 20-7. Only twice prior to that at any level of ball had he won more than seven games in seven seasons. And he hasn't come close since, not that Wayne is any special example. He's just handy.

With players good, bad and indifferent on long term, no cut, no trade contracts, you've got to be a Fernando Valenzuela to break into the major leagues. With the major league owners obligating themselves to long term contracts for ball players "who won't embarrass you", much, the not-quite-ready for prime time prospect pines away in the minors. He waits and waits for the chance that is delayed because the owner has too much invested in a roster player to turn him loose. So the product, although most don't realize it, is suffering.

PRO GOLFERS, who pay their own way and must produce week-after-week to remain eligible, look on in disbelieving green-eyed envy at baseball's strikers.

Since the well-heeled owners are going to get the top players anyway, simply because they are going to outbid everyone else, and since loyalty and team allegiance are something we remember with the biplane and paddle-wheeler, the day when a fan could identify with a player as "his" has gone. So why not declare complete free agency at the end of each season, limiting all contracts to one year duration, and holding an open bidding for the talent.

The best players as usual would wind up with the New York Yankees and Los Angeles Dodgers and perhaps Philadelphia and Kansas City, because they would pay what it takes to get the player who had the best year the year before. However, the shrewd baseball dealer in Baltimore or Pittsburgh still might wind up with a cotender that could sneak away with it all by picking over the best of the leftovers.

The dogs would still be dogs, but after Steinbrenner got through picking over the talent, it wouldn't cost as much. Nothing would be changed, except the cynical fan could ask once again, "What's he done for me today?"

The Bluebonnet Sunbeamer softball team will hold a reunion 1 p.m. Saturday at Lubbock's Grand Motel. The team dominated West Texas softball from 1945-1949 and was managed by Jackie Hilliard. Ralph Bumpass, chairman for reunion functions, recalls an incident that best typified the Sunbeamers, a game in which Pete Garrison was pitching for Odessa and took a 5-0 lead into the final inning. Lubbock struck for two runs and the fans were yelling for blood. Garrison, says Bumpass, strode the plate, past the batter, catcher and umpire and looked up at the press box. "Finally, the press understood the request over the taunts of the Lubbock fans and the reply came loud and clear, 'Odessa 5, Lubbock 2.' Garrison demanded to know how many were out. 'Two.' Then, retorted, 'O.K. you mullet heads, this is one game you will never win.' Returning to the mound, Garrison was greeted by fivve straight hits and a 6-5 loss...

Auto sales drop in mid-June

DETROIT (AP) — New car sales by domestic carmakers fell 8.3 percent in mid-June as consumers continued to show resistance to high prices, according to auto industry analysts.

The five major U.S. carmakers said Wednesday they sold 171,570 cars during the June 11-20 period, against 187,010 in the 1980 period.

"The domestic sales for mid-June were crappy," said David Healy, an analyst for Drexel Burnham Lambert in New York. "I think it raises some question whether a new round of rebates might be necessary."

Chrysler Corp. was the only company to show improvement in mid-June with sales of 19,210 cars, up 16 percent from 16,489. GM's sales dropped 12 percent, to 103,331 from 117,014, and Ford's fell 5.9 percent, to 41,644 from 44,256.

Volkswagen of America said its sales fell 33 percent to 3,585 from 5,320, while American Motors Corp. sold an estimated 3,800 cars, down 3.4 percent from 3,931. AMC's figures are estimated because the company reports sales only on a monthly basis.

"It's very clear that there's price resistance, especially during a period of high interest rates," said Arvid Jouppi, a Detroit-based auto industry analyst for john Muir & Co.

Republicans urge Reagan to delay AWACS

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Pres Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans, saying they still may be able to salvage the planned sale of advanced radar planes to Saudi Arabia, are urging the White House to delay once again submitting the deal for congressional review.

A majority of Congress has gone on record in opposition to the sale of the five planes — Advanced Warning and Control System or AWACS — to Saudi Arabia.

Sen. Charles Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the administration should find out why 54 senators are opposed to the sale and try to resolve those concerns in a final sales package.

"I would hope we could agree on a package that meets the concerns," the Illinois Republican said in an interview Thursday.

Percy said he recommended the delay in a meeting with Richard V. Allen, President Reagan's national security adviser. Sens. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a close friend of Reagan's, and John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, also attended the meeting and concurred, Percy said.

Reagan announced last March that he intended to sell Saudi Arabia five AWACS and missile and long-range fuel tanks for 62 F-15 jet fighters the Saudis already have ordered. But he agreed to delay the sale so his aides could line up congressional support.

Reagan planned to formally propose the sale on July 8, but this week majorities in both the House and Senate went on record against the sale.

Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., and Norman Lent, R-N.Y., announced Wednesday that more than half the House, 224 members, now co-sponsor a resolution to veto the sale.

And Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., announced that 54 senators, more than half that body, had signed a letter asking Reagan to drop the sale.

Like any major weapons deal, the AWACS sale is subject to congressional veto. A majority would be needed in both houses to void the sale, something that has never been done.

The major concerns already expressed in floor speeches are that the planes would increase the Arab threat to Israel and that secret AWACS equipment might be compromised.

The administration has said the Saudi AWACS would not be a threat to Israel because they would be out of range for spying on the Jewish state. If one came too close, the administration said, Israeli jets could simply shoot it down.

Administration officials also have indicated that they are negotiating arrangments with the Saudis to protect the secrecy of the AWACS equipment.

Morocco OK's referendum call

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — King Hassan II today took Morocco a step closer to a peaceful settlement of the guerrilla war in Western Sahara by accepting for the first time proposals for a referendum to decide the fate of the disputed territory, sources said.

The sources, who heard Hassan speak in a closed session of the Organization of African Unity summit here, said he endorsed a "controlled referendum" supervised by a group of African and Arab countries and Spain, the former colonial power in the Western Sahara.

Hassan gave no further details, said the sources, who insisted on anonymity. Moroccan delegates said details of a referendum plan "would come later."

A Polisario spokesman described the king's proposal as "obviously unacceptable to the Saharan people" but made no other comment.

The conflict in the Western Sahara is one of the most contentious facing the OAU, and has threatened to divide the 18-year-old, 50-nation organization.

Morocco historically claims the phosphate-rich territory and has for six years been fighting independence-seeking guerrillas of the Polisario Front, supported by Algeria and Libya.

Hassan, was quoted as saying in a 35-minute speech in Arabic and French, that any referendum among the Western Sahara's 100,000 inhabitants would have to satisfy Morocco's national goals as well as those of the OAU, which had proposed a plebiscite to settle the future of the territory.

According to the sources, the king said that he was urged to change his earlier position — rejecting any referendum in the Sahara territory as a violation of Morocco's territorial integrity — by many friendly countries in the region, as well as by Britain, France, West Germany and Spain.

Hollander barred from television

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Xaviera Hollander, author of the "Happy Hooker," has been barred from appearing on a prime time talks show on Israel's state television.

Ms. Hollander, whose autobiography about her experiences as a brothel keeper in New York City became a worldwide bestseller, was to have appeared on "The Good Hour," a popular entertainment show broadcast after the start of the Jewish Sabbath on Friday evenings.

