Boomers no babys

WASHINGTON — In the past decade, baby boomers began to take command of the country — moving into the front offices, political posts and leadership positions vacated by their retiring parents. The torch was being passed once again to a new generation, just as surely in the 1990s as when President Kennedy used the phrase in his 1961 inaugural address. But this generation is huge. /4A

Savings and loan bailout could top worst-case estimate, auditors say

■ Management, accounting lapses make it hard to gauge cleanup cost, GAO chief says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congressional auditors complained Monday that management and accounting lapses by the savings and loan bailout agency are making it hard to gauge the cost of the cleanup.

Charles A. Bowsher, head of the General Accounting Office, said his agency may not be able to reach an opinion on the Resolution Trust Corporation's 1990 financial statements.

And in testimony prepared for a Senate Banking Committee hearing today, Bowsher said the savings and loan bailout's cost probably will meet or exceed the Bush's administration's worst-case estimate of $130 billion.

"The $80 billion already provided by Congress will not be sufficient to resolve all expected thrift failures," Bowsher said. He said the RTC will need at least $50 billion more next year.

In a letter to Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady, who serves as chairman of the RTC Oversight Board, Bowsher conceded that much of the difficulty stems from fluctuation of real estate prices and other factors over which the agency has little control.

But, he said, "it can gain better control over the

■ Extravaganza was billed as nation's biggest gulf war homecoming — and it was a day to remember.

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Three months after the last angry rocket of the Persian Gulf war, New York City lionized the victorious troops on Monday with a magnificent blizzard of ticker tape, patriotism and affection in a homecoming parade up lower Broadway's Canyon of Heroes.

With painted yellow bows underfoot and a glimmer of blue between the skyscrapers overhead, brass bands exploded, flags and confetti whirled in the wind and what might have been another Monday in Manhattan's gray financial district suddenly boomed into a dazzling holiday of music, marching, balloons and deliriously roaring crowds.

In the footsteps of Lindbergh, MacArthur, the Apollo astronauts and American legions home from World Wars I and II, some 24,000 marchers — troops from 17 allied nations that fought in the gulf, plus veterans of other wars and civilian groups — crossed the Rubicon into history under a deafening tumult of cheering and cascades of confetti and ticker tape.

"U.S.A.! U.S.A.! U.S.A.!" the crowds chanted again and again as the troops in desert battle fatigues and sharp dress uniforms, the bands, the floats, the missiles and other military hardware, the international color guards and the celebrities moved up the skyscraper-walled canyon.

"It's a great day to be back home in New York," exulted Gen. Colin L. Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who was born and raised in the Bronx.

The police estimated that 4.7 million people lined the one-mile route from Battery Park to Worth Street, and they called it the largest crowd for any single event in city history. The count, for all its seeming precision, appeared to be extravagant.

It implied that 235,000 people lined each of the 20 blocks on the route. The police conceded that it was based on a formula using square feet of street space

Report recommends county-jail expansion

■ Consultant presents five-point program for $2 million, 96-bunk addition.

By Ed Todd

Staff Writer

A little over a year ago, Midland County finally got some respite from its long-standing jail overcrowding problems when it opened the $4 million Midland Detention Center, which comfortably houses 202 prisoners.

Today, those bunks are overflowing. Prisoners are sleeping on the floor, and there's nowhere to send them.

Now, county commissioners are contemplating expanding the jail by 96 bunks at a cost of $2 million.

At Monday's Commissioners' Court meeting, John E. "Jack" Dufficy, a San Antonio-based consultant on efficient and effective jail operations, presented a five-point jail program that included the 96-bunk expansion.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press GraphicsNet

Partly cloudy skies ahead

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the upper 80s, southeast winds 10 to 15 mph and a 20 percent chance of mainly afternoon thunderstorms, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-60s and a 20 percent chance of mainly evening thunderstorms.

Wednesday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high near 90 and a 20 percent chance of mainly afternood thunderstorms.

After an overnight low of 64, Monday's high was 82 compared with the record high for that date of 103 in 1958. The record low for today's date was 51 set in 1975.

STATE

Heavy rains fell Monday across South Texas, and the National Weather Service said stormy weather is likely to continue for awhile.

High pressure that kept much of Northeast Texas free of rain over the weekend shifted east, allowing low pressure to build into the area and interact with a very moist atmosphere over the eastern third of Texas.

The result was a substantial increase in shower activity across North Central and especially Northeast Texas.

The extensive cloud cover helped hold temperatures into the lower 80s Monday afternoon, except in the rain-cooled areas of Northeast Texas, where readings were in the 70s.

Elsewhere in the state thunderstorms were scattered across West Texas and along the coastal areas of South Texas. Otherwise partly to mostly cloudy skies prevailed. Extremes at mid-afternoon ranged from 56 degrees at Guadalupe Pass to 95 degrees at McAllen.

The low pressure at the surface resulted in east to northeast winds except near Abilene and Wichita Falls, where winds were from the southeast. Speeds remained light at 5 to 10 miles an hour.

The weather service said thunderstorms can be expected through today, with highs generally in the 80s and 90s.

Heaviest storm activity Monday was reported in South Texas. A thunderstorm with very heavy rain was reported at Hargill, 10 miles west of Raymondville, and over Roncon, 10 miles northwest of Rio Grande City. The weather service said the storms were capable of dropping as much as 7 inches of rain in an hour.

accountability and management of its assets."

Among the lapses the GAO cited:

■ In January, the RTC awarded a contract to manage $7.4 million in assets that it had already sold. The agency is renegotiating with the contractor, but could be liable for $144,000 in unnecessary fees.

■ The RTC lacks penalties when contractors fail to perform as required and needs to do a better job of monitoring contractor performance.

■ The agency loses opportunities to package and sell loans and other assets because its information system does not properly identify assets left behind with the government after it sells failed thrifts.

■ For some contracts, the agency retains little documentation to ensure there was proper competition.

■ Some RTC offices lack proper procedures for handling wire transfers and checks.

RTC spokesman Steve Katsanos said the agency itself pointed out most of the problems mentioned by the GAO.

"The RTC is doing things to deal with most of what they identified here ... and many of these things have been taken care of," he said.

In another instance of worsening news, a statement from the Resolution Trust Corp. said the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, insurer of commercial bank deposits, recently had adopted "a dimmer forecast for bank failures in 1991 and 1992 than previously projected." The statement was attributed in paraphrase to L. William Seidman, who is chairman of both agencies.

Early this year, the insurance fund said in a "baseline" forecast there would be 340 bank failures in the two years. A "pessimistic' scenario said there would be 440 failures if the recession were a bad one.

On May 2, Seidman's deputy put the cost of failures under the pessimistic forecast at $24 billion .

REPORT: Commissioners consider jail expansion

(From 1A)

The report, commissioned by the officials, seemed to catch them by surprise. Commissioners said they expected an eventual expansion, but not one barely a year after the new jail's completion.

"We just didn't anticipate that the future would be now," said Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer.

Dufficy, an associate vice president with the planning-management firm of N.R. Cox Associates Inc., commended the Commissioners' Court for planning "well for the future" by allowing room for expansion at the new jail site.

"But I don't have any idea how we are going to approach it (jail expansion) at this point in time," said Commissioner Durward Wright, who has been involved with Midland County jail projects since the late 1960s.

"It's not something we weren't aware of," he said, noting an alarming increase in inmates being funneled into the new jail at the city, county, state and federal levels.

But where the county will get the funds for the project remains a question for the 1991-92 budget study, slated to begin in July.

The county still is paying off the new jail's costs.

Midland County, which for more than two decades has been battling jail overcrowdedness while complying with Texas Commission on Jail Standards rules, seemingly had reached a comfort zone with the opening of the jail in the spring of 1990.

Bunks in the new jail and the courthouse's fifth-floor jail will hold about 300 city, county, state and federal inmates. On Monday, 320 prisoners were in jail, and more than a score of them were sleeping on the floor.

A backlog of Texas Department of Corrections-bound state prisoners adds to the overcrowded conditions at the Midland jail.

Too crowded to accept prisoners from Midland and other large counties, the Texas prison system is to build new units by the mid-1990s to handle its 70,000 prisoners.

Meanwhile, county jails are having to room and board them at local taxpayers' expense.

Seltzer said a proposed settlement to a lawsuit filed by nine major counties against the state would require the state to pay the counties $20 to $30 per day per state prisoner over a certain number computed by a formula from Sept. 1, 1991, to Sept. 1, 1995.

Currently, the state prison system lodges about 40,000 prisoners in 29 units. Pending legislation would authorize almost 30,000 new prison bunks by 1995, he said.

Meanwhile, said Judge Seltzer, "Midland County is not going to be soft on law-enforcement." But, he said, there must be a "trade-off" sanctioned by the taxpayers on law-enforcement and prison-jail space.

"If you want people who burglarize your houses, or rob your 7-Elevens (stores), or sexually abuse the women of the town to go to the 'joint,' " Seltzer said, "you have to be willing to pay the (jail) housing" and related costs of the law enforcement system while maintaing jail standards.

"The problem," the judge said, "is a lot of people here (in Midland) are for real strong law-enforcement, but they don't want to pay for it. If they want tough law enforcement, if they want people behind bars, there's a cost that goes along with it."

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter seemed confident that his jail system could handle most problems that face it.

"It's nothing that we can't handle," he said of the overcrowdedness and other woes, "but it takes every one of us working together to make it work."

In his $20,620 report billed to the county, Dufficy proposed that the county:

■ Increase jail capacity by adding facilities for 96 bunks.

■ Increase staffing in the new jail by six deputies.

■ Purchase and install a $60,000 computerized "fingerprint machine" to save time and money and to have ready access to fingerprints statewide.

■ Contract with a food service to prepare inmate meals to cut costs.

■ Contract with a commissary service for similar reasons.

The sheriff approved of three of the consultant's suggestions but was not persuaded by Dufficy's reasons for contracting food and commissary services.

Of the sheriff's 157 deputies and other staffers, 91 men and women work in both jails.

Equipping and maintaining the Sheriff's Office and the two jails accounts for about one-fourth of the county's $20 million budget.

day for a glimpse of beribboned generals and beaming soldiers. They cupped their hands to their ears for a few bars of a Sousa march from shiny oom-pahing tubas. They clomped through ankle-deep paper — a shredded mass of data-processing cards, computer printouts, ripped-up phone books and 200 miles of real ticker-tape, a stock ticker being practically a collector's item in this computerized age. They watched 7,000 four-foot-wide balloons float above the steamy streets.

From office-window gawkers to sweaty pinstriped reviewing-stand ticketholders, they made up what the police said was the largest crowd ever to gather in the city's history, 4.7 million people. There was a lot of neck-craning. But some who praised the troops for standing tall in the Mideast could not stand tall enough on Broadway as the soldiers marched by in precise formations.

A man tottering with the delicate balance of a gymnast on a police barricade said, "There's Cheney, up front." Cathy Geil of Mount Vernon, N.Y., squinted. "I can't see a thing," she said.

So she rustled up some confetti from the sidewalk. A lot of confetti. She rolled it into a ball almost as tall as the police barricade. Then she stepped on top of it.

This was like climbing onto a pile of dry, rustling leaves. Confetti does not have the firmness of, say, concrete, and Mrs. Geil sank an inch or two.

But like a theater-goer whose third-tier alchemy turns an obstructed-view seat into a partial-view seat, she could see more than before. Mrs. Geil, who is 5 feet 8 inches tall but topped 6 feet with her confetti, could almost tell what was going on out in the street.

"Norman, turn this way," Mrs. Geil said when Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf's name boomed over the public-address system.

Then she realized she needed an even taller pile of confetti. "That wasn't him," she said.

"This is another example of life in New York," said Sonja A. Scott of Calgary, Alberta, who saw only the headgear of marchers from her vantage point at Liberty Street and Trinity Place. "I've been watching the sky instead of the people going by."

Lois Britton of Charlotte, N.C., did not mind. "Seen a dozen soldiers, seen 'em all," she said.

The hawkers were ready. They hoped that Church Street would be their gold mine, the place they could finally sell off all those Persian Gulf T-shirts and buttons they had had printed up in the heady opening days of the war. There were baseball-card-like pictures of Schwarzkopf and Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. There were buttons. There were yellow ribbons.

OUTLAW: The old revolutionary fire comes back

(From 1A)

Luckenbach, after all.)

■ Country radio (especially if the station claims to be playing Texas music).

■ Big record labels (or almost anything having to do with the organized, Nashville-style music business).

■ Image-makers.

His own image has mellowed some since Jerry Jeff — it's less "establishment" to call him that, and "nobody" calls him Walker — helped smear country music's starched white pinafore with the greasy graffiti of mid-'70s outlaw music.

Those were the days of "Redneck Mother" and "London Homesick Blues."

Now, though, Jerry Jeff's settled into a comfortable life with his family, friends and work in Austin.

But the old revolutionary fire comes back, with a touch of bitterness, whenever he discusses the state of the business.

Like his most famous song, "Mr. Bojangles," Jerry Jeff can still be made to dance. The Nashville Network hired him as host of "The Texas Connection" this year, since his segment last year was the show's highest-rated one.

"It's been all right," Jerry Jeff said of the TNN show, which filmed Jan. 15 through April 15. "I haven't had a lot to do except talk to people." He does get to recommend guests for the show, though.

And he'll be part of the Ann Richards roast scheduled for Thursday in Washington.

"I don't roast people," Jerry Jeff said. "I never felt comfortable putting people down, so I'll probably just sing a couple of her favorite songs."

Jerry Jeff's career caught new fire in 1989 with the release of his "Live in Gruene Hall" album that ended up being the first release off his own record label, Tried & True, on which he still records.

"That was the one nobody wanted to do," Jerry Jeff laughed.

"About the time they give up on me is when I do best."

Jerry Jeff said there were "too many disappointments" involved in playing by Nashville rules, so the best policy is to do your own thing your own way.

"Then, if you make money along the way, that's gravy."

Jerry Jeff's other albums on Tried & True are "Gypsy Songman" and "Navajo Rug." His albums are distributed by Rykodisc.

He squelched any ideas about another Texas "outlaw movement" simmering, unless someone manufactures one as a marketing concept.

"The outlaw movement right now is in independent marketing, in a business sense," he said. "There's enough people around, recording independently. I don't know how they're doing."

The legendary singer said he receives some airplay, but "only on stations that want to do it."

"There's a closed shop on all of 'em," Jerry Jeff said of country radio. "There's about 50 of the big reporting stations around the country; you can't get on 'em if you're not on a major label."

He advocates an hour a week of genuine Texas music on the radio, independent labels and all, but he knows that's probably not going to happen. He's even had DJs come up and say they like his stuff, but they can't play it.

"I said, "I don't much care,' " Jerry Jeff laughed. "Used to, a DJ built his own following by the music he played. Now there's no freedom of choice out there. It's all angles."

There's that dirty word again.

"Hey, I've even heard that the Kentucky Headhunters are a concept," Jerry Jeff laughed.

So it's mostly by themselves, without the backing of a major label, that Jerry Jeff Walker and his newly re-formed Gonzo Compadres (they were called the Gonzo Survivors in recent news releases, but Jerry Jeff didn't like that name) continue to tour.

"I'm not part of the package deal," Jerry Jeff, one of a kind, drawled.

PARADE: N.Y. police estimate that 4.7 million people lined the route and was a bit like numbering the blades of grass on a hillside. But it was in keeping with the hyperbole of the day.

"This was the mother of all parades," beamed Mayor David N. Dinkins, who had been using the phrase for weeks.

There was no disputing that the throng was enormous. People filled the broad sidewalks to capacity, gawked down from windows and rooftops at dizzying heights, spilled out of the plazas and side streets and choked four blocks of reviewing stands lining City Hall Park. And millions more watched on television across the nation and abroad.

It was an artist's conception of a spring day in New York: people in summery pinks and oranges for temperatures in the high 80s, an azure sky brushed with horsetails, the harbor shimmering in the sun like silver coins, and all along the parade route a palette of red, white and blue flags, yellow ribbons and desert-tinted uniforms. A brisk wind up from the Hudson swayed the trees in City Hall Park and blew the leaves in great masses like a woman's hair.

In the enormous fall of confetti and ticker tape, the sky at times grew dim, and the city and the parade seemed to recede in the storm as if into a framed picture. And for a while the familiar music of the streets, the bass rumble of traffic, the brassy horns were gone and all you could hear were the faint strains of "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here" or "The Halls of Montezuma," and above it all the madrigal song of a million cheering voices.

The four-hour extravaganza — a $4.7 million private production that did not cost the hard-pressed city a cent — was billed as the nation's biggest gulf war homecoming and the largest ticker-tape parade in New York history, and it was a day to remember.

But, like any big event in a nation of diversity, there were those who disagreed with its substance and tenor, or whose enthusiams were at least tempered by the knowledge that this was just one of many parades and celebrations held across the country recently to mark the return of American forces, and that the conflict from which they had come home was perhaps the nation's least perilous war in this century.

Antiwar protesters dotted the route, but were concentrated at Vesey, Fulton and Ann Streets. "Operation Desert Massacre," proclaimed one sign mocking the march. "Jobs, health care and schools — Not war!" said another. "This parade and the millions of dollars spent on it to celebrate the evil destruction of Iraq is obscene."

At least 25 protesters were arrested and 13 officers were injured in two clashes, one at Fulton Street, where a dummy was thrown into the path of the paraders, and another at Ann, where Christmas tree balls filled with red paint were hurled.

But for most of the people in lower Manhattan, it was a banner day of tribute to 12,000 troops from all 50 states and 17 nations, who marched with 6,000 veterans from other wars and 6,000 civilian groups ranging from bands and drill teams to dance troupes and fife-and-drum corps.

Even before the parade, the town was alive with activity. Mayor Dinkins, at a breakfast, gave the keys to the city to the three grand marshals — Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney, the gulf commander Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf and Powell. And in keeping with the day, thousands of people visited warships in the harbor for Fleet Week.

By 10 a.m. all motor-vehicle traffic was cut off to lower Manhattan below Canal Street, and extra subway trains ferried in the swelling flow of paradegoers joining the ranks of those who had staked out the best viewing spots before dawn. Within an hour, the sense of excitement along Broadway was almost palpable.

Vendors hawked T-shirts, buttons, hats, flags and other souvenirs; 3,000 police officers formed phalanxes on both sides of Broadway; workers in hundreds of government and corporate office buildings filed out, and the crowds grew so dense that some spectators were squeezed 15 or 20 deep on the sidewalks.

"You couldn't even move," said Samantha Simone, a 14-year-old from Garden City, N.Y., who fainted in the late morning heat.

The Emergency Medical Service said 148 people were treated for heat exhaustion in temperatures that reached a high of 89 at 2 p.m., and for a variety of other minor injuries. A spokesman said 103 were treated at the scene, and 45 were taken to nearby hospitals. Most had fallen from barricades or trucks, and two were hit by objects thrown from windows.

The crowds were in a noisy, exuberant mood. There were women in chadors and men in yamulkes, business people in suits and many more in the civilian uniform of the day, shorts and T-shirts. The parade began shortly after 11:30, and the singing, cheering and chanting swelled into a single roar that echoed and re-echoed off the facades and was sustained for hours.

The air was already bright and dense with confetti, streamers and ticker tape, but the storm grew steadily into a torrent that broke the sunlight into rainbow colors and rose and fell on the drafts in great sweeps, so that you could see the air currents playing in the canyon. In the midst of the tumult, a little white butterfly fluttered up out of City Hall Park and was lost in the alluring storm.

A trio of vintage convertibles carried the grand marshals and their wives at the head of the line of march. Cheney, in a business suit, Powell, in his dress greens, and Schwarzkopf, in his familiar battle fatigues, waved constantly through the barrage.

Behind them came thousands of soldiers, sailors and Marines, most of them in battle fatigues with helmets or barracks caps and desert boots, with rifles at shoulder arms or assault weapons slung tightly on the right.

They moved in lock-step mostly, shoulders back, chests out, heads up, battle flags in the vanguard of each unit, representing infantry, armored, cavalry, airborne, intelligence, mountain, support, engineers, maintenance, medical, supply, communications and reserve detachments.

Air Force puts B-2 stealth in spotlight

Showing kicks off bid for political, congressional support.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force on Monday put the B-2 stealth bomber and its other radar-evading aircraft under a rare public spotlight, kicking off a "stealth week" effort aimed at building political support for its most prized weapons.

Reporters and photographers were permitted to view the stealth planes in an air-conditioned hangar at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., and the Air Force has invited members of Congress and their staffs to take a close-up look starting Tuesday.

The administration wants to build 75 of the B-2s, but the House last week eliminated money for the four planes scheduled to be purchased in 1992.

President Bush, who will visit the hangar on Tuesday, has threatened to veto the 1992 defense budget unless money for the B-2 is included. The Senate is to begin its debate on the military budget the second week of July.

Many in Congress say the end of the Cold War and a need to reduce defense spending makes it unreasonable to devote so large a share of the public purse to the B-2, which costs $864 million a copy and has not yet proven in tests that it can perform as advertised.

"We want people to touch and feel and look so they can get a better view," said Maj. Gen. Stephen Crocker, the Air Force's director for strategic modernization.

Reflecting the Air Force's concern about the depth of Congress' skepticism over the B-2's capabilities, Crocker told reporters, "Most importantly, we flew it in here."

