Raymond Lee Peggram

Raymond Lee Peggram, 5 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Peggram, passed away at their home here Sunday. Funeral services were conducted Monday at the Methodist Church in Clarendon by the pastor, Rev. Gordon Interment was made in the Clarendon cemetery.

The family had lived here only a short time, having moved here from near Quail.

He is survived by his parents, grandparents and one sister.

The former extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved.

Church of the Nazarene

The Sabbath day was a time of refreshing with the presence of God for the congregation of our church. The Sunday School hour was enjoyed by all, followed by the pastor's sermon. The Great Home Gathering at 11 o'clock. At 7:45 the N. Y. P. S. presented a musical program, the first this season. We would like to contact every young person who does not attend a young people service, if you play an instrument or sing we want to help you develop your talent.

At 8:30 we were blessed by having our former pastor, Rev. Fitzgerald, bring the evening message. The shouts of the congregation assented the throne of God as this faithful man of God brought the soul stirring message from 1st John, 3rd chapter. Love was the theme of his message. Truly we enjoyed hearing our pastor of nineteen years ago bring the message in the same old time fervor of yester years. May God's richest blessings follow this faithful preacher of righteousness to the end of life's way.

The church board voted to begin our summer revival on the second Sunday in July, and run for at least three Sundays. We hope this date does not conflict with any other pastor's revival in town, for we want to cooperate with the good pastors of our community, to lift people out of sin, and get their feet on the path of righteousness.

Entertains

Mrs. J. B. Masterson entertained the Memphis 42 club last Friday afternoon. After a number of games of 42, the hostess served delicious refreshments to Mesdames. Graham, Massey, Burke, Dennis, Sargent, Osborn, Sims, Breedlove, Vallance, Tollett and Bowlin.

The Baptist parsonage is being "dressed up" with new wall paper this week. C. R. Hunsacker and Rev. Wells are doing the papering.

Déway and Roy Brinkley went out hunting this week and killed 17 coyotes, north of town. They took the coyotes to Clarendon, receiving $17.00 for them.

Mrs. Lola B. Owen spent the past week end in Canyon.

At the Churches

Jesus said "And I will be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." It is the Christian's duty to lift Christ up before the world as an all-sufficient savior. We must do this by our living above the world, that is, not to partake in the same things as those of the world. We can lift Christ before the world by our church attendance. Let us attend church next Sunday.

W. M. SOCIETY

Masterson Circle met Wednesday with Mrs. Kendall. An enjoyable program was given by those present. We had 5 present but only one member, so please let's have more come and make a big circle a big circle of it. We can't do it and stay at home.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. H. L. Whitfield Wednesday May 3 in an all day quilting, so bring your thimbles, needles and covered dish for a good time.

Mrs. Kendall served lovely refreshments to Mesdames Biggs, Duncan, Bowlin and Whitfield.

B. W. M. U.

The W. M. U. met Monday with Mrs. Frank Murray in a missionary program on our work in South America. Nine ladies were present. Those on the program were Mesdames McQueen, Martin, Alewine and Wells. We had a very interesting program, and were very glad to have Mrs. Grover Heath of Clarendon as our guest. Our society is doing good work and quite an interest is being taken.

The hostess served delicious refreshments to those present.

W. M. SOCIETY

Circle No. 1 met April 28 at the Methodist Church. A very enjoyable and educational program was given on The Church Takes Root in India by Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Biggs.

The next meeting will be on May 1 at the church. The program will be a continuation of the study of India.

Bowlin Bible Class

The class met with Misses Ola and Enla Cud April 19. A very nice evening was spent playing games, and refreshments were served to those present.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Bowlin the second Wednesday in May, on May 10, instead of the usual third Wednesday.

The 42 Club

Mrs. Richmond Bowlin was hostess to the Afternoon 42 Club Tuesday afternoon. After many games of 42 were enjoyed, refreshments were served to Mesdames Walter Pierce, C. R. Hunsacker, John Mitchell, Earl Tollett, H. L. Whitfield, Miss Hazel Whitfield and the hostess.

Mrs. M. G. Whitfield visited her father in Clarendon Saturday.

J. D. Gein of Goodnight spent Sunday here with his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Jamar.

Mrs. O. L. Johnson attended the P. T. A. Convention at Berger last week.

Seniors and Faculty Members Entertained

On Thursday night, April 20, the 1939 group of Seniors and faculty members were entertained by the ladies of the First Baptist Church with a reception.
The basement of the church was decorated as a modern parlor, and the program was also in harmony with this setting. A large lovely ship on the piano illustrated the senior's motto, Out of the harbor into the deep. Mrs. E.
W. Seales and Mrs. Ohas Rains welcomed us as we entered the room; Mrs. P. L. Dishman and Mrs. T. E. Caldwell were at the punch bowl and serving table.
Beautiful sweet peas and little meme books made our plates still more attractive. Our menu consisted of punch, sandwiches, cake and nuts. The program included the following numbers:
Music, Mrs. Watkins
Welcome, Mrs. Wells
Response, Bruce Edwards
Solo, Theresa Bain accompanied by Jo Wells
Reading, Mrs. Moffitt
Piano solo, Mrs. T. E. Caldwell
Speaker, Rev. M. E. Wells
All of us enjoyed playing such games as Getting Shocked, Feed ing the Hungry Animals, Buying Grandma's Wardrobe. This joyous occasion was brought to a close when we blended our voices in that well loved song, Onward Christian Soldiers. As one of the seniors, I wish to take this ocean to say the seniors and their sponsor thank the ladies of the Baptist Church for a very lovely entertainment which all of us heartily enjoyed.

