Principles Of Sound Banking Will Be Observed In Housing Program

By JAMES A. MOFFETT, Federal Housing Administrator (Copyright, 1934, By Associated Press).

Author Of Book Desires Copies Of 'Wastelands'

A fine, old popular tradition has the cobbler turning out shoes while his children go shoeless.

Without custom or tradition, a novelist now finds himself without copies of his novel.

Robert Cosgriff, novelist who spent some time in Big Spring five years ago as guest of Bob Rainey, has written here in an effort to "recover" just a few copies of the book, now out of print.

HEAT RECORD EQUALLED

CINCINNATI, (AP)—Not only was the highest single day's heat record broken here recently but an all-time mark for continued hotness was equalled as well. For 23 days in July the temperature was more than 90 degrees, equalling a record established in 1901.

Relief Payroll For This Week To Be $4,500

Relief payrolls this week will amount to roughly $4,500, R. H. McNew, county administrator, said Friday.

This is the average figure for the past three weeks. Four shifts of 50 each are employed daily at the canning plant and a shift of 75 is kept on the highway No. 1 project, east and west.

Hugh Johnson Reduces Force In Washington

Forming Of Codes Has Been Completed; Employment To Be Given

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Hugh Johnson Friday notified NRA workers of the Blue Eagle organization that reached the point where a personnel reduction must be made.

The notice was in the nature of a personal letter, which went to all employees. The notice said: "We are confronted with the necessity of a slight reduction in personnel because work that had to be done has declined in volume, but I want you to know I am laying down the rule that no person who has been efficient in this organization shall be let go without a period of notice, and this organization will endeavor to find other employment for those no longer needed."

Johnson's notice went out as NRA reached the day officially set for the end of code-making and beginning of a new emphasis on code enforcement.

This change in the phase of NRA work was believed an explanation of probable curtailment to forces.

Texas To Act On Water Pact

Pecos Agreement May Be Presented To Sponsors August 27

AUSTIN, (AP)—A compact between New Mexico and Texas apportioning waters of the Pecos river probably will be presented to the Texas legislature for ratification at the Aug. 27 special session, the attorney general's department said Thursday.

The compact was ratified by New Mexico last year. The agreement would give New Mexico water sufficient to irrigate 76,000 acres and would give Texas water for 40,000 acres. Excess waters above these amounts would be divided equally between the states.

Confirmation of the compact by Texas would end a controversy of nearly two decades between the states. Negotiations toward the agreement were started in 1919. The compact would give Texas until Jan. 1, 1950, to complete the Red Bluff dam in Reeves and Loving counties about 39 miles inside Texas from the New Mexico line.

A PWA loan has been granted for the dam and preliminary work started, said Ralph Tarrabough, assistant attorney general.

Cartels

Anybody who can suggest a painless, yet effective, method of enforcing NRA mandates to industry and labor will be received with open arms by the Roosevelt New Deal.

One of the Blue Eagle's highest officials confides that NRA is just about at its wits end over the problem of making its order stick. Every time NRA cracks down on a code violator, a vociferous howl goes up in assorted directions. In recent months whenever an issue has arisen the Blue Eagle has been more flouted than flown.

Harrassed government codifiers have been searching desperately for a solution. They had the licensing provision as a threat up in June 18 of this year, but the White House elected to let it die without test. Now they have nothing but the force of public opinion—which unfortunately for General Johnson and his lads has been bouncing around at tangents lately.

There isn't much that can be done at this late date unless Uncle Sam wants to borrow the cartel system in effect in certain European countries. This, of course, would necessitate an "authoritative government" a dictatorship—which could always enforce its edicts with the threat of taking over bodily any recalcitrant industry.

A bad boy gets obnoxious in any of the strong-arm nations his industrial colleagues promptly clamp down on him. The majority knows that if it doesn't the entire industry may be penalized severely. NRA hasn't reached the point yet of proposing such a system. It would clash violently with the whole background of Johnson himself. But many of the abundant Young Liberals are in a mood to cheer for it. They got encouragement when President Roosevelt at Glacier Park again promised the people protection from exploitation by private interests.

More conservative officials are of the opinion NRA was "sold" badly in the beginning and that nothing much can be done about the situation. In the first frenzy of ballyhoo

'Babe' Says He's Through As A Player

Would Like To Remain In Game As Manager And Pinch Hitter

BOSTON, (AP)—Babe Ruth, for many years kingpin of baseball, Friday settled all conjecture as to his immediate future by stating to newspapermen:

"I'm definitely through as a regular player at the end of this season."

He said he would like to remain in the game as manager and do some pinch hitting.

Cattle Buying At Standstill

County Administrator Meets Awaits Orders From Headquarters

Cattle buying, except for stuff accepted for canning plant consumption, is still at a standstill in Howard county.

County Administrator R. H. McNew said Friday that no more cattle would be accepted for shipment until he was so notified by proper authorities.

Cattle have been bought at such a rapid rate, he said, that the processing end of the government's program has been unable to keep pace with purchasing. All available pens have been congested with stock bought as a drought relief measure.