The B-2 had never before flown across the continental United States. It arrived at Andrews last week from its test base at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

The bat-winged B-2, whose wingspan is slightly more than half the length of a football field, was parked at the rear of the Andrews hangar. A huge American flag formed the backdrop for the dozens of photographers and television camera crews who were kept in a roped area about 30 yards from the aircraft.

On opposite sides of the hangar were a prototype of the F-22 stealth fighter which the Air Force says will be the mainstay fighter in the 21st Century, and the F-117A stealth attack plane which won praise for its exploits in the Gulf War.

The Air Force also put on open display for the first time an Advanced Cruise Missile, a 21-foot stealth missile designed to be dropped from B-52 bombers.

Reporters and photographers were not allowed within arms length of the stealth planes, but the members of Congress will be permitted to climb into the cockpits, kick the tires and slap the sides of the once-secret aircraft, officials said.

Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., who wants to end the B-2 production program, said Monday the Air Force is trying to take advantage of a wave of patriotism following the Gulf War victory to win support for continuation of the bomber program.

"Once more the military-industrial complex is gearing up a public relations bonanza to justify an unneeded, outrageously expensive weapon system," Slattery said.

Nation's generation torch passes to baby boomers

Simply because of its size, the generation has had phenomenal impact on American society.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the past decade, baby boomers began to take command of the country — moving into the front offices, political posts and leadership positions vacated by their retiring parents.

The torch was being passed once again to a new generation, just as surely in the 1990s as when President Kennedy used the phrase in his 1961 inaugural address. But this generation is huge.

An AP analysis of 1990 census data found that baby boomers — those born between 1946 and 1965 — now make up nearly one-third of America's 248.7 million people.

The baby boom has often been described as a pig moving through a snake, an enormous bulge in the population. Simply because of its size, the generation has had phenomenal impact on American society. It's also one of the most studied, analyzed, self-conscious and watched-over generations in history.

The marketplace is looking now to see what boomers will want as they age — the youngest of them became adults in the 1980s and the oldest are now middle-aged.

"Businesses for years have been focusing on young adults," said Cheryl Russell, author of "100 Predictions for the Baby Boom." "They think young adults spend the most money. They're wrong. The middle-aged spend the most money."

Lots of baby boomers are now having children of their own — the number of kids under age 5 was 14 percent higher in 1990 than a decade earlier. And that, too, is having an impact.

"With so many parents out there, it will have an effect on about everything we do," Russell said. "I think that's why the nation has become so conservative lately — anti-drug, anti-drunken-driving. All these people are concerned for the health and safety of their children."

That's also likely to change national spending patterns, Russell says: Fine dining with a big tab will be out, relaxed, inexpensive eating at places that serve kids will be in, women's clothing stores will be less profitable, kids clothing stores will take off.

The entry of the baby boom into adulthood meant a large group of Americans left the years of learning and began working.

"Before, they were takers. Now, they're givers," said Martha Farnsworth Riche, a sociologist with the Population Reference Bureau, a Washington research group. "We should be entering a 10-to 20-year highly productive period for our economy."

Several experts think the baby boomers will harden the conservative cast of American politics.

Neil Howe, coauthor of the book, "Generations," believes boomers will add a moralistic tone to public life because they came of age during a time of vivid social change highlighted by the civil rights movement and the Vietnam War.

"They'll be less compromising on the issues of good vs. evil," said Howe, a boomer himself. "We're going to be insufferable."

■ Judge rejects method for choosing successor

PHILADELPHIA — A federal judge Monday rejected Pennsylvania's method for picking a successor to the late Republican Sen. John Heinz, throwing Attorney General Dick Thornburgh's candidacy into doubt.

The judge said state election law unconstitutionally lets Republican and Democratic party committees pick nominees for a special Senate election instead of letting voters choose the candidates in primaries.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Edward N. Cahn could delay the special election scheduled for November to fill the unexpired term of Heinz, who died April 4 in a plane-helicopter crash.

■ Judge: Police remarks were racist

LOS ANGELES — Statements by a police officer charged in the beating of a black motorist were obviously racist, a judge said Monday in denying a defense request to strike them from the case.

"To say that those comments aren't racially biased is like sticking your head in the sand," Superior Court Judge Bernard Kamins said. "This is probably the first trial in which I will allow racial questions. I feel it's a significant and relevant thought in the case."

Earlier Monday, King had his first confrontation with officers charged with clubbing him, but no words were exchanged during the brief court hearing.

■ Presbyterians reject shift on sexuality

BALTIMORE — Presbyterians on Monday rejected a report on human sexuality that would have given the church's blessing to premarital sex, homosexuality and bisexuality.

In an action watched closely by other Protestant denominations, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) also voted 534-31 to send a letter to its 10,500 churches affirming the sanctity of the marriage bond and past church statements declaring homosexuality to be wrong.

"Let it be said that in Baltimore the 203rd General Assembly heard the cry of the church for an assembly that listens to the grass roots," the assembly said in its letter to churches.

Nearly 300 Presbyterian gay rights activists followed a wooden cross down the center of the convention hall in a silent protest of the assembly's action.

■ Court to hear Scouting exclusion case

CHICAGO — In a quiet voice, an 8-year-old boy told a federal judge Monday that he does not believe in God but would like very much to be a Cub Scout anyway.

The boy, 8-year-old Mark Welsh, and his father, Elliott, sued the Boy Scouts of America after Mark tried to join the Tiger Cubs in 1989 but was turned away because he and his father said they did not believe in God.

The Welshes contend the organization is a public group and cannot discriminate. The Boy Scouts, headquartered in Irving, Texas, argue that scouting is a private matter and that religion is a fundamental part of the group's nature.

Kennedy Center set for Texas-style festival

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Kennedy Center is in for culture shock — Texas style.

Beginning today and for the next 10 days, every corner of the elegant institution on the Potomac will be taken over by a rollicking celebration of all things Texan.

As part of the 11-day Texas Festival, the performance halls will feature entertainment ranging from toe-tapping Tejano music to the soaring leaps of the Fort Worth Ballet and the restaurants will serve up fajitas and ribs.

Boots and boleros will mingle with big hair and beaded gowns, and an unlikely site — a cafeteria — will be transformed into the rowdy ambience of a Texas roadhouse.

The staid Kennedy Center may never be the same.

James Wolfensohn, the center's new chairman, wants it that way. An energetic New York investment banker who presided over Carnegie Hall for 18 years, Wolfensohn has brought new vigor and ideas to the Kennedy Center since taking over a year ago.

"We're trying to make good the promise of the Kennedy Center being a national center for the performing arts," he said in an interview. "My intention is for each year to have one state to showcase. By education programs and by organizing festivals, we want to stimulate performance around the country."

The Texas Festival is the prototype under the new regime and organizers are acutely aware that Wolfensohn's vision for the future is as much at stake as their reputations.

Not that anyone seems worried.

"I can comfortably say that this is going to be a great success," said Georgette Mosbacher, general chairman of the Texas Festival, cosmetics executive and wife of Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher of Houston.

Kennedy Center officials expect 50,000 to 60,000 visitors to the Texas Festival and all events associated with it. Many shows — notably all seven Roadhouse Cafe nights — have been sold out for months.

Florida students return to class after slayings

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The weekend arrest of a carpet cleaner in the strangling deaths of two women studentshelped ease tensions on the University of Florida campus, still numbed by five grisly killings last summer.

"Things, under the circumstances, are as back to normal as they can be," said University of Florida spokeswoman Linda Gray as students returned to classes Monday.

"When you have a tragedy like that, when you lose one of your own, it takes a while to bounce back," she said.

Alan Robert Davis, 29, was charged with murdering Eleanor Anne Grace, 20, of Fort Myers, and her longtime friend and roommate, Carla Marie McKishnie, 22. He was ordered held without bail Sunday.

Davis said he had gone to clean the students' rugs Thursday and became enraged and strangled the women after they sprayed him with Mace, State Attorney Len Register said.

Their bodies were found Friday by a friend who broke into their condominium at Casablanca West apartments. A tip from the owner of a carpet company led authorities Saturday to question Davis, who later reportedly confessed to the killings.

The college town is still nervous about the serial slayings last August of five students, three of whom were mutilated. After the latest killings, some students left campus for the weekend while others resumed security measures they had used last year.

Gorbachev eyes false democracy

President Mikhail Gorbachev is warning of a modern apocalypse. He declares the Soviet Union faces economic, social and political chaos unless Western nations offer it massive economic aid. He suggests such chaos could allow some Soviets to capture nuclear weapons and perhaps launch them against the West.

Who are these potential powers of such massive destruction? Why would they strike such terror and kill millions of Westerners? What would they gain? He answers none of these questions.

The Soviet leader does answer other crucial questions. He opposes full privatization of land ownership. Most Western economists argue that the Soviet economy cannot be transformed unless a virtually complete privatization of property occurs under a pluralistic economic and political system. Freedom must be institutionalized. It must not be forced to battle the monopoly of political power that still exists in the vast communist central bureaucracy.

The Soviet government is still less than legitimate because its central leadership, including Gorbachev, has not been elected in a free vote. Yet it wants the West to give it up to $250 billion over the next five years. To do precisely what? Well, that's indeed vague. But some of that money certainly would be used to strengthen the old-line communist apparatus that is trying to control the country.

Where is the evidence of real change in the Soviet Union? In the republics, yes. In the central government, very little. And what we have received from Gorbachev is a year of doubletalk.

If we are to help the Soviet people, then we must deal directly with the republics and specifically with individual projects — from oil production to agricultural distribution, from a private transportation network to economic advice. These are freely elected, legitimate governments.

The remnants of the Communist Party must go. Eastern Europe is dumping its old party bureaucracies. And it's moving ahead with painful but progressive liberalization of its governments and economies. The trouble with Gorbachev is that he's still a communist. He wants a democratic dictatorship and that's a contradiction in terms.

ANOTHER VIEW

Taxes, other items require action now

The real business of the Texas Legislature has been postponed until this summer, when the governor has promised she will summon lawmakers into a special session to write a state budget.

It will be no easy task. Budget writers believe it will require nearly $5 billion more than the state is expected to collect from its current tax system just to maintain current services, fund public education reforms, operate new prisons and meet federally mandated guidelines for Medicaid reimbursements.

Lawmakers must either make dramatic cuts or pass the largest tax bill in Texas history.

Either could cause the political demise of many politicians.

The responsible path should include trimming the current-services budget. Big cuts can be made, and overall government efficiency can be improved. That will lower the size of the tax bill.

However, the special session, or sessions, cannot restrict themselves just to spending and taxing. Indeed, just cutting the budget will require sweeping changes in state policies, programs and even the very structure of state government. Moreover, there is unfinished business from the recently concluded 72nd session that need not wait two years to be addressed.

The agenda of the coming session(s) should include tax reform, . . . legal reform, . . . education, . . . congressional redistricting . . . and campaign finance reform . . .

Is it possible that all this could be done in a 30-day special session, when lawmakers could hardly scratch these issues in a 140-day regular session? No. Each item may require its own session. And other items are sure to arise. But the governor should not shrink from keeping lawmakers in Austin until Christmas Eve if need be, to build not just a new Texas, but a better Texas.

Animal-rights group uses violent tactics

WASHINGTON — In the United States, a woman who wears a fur coat in public takes the chance of having someone throw paint or blood on the coat. But in England, the animal lovers have raised the stakes. Scotland Yard calls some animal-rights advocates "terrorists," who may be taking lessons from the Irish Republican Army.

Anderson

Britain is the home of the most lethal animal-rights activism in the world. So prevalent are the assaults by an underground movement known as the Animal Liberation Front, that New Scotland Yard has a unit devoted strictly to investigating animal-rights violence. Some authorities in the United States and Britain fear that American animal-rights groups may be tempted to take some cues from the ALF.

Officials with the New Scotland Yard Animal Rights National Index operate under such secrecy that the only public information they provide is limited to tips that will help potential targets of violence protect themselves from the ALF. Our associate Scott Sleek investigated animal-rights terrorists in London and found that they are not above planting bombs in fur stores, blowing up the cars of scientists who use animals for medical research and vandalizing butcher shops.

Recent literature put out by the animal rights network describes the violent acts carried out by ALF throughout England and elsewhere. They include an arson attack on two vans belonging to a food company, a $40,000 vandalism spree in a sausage factory, a raid on a poultry farm to liberate 82 hens and the firebombing of a greyhound racing track in Northern Ireland. The zealots often leave their mark by painting ALF or "Meat is Murder" at the scene of the crime.

If ALF's own boasting can be believed, the group is branching out to the United States. ALF has claimed responsibility for more than 75 attacks in the United States since 1979 including arson and theft. The targets have been scientific research labs. To date, no Americans have died in those attacks, but Glenn Schoen, a monitor of animal-rights violence, has warned Congress that the violence is getting more personal.

For example, in 1988, the head of a U.S. company that did tests of surgical staples in dogs was the target of an unsuccessful assassination attempt. And last year a university professor's house was burned down by unidentified animal-rights activists.

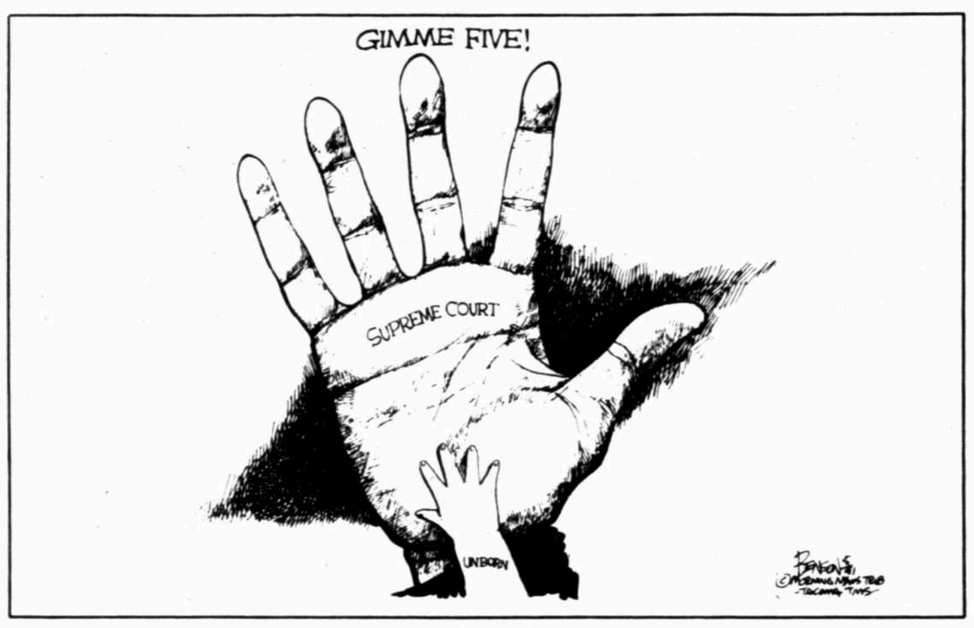

New Scotland Yard has blamed animal-rights advocates for attacks on research labs, fast-food restaurants and livestock transporters. In one case, a bomb was planted under the car of a man who managed a construction company. His "crime" was that he built research facilities for pharmaceutical companies.

Some Britons who work for research labs live in fear that they will be targeted too. A 1988 burglary at one company led to at least 25 attacks on employees.

The police at New Scotland Yard do their best to track down and bring the terrorists to justice, but they are privately frustrated about some of the lenient sentences the courts hand down.

While New Scotland Yard suspects the terrorists are imitating the IRA, not all of the activists want to go that far. One issue of a magazine printed by animal rights activists suggested that "we could actually learn from the IRA," but a follow-up issue included a guest editorial complaining about that notion. That difference of opinion doesn't help British police to rest any easier at night because they know that ALF has already proved itself to be capable of IRA-style violence.

Mixing trade, moral outrage is interference

President George Bush is paying off the Chinese for not vetoing the Persian Gulf War in the U.N. by recommending that they retain most favored nation status. Bush's professed reasons are bunk. He argues that the alternative is to isolate China. Of course, the Soviet Union does not have and never has had most favored nation status and no one, including Bush, has suggested that we have isolated them.

Reese

In fact, with conditions as they presently exist, one would have to say the Soviet Union, denied most favored nation status, has a better human rights record at this moment than China, which has the coveted trade status. According to the law, President Bush must certify improvement in human rights in order to extend the most favored nation status.

Obviously, Mr. Bush is not playing it straight, either with Congress or with the American people. Sadly, I have come to expect that. I wouldn't buy a U.S. Savings bond from Mr. Bush.

On the other hand, Democrats in Congress are also not playing it straight with the American people. They are opposing the renewal of MFN status to China on the grounds that the U.S. must self-righteously uphold the principle of protecting human rights.

Their message to the American people is that by golly they stand forthrightly on principle and not expediency. Horse apples. The human rights of Palestinians on the West Bank and Gaza, not to mention in refugee camps in Lebanon, are abused daily by the present Israeli government and with few exceptions, Congress does nothing but coo sweet words of undying love to a government that, so far as Palestinians in the territories are concerned, is neither democratic nor humane.

What we ought to do, in terms of trade, is to dispense with moralizing and posturing and hypocrisy completely and set trade policy strictly on the basis of the commercial interests of the United States. We should, as George Washington urged, offer precisely the same trade terms to all nations.

Mixing trade with moral outrage is nothing more than a backdoor attempt to interfere in the internal affairs of other nations. This whole MFN bit derives of the Title 4 of the Trade Act of 1974, commonly referred to as the Jackson-Vanik amendment.

It says that MFN status can be given to nonmarket economies — read communist — if the countries permit substantially free emigration of their citizens. Actually, it was aimed specifically at the Soviet Union's policy on the emigration of Soviet Jews and some experts have since argued that it scuttled detente.

While free emigration of Soviet Jews or of all Soviet citizens may be a desirable policy, it really is not wise to make one issue the test of the entire relationship between two countries. Furthermore, it has nothing to do with trade matters, just as China's abominable human rights record has nothing to do with trade.

The extent of moral considerations is that trade policy should go no further than the decision to allow trade or disallow trade. If a government is really so morally repugnant to us, then the obvious answer is to have neither trade nor diplomatic relations with it. If, however, we are going to have diplomatic and commercial relations, then we should have one standard — based on our commercial interests — for those relations.

As it happens, China is a lousy trade partner. We are running a $10 billion trade deficit with China, expected to climb to $15 billion. China refuses to protect American copyrights and patents and also refuses to open its market fairly to U.S. imports.

It is time to insist that both Congress and the White House conduct U.S. policy strictly for the benefit of the United States and not use our trade policy as a weapon for partisan purposes or as a tool of special interests or a coin for buying votes in the U.N.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

With luck, civil rights bill may not be too bad

The effect of the 1991 civil rights bill — leave aside the rhetorical acrobatics performed by the bill's mostly Democratic supporters — is to intensify racial preferences in hiring, which is why the bill passed the House with less than a veto-proof majority, which is why the version finally enacted, if tailored to the president's more sensible specifications, may not cause undue damage. At least, let's hope not.

Murchison

"This legislation," protested Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois, during the House debate, "pits group against group, race against race, ethnic against ethnic. It's a backward step."

The Democrats claim, with many a pious rolling of the eyeballs, that their bill actually outlaws racial hiring quotas. What the bill doesn't outlaw, because it's un-outlawable, is the proved propensity of federal judges and civil rights enforcers to adopt and enforce quotas, all the while calling them something else. Employers do the same thing just to stay out of trouble and to advertise their social sensitivity.

The Democratic version, adopted Wednesday and billed as the moderate alternative to kooky extremes, is replete with tricky provisions designed to outlaw job discrimination.

The one alternative Congress hasn't tried, and certainly won't try, is called the free market. Under free-market discipline, employers who violate the principle of hiring the right man or woman for the job are subjected not to government fines but to inferior economic results.

Congress' wont is to trust not the invisible hand of the marketplace, but the paddle, applied to the seat of the social malefactor who'd prefer to make his own hiring decisions.

This is because Congress is a political body. Politicians prosper not by doing right things, but by massaging their friends and kneeing their adversaries in strategic places.

What goes on in American politics goes on elsewhere — with what lack of success, Professor Thomas Sowell tells us in "Preferential Policies: An International Perspective."

Sowell, surveying the world, finds plenty of efforts to overcome perceived power imbalances through racial or ethnic preferences — in India, Nigeria, Sri Lanka, New Zealand, the United States. He just can't find any efforts that work, that's all. He finds, as per Henry Hyde, race pitted against race, class against class — frequently in bloody communal violence. He finds, further, that racial preferences don't so much raise up the downtrodden as further advantage the "already more fortunate."

Preference is becoming the new world religion. A leader of an "oppressed" minority in India argues against the whole idea of merit as a factor in hiring: "Why is merit so important? We can have some inefficiency. That will be necessary if our people are to get jobs. Are we not entitled to jobs just because we are not as qualified?"

Sowell, who is black — a designation he probably gets tired of hearing — argues on the statistical evidence that American blacks were on the way up before preferential policies started, and that blacks tend to cluster in government employment rather than in the better-paying private sector.

With quotas, moreover, we get into the business of determining who is a preferred minority. These days, that designation seems to include everybody but white males, who don't enjoy any rights their government is bound to respect. This means that those minorities who actually constitute the majority — blacks, Hispanics, Asians, black women, Hispanic women, Asian women, white women (I didn't say this made sense!) — must decide how to parcel out among themselves the opportunities offered.