"The Good Hour is a family program watched by 90 percent of the country and there is no place for this kind of element," said state television director Yitzhak Shimoni.

He told The Associated Press he would not have objected to Ms. Hollander being interviewed on a serious, late-night program, but added that no such program exists at present.

Ms. Hollander has been in Israel for the past week attending an international sexology congress — and stealing the show, to the apparent chagrin of many serious sex researchers.

A group of sexologists issued a statement regretting that the media had turned the Happy Hooker into "the star of the congress." They complained that her talk on sexual gratification amounted to only seven minutes of a total of 200 hours of lectures.

Ms. Hollander was not available for comment.

Producers, directors agree

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Chances that Hollywood directors will join screen writers in a strike against movie producers have lessened with a tentative agreement on profit sharing in the home video market.

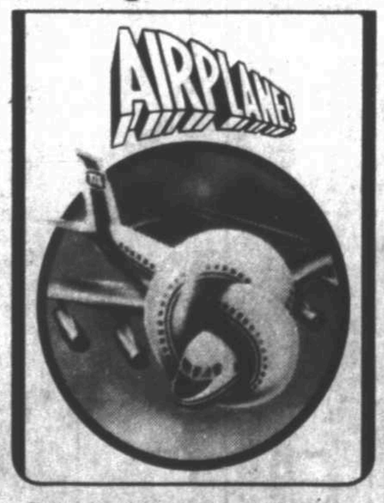

The thorny issue has put both actors and writers on the Hollywood picket lines during the past year.

While members of the Directors Guild of America appeared alongside the striking screen writers on a picket line Thursday at the gates of 20th Century Fox Studios, the producers' negotiators announced agreement on a profit split with directors.

The pact would give directors 2 per cent of the profits a movie makes after it earns a certain amount, said Jan Slater, spokeswoman for the Motion Picture and Television Producers Industry negotiating committee.

Creative prisoner held on forgery charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's hard to find a profitable hobby in prison, but authorities believe James Lenn Jackson nearly hit the jackpot with his creative writing.

The only problem, officials say, is that what Jackson was writing were glowing letters about his own progress, signed in the names of various officials.

There was a letter from a warden in Boron, Calif., saying Jackson had saved the life of a government employee during a food strike; another letter said he had been approved for a vocational program to become a federal aviation investigator; a warden in Inglewood, Colo. wrote that Jackson had made great progress toward rehabilitation. And there were others.

The letters reached Superior Court Judge David F. Cunningham, who was impressed enough to drop the three-year prison sentence he imposed on Jackson two years ago for grand theft, insurance fraud and auto theft.

Jackson previously had been convicted of passport violations and of posing as a U.S. serviceman but disappeared before he could be sentenced in federal court. After his arrest on the theft and fraud charges in 1978, he was ordered to serve his federal sentence first, then be transferred to state prison.

However, on Tuesday Cunningham dropped the state sentence as a result of the glowing letters. That freed Jackson since he had completed his federal term.

But a district attorney's investigator, Herschel Aron, who was familiar with Jackson's background, had his suspicions aroused when he learned business cards stating Jackson was a lawyer were circulating among inmates in the county jail.

Aron looked into Jackson's file and found the laudatory letters, plus Cunningham's order dropping the state prison term. After a few calls, Aron also found the letters were all fabrications.

As a result, the 38-year-old Jackson is back in prison, awaiting not freedom, but prosecution for allegedly forging the letters and filing false documents with the court.

A hearing is set for July 14.

Two Charleston officers killed

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Two police officers were gunned down and killed early today after they approached a car for a traffic check, authorities said.

Patrolman Ed Duncan, 33, and Lt. Delbert Roush, 61, each were hit in the chest with shots from a "large caliber gun" after they stopped a car on U.S. 60 near the Interstate 64 entrance shortly after 2 a.m. EDT, authorities said.

Roush, a 32-year veteran, and Duncan, a four-year veteran, died while undergoing emergency surgery at two Charleston hospitals, said police Lt. Thomas Chabot.

Chabot said authorities were looking for Antoine Hickman of Charleston on two charges of murder. He was described as a black man in his early 20s.

"He's armed and dangerous, very dangerous," Chabot said.

Police were alerted to the shooting by someone at the scene, he said.

Long-distance rates go up Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of an interstate long-distance telephone call will rise 16 percent Sunday under a notice the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. says it will file with the Federal Communications Commission today.

The FCC late Thursday authorized AT&T to implement a series of rate changes once the notice is filed, with the understanding that the Bell System will refund any overcharges to its customers if an in-depth investigation shows that the new rates are not justified.

The commission's decision also will allow the Bell System to raise its private-line business rates 16 percent and its charges for a WATS — Wide Area Telephone Service — line 10.5 percent.

At the same time, rates for international phone calls will drop 35 percent at 12:01 a.m. Sunday, when AT&T says it will implement the changes.

"Certainly we are pleased that we're finally able to put in new rates to earn what the FCC decided on April 6 was needed," AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner said Thursday. "As it stands right now, we think we'll be able to file the tariff tomorrow, meaning the increases will take effect Sunday morning."

Altogether, the steps will produce an estimated $725 million in additional earnings annually for the company.

The FCC said the two-day delay in implementing the rates would allow it to impose a so-called accounting order on AT&T, enabling the agency to launch a more in-depth investigation into the legality of the rate increases.

AT&T has been struggling to raise it rates ever since the commission ruled April 6 that the company was entitled to an overall profit margin of 12.75 percent instead of the 10.5 percent previously allowed.

The various rate changes will have no effect on the local phone bills of consumers or on the rates charged for long-distance calls within the boundaries of a single state.

The commission's new investigation will focus on AT&T's methods of calculating costs for regular long-distance calls and WATS lines, its capital recovery procedures and its exclusion of international phone calls from evening and weekend discounts.

Agency officials refused to predict how long the investigation would take.

The commission has been under a July 9 deadline for either rejecting the increases, approving them outright or allowing them to take effect pending further investigation.

Officials said it opted for the latter course, primarily because its decision to raise AT&T's profit margin clearly justified some increase in rates.

Census chief named in corruption

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — Arraignment was scheduled today for John Melbert Hudson, Muskogee District Census Bureau manager, indicted by a federal grand jury for allegedly using census employees to do political work.

The indictment returned Thursday is the first related to operation of a census office in the 1980 population count.

The six-count indictment charges that Hudson, 33, and unnamed coconspirators violated the Hatch Act, which prohibits the use of federal funds to accomplish political objectives.

The object of the alleged conspiracy "was to utilize this census program and positions therein to procure persons to assist in the campaigns of political candidates of the Democratic party; to reward political loyalty to local Democratic party leaders ... and to promote the political aspirations of the defendant," the indictment said.

In addition, at least 10 employees recommended by local Democratic officials were hired although they failed to obtain passing grades on employment tests, according to the indictment.

Hudson used "intimidation and threats of force" to dissuade at least two employees from helping in the probe of office operations by the inspector general.

Muse Air bans smoking on flights

DALLAS (AP) — A new short-haul airline is looking for nonsmokers who would rather fight than switch — from its planes, that is.