Assembly

The Home Ec department of this year, directed by Miss Benner, has proved to be a great success and all of the members have seemed to enjoy their work.

Thursday April 20, they were in charge of the assembly program. Ten girls started the program by singing Ten Pretty Girls.

A skit, demonstrating the dress for the occasion, was given by a small group after the singing.

Van Biggs rendered two selections, Indian Love Call and When Paw Was Courting Maw.
A pantomime illustrating the Junior and the Senior at a busquet was given next. Loyce Mae Lowrey and Weldon Simmons acted the part of the dignified
Senior and Ralph Alewine and Geraldine Rilee gave a demonstration of the Junior.

The style show came next.
Every one of the 15 girls was decked out in summer dresses with perfect fits and accessories.
Each one looked as if she might catch some little boy's eye.

After the program, all of the high school girls and the guests including the mothers and friends of the students, were invited to the Home Ec room where they were served ice cream and cake.
The tables were attractively arranged with Maypoles for center pieces and white table cloths.
The refreshments hit the spot as well as the well planned books and well made dresses that were put on display for the guests.

Men's Fashion 'Authorities' Find Their Clients Stubborn; Colorful Clothes Still Taboo

Stylists Fight Century of 'Drabness' to Deck Mere Male in Modern Raiment This Spring; Mild Green Hue Wins Favor

First off, there's nothing wrong with that blue serge Sunday-to-meetin' suit. But it's spring, and as usual the irrepressible men's fashion arbiters must have their say.

For 10 years this valiant crew has been trying to make the American male conscious of style and color, but the American male is stubborn. It's expensive enough, he says, to keep the wife fashionably dressed without being a clothes horse yourself. But in spite of himself the master of the home is becoming something of a peacock, blossoming out each spring with more colorful suits, shirts, ties and hats. Advance showings of clothing in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago, plainly show the trend.

George Bryan Brummell, better known as Beau, died in 1840. Since then the prevailing colors of men's clothes, as if in mourning, have been somber black, dark blue, dull gray and subdued browns. During Beau Brummell's lifetime and before, men's fashions in England, France and colonial America approached the apex of perfection, but the man became more interested in making a living he lost interest in his clothes. Now, say the fashion experts, we're emerging.

Still in Infancy.

This trend, however, is in the incubation stage. So timid is man in his dress life and the use of color that he limits his indulgence to brightly hued pajamas, a red bathing suit and an occasional green necktie. The designers of this year's spring and summer clothes had contemplated bright green to smash precedent but the men rebelled. The fashion experts then settled for off-shades like bluish green and greyish green, a few group stripes and heather stripes. Considering the handicap, it was a signal victory.

There's ample precedent for men's fashions, though let's hope the Twentieth century male doesn't become so vain as that of the Eighteenth century whose wardrobe is described by the historian, H. Dennis Bradley: "At least six coats of colored velvet and white satin, trimmed with gold and silver lace with perhaps one made in a plainer fashion for use on mournful occasions. With these he would have the choice of perhaps a dozen long waistcoats, made in blue satin, gold brocade, green silk, white satin, scarlet, black silk with fringes, all laced and embroidered in colored silks. His wardrobe also contained nine or ten pairs of breeches of velvet, satin or cloth; half a dozen three-cornered hats, silver laced, scalloped, laced with gold point d'Espagne, some with gold binding, and some bound plain; three dozen ruffled shirts and three dozen lace neck-cloths, and a like number of white silk, black silk, and fine cotton stockings; cambric and silk handkerchiefs galore; shoes adorned with buckles, set with diamonds; silver handled swords; silver mounted pistols and as varied a choice of jewelry as his means would allow."

Beau Brummell Brought Order.

Later in the century Beau Brummell introduced a semblance of taste to this profusion of color. Employing fewer hues and blending them expertly, he strove for quiet good taste and introduced what is considered today to be the essence of style—the ability to wear clothes with an unconscious flair.

American men's clothing hasn't always been dull. While the early Puritan fathers were straight-laced they were sufficiently style conscious to clothe themselves tastefully.

Beginning in the 1850s, and influenced by the industrial revolution in England and America, men's clothes—and women's too, of course—reflected the drabness of the times. Machinery tended to standardize all domains of life, not omitting fashion.

Now that Victorianism has passed, fashion experts think man will become "emancipated," as did women earlier in the century. Take it or leave it, here's a thumbnail sketch of modern men's fashions. Obviously they were not designed to replace the time-tested overall:

Mixed suits and trousers are fashionable, with liberal use of color such as dark green coat with willow green slacks. Right now big yarn tweed is the rage on the Pacific coast, which is becoming the creative center in both men's and women's sports wear. Slack suits may run the range of color and fabrics, with rayons, cottons, linen, hopsacking, twills and poplins holding the edge.

Coats Become Comfortable.

That the prim dressed-up look of 10 or 15 years ago is passing, can be seen in topcoats. They're comfortable, loose and casual, usually made of fleeces, shetland and cheviot. Popular off-shades, if the design is herringbone, plaid or small all-over effect, are between brown and black, black and white, gray and blue, or green and gray.

The newest in rainwear is the gabardine or poplin coat developed with the use of a new water repellent process which not only sheds rain but defies the laundryman or dry-cleaner.

