Ex-Classmate Held For Coed's Murder

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A muscular 22-year-old University of Texas student was charged with murder Friday night in the slaying of two young women whose nearly nude bodies were found July 30 in a weed field.

James C. Cross Jr., handsome son of a Fort Worth chain store advertising executive, was charged in the death of Susan Rigsby and Shirley Ann Stark, both 21, beautiful, brunette and from Dallas.

The complaint against Cross alleges he strangled both of the Chi Omega sorority sisters.

State Police Director Homer Garrison told a news conference that Cross voluntarily signed a statement. Cross then was taken to the Travis County Jail where he was held without bond.

Dist. Atty. Tom Blackwell said the case would go to the grand jury "as soon as possible." He said he "absolutely" would seek the death penalty.

Filing of the charges against Cross climaxed a day-and-night investigation that started out as a missing persons search.

The young women last were seen alive July 18. Their decomposed bodies were found in a vacant lot on the north edge of Austin 12 days later. They had come to Austin to enroll Miss Rigsby in summer classes at the University. Miss Stark left the University in June.

Garrison declined to say whether the statement mentioned any sexual assault on the women.

In a statement to Austin police early in the investigation, Cross said he had dated Miss Stark several times and had talked to her over the telephone July 18.

Garrison quoted Cross' statement as saying the women were slain in Austin in midafternoon of July 18. The police director refused, however, to divulge the alleged motive or the place where the statement said — if it did — the women were killed. He said the statement implicated no one other than Cross.

Officers said Cross came to headquarters alone to make the statement.

Garrison said, "we are pretty proud of the investigation. As far as we're concerned, the case is clear."

The black-haired Cross was a sophomore in arts and sciences. He served three years in the Army, including service in Japan.

A check in Fort Worth showed he had no police record.

Richard H. Udlock, a Fort Worth neighbor of Cross, described the youth as friendly and said he considered him "nothing but No. 1." He said Cross planned to become an English teacher.

Officers described the 5-foot-9, 145-pound youth as muscular.

Greek King Undecided

By PHILIP DOPOULOS

ATHENS (AP) — King Constantine concluded his consultations with political leaders today, but gave no indication of what course he intends to follow to resolve Greece's 23-day political crisis.

The 25-year-old monarch is expected to make known his decision at a meeting this evening with ex-Premier George Papandreou, the man he ousted in a dispute over leadership of the army.

Papandreou, 77, has demanded that he be recalled to the premiership or that general elections be held, but many politicians speculated that the king would follow a third course—appoint a compromise premier from Papandreou's enter Union party.

Red China Warns Of Intervention

TOKYO (AP) — Communist China declared today it would definitely intervene in the Viet Nam conflict, as it has repeatedly pledged to the Vietnamese people, if the United States continues its military buildup there.

"We warn the U.S. aggressors once more: We Chinese people mean what we say," the Chinese Communists asserted.

"We, the 650 million Chinese people, have repeatedly pledged to the Vietnamese people our all-out support and assistance, up to and including the sending, according to their need, of our men to fight shoulder to shoulder with them to drive out the U.S. aggressors."

The warning was contained in a Communist Chinese government statement distributed internationally by the New China News Agency in a broadcast monitored here.

Johnson Calls Meet On Water Shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson is summoning governors, mayors and Congress members from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania to a special White House conference next Wednesday on water shortage.

He acted after being informed that those populous states "will face a water impasse in early September" because of a continuing drought.

Showers Logged East Of Snyder

Unsettled weather prevailed Friday night over much of the north half of Texas, bringing rainfall to a wide area reaching within a few miles of Snyder.

However, most of the showers were light, according to Weather Bureau reports. Showers were reported all the way from Dallas into the eastern part of Scurry County, as brilliant flashes of lightning lighted the eastern skies. As much as half an inch of moisture was reported around Camp Springs near the Scurry-Fisher County line.

The Weather Bureau said turbulent weather which struck North Texas areas Friday night was due to return to north and east portions of the state.

High winds were logged in several areas of North Texas on Friday night.

A tornado tore a roof from a boat storage building at Pottsboro, Tex., near Lake Texoma, Friday night, destroying several boats.

The weather bureau also warned of high winds on lakes in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, but there were no reports of damage.

Several sections of the state received light showers Friday night and early Saturday morning. Fort Worth, Dallas, Wichita Falls, Mineral Wells, Sherman and Lubbock all received some moisture.

The forecast called for partly cloudy skies and little change in temperature through Sunday, with thundershowers over 30 to 40 per cent of the state except in the extreme west.

Eight Die In Plane Crash

By ANDREW JAFFE

LAKEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A light plane, groping through heavy fog, crashed into a cemetery today, spewing bodies and plane parts into a suburban housing tract.

All eight persons aboard — members of two families—were killed, sheriff's deputies said. No one on the ground appeared to be hurt, they added.

"If the pilot had gone a little further he sure would have taken out another dozen people at least," said a sheriff's deputy.

The plane, a twin - engine Beechcraft C45H, crashed into All Souls Cemetery minutes after taking off from Long Beach Airport, 1½ miles south.

"It was like an explosion," said John Hagedorn who lives a few yards away. "I looked out the back window and there was fire all over the backyard. I saw plant parts all over the yard—and two bodies."

Another body landed in the dining room window of Hagedorn's neighbor, Joseph Rhoades. A plane engine plowed through another neighbor's garage.

Sheriff Lt. Roy Kundtz identified the victims from papers found near the crash site, as:

James Whitmarsh, 37, the pilot, of Lakewood; his wife, Mildred, and their children, Terry, 16, and Mary Margaret, 14.

James Edward Dent, 37, of Whittier, Calif., his wife, Rebecca, and their children, Peggy 15, and Richard, 16.

Plans New Viet Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House disclosed today President Johnson has rejected an appeal by President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana for a temporary halt in American bombing of North Viet Nam.

However he assured Krhymah he would be in no danger from American planes if he makes a planned peace-seeking trip to Hanoi.

Bill D. Moyers, White House press secretary, gave newsmen a summary of correspondence exchanged Friday by Johnson and Nkrumah.

Moyers reported that Nkrumah, in a personal message delivered to Johnson by Ghanaian Foreign Minister Alex Quaison-Sackey, "asked that all bombing of North Viet Nam be halted so that it would be safe for him to go to Hanoi."

In response Moyers reported Johnson replied that the United States would welcome anything Nkrumah could do "to end aggression in Viet Nam."

The President said further that there is no danger from the United States to the plane which would transport President Nkrumah to and from North Viet Nam," Moyers declared.

Moyers also announced that Johnson plans briefings for all members of Congress on the Viet Nam situation within the next week.

Johnson and his senior advisors will meet with half the members of the Senate at the White House at 9:30 a.m. (EDT) Monday.

The other half of the Senate membership will gather for a similar session at 6 p.m.

All House members are expected to be invited to White House briefings later in the week, but the exact schedule has not been arranged.

Moyers said Johnson was scheduling a new round of briefings—at least the third he has initiated this year—because of his desire to keep members of Congress fully informed."

Moyers said that, while he was not making public the text of letters exchanged by Johnson and Nkrumah, he was publicizing the portions of Johnson's letter "that are of any substantive concern."

The message, delivered at the White House Friday, had aroused considerable advance speculation because only a day earlier, Nkrumah had received a communication from President Ho Chi Minh of North Viet Nam, with whom he is friendly.

Quaison-Sackey, who is also president of the U.N. General Assembly, met with Johnson and, the White House later indicated, received assurances the United States has no present plans to bomb Hanoi, capital of North Viet Nam. U.S. officials have repeatedly said as much.

Presidential ress Secretary Bill D. Moyers said Quaison-Sackey reported Hanoi had expressed concern about a visit from Nkrumah because of possible bombings. Moyers said Johnson had told the envoy, "That concern was unnecessary because there is no U.S. military action against Hanoi . . . "not a bomb has fallen there'."

CONGRESSMAN'S SON

Denies Part In Officer's Death

WEST POINT, Miss. (AP) — The son of a Wisconsin congressman, charged with manslaughter after a state highway patrolman dropped dead in this northeast Mississippi town, says he didn't shove the officer.

Dist. Atty. Harvey Buck said trooper B. Cowart, 53, was attempting to frisk 18-year-old Mike Reuss when the youth turned around, grabbed Cowart and shoved him away.

"I didn't know anything about a man being dead until they told me in jail," said Reuss, whose father is Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis.

Young Reuss has been in Mississippi since June as a volunteer civil rights worker. He will be a sophomore at Stanford University next month.

He told Sheriff Joe Strickl that an officer plucked a but n with a civil rights slogan from his shirt "and I said I'll take the other one off and did."

The incident occurred under a blazing sun Friday as Cowart, a special investigator for the patrol, and other officers were arresting 45 civil rights demonstrators for blocking the sidewalks.

Buck said he filed manslaughter charges after being informed Reuss had pushed Cowart.

A doctor said Cowart died of an apparent heart attack.

Rep. Reuss and other members of his family were reported vacationing somewhere in England. The congressman's home is in Milwaukee.

Other civil rights workers arrested with Reuss also remained in jail on charges of disturbing the peace.

The group was demonstrating against the arrest of 54 Negro students the previous day at Beasley School. The students were trying to recruit others to join them in a boycott to protest a split term at the school, which operates in the summer and then shuts down in the fall when crops are harvested.

Dear Abby...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and engaged to a wonderful guy (I'll call him Buddy), who is 20, in the Army and is stationed overseas. He's been there since last December and if he's lucky he'll be home (on leave) for Christmas, but he has to go back until June 1966. I'm sure I'm really in love with Buddy, but here's my problem. All my girl friends are dating and having fun and I am getting tired of sitting home. Is there anything wrong with having a friendly date? Everyone knows I am engaged and all I want is to go out and have a good time with the other kids.

Lots of my friends think I accepted this engagement ring too soon, but I don't. My mother doesn't understand. She says as long as I am wearing Buddy's engagement ring I am not going on any kind of date with anyone else. I don't want to send the ring back, but this is like being in jail and I'm tired of being —

"CAGED"

DEAR "CAGED": A girl who is "really in love" doesn't feel as though she's "in jail" because she isn't dating. I think you took the ring too soon. But now that you have it, keep the promise you made when "Buddy" put it on your finger. Stay home. When your finance returns, if you still feel that to give up dating is too great a sacrifice, return the ring.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: We are parents of a 16-year-old daughter who is beautiful, bright and soughtafter, and could have the pick of any young man in town. But she has chosen as her "steady" a disreputable 19-year-old vagrant who sleeps in his car and sponges off his friends. He has even been picked up and questioned regarding burglaries. Our daughter honestly believes that the "love of a good woman" can bring out the best in him. We are at our wits' end with her. How can we cope with her?

BEAUTY'S PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: While your daughter's intentions may be admirable, she lacks mature judgment and experience. That's what parents are for. The 19-year-old character you describe is apt to bring out the worst in your daughter before she can bring out the best in him. It's your duty as responsible parents to nip that romance in the bud.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me what to do with this kind of husband? We have been married for ten years and we have three beautiful children. I am not able to support myself and have nowhere to go or I would have left him long ago. This is my problem. He has a big mouth. He tells everything we say and do in our private life. Nothing (and I mean NOTHING) is sacred. Our private life is discussed on his job, in conversations with neighbors, relatives, and in every beer joint he visits. He will tell anything to get a laugh at my expense. I've tried talking calmly to him and I have even shouted at him, but it hasn't helped. I didn't know he was so filthy-minded when I married him. Must I spend the rest of my life with a man who acts like this because I made a terrible mistake when I was young? I am fed up.

MRS. X

DEAR MRS. X: You need more help than I can give you in a letter. If your husband is not "sick in the head" (and don't dismiss this possibility until you have investigated it thoroughly) he needs to be talked to by someone whose judgment he respects. Have you a clergyman, family doctor, or even a wise friend who can straighten him out? A marriage with three beautiful children under ten is worth saving. And no man in his right mind would risk losing his family because he can't keep his mouth shut.

CONFIDENTIAL TO L. IN PORTOLA VALLEY: Parents who say their children never gave them one minute's worry will lie about other things.

Pledges To Fight Critics

WATERFORD, Conn. (AP) — Playwright Edward Albee says he'll continue to battle the New York drama critics.

"I'll be a sacrificial lamb as long as I fight them," he said Friday night, "But someone has to, and I'm that someone, even though I have to live with them."

Albee spoke at the Eugene O'Neill Memorial Theatre Foundation's National Playwrights Conference.

The playwright, who won the 1962 Drama Critics' Circle award for "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf" said the audience at the preview of his last play, "Tiny Alice," was "quite alive."

"When the play opened, poor thing, the critics said it was too difficult and complex to understand", Albee said. "Then the show closed."

Newman Makes His Smokes Too Costly

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Paul Newman has a cinch way to break the cigarette habit.

"When I take my first cigarette," say Paul, who has been offf them for a month, "it will cot me $9,050."

When Newman decided to quit he placed bets at 3 to 1 with some of his friends that he would quit for good.

Even in his movie "The Moving Target," he doesn't smoke.

"Fortunately the script came that way — and I'm glad," says Newman.

Newman keeps an icebox full of carrots in his dresing room. When he gets the cigarette urge, he chews a carrot.

Blondes In Oregon Now Green-Haired

PRINEVILLE, Ore. (AP) — Dozens of blondes in this little central Oregon community are upset because their hair is turning green.

Embarrassed city officials said Friday that a disinfectant used in the municipal swimming pool has caused a temporary discoloration of blonde hair. They assured irate mothers that another chemical will be used and their daughters' green hair will be blonde again in a week or 10 days.

Russians Cautiously Testing Production-For-Profit Way

By FRED COLEMAN

RIGA, Latvia (AP) — Comrade Theodore Erenstreits belongs to a select group of Soviet factory bosses caught in a profit squeeze with a Communist touch.

He is testing the profit motive, but he still must work within rigid central control.

He is supposed to act on his own initiative and at the same time take orders from above. Under these circumstances he does not know just how he is supposed to assume more individual responsibility to make profits. The system is being used as a yardstick for efficiency. All enterprises belong to the state.

The profit idea has been touted abroad, despte Russan denals, as showing that the Soviets are taking economic cues from the West.

A talk with Erenstreits, a man who lives with the test daily, perhaps gives a better indiation of how the idea is working.

It is barely off the ground and already the Soviets face a series of sticky problems in tinkering with their economic system.

That system provides for production under a central state plan, often ignoring the buyer's demands. Success is measured by whether the plan is filled, not by whether goods are sold. Unsold, unwanted goods have cost the state millions.

The profit system, fostered by a Kharkov University professor, Yevsey G. Liberman, calls on central government planners to assign only limited goals to a factory. The factory chief is to be free to make his own decisions, based on local demand, to achieve maximum profits.

Liberman's ideas, tested in two clothing factories last year, were extended to 400 consumer goods plants this year.

The Riga Audums — fabric — factory which Erenstreits directs got the new system in April.

In practice it is a far cry from the idea Liberman put on paper. There have already been complaints in the Soviet press that central planning officials are sabotaging the profit motive system tryout.

In Erenstreits' case, buyers from trade organizations, clothing factories and stores can now come in and tell him which fabrics should be produced to sell better.

"These new connections make life much more difficult for managers," Erenstreits said.

"The new system means we have to satisfy the needs and demands of the buyer. Of course this affects production. We have to change more quickly and more often.

"The accounting business has become more complicated because we have to be more flexible."

All this must be done within the framework of the central plan. The state still dictates targets for gross output, profits and total sales, Erenstreits said.

Liberan's idea called for less state direction. Erenstreits is relatively free only in choosing the style, color and variety of cloth made.