But you won't hear a lot of puffing from former Southwest Airlines president Lamar Muse about his Houston flights for nonsmokers. His company, Muse Air Corp., announced Thursday that it will become the first no-smoking airline.

Stewardesses will ensure that rule is enforced when the airline's first flights, from Dallas' Love Field to Houston Hobby Airport, begin on July 15.

Muse, who smoked three packs of cigarettes daily in his Southwest job, calls the move a marketing decision designed to attract more travelers to his new company, Muse Air.

"I certainly do not expect the industry to follow me," he said. "If I miscalculate, I will know soon enough. But I don't think that I have."

The flamboyant air executive who pioneered the concept of low-fare, short-haul flights from close-in airports while at Southwest is gambling that there are more nonsmoking air travelers than smokers and that the majority should rule.

"There are smokers who will sit through church for an hour without smoking, and those who don't go to church will still go to a two-hour movie and not light up," Muse, chairman of the board of his company, said. "Why should they have to smoke on a 50-minute flight to Houston?"

He said his decision came as the Civil Aeronautics Board was debating whether airline passengers should be allowed to smoke on domestic flights.

"We wanted to get out in front of that question," Muse said. The no-smoking approach was first considered last year, he said.

Since then, Muse Air has been approved for service to 24 southwestern and central U.S. cities. Muse said the airline has made the move in order to guarantee the confort and the convenience of all passengers.

For every passenger who would request a plane's smoking section, he said, five would prefer the no-smoking section. Company surveys indicate that 10 other travelers would switch to Muse Air because of its no-smoking policy.

He says that passengers will appreciate the absence of stale cigarette odor in the two McDonnell-Douglas Super 80 planes being purchased for the Dallas-Houston flights.

Ironically, Muse said the question of whether to ask pilots to quit smoking was solved when the company discovered that all 18 cockpit personnel it hired were nonsmokers.

"I did not want the flight crew getting up-tight because they didn't have a cigarette," he said. In-flight cabin attendants will not be allowed to smoke on Muse Air flights.

The number of nonsmokers is increasing, Muse says. And nonsmokers are becoming more aware of the dangers of secondhand smoke, especially in enclosed environments such as airplane cabins.

Muse Air will eventually operate hub flights from Houston, Chicago and Atlanta. Muse, now a nonsmoker, said it will have clean airplanes on all flights.

"Even when I was a smoker," he said, "I always traveled in the no-smoking sections. The (cabin) filter systems just do not do the job and there is close confinement."

Deliberations continue in Chevymobile case

CHICAGO (AP) — Jury deliberations were underway in a $131 million suit against General Motors Corp. by people who bought Oldsmobiles with Chevrolet engines.

The six-member panel deliberated six hours Thursday before adjourning for the night. Deliberations in the 10-week trial were to resume today.

The U.S. District Court jury was asked to decide if GM breached consumers' warranties by not disclosing the engine switch. If the panel determines GM is liable, jurors also must decide the amount of damages and also whether people who bought their 1977 "Chevymobiles" after April 10, 1977, qualify for damages.

GM contends after that date, up to two-thirds of the 43,000 consumers involved in the suit should have been aware their cars contained Chevy engines.

The purchasers of 1977 Delta 88s, Omegas and station wagons seek $131 million in damages for the value they allegedly lost in engine durability, design, fuel and oil economy and higher repair costs in receiving Chevrolet-manufactured 350-cubic inch V-8 engines in their Oldsmobiles.

The plaintiffs contend they thought they were buying cars with the Oldsmobile "Rocket" 350-cubic inch V-8 engine. The consumers contend the "Rocket" engine has been featured prominently in GM advertising since it was developed by Olds just after World War II and that the Olds and Rocket engine go together.

Non-smokers could be seated in smoking area

WASHINGTON (AP) — Non-smokers scrambling to the plane a few minutes before takeoff may soon find themselves surrounded by passengers puffing away.

New rules adopted Thursday by the Civil Aeronautics Board give the airlines the right to assign non-smoking passengers to seats in the smoking section if they are late in boarding.

Current regulations require the airlines to make passengers who wish to smoke give up that privilege in order to accomodate non-smokers when the non-smoking section is full.

The new rules, expected to take effect next month, will allow the airlines to tell late-arriving passengers to take whatever seat is available. The airlines still must continue to assure non-smokers a seat in a non-smoking section as long as the non-smoker arrives during normal boarding.

The airline industry has complained that problems with the government smoking rules mostly involve late-arriving passengers. With the industry wanting the government to step out of the issue altogether, anti-smoking groups reacted with relief that the board took a middle-of-the-road approach.

"I'd like to see the rules stronger, but with the deregulation mood (among board members) we're lucky to survive," said John F. Banzhaf, executive director of Action on Smoking and Health.

ASH, with 60,000 members nationwide, has been campaigning for years to ban all cigarette smoking on airline flights. Its members packed the hearing room Thursday.

The CAB has been debating the smoking issue for 2½ years. Two board members agreed Thursday with the airline inudstry's contention that competitive pressures would force it to meet the needs of non-smokers without any government intervention.

"This is a golden opportunity to get the agency out of where it should not be," CAB member George A. Dalley said. Chairman Marvin Cohen added, "I don't think the government needs to be in there."

Three board members disagreed, however, and questioned whether the airlines would have an incentive to protect non-smokers.

A Titanic Task

Abilene oilman Jack Grimm, holding a model of the cruise ship Titanic, points to the sport on the hull where the ocean liner rammed an iceberg and sank in 1912. Grimm is financing an effort to locate the wreckage.

Reagan set for another big victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic-controlled House, swayed by President Reagan's long-distance lobbying blitz, is all but certain to approve his stringent budget cuts and smooth their chances of final congressional passage.

The bruising floor fight that left losing Democrats grumbling about "pork barrel politics" and an "imperial" presidency set up the win-or-lose showdown Reagan wanted on a single package of more than $5 billion in revisions to a $37.8 billion spending-cut bill supported by Democratic leaders.

It was to come today in a series of House votes likely to amount to little more than rubber-stamp ratification of the Reagan program.

For Reagan, that would be two victories in less than 24 hours.

He reaped expected Senate approval of a $39.6 billion budget-cutting package to his liking just before midnight Thursday. The vote there, in a chamber ruled by Republicans, was 80-15 and came after Senate leaders worked out a bipartisan agreement to head off a threatened filibuster by Democrats.

Differences between the House and Senate versions still will have to be ironed out in a conference committee — perhaps an easier task if both bills bear the basic Reagan cuts.

"I've never seen anything like this in my life to be perfectly truthful," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

Just hours earlier, O'Neill acknowledged that "as of yesterday we had the vote won" and he could count only 15 Democrats going with the Republicans.

"These are the times that try men's souls and make no mistake about it," the Massachusetts Democrat said after the first and most critical of several parliamentary votes which went Reagan's way Thursday.

The vote was 217-210. Reagan, who conceded later that "24 hours ago our defeat seemed almost certain, won the support of 11 Democrats whom he personally wooed.

The parliamentary victory crushed the Democrats' strategy of splitting Reagan's cuts into six parts in an effort to strip away the politically protective cover provided by voting on the president's program as a whole.