Hats of Tyrolean shapes, with sharp curl brim and conical crown, bearded with trimmings like pins, bawler brushes, braided and corded bands, are increasingly popular. Straw hats next summer will be so, imitating the felts. As for color, green is showing up prominently.

Shirts for spring and summer will have lighter grounds with simple stripes more widely spaced. Collar motifs are lower in front with a moderate spread to the points. Lighter fabrics are the rule and green in several shades, particularly in the stripes, is once more prominent.

WHEN CLOTHES WERE CLOTHES—Buck in 1880, when America was more interested in its future than its clothes, the president of a great railroad or bank might look like this gay fellow who didn't care about the press in his trousers so long as he made money.

green in several shades, particularly in the stripes, is once more prominent.

Ties Go Fashionable.

Ties, as might be expected, are made of the suiting fabrics—and green pops up again. Grenadine types of open-weaved net fabric are popular. The figures are smaller than last season, and the larger color range in men's suits has naturally made for a larger variety in necktie colors.

The sports trend is particularly strong in hosiery, and naturally the colors are brighter and the materials lighter. Bright plaids and checks are much in evidence. Short socks with elastic tops in lisle, rayon or silk, seem to have the edge for spring and summer. For business wear vertical or horizontal stripes or checks will be seen most often. Mesh socks will probably get a good run for the summer.

Shoes? Influenced by sports, they'll be sturdier looking this summer since the tip and vamp have been shortened. Most popular, and most comfortable, will be the semi-sports shoe and the town and country type characterized by its crepe rubber sole. The perforated and woven leather shoes will also be worn frequently. Countless types of unlined shoes in various color combinations show that footwear, at least, is defying convention.

If you're the rugged he-man type to whom a suit is a suit, be it pink or black, 1939 "spring fashions" may be so much eyewash. And it bears repetition—the time-honored blue serge suit is still considerably more practical for many men than a stylish ensemble of green. But the clothing experts need encouragement after all these years of fruitless struggle. Now that they've spoken their minds, you can take it or leave it!

TODAY'S FASHION PLATE
—A typical 1939 spring suit, well tailored and colorful, the type of apparel style authorities would like to popularize in their "emancipation" campaign

Summerlin, U. S. Protocol Chief, Prepares for Busiest Summer

This summer the White House sees the greatest invasion of foreign monarchs in American history. In April, May and June the representatives of five nations will descend on Washington and their reception is the personal problem of George Summerlin, chief of the state department's division of protocol.

The visitors: King George and Queen Elizabeth of England, June 8 and 9, arriving on a cruiser with an entourage of 40 persons and about 200 trucks.

Eduardo Valera, New York-born prime minister of El Salvador, May 7. He will spend only one of his three nights in Washington at the White House.

Gen. Anastasio Somoza, president of Nicaragua, and Senora Somoza, May 5.

Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway, to visit the Roosevelt Hotel at Hyde Park on April 2, also stopping at Washington.

Crown Prince Frederick and Crown Princess Ingrid of Denmark, who will visit at Hyde Park and later in Washington.

Representatives of Summerlin's department, or the chief officer himself, will escort each foreign dignitary's party from the time it enters the United States until it leaves. Already most details of the English "invasion" have been worked out, even to the time cameramen and newsreels are assigned for photographing the royal couple on its arrival at the Washington Union station. The difficult problems are those of housing the English mon-arch's entourage, and arranging seats at the state dinner given in his honor. There will be no curtsying to the queen; the English royal couple has decreed that American customs shall prevail in such instances.

Such decisions are made after consultation between representatives of both nations concerned, in this case Summerlin and Alan Frederick Lascelles, acting secretary to King George who visited the United States recently.

Summerlin's staff is small because seclusion is the nation subjected to such a barrage of visitors. There are only 10 people in the division, five of them clerks. The principal other members are Stanley Woodward, assistant chief, and Charles Spruks, ceremonial officer.

How members of the staff feel about their work was revealed in a recent speech by Mr. Woodward. "We have no royal coaches in which to parade our visitors, no palaces and no diplomatic uniforms," he pointed out. "We have, of course, the army, navy and marine corps, which always do much to make our ceremonies dignified, and best of all, we have a native sincerity and hospitality which I believe more than makes up for the gold braid and other trappings that we lack."

"The members of the American press and the ever-present cameramen are not always conducive to the solemnity of our ceremonies, but nevertheless they are really a great asset to us. . . . In a country where there is a controlled press, it always seems to me that everything is stereotyped. . . . Indeed, if it were not for the press and the camera newsreels, the visits of the distinguished visitors to the United States would lose at least a portion of their full value."

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Explains How Food Can Make You Fat or Thin; Offers Tips on Gaining Weight

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

TO NEARLY every adult, weight is a matter of great concern. Thin people step on the scales in the hope of finding that they have gained a pound or two. Fat people sometimes weigh themselves several times a day, trusting each time that the arrow will point to a slightly lower figure. In many cases, the reason for this absorbing interest is vanity—a desire to look better. But the real objective should be to attain the weight at which one feels better, for few people realize that to weigh neither too much nor too little is one of the best possible aids to buoyant health. Moreover, the secret of weight control for normal individuals lies in the kind and amount of food consumed.

The science of nutrition teaches us that all body fat originates as surplus fuel. . . . that is, food which has been consumed over and above the immediate requirements of the body machine. It therefore follows that in general the problem of losing weight is concerned with an increase or reduction in the total fuel value of the diet.