Giving government the power to oversee results of this nature is giving government more power than is good for government itself, for the intended beneficiaries or for the larger society. We'd be better off with no new civil rights bill, period, but politics is politics. You can bet we'll go on doing the wrong thing, given how much our leaders seem to enjoy doing it.

Senators dislike programs at Smithsonian Institution

By Alan Fram

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative senators are hinting they may try to cut funds to the Smithsonian Institution, beloved for collections ranging from rocks to rocket ships, because they believe two museum projects unfairly portray the nation's westward movement.

Echoing recent right-wing efforts to halt federal aid for offensive art, the new battle focuses on an exhibit of art of the old American West and a television production on Spain and the Americas.

The critics — both westerners — complain that the projects present overly negative views of white settlers and that the museum has a liberal political agenda.

With millions of dollars at stake, Smithsonian officials say they aren't promoting a political message, but fulfilling a museum's duty to present varied points of view.

The dispute recalls a battle that raged in Congress in 1989 and 1990 over whether government funds for offensive art should be cut, as Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and other conservatives insisted they should.

Congress last fall dropped a yearlong ban on National Endowment for the Arts grants to allegedly obscene art, deciding to leave the question to the courts.

For many museum defenders, the issue is the First Amendment's protection of free speech.

"We're back at the problem of the intersection of the First Amendment and Congress' right to control spending," said John Hammer, director of the National Humanities Alliance, a coalition of cultural groups.

"Who should decide what is a balanced or appropriate way to present an exhibit?" asked Laura R. Handman, a director of Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts. "That's a judgment better left to curators and historians, not politicians."

Leading the charge against the Smithsonian is Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, a gruff 67-year-old known mostly as a defender of his home state and of higher military budgets. Stevens said he wants public debate over how the museum — a part of the government — should bring history and culture to its visitors.

"The Smithsonian thinks it must be the toadstool on which revisionists can stand," he said last week. "That's OK if it's a private institution, but I think of the Smithsonian as a place where we really demonstrate the truth."

Joining him is Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., who said he believes the exhibit on art of the frontier depicts a "terribly distorted, negative and untrue statement about the settlement of the west."

The exhibit, "The West as America: Reinterpreting Images of the Frontier, 1820-1920," will be at the National Museum of American Art in an extended run through July 28. It contains 164 paintings, photographs, prints and sculptures from such artists as Frederic Remington, Charles Russell, George Caleb Bingham and Albert Bierstadt, who created images of the West created then persist today.

But it's not the art that irks the lawmakers, it's the accompanying text.

The commentary argues that those artists depicted the westward movement as a glorious, divinely ordained enterprise in which settlers tamed a lush, fertile wilderness. In the process, the settlers brought civilization to the Indians who lived there — or triumphed over the cruel savages who resisted.

Ignored were the massacres and deprivation that were the lot of many who moved west, and the environmental plunder that resulted.

Museum officials argue that this view of the westward movement has been taught by many historians for decades.

"We're not really taking a historical point of view that is radical or eccentric or even avant garde," said Elizabeth Broun, director of the art museum.

But that has not been enough for Stevens and Gorton, who first voiced their objections last month when Smithsonian Secretary Robert McC. Adams testified before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Stevens criticized the exhibit on the West and a five-part television series the Smithsonian is helping produce called, "The Buried Mirror: Reflections on Spain and the New World by Carlos Fuentes." The series, still in production, is being financed mostly by a Spanish publishing firm, but the Smithsonian is contributing $250,000 in non-federal money.

Fuentes, 63, is a Mexican citizen and award-winning author who has been critical of the United States. The documentaries, to be broadcast next spring, will track the history and culture of Hispanic America.

Despite their laws, India still permits marriage of children

By Bob Deans
New York Times New Service

TILAUNIA, India — The bride wore a red cotton headdress and matching gown, and her moist face glistened in the sweltering night like a dark and holy jewel.

Beneath a canopy of stars she stood in a dusty courtyard, enclosed by mud-brick walls, where fly-ridden dogs nosed around small mounds of rice — a prayer for fertility.

But the hour was late, it was well past ten, and the ceremony had just begun. The bride had a sore throat and was weary besides, and soon she began to cry.

And who could blame her, after all, despite her fine red gown? This was Shipya's wedding day, and she's barely five years old.

"I keep telling people not to get their daughters married so young," said Kamla, the midwife who helped deliver Shipya not all that long ago in Nalu, an impoverished village of some 3,000 near this rural train stop 400 miles southwest of New Dehli.

"The girl should be able to stand on her own two feet," the midwife said in her native Hindi, "and then get married."

It seldom happens that way for millions of women throughout India's vast hinterlands, where two-thirds of the population lives.

Despite a government ban on the practice, child marriage remains an essential part of the social structure throughout thousands of the farming communities that make up much of rural India.

Shipya, for instance, was only one of eight girls married in a single ceremony in her village last week. Nor was she the youngest. That distinction went to four-month-old Shoba, who napped fitfully in her father's arms as her wedding ceremony progressed.

The other brides ranged in age from one year to 15, and included two who were seven. The grooms ranged accordingly, from toddlers to young men.

After the wedding, child brides generally continue to live with their own families until the age of 16 or so, when they actually become wives, begin bearing children of their own and move in with their husband's family.

Then why marry so young? Tradition plays a role. The practice dates back hundreds of years and has much to do with holding villages together and preventing unwanted marriages, particularly to village outsiders or members of social classes and ethnic groups forbidden by ancient prejudices to cross paths.

By ensuring that a girl is married before she reaches sexual maturity, the custom also reduces the odds of out-of-wedlock pregnancies, which might bring discord and hardship to the close-knit communities.

But the chief reason, villagers insist, is poverty.

Throwing even a modest village wedding — a sort of festival that lasts for days — can cost a family a year's wages or more in a country where some 420 million people live on less than a dollar a day.

So when a family puts on a wedding, as the Morajee clan did in Nalu, it's common to try to marry off all available daughters in a single stroke. As it was, patriarch Morajee had to sell his spring wheat crop and still borrow money to come up with the $900 needed to wed his youngest daughter and seven granddaughters.

"It's like child labor," explained an Indian woman working as a rural development agent here. "No parent wants their children to work, but it's economic."

The World

■ Italy's voters want new brand of politics

ROME — Italian voters sent a ringingly clear message to their national leaders on Monday that they want a new brand of politics that is less corrupt and more efficient than what they have lived with for the last four decades.

By a margin of 19-to-1, voters approved a binding referendum to eliminate an electoral system that dishonest officials and even the Mafia had manipulated to install their preferred candidates, especially in the country's hard-pressed south.

Several weeks ago, the government's special anti-Mafia prosecutor, Domenica Sica, said the situation was so grave that 17,000 local officials — well over 10 percent of all office-holders in Italy — were under investigation for corruption and possible underworld connections.

■ Shamir adds conditions to peace talks

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has added a new and potentially difficult qualification to the list of conditions that the Israeli government has attached to its participation in any American-sponsored regional peace conference.

By adding the new condition, the right to veto the names of any Palestinians who would attend the conference, Shamir seems to be backtracking from an agreement he made with Secretary of State James A. Baker III during Baker's most recent visit to Jerusalem last month.

The prime minister, in an interview with Israeli journalists on Sunday, said that his government would insist on approving the names of any Palestinians named to the proposed conference's joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation. This condition has never been mentioned before, and a senior government official said the prime minister felt a need to "make this point now so there will be no misunderstandings later."

■ Envoy urges Lebanon to act on hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A senior British diplomat warned Lebanon on Monday that it had little hope of receiving assistance from the West as long as kidnappers in the country continued to hold Western hostages.

Douglas Hogg, the second-ranking minister in the British Foreign Office and the most senior British official to visit Beirut in six years, said the Lebanese government should recognize that until the 12 hostages are released it would be difficult to persuade Westerners to invest in or visit the country.

■ Kuwait expels prisoners to Iraq

KUWAIT CITY — The Kuwaiti government has begun expelling civilian prisoners to Iraq, and some of those deported apparently have been sent against their will. Any such forcible expulsions would be a violation of an agreement signed by all parties at the end of the Persian Gulf war.

At least 600 prisoners, including many Iraqis, are being held in a jail opened about 10 days ago in the Shuwaik section of town, and of these about 30 prisoners were escorted across the border on Sunday night. More were seen arriving in the prison in shackles on Monday.

U.S. fears major volcanic eruption

■ Nearly 15,000 Americans flee Clark Air Base.

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Nearly 15,000 Americans fled sprawling Clark Air Base on Monday after a volcano 10 miles away spit searing gases and ash into the sky. Experts said a major eruption was possible.

Magma was rising to the surface of the 4,795-foot Mount Pinatubo, west of the base, which came to life last week after six centuries of dormancy, volcanologists said.

On Sunday, the volcano spewed gases, ash and rock from two craters at speeds up to 60 mph. On Monday, gas and molten rock poured out of the mountain, shrouding it in a thick, gray clouds of ash and steam that rose 12,000 feet.

Operations were suspended at Clark, about 50 miles north of Manila, but its command center operated Monday with a skeleton crew. About 1,500 troops stayed behind to provide security.

The air base is a major switching point for the worldwide network of flights operated by the Military Airlift Command.

More than 12,000 Filipinos living in three provinces bordering the volcano, many of them primitive tribespeople, were ordered from the slopes of the mountain.

However, Philippines authorities did not evacuate Angeles, a city of 300,000 people in which Clark is located. Business in the city was normal, except at the bars and brothels frequented by U.S. troops.

The 14,500 American evacuees traveled to Subic Bay naval base, about 50 miles to the southwest, where Navy officials scrambled to find temporary housing for them.

"What we are doing at Subic is doubling our population," Subic spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Kevin Mukri said. "It's like having a small town of 14,000 in the States having to double itself overnight."

Subic Bay families hosted Clark families, bachelors tripled up with Navy counterparts in barracks, and others were housed on cots in the base's gyms.

Although Subic Bay covers about 62,000 acres, the garrison itself is relatively small, with only 2,200 housing units for a permanent presence of about 14,000 sailors, dependents and civilian employees.

Subic often hosts up to 20,000 additional sailors and Marines when carrier battle groups call at the port.

Engineers devise way to extinguish oil-well fires

By Don Martinez
Hearst News Service

LIVERMORE, Calif. — Carl Henning and a group of fellow engineers at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory think they've come up with a way to quell the nearly 500 oil well fires that are raging out of control near Kuwait.

The fires, a threatening legacy of the Persian Gulf War, have consumed millions of dollars worth of oil and have Kuwait authorities, as well as officials from surrounding nations, worried about long-lasting health problems caused by the vast toxic black clouds of smoke darkening their skies.

Some 520 wells were set on fire by retreating Iraqi forces and another 80 wells were left spurting out of control, Henning said.

"Workers have been able to extinguish 92 wells so far and another 40 that were spurting have also been capped," he said. Those that continue to burn are consuming enough oil to fill about 10,000 barrels a day at a loss of more than $200,000 for each well.

The engineers' idea, still on the drawing boards but ready to take shape later this month, has attracted the attention of the Kuwait Petroleum Co., which has requested a demonstration as soon as possible.

"We were all sitting around brainstorming early in April," Henning recalled Monday, "when somebody said something, and somebody said something else and we all started to get pretty excited."

What Henning and his colleagues have come up with is an idea to build a gigantic 10-ton metal cylinder, 8 feet in diameter and 24 feet tall with special air vents on the top and a network of a curved fins built into the inside walls.

Henning likened the technique to putting a large can over a gushing fire hydrant and pumping away the excess water.

India's vote nears close

NEW DELHI, India (NYT) — In the shadow of the most violent election in India's history, the vote for a new Parliament moved to a close on Monday as Sonia Gandhi, the widow of Rajiv Gandhi, urged the divided Congress Party to fulfill her husband's "dream of a strong united India."

Mrs. Gandhi, who remains in seclusion after her husband's slaying more than two weeks ago, made her rare public comment, in the form of a letter to the party president, as the campaign ended on Monday afternoon in 15 states, parts of states, or territories with more than 105 million voters scheduled to go to the polls on Wednesday.

On Saturday, at least 185 million more people are to vote, ending a national election marked by what one prominent columnist called "fatigued helplessness among the people at large."

"The elections have just drained the people of any expectation that it might solve their problems," the columnist, Arun Shourie, said in an interview.

Gandhi's assassination on May 21, apparently by a suicide bomber, disrupted and delayed the three-step election and left the nation, by all accounts, in a virtual torpor.

■ Public-private initiative teaches Midland students about value of saving money.

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Steven Michael's experience as "Millionaire for a Day" left the 11-year-old speechless at First City, Texas bank's news conference Monday morning.

Although he won't receive $1 million in hard cash, Steven was credited with the bank's one-day interest on $1 million — $109.59.

Steven, a sixth grader at Pease Elementary School, won the bank-sponsored contest that concluded the School Savings Program.

The savings program, implemented in Midland schools by the bank, taught pupils how to establish and maintain savings accounts.

The bank donated the first dollar to open each student's savings account. About 850 students saved more than $27,000 during the 1990-91 school year, according to a report from the bank. The average monthly deposit per pupil was just under $8.

"This was my first savings account," Steven said. "I learned a lot about saving money and about the bank on the tour."

Steven toured First City, Texas with his parents, John and Donna Michael, before the news conference.

"I was shocked when my name was picked out for Millionaire for a Day," Steven said. "I may spend a little of my savings this summer, but I want to keep on saving most of it."

Joseph Baressi, superintendent of Midland Independent School District, praised the program at the news conference.

"What a wonderful example of the cooperation between the business and education communities in Midland.

"This is not a superficial program," Baressi said, noting that the program's curriculum was approved by the Texas Education Agency. He said the savings program teaches math skills, develops a savings ethic in pupils and promotes goodwill between business and education entities in the community.

Baressi said that the program was successful from several perspectives — "both as a superintendent and as a parent.

"I had a sixth grader at South Elementary School this year," he said. "Roughly, half of the sixth graders in the district deposited money into the program."

Bill Franklin, president and chief executive officer of First City, Texas, said the savings program promotes student responsibility.

"Through savings, students will understand that the work ethic needed to be successful in school is the same work ethic which is needed to be successful outside of school," he said.

The savings program was implemented in the third grade at Bush Elementary School and in the sixth grades at Pease, DeZavala, Crockett, Washington, South, Travis and Milam elementary schools.

Pupils learned to manage their own bank accounts in the classroom. VIPS (Volunteers in Public Schools) members collected deposits, recorded them on school computers and took them to the bank.

The students' savings accounts earn interest at the rate of 4 percent.

Minister spreads gospel on Harley

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Little Bear Villegas rides as the leader of a local motorcycle gang.

And though his jacket sports colors, his mark isn't outlaw.

"There are only two people you ride for. You ride for the Lord or you ride for the devil," said Villegas, 37, president of The Brotherhood of the Cross, a 32-member Odessa-based Christian motorcycle group.

Villegas, who rides a 1976 Harley-Davidson ElectraGlide Liberty Edition, helped form the group about a year ago.

"In church we all like to ride. We ride in what we believe in," said Villegas, associate pastor of the non-denominational Shiloh Community Church.

The mission of the motorcycle group "is to promote the image of motorcycling, to encourage fellowship among motorcyclists and to proclaim and spread the gospel," said Villegas, an ordained and licensed minister since 1989.

The gang takes to the open road about every other weekend, Villegas said.

"We make a lot of secular motorcycle rallies and show our colors," he said. About 300 to 1000 people show up at such get-togethers.

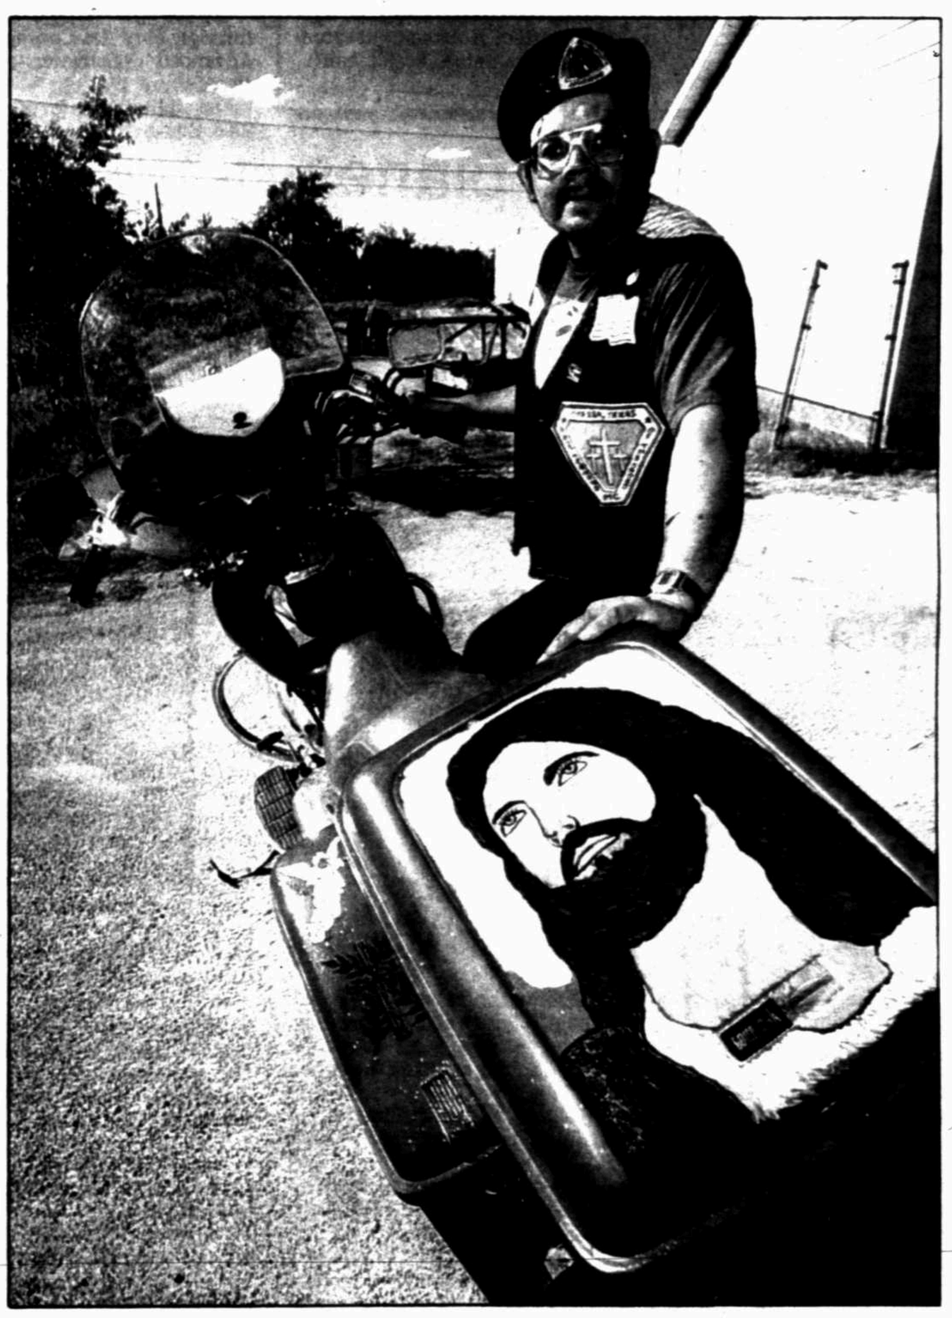

"I get quite a few calls to do weddings at motorcycle events ... it's pretty neat, a natural high," Villegas said. So far this year, Villegas has performed three ceremonies.

In addition to attending rallies, the group goes on camping trips and day rides.

And although the roar of motorcycles and the look of black leather may seem threatening, Villegas said the group is always met with a warm welcome from strangers.

DARE may pull the plug on Jambox

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A youngsters' hang out created as an alternative to summertime cruising and parking probably won't be repeated this year, Midland DARE officers said Monday.

The DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) Jambox program attracted as many as 600 youngsters to the designated gathering place at the Town and Country Shopping Center on Friday and Saturday nights last summer.

The program's coordinator, Midland police officer Dale Seago, said an average of 200 to 300 predominantly high school students met at the lot at Midkiff Road and Cuthbert Avenue each weekend.

Without the Jambox this summer, many youngsters will return to parking lots that prohibit loitering — the problem that led to the Jambox's creation, Seago said.

"We don't have anybody that will allow us to use a suitable location" this year, he said. "The owners (of Town and Country) did not want us to come back."

Property manager Wesley Tune of Mike Lewis and Associates, which manages the property, said, "The owners instructed us not to do that this year. They didn't want to open themselves up to the liability ... the possibility of what could happen out there."

Seago said the program's officers considered alternative locations but no favorable replacement was found. The program possibly could be revived if a suitable site was made available, he added.

"We basically looked at other sites and felt they weren't acceptable ... We believe location is everything," Seago said.

The right location needs to be easily accessible and at a pivotal point to the strip frequented by cruising youngsters, He said.

"They (the youngsters) have to be able to see each other driving up and down the street. It's part of the social structure," he said.

Without the location, there would be no participation, Seago said.

"And it needs to be a large enough facility to control traffic," he said.

Intensive search ends with Odessan's arrest

■ Police track down fugitive who was convicted of cashing, writing close to $1.25 million in stolen, bad checks.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

An Odessa man with a hot-check habit is back in custody after leading federal authorities on an 18-month nationwide chase, the U.S. Marshals Service in Midland reported.