Until this congestion is relieved, no more than 100 head a day will be purchased in this county. This will care for the needs of the government meat canning plant here, he indicated.

Meanwhile many farmers and ranchers of not only this but surrounding counties have on their hands cattle which they have marketed to the government but cannot be delivered. Others have had in offers for as long as a month but because of the press of the program, have yet to have their herds inspected and appraised.

John A. "Jack" Cummings left Friday afternoon on a vacation trip. Cummings is manager of the local United States weather bureau.

Re-Investigate Relief Cases

County Relief Administrator Says Weeding Out Process To Be Made

A complete re-investigation of every case record on the active relief rolls of Howard county has been started by County Administrator R. H. McNew.

The administrator said that the re-check was being effected in order to weed the rolls of a number of deserving cases.

"It is a violation of the state and federal laws to misrepresent or create a false impression as to actual needs of relief," explained McNew. "Any person who has applied for relief and did not actually and seriously need it had best report to Miss Bobbie Malone and have their case removed from the active roll."

He warned that case workers were going to report all irregular cases to proper authorities for action.

"It is the direct responsibility of the applicant for relief that he not ask for relief only when in actual need," declared McNew. His staff is investigating every statement made by applicants for relief.

He indicated that a preliminary check had disclosed some irregularities on the part of a few applicants.

Flew's Team Victorious Over Carter Chevy 3-2

Morgan Hits For Winner

Two Base Blow Brings In Two In Seventh Inning

By HANK HART
Flew's soft ball contingent emerged victorious over the Chevrolet base action ten by the score of 3-2 Thursday when Jake Morgan smashed a two base hit into left field with two aboard in the final frame. Until Morgan's hit in the seventh, it was a dingdong battle with both teams holding the enemy fairly well in check. Chevrolet went into the lead in the first inning when Sam Sain and Pop Payne tallied on Rowe's bingle down the left field foul line. Flew's men went in order until third when a free pass, a double, and a single were combined to chase two runs across the plate and tie the score. Payne tripled in the fourth and Townsend and Swatzy doubled in the later innings, but fast fielding on the part of both teams kept runs from the plate. In the final, Townsend singled and Waincott walked to set the stage for Morgan's decisive blow. The game was one of the cleanest played this year, and both managers commented on the show of sportsmanship.

Ford After Linck Team

Motor Team Hot After Linck Club In League Two Race

The Ford Motor team is hot on the trail of Linck in the league No. 2 soft ball race. The Groceries still hold the lead but the rapidly improving Ford team is close behind. Linck has won six out of eight games and has two to play, while Ford has won five out of seven and has three to play. The league No. 2 schedule ends three days earlier than the No. 1 schedule.

MANY ERRORS MAKE GAME CLOSE

The Herald Type Lice tied up again with the Lions for first place in league No. 1 by defeating the Robinson Groceries 6 to 5 Thursday night. Errors were numerous on both sides, the Lice with eight and the Groceries six. The Herald led in hits six to three.

OIL NOTES

John I. Moore No. 1 McDowell, Ordovician test in Glasscock, is down to 2800 feet in gray time. It was spudded in nearly five months ago and is to go to a contract depth of 900 feet. Borden county claims a little attention here with its Continental No. 1 Clayton-Johnson, which is now drilling at 2755 feet in any-drite. It is distinctly wildcat. Humble O. & R. No. 1 Meana discovery well in northern Andrews flowed 157 barrels on its third 24 hour gauge, dropping down from 200 for the second and 200 for the first 24 hour gauge. It will probably be deepened from its present depth of 4472 which is 400 feet into gray lime. Illinois Oil company, which contemplated development northeast of the Denman pool this year with approximately 15 wells, has made to foot from the east and 900 feet from the north lines of section 2, block 80, T-1-S, T & P survey. Its No. 1 Davis, just completed in the same block and section at a total depth of 2800 had a initial pay of 600 barrels per day. It was treated with 1000 gallons of acid at 2775 feet and pumped 153 barrels. It had an increase of oil at 2730-41 feet and shot with 250 quarts from 2672-2765 feet.

JOBLESS RELIEF NEEDS HUMAN SYMPATHY

Historians nowadays generally agree that Marie Antoinette, when she learned that the people of France had no bread did not make that famous crack—"Let them eat cake." Nevertheless, story will persist; for whether she actually said it or not, the remark illustrates perfectly the attitude of the Bourbons toward the masses of France and it helps to explain why those masses eventually rose and cut their sovereign's heads off. For some reason one is reminded of that hoary anecdote by the recent experiences of George Allen of Washington, commissioner for the District of Columbia. Mr. Allen wanted to find out how the nation's jobless men were getting on, so he put on his hat and went to stand in breadlines in such cities as Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Toledo, and Milwaukee. He came back to Washington the other day and expressed himself.

"The snottiest people on God's green earth are running the federal employment agencies," he said. "You ask them for a job and they feel they're doing you a favor to take your application. Most of the offices close at noon. Why don't they keep open all day and fight for the unemployed, trying their damndest to get them jobs?"

Now it happens that Mr. Allen met a number of Communists during his wanderings and he found, to his amazement, that they are more sympathetic which, he said, explains why jobless men sometimes come under their influence.