Shortage or Surplus of Fuel

Those who find it difficult, after 30, to avoid taking on excess pounds must learn to reduce the total fuel intake. Otherwise, they may find themselves burdened with a mounting surplus of fat, which not only destroys beauty, but impairs health, and tends to decrease both mental and physical efficiency. On the other hand, those who feel that they must struggle to keep their weight up to normal . . . who declare that they simply cannot gain, no matter how much they eat, should acquaint themselves with the high-caloric foods and make a persistent effort each day to eat a little more than enough to meet their needs. If a gain is achieved, the result will be well worth the effort. For just as overweight is a handicap to health and efficiency, so have nutritionists observed that physical efficiency may be definitely decreased when the weight falls more than 10 per cent below the average for one's height.

It is often said that it is easier to lose weight than to gain it, and in many cases this is true. For the overweight person who consistently cuts down the fuel value of the diet, should, under normal circumstances, be able to reduce gradually, comfortably and effectively. But the individual who is underweight often has a small appetite and therefore has little desire to eat the increased quantities of food that are required in order to gain.

Influence of Body Build

Nutritionists have observed that many people who find it difficult to gain have a tall, slender type of body build. It has been determined that in people of this type, the digestive tract is usually shorter than in those having a stocky build. Moreover, they tend to be more tense, more active and of a more nervous temperament. As a result, the passage of food through the digestive tract may be so rapid that it leaves the body before all the available nutrients can be utilized. At the same time, these active people tend to burn up more of their food for energy, so it is not surprising that they fail to store body fat, unless the diet is especially planned to meet their needs.

Concentrated Foods Desirable

The well balanced diet, with its full quota of minerals and vitamins is basic to good health for all. But in order to produce a gain in weight, the diet of individuals belonging to the slender type should be composed of easily digested foods, which can be utilized by the body with a minimum of effort; and it should include generous amounts of concentrated and highly nourishing foods.

Included in this classification are eggs, cheese, cream, butter or margarine, bacon, bread, cereals, cream soups, custards, ice cream, rice and tapioca puddings. The addition of two or three glasses of milk to the regular meals will be found useful in increasing the fuel value of the diet. Milk also belongs in the reducing diet, but there it is used to replace other high caloric foods. Fruit juices will be found useful in stimulating the appetite of those who desire to gain; and the fuel value of these beverages may be increased by the addition of milk or cream.

An Extra Meal

Very often it is possible to get extra nourishment into the diet by way of a light lunch in mid-morning, mid-afternoon or both—provided it does not interfere with the appetite for the regular meals. This may take the form of fruit juice and crackers; malted milk; cocoa, egg nog or plain milk. A between-meal snack is regarded as especially desirable for thin people whose work is fatiguing. It will help them to sustain energy and prevent them from coming to their regular meals too tired to enjoy or profit by food.

Importance of Rest

Since thin people have a tendency to tire quickly, they are advised to get plenty of rest. There should be long hours of sleep at night, and nutritionists have also observed that the food is apt to be better utilized if a short rest is taken before meals.

QUICK QUOTES

PREPONDERANT SENTIMENT

"AFTER one hundred and fifty years, notwithstanding expansion of territory, enormous increase in population and profound economic changes; despite direct attack and subversive influences; there is every indication that the vast preponderant sentiment of the American people is that our form of government shall be preserved."—Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the United States.

AROUND the HOUSE

When Heating Milk.—Put a spoon or pie funnel into the saucepan, and when the milk boils it will not run over the sides.

Peeling New Potatoes.—When scraping new potatoes, use a tinse pot cleaner kept especially for the purpose instead of a knife.

On the Davenport.—A row of cushions along the top of a davenport hides the top of this piece of furniture and often spoils its proportion.

SAFETY TALKS

At the Crossroads

THE "dirty work at the crossroads" of fable and story has a counterpart in the pattern of modern automobile accidents.

The National Safety council reports that in 1937 about 58 per cent of all injury accidents in cities occurred at intersections.

In rural areas, however, only about 24 per cent of the injury accidents occur at intersections.

The council said 52 per cent of the intersection accidents that involved two motor vehicles were right-angle collisions.

When Tinting.—Before tinting or dyeing fabrics be sure to have them clean and free from spots or stains which may show up afterwards.

When Painting.—A handful of hay placed in a bucket of water, which should be changed every few hours, will help to absorb the smell of fresh paint.

Drying Shoes.—To dry wet shoes so that they will retain their shape and not become stiff and hard, stuff with crumpled paper and allow them to dry slowly. Never dry them near a hot stove or radiator. Polish thoroughly as soon as they are completely dry.

For Nervous Fingers.—If you are continually breaking eggs when trying to separate them, try breaking the eggs one at a time into a funnel which has been placed over a jelly tumbler. The white will pass through the funnel, leaving the yolk in the funnel.

Soda for Cleaning.—Baking soda will keep your refrigerator clean and sweet at all times. Whether it is an electric, oil, gas or ice refrigerator, clean it inside and out with a damp cloth sprinkled with baking soda, or wash it with a baking soda solution, a handful to a basin of water.

A Way to Anchor Your Slip Covers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: My living room is looking very smart and gay; the clear sketches on how to fit and make slipcovers in your Book 1, SEWING, for the Home Decorator, have been a great help."