Reagan called that plan "sabotage," and both sides agreed it would have made passage far more difficult since members would have been put squarely on record regarding funds for such programs as food stamps, welfare, Social Security and school lunches.

Thursday's victory was Reagan's second over House Democrats, but this one was bigger to the president than the initial budget ceilings that passed last month with the help of 63 House Democrats.

Reagan said he was "extremely pleased and gratified" and added: "I have never felt better in these last five months."

In a speech Thursday to members of the California Taxpayers Association in Los Angeles, Reagan said Republicans "joined by 31 courageous members of the Democratic Party have joined together to defeat the gag rule that would have seriously damaged our plan."

He said he wanted to emphasize "just how important this vote really is. It means that in a crunch of heavy pressure from all sides, the Congress of the United States seems ready and eager to join in the fight to curb runaway spending. It means...there are enough members who have the wisdom and the courage to cast their vote in favor of America's overall economic interest, not just our special interests."

He called it "a new beginning toward economic progress for all our people."

To Grimm, it's no fairy tale

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jack Grimm wants to find the Titantic. He sets sail to the North Atlantic Sunday. This is not the first curious ambition for this self-described "ordinary, plain, average" Texas oilman.

By JOE STROOP
Associated Press Writer

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — So who is this guy, anyway?

He made millions in the Texas oilfields and uses his money to look for Noah's Ark, the Loch Ness Monster, Big Foot and — if he leaves Boston harbor Sunday as scheduled — the Titanic? And his name is Grimm? Must be a fairy tale of some sort, right?

"I consider myself ordinary, plain, average," oilman Jack Grimm said with a straight face and a serious tone of voice. But if he means it — if it is not a tongue-in-cheek assessment — he is the only one who thinks that of himself.

For 11 years Grimm has been making headlines with his unusual adventures, but the 56-year-old wildcatter's taste for the unusual really began before then — when he got married, he and his wife spent their honeymoon prospecting for gold.

Texas Topics

The first of his escapades to reach the public eye was his financing of a 1970 expedition up Mount Ararat in Turkey to look for the remains of Noah's Ark.

The trip did not locate the ark but did result in a movie, "The Search for Noah's Ark," that enjoyed a limited run in theaters and drive-ins as well as a couple of showings on network television.

Next he entered the 1975 World Championship of Poker at Las Vegas, Nev. Much was made of his ouster from the tournament, as he went bust — dropped $10,000 — in one hand of Hold 'Em.

"What nobody mentions is that I had won nearly $10,000 the day before," Grimm said, insisting he just about broke even, except for picking up a nickname he despises to this day.

"Please don't call me 'Cadillac Jack,'" he begged a reporter who had spent the day with him in Abilene.

After the poker stint, Grimm announced in 1975 he was financing a search for the legendary Loch Ness monster, the prehistoric reptile supposed to be living in a lake in Scotland. Grimm had bought some special film for the Noah's Ark expedition and, since he had some left over, decided to use it in the hunt for "Nessie," too.

The next year he paid his own

Habib flies home during politicking

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saying the danger of war between Israel and Syria has receded, U.S. peace envoy Philip Habib flew back to Washington to take a breather from his shuttle diplomacy while Israel elects a new parliament and Arab leaders hold a summit meeting.

"I believe all concerned want to see tensions reduced as it it evident that the immediate danger of military action that existed when the crisis arose almost two months ago has receded," Habib said in a statement as he left Beirut Thursday.

Deputy White House spokesman Larry Speakes said in Washington that "diplomatic efforts will continue will Habib consults with President Reagan." He did not elaborate but said Habib would return to the Middle East in early July.

Israel holds its national elections next Tuesday and the Arab League's annual summit meeting opens July 4. Both events will sideline Habib's efforts to defuse the Israeli-Syrian missile crisis.

Reagan dispatched the retired State Department troubleshooter to the Middle East after Syria moved Soviet-made anti-aircraft missiles into eastern Lebanon and Israel threatened to destroy them if Syria didn't pull them out.

The missiles are still in eastern Lebanon, and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin is still threatening to destroy them. But Habib ini his statement thanked Arab and Israel leaders for a cordial welcome and said, "The restraint on the part of all remained indispensable."

As the U.S. envoy left, the Lebanese government radio reported artillery exchanges between Syrian troops and Lebanese Christian militiamen in the east Lebanese city of Zahle were subsiding. The Christian radio station said six Lebanese were killed and 40 were wounded in Zahle Wednesday night and Thursday.

A special Arab League mediation committee, trying to work out a formula to restore peace between the Syrians and the Christians, appealed to both sides to stick by the cease-fire they agreed to June 9.

Syria maintains 22,000 troops in Lebanon under an Arab League mandate to police the armistice that ended the 1975-76 civil war between the right-wing Christians and an alliance of leftist Lebanese Moslems and Palestinian guerrillas. The Syrians began attacking the Christians in Zahle on April 1, charging that they were building a military road for Israel to use in an invasion of Syria.

The Christians charge that the Syrian force in Lebanon and turned into an army of occupation. Syria reportedly has agreed to accept troops from other Arab countries in the peacekeeping force to make it more acceptable to the Christians.

In another development, the United States, Egypt and Israel agreed on the creation of a multinational force to patrol the Sinai Peninsula after Israeli completes the return of the war-won desert wilderness to Egypt in April.

Israel is returning the Sinai under terms of its U.S.-sponsored peace treaty with Egypt.

Royalty owners say fight's still on

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Royalty owners haven't given up their fight for an exemption from the windfall profits tax, according to the group's national president. In fact, the push is just starting.

Jim Stafford with the National Association of Royalty Owners said in a telephone interview Thursday from El Paso that royalty owners don't want to settle for less than a 1,000 barrel exemption.

Legislation in a Senate committee for such an exemption failed this week by a 15-5 vote. That committee, however, approved a $2,500 permanent exemption for royalty owners.

"We're not pleased with that $2,500 exemption; it's like tossing us crumbs to shut us up," noted Stafford.

The turning point will come in the House of Representatives after the summer recess, and Stafford named Congressman Kent Hance as the man who is spearheading legislation to favor royalty owners. Hance, a Democrat from Lubbock, represents the 19th Congressional District which winds from the Panhandle down to Midland.

Hance, according to Stafford, is sponsoring legislation that would allow the 1,000 barrel exemption. Already the former Lubbock attorney has obtained 212 co-sponsors, "and that's a record for that bill."

And Rep. Jim Jones of Oklahoma has scheduled a press conference for July 6 to pledge his support of the legislation.

His headquarters in Ada, Okla., Stafford said he is traveling around the United States to publicize the royalty owners plight with the windfall profits tax and to solicit support.

The 2½ million royalty owners in the country combined efforts last fall to get Jimmy Carter out of the White House, "and they felt they had bought themselves a president (Ronald Reagan). But there's been budget troubles," said Stafford, and the royalty owners are no longer on the top of the priorities list.

But with publicity, there has been some noticeable change on the part of various congressmen, Stafford noted. "Dan Rostenkowsky of Illinois is beginning to soften his attitude. He didn't realize there were so many royalty owners in Illinois."