"The relief people," he says, "won't listen to the jobless man, much less fight for him so he turns to the Communist, who offers to go out and get what the man wants. But Communists orators can't hold their listeners if jobs are in prospect. Pass through a crowd, whisper that jobs are available here and there, and soon the Communist is talking to himself."

Now this whole problem of unemployment relief is a new one, and it was inevitable that we should make mistakes in our handling of it. But it is hard to see how a greater mistake could be made than to permit relief agents to adopt the old Marie Antoinette attitude toward the people they are supposed to help. The jobless man is always discouraged. He needs friendly sympathy and understanding just about as much as he needs a job. If the agents of his own government don't give him that sympathy they take pains to show that they feel him to be a ragged and undeserving bum—they are building up for all of us a misunderstanding and a resentment that may some day prove pretty costly.

PROMISING FIGURES
Although the customary "summer slump" in employment seems to be visiting us this year, the employment picture as a whole is slowly but surely improving.

Witness the fact that in May and June more men left the Civilian Conservation Corps to accept private employment than during any previous two months since the corps was organized. In case you're interested in exact figures, 10,028 CCC men found jobs in private industry during May, and 10,256 followed suit in June.

All this to be sure, is only a small drop in a big bucket. But the figures are valuable as straws in the wind. Slowly but surely, things are opening up for these young men. May the present trend continue!

SETTLING DOWN
It begins to look as if the Communist regime in Russia is feeling more confident of its popularity with the masses than it has felt at any time since the revolution.

Elbow School Contract To Be Let Saturday

Contract for the addition to the Elbow school will be let 1:30 p. m. Saturday from the county superintendent's office.

The structure, a frame building 48x60 feet, will be used to house classrooms, a library and home economics laboratory. Elbow common school district will finance the project without the necessity of a bond issue.

Coach J. Gordon Obie "Iron Head" Bristow will return tonight or tomorrow from the Texas Tech coaching school. All of the boys are trying to figure out a few new tricks.

Principal George H. Gentry said today he expected about thirty boys would make the football camp. He added that the trip will be so costly the players will be forced to chip in a small sum if they expect to go. Some individuals are going to help out, Gentry said.

For a while word drifted around that assistant coach George Brown would not be back for another year. But word was received Thursday that he would return.

The Colorado Lion soft ball team called off an exhibition game yesterday afternoon which was scheduled to be played here tonight with the local Lion contingent.

The Ford soft ball team received credit Thursday for defeating the Midland Hokus Pokus soft ball team at Midland. Manager Leon Cole of the Ford team was misinformed. His cohorts lost 10 to 9.

Robinson soft ball players protested their game with the Herald Type Lice last night. However, President Hall witnessed the play on which the protest was made and would not uphold the Groceries' kick.

Flew's settled a heated protest Thursday night by defeating Chevrolet. Chevy had protested a game with the Fordmen, and Hall made an agreement with the managers that if Carter won Thursday night the teams would have to play the game over. Otherwise the protest would be off. Chevrolet's loss last night put them out of the championship race.

TULSA 14, INDIANS 7
TULSA, (AP)—The Tulsa Oilers continued their terrific spurge of extra base hitting Thursday night and bowled over the Oklahoma City Indians, 14 to 7, in the last game of the series. Alex Hooke and Paul Easterling hit home runs.

Ford should breeze through the C. & P. Druggists next Friday, and on the next Monday will be the tell-tale battle when Ford and Linck come to grips. If the Linckmen win they'll have to play bang-up ball, as the Ford team is one of the most improved clubs in the No. 2 league.

In the league No. 2 schedule where Linck and Ford were scheduled to play on Saturday, August 18, the game will be moved up to Monday. The Coden Lab-Flew tilt scheduled for Sunday, August 19, will be played Tuesday. It will be the last game of the season in the No. 2 league.

The Type Lice completed their scoring in the sixth inning when Redding and Wilson tallied. Redding binged, advanced on a hit by Anderson, and scored when Wilson hit. Savage and Arnold hit to score Wilson.

The Robinsonites rallied in the third frame to knot the count. H. Hart led off with a clean single and Ebbs followed with a mighty whack between first and short that got by center fielder Robinson and Ebbs followed Hart across home plate.

Long 'Sore At Him'

TEXAS TOPICS

By Raymond Brooks

While the government is building its 1800-mile forest for the songbirds, it should consider the poor ducks that this year have no landing field from Canada to the gulf. Why not some emergency lakes or reservoirs in the streams? or even artificial supplies of water to restore some of the shallow lakes?

Actually, during the past several days, the Brazos river, for long stretches, has stopped flowing. Down as far as Waco, its flow perhaps does not exceed 16 gallons per second, or about the product of a hillside spring. Yet the Brazos alone has drawn out of its watershed in 10 years enough flood waters alone, in excess of its normal flow to resupply every lake and pool and stream in the state in bounteous plenty of water for months. The Colorado river, which gets as low as 65 gallons per second flow, runs as high as 1,600,000 gallons a second in floods.