"While shopping in a drapery department I found some braid 1 1/4 inches wide in bright blue, green and red. I was so attracted by it that I had to find a way to use it. The result is a chair covered in plain blue glazed chintz with green seam bindings and the blue, green and red braid around the cushion and the bottom ruffle. It is very stunning and everyone admires it. My problem now is keeping my slipcovers firmly anchored in place. How should this be done?"

Here is a sketch of the chair that was inspired by a shopping tour. I have also sketched a method that is often used by professionals for anchoring slipcovers.

Give your house a fresh start with new curtains; slipcovers, lampshades and other smart new touches which you will find in Book 1, SEWING for the Home Decorator. Book 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery, illustrates ninety embroidery stitches and many ways to use them. They are 25 cents each; with each order for both books, Rag Rug Leaflet is included FREE. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplains St., Chicago, Ill.

Why Let Yourself Get Constipated?

Why endure those dull headachy days due to constipation, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble? If your constipation, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Brans.

This crunchy toasted breakfast cereal is the ounce of prevention that's worth a pound of emergency relief. It helps you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day and month after month, by the pleasant means you ever knew.

Eat Kellogg's All-Brans every day, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

THE STORY SO FAR

Driving home through a torrential rain, young, well-to-do Clint Jervies picks up a girl, scantily clad, running in terror-stricken flight down the road. She rides a short ways, leaves the car and runs into the woods. He decides to talk to his dear friends, Inspector Tope and Miss Moss, about his adventure. Clint still thinks of her as Miss Moss, his former guardian, though she and the Inspector are married. Clint, having settled down, now manages the Jervies estate himself. In three shuttered houses, all gloomy and forbidding, on Kenesaw Hill, near where Clint picked up the frightened girl, lived three families. In one house lived old Denman Hurder, his wife, who had been Ella Kenesaw, and his daughter, Kitty Leaford, and her daughter June. Living in a second house was Aunt Evie Taine, Uncle Justus and brothers Rab and Asa. The third held old Matthew Bowdon and his wife. Living on the estate was a man known only to June as "Uncle Jim." Following their usual custom, the three families gathered in the Hurder home Saturday night. Kitty, June's mother, retired early with a headache. She was given warm milk, and insisted on taking two sleeping tablets, one more than usual. Strangely upset, June slept fitfully, and in the middle of the night went in to see her mother. She finds her dead. Panic stricken, June ran from the room, out the unlocked door, and into the storm to get Doctor Cabler. It was here that Clint Jervies picked her up. Clint tells his story to the Inspector and Mrs. Tope. They communicate with the police, who are told by the family doctor that Kitty Leaford died of an overdose of sleeping powders. Clint and the Inspector are not satisfied and feel further investigation is necessary. When Clint and Tope drive back to Kenesaw Hill they find Inspector Heale and the medical examiner, who also reports the death due to an overdose of the powders. He becomes angry when Tope intimates that queer circumstances surround the death. After returning home June ran to see Uncle Jim and told him of her mother's death. There Clint and the Inspector visit them.

Glover explained then, watching these newcomers: "I don't know anything about—last night. Miss Leaford had just told me that her mother was dead." His eyes flickered from one of them to the other; and when no one spoke, he said in a sort of swift passion: "Some one tell me what has happened. Why did you come here?"

"They said Miss Leaford might be here," Clint answered. "I was driving past, last night, overtook her on the road. She was running, through all that rain. I gave her a lift as far as Doctor Cabler's house."

June was afraid he would say more than this; she hurried to explain:

"You see, Uncle Jim, Mother hated thunder and lightning. So when the storm came near, I went in to see if she was all right. And when I saw her, I knew she was—dead. But I lost my head, I guess. Calling the Doctor was the only thing I could think of."

"What happened?" Uncle Jim insisted.

"She took too many sleeping-tablets," June told him, in a low tone. "You know, she was sick from doing that; once before." Her face suddenly was stony calm. "I gave them to her," she whispered. "I gave them to her, and she died."

Clint caught her hand. "Now listen," he protested. "You—"

Her head leaned back against the cabin wall. "She insisted on taking two," the girl said. "I couldn't persuade her not to. I was afraid." She whispered: "Oh, I wish I'd spilled them all!" And then she explained:

"You see, she couldn't get to sleep, so she got up and went to the bathroom and took the rest of them."

Tope asked thoughtfully: "You spilled some of them, you say?"

"While I was getting one for her," June answered. "I set the bottle down on the basin, and it fell and tipped over. They spilled out, and there was water in the basin, a little. The tablets in the water dissolved. There weren't but three left in the bottle. And I took one of them to her, one besides the one I already had. Then she must have heard the thunder coming, and she was afraid of lightning. So she got up and took the other two. Oh, I wish I'd spilled them all!"

"How do you know all this?" Uncle Jim asked. There was a rasp in his tones; something challenging and angry. "How does anyone know what she did?"

"Why, the other tablets were gone," said June.

"Bottle empty?" Uncle Jim insisted.

The girl hesitated. "I don't know," she said. "We didn't find the bottle. It's probably under the bed, or in the bed or something. We didn't look there. She was there." Her tone wavered.

Clint held her hand hard.

He said: "Now you forget it, Miss Leaford! Don't worry. There's nothing to be afraid of."

"I wasn't afraid of you," she confessed, and saw the leap of pleasure in his eyes, and was happy that she had pleased him. But suddenly she was uneasy; she had stayed too long. "I must go back," she said.

Clint rose. "I'll go with you."