He said he did not know how factory managers could assume more individual responsibility under this setup.

Supply could be a major headache. Erenstreits must order dyes for his fabrics from factories still working on the old system of strict obedience to central plans. If his customers want a certain color cloth, he may not be able to get the dye.

So far, he said, this has not been a problem. But he favored putting the dye plant on the same profit basis.

Erenstreits said it was too early to tell whether the new system works better than the old.

Bias In Textbooks Condemned

TORONTO (AP) — "Today the United States is the greatest of all the world's countries. With its gigantic military power it has rescued other, older nations in time of war. With its abounding wealth and generosity it has saved them from poverty and collapse in time of peace."

That statement is from a U.S. book published in 1961. A teacher recommended it to a Toronto junior high school girl as a suitable history.

It is flagrant bias, says a Canadian committee.

The committee has set out to eliminate what it considers bias in teaching in Ontario. Its chairman is Mrs. Stanley Gardiner, 44, mother of three. The group was originated by the Society of Friends—Quakers—and has grown into an interdenominational body of 12, mostly teachers. It is largely self-supporting but the Friends make up any deficit incurred through meetings or seminars.

With the blessing of Dr. Z. S. Phimister, deputy minister of education for Ontario, study sessions with teachers were started. What could be done about bias and prejudice against minority groups, particularly in the field of history?

First a few teachers attended out of curiosity. Then more came to other study sessions and seminars.

The committee's third annual seminar will be held Aug. 14-21. Educators and social workers will be there. Attendance is limited to 40.

"We feel that the schools are unconsciously indoctrinating propaganda into the minds of children, which is all right in itself, but the children should be left with an open mind. The source of every statement should be given," Mrs. Gardner says.

"The teacher may say that God exists. Some one in the class may not believe in God. The teacher should say that the Christian or the Jew or the Mohammedan says there is God."

Connally Hints At Future Plans

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Gov. John B. Connally of Texas said Friday night he would like to see Texans abolish their poll tax themselves and that he'd rather run for governor than U. S. Senate.

But he still kept his future political plans misty.

"Washington has no particular [illegible] ing that if he decides to continue his political career the odds are that he will run for re-election.

"I am sure that most people in Texas would prefer me to do so," he said.

Again, he said he would make up his mind definitely by the middle of next month.

Connally made his comments at a news conference in the Foreign Press Club here. On the poll tax, he said:

"I have always been in favor of abolishing the state's poll law, and as you know efforts have been made by the legislature during my administration calling for its repeal.

"But you also know that the people refused to approve amending the constitution. I think the Texas poll tax law should be abolished, but I would prefer we abolished it ourselves in Texas," he said, adding "... although in Texas it has never been used as an anti-voting vehicle."

Negroes have been voting in Texas for a long time with no obstacles, he said. "Our problem is to get people to go out and vote."

Seeks To Void Ruby's Sentence

DALLAS (AP)—Attorneys for Jack Ruby will attempt to free him from a death sentence verdict by a habeas corpus hearing based on Judge Joe B. Brown's proposed book.

An application for a habeas corpus hearing filed Friday claims Ruby now is illegally confined because his conviction is "void."

The application charges that "during all or part of such proceedings, the said Judge Brown was contemplating, researching, preparing and actually writing a book upon the subject matter of the proceedings then pending before him."

For those reasons, he was disqualified and his actions null, Attorney Phil Burleson claimed on the application.

Burleson requested a hearing to show that Judge Brown was involved in the proposed book prior to and during the trial.

Judge Louis Holland of Montague ruled in the last Ruby hearing that he had no jurisdiction to determine disqualification of Judge Brown. He also said he considered the question most because Judge Brown has resigned from the case.

Burleson said Friday, however, that Judge Holland does have jurisdiction to issue a writ of habeas corpus and call an evidentiary hearing.

Director Laments Pantomime's Exit

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Director Henry King, a veteran of silent movies, says that pantomime has become a lost art.

"It seems that young players have forgotten that such a mode of expression exists," say King.

"Why does Chaplin remain an international star though he has not made a movie in years?"

King made the remarks in explaining why he chose Cantinflas to play the role of the simple Mexican peasant in "The Story of Guadalupe."

KKK SECRETS

Probers Find Willing Witness

By HARRY KELLY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Committee on Un-American Activities apparently has found witnesses — possibly disgruntled Klansmen — willing to tell inside secrets about Ku Klux Klan operations.

Chairman Edwin E. Willis, D-La., wouldn't say so, but he did announce Tuesday that public hearings, delayed by a lengthy search for "friendly witnesses," would definitely begin in October.

When Willis disclosed March 30 that his committee had voted to carry out a formal investigation of the Klan, as requested by President Johnson, he expressed hope hearings could begin in "a couple of months."

But when his investigators fanned out through the South, they reportedly ran into more difficulties than they had expected.

Willis wants to use the same hearings technique with the Klan his committee employes in probing Communist activities — confronting recalcitrant witnesses with former insiders' testimony.

But, sources said, investigators had trouble locating persons willing and able to reveal details of Klan operations at a public hearing.

Dissident Klansmen and others with knowledge about Klan affairs were described as having been frightened by threats of physical, economic or social reprisal.

"They're scared to death, and we don't have the facilities for protecting witnesses like the FBI does," one source said.

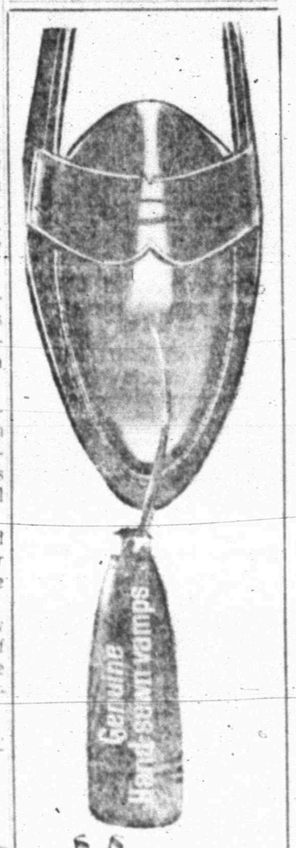

Also, Klan officials said they would not break their oaths of secrecy by divulging inside workings of the invisible empire.

Robert Shelton of Tuscaloosa, Ala., Imperial wizard of United Klans of America Inc., the biggest of the Klan organizations, those quoted as refusing to cooperate with the probe.

While no public hearings would start any later than the 20th of October.

He said subpoenas have been authorized, that "a large number of persons" have been and are being questioned by investigators and some prospective witnesses have already been heard in closed sessions.

Willis did not reveal how many subpoenas have been authorized or for whom. But other sources said at least 160 have been issued, many for Klan leaders.

More Insects In Irrigated Fields

In most dryland cotton, insect activity decreased during the past week. However, in the irrigated cotton an increase in insect activity and damage was noted. Several fields of irrigated cotton required control measures, but most of the cotton was not in condition to require insecticide applications.

Fleahopper counts in dryland cotton usually ran less than 10 per cent, and damage was not sufficient to warrant insecticide application. Rather high infestation counts of fleahoppers in irrigated fields were found, some ranging as high as 40 - 50 per cent could cause severe damage in this cotton if left uncontrolled.

Bollworm infestations were light to medium in the irrigated field and a light increase of eggs and small worms were noted during the last week. Several acres required insecticide treatment for bollworms. Cotton should be checked regularly for eggs and small worms as [illegible] bollworm activity can be expected during August.

Bollweevils were found in one field which was inspected by the insect survey team, but the bollweevils were confined to one [illegible] fruited squares were found to be in the 20 - 40 per cent range. This was one small area in the field and the weevils seemed to be confined to this small area. Of the four fields that were checked by the insect survey team only one contained bollweevils, but producers in the area where boll weevils have been present in the past should be on the watch for bollweevil infestation.

Verticillium Wilt, which usually makes its appearance about this time of year, has shown up in some irrigated fields. This is a soil-borne disease. There are no varieties which are not susceptible to this disease. There are some cultural practices which will help to cut down on the occurence of this wilt. These practices are: thicker plantings of cotton, the use of minimum amounts of nitrogen fertilizer, and less frequent irrigations.

Another disease which has become more noticable during the past week is blossom end rot of tomatoes in home gardens. This disease affects the blossom end of the tomato and is caused primarily from fluctuation of the moisture in the soil. The use of a mulch and regular application of water will help cut down on the occurrence of blossom end rot of tomatoes.

Bermuda mites are still a problem in some lawns in the area. Close watch of the lawns will result in less damage by Bermuda mites with the application of an insecticide for their control as soon as infestation is noticed.

Producers desiring more information on these and other problems may call the County Agricultural Agent's office in Snyder.

Prisoner Charged With Girl's Death

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A Denver man serving a sentence in the Arizona State Prison for stealing from a cousin has been charged in the 1963 slaying of Jane Langdon, daughter of Judge Jack Langdon of the Civil District court in Fort Worth.

Charged is Erwin Stewart, 37, who was questioned in the slaying just a few days after Miss Langdon's body was found in a prospector's cave north of here on March 23, 1963.

The TCU coed had been shot three times.

Miss Langdon was last seen alive March 21, 1963, when she left a taxi on the east side of Phoenix. She had flown here earlier that day, planning to visit her mother in a Phoenix hospital.

Stewart was arrested in Denver in April, 1964 and brought here to face a grand theft charge filed on a complaint by his cousin, Rose Flanery of Phoenix. She said he stole two rings and a watch while visiting her at the time of the Langdon killing. Stewart was sentenced to four to six years after pleading guilty.

Sheriff's Sgt. Don Golding said Stewart became a suspect when his cousin reported seeing him bleach bloodstains from his clothing on the morning Miss Langdon disappeared. Lie detector tests were given Stewart in Denver and Phoenix, but they proved inconclusive, officers said.

Sheriff's Lt. Jerry Hill, who said the case had been under constant investigation since the coed's body was found, said the murder charge was based on new evidence, which included statements from persons acquainted with Stewart and some physical evidence.

A preliminary hearing is set for Aug. 30.

Says Widow Offered Money For Death Of Millionaire

By BEN FUNK

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A young drifter testified that the wife of a multimillionaire Texas banker and her nephew offered him $10,000 to kill the banker so they could continue a love affair.

Edward Diehl, 28, a carnival worker and ex-convict from California, said Friday the offer was made in 1962 — two years before Jacques Mosler, 69, stabbed 39 times and hit on the head with a blunt instrument, died in his Miami apartment.

Candace Mossler, 46, the banker's blonde wife, and Melvin Lane Powers, 23, have been indicted for first-degree murder and are fighting for release on bond before their November trial.

Diehl told a hearing that the kill-for-pay offer was made while he was working on Mossler's ranch near Galveston, Tex. He said he turned it down because "I have stole and cheated, but I ain't gonna kill nobody."

At the time, he said, Mrs. Mossler and Powers were living together in a trailer on the ranch.

Diehl's testimony and his credibility came under strong attack by Percy Foreman, Houston lawyer directing Powers' defense.

"Wouldn't Jacques Mossler come to the ranch on Friday nights, and didn't you arrange sex orgies for him with several men and one woman?" Foreman asked. "And didn't you argue with him over extra pay for these orgies?"

Diehl replied, "No sir."

Powers was arrested in Houston three days after Mossler was killed June 30, 1964. Sgt. Charles Maddox testified that he questioned Powers then at the Texas Rangers headquarters, and he quoted Powers as asking:

"What led you to me so fast?"

The detective said he outlined some of the evidence and Powers raised his head and told him, "You've got it all. You don't need any more."

The detective said Powers continued: "What do you want me to do, implicate somebody else? Well, I am not going to tell you anything else."

Diehl, who told the court he had served prison sentences for forgey in Oklahoma and for theft in California, and had been arrested other times for vagrancy and drunkenness, said Powers first offered him $5,000 to kill Mossler.

When he refused, he said, Powers and Mrs. Mossler raised the price to $10,000, promising to pay one-half down and the rest "when the estate is settled."

"Mel said he and Mrs. Mossler were living together and her old man didn't like it," Diehl said.

State Needs Rain For Late Crops

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas farmers and ranchers watched another arid week go by with the usual mixed emotions. They would like to have rain, but the dry weather is fine for harvesting.

John Hutchison, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, said general rains are needed to revitalize pastures, some late crops and the lawns in town. A few showers fell along the coast and in the Panhandle. Otherwise the state is in the annual ground-cracking August drouth.

Hutchison said the hot weather is allowing harvesting to reach its climax. Cotton bolls are popping, grain is ripening and hay is curing. Most pastures are holding up fairly well, and livestock are in good condition. Stock water is mostly adequate.

Some showers in the upper panhandle temporarily helped pastures. Ranges and cattle are generally in good condition.

In the Lubbock area, moisture is short. Dryland cotton needs rain now, and the next few days will be critical. Dryland grain sorghum is in severe drought stress. Irrigated cotton and sorghum are making progress. Early grain is ripening. Onions and potato harvesting continues.

A general rain would help rolling plains pastures and stock tanks but hinder harvesting. Cotton growth is fair to good, with some insect damage in a few counties. The sorghum harvest is general. Dryland yields in one county ran 600 to 1,000 pounds per acre.

In North Texas the moisture situation worsened and crops are wilting. Some cotton is opening. The sorghum harvest is in high gear, with several counties reporting good yields. Corn is about mature. Ranges are beginning to burn.

Northeast Texas could stand a rain, although cattle and pastures are holding up. Melons are moving to market in volume, some sweet potatoes are being harvested, and about one week of peach picking remains. The sorghum harvest is under way. A good pea crop is keeping pea pickers busy.

Far West Texas has shortages of rain and labor. Livestock conditions are fair to good. Irrigated crops are fine.

The San Angelo area needs a gen ar ar nileSatd eetchroerwss general rain. Scattered showers have helped. Cotton is fruiting. Sorghum harvesting is well under way. Early crops made fair to good yields. Late sorghum needs rain. Pastures are dry but furnishing grazing. Goat shearing is on.

Teaser showers have failed to soften the need in Central Texas for moisture. Crops are suffering. Corn harvesting is starting. Cotton is opening. Overall bug damage is light. There is some natural shedding of pecans, and some is due to casebearers.

In East Texas, light showers fell but moisture is still short. Insects are active in cotton. The corn crop is fair, hay cutting is active, livestock are in good condition, and pastures are average and below.

Rain is needed in all of South Texas. Pastures are drying fast. Cotton picking is starting, the melon crop is complete and peanut harvesting is beginning. The hay harvest is going strong.

Farther up the coast, cotton harvesting is increasing with defoliation on. Harvesting of rice, sorghum, peanuts and corn continues. A general rain would help pastures and hay crops. Spotty showers offered some relief this week.

Moisture is short, yet scattered showers have delayed the cotton harvest in deep South Texas. Harvest was 40 to 70 per cent complete by midweek. The sorghum crop is complete. In the Winter Garden, the grain harvest is finished. Pastures are average to below. The labor supply is short to adequate.

These Girls Prove Their Fatal Charm

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Cornell University scientist flashed word today he's discovered some females with truly fatal allure.

They are fireflies, sneaky sirens that lure gullible males to trysting spots by blinking their lamps at them — then the girls devour the boys.

It's a downright violation of the love lantern system fireflies use in their legitimate courting, said entomologist James E. Lloyd.

And these deadly females, he said, apparently have achieved the dastardly deed by cracking the signal code of some other types of fireflies — and then mimicking it to make males of the other breed believe they're being called by the nice girls they usually date.

Throwing light on all this in an article in Science Magazine, researcher Lloyd said it's been known for a long time that firefly females of the Genus Photuris are carnivorous.

