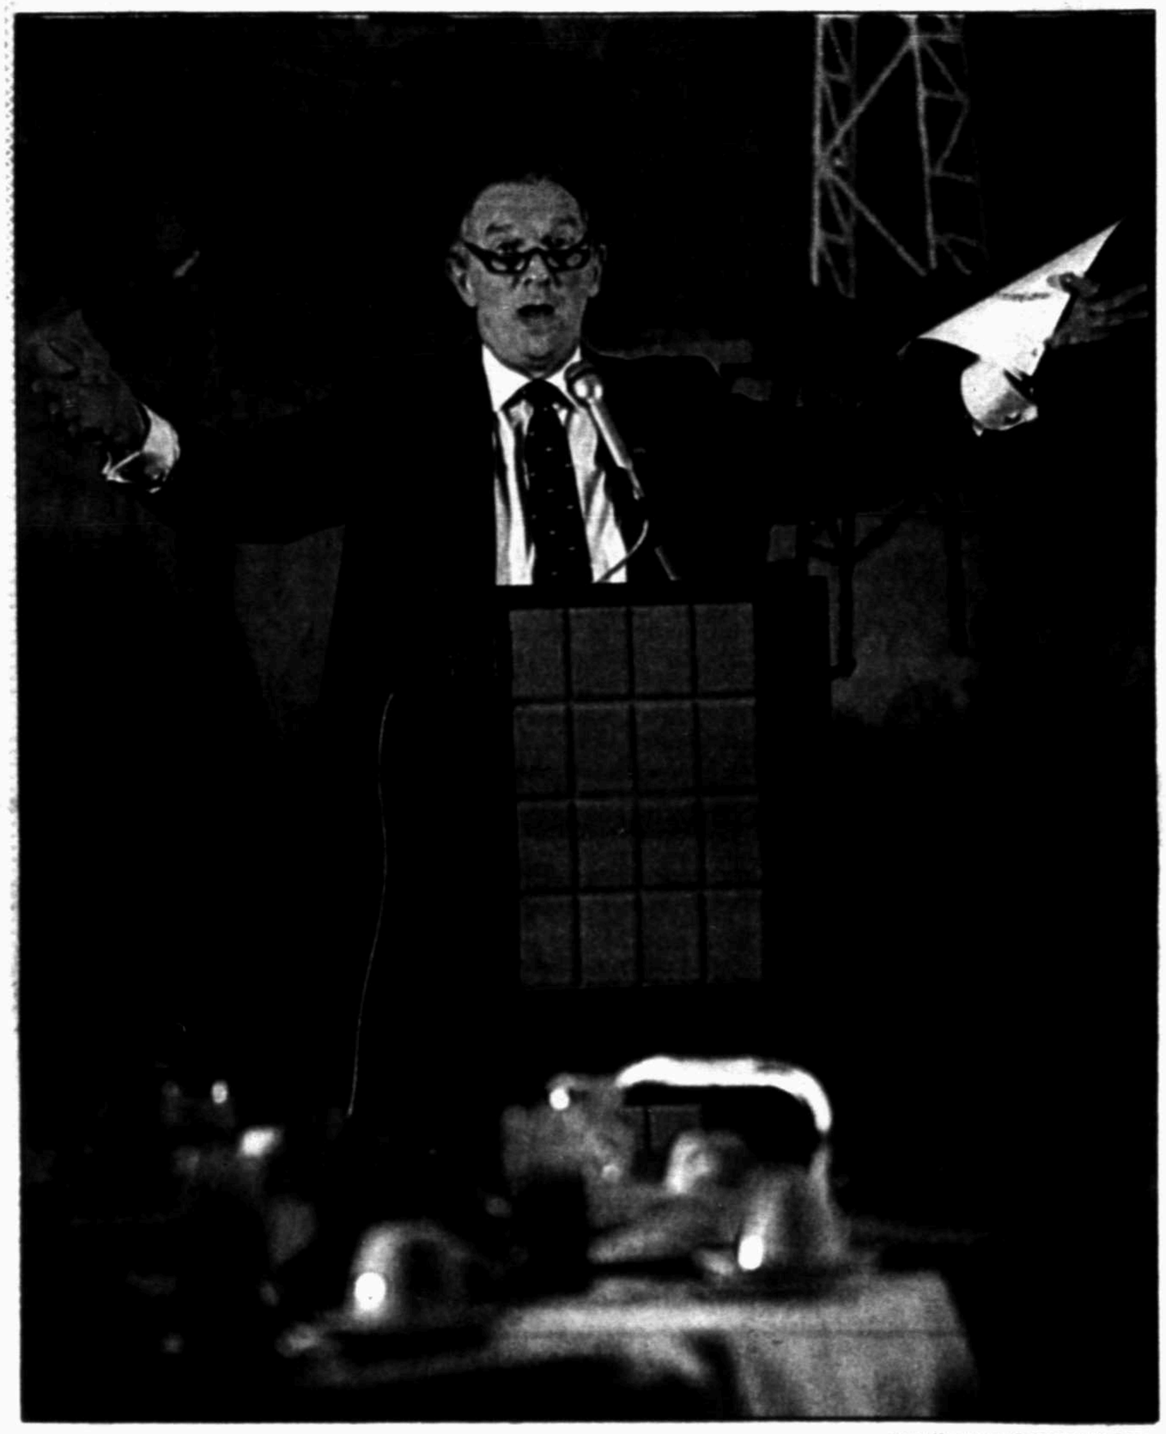
United Way gets $250,000 boost



Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Tom Wageman, outgoing chairman for the 1986 United Way campaign, speaks at the campaign finale Thursday. Wageman announced that more than $2 million was raised, $10,000 more than last year. He also announced a special contribution from local energy firm Wagner and Brown.

Wagner and Brown pays administrative costs, freeing $2 million for agencies

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The finale of Midland's 1986 United Way campaign was celebrated Thursday night with an announcement that means the total of monies raised, which exceeded that raised last year, will go directly to the agencies served.

Tom Wageman, chairman of the '86 campaign, told those gathered at the Holiday Inn Country Villa that Wagner and Brown, Midland independent oil and gas partnership, donated $250,000 to underwrite the administrative cost of United Way for 1987, "so that all of the money we raised...will go to our agencies."

"They do it in large measure in recognition of the hundreds and hundreds of employees that have said yes."

Wagner and Brown was formed in 1962 by Cyril Wagner Jr. and Jack E. Brown, both of Midland. In addition to oil and gas, the partnership holds interests in real estate, plastics research and manufacturing, and investments. The company is based in Midland and has operations in Houston and Big Spring.

Wageman said because of the gift, the more than $2 million raised in the campaign can be channeled more quickly to agencies that, because of the area's depressed economy, have been in greater demand.

"We are pleased to be able to help our community in this way," a Wagner and Brown spokesman said today. "We view this commitment as a complement to the unselfish contribution by hundreds of individuals and companies, and it is our hope that our combined efforts will be a source of pride and satisfaction for all Midlanders."

Wageman announced that $2,018,000 was raised to date in the campaign.

"This is an important campaign," he said. "This is the worst year in Midland's history. It's really been scary here for lots of us.

"Part of what we wanted to do was find out if the Midland story was real or propaganda — we wanted to give everybody a chance to feel good. We set no goal; we were going to raise every dollar we could.

"We raised $10,000 more than we raised last year at the finale and I attribute it to the yes people...and you know what? Midland is for real."

Jack E. Brown

Cyril Wagner Jr.

Bill Morrow, United Way president, and Judy Devenport, vice-chairman of the campaign cabinet, praised Wageman, who is leaving his job as president of RepublicBank First National to take a job in the Dallas area.

Morrow called the campaign "extraordinary."

"Because of this man, we were challenged to redouble our efforts. Because of your efforts," he told Wageman, "we as individuals have learned a little more about reaching out."

Contributions from individual United Way units were also recognized at the campaign finale.

Candy Stolz, associate executive director of United Way, said Special Gifts raised $581,179; Independent Oil, $65,991; Residential, $20,070; Major Firms, $374,162; Pacesetter, $34,044; Small Business, $20,237; Education, $66,560; Government and Services, $68,362; Professional, $89,397; Major Oil, $495,302; Intermediate Oil, $67,391; Trailblazers, $105,083.

Wageman recognized the campaign's loaned executives, staff, volunteers, and the staff of United Way serviced agencies. He said for this year's campaign, everyone was given a "chance to say yes."

"We're gift-givers...that gift is the chance to feel good.

"When folks say no (to United Way) that means some little boy of little girl is not going to have a big brother or big sister. 'Yes' is powerful — yes opens us to everything. We gave thousands of people in Midland the chance to say 'yes' and they said it."

The outgoing chairman closed the finale with mention again of the gift from Wagner and Brown.

"Wagner and Brown gave us a quarter of a million dollars," Wageman said. "I want you to understand that.

"That message is the Midland message. They know how hard it is for all of us and they said yes."

The money raised in this year's campaign will be allocated to the following United Way agencies: the American Cancer Society, American Red Cross, Big Brothers and Big Sisters, Casa de Amigos, Boy Scouts of America, Boys' Club of Midland, Petro-Plains Camp Fire, Midland Council on Alcoholism, Family Services of Midland, Midland Rape Crisis Center, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Children, Permian Basin Girl Scouts, Salvation Army, and YMCA.

Aides hope to continue dealings with Iran

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Hours after President Reagan confirmed months of secret dealings with Iran, his national security adviser said today the dialogue would continue in the hope that "we can make further progress and get the rest of the hostages home."

But the president's chief of staff said publicity over the discussions, which Reagan confirmed Thursday, may have blocked further efforts to improve relations with Iran and could "have some repercussions on our efforts to get the hostages out."

The national security adviser, Adm. John Poindexter, and Reagan's chief of staff, Donald T. Regan, made themselves available to morning news shows less than 12 hours after Reagan said he had sent small quantities of weapons to Iran not to ransom the Americans held hostage by pro-Iranian forces in Lebanon but to reopen contact with Iran, a strategically important nation governed by Islamic fundamentalists.

Reagan confirmed in a nationally broadcast Oval Office address that he engaged in secret diplomacy with Iran for 18 months and, to demonstrate his personal interest, authorized the transfer of "small amounts of defensive weapons and spare parts" to that country.

Indeed, Robert McFarlane, Poindexter's predecessor and Reagan's envoy at secret talks earlier this year in Tehran, said today those arms shipments had been necessary because the "moderates" with whom he dealt "are going to be quite vulnerable.

"They must necessarily try to expand their constituency and they must look to elements for that support who need signs themselves of influence" with the United States.

About 500 drugs most often abused

By JOHN A. BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The street and the playground are drug boutiques.

There are probably some 500 drugs out there, legal and illegal, that are abused and abuse those who abuse them.

Just a glance at the 240 or so that show up most often every year as emergency room problems is an education in how easy it is to get strung out on chemicals. The list starts with acetaminophen (Anacin-3 for instance) and runs to zomepirac sodium (a nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory that has been taken off the market).

Midlanders share varied reactions to arms deals

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Political and special interest leaders in Midland are split on the question of whether President Reagan tried to buy friendship or hostages when he authorized a "a modest delivery" of arms to Tehran, Iran.

Midland County Republican Chairman Dean Rucker said he supported Reagan's efforts to create better relations with a post-Ayatollah Khomeini regime.

"I'm in favor of efforts to stabilize that region (of the world)," Rucker said.

"I trust Reagan's judgment...and as I understand it, it (the arms deal) had nothing to do with the release of any hostages.

"I accept and support what the president says and am not going to speculate that it did have anything to do with their release."

On the other side of the fence, Midland County Democratic Chairwoman Janet Massey said her emotions on the subject were mixed.

"I do feel we should negotiate with those who kidnap Americans. These are human beings we're talking about.

"I feel Reagan may be overstepping his bounds (on sending military equipment to Iran). It appears he has done this without his advisors' or Congress' knowledge.

"I think it's scary he can do something like that," Ms. Massey said.

Reagan contended Thursday night small amounts of weapons were sent to Iran to pave the way for better relations with a future, less hostile post-Khomeini regime.

However, many have questioned the manner and reasons Reagan authorized the transfer of arms to Iran.

An associate for a research group in Washington D.C. said the question of legality of the arms deal may hinge on an interpretation of the 1976 Arms Control Export Act.

WTCC seeks import fee support

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Enlisting broader community support for a "clean, variable oil import fee," leaders of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce (WTCC) met with civic and industry leaders from around the region in Midland Thursday.

Among the organizers of the meeting were former Midland mayor Ernest Angelo, now chairman of the natural resources committee of the West Texas Chamber; Adolph Janca, executive director of the WTCC; Charles Perry, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) and the Council for a Secure America; and, Perkins Sams, local coordinator for the Energy Security Policy (ESP) group.

"I gravely doubt that the domestic oil industry will be able to provide 50 percent of America's demand even if prices remain stable at the current $15 per barrel level for six months to a year," said Angelo, who also is a member of the National Petroleum Council which advises Energy Secretary John Herrington.

The situation has reached crisis proportions, according to Angelo. "Even improvement to $20 per barrel will only allow the survivors among independent operators to continue surviving. It will take a price of at least $25 to significantly stimulate drilling activity."

Texas cold spell blamed in man's death

Associated Press

Bitter cold temperatures that blanketed much of Texas have been blamed for at least one death and for temporarily shutting down a portion of Interstate 35.

George Myrick, 47, originally of Oklahoma City, was declared dead about noon Thursday in Waco by Justice of the Peace Joe Johnson.

Police spokesman Ira Royals Jr. said he was found sitting in a chair in a makeshift shelter across the alley from the Dew Drop Inn. The low early Thursday reached 27 in Waco, in the heart of Texas.

Royals said Myrick had a history of epileptic seizures. Johnson ruled Myrick died of exposure to the cold.

Myrick apparently had lived in the crude shelter for about two weeks, Johnson said.

The sharp cold also caught some motorists on Interstate 35 in Temple by surprise Thursday. Three separate accidents at the same location within five minutes shut down northbound and southbound lanes.

Temple Police Sgt. Wayne Parsons said icing was the cause of the accidents. He said the accidents occurred on the railroad overpass on the north side of the city.

"That overpass is banked, and the bank faces north," he said. "That bridge is the first one to freeze."

Myrick had only a light jacket and sweater to protect him against the cold when he was found, Johnson said.

His death represented a concern that has increased among social agencies as the first cold snap of the year hit the state — the welfare of the homeless.

Some estimates are that the demand for bed space is up 30 percent over last year.

Linda Avila, a staff member of Hope for the Homeless in San Antonio, said her organization planned to pass out blankets and coats as soon as they had enough donations.

They hoped to start the project this weekend, although by that time, much of the cold was expected to be gone.

In Texarkana, Steve and Milton said they were glad for a meal and a warm place to stay.

"I was scared of this weather," Steve said after he checked into the Texarkana Salvation Army Emergency Lodge.

"I slept under a bridge last night," Milton, 60, said.

The men wished to give only their first names.

Steve, a 36-year-old welder, said he was looking for work and heading from Iowa to Baytown, where he has family.

Milton, better known as "Bushy" because of his thick white beard, said heis just going. " I'm on a pension, but it has to catch up with me," he said.

As Texas shivered under another day of icy winds Thursday, freezing rain and sleet fell from the Trans-Pecos to the Hill Country, prompting slick roads and travelers advisories throughout West Texas. The sleet also fell over alarge part of the Edwards Plateau and Southwest. Patches of light rain also fell over South Texas from Austin to near Hondo.

Skies were generally cloudy over the entire state. Afternoon temperatures on Thursday ranged from the 20s to the 40s statewide. The wind chill indexes ranged from near zero to around 30.

The forecast called for warming into the 60s and 70s by the weekend.

As many as 500 different substances are available in America's "drug boutiques" — its streets and playgrounds.

Temperatures hit record lows in 19 U.S. cities

Associated Press

Bone-chilling arctic air kept the Deep South in the deep freeze today, and temperatures plunged to record lows in 19 cities from Kentucky to Vermont as city workers patrolled the streets of Boston to help the homeless find shelter.

"Everyone will certainly feel like Old Man Winter is knocking on the door again," said Wes Tyler, assistant state climatologist in South Carolina.

The huge arctic air mass that gripped much of the nation this week, contributing to the deaths of 22 people, was expected to head into the Atlantic, and temperatures were expected to moderate in the East later today, the National Weather Service said.

Newark, N.J., had a record low 22 degrees this morning, breaking the 1942 mark of 25, and the weather service said it was the coldest reading for the city so early in the season. The previous record low for early season cold was 23 degrees set Nov. 9, 1976.

Other record cold temperatures included 10 in South Bend, Ind.; 15 in Burlington, Vt.; 16 in Buffalo, N.Y.; 14 in Binghamton, N.Y.; 16 in Huntington, W.Va.; and 20 in Roanoke, Va.

The cold air also sent homeless people to overflowing shelters.

"There's people on benches and all over the floor, trying to find a spot to curl up and sleep someplace warm," Michael Taylor, supervisor at Boston's Pine Street Inn, said late Thursday.

The shelter's 350 beds for men were filled, but Taylor said up to 225 more homeless were expected. The temperature had fallen to 20 degrees by 3 a.m.

Jay Peterzell, a researcher on covert and government secrecy at the Center for National Securities Studies, said the Arms Control Export Act prohibits to a degree the sale of arms to nations which sponsor terrorism.

President Reagan in 1984 declared that Iran was such a state.

Though any arms dealings appear to Peterzell be in violation of the 1979 U.S. arms embargo on Iran, he said, "There is the question of a certain loophole that is staring people in the face," Peterzell said.

"The Arms Control Act says America can ship arms to a non-embargoed country which can then send those arms to any third party," Peterzell said.

In addition, the Act states the President — acting in the best interests of national security — can waive the ban on the sale of arms to terrorist countries if their value doesn't exceed $50 million.

This waiver, Peterzell continued, must be after the president has notified the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Peterzell said the law is unclear about when the notification must take place.

"But not until last night (Wednesday) did Reagan notify anyone. There is also the question of that $50 million trigger...we still don't have a dollar figure on those arms sent to Iran."

Reagan said Thursday night the arms shipped would have easily fit into a single cargo plane and were defensive in nature.

Peterzell said the administration is trying by heartful definitions to make it appear this was not an "arms for hostages" deal.

"For all we know, the U.S. did this in hopes of bettering relations with future Iranian governments."

Peterzell went on to say that theoretically, Iran could have then pressured the Islamic Jihad into releasing American hostages (the Rev. Benjamin Weir, the Rev. Lawrence Jenco and David P. Jacobsen) in an effort to match the U.S. display of diplomacy.

The 21st District Congressman-elect, Lamar Smith, of San Antonio, said he has severe reservations about negotiating with terrorists.

"Once you begin negotiations with terrorists, there's never an end to it," Smith said.

Smith said he couldn't speculate on the coincedental timing of the hostages' release and the admission of the arms deal.

But he said, "We may never have the kind of friends in Iran we hope to, but certainly it's in the best interests of America to have (and hope for) a less extreme government over there."

In terms of Reagan's contention that the arms agreement was made in hopes of bettering future relations, James Fuller, president of the Midland NAACP, said, "There is no guarantee that the next Iranian regime will be any better than the present one.

"The reason I say that is the fact that the Khomeini government has allowed no possibility for anyone to be moderate. The atrocities committed in Iran only give further proof," Fuller said.

Fuller said he didn't doubt there was some behind-the-scenes dealing in terms of the coincedental timing of the disclosure of the arms agreement and the release of hostages.

"I don't think the American people are that naive. Don't get me wrong though, I'm glad to see them released, but whom are we (America) supporting here?"

A representative from the Veterans Administration stood by a hard line approach to terrorism and dealing with those who sponsor it.

Melle May, service officer for the Veterans County Service Office said, "I think the U.S. should try to get along with everyone as long as they know we're not going to take any agressive action from them in any way," Ms. May said.

"They're going to have to prove it to me," Ms. May said when asked if she thought the arms deal was not related to the release of hostages.

"We all have to learn to get along on this planet, but I think we're going to have to do what we have to do to get along.

"We'll do what we have to do even if we have to send a couple of our planes over there to get our people back. I don't think anyone should be left over there."

Ms. May said she "absolutely" advocated the April bombing of Libya as a show of the fact Americans "will not take anything off anyone."

DRUGS

But the psychoactive drugs are movers and shakers in this marketplace. One must wonder if there is not some advertising type somewhere who drums up the names and the packaging for illicit drugs. It is incredible that an underground market can react in such a sophisticated way. Who watches the charts? Who arranges for the raw materials to come in and mate with the new drug variety? Who decides to shift to a new product? Who decides to go for volume instead of a steady high-priced product? Who and where are research and development?

This is, after all, a very big business. Billions and billions of dollars. Law enforcement officers and drug fighters are put in the position of comparison shoppers, roaming the streets to find out what is going down. Should it really come as a surprise that in Chicago marijuana, the nation's most popular drug, is being sold in sealed cans, like coffee?

To keep track of the street scene, the National Institute on Drug Abuse set up a community epidemiology work group that meets twice a year to share their intelligence on the illegal drug market.

Cocaine, of course, is the current rage with crack or binge houses, where addicts cluster to buy their drug, popping up from Atlanta to Boston. The crack phenomenon, a big city act that opened on the East Coast, jumped westward and is now touring the Midwest.

A question unanswered: Why does it pay for a drug-magnate to condense high-priced cocaine into a pebble and sell it for less than the raw material would go for? Are they opting for volume?

Although, in general, the drug market follows the normal business rules of supply and demand, it frequently makes no sense. Certainly, the price of marijuana goes up when the supply is short. But in the case of crack, the marketplace seems to have made a decision to create a new demand. Drug experts shrug and admit they can't explain it.

Because the quick high with crack is over so fast, it is made for binges. There are binge houses where one can trip as long as the money lasts, go out, fetch some more, and trip again. Or one can stay right there and sell one's favors for another hit.

Boston says crack has invaded areas where heroin was traditionally peddled, an 80-85 percent pure mixture selling for $200 a gram. In Los Angeles, 90 percent pure crack sells for $10 to $25 depending on the size of the rock. In Miami the purity is down, but so is the price. In Seattle small vials of two or three small pebbles sell for $25. In Philadelphia the trend is do-it-yourself, processing cocaine hydrochloride with baking soda to make one's own crack. But in the same city there are "hit" houses were a cocaine smoke runs as little as $5.

In Detroit, crack sells for $30 for a piece the size of a matchhead to $100 for a rock the size of a pencil eraser.

In Baton Rouge, La., and St. Louis, peddlers are offering a combination of cocaine and PCP (angel dust) called "Desire."

The community watchdog group also reportsthe most significant trend in heroin use has been the growing availability of a potent form known by a variety of names, including "black tar," "tootsie roll," and "gumball."

It is not cheap. In Atlanta the going price in 1985 was up to $700 a gram.

In Newark, N.J., crack users are turning to diazepam (Valium) to cushion the side effects. San Diego is a diazepam hot spot as is Los Angeles where white women lead in emergency room calls with the drug problem.

Methaqualone, a sedative known by its brand name Quaalude, is reappearing in Miami, indicating, authorities say, that clandestine production may be on the increase.

In the stimulant arena, prescription items Preludin and Ritalin (also called "coast" or "west coast") sell for between $10 and $15 a tablet in Chicago as a less expensive substitute for cocaine containing "speedballs." Amphetamines at $10 to $15 a dose are a high priority drug in New Orleans. Authorities believe that several motorcycle gangs control the production of methamphetamines in Philadelphia where it is sold as "crank" or "speed."

In the Seattle area the hallucinogenic psilocybin mushroom grows wild in the spring and fall and is popular with teen-agers.

IRAN

McFarlane said he still feels further discussions with Iran could be fruitful. "If we didn't think so, the president wouldn't be pursuing it," he told the "CBS Morning News."

Regan, appearing on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," took a more cautious view.

Asked if there would be further arms shipments to Iran, he replied: "No. I doubt that. I think ... since this story has received so much publicity that this avenue of trying to establish relationships with them (Iranian moderates) may have been blocked for a while and, unfortunately, that will also have some repercussions on our efforts to get the hostages out."

Poindexter, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said the administration had been concerned about "the reaction in Iran to whatever it was that we might have to say" publicly about the secret discussions.

In Tehran today, Iranian President Ali Khamenei said relations with the United States would not improve until Washington abandoned its "spirit of aggression and expansion."

But Khamenei was quoted as saying he had found both "right and wrong" in Reagan's speech.

Congressional Democrats, appearing also on the morning news programs, called Reagan's approval of secret overtures to Iran an "amateurish" foreign policy that makes him appear willing to trade arms for hostages while eroding U.S. credibility with its allies.

"It seems to have been operated out of the basement of the White House ... the State Department cut out, the Defense Department cut out, almost in an amateurish way," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said.

The president, who said his address was prompted by widespread misinformation about his actions, acknowledged he had sent McFarlane, on a secret, four-day mission to Iran last spring "to raise the diplomatic level of contacts" with Iranian officials.

"Since then," Reagan said in his hastily arranged 12-minute speech, "the dialogue has continued, and step-by-step progress continues to be made."

OIL

The only workable means of establishing a viable oil price floor is a import fee, Angelo said. "Many people, including myself, were reluctant to embrace the idea of an import fee, but there haven't been any other alternative solutions proposed which can provide the stability and higher prices we need."

One of the aims of the leaders' conference was to assess community sentiment and, if appropriate, present a united front on the import fee issue. Said Perry of the PBPA, "One of the primary obstacles to influencing national opinion has been the industry's inability to solve the unity problem.

To that end, the group agreed to an informal recommendation that civic and government officials attending the meeting return to their respective organizations and encourage adoption of resolutions in support of an import fee.

"It's not that any one resolution will turn the tide, but we need to demonstrate to Washington that everyone in West Texas has a stake in the survival of the domestic oil industry," Perry said.

Among the government officials voicing their intentions to introduce such resolutions were Midland City Councilman Gordon Marcum and Midland County Commissioner Winfree Brown. Additional support came from industry and government leaders from Odessa, Big Spring, Lamesa, Monahans, McCamey and Gail in attendance at the conference.

Another significant role for the leaders is educating and informing people inside and outside the industry on the import fee issue, said ESP's Sams, who also is president of Banner Energy Co. in Midland.

"We've been too hesitant to thump the energy tub when we have the chance," said Sams, who is the point man for organizing a local chapter of ESP, the national non-partisan group whose sole purpose is promoting a variable fee on imported crude oil and petroleum products.

"When the opportunity arises to explain the importance of the future of the domestic oil industry, and the role of a stable, fair price in that future, we need to take advantage of that forum."

Sams says the local ESP group is being formed slowly and deliberately to ensure a well-informed, coherent core of members who can effectively deliver the import fee message. Initial response to organizational meetings has been very encouraging, according to Sams.

He says one important consideration in lobbying for passage of an import fee is to understand and respect those who are opposed to the idea. He categorized the opposition into five groups:

— Those who are philosophically opposed to any form of government intervention;

— Those who think it doesn't do any good to come down on either side of the issue, in support or opposition;

— The Saudi Arabians and others exporting large volumes of oil and products into this country; — "Wafflers," who don't stick to a clear position, including a portion of the major oil companies, particularly those who import a large portion of the refinery and petrochemical feedstocks; and,

— Those firms and individuals with their bills paid, to whom a prolonged period of depressed prices is a "waiting game."

While holding no ill will against any group opposed to the fee concept, Sams says the first two groups are most likely to be swayed by persuasive arguments. "Realistically, government involvement — domestically and overseas — is unavoidable, and the best we can hope for is beneficial government action."

Apathy and non-involvement in the decision-making process worked in the past, but not any more, explained Sams, who has been an independent operator in Midland for more than 30 years. "In the past, I've been willing to follow others' lead through the ups and downs of the industry, but we always had the promise of the future. We're now faced with the real prospect of NO future, so we must get involved."

Waco man started industry-leading motel chain

By ALLAN TURNER

You will still find many of them (Alamo Plaza Motels) — some well-kept, some not — on once-major highways where they beckon to faithful old customers and those looking for cheap rates.

HOUSTON (AP) — Davy Crockett never slept here.

But plenty of other people did.

For a period of 20 years, beginning in 1929, the motel chain founded by a Waco used car salesman led the industry in innovation. Telephones in each cabin, room service and porters were all extras that patrons of the vaguely Spanish-styled tourist courts came to expect.

From E.L. Torrance's first motel on Waco's Dallas Highway, the chain expanded quickly throughout East Texas and the south.

And, while many independent tourist courts were little more than roach motels, Alamo Plazas offered cleanliness, reasonable rates and fine linen. "Daddy always advertised that he used only Beautyrest mattresses," said Helon Hiatt of Waco, Torrance's daughter.

They were the Holiday Inns of their day — and, in fact, one Alamo Plaza executive claims to have imparted the secret of business success to Holiday Inn founder Kemmons Wilson Sr.

You will still find many of them — some well-kept, some not — on once-major highways where they beckon to faithful old customers and those looking for cheap rates.

IN HOUSTON, the Alamo Plaza Motel, owned by Eugene Taylor, is at 4343 Old Spanish Trail — Alternate U.S. 90 — more or less across the street from a hamburger stand that serves as its restaurant.