Drought like this calls sharp attention to the need of conserving all the water resources. Not alone for fish and ducks, but for live stock, for city water supply, for the protection of great areas, for irrigation country and maybe, too, for a continued supply of moisture that would come back over the parched land as rainfall more abundant than now.

to one of the end seats next January. The incoming governor would be assumed to have the same desire to make his appointee chairman as actuated the present governor.

It would seem that the commission ought like other states agencies, name its own chairman from its membership. The railroad commission elects its senior term member chairman every two years. The board of control names a member its chairman.

COMMENDS GOVERNMENT'S CATTLE BUYING PROGRAM

Big Spring, Texas, Aug. 10, 1934. To the Editor of The Herald, Big Spring, Texas. Dear Sir: From the front page of the Daily Herald on August 9th I notice where Mr. I. H. Cauble has wired Senator Connally complaining of the buying campaign of the government. I am forced to take issue with Mr. Cauble on his view as to the campaign of cattle buying of the government. It is not the purpose of the government to make money for any individual, but instead to try to take care of the destitute people who are in need. Furthermore, the government is not forcing any man to take the prices that are being paid for them, and if it isn't sufficient pay for Mr. Cauble for his class of stuff he has the privilege of holding them for better prices. If he thinks the chances are good, the packing house may take the same position as Mr. Cauble in regard to the live packing plants that are being established over the country in opposition to them, as they are not in a position to handle the market as they have been heretofore and to prices—both buying and selling prices. I am sure if it was not for the action of the government that cattle would be down at the present time to $4 and $5 per head due to the drought-stricken condition of the country. I am mailing Senator Connally another man's views on this matter. Sincerely,

J. V. DAVIS,
Big Spring, Texas.

Allred Says Sales Tax Is Burdensome

Claims Hunter Changes Sales Tax Talk To 'Blended Tax'

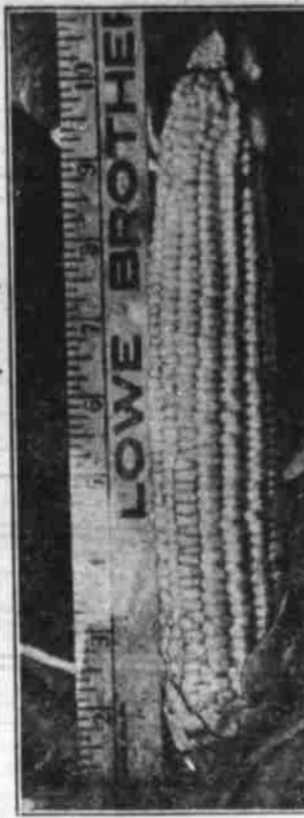

COLEMAN, (Sp.)—A sales tax by any other name would be just as burdensome as it was when President Roosevelt declared that it was a tax on poverty, declared Attorney General James V. Allred in a campaign address here today.

"When Tom Hunter, lobbyist and oil man, went before a legislative committee considering a sales tax, he frankly called his proposal a sales tax. Since that time, however, his high-powered public relations man, who resigned a lucrative position in Washington to come back and direct Hunter's publicity, has dressed up the credit of Hunter's platform and now he calls his sales tax a 'blended tax'."

Attorney General Allred said he could prove that when his opponent for governor talked about a blended tax, he really meant a sales tax, "although Hunter is careful enough to camouflage it so that the people will be deluded at least until after the August voting."

"Here is his written argument before the legislative committee on revenue and taxation when the sales tax was pending," Allred said, exhibiting a document. "At the time he said a general sales tax would reach all the masses to some degree of their ability to pay. In his 'dressed-up platform' he now says 'a blended tax system shall be adopted one that will require every person to pay in proportion to his ability to pay.'"

"This language about 'ability to pay' is the exact language used by the lobbyist financed by Inull Stone and Webster, the Mellon interests, and others in trying to put through congress a general sales tax. Here is a pamphlet setting out the names of contributors to a fund to put that sales tax through congress."

"How strange it is to find the same language used by lobbyists for the Mellon and the great utility interests to get a sales tax through congress, now employed by a man who claims to be the friend of the little merchant and the masses down here in Texas."

"I was opposed to the sales tax when it first appeared. I am opposed to it now," Attorney General Allred declared. "I am opposed to Tom Hunter's 'blended tax' because I think it will be more tax than blend for the plain people of Texas.

History has demonstrated that unlimited and unrestrained taxing power on the part of the government ultimately destroys the very government itself. In some instances, we have approached that stage in Texas. This is largely due to the fact that taxes are not 'equal and uniform' as the constitution of our state prescribes.

"In order to secure equalization of the tax burden, I propose the establishment of a more uniform system of assessment and classification of property for tax purposes, combined with a more efficient state system of collection so as to reach property now escaping taxation in the hands of those who are able to pay."

"I propose the adoption of the constitutional amendment to be voted on at the coming general election, which will empower the legislature to classify property for taxation. If this amendment is adopted the legislature of Texas,

SPITE MARRIAGE

by Robert Hamilton Taylor

Chapter 20
THE LETTER
 That evening Mrs. Powers wrote Bob of Marsha as if he were fourteen, and rather given to robbing birds' nests and or to washing little girls' faces with snow. She did not show the letter to Marsha.