And, while they'll make a lunch of most any other brand of firefly, one of their favorite dishes is the male of the Genus Photinus.

Scientists have suspected the Photunis girls snare the Photinus boys by imitating the characteristic lamp signals of the latter clan — but no one previously had caught them in the act.

That's where Lloyd came in.

Armed with a flashlight to simulate the wooing signals of fireflies, he invaded some prime firefly haunts in Florida, Illinois and Virginia.

He flashed the mating calls of various species of Photinus males and out of the night sky would come answering signals from Photuris females who apparently could mimic a whole repertoire of signals.

Lloyd said he watched a Photuris femme flash an invitation and, a little later, lunching on a sadly deceived Photinus.

Head-On Crash Fatal

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Three persons were killed early Saturday morning in a head-on collision of two cars on Interstate Highway 35 here.

The victims were identified as Raymond Hoyle Edwards, 38, and his wife, Margie, both of Dallas and Donald Rudi St. Wrba, 36, of Austin.

St. Wrba was alone in his car, officers said.

'Snyder' And 'Texas' Are Synonymous To AFS Group

Texas apparently made an indelible impression on [illegible] foreign exchange students who stopped here for a two-day visit June 30. Snyder and Texas are synonymous so far as the foreign students are concerned, according to their diary kept by various members of the group.

The diary is now in the custody of Ron Bippert, one of the chaperones on Bus No. 10, which made the stop in Snyder. Bippert is spending the weekend here in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kayser. He is enroute back to California after delivering the exchange students to their assembly point for departure in New Jersey and visiting relatives in South Texas. Bippert plans to reproduce the diary in sufficient quantities to provide each exchange student with a copy.

Alejandro Lopez of Colombia, called Jake by the students, was the diary recorder when Bus No. 10 crossed the Texas-New Mexico border on June 30.

He described the event as follows:

Place: 15 miles inside the boundary line of TEXAS.

Time: 2:30 Texas time.

Date: Wednesday, June 30. [illegible] days after D day. D stands for departure. (Sniff!)

Now all this have become reality and we are being a part of it; every one of us 44 students eager to make of our last the best impression of the people and ideas of U.S.

Summer band school will begin Monday at both of Snyder's junior high schools.

Don Eiring, band director at Lamar, and Jerry Pickens, band director at Travis, have announced that the band students will begin receiving instruction at 8 a.m. Monday at their respective schools. All students planning to participate in the junior high band programs are urged to attend.

Nun, Brother Reunited

LAND O'LAKES, Fla. (AP) — A Roman Catholic nun and her brother bridged 49 years of separate living today in this quiet community 10 miles north of Tampa.

Sister Mary of Juliana, 70, saw her brother, Charles J. Johannsen, Friday night for the first time since 1916. The nun said her heart was "filled and overflowing."

She said they were born in Chicago, where she "raised him and led him hand-in-hand through everything."

In 1916, when she was 21, Sister Mary joined the Order of The Good Shepherd and had not ventured outside the convent walls since then except on business. Recent papal suggestions have relaxed the restrictions on cloitered orders.

Sister Mary now is supervisor of the Good Shepherd School for Girls in Arizona.

Sister Mary, "radiantly happy," said she would spend a three-day vacation with the Johannsens before returning to the school.

Truck Mishap Fatal

GORDON, Tex. (AP) — Two persons were killed Friday night when their car collided with a heavy truck two miles south of here. They were Mrs. Virginia Howard, 46, and her son, Thomas Howard Jr., 20, both of nearby Huckaby in North Texas. Mrs. Howard was postmater there. Trucker Roy Hart of Dalla was not injured.

Pierpont Has Water Again

PIERPONT, W Va. (AP) — Residents of Pierpont had water again today after two weeks of drought.

Cool, clear water poured Friday from a pipe the small community's 125 citizens laid to a flooded mine more than half a mile away.

State Health Department officials will check the water for purity.

Two weeks ago private wells of the townspeople suddenly went dry. The reason has not been established.

The community's leaders decided to lay pipe to an abandoned mine on a mountainside overlooking the town. The mine was known to have an abundant supply of water.

The newly laid pipe tunnels under railroad tracks and a state highway before ending in the center of town.

The next job is to link up individual homes with the main pipe. But at least days of hauling water from nearby towns are over.

wILLiAmSon'S WiLDneSS

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

The closing weeks of the summer months bring many tears to students of Snyder High School when they think of having to return to the classroom, but there is another group of Snyderites that almost pray for classes to begin — The Black and Blue Snyder Tigers' football team.

Really Snyder's colors are Black and Gold, but the players appear to favor Black and Blue during the first few weeks of practice, which incidently starts August 16 School, therefore, is a pleasant relief to the Tiger hopefuls from the two-a-day workouts that plague every player.

Coach Horrace Bostick will send the 1965 edition of the Snyder Tigers through two weeks of two-a-days in order to build team composure for the upcoming slate that will face the locals shortly after school begins. It could be said that this is the most crucial time of the year for a team. Team members, will be concerned with getting in shape, obtaining lost coordination, developing timing, and most important learning to act instinctively to key situations. This important time could insure a team a good season should this period elapse with the minimum of injuries, and if every player is made to be his physical best.

Although the Snyder coaches will be on hand to urge on each boy, the job of being physically ready comes from the heart of each individual. Football never has been or never will be a game for the physically weak, and a player will probably not reach any further physical development after the first three or four weeks of practice.

Snyder football fans always begin to buzz at the prospect of another football season, and are always interested in the outlook of the up-coming Snyder team. The only answer that anyone can get this season is "?".

The Tigers for the most part remain a puzzling mystery. There for sure are glaring weaknesses in the local team, but because of so many unproven ball players on the squad, the real strength of the Tigers may be a hidden factor. The '65 Tigers will undoubtedly be much lighter than their counterparts of last season, but should be as quick or quicker, especially in the line. It is true that many unproven players will have to step in and take some starting spots, but the strength or weakness is hard to measure accurately.

This year's pre - season practice could play a more important role with the '65 Tigers than with any other previous team. It will have to serve as the proving ground for the inexperienced players, and it will also have to develop new team leadership to take over from a departed senior crop of last year.

If you like to know the answers before the season, it might prove worth while to keep your eyes on those vital two weeks. The Snyder coaches hope the favorite team color of Blue will change to Gold in the end, but who knows??????

SWC Press Book Is Released

DALLAS (AP)—Some prodigious feats are listed in the Southwest Conference football guide just off the press.

The longest run in conference history came in 1933 and it was 105 yards. Charley Casper of Texas Christian returned a kickoff that distance against Texas.

It never will be equalled—they don't count more than 100 yards now.

Charley Jackson of Southern Methodist ran a pass interception back from behind his goal line against Rice in 1957 but it was limited to 100 yards.

The longest pass play was 86 yards from Gil Johnson to Paul Page of Southern Methodist in 1947.

Wear Schoonover of Arkansas caught 13 passes in a single game and it has stood as a record for 35 years.

Jelly Woodman of Texas A&M scored 44 points against New Mexico in 1926 and no one has come within 14 points since.

Carl Knox of Texas Christian and Preston Johnston of Southern Methodist each kicked a football 94 yards for a record that has stood since 1940.

These and many other interesting statistics are contained in the booklet that may be obtained by mailing $1.00 to the Southwest Conference, Box 7185 Inwood Station, Dallas 9, Texas.

It contains the schedules and rosters of all teams and complete results of games played in the 50 years of the conference.

For instance, did you know that Texas A&M beat Daniel Baker 110-0 in 1920 for the biggest score ever run up by a conference team against an outsider?

Inside the conference, the biggest score was 146 points made by Rice in 1916. Southern Methodist, the opponent, got three points.

Hollywood Goes All Out On Heroes

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When Hollywood decides to make a picture about a hero, even 20 years after his death, it goes all out.

At the moment there are three pictures about Gen. George S. Patton in the works.

Producer Frank McCarthy, Gen. George C. Marshall's aide during World War I, has had one in the works since 1962. As soon as he announced production start, Nick Adams announced that he was doing a picture on the fiery Patton.

And now comes Kirk Douglas playing Paton in "Is Paris Burning?"

Officers seized 31 slot machines, a marble table and some bingo equipment at the three clubs.

Felony charges were filed on the officers of the clubs after the raids, but the charges were dismissed. The misdemeanor charges do not name any individuals.

Versalles Takes Up Slack

Minnesota Extends Lead With Big Win

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

It's beginning to look as if the bat of Minnesota's sparkling shortstop, Zoilo Versalles, just isn't going to cool off.

While on his spree Friday night, Versalles clouted a three-run homer, climaxing a six-run explosion in the sixth inning that carried the Twins to a 9-3 victory over Boston and to a 6½-game lead in the American League, biggest bulge the leaders have had all year.

The 24-year-old hustler is headed for his best slugging season, having hit 14 homers and driven in 55 runs. His best previous highs are 20 and 67.

Elsewhere in the AL Friday, Kansas City whipped Baltimore 9-4, Chicago stopped Cleveland 1-5, Detroit nipped New York 5-4 and Los Angeles knocked off Washington 6-1.

In the National League Cincinnati edged Los Angeles 5-4 in 11 innings, San Francisco nipped St. Louis 3-2, Milwaukee trimmed Houston 8-4, Philadelphia defeated Pittsburgh 4-0 and Chicago squeaked by New York 4-3.

Versalles' homer came after rain had delayed the game for 95 minutes. Just before the storm, Bob Allision snapped a 2-2 tie with a two-run homer. The blows gave Jim Merritt his first major league triumph.

Three hits each by Wayne Causey and Jose Tartabull helped Kansas City down second-place Baltimore. Causey's single following Tartabull's third-inning double broke a 2-2 deadlock and put the Athletics ahead to stay. Ken Harrelson added a pair of run-scoring doubles to the attack.

J.C. Martin and Don Buford each drove in four runs as Chicago bumped Cleveland. Martin collected two singles and a double while Buford had two hits and John Romano homered. Their power nullified a four-hit day for the Indians' Rocky Colavito and Leon Wagner's 20th homer.

Don Wert walked in the seventh inning, was sacrificed to second and scored Detroit's winning run as Norm Cash grounded. The Yankees had tied the game with three runs in the top of the seventh, one run scoring on Clete Boyer's ingle, another on a wild pitch and the third as Tony Kubek grounded out.

Marcelino Lopez pitched a five-hitter after holding Washington hitless for 5 1-3 innings. Los Angeles, meanwhile, got three hits from Al Spangler and two RBI each from Jim Fregosi and Merritt Ranew.

Dick Sikes Leader In Third Round

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

WHITEMARSH, Pa. (AP) — Dick Sikes led the $125,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic into the third round today with Jack Nicklaus breathing down his neck, but the big news was Arnold Palmer.

After Nicklaus charged through the second round with six birdies and an eagle for a seven-under-par 65 and a 36-hole total of 136, one stroke behind Sikes' 135, Palmer stirred the crowd with the announcement he was packing his clubs and going home to Latrobe, Pa.

"I don't remember ever doing what I did on the golf course today," Palmer said. "I just lost my concentration . . . and everything."

The 35-year-old Palmer shot a 34-43—77 for a 36-hole total of 146, which would have made him anchorman among the 70 qualifiers if he chose to continue in the 72-hole competition through Sunday.

He said he was going home to Latrobe, Pa., to rest for next week's PGA championship at his home Laurel Country Club course at Ligonier, near Pittsburgh.

The 25-year-old Sikes, admitting the pressure of leading was affecting his putting, shot a one-under-par 71, and clung to his slim lead over Nicklaus, who said pressure makes him a better player.

Behind the top pair were Johnny Pott, 29-year-old pro from Gulf Hills, Miss., who hasn't won a tournament on the tour in almost two years; 44-year-old Kel Nagle of Australia, and Joe Campbell, 200-pound veteran of eight years on the tour. Each had 36 hole totals of 138.

U.S. Open champion Gary Player was far back at 152.

Clay Is Upset With Booers In Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Cassius Clay, the world heavyweight boxing champion, opened his exhibition tour of Sweden Friday night and was booed by many in a crowd of 10,000.

After boxing two rounds each with James Ellis of Louisville, Ky., and Cody Jones of Detroit, Clay played at getting mad at the booers, most of them admirers of Floyd Patterson, the former heavyweight champ who is a favorite in Sweden.

"I wanted them to boo," Clay said afterwards. "That's why I did not show them my best. I want them all to root for Floyd and not lose confidence in him."

Clay has said he "very likely" will make his next title defense against Patterson.

"I like them to boo me," Clay said, "I take it out on my opponent."

The crowd at first applauded politely at Clay's skillful rope skipping that opened the exhibition. The boos started when Clay started imitating Patterson's peekaboo style as he let Ellis make him look bad at times with rights to the face.

The crowd cheered for the absent Patterson and changed back to boos when Clay grabbed a ringside mike and called them "awful nutty."

Element Of Surprise Gone When Maury Wills Races

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sport Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The element of surprise is gone. The pitchers are watching him closer than ever before. Rival players rough him up because they think he's trying to show them up. Opposing teams drench the basepaths in an effort to slow him up.

Even his teammates sometimes resent his burning obsession to steal bases. But nothing or nobody is going to stop Maury Wills from running and running and running.

"A feeling comes over me that I've got to run, that I've got to break loose," said the fleet-footed shortstop of the Lo Angele Dodges. "I know there is more pressure on me this year because the pitchers are watching me closer than ever before. They throw at my legs when I'm hitting and the basemen make the unnecessary hard tag.

"But that only makes me to create situations. I'm always striving to disturb the pitcher, more determined, more eager to force him into extra exertion. I try to upet the other team's strategy, take advantage of every lapse."

Wills' 72 stolen bases in his team's first 106 games attest to his success. He has perfected the art of stealing as no man has before him. Yet he concedes it is getting more and more difficult for him to steal bases.

"They're always expecting me to steal," he said, "So I no longer have the advantage of surprise."

Attempting to score in a game with the Chicago Cubs a couple of years ago, Wills was blocked at the plate by catcher Dick Bertell, who grabbed his leg instead of the ball. For weeks thereafter, Maury ran practically on one leg. In a game with Pittsburgh earlier this season, the Pirates' groundskeeper sanded and watered the area around first base making it resemble a beach. Although the mud was up to his ankles, Wills managed to steal a base.

The toughest part of being a big leaguer, said Wills, is to develop and maintain a consistency of hustling.

"Playing 162 games a year," said the 170-pound bundle of energy, "and getting yourself up mentally for every one of them is tough. You must develop a habit of going all out all the time.

"The only reason why I've been able to achieve success is my mental approach. Other than speed, I have only average ability. The difference is desire. Two men, Bobby Bragan and Pete Reiser, instilled that desire in me. Without Bragan, I'd never have made the big leagues. Without Reiser, I'd never have stayed up."

US In Danger Of Losing Americas Cup

WINNIPEG, Man. (AP) — The United States is in danger of being beaten for the first time ever in the biennial Americas Cup international amateur golf matches against Canada and Mexico.

The Americans, who have won all seven of the previous Americas Cup matches, were in last place starting today's final round of sixsomes and singles at the St. Charles Country Club.

Canada led with 9½ points. Mexico had nine and the U.S. 8½.

Veteran Bill Campbell, the U.S. amateur champ from Huntington, W.Va. led the Americans with two victories in the singles after he and Downing Gray of Pensacola, Fla. had teamed for two points in the sixsomes. He defeated Nick Weslock, the Canadian amateur champion from Toronto, 5 and 4, and Mexico's junior star Ricardo Vega 3 and 2.

Canada and the U.S. had tied 4-4 to only one point for Mexico in Friday's sixsomes, but the Mexicans came back strong with eight points in the singles.