The cabins' stucco exteriors are cracked and patched — but metal lawn chairs arranged beneath venerable oak trees add a touch of hominess absent from Alamo Plaza's trendier competitors.

For $18 a night, a single occupant can get a tidy, pine-paneled room with two beds, a shower and a cavernous closet.

The decor is western, circa 1940.

A horseshoe-framed mirror hangs above a formica-topped vanity, marked by cigarette burns. Lamps stand on horseshoe-shaped bases and the furniture is decorated with cattle brands.

On either side of the mirror are wall lamps, one of which is missing a bulb.

Framed lithographs of firearms — "The Gun That Killed A. Lincoln" and "Jesse Jame's Own" — grace the walls above the beds. On the wall opposite the front door hangs a stuffed deer head.

The room's only modern touch — a color television set — works.

MRS. HIATT said her father's reasons for naming the motel after the Alamo, and for decreeing a Spanish motif, have been lost to history.

"I really don't know how he came up with that Spanish-type stuff," she said, "But they were all built that way except for the one in Chattanooga (Tenn.)"

Torrance and his partner, a Waco judge who later gained fame for presiding over the first televised court session, had originally planned to build apartments. But, astute businessmen, they recognized the potential for stylish, modern tourist courts.

"There really weren't many first-class motels at that time, except maybe out near California," Mrs. Hiatt said.

Torrance freely allowed others to use the blueprints and innovations of the Alamo Plaza for their own motels. He later owned motels in Tyler, Oklahoma City, Little Rock, Ark. and other cities.

For Torrance and a number of other businessmen associated with him, the Alamo Plaza motels were a sure route to wealth.

"He worked like a dog," Mrs. Hiatt said of her father. "He was active personally in Waco and also oversaw the operation of the others. He was quite a go-getter."

IN ADDITION to the motels, she said, her father trained Tennessee walking horses. It was while on a deer hunt shortly after he opened the first motel that he met William Farner, a man who would play a crucial role in the motel chain's future.

Farner, fresh off his father's McGregor farm and eager for a break in business, became manager of Torrance's Waco motel. Although he had only a seventh-grade education, he displayed a quick wit and a natural talent for business. Ultimately, he developed a mini-chain of 11 Alamo Plazas of his own. He built his last motel about 25 years ago.

"It was the perfect business for me," Farner, now 81, recalled. "I enjoyed meeting people and when the traveling men would come to the motel, I'd talk to them and learn everything I could.

"I was working on commission for Mr. Torrance and his partner, making about $87 a month.

"Gradually, over time, I got the business going and was making $275 a month. That was pretty good money for that day, especially since it included a place to live."

When Torrance's partner complained Farner was making too much money, Farner quit, opening the Beaumont Alamo Plaza a short time later.

"The Alamo Plaza name really got around all over the country," Farner said. "And we built nice motels — not extra nice — but nice. We catered to the customer. If someone needed to know where a grocery or a dry goods store was — we helped. If we could do the customer a favor, we did.

"AND WE didn't try to rob people. We would fill the motels up at a fair price."

Alamo Plaza Hotel Courts — as they were then known — were promoted for their reasonable rates. "Spend the night where the price is right," became the chain's slogan.

Farner recalled the occasion when he offered sound business advice to Holiday Inn's Wilson, who had opened his first motel less than a mile from the Alamo Plaza in Memphis.

"I said, 'Kemmons, you're charging too much for your rooms. People aren't ready for that kind of price. Maybe they will be someday, but they're not now. Cut your price in half.' He did, and they started filling up."

Wilson, in an interview from his Memphis, Tenn., office, acknowledged he "picked Bill's brain," but failed to recall the episode Farner described. "I'm not saying it didn't happen," he said, "but I don't remember it. I was only charging $4 and $6 for a room then. So I know that I didn't cut my prices in half. I opened four motels about the same time, and they were all successful from the beginning."

In the Alamo Plaza chain's heyday, 98 percent occupancy was the rule, recalled Maybelle Olsen, widow of Charles Mooney, Farner's partner in the Beaumont venture.

Mrs. Olsen said the motel proved an ideal business vehicle for her husband, a Waco lawyer who worked his way through Baylor University and law school as a newspaper delivery boy.

MOONEY'S DAUGHTER, Sharon Bunning, who now resides in Colorado, said: "My father was a brilliant man. He was born in Waco and his father died when he was 5 years old. His mother took in washing, ironing, boarders to make ends meet and he put himself through school."

Mooney started as Farner's partner, and within a relatively few years, he owned or was a partner in, motels in Oklahoma City, Gulfport, Miss.; Atlanta and Augusta, Ga.

"The automobile was our main friend," Mrs. Olsen said. "We were spread over probably a whole city block and there was plenty of parking. You could park right in front of your door.

"We catered to professional, traveling men. We always had good managers. With some customers arriving, it would be just like a homecoming. There was a wonderful camaraderie.

You'd be surprised at the faithfulness of some of them — they've been coming by for 30 years.

"We've kept the motel up well. The rooms are clean and we give good service. Boy, I wish we could see 98 percent occupancy again."

In 1949, "things were beginning to take off," Mrs. Olsen said. But, just when success seemed certain, Mooney's health failed and his empire crumbled.

FOR 10 years, until his death in 1959, Mooney was in and out of hospitals — hardly able to attend to his business.

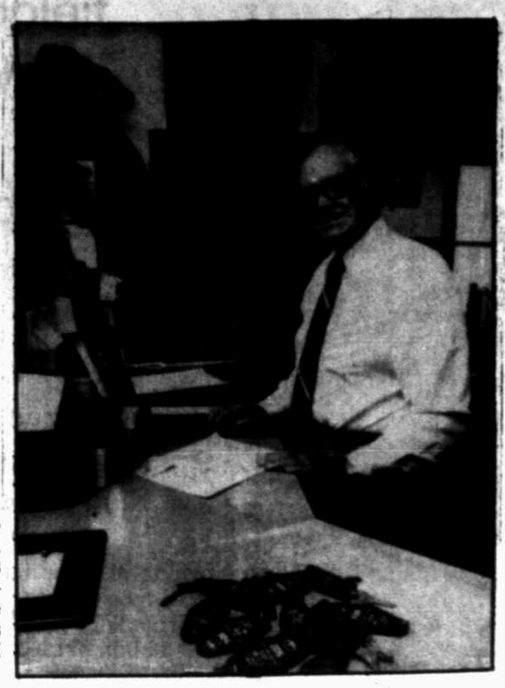
In 1952 — just three years after Mooney became ill — Wilson opened the first Holiday Inn on Memphis' Summer Avenue.

The motel featured 120 rooms, each with telephone and private bath. Air conditioning was standard, and guests were offered a swimming pool, free ice and parking and dog kennels.

Children younger than 12 could stay in their parent's rooms free. Those innovations — and others — led to the chain's rapid growth.

At present, Holiday Inn operates 1,700 hotels in 53 countries, making it the largest such operation in the world.

"It was Kemmons Wilson who started the big chain business," said Mrs. Hiatt. "So many of the motels started going after the big conventions — we were always after the year-round traveling man. Wilson is one of the most admirable men I know in the business."



Eugene Taylor is the owner of the Alamo Plaza Motel in Houston, where for $18 a night, a guest can get a room with Western-style decor — circa 1940 — and a colored television. Since 1929, the Alamo Plaza Motel chain, founded by E.L. Torrence of Waco, has led the industry in innovation.

Easter bunny hops into man's heart

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Easter Bunny hopped into Maurice Etter's life and drastically changed things.

He did not bring colorful eggs or chocolate chunks molded in his image. But he brought a need to be loved, cared for and nurtured.

That was in 1968, when Etter's daughter received the long-eared, fluffy creature as a holiday gift and he acquired the responsibility for its upkeep.

It was his first hare-raising experience. But it was not his last, as it evolved into a hobby of breeding the nose-twitching, burrowing mammals. And today Etter, a 48-year-old postal clerk, is considered one of Bexar County's utmost experts on breeder rabbits.

Recently he shared his expertise with homeless children at Boysville who are raising rabbits as 4-H Club projects.

"I have a soft spot in my heart for kids," Etter said. "I've tried to help all the youngsters that I can who need and want help. It's very gratifying to know you've been able to touch a youngster's life to the extent that you may have kept him off the street and out of trouble."

Among the things he teaches the young rabbit raisers are how to select animals from quality bloodlines and which diseases are most likely to plague the furry critters. The tips the children get from Etter just may help them win ribbons at rabbit or stock shows because Etter, a popular judge at such events, shares his judging criteria secrets.

Among the show tips he passes on, for example, is how show judges closely scrutinize the rabbits' ears:

Clements' 'chief headhunter' have to hit road running or fall behind

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

STATE

AUSTIN — James Huffines has a big job ahead of him.

The Dallas banking executive Gov.-elect Bill Clements named Thursday as his chief headhunter will have to hit the road running or he may never catch up. The ironic twist to Huffines' heavy work load is that Clements' actions four years ago brought much of it on.

Huffines, the 35-year old vice chairman of the Bank of Dallas, will screen and recommend candidates for Clements to name to state boards and commissions.

A 1973 graduate of the University of Texas at Austin, Huffines was co-chairman of Clements' 1986 campaign in Dallas County. He serves on the boards of the Dallas Symphony, the Texas Lyceum and the Dallas Council on World Affairs.

"Coming from the business world, James Huffines shares my view that men and women of the highest quality will be appointed during the Clements administration," Clements said. "Ability, commitment and a can-do attitude will be the cornerstone of the appointments process."

A 1983 law boosts the impact of the appointments authority several fold during the first month of an incoming governor's term. By Feb. 1, Huffines will have 42 major openings to fill, including three plum spots each on the University of Texas and Texas A&M University boards of regents and the Parks and Wildlife Commission.

Before he left office in January 1983, then-Gov. Clements made 102 "midnight appointments" to various boards and commissions. Because those positions came open between Clements' Election Day loss to Gov. Mark White and White's Jan. 18, 1983, inauguration, White felt those appointments should be his.

After some heated debate, the Democrat-controlled state Senate agreed and returned the appointments to White. The wrangling over the rejection of such nominations as former Gov. John Connally to the UT regents and former House Speaker Billy Clayton to the A&M regents hurt White's relationship with some senators through the remainder of his term.

Trying to avoid a repeat of the 1983 showdown, the lawmakers restricted a governor's authority to make such lame duck appointments. They also moved the expiration date for the terms of 12 boards and commissions and more than a dozen water authorities to fall after the incoming governor's inauguration. That law moves 11 of the 42 major vacancies out of the purview of White's appointments secretary Dwayne Holman and into Huffines' hands.

At least five of the remaining key slots, including two $58,700-a-year jobs on the Texas Employment Commission, come open before White leaves office Jan. 20. Kyle Frazier, Holman's assistant, said White's staff is investigating the legality of filling those posts.

In addition to the UT and A&M regents, Employment Commission and Parks Commission openings, important vacancies include: Three each on the boards of regents of Texas Tech University and the Texas State University System; Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle's position; one each on the Board of Human Services, Banking Board and State Board of Insurance; the commissioner of labor and standards; three spots each on the State Finance Commission, Commission on Jail Standards, Board of Mental Health-Mental Retardation and Texas Motor Vehicle Commission; nine on the Board of Health and two on the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

AIDS research support lacking in state

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State and federal support for AIDS research is woefully lacking in Texas, one of only three areas in the nation where studies of the deadly illness are concentrated, a top expert on AIDS said Thursday.

Also, AZT, the much-ballyhooed possible cure for one of the infections brought on by acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is "not an ideal drug," said Dr. Peter Mansell, the principle investigator in the AIDS research team at M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston.

Mansell, who also serves as medical director for the Institute for Immunologic Disorders in Houston, spoke at a two-day conference on AIDS sponsored by the Texas Department of Health.

AIDS is a fatal illness in which the body's immune system is damaged and no longer has the ability to fight off certain kinds of cancers and infections.

"Until June of 1986, we in Houston had no federal funding except for one very small grant," Mansell said. "There has been very little state funding, certainly none compared to the type of state funding available in New York state and California, no city funding and no county funding....

"Most of it is done by seat-of-the-pants entrepreneurial efforts between ourselves and private industry..." he said, lauding such companies as DuPont in their efforts to fund AIDS research.

A colleague of Mansell's in San Francisco receives $2 million to $5 million a year for AIDS research from the state of California while Mansell operates with $6 million over five years from the National Institute of Allergies and Infectious Diseases.

Although it lacks in research dollars, Houston has gained the distinction of being the only major concentration of AIDS research between California and New York.

"That is a sad dereliction on the part of the federal government," Mansell said. "There are AIDS patients in Chicago, Kansas City, New Orleans (and other cities) and there are no treatment facilities in any of those places. This means that Texas is going to become more than ever a focus for people with this disease because they have no where else to go...."

More study is needed of AZT, or azidothymidine, before it can be a viable treatment for an unusual pneumonia, called pneumocystis carinii, that AIDS victims suffer, Mansell said.

Justice of Peace race has finally been laid to rest

ANSON (AP) — The Jones County Justice of the Peace race has finally been laid to rest.

Roy Lambert won the election 566-414 over write-in candidate Donnell Turnage of Hawley.

Lambert died more than two months ago.

Jones County Judge Roy Thorn said Turnage had until 5 p.m. Wednesday to ask for a recount, but chose to let the election stand.

"It's all over, I think," Thorn said.

The slot has been open for about 20 years, and Thorn said it may remain open.

Thorn said if commissioners decide in January there is a need for a peace justice, Turnage will be able to apply for the job.

Couple donates $100,000

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas couple said they will donate $100,000 to two local charities that benefit the homeless including a shelter that was on the verge of shutting down because it could no longer pay utility bills.

Bill and Babe Barrett, owners of a Coors beer distributorship here, said Wednesday they will donate $50,000 to the Dallas Life Foundation so the shelter can pay $42,000 in past due utility bills.

The couple also said they would contribute $50,000 to The Dallas Morning News Charities, a fund drive to aid the needy.

"I think as good citizens and organizations, we are going to have to assist these foundations," Bill Barrett said. "We need to help the people who are starving in the city."

NASA silence harmful

HOUSTON (AP) — NASA is not keeping Congress informed about the space program, and that lack of communications may jeopardize future appropriations, a congressman who flew aboard the space shuttle says.

"I think NASA is doing a poor job of keeping us informed," said Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., who heads the House Space Science Subcommitee.

During a tour of the Johnson Space Center on Wednesday, Nelson said space agency officials have been unable to tell congressmen how much recent changes in the space station project will cost.

"I don't think NASA has had its act together," he said.

Nelson, who trained in Houston for his flight aboard the shuttle last year, was on the first leg of an eight-day trip that also will take his subcommittee to the Marshall Space Flight Center in Alabama and NASA contractors in California and Utah.

Museum exhibit depicts 12,000 years of history

The exhibits, representing the major archaeological periods and the long succession of different peoples who left their mark on this territory about the size of New Jersey, are nearly all from excavations of famous biblical sites conducted during this century.

NEW YORK (AP) — A remarkable range of exhibits whose significance and evocative power go far beyond their beauty and size is on view in "Treasures of the Holy Land: Ancient Art from the Israel Museum," at the Metropolitan Museum of Art here through Jan. 4, 1987.

The exhibition's span of 12,000 years of the history of this area gives the nearly 200 antiquities in the collection their distinct and wide cultural resonance — from prehistoric bone carvings of animals to Dead Sea scrolls, to Byzantine mosaics, from paganism to the development of Judaism and Christianity.

The exhibits, representing the major archaeological periods and the long succession of different peoples who left their mark on this territory about the size of New Jersey, are nearly all from excavations of famous biblical sites conducted during this century.

They are as different from each other as the periods and people who produced them; some are one-of-a-kind pieces, their precise origin or use still obscure. The Metropolitan Museum, which organized the exhibition jointly with the Israel Museum, Jerusalem, characterizes it as the largest and most important exhibition of ancient art from Israel ever to travel abroad.

The installation is roughly chronological. The naturalistically rendered animal carvings in bone and stone are from the earliest period, the Natufian-Neolithic, around 10,300-4500 B.C., which is also represented by stylized carvings of the human figure and masks.

A striking and beautifully preserved ivory statuette of a young pregnant woman, known as the "Beersheba Venus," is from the Chalcolithic period, 4500-3150 B.C. The "Judaean Desert Treasures," a series of copper objects of a forceful, simple elegance, are also from this period.

Pottery from the Bronze Age-Canaanite period, 3150-1200 B.C., includes a perfectly proportioned, simple, rounded jug whose handle consists of two snakes writhing sinuously over its lip. The "Shrine of the Stelae" exhibit is a grouping of ten simple basalt stelae, an offering table and carvings of a man and a lion, whose monumental impact belies their relatively small size. This period is represented also by Canaanite ivories, gold, jewelry, an appealing alabaster fish, and pottery sarcophaguses and their lids.

Among beautifully worked ivories from the following Israelite period-Iron Age, 1200-586 B.C., is a group from 9th-8th century B.C. Samaria, bearing out biblical references, that includes carvings of lions and sphinxes, and an exquisitely rendered sacred-tree plaque. A wonderfully spare terracotta figurine — a scant seven inches high — depicts a woman whose body merges with the chair on which she is sitting.

The written language appears: a group of inscribed seals made of semiprecious stones bear the names of their owners in ancient Hebrew script.

The progression of cultures continues through the Persian period to the Hellenistic and Early Roman period, 332 B.C.-A.D. 70, from which the exhibition includes masonry fragments of extraordinary interest. Here, for example, is a limestone block bearing a fragment of a dedication to Pontius Pilate, the Roman prefect of Judaea traditionally believed to have authorized the execution of Jesus — this is the only contemporaneous evidence of his existence.

Another piece of masonry with an inscription in Hebrew is one of the very few remains of the vast Temple of the old city of Jerusalem, destroyed in A.D. 70. A stone plaque with a funerary inscription in Aramaic made during this period for the reburial of Uzziah, king of Judah who died in the 8th century B.C., is the only ancient object known on which the name of a king of Judah appears.

Vivid mosaics from a villa, from a Byzantine church floor and from a synagogue floor were created during the Late Roman and Byzantine period, A.D. 70-640. The head and torso of a strikingly handsome bronze statue of Hadrian dates from A.D. 135-138. Reflecting the artistic vitality of both Judaism and Christianity, there are bronze Jewish and Christian oil lamps, and sections of synagogue and church chancel screens, distinguished by their respective designs of menorahs and crosses.

The Dead Sea Scroll fragments are precious relics. One is of the Habbakuk Commentary, one of the best preserved scrolls; the other is a manuscript of psalms found in Masada.

After the exhibition closes in New York, it will be shown at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, April 9-July 5, 1987, and at the Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, Oct. 30, 1987-Jan. 17, 1988.

Officials: Flights to Nicaragua sponsored by State Department

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department sponsored flights this year that entered Nicaraguan air space to drop logistical supplies to Contra rebels fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, U.S. officials say.

The officials, insisting on anonymity, said the flights were made by Vortex Air International, a shadowy Miami-based firm that has no planes registered to it in the United States and was established only one year ago.

Robert Duemling, who ran the special State Department office that disbursed $27 million in "humanitarian" aid to the rebels, refused to confirm or deny the overflights, but said the U.S. government only paid for delivery of non-lethal supplies.

State Department supplies included uniforms, boots, food and medicine. But the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, complained earlier this year that it could not track more than half the $27 million with much of the money disappearing into offshore bank accounts and the Honduran military.

"We had the responsibility to deliver the supplies to the resistance," Duemling said. "I will not discuss any of the details of the delivery of supplies."

An administration official said the State Department-sponsored flights were kept separate from another Contra supply network that dropped weapons and ammunition to the rebels, even though both operations used El Salvador's Ilopango military airport.

The weapons supply operation came to light Oct. 5, when one of its American-manned planes was shot down over southern Nicaragua, killing two Americans and leaving another, Eugene Hasenfus of Marinette, Wis., captive of the Sandinistas.

Hasenfus said the arms supply operation was run by two Cuban-Americans who he believed worked for the CIA. The CIA and the Reagan administration have denied any connection to the Oct. 5 flight.

Other government sources said the Ilopango-based operation was secretly managed out of the White House by Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a senior staff aide on President Reagan's National Security Council. North's NSC office received frequent calls from a safe house in El Salvador used by the supply network, according to Salvadoran telephone records.

Repeated calls also were made from the safe house to AIRMACH Inc., a Vienna, Va., firm run by former Air Force Lt. Col. Richard B. Gadd. The State Department hired AIRMACH to be a principal air transport company for non-lethal supplies to the rebels.

Classified State Department records, obtained by The Associated Press and covering the early phase of the non-lethal aid program, show that AIRMACH received a contract in January worth $182,000 for "air charter services."

According to the documents, Vortex received two contracts totaling $87,070 for air delivery and related services. One item on a Feb. 19 contract set aside $7,481 for "contingency," an item not otherwise explained.

Federal Aviation Administration records show no planes registered to either AIRMACH or Vortex.

When Congress approved $27 million in non-lethal aid to the Contras in 1985, it continued a ban on U.S. military assistance to the rebels that had been enacted a year earlier. The ban ended last month when Congress approved Reagan's request for $100 million in lethal and non-lethal aid.

The Vortex flights into Nicaragua have been a closely held secret inside the government with even key members of Congress unaware they had taken place. "It shows how limited the oversight was," remarked one official.

Catholic bishops are setting selves at odds with Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time in four years, the nation's Roman Catholic bishops are setting themselves firmly and formally at odds with the Reagan administration on a major national issue.

In a much-publicized pastoral letter in 1983, the bishops called for a freeze on new nuclear weapons, seriously questioning the morality of using missiles to deter attack at a time when the administration, as now, was trying to build up the U.S. nuclear arsenal.

Now, after a lopsided 225-9 vote on Thursday, the bishops are declaring they find serious moral fault in American economic policies, and many of the remedies they're recommending run counter to positions President Reagan holds strongly.

For example:

— Government job-creating programs. The bishops say they're an obvious answer to a jobless rate they say is much too high at 7 percent. Reagan has called many such programs worse than worthless, that they create dead-end, make-work jobs.

— Military spending, an issue linking the two policy letters. The church leaders want such spending cut, with the money going to fight poverty, which they say — contrary to administration officials — is increasing rather than decreasing.

— Welfare programs. The bishops say they should be expanded, not squeezed, to better serve people unable to make it economically even after greater employment help.

Spokesmen for Reagan, who is not mentioned by name in the new economic letter, have had little to say about it in the two years since it was first proposed. But Reagan supporters and other conservatives, including a Catholic lay group led by former Treasury Secretary William Simon, have attacked the bishops for sounding too much like liberal Democrats — and for not sticking to church business in the first place.

However, the recommendations in the 115-page pastoral letter approved Thursday have changed little since the first draft. And the rhetoric is no less stinging.

NATION IN BRIEF

FDA approves for sale first artificial ligament

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has announced approval of the first artificial ligament to win the government's certification for commercial distribution and sale.

The ligament, a braided strand of synthetic fiber, has been used experimentally for two years on more than 1,000 patients at 27 hospitals in the United States to speed recovery from torn-ligament injuries common in football, soccer, skiing and other sports.

The FDA said Thursday that many patients implanted with the artificial ligament can walk and run within several weeks, compared with six to eight months after traditional surgery in which a patient's tendon is grafted in place of the ligament.

Pentagon to deploy missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, citing the movement of North Korean forces toward the South Korean border, will deploy a battery of Lance artillery missiles with the Eighth U.S. Army in South Korea.

The deployment of the missiles, which are capable of carrying a nuclear warhead, restores medium-range missile capability in South Korea. The Asian nation has been without that capability since 1978.

The Pentagon and Army refused to say whether the Lance missiles would carry nuclear or conventional warheads. The services maintain a policy of neither confirming nor denying the presence of nuclear weapons.

Two jetliners nearly collide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials are still trying to determine whose stuck microphone prevented an air traffic controller from contacting two Boeing 727 jetliners that nearly collided at 35,000 feet north of Atlanta.

FAA spokesman Jack Barker said Thursday that radio communication between an air traffic controller in Atlanta and the two jets, as well as all other aircraft on the same frequency, was disrupted for "about five minutes."

Barker said the pilots of both the United Airlines jetliner and the Braniff Airways aircraft have denied their microphones were the culprit, and the possiblity of a radio malfunction in a third aircraft has not been ruled out.

Give us a sign

One of the most common complaints lodged against any governmental entity is that the concerns of the people it was designed to serve are forgotten. When that occurs, the constitutional tenet of government "of the people, by the people and for the people" is rendered meaningless.

That principle has not been forgotten in Midland, evidenced by the City Council's decision to reverse an earlier action that had already resulted in a number of traffic control signs being removed in residential neighborhoods and would have removed more in the future.

Residents of the affected neighborhoods were obviously irritated by the removal program, and showed up in force Tuesday evening at council chambers to argue against the dastardly white dots the city had opted to use as a signal to motorists who should yield at uncontrolled intersections. But there was little need of a show of force. In a matter of minutes the council had unanimously agreed that the statistical evidence was overwhelming that the sign removal program was not working.

The statistics are hard to argue against. At one location cited, accidents jumped from 10 a year to 11 a month after stop signs were removed. At another, accidents increased from six a year to four a month. And even though traffic officials contend that it's natural for accidents to increase for a period of time after controls are changed, there simply isn't enough benefit to the city to justify the cost of the program in terms of increased risk to life and property.

It isn't every day that a city council will admit an error in judgment. In this case it did and John Sullivan, one of the opponents to the sign removal who showed up to protest, summed up the feelings of a lot of Midlanders when he said:

"It's refreshing to know that we have a City Council that is big enough to admit a mistake and act promptly."

We agree wholeheartedly.

Another View:

Presidential arms

The White House is erecting its thickest stone wall since the Nixon years to fend off questions about the blundering arms-for-hostages deal with Iran. Further, President Reagan's aides imply that the press is somehow to blame for divulging secrets that were leaked or blurted by the feuding ayatollahs of Tehran. It's all a dangerous response to a flaming embarrassment.

Reagan may be a Teflon president, able to keep Americans' confidence even while giving himself a hotfoot. But to allies and adversaries, his conduct still sends a signal: Washington's tough talk about terrorism is mostly humbug. Unless Reagan somehow acknowledges the blunder and reaffirms a sound anti-terrorism policy, this Iranian episode may cause America repeated harm.

The president's purposes were laudable: to free hostages in Lebanon, and begin to coax Iran out of its belligerent isolation. There's nothing in itself offensive in using the National Security Council staff. Other presidents have relied on unconventional channels; recall President Nixon's use of Henry Kissinger in China. The flaw was in the execution, which mixed the desirable goal of making contacts in Iran with tactical bargaining over individual hostages, using arms to barter for their freedom. That can only tempt other terrorists to expect big ransom for taking other hostages.

Selling arms to Iran, directly or by way of Israel, violates existing laws as well as an order issued by President Carter and endorsed by Reagan, and also Washington's avowed neutrality in the Iran-Iraq war. Congress was not alerted to this fundamental shift in policy; the National Security Council, unlike the CIA, is not required to brief oversight committees. At the least, this evades oversight laws.

The evident lack of deliberation is even more disquieting. State and Defense were kept at arm's length as the council staff plunged ahead, assuming improbably that the secrecy of negotiations would be protected by battling Iranian cliques. When a Lebanese publication broke the story, it was imaginatively amplified by Iranian clergymen.

Professional diplomats may suffer from excessive caution but nonprofessionals suffer their own affliction: an eagerness for swift and flashy results. Bargaining for the delivery of arms, the White House was drawn into paying piecemeal ransom for individual hostages — what can ruefully be called a supply-side anti-terror policy.

Put aside legality, sensible consultation and the egregious tilt against Iraq. Taken alone, the arms-for-hostages deal was still alarming. As much anguish as Americans feel for the remaining hostages, the message that the deal conveys to terrorists is that there's a reward for grabbing more Americans — if not in Lebanon, then on an airplane or a cruise ship.

The only truly effective way to fight the terrorist plague, as Reagan has said so often, is for civilized states to stand together in resisting ransom. If he still believes that, the way to send the right message to allies and terrorists alike is not by stonewalling but by acknowledging, however tacitly, that this episode went awry.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Nov. 14, the 318th day of 1986. There are 47 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 14, 1889, New York World reporter Nellie Bly (Elizabeth Cochrane) began her attempt to top the fictitious voyage of Jules Verne's Phileas Fogg by traveling around the world in fewer than 80 days. She succeeded, finishing the trip in 72 days.

On this date:

In 1832, the first streetcar, a horse-drawn vehicle called the John Mason, made its debut in New York.

In 1851, Herman Melville's novel "Moby Dick" was first published in the United States.

In 1881, Charles J. Guiteau went on trial for the assassination of President James Garfield. Guiteau was convicted and hanged the following year.

In 1922, the British Broadcasting Corp. began its domestic radio service.

In 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed the Philippine Islands a free commonwealth.

In 1940, during World War II, German planes destroyed most of the English town of Coventry.

In 1972, on Wall Street, the Dow Jones Industrial Average closed above the 1,000 mark for the first time, ending the day at 1,003.16.