Randy Cornell Howard, 37, was arrested last Thursday in Louisiana for violating the terms of his supervised release on a federal forgery conviction, Deputy U.S. Marshal Carlos Trevizo said.

The U.S. Parole Commission will consider Howard's case to determine how much time, if any, he will have to spend in prison.

The events leading up to Thursday's arrest began in 1986, when Howard was convicted in U.S. District Court in Midland of cashing a stolen U.S. Treasury check for $22,000.

Judge Lucius D. Bunton III sentenced Howard in January 1987 to five years probation for that offense. In the summer of 1987, however, Bunton issued a warrant for Howard's arrest after Howard was accused

Midland couple on a mission to bring dormant shopping center back to life

By Melia McEwen

Mission Square — long one of the city's most vacant shopping centers — is showing new signs of life.

The 103,193 square-foot office and retail center at Loop 250 and Big Spring was purchased last month by Melton Energy, which is owned by Joe and Jan Melton.

Mrs. Melton, a Realtor with Re/Max of Midland, said she was looking for a better space for her business and was drawn to Mission Square. The realty company occupies 9,000 square feet in the two-story office building at the front of the center, and Mrs. Melton says she is saving half the second story for expansion.

She said she has signed office leases with Drummond Advertising, Woodmen of the World Life Insurance, advertising company EKA & Associates, candy company Duo Delights and Allstate Insurance.

Long-time tenants Marc's Photography and Dave Taylor Computers are staying, and Mrs. Melton said she has sent out leases on another 17,000 square feet — all new build-out space.

Free trade would overwhelm U.S.-Mexican border, GAO says

By James R. Owen
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Customs inspection facilities on the U.S.-Mexican border cannot handle current levels of trade between the two countries and they would be completely swamped by a proposed free trade pact, the General Accounting Office said Monday.

In a report requested by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the GAO found that government officials and business groups on both sides of the border say existing port facilities are inadequate.

"These shortcomings cause bottlenecks that pinch off the flow of commerce at the border and those bottlenecks will only get worse if we reach a free trade agreement that increases trade," said Bentsen, who chairs the Senate Finance Committee with jurisdiction over trade legislation.

In a letter to the GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, Bentsen on Monday asked the agency to determine what additional facilities would be needed to handle sharply increased U.S.-Mexican trade, including bridges, highways, customs offices and staffing.

Shooting

By Staff Reports

One man remained jailed and another hospitalized Monday following a shooting at a local nightspot early that morning, police officials said.

Dewayne Hall, 18, was in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital after being shot in the upper neck with the bullet exiting his cheek, police and hospital officials said.

Police arrested Jimmy Harold Doss, 22, in connection with the shooting that occurred about 1:39 a.m. at Red's Drive-In, 1807 E. Front St.

Doss remained in jail Monday in lieu of a $25,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe. Doss was denied bond for a violation of probation out of Harris County on a charge of burglary, police and jail officials said.

According to police reports, officers, who were greeted by a hostile crowd at Red's, found the injured Hall, who had been shot with a .32-caliber revolver, and obtained a description of the assailant.

Hall, who was conscious, was treated at the scene by paramedics before being transported to the hospital.

Shortly after police arrived at the scene, Doss was apprehended while traveling as a passenger in a silver mini-van in the 700 block of E. Front Street.

Arrest

ODESSA — A 27-year-old Odessa man was arrested after stabbing another man during an argument that occurred about 9 p.m. Sunday, police said.

Joe Ray Nunez, 2118 A West 6th St., remained jailed Monday for aggravated assault in lieu of a $5,000 bond set by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly.

According to police reports, officers responded to a stabbing at the 6th Street address and found Nunez standing on top of a vehicle holding a knife. Nunez was arrested without incident.

Hector Ruiz, 26, of the same address, was discovered inside the home with a puncture wound to the lower back with a possible punctured liver. The wounded man was transported to Medical Center Hospital by fire department ambulance, police said.

Medical Center Hospital had no record of Ruiz being treated under that name, hospital officials said.

as a group compared to how it used to be," he said.

Perception of all motorcycle groups as outlaws began to change about five years ago with an increase in Christian riders, Villegas said.

Nationwide there are about 35,000 members of the Christian Motorcycle Association, with which The Brotherhood of the Cross is affiliated but isn't a charter member.

As a minister, Villegas said he spreads the gospel throughout his travels — usually prompted by inquiries about religious murals that he painted on his bike.

"Everybody needs to know Jesus," said Villegas, who added that he has helped influence outlaw bikers as well as others from doing "stupid things."

"The bottom line is that I'm out there telling people Jesus loves them just like they are," he said.

The mission of Villegas' gang is also accomplished through volunteer work.

The Brotherhood of the Cross has been involved with community service organizations that include the Country Mesa Boys' Home, the Battered Women's Center and the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

During Christmas, the group loaded up their bikes with a tree, lights, ornaments and gifts for the boys' home.

"You should have seen those kids eyes light up when we pulled up," Villegas said.

In July, the gang will assist the Multiple Sclerosis Society with their Bike-A-Thon.

More than an outlet for personal testimony, cruising on the highways is a way of life for Villegas.

A 20-year veteran motorcyclist, Villegas said he enjoys riding for "the comradery, the fellowship, the natural high, the natural stress release."

His wife Barbara, who rides a 1973 ElectraGlide Police Special, joins him on his quest for freedom and relaxation.

Before moving to Odessa, where he works as a mechanic for Coca-Cola, Villegas led the Monahans Social Riders Motorcycle Club. As part of that group, Villegas initiated the first Adopt-A-Highway program in West Texas in May 1986.

Villegas' involvement in motorcyle groups hasn't always been as civic-minded, however.

About 15 years ago, Villegas said he was part of a gang more into partying than good-natured fellowship.

"We didn't cause trouble but we we didn't run from it," Villegas recalled.

"Like the stereotype of motorcyclists on TV — that's what I used to look like," he said.

"I had no direction back then. I think I partied back then to fill a void," Villegas said.

"It's different now — no void and lots of direction," he said.

But Villegas said he doesn't regret his past motorcycle associations.

"I think you're allowed a time to run amuck but then you need to settle down because you have a purpose (in life). That's my belief."

BACK: Realtor moving office into Mission Center

(From 1B)

Kenny Ho has purchased the 15,000 square-foot wing that houses his Golden China restaurant and Kenny's Lounge, she said.

Mrs. Melton also hopes to sell the 6,500 square-foot wing that once housed People's Restaurant, an offer that has drawn the interest of three or four businesses.

In addition to attracting a new restaurant, Mrs. Melton said she would like to see some outlet stores join the center.

"I feel we will have the center 90 percent leased by the end of the year," she said.

Mission Square was built in late 1982 at a cost of $9 million. The center was developed by Jay Peck Construction Co. of Reddington, Calif.

According to Mrs. Melton, interest in the center has increased because it is locally owned.

"It's hard to negotiate a lease in a center when the people live in Houston or Denver or New York," she said, adding that Mission also was handicapped by the fact that its owner, the Resolution Trust Corp., wouldn't allow it to be leased.

Mrs. Melton is leasing retail space for $3.50 a square foot.

As space in the center is marketed, Re/Max is working on the landscaping, roofing and windows. Mrs. Melton said that while the center had not been kept up in recent years, it fortunately had not been abused.

She feels that the affordable rent and the center's good location — with approximately 20,000 cars passing by daily — will boost occupancy, she said.

"This is going to work. It won't happen overnight, but this is going to work," she said.

JAMBOX: Police having difficult time finding site for youths to use

(From 1B)

Although police encountered some disturbances at last year's hang out, the problems before the program far exceeded those, Seago said.

The Jambox reduced complaints from area businesses about youngsters blocking lots and consuming alcohol, police officials said.

Seago said the Town and Country lot — which was supervised unobtrusively by plain clothes police officers — also provided a drug-free environment for youngsters.

Because police staffed the lot, many parents approved of the hang out, Seago said.

of passing bad checks in Ector County, Gaines County and Dallas. Howard also had failed to report to his probation officer.

He was arrested July 17, 1987, in connection with the warrant in Dallas after attempting to cash a bad check for more than $7,000 at a Dallas bank, Trevizo said. Meanwhile, Trevizo said, Odessa's Western National Bank reported that Howard had written $100,000 in bad checks on a closed account there.

Bunton sentenced Howard to 13 months in the federal prison in Big Spring, and he was released in October 1988.

Serving a five-year term of supervised release, Howard failed to notify his probation officer of a change of address in January 1990.

A warrant was issued for his arrest later that month, but Howard, his wife Sherida and their 16-year-old daughter had disappeared by the time the marshal's service attempted to serve it, Trevizo said.

Trevizo and Deputy U.S. Marshal Albert Arias of Midland spent the next 18 months attempting to track down the elusive Howard, who dodged authorities by remaining on the move and using at least four aliases.

"This individual was very good at the red-herring routine," Arias said. "We were always a couple of steps behind. It was challenging, because here you were dealing with someone who was like a chameleon."

Arias said Howard also received help from family members, whom he relied on to wire him money when he was between jobs.

Howard's flight took him from Odessa — where he purchased a car with a check before heading north — to the Canadian border, where Canadian customs officials refused him entry.

Then it was on to New Jersey, San Diego, Calif,, Alpine, Calif., and Las Vegas, Nev., where a car accident involving Howard alerted authorities to his presence there, Trevizo said.

"We thought for sure that they were going to arrest him over there," Trevizo said. "They were very close."

But Howard, with his wife and daughter in tow, eluded capture once again. This time he fled to Salt Lake City, Utah, Trevizo said. That was followed by a move to Port Arthur and finally to Lake Charles, La., last month.

But confidential informants told the U.S. Marshals office in Midland about Howard's last move. Deputy U.S. Marshals in Louisiana found Howard working under an assumed name at a Citgo Petroleum Corp. refinery in Sulphur, La., Trevizo said.

Trevizo and Arias said they may question Howard's wife and some of his other relatives in connection with Howard's flight. Family members who assisted him in hiding from authorities could face federal charges, they said.

Meanwhile, state charges against Howard in connection with his bad-check spree are pending.

Both Arias and Trevizo said they were pleased that their long search for Howard has come to an end, especially since the ex-fugitive involved his teen-age daughter in his flight from justice.

"It's kind of sad to see a young person get involved," Arias said. "It's not a family vacation type thing."

After bloody weekend, mayor calls for calm

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — In the wake of weekend violence that left eight people dead, Mayor Nelson Wolff urged San Antonians to "cool it" and said the city may start a curfew for youths and enact other anti-crime measures.

One of those measures, a special team to crack down on gang violence, got going Monday. The six-person police team had been tracking gangs the past six months.

"Let me first make a plea to parents to watch your children this summer, and keep them off the streets at night," Wolff said Sunday. "A second plea is to everybody to settle down in this community."

In an exasperated voice, Wolff added: "Try to cool it a bit in these disputes that are happening here in the city of San Antonio."

The mayor, who held a news conference Sunday with police homicide Lt. Albert Ortiz, said the city is in for a "tough summer."

"The days of getting into a fist fight for the fun of it are gone," Ortiz said. "The best way now is to avoid a confrontation if you wish to avoid being a victim."

The warning came as the city endured a violent weekend in which eight people were killed, including a 36-year-old man found stabbed to death Monday morning.

The man, who had been stabbed in the chest, was discovered in the parking lot of a city swimming pool about 7:30 a.m.

Other victims included a man found slain and dumped near a major intersection; a body found in a housing project; a woman killed with a brick and found in an area known for drugs and prostitution; a gang-related slaying; a man and his mother killed in a neighborhood argument; and a man killed at a pool hall when he accidentally bumped another man with a pool cue and didn't apologize.

GAO: Border may not be ready for free trade

(From 1B)

"I am disturbed that there has been no long-range planning to meet the demands of increased trade," Bentsen said. "It would be foolish to reach an historic agreement designed to boost trade, only to realize that the effort has been hamstrung by inadequate border facilities."

Even without a free trade agreement that would eliminate most tariffs that inhibit commerce, U.S.-Mexico trade has soared in the past five years, thanks to a sharply devalued peso and a Mexican government that has been more receptive to foreign investment.

The number of northbound commercial trucks and railcars processed at the border jumped by 64 percent between 1986 and 1990, the study said.

The GAO report comes just two weeks after Congress gave the Bush administration a green light to negotiate a free trade accord with Mexico.

Allan I. Mendelowitz, director of international trade issues for GAO, said forging a trade agreement on paper would be easy compared with actually enabling that physical commerce to occur.

Calling border infrastructure the "nuts and bolts" of a trade agreement, Mendelowitz said in an interview: "The way you get improved infrastructure is you spend more money. But we seem unwilling to do that these days."

"What's the point of boosting trade between Mexico and the United States if you end up waiting at the border for three days because you don't have the inspection capacity?" he added.

Problems cited by GAO include:

- Traffic delays that persist despite the introduction of new automated procedures by both U.S. and Mexican customs officials.
- Inadequate U.S. Customs Service staffing along the border.
- Dangerous and poorly maintained roads in Mexico and inadequately maintained border facilities and roads in Texas.
- The lack of reciprocal access for commercial motor carriers that presents a major obstacle to cross-border commercial traffic.

U.S. officials pointed out that efforts to speed processing of Mexican goods across the border must be weighed against the danger of allowing illegal drugs into the United States.

But, said Bentsen, "We can't let the potential benefits of increased commerce get held up in traffic."

Beltone's Profile solves big problems for small hearing aids

Hearing aids were first made small enough to fit in the ear nearly 15 years ago by advances in microcircuitry and miniaturization. But in-the-ear wear and tear have caused problems in keeping these aids in top working order.

Ear wax, "whistling" feedback and static from unreliable volume controls are the bigget complaints heard from people who wear in-the-ear aids. The Profile, an in-the-ear hearing aid from Beltone, conquers all three of these problems.

"According to statistics from the Hearing Industries Association, more than 80 percent of the hearing instruments fitted this year were the kind that are work in-the-ear or in-the-canal," said Josh Villasenor, Beltone Hearing Aid dispenser in Midland and Big Spring.

The Beltone Profile is the first Beltone in-the-ear hearing instrument to combine an extremely low profile design with a variety of technological advances. This combination enables the new instrument to offer high performance and reliability with the style today's hearing aid wearers are seeking.

"The Beltone Profile is less noticeable than conventional in-the-ear instruments because the faceplate — the part of the hearing aid that can be seen when in the ear — is smaller with a recessed batter door and a textured, matte finish," said Villasenor. "The result is a stylish, inconspicuous instrument."

Despite its small size, it solves many big problems with hearing aid reliability. "The number one reason these types of aids are sent in for repair is earwax clogging the receiver," Villasenor added.

When Beltone introduced its Sentry Wax Guard System TM on an earlier model, it was found to dramatically reduce repairs for receiver problems due to wax build-up. "We haven't had any problems with wax-clogged receivers since Beltone introduced the Sentry. Now Beltone has a new improved Sentry Wax guard which essentially ends wax problems. We standard order the Sentry for anyone interested in in-the-ear hearing aids."

A second problem for in-the-ear hearing aid wearers is the presence of a whistling noise, called feedback. Feedback can occur under several conditions: a poorly-fitted earmold, an ear impacted with ear wax, the receiver placed too slose to the mircrophone or, most common, internal vibration of the receiver.

At the Beltone manufacturing facility in Chicago, ear impressions are examined and sculpted by Beltone employees trained in ear anatomy and mold amking to ensure a perfect fit.

And Beltone hearing aids are designed to minimize feedback: the location of the internal electrical components is specified by the research department, and Beltone's patented Cushion-Lock receiver mountung system keeps the receiver firmly mountes in place for greater stability and performance. These Beltone innovations have virtually eliminated whistling due to feedback.

Finally, annoying static from unreliable volume controls has been eliminated in the Profile by Beltone's all-in one volume control connector system. Heat and glue often break down a connection: In the Beltone Profile, the volume control is integrated into the faceplate of the hearing aid, eliminating the need for heat and glue, and resullts in a more reliable, durable hearing instrument.

The Beltone Profile also solves a big problem for people who wear hearing aids in noisy environments. "Background noise has been a problem for some hearing aid users," explained Villasenor. "The Profile can be customized with ANF, Beltone's Automatic Noise Filter TM. ANF listens to the whole picture, processes what it hears and then automatically reduces background noise so you can better hear in noisy situations." ANF is an option available on the Beltone Profile.

Josh Villasenor, right, Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist and A.C.A. Audioprostholgist, fits a Profile hearing aid by Beltone.

The Beltone Profile is available now from the Midland (2002 W. Wall), the Big Spring (106 W. Marcy) and the Odessa (817 E. Seventh) Beltone Hearing Aid Centers. Graham's Pharmacy known for longtime, professional service

Graham's Pharmacy, a Dodson Street merchant located in "Old Town Midland," has been in business at 319 Dodson since 1977. The drug store was first known as Price Crawley Rexall Drug and was owned by Price and Gladys Crowley more than 40 years ago.

A young pharmacist, Wes Graham, was hired and has worked faithfully for more than 30 years at this same location. He is known for his friendly and professional service.

Wes Graham purchased the pharmacy and drug store from Price and Gladys Crowley upon their retirement in 1977. Wes and his wife, Doris, ran the pharmacy until 1979, when partners Paul and Ellen Keele agreed to join them. They left Big Spring, where they had lived about 40 years and Paul had worked faithfully in several pharmacies, including Professional Pharmacy.

Working congenially together, the Grahams and the Keeles strove to create a "family drug store," where not only medical but personal and gift needs can be met. Refreshments are also available at the old-fashioned soda fountain, where ice cream sodas, "400's" and milk shakes are specialties. Waiting on you with a smile will be longtime employees Linda Edwards and Pat Shannon.

A select line of gift items was created by Ellen and Doris through hard work, long hours, frequent trips to gift markets and "tender loving care." Traditionally, fine gifts are available for all occasions and holidays. Father's Day gifts are now being featured, such as Tom Landry autobiographies, aquarium picture frames, Preferred Stock, Stetson and Santa Fe colognes and aftershaves, "Father of the Year" neck pillows, Auto Notes, acrylic desk clocks, shoe mitts, executive dart sets, alma mater coasters, Pangburn's Candies, and leather gift items.

Upon Paul's retirement in 1990, his son, Kevin Keele, acquired his share of the partnership and has added his experience and expertise to the quality care in the pharmacy. With the addition of a highly-qualified part-time pharmacist, Debra Euston, three pharmacy technicians, Sharon Wilcox, Cheryl Reddig and Melissa Gilbreath and bookkeeper Joyce Boatwright, the pharmacy combines fast, quality service with friendliness and professional drug counseling. Also available is citywide delivery for prescriptions, and most third party insurance cards are honored, as well as Visa, Mastercard, American Express and Discovery credit cards.

A full-line drugstore, Graham's Pharmacy handles an excellent selection of vitamins and dietary products, pill dispensers, first aid supplies, allergy and cold medications, heating pads, incontinent aids, support hose, plus seasonal needs such as summer sun screens and vacation needs.

No local drugstore can boast a finer selection of gift items either for those close to you or a casual friend. Waiting to serve you are long-time employees Phyllis Glass and Nell Moore, who will be glad to gift wrap any item $5.00 or over, without charge and while you wait.

Open Monday through Friday 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. and 9:00 to 5:00 Saturdays, our staff will be waiting to service you with your drugstore needs. Drop by soon and decide if you want to make Graham's your family drug store. Please call 684-0569 for more information.

Laserdisc technology is expanding the range of art available to West Texas art lovers, thanks to an important investment made by The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery at 321 Dodson Street.

"Our gallery has recently acquired the latest development in the art industry," said Dorothy Davis, Blue Gem Shop and Gallery owner. "We have a laser disk player that projects the images of art on a high resolution screen. At your convenience, you can see thousands of works of art — all available — very accurately and almost life sized."

Do you have a favorite artist that you ara interested in? You may not have even seen the majority of that artist's work. Is there a particular subject or style that you are interested in but have not been able to find? "The company that provides this system for us has spent thousands of dollars and years in research to develop this product. In our gallery, you can view virtually all of the popular affordable art available in this country," added Ms. Davis.

At the average gallery, you can view approximately 40 images at one time (based on the amount of wall space available). "Our gallery, however, allows you to view more art in one visit that you could see in years of visiting galleries."

- Originals
- Sculpture
- Limited edition contemporary
- Wildlife
- Computerized search saves you time

According to Ms. Davis, "Our computerized search can narrow things down for you. We can search through our extensive library in seconds, locating the art that matches what you are looking for." Are you looking for an affordable original oil that matches your color scheme and is a certain size? Or are you looking for pictures of horses, for example? "We can scan for any criteria such as type, color, size and subject and then show you the images almost as large as life."

In addition to the art available from the major publishers in this country, The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery is part of an exclusive nationwide dealer association, and it has more than 30,000 popular items available to the shop that are sold out and are no longer available through the publisher.

Ms. Davis suggested that she can take the monitor and player anywhere needed, to anyone's home or office.