Soap Box Derby In Final Stages Today

Derby officials expected the 128 three-car heats to be finished and a winner named by 4:15 EDT.

USSR Paper Says Bowen Laughable

MOSCOW (AP)—The main sports paper in the Soviet Union, Sovietsky Sport, tore into assistant manager Pete Bowen Saturday for claiming the American track and field team was sabotaged at the Kiev meet.

The paper said "The inventions of this former runner are only laughable."

Bowen, of Lyndon, Ky., made his charges last Monday when the U.S. team stopped over in Moscow after losing to the Russians in the Ukrainian capital. The coach said that the American athletes were subjected to subtle delaying and harassing tactics by the Russians.

Sovietsky Sport told Bowen he should consult papers in his own country which laid the loss to a superior Soviet team. It specifically mentioned the New York Times and the Washington Post.

The two-column article said Bowen was "nobly restrained when American athletes congratulated the Soviet victors at Kiev. There were no signs of discontent evident. But it seems he was harboring far from noble thoughts."

Bowen had complained about the team being tired from delays in travel. Several American athletes made the same complaints.

Sovietsky Sport overlooked that angle and said only that everybody knows the long flight across the Atlantic is tiring—but just as much for Russians going to America as vice versa.

The paper pointed out that the Americans arrived at Kiev on July 27 and the meet did not start until July 31, so they had time to recover from the trials of the trip.

It also urged Bowen to take the same attitude as his colleague, Brutus Hamilton, who, it said, praised the excellent arrangements made for the U.S. team. Hamilton is the head men's coach.

Sovietsky Sport told Bowen that if he was not convinced by his own papers that the Russians had deserved to win, he should look at sports pages in European papers.

Yogi Berra's playing comeback with the New York Mets this spring, after being out all of 1964, resulted in two singles in nine trips to the plate in four National League games.

Namath To Make AFL Debut Today

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dark, handsome Joe Namath, one of the most highly-publicized and certainly most costly rookies of all time, gets his first major professional test tonight in pro football's opening exhibition weekend.

Namath, the Alabama boy with the flashing smile of a movie star, whose golden passing arm won $400,000 in bonuses, despite a questionable knee, will work for the New York Jets in an American Football League exhibition against Houston at Alexandria, Va.

Namath is scheduled to work the second and third quarters. As much attention will be paid to his right knee, on which an operation was performed during the off-season, as his strong passing arm. Both survived tests in a rookie game against the Boston Patriots rookies earlier this season.

Most of the rest of the rookie standouts were in action in Chicago Friday night as members of the College All-Stars who took a 24-16 drubbing from the National League champion Cleveland Browns.

The All-Stars who have professional contracts were due to report to their clubs today, but they were scheduled to see little if any action in the spotty exhibition schedule.

The only day game and the only National Football League exhibition sent the improving Washington Redskins against Philadelphia this afternoon at Hershey, Pa.

The AFL opens tonight with the Jets-Houston game, Oakland at San Diego and Kansas City at Denver. Buffalo is at Boston Sunday.

The Eagle-Redskin game and Sunday's Boston-Buffalo clash are scheduled for national television coverage. CBS will handle the NFL game from Hershey and NBC the AFL game from Boston.

Huarte-Led All-Stars Fall Short In Comeback Effort

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — For awhile it looked as if Notre Dame quarterback John Huarte, the 1964 Heisman Trophy winner, was the forgotten man of the All-Stars, who lost 24-16 to the Cleveland Browns.

Head Coach Otto Graham started Navy's Roger Staubach against the National Football League champions Friday night. But Roger was rocked up early in the second period by a Galen Fiss tackle and left Soldier Field's rain-soaked turf with a reprise of a shoulder injury.

Then Graham called on California's Craig Morton, rookie chattel of the Dallas Cowboys. Morton tried five passes and completed two for nine yards.

With 7½ minutes gone in the third quarter and the Browns cruising with a 23-3 lead, Graham pointed a finger at Huarte and said, "get in."

It was then the All-Stars started popping. Huarte completed seven out of seven tosses for 72 yards leading the stars on an 80-yard touchdown drive in 10 plays and capped it with a five-yard scoring shot to Yale's Chuck Mercein (New York Giants).

Within eight minutes of the fourth period, the inspirational Huarte hit Oklahoma's Lance Rentzel (Minnesota Vikings) for 40 yards and his Notre Dame battery mate, Jack Snow (Los Angeles Rams) for 20 — running his streak to nine for nine for 122 yards in the rain.

North Carolina's Ken Willard (San Francisco 49ers) then smashed 18 yards and Huarte topped off the 86-yard thrust with a five-yard scoring pass to Rentzel.

Mercein booted extra points after each touchdown and also added a 36-yard field goal at the opening of the second period.

The Browns, a 17-point favorite, ran the pros' record in the series to 21 victories against nine losses. Two games were tied.

Jim Brown scooted seven yards in the first quarter for Cleveland's first touchdown after Frank Ryan's 26-yard aerial to Gary Collins set it up.

The Browns went ahead 14-3 in the second when a punt by Mississippi's Frank Lambert was blocked by Jamie Caldwell and the Browns' Stan Szcurek pounced on it.

Lou Groza booted a 30-yard field goal to make it 17-3 at halftime. Passes by Ryan to John Brewer and Brown made way for a 10-yard scoring toss to Gary Collins early in the third.

Graham Is Pleased With Huarte

By JOE MOSHIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Head Coach Otto Graham put his back against the wall after his College All-Stars lost to the Cleveland Browns 24-16 Friday night and said "you don't have to ask the first question, I know what it is."

Graham then proceeded to give the main reason Notre Dame's John Huarte, who rallied the Stars in the second half to make a battle of the game, did not start.

"We had to go on the basis of our training camp results and there was no question in our minds that Roger Staubach would start.

Graham admitted that after Staubach it was a tossup between Huarte and California's Craig Morton and Morton simply got the first chance.

"Huarte did a great job and helped fire the team," Graham said. "Like Ara Parseghian, Notre Dame's head coach told me, He'll fight, He'll inspire and he'll get the job done. He certainly did all that tonight."

Huarte, winner of the Heisman Trophy last season, said he wasn't at all disappointed at not starting.

"Rog earned the shot because he did so well in practice and also in that scrimmage against the Chicago Bears."

Shea Stadium, New York City's municipally owned stadium, seats 55,300. It is the home of the baseball Mets and the football Jets.

Dunce Is Favorite In Monmouth

OCEANPORT, N.J. (AP) — It is nearly 1,000 miles from Cahokia Downs outside of St. Louis to Monmouth Park near the shores of the Atlantic Ocean. It took Brilliant Dunce 33 hours to make the trip in a van.

But the little-known son of the equally little known sire, Dunce, hopes to make the tiresome trip worthwhile in the six furlongs of the $100,000-added Sapling for 2-year-olds today.

You can almost write your own ticket on Brilliant Dunce's chance of winning against six other juveniles that include two of the best — Our Michael from the Edgehill Farm of Leonard and Morris Fruchtman of Toledo, Ohio, and Ogden Phipps' Buckpasser.

This is supposed to be a showdown between the two fleet colts. Each has won five of six starts, with four of Our Michael's victories coming in stakes and two of Buckpasser's triumphs also in stakes.

Brilliant Dunce is owned by Ollie Brown, East St. Louis distributor of wall paper and paints. He has won only one of four starts, all at a track far less known than Monmouth Park.

"We think we've got a colt with some ability," said Brown who has been racing thoroughbreds only two years. "We know we're up against tough company in Buckpasser and Our Michael but we're anxious to test them so we can find out just what kind of a horse we've got."

Lining up against the trio will be four others with just so-so credentials. They are Quinta, Stands to Reason, Michael J. Toppa and Gary Dear, a stablemate of Our Michael.

Cincinnati Bounces Dodgers With 4 Homers And Single

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The way Gene Mauch was talking you'd think Jim Bunning was his own personal invention. Like sliced bread. Or the pop-open can.

"It has to be one of the best pitching performances I've seen," the Phillies' manager said after Bunning's five-hit, 4-0 conquest of Pittsburgh Friday night.

It snapped a five-game Pittsburgh winning string and marked Philadelphia's third straight victory.

Jim Coker's pinch hit single in the 11th drove in the winner for Cincinnati in the Reds' 5-4 decision over the leading Los Angeles Dodgers. San Francisco edged St. Louis 3-2, Milwaukee whipped Houston 8-4 and the Chicago Cubs edged New York's Mets 4-3 in the other National League games, all at night.

Chicago bombed Cleveland 11-5 in the American League's only day game. Detroit edged New York 5-4, Kansas City whipped Baltimore 9-4, Minnesota trounced Boston 9-3 and Los Angeles knocked off Washington 6-1.

Johnny Callison's 25th homer, Tony Gonzalez' three singles and Cookie Rojas' two-run double provided the hitting support for Bunning's attack.

Cincinnati's first four runs came on homers by Don Pavletich, Pete Rose, Deron Johnson and Tommy Harper. The Dodgers tied it twice, the last time in the eighth when Wes Parker walked, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on John Roseboro's single, prolonging it until Coker delivered his winning single in the 11th.

Hal Lanier doubled in two runs and scored the third on a bad throw in leading the Giants past St. Louis. His fourth-inning drive came with two out and drove in Willie Mays and Willie McCovey. The relay throw trying to get McCovey at the plate bounced away from the catcher and Lanier slid home with the winning run.

Gene Oliver drove in four runs with a homer and a double. Hank Aaron had three singles and Mack Jones lashed his 20th homer in Milwaukee's free-swinging triumph over the Astros.

Ted Abernathy's 39th relief performance of the season preserved Chicago's victory and Larry Jackson's lifetime 13-0 record against the Mets. He came on after Gary Kolb's three-run homer pulled the Mets to within one in the bottom of the ninth.

Britian's Hopes Are Crippled

CLEVELAND (AP) — Christine Truman, the 6-foot English girl who ranks among the world's best women tennis players, was hobbling around the sidelines today with an inflamed achilles tendon, an injury that crippled Great Britain's chances in the opening of the Wightman Cup matches.

With the English ace out of action, the United States ranked a top-heavy favorite in the three-day, best-of-seven series on the grainy, synthetic-surfaced Harold T. Clark courts.

Miss Truman was scratched from today's opening singles matches after she suffered the injury in practice Thursday. She was to have played No. 2 singles, but No. 3 Elizabeth Starkie was moved up to face Nancy Richey, 22, of Dallas, Tex. in today's second singles.

The opening singles paired Mrs. Ann Hayden Jones of England against Billie Jean Moffitt of Long Beach, Calif.

In Sunday's singles, it will be English newcomer Virginia Wade against Mrs. Carole Caldwell Graebner of Beachwood, Ohio. On Monday Miss Starkie will play Miss Moffitt and Mrs. Jones will oppose Miss Richey.

Both sides agreed to postpone Monday's doubles pairings because of the possibility Miss Truman may be able to play.

The British girls have won the cup only six times in 37 matches starting back in 1923. The only time they won in the United States was in 1925.

Leading Hitter Is Called By Los Angeles Angels

By The Associated Press

Chuck Dees, the El Paso outfielder with the mighty mace, left something to be remembered by when he was called up by the Los Angeles Angels. He was hitting .377 and leading the Texas League by six points.

But Dees can't win the batting title even if he should finish the season ahead because he had only 371 times at the plate and 434 are required.

Dave Pavlesic, Tulsa catcher, is second with .371 and can win the crown unless the St. Louis Cardinals should also summon him to the majors. He can pick up the necessary number of times at the plate in the remaining games. He has 313 now.

Walter Williams of Tulsa is batting third with .331 and has a lot of ground to make up, although he will of a certainty be at bat enough. He already has faced the pitchers 426 times.

Leo Posada had his bat pretty well muzzled while Amarillo was going through 58 scoreless innings but still leads the league in home runs with 24, in total bases with 215 and in runs with 86.

Winston Llenas of El Paso tops in doubles with 32 and Vince Ferguson of Austin leads in triples with 10.

Williams has the most hits with 141 and also paces the way in runs with 80.

Ken Nixon of Austin racked up his 15th pitching victory in 22 decisions and there may be a 20-game winner yet.

Herb Hippauf of Austin leads in strikeouts with 147 but is getting competition from Larry Jaster of Tulsa, who now has fanned 140.

Chuck Hartenstein of Dallas-Fort Worth has 2.52 to lead the pitchers in earned run average.

Albuquerque leads in club batting with .282 and in club fielding with .9701.

Elston Howard led American League catchers in fielding in 1964, making only two errors in 1,008 chances.

Attendance Drop Is Due In All-Star Bout

DALLAS (AP) — It will be Tuesday before an official count is made but the all-star football game of the Texas coaching school Thursday night isn't expected to show 39,000 attendance.

That was the estimate announced after the game but L. W. McConachie, executive vice-president of the Texas High School Coaches Association, said State Fair officials indicated they thought the total might reach 30,000 only.

He said he thought that would be very good and wiped out the memory of 1960 when only 12,731 saw the all-star game in the Cotton Bowl and the coaching school wound up losing money.

Dic McCann Displays Many Exciting Football Relics

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Y.A. Tittle isn't in the Pro Football Hall of Fame yet but his shoulder pads made it.

The battered set that Y.A. wore at Baltimore, San Francisco and New York are on display at the handsome museum operated by director Dic McCann in pro football's Cooperstown.

McCann missed a bet by not getting the helmet that Y.A. used to boot in anger when he missed a pass. Or the baseball cap the Old Bald Eagle wore as a rug in practice sessions.

But McCann hasn't missed much. The exhibits of pro football's historical material range from Knute Rockne's helmet and Jim Thorpe's Olympic blazer to Sammy Baugh's old uniform, complete with bronzed shoes, and Bobby Layne's No. 22, both Detroit and Pittsburgh versions.

There is the original check for $115,153 turned over to charity as the result of the Dec. 18, 1950 exhibition game between Rockne's Notre Dame All Stars with the Four Horsemen and the New York Giants. Also the programs for the depression era game, carrying the message, "You can help smash that line—the bread line."

The ball used in the famous sudden death championship game between Baltimore and New York in 1958 has been presented to the Hall by Gino Marchetti, the Colts' great retired defensive end.

An anonymous donor chipped in with a chunk of the white goal posts that delirious Colt fans carted home from Yankee Stadium after Alan Ameche crashed home for the winning touchdown after 8:15 of sudden death overtime.

If George Halas ever sees the caricature of him by Bob Kilcullen, Chicago Bears defensive tackle, he won't be happy. Kilcullen, an accomplished artist, pictures the Bears' owner-coach in a moment of teeth-gritting sideline frustration.

Others have contributed oil paintings that never will make the Louvre but do reflect a growing interest in pro football.

Wall plaques and busts of the 21 members of the Hall of Fame, already installed, are on view. Space has been marked off for the seven new members to be formally acknowledged, Sept. 12 before Detroit and Washington meet in the annual Hall of Fame exhibition game. The new members are Bob Waterfield, Otto Graham, Steve Van Buren, Sid Luckman, Paddy Driscoll, Dr. Danny Fortmann and Guy Chamberlin.

Writers Are Picked For Best Story Award

DALLAS (AP)—Blackie Sherrod of the Dallas Times Herald, a steady winner over the years, had the best game account—his story of Texas-Arkansas football—in the annual writing contest of the Texas Sports Writers Association.

He won first money of $25.00.

John West of the Bryan Daily Eagle won first prize for game account in the small-paper division. He got his $25 for his story of the Houston-Texas A&M football game.

Jim Browder of the Fort Worth Press won with his column on Francis Schmidt, the late famed coach of Arkansas, Texas Christian and Ohio State.