"Will you?" she asked gratefully. They went past the others. "Miss Leaford is going home," Clint explained. "I'll come back here."

They came within sight of the house; and Clint paused.

"I won't go in," he said. "Remember, though, I'm coming again. Soon."

He caught her hand and held it. Incredibly, he kissed her hand, the backs of her fingers. She saw his eyes shine.

"Good-by," he said.

She loosed her hand and went on alone, and she held one hand over the other, to protect and treasure the spot his lips had touched.

She went on toward the house. When she had gone in, Asa came after her, quietly, out of the wood.

CHAPTER VII

It was to be Miss Moss who perceived beyond dispute that Kitty Leaford had been murdered. She had stayed behind, in the car, when the garage man Thayer, in response to Tope's inquiry went to point out the path that led to Jim Glover's cabin. Thayer returned, and a girl came out of the office of the garage to join him. Thayer called her Lissa; she was, Miss Moss perceived, his daughter; and Miss Moss had some casual talk with them.

After a time she saw Lissa's eyes suddenly fix on something toward the house, in an expression of concern; and Miss Moss looked that way to see a man moving secretly among the trees. Then Lissa without a word went toward the house and disappeared indoors. She did not reappear, but neither did the secret man. Miss Moss thought she would know his form again. She fell to talking with Thayer, and when by and by the Inspector and Clint returned, she thought her time here had not been misspent.

"Not much chance," he said.

Clint said eagerly: "I've seen her. Talked with her. She's a wonder!" Miss Moss said: "Is she, Clint? That's fine." But she looked expectantly at the older man.

Inspector Tope without a word got into the car, and Clint took the wheel. They started back toward Boston.

"Accident?" Miss Moss asked presently.

Tope answered in an abstracted tone: "Doctor Derrie says so! He will call it accident, yes." He sighed, as though he were tired. "The trouble with me," he confessed, "I'm a meddling fool."

"What is it?" she asked. "What disturbs you?"

He wagged his head doubtfully. "I don't know," he admitted. "Here's a woman dead, and as far as you can see, there's no mystery about it. But there are a lot of little things, strange, unusual—"

Miss Moss asked: "What are they? That Miss Leaford should run for a doctor, without stopping to dress, for instance?"

The old man made a gesture as though to brush away an annoying swarm of mosquitoes. "Why, that, yes," he agreed. "Then the telephone was out of order, and the electric light went out at the wrong time, and the front door of the house blew open in spite of the fact it was always bolted at night. And then this man that lives up here in the woods—"

Miss Moss broke in with a question: "What is he like? What did you think of him?"

"He's a strong man," answered Tope, "doing nothing. Lives up there alone, writes poetry for fun, tramps around the woods, and looks at Miss Leaford as though she meant a lot to him. He told me that now that her mother is dead, he had a mind to take June away from here."

Clint cried angrily: "He did? That—tramp! I'll—"

Miss Moss asked acutely: "If he's so fond of Miss Leaford, what does he think of the rest of the Kenesaw connection?"

Tope chuckled. "He talked quite a lot about them," he admitted. "He seemed to know them pretty well, know a lot about them. He says old Mrs. Bowdon and her daughter, Mrs. Taine, have things their own way up there. He said they were like people living in the valley below a big dam. Bowdon is a wealthy man, and Hurder too; and their money is like the water behind the dam, waiting to flow down the valley when they die, flow into new channels. The others all sit there waiting for the dam to break, with their buckets ready to catch the overflow, afraid they'll let a few drops get away."

Miss Moss said softly: "That's why they're afraid!"

Tope looked at her in quick attention. "Eh?" he exclaimed. "Why should they be afraid? After all, the money can't get out of the family."

"Having things makes people afraid," she reminded him. "A man with nothing to lose has nothing to fear."

Tope shook his head. "I don't know," he demurred. "It's mighty easy to be afraid. . . . There's one other thing—probably no connection. But when Clint and I were on our way in to Glover's cabin, we saw a man in the woods. He was coming down the path toward us; but he spotted us, about as soon as we saw him, a hundred yards away or so. And he ducked to one side, out of the way, and kept out of sight while we went by."

"Why didn't you speak to him?"

"Clint here was in a hurry to go on," the Inspector chuckled.

"I didn't even see this man," Clint explained. "I think the Inspector imagined him. He's seeing things today, anyway."

Miss Moss sat thoughtful for a while; but she said at last, smiling: "He didn't imagine this. I saw your man come out of the woods. The garage proprietor has a daughter. He calls her Lissa. I think that was her young man. She was with him when he came in sight, but she left me then, and neither of them reappeared."

Tope chuckled. "Trust you to dig up any romance that's lying around!" he exclaimed. "Don't know who it was, do you?"

"No, but I know Lissa Thayer was troubled by his coming," Miss Moss declared. "That was plain, in her eyes." And she asked: "This Mr. Glover—how old did you think he was?"

The Inspector watched her. "Forty-five and up," he said. "Maybe ten years more."

"Old enough to be Miss Leaford's father," Miss Moss reflected. And she added, still smiling: "You see, I begin to wonder about things too, Inspector. I've caught the habit from you." She ceased to smile. "I'm wondering now," she said gravely, "how many of these tablets it would take, to kill a person so quickly."

The Inspector looked at Miss Moss with a sort of wonder. He said at last:

"Mrs. Tope, you make me feel like a man on crutches. You can jump farther, and straighter, than anyone I ever saw."

"I was just wondering," she protested, her cheek bright with pleasure in his praise.