"It ran, after the start: 'I wish I could be certain that you understand, fully, the rare qualities that are your wife's. I want to feel that you will always be deeply considerate of her needs, Robert.'

"Her life has not been happy. She cried today when I told her of my deep and growing affection for her. Her aunt had called. I cannot like Miss Moore. Her manner is both stern and bold.

"She is knitting a wash-cloth for you, Robert." (Robert understood that this last applied to Marsha and not to Marsha's aunt) "and while the work is not, I write in confidence, the best. I want you to remember that it is her first wash-cloth."

"She has tried very hard to make it nice, so please write her enthusiastically for her. Consider, I think it is exceptionally good. She has had no training whatsoever in the housewifely arts."

"Miss Moore is a person who serves upon committees. She spoke to me loudly of a work with women which I would not mention even to you, my son. (I mentioned Marsha to leave the room; telling her to fetch my shawl. I then, I fear abruptly, led the conversation to safer channels.)

"I have written that which I wished to write, but I want you to consider Marsha's needs. She loves you in a manner that makes her perhaps, too dependent upon you at times, as I speak of you, her eyes are extremely wistful.

"I sometimes worry over having parted you, Robert, but she assures me she could not be elsewhere, with me a trifle ill and in need of her, and that you would wish her by my side. I am certain, Robert, that your choice has been wiser than you know.

"On my knees I thank God each night, for this daughter you have given to me; the dearest daughter, Robert."

And the writing was a little tremulous.

Marsha laughed a little as she began to wrap up the wash-cloth; and then, because tears and laughter are sometimes not far apart, she wiped her eyes on it quickly before she turned from the desk and toward Mrs. Powers.

"It is a very strange looking thing," said Marsha, "and he will be sure to laugh at it!"

"Oh, no, dear! He won't. I have written to explain that it is your first work. I think perhaps— (a twinkle of conscience troubled Mrs. Powers) "I did not show that letter to you. He will be very pleased."

The wash-cloth was full of air holes and lumps and, for some reason that Marsha could not fathom, it had acquired the shape of a skull-cap that had been designed for a human who wore an adult wig.

"I shall write Robert directions for stretching it to shape after use," said Mrs. Powers. "It can be done!" And Marsha laughed unsteadily, had said that, if it could, Bob was more of a genius than even she had supposed him to be!

Bob did not laugh at the wash-cloth; his mother was correct in thinking he would not. Instead he grew violently tender over the air holes and the lumps and the shape, which made him think of an oriole's nest. There are men who feel such emotion as they look on foolish, useless things, over which the women they love have struggled.

He held it closely between his hands. For a second he held the absurd thing to his lips. Then he saw it again; Tarleton holding her close, kissing her.

That made him drop the wash-cloth to the table to sit staring at it. He put it in the top drawer of a crudely wrought, unpainted bureau. He formed the habit of taking it out each night before going to bed, to look at it.

The idea of Marsha's knitting troubled him abominably. He became obsessed by the feeling that the new life might be too much for her; that she might break down to settle into a nervous condition. And if she did that, he knew that Geoff Tarleton would throw her over. (He had not needed that letter from his mother in which he had been asked to think of Marsha's needs.) Tarleton wasn't the sort who could love a sick woman or be patient with her. Bob lay awake too many nights worrying over the possibility of this.

Then he decided that if she did grow ill and Tarleton did throw her over, he, Bob, would ask if he might care for her, explaining that he would prefer to care for her, and that the care would be most impersonal.

That would quiet her fears; any fears of hers, made by the thought that he might "bother her in any way." He felt lightened by the decision and it started the kind of dream that even a wholly balanced man may indulge when over-worked and lonely and divided by tropical jungles from the world where he belongs.

The fabric stretched, torn and shocked nerves and loneliness helped him to make his pictures. He saw himself sitting by Marsha's bed and reading to her.

"Haven't you been sitting up rather long?" he heard himself say aloud one night. It applied to him. He's known one chap—on a job in the East—who had begun by babbling and then—

But he could not stop the dreaming, although he could keep it from slipping to words. In dreams he drew her negligee close around her; he saw the white, smooth loveliness of her throat. Once and again dreams ended by his sitting, sodden with despair, his head in his hands. Dreams will, sometimes, and in this way.

He wrote, in parenthesis, "Don't wear yourself out knitting, please!" The rest of the letter was tremulous with gratitude and the letter should have been enclosed, from start to finish, by that sign she had informed him, would tell her of his sincerity.

He had, two weeks later, her flippant reply: "I know," he read, "that it looked as if I did it on a crowbar, but I didn't and you mustn't agitate yourself over the strain. The people who receive exact—who had worn his interest them are more to be pitied. When you drop the needle (and they are very slippery) these funny looking holes get in. I wanted to put on patches, but your mother says it isn't done."

After that he stopped worrying about the nervous breakdown that in his poor, tired mind, was oddly connected with knitting, but he found another subject for anxiety in Geoff.