Bob St. John of the Dallas News had the best feature — a story on Roy Harris.

Rick Pezdirtz of the Valley Morning Star, Harlingen, had the top advance story—the Texas-Texas A&M football game.

Ken Carr of the Conroe Courier won in the small-paper division with his story on Bay City-Conroe football.

Tulsa Makes Strong Bid For Top Spot

By The Associated Press

There's cause for alarm in the Dallas-Fort Worth camp at Tulsa's Oilers edge up on the Spurs in the hectic battle for first place in the Texas League's Eastern Division.

Dallas-Fort Worth lost its third straight game Friday night, falling to Albuquerque 2-1, while Tulsa won its third in a row in beating El Paso 5-2.

So now Dallas-Fort Worth has only a half-game lead and Tulsa plays a double-header tonight against El Paso at Tulsa.

Jack Billingham put down a ninth-inning Dallas-Fort Worth threat as Albuquerque beat the Spurs and increased its lead in the Western Division to 16 games with 32 to play.

Albuquerque won with an unearned run and a botched rundown play during which another Dodger tally scored.

Tulsa slammed four runs across in the eighth inning to trim El Paso. Joe Patterson, Bobby Pfeil and Dave Pavlesic got hits to drive in runs and John Kindl drove in another with an infield out.

El Paso was leading 2-1 as the result of Cotton Nash's 17th homer in the sixth inning when the Tulsa blast came.

Amarillo beat Austin 4-1 in the other game of the night.

Paul Knechtges scattered eight hits and was helped by four Amarillo double plays while Leo Posada got his 25th homer and a pair of singles to bat in enough runs for victory—two.

Austin is again at Amarillo and Albuquerque at Dallas-Fort Worth tonight.

LIGHTEST MEXICO

BY BOB ABNEY

ACAPULCO, Mexico — Jai-alai (pronounced jai - alai) was brought over by the Spaniards. It is a betting game and the Spaniards were heavy on sporting money.

They caused the king all sorts of problems during the conquest days. Betting ponies, playing cards and losing their armor plates in floating crap games.

As every bookie knows, the Spaniards got deported after their 300 year visit to Mexico but jai-alai stayed.

It has grown to a large operation here in the Paradise of the Pacific. It is a nightly must with a big percentage of the local population. And tourists go mad over the game weather they understand it or not.

But first things first. Jai-alai is played in a caged-in concrete court. Players glove on a long, curved wicker - like thing that looks like a warped fruit holder.

It is awkward looking. But a rubber ball, hard as a pawn broker's heart, is flung against the wall at one end of the court. A player catches it in his jai-alai catcher, whirls and flings it back against the wall. What happens then is up to the opposing player. Like one-way tennis.

The betting gets wild - eyed. You can bet a "quiniela" (originated with the game) or do it with the mutual system on points.

To bet "quinielas" you pick the post position of players or teams to come in straight and place like the horses. Example, get a "guiniela" ticket on 1 and 5. If they come straight or place in either direction you win. Gets a little complicated to my simple mind because odds change constantly during the games.

Bookies race through the stands with fists full of bills taking bets as the odds wave. Maybe it started heavy on the Red team as the game opened. Blue is hot and it looks like an upset. Odds swing over to Blue and you fudge with a point bet on Blue to cover what's already laid out.

Most of the players are Basque. They go by one name like Osa, Ikeda, Aquinaga and Pareyon II.

So shortly before 9 p.m. Mr. Buck Marryat, the American Airlines press gentleman, and I strolled through the light of the full moon and into the jai-alai emporium. A packed house with odds on Osa and Salazar, the Blue team in the first star match. A 30 point game.

Mr. Marryat picked up his ticket for Osa & Company. And at 9 p.m. the ball began flying. I must say this is one of the most acrobatic contests yet. They leap up the side of walls to snatch at the ball and whirl like dervishes to sling it back.

Odds shot up and down like a Wall Street chart. With every change of odds, the bookies shouted and waved bills. Mr. Marryat shouted right back and pushed more bills into their hands.

The house roared like a political convention and as I recall, the Reds were more inspired and hit the finish line first. Buck settled back with a fatigued Blue and Red look and mopped at the perspiration on his brow.

So I asked Mr. Marryat, "How much did you win — or lose?"

And he gave me a sort of executive look and muttered, "I don't even know who I was betting on. The bookies will inform me of the results and they are honest gentlemen."

Just like home-town bankers.

Summer Theaters Attract Bigger Audiences In Texas

Editor's Note — If you think live theater west of Broadway is dead, just count up the summer theaters in Texas. People jean at the chance to join them and see them.

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

Texans are in a play-going mood this summer.

Theaters are luring new audiences with breezes and lawn chairs, big name stars or the up-and-coming hometown actress.

Outdoor theaters are more popular than ever. It helps if they're by a river, but the stark canyon walls around the Panhandle's Palo Duro Amphitheater are just as good a mood setter.

Productions range from glittering professional "family" performances to season, but a California company patched-up experimental plays by volunteers. Most plays are aimed at the family and tourist trade.

The grandaddy of summer stock in Texas is the Dallas State Fair Musicals. Mary Martin and Carol Channing in two Broadway theaters-in-the-round crowds early this season. State Fair shows run about two weeks each.

In Fort Worth, the Casa Manana Theater brings New York stars for the leads in eight summer musicals. The stars are not usually as famous as in the Dallas plays but Fort Worth's theater has a widespread community support and is on good financial footing.

Houston has no such musical "Hello, Dolly" packed in the crowds early this season. State Fair shows run about two weeks each.

In Fort Worth, the Casa Manana Theater brings New York stars for the leads in eight summer musicals. The stars are not usually as famous as in the Dallas plays but Fort Worth's theater has a widespread community support and is on good financial footing.

Houston has no such musical ter and Ann B. Davis, who played a character named "Schultzy" in a Bob Cummings series for so long.

"It is very important to a series that the cast get along well together," said Forsythe soberly as befits a co-owner of the show.

The trade publication Variety, which keeps charts of such things, finds that eight shows have changed producers this summer, often a signal of program trouble. Most recent departure has been the producer of the new "Dean Martin Show," Bill Colleran, who said his approach to the show differed from the network's ideas.

Other new programs suffering recent producer changes include the Smothers Brothers' show, "A Man Called Shenandoah," "The Wild, Wild West," and "O.K. Crackerby."

Houston has no such musical

The state's only historical theater is in San Antonio, with a stage curving on three sides of the hillside audience next to Mission San Jose. Its plays often, but not always, have historical overtones. In San Antonio fashion, playgoers come early to hear Mexican music and snack on tamales and tostados. The San Antonio Little Theater capitalized on the enthusiasm for outdoor plays by staging "Oklahoma!" in the Brackenridge Park sunken gardens theater.

One of the more unusual theaters is the rugged Palo Duro Canyon Theater. On summer nights, "Thundering Sounds of the West" are dramatized for visitors, complete with galloping actors and eerie lighting.

Another amphitheater is in use at Gonzales, where "Seven Nuns at Las Vegas," a comedy, was the first annual summer youth production with Gonzales Little Theater actors taking some roles.

At least two theaters operate on an educational, nonprofit basis.

The Hill Country Arts Foundation underwrites the Point Theater at Ingram. Since its founding seven years ago, the foundation has rebuilt a stage ripped away by a tempestuous Guadalupe River and added dormitories and classrooms on a tree-shaded 12-acre site. Nightly plays this summer included "The King and I," "A Thousand Clowns," and "Tosca." The outdoor theater drew about 20,000 last year, helped by more than 30 area camps. The foundation also brings in artists, dancers and craftsmen for summer workshops.

The Peninsula Playhouse in New Braunfels went broke last year after two seasons of summer stock productions featuring stars such as Linda Darnell and John Kerr in musicals. This spring, some San Antonio people formed the nonprofit Playhouse Productions Inc. and leased the Comal River Peninsula Playhouse Theater for nine years.

Lee Brandt, a former professional actor now living in San Antonio and president of the new drama group, said plays such as "Little Mary Sunshine" have filled most of the lawn chairs in the theater. New Braunfels, like Ingram, draws a good tourist business and he expects to attract more of them with a workshop program next summer.

Star Definition Expands On TV

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In strict theatrical terms, a performer is the star of a show when his name appears in the billing over the title of the vehicle.

This limited definition has been broadened considerably by motion pictures and, particularly, television.

Today a television star is anyone — even an unknown — cast in a regular, leading role in a series. Or it may be a "guest star" — a performer with or without name value brought in to play a leading role in a single episode. And there are many types of special billing, like "special guest star," and "also starring" which more than anything else reflect the ingenuity and persuasiveness of the performer's agent.

Despite the loose application of the glamorous word, television does award real star status to a few, those whose names are the titles of the shows: Andy Williams, Andy Griffith, Danny Kaye, Red Skelton, Patty Duke, Ed Sullivan, Donna Reed, Dick Van Dyke, Jimmy Dean, Jackie Gleason and Lucille Ball.

During the new season there will be a few additions — Dean Martin, the Smothers Brothers, Steve Lawrence and John Forsythe.

The last named wound up as title star of "the John Forsythe Show" — one of NBC's 10 new comedy series — largely because the producers were stuck for a suitable name. The responsibility seems to make him a little nervous.

"We originaly had a dandy, 'The Major, and the Minors,'" Forsythe said almost apologetically. "But we dropped that when we found the people who owned an old movie called 'The Major and The Minor' wanted a lot of money to use it."

Forsythe, who played the title role in "Bachelor Father" for five television seasons and is still seen in its reruns all over the place, is as pleased with his new professional "family" as he was with the other one. Among the regulars are Elsa Lanchester and Ann B. Davis, who played a character named "Schultzy" in a Bob Cummings series for so long.

"It is very important to a series that the cast get along well together," said Forsythe soberly as befits a co-owner of the show.

The trade publication Variety, which keeps charts of such things, finds that eight shows have changed producers this summer, often a signal of program trouble. Sinatra And Party Set Sail

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) — Singer Frank Sinatra and his 19-year-old friend, Mia Farrow, left Edgartown today aboard the yacht Southern Breeze, headed for an undisclosed destination.

The 49-year-old singer's party, including several other Hollywood personalities, was variously reported setting a course for Hyannis or Provincetown on Cape Cod, or Boston.

The sailing definitely ended rumors Sinatra would marry Miss Farrow during the stopover at this Martha's Vineyard port.

Actress Rosalind Russell, one of the group aboard the yacht, told newsmen Friday, "they are not getting married here. Not on this voyage. There is no suggestion of it."

CLIFF ROBERTSON as an American soldier, and Irina Demick as a member of the French Resistance, are shown on the day after the Normandy invasion in this scene from "Up From the Beach." Also starring Red Buttons, it is coming to the Palace Theater here Sunday, Aug. 15.

'Combat' Troops Fight Slow War

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The slowest-fighting company of World War II is ABC's "Combat" infantrymen, who are starting their fourth year of battling the Germans and still are not far away from Normandy.

"Combat's" war is really waged on MGM's big back lot, in and around a standing set that looks like a shell-scarred French village. The action Wednesday, however, was in a nearby sweet-scented eucalyptus grove made more dense by fake trees and shrubs. Star Vic Morrow was playing Sgt. Saunders deafened by an exploding grenade and trying to get back safely to his own lines.

When the lunch break came, Morrow and other tired-looking men in beat-up khaki slouched over to a nearby chow line, and this on-looker, caught by the mood of the script, was quite unprepared for the menu.

"Would you like stuffed guinea hen — or ham loaf?" inquired the white-uniformed woman presiding over the food. "And perhaps some macaroni or mixed green salad? And a little fresh mixed fruit?"

K-rations, or even C-rations of the real old war, never tasted like that.

Morrow, whose realistic portrayal of a battleweary man has won him the admiration of veterans of the fighting across France, says that the show is "the toughest, physically, I've ever acted in."

Morrow has turned into an avid student of World War II infantrymen, and has dug up many rare snapshots showing GIs in spirits ranging from holiday to pain and despair. They have helped him, he says, to understand the man he portrays better and in directing an occasional episode.

The actor admitted "Combat" will stay on its slow time-table just as long as the Nielsen ratings keep the show in fast company.

American involvement in Viet Nam will be thoroughly explored by television during the coming weeks.

CBS news will present a series of four one-hour shows, starting next Monday evening (10-11 EDT) and continuing on Aug. 16, 23 and Sept. 6.

ABC on Aug. 25 will preempt "Shindig" for an hour's report based on commentator Edward R. Morgan's recent three-week visit during which more than 100,000 feet of film was shot.

NBC, at the moment, does not have a Viet Nam special on its schedules, but its Sept. 7 evening show, devoting three and one-half hours to an examination of American foreign policy, will devote considerable time to the Viet Nam conflict.

NBC, incidentally, will return Ray Scherer to its White House staff, succeeding John Chancellor, new head of the Voice of America.

Marriage Is Inevitable, Says 'Casey'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Every man has to face the experience sometime. I'm 35, so I figured it was time for me."

That was Vincent Edwards' explanation of his sudden, secret marriage to actress Kathy Hillies, now plans to take a Kersh. The wedding, disclosed Manhattan lawyer and his wife six weeks after it happened, came as a surprise to everyone in the rumbling penthouse — far the "Ben Casey" star and from "dry martinis and iced caviar."

The scowly television surgeon long was one of Hollywood's most devout bachelors. A year ago I offered to bet him he would marry in 1964. Edwards accepted readily and even volunteered 10-1 odds. I lost, and unfortunately declined to renew the bet for 1965.

Edwards, who plays the odds on horses and show business with equal enthusiam, take a like attitude toward his marriage.

"Kathy's a great girl—talented, too," he remarked. "I hope everything works out all right."

He can thank actor George Hamilton for introducing him to the young actress. The pair met at a small party at Hamilton's Beverly Hills mansion eight months ago. They started dating immediately, and Edwards directed her in one of the "Ben Casey" shows.

Eva Gabor To Be A Country Wife

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Paul Henning, who achieved fame by rubbing country folk against city ways in "The Beverly Hillbillies," now plans to take a Manhattan lawyer and his wife, after it happened on an East River penthouse — to rumbling farmhouse — far from "dry martinis and iced caviar."

Hennings new show, "Green Acres," will feature such spectacles as a new farmer's wife, in a filmy Jean Louis negligee, chasing a rooster around the yard pleading with it please to produce three eggs for breakfast.

In what may prove to be a truly inspired bit of casting, Henning has Eva Gabor as Eddie Albert's wife.

The show will be in color. And Miss Gabor's high-style costumes promise to be the greatest fashion treat the feminine audience has had in a long time.

The youngest Gabor sister, an established television personality on conversation shows, will be making her debut in a series. After six weeks she is utterly enchanted with her new assignment.

"Darling, it is going ridiculously well," she exclaimed. "Of course I adore Eddie, so when even my father-in-law said to go ahead and make the test, I did. Then it happened so fast I raced back to New York to make sure that the house — my beautiful house — would be running smoothly for Richard, my husband, and then back here to rent a house in Beverly Hills for myself because my beautiful little cottage out here I had unfortunately rented. The important thing, darling, is Richard because I would not put anything in front of my marriage."

Richard Brown, Eva's husband of six years, is a Wall Street broker.

"The poor darling now is flying [illegible] weekend and that isn't good for him. So after the show is running smoothly on schedule, I will fly to him weekends, but it is very expensive."

Eva, despite taking the role on short notice, has had few problems. Even collecting the elaborate wardrobe was a cinch.

"Darling, I am model size — 6 or 8 — and I fit in the clothes perfectly with only a little shortening," she said. "And the show is so funny. Last week we ruined three scenes because the man up on the scaffold got to laughing and shook up the lighting."