"I think you've hit it," he said.

"Derrie missed it, and Heale, and so did I. But I think you've hit it on the nose. We'll see." He looked ahead. "Clint, pull in at the first drug-store," he said. "I want to telephone."

When he came out to them again, Clint asked quickly: "Did you call Doctor Derrie?"

Washington Loved to Ride After Foxes And Attend Cockfights, Diary Reveals

John Peel is the hero of the English hunting song, but to American fox hunters George Washington is almost a patron saint. This fact is brought to light by Samuel J. Henry in "Foxhunting Is Different," a volume on the sport in Virginia and Maryland, in which Washington's diaries are used as background for many sketches.

"George Washington, many-sided man, attended a cockfight and a vestry meeting on the same day," writes the author. "He would go to church and enter in his diary the pious duty as performed. But he said not who the preacher was, nor subject of the sermon. Foxes, hounds and hunting were matters that loomed large in his philosophy, and there is detail after detail.

"You cannot help loving Washington when you read his diaries, an unstudied record of day-to-day happenings. The man stands forth alive. . . . Despite the treatment he has received at the hands of historians, who have made him an aloof and detached god to a fellow-lover of sport the Virginian seems a departed friend, a human and responsive character with whom he has spent

"I called Doc Gero," Tope explained. This was the Medical Examiner with whom the old man had worked for so many years. "Doctor Gero thinks that it would need eight or ten tablets, maybe more, to have killed Mrs. Leaford so soon. He said if one was a dose, and three made her pretty sick, four or five might put her into a coma so that she would die in twenty-four hours or so. Specially if she had a weak heart."

"But to be dead in three hours, that would need eight or ten tablets, and maybe more."

His tone had the finality of doom. "And there weren't that many tablets left in the bottle!" he concluded.

Miss Moss said in a low tone: "I was afraid so. Then it was murder. What will you do?"

Tope shook his head. "Why," he said, "I guess we'll have to go back." He chuckled in a dry mirth. "It looks like I'd have to annoy young Doc Derrie again."

When they came back to headquarters, Heale was there.

"Now what is it, Tope?" he asked patiently.

Tope hesitated; he said then: "Here's the sticker, Heale. Miss Leaford gave her mother two tablets. There were two more left, in the bottle in the bathroom cabinet. And Doctor Derrie figures the dead woman got up and took those two. That's right, isn't it?"

Heale nodded. "Yes," he said.

"Now then," Tope explained, "two and two make four. If Doctor Derrie's right, she took four tablets. And two or three hours later she was dead."

"Sure," Heale repeated.

Tope leaned back in his chair. "Then here's the rest of it," he said. "You know Doctor Gero, the Medical Examiner in town?"

"Of course."

"Well, Doctor Gero says it would take at least six, and more likely eight or ten tablets to kill this woman dead in three hours."

Inspector Heale looked at Tope, frowning a little, for a long time. He started to shake his head; then abruptly he lifted the telephone beside him.

"Get me Doctor Cabler," he directed; and presently: "Doctor Cabler? Inspector Heale speaking. I'd like to consult you on this Leaford case. Can you come down? . . . Thanks." He returned the receiver to its hook again. "Doctor Cabler will know," he told them.

Tope nodded. "The bottle's missing," he reminded Inspector Heale. "That may have significance or not. Have you been in the house, searched the bedroom?"

Heale shook his head. "No excuse to do that," he protested. "So far as we know officially, it was an accident. I don't want to antagonize those people unnecessarily, Tope. You can see that."

"I'd like to look around in there," Tope confessed. "Unofficially. Without their knowing."

Inspector Heale grinned. "Not much chance," he said.

Miss Moss spoke for the first time. "When is the funeral?" she inquired.

"It might be managed then," Inspector Heale agreed. "If they all go. Of course, they'll lock the house. They have no servants. We'll have to get someone to arrange it so we can get in."

"Miss Leaford will do that," Clint proposed.

"I'd rather try Asa Taine," Inspector Heale decided. "He might be reasonable. I know him better than I know any of the others."

He lifted the telephone. "I'll send one of the boys to ask him to come down," he said.

many happy hours afield; for fox-hunters . . . speak the same language.

"In the carefree years of 1768-69, 70, the Virginian planted and reaped, bred horses, experimented with the soil, ingeniously sought to devise a better plow . . . With meticulous detail he tells about each hunt, how long it lasted, whether the quarry was lost, denuded or killed, of hounds switching from fox to deer, and says they once got after a bear."

Washington's huntsman was a little Negro named Billy Lee, a former jockey, who, according to this authority, after his master died, "drank himself to death, dying of the D. T.'s."

Snow and Blue Geese

Unlike Canada geese, the snows seldom fly in V-formation. Adult snow geese have pure white bodies with black wingtips, with pink or pale purplish bills. Blue geese, about the same size as snows, have white heads and necks, grayish-brown bodies (not blue as the name indicates), dark red bills and purplish-red legs. The young are sooty-gray or brown.

★ Deanna Stays Deanna

★ Bouquets for McCarey

★ Clothes Make the Guide

—By Virginia Vale—

DEANNA DURBIN seems to be the current heroine of moviedom, because of her excellent performance

"Three Smart Girls Grow Up." A lot of people who were pretty sure that they wouldn't like this sequel; sequel have a way of being disappointing, especially in the movies.