In 1973, Britain's Princess Anne was married to a commoner, Captain Mark Phillips, in a ceremony in Westminster Abbey.

Ten years ago: Syrian forces began entering Beirut, taking control of the divided Lebanese capital.

Five years ago: The space shuttle Columbia, its five-day mission cut down to two days because of a malfunctioning fuel cell, made a safe landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

One year ago: In a nationally broadcast address, President Reagan said his upcoming summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev would reduce distrust and secrecy, and "bring forth a more open world."

Today's birthdays: Composer Aaron Copland is 86. Actor Brian Keith is 65. Actor McLean Stevenson is 57. Actor Don Stewart is 51. Jordan's King Hussein is 51. Britain's Prince Charles is 38.

Thought for today: "The question is not where civilization began, but when will it." — Anonymous.

General attempting Aquino overthrow

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency has been tracking the mysterious operations of Gen. Fabian Ver, former chief of staff of the Philippine armed forces, who reportedly is plotting to overthrow President Corazon Aquino.

Jack Anderson

Intelligence sources believe he has formed a "death squad" that is ready to eliminate any Filipino leaders who stand in his way. According to these sources, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile has already received death threats for his role in boosting Aquino to power.

Enrile has tightened his security; he is constantly guarded by an elite security force of 600 crack troops. But he has also tried to placate Ver's partisans by speaking out against Aquino and accusing her of courting the communist insurgents.

Press reports have suggested that Enrile is maneuvering to run against Aquino in the next election. But the truth is that he is afraid of Ver and is merely trying to save his own skin, our sources say.

Under the Ferdinand Marcos dictatorship, Enrile and Ver were close friends. In fact, Enrile has confided to intimates that he urged Marcos to appoint Ver as chief of staff. But when the dictatorship came crashing down, the friendship broke up. Enrile abandoned Marcos and ordered his troops to support Cory Aquino. An embittered Ver fled to America with Marcos.

Intelligence sources now report that Ver has been flying back and forth between the United States and Southeast Asia, meeting with cohorts and building an underground to oppose Aquino.

While he was chief of staff, Ver personally directed the security operations that cracked down on Marcos' opponents. He was in charge of "special security projects" that not only hounded exiles who dared to oppose Marcos but eliminated some of the most troublesome.

Ver developed a particularly close relationship with President Marcos' wife, Imelda. At one time, their operations inside the United States came under the scrutiny of the Defense Intelligence Agency. A secret DIA report claimed that Ver and Imelda Marcos stacked the Philippine Embassy in Washington.

Declared the report: "The new team is ... expected to monitor Philippine dissident activity in the U.S. The attaches will undoubtedly report on, and possibly operate against, anti-Marcos Philippine activists in the U.S."

Their top target in America was Marcos' arch-rival, Benigno Aquino. The DIA reported that Imelda Marcos secretly called on Aquino in May 1983, and warned him that he might be assassinated if he returned to the Philippines.

Aquino disregarded the warning, later returned home and was gunned down as he stepped off the plane. This cold-blooded murder precipitated the dramatic events that led to Marcos' downfall and his replacement by Aquino's widow.

Ver is now wanted in the Philippines for allegedly plotting the assassination. Intelligence sources say that, meanwhile, he is directing a shadowy operation to oust President Aquino and erase the Aquino name from Philippine politics once and for all.

POVERTY ON THE NILE: There's little doubt that the Egyptian "fellahin" generally live in abject poverty, and State Department sources say that most working-class Egyptians live in hovels. But even in their straitened circumstances, Egypt's lower classes apparently enjoy one luxury shared by many middle-class American households: videocassette recorders.

Many Egyptian "hovels" boast VCRs, and video shops sell and rent movies that include the latest Hollywood productions as well as Egyptian films. The government reportedly approves of the home-video fad, evidently figuring that families who are watching their VCRs aren't plotting revolution. Possibly by the same token, the government's Moslem fundamentalist opposition hates the VCR craze, and has even gone to the extreme of torching the cassettes.

CHARLEY REESE

Manifesto urges change of Soviet system

Some time ago I observed, as others have before me, that the Soviet Union is a superpower only in a military sense.

Now we have, for additional evidence, a manifesto written by someone within the Soviet bureaucracy and handed over to the Manchester Guardian Weekly, which published it.

Charley Reese

The writers of this manifesto are Soviet communists and what they propose is not an abolition of communism but its reform. Their title is, "The Secret Dream of a Soviet Tomorrow."

People who study these things believe it was written by middle-level bureaucrats in Moscow because of the data, not otherwise available, which it contains. It is a scathing criticism of the Soviet Union from a communist, Leninist point of view.

The manifesto states: "Almost 70 years have passed since then (the October Socialist Revolution), yet in all key indicators the Soviet Union has still failed to catch up with, let alone overtake, the advanced countries. Thus the USSR's gross national product is 50 percent that of the USA. The Soviet Union lags 10 to 15 years behind the capitalist countries in its economic development and this lag is growing. The USSR is now on the path to becoming one of the underdeveloped nations."

The document cites the fact that the Soviet Union has become an importer of manufactured goods and grains. It cites enormous waste — 30 percent of grains and 60 percent of other crops — due to inefficiency.

It says the Soviet people's standard of living is one of the lowest in the industrially developed world, including the other communist countries. Not only do Soviet workers receive five times less than the average American worker, they are plagued with bad living conditions: chronic shortages of basic foodstuffs, frequent stoppages of certain kinds of food, a decline in public health, the feminization of men, the masculinization of women, and the rise of drunkenness and prostitution.

The report says that despite the fact that the Soviet Union leads the world in the number of scientists and is doubling the number of scientists at twice the rate of the United States, the Soviet Union has nevertheless become scientifically and technologically backward.

It's strange to find in the manifesto's criticism of Soviet foreign policy a statement I've made so many times but there it is: "The arms race is a consequence, not a cause, of international tension..."

These amazing communists propose, as a solution to the Soviet Union's ills, that it allow a free press, freedom of speech, and alternative political parties. It justifies the latter by citing Lenin and saying that the need for the dictatorship of the proletariat has passed.

They also argue for some injection of capitalism and private economic opportunity into the economy within the over-all socialist framework.

The manifesto was signed, "Movement for Socialist Renewal," and ended with the promise that if the manifesto were published in the Soviet press, the leaders would come forward and discuss their ideas publicly.

Sad to say, it was not published and they have, wisely, not come forward.

This remarkable document, however, is symbolic of the long-term hope for peace on this planet. It is not communism or socialism per se that is dangerous — they are in themselves merely economic systems — but rather the totalitarian, militaristic, and expansionist regime that presently rules the Soviet empire.

A Soviet Union, with an open society and freedom for its citizens, even though economically communist or socialist, would be far less dangerous than the present paranoid and supersecretive regime.

It is a paradox but we in the West can only insure our survival by remaining militarily strong. We can counter the threat but we cannot remove it. Our real salvation from the threat of nuclear war must come from within the Soviet Union and if it comes at all, it will come from just such people as those who wrote this amazing document.

EVANS & NOVAK

Growing power of NSC draws complaints

WASHINGTON — The penalty the new Democratic Congress will try to exact from President Reagan for illicit U.S. arms aid to Iran may mark the end of autonomy for the National Security Council (NSC) staff, now headed by Vice Adm. John Poindexter.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

That punishment would be grave, considering the importance of the NSC and its high quality of service in the past. What may make it possible is that the new Congress will be controlled by Democrats who have long itched to attack Reagan's national security staff for alleged excesses in support of the contras, the anti-Marxist Angolan freedom-fighters and other Reagan-doctrine activities.

Evidence that U.S. arms are being secretly ferried through a third party to terrorist-controlled Iran is a political windfall making that attack virtually certain. With most conservative Republicans equally outraged at the Israeli-aided arms transfers, the expose confronts President Reagan with the worst crisis over national security policymaking of his administration.

"Reagan has let the Democrats get to his right on this one and he's lost his own conservatives," a highly-placed administration insider told us. "We are pinioned."

The easy way for the president to withdraw from battle, mark the case closed and terminate the policy of bribes-for-hostages would be quick release of the remaining five Americans. More likely, in the opinion of non-NSC officials, is that the Iranian terrorists will up the ante and when they get more arms, seize more Americans and raise the ante still higher.

Ending the NSC's autonomy as a unique arm of the presidency would at the least compel Poindexter and other NSC officers to give testimony on Capitol Hill. That would terminate the strange twilight world of the past 10 days. Neither State nor Defense Departments have known enough about the arms-for-hostages deal to explain what is going on. But the NSC staff, which knows all there is to know, today is protected from testifying under the doctrine of separation of powers. Thus it is immune from having to say anything.

Exposing his personalized national security staff to Capitol Hill would create major problems for Reagan — and all future presidents. As with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) 10 years ago, it took a major scandal to upset decades of gentle congressional oversight and force the CIA to accept tough-minded Intelligence Committees in the Senate and House.

The only occasion in recent times that a president allowed his NSC adviser to testify on Capitol Hill was in the juicy but highly-specialized case of Billy Carter and Libyan strongman Moammar Gadhafi. President Carter sent Zbigniew Brzezinski to explain the Billy Carter affair in person, and answer questions in public.

The lineup of Democrats on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which would have a major say in putting a leash on the NSC staff, worries White House aides. The test they are using is the contra-aid vote last year. With Sen. Claiborne Pell certain to become chairman in January, the committee contains not a single Democrat who supported President Reagan's supreme effort last March to authorize $100 million for aid to the contras.

It has been in the Republican-controlled Senate that Reagan has so often saved his bacon the past six years on such inflammatory issues as arms for the contras and for Dr. Jonas Savimbi's freedom-fighters in Angola. But liberal Democrats on the Foreign Relations Committee have charged that Reagan's NSC operatives, working under an almost invisible naval officer, have acted as surrogates for the CIA in carrying out clandestine operations to further the president's policies. Having forced the CIA to submit to congressional watchdogs, they may demand equal treatment for the NSC staff.

No better case could be made in pursuit of that highly-questionable objective than the uncovering of the NSC's arms aid for terrorist Iran. The case these Democrats will make starts with a compelling argument: Since neither Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger nor Secretary of State George Shultz could stop the arms-for-hostages trade, Congress has no recourse but to move in on its own to control the NSC staff.

That staff was erroneously downgraded by Reagan in one of his first acts in office. Partly as a result, it has failed to play the top-drawer coordinating role designed for it by Dwight Eisenhower 35 years ago. Reagan has given it four bosses in less than six years, a dibilitating turnover rate.

Despite its shortcomings in working out conflicting policy aims pushed on the president by tough-nosed Cabinet chiefs, former chief Robert McFarlane and now Poindexter have ironically converted the NSC staff into a powerful implementer of policy. In the arms-for-Iran affair, it operates like a shadow CIA responsible not to cabinet departments or Congress but to the president alone.

Even some Republicans, brought up to respect law and order in government and disliking runaway power, may join the Democrats in the coming battle to end autonomy for the NSC staff.

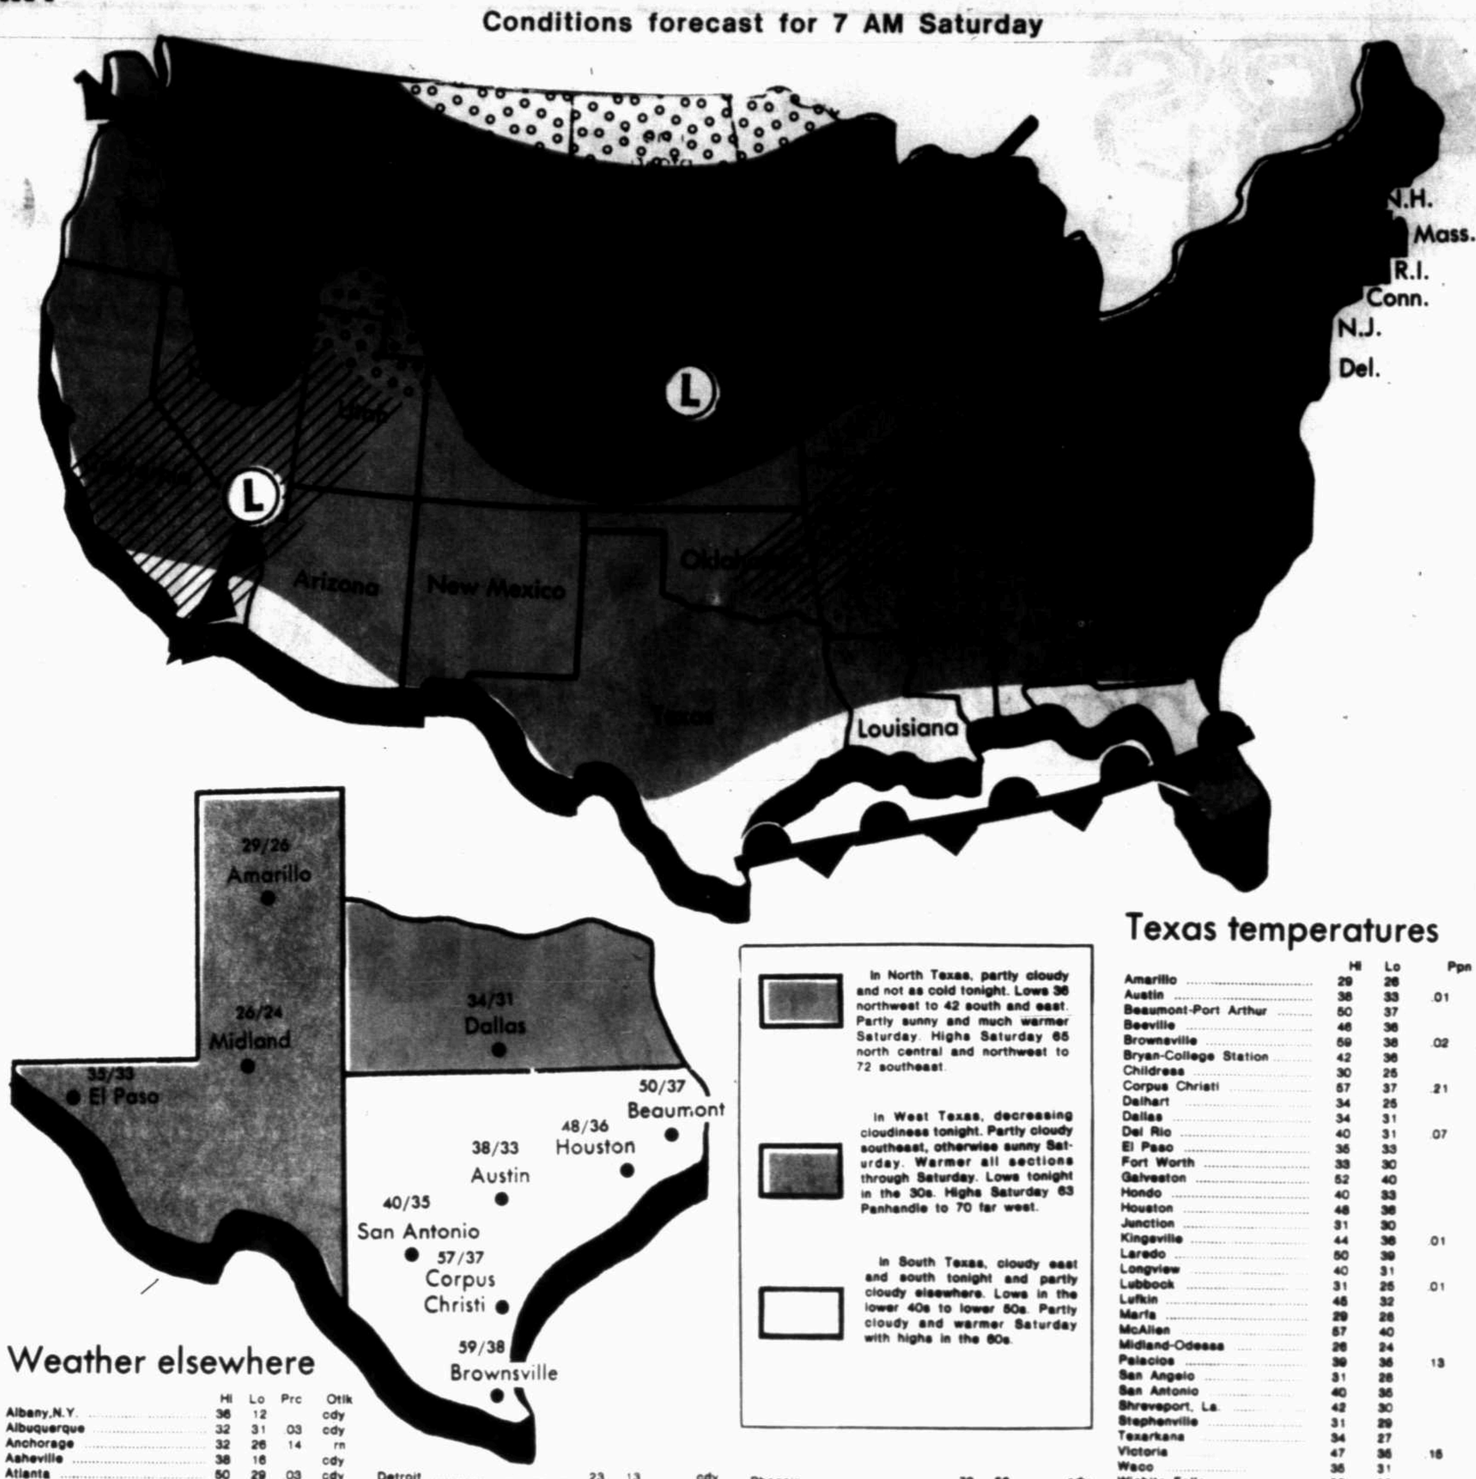
Conditions forecast for 7 AM Saturday



In North Texas, partly cloudy and not as cold tonight. Lows 36 northwest to 42 south and east. Partly sunny and much warmer Saturday. Highs Saturday 65 north central and northwest to 72 southeast.

In West Texas, decreasing cloudiness tonight. Partly cloudy southeast, otherwise sunny Saturday. Warmer all sections through Saturday. Lows tonight in the 30s. Highs Saturday 63 Panhandle to 70 far west.

In South Texas, cloudy east and south tonight and partly cloudy elsewhere. Lows in the lower 40s to lower 50s. Partly cloudy and warmer Saturday with highs in the 60s.

Warming trend due Saturday

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warmer temperatures are in store for Saturday for Midland-area residents, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service. A high in the middle 60s and partly cloudy skies are being forecast.

Tonight residents can expect decreasing cloudiness and a low in the middle 30s. Southwesterly winds will blow at five to 10 mph tonight, increasing to 10-20 mph on Saturday.

Thursday's 26-degree high was 57 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1973. Today's low was 12 degrees above the bone-chilling record low of 13 set for this date in 1976.

STATE

Patchy light freezing rain fell across a small sections of North Texas early today, prompting the National Weather Service to warn motorists of icy roads.

A travelers advisory also was issued for the Hill Country, southwest portions of North Texas and all of West Texas except the Panhandle because of the icy roads and highways.

But there was good news on the horizon.

A warming trend began today across all of Texas with forecasters calling for readings to reach into the 60s and 70s by Saturday.

Warmer temeperatures are due tonight and Saturday statewide. Highs Saturday will reach into the 60s in North Texas, where bone-chilling cold temeperatures prevailed for two days.

Scattered light rain was reported in at dawn today in East Texas, Southeast Texas and along the upper gulf coast. Skies were mostly cloudy across the entire state.

Forecasts called for decreasing cloudiness from the west tonight and Saturday with skies to partly cloudy Saturday.

Lows tonight will be in the 30s over West Texas, the 30s and 40s over North Texas and in the 40s and 50s in South Texas.

NATION

The Plains warmed today but record-shattering cold gripped the East and South, as snow fell in the Great Lakes region and a Pacific storm churned rain and snow.

A mass of cold air over the Ohio Valley pushed temperatures down from the Ohio Valley to the mid-Atlantic Coast region. Newark, N.J., was 22 degrees early today, breaking a 1942 record of 25.

The cold air broke more than 70 low temperature records east of the Rockies Thursday and was continuing to move East. Temperatures were expected to rise after it passed, probably late today or Saturday.

Early Christmas Gift Guide

November 14, 1986

Midland Reporter-Telegram

Celebrate with gifts from the heart

What makes this the warmest, most wonderful time of the year? Traditions. The brightly lit tree...the pleasent aroma of homemade goodies...the stockings hung by the chimney...and, most of all, the perfect gifts we choose for friends and relatives, add a festive touch to our christmas celebration.

This season, add extra warmth and pizazz to your holiday with charming gift packages you can easily make yourself using inexpensive, readily available materials and dye.

And, when filled with treasured gifts or edible treats they become gifts themselves to be cherished for years to come.

Unfinished wicker baskets and wooden Shaker boxes are easily transformed into colorful gift containers when dyed in hearty Christmas colors of scarlet and forest green dye.

Trimmed with ribbon or holly, and lined with a pretty lace hanky (also dyable), baskets become a unique way to package a variety of small gifts for that special someone.

Simply dip the basket in a hot concentrated dye solution (dissolving one package powder dye or 1/2 cup liquid dye to 2 quarts of hot water; rinse in cool water).

For a softer color, thoroughly wet the basket first. For a more intense color, sponge or paint the dye directly onto the dry basket. Let the basket dry completely. Spray dyed basket inside and out with a clear plastic finish.

To make your tasty homemade delectables a delight even before they're eaten, present them in a decorated Shaker box reminiscent of old folk art.

Simply tape a stencil of a familiar Christmas motif onto the lid of an unfinished Shaker box. Brush dye solution into cut-out areas. Let dry and remove stencil. Spray with protective clear plastic finish. Then tie it all together with a contrasting satin ribbon.

How about adding alittle excitement to your tradition of exchanging gifts with friends and relatives? This year, take a cue from Ol' St. Nick and deliver your heart-warming presents the North Pole way — over your back in Santa's sack!

Take a white or light colored cotton or cotton blend pillow case. Then dye it in traditional Christmas colors or choose your favorite fashion colors of Fuchsia or Periwinkle Blue using the washing machine method.

To make the drawstring, use the already made hem at the top, and insert a cord through the other side. you can personalize the sack by printing the surname of the relative or friend with dye in a contrasting color using an artist's brush and hot concentrated dye solution.

Or, to satisfy your artistic whims, paint familiar Christmas motifs — stars, trees, angels — all over the bag to make your holiday surprises more exciting! After designed fabric is dry, press with warm iron to help set the colors. Protect bag with soil resistant spray.

These holiday packages provide the perfect complement to gift-giving traditions and are guaranteed to make this Christmas one you'll always remember.

Model trains back on track this season

(UPI — Before the dawn of video games and SWAT cars, model trains were at the top of the all-American holiday gift list. Throughout the '40s and '50s, kids tumbled downstairs Christmas morning hoping above all else to see the glint of tiny tracks under the family tree.

Then, just as the highways overtook the real railroads, toy technologies of the '60s and '70s left model trains in the dust.

This year, the technology of the '80s and a wave of nostalgia are getting miniature railroads back on track in time for the holidays.

The Marklin Co., a German firm that first launched model trains at the 1891 Leipzig Spring Fair, is introducing the Digital HO system that "brings model railroading into the space age," according to Marklin president Fred Gates.

The new system allows for greater orchestration of trains and accessories, Gates reports. Digital HO can be incorporated into existing layouts (the secret is a small decoder chip placed in the cab of the locomotive) and can hook up to home computers to produce a smorgasbord of special effects.

Model train buffs believe that such advances, coupled with a growing nostalgia for tried-and-true toys, have helped introduce a new generation of kids to the mystique of miniature locomotives.

"I've noticed a steady increase in their popularity over the past 20 years," reports Russ Larson, editor of Modern Railroader magazine. "People who got trains years ago are buying them for their kids and grandkids."

During the late '40s and early '50s, "an electric train set was THE toy that every boy wanted," he said. "You'd get the train set as a Christmas gift because it was a fairly expensive toy. After the first year, kids would get accessories for as many years as they stayed interested."

Interest in model trains generally fell off in the '60s and '70s, as television brought cartoon-tailored toys into U.S. living rooms and the airplane became the preferred long-distance vehicle. "Today's kids don't have the exposure to real trains that we had," Larson says wistfully.

Still, an estimated 1 million model train sets are sold each year, and 60 percent of these are purchased between Thanksgiving and Christmas. "Even if they're not THE toy anymore, trains are still popular around the holidays," he adds. "It's a traditional toy and toy buyers seem to come back to it each year."

Larson, who publishes several magazines for adult train hobbyists, recalls his own set down to the last detail: "Special cars would unload things, like milk cans, and there were cattle cars and crossing flashers with ringing bells.

"A lot of adults today have fond memories of those Christmases — and that's why people hang onto their trains. I've met hundreds of people who say, 'Oh yeah, I've got my old Lionel set in the attic.'"

A recent edition of Toy and Model Trains magazine, Larson's newest publication, features an article on the cleaning and repair of long-forgotten train sets. The story is subtitled, "Your children or grandchildren will have as much fun as with them as you did."

For the space-age kid who fancies state-of-the-art toys, Gates reports that the Marklin Digital HO system is now available at 100 licensed Marklin dealers throughout the United States. Standard Marklin systems can be purchased from 600 dealers nationwide.

But, technology aside, kids of all ages will continue to wear the striped cap of the locomotive engineer. This, he says, is the real magic of model trains.

Fire prevention for a safe holiday

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
United Press International

Holiday trees, festooned with lights and fancy ornaments, are symbols of joy and celebration. But every holiday season, accidental fires involving indoor tree displays spell tragedy for too many families.

The key to preventing tree fires and other holiday mishaps is common sense and advance preparation, according to home safety specialists at the National Safety Council in Chicago.

The safety experts offer these guidelines for the upcoming season:

TREE SELECTION

Since most trees remain on display for at least a few days, make sure the tree you choose is as fresh as possible at the time of purchase.

Start with your sense of smell. The stronger the ever-green scent, the fresher the tree.

Next, give the tree a bend test. The tips of fresh trees bend easily but tend to snap and break in older, drier trees.

If the tree passes the bend and sniff tests, put it through the bounce routine. Bounce the trunk end on the ground a few times. If the tree rains needles, it's too dry, so look for another. If just a few needles fall, head for the cash register.

Artificial trees, a popular alternative to the real thing, may be combustible. Buy only a tree that is tagged fire-resistant. If the tree has a built-in electrical system, make sure it carries the UL marker.

TREE CARE

When you get the tree home, lop off one to two inches from the original cut, sawing at an angle rather than straight across. Stand the tree in a container of water mixed with dirt or sand as soon as possible, and be sure to add water daily. It's a good idea to make one person in the household respon-sible for the daily water check.

Place the tree in a shady part of the room (sunlight will dry it out) and away from heat sources (registers, radiators and fireplaces). Position the tree at a distance from foot traffic and close enough to an electric outlet to eliminate the need for extension cords.

When handling the tree, keep your face away from its branches. If needles scratch the cornea of the eye, the injury can be quite slow to heal.

TRIMMING

Use only lights and electric cords with the UL mark. Examine strings of lights closely before putting them on the tree. Discard any lights with fraying or bare wire, loose connections or broken sockets.

Don't overload the circuits by having too many plugs in one outlet. If in doubt, consult an electrician.

Use fireproof or fire-resistant decorations.

Hang breakable ornaments or decorations with small detacha-ble parts on high branches to keep them out of the reach of toddlers.

FIRE PREVENTION

Turn off the tree lights when you leave the house or go to sleep.

Check the tree daily for dryness. When the needles start raining down or the tips break off, your holiday tree is becoming a fire hazard and it's time to get it out of the house.

Finally, discuss in advance how the family might respond to a sudden fire (something that should done periodically throughout the year). Sit down together and draw up an escape plan. Remember, the first responsibility is to get all family members safely out of the house, and then contact the fire department using the nearest available phone.

Holiday book offerings

By JILL LAI
UPI Book Editor

Christmas is a time of remembering past celebrations and creating new memories. Both sentiments are emphasized in a sampling of books available for and about the yuletide season.

Not long before America entered World War II, first lady Eleanor Roosevelt wrote a simple story for Liberty magazine of a mother and child living in the war-torn Netherlands. Her story, "Christmas 1940," (St. Martin's, 61 pp., $8.95), describes how faith can ward off evil, even in hard times. Its message is as pertinent today as it was 46 years ago.

Over the years, the season has inspired many a tale by famous authors. In "An American Christmas," (Peachtree, 300 pp., $12.95) editor Jane Hill has drawn together short stories and poems by such contemporary writers as Garrison Keillor, Robert Penn Warren and John Updike. Their tales are about family, about people who are lonely at Christmas and about community efforts to bring meaning to the season.

Modern holiday festivities are really a reflection of celebrations past. J.M. Golby and A.W. Purdue relate the history of the season in "The Making of a Modern Christmas" (U. of Georgia Press, 144 pp., $19.95). Numerous illustrations and photographs capture the mood of the Victorian era, Christmas during wars and other epochs.

Those who would like to preserve memories of this and future yuletides can do so with "Christmas at Our House" (Harper & Row, $14.95). This is set in the format of many genealogical books with blank pages where readers can record favorite recipes, anecdotes and photographs.