Eva, incidentally, will be sporting some very fancy jewelry.

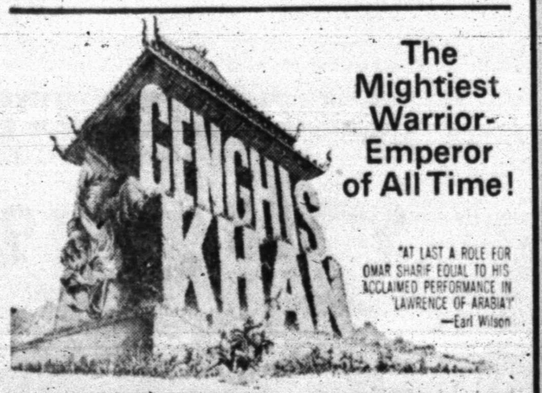

"My own," she said. "But it is all paste — I've been terrified since we were robbed and I was almost killed in Miami last year. Now I will wear only paste. And I want everyone to know it, darling, so that nobody else will get any bad ideas."

All The Way With LBJ Is Jake Pickle's Way Of Life

BY FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — For James Jarrell Pickle, "All the way with LBJ" is more than a catchy political slogan. It's closer to a way of life.

Once a Capitol Hill policeman through Lyndon Johnson's influence, Pickle now is congressman from the President's district in central Texas.

He is being talked about as a potential Senate candidate, although he disclaims any such ambitions.

For nearly three decades, Pickle, 52, and Johnson, 56, have been personal and political friends. These close ties have had a lot to do with Pickle's steady ascendancy in Texas politics. These plus his native ability and hard-to-forget name.

As the President's congressman — and occupant of the House seat Johnson held for 11 years — Pickle commands close attention from Capitol colleagues. They sound him out on presidential thinking and watch his voting record with more than usual interest.

Actually, Pickle has not been a rubber stamp for Johnson — although he tries to go along with the "Great Society" blueprint despite some conservative misgivings.

Pickle probably spends more time in private sessions with Johnson than any of the 22 other House members from Texas. When the President commutes by jet to his Texas ranch, Pickle often is aboard as a guest.

Pickle, a political professional, goes out of his way to dispel any notion that he is Johnson's man in the House.

"I don't think of myself as the President's congressman," he says. "I prefer to think of him as my constituent."

Pickle is a husky, heavy-set man, medium tall, with dark but graying hair. When he smiles, which is often, his tooth fillings show.

The Pickle name is getting ever-wider notice as more people become aware of his link with the White House. He doesn't discourage jokes about the name. His campaign emblem is a green plastic lapel pin shaped like a pickle and emblazoned with the name Jake, and he credits his name with making him known quickly in campaigns.

The Pickle name has provided some laughs in Congress. Last year there was much merriment when Pickle joined Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., in sponsoring the "Pepper-Pickle bill" — legislation that would permit widows to remarry without surrendering their Social Security benefits as survivors.

Although friends do not think of Pickle as deeply committed to any political ideology, except Democratic party, he says, "I am by nature rather conservative."

Yet, he was one of only six congressmen from Southern states to vote for House passage of the 1964 civil rights law — a vote popular in his district.

After that vote, Johnson awakened Pickle with a 1 a.m. phone call to offer congratulations plus a confession that he, Johnson, might have voted "nay" had he been in Pickle's shoes. In fact, the President did vote "nay" on civil rights when he represented the district.

Pickle was sworn in at 7:15 a.m. on Christmas Eve of 1963, taking over the House seat of the 10th district of Texas from Homer Thornberry, another Johnson friend who was elevated to a federal judgeship. Thornberry had succeeded LBJ in the job.

Like most congressional newcomers, Pickle was eager upon arrival to meet Washington's movers and shakers. At his first formal social event, a reception at the Finnish embassy, he approached the most distinguished-looking man in the crowd and announced:

"I'm Jake Pickle, congressman from Austin, Texas. Who are you?"

"My name is Pierre," said the other man, "and I am your waiter. What would you like to drink?"

Pickle was guilty of another slip-up the day he arrived. He was driven to the Capitol by Rep. Frank Ikard, D-Tex., who asked what he thought of the Sam Rayburn Office Building they were passing.

Pickle responded:

"I believe," said Ikard, "that marble is from the 10th District of Texas."

"You know," said Jake, "the closer you get, the prettier it looks."

Incidentally, Pickle collects political anecdotes as a hobby. He wants to put them in a book one day.

Other amusements: he is a self-taught pianist and harmonica player, practicing both arts occasionally at political gatherings. On Sunday mornings, Methodist Pickle often bangs out familiar hymns on the family piano for his attractive brunette wife Beryl and their three children.

The story of Pickle's political rise tells much about Johnson's own political success. Johnson, early in his career, captured the loyalty of a group of promising young Texans like Pickle and, by helping them to success, helped himself.

Like most members of this select group of LBJ proteges, Pickle was a poor boy — one of five children of a newspaper publisher and corner grocer who went broke in the depression of the 1930s.

Raised in Big Spring, in West Texas, Pickle entered the University of Texas in 1932 with total resources of $60. Taking a bare room in what was known as the "Poor Boy's Dorm," Pickle financed most of his education by peddling milk, collecting laundry and dry cleaning, and working as a student janitor.

Membership in the Delta Tau Delta law fraternity brought him into contact with John Connally, now governor of Texas and still a very close friend. It was Connally who introduced Pickle to Lyndon Johnson in 1937, the year Johnson went to Congress.

Jake earned his bachelor of arts degree in 1938 and took a job that solidified his ties with Johnson. He became an area director for the National Youth Administration, the New Deal agency for which LBJ was Texas director before going to Congress.

When Johnson went to war in 1941, as a Navy officer in the Pacific, he hired Pickle to help Lady Bird run his congressional office in Washington. To boost Jake's income, Johnson got him a "moonlighting" job as a uniformed capitol policeman.

This double life ended in the summer of 1942 when Pickle followed Johnson into the Navy. Winning an ensign's commission, he went to the South Pacific for 3½ years, was torpedoed once and took part in nine sea battles.

Peacetime brought renewal of the old ties with Johnson. Pickle, Connally and several other Navy veterans were hired by the Johnson family radio station in Austin. Pickle sold advertising.

Later, as a member of a public relations-advertising agency called Syers, Pickle & Winn, Pickle became one of the best-known and most effective back-stage political operators in the state. He also became controversial.

The controversy erupted in 1954 when Pickle's agency was handling Johnson's campaign for re-election to the Senate and Alan Shivers' bid to win re-election to the governorship against a challenge by liberal Democrat Ralph Yarborough, now a senator.

Syers, Pickle & Winn produced a campaign movie called "The Port Arthur Story" which documented, in admittedly partisan fashion, the results of a strike in Port Arthur.

It made Port Arthur look like a ghost town and suggested a Yarborough victory would make all of Texas desolate. Organized labor denounced the film and Yarborough held Pickle responsible for his ultimate defeat.

Pickle acknowledges he was aware of the production of "The Port Arthur Story" but says he did not have a direct role in its preparation. He was much too busy handling the Johnson campaign, he says.

Pickle won his seat in Congress, in a special election Dec. 17, 1963, in something of a walk.

China Pictures Soviets As Being Incurably Spineless

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special correspondent

Red China still wonders who is top man in the Soviet Union, but judging from its tirades, Peking thinks less of the present Kremlin leaders than it did of Nikita S. Khrushchev.

Propaganda assaults on Moscow's leaders are frustrated by lack of any one personality to single out. Peking attacks "Khrushchevism without Khrushchev." It has yet — after 10 months — to abuse any one member of the Soviet collective leadership by name.

This suggests that Peking considers practically all the Soviet leaders as antirevolutionary and beyond redemption. At least Khrushchev had been highly vocal against the United States. His words — if not his deeds — produced thunder at each new development in Viet Nam just a year ago.

By comparison, the new leaders have been a pale substitute. Their lack of menacing response to U.S. actions has impelled the Red Chinese to describe the Soviet leaders as:

—The "lowest flunkeys of U.S. imperialism."

—"Afflicted with incurable spinelessness."

—"Scared of revolution" (and traitors to it.)

—"Like forlorn lovers dreaming of joint domination of the world with the United States."

—"Imperialist agents" who will be "cursed by posterity."

—Men who, as Khrushchev did, "beg for peace."

The Red Chinese predicted — correctly, as events demonstrated — that Khrushchev would be overturned. They are now predicting that the present Soviet leadership "will bring ruin and shame upon themselves."

But the attacks fail to say which of the Soviet leaders will come to grief. The Red Chinese, like much of the rest of the world, lack a clear idea of who dictates Soviet policy today. The collective leadership is nominally headed by Leonid I. Brezhnev as party chief and Alexei N. Kosygin as premier, but apparently many other powerful figures are involved, representing a wide variety of opinion.

The failure of any one man to emerge clearly has weakened the Kremlin's potential for dominating the world stage. Stalin was a symbol, and Khrushchev became one, too. Verbal thunderbolts reverberated in world capitals.

To the Chinese, apparently, the present Soviet leaders are nonentities, heirs of Khrushchev who, in the words of the Peking newspaper Ta Kung Pao, "have acquired his rotten legacy."

For all the fault they found with Khrushchev, and for all the names they called him, the Chinese had more reason to be satisfied with his performance.

When antiaircraft missile bases in North Viet Nam, presumably installed by the Russians, were attacked by U.S. planes recently, the Soviet leadership paid no public attention to it. If Khruschev had been around, the reaction might have been a horrendous roar of threats.

Just a year ago, less than three months before he was overthrown, Khrushchev reacted violently to a U.S. bombing of North Vietnamese targets in retaliation for a sea raid on U.S. warships.

Denouncing what he called "arbitrary and piratical methods," Khrushchev proclaimed: "We wish to warn all wildmen and half wildmen, normal and abnormal, who do not wish to live in peace and respect the sovereignty of nations, not to interfere in the internal affairs of other countries."

Khrushchev waded into verbal battle with dire pronouncements. Events could "touch off a world conflagration," he warned. Stung by Red Chinese scorn of his policies, he cried that Soviet forces could "deal a crushing retaliatory blow" to any enemy.

"Let the imperialists know that we are not indifferent to the situation which is taking shape," he said.

A month before his fall, Japanese journalists quoted Khrushchev as telling them the Soviet Union had a weapon which could "annihilate mankind." Later he modified the boast, which may have been one of the points against him in deciding the Communist party on his removal.

Today, by comparison, reactions of Soviet leaders to tense events such as those in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic seem mild. This has impelled the Red Chinese to complain that "both Khrushchev and his successors, who claim to be Marxist-Leninists, are filled with awe before U.S. imperialism."

Said Ta Kung Pao: "The Khrushchev revisionists are blind to the strength of the world's revolutionary people and regard U.S. imperialism as almighty, believing that any question in the world must be solved by their collaboration with the United States. Khrushchev was like this and so are his successors. The counterrevolutionary black thread of Soviet-U.S. cooperation for world domination runs through their whole set of revisionist policies."

COMFORTABLE, tailored, practical and pretty — all the virtues that echo the country of origin — Israel, a driving new force in modern apparel design. For this two-piece suit, the designer chose a most modern fabric, Acrilan acrylic. The fabric is a red and black boucle jersey that will shed wrinkles throughout a busy day. The jacket has an easy fit over a slightly A-lined skirt. Small slits at the jacket hem are marked with striped trim which is repeated around the collar.

Cadette Troop No. 325 (Mrs. Redwine) had a business meeting and also a swimming party during July. They are pla... an overnight trip soon.

Chemical blankets are a thrifty method of saving water lost by evaporation, says a researcher in mineral engineering.

Dr. Victor K. LaMer of Columbia University urges that thin chemical blankets be spread over reservoirs to save billions of gallons of water lost by evaporation.

The blankets are layers of a harmless chemical, spread one molecule thick over the surface of reservoirs to seal off the water from the air. This retards evaporation.

The cost is estimated at between 10 and 12 cents per 1,000 gallons of water saved. This, Dr. LaMer says, compares with $1 to $3 per 1,000 gallons to de-salt sea water.

In 17 western states, according to LaMer and Dr. Thomas W. Healy of the University of California, 15.6 billion acre-feet (more than 5 trillion gallons) of water are lost by evaporation alone each year. This loss, they say, is equivalent to a disappearance of all the usable water in storage in California, the most populous state in the nation.

Northeastern United States is suffering from the worst drought in U.S. Weather Bureau records, causing severe garden problems.

The Venus fly trap plant has increased in popularity in recent years. Did you ever wonder how this small perennial herb with a rosette of leaves and often small white flowers does its insect-trapping?

The leaf blade works like the teeth of a trap. The two halves, at an angle of about 50 degrees when open, snap together and about 13 bristles interlock.

Sensitive hairs, like feelers, spring the trap. The feelers line the inner surface of the leaf blade. The trap is activated in a fraction of a second when one hair is touched twice, or more that one is touched once by the insect.

Generally, if the insect is small or of little food value to the plant, it is permitted to escape.

Once, the insect has been trapped, the secretion of digestive enzymes begins and the insect is digested and absorbed into the plant's circulatory system. The process takes about 10 days, then the leaf blades open and are ready for the next victim.

Homemakers who find themselves in possession of a random piano bench have at hand a perfect "work bench" for the junior member of the family. Seated on a floor cushion, a child can easily write or color in a book on the top. For a custom-made touch, the homemaker can re-finish the bench, and even surface the top with ceramic tile to make it a readily cleaned, wear - resistant piece of furniture. The compartment under the seat of the bench makes a perfect storage place for crayons, paints, coloring books, puzzles and the other paraphernalia of childhood.

Jester Records Memoirs

THE MEMOIRS OF AN AMNESIAC. By Oscar Levant.

If there had been an index for this book, it would have been jammed with names — all celebrities, both famous and notorious, from classical music, Tin Pan Alley, radio, television, Broadway, Hollywood, gangland and publishing.

Levant has been an adult prodigy for 40 years or so, a phenomenon of the footlights, neon lights and electronics, whose stock in trade varied from concertos to verbal upsmanship, from grim anecdotes of egocentric grandoisity to the once was fashionable in the In-groups of his day.

He also has been a hypochondriac and a neurotic, who for many of his recent years has gulped pills, inhabited psychiatric wards and tried to overcome his superstitious compulsions. The opening and closing chapters of this autobiography are filled with startling descriptions of his troubles with sedatives and a straitjacket.

The range of his experiences has been almost incredible. Older readers will remember him as the 'Bad Boy genius of the famous "Information Please" on the radio, and not-so-old readers will remember his cutting observations on television. He was both a pop musician (Ben Bernie's band) and a professional concert pianist (he has a chapter of such figures as Monteaux, Toscanini and Mitropoulos). He was a Broadway song writer and friend of George Gershwin, but also a composer of serious music; an actor, score - composer and writer for the movies; a night club companion of show girls, mobsters, playboys, columnists and assorted oddballs.

Levant's book is a recapitulation of his career as a professional smart guy who lived in many worlds and made devastating quips on everything. He burned his candle at both ends and in the middle, and singed everyone with its flames. If the 20th Century has its court jesters, he is the foremost.

ON THE HOUSE

Because plywood is made of thin sheets of wood glued together under heat and pressure, its edges have a lined or seamed effect. When the plywood is to be used in a project where the edges will be hidden, nothing more is required than a coat of sealer, a precaution necessary to prevent the entrance of moisture. But when the edges will be visible, some effort usually is made to cover or disguise them.

The home handyman has a number of possibilities open to him. He can paint the edges, bevel them, cover them with wooden strips or special moldings, apply laminated plastic, use aluminum or stainless steel channels, or attach what is called plywood tape.