Stafford explained a comment made recently by the president in connection to his budget and tax cuts. In a meeting with some senators a $1,000 credit was mentioned. But Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, "raised heck and said he couldn't take that back to the people in his state. There was then an agreement for a $2,500 credit. But Bentsen asked if the White House would object to a 1,000 barrel exemption, and Reagan said if it came across his desk he wouldn't oppose it."

Stafford added that Treasury Sec-

Peres, Rabin reunited in effort to oust Begin

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Opposition Labor Party leader Shimon Peres and his enemy Yitzhak Rabin kissed and made up five days before Israel's June 30 election in a bid to trim Prime Minister Menachem Begin's lead.

Peres announced Thursday, shortly after a TV debate with Begin, that Rabin, a former Labor Party prime minister and ambassador to the United States, would become his defense minister if their socialist party defeats Begin's conservative Likud bloc at the polls.

The defense post had been promised to Haim Bar-Lev, a former military chief of staff. He agreed to be deputy prime minister instead and said he had no hard feelings.

Peres and Rabin, political foes since they served in the late Prime Minister Golda Meir's government, appeared together at a news conference. Peres said the party needed Rabin's help in order to defeat Begin's coalition, and Rabin said he was withdrawing his past vows never to serve under Peres.

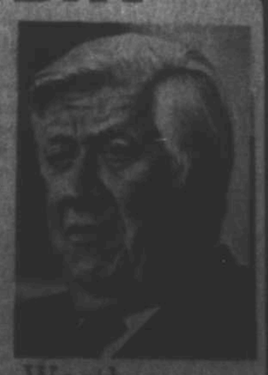

Rabin, the architect of Israel's 1967 victory against the Arabs, succeeded Mrs. Meir after her retirement in 1974. The first Sabra, or native-born Israeli, to hold the nation's highest elected office, Rabin resigned on Dec. 20, 1976, after losing a confidence vote in Parliament and became caretaker government chief pending election of a new Parliament.

With nearly a month to go in that campaign, Rabin was forced to surrender the party leadership following the revelation that he and his wife maintained a bank account in Washington in violation of the law concerning overseas bank deposits.

Sunday Through Tuesday

West Texas: Fair most sections through the early part of next week except widely scattered mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms south Sunday. Continued very warm to hot afternoons and mild nights with highs ranging from the mid 80s north to near 110 southwest and lows mostly in the mid 60s to the lower 70s.

Chance of rain

Midlanders may get a break from the heat with a 20 percent chance of rain in the forecast for tonight and Saturday.

The skies are predicted to be clear to partly cloudy with the high Friday and Saturday near 90 degrees, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The low tonight will be in the upper 60s. East to southeasterly winds 10 to 15 mph today and Saturday calming to 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Thursday's high was a relatively mild 93 degrees, 12 degrees shy of the record high for the date of 105 degrees set in 1953. This morning's low of 65 also didn't touch the record low for today — 59 degrees in 1958.

Some portions of Midland received a few sprinkles from thunderstorms that skipped through the area Thursday afternoon. The rain gauge at the NWS office recorded .03 of an inch, upping the monthly total to .46 of an inch and the annual figure to 6.61 inches.

United Way to go for $1.35 million

The United Way of Midland, Inc., campaign for 1982 will go after a record $1.35 million, the board of directors decided Thursday in its monthly meeting.

Leading the drive will be campaign chairman George W. Bush and vice chairman Joe Kloesel.

"This year's goal represents a 16 percent increase over last year's goal," said Bush. "But it is a realistic reflection of Midland's growth and the growing needs United Way agencies have experienced during the last year. Knowing the generosity and community spirit of Midlanders, I think we will be successful in meeting this challenge."

Two new agencies have been approved for admission to the United Way and will be included in the funding package for 1982. These are Midland Rape Crisis Center and the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Children.

Currently, 18 agencies are receiving funding under United Way this year, based on the 1980 fall campaign.

Following the board meeting, United Way agency directors met and projected an allocation of $37,000 for the Rape Crisis Center and $13,000 to the Center for Battered Women.

For the Rape Crisis Center, this represents 69.7 percent of its annual budget; and for the Center for Battered Women, this is 9.6 percent of the annual budget.

All allocation figures are based jointly on agency requests and recommendations of United Way volunteer panels which review each agency's operation twice a year. In addition, the recommendations are subject to appeal by the agencies and will not become final until after the fund-raising campaign.

Besides adding the two agencies to the 1982 roll, the board decided to phase out funding of the Midland and Lee Youth Centers. The board voted at its April meeting to decrease support of this organization by half for 1982 and to eliminate support in 1983. The decision came after studying an allocations committee report. Youth center directors accepted the decision as an indication they had grown beyond dependence on United Way funding.

Youth Center board members indicated they would investigate other sources of funds and possible new activities for the centers. For the past four years, United Way funding has accounted for about 12 percent of the centers' budget.

"By making these changes," remarked Bush, "the United way has demonstrated its continuing responsiveness to the community's wishes. Our campaign goal also reflects Midland's growing needs, and I feel certain people will respond to those needs generously."

Fenimore pleads guilty to largest bank robbery

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A 34-year-old man has pleaded guilty to the largest bank robbery in U.S. history, but he still refuses to help authorities find his two accomplices in the $3.3 million heist.

Douglas Bruce Fenimore pleaded guilty Thursday to the April 22 robbery of the First National Bank of Tucson, Ariz., under a plea bargain granting him immunity from prosecution in several other major cases in which he is a suspect.

But U.S. Attorney Roxanne Conlin said the plea bargain was no signal that Fenimore, of Des Moines, was cooperating in the search for two other men sought in the Tucson case.

"Mr. Fenimore still isn't talking to us," Ms. Conlin said.

Three or four heavily armed robbers wearing Halloween and stocking masks overpowered a bank janitor in the early morning hours of April 22 and then waited until the First National Bank manager showed up. They threatened to kill both men unless the manager opened a vault where cash from the bank's other local branches was kept overnight.

Neither the bank manager nor the janitor was injured as the robbers made off with the $3.3 million.

Fenimore also pleaded guilty earlier this month to two federal charges in c9nnection with the $500,000 robbery of a jewelry store in Walnut Creek, Calif., and a $1.5 million jewelry robbery in Phoenix, Ariz.

David Lee Grandstaff, 38, and Douglas Wayne Brown, 34, both of Des Moines, were indicted along with Fenimore in the Phoenix jewelry robbery, but still are at large. A fourth man is serving a jail term for the May 1980 heist.

Brown also was indicted in the Walnut Creek case.

Ms. Conlin said officials now believe they have recovered all the money Fenimore got from the Tucson robbery. Federal prosecutors said they have recovered $950,000 since Fenimore's arrest June 3.

In his appearance Thursday in U.S. District Court, Fenimore admitted all the cash recovered came from the Tucson bank.

He faces up to 45 years in prison and a $30,000 fine when sentenced Aug. 4 by U.S. District Judge William C. Stuart.

Police arrested Fenimore when he surrendered after a wild chase through the Des Moines suburbs. Investigators said they believed he had returned to see his two children.