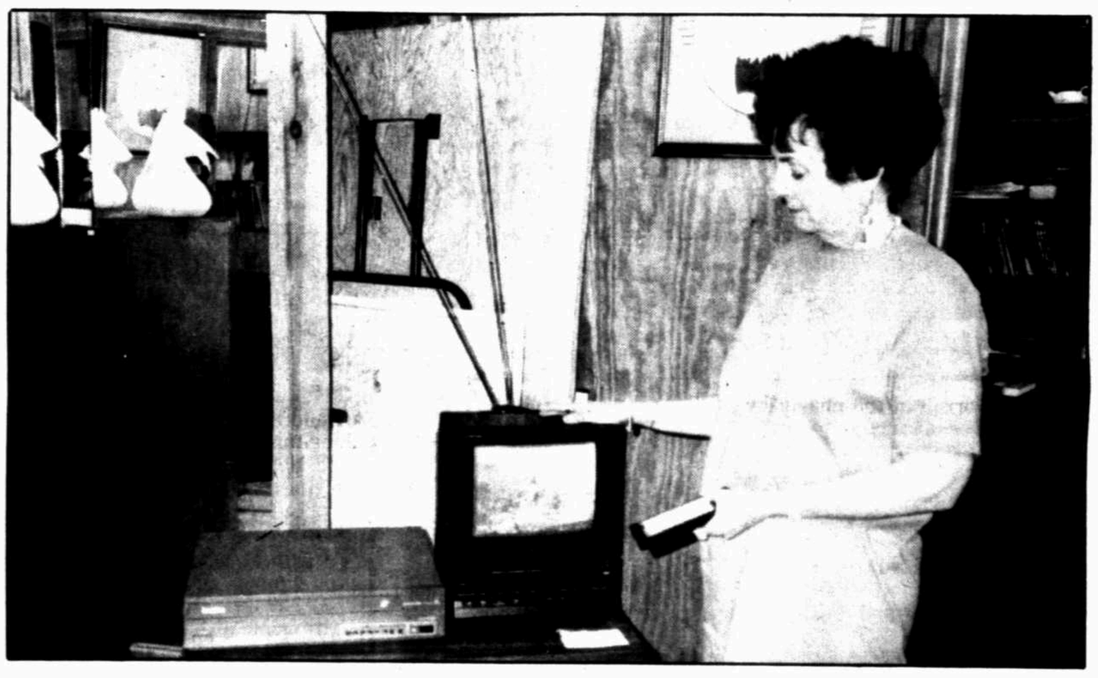

"We suggest that you call us and make an appointment, so that we can prepare a special presentation to address your personal taste. Also, this way we know that the equipment will be available, and that we will not be interrupted," said Ms. Davis. "If this is not possible, please stop by The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery at your convenience, and we'll show you more art than you have ever seen."

Other new developments at The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery include a new artist on display, Pierel from Austin. This very talented artist is well known for magnificent florals. A benefit show is being planned for late this year. Watch for details.

Whether it is fine art, quality Native American art and jewelry, children's art and more, Midlanders have counted on The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery for years. For Father's Day, the Shop is filled with unusual gifts that Dad will love.

What better time than now to buy jewelry for Dad. Choose from creative, timeless designs in money clips, key rings, belt buckles, button covers, rings, bolo ties and more. Many pieces are decorated with malachite, black and purple onyx, turquoise and coral.

The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery has an excellent reputation for carrying fine art and prints by talented and well known artists.

Dorothy Davis, Blue Gem Shop and Gallery owner, reviews some of the thousands of pieces of art available for viewing on the disk player with a high resolution screen. The Gallery is located at 321 Dodson Street.

Any art which you need framed can be expertly handled in the Blue Gem Shop and Gallery's in-house framing shop.

Beltone's Profile solves big problems for small hearing aids

Hearing aids were first made small enough to fit in the ear nearly 15 years ago by advances in microcircuitry and miniaturization. But in-the-ear wear and tear have caused problems in keeping these aids in top working order.

Ear wax, "whistling" feedback and static from unreliable volume controls are the bigget complaints heard from people who wear in-the-ear aids. The Profile, an in-the-ear hearing aid from Beltone, conquers all three of these problems.

"According to statistics from the Hearing Industries Association, more than 80 percent of the hearing instruments fitted this year were the kind that are work in-the-ear or in-the-canal," said Josh Villasenor, Beltone Hearing Aid dispenser in Midland and Big Spring.

The Beltone Profile is the first Beltone in-the-ear hearing instrument to combine an extremely low profile design with a variety of technological advances. This combination enables the new instrument to offer high performance and reliability with the style today's hearing aid wearers are seeking.

"The Beltone Profile is less noticeable than conventional in-the-ear instruments because the faceplate — the part of the hearing aid that can be seen when in the ear — is smaller with a recessed batter door and a textured, matte finish," said Villasenor. "The result is a stylish, inconspicuous instrument."

Despite its small size, it solves many big problems with hearing aid reliability. "The number one reason these types of aids are sent in for repair is earwax clogging the receiver," Villasenor added.

When Beltone introduced its Sentry Wax Guard System TM on an earlier model, it was found to dramatically reduce repairs for receiver problems due to wax build-up. "We haven't had any problems with wax-clogged receivers since Beltone introduced the Sentry. Now Beltone has a new improved Sentry Wax guard which essentially ends wax problems. We standard order the Sentry for anyone interested in in-the-ear hearing aids."

A second problem for in-the-ear hearing aid wearers is the presence of a whistling noise, called feedback. Feedback can occur under several conditions: a poorly-fitted earmold, an ear impacted with ear wax, the receiver placed too slose to the mircrophone or, most common, internal vibration of the receiver.

At the Beltone manufacturing facility in Chicago, ear impressions are examined and sculpted by Beltone employees trained in ear anatomy and mold amking to ensure a perfect fit.

And Beltone hearing aids are designed to minimize feedback: the location of the internal electrical components is specified by the research department, and Beltone's patented Cushion-Lock receiver mountung system keeps the receiver firmly mountes in place for greater stability and performance. These Beltone innovations have virtually eliminated whistling due to feedback.

Finally, annoying static from unreliable volume controls has been eliminated in the Profile by Beltone's all-in one volume control connector system. Heat and glue often break down a connection: In the Beltone Profile, the volume control is integrated into the faceplate of the hearing aid, eliminating the need for heat and glue, and resullts in a more reliable, durable hearing instrument.

The Beltone Profile also solves a big problem for people who wear hearing aids in noisy environments. "Background noise has been a problem for some hearing aid users," explained Villasenor. "The Profile can be customized with ANF, Beltone's Automatic Noise Filter TM. ANF listens to the whole picture, processes what it hears and then automatically reduces background noise so you can better hear in noisy situations." ANF is an option available on the Beltone Profile.

Josh Villasenor, right, Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist and A.C.A. Audioprostholgist, fits a Profile hearing aid by Beltone.

The Beltone Profile is available now from the Midland (2002 W. Wall), the Big Spring (106 W. Marcy) and the Odessa (817 E. Seventh) Beltone Hearing Aid Centers. To schedule a FREE electronic hearing evaluation, please call Midland (682-2180), Big Spring (263-6181) or Odessa (332-0519). Clip and bring this ad with you to receive $50.00 off on the retail price of a Beltone Profile (not good with any other special offer.)

Graham's Pharmacy known for longtime, professional service

Graham's Pharmacy, a Dodson Street merchant located in "Old Town Midland," has been in business at 319 Dodson since 1977. The drug store was first known as Price Crawley Rexall Drug and was owned by Price and Gladys Crowley more than 40 years ago.

A young pharmacist, Wes Graham, was hired and has worked faithfully for more than 30 years at this same location. He is known for his friendly and professional service.

Wes Graham purchased the pharmacy and drug store from Price and Gladys Crowley upon their retirement in 1977. Wes and his wife, Doris, ran the pharmacy until 1979, when partners Paul and Ellen Keele agreed to join them. They left Big Spring, where they had lived about 40 years and Paul had worked faithfully in several pharmacies, including Professional Pharmacy.

Working congenially together, the Grahams and the Keeles strove to create a "family drug-store," where not only medical but personal and gift needs can be met. Refreshments are also available at the old-fashioned soda fountain, where ice cream sodas, "400's" and milk shakes are specialties. Waiting on you with a smile will be longtime employees Linda Edwards and Pat Shannon.

A select line of gift items was created by Ellen and Doris through hard work, long hours, frequent trips to gift markets and "tender loving care." Traditionally, fine gifts are available for all occasions and holidays. Father's Day gifts are now being featured, such as Tom Landry autobiographies, aquarium picture frames, Preferred Stock, Stetson and Santa Fe colognes and aftershaves, "Father of the Year" neck pillows, Auto Notes, acrylic desk clocks, shoe mitts, executive dart sets, alma mater coasters, Pangburn's Candies, and leather gift items.

Upon Paul's retirement in 1990, his son, Kevin Keele, acquired his share of the partnership and has added his experience and expertise to the quality care in the pharmacy. With the addition of a highly-qualified part-time pharmacist, Debra Euston, three pharmacy technicians, Sharon Wilcox, Cheryl Reddig and Melissa Gilbreath and bookkeeper Joyce Boatwright, the pharmacy combines fast, quality service with friendliness and professional drug counseling. Also available is city-wide delivery for prescriptions, and most third party insurance cards are honored, as well as Visa, Mastercard, American Express and Discovery credit cards.

A full-line drugstore, Graham's Pharmacy handles an excellent selection of vitamins and dietary products, pill dispensers, first aid supplies, allergy and cold medications, heating pads, incontinent aids, support hose, plus seasonal needs such as summer sun screens and vacation needs.

No local drugstore can boast a finer selection of gift items either for those close to you or a casual friend. Waiting to serve you are long-time employees Phyllis Glass and Nell Moore, who will be glad to gift wrap any item $5.00 or over, without charge and while you wait.

Open Monday through Friday 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. and 9:00 to 5:00 Saturdays, our staff will be waiting to service you with your drugstore needs. Drop by soon and decide if you want to make Graham's your family drug store. Please call 684-0569 for more information.

Select Cruise & Excursions pampers first time cruisers

"The world is just a cruise away" when you make a phone call to Select Cruise and Excursions at 697-2555. If you are considering a cruise for the first time, or if you are planning a repeat cruise, please feel free to visit with one of the four friendly cruise counselors for professional advice.

Cruises vary from three and four day trips to Nassau, sailing from Florida, or three to four day fun filled cruises from Los Angeles to Ensenada, Mexico. Sail the Caribbean for seven days, Alaska for seven to 14 days, sail through the Panama Canal for 16 days or cruise around the world!

In fact, there is a cruise tailored for everyone — singles, honeymooners, children and family vacations.

Select Cruise and Excursions can locate specialty cruises, for example, sports fans, country-western music fans, golf, scuba, theatre, classical music and specialty Christian cruises. Cruises are perfect for family and class reunions or travel groups. A terrific benefit of booking your group with a specialty cruise is they might qualify for discounts.

Cruise ships, say the counselors at Select Cruise and Excursions, can be either on large ships or small ships or sail ships. Windjammer Barefoot Cruises, for example, encourage passengers to participate in the work along with the crew. These cruises call for very casual dress — perfect if you really want to get away from your routine.

Select Cruise and Excursions holds memberships in National Association of Cruise Only Agents and Cruise Line International Association. The affiliations allow the counselors to book with 36 major cruise lines. Furthermore, affiliation with Travel Authority gives Select Cruise and Excursion clients a way to book all inclusive land packages, bus tours and various three and four to seven day packages. Plan an adventure to cities in the United States, Canada, the Caribbean and Mexico. Or choose a customized plan.

It's so easy and convenient when you call Select Cruise and Excursions at 697-2555!

Call or come by Suite 178 in the San Miguel Square Atrium at the corner of Midkiff and Wadley and let one of the friendly cruise consultants personally escort you through the world of cruises with brochures and the Discovery system. The Discovery system profiles ships and adventurous ports of call.

Select Cruise and Excursions owner Clynice Baker and counselors Vicki Horne, Virginia Morrow or Patsy Odom will be happy to help you plan your cruise or vacation.

Hours are 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and evenings and Saturdays by appointment. For personal service and expertise you can count on, call Select Cruise and Excursions at 697-2555.

Laserdisc technology is expanding the range of art available to West Texas art lovers, thanks to an important investment made by The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery at 321 Dodson Street.

"Our gallery has recently acquired the latest development in the art industry," said Dorothy Davis, Blue Gem Shop and Gallery owner. "We have a laser disk player that projects the images of art on a high resolution screen. At your convenience, you can see thousands of works of art — all available — very accurately and almost life sized."

Do you have a favorite artist that you ara interested in? You may not have even seen the majority of that artist's work. Is there a particular subject or style that you are interested in but have not been able to find? "The company that provides this system for us has spent thousands of dollars and years in research to develop this product. In our gallery, you can view virtually all of the popular affordable art available in this country," added Ms. Davis.

At the average gallery, you can view approximately 40 images at one time (based on the amount of wall space available). "Our gallery, however, allows you to view more art in one visit that you could see in years of visiting galleries."

- Originals
- Sculpture
- Limited edition contemporary
- Wildlife
- Computerized search saves you time

According to Ms. Davis, "Our computerized search can narrow things down for you. We can search through our extensive library in seconds, locating the art that matches what you are looking for." Are you looking for an affordable original oil that matches your color scheme and is a certain size? Or are you looking for pictures of horses, for example? "We can scan for any criteria such as type, color, size and subject and then show you the images almost as large as life."

In addition to the art available from the major publishers in this country, The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery is part of an exclusive nationwide dealer association, and it has more than 30,000 popular items available to the shop that are sold out and are no longer available through the publisher.

Ms. Davis suggested that she can take the monitor and player anywhere needed, to anyone's home or office.

"We suggest that you call us and make an appointment, so that we can prepare a special presentation to address your personal taste. Also, this way we know that the equipment will be available, and that we will not be interrupted," said Ms. Davis. "If this is not possible, please stop by The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery at your convenience, and we'll show you more art than you have ever seen."

Other new developments at The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery include a new artist on display, Pierel from Austin. This very talented artist is well known for magnificent florals. A benefit show is being planned for late this year. Watch for details.

Whether it is fine art, quality Native American art and jewelry, children's art and more, Midlanders have counted on The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery for years. For Father's Day, the Shop is filled with unusual gifts that Dad will love.

What better time than now to buy jewelry for Dad. Choose from creative, timeless designs in money clips, key rings, belt buckles, button covers, rings, bolo ties and more. Many pieces are decorated with malachite, black and purple onyx, turquoise and coral.

The Blue Gem Shop and Gallery has an excellent reputation for carrying fine art and prints by talented and well known artists.

Dorothy Davis, Blue Gem Shop and Gallery owner, reviews some of the thousands of pieces of art available for viewing on the disk player with a high resolution screen. The Gallery is located at 321 Dodson Street.

Any art which you need framed can be expertly handled in the Blue Gem Shop and Gallery's in-house framing shop.

Free gift wrap is available for your purchases. Charge it on Mastercard, Visa, American Express and Discover. Store hours are 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Saturdays. For more information please call 683-1391.

Lifetime Siding & Window Company offers sizzling July specials

Neil Letkeman, owner of Lifetime Siding and Window Co., shows off his most recent job of soffit, fascia, siding, storm windows and a storm door on the home of Midlanders Mr. and Mrs. Roger Robinson at 4616 Ric. For a free estimate on quality siding, soffit, fascia or other home improvements, please call Lifetime Siding and Window at 689-0307.

Don't miss out on the money saving specials offered by Neil Letkeman and Lifetime Siding and Window Co. Through the end of July, take advantage of 25 percent off vinyl siding and soffit and fascia systems. Storm windows installed, up to 90 united inches, are priced at just $75.00 each. Storm doors are $180 each installed, for full view or operators (standard sizes). All prices good until July 31.

"Our superior installation methods contribute largely to the success of Lifetime Siding and Window Co.," says Lifetime owner Neil Letkeman. "Today's homeowners are looking for the highest quality products at the lowest prices."

However, in order to keep costs down, many siding companies are resorting to lower quality materials and faster installation methods such as stapling and nailing. These methods are standard in the industry. But are they the best? Lifetime Siding and Window doesn't think so!

"We start by replacing any rotten and warped boards," explained Letkeman, "and we refasten loose boards. We make sure that all the wood on the house is in good shape before we start installing our siding."

When installing siding, Lifetime Siding specialists use screws and rivets in all critical areas of installation. It does not take an engineer to figure out that screws and rivets secure siding better than staples and nails.

These installation methods, together with highest quality lifetime warrantied steel or vinyl siding, will give you a permanent solution to your painting problems. Just call Lifetime Siding and Window Co. at 689-0307 for a free, money-saving estimate.

That's what Mr. and Mrs. Roger Robinson of 4616 Ric did, and Lifetime Sidng and Window Co. installed steel siding, soffit, fascia, storm windows and a storm door. "Neil did some excellent work. We have no complaints," said Robinson. "He was prompt and did really good work for us. We took the advice of some of my co-workers and we also looked over some of Neil's work in the neighborhood."

Lifetime Siding and Window Co. did an excellent job for us," said Mrs. Johnson. "We recommend Neil and his company to anyone."

For energy efficiency, protection for your home and family, noise and dust reduction as well as overall savings, Letkeman also recommends storm and replacement windows for your home. Storm windows, which are great for insulation, can come with tinted glass. And replacement dual glass thermal break windows are solid investments for the long term.

If you've ever considered siding your home or installing new windows, this is the best time of the year to get a free, no obligation estimate. Call Lifetime Siding and Window Company at 689-0307.

"We would like to thank all of our customers for putting their trust in us and making our success possible! Thank you!" says Letkeman. Give Lifetime Siding and Window Co. a call at 689-0307 today.

NL selects Denver, Miami

■ Baseball's expansion approval is still to come, but Colorado and Florida appear to have teams in the National League in 1993.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Denver and Miami all but clinched a place in the National League when the expansion committee recommended Monday that they join the league in 1993.

The cities and owners still must be approved by the eight-man major league ownership committee and by both leagues. Approval is expected to be routine, although probably not this week.

"They obviously were the two most attractive choices," commissioner Fay Vincent said in Santa Monica, Calif., where owners are scheduled to meet Wednesday and Thursday. "That speaks for itself."

Miami will be the first major league team in Florida and Denver will be the first in the Mountain time zone. The cities beat out four other finalists: Buffalo, N.Y.; Orlando, Fla.; St. Petersburg, Fla., and Washington.

"We're obviously rejoicing," Miami mayor Xavier Suarez said. "It kind of gives a stamp of certification as a major city in the United States."

The Miami team would play in Joe Robbie Stadium, which is midway between Miami and Fort Lauderdale and recently was renovated for baseball. Denver would play in Mile High Stadium during its first two seasons and move into a planned 43,000-seat Coors Field in 1995. The additions will give the NL 14 teams, matching the American League.

"We only celebrated for about five minutes," Denver major Federico Pena said before going to a meeting on the proposed team's stadium lease. "I'd say we're rounding third base and heading for home, but we must continue to run with the same determination for the rest of the way."

The franchises cost $95 million each and will be the first new major league teams since Seattle and Toronto joined the American League in 1977. They will be the first new NL teams since Montreal and San Diego joined in 1969.

The four-man expansion committee — NL president Bill White, Pittsburgh Pirates chairman Douglas Danforth, New York Mets president Fred Wilpon and Philadelphia Phillies president Bill Giles — made its final decision at a meeting in New York on May 29.

The decision was kept secret from other owners to prevent leaks, but that caused a snag. When the expansion committee refused last week to reveal its choices to the larger ownership committee, the ownership group said it wouldn't be able to complete its review by Wednesday, the date originally set for a vote.

Over the weekend, the NL reversed course and

Buccettes mad

CLUTE, Texas (AP) — The coach of the girls sports programs at Brazoswood High School is bucking 22 years of tradition by changing the name of the girls' teams from Buccettes to Lady Bucs.

Buccettes boosters don't like it and took their beef to the school board, which passed the buck.

"This thing has caused a mild stink, but the name is going to stay the Lady Bucs," says Rod Brown, who took over as girls' athletic coach last September. He thinks Lady Bucs would give the girls' teams more dignity.

"I wanted the girls' mascot the same as the boys'," he said. "Lady Bucs has a lot of class. I didn't change it to hurt anyone or to be controversial."

"Twenty-two years of tradition is being trashed by one faculty member," complains Debra Houston, a Clute attorney and 1973 Brazoswood graduate retained by opponents of the name change.

Principal quits

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The only principal Porter High School has ever had has asked for another job, one week after the school was suspended from all academic and athletic competitions sponsored by the University Interscholastic League.

"I feel I have done my duty. I have done my time," Tony Ortiz said. "And I think now it's time for me to start looking into something else.

"I'm tired," he said. "Things are changing now and there's too much pressure."

Ortiz called the UIL suspension "rather harsh."

The UIL said it suspended the school because it had failed to report an incident in which Porter soccer players allegedly verbally and physically abused a UIL referee during a junior varsity game.

Brownsville school district officials sent a management team to the school last Friday to draw up a plan for correcting UIL deficiencies. Director Bailey Marshall hinted the league might lift the suspension if the district responded swiftly.

"I wasn't aware there was a deadline (for submitting the report)," said Ortiz. "I still haven't seen it in writing."

He said he tried to give the completed report to UIL officials in Austin last week, but said "they wouldn't see it."

The suspensions at Brownsville's largest high school include sports, academic and fine arts.

Desperation pays visit to Lakers

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Injuries to James Worthy and Byron Scott have turned the Los Angeles Lakers' bleak situation into a desperate one.