A number of new books provide an overview of the story behind Christmas and of traditional carols, recipes and craft ideas.

A perennial favorite is "The Reader's Digest Book of Christmas" (304 pp., $21.95), which includes both biblical tellings of the birth of Christ and stories from around the world to heighten the season's warmth. The Digest also publishes "A Family Christmas," a collection of recipes, projects and many other articles.

"The Whole Christmas Catalogue" (HP Books, 191 pp., $12.95) is a colorful, cheerful book chock full of information. It explains the stocking and tree traditions, provides menus for buffets or small dinners, suggests gifts and provides the words to some carols.

Holiday greetings cards: centuries-old social ritual

By ANDRA VARIN
United Press International

This month, Americans are digging out their mailing lists and checking them twice to start in on a century-old tradition — the exchange of holiday greeting cards.

Americans will send a projected 2.2 billion holiday cards this year, and like the Victorian-era lithograph that launched the custom, these cards constitute an important social ritual, according to a psychologist.

"One reason people give cards is to get them," said R. Chris Martin of the University of Missouri, Kansas City, "because when you get a card it's like keeping the path to your door open."

The first holiday card was mailed in 1843, three years after the British Penny Postage Act made it possible to send mail for a penny stamp. The sender was London businessman Henry Cole, who asked a friend, artist John Calcott Horsley, to design a holiday card.

Horsley came up with a tryptich of familiar holiday scenes. The center panel showed family members at a festive dinner table raising their glasses in a toast; the side panels illustrated the charitable tradition of Christmas — feeding the hungry and clothing the needy.

The card bore the inscription, "A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to You," which, according to Hallmark Cards, remains the most popular holiday card greeting.

That simple sentiment has not worn out from use. Although the task of signing and addressing cards can seem endless — and postage prices have risen since the 1843 penny stamp — holiday greeting cards continue to swamp the postal system each December.

Martin believes that people send cards not out of a feeling of obligation but because they are in genuinely good spirits during the holiday season. "People like for others to feel as good as they feel," he said. "'I'm happy — and I want you to be happy too' is what a card says."

In addition to reaffirming old friendships, holiday cards provide an unmatched opportunity to rejuvenate relationships. "It's a way to renew past acquaintances without the need to explain why there's been no contact for so long," Martin explained.

For those who wonder how this longstanding tradition has adapted to modern social mores, Hallmark Cards offers the following guidelines to holiday card etiquette:

—When sending a card to a couple with two different last names, address it to "Mary Smith and John Jones." If there are children, address the card to "Mary Smith, John Jones and Family."

—Many divorcees resume their maiden name. Find out which name and courtesy title they prefer.

—If you're sending cards to business associates, use their office addresses. Cards should only be mailed to the home address if you see that person socially, or if you have met the person's spouse or partner.

—Parents should include the names of their children when signing cards to friends and family members.

—If the card is from more than one person, the person who signs should write his name last as a gesture of courtesy.

—Personalize your cards by including a short handwritten note. If your name is imprinted on the card, sign it anyway.

—Keep your signature informal. It is not proper to include courtesy titles in your signature.

Looking for dramatic holiday wear for that special holiday party or for New Year's Eve? This stunning five strand pearl collar with black bead accent and matching bracelet is ideal.

Jewelry right for festive season

"You'll need something dramatic and daring to set off the bare necklines, bright colors and rich fabrics of new holiday wear," says Kae McCulloch, fashion consultant to the Jewelry-Industry Council.

New jewelry designs rise to the occasion with bold colorful earrings, impressive cuff bracelets and imposing collars, bibs and necklaces, she reports.

"While you are doing your Christmas shopping, why not get a gift for yourself this Christmas," she suggests. What with the gala holidays ahead, and New Year's Eve in the offing, every woman needs jewelry accessories that echo the bright colorful season.

New bead necklaces come in an array of strong color accents, and stone jewelry reflects the holiday glow. Impressive is the word for wide cuff bracelets, and longer, wider earrings. Big coat pins brighten holiday wear, and pearl jewelry, a perennial favorite, combines with beads and stones for eye appeal.

The pearl collar — four strands of pearls around the neck matched to a bracelet and with large baroque pearl earrings — makes an appealing fashion statement.

In this most flamboyant of seasons, every woman should indulge her feminine inclination toward the actress in her, and give in to her personal flair for the dramatic.

Jewelry can evoke a festive mood, and in the season ahead, jewelry designers have emphasized color, shape and size in new jewelry to complement the colorful holiday season.

Choosing appropriate gifts for business associates

Business associte? Client? An important prospect? And what about that exceptionally deserving employee? Too often, all remembered at the very last moment with totally impersonal, rush-purchased Christmas gifts. This year, plan ahead, and make a lasting impression.

And for that special gift this year, consider a rich, handcrafted leather-bound desh agenda from Italy, a gift that will last a lifetime for $80 to $200. The Italian Leather Goods Association also suggest a top-quality6 calfskin attache case, available from $150 to 500.

A smartly slender attache case, it points out, is perfect for the "9 to 5" business executive, but traveling execs need a deeper, larger cpapcity style. When selecting either type, look for hand-sewn leather or fabric linings and superb quality hardware and locks.

This season also offers a special opportunity to impress business associates with a super premium rum, a super premium gift for around $9.99 a 750ml bottle.

The electronic age also offers interesting opportunities for selecting unique business associate gifts.

Associates involved in the financial area, for example, including real estate and sales, will appreciate Sharp's new EL-533 financial calculator. Priced at a suggested $39.95 list, the powerful walletsized calculator automatically performs interest calculation and instantly computes costs, selling rpices, margins and markups.

Another special purpose Sharp calculator ideal for a business associate is th enew $49.95 Pocket Data Book, which stores telephone numbers, addresses, daily appointments and reminder notes.

But whether a rich Italian leather gift, something unusual in an aged Scotch or flavored vodka, or a state-of-the-art, very practical electronic calculator, selecting jus tthe right gift for that business associate will make this holiday one to remember.

High tech doll joins toys talking their way onto nation's holiday shopping list

This holiday season, as wrappings are torn off gifts and the family exchanges greetings, the presents themselves are apt to join right in the conversation.

One of the most exciting technological advances in the history of toy manufacturing took place over the past year when toys started talking — and the newest and most loveable entry into the marketplace is CRICKET, a 25" "kid" from Playmates toys.

CRICKET, whose mouth movement is synchronized to special encoded tapes, is loaded with personality. She asks questions and waits for response, and her stories, songs and jokes will enchant and educate any child from the age of three on up.

CRICKET's secret is a built-in tape player which is activated by her specially encoded tapes. Two tapes are included when she comes home form the store: A basic introductory tape and one in which she explains to the child how to take care of her.

Dr. Stevanne Auerbach, director of the Institute for Childhood Resources in San Francisco and author of Toychest, published by Lyle Stuart, feels that the introduction of a companion such as CRICKET to a child's daily routine can have far-reaching benefits to both that youngster and the parents.

"A toy which talks and seems to listen, encourages the child's language and communication skills and teaches the child how to be a good listener," Dr. Auerbach commented.

"We've all had dolls which were important to us and when they take on human-like qualities they encourage children to develop strong emotional bonds."

Dr. Auerbach also says that talking dolls provide hours of active educational entertainment nurturing language in the child.

This is particularly important to youngsters with working parents who do not always have the time to reinforce and repeat stories.

In addition to the tapes included with CRICKET, Playmates offers 12 additional tapes with activity books (enabling child to follow her adventures) and six different outfits.

She also has her own Health Care Plan. Bob Mayihan of Playmates explains that it was designed to solve a problem when dolls are returned to the factory for repairs.

"Very often, the doll that comes back to the child is not the original. Of course the youngster recognizes that immediately and is terrible disappointed," he says.

"However, when CRICKET is sent to the hospital, she is given her own hospital bracelet with all identifying data on it. When she comes back to her family, she naturally will be wearing a hospital gown."

Although CRICKET plays any standard cassette tape, her mouth and eyes are synchronized only to her special CRICKET tapes.

This brand new doll will talk her way into any little girl's heart this holiday season. CRICKET has a built-in tape player which is activated by her special taples, and her mouth and eyes move in synch to her lively conversation.

Call Santa on hotline

LEXINGTON, Mass. (UPI) — Hundreds of convalescent home residents will get a chance to play Santa this season as a national holiday hotline begins its sixth year of operation.

The Ho Ho Hotline is run each year by the Hillhaven Corporation as an activity for the elderly residents of its 410 health care facilities nationwide. The phone-in program allows children all over the country to ring up Santa and Mrs. Claus — as played by the residents — for an old-fashioned dose of holiday cheer.

"Oftentimes the elderly give up on life because they no longer feel needed or wanted," said Jim Brennan, Hillhaven community relations director and inventor of the program. "The Hotline helps them feel both."

Each fall, Hillhaven residents attend the Ho Ho Academy, a one-day training program designed to prepare them for staffing the hotline. In addition to practicing their "ho ho's," the volunteers study popular toy lists, brush up on their listenining skills and practice mock phone calls.

Come December, local Hillhaven facilities announce their own phone-in programs throughout their communities, and a national hotline, (800) 458-HOHO, operates 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. every day from December 8 through December 23.

According to the Hillhaven residents, the young callers' most frequent requests are for Masters of the Universe characters, skateboards and baby brothers and sisters. Other young callers ask for jobs for their parents and food for their families.

"It's not always easy to answer the hotline, but it feels real good to make the children happy," said Dan Boyle, 90, who is in his third year as a hotline Santa at the Blueberry Hill Health Care center in Beverly, Mass.

"The best part of the job is when they tell me, 'Santa, I love you.'"

Foot care for shoppers

CHICAGO (UPI) — Holiday shopping is even harder on your feet than it is on your wallet. To help alleviate the season's inevitable foot fatigue, Dr. Scholl's Foot Health Council offers these suggestions:

—To protect feet from cold and dampness, put insulated or wool fleece insoles in shoes and boots for extra warmth and cushioning comfort.

—Each day, take a foot break by elevating your feet above heart level for five or ten minutes.

—Keep feet well-groomed with regular pedicures. Brush toenails while bathing, then use a moistened pumice stone or file to reduce calluses. After drying feet, clip toenails straight across to avoid ingrown toenails.

—Pamper toes and soles that come in from the cold by soaking them in warm water containing bath crystals or other moisturizing agents.

—A massage can help increase circulation and defrost chilled feet. Apply a conditioning lotion for a smooth touch, and, using the fingertips, massage toes, then work up to the arch, past the heel and up the ankle.

Video Christmas cards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tired of mailing out the same old holiday greeting cards? This season, consider sending holiday greeting videotapes.

Two new "Video Greetings" stores in the Washington area now offer customers an opportunity to record personal holiday messages on videotape.

For prices starting at $9.95, the customer can make a tape in a private booth much like the standard photo booths in penny arcades. The tape is recorded on the spot and handed to the customer already packaged for mailing.

Microwave makes holiday entertaining easy

Whether you're planning to invite 20 carolers for a buffet supper or two friends for a slice of homemade fruitcake, a microwave oven is a handy ally this time of year. You can prepare hors d'oeuvre, casseroles and desserts much quicker with a microwave than with a conventional oven.

With the speed of microwave you can also take advantage of freezing food in large quantities to use at your convenience. The microwave will defrost it in minutes on the day of your big party or when firends drip by unexpectedly.

It will also reheat leftovers in seconds — especially beneficial when you come home tired from a long day of shopping.

To make this year's holiday cooking even easier, there's a new generation of microwave ovens. These new microwaves function not only as a microwave but, because of a speci heating element, also toast broil, bakes and microbakes.

The last method combines th browning of a thermal oven an the speed of microwave.

The holidays cna be filled with endless chores and preparation. With careful planning and a microwave oven you can lessen the work and give yourself more time to enjoy the season's pleasures.

Easy to prepare meals are ideal for hectic holidays

With all of the hustle and bustle of the holiday season, shopping for gifts, baking and cooking for parties and family get togethes, decorating the home and taking the kids to see Santa, it's no wonder that more often than not their just isn't enough time to prepare the food, wholesome meals tht you're used to.

But with a little bit of planning ahead, you can prepare delicious meals in no time.

One way of beating the hectic holiday rush is to prepare foods in advance. Pita pocket sandwiches ar a great alternative as a quick, healthy, all-in-one meal.

Filings for the pockets can be prepared in advance, anything from chicken or turgey salad to something more exotic, like crabmeat an pineapple. Whatever your choice, when it's time for dinner, just fill the pocket and you're ready to eat.

Soup lovers can prepare a whole meal in just one pot by making a hearty feef or fish soup, which can be prepared ahead of time and then reheated before serving. Add some crusty French bread and a platter of fresh fruit and cheese and you have a hot meal that will chase away the winter chills.

Clay pot cooking in the microwave also offers enless possibilities for preparing quick versions of your favorite hot and hearty meals.

The ingredients for a classic beef stew can be combined in a clay pot in the morning and then, when its time for dinner, just popit in the microwave and in less than an hour you'll enjoy a richa and luscious stew that would normally have taken hours to cook.

But be sure that your clay pot is suitable for microwave ovens, and follow the instruction book carefully with regard to pre-soaking the pot.

If after all of the traditional holiday food syou've been preparing and enjoying, you suddenly get an urge for something Oriental, why not try a Chinese noodle dish that can be tossed together in just 15 minutes.

The recipe that follows for Cold-tossed Noodles with Bean Sprouts is taken from The 15 Minute Chinese Gourmet (Macmillan Publishing Co.) by Elizabeth Chiu King.

If you'd like to try clay pot cookery in your microwave, then try Christy's Beef Stew from Simply Scrumptious Microwaving (Fawcett Columbine) by Lorela Nichols Wilkins, Mary Ann Feuchter Robinson and Rosemary Dunn Stancil.

If pita is your passion, then try stuffing yours with Smoke Turkey and Apricot Salad, from Pita the Great (Workman Publishing) by Virginia T. Habeeb.

Cold-tossed Noodles With Bean Sprouts

Seasoning
1 tbs. soy sauce
1 tbs. sesame seed oil
1 tbs. Hunan chili paste, or any brand of chinese chili paste, optional
1 teaspoon wine vinegar
4 tbs. diced fresh scallions or 2 scallions with green tops, diced
1 tsp. minced fresh garlic or 2 large cloves garlic, finely minced

Marinade

1 tbs. sesame seed oil
1/2 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. white pepper

Ingredients

Large kettle boiling water
1/2 pound very thin noodles, fresh or dried
1/2 pound fresh bean sprouts, or 1 can (4-ounce) bean sprouts

Before you start

Mix seasoning ingredients togethe in large bowl. Mix marinade ingredi ents together in medium bowl.

1. Cook noodles according to package directions until just tender (al dente). Rinse in cold water and drain well. Add noodles to seasoning in bowl and toss to coat well. Set aside.

2. While noodles are cooking, add three cups boiling water to 2-quart saucepot. Add bean sprouts and parboil for no more than 15 seconds. Drain under cold water. Add bean sprouts to marinade ingredients in bowl and toss to coat well. For canned bean sprouts, drain well, then add to marinade in bowl. Toss to coat well.

3. Add marinated bean sprouts to seasoned noodles. Mix together well. Spoon to serving platter.

Christy's Beef Stew

1 1/2 pounds beef stew meat, cubed
3 medium potatoes, cubed
3 carrots, sliced
1 large onion, chopped
1 garlic clove, minced
1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
1 cup water
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper

Smoked Turkey and Apricot Salad

2 cups julienned smoked turkey
1 cup chopped celery
1/2 cup finely chopped dried appricots
1/4 cup finely chopped sweet pickles
1/2 cup thinly sliced radishes
2 scallions, chopped
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 tsp. celery seed
salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste
Small Wheat-Germ Honey Pitas, with the tops cut off
Shredded romaine lettuce

1. Combine the turkey, celery, apricots, pickles, radishes and scallions in a large bowl.

2. Whisk together the mayonnaise, celery seed, salt and pepper in a small bowl.

3. Fold the dressing into the turkey salad and toss gently to coat. Taste to correct seasonings. Refrigerate, covered to chill.

4. Line the pitas with teh shredded lettuce and fill with the turkey salad.

Makes about four cups.

Rock 'n' roll Christmas through the years

(UPI) — Don't let anyone ever tell you rock 'n' rollers lack the holiday spirit. Ever since they started rocking around the clock, popular musicians have taken time each winter to crank out a yuletide backbeat.

And the fans love it. Charlie Murphy, a bartender at the popular Manhattan watering hole Jimmy Day's, sees it every year.

"After Thanksgiving, everybody who plays the jukebox punches out the same song, 'Jingle Bell Rock,'" says Murphy.

That 1957 classic was recorded by Bobby Helms, a minor figure whose only other singles were sappy ballads like "Fraulein" and "My Special Angel." Without "Jingle Bell Rock" Helms would have disappeared from history, but that snappy little tune ensures him a perennial spot on American playlists.

In 1961 Bobby Rydell and Chubby Checker paid Helms the ultimate compliment by recording a cover version of the song, but it couldn't replace the original.

Other rockers followed suit. Chuck Berry recorded "Run, Rudolph, Run" in 1958, the same year Charles Brown released the R & B ballad "Merry Christmas, Baby."

Years later Rolling Stone Keith Richard remade "Run, Rudolph, Run" in a rare solo outing. Another '50s Christmas blues number from Charles Brown, "Please Come Home for Christmas," was covered by the Eagles in 1978.

The early 1960s marked the girl group era, the reign of a number of powerful female rock and rollers. In 1960, Brenda Lee hit her high point with "Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree," written for her by Johnny Marks, the author of "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer." The song was so popular that it was re-released in 1961 and again in 1962.

In 1963 one of the greatest Christmas records of all time came out. "Phil Spector's Christmas Album," which has been re-released sporadically over the past two decades, featured an all-star lineup. But it was Spector's epic productions that sparked the girl group rage and he pulled out all the stops on this set.

Bob B. Soxx and the Blue Jeans did "The Bells of St. Mary" and "Here Comes Santa Claus," while the Crystals covered "Santa Claus Is Comin' to Town," "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" and "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers."

Throughout the history of rock, musicians of all stripes have gotten into the holiday groove. Who can forget the Royal Guardsmen doing Snoopy's Christmas album? Or "Holiday for Teens" by Paul and Paula? How about the punk Christmas theme of the Kinks' "Father Christmas" or Patti Smith's rendition of "White Christmas?"

Every year before they broke up the Beatles released a privately distributed Christmas record to fan club members. On his own, John Lennon recorded the peace tribute "Happy Christmas (War Is Over)." Paul McCartney put out "Wonderful Christmas" in 1979.

Then, of course, there's Elvis Presley. "Blue Christmas" is the King's best-known Christmas tune, but he recorded enough of them to fill two albums — "Elvis Presley's Christmas Album" and "Elvis Sings the Wonderful World of Christmas."

Motown released its share of Christmas records over the years. Stevie Wonder's "Someday at Christmas" showcases the prodigy singing songs like "Ave Maria" from his days in a Detroit gospel choir. Smokey Robinson and the Miracles did "The Season for Miracles," the Supremes had "Merry Christmas" and the Jackson Five recorded "The Jackson Five Christmas Album."

When it comes to Christmas, rock 'n' roll never forgets.

Christmas is the perfect chance to capture special moments in photos

Christmas is a time for sharing warmth and love with family and friends. And photographs are a perfect way to keep those feelings alive, because pictures are the best reminder of good times.

To capture the excitement of Christmas, have your camera ready for the highlight of the holiday — the opening of presents on Christmas morning. The best way to get these pictures, and to ensure that you don't miss any good photo opportunities once the gift paper begins to fly, is to leave the camera with extra film near the tree on Christmas Eve.

The new K12 model of Kodak's VR35 camera, with automatic focus and film advance, is an excellent choice for holiday photographs. The camera's aim-and-shoot operation allows even younger children to join in the picture-taking fun.

Passing the camera among family members means there need not be a single photographer who is missing from all the pictures because he or she was behind the camera.

If you are giving the Kodak VR35 camera as a gift, load it with film and mark it "Open me first," so it can be put to use immediately.

Always hold the camera steady and level. Shoot from your subject's level even if it means stretching out on the floor. This is especially important when taking pictures of small children and pets.

Get as close to your subject as possible so detail and expression fill the picture instead of background and distortions. By keeping backgrounds dimple and uncluttered, subjects are highlighted.

Stay close enough to people so that you can really see the facial expressions. Capturing the true emotions — the look on children's faces as they open up a special Christmas present — is what holiday picture taking is all about.

Try to get one shot of children's faces when they first open their gifts and then another shot when they have their new gifts in their hands. A picture of a child's expression is always a photograph to cherish.

When you take pictures on Christmas morning, remember that the joy of the occasion is not just the event itself, but a series of activities. A fine collection of holiday shots will always include a variety of pictures.

Take a sequence of eye-catching and memory-triggering photographs showing the magic of the first tentative meeting between small child and new pet, or uncertainty turning to joy as he or she discovers that Santa brought just what was wanted.

And remember to capture the reactions of the other family members as they witness the joyous events.

After everyone has opened their gifts, take some photographs of the children playing with their new toys. And don't forget to pose some pictures of all the kids, or all the cousins together, as a memory of Christmas, 1986.

Picture-taking is the best way to preserve those once-in-a-lifetime holiday moments.

Or get the shutter bug in your family one of the newest photography books on the market, they make wonderful Christmas gifts.

Consider one of the following for that photographer in your family:

LIFE: The First 50 Years — 1936-1986, by the Editors of LIFE (Little, Brown, 319 pp., $50)

Margaret Bourke-White: A Biography, by Vicki Goldberg (Harper & Row, 426 pp., $25.95)

In A Grain of Sand, by Andreas Feininger (Sierra club, 176 pp., $35)

The Most Beautiful Place in the World, ed. by Jay Maisel (Friendly Press, 256 pp., $50)

A Day in the Life of America, by Rick Smolan and David Cohen (Collins, 272 pp., $39.95)

One Day USA: A Self-Portrait of America's Cities, by Richard and Judith Carver (Abrams, 256 pp., $35)

Photographs are the perfect way to capture the Christmas spirit and preserve special moments, like the magic of the first meeting between small child and new pet.

Mexico braces for 'onslaught' of deportations

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Isidro Vazquez

Mexico is preparing for a wave of up to 3 million people expected to be deported from the United States as part of a new immigration bill, said a Mexican chancellor visiting Midland Thursday.

"The administration in Mexico is trying to find jobs for all the people who are being deported," said Isidro Vazquez, a chancellor with the Mexican consul in Del Rio.

The immigration bill, signed by President Reagan last week, will allow those illegal aliens who have lived in the United States since 1982 to apply for amnesty.

But the bill will penalize employers who hire illegal aliens, and Mexico is bracing for an onslaught of deported unemployed.

While few specifics are known about the law, some area immigration officials say there may be a 12-to 18-month grace period before the government starts enforcing the bill.

Vazquez admits it will be hard for his country to find work for the millions that are expected to be returned to Mexico.

But he said, "They (illegal aliens) will gradually have to learn to live within their means."

Vazquez, who has worked with the Del Rio consul for four years, travels to Midland-Odessa about every three months checking on jailed and hospitalized Mexican citizens.

Working in the Protection Division of the consul, Vazquez said his job is to ensure the rights of the estimated half million Mexican nationals in the 16-county area running from Midland-Odessa to Del Rio.

Vazquez said he is pleased with one part of the immigration bill that will allow families to stay together.

One clause would allow a family to apply for amnesty if one member has been in the United States since 1982, he said.

"I think that they will be trying to keep the family together," he said.

Mexican citizens living in West Texas have mixed feelings about the bill, with most of them confused about it, Vazquez said.

"Some are really worried and others are happy, but many of them are confused," he said.

Despite the confusion, Vazquez said the consul is advising all Mexican nationals to avoid seeking legal advice until area immigration offices are set up where illegal aliens can present their claims.

Many Mexican citizens could get ripped off by attorneys who may promise to get them citizenship, he said.

"We are recommending to the illegals that they do not seek professional help because they leave themselves open to a lot of expenses," he said.

Although Congress passed the bill to stem the flow of illegal aliens coming from Mexico, Vazquez said he thinks many Mexican citizens, who don't know about the law, will still try to come to the United States.

"I think a lot of people will still be coming over that don't know about it," he said.

Even a lot of illegal aliens in the United States don't know about the law, he said.

Despite the confusion, Vazquez said he thinks the bill will be effective.

"It's going to be a lot harder for illegals to get jobs," he said.

Youths represent those on 'decent' road to adulthood

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland's cream of the crop — more than 160 area youths — were inducted into Club 95 Thursday to represent those 95 percent who follow the "juvenile decency" road to adulthood.

The induction ceremony, sponsored by the Optimist Clubs of Midland, was held in conjunction with the observance of the city's Youth Appreciation Week and National Youth Appreciation Week.

The younsters, in grades 7-12, represented Midland and Greenwood Independent School Districts, Midland Christian School and Trinity School. They were selected by their teachers and counselors on the basis of scholastic achievement and participation in school and community activities.

Keynote speakers Pat and Joan Baskin — in a duel speech — told the honored guests that, as they approach adulthood, they not only will be expected to spread the volunteer spirit in the community, but create those things that have never been done before.

"Volunteering is a two-way miracle. The citizen and volunteer benefit from volunteerism. ...I charge that you use it as well and as fruitfully as you can. ..."You all are very lucky because you have parents who have given you guidance and love and expected a lot from you."
— Pat and Joan Baskin

Baskin, a 142nd District Court judge, said "Volunteering is a two-way miracle. The citizen and volunteer benefit from volunteerism."

"I charge that you use it as well and as fruitfully as you can," he said.

Calling the youngsters "the cream of the crop, the best of the best," Mrs. Baskin said "not everyone is confident or mature enough to volunteer."

"You all are very lucky because you have parents who have given you guidance and love and expected a lot from you," said the immediate past president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

For more than two decades, Midland Optimists have celebrated Youth Appreciation Week, recognizing the contributions and accomplishments of youth for heroism, church work, tutoring of retarded children, serving as volunteers in hospitals, outstanding school achievement and other areas of service.

From its beginning in North Carolina, Youth Appreciation Week has grown to such an extent that Congress issued a public law designating the second week in November National Youth Appreciation Week; and the House of Commons of Parliament also passed a motion requesting the Canadian government annually honor its youth.

Ex-FNB president 'very angry' Brock set up deal

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Charles Fraser, former president of the defunct First National Bank (FNB) of Midland, testified in federal court on Thursday that he was "very angry" after he found out that FNB Vice President Olen Mack Brock had "set up a deal" in late 1981 with a major FNB customer to buy a Pecos bank and become its president.

Brock, 49, who is charged with embezzlement and bank fraud, is also accused of making outside investments with FNB customers to whom he was their loan officer and in doing so violated the bank's "conflict-of-interest" policy.

Fraser said Brock "should have known" to talk to him about those conflicts. The buyer of the Pecos bank — the First National Bank of Pecos — was J.L. Davis, a "significant" bank customer and a Midland oil-and-gas producer-operator and investor.

Fraser also was critical of Brock's investing his (Brock's) personal funds with William E. "Bill" Hendon, a Midland oil-and-gas producer and a bank customer. Evidence indicated that Brock paid $5,200 into a Hendon drilling venture, which resulted in a producing well, and later sold his interests for about $12,000 to Hendon and Bill Deso, a geophysicist.

"Mr. Brock should not have been investing with Mr. Hendon," Fraser said. "Mr. Brock should have recognized that." He said Hendon's credit line was "always extended. Mr. Hendon was not financially strong." Brock was earning about $60,000 at the Midland bank.

Courtroom testimony indicated that Davis, who at peak of the oil boom had a net worth of $36-million, had borrowed $5.6-million from FNB-Midland toward purchase of the stock of the Pecos bank. Brock in late 1981 had resigned from the Midland bank to work for Davis at $60,000 a year but returned to his post in spring of 1982 after he decided against taking the presidency of the Pecos bank. In the meantime, Davis had paid Brock a $55,000 fee apparently for his efforts in finding Davis a bank to buy and in evaluating the bank's assets and potential.

Fraser said he had lashed out at Brock and gave him "a good cussing out" for negotiating the Pecos bank deal with Davis and not informing Fraser until after the proposal had been set up.

"I didn't behave like I should have," Fraser said upon questioning by Assistant U.S. Attorney James K. "Jim" Blankinship. "I wasn't very gentlemanly." Later, Fraser said he apologized "for my bad language."

Brock had indicated that he was "thinking about leaving First National and wanted to get in a country-type bank," Fraser said.

Brock eventually did just that. In 1984, after FNB-Midland had failed in October 1983, Brock located another bank for Davis to purchase, which Davis did, and subsequently became president of a bank in Seminole. He resigned later that year. At the time he was indicted, Brock was a bank officer in Ruidoso, N.M., where he now lives.

"We did not think there was anything like that (illegal about Brock's dealings with Davis and the Pecos bank)," Fraser said. "We just thought there was some poor judgment."

At that time, Fraser said, the Midland bank was considering expanding into a multi-bank holding company by buying the Pecos bank and an Andrews bank before Brock arranged for Davis to make the Pecos bank purchase.