The agreement frees Fenimore from prosecution for several robberies in which federal officials said he is a suspect, including a $110,000 Denver bank robbery in January and armored truck robberies here in 1976 and 1978. Officials believe from $250,000 to $500,000 was taken in the latter case, but haven't estimated the value of the 1976 haul because mostly checks were taken.

Ms. Conlin said federal officials also have recovered about $800,000 in jewelry.

The plea bargain also grants immunity to family members and friends who might have assisted Fenimore after the Tucson robbery. Ms. Conlin said the agreement was "in the best interests of justice."

Dressed in jeans and a white pullover, Fenimore stood with his arms folded throughout the court hearing. After the appearance, Fenimore asked for a few minutes alone with his family.

He was being held without bond in Polk County Jail.

The previous largest bank robbery in the United States occurred Dec. 19, 1978, when robbers took $2.26 million from a Wells Fargo armored truck in New York. It was considered a bank robbery because the truck had just picked up money from banks.

Woman allegedly raped, stabbed at residence

Police investigators this morning were looking for a man who allegedly raped and stabbed a 19-year-old Midland woman early today in the bedroom of her Midland residence.

The woman told police officers she believed the man gained access to her home through a front window. She said he came into her bedroom, struck her over the head several times with an unknown object and then raped her.

The assailant also stabbed the woman several times in the back, in the living room of the home, wiped blood off the knife blade against the couch, threw down the knife and left through the residence's front door, the woman said.

Officers questioned two men at the scene, one of them the woman's boyfriend. The boyfriend said he had left the woman's house at 1:45 p.m. and had not returned. The other man said he had left at 4:45 p.m., returned at 7:15 p.m., left at 7:20 p.m. and not returned.

When police arrived at the woman's blood-stained residence they reported finding a trail of blood leading from the front door to the middle of the living room, through the hallway to two bedrooms and throughout the bedrooms.

Police Roundup

The woman was treated for multiple stab wounds at Midland Memorial Hospital's emergency room about 4:30 a.m. today and released.

No arrests had been made in the case by early this morning and the investigation was continuing.

Police also are investigating an incident early this morning in which a 41-year-old Midland man was shot in the leg.

According to police reports, Billy Don Ramson had just walked out of RV's Barbecue when he heard several shots fired and ducked back inside. He told police he stayed inside several minutes and then went to the Koko Lounge, 1811 E. Front Ave.

While at the Koko Lounge, someone told him he had been shot in the leg, Ramson said, so he proceeded to the emergency room. Hospital officials notified police. Ramson was treated and released at 3:08 a.m. for a wound from a small caliber weapon.

A fight among several individuals at the Executive Lounge parking lot, 3803 W. Wall Ave., early today sent at two men to Midland Memorial Hospital.

A 22-year-old Midland man was treated and released for a bruised chest at the emergency room and a 37-year-old Midlander was admitted to the hospital for treatment of a deep contusion to the forehead, according to a hospital spokesperson.

Police reports indicated a fight broke out at the parking garage about 1:30 a.m. today and the two men were severely beaten. The 22-year-old reportedly told police he was struck in the chest with a piece of 2-by-4 lumber.

A 34-year-old Midland man was taken into custody for questioning by police, reports indicated, but no charges had been filed by early this morning.

A five-vehicle pileup at the intersection of Thomason Drive and Wall Avenue at 6:55 p.m. Thursday sent one Midland resident to MMH with minor injuries.

Police said the accident occurred as Victor M. Lozano, 27, of Crane was driving his pickup west on Wall Avenue and was involved in a collision with a car driven south on Thomason Drive by Mark L. Pitts, 23, of Midland.

After the collision with Pitts' vehicle, Lozano's pickup also struck vehicles being driven east on Wall Avenue by John R. Taylor, 33, of Andrews, Arlon E. Perkins, 56, of Odessa and Mark T. Wellen, 27, of 702 W. Nobles Ave.

Pitts was the only person to require medical treatment. He was treated and released at the hospital emergency room.

Search for the Titanic no fairy tale to Grimm money to send a pair of local photographers to western Canada to look for Big Foot, the large, hairy, man-like creature said to have been terrorizing some of the nativesin that rgion.

And his big year was last year, which contained two major announcements.

First, he was going to be spending money to search for the sunken ocean liner Titanic which went to the bottom of the North Atlantic after ramming an iceberg in 1912.

Second, he was commissioning noted sculptor Robert Berks to carve a 40-foot high, 200-foot long panoramic bas-relief into the side of a mesa he owns outside Abilene. The work would be a pictorial history of the Old West as told from the point of view of the buffalo.

"This will last longer than the pyramids," Berks said of the work during a groundbreaking ceremony earlier this year.

"I bet you came here thinking all this stuff I do is just half-baked, didn't you," Grimm said as he held up a model of the Titanic. "Like I work on whims — just wake up some morning and say, 'Hey, let's go look for the Titanic.' Well, I put a lot of thought and research and time into these things.

"I look on them as business ventures. Each one is a business venture designed to be successful — to make money. They're not off-the-cuff larks."

The search for Noah's Ark, for example, resulted in a movie — "The Search for Noah's Ark," which was not a box-office smash but "made money," Grimm said.

His Titanic search, cut short last winter by foul weather off the coast of Newfoundland, is scheduled to begin again when the research ship Gyre, with Grimm on board, leaves Boston. And if he finds the hulk, a book and a movie are waiting in the wings for near-immediate release.

"Maybe I differ from a lot of other people by doing these projects when someone else would just dream about them but...would be embarrassed about saying, 'I'm gonna go climb Mount Everest,' or something," he said. "But once you start one of them, people say, 'Oh, boy, that's a great idea, I wish somebody would go do that.' "

Grimm said many of his associates in "conservative" enterprises, such as oil and gas exploration, also have interests in his more exotic projects, such as the Titanic expedition. And they, he said, do not consider him eccentric, strange or whimsical.

"There are others involved in these things, geologists and engineers, friends and associates of mine. Do you think that they would have the same whims that I do? No, they wouldn't. I think they enjoy participating in these things because there's a chance they'll get their money back, maybe make a profit. And maybe it is on the order of looking for a gold mine, but they're business ventures."

But why such out-of-the-way projects? Why not investments in the silver market, like Dallas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt, a longtime friend? Or a baseball team, like fellow oilman Eddie Chiles?

Basically, his answer is that he considers the potential reward worth the risk, just like oil drilling but a lot more fun.

"If I do find the Titanic — and I will — if we found Big Foot, or the Loch Ness monster, nobody would think we're silly. When you confirm the existence of something, you've got the support of everybody. And until you do confirm it, or make these discoveries, people share with me the excitement of looking for them. It's a great search.

"I get to go do these things, take part in these adventures, but I always try to share them with the public, with the average man, because he would love to go do them, too. He dreams about them, but he hasn't had the opportunity."

Board, house can't force parolees to attend church

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles and a Houston halfway house must not require parolees to attend religious services pending a hearing today, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue issued the order Thursday after four Texas Department of Corrections inmates paroled to the halfway house, The Shoulder, filed suit claiming their right to free religious expression is being violated because they are required to attend in-house church services twice daily.