The Lakers, who trail the Chicago Bulls 3-1, a deficit no team has ever overcome in the Finals, might have to play Game 5 on Wednesday without Worthy or Scott, or both, because of injuries. Worthy aggravated the injury to the left ankle he sprained two weeks ago, and Scott has a bruised right shoulder.

"I have until Wednesday to make a decision on playing. I can't put a percentage on my chances," Worthy said on Monday. "We have to have hope, like we have all season. If we can get one win, things might turn around."

"It looks very bad with James out and myself, I don't know," Scott said. "We'd like to go into each series completely healthy and we didn't. We're beat up and we're not playing well. The Bulls are taking advantage of it."

Lakers trainer Gary Vitti said he would characterize Scott's injury as more serious "if he had to run on his arms."

But Worthy has to run on the bad ankle, an injury he said keeps him from being "mobile and spontaneous. Some of my moves bring back the pain."

Magic Johnson said the Lakers will play hard on Wednesday night, regardless of who plays, but he took a realistic viewpoint.

"When you're playing a team that's playing well and you're minus two guys, it's going to be a tough task," Johnson said. "I mean, you can be real about this."

Johnson said he could tell that Worthy was in pain even before he left Sunday's game late in the third period.

"Even if James plays, he probably shouldn't be playing," Johnson said. "He's trying, but when he sees a lane open, he can't get there. He also can't defend, and the Bulls aren't stupid, they see that and use that to their advantage."

Chicago held the Lakers to 36.6 percent shooting in Sunday's 97-82 victory, and Los Angeles is averaging just 89.3 points per game in the Finals.

Lakers coach Mike Dunleavy said the key to scoring points against the Bulls' pressure defense is "to make some outside shots to loosen them up inside. We've done a pretty good job of finding good shots, but we get out of position too often. When we spread the offense, we've been OK."

"We've been attacking them the right way, we just have to make the shots," Johnson said. "You never expect Sam Perkins to go 1-for-15. He was getting his shots."

Perkins, the hero of Game 1, said he was missing "little simple layups. They just didn't fall. They collapsed on me, which made it even harder. But the shots just didn't fall. I don't understand why."

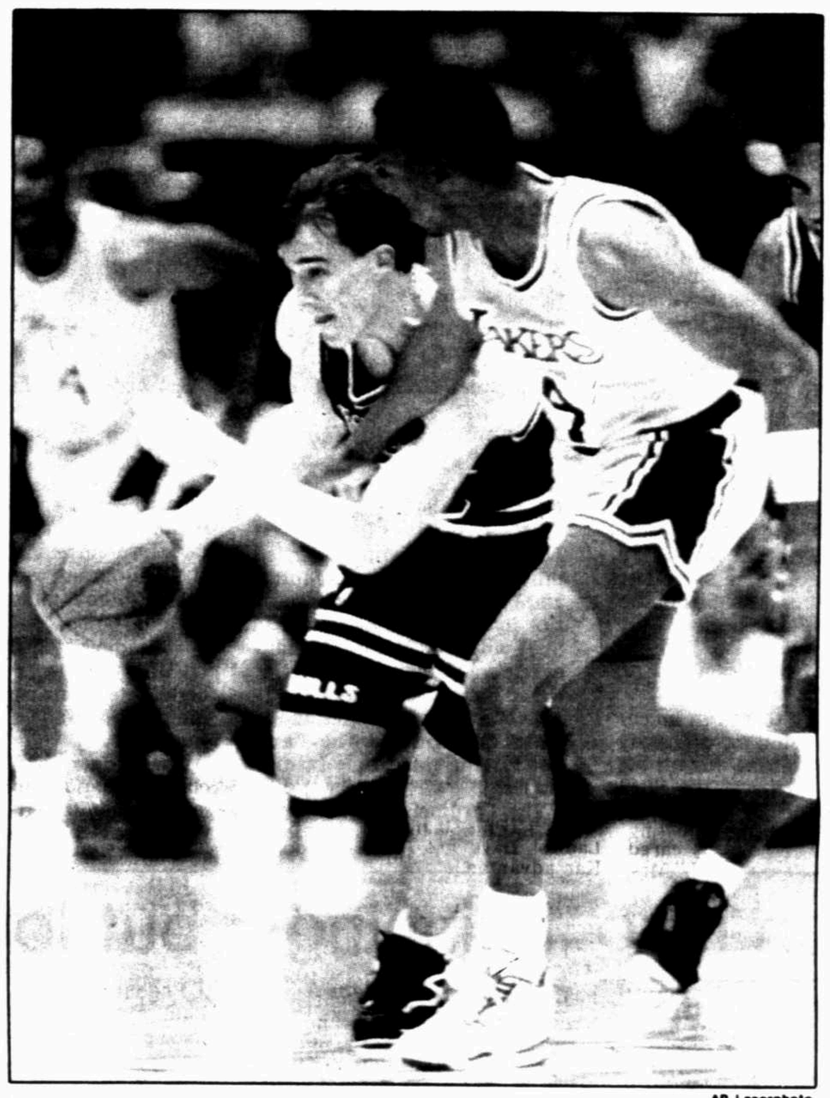

Scott has made only five of 18 shots in the series, allowing the Bulls to concentrate on the Lakers' post-up game that was effective in their only victory in the series opener.

"They have the ability to trap and then recover," Dunleavy said. "Part of that is quickness and ability, but a lot of it is heart. I've been very impressed with their defensive talent. Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen are in the top five in the league."

"They stay on Byron and then double-team from the blind side so we don't see it coming," Worthy said.

Bulls guard John Paxson, who is responsible for staying with Scott while Chicago double-teams the ball, said he knows how Scott is feeling.

"Byron killed Portland and Golden State in the playoffs with his clutch jump-shooting," Paxson said. "I'm a jump shooter and I know that if you don't get a lot of attempts, you can lose your rhythm. We've taken away their outside game. I'm not feeling full of myself about it. I've had a lot of 1-for-7 and 1-for-8 games."

Diablos roll by Midland

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Last Tuesday, El Paso designated hitter Kenny Jackson banged a foul ball off his left foot and wound up missing the entire series with Wichita because of the injury.

After playing computer baseball for the entire week, Jackson returned to the Diablos' lineup Monday night in time to hit two home runs and drive in four runs as El Paso downed Midland 7-4.

Jackson also fouled three more pitches off the same injured foot. He was sore as a result, but says there's no way he'll miss another game.

"I've been out too long," Jackson said when asked if the nagging pain would keep him out of Tuesday night's game. "All I do is sit at home and play Nintendo baseball."

Jackson's hitting combined with the two-hit pitching of reliever Steve Lienhard through 3⅓ innings gave the Diablos a 39-18 first-half mark. El Paso is 3½ games in front of second place Wichita after the Wranglers lost 8-4 to San Antonio.

Midland (25-32) is now 14 games behind the West Divisio leading Diablos.

Jackson's first smash of the evening came in the second inning. The 26-year-old right hander slapped a Dave Shotkoski (2-6) fastball over the left-centerfield wall to drive in Shon Ashley and John Byington, giving the Diablos' their first lead of the game at 3-0.

The Angels tied the game in the third, scoring three runs on an RBI double by Tim Salmon and a two-run homer by Mark Howie.

Howie's blast, his fifth of the season, was his third in the last week.

El Paso jumped ahead 4-3 in the fourth on Jackson's second home run of the game, another fastball from Shotkoski.

An error by Diablos' third baseman Byington allowed Midland's Walt McConnell to score and the Angels to tie the game again, at 4-4.

El Paso scored its final three runs of the game in the seventh on a two-run single by Dave Nillson and an RBI double by Ashley. The runs gave the Diablos their 7-4 lead and allowed eventual winner Lienhard (6-3) a little breathing room.

Lienhard, though, did get in a bit of trouble in the ninth as the Angels mounted a minor threat. Lienhard, who pitched last season with Shreveport before being released by the San Francisco Giants' organization, walked two batters before finally recording the last out.

U.S. Open favorites exhibiting flaws

■ The U.S. Open golf tournament could give a surprise winner as the top favorites aren't in top form.

Associated Press

CHASKA, Minn. (AP) — If some seasoned pros were using the Buick Classic as a tuneup for the U.S. Open, the tournament served its purpose.

The Buick Classic definitely pointed to flaws that need correcting for such U.S. Open favorites as Hale Irwin, Seve Ballesteros, Nick Faldo and Greg Norman.

"I'm not hitting the ball anywhere close to as well as I need to be," said Irwin, the defending U.S. Open champ who finished tied for third in the Buick Classic, won by Billy Andrade. "I need to get back into the practice mode. I'm trying to use Westchester as a positive experience."

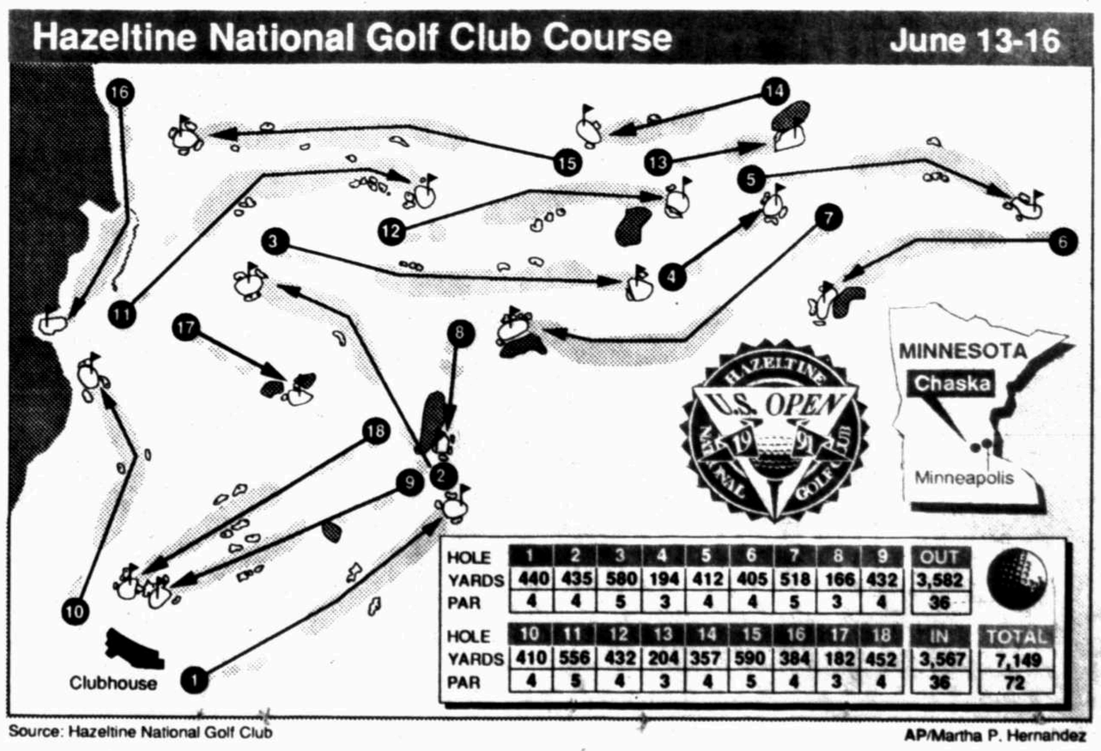

Despite some erratic play, Irwin managed his game well enough to stay in contention through 63 holes. But in the final nine holes, the shots that strayed took their toll as he finished with final-round 73.

"On a scale of 10, my execution was about a 3," Irwin said. "On a scale of 10, my management was 10."

Ballesteros, who tied for fifth on Sunday, was in a simliar situation. In four previous international starts, the Spanish star had won three and lost once in a playoff.

A three-time British Open winner and twice a Masters champion, Ballesteros was full of confidence going into

Expansion losers won't give up baseball dream

Associated Press

The four cities that were rejected by the expansion committee have not given up their dream for a major league team.

The word came on Monday that Denver and Miami have been recommended to owners for entrance into the National League in 1993. Approval from the major league ownership committee is expected when it meets Wednesday in Santa Monica, Calif., this week. However, the leagues may not vote on final approval at the meeting.

It really didn't come as much of a surprise to officials from Buffalo, N.Y.; Orlando, Fla.; St. Petersburg, Fla., and Washington. The news that baseball was coming to Denver and Miami had been leaked by various sources the last few weeks.

St. Petersburg and Buffalo have stadiums ready for baseball. Now, they're hoping to perhaps snag a franchise on the decline, such as Montreal or Houston.

Robert E. Rich Jr., the millionaire businessman who would have owned Buffalo's expansion team, is not giving up.

"I'm a free-trader and I've always felt that the market will dictate (actions)," he said. "If a team is for sale ... then so be it."

Rich said it was "pretty common knowledge that there are going to be teams for sale. And they're going to be teams that are going to have some difficulty. And they're going to be teams that are looking to either move and-or sell."

Rich also mentioned the possibility of buying into an existing franchise to gain access to the fraternity of major league owners.

A member of the board of directors of the Buffalo Sabres, Rich recalled how the owners of that team, the Knox family, followed that route as a means of getting an NHL team in Buffalo.

"The Sabres bought the (California Golden) Seals and it gave them access to the NHL forum. I would not just summarily rule us out of that process," he said.

Last week, when the reports of the expansion committee's recommendations first came out, Rich said he still wasn't sure that the rest of the league would agree on Denver and Miami.

He talked about the NL's last expansion in 1969, when San Diego and Buffalo were considered sure bets for teams before behind-the-scenes politicking ended with Buffalo losing out to Montreal at the last moment.

Washington has already lost two baseball teams — to Minnesota and Texas — and shares a market with Baltimore.

"Obviously, I am disappointed that the nation's capital was not selectged for a major league baseball team," Washington mayor Sharon Pratt Dixon said. "Everyone involved in this effort, including the thousands of fans who bought seasons tickets, worked very diligently to make baseball a reality in Washington, D.C.

"However, one strike doesn't mean we are out. In the coming months, I will work with investors and other baseball boosters to pursue teams for sale in order to bring baseball to Washington, D.C."

Orlando had a name, the SunRays, but didn't hav· a stadium. A 35,000-seat park was in the works for the 1994 season. It would cost upwards of $100 million.

"We've done everything we can do, and now we'll have to await official word," said Pat Williams, who headed up the Orlando group.

The Florida Suncoast Dome in downtown St. Petersburg has a capacity of 43,200 for baseball. At least $37 million in improvements are needed to equip for baseball with about $23 million of that coming from a financial package approved by the state legislature.

Astros shake Mets again

NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell's two-run double and Rafael Ramirez's game-winning two-run single off reliever John Franco in the eighth inning rallied the Houston Astros over the New York Mets 6-4 Monday night.

It was a disappointing end to a 13-game road trip for the Mets, who started the journey with four straight wins but finished only 7-6. New York trails first-place Pittsburgh by six games in the NL East.

Dwight Gooden, hit hard in his previous four starts, gave up two runs and seven hits in seven innings before Franco (1-5) relieved. Gooden entered the game having allowed 42 hits and 23 runs in 22⅓ innings.

Hubie Brooks hit a homer and added an RBI double in the eighth to give the Mets a 4-2 lead.

Pirates 5, Padres 3

PITTSBURGH — Jeff King hit a two-run homer in Pittsburgh's four-run first inning, and the Pirates bullpen shut down San Diego with six scoreless innings.

Relievers Bob Patterson, Vicente Palacios and Bill Landrum limited the Padres to four hits over the final six innings as the Pirates split the four game-series despite being outhit 50-25.

Expos 7, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Dennis Martinez gave up one run in seven innings and Dave Martinez hit a homer for Montreal.

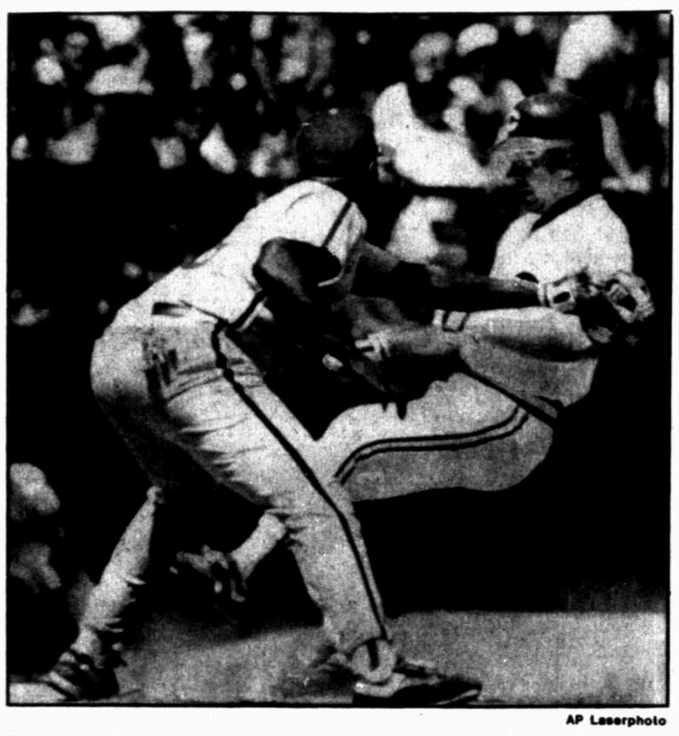

Ron Gant led off the game for Atlanta and hit his 11th homer on the first pitch from Dennis Martinez (8-4). The right-hander then settled down and allowed only six hits.

Reds 9, Phillies 3

CINCINNATI — Jose Rijo pitched a four-hitter for Cincinnati's second complete game this season and Paul O'Neill drove in four runs.

Rijo (5-2) struck out five, walked two and allowed just one earned run. It was Rijo's first complete game since last Sept. 26 against Atlanta and the first for the Reds since Jack Armstrong pitched a four-hitter against San Francisco on May 23.

O'Neill hit a three-run homer in the third inning off Andy Ashby, who was making his big league debut. It was the third home run for O'Neill on the seven-game homestand.

AP Laserphoto

Cincinnati's Chris Sabo escapes a tag by Philadelphia's Charlie Hayes on a play at third base.

Cardinals 3, Giants 2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Milt Thompson's two-run triple tied the score in the seventh inning, and Pedro Guerrero hit a sacrifice fly for the game-winner in St. Louis' 3-2 victory Monday over San Francisco.

The Cardinals salvaged the finale of a 13-game homestand in which they were 5-8. The Giants lost for the third time in nine games.

The Cardinals' major league record-tying streak of 15 consecutive errorless games came to an end in the first when Lankford missed McGee's pop fly. Cincinnati also went 15 games without an error in 1975.

Dodgers 13, Cubs 5

CHICAGO — Lenny Harris highlighted a six-run fourth inning with a grand slam for Los Angeles.

The Dodgers had 16 hits, including Juan Samuel's first-inning homer to extend his hitting streak to 11 games.

Gwynn on record pace

By Jim Donaghy
AP Baseball Writer

It's that time in the season when the Top 10 starts to mean something.

Tony Gwynn, for example, leads the National League with a .373 batting average and has 85 hits in San Diego's first 57 games — a pace that gives him a shot at the major-league record for hits in a season.

Gwynn is no pretender, either. His career average of .329 ranks 12th in NL history, .0002 ahead of Honus Wagner and two points behind Stan Musial. Gwynn already has four batting titles in eight seasons.

Now the interesting part. Gwynn is on a pace for 241 hits this season. It's not a clip that would break George Sisler's record of 257 hits set in 1920, but it's in the ballpark.

In the last 50 years, only five major leaguers, including Wade Boggs with 240 in 1985, have had more than 230 hits in a season.

"I'm not thinking of numbers like that," Gwynn said. "I was disappointed in the way things went last season and it was important for me and the team to get off to a good start."

Gwynn hit a career-low .309 in 1990, and missed the last 19 games of the season with a fractured right index finger. There was also a rift with some teammates who thought he was selfish, most notably the now departed Jack Clark.

"I'm the same person now as I was last year and the year before," Gwynn said. "I can't worry about what others think or say."

Gwynn entered Monday night's game at Pittsburgh with a 15-game hitting streak, going 25-for-57 (.439) in that span. He also leads the league with eight triples and is among the leaders with 14 doubles.

When Sisler set his record for the St. Louis Browns, he had a .407 batting average. He had a pretty good month of June, too, with 61 hits in 29 games.

Sisler finished with a career average of .340 and it could have been even higher. He hit .420 in 1922 but missed the next season following surgery for sinus blockages that affected his eyesight. After the surgery, Sisler was never the same hitter.

Since 1901, the highest average belongs to Rogers Hornsby with a .424 mark in 1924 when he had 227 hits.

Braves getting Justice

ATLANTA (AP) — David Justice of the Atlanta Braves has a strange way of concentrating when he's hitting.

He steps out of the batter's box and talks to himself.

"I can't just think it," he says. "I've got to tell myself. If I'm not talking to myself, I'm not into the at bat."

Whatever last year's National League Rookie of the Year has been telling himself lately, it works.

He went into Monday night's finale of a four-game series against the Montreal Expos riding a 17-game stretch in which he's hitting .394. He's had seven home runs and 20 RBIs during that run and has hit safely in 11 of the last 13 games.

He ranked in 10 of 16 NL offensive categories through Sunday's action, leading in three — RBIs with 47, slugging percentage at .563 and extra base hits with 26, including 10 home runs.

"If I'm concentrating, then I'll swing at the good pitch," Justice said. "My approach is just so simple. I just look for the ball over the plate and try to hit it hard."