The big advantage of the tape — actually rolled-up wood veneer — is that it can be obtained in matching or contrasting colors. These colors are not painted on, but are the real shades of the wood from which they were stripped. Thus, if you are using birch plywood, you need only to ask for birch tape (or wood trim, as it sometimes is called) to be sure of a reasonably good match. The same king of finish can be used on the tape as on the remainder of the table, bookcase, cabinet or whatever.

Plywood tape is attached with ordinary wood glue or one of the various forms of contact adhesive. In the first case, clamps must be used to keep the tape firmly against the edges until the glue has set. In the second, it is necessary only to apply the cement to both surfaces, wait a few minutes, then join. However, contact cement grips instantly and will not let go, so it is important that the tape be pressed against the edges with great care. The tape, by the way, can be cut easily with ordinary scissors.

Some years ago, we saw a well - built plywood table with an ultramodern look. On closer inspection, we discovered that the edges of the plywood were exposed, but had an odd yet striking appearance, almost like a piece of burnt toast with lines running through it. Questioning the man who made the table, we found that, using a power sander, he had deliberately held the sander tightly against the plywood edges until the friction created smoke. The result: a seared effect of unusual quality.

QUESTION: About four years ago I put up gypsum wallboard in our attic. I had never done anything of this kind before and did not get as smooth a job as I expected. There is a kind of unevenness around the seams and where some of the nails were put in, although everything seems to be solid. Now I'd like to repaint the wallboard and wonder if there is anything I can do to make certain areas a bit smoother.

ANSWER: If there are a few definite low spots in the wallboard, you probably can even them up with the surrounding surfaces by using the same kind of cement used originally. But you would have to be very skillful for the patchwork not to be noticeable. If the uneven spots are many in number, you'd have a hurculean task. A much better way to rectify the lack of perfection would be to use textured paint. It has a rough surface and probably will hide all the defects. Follow the directions on the container, using two coats if necessary. Textured paint can produce highly interesting results. It comes in many decorator colors and these days often is used in expensive homes in contrast to the time when it was applied mainly for the purpose of covering unattractive surfaces.

QUESTION: You said recently that anyone over 65 doesn't have to pay income tax on the profit made on the sale of his house, if certain conditions prevail. I bought an income tax book about a year ago and, after reading your article, looked it up. I can't find anything in there about it. are you sure you're right?

ANSWER: Yes. The book probably was written before the law went into effect. Incidentally, you were one of several persons who questioned that statement.

Nutrition Important

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Early parenthood requires emphasis on adequate nutrition, says a University of Illinois home economist.

Esther Brown said good nutrition has become a prime need for young women who have children.

She said one of every four mothers bearing a first child is less than 20. In 1963 teen-age marriages produced about 600,000 babies.

Controlled scientific studies show a relation between good nutrition during pregnancy and the health of both mother and child.

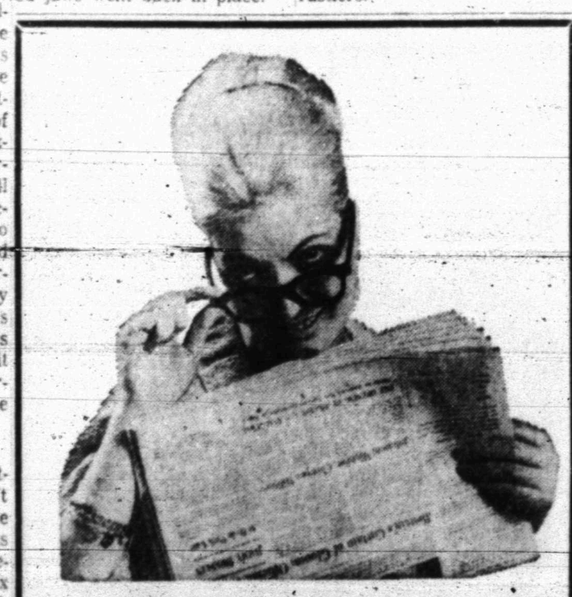

During pregnancy, a girl's need for protein, minerals (calcium) and vitamins increases.

MRS. CHARLES PHILLIP McCAIN

Vows Solemnized Here For Miss Schmidt, Mr. McCain

In a candlelight ceremony at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, July 31st, Miss Martha Ann Schmidt of Snyder became the bride of Mr. Charles Phillip McCain of Roby. The Rev. E. R. McGregor of Cone, officiated at the double ring ceremony read in the First Methodist Church of Snyder.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Andrew E. Schmidt of Snyder, and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McCain of Roby.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of Alencon lace and net over taffeta. The fitted bodice tapered to a point at the waistline. Long tapered sleeves came to a point over the hands and were closed with tiny self-covered buttons. She wore a pearled tiara holding an elbow-length veil of white tulle.

The bride's bouquet was a white gardenia with streamers of stephanotis atop a white Bible.

Miss Georgia Spence of Snyder was maid of honor. She wore a street - length dress of sky blue whipped cream featuring a scooped neckline and a fitted bodice tapering to a point at the waistline. White crescendo gloves and a brief blue net veil attached to a matching fabric rose completed her costume. She carried a white long stemmed chrysanthemum.

Mr. Bruce McCain of Roby attended his son as best man. Mr. Lynn Gibson and Mr. Weldon Van Liew, both of Roby, were ushers.

Mr. Herbert F. Groth, uncle of the bride, from Copperas Cove, presented traditional wedding music at the organ. Mr. Nelson Schmidt, also an uncle of the bride from Copperas Cove, sang "O Perfect Love" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The reception was held in Wesley Hall immediately following the ceremony. Presiding at the table were Miss Becky Lewallen and Miss Judy Johnson, both of Snyder. Miss Norma Sparks of Rotan registered guests.

Following a short wedding trip to Carlsbad, New Mexico, the couple will reside in Roby until school starts in September. Then they will both attend Texas Tech in Lubbock where the bride is a junior and the groom is a senior.

Parents of the groom were hosts for the rehearsal dinner held at the Town House Restaurant.

Out of town guests attending were from Roby, Rotan, Sweetwater, Eastland, Crosbyton, Lubbock, Welsh, Mason, Cone, Coleman, Abilene, Goldthwaite, Copperas Cove, and Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Bird's Life Narrated

THE GOLDEN EAGLE. By Robert Murphy.

Murphy's vivid prose delineates the life of a young eagle, Kira, with such feeling and intensity that before the book is ended, the reader has virtually identified himself with the golden bird.

In this respect, his narrative is like that of his previous book, "The Peregrine Falcon." He tells of Kira's sudden need to try her wings, and to learn to fly. He describes her first lesson in hunting, her wanderings, her encounters with manmade and natural dangers.

At the same time — as he did in his first book, "The Pond" — he gives a naturalist's complete background of the environment: in this case it is the continental spine of the Rocky Mountains. There is a glimpse of a band of bighorns and a memorable scene of a mountain lion stalking an elk.

Murphy emphasizes that the eagle's greatest enemy is man. Kira escapes a pair of hunters who kill her father; she is caught in an abandoned cabin by an old miner; she is nearly shot by a pair of boys; she is missed by a hunter who shoots a companion eagle from a plane; but finally she is destroyed in another way.

John Schoenherr's drawings illustrate well this beautifully written story.

Following an eight - month study, the Inter - American Development Bank has recommended that Colombia and Venezuela combine efforts on their border to build roads, provide irrigation, improve farms, establish industries where possible and encourage some people to resettle.

Library Notes

First year band students and junior high school band instructors may welcome a music series received recently by the Scurry County Library. This 12-book series, well written and beautifully illustrated, traces music composition, musical instruments and musical organizations from their earliest beginnings to the present.

These books will make interesting reading for the novice musician, and give basic and sound information. The series has been assembled by one publisher and is authored by seven accomplished musicians, some with many years of teaching experience.

Elementary music class students and instructors of school choral groups may wish to make use of this group of books also. Teachers may find these helpful in fostering music appreciation.

Author of four of the series, Robert W. Surplus, has been active in music education almost 20 years. He has had experience in every phase of music instruction in the public schools, and has taught all age levels from kindergarten through graduate school.

Featuring musical highlights emphasized in general music in the upper elementary and junior high years, Surplus' book, "Alphabet of Music," will prove a real aid to the youthful musician. He also deals with unusual topics such as making up a song and finishing a phrase. This book will prove a soure of positive guidance in basic music understanding, and deals with melody, harmony, rhythm and form.

"Beat of the Drum," the second of the Surplus books, traces the primitive beginnings of this instrument from a tree stump to the modern timpani in today's orchestra. Many other members of the percussion family are discussed also.

This author tells how conducting came into being centuries ago and how it has developed through the years to what it is today in his book, "Follow the Leader." The work of the music conductor is described in terms easily understood by young people. Technical explanations are simple, but clear and accurate.

The fourth book, "The Story of Musical Organizations," discusses the orchestra, band, dance band, combos, choirs, glee clubs and chamber music. Development of group playing and singing is traced by the author through the ages to the fine organizations of today.

Jean Craig is author of three books of the series. Miss Craig has several years experience as a teacher in Iowa public schools. She is a student of the violin, piano and music theory. At the present time she is studying music education at Columbia University, and is a graduate of Oberlin Conservatory of Music with a degree in music education.

Miss Craig's book, "Heart of the Orchestra," gives the story of the violin and other strings. In accurate terms, this book describes the violin, viola, cello, bass violin and early string instruments. She tells how string instruments are played, their role in the orchestra, and their similarities and differences. Considerable detailed information is given to illustrate fingerings and bowing. History of the bow and early stringed instruments is given also.

Through skillful use of musical examples, Miss Craig tells the history of musical notation in her book, "The Story of Musical Notes." Questions about how music is written today are clearly answered. Rhythm and pitch are explained in understandable terms for the aspiring young musician.

In her third book, "The Woodwinds," the clarinet, flute, piccolo, oboe and bassoon are not only clearly presented, but many interesting, little known facts are told about each of them. Miss Craig tells the story of the five woodwind families where they came from, how they work and how they developed. She points out the fact that the player of any woodwind can switch from one instrument to a related one quite easily.

Lionel and Edith Davis have teamed up to write, "Keyboard Instruments," the story of the piano. Technical as well as historical information concerning the piano is presented. Diagrams and other illustrations are employed to make the discussion clear and logical to the young reader. The Davises have given the major portion of this volume to the piano, but they also discuss the harpsichord, clavichord, organ and other key board instruments.

Lionel Davis has been teaching piano to children for many years. He is also a choir director and organist. Mrs. Davis is a professional writer.

"Shining Brass," is the story of the trumpet and the other brass instruments and is interestingly told by Daniel B. Tetzlaff. The author includes the cornet, trombone, baritone, French horn and tuba in his discussion. This book focuses attention on features such as size, shape and appearance of brass instruments, and presents interestingly how each instrument is effectively used in the band and orchestra of today.

Tetzlaff has taught at several universities and colleges of music and has devoted his life to this field of endeavor. He has played the trumpet with well-known symphony orchestras, and is an outstanding conductor himself.

Lee Gilmore, a well known interpreter of folk music, is author of the volume, "Folk Instruments." This book covers the fiddle, banjo, guitar, ukuele, mandolin, zither, Jew's harp, bagpipe, mouth organ and accordion and devotes a section to square dance bands. The author gives a brief history and the physical description of each instrument. A clear discussion of a few major technical aspects of individual instrument is also given. The narrative is interesting and informative and the book is well illustrated.

Gilmore has a wide and varied experience in the field of music education. He is a singer of great versatility. Not only has he distinguished himself as an interpreter of folk and popular music, but is known in the fields of concert and opera as well. A university graduate, he is a public school teacher and a choir director.

"Playback," the story of recording devices, is written by Robert K. Krishef. This fascinating story traces the development from Thomas Edison's first attempt with the cylinder to the present finely precisioned high fidelity and stereo producing instruments. This book may be used for supplementing science study. One chapter, "What Is Sound?" clearly illustrated amplitude and frequency and briefly states the meaning of sound.

Krishef is an experienced journalist. He is not associated with the teaching profession.

Sharon Lerner describes many of the famous concert halls of the world in her book, "Places of Musical Fame." Famous halls from faraway places are included with those of the United States. Any budding musician would find this book fascinating reading.

Mrs. Lerner has traveled widely on the American continent and in Europe. She is interested in music and art. This author has taught in public schools for several years and is doing post-graduate work at this time.

Youthful Scurry County readers be musicians and their instructors can benefit by the library's to music. When youngsters' talents limit them in the use of musical instruments or in vocalizing, they can gain music appreciation which will enhance their enjoyment of music for their lifetimes.

Women In The Driver's Seat

Don't tell the men, it would put fear in their hearts — there are over 40 million women drivers on the highways this year. And, according to National Petroleum News, our numbers are growing. It is estimated that 10 years from now, there will be over 54 million of us. Looks like the men will just have to get used to our curious driving habits. Women behind the wheel are there to stay.

Everybody Lines Up To Shop In Moscow

By JOAN BEST

MOSCOW (AP) — The secret of shopping for vegetables and fruit in Moscow is to learn to "follow the string bag."

Instead of scanning newspaper advertisements for bargains — you'll find neither ads nor bargains here — the shoppers must keep a sharp eye peeled for purchases carried by others who've already been to the market.

In that way, before you arrive at the market place, you have a good idea of what is on sale that day and don't have to spend so much time looking around.

When we arrived in Moscow a year ago, I set out to find the local open-air market. I had been told the general vicinity and, by following the route traced by people carrying potatoes in string bags, was able to locate the market.

During the summer months when many fresh fruits and vegetables were on sale I was often stopped on the street and asked where I'd bought tomatoes or other purchases in my string bag.

Besides learning the market-intelligence value of string bags I also quickly learned all about queue - joining.

EVERYONE QUEUES

Russians have a great weakness for lineups. When a shopper sees one she gets into it and then finds out what she is queueing for. If it doesn't interest her she drops out of line.

But if it does — and Russian women out shopping often seem to be in the market for just about anything that's going — she counts herself ahead by having staked out a position.

Moscow's central market is indoors but many of the stall markets are open-air. Most of the goods on sale are state produce but, particularly in the open-air markets, you find "entrepreneurs" selling goods from their private plots. These generally are higher in both price and quality.

Except for a few home-made signs there are no price tags on fruit and vegetable trays. The shopper just has to inquire.

Double scales with weights are used for weighing purchases. The good shopper takes care to see that only good produce gets on the scales.

ROTTEN APPLES

On two occasions, women in the lineup behind me have obligingly plucked bad tomatoes out of the lot weighed for me, scowled at by the salesman.

Once when I was buying apples the woman selling apples next door wasn't busy so she removed two rotten apples I had missed. I have no doubt the man selling me the apples had a few words with her afterwards.

Wrapping is casual or nonexistent. If you don't bring your own carton or bag you will get your blueberries in a bit of newspaper folded into a cone. They have barrels of whole dill pickles which are scooped on to the scales. If you don't supply a carton the wet pickles are dumped into your string bag with the other vegetables.

Sauerkraut and smetana — an excellent sour cream — are sold in bulk so you must supply your own jars.

TICKET WICKET

When shopping in Soviet state stores you queue up to pass the counter to decide what to buy. Then you line up again to pay the required amount at the kassa, or cash wicket. With the receipt ticket you line up still another time to obtain the article.

If the purchase is sold by weight and comes to more ounces than you had anticipated, you may find yourself back in the kassa line. If your purchases are from different counters you must obtain individual tickets.

The only freezer units I've seen are small ice cream chests. Recently, I've seen frozen plums and tomatoes for sale in bulk.