But Shoulder Administrator Vincent West defended the program. "We have a private, non-denominational program, where people come in to talk. We get no federal grants because we have chapel services," West said.

Michael I. Lynn, convicted of drug posession; Jeffery Allen Barney, car theft; Robert Wesley McDonald, burglary; and Rickey Glen Scott, robbery, asked the judge to issue an injunction barring the board and The Shoulder from violating their constitutional rights.

The suit, filed by the American Civil Liberties Union, said the parole board failed to disclose the religious requirement before the inmates were paroled to the halfway house.

The plaintiffs, who all claim to be devout Christians who attend church voluntarily, said they considered the mandatory services to be "coercive and offensive to their religious and personal convictions."

Benny Young, office manager of the board's southeast Houston district which supervises the halfway house, declined to comment on the action until he had more knowledge about the suit.

Oxley wins congressional seat

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — With a victory margin of only 378 votes, Republican Michael Oxley claimed Ohio's 4th District congressional seat and began laying plans for a hasty swearing-in. But his Democratic opponent says the fight isn't over yet.

Oxley squeaked past Democrat Dale Locker in voting Thursday. He told supporters at a victory rally his staff already was checking to see how quickly he could move to Washington.

The Findlay state representative said he was anxious to lend his support to President Reagan's budget proposals.

According to unofficial final returns, Oxley won 41,904 votes to Locker's 41,526.

"We're going to go for a recount, there's no question about it. We're not trying to drag this thing out — it's just ... close," said Locker's press secretary, Geoffrey Ely.

Second session signup nearing end

Only five more days remain to preregister for Midland College's second summer session, according to registrar Dee Windsor.

Early registration figures at the end of the first week are running just about even with the count for the same period last year, Windsor said.

Persons wishing to take one or more credit courses during the second summer term are encouraged to visit the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building. Pre-registration hours are from 7 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday of next week and the same hours on Tuesday, July 7. Midland College will be closed for its observance of Independence Day on Monday, July 6.

Students who pre-register receive a time permit that allocates specific times to report for registration, which will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m. on Wednesday, July 8. Classes for the second summer term begin July 9 and conclude on Aug. 13.

For specific information regarding the academic courses being offered during the second term, persons may call 684-7851, extension 166, or come by the college's Administration Building.

Royalty owners seek exemption

retary Donald Regan agreed with the president that the White House could handle such a measure.

But to get that legislation before Reagan, it will take 18 hour days of lobbying in all the states, according to Stafford. "But I don't think we will see anything until after July."

Stafford, who had been in Eunice, N.M., Tuesday to talk with royalty owners and in El Paso on Thursday, said his national organization lists 5,000 individual members. State affiliates in 49 states up that number to 30,000.

Iran executes eight rebels

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Government firing squads executed eight presumed Kurdish rebels at dawn today in the Kurdish town of Ushnuiyeh, Tehran Radio said.

The radio said the eight were "counter-revolutionaries" and members of illegal armed groups, accused of rebelling against the Islamic Republic of Iran and "firing on defenseless people in the region."

Their deaths raised to 52 the number of people reported executed so far this week.

It was not clear if today's executions were related to Wednesday's attack by independence-seeking Kurdish rebels on a funeral procession in the Kurdish stronghold of Mahabad, 30 miles southeast of Ushnuiyeh.

Six mourners were killed in the attack and the city's governor and six revolutionary guardsmen were wounded. They were burying a local dignitary killed Tuesday by Kurdish rebels, the state radio said.

After the attack, authorities in Tehran charged that the rebels have joined leftist groups in an "anti-Islamic counter-revolution under the pretext of supporting (ousted President Abolhassan) Bani-Sadr."

However, there was speculation the Kurds were using the turmoil spawned by Bani-Sadr's impeachment and ouster to further their campaign to break the Tehran government's hold on the Kurdish-populated provinces of Kurdistan and Azerbaijan in northwestern Iran.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Soviets keeping mum on treatment

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recall reading some time ago about an athlete who had been paralyzed in an accident, and who went to the Soviet Union for treatment which he said was not available in the United States. Do you know if the treatment used in the Soviet Union has been perfected and, if so, whether it has been adopted in this country? — Terry

Dear Terry: I believe the person to whom you refer suffered a spinal cord injury. The Soviet Union has stopped public discussion of the treatment provided, which in part included the use of enzymes and physical therapy, and apparently no longer offers it to Americans. The reason for the Russians' change in attitude may be found in the comments of officials of the National Institutes of Health, who have reported that patients who underwent the treatment showed little improvement.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My three-year-old son had a seizure that my doctor said was related to a fever he had at the time. The episode was very upsetting and it still bothers me when I think of it. The doctor prescribed some medicine that he says should prevent further seizures, but I'm still very concerned. I would appreciate any information about these seizures and their significance, particularly about what they mean in terms of the future. — Mrs. N.Y.

Dear Mrs. Y.: Your son apparently had a "febrile seizure" which, as the name suggest, is a seizure associated with fever. It usually occurs in infants or young children, from approximately three months to five years of age. While febrile seizures in most instances are relatively benign, they can be extremely upsetting to the family, as you well know. In addition, there is some slight risk of physical injury to the child at the time of the seizure.

Most children who experience a febrile seizure return to normal health after the event. Unless they receive some treatment, however, it is estimated that about 30 percent to 40 percent will have a second seizure. That is why your doctor prescribed the medication. Phenobarbital is the drug most often used, but others are available.

Soviets demanding vacation rights

By PATRICK MENEY
Agence France-Presse

MOSCOW — Soviet citizens are demanding new rights — to annual family vacations, now a rare privilege.

Usually husband and wife, working in different factories or offices, find they are given different vacation periods.

"We have been married for three years and we have a two-year-old child, but we have never been able to take a vacation together," a young woman complained recently in a letter to the Komsomolskaya Pravda, official newspaper of the Soviet Communist Youth movement. If an official publication publishes a letter on this kind of subject, it means the complaint expresses the view of many Soviet citizens and is therefore taken seriously by the authorities.

In this case the writer went on: "The government has so far not been able to solve this problem of family vacations.

The difficulty arises from the Soviet system itself, as factories and offices do not close for annual vacations as in many other countries. Workers are sent on vacation at dates seemingly picked at random or according to the needs of the business or industry.

The result is that summer vacations — usually a month in the Soviet Union — are often given to husbands and wives at diferent times. There is no doubt this is a nationwide problem, because 93 percent of women here go to work.

The Komsomolskaya Pravda letter writer said a large number of marriages failed because it was impossible for husband, wife and children to be together on vacation. One-third of all Soviet marriages end in divorce.

She asked: "What do you expect when the husband goes off to the sunny south on vacation by himself because his wife has a different vacation date? Even for our honeymoon, we were unable to go away together.

"We see each other only at weekends, and then we have to catch up on domestic chores."

There can be no doubt Soviet authorities are well aware of the problem.

For several years an experiment has been carried out at a factory in Kiev, based on Western methods in which the factory closes down in August and the entire work force goes on vacation at the same time.

The Soviet press has called the experiment a great success, with everybody happy and production increased. But it will be many years before it is adopted on a nationwide basis.