Justice saw plenty of fastballs during a rookie season in which he hit .276 with 28 homers and 78 RBIs.

"Last year when I'd get in a situation to get a fastball, I'd get a fastball," he said.

He's not seeing as many this year. Pitchers are testing him with breaking balls and offspeed pitches.

"They pitch to him differently," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "Dave's adjusted well. All hitters make adjustments. He's doing great. He's on track for a great season."

Justice got a compliment from Larry Walker of the Expos on Sunday after the Atlanta outfielder had two homers and a single in an 8-6 victory.

"Justice is a one-man wrecking crew," Walker said. "He has what I call a Will Clark swing. It's perfect.

"He's going to make a lot of money before he's through with this game. I played against him in Double-A ball, and you always knew he was one of those guys that would make it to the big leagues."

Rangers stretch it to 13 innings, but lose

Associated Press

AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Rangers' right fielder Ruben Sierra's error with two outs in the 13th inning Monday night led to two unearned runs and gave the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory, their fifth win in a row.

The loss was the Rangers' eighth straight and 10th in their last 11 games after winning a club-record 14 in a row in May.

Lance Johnson led off the 13th with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice. One out later, reliever Gerald Alexander (3-1), the fourth Texas pitcher, intentionally walked Tim Raines. Joey Cora then lifted a fly ball to Sierra, who was backpedaling to the warning track. The ball kicked off Sierra's glove as both runners scored.

Melido Perez (3-4) pitched 3⅓ innings for the win, allowing one hit. Bobby Thigpen pitched the 13th for his 12th save, allowing a sacrifice fly by Brian Downing to make it 3-2.

With two outs in the 13th, Garry Pettis hit a sharp shot to first baseman Dan Pasqua, who fumbled the ball for an error with the ball going into foul territory. Second baseman Cora retrieved it and fired to the plate, where catcher Matt Merullo easily tagged out Mario Diaz trying to score from third to end the game.

The White Sox had threatened in the 12th. Robin Ventura led off with a double. Frank Thomas was intentionally walked by John Barfield, then pinch runner Cora was picked off second base by catcher Geno Petralli. Cora could have scored one out later on Merullo's single.

Twins 8, Indians 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Pagliarulo atoned for a costly error with a three-run double that lifted Minnesota to its ninth straight victory.

The winning streak is the Twins' longest since 1985, when they won 10 straight. Minnesota has won 12 of its last 13 games and is 30-16 since starting the season 2-9. The victory also completed a four-game sweep of the Indians, who have lost five straight.

The third baseman, whose errant throw allowed a run to score as the Indians built a 4-1 lead in the second inning, lined Eric King's pitch high off the fence in right-center field in the fifth for a 6-4 lead.

Pagliarulo's hit gave reliever Paul Abbott (1-0) his first major league victory.

Red Sox 6, Mariners 2

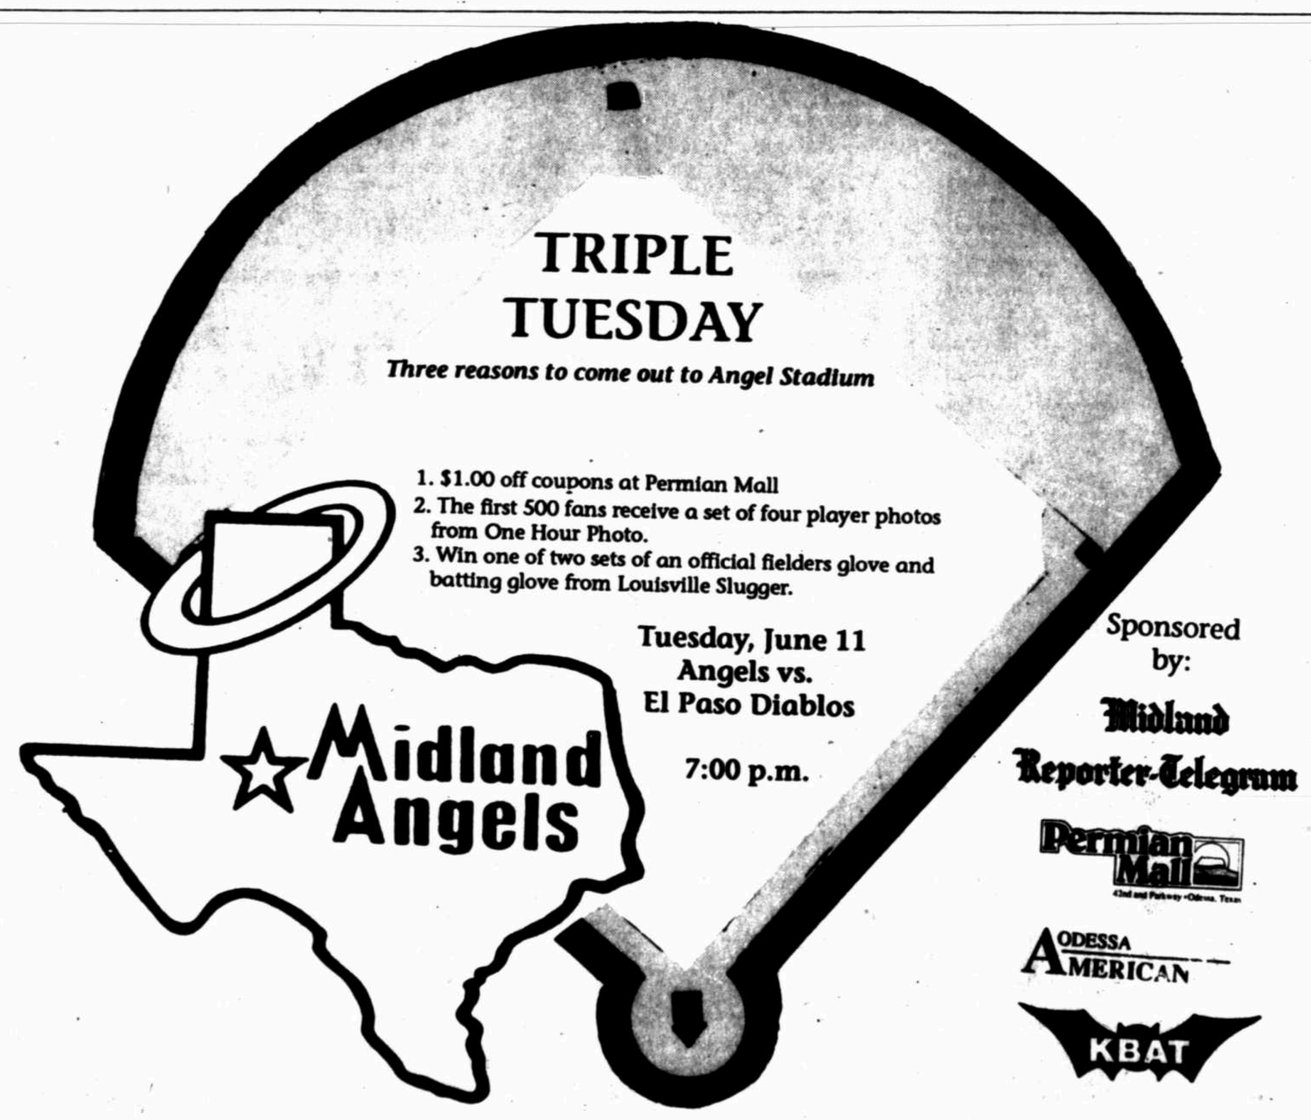

SEATTLE — Carlos Quintana, Ellis Burks and Jack Clark awoke from batting slumbers, combining to hit four home runs.

Quintana hit two home runs for the first time in his career and had four RBIs.

The loss ended a three-game Mariners' winning streak.

Mike Gardiner (2-1), acquired by Boston in a trade with the Mariners on April 1, pitched 6 2-3 innings, giving up one run on six hits. He struck out seven and walked two. Tony Fossas and Jeff Gray finished.

Denver Expansion

DENVER (AP) — A brief look at Denver's bid for a National League expansion franchise:

POPULATION: The city of Denver has a population of 500,000 and the metropolitan area has a population of 1.8 million.

STADIUM: The team would play in 75,000-seat Mile High Stadium for first two years. Voters have approved construction of a 43,000-seat, baseball-only stadium (Coors Field) in downtown Denver for occupancy in 1995 if Denver is awarded a franchise. Both would be open-air stadiums with grass fields.

OWNERSHIP: John A. Antonucci, 37, managing general partner, is chief operating officer of Superior Beverage, a large beer and wine distributor in Ohio. Michael "Mickey" Monus, 43, managing general partner, is founder and president of Phar-Mor Inc., a Youngstown-based discount drugstore chain. They are long-time business associates, and they have a combined net worth believed to be about $125 million. Steve Ehrhart, 44, managing general partner, is an attorney, a third-generation Coloradan now living in Memphis. Ehrhart, a former sports agent, was the first executive director of the USFL, and he now is commissioner of the World Basketball League. Antonucci and Ehrhart both would move to Colorado if Denver's bid succeeds, and Antonucci would serve as chairman and chief executive officer of the team. The largest investor in the Colorado Baseball Partnership is the Adolph Coors Co., with a financial commitment in excess of $30 million. Other general partners are John R. Antonucci, Nathan Monus and Cary Teraji.

ESTIMATED OWNERSHIP WORTH: Total financing capability of $140 million.

TEAM NAME: Undecided, although frontrunners are believed to be Colorado Rockies or Denver Bears.

TEAM COLORS: Purple as primary color, secondary colors to be decided.

DENVER'S BASEBALL HISTORY: A long tradition of minor league baseball, dating to 1886. Teams named the Bears and Grizzlies played in the Class A Western League until 1955, when the Bears joined the Class AAA American Association. Team competed in the Pacific Coast League from 1963-68 before returning to the American Association, where it still resides. Team name was changed to Zephyrs in 1965.

Miami Expansion

POPULATION: 4.5 million in the Miami-Fort Lauderdale-West Palm Beach area.

STADIUM: Joe Robbie Stadium, home of the NFL Miami Dolphins. More than $10 million was spent to make multi-purpose facility suitable for baseball. There are 46,000 prime seats for baseball, but an exhibition game drew a sellout crowd of 67,654 this year.

OWNERSHIP: H. Wayne Huizenga, chairman of the board of Blockbuster Entertainment Corp.

ESTIMATED OWNERSHIP WORTH: One-half billion dollars. A drop in Blockbuster stock recently cost Huizenga $115 million on paper, but the price rebounded later to enable him to regain $40 million in stock value.

TEAM NAME: Not determined.

TEAM COLORS: Not determined.

MIAMI'S BASEBALL HISTORY: Effort to get a team gained momentum when Huizenga entered the picture. Minor league teams have not enjoyed much success in Miami, but large television market and sizeable Latin population make it an attractive city for the National League.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JUNE 11, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Highly motivated and unafraid of hard work, you are destined to find both satisfaction and prominence in your chosen field. A supervisory position will bring increased income and prestige next month. Your natural reserve is seen as a challenge by those who want to know you better in the fall. A new romance could prove very fulfilling at Christmas.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: explorer Jacques Cousteau, actors Gene Wilder and Chad Everett, composer Richard Strauss.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Things will change rapidly today. A flood of news leads you in a beneficial new direction. A profitable financial arrangement or success-bound project is featured. Evaluate your goals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be careful of plunging headlong into a tough decision or task; it may be a leap in the dark. Go slowly and consider the impact of your actions. Use your common sense.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be wearing a special smile lately and looking for an imaginative way to celebrate a recent triumph. Invite a few close friends over. Family affairs take on new importance this week.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The work atmosphere will be harmonious if you refrain from vehemence. The mail brings excellent news. Emphasize your leadership abilities if seeking a promotion or raise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The emphasis today is on transportation and communication. You may attend a social event with reluctance, only to find that you have a wonderful time. Resist an urge to play games in romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your ideas are looked on with new favor. Be on the lookout for any special professional opportunities. Your associates are enthusiastic about what you are trying to accomplish.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Delays and red tape are always frustrating. Attention to detail is essential. Carefully proofread everything you sign or write. Give a family relationship more nurturing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Detours are possible today. Call on your strong will to pull you through a professional or personal crisis. A new outlet for your creative talents makes you feel better about things.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An important long-term commitment may be at hand. Look a proposal over carefully — it could be the steppingstone to a brighter love life or key business partnership. Dress to impress.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A focus on mental pursuits will lead to new professional success. You have excellent social opportunities and may soon meet someone who fulfills many of your desires. Do not neglect elderly relatives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You and your friends need to hash out your differing views. Refuse to argue over decisions related to household changes or possessions. Play the role of family peacemaker.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Refuse to be upset by someone's poor taste. Increased activity at home is leading to something good. Do not forget to include siblings in your social plan.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have lots of energy and thrive on change. Staying in one place a long time makes them restless. The truth is, they have a low threshold for boredom! Providing these youngsters with mental challenges and daily exercise will minimize this potential problem. These Geminis' generosity, especially to the unfortunate, is legend. They always root for the underdog and will go all-out to help the needy. A career in public service will bring the greatest personal satisfaction.

Opening lead: Four of ♠

The secret of winning at rubber bridge is to make sure of your contract, even at the cost of an overtrick or two. That is a luxury not available in a duplicate contest, and declarers must learn how small investments can pay huge returns.

Since a reverse bid in the modern style is a one-round force, North elected to temporize with two diamonds rather than suggest a one-suited hand by jumping to three clubs. When South rebid hearts, North was able to make an invitational raise while at the same time pinpointing spade shortage. South did not have enough to be interested in any more than game.

At duplicate bridge the hand would soon have been over. Declarer would win the opening lead in hand, ruff a spade, draw trumps and then go after clubs. As the cards lie, South would have to surrender a club trick to East, whereupon the defenders would take a spade trick and two diamonds for a one-trick set.

A careful declarer at rubber bridge would make his contract. The first step would be to allow East's king of spades to win the first trick. That renders the defense helpless. Suppose East returns a trump.

Declarer forgets about spade ruffs. Instead, South draws three rounds of trumps, ending in hand and then leads a low club, finessing the jack when West follows suit. East wins the queen, but the king of diamonds is safe from attack. The best the defenders can do is take their diamond trick while they have the chance. Otherwise, declarer can win any return and run the club suit for all the discards needed. True, declarer must be willing to give up the chance for an overtrick or two, but 60 points is a small premium to pay to insure the game bonus.

Kurt Russell, Goldie Hawn 'disinterested' in marriage

LOS ANGELES — Kurt Russell says he and Goldie Hawn are perfectly happy as an unmarried couple, but would consider a formal commitment if their young son wants them to be married.

"He doesn't understand the concept of our not being married," Russell said of 4-year-old Wyatt. Russell and Miss Hawn lived together for years with two children from previous marriages before Wyatt was born.

"If Wyatt were to have some sort of problem with it, that would be a reason for us to go down to the courthouse and say, 'Marry us,'" Russell told Entertainment Weekly in an article published this week.

Russell said the couple is "disinterested" in marriage, although he calls Miss Hawn "one of the most unique women in the world."

The admiration is mutual.

"I just love Kurt so much. The guy doesn't have an ounce of (garbage) in him. And he's just about the best father God ever created," Miss Hawn said.

GREENVILLE, S.C. — David Letterman claims he can pitch a shutout inning for a professional baseball team. Joke or not, the Greenville Braves want to give him the chance.

Earlier this year, Letterman challenged any major league team to let him prove he could pitch. The Braves, a minor league club, have offered Letterman a uniform, a field and a game for him to prove his boast, although they're still waiting for their parent club, the Atlanta Braves, to approve.

General Manager Steve DeSalvo said the team mailed a proposal to Letterman's office in March. It even enclosed a Letterman-style top 10 list to entice him, including No. 1, "Nobody comes out to see that damn bird anymore, anyhow."

Letterman hasn't decided how to respond to the offer, said Rosemary Keenan, a spokeswoman for his show.

NEWPORT, N.H. — Author Michael Dorris, who won literary and medical acclaim for his novel "The Broken Cord," about how Fetal Alcohol Syndrome affected his adopted Indian son, says young writers need to be persistent.

"Get experience, keep a notebook, and don't take rejection notices too seriously," he said.

Dorris, 45, was honored Saturday with the Sarah Josepha Hale award, given to a New England writer for an entire body of work. It was named after the writer and women's rights activist who persuaded President Lincoln to proclaim a national Thanksgiving Day in 1863. The award, first given to Robert Frost, is presented by the Baker Free Library in Newport, Hale's hometown.

Bruce Springsteen, married singer Patti Scialfa in a weekend ceremony at their California home. The couple have a son, born last July.

Dorris, who lives in the town of Cornish, was raised on an Indian reservation. He collaborated with his wife, Louise Erdrich, this year to write "The Crown of Columbus," a novel commissioned to mark Columbus' discovery of the New World by describing it from the Indians' perspective.

At the awards dinner, Dorris encouraged aspiring writers to keep trying.

"It takes years and luck. Louise and I were both out there in the slush pile for a long time," he said.

BRINKLEY, Ark. — He's stepped away from politics, and former Rep. Tommy Robinson says he's working harder than ever. He has callouses to prove it.

Robinson, 49, now farms 7,000 acres in Monroe County, a task he says requires more dedication than any he's ever taken on.

"I've never committed myself to anything like this farming operation," he said. "I am very happy. I'm having a good time and I'm working harder than I've ever worked, but it's not going to hurt me."

And he doesn't mind a few callouses.

"It's worth it to me because I know in 25 years when this farm is completely paid for, my kids and grandkids are going to have some equity in something," he said.

Robinson has planted 500 acres of rice and has plans for 5,800 acres of soybeans. He harvested the last of 640 acres of wheat last week and said his 300 acres of milo was thriving.

Robinson served six years in Congress before making an unsuccessful run for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 1990.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted lower in slow trading Monday, still restrained by worries over rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 50.76 points last week, slipped 1.34 to 2,975.40.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 7 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 654 up, 920 down and 479 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 127.42 million shares, down from 168.05 million Friday and the lightest total since a 109.51 million-share day three weeks back, on May 20.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 158.93 million shares.

The signs of a budding economic recovery that helped inspire the market's gains through the winter and spring have continued to accumulate.

But analysts noted increasing concern over rising long-term interest rates, which have been prompted by expectations of increased loan demand and possible new inflationary pressures.

Some traders evidently are worried that higher rates will slow or even reverse the recovery in economic activity.

Prices and interest rates were little changed Monday in the credit markets, where activity was limited by a ticker-tape parade through the financial district in honor of American forces in the Gulf War.

Prices retreat

Crude prices continue to retreat as traders remain concerned about slumping demand and rising supplies.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate for July delivery dropped 44 cents to close at $19.84.

The move prompted local crude purchasers such as Permian Corp. and Texaco Trading and Transportation to lower their posted price 50 cents to $18.50.

T-bills rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction to the highest level since April.

The Treasury Department sold $10 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.60 percent, up from 5.59 percent last week. An additional $10.1 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.78 percent, up from 5.71 percent last week.

The three-month bill rate was the highest since the 5.60 percent of April 29. The six-month bill rate was the highest since the 5.79 percent of April 22.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar slipped against major foreign currencies on Monday but rose against the Japanese yen as traders expressed uncertainty over the future of Japan's economy. Gold prices rose.

At least 10 European central banks and the Bank of Japan sold dollars in European trading in an attempt to control the dollar's rise, traders said.

The dollar continues to show strength as signs emerge that the U.S. recession has bottomed and the economy is resuming growth, currency analysts said.

Selling accelerated further after the dollar surpassed 141.50 yen level, leading the dollar go as high as 142.00 yen. The dollar closed at 141.55 yen in New York trading, up from 140.35 yen on Friday.

The British pound fell to $1.6685 from $1.6710 late Friday in London.

Other late rates for the dollar in New York, compared with late Friday's prices, included: 1.76785 German marks, down from 1.7720; 1.5105 Swiss francs, down from 1.5190; 5.9875 French francs, down from 5.9985; 1,312.00 Italian lire, down from 1,312.75; and 1.14705 Canadian dollars, down from 1.14775.

Gold rose in London to a late bid of $372.75 a troy ounce from $366.60 late Friday.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold rose $7.40 to close at $373.70 per troy ounce.

Silver bullion was unchanged in London at a late bid of $4.52 a troy ounce.

Low gasoline prices don't hit pump

■ Those in the industry refuse to predict which way prices will go, say prices are set by supply and demand on local basis.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — What do you get when you mix falling wholesale gasoline prices with a recession that has dampened demand? If you answered lower prices at the pump, you may be wrong.

In one of those curiosities that seems peculiar to the oil business, motorists seem to be paying more and more for gasoline each week, even though some dealers are paying less.

Some wholesale gasoline prices have gone down by as much as 10 cents a gallon since March. At the New York Mercantile Exchange on Monday, unleaded gasoline for next-month delivery settled at 63.50 cents a gallon, the lowest since the day after the ground war with Iraq began in February.

But the average retail price for all grades of gasoline has risen 8.76 cents a gallon since early March, according to the latest Lundberg Survey released over the weekend.

Meanwhile, the American Automobile Association has reported higher prices at the pump for 12 of the past 13 weeks.

Critics say the major oil companies are once again exploiting consumers because summer driving season is here.

"There's been a substantial decline in the wholesale price, but we have yet to see it at the pump," said Edwin S. Rothschild, energy policy director at Citizen Action, a consumers group in Washington. "Once again, the companies are taking advantage of the situation. We likely will even see continued increases when we should be seeing decreases."