"Davis was a significant customer" of the Midland bank, Fraser said, and indicated that the bank's directors did not want to jeopardize that.

Under cross-examination by defense attorney A.L. "Dusty" Rhodes of Abilene, Fraser said that the result of Brock's "conflict" with him and the FNB over the Davis Pecos bank "deal" was "a good cussing out up 'til now."

Fraser said that the Midland bank's "conflict-of-interest" policy was "no measure of criminal law."

Fraser, who helped phrase the bank's policy, said he was "seeking a very simple statement that there will be no conflicts of interest."

The policy read in part:

"Therefore, all parties associated with the Bank will be expected to conform to high standards of ethical behavior in both the conduct of the Bank's affairs and their own personal affairs.

"Confidentiality of customer information must be protected at all times even after a director or staff member is no longer associated with the Bank. ...All directors and staff members will be required to manage their personal and business affairs so as to avoid any conflict between their self-interest and their obligations to the Bank, its customers, and its shareholders."

Woman's disappearance still mystery as men pass polygraph

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The disappearance of a 24-year-old Midland woman remains a mystery after two Michigan men passed a polygraph test administered by police.

Midland Det. Sgt. B.G. Johnson said today the men, a 20-year-old man on probation for burglary who was released from the Midland Restitution Center Friday, and his father, were each given a polygraph several times. Johnson said each of the men passed.

Police Roundup

June Carpenter Gilkerson, a part-time employee at the restitution center, has been missing nearly a week. She was last seen Saturday morning when her husband told police she was going to the office to do some work. Her car was later found abandoned at the Best Western motel on Interstate 20.

Ms. Gilkerson's family is offering a $5,000 reward for information that leads to the location of the woman. Police said anyone with information should call police or Midland Crime Stoppers.

In other reports, police have a man in custody in connection with a sexual assault and robbery that occurred early this morning at a local service station.

According to police, the attack occurred about 2:30 a.m. today at the Exxon station at Illinois Avenue at Midkiff Road. No other details were available, but police did say a 23-year-old man was arrested just before 3 a.m. at Midkiff Road and Bankhead, and they are investigating.

Police also are investigating the burglary of several items from a Midland residence. According to reports, a videocassette recorder valued at $900, a stereo with speakers valued at $500, a nine-inch color television valued at $250, a cable channel selector valued at $250, and jewelry valued at $300 were reported stolen from a residence in the 3600 block of Kansas Avenue. Police said the items were stolen Thursday between 4 a.m. and 12:50 p.m.

DEATHS

Celia Lendrum

Celia Lendrum, 39, of Midland died early Thursday at a local hospital.

Services will be 1:30 p.m. Saturday at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity with the Rev. Allen Whitman, pastor, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Lendrum was born Dec. 10, 1946, in Dallas. She met Bruce Lendrum at Stephenville while attending Tarleton State University. They were married May 27, 1967, in Stephenville. They moved to Austin and then to Midland in December of 1972. She graduated from Midland College in May 1986 and was a writer.

She was a member of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity.

Survivors include her husband; one son, Eric Lendrum of Midland; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Newton of Waco; two brothers, James Wade Newton of Arlington and John H. Newton Jr., of Houston; and one sister, Carol West of Waco.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Lung Association.

Mrs. Foy E. Cox

Mrs. Foy E. (Bernie) Cox, 55, of Midland died Thursday morning at a local hospital.

Services will be 2:30 p.m. Saturday at St. Ann's Catholic Church. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Cox was born May 5, 1931, in Bremerton, Wash. Her early life was spent in Washington. She moved to Riverton, Wy., in 1948, where she attended and graduated from high school. She married Foy E. Cox in 1950 and they resided in several different places in Wyoming and Montana. In 1951, they moved to Oklahoma City, where Cox was with Cities Service Oil Company in the geological department. They transferred to Midland in 1964 and had resided here since that time.

Mrs. Cox was a member of St. Ann's Catholic Church, Hogan Park Ladies' Golf Association, St. Ann's Altar Society, the Paint & Palette Club, and was a past volunteer at Parkview Hospital.

Survivors include her husband; one son, Andy Cox of Moore, Okla.; three daughters, Nancy Rutledge of Tulsa, Okla.; Connie Harless of Midland; and Cindy McCoy of San Marcos; three brothers, Charles F. Prescott, 82, died at his home Wednesday following a lengthy illness.

Survivors include his wife, French Fowler Prescott; a daughter, Mrs. E. Heap of Temple; a sister, Mrs. Leonard Lionberger of Fort Worth; five grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers were to be Spencer Blocker, Charles Priddy, Marvin McCree, Dayton Chase, W.H. "Bill" Collins, Ray Moudy, Mike Nance, and Rudy Wright.

Frank Gervasi

MARFA — Frank Gervasi, widely acclaimed artist, of Marfa died Tuesday at an Alpine hospital following a brief illness.

Military graveside services were to be today at the Marfa Cemetery under the direction of Memorial Funeral Home of Marfa. The Rev. Pat Ryan was to officiate.

Gervasi, 91, was one of two World War I veterans living in Marfa at the time of his death.

Born Oct. 5, 1895, in Palermo, Sicily, he came to New York in 1908 and became a naturalized citizen in 1919. He served in the 27th Division of the United States Army in World War I and lost his right arm as a result of injuries he received in the Battle of Somme in France.

The only member of the National Academy of Design residing in Texas, he later claimed that it took 10 years to learn to paint with his left hand.

He and his wife, the former Leonilda Sansone, moved to Texas in 1960, first residing in Alpine and, for the last 25 years, in Marfa.

He was preceded in death by his wife in 1982.

Gervasi belonged to many art associations including the National Art Academy, the American Watercolor Society, the Salmagundi Club, the Hudson Valley Art Association, the Audubon Artists Association, and the Baltimore Watercolor Society.

Survivors include four sisters, Mrs. Mary LaPlac of Lynbrook, N.Y., Mrs. Christina Gervasi of Brooklyn, N.Y., Mrs. Peter Bottone of Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. Paul Bacchi of Sag Harbor, N.Y.; and several nieces and nephews.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Dr. Roy Slaton, Col. Harry Hubbard, James Baker, John Whitcomb, Richard Sotelo and Clay Styles.

Perot: Reagan behind effort to return POWs

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot says President Reagan is behind his latest effort to locate and return U.S. servicemen who may be held against their will in Southeast Asia.

Perot has recruited a team of experts, including at least two retired generals and some former Vietnam-era prisoners of war, according to those working with him.

"The president and the vice president asked me to dig into this issue — go all the way to the bottom of it and figure out what the situation was — then come see them and give them my recommendations," Perot said in Thursday's editions of the Dallas Morning News.

Perot declined to say whether he might take action on his own to free any remaining POWs or if he was limited to proposing a course of action to the White House.

One member of Perot's team, Air Force Brig. Gen. Robert Risner, a seven-year Vietnam prisoner of war, said he and Perot are certain there are Americans there but can provide no proof.

"We don't have a living body (of a POW)," he said. "But we have enough evidence to convince us that they are there."

A congressional investigation that concluded in September stopped short of saying Amercians were still being held in Indochina.

But the investigators said there is substantial evidence to prove servicemen may still be held there.

Risner said Perot wants to further explore the results of that investigation.

"The president and the vice president asked me to dig into this issue — go all the way to the bottom of it and figure out what the situation was — then come see them and give them my recommendations."

— H. Ross Perot

In explaining why Perot's help was enlisted, Marlin Fitzwater, Vice President George Bush's press secretary, said Thursday, "The government agencies are doing an outstanding job but sometimes private channels can be more effective."

Perot, the founder of Electronic Data Systems now owned by General Motors, has successfully located captives in the past. He is famous for engineering the commando raid that rescued two of his company's employees being held in Iran several years ago.

U.S. Rep. Gerald B. Solomon, R-N.Y., chairman of the House Task Force on Missing-in-Action in Indochina, said he will help the Perot investigation.

Reagan asked Perot to take up the investigation several months ago, Solomon said.

Hearing set on farm workers' use of hazardous chemicals

AUSTIN (AP) — A hearing is scheduled for Tuesday on a lawsuit that claims farm workers are unfairly excluded from a state law requiring employers to notify their workers when hazardous chemicals are used at job sites.

"Farm labor is one of the most dangerous in terms of pesticides and use of hazardous chemicals," said Jim Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, which is representing farm workers in the class action lawsuit.

"The only group of workers that has any exposure to chemicals that are excluded (from protections of the law) are farm workers," Harrington added.

Filing the suit Thursday, Harrington said the hazardous chemical notification law was written by the Legislature to leave out farm workers because of "political reasons and as part of a long-standing pattern of discrimination against them because of ethnic origin."

At issue is a 1985 law requiring employers to provide advance notice to workers about the use of chemicals as well as other precautionary steps so workers who might be health-sensitive would know to avoid a specific workplace at a certain time.

Harrington likened the chemical law to the Texas worker compensation and unemployment compensation laws, both of which courts said unfairly excluded farm workers.

"It's the same sort of theory. They have a number of trick definitions. ...When you put them together it operates to exclude farm workers," Harrington said.

The lawsuit was filed in State District Judge Harley Clark's court. Clark ruled against both the worker compensation and unemployment compensation exclusions, Harrington noted.

The suit was filed against the Texas Department of Health, Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein and Attorney General Jim Mattox. It named nine individual farm workers and the United Farm Workers union as plaintiffs representing all 180,000 farm workers in Texas.

Harrington said Bernstein and the Health Department have been very responsive to farm worker health needs but were named defendants because the department technically is charged with enforcing the law.

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Mattox, said the attorney general's office hadn't seen the suit and had no immediate comment.

Harrington said he was optimistic that this suit would be successful as the earlier ones.

"I can't imagine how anyboy can really justify an exclusion. You have a law that's designed to protect people in the workplace from hazardous chemicals. And then you turn around and exclude one of the groups that's primarily affected by hazardous chemicals just as you've always excluded that group from ever other protective legislation in the state," he said.

Fraser said the bank "continually aired" in forums its policy on conflict of interest "to make sure nobody misunderstood." He said other bankers, included himself, made investments.

"The most difficult thing in banking," Fraser said, "is the issue of trust." And he said that the "most difficult thing for people in banking...is to draw salaries, lend money, and watch their customers prosper."

A bank job is no place to get "big rich," Fraser said. A banker who has such aspirations needs "to get out from behind that desk and get on the other side."

The "fear" in managing a bank is that of "internal dishonesty," Fraser said. It's "hard to detect, and when it does happen, it is very disruptive."

Fraser noted that the bank's vault "did not have much money in it. Loans are not made in cash." At its peak in the early 1980s, the 1890-founded bank had only about $2-million in cash on hand. In 1982, the bank's assets were about $1.4-billion to $1.5-billion.

Fraser, a one-time roughneck, joined the Midland bank in 1966 as a petroleum engineer. "I got to work more hours for slightly less money," he said. After a series of promotions, he was named president, chairman of the board, and chief executive officer in 1980. By 1982, his salary had grown to $300,000. That year, he received a $100,000 bonus for his performance in 1981.

But in April 1983, he resigned. The bank's energy loans had begun to sour because of the drop in oil prices, and bank deposits were falling.

In 1966, the bank's total assets were between $75-million and $125-million, Fraser said. By mid-1982, FNB assets had grown to $1.4-billion to $1.5-billion.

Frost can lead to prussic acid poisoning in livestock

Frost has hit Midland County and this could lead to prussic acid poisoning in livestock grazing certain pasture grasses and forage.

Although many plants contain the toxic material that causes poisoning, those causing the highest mortality in livestock when grazing after they have been frozen and wilted are Johnson and Sudan grasses and sorghum or hybrids of these.

The most dangerous time as far as the grazing of these plants is concerned is following frost when the plant meterial begins to wilt. Livestock should not be allowed access to the wilted material until it has dried completely. This usually takes three or four days of good sunlight. New plant growth usually becomes nontoxic and can be grazed within 10 days to two weeks following a rain.

As far as prussic acid poisoning is concerned, the poison acts rapidly and can kill animals within minutes. In most acute cases, animals become affected within 10-15 minutes after eating toxic material and can die in two to three minutes. Symptoms may include a brief period of stimulation followed by depression and paralysis. Signs of colic may be present. Stupor (loss of sensibility), difficult breathing and frequent convulsions may result. Death is caused by suffocation since oxygen remains in the blood and is not exchanged to the tissues. This also causes the blood to appear bright red.

To prevent prussic acid poisoning in livestock you should follow these steps:

— Allow plant material affected by frost to dry thoroughly before grazing. This may require a week or more of good sunlight.

— Feed animals hay or a supplement before turning them in on plants that may contain prussic acid. Animals that are not hungry will not be affected as seriously by toxic material since their intake will be limited.

— Remove all animals from the pasture if one in the herd shows any signs of poisoning.

— Call a veterinarian immediately if an animal appears to be poisoned. An antidote to treat affected animals is highly efficient if given early. This product is available from veterinarians.

— Have suspect plant material checked by the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratories at College Station or Amarillo. Local veterinarians will be happy to submit samples for you.

The overall key to prevent prussic acid poisoning in livestock is to be aware of plant materials that may cause poisoning and then to keep cattle from grazing such plants until a safe period has passed.

Farmers Home Administration moves ahead with foreclosures

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration is gradually moving ahead with foreclosure actions against thousands of borrowers whose debts have been stacking up for years.

Moreover, according to year-end figures provided by the Agriculture Department agency, there has been an increasing number of farm borrowers who have lost equipment, livestock and other property through "chattel liquidation" to raise money for debt payments.

In all, during the fiscal year that ended on Sept. 30, the FmHA sent "acceleration letters" to 7,593 borrowers demanding payments, the first step toward the drawn-out legal process of foreclosure. That compares with only 978 acceleration letters sent in 1984-85, and 2,954 in 1983-84.

The report showed that a total of 11,126 borrowers had either received acceleration notices last year or had undergone chattel liquidations to take care of at least part of the debt. Those combined actions were up from 4,007 in 1984-85 and 5,865 in 1983-84.

New foreclosure proceedings by FmHA were effectively stalled by a federal court order in late 1983 until the agency came up with new guidelines that clarified for farm borrowers the kind of help and alternatives available to them.

After all the legal paperwork was cleared up, the agency began last winter to write get-tough collection letters to thousands of overdue borrowers who had made no payments for three years or more.

Now, according to FmHA officials, despite loan reschedulings, consolidations, reamortizations, interest buy-downs and other steps to help borrowers survive, thousands are nearing the end of the road.

The report showed that as of Sept. 30, the agency had 274,145 active borrowers and that 79,320, or 28 percent, were behind schedule on payments, about the same percentage of delinquencies as in the previous two years.

In all, FmHA has a farm loan portfolio of around $29 billion, accounting for about a sixth of the total debt owed by the nation's farmers.

U.S. farm foreclosures

In the first quarter of 1986, America's struggling farmers faced 587 foreclosures -- three-quarters of 1985's overall total of 792 farms. If this foreclosure rate continues, the total for 1986 could amount to around 2,300 farms lost -- much higher than 1984's peak losses of 1,422 farms.

Other figures provide further evidence of the crunch on thousands of farmers who have used FmHA as the lender of last resort after being turned down by banks and other commercial lenders. For example:

— During the last fiscal year, 5,723 farm borrowers filed for bankruptcy, up from 4,018 in 1984-85 and 3,842 in 1983-84.

— As of Sept. 30, there were 1,514 bankruptcy cases pending, compared with 980 a year ago and 1,140 two years ago.

— There were 111 actual foreclosures by FmHA last fiscal year, compared with 89 in 1984-85 and 356 in 1983-84. Those partly reflect the hold-down caused by the November 1983 federal court order, however.

— In additon, FmHA shared foreclosure actions with other lenders in 850 cases last year, compared with 703 the previous year and 1,066 cases two years ago.

— Besides actual foreclosures, 2,062 borrowers quit farming because of financial difficulties other than foreclosures and bankruptcies. Those included voluntary conveyances to settle debts, transfers and assumptions, and sales. In 1984-85, those totaled 1,833, and in 1983-84 there were 2,187.

The report showed that as of Sept. 30, the FmHA had sent acceleration letters or had approved chattel liquidations on 11,126 farms, 4 percent of the agency's number of active borrowers. By state, those included:

Alabama, 316 borrowers, representing 5.3 percent of the state's FmHA borrowers; Alaska, 2 borrowers and 20 percent; Arizona, 52 and 4.6; Arkansas, 508 and 4.5; California, 185 and 5; Colorado, 116 and 4.9; Connecticut, 2 and 0.6; Delaware, 23 and 6; Florida, 193 and 6.2; Georgia, 862 and 10.5.

Hawaii, 2 and 0.5; Idaho, 93 and 2.1; Illinois, 334 and 3.1; Indiana, 230 and 3.6; Iowa, 388 and 2.2; Kansas, 259 and 3; Kentucky, 288 and 3; Louisiana, 818 and 10.3; Maine, 103 and 5.2; Maryland, 64 and 5.3; Massachusetts, 16 and 3.5; Michigan, 145 and 2.7; Minnesota, 309 and 2.4.

Mississippi, 704 and 5.7; Missouri, 573 and 4.8; Montana, 44 and 1.1; Nebraska, 383 and 3.3; Nevada, 13 and 4.3; New Hampshire, none; New Jersey, 15 and 1.7; New Mexico, 50 and 3.1; New York, 244 and 4.1; North Carolina, 507 and 56; North Dakota, 217 and 2.4; Ohio, 182 and 4.1.

Oklahoma, 126 and 1.2; Oregon, 141 and 5.8; Pennsylvania, 175 and 5.7; Puerto Rico, 32 and 0.9; Rhode Island, 1 and 1.5; South Carolina, 275 and 6.7; South Dakota, 442 and 3.6; Tennessee, 467 and 5.3; Texas, 556 and 3.7; Utah, 15 and 1.

Vermont, 15 and 1.7; Virgin Islands, none; Virginia, 158 and 3.4; Washington, 79 and 3.1; West Virginia, 39 and 2; Wisconsin, 350 and 3.6; and Wyoming, 15 and 1.3.

Tobacco plant could speed up research into genetic engineering

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — A tobacco plant that shines from inside with an eerie green glow could light the way to a dramatic speeding up of research into genetic engineering.

"We have produced plants that can actually glow in the dark," said University of California at San Diego biology professor Stephen H. Howell, one of the scientists who created this strange fusion between a plant and the gene that gives the firefly its "fire."

The faintly luminescent plant is a thing of beauty, Howell said here Thursday, "but this is really an important scientific discovery as well."

The glowing plant is just barely detectable with the eyes in a darkened room, but a 24-hour-exposure photograph clearly shows the light coursing through the roots and veins.

The scientists said they do not care much about just getting plants to shine — although the prospect does raise imaginative possibilities. It could give the phrase "light up a cigarette" a whole new meaning. Or lead to houseplants that serve as a natural night light.

Instead, the researchers see the firefly gene as acting like a signal lantern to tell them of the successes and failures of their genetic engineering work.

"It is the discovery of a very powerful tool that we hope scientists all over the world will be using," said Donald Helinski, director of UCSD's Center for Molecular Genetics, and another member of the research team. Helinski was one of the scientists who last year announced the insertion of the firefly gene into bacteria cells.

The plant research was published in an article last week in Science magazine.

Genetic engineering of recombinant DNA is the technique for putting the genes from one species into the cells of another. Genes are made of DNA, or deoxyribonucleic acid, and they instruct the cell to make the proteins essential for life.

When scientists are trying to insert a new gene into cells, they often have to break open the cells and do a chemical test for the protein made by that gene before they know if the technique was successful. The test takes time and destroys the cells being studied.

The firefly gene, according to the UCSD team, will let the scientists literally see if the genetic transfer was successful. Any cell with the gene will glow — as long as some necessary chemicals are added for the reaction to occur.

Cotton industry sustains loss from poorly managed modules

Economic loss from improperly managed modules hits the cotton industry to the tune of several million dollars annually.

How does it cost the producer?

— Seed cotton harvested with excessive moisture increases the total weight, reduces gin turnout and results in high ginning costs.

— Damp seed cotton stored in modules rapidly increases in temperature. Reduced seed quality and lint grade can result in loss ranging from $25 to $60 per bale.

How does it cost the ginner?

— Wet modules can reduce ginning capacity by as much as 50 percent. With current high energy costs and labor shortages, the cost to the ginner is staggering.

— Grade and value of cottonseed drops below the price paid to the producer at the gin.

How does it cost the oil mill?

— Reduced seed grade. Free Fatty Acid (FFA) percent may range from 0.5 percent in seed from dry modules to a high of 11 to 12 percent in hot, wet modules.

— Wet seed reduces plant capacity by up to 50 percent.

— Loss in seed value can range from $30 to $40 per ton.

How does it cost the seedsman?

— Germination percent can be reduced from 90 percent plus to near zero percent in a matter of days if the temperature in modules approaches 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

— Seed is more sensitive to high moisture in modules. Reduction in seed vigor is likely to occur when temperature approaches a level of 110 degrees Fahrenheit even for a short period of time.

— Loss of seed for planting purposes can cost the seedsman as much as $600 to $700 a ton.

PUBLIC NOTICE

TEXAS UTILITIES ELECTRIC COMPANY, in accordance with its prior public announcement of October 15, 1986, hereby publishes NOTICE that, pursuant to the provisions of the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the Public Utility Commission's Substantive Rule 23.23(b)(2), it has filed an application on November 7, 1986, with the Public Utility Commission of Texas seeking authority to refund to its customers a prior over-recovery under its current interim fuel factors (base rate fuel component) in the amount of $58,445,953 as of September 30, 1986, including applicable interest, and to reduce its interim fuel factors.

Texas Utilities Electric Company has proposed that the refund be made and its interim fuel factors be reduced effective with customers' usage beginning with the first billing month following five days after entry of a Public Utility Commission Order authorizing such refund and reduced interim fuel factors. The proposed change in interim fuel factors is expected to result in a $42,828,268 decrease in fuel revenues or a 10.3% reduction in the interim fuel factors. All customers and classes of customers whose electric service rates include charges for fuel cost pursuant to Texas Utilities Electric Company's Rider FC, entitled "Base Rate Fuel Component," and all territories in which Texas Utilities Electric Company provides electric service through its Dallas Power & Light, Texas Electric Service, and Texas Power & Light divisions will be affected if the application is granted.

A complete copy of said application is on file with the Public Utility Commission of Texas.

On October 23, 1986, a petition was filed with the Public Utility Commission requesting that Texas Utilities Electric Company refund over-recovered fuel cost revenues and to reduce its current interim fuel factors. That petition has been docketed as Docket No. 7159. All customers and classes of customers whose electric service rates include charges for fuel cost pursuant to Texas Utilities Electric Company's Rider FC, entitled "Base Rate Fuel Component," and all territories in which Texas Utilities Electric Company provides electric service through its Dallas Power & Light, Texas Electric Service, and Texas Power & Light divisions will be affected if the petition is granted. A prehearing conference in Docket No. 7159 has been scheduled beginning at 1:30 p.m. on Wednesday, November 19, 1986, at the Commission's offices at 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Austin, Texas; persons who wish to participate as parties must attend the prehearing conference.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Public Utility Commission of Texas as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Man soon to be living Indian history he so enjoys

WACO, Texas (AP) — Tom Dooley likes the unusual.

From driving 40 head of Texas longhorns from San Antonio to Dodge City, Kan., to building a 32-foot-tall, three-bedroom, wooden tepee, Dooley strives to be different.

"I just like to be different from anyone else. I'm just odd," Dooley said. "One time I almost built a house like a shoe. You know, like the nursery rhyme. But I didn't cause I never had the money to experiment before."

Since then, Dooley has bought 4.72 acres of land in Waco. He has been working as an automobile mechanic for Fred Binner Excavation Co. for several years.

And now, he's ready to do "a little experimenting."

Dooley said he is building on his land a three-story tepee that will include three bedrooms, a utility room, 1½ bathrooms, an attic, a living room, a kitchen and central heating and cooling.

The tepee will have trailer doors and a drop ladder on each floor in case of fire, Dooley said.

Inside the tepee, stairs will connect the three floors, he said.

Dooley said he is taking it one step at a time.

"I can't get anything out of the books, so I'm just building it as I go," he said.

Using lumber for his frame, walls and floors, Dooley started building the third floor and the attic four weeks ago with a friend.

Working on weekends and weeknights, they nearly have completed the third floor and the attic.

"I wanted to build the top-half first to study the wind break, how easy it is to cool and how sturdy it is before I build the bottom half," Dooley said.

Tom Dooley of Waco stands next to the first floor of his 32-foot-tall teepee. When finished, the teepee will stand three stories tall with three bedrooms and all the comforts of home. Dooley says his interest in Indian history spurred him to build the teepee.

He said he plans to place plastic on the installation boards to make the tepee "rainproof" and then place stucco on the top.

"I want the outside to look like an old piece of rawhide," Dooley said.

Dooley said he plans to start living in the tepee.

Before finishing the tepee, Dooley said he wants to get more ideas about how to make his tepee more authentic.

"I want to go up to Indian country to get more ideas. From what people say, a tepee door should face the east. So I put my door facing east," Dooley said.

"I've been told that eagle feathers and a cow skull are placed inside the tepee to keep the evil spirits away," he said.

Dooley said he hopes to finish the tepee by the fall of 1987.

Dooley started thinking about the idea five years ago. "It just struck my fancy," he said. "I had carpenters come out here and shake their heads and laugh. Some said that it couldn't be done, but I'm crazy enough to try it."

Dooley began planning and drawing tepees about a year ago.

"None of it works out here like it does on a piece of paper," Dooley said.

When he is finished, Dooley said he might sell Indian artifacts, Indian jewelry or even start his own tepee business.

"I might rent a bunch of them out like tourist cabins," Dooley said.

Or Dooley said he might start a tepee construction business.

"If I could find a way to do it, I could make steel portable tepees and mold them together like they do portable buildings," Dooley said.

Dooley traces his interest in tepees and Indian culture to his childhood days in West Plains, Mo.

As a child, he rode horses, hunted and played cowboys and Indians in the small town about seven miles from the Arkansas line.

"I always loved the outdoors, fishing and the Old West even when I was a boy," Dooley said.

His interest mushroomed in 1972 when he and 11 members of the Historical Performance Society, which was a private corporation in Waco, drove 40 head of Texas Longhorn cattles along U.S. Highway 283 to Dodge City.

The Circle Five was the Historical Performance Society's official brand name.

Dooley was a trail boss. "We called ourselves the dirty dozen," he said.

With 10 riders, two trail bosses, a chuck wagon driver and 20 horses, the Circle Five made the journey in 77 days, two hours and 24 minutes, Dooley said.

They left San Antonio on July 1, 1972, and arrived in Dodge City on Sept. 15, 1972, he said.

During the cattle drive, Dooley and his men camped near Cheyenne, Okla., the site of Gen. George A. Custer's surprise attack of Cheyenne Chief Black Kettle and his camp.

Custer and his soldiers killed Black Kettle and killed or wounded more than 100 people.

That is when his curiosity about Indian culture peaked.

"I learned about Black Kettle in the history books but it's different when you go to the museums and go through the country where it happened," Dooley said.

"I just like to be different from anyone else. I'm just odd. ...One time I almost built a house like a shoe. You know, like the nursery rhyme. But I didn't cause I never had the money to experiment before."

'Cats try to uphold 4-5A tradition

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — District 4-5A has been king of 5A football playoffs since the two-team system was introduced in 1982.

In that first year, Odessa Permian and San Angelo — by virtue of a coin flip victory over three other district teams — advanced into the elite tournament and started a trend that has yet to be broken.

Both the Panthers and Bobcats won the first two rounds of competition before losing at regional. Success has been even greater since. But, until this year, not for San Angelo.

The Midland Lee Rebels replaced the Bobcats as 4-5A runner-up the next three years and, in 1983, made it as far as the state championship game where they lost to Converse Judson.

The following two years, Permian gained the state championship game, only to be tied by Beaumont French in 1984 and to be blown off the field by Houston Yates in 1985.

Now, Permian is gone and San Angelo is back once again, this time teamed with Midland Lee as 4-5A heads into bi-district action this weekend.

The Bobcats weren't given their playoff berth and shot at No. 3 ranked Amarillo Palo Duro 8 p.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium, they went out and earned it. They posted a do-or-die 14-7 victory over the Panthers at Ratliff Stadium last week to eliminate Permian from the playoffs for the first time since 1979.

IT COULD be the kind of victory San Angelo needs to build future success.

"You sure want to win a game like that," said San Angelo head coach Jimmie Keeling of his first win over Permian in eight years as Bobcat head coach. "Overall, it certainly should be helpful. But, the thing we have to do now is forget that sucker and move forward. We've got another tough football team to play."

And, that football team has playoff experience. This is the third straight trip into the bi-district round of 64 for the Dons and they're still looking for a win.

"We lost both years in bi-district to Permian," said Palo Duro head coach Doug James.

Both teams are showing respect for their foe, each down-playing his team's advantages and and pointing toward the other's strengths.