He wondered how Geoff would treat Marsha? He knew a good deal of Geoff, and Geoff had, in the past, been known to deal rather harshly with people—women to be exact—who had worn his interest thin. After Bob considered this from all angles he decided, and he meant it, that he would kill Geoff if he didn't treat Marsha well, and then he dismissed that particular phase of the Marsha-Geoffrey complication to go on to another.

If she had thought him somewhat the conqueror, the entirely knowledgeable devil and the keeper of his secrets, perhaps she—have married some one else—to let him kiss her? Perhaps, but he did not want that "an affair."

Perhaps, even married to him, she would have loved him if she had felt him to be something of the rake.

He, the judge and jury and the defense, weighed all aspects of the case. What might have happened if he had kicked this Boulder in front of her to block her path? If he had said, to Geoffrey Tarleton, for instance, upon that day, "No, you can't have her!" And to Marsha, "You are my wife!"

But of course that particular Boulder was impossible for him to toss before her in order to "block her path" no man would hold a woman against her will.

And yet perhaps he would. Bob strangely felt that perhaps Marsha needed just that—holding against her will.

Again the ghost of Tarleton rose before him. What would Geoffrey have done in that situation? Bob could see his tossing aside a girl to whom he had grown necessary, without a thought.

Oh well, thought Bob, one is not made to one's own specifications, like a bridge. He was no Tarleton; that was sure.

The public was promised that codes would be applied so industry, labor and the consumer all would benefit without sacrifice.

Under this rosy sunrise the government failed to get really tough with any of the early defiants. Second-guessers now say the licensing clause should have been invoked a couple of times during the period when NRA was hitting its first enemies in the public estimation. But it wasn't and now the picture has changed decidedly.

Textiles—

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, triggered the situation when he demanded in Atlantic City the other day that "society" take over industry if the unemployed millions remained much longer out of work.

This is no new cry from organized labor. The man with the hod always figures to get a better break out of working for a government he helps to elect.

The question now before the house is how sympathetic the Roosevelt New Deal may become under pressure of its left-wing element.

Union leaders are puzzled and worried over George A. Sloan's sudden resignation as chairman of the Cotton Textile Code Authority and president of the Cotton Textile Institute. The industry's inclination to accept his resignation offhand failed to reassure the labor boys.

Organized labor is going to have another showdown with the textile houses on August 25. On that date the compulsory agreement curtailing production 25 per cent expires. A majority of the industry wants it continued. Labor will demand higher wages and shorter hours in compensation.

Reports have reached the labor camp that Sloan quit because he wasn't able to bring the industry around to an advance stand that would involve some concessions to the workers.

Sloan is one of the original backers of the NRA idea. He and General Johnson has been extremely close. Johnson invoked the 25 per cent curtailment order as a means of keeping textile prices up at Sloan's suggestion—and did it without the formality of a hearing.

Because of his NRA background labor has come to regard Sloan as a friendly Code Authority.

A. F. of L. headquarters think Sloan tried to get a conciliatory attitude among the employers but failed Sloan himself has refused to discuss his offer to resign. Labor men are wondering if the cotton textile industry is going to follow the suit of other industries two weeks hence and get it back 'way up.

Noise—

While Huey Long is busy fighting the Battle of New Orleans, administration officials here are debating a move which, if adopted, will furnish the Kingfish a made-to-order issue when congress meets again.

This is the proposal to lay a punitive tax on state banks which decline to join the Federal Reserve system.

Senator Hoey is at his best when defending the cross-roads banker from the potential blackjack of Washington and Wall Street. He performed nobly during the hectic days immediately following Mr. Roosevelt's inauguration and was credited with having been a prime factor in keeping some stringent anti-trust provisions out of the Emergency Banking Act.

If the treasury powers recommend a prohibitive state-bank tax you will be able to hear Hoey with the naked ear from coast to coast.

Safety—

Back in 1916, when war clouds hung over the Mexican border, some Tin Pan Alley genius wrote a song to the effect that "When the Trouble Starts in Mexico, I'll Be Found in Montreal."

Cagey Senator Pat Harrison has been humming something similar—only with reverse English.

A bitter primary fight is on in Pat's home state of Mississippi. Senator Hubert D. Stephens wants to keep his job for six more years. Ex-Governor Theodore Bilbo and Rep. Ross Collins have designs on it.

Taking sides on the question of who your senatorial colleague is going to be is a touchy matter during the primary stage. So Pat just left for Mexico City to visit his old friend, Ambassador Josephus Daniels. He'll be back just barely in time to cast an Australian ballot.

Notes—

About two hours after President Roosevelt gets back to his desk today he's going to appreciate how much he needed a vacation. One of the finest assortments of hot-and-cold-running problems in modern history is piled ceiling-high awaiting his decision. A deadly undercurrent of propaganda against the government's big western power projects has been shown adroitly all over the country. That fact may explain some of PDR's speeches on the way home. They do say a certain midwest congressman lately forced himself into a prominent position in an off-season investigation because he discovered his brother was one of the potential guilty parties and might need protection.