We also have a local store that specializes in partially prepared foods. You can buy stuffed beets or peppers, pieces of chicken or meat with a potato or cracker coating, cooked chickens and salads.

I've watched the clerks prepare a new slab of butter for sale. The slab is about a two-foot cube. A long knife is used to skim a thin layer off the cube. Then two girls, using wire, cut the cube down and across in several layers.

They have a fish tank at our local meat store. Having paid at the kassa, customers leave the store with fresh flipping fish.

Peacock's Tail Is Baffling

THE PEACOCK'S TAIL. By Edward Hoagland.

Only the literary set may be able to make anything of this patchwork of episodes, which resemble a half dozen disconnected short stories of the sort that appear in the little magazines.

Since this is only a demi-novel, perhaps the irregular thread of narrative is unimportant. Such as it is, it deals with a young man named Ben Pringle, who has been fired and jilted on the same day.

He takes refuge in a slummy "hotel" inhabited mostly by fecund Negroes and fecund Puerto Ricans. He pesters some of his former friends with telephone calls and visits, moping. He slops around with some aging derelicts. He tells fables to swarms of grotesque children in the slum ant-heap. For lack of a climax, the book ends with Ben piping a few hundred of these irrational children on a parade through the city.

Granted that the story doesn't count, the point seems to be that the author is demonstrating what a gifted writer he is. He is grimly determined to demonstrate it in every sentence, each of which contains at least one hot verb, a glaring image, a wild metaphor and an elliptical extravagance. At one point, Ben's legs "were popcorn popping; where like internal insomnia." At another, "The pigeons on the sidewalk doubled the color and go of the people because they made twice as many."

Hoagland tries awfully hard to put sounds, sights, thoughts, feelings, smells, wishes and emotions into fresh words. He tries too hard, and although his experimentation sometimes creates a strong effect, too often he only baffles the reader. Some day when he has learned to throw in — occasionally, at lease — a simple, declarative sentence, he may write a real novel.

No cottons are true annuals.

IDEA for storing fitted sheets — put them in a grocery store cardboard honeycomb container that has been covered with wallpaper.

Fitted Sheets Look Neat In Honeycomb Cartons

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

House hunters on the prowl note that a great many new homes still do not build closets to suit modern needs. But in most homes a closet would need to be tailored to suit the family, anyway. Closets seem to be made to bulge at the seams for want of all the niches, large and small, that would be necessary for proper storage.

A well thought-out closet design can help in achieving some semblance of order. Working with an architect, builder or family do - it - yourselfer in advance of closets being built, may forestall those dead spots. One big one usually is the top shelf, and sliding doors or fold- the closet door behind the part of the wall into which the door frame fits. Builders argue that this is "free space" you wouldn't have otherwise, but a small door above the main door would give free access to the other shelf, and sliding doos or folding louver doors could be a logical choice to free all the space.

Linen closet shelves often are too deep for proper use so that we never fully use linens that get stashed away at the rear, especially on the top shelf. The solution could be roll-out shelves or bins on rollers. That way we could reach the back of the closet and use the linens in the rear occasionally.

Sheer inventiveness in solving such problems often results from necessity. A lady who wanted to photograph fitted sheets in a neat closet was at her wit's end. After all, thought Bess Williams, how in the world can you keep a closet neat if you must file away fitted sheets each way. Folding them may be simplified when you get the hang of it, but making a nice neat package for your closet is another.

In thinking about the problem she came up with a great idea.

"Why not put them in a honeycomb rack, the kind you use for wine bottles?"

But wine racks would be rather costly, she thought, reconsidering.

Never one to be stymied by some problem connected with her job, Bess did just what comes naturally. She found cardboard cartons that had the same little honeycomb inside, at the grocery store. These are the boxes used for vinegar, soda pop, juices and so on.

Twin-bed size sheets fit snugly into quart-size cubbyholes. For double-bed sheets, she folded down one flap, turning two cubbyholes into a larger oblong cubbyhole. Cartons holding half-gallon beverages often come in the larger compartment, Bess found, three doubles in a box. These are more adjustable to available space. You can stack them one on top of the other.

Bess tried three ways of brightening up the store boxes for pictures she needed of Sanforized sheets in time for the white sales. She painted the boxes. She wallpapered others. New papers like quilted fabric seem ideal for linen closets, she says. She also tried vinyl paper with self - adhesive from which a backing is removed before it is pressed into place. She could visualize, too, covering the boxes with fabric such as mattress ticking, and she liked a finishing touch on paper-covered boxes, such as binding the edges with solid color half-inch plastic tape for a color accent.

The idea is a good one to keep in mind when building a closet or converting one. You could have a unit such as that built right into the closet or a removable unit of inexpensive wood, plywood or plastic that could slide into a closet.

BUGS IN THE WORKERS' PARADISE

Crisis Draws Near For European Common Market

By NEL SLIS

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Europe's Common Market is moving toward a crisis at the end of this year. Charles de Gaulle's current boycott is only a symptom.

European Common Market officials and the ministers of the six member nations — France, Italy, West Germany, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg — have packed up for a long summer vacation.

While lingering on sunny beaches they will wonder what France's president will do about the market's future when he speaks at a news conference Sept. 9.

Speculation differs as to what methods De Gaulle will use in seeking to stave off growing European integration or even undo some of the power of the top leaders of the Common Market.

The issue is called supranationalism — meaning creation of new power to be exercised by political leaders not belonging to any national government. De Gaulle is its chief opponent.

Its chief supporters are the nine members of the market's Executive Commission, led by Chairman Walter Hallstein, and his top man for agriculture, Sicco L. Mansholt.

It is no secret that De Gaulle is after their political skins.

At the end of the year the Common Market is due to pass new milestones.

Under the Rome Treaty — the market's founding charter — economic integration must move further ahead and the Council of Ministers, its ruling body, would use majority voting next year.

It would mean the end of the veto on major decisions that now can be exercised by each of the member nations.

Decisions on proposals by the Executive Commission could then be taken by a weighted majority, so that in theory even a major power like France or West Germany could be outvoted by a combination of the others.

De Gaulle objects to this. French Premier Georges Pompidou said recently that the French government intended to keep firm control of the French economy and did not intend to surrender any of its authority to the Executive Commission.

Other member nations, on previous occasions, have openly declared that national interests would not always allow for a majority vote. Holland has said so in the case of integration of transport.

De Gaulle's boycott, carried out since July 1 after the clash with the other five members over the financing of common farm programs, was directly mainly against the commission's proposal for an estimated $2.4 billion budget of custom receipts, by mid-1967 to be controlled by the European Parliament.

A compromise proposal brought in by the Executive Commission July 26, when the five met without France, did not make them all happy.

Although all five would like to see France back at the table, it is doubtful whether Holland and Italy, not under Socialist pressure, can give in on the issue of supranationality.

At the next council meeting, Oct. 7, the five will discuss the compromise proposal — postponing the issue of supranationality for five years — with or without France.

Meanwhile De Gaulle's news conference may open up other vistas. Speculation varies widely. Will De Gaulle aim at early proposals for political integration on an intragovernmental basis or might he be thinking of a wider and looser alliance with the British - led European Free Trade Area?

Junior Editors Quiz on THE MOON

QUESTION: If the moon is dry, why are the dark spots called seas?

• • •

ANSWER: Long before there were telescopes, people had, of course, noticed the markings on the moon. Not being able to see them sharply, they thought there was a resemblance to a man's face—hence the imaginary idea of "the man in the moon." Later, after telescopes had been invented in 1608 A.D., the dark areas were thought to be seas, because water generally looks dark. Such names as the Sea of Showers, Sea of Moisture and so on, seem quaint to us today, since our powerful telescopes show us that the so-called "seas" are flat plains of some darker ground material. Exactly what the moon's surface is like we do not know as yet—but astronauts will probably be able to tell us all about it before too long, when they actually land. As we look at the moon through binoculars and telescopes, other surface features become visible: many circular craters, ranges of mountains and mysterious rays of a light color crossing the lunar landscape. Many of these features have been given names in honor of famous astronomers, like the crater Copernicus, named after the 16th century astronomer who first realized that the earth revolved around the sun, and Tycho, named for another great astronomer, Tycho Brahe, of long ago.

• • •

FOR YOU TO DO: As George is doing in our picture, make a copy of our artist's moon drawing (or paste his drawing on a card) and carry this outside when the moon is full. With binoculars, you'll be able to locate the general position of the seas and be better prepared to understand newspaper accounts of coming events. 8-7

Oilmen Eye Test Of New Power Cell

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — Petroleum industry scientists will be quite interested in the performance of a new gadget to be used later this month by the Gemini 5 spacecraft.

Electric power for the eight-day flight will be supplied by a fuel cell that produces electricity through a continuous hydrogen-oxygen chemical reaction.

This will be the first major operational use of fuel cells even though the theory behind their power generating ability was defined as early as 1839.

Gemini 5's long duration and future Apollo moon shots dictate a need for a power source more compact and more reliable than the storage batteries used on previous manned and unmanned space flights.

With 22 pounds of hydrogen serving as the fuel supply, no liquid hydrocarbons will be used.

But petroleum research specialists are vitally interested in that similar cells fueled by natural gas, kerosene, gasoline, diesel fuel, propane and methane are in various stages of development.

Recent progress has bolstered hopes hydrocarbon fuel cells some day may be used in homes, remote localities, land vehicles and ships and for emergency power during disasters.

Much research still is to be done. A major problem blocking such long range uses of the cells, whether fueled by hydrogen or hydrocarbons, is the cost of the electric power they produce.

Cost of fuel cell power presently dwarfs that produced by conventional sources.

One reason for the high cost is that the chemical reaction producing the electricity requires most fuel cells to have an expensive platinum catalyst.

An exception is a cell tested late last year by the U.S. Army. It can be fueled either by liquid hydrocarbons or natural gas but requires no platinum catalyst.

The two fuel cells to be carried in the Gemini 5 adapter section will have platinum catalysts and will weigh about 75 pounds each. The eight bottles of hydrogen and oxygen will weigh 202 pounds.

A similar fuel cell package was used on the unmanned Gemini 2 flight but it was not operational. The components were installed so engineers could check placement and weight requirements.

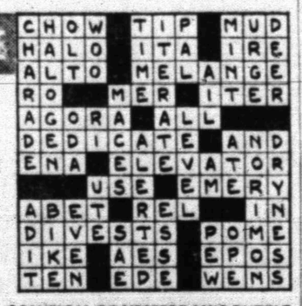

The Gemini hydrogen fuel cells were developed by General Electric Co., which also has developed a cell that will operate with a broad range of hydrocarbon fuels.

General Electric officials say their fuel cell systems have run through ground test missions up to 46 days, equalling five trips to the moon and back. In tests to marine performance specifications, individual cells have exceeded 4,000 hours of operation.

A General Electric booklet summarizes the outlook for fuel cells this way:

"While the special requirements of space flights make that field the first user of fuel cells, many uses on land and at sea are foreseen for this important addition to the available sources of electric power.

Merman Criticizes Today's Musicals

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ethel Merman, one of show businesses all-time talents, says the old-time musical comedy is dead. She's happy in her new niches —movies, television and night clubs.

She says: "I'm a pretty sophisticated type, but sometimes I can't understand what they are trying to prove on the Broadway stage. Everything seems to be a message — a way-out ballet or something. I keep asking myself, 'What do they want anyway, a moral victory?'"

From 1930, for almost three decades, Miss Merman wowed audiences in 12 big musical hits.

"It was entertainment for the sake of entertaining," she explains. "Everybody, no matter what his age, could understand it."

There were terrific songs, she comments.

"Today there's maybe one set and one popular song to carry the whole show. There's no competition. People go to the theatre because they want to go to the theater. They accept what ever is there; no matter what it is. I go sometimes and though I don't like what they do, I do enjoy watching them do it, I guess."

You need a gimmick to be on the stage today, she thinks. It has nothing to do with your performance. There's got to be something about you personally, a manner of dress — beatnick or whatever. You've got to be different in some way other than being a performer.

"As far as I'm concerned, the day of the real basic solid musical comedy with a series of hit songs is over," she says.

Miss Merman has played with some of the great comedians of show business, — Bob Hope, Jimmy Durante, Bert Lahr. Jerome Robbins who directed her in "Gypsy," her all-time favorite role, began his career as a chorus boy with her in "Stars in Your Eyes," She was with Rudy Vallee in "George White's Scandals."

There is never a dull moment in Miss Merman's life. She has made 10 movies. In the newest, "The Art of Love," she plays the role of a cafe proprietress in Monmartre in which she sings a song in French, which she describes as a "very sexy language," and wears colored wigs to match her gowns.

"Personally, it's the sort of thing I'd rather do now. I live alone, and I don't want to spend my life anyway commuting from the theater to a lonely hotel apartment. I like to come and go as I please. I'm going to spread out and live a little."

She used to be happy as long as the family was with her. When she goes to the coast, daughter Ethel, 22, is there. Her son, Bob, a college student, is going to Europe with her this summer, and it marks the first time in her life she'll be having any fun, she says.

"Up until now, it has always been go, go, go," she says.

She likes shows that have given her the chance to pour out her energy. And she's loaded with it, though she can "fall asleep anywhere, anytime," she says.

Legend Of Solomon And Sheba

By DENNIS NEELD
Associated Press Writer

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Ethiopia's Emperor Haile Selassie, recent host to Britain's Queen Elizabeth, claims descent from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba who lost her virtue for the sake of a drink of water.

Numerous Ethiopian works of art perpetuate the saucy legend and are favorite tourist souvenirs.

According to the legend, Sheba was as renowned for her beauty as was Solomon for his wisdom.

She reigned, it is said, in the ancient Ethiopian city of Axum but visited Solomon's court in Jerusalem to consult the royal sage.

Now Solomon, as well as being wise, was also one for the women. Not content with 400 wives and 600 concubines he determined to woo and win Ethiopia's virgin queen.

But he had tried and failed and now it was time for Sheba to return to her own country.

Solomon had one last trick up his sleeve. He invited the queen to a farewell banquet.

"And with wise intent Solomon sent to her meats which would make her thirsty and drinks that were mingled with vinegar, and fish and dishes with pepper," runs the ancient legend.

When the sumptuous feast was over, Sheba, alarmed by the twinkle in the merry monarch's eye, made him swear he would not take her by force.

"For if I who am a maiden be seduced I should travel on my journey in sorrow and affliction and tribulation," she declared.

Solomon agreed, but in return demanded:

"Thou must swear unto me that thou will not take by force anything that is in my house."

"Being a wise man why dost thou speak as a fool?" retorted the bewildered queen. "Assuredly I have only come in quest of thy wisdom."

But the gullible Sheba agreed to the king's condition and went unsuspecting off to bed.

"And the queen slept a little," goes the tale. "And when she awoke her mouth was dry with thirst, for the food which Solomon had given her in his wisdom had made her thirsty, and she was very thirsty indeed, and her mouth was dry, and she moved her lips and smacked with her tongue and found no moisture."

So the queen, in her foolishness, determined to drink from a pitcher of cool water which the king, in his wisdom, had placed in her room.

Before she could take a sip Solomon was beside her.

"Thou has broken the oath," exclaimed the king triumphantly.

"Be free from thy oath, and only let me drink thy water," replied the thirsty queen.

So Solomon permitted her to drink and Sheba surrendered to his embraces.

Thus was their son, Menelik conceived. He became the first ruler of the Kingdom of Ethiopia and Haile Selassie claims him as an ancestor.

History doesn't bear out the legend but it is the origin of the Emperor's title "Conquering Lion of the Tribe of Judah, Elect of God, King of Zion, King of Kings, and Emperior of Ethi-