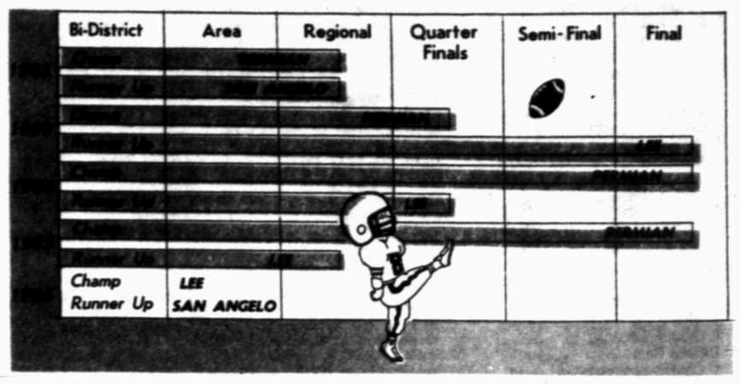
"I guess only one word would describe them from what we've seen and that's awesome," said James. "They're awfully big and physical. They have a size advantage."

"They've got a lot of speed, certainly more than we have by a great deal, more speed than most people," said Keeling. "They have size, good size."

"If we have quickness, it isn't much more than San Angelo," countered James. "We've got some kids that run good but we didn't win many track meets last year. We don't have the speed people think we do."

Offensively, Palo Duro and San Angelo have four players on the front line at 200-plus while Palo Duro lists three on defense to San Angelo's one.

How 4-5A Teams Have Fared



"I DON'T know if we'll be able to control the game," said James. "Those guys are so big and they're going to keep the ball a long time unless they break loose and score some big ones."

Both coaches agree mistakes could prove to be a deciding factor in the game and the key to success will be containing the big play.

"I think it will be a game like we've played the last couple of weeks," said Keeling. "The team that really wants to win it the most, I mean deep down to the soles of their feet, and it will go to the team that makes the fewest mistakes."

"We have to keep them from breaking loose and on offense we have to watch out for penalties and turnovers," said James. "If we start making mistakes, we'll be in trouble."

One sour note going into the game for the Bobcats: Keeling's streak of five straight coin flip wins came to a halt when the two teams met to determine home team.

"I wasn't mentally ready to flip," said Keeling. "No, they called it and we lost. No matter, we'd just as soon wear white anyway."

Interesting match ups loom for 4-5A

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

If Midland Lee gets by Amarillo Palo Duro tonight (8 p.m.) at Texas Tech's Jones Stadium in Lubbock, the Rebels will catch the winner tonight's El Paso Austin-El Paso Eastwood in the Sun Bowl in next week's Area round game.

San Angelo, the other half of the District 4-5A playoff entry, faces unbeaten but tied Amarillo Palo Duro at 8 p.m. Saturday in Jones Stadium. The winner meets El Paso Bel Air, an 18-14 winner over El Paso Irvin Thursday night.

The Lee bracket would send the Rebels, if all goes right, into the third week against the survivor of this week's L.D. Bell vs. Duncanville and Denton vs. Fort Worth Southwest skirmishing.

Originally Duncanville was tabbed as the team to beat, but lost its final game of the season.

Meanwhile, in the San Angelo bracket, it will be Wichita Falls vs. Trimble Tech and Trinity vs. MacArthur to complete the Region I lineup...

Tech SID Joe Hornaday informs that there are tickets available for Saturday's SMU-Tech SWC game for fans who want to make it a three-game weekend....

DID ANYONE stop to think how close Abilene came to snarling the District 4-5A race beyond repair?

The Warbirds defeated Midland Lee, 6-3, in the season's finale last week, a relatively harmless setback, but what if Abilene had held on to that two touchdown lead going into the fourth quarter against San Angelo earlier in the season? They might still be trying to unravel the snarl....

One Fort Worth paper took note over the weekend of Abilene's win over Lee, the state's fifth ranked team, and added with more than a hint of snideness, "That's the same Abilene that lost to Eastern Hills, 28-27, earlier in the year." Eastern Hills was one of the also rans in 6-5A, whose champion, Southwest, finished the regular season with a 7-3 record....

For West Texans, the fact that Irving MacArthur and Trinity made the playoffs is bad news. Last year Cinderella MacArthur eliminated Midland Lee in the third week of the playoffs. And it was Trinity that ushered Odessa Permian from the playoffs prematurely not too many seasons ago.

Both teams are coached by former District 4-5A coaches. John Reddell, former Midland High coach, is at Trinity and Ray Overton, who had many successful seasons at Abilene Cooper, is at MacArthur.

The good news is that Trinity and MacArthur play each other in a first round game Friday night at Texas Stadium....

TRINITY AND L.D. Bell tied for first in 7-5A with 8-1 (district) and 9-1 (season) records....MacArthur gained the playoffs in Cinderella fashion, a freak string of circumstances. Duncanville, the ajudged power in the metroplex, was upset and all Nimitz had to do was win to nail down the other spot. Instead they tied.....One of Reddell's top players at Trinity is son Brad, the Trojans leading receiver and scorer...

In District 5-5A, Wichita Falls and Denton are the representatives with 9-0-1 and 6-0-1 season and district records....

Mitchell hopes to feast on playoff fare

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

For Gerald Mitchell of Crane, Friday's bi-district playoff game is little more than unfinished business.

Mitchell is one of the premier tailbacks in the state with 1,620 yards through 10 games, darting through defenses like a rabbit through a garden fence.

It is the second straight year Mitchell's running has plowed the way for the Cranes into the state Class 3A playoffs. But the 6-2½, 195-pound senior, has unpleasant memories of bi-district play.

But it was in bi-district against Lampasas in 1985 that Mitchell had the game he would like to forget. The Badgers snared the crafty Mitchell, allowing him just eight yards in a bitter, 30-14 loss.

"I would hate for this season to end in bi-district — not in my senior year," Mitchell said after a recent Crane game. "We've got some making up to do."

Mitchell and the rest of the Cranes can begin uprooting past bi-district failure tonight in a 7:30 bi-district game with Denver City at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium.

THE CRANES, champions of District 4-3A and on a six-game winning skein, face the 9-1 Mustangs, runner-up in 3-3A. Denver City's only loss was a 22-21 squeaker to district titlist Lubbock Roosevelt.

It'll be a homecoming for Crane coach Rickey White, a 1966 Odessa Permian graduate and a member of the Panthers first state championship team. But it is the first time he has brought a team onto the Ratliff Stadium carpet.

"I'm happy to be playing in Odessa, everybody likes to go home. But it's been such a long time," White said.

White points to improvement in his defensive unit against a powerful Denver City offense as the key to taking the next step in the playoff process. In the title-clinching game at Kermit last week, the Cranes held the Yellowjackets offense scoreless in an 18-2 decision.

"Our play on defense was encouraging — I mean they didn't give an inch at times," White said. "They held Kermit 12 times inside the 10 — they got so many tries because of flags — the last two on the ½-inch line.

"Paul Smith, our defensive end, played maybe the finest defensive game Crane, Texas, has ever seen. He's been steady for us all year, but Friday night he just exploded."

Seniors Darin Guy and Trey McDonald join juniors Smith and Tony Torres up front to anchor a defense that has allowed just three touchdowns in six weeks.

Crane vs. Denver City

Crane Offense: Center-Barry Wright, Sr. Guards-Dean Barrett, Ronnie Ornales, Sr. Tackles-Devin Beardslee, Sr., Kip Brunson, Sr. Tight End-Brian Weis, Sr. or Brent Ward, Soph. Straight end-Carl Claunch, Sr. Quarterback-Mark Allen, Sr. Fullback-Cliff Wilson, Sr. Split back-Sharod Vaden, Soph. Tailback-Gerald Mitchell, Sr.

DENVER CITY lines up more offensive firepower than any team the Cranes have faced since playing Monahans in the third week of the season. Tailback Chris Gravitt is the running threat with 1,213 yards, but Mustang coach Alan Cornelius has three fullbacks with combined yardage of more than 750 yards.

Quarterback Jason Vogt can also move the ball through the air, stockpiling more than 1,300 yards passing. So the Mustangs can more than test the Cranes defensive unit.

But Cranes' staple all season has been offense, and that offense sprouts around Mitchell, the workhorse tailback. Making him more effective has been the running of fullback Cliff Wilson and sophomore tailback Sharod Vaden.

That trio gives White a cornucopia of offensive weapons to choose from. He's just hoping the result keeps the Cranes dining from the horn of plenty.

Region I play at Chap Center

The Class 5A Region I volleyball tournament gets underway Saturday beginning at 9 a.m. at Midland College's Chaparral Center.

The tournament brings in four teams from the region to vie for one berth in the state tournament in Austin next week. Action tips off with Amarillo High against Arlington High in the first semifinal game at 9 a.m.

The second semifinal pits Grand Prairie against Amarillo Tascosa at approximately 10:30 p.m. The regional final will get begin at 3 p.m.

Admission for the day long event is $4 for adults and $2 for children and can be purchased at the gate the day of the tournament.

Do 'Hogs have Aggies psyched out?

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill is worried about the big psychological advantage the Arkansas Razorbacks own going into Saturday's Southwest Conference football showdown in Little Rock.

"They are trying to make some kind of grudge match out of this," Sherrill said. "They're saying they don't have any love lost for us. Well, I'm glad they're saying it. We'll be ready."

Sherrill is particularly miffed that the Aggies only got 4,000 tickets for the game.

"That's not very many," Sherrill said. "We could use some more."

The Aggies have a large following of fans. Two weeks ago when they defeated Southern Methodist in Texas Stadium on homecoming, the majority of the fans were pulling for the Aggies.

A&M has a two-game lead in the SWC with three to play.

A combination of an A&M victory over Arkansas and a Texas Christian victory over Texas on Saturday could seal a second consecutive Cotton Bowl visit on New Year's Day.

IN OTHER games on Saturday, Texas was a six-point favorite over TCU in a noon (Raycom-TV) game in Fort Worth, Baylor was a 24-point pick over Rice in Houston in a 2 p.m. game, and Texas Tech was a point favorite over SMU in a 2 p.m. game in Lubbock.

Beating Arkansas in Arkansas has been a big problem for the Aggies.

A&M hasn't won on the road against the Hogs since 1976. They haven't even scored in Arkansas since 1980.

The Aggies were blanked 28-0 in Fayetteville and 35-0 in Little Rock in their last two games.

Arkansas is 8-3 against A&M in Little Rock and leads the series 35-21-3. A&M hasn't won in Little Rock since a 31-10 triumph in 1976.

Ignoring history, the oddsmakers have installed the Aggies as four-point favorites for the 2:30 p.m. regionally televised (ABC) clash.

Arkansas is coming off a 29-14 loss to Baylor.

"Texas A&M has played better than anyone in the Southwest Conference since the opening loss to LSU," said Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield. "They have done a great job of rallying and coming back after that defeat.

"They were terrific in rallying against Baylor and SMU."

Hatfield said A&M quarterback Kevin Murray "is the hottest quarterback in the league. Murray throws well and runs enough to keep you honest."

Arkansas, Baylor and Texas Tech are being heavily courted by the bowls.

THE INDEPENDENCE Bowl is strongly interested in Tech, the Bluebonnet Bowl would love to have Baylor, and the Liberty Bowl, among others, is looking at Arkansas.

Texas Tech is assured of its first winning season since 1978.

The Raiders are 6-3 in Coach David McWilliams' first season after serving as Fred Akers' defensive coordinator at Texas.

"I'm proud for the team that we are getting some bowl consideration," McWilliams said. "It's great but our players know they have to perform well against SMU to enhance that position."

SMU faces 'death penalty'

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist could be the first to get the "death penalty," a two-year suspension of the Mustang football program, if the most recent allegations about cash payments prove true, an NCAA official said Thursday.

The penalty, which has yet to be imposed on any school, is part of a 1985 sanctions package adopted by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

SMU now is serving three years' probation mandated in 1985 because of illegal cash payments to players by boosters and other NCAA violations.

Linebacker David Stanley, who dropped out of SMU in December 1985, told Dallas' WFAA-TV in a report aired Wednesday that he received $750 per month in payments that continued after the NCAA sanctions. Stanley also told the station he was paid $25,000 to sign with the Southwest Conference school in 1983.

Athletic Director Bob Hitch and head coach Bobby Collins denied Stanley's allegations.

LaMar Hoyt to serve minimum of 60 days

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — San Diego Padres pitcher LaMarr Hoyt must serve a minimum of 60 days and possibly a year in federal prison, followed by five years of supervised probation, after pleading guilty to two federal drug charges here Thursday in U.S. District Court.

Hoyt will be sentenced Dec. 16 by U.S. Magistrate Roger Curtis McKee.

Hoyt, 31, never made it back to his car after walking aross the U.S.-Mexico border at San Ysidro on Oct. 28. When he tried to return later in the day, Customs agents who stopped Hoyt found almost 500 pills — Valium and Propoxyphene, the active ingredient in the painkiller Darvon — hidden on his person.

Hoyt faced smuggling charges that could have meant 15 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. It was the third time in nine months that Hoyt had been caught with illegal drugs. He was detained at the same border for trying to bring marijuana and pills into the United States on Feb. 10, then was arrested 18 days later by San Diego police for possession of marijuana and a switchblade knife.

"We just wanted to make sure he went to jail," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Pat Swan Thursday. "In previous cases, he was only fined and given probation. The lesson has not been learned. The time has come to pay the price."

When arrested last month at the border, Hoyt was in the first year of a three-year probation from the city of San Diego stemming from the Feb. 18 incident. The city would wait before taking action, if any, against Hoyt for violating his probation.

Asked if the penalties might be viewed as a slap on the wrist of a three-time offender, Swan said, "Not at all. He's losing his liberty for 60 days, minimum, and the government could ask for a year (sentence)."

Hoyt's career with the Padres, it would appear, is over. His won-lost record went from 16-8 with a 3.47 earned-run average in 1985, his first year with the Padres, to 8-11, 5.15 last season, but it's this latest blotch on his drug record that likely will sever his relationship with a team among the most active in major-league baseball's battle against substance abuse.

Notre Dame poised to pen chapter in storied past

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Notre Dame is the most hallowed of all college football schools. Not only have the Irish won more national championships (seven) than anyone else since the Associated Press poll began in 1936, but they also have been involved in many memorable games.

Nov. 1, 1913 — The combination of quarterback Gus Dorais and end Knute Rockne popularizes the forward pass as a legitimate offensive weapon in a 35-13 upset of Army.

Nov. 10, 1928 — Rockne, now Notre Dame's coach, makes his famous "Win One for the Gipper" pregame speech and the Irish beat mighty Army 12-6 at New York's Yankee Stadium.

Nov. 2, 1935 — Notre Dame's 18-13 upset of Ohio State in Columbus is still labeled "The Game of the Century" in some quarters.

Nov. 9, 1946 — Notre Dame snaps Army's 25-game winning streak with a 0-0 tie at Yankee Stadium.

Oct. 24, 1953 — Johnny Lattner returns the opening kickoff 80 yards to set up the first touchdown in a 27-14 victory that ends Georgia Tech's 31-game unbeaten streak.

Nov. 16, 1957 — Halfback Dick Lynch scores the game's only touchdown in a 7-0 triumph that snaps Oklahoma's 47-game winning streak, still the longest in college football history.

Nov. 19, 1966 — Notre Dame and Michigan State battle to a 10-10 tie that keeps the Irish No. 1 en route to the national championship.

Jan. 1, 1971 — The Irish down Texas 24-11 in the Cotton Bowl and end the Longhorns' 30-game winning streak.

Oct. 27, 1973 — A 23-14 victory that snaps Southern Cal's 23-game unbeaten streak is the pivotal triumph in Notre Dame's drive to the national championship.

Dec. 31, 1973 — Notre Dame 24, Alabama 23 in the famous Sugar Bowl shootout.

Jan. 2, 1978 — Fifth-ranked Notre Dame rips No. 1 Texas 38-10 in the Cotton Bowl and vaults to the national championship.

Nov. 15, 1986 — Notre Dame Stadium. The unranked Irish are 4-4 but have won three games in a row under first-year Coach Lou Holtz, including last week's 61-29 rout of Southern Methodist. Third-ranked Penn State is 9-0, has a 20-game regular-season winning streak and is making a serious run at the national championship.

"Some people think we turned the corner because of the way we beat SMU," says Holtz. "But with our schedule, every time you think you've turned the corner there's another corner waiting for you."

Penn State is a 5-point favorite. This corner picks . . . Penn State 24-14.

Tulsa at No. 1 Miami, Fla. (favored by 35): Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson points out that Tulsa has beaten a Big Eight team (Oklahoma State) and a Southwest Conference team (Houston). He fails to mention that Tulsa lost to Division I-AA Louisiana Tech . . . Miami 48-7.

Minnesota at No. 2 Michigan (by 25): "The independents like Joe (Paterno) want a national championship playoff because they don't have a conference championship and they don't have a specific bowl bid," says Michigan's Bo Schembechler. Bo is 3-10 in bowl games . . . Michigan 31-14.

No. 4 Oklahoma (by 23) at Colorado: If the Buffs win, they need only a tie against Kansas State to go to the Orange Bowl . . . Oklahoma 28-14.

Wichita State at No. 5 Arizona State (no line): The Sun Devils are in the Rose Bowl and Wichita State's in Kansas . . . Arizona State 56-7.

No. 6 Nebraska (by 31) at Kansas: The Cornhuskers' big one is next week against Oklahoma . . . Nebraska 42-10.

No. 7 Texas A&M (by 4) at No. 17 Arkansas (Little Rock): The Cotton Bowl still has a shot at Miami, but not if Texas A&M loses . . . Arkansas 24-21.

Georgia at No. 8 Auburn (by 10½): The Southeastern Conference race for the Sugar Bowl doesn't include Georgia. It does include . . . Auburn 28-14.

No. 9 Ohio State (by 20) at Wisconsin: The Buckeyes have won eight in a row after an 0-2 start but they've dropped four out f the last five to Wisconsin . . . Ohio State 30-13.

No. 19 UCLA at No. 10 Washington (by 3): UCLA could miss out on a bowl if it loses its last two games . . . Washington 24-17.

Temple at No. 11 Alabama (by 20): Temple's Bruce Arians coached under Bear Bryant at . . . Alabama 35-13.

No. 12 LSU (by 9) at Mississippi State (Jackson): The Bulldogs are fading and the Tigers are roaring . . . LSU 27-20.

No. 15 Clemson (by 5) at Maryland (Baltimore): The Pressbox Bowl because that's where Coaches Danny Ford and Bobby Ross have been sentenced by the Atlantic Coast Conference . . . Clemson 28-17.

No. 18 Baylor (by 24) at Rice: The Bears reportedly are bound for the Bluebonnet Bowl . . . Baylor 42-14.

Tennessee at No. 20 Mississippi (by 6½): The Vols destroy Ole Miss' Sugar Bowl hopes in the first part of a day-night doubleheader in Jackson. Upset Special of the Week . . . Tennessee 27-17.

RUTGERS AT Pitt (by 7): The Scarlet Knights catch the Panthers between Miami and Penn State. Second Upset Special . . . Rutgers 21-17.

Buffs prepare amid turmoil

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The University of Colorado does not face penalties from the National Collegiate Athletic Association for failing to subject three football players to its drug counseling program last August, according to an NCAA representative.

The three, quarterback Mark Hatcher, fullback Anthony Weatherspoon and backup cornerback William Harvey, admitted to campus police that they had used cocaine.

But Ursula Walsh, NCAA director of drug education, said Thursday that the NCAA cannot penalize Colorado.

"If the university did what it felt it should have done, according to its institutional procedures, there can be no penalty from the NCAA," Walsh said. "The decision is up to the university."

The drug turmoil comes as CU football fans and players are getting ready for the school's biggest game in 10 years.

The Buffaloes, who earlier upset Nebraska, host Oklahoma Saturday with an Orange Bowl berth on the line. Then it was disclosed that the four players have admitted using drugs and a charge of trespass was filed against one player.

The shadow was cast on Wednesday, when the Rocky Mountain News reported in a front-page story that four players, including Hatcher and Weatherspoon, admitted they had used cocaine in the past year.

The cocaine disclosures grew out of an investigation into a May 6 burglary of a school dormitory room. Late Wednesday, Weatherspoon was charged with second-degree criminal trespass — a misdemeanor — in connection with the burglary, which involved a computer, television and camera.

The university's response to the drug revelations was swift.

A livid Coach Bill McCartney, slamming a copy of the newspaper onto his desk top, said, "They admitted they had tried it. Now it comes out like they are some kind of druggies, which they aren't because we've tested them. This baloney is only a distraction."

Colorado initiated a drug-testing program for its athletes two years ago, then adopted a stiffer plan Aug. 16 that included random testing. The program is being challenged by the American Civil Liberties Union.

Athletic director Bill Marolt said the university has completed 663 tests since August involving all team members, and all have shown negative results.

"We're on top of it," Marolt said. "We've had 663 tests, all negative. We're not here to deal with past mistakes. We're here to deal with future growth and improvement.

Somewhat appropriately, a siege mentality has set in. At a team meeting just prior to the practice Wednesday, the players voted to refuse media interviews until after the Oklahoma game.

McCartney, who has insisted that Colorado runs "the cleanest drug program in the United States," said he was unaware that the players had admitted using drugs until the newspaper disclosure.

McCartney, trying to find something positive about the week's developments, said, "Maybe it will bring us closer together."

Breland paves path to title, KOs Orozco

NEW YORK (AP) — The date is not definite, but the way has been cleared for undefeated welterweight Mark Breland, ranked second in the World Boxing Association, to fight top-rated Harold Volbrecht of South Africa.

"Maybe I was looking forward to that fight," Breland said after stopping Orlando Orozco of Venezuela at 1:46 of the second round Thursday night at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum.

Breland, a 1984 Olympic champion, had little trouble in running his record to 16-0. Still, the 6-foot-2, 149-pound boxer from New York was not pleased with his performance in the scheduled 10-round bout.

"My jab is my whole career and tonight I didn't have it," Breland said. "My jab sets up everything. Sure, I can punch with one hand and still win, but I can't win the way I want to by fighting like that."

Breland needed only one punch, a solid right to the head, to stop the 145-pound Orozco. Breland's big blow knocked down Orozco for a seven-count, and when he was still wobbly, referee John Colan stopped the bout.

Breland got credit for his 11th knockout, and the 145-pound Orozco fell to 12-6-1. Orozco, 5-foot-8, had taken the fight after both Sanford Ricks of Newark, N.J., and Tomas Garcia of Harlingen, Texas, pulled out.

"It's back to school to get going again. I have to learn from the mistakes I created here tonight. Things are becoming better and better for me and I have to take care of business."

That busines is the bout with Volbrecht and Shelly Finkel, Breland's manager, reported that the bout will take place sometime in January.

'Canes attract most attention from Bowls

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The Orange Bowl wants Miami. The Gator Bowl wants Miami. The Florida Citrus Bowl wants Miami. Bowls like the Hall of Fame Bowl aren't quite so picky.

The Orange, Citrus and Gator all have legitimate shots at luring the Hurricanes, but all three could be left out.

Miami Athletic Director Sam Jankovich says the Hurricanes want to play the best team available for the best financial package. Third-ranked Penn State and the $2.3 million payoff in the Tempe, Ariz.-based Fiesta Bowl seem to fit those criteria.

"We like to think we have contingency plans," said Citrus Bowl spokesman Dylan Thomas. "If the Fiesta gets Penn State-Miami, we will be scrambling for the top conference runners-up.

"If Penn State loses this week and Miami and Penn State go in separate ways, it's a little more likely we'll get two of the top runners-up."

One likely conference winner, Clemson of the Atlantic Coast Conference, also figures in the plans for the Gator and the Citrus.

The Jacksonville-based Gator is scheduled for Dec. 27 in Jacksonville, while the Orlando-based Citrus has moved to Jan. 1 to join the Big 5 of the Orange, Rose, Cotton, Sugar and Fiesta bowls on the busiest day of the college football post-season.

The Big Ten and Pac-10 winners are locked into the Rose, the Southwest winner into the Cotton and the Southeast winner into the Sugar.

Because Miami and Penn State are independents, the bowls without conference affiliations are scrambling to attract them both. The Fiesta was the first to put together a special package for a national championship matchup.

Gator Bowl Executive Director John Bell said his organization has firmed up a similar payout, while Thomas says the Citrus nearly has completed its special financial package for a possible Miami-Penn State matchup.

Jankovich is sitting back and listening with a smile on his face. "We're going to fight to hold out on our decision as long as possible," he said.

Bowls aren't allowed to make official bids until Nov. 22.

Penn State, 9-0, still has tough games against Notre Dame this week and Pittsburgh the following week. A Nittany Lion loss this week could change the entire bowl picture.

"Everything depends on what happens Saturday," said Bell. "We'll have people all over Saturday. We do have some contingencies set up" in case the Miami-Penn State matchup falls through.

High on everybody's backup list is the loser of the Michigan-Ohio State game. The winner will go to the Rose Bowl.

The Gator also is looking at Washington and Auburn, among others, Bell said.

The Orange Bowl's chances of getting Miami hinge on Penn State losing and Nebraska beating Oklahoma to win the Big Eight title and the automatic berth that goes with it. Jankovich has said the Hurricanes, who beat Oklahoma 28-16 earlier this season, would prefer not to play the Sooners again in the Orange Bowl.

Other than Miami, the Orange Bowl is courting Clemson, Auburn, Alabama, Michigan and Ohio State.

The Orange Bowl committee's nightmare would be for Colorado to beat Oklahoma this Saturday and earn the conference championship with four non-conference losses.

Hall of Fame Bowl officials realize they can't compete for the big game. Instead, their scouts will scour the country this weekend, attending 12 games in search of the best available team.

But one of the likely teams will be found in Florida. Officials say either Florida, 5-4, or Florida State, 4-3-1, could be pitted against a team from another section of the country.

Because the game has a national television contract, the selection committee feels obligated to pluck its other entry from outside the South, Mains said. The top candidates are Boston College, Indiana, Michigan State and Notre Dame.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Saturday, November 15, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your self-confidence gets a big boost. You find you can accomplish almost anything! Responding emotionally to constructive criticism could jeopardize a relationship or job opportunity. It may be time to move on. Romance is more exciting and glamorous than in the recent past. Travel should be welcomed as an aid to business. New doors open to you.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Perky Petula Clark, Justice Felix Frankfurter, actor John Kerr, actor Ed Asner, actress-author Joanna Barnes, Tennessee politician Howard Baker, artist Georgia O'Keeffe, baseball's Gus Bell, priest-politician Father Robert Drinan, statesman W. Averell Harriman, actor Yaphet Kotto, poet Marianne Moore, WWII German Gen. Erwin "Desert Fox" Rommel.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New business ventures look attractive but require investigation. Check things out before getting involved. Play it safe: consult experts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pay more attention to the business side of your life. Your work is being evaluated by higher-ups. Discuss your plans with mate or partner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Refrain from asking friends for advice — they may not have practical answers. Keep spending within reasonable limits. Do not let boredom send you on a binge.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An excellent day for dealing with an authority figure. Be wary of vague promises. Keep up with the latest developments in your field. A former romantic partner re-enters the picture. Go slow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Not a good day to make a major move. Your financial resources continue to require careful handling. A short trip could lead to romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If you keep friends waiting too long, you could end up on your own. Romance is very much on your mind. If the object of your affection lives far away, write letters!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Joint efforts are favored. Seek family members' cooperation in holding down spending. Perform more services for yourself. Romance is happier and more exciting than in recent months. Make the most of it!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Use this somewhat quiet day to work on projects that require close attention to detail. An old friend is anxious to get in touch with you. Call or write a long-time ally.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you work today, ignore those who gossip. Put more energy into your job. Your dedication will not go unrewarded. Enroll in a special course.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Teamwork is easier to promote today. Tackle a big clean-up project. You may need more time to ponder an important decision. Mate or partner gives you the benefit of his/her experience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make a list before going shopping today — you will save both time and money. Avoid doing business with people you do not really know. Some deception is possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Self-improvement activities that do not require too much physical energy are favored. Invite friends or neighbors over this evening. Group gatherings hold more appeal than one-on-one encounters.

As declarer, don't look upon the two players sitting to your right and left as enemies. If you coax them a little, they are ready to be friendlier than you imagined in your wildest dreams.

This hand came up in a match between Britain and the Netherlands at a tournament in Europe. In one room the British North-South pair bid to four spades. Despite the fact they held a combined 26 points, that contract had no play. Indeed, declarer had to guess the heart position to hold himself to down one.

In the other room the Dutch pair reached three no trump on an auction which was equivalent to the one shown. West could have settled matters by leading a low diamond, but instead she chose the jack of hearts. Declarer, who had eight fast tricks with a 3-2 spade split, could now have established a ninth by covering with dummy's queen, capturing East's king with the ace and then leading another heart.

The only problem with that was the defenders would surely have realized what was going on and would have found the diamond shift to defeat the contract. Declarer instead accomplished the same thing with an innocent deceptive maneuver—he allowed West's jack to win.

Somewhat naively, West continued with a low heart, and declarer was home free. The table's eight of hearts forced East to cover with the king, and declarer now had his two heart tricks and his nine tricks overall.

We can advance all sorts of reasons why West should have found the diamond shift. At the table, however, we are inclined to believe that we, too, would have been victims of declarer's inspired play.