Younger—

The gap between utility men who want to fight the New Deal to a finish and those who want to meet it half way is widening to Grand Canyon proportions. You'll see two vastly different policies developed by various utility companies with no bridge between. The New Deal won't have to face anything like a united front.

A majority of big time utility leaders string with the fighting school. Few of them are as outspoken as Thomas N. McCarter—head of Public Service of New Jersey and the Edison Electric Institute—but they privately agree with his view that the administration's attitude toward the utilities is grossly unfair. They don't believe in "compromising with radicalism" and are digging in to battle for every inch.

But there's another group—still small in numbers and influence but growing in both—which favors voluntary rate reductions to jibe with the federal yardstick plus an aggressive campaign to broaden the use of electrical appliances. Most of those who feel this way about it belong to the younger generation of executives.

Future—

Samuel Ferguson—president of Hartford (Conn.) Electric Light—expressed their ideas when he said: "Your company welcomes this challenge to match Yankee dollars and ingenuity against taxpayer dollars and the efficiency of government bodies."

This school of thought sees the only hope of further expansion and profits for the industry in the sweeping substitution of electricity for gas, coal or oil in cooking, refrigerating, water heating, etc.—and in the intensive development of new household functions for electricity. Such a campaign can only be effective if current is made as cheap as water from the tap.

Curiously the bituminous coal industry—by organizing to combat low power rates—has done more to convert utility people to the idea of slashing prices themselves than all the threats and pressure the government has used. A number of them are beginning to figure they must have been missing a bell or two in the past that scared off electric competition.

Several shrewd New York observers believe the Ferguson will have more to say about the future of utilities than the McCarter and Carlises—even though they haven't been so well-known or influential up to now. They also predict that companies which go in for rate cutting of their own accord won't have much to fear from federal encroachments.

Warning—

Utility conservatives were more perturbed by the President's remarks at Bonneville and Grand Coulee than by anything he had said before.

They were hoping for a modest dose of encouragement. PDR's advisers have been told plenty in recent weeks about how essential it was. Instead they were taken over a rougher set of bumps than ever and some of them detect a broad hint of extinction.

Utility interests in general have been more stubborn in their opposition to the New Deal than other industries—perhaps because they have more directly at stake. Also they've been the backstage spearhead of the campaign to engineer PDR's political overthrow.

Now you hear New York comment that the President has said in effect: "You want a fight? O. K., but don't say I didn't warn you what would happen."

Labor—

Inside New York gets word that the sessions of the American Federation of Labor's executive council have been stormier than the world knows.

The story runs that Bill Green's "pacifist" tactics have stirred bitter resentment among advocates of direct action and that it will be something of a miracle if he comes out on top. If he crosses the executive council bridge successfully the still has the annual election to face—and plenty of the boys are hot after his scalp.

In this connection watch John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers. Lately he's played his cards close to his chest. There are no visible signs of friction between him and Green. He's even supporting Green's drive to rid the Federation of Reds. But the knowing say his friends have been conducting a quiet campaign for more aggressive leadership as personified in himself and that his long-standing ambition to head the Federation is closer to fulfillment than ever before.

An informed New Yorker makes the following unqualified prediction: Either the Federation will give the disconcerted labor element—the rank-and-filers—a much larger voice in its affairs or you're likely to see a series of internal explosions that will leave the organization a tattered hulk. The secession of the Hudson Motor Union is rated a significant straw in the radical breeze.

Heretic—

Reports that Marriner Eccles—now in the treasury department—has the inside track for Eugene Black's job as chairman of the Federal Reserve board give Wall Street theitters. Eccles is bank or himself but his views on finance are distinctly unorthodox.

For one thing he's known to favor lavish government spending as a depression remedy and is painfully unconcerned about the need for a balanced budget to maintain federal credit. You can imagine what New York thinks of the appointment of such a heretic to head the nation's banking system.

14 Juniors, Four Seniors Qualify In Red Cross Life Saving Course

Weary examiners, minus a stock of hair, bruised and scratched, Friday were cheered by the prospect that Red Cross Life Saving examinations would be a thing of the past until next year.

Friday afternoon approximately half a dozen candidates who were unable to participate in the regular examinations Monday and Tuesday were to close out the course at Hillcrest pool.

Thirteen juniors and 4 seniors qualified for the Red Cross life saving award.

Juniors qualifying were Sam Atkins, Jr., Jim Brigham, Allice Bell Day, Clifton Ferguson, Lola Mae Hall, Dora Ann Hayward, Mervin Moore, Arthur Katch, Marguerite Reed, Odell Womack, George Yates, Wayne Burch, Austin Burch, and Bruce Phillips renewed their junior certificates.

Successful seniors were Ira Day, and Jr. Day, Merrill Creighton and Ray Cantrell renewed their certificates.

Instructors had minor injuries to show for their efforts. Some had their hair pulled most unmercifully by frantic candidates while others entered a solemn protest against life savers with sharp nails and "strong punches."

Walton S. Morrison, chairman of the life saving committee of the Howard county, Red Cross, extended his appreciation to instructors and examiners for aiding in the course. Those who assisted Morrison were Steve D. Ford, Jr., J. B. Hodges, Jr. and Jake Pickle.