But a company that tracks fuel prices for the AAA predicts prices will soon stop rising and perhaps even inch lower.

"Over the last month, the wholesale price of unleaded gasoline nationally has fallen a little over 5 cents a gallon," said Mike Doyle, editor at Computer Petroleum Corp. of St. Paul, Minn.

"At the same time, the spot market price of gasoline is down about 9 cents. Futures prices in the past month are down about 7 cents a gallon. Basically what that's telling me is the retail is going to stop going up and start going down."

Doyle said the average price for a gallon of self-serve regular unleaded is about 8.6 cents higher than last year, although most of that — about 5 cents — came from higher federal taxes imposed in December.

Those in the industry refuse to predict which way prices will go, but they say prices are set by supply and demand on a local basis.

The American Petroleum Institute, the industry's leading trade group, recently said gasoline prices typically rise in the summer because of higher demand, which prompts companies to make a larger proportion of gasoline from each barrel of crude oil that is refined, at a higher refining cost.

The API said the higher taxes and a higher per-barrel cost of crude oil have also helped push prices higher going into the summer.

Even though pump prices for gasoline are up, the big players in the oil industry have expressed concern about the sluggish demand.

GAO: Matching documents could cut tax gap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service could collect an additional $1 billion a year in taxes from corporations by using a program that has been successful in deterring cheating by individuals, government auditors said Monday.

That could be done at an annual cost of $70 million, Richard L. Fogel of the General Accounting Office, told a House Government Operations subcommittee.

"Growing budget deficits, increasing corporate noncompliance and declining audit coverage all point to the need for a corporate document-matching program similar to the one that has so effectively promoted voluntary compliance and full income reporting for the vast majority of wage earners," Fogel said.

For several years, one of the most successful tools in the IRS arsenal has been document-matching — using a computer to ensure that income, which is reported to the IRS by employers, banks and securities dealers, is listed on individual tax returns. That program produces about $1.7 billion a year in taxes.

The IRS has insisted over the years that a similar document-matching plan for corporations is not practical. Testifying before the subcommittee on consumer affairs, IRS Commissioner Fred T. Goldberg Jr. said, "We are not yet at the point where we can make a recommendation that a full-scale business information returns program is necessary or needed."

Goldberg said that corporations with assets under $10 million already report about 94 percent of income; the largest companies report more than 99 percent. This is a considerably better record than individuals have in reporting non-wage income, such as interest and capital gains.

The IRS estimates that failure to report corporate income accounts for only about $500 million of the $100-billion-a-year gap between the income taxes that individuals and businesses owe and what they pay voluntarily.

"Since a corporate matching program would eliminate only a fraction of this compliance gap, these estimates do not translate directly into dollars in the bank," Goldberg said.

He said the IRS also is concerned with costs and paperwork burdens that a matching program would impose on businesses.

Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., chairman of the subcommittee, cited a report from the IRS earlier this year that noncompliance by smaller corporations has worsened to the point that they now pay only 61 percent of the income taxes they owe.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Treasury securities still safe investment

By Bill Doyle

Q. In the past, U.S. Treasury bonds, notes and bills have been considered the safest of investments. Lately, when I read about these "Treasuries," there has been a change in terminology. Now, they are being described as "government debt."

This makes we wonder if I make bad investments when I buy Treasury securities. Am I being told something?

Doyle

A. Yes, but there's no reason to be surprised. It's something you should have known all along. Bonds, notes and bills are debt securities. When our federal government is short on cash, it borrows money by selling U.S. Treasury securities.

The government pledges to pay interest on the Treasury bonds, notes and bills it sells and to redeem those securities at face value when they reach their maturity dates.

That's basic — and something you should have learned before making your first purchase. Fortunately, no harm has been done. Treasuries remain the world's top-rated security. The U.S. government has always met its debt obligations and always will. That's an absolutely certain statement, despite what some far-out doomsayers claim.

As far as Treasury security safety is concerned, it's rock-solid when the bonds, notes and bills are held to maturity. If you sell yours before they mature, you might get more or less than your purchase price.

Q. A book about tax shelters states, "If you hold Treasury bonds longer than a year, they are taxed as long-term capital gains." All U.S. Treasury bonds and notes normally are held for more than a year. If Treasury bonds are owned for longer than one year, how do you report that interest as a capital gain — on Schedule D of the Form 1040, Federal Income Tax Return?

A. You don't, no matter how long you own Treasury securities. You are required to report all the interest on Schedule B, along with all other taxable interest during the year for which the return is being filed.

Either you took that quote from the book out of context or the author's elevator doesn't go all the way to the top.

Assuming the former is the case, the book probably explains that profit or loss from the sale of Treasuries — as well as any other securities — held for more than a year is reported as a capital gain or capital loss. But that's not interest.

Although the vast majority of ordinary investors do hold Treasury bonds and notes for longer than a year — usually until maturity — some investors and traders sell their Treasuries in rather short order. There is a very active market for Treasury securities, in which tens of billions of dollars worth are traded every business day.

Q. How can I open a "Treasury Direct" account to buy U.S. Treasury bills?

A. You do that through the Federal Reserve Bank or branch serving your area of the country. There are 12 such banks and 25 branches. Your local bank, savings and loan association or credit union can give you the right address.

Every federal bank has literature explaining Treasury Direct. Study up, before you purchase any Treasury bills, notes or bonds, all of which are available through Treasury Direct.

It boils down to the following. You buy a bill, note or bond by submitting a "tender" application and your check. After that, all your dealings are by mail. You get a statement every time there is a change in your account. Interest payments and redemption values go by wire to your bank account. You save the commissions and/or service charges brokerage firms and banks levy.

AT WIT'S END

Moving experience is the one to avoid

By Erma Bombeck

Between now and Labor Day, 20 million Americans will engage in a game of musical homes. The way it works is that a family will pack all its belongings in cardboard boxes and put them in a van, shut off all the utilities, and drag the kids kicking and screaming into a car and set off for a new neighborhood. Next summer, another 20 million will do the same thing.

Bombeck

Possibly one of the greatest works of fiction I have ever read was the brochure given to me by a moving company before our last move. It showed a mother sitting on a carton drinking coffee and smiling. Her husband was resting beside a dolly supporting a refrigerator, and their 2.5 children were wheeling bicycles up to a waiting van. It made you want to cry.

Our moves never even came close to the "positive experience" the brochure promised. To save a few bucks, I packed everything myself (including the coffeepot) and marked all the boxes "Miscellaneous." The moving van couldn't get through the posts at the end of the drive, and everything had to be dragged to the curb to load. The kids were surly because we were moving and would forever look at us like we had just destroyed their puppy. Our dog dropped a bomb in the kitchen just before I locked the door to leave. I ended up riding 5,000 miles with a lampshade on my head and balancing a bowl of guppies between my knees.

The brochure never tells you what to do when you arrive at your new home late Saturday night with a mover who accepts only cash and the bill is $200 more than he estimated. It never spells out why the promised utilities were not turned on or why the toilet in the new house is hooked up to the water heater and every flush is a sauna experience.

In recent years, there has been a noted increase in the number of people who move themselves — especially young people. You can always tell when your kids are preparing to move again. They will start dating a Sumo wrestler or someone whose only endearing trait is that he owns an 18-wheeler. Then they will subtly mention they're having a pizza party. You're a fool if you ask why. They will tell you they are celebrating their new apartment . . . the one on the third floor you are going to help them move into.

Moving is a game where the only ones who win are orthopedic surgeons.

DEAR ABBY

Brother-in-law's hug too close for comfort

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl. I have a sister who is 19 and has been married for a year. One day last week, her husband told me how beautiful he thought I was and how much I had developed lately.

Van Buren

Later he gave me a ride to my girlfriend's house to pick up my bike. On the way back it was quite dark. All of a sudden he stopped the truck and asked me for a hug. I thought, "What the heck, he did me a favor to drive me to pick up my bike, so it's no big deal to give him a hug." Well, it was a real long hug, and he wouldn't let me go. Then he asked me for a kiss, and I said, "No way . . . no, NO!" He knew I really meant it, so he let me go. Neither one of us said a word until he dropped me off at my house.

I really feel uncomfortable around him now. I can't tell my sister or anyone else because my sister really loves him and I couldn't live with myself if I made trouble in her marriage.

If you want to print this to warn other teens who may run into a problem like this, please don't use my name. — THE KID SISTER

DEAR SISTER: You were very, very wise. Thanks for sharing your experience as a warning to other young girls who could be taken advantage of by a relative or close friend.

DEAR ABBY: We got a good chuckle out of "Very Disappointed" who spent her wedding night on a fold-out couch in a fancy hotel. Your advice to double-check reservations was very good, but it doesn't always work. Here's our story:

We had arranged the "honeymoon package" at the then brand-new Hilton in Erie, Pa. We arrived late on our wedding night and were warmly welcomed at the front desk. When we got to our room, we found the promised bottle of champagne and a very lovely large room — but no bed! It seems one of the couches was a fold-out bed with one pillow and a set of sheets (no blanket)! When we telephoned downstairs, we were informed that the hotel was full and "housekeeping" was closed for the night, so we were out of luck.

When we folded out the bed and sat on it — it collapsed!

But what the heck? We've had many laughs over that story through the years. We've often said that a couple without a sense of humor could have broken up over such a series of incidents. Let's hope the honeymoon couple in that classy Dallas hotel survived their disappointment.

As for us, 13 years later, we're . . . STILL LAUGHING IN GRASS VALLEY, CALIF.

CONFIDENTIAL TO V.N.: You know you're getting old when a lady you've never met before is seated next to you at a dinner party and she asks which is your good ear.

Poland's aristocrats are courted again

By Matthew C. Vita

WARSAW, Poland — Adam Tarnowski has lived most of his 39 years adrift.

He was born in Britain, where his father had taken refuge during the war. He moved back to Poland with his family at age 14, tried twice unsuccessfully to get a university degree, then became a librarian.

It has been a life, he admits, without much distinction. Except for one tiny detail: Tarnowski was born a count.

Now the man who is the latest in a line of one of Poland's oldest aristocratic families believes his time has come.

"I don't want to recreate the old Poland," he said one recent evening in the tiny Warsaw house he shares with his mother and father. "But I was taught about life here before the war, and I believe that we can build upon it."

Tarnowski is no errant knight tilting at windmills.

Shunned for decades onto the sidelines of communism's "classless society," the Polish aristocracy suddenly finds itself being courted again by the country's democratic leaders.

In one of the first and most popular moves undertaken by the new regime, parliament restored the golden crown to the Polish eagle — the national coat of arms — that had been removed by the communists.

That symbolic gesture has been followed by a reemergence of many old aristocratic pretenses — not all that surprising in a country whose population had the largest percentage of nobility in Europe before World War II.

Counts and princesses are consulted regularly in newspaper columns and on television screens, portrayed as models of authority and reason.

The diplomatic ranks are being filled by well-mannered Poles with aristocratic claims who can slip easily into English and French.

Count Marcin Zamoyski was chosen mayor of Zamosc, the eastern city founded by a forbearer in 1580. Princess Anna Radziwill, a member of what may be Poland's best-known family, was elected to the national Senate.

The voters didn't know a thing about her politics "but the name Radziwill alone was enough to inspire confidence," remarked Lech Walesa, who, though he now occupies Belvedere Palace as president, remains a humble electrician.

Last year, the nobility formed their own lobby group, the Society of Polish Landowners, to press demands for a return of their country estates, parks and forests that were expropriated by the government in the 1940s.

"As an old lady said during our first meeting, 'We want to be together again,'" said Ludwik Karnkowski, the society's vice chairman. "We want to cultivate the best of Polish history and tradition, educate the youth."

After the war, the nobility lost everything. Their property was confiscated. Many were imprisoned; some were carted off to Soviet gulags.

For years, they were denied the right to send their children to college or to live within 30 miles of their former estates.

New 'Puss in Boots' published

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles Perrault's "Puss in Boots" was first published in 1697. Now, Fred Marcellino has interpreted this classic tale, translated by Malcolm Arthur, in a series of beautiful illustrations. (Farrar Straus Giroux, $14.95).

As the story opens, a miller has died, leaving his three sons nothing but his mill, his donkey and his cat. The youngest son, of course, gets the cat, which he figures is good for a meal (cat stew, perhaps?) and a new fur muff.

This feline, however, is no ordinary run-of-the-mill cat. For the price of a sack to trap wild animals and a pair of boots to carry him through the brambles, the cat promises his new master that things will turn out well — and, they do.

The cat snares a hare and other wild animals and presents them to the king as gifts from his master, whom he calls "the Marquis of Carabas." Then, he fakes his master's "drowning" and a timely rescue by the king and his daughter. It is inevitable that the young princess will fall in love with the handsome "marquis."

"Puss became a great Lord and gave up chasing mice, except just once in a while, for the fun of it."

Paintball is therapy, players say

By Darlene McCormick
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO — Ken Taylor of Waco was shot in the chest shortly after 2 p.m. Sunday just outside of China Spring.

It left him with a bee-sting-sized welt and hurt pride.

Taylor wasn't the victim of crime, but of his passion for paintball, a military-style game that uses paint instead of bullets.

He was among 10 camouflage-clad men playing the game at the new Heart of Texas Paintball Complex.

"It feels like getting shot, I guess," he said during a break in the action. "It stings."

Taylor said the paint pellets don't hurt much unless one catches you in a sensitive place. He said one recently hit him behind the ear.

"Like I say, it's nothing to cry over," he said, smiling. "At least I'm not going to let anybody see me."

Despite the welts and paint-spattered clothing, Taylor, like all the other players present, said he loves the often intense game.

"I sell insurance," said Brian Miller of Waco. "I deal with people all week long that I'd really like to shoot."

Like Miller, Bill Schroeder of Bellmead said the game allows him to blow off some steam.

"It was an instant hook," he said. "It's something to alleviate the stress."

John Griffith takes aim at an opponent during a game of paintball in Waco, Texas. Paintball is a game similar to 'Capture The Flag,' where opponents remove each other from play by shooting them with paintballs.

Tom Griffith and Jack Aaron, both paintball players, opened the complex in April outside Waco because they were tired of driving to Belton every week to play.

"There's a lot of people in town that play paintball," Griffith said, adding that the "sport" is catching on though he hasn't advertised much. People drive by and stop, others get introduced to it by friends, he said.

Griffith insisted paintball isn't a war game, that he knows of at least one university in the South that uses it as a physical education elective.

"You don't need to know how to shoot good," he said, adding that safety is stressed at his field.

The game is played with two teams of five people. Each team tries to capture a flag in the center of the playing field and then move the flag to the enemy's fort without getting marked with paint. Tires and wooden props offer protection from the paint pellets. Those hit are out of the game and must raise their guns into the air to avoid being shot at again.

Griffith said the game is sometimes called speedball. Players must wear protective clothing, glasses and a helmet. The paint pellets are .68-caliber, and the guns are air-powered, much like B-B guns, he said.

Griffith said players must be 18 or older, but he will let youngsters play if they are accompanied by a parent who signs a waiver.

Most of the players so far have been men in their late 20s and early 30s, but Griffith says he encourages women to play and wants the game to become a family affair.

Those women on hand, though, didn't seem to have any desire to play.

Debbie Harris says she and her children come out to watch her husband David play. She says she enjoys getting the family together, but won't play the game.

Baylor tops Baptist Convention's agenda

DALLAS (AP) — State Baptist leaders meet Tuesday to consider their own ideas for governing Baylor University, but the Waco school says it has no plans to alter its latest proposal, which significantly cuts the power of the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

"We've made a proposal, which we asked (the BGCT) to accept by June 15, otherwise we're going ahead with the charter as amended a year ago," said Baylor vice president Michael Bishop.

"We don't have plans for any further affiliation proposals," Bishop said.

Under the school's plan, the BGCT could elect six members of a 24-member Board of Regents. The remaining 18 members would be appointed by the Regents themselves.

The BGCT's 193-member executive committee Tuesday will discuss its own proposal, crafted by a specially-appointed panel to study the convention's relationship to Baylor, the world's largest Baptist-supported university.

Under the BGCT plan, the school would elect six regents and the convention six regents. The school would nominate 24 candidates for the remaining 12 positions, and the convention would elect from among the school's nominees.

"Of course, I could not without a crystal ball foretell the future. But I have hopes for it (the proposal) in the first place," said Robert Naylor, president emeritus of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

Naylor was appointed to lead the panel after the school last year moved to insulate itself from what it said was a looming takeover by fundamentalists.

Naylor said Baylor's proposal was unacceptable, and the committee "and it has been better to focus on our proposal to the convention."

The BGCT proposal "offers Baylor security. It offers the convention a participation in its governance," Naylor said. "It provides an assurance that Baylor will continue to be a Christian-oriented, Baptist-oriented institution."

Although board members could reject the plan, Baptist officials say they believe it will be approved, with possible modifications.

The school's charter previously included a 48-member board of trustees elected by the BGCT, but last September, Baylor created a board of Regents that had sole authority over the school.

Outraged by the action, delegates to the state convention voted to withhold up to $6 million budgeted for Baylor in 1991, along with $1.5 million from the previous year.

The special panel was established and a subcommittee met several times with Baylor regents. The committee's first plan submitted to Baylor was rejected last month by regents.

The proposals have mainly differed on composition of the university's board.

If the university does not accept the plan recommended by the executive board by July 20 after Baylor's board meeting, the BGCT will make a new recommendation to the executive board at its September session.

"This is important to our Baptist cause," said Naylor. "If the executive board approves it and Baylor later accepts it, it will be presented to the annual meeting of the convention in November in Waco. It will mean a continuing, meaningful relationship between the convention and the university.

"If Baylor refuses the proposal, the committee, executive board and the convention must determine unilaterally any future relationship to the university," he said.

Groups call for tougher mileage standards

AUSTIN (AP) — Citizen and environmental groups Monday called on Texas congressmen to support tougher gas mileage standards for automobiles, saying increased fuel efficiency would reduce the nation's dependence on foreign oil, help the environment and save drivers' money.

U.S. Public Interest Research Group and Public Citizen of Texas pushed for passage of congressional proposals that would require the auto industry by 2001 to make cars that would get up to either 40 miles per gallon, or 45 miles per gallon.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, is a cosponsor of the 40-mile per gallon level, said Ross Crow, the state director of U.S. PIRG. Crow said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, voted last year against allowing the 40-mile per gallon proposal to reach the Senate floor.

The groups criticized President Bush's energy policy because, they said, it contains no provisions to raise fuel economy.

"Raising automobile fuel efficiency is like finding huge oil reserves under Detroit that make potential (oil) stocks under the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge pale in comparison," Crow said.

He said adopting measures under consideration in Congress would save more oil than could be produced by the combined total of Persian Gulf imports, California Outer Shelf production and reserves in the Arctic refuge.

"Our continued dependence on the politically unstable Middle East for our energy lifeblood is both dangerous and unnecessary," Crow told a news conference.

He said increasing fuel efficiency would also reduce the amount of carbon dioxide emitted into the atmosphere, which has been said to be a major contributor to the greenhouse effect, or global warming.

A 45-mile per gallon level would reduce the amount of carbon dioxide emitted over the lifetime of an average vehicle from 50 tons to 23 tons, Crow said.

David Hamilton, U.S. PIRG representative in Washington, D.C., dismissed as a "red herring" an auto industry-backed campaign blitz which claims the tougher gas standards would force the industry to produce less safe, smaller cars.

Tom Smith, director of the Texas office of Public Citizen, said Texans would save in fuel costs if the tougher gas levels become law.

He urged citizens to contact their representatives because, he said, the auto industry has pumped more than $18 million into the coffers of congressmen over the past six years.

Porter principal seeks new job

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The only principal Porter High School has ever had has asked for another job, one week after the school was suspended from all academic and athletic competitions sponsored by the University Interscholastic League.

"I feel I have done my duty. I have done my time," Tony Ortiz said. "And I think now it's time for me to start looking into something else.

"I'm tired," he said. "Things are changing now and there's too much pressure."

Ortiz called the UIL suspension "rather harsh."

The UIL said it suspended the school because it had failed to report an incident in which Porter soccer players allegedly verbally and physically abused a UIL referee during a junior varsity game.

Brownsville school district officials sent a management team to the school last Friday to draw up a plan for correcting UIL deficiencies. Director Bailey Marshall hinted the league might lift the suspension if the district responded swiftly.

"I wasn't aware there was a deadline (for submitting the report)," said Ortiz.

The suspensions at Brownsville's largest high school include sports, academic and fine arts competitions.

NOW May Just Be The Best Time To Buy A New Car, Truck or Van!

HERE'S WHY:

You AUTO Buy Now

DEALER INVENTORIES ARE HIGH

Dealers anticipated better sales earlier this year, and inventories are much higher than expected. When dealers say they are overstocked and have to move cars out, it isn't hype.

FINANCE RATES ARE FAVORABLE

The Permian Basin is getting stronger every day. The Midland Auto Dealers are wanting to make it even better by offering better selections and better prices. And since interest rates have been coming down, you'll find financing rates in your favor.

DEALER COSTS

Dealers pay interest charges for every day a car sits on their lot. Current larger inventories mean the dealers are now eager to sell.

TRADE-IN ALLOWANCES ARE GOOD

Dealers want clean, quality trade-ins to keep for their used car inventory. Consequently your current car is worth more as a trade-in than in recent times.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