In the meantime, factory workers will have to go on jostling and maneuvering to get the dates that suit their spouses so they can have a family vacation together.

Energy department refuses to turn over shale information to Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department, faced with a congressional subpoena, is standing fast in its refusal to turn over information about negotiations on government subsidies for a commercial shale oil project in Colorado.

"The department feels it has a responsibility, as part of the executive branch, to go forward with this process," spokesman Jim Merna said. "We can't honor the subcommittee's request."

On Wednesday, the House Government Operations subcommittee on environment, energy and natural resources voted to subpoena all DOE documents connected with Union Oil Co.'s request for government price guarantees for its Colorado shale oil project.

"We don't go off issuing subpoenas haphazardly," Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., said. The move came after three days of discussions between subcommittee staff and DOE officials last week failed to yield the information the panel is seeking.

Moffett, the subcommittee chairman, said the panel's major concerns are that DOE has not determined that a subsidy is needed to convince Union Oil to build the plant or that whatever subsidy is agreed on is justified.

"I fail to see how giving government money to projects that would go forward anyway is a wise decision," Moffett said. "In doing that, in fact, you're denying money to other projects."

But Merna, calling the subcommittee action "unprecedented," said that releasing the information before negotiations on the project are completed would "impair the integrity of the process leading to awards of public contracts."

He said Moffett has been advised that the department will consider any legal questions he raises about the proposal before those negotiations are completed, possibly in the next two weeks.

Subcommittee members argued, however, that the Union Oil contract would be binding once signed so any review after that will mean nothing should serious questions about its propriety remain.

Union Oil is one of two companies seeking federal aid under the $3.3 billion Defense Production Act. Edith Holleman, a subcommittee staff member who has been involved in the dispute, told the panel that unconfirmed trade publication reports indicate the government is ready to guarantee Union Oil $89 a barrel for between 10,000 and 20,000 barrels of oil a day from the plant.

She said there is no indication what the maximum amount of government subsidy for Union Oil might be. Government estimates place the cost of a barrel of oil at a maximum of $58 in 1990, not adjusted for inflation between now and then.

Rep. Floyd Fithian, D-Ind., said the $89-a-barrel price amounts to nearly twice the government estimate for the cost of producing synthetic fuels.

On the other project, Congress will have automatic review of the contract between DOE and the Tosco Corp. because it involves a government loan guarantee for construction of a shale oil plant adjacent to Union Oil's.

Republicans urge Reagan to delay AWACS

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Pres Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans, saying they still may be able to salvage the planned sale of advanced radar planes to Saudi Arabia, are urging the White House to delay once again submitting the deal for congressional review.

A majority of Congress has gone on record in opposition to the sale of the five planes — Advanced Warning and Control System or AWACS — to Saudi Arabia.

Sen. Charles Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the administration should find out why 54 senators are opposed to the sale and try to resolve those concerns in a final sales package.

"I would hope we could agree on a package that meets the concerns," the Illinois Republican said in an interview Thursday.

Percy said he recommended the delay in a meeting with Richard V. Allen, President Reagan's national security adviser. Sens. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a close friend of Reagan's, and John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, also attended the meeting and concurred, Percy said.

Reagan announced last March that he intended to sell Saudi Arabia five AWACS and missile and long-range fuel tanks for 62 F-15 jet fighters the Saudis already have ordered. But he agreed to delay the sale so his aides could line up congressional support.

Reagan planned to formally propose the sale on July 8, but this week majorities in both the House and Senate went on record against the sale.

Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., and Norman Lent, R-N.Y., announced Wednesday that more than half the House, 224 members, now co-sponsor a resolution to veto the sale.

And Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., announced that 54 senators, more than half that body, had signed a letter asking Reagan to drop the sale.

Like any major weapons deal, the AWACS sale is subject to congressional veto. A majority would be needed in both houses to void the sale, something that has never been done.

The major concerns already expressed in floor speeches are that the planes would increase the Arab threat to Israel and that secret AWACS equipment might be compromised.

The administration has said the Saudi AWACS would not be a threat to Israel because they would be out of range for spying on the Jewish state. If one came too close, the administration said, Israeli jets could simply shoot it down.

Administration officials also have indicated that they are negotiating arrangments with the Saudis to protect the secrecy of the AWACS equipment.

Morocco OK's referendum call

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — King Hassan II today took Morocco a step closer to a peaceful settlement of the guerrilla war in Western Sahara by accepting for the first time proposals for a referendum to decide the fate of the disputed territory, sources said.

The sources, who heard Hassan speak in a closed session of the Organization of African Unity summit here, said he endorsed a "controlled referendum" supervised by a group of African and Arab countries and Spain, the former colonial power in the Western Sahara.

Hassan gave no further details, said the sources, who insisted on anonymity. Moroccan delegates said details of a referendum plan "would come later."

A Polisario spokesman described the king's proposal as "obviously unacceptable to the Saharan people" but made no other comment.

The conflict in the Western Sahara is one of the most contentious facing the OAU, and has threatened to divide the 18-year-old, 50-nation organization.

Morocco historically claims the phosphate-rich territory and has for six years been fighting independence-seeking guerrillas of the Polisario Front, supported by Algeria and Libya.

Hassan, was quoted as saying in a 35-minute speech in Arabic and French, that any referendum among the Western Sahara's 100,000 inhabitants would have to satisfy Morocco's national goals as well as those of the OAU, which had proposed a plebiscite to settle the future of the territory.

According to the sources, the king said that he was urged to change his earlier position — rejecting any referendum in the Sahara territory as a violation of Morocco's territorial integrity — by many friendly countries in the region, as well as by Britain, France, West Germany and Spain.

Hollander barred from television

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Xaviera Hollander, author of the "Happy Hooker," has been barred from appearing on a prime time talks show on Israel's state television.

Ms. Hollander, whose autobiography about her experiences as a brothel keeper in New York City became a worldwide bestseller, was to have appeared on "The Good Hour," a popular entertainment show broadcast after the start of the Jewish Sabbath on Friday evenings.

"The Good Hour is a family program watched by 90 percent of the country and there is no place for this kind of element," said state television director Yitzhak Shimoni.

He told The Associated Press he would not have objected to Ms. Hollander being interviewed on a serious, late-night program, but added that no such program exists at present.

Ms. Hollander has been in Israel for the past week attending an international sexology congress — and stealing the show, to the apparent chagrin of many serious sex researchers.

A group of sexologists issued a statement regretting that the media had turned the Happy Hooker into "the star of the congress." They complained that her talk on sexual gratification amounted to only seven minutes of a total of 200 hours of lectures.

Ms. Hollander was not available for comment.

Producers, directors agree

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Chances that Hollywood directors will join screen writers in a strike against movie producers have lessened with a tentative agreement on profit sharing in the home video market.

The thorny issue has put both actors and writers on the Hollywood picket lines during the past year.

While members of the Directors Guild of America appeared alongside the striking screen writers on a picket line Thursday at the gates of 20th Century Fox Studios, the producers' negotiators announced agreement on a profit split with directors.

The pact would give directors 2 per cent of the profits a movie makes after it earns a certain amount, said Jan Slater, spokeswoman for the Motion Picture and Television Producers Industry negotiating committee.