Kiwanians Give Watermelon Feed For Boy Scouts

Kiwanians Thursday evening fed members of their Boy Scout Troop No. 5 to a annual watermelon feed at the city park.

Following a feast of melon, Kiwanians were entertained by a camp fire program staged by 14 Boy Scouts.

The scouts kindled a council fire and led to two songs.

Two scouts engaged in a game of "Rufus and Rastus", before drawing George Gentry and Carl Blomfield into the ruckus.

Both Kiwanians and the scouts participated in a novel numerical game.

Ray Wilson told of an episode of ghost story telling at camp this year and related reactions of certain members of the troop.

Jack Cook, who won a bugle offered by through the council to the best bugler in the area, dismissed the meeting by blowing "taps."

Approximately 25 Kiwanians, their wives and guests attended the affair.

The program was staged in the council ring near the Scout Hut.

transportation. It requires no stretch of the imagination, therefore, to see how the money that is to be drawn from the banks in the modernization program will move from person to person with considerable velocity and prove of direct immediate benefit to every business interest in the community.

But the good work will not stop there. The loans, having been made on sound banking principles, will be of such a nature as greatly to enhance the value and attractiveness of the properties involved; and this, in turn, will create new standards of values for the community as a whole.

The entire real estate field will be improved and the value of the security behind all real estate loans will be enhanced.

All of these individual and composite benefits will be possible because the practices of good banking in transaction in the entire modernization program will be of such a nature as to improve and modernize their properties as part of a general scheme of neighborhood improvement.

It should be clear that all property is helped by this improvement of buildings on the block and this advantage to all the more marked when a co-ordinated improvement scheme is undertaken for an entire neighborhood.

What is less well understood, perhaps, is the added advantage to be gained if a group of owners in a given block or neighborhood alter or modernize their properties as part of a general scheme of neighborhood improvement.

Canning Plant In Temporary Shut-Down

The federal meat canning plant was temporarily shut down Thursday night for necessary changes.

Operations were to be resumed Friday 6 p. m., according to County Administrator R. H. McNew.

Adjustments were to be made both at the plant and at the slaughter house.

McNew said that the plant would be put into operation again Friday evening with the same arrangement for crews and shifts.

Production has been mounting during the last week with each of four shifts of 60 turning out approximately 4,000 cans, or a total of between 10,000 and 12,000 cans meat per day. This requires about 100 head of cattle per day.

Most of the canned product is being stored at the Wynn produce building where cold storage is also carried on. First disbursing order was received here this week and movement to other relief offices in the district has begun.

Committeemen To Meet At Courthouse Monday, Tuesday

Community committeemen, engaged now in the final stages of taking applications under the Bankhead act, will meet at the courthouse Monday and Tuesday.

All applicants are urged to get in their applications before the end of this week.

Those who were prevented from doing this may have an opportunity to get in their applications by coming to the court house Monday and Tuesday while the community committeemen are here.

The county committee will also convene to check applications and to make necessary adjustments.

Mexican School To Open Early

Mexican Ward school will be the first of the Big Spring public schools to open when it begins its 1934-35 term Monday morning.

When cotton picking reaches full speed here the school will be dismissed to allow the students to work in the fields. When the crop has been mostly harvested, school will be resumed and continue until it has run for a total of nine months.

Teachers will be John R. Hutto, principal, Mrs. W. E. Martin, Mrs. Mina Franke, and a substitute to take the place of Mrs. W. N. Curtis, resigned.

Carpenters Finish Work At CCC Camp

14 Structures Have Been Erected By Crew Of Forty Men

Carpenters Thursday completed their construction work on the CCC camp here.

Fourteen structures have been erected by the workmen for the permanent camp site. Garages and a blacksmith shop will be erected later by CCC recruits.

At one time there were 40 carpenters and 15 helpers on the job. Construction work, carried on under the direction of Captain Tom B. Martin, required approximately three weeks, and included the completion of a mess hall and kitchen, headquarters and recreational building, officers quarters, camp superintendent and engineers' building, barracks, bath and out-houses.

Carpenters were paid prevailing wage scale for labor on the project.

Labor Day Rodeo To Be Held Here

Steering committee for a Labor Day rodeo celebration, planned as an annual affair for Big Spring, will convene Friday evening in the sheriff's office to work out further details for the occasion.

Think . . . Talk . . . Write TEXAS CENTENNIAL in 1936

"Think . . . Talk . . . Write Texas Centennial in 1936," because it's the hundredth anniversary of a State's march of freedom. The world is watching Texas with wonder at its stupendous undertaking.

The world does not doubt that Texans will make a great success of such endeavor. Texans have never failed.

"Remember the Alamo, Remember Goliad"; remember San Jacinto, remember the great wilderness that was Texas at one time . . . early Texans undertook to make a Nation from a wilderness and they succeeded!

In as short a time as one hundred years the prophecy of Thomas Jefferson, "The Province of Texas will be the richest State in our Union without exception," has become a reality!

Let us dedicate ourselves to the task of carrying it forward. Let us observe, let us challenge the best thought of future generations.