Then along came Universal with the announcement that in this of their money-making little star, turned glamorous. That made everything much worse. If Deanna was going in for slinky gowns and false eyelashes even the critics who had always liked her were going to use barbed adjectives, and urge their readers to stay far, far away.

But along came the picture, and there has been dancing in the streets. The picture is swell, and Deanna isn't "glamorous," she's just herself. It's a picture that everybody ought to see.

Our hero this time is Leo McCarey, director-producer, who also did a turn as writer for "Love Affair." The picture is one of the best that has come out of Hollywood in a long time. When you see it, you might pause and think of how very bad it might have been, were it not so expertly done. With a couple of not very good actors in the roles played by Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer, with a run-of-the-mill director, it could easily have been a B picture.

Several bouquets should go to McCarey for his work on the writing end also. His movie career began with writing, you know. Hal Roach suggested that he become an actor, and he replied that he'd rather become a writer. Within six months he was a studio executive; then he directed Laurel and Hardy and Charlie Chase comedies for five years, and in 1936 he directed "Ruggles of Red Gap" for Paramount and was all set for big things.

"Love Affair" was developed out of an idea of his, with Miss Dunne and Boyer in mind for the picture. Don't miss it!

If you liked "The Citadel" you'll be glad to know that "Vigil in the Night," by the same author, has been bought as a starring vehicle for Carole Lombard. A romantic drama, it tells of the love and sacrifices of a young woman who wants to save her sister, a student nurse, from the results of a moment of carelessness which leads to the death of a hospital patient.

Jack Berch, one of NBC's handsome young baritones, recently discovered that clothes are more important than he thought. With summer just ahead, he bought a yachting outfit, and liked it so much that he wore it right out of the tailor's and back to Radio City.

He was on his way through the first-floor corridors to the elevators when an elderly lady stopped him. "Young man," said she, "I stopped to look at one of the murals here, and the touring group I was with has gone on. Please continue my tour."

Berch used to be a small-town boy, and learned to be polite to elderly ladies. So, cursing his yachting cap, he escorted her to the front door, industriously describing the murals they passed on the way. There she discovered her group, and he fled to the studios, his cap in his hand.

Paul Whiteman's replacing Burns and Allen on the air for the summer could be listed as "Turn about is fair play." They once replaced Paul Whiteman.

ODDS AND ENDS—If you liked "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," you'll look forward to "The Real Glory"—some stars, Gary Cooper, scene director, Henry Hathaway . . . Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall, "Hurricane" stars, will appear together in "Canal Zone" . . . Pat O'Brien will have the lead in "Father Damien," the story of the priest who devoted his life to the lepers in the colony of Molokai.

He was on his way through the first-floor corridors to the elevators when an elderly lady stopped him. "Young man," said she, "I stopped to look at one of the murals here, and the touring group I was with has gone on. Please continue my tour."

Berch used to be a small-town boy, and learned to be polite to elderly ladies. So, cursing his yachting cap, he escorted her to the front door, industriously describing the murals they passed on the way. There she discovered her group, and he fled to the studios, his cap in his hand.

Paul Whiteman's replacing Burns and Allen on the air for the summer could be listed as "Turn about is fair play." They once replaced Paul Whiteman.

ODDS AND ENDS—If you liked "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," you'll look forward to "The Real Glory"—some stars, Gary Cooper, scene director, Henry Hathaway . . . Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall, "Hurricane" stars, will appear together in "Canal Zone" . . . Pat O'Brien will have the lead in "Father Damien," the story of the priest who devoted his life to the lepers in the colony of Molokai.

DEANNA DURBIN

from theaters where those three particular smart girls grew up.

But along came the picture, and there has been dancing in the streets. The picture is swell, and Deanna isn't "glamorous," she's just herself. It's a picture that everybody ought to see.

Our hero this time is Leo McCarey, director-producer, who also did a turn as writer for "Love Affair."

The picture is one of the best that has come out of Hollywood in a long time. When you see it, you might pause and think of how very bad it might have been, were it not so expertly done. With a couple of not very good actors in the roles played by Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer, with a run-of-the-mill director, it could easily have been a B picture.

Several bouquets should go to McCarey for his work on the writing end also. His movie career began with writing, you know. Hal Roach suggested that he become an actor, and he replied that he'd rather become a writer. Within six months he was a studio executive; then he directed Laurel and Hardy and Charlie Chase comedies for five years, and in 1936 he directed "Ruggles of Red Gap" for Paramount and was all set for big things.

"Love Affair" was developed out of an idea of his, with Miss Dunne and Boyer in mind for the picture. Don't miss it!

If you liked "The Citadel" you'll be glad to know that "Vigil in the Night," by the same author, has been bought as a starring vehicle for Carole Lombard. A romantic drama, it tells of the love and sacrifices of a young woman who wants to save her sister, a student nurse, from the results of a moment of carelessness which leads to the death of a hospital patient.

Jack Berch, one of NBC's handsome young baritones, recently discovered that clothes are more important than he thought. With summer just ahead, he bought a yachting outfit, and liked it so much that he wore it right out of the tailor's and back to Radio City.

He was on his way through the first-floor corridors to the elevators when an elderly lady stopped him. "Young man," said she, "I stopped to look at one of the murals here, and the touring group I was with has gone on. Please continue my tour."

Berch used to be a small-town boy, and learned to be polite to elderly ladies. So, cursing his yachting cap, he escorted her to the front door, industriously describing the murals they passed on the way. There she discovered her group, and he fled to the studios, his cap in his hand.