Lucy will always have home at CBS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lucille Ball's new ABC series may be in trouble, but she always has a home at CBS, where her shows were ratings champions for more than 20 years, the president of CBS Entertainment said.

CBS is planning a 35th anniversary special celebrating Miss Ball's classic series "I Love Lucy," Bud Grant said Thursday.

"I told her we'd be delighted to do another movie with her," Grant said. "She did 'Stone Pillow' for us last year and it was very well received by the audience and the critics. The door is open because I have such a high regard for her. She was with CBS for so many years."

ABC has placed "Life With Lucy" on hiatus because of low ratings. The half-hour comedy ranked 71st among 76 programs in the latest the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

Grant said plans for the anniversary program had been under way before ABC pulled the new show, but that no date for airing had been set.

"I Love Lucy" debuted on CBS on Oct. 15, 1951, and ran until 1961. Miss Ball reappeared on CBS during the 1962 season in "The Lucy Show," which was renamed "Here's Lucy" in 1968. The half-hour comedy ran until 1974.

WINCHESTER, Va. (AP) — A seven-mile section of U.S. 522 will be named the Patsy Cline Memorial Highway in honor of the country music star who was born here and is buried in a cemetery next to the highway.

The vote by the Frederick County Board of Supervisors came after a public hearing Wednesday night and applies to the stretch of highway running south from the city limit to the Clarke County line.

The singer was killed in an airplane crash in 1963 at the height of a career that included such hits as "Crazy," "I Fall to Pieces," and "Sweet Dreams," which also was the title of a recent movie about her life.

• • •

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Seventy-six-year-old former Gov. Orval E. Faubus has announced plans to marry an elementary school teacher.

Faubus said Thursday that he and Jan Wittenburg, 43, of Conway, who teaches fifth grade in Mayflower, will wed Nov. 23 in Little Rock.

"I teach Arkansas history, and I'm just really proud to be married to the former governor," Ms. Wittenburg said.

Faubus said his financee was divorced about eight years ago, and has a 21-year-old daughter and a 16-year-old son.

Faubus divorced his first wife, Alta. His second wife, Elizabeth, was killed by an intruder at their home.

• • •

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Frank Sinatra, recovering from emergency surgery, is walking hospital corridors and joking with doctors and nurses, hospital officials say.

Sinatra, 70, had normal vital signs Thursday, according to a statement by Dr. Alan Altman, the singer's physician at Eisenhower Medical Center.

Surgeons removed a 12-inch section of Sinatra's large intestine Sunday after the entertainer became ill in Atlantic City, N.J.

His stay in the hospital was expected to last several more days.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Chad Everett says he hopes the unveiling of his star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame is just the beginning.

"Just put a "t" on the end of 'star,' and you'll know how I feel about this whole thing," Everett, who has been acting for 26 years, said at ceremonies Thursday.

Everett played Dr. Joe Gannon on the old CBS-TV series "Medical Center" and starred in the television series "The Dakotas," "Hagan" and "Rousters." He was a contract player for Warner Bros. and MGM and has appeared in several feature films.

• • •

ATLANTA (AP) — Eliot Wigginton, who turned a classroom teaching idea into the Foxfire Project, is the state's 1987 Teacher of the Year.

Wigginton, whose high school students have produced nine best-selling books in the "Foxfire" series, was chosen from among 131 entries, the state Board of Education said Thursday.

"Although people here have been fans and have bought the Foxfire books, most of the awards to the program have been from outside the state. This is a special honor," Wigginton said.

Wigginton began Foxfire to motivate his northeast Georgia students by having them interview their elders about mountain crafts and arts.

The program has grown into a business with nine full-time employees.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Short-story writer Grace Paley has been named New York's first State Author.

She will receive an honorarium of $10,000 and give two public readings each year of her two-year appointment, the nominating committee announced Thursday.

Paley, 64, is the author of three collections of short stories: "Later the Same Day," "Enormous Changes at the Last Minute" and "The Little Disturbances of Man." She has homes in New York City and Vermont.

• • •

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Nicholas Daniloff, the reporter who was accused of spying by the Soviet Union, cut his lecture fee and will collect $8,500 for a three-day appearance at Stanford University, a spokeswoman said.

Daniloff is expected to be at Stanford on Nov. 20-22, said Mary Thurber of the student Council of Presidents.

After the student body paid Dr. Ruth Westheimer $7,500 for a talk Tuesday, the student senate balked at paying Daniloff's stated fee of $10,000 for one lecture.

"It's worth the money now," Thurber said. "For three days of work, $8,500 is pretty reasonable."

CHICAGO (AP) — A toddler who had undergone a rare bowel transplant died early today after he suddenly began to bleed internally, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The 17-month-old boy, Ryan Threet of Mountain Home, Ark., died at 2:50 a.m. "of sudden massive internal bleeding from the transplant," said Mary Ann Redeker, spokeswoman for Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center.

"It just happened so fast there was no time to take him into surgery," Ms. Redeker said. Ryan died in the intensive care unit, she said.

Ms. Redeker, who could provide little details, said she did not know if the surgeons were present at the time of Ryan's death. She did say Ryan's parents had been notified.

The child's father and his surgeon had said Thursday that Ryan was "holding up real well" following the experimental surgery two days before. Dr. James W. Williams said infection was the primary concern in the short term.

The child's parents, Bill Threet, a 34-year-old farm-implement dealer, and his wife Doreen, 33, have four other children, including Ryan's twin.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roger Carmel, the rotund actor who played the bumbling, scheming Harry Mudd on "Star Trek" and also was the voice of Smokey Bear on television ads, died of an apparent drug overdose, police said. He was 53.

Carmel was found dead in bed at his Hollywood Boulevard condominium on Tuesday evening, police Lt. Ed Hocking said.

Spurs reserves spark comeback over Cavs

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

SAN ANTONIO — Mychal Thompson may have provided the scoring muscle to help reverse San Antonio's fortunes, but he had help from another player coming off the bench in the Spurs' 115-102 NBA victory over Cleveland Thursday night.

Thompson scored 23 points after entering the game late in the first period, with 10 of them coming in a San Antonio spree. Reserve center-forward Ed Nealy made his presence known also, even though he scored just one field goal during the same span.

"Nealy usually gets involved and gets his hands on the ball," Spurs Coach Bob Weiss said. "He's a great role player. He's not a big scorer, but he contributes in other ways."

Nealy said, "We came off the long road trip and the victory was real sweet. I know I'm not going to score a lot of points, but that doesn't mean I can't get after it."

Nealy finished the game with 5 points and four assists.

The Spurs raised their record to 3-5. Cleveland is 3-4.

"We couldn't bury any of our shots and we couldn't get back on defense," Cleveland coach Lennie Wilkins said. "We didn't read the press well at all. The Cavaliers were a step slow mentally tonight."

Entering the game with San Antonio trailing 30-23, Thompson led a 25-6 scoring surge to put the Spurs on top 48-36 with seven minutes left in the second period.

Warriors 112, 76ers 104

OAKLAND, Calif. — Larry Smith scored 11 points and grabbed nine rebounds for Golden State in the decisive third period and the Warriors went on to beat Philadelphia 112-104, ending the 76ers' four-game NBA winning streak.

The Warriors trailed by two points at halftime but took command by outscoring the 76ers 34-23 in the third quarter. Purvis Short, who finished with a game-high 34 points, had eight in the quarter.

Smith scored all of his points in the third period. He also finished with 19 rebounds. Sedale Threatt scored 27 for Philadelphia.

Pacers 120, Nets 117, OT

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Wayman Tisdale came off the bench to score 24 points, including four in overtime off offensive rebounds, as the Indiana Pacers rallied from a big first-half deficit to defeat New Jersey.

Tisdale grabbed the rebound of a Chuck Person shot and hit a short shot to tie the game at 112 with 3:45 to go in overtime. Thirty-two seconds later, he put Indiana ahead for good, grabbing his own missed shot and scoring.

Person and John Long, who led the Pacers with 26 points apiece, added long jumpers to cap an 8-0 surge, giving Indiana a 118-112 lead.

Jazz 130, Clippers 113

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 17 of his 19 points in the first half as Utah moved out to an early 20-point lead and stayed ahead the rest of the way in defeating the Los Angeles Clippers.

With just four minutes remaining in the first quarter, Utah, behind Malone and Bobby Hansen, were ahead 30-10 and led 36-21 after one quarter of play. Hansen scored 11 and Malone nine in the period.

Kurt Nimphius scored 14 of his 22 points in the second quarter to lead a Clippers rally. With 2:16 left, they were down 55-49, but Malone and Thurl Bailey, who scored 15 in the game, brought the Jazz back to 65-54 at intermission.

With 3:25 remaining in the quarter, Nimphius' field goal narrowed the score to 83-77, but that was as close as the Clippers got. The Jazz moved out again and led 93-80 going into the final period.

Pan Am saves Division I membership

EDINBURG (AP) — The athletic subcommittee of the Pan American University Alumni Association voted 3-2 with four members abstaining Thursday night to keep the school in Division I of the NCAA.

The vote came after 38 of 42 speakers spoke in favor of keeping the Broncos athletic teams in Division I.

Eddie de la Garza, president of the alumni association, helped organize the favorable support at a public hearing at which 600 people attended.

In an impassioned appeal, track coach Reid Harder said, "If academics is the backbone of the university, then athletics is its soul."

The question now goes to the Pan American board of regents for a final decision.

Three-pointer draws mixed reviews

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Lou Carnesecca calls the three-point goal a Mickey Mouse shot.

Denny Crum calls it a step backward.

Stu Starner says it can't hurt to try it.

A shot through the net from 19 feet, 9 inches means three points in college basketball this season, one of the most drastic changes in the game since James Naismith invented it in 1891.

"It could put the smaller man back in the game, and that's good," said Dr. Edward S. Steitz, secretary-editor of the NCAA basketball rules committee and athletic director at Springfield College.

Steitz added that it also is aimed at reducing rough play under the basket and opening up the zone defenses that have held down scoring over the past several years.

"Teams are going to have to play more defense away from the basket," he said.

Not everyone is thrilled with the change, including Carnesecca, coach at St. John's, and Crum, coach of NCAA champion Louisville.

However, Starner, coach at Montana State, urged his peers to be open-minded: "Try it. You might like it." The Bobcats belong to the Big Sky Conference — one of 15 conferences that experimented with the three-pointer from varying distances during the past five years.

"WE'VE PROBABLY gotten more questions about this than any other change we've made excepting the shot clock," Steitz said. "There's still a lot of comment about whether we've chosen the right distance and we may have to make some adjustments."

Of 744 college coaches surveyed by Steitz at the end of last season, 64 percent said no to the three-pointer.

Crum said he was surprised the committee adopted the rule despite the coaches' opposition.

"It's aimed at cleaning up the play on the inside, but I think it's going to benefit the big man because teams are no longer going to be able to afford to double- and triple-team him underneath," Crum said. "I just don't see the need for it. Why mess with a game that's at its peak?"

They may not like it, but coaches haven't wasted any time figuring out how to deal with it.

Kotchman is Angels AAA skipper

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Tom Kotchman will manage the California Angels' Edmonton farm club of the Pacific Coast League next season, it was announced Thursday.

Kotchman, 32, managed Palm Springs of the California League to an 87-55 record this past season and was selected as the league's Manager of the Year for the second straight year.

In 1984, Kotchman guided Redwood of the California League to a 91-48 record.

Kotchman, who succeeds Winston Llenas as Edmonton's manager, will be assisted by pitching coach Frank Reberger, who held the position with the Trappers last year.

MONEY

Dollar stagnant

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed but little changed in early European trading today prior to the release of fresh U.S. economic indicators. Gold edged up to around $409 an ounce.

Currency traders said the market was keyed to the reports due later on U.S. retail sales, industrial production and wholesale prices for October.

The dollar has been falling against most major currencies all week. The chief trader at a bank in Frankfurt, West Germany, said he did not think the trend could be reversed before the weekend unless today's reports indicated economic growth was better than expected.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Thursday:

—2.0117 West German marks, down from 2.0150

—1.6700 Swiss francs, up from 1.6685

—6.5985 French francs, up from 6.5825

—2.2730 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2842

—1,395.00 Italian lire, down from 1,400.50

—1.38425 Canadian dollars, unchanged

The British pound rose to $1.4295 from $1.4255.

The dollar continued a gradual fall against Japan's currency, closing in Tokyo at 161.57 yen, down from 161.65 yen. Later, in London, the dollar was pegged at 161.63 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $409 a troy ounce, up from $408 late Thursday.

In Zurich, the precious metal also was trading at a bid of $409.10, up from $407.50.

STOCKS

Stocks dive

NEW YORK (NYT) — Speculators pulled out of many supposed takeover stocks Thursday, and the rest of the market fell with those stocks, giving Wall Street its worst drop in more than two weeks.

The delicate balance that existed for weeks in the equity market was also upset by a severe weakening in the price of stock index futures. This caused investors to sell stocks in New York and to invest in index futures in Chicago, profiting from a difference between the markets.

The Dow Jones industrial average, after meandering for days, retreated 31.50 points Thursday, to 1,862.20. It was the blue-chip index's worst defeat since Sept. 25, when it fell nearly 35 points.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 1.86, to 140.03, and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index dropped 3.62, to 243.02.

The American Stock Exchange index lost 1.89, to 266.76, and in over-the-counter trading the Nasdaq index lost 3.19, to 358.00.

OPEC committee looking to raise oil price

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — A three-member pricing committee of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries begins meeting Thursday in Quito, Ecuador, charged with finding a way to raise the price of a barrel of oil by about $3, to $18.

The committee — comprising the oil ministers of Kuwait, Libya and Ecuador — will be working under the long shadows of Saudi Arabia and Iran. Their oil ministers will not be attending, but there is no doubt that the panel will produce a report satisfactory to those countries, oil analysts in the United States said.

The idea of returning to a fixed-price system was first suggested in the communique issued at the end of a 17-day OPEC meeting in October.

The price of oil had largely been fixed by OPEC since the organization was formed in 1960 until last December, when it became clear that no official price was going to hold. On Dec. 6 the members decided to abandon price setting in favor of trying to influence prices indirectly by controlling the volume of oil on the market.

But the members were unable to restrain production, and prices plummeted from $30 a barrel a year ago to as low as $7 a barrel by summer.

After last month's OPEC meeting in Geneva ended, King Fahd of Saudi Arabia dismissed his oil minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, and asked his planning minister, Hisham Nazer, to take over temporarily.

Neither Nazer nor Gholam Reza Aghazadeh, Iran's oil minister, will be at the Quito meeting. While some analysts interpreted that as meaning this meeting would not be important, others said it merely showed that the outcome would be as Saudi Arabia and Iran want.

Peter C. Beutel, assistant director of Elders Futures Inc., said yesterday that the absences of the Saudi and Iranian oil ministers "weren't viewed positively" by traders on the New York Mercantile Exchange. "It's left the market wondering," he said.

Ecuador's oil minister, Javier Espinosa, said in Quito that the meeting would mark the first steps taken toward the recuperation of oil prices in the world market. He will be conferring with Kuwait's oil minister, Sheik Ali Khalifa, and Libya's oil minister, Fawzi Shakshuki.

Sanford Margoshes, an analyst for Shearson Lehman Brothers, said it was unimportant for Saudi or Iranian officials to be present at the conference because "it's a foregone conclusion" that the committee would adopt the two-pronged policy they both favor and present it to the full OPEC at its meeting in Geneva Dec. 11.

"They'll produce a strong declaration for the $18-a-barrel oil price and assert that they intend to return to a fixed-price system," Margoshes said, "and say they'll achieve this by restraining their production."

He contended that OPEC would largely be successful in fashioning a fixed-pricing system at its December meeting. But he added that the OPEC members might privately agree to let the price float within a narrow range — perhaps $17 to $19 a barrel.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange the West Texas Intermediate grade of crude oil rose 16 cents Thursday, closing at $15.51 a barrel.

Other American oil analysts disagreed with Margoshes and said they doubted that OPEC would be able to take the necessary steps at its December meeting to raise oil prices.

Dillard P. Spriggs, president of Petroleum Analysis Ltd., an oil industry consulting firm, said there was not likely to be an agreement "because they can't raise prices without cutting production." The problem, he noted, is that the individual OPEC members would have to decide whose production would be cut by how much — a task they have found impossible.

In fact, William B. Quandt, acting director of the Foreign Policy Program at the Brookings Institution, suggested that Saudi Arabia was staying away from the meeting because it did not want to have to say whether it would cut its production.

"I believe they want both a greater market share for their oil and higher prices," Quandt said of the Saudis. "Obviously, that's a very difficult position to make just about anybody else in OPEC accept."

But Scott Jones, a vice president at Chase Econometrics in Bala-Cynwyd, Pa., said the Saudis "know as well as everybody else you can't 'talk' the price up to $18 for more than a few days at the most."

Jones said he expected OPEC would fail to agree on a pricing and production system next month and would have to settle for again extending its current pricing arrangement.

Such an outcome would place great pressure on the oil market, said one official of a top U.S. oil company. Asking not to be identified, he said that not only would that force OPEC to confront the issue again at its meeting in late winter — when the world demand for oil would be falling and the pressure on OPEC members to keep their production up would be greater — but also it might cause refiners to think OPEC could not achieve higher prices at all.

That, in turn, would cause the refiners to liquidate their inventories — which numerous oil specialists say total at least 100 million to 200 million barrels. And that, the official said, would send oil prices skidding into single digits.

Hodel: U.S. national security threat real

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON – Secretary of the Interior Don Hodel Thursday night said the United States faces a "substantial national security threat" because of conditions in the world oil market and is in danger of becoming "unduly reliant on the Persian Gulf for our oil supplies."

In a speech to the Council on Foreign Relations in New York, Hodel outlined his view of strategic considerations in the oil market for the next five years.

He warned that the Soviet Union has aspirations in the neighboring Persian Gulf. He said if Soviet oil production declines as predicted, the Soviets might have to choose between reducing supplies of oil to the communist bloc countries or to the West, whose oil purchases provide the U.S.S.R. with hard currency.

Hodel observed that he has "no doubt that the Kremlin is at least as aware" as Washington is of the fact that, absent world reduction of its dependence on oil and acceleration of exploration and development in the United States and elsewhere, "the Middle East will become increasingly important" to the world oil supply."

At approximately the same time Hodel was speaking, President Reagan in a nationally televised address was revealing details of secret U.S. contacts with Iran leading to shipments of arms and supplies to be used in that country's conflict with Iraq.

The president earlier had justified his silence on the arms deal by saying lives of U.S. hostages being held by pro-Iranian terrorists in Lebanon were at stake.

In his address, however, and in a Wednesday briefing of congressional leaders, Reagan said the U.S. acted also out of concern for "national security interests."

Sending arms to any country that encourages terrorism is a violation of U.S. law, but Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, the incoming Speaker of the House, said the prohibition includes a loophole of sorts, permitting the president to act "in the national interest."

Hodel's spokesman, David Prosperi, in an interview from New York, said, "It would be reading too much into it" to suggest Hodel was raising U.S. requirements for Iranian oil as a justification for the arms shipments.

Hodel — formerly the Secretary of Energy — has been "speaking out" on potential national security consequences of shrinking domestic oil production, Prosperi said. "When they (the Foreign Relations Council) learned this, they invited him to speak."

Administration officials, including Hodel, have expressed delight by the fact that oil and gas prices have dropped, because of the resulting boost to the U.S. economy.

Also, they have consistently opposed an oil import fee or other suggestions for shoring up the depressed U.S. oil industry. Prosperi said Hodel's opposition to an oil import fee has not softened.

Asked for suggestions on how to strengthen the domestic oil industry, Prosperi said instead of relying on taxes or imports, Hodel would like to see oil development on public lands. Congress has forbidden oil drilling off the California coast and in the Arctic Wildlife Refuge in Alaska, a decision Hodel would like to reverse.

Oil explorers don't operate with today's prices in mind, Prosperi said, and they would be encouraged to go into the oil rich public fields because they know the low prices won't last forever.

Hodel urged his audience to consider possible deterrents to Soviet actions in the Middle East. He said, "The Soviets may be encouraged to seek to dominate or control production in the Middle East unless we are able to maintain a credible level of deterrence."

He cited U.S. strength and commitment, and the strength and unity of the "indigenous populations" in the Persian Gulf as major deterrents. But he also suggested that the listeners consider the significance of the "efforts of peoples in Marxist or communist-dominated nations to rid themselves of the totalitarian governments now in place."

While he did not name the "communist-dominated countries" that might rebel against the Soviets, "freedom fighters" in neighboring Afghanistan have been battling the occupying Soviet forces for many years. Other neighboring countries dominated by the Soviets include Bulgaria, Hungary and Poland.

Here's how the three major U.S. auto manufacturers have fared thus far this year.

New car sales up 5.7 percent

N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — New-car sales by U.S. manufacturers from Nov. 1-10 rose 5.7 percent from the corresponding period last year, the companies reported Thursday.

Sales of light trucks fell 12.3 percent, however, and the combined sales of cars and light trucks fell 0.6 percent from early November last year. There were eight selling days in the period both this year and last.

The annualized selling rate for the period was 6.5 million, up from 6.2 million in late October and from 6.4 million in the first 10 days of November last year. Analysts and industry officials expect overall sales of about 8 million for all of 1986.

While car sales were ahead of last year, and slightly above expectations for a period immediately after the lifting of financing incentives, some industry analysts said today that they expect to see the return of sales inducements for selective models.

"The companies have been advertising the advantage of the sales-tax deduction if you buy a car this year but so far it has had only minimal effect," said Thomas O'Grady of Integrated Automotive Resources. "Obviously, we're going to have see some incentives."

According to Automotive News, a trade publication, the General Motors Corp. had more than 100-day supplies of at least five car models at the end of October, although the company's overall supply is near normal at 68 days. The Ford Motor Co. had a 56-day supply and the Chrysler Motors supply was set at 54 days.

"In my opinion, GM will introduce incentives within three weeks," said Ronald Glanz, an analyst with Montgomery Securities. Glanz also cited heavy supplies of such cars as the Pontiac Fiero and the J-body compacts, as well as GM's sliding market share, as the impetus for such a move. He said he expected the other domestic companies to follow suit.

Wholesale prices up, retail sales plunge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose 0.3 percent in October as lower gasoline prices were offset by sharp price rises for food and new cars, the government reported today.

The increase in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index was the third in a row, following hikes of 0.3 percent in August and 0.4 percent in September.

Retail sales, meanwhile, plunged 5 percent — the biggest decline on record — in October, the Commerce Department reported.

The drop followed a record monthly increase of 5.3 percent in September, bith both sharp changes attributed largely to automobile sales. Consumer demand for cars had been spurred by incentive programs, and sales fell when the programs ended.

So far this year, wholesale prices have fallen overall at an annual rate of 3.2 percent, largely due to the sharp tumble of petroleum prices earlier in the year.

Economists predict only slight inflation for the rest of this year, but say prices will rise more moderately in 1987 as oil prices stabilize and imported goods continue to become more expensive, reflecting declines in the value of the U.S. dollar against other major currencies.

Gasoline prices fell 7.4 percent in October, following a 9.5 percent gain in September. Heating oil declined 7.5 percent after a 7.7 percent increase. Natural gas dropped 1.3 percent, their third consecutive decline.

Food costs advanced 0.9 percent in October, following a 0.2 percent dip in September.

Leading the increase was a 19.6 percent jump in the price of fresh fruit and a 9.1 percent advance in poultry prices.

The average price of a new automobile increased 4.7 percent on a seasonally adjusted basis in October — marking the end of cut-rate financing packages offered by automakers to reduce their 1986-model inventories. New truck costs were up 3.1 percent.

If October's increase continued for 12 consecutive months, it would yield an annual rate of inflation of 4.2 percent.

The Labor Department had these additonal details on October wholesale price activity:

Beef and veal prices were up 2.8 percent while egg prices fell 5.0 percent and fish was unchanged.

Alcoholic beverages were up 1.0 percent, soft drinks rose 0.6 percent and coffee prices fell 0.8 percent.

Oilfield security group gets $80,000

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

The Petroleum Industry Security Council (PISC) was the recipient of more than $80,000 to be used as reward money in an effort to curb oilfield crime.

Midland oilman Clayton W. Williams, Jr. spearheaded action to formally close the books on the old Giddings Oilfield Security Association (GOSA), turning the remaining funds over to the council.

Boyd Burdett, executive director for the PISC, says the transfer comes "at an opportune time. The council has been suffering economic hardships due to the decrease in contributions from oil and gas concerns that have been hard hit by the oil price collapse."

Burdett says the council's primary thrust is to combat industry related crimes on a state and national basis by assisting oil companies in their prevention efforts and law enforcement agencies in their investigations.

"The training of law enforcement officers has played a major role in the reduction of oilfield thefts."

PISC also operates a hotline, which has been successful in providing information needed to stop industry thefts.

The GOSA was established as a non-profit group whose efforts were directed to fighting the severe oilfield theft problems that developed in the Austin Chalk area during the boom of the early '80s. Williams and his security director, John Omohundro, organized the fund transfer to the PISC, noting that the purposes of the two organizations were very much alike.

Omohundro presented Burdett with a check representing the remainder of GOSA's funds at the quarterly meeting in Midland of the Permian Basin Oilfield Crime Committee — a group of law enforcement officers and oil company security representatives who meet to discuss West Texas oilfield crime problems.

Lenders put lock on Galveston tourist attraction

GALVESTON (UPI) — A popular tourist attraction was closed to the public Wednesday because lenders filed a foreclosure notice to collect an undisclosed amount.

Sea-Arama Marineworld, the home of hundreds of animals, fish and birds, opened in November 1965 and operated year-round for 21 years on the west end of Galveston Island.

The decision to close the park came one day after a notice of foreclosure was filed against Sea-Arama general partner William Cherry and another general partner, Kenneth Shelton, for default on payment of a promissory note held by the park's orginal owners.

Both Cherry and Shelton are real estate investors who acquired the property last year.

The two primary lenders of the partnership, Sea-Arama Marineworld Liquidating Trust and Marine Investors Ltd., posted a notice of foreclosure Tuesday in the Galveston County Courthouse.

"It's a simple matter of them defaulting on the note," said J.K. Dismukes of Austin, one of the original owners. "No agreement could be reached. There's a sizable amount of money involved. It's in the millions. We operated this park for 20 years before selling it to them. We're not going to walk away from it."

Park spokeswoman Gini Brown said the park employs about 30 people, most of whom will be furloughed. Several employees, including Brown, have volunteered to help maintain operations without pay, she said.

"I think it's going to work out. I love the place," she said.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Andrews wildcat flows 36 barrels

From Staff Reports

MABEE PETROLEUM CORP., Midland, completed a Yates discovery in western Andrews County.

The company's No. 1 Linebery flowed 36 barrels of oil and 132 Mcf gas per day on test through a 30/64-in. choke with flowing tubing pressure of 35 psi. Perforations are at 2,907 ft. to 3,308 ft. Gas to oil ratio is 3666:1.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 10,520 ft. and 8 5/8-in. casing was set to 4,201 ft. Plugback depth is 4,155 ft.

Completion treatment of consisted of 2,500 gal of 15 percent acid and 23,500 gal. of gel with 40,000 lb. of frac sand.

Formations tops were seen at: 2,760 ft., Yates; 4,195 ft. San Andres; 5,750 ft., Clearfork; 6,970 ft., Wichita Albany; 7,904 ft., Wolfcamp; and 10,220 ft., Ellenburger. Ground elevation of the well is 3,341 ft.

The well is located 1,650 ft. from north and 990 ft. from east lines of Sec. 8, Block A-40 of the PSL Survey, 13.5 miles southwest of Frankel City.

Recompletion finds Abo pay for Coastal

COASTAL OIL & GAS CORP., Midland, recompleted the No. 2 State "22" in Lea County to pump 160 barrels of 42.5 gravity oil and one barrel of water daily from Abo perforations between 8,894 ft. and 8,906 ft.

Formerly a Pennsylvanian oil producer, the well was originally drilled to a total depth of 9,900 ft. in early 1984. It is plugged back to 8,956 ft.

The producing interval was treated with 2,400 gal. of acid.

The well location is 660 ft. from south and 1,340 ft. from east lines of Sec. 22, Township 14 South, Range 32 East, 21 miles south of Caprock.

BLM plans one-year delay on public land oil leases

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — The Bureau of Land Management has decided on a one-year delay in rental increases for certain oil and gas leases on public lands.

BLM officials said the rental rate of $1 per acre during the first five years of a lease has been increased to six years. They said the move was made because of a large increase throughout the west of oil and gas explorers failing to pay their rents or return their leases.

During the first half of this fiscal year, people have given up 6,800 leases involving more than 11 million acres, a 55 percent increase from the year before, BLM officials said.

They said that in New Mexico, the number of leases relinquished this fiscal year has increased 126 percent from the year before.

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel said, "We wanted to provide an incentive for lessees to continue to hold those leases, thereby encouraging further exploration and development during this downturn in our domestic oil and gas industry.

"Hopefully, this will pave the way for future production when oil prices rise again," he said.

W-K-M valve, wellhead plant closure came as no surprise

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Joy Manufacturing's announced shutdown of the W-K-M valve and wellhead manufacturing plant is the most recent in a series of closures here that has pushed unemployment to double-digit levels.

About 70 W-K-M workers will be out of jobs by early 1987 and another 10 moved to a Joy plant near Houston, Les Robertson, director of human relations at Joy's Houston office said Tuesday.

The company's building in Shreveport will be put up for sale.

The closure ends production that was seriously curtailed in recent years.

W-K-M's employment has dropped from the three shifts and more than 500 workers it employed in 1982 to its single shift of 79 workers today. About three months ago the plant went to a four-day workweek.

"When you look back five years ago there were nearly 5,000 oil rigs working to about 900 today. Our business is very much controlled by the rig activity. I would say it has suffered in reasonable relationship to the rig count," Robertson said.

Tuesday's announcement was the latest blow to Shreveport's workforce, which suffered from an 11.2 unemployment in September. Overall, 12.5 percent of Louisiana's workers were jobless in September and experts see no end to the oil field depression that has draggged down the state's economy.

While the decline in the old industry is worldwide, it effects have been reflected here in a series of closures and layoffs.

In September 1985, Fabsteel, which once employed 1,400, closed its local plant. It specialized in steel fabrications for use in refineries, the petrochemical industry and other oil-and-gas-related fields.

Also in late 1985, Bingham-Willamette announced it was shutting down its Shreveport pump manufacturing operations.

Earlier this year, Kast Metals, where officials said 80 percent of the business was oil-related, announced it was shutting down operations that once employed more than 2,000 people.

Shreveport-based Crystal Oil Co. filed a Chapter 11 reorganization plan in October after months of trying to renegotiate debt and trimming its work force. Monroe Well Service, the most active oil drilling firm in the Ark-La-Tex area in recent years, filed a Chapter 11 bankruptcy in Philadelphia in April.

Spot layoffs also have been felt at Tri-State Oil Tool Industries of Bossier City. The company has reduced its work force by about 35 percent in recent months.

Riley-Beaird blamed declining orders from the oil and gas industry for its laying off 25 people last month. Riley-Beaird is a metal fabricating plant where employment has decreased from 1,300 to about 400 over the past six years.

Joy, which purchased W-K-M in 1984, also is closing its operations in Wichita Falls, Texas.

Robertson said the work force should remain intact until early 1987 as production is completed on contracts already begun at the Shreveport plant.

A complete shutdown is expected in March 1987, he said.

Economist pessimistic on prices

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — An oil economist says he is pessimistic about future oil prices rebounding to the levels of the 1970s because world energy markets have changed so dramatically in the years since.

Oil economist Philip K. Verleger Jr. gave his bleak views on the energy markets to the Coopers & Lybrand energy conference here. "I expect prices to remain low and volatile for several years or perhaps a decade," he said.

And his outlook for gas is equally as bleak since gas competes with residual fuel oil for market share.

Verleger, a former vice president in the commodities group of Drexel Burnham Lambert and a fellow at the Institute for International Economics in Washington, said the changes since the 1970s have included a slowing in oil demand, the substitution of other fuels and conservation, which "together created a glut that drove prices down."

He said the multinational oil companies no longer control the world distribution of oil and OPEC has not been able to "assert the discipline previously demonstrated by the multinational companies."

Another reason for the price collapse has been the increasing supply of oil developed outside OPEC.

"Between 1980 and 1985, Free World consumption declined by five million barrels per day while OPEC experienced a 10 million barrel per day decline in sales," Verleger said. "In other words, OPEC was nickel-and-dimed to death."

"Essentially the oil market has been transformed from an orderly, regulated market where volumes move through established channels to a disorderly commodity market — an oil souk," Verleger said.

He said Salomon Brothers has charted oil prices since 1900 and concluded that 1985 prices, in real 1972 dollars, had returned to a level in line with the flat oil prices seen throughout this century.

But that does not mean prices will always be low. "However, these excursions (of higher prices) will be short-lived unless OPEC or some other organization is able to assert control over the market." However, he thinks that possibility is remote.

Companies will survive and profit if they are efficient, protect markets, acquire reserves cheaply and can use financing tools that transfer risk to the marketplace, he said.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Gas Gathering Systems forms marketing firm

MIDLAND (SWN) — Gas Gathering Systems, Inc., a 35 percent owned affiliate of Adobe Resources Corp., announces the formation of GGSI Marketing Co. to engage in industrial end-use gas marketing. The new company will market natural gas controlled by the parent company as well as certain supplies owned by Adobe Resources and other independent producers. Gas Gathering Systems, Inc. currently owns an interest in 28 gas gathering, transmission and gas processing facilities of which it operates 21. The facilities are located in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, Montana, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Cenergy posts decreased earnings in quarter

DALLAS (SWN) Cenergy Corp. released the results of operations for the third quarter ended Sept. 30.

Cenergy reported net income of $664,000 or $0.06 per share for the three months ended Sept. 30, compared with $935,000 or $0.09 per share for the same period in 1985. Working capital provided by operations, $2.5 million in the three months ended Sept. 30, 1986, was $7.8 million for the 1985 comparable period. The $2.5 million working capital provided by operations in the 1986 third quarter excludes $900,000 received for overproduced gas sold by Cenergy under gas balancing arrangements, such proceeds being recorded as a long-term liability rather than as revenues. Total revenues reported for the third quarter were $7.6 million compared to $14.9 million for the same period in 1985.

Seagull increases gas production 80 percent

HOUSTON (SWN) — Seagull Energy Corp. has initiated production of natural gas from two properties that account for nearly half of the company's proved gas reserves. The new volumes will increase Seagull's daily gas production by approximately 80 percent.

The company said 20 million cubic feet of gas per day (mmcf/d) is now flowing from Mustang Island Block 831 and Mustang Island Block 828, adjacent tracts in federal offshore waters approximately 35 miles southeast of Corpus Christi, Texas. The new production totals 7.4 mmcf/d net to Seagull's interests.

Snyder Oil records profit in third quarter

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Snyder Oil Partners L.P. ("SOI") shows net income of $671,000 for the quarter ended September 306. The profit followed significant losses in the first six months of the year, as declining energy prices forced the Partnership to take writedowns on the book value of its proved reserves.

During the third quarter, SOI's results began to reflect improvements in virtually every area of operations. Production volumes increased, due in part to the Aetna acquisition in September. Oil prices, which appear to have hit bottom at mid year, recovered to an average of $12.15 during the quarter and the improvement appears to be continuing. Avge gas prices continued to decline but at a far slower rate, reaching $1.83 per Mcf in the quarter. More significantly, lease operating expenses as a percent of revenues declined slightly and general and administrative expenses fell 25 percent. With these fixed costs declining, the anticipation of a futher recovery in product prices and the benefits of our continuing acquisition program, SOI should make additional strides in rebounding from the losses recorded in early 1986.

Mobil awards refinery contract to Kellogg

HOUSTON (SWN) — Mobil Oil Corp. has announced the award of contracts for construction of a hydrotreater at its Torrance, California refinery. The M. W. Kellogg Company will provide detailed engineering and procurement for this project. KCI Constructors, an open shop construction company associated with The M. W. Kellogg Company, will handle the construction.

The new unit will reduce the amount of sulfur in the feedstock sent to the refinery's primary production unit — the fluid catalytic cracker, or FCC. It is part of Mobil's ongoing program to meet or exceed California's environmental protection regulations. In addition, the new unit will improve the refinery's gasoline yield and profitability.

Construction will begin late this year and should be complete by late 1988.

Tipperary Corp. extends bond exchange offers

MIDLAND (SWN) Tipperary Corp. announced that the company is extending to 5:00 p.m., (EST), November 17, its three contemporaneous exchange offers to the holders of its 12 percent senior subordinated convertible notes due September 15, 1995, non-interest bearing senior subordinated delayed convertible notes due June 15, 1990 and 11-1/2 percent subordinated debentures due September 15, 1998. Successful consummation of the exchange offers is contingent on successful completion of all elements of the company's plan of financial restructuring.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Anticipating job loss more stressful than loss itself

By JIM MAY

DEAR COPING: As a health care professional I always have felt that my job was relatively safe. However, with the economy being what it is, we hear constant rumors about impending layoffs. When we try to find out about whether the rumors are true or not, we find ourselves up against the (name omitted) bureaucracy. What can we do? RN

DEAR RN: The stress associated with anticipated job loss is often worse than the initial stress associated with the actual job loss. This poses a real problem in the health care profession as your currency is interpersonal relationships.

Staff morale, job performance and patient outcomes are often related. It is especially important in your profession that your employer consider the effects of the current situation on the morale of the staff. The emotions and behaviors that are set in motion may have a critical impact, not only on the staff, but on the quality of the services provided.

Research suggests there are four stages associated with the job termination experience. You are presently in the first stage, job uncertainty. This stage usually begins with staff awareness that at some time in the future there may be a reduction in staff. This stage ends with the announcement of the jobs that are secure or of the jobs that will definitely be terminated. As noted in the research, there are relatively high stresses associated with this stage.

In order to address the issues raised by the staff's job uncertainties and its potential effects on the patients, I suggest you form a committee and present your concerns to the administration. You may not receive the response you feel you need initially, but you will have initiated what hopefully will become a dialogue on a shared experience. This matter must be addressed, especially in your profession, as it potentially effects the quality of care provided to your patients.

DEAR COPING: My husband lost his job almost eight months ago. He seems to be getting more angry at his former employer and the Arabs as time goes on. We have all tried to cheer him up but I think he still feels really guilty about losing his job. All of this does not concern me as much as his procrastination. He keeps saying that he knows he probably needs to change careers, but he needs more time to prepare himself. I don't understand his attitude. If he is going to change careers he should get after it and not let anything stop him, don't you agree? TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: You are very perceptive to be able to map your husband's feelings so accurately. The entire family may be experiencing some frustration in not being able to "cheer him up." Your description of his experiencing anger, guilt and procrastination are all "normal," but certainly unpleasant, characteristics identified in the unemployment research. It is important to understand that nearly everyone who experiences an involuntary job or career change feels also a significant loss and will experience grief. Each individual's intensity of grief will vary.

Perhaps the family could help by helping your husband face the reality of the situation in all its aspects (rather than trying to make him feel better), to break all ties with his old job and company (refocusing on the "new" career) and develop new interests and creative activities. However, do not rush the grieving process. He has experienced a significant loss and must truly grieve for that loss. We do not expect someone who just lost a close relative to forget and get on with their lives without an appropriate time for mourning.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DEAR CS: I agree that your firm's offer to retrain you to become a secondary-level science or mathematics teacher is quite generous. However, I urge you to sit down and analyze your position (financial and mental) and goals prior to committing to such a program. For example, 18 months is a long time to prepare yourself for a specific profession. Are there other professions you could spend that same amount of time preparing for that would be more consistent with the long-term goals of you and your family? At your age, going back into high school to teach young people may not be what you envision. I encourage you to visit some classes while they are in session and talk to some teachers. Research this decision prior to committing yourself.

I also enourage you to consider teaching at the junior college or college level. They are more interested in your experience than your degrees, or lack thereof.

DEAR ABBY

Bird shoot slaughter, not sport

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Your letter about "killing two birds with one stone" had a special meaning for me. Recently we visited our son and his fiancee in New York. On Labor Day weekend we drove to Hegins, Pa., to protest a live bird shoot. Thousands of pigeons are brought in cages to a park where they are released to be shot by "sportsmen." These birds, which are semi-domestic, have to be encouraged (forced) to fly into the air so the "sportsmen" can shoot them down!

To make matters worse, when the birds are shot but not killed, children are sent out to wring their necks and finish the job!

You could do a truly humane service by contacting the governor of Pennsylvania and trying to get this barbaric spectacle outlawed as it is in many states. — KAY BAUR, LOS ANGELES

DEAR KAY: Gov. Dick Thornburgh may think I'm "for the birds" for sticking my beak into his business, but I promise you that I will set the wheels in motion to do whatever I can to bring down this inhumane sport.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 56-year-old grandmother of six. I love each and every one of my adorable grandchildren with all my heart, but — and please don't think I am a terrible person — I have been cast in the role of an unpaid baby sitter ever since my eldest daughter became a mother. I have two sons and two daughters, and if I'm not able to go to their place to sit, they bring the children to my place. I discourage that lately because the noise is too much for my husband.

My children think it's a treat for me to have the grandchildren; they don't realize it is a strain on me because I am responsible for their well-being.

I used to hold down a full-time job outside the home, but I retired four years ago to stay home and take it easy.

Abby, please tell me how I can refuse to be a sitter for my grandchildren without offending their parents. I have even considered going back to work so I'll have an excuse. It's easier, and my old boss keeps calling and begging me to come back. — TAKEN FOR GRANTED

DEAR TAKEN: What's the matter with telling your children the truth? "The stress, responsibility and noise level are more than Grandpa and I can handle at this time. And don't call me. I'll call you."

DEAR ABBY: How humanitarian of you to urge your readers to discontinue the use of that cruel expression, "To kill two birds with one stone." The very thought of stoning birds to death sends cold chills up my spine.

Now, please discourage the use of the equally cruel expression, "There's more than one way to skin a cat." Thank you from a ... CAT LOVER

DEAR CAT LOVER: Communication is at its best when one says exactly what one means in the most direct and simple way, so when stating that something can be done in more ways than one, there is no reason to drag a cat into it.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column from the man who complained because his 30-year-old "college-educated wife of eight years" continually used his toothbrush brings to mind this old family story told to me by my mother. (I am now 67.)

Grandfather Walker was a pioneer in Fort Ransom, N.D., building his mill there in 1880. It was common to have Scandinavian immigrant girls work in the home as maids. (My grandmother was also one — from Oslo, Norway.)

One particular girl kept using Grandfather's toothbrush. One evening as they all sat around the fire (it gets bitter cold in North Dakota), Grandfather left the room and returned with a pan of water and his toothbrush. Without comment, he removed his shoes and socks, soaked his feet in the water and used the toothbrush to very carefully scrub each toenail!

The maid never used Grandfather's toothbrush again! — WILLIAM S. PARKER, SACRAMENTO

Memory process studied

CHICAGO (UPI) — Scientists are closing in on the mystery of human memory, how images are stored permanently and what determines which thoughts are remembered and which are quickly and forever forgotten.

Dr. Robert Rose, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Chicago, is studying a chemical he thinks will help explain the complex process of information storage and retrieval in the brain.

He has strong evidence to indicate the substance, a stress-related hormone, may play a vital role in signaling the brain that something is worth remembering. This, he says, is very different from the chemicals — called neurotransmitters — that do the actual storing.

But right now, what Rose is struggling for is an appropriate metaphor.

"The computer model doesn't really do it with memory," he says. "It might be easier to explain in terms of a radio.

"You might say the neurotransmitters are more like the radio waves, the actual representation of what's going on, and the hormone is a neuromodulator, more like tuning the dial on the radio."

After a pause, Rose adds "well, that's close, but not exactly it."

What this particular neuromodulator is exactly is adrenocorticotropic hormone or ACTH. Produced by the pituitary gland at the base of the brain, ACTH is released into the blood during times of stress and helps activate the production of adrenaline.

ACTH is also found throughout the brain during times of stress, Rose says, but appears to be produced where it is found and not by the pituitary gland. This finding has led Rose and other researchers to speculate that ACTH and other hormones somehow "tune" the brain in to experiences associated with important emotional states, initiating the remembering process.

"They're the ones who tell the neurons, 'hey, this is an important, you better remember it,'" he said.

Rose and his colleagues recently completed studies that seem to support this theory. Human subjects were given ACTH shortly after a learning task, and depending on the level of hormone already in their blood, adding more either facilitated or interfered with remembering.

The fact that too much ACTH blocks memory formation is consistent with other findings on stress, Rose says, and confirms a common observation from school days: "Certainly, it helps to be a little bit anxious about a test, but you don't want to be too stressed out or you can't remember anything."

Boston fern's tragic demise traumatic

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

I bought a Boston fern last week and as I placed it on the countertop, a hush came over the entire family.

They were all remembering the one I bought home in 1981. Finally, my mother whispered to my husband, "I tried to talk her out of it, but you can't tell her anything." He said, "I hope you're not going to get emotionally involved with this one." One of my children shivered and said, "Is Mama going to be sick again?"

I assured him that this Boston fern was different in many ways. The one I bought in 1981 cost $45, an excessive amount for a plant that cost more than my first set of flatware. I was an emotional pygmy then and never considered it would die in three days. Relationships with the flora and the fauna were important to me five years ago and I felt personally responsible for their demise. I've watched PBS and I'm wiser now.

I know now that you can't take a Boston fern seriously. They'll tear your heart out. You have to know that from the moment you take it out of the nursery, it turns hostile. It doesn't want your water. It doesn't want your sun. It doesn't want your fertilizer or your Willie Nelson records. It just wants to die.

So why do people buy Boston ferns in the first place? Because they need to feel challenged. You reach a stage in your life where you know you're not going to be Miss America ... you're not going to win the Pillsbury Bake-off. Winning the lottery is a long shot and you've been passed over too often to have a late-night talk show of your own. So you see how long you can sustain a Boston fern.

The fern was in the house three hours when it went limp. We all gathered around and offered advice. "It's too near the stove." "It's getting a draft from the air vent."

Within two days, the fern was in the final stages of deterioration. I bit my lip and said, "These things happen." Then I threw myself on the plant and gave it leaf to mouth resuscitation. The family restrained me. "How much did you pay for it?" asked my husband. When will any of them ever understand that it isn't the money.

A few days ago, I was going by one of those silk plant stores. I couldn't resist going in and checking out the fake Boston ferns. There were only two. Both of them had leaves missing and the edges were turning brown.

I felt better.

Natural protein treatment tested

NEW YORK (AP) — A natural protein under scrutiny for cancer treatment also fights genital herpes and other viruses in the test tube, suggesting it may play a role in treating viral diseases, researchers say.

Such treatment could combine "tumor necrosis factor" with another natural protein called gamma interferon, the scientists wrote in the British journal Nature.

The combination protects a wider range of cell types against a wider range of viruses than does either substance alone, one of the researchers, Grace Wong of the California biotechnology company Genentech Inc., said.

The combination should also allow a smaller total dose than either substance alone would require, which should reduce potential side effects, she said in a telephone interview.

West German scientists also reported virus-fighting action by tumor necrosis factor in Nature.

Cancer researchers are studying the substance, which is secreted by white blood cells, because it appears to kill tumor cells without harming normal cells.

To reproduce, viruses infect cells and hijack the cellular reproductive machinery. But Genentech showed that reproduction of the virus that causes genital herpes, the herpes simplex virus type II, was dramatically reduced when it faced cells pretreated with tumor necrosis factor.

Wong, who authored the Nature report with David Goeddel, emphasized that the tests were done only in test tubes rather than animals.

Other drugs have previously been shown to sabotage replication of the herpes virus.

Tumor necrosis factor inhibited replication of members of two major families of viruses: those that use deoxyribonucleic acid, or DNA, to store their genetic information, and those that use ribonucleic acid, or RNA, instead.

The Genentech researchers also found that infection by several kinds of viruses can induce cells to secrete tumor necrosis factor, suggesting it plays a natural role against viruses, Wong said.

Commonsense measures remedy insomnia, experts say

Copley News Service

You have made up your mind to fight your insomnia — beginning tonight.

After a good dinner, which will include the better part of a bottle of wine, you are going to watch a relaxing TV show, have a go at the Exercycle.

Then you will take a long, hot bath, and climb in bed with a Stephen King book and a mug of warm milk laced with bourbon.

Sleep experts would give the program mixed reviews.

They would approve of the relaxing TV show, the bath and the drink of hot milk.

They would question late exercise — too stimulating — and Stephen King as a choice of author — you might not be able to put the book down to go to sleep.

And they would almost certainly nix all that wine and the shot of bourbon.

Drinking alcohol, sleep experts agree, is a common cause of insomnia.

Typically, they say, the insomniac will wake up when the alcohol has passed from the body, which will then suffer from dehydration and other, less understood, metabolic effects.

"It seems that when the alcohol level falls, there is a bursting out of REM activity (a stage of sleep filled with dreaming) and then wakefulness," said Dr. Stuart Menn, associate director of the Sleep Disorders Center at Scripps Memorial Hospital in San Diego.

METABOLIC EFFECTS of alcohol and wakefulness are just one of the many facets of sleep disorder being studied by psychiatrists, psychologists, internists and other medical specialists.

The Scripps facility is one of an increasing number of centers for sleep research and treatment of disorders centered at medical institutions nationwide.

The field is well on its way to becoming a medical sub-specialty of psychiatry, neurology and pulmonary medicine, according to Merrill Mitler, director of the Scripps facility, which is among 150 centers nationally certified by the National Association of Sleep Disorders Centers.

Merrill said there are also about 700 physicians who have been individually certified as knowledgeable in the field.

And while sleep medicine is not usually taught as a specific discipline in medical school, more and more physicians are taking courses on it in continuing medical education classes.

With all of this expertise, one would expect that insomnia would soon be a thing of the past.

However, there are no quick fixes, experts say. Their suggested remedies for run-of-the-mill insomnia combine commonsense remedies such as exercise, relaxation, bedtime snacks, boring reading, plus ideas based on research.

For example, a lot of the current research in the field pertains to the body's "clock."

"Regularizing your sleep habits can help," said Dr. Milton Erman, a psychiatrist at the Scripps facility. "You can work on sleep the way you can work on exercise. Make a real commitment to going to bed at the same time each night and making yourself get up at the same time each morning."

DR. DANIEL Kripke, a psychiatrist at the University of California at San Diego, studies and treats sleep disorders.

He said research on body clocks has shown that people whose biological clocks run too fast or too slow will sleep badly, either taking too long to get to sleep (slow clocks) or going to sleep early and waking up very early and staying awake (fast clocks).

CNS Graphic

The solution is to reset the clocks, says Kripke.

Insomniacs, thanks to current research, may have help resetting their clocks.

"We now see the clocks can be reset with bright lights," Kripke said.

Exposing someone to a bright light late in the day can help the person who falls asleep early to stay up later and sleep later. Bright light in the morning can help the late sleeper adjust the clock.

"The idea of resetting our clocks with the use of lights has not been tested enough to do complicated cookbook directions," he said.

"But, for example, we might recommend that the person sit near a 40-watt fluorescent light for an hour or so in the evening. Someone who needs help waking up in the morning might go outside right after sunrise. And to get to sleep earlier at night we would suggest reducing light exposure in the evening."

Kripke said the main problem with insomnia is that there is no simple cause or treatment.

For one thing, insomnia has a wide range of causes ranging from physiological to psychological, and is often a matter of perception.

"If you ask the average physician or lay person the reason for insomnia, they will say it's because of mental problems — stress, tension, depression. But probably as much as 50 percent of insomnia is medically caused. But stress can exacerbate or maintain the insomnia."

AT UCSD MEDICAL Center Psychiatric Outpatient Clinic, the patient's initial complaint is frequently insomnia, but it is usually part of a much broader picture, says Dr. Stephen Shuchter, director of the clinic.

For example, people with alcohol or drug problems often come to the clinic complaining of insomnia.

When a person is bothered by insomnia for more than four nights or so — perhaps during a period of particular stress — he should probably seek medical help.

Mitler said that at the sleep center a patient's daytime condition is the most important factor in determining the problem. If a patient is not functioning well during the day, it could be a sign of sleep disturbance.

On the other hand, some patients who believe they are not sleeping at all are, indeed, sleeping, but may be having periodic moments of wakefulness.

Menn, who is an internist, said that among physiological causes of poor sleep are: the condition known as apnea, in which the sleeper's breathing is obstructed; involuntary leg movements; and another, little-understood rheumatalogic condition called fibromyalgia, in which the person's sleep is so ineffective that he or she feels achy and exhausted the next day.

"People sometimes come into the center expecting a miracle cure, but there are no miracle cures," he said. "But sometimes just knowing what is wrong can help an insomniac."

Menn said that often an insomniac will sleep better in the clinic than at home.

"It's because the insomniac has come to expect a night of misery and associates his bed with insomnia. He may need help with disassociating insomnia from his bedroom."

THIS IS WHY experts suggest that in some cases a person having difficulty sleeping actually get up and go to another room to read or look at TV until he gets sleepy.

Fear of insomnia, they say, can exacerbate the condition. They also suggest that insomniacs never watch the clock. That in itself can increase the panic.

'Counting sheep' still works

NEW YORK (UPI) — Here's something to mull over while lying awake at night.

Has medical science come up with a better way to cure insomnia than counting sheep?

"Counting sheep actually does work," said Stephen Gidro-Frank, director of technology at the Sleep Disorders Clinic at the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center.

"It gets your mind off whatever is worrying you," he said. "Anything that does that is effective."

But over the past decade, scientists who study sleep disorders have come up with a few more developments that might lull wide-awake people into blissful slumber.

"We have come up with better patterns, better ways of coping," said Dr. Richard R. Booztin, professor of psychology at Northwestern University.

There are forms of insomnia caused by dangerous medical conditions, such as breathing and muscle disorders that jolt a sleeper awake periodically during the night.

But Booztin and psychologists like him have spent years studying people who either cannot get to sleep when they go to bed at night, or who wake up in the middle of the night and then cannot go back to sleep.

DOCTORS CALL these two forms of insomnia sleep initiating disorder and sleep maintenance disorder respectively. Most people suffer from one or the other at some point in their lives, usually after a particularly stressful event such as a death in the family or job loss.

But many suffer recurring bouts of insomnia for years, with the disorders getting progressively worse as they age.

"The elderly are especially vulnerable," Gidro-Frank said. "But they are a special case. When you're older you don't need as much sleep as when you're younger."

Doctors said both sleep maintenance and sleep-initiating disorders are caused biochemically by stimulants, such as caffeine, drugs or stress, that prevent the body from following its normal rhythm of sleeping and waking.

"The first couple of hours are your deepest sleep, then it gets lighter," Booztin said. "When it gets lighter, people normally wake up periodically and immediately fall back to sleep.

"If something is stimulating, though, you will wake up and stay awake," he said.

Sleeping pills, which work by depressing nerve stimuli, combat short-term insomnia, doctors said. But the body builds up an immunity to the drugs within two weeks, rendering them all but useless to chronic insomniacs.

For these nightowls, doctors said, getting the proper amount of sleep becomes a matter of psychology and diet.

BOOZTIN, WHO HAS conducted dozens of studies on insomnia at Northwestern, came up with a treatment regime several years ago that doctors said is generally successful.

"First, cut out caffeine in the hours before you go to bed," Booztin said. "That includes chocolate and colas."

But he said insomniacs must also deal with some of the psychological, as well as chemical, reasons for their sleeplessness.

Booztin said his studies have shown insomniacs tend to spend too much time in bed.

"They work there, read there, watch TV there," he said. "The bed isn't for sleep, it's for work and recreation."

Booztin said these types of insomniacs can often sleep the entire night on a couch or in a strange bed.

"They don't associate their own beds with sleep," he said. "When they are in a new environment, then they sleep with few problems."

So Booztin's basic line of advice to insomniacs seems contradictory.

"Get out of bed," he said. "And stay out of it until you are ready to go to sleep."

Booztin said chronic insomniacs should set up a schedule of sleeping and waking and stick to it, even on the weekends. He said they should spend their evening time outside of the bedrooom until they are ready to sleep.

DOCTORS ALSO said insomniacs should learn basic relaxation techniques designed to relax their muscles and clear their minds of the worrying thoughts that cause adrenaline to flow.

Like counting sheep?

"That's one way to do it," Booztin said.

Sleep disorders affect social, professional lives

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — Some people quit fishing because every time they get a strike they risk falling asleep on the spot.

Narcolepsy is the culprit, and any strong emotion can provoke a "cataplectic" attack of overpowering sleepiness.

Narcolepsy is but one of a number of sleep disorders, but it is worse than most because it can disrupt social and professional lives. The American Narcolepsy Association estimates the condition afflicts between 100,000 and 250,000 Americans.

Most people with sleep disorders can be successfully treated and therapy has been dramatic in the narcolepsy program underway at Miami Valley Hospital in Dayton, where 70 narcoleptics are given Catabate, an orphan drug for which researchers seek FDA approval.

"I have one woman who is holding her grandchild for the first time in her life, because before the emotion would make her collapse," said Martin Scharf, clinic director.

The cause of narcolepsy remains a mystery and the condition is lifelong. But Catabate can control the uncontrollable urge to sleep, an urge often complicated by an emotion-triggered attack in which the person loses muscle control, drops things and even falls over, Scharf said.

Dr. Michael Aldrich, director of the sleep disorders center at the University of Michigan medical Center in Ann Arbor says an incorrect diagnosis of narcolepsy is common. He said a person found to have the ailment typically has lived with the symptoms for 10 to 15 years.

He said the reason many narcoleptics go undiagnosed for so long is because their symptom are not taken seriously or are mistaken for dizziness or seizures.

ALTHOUGH A DRUG is showing evidence of helping narcoleptics, drugs are usually a poor solution for patients suffering from insomnia, said Mark Mahowald, co-director of the sleep clinic at Hennepin County Medical Center in Minneapolis.

Insomnia is much more common than narcolepsy and affects an estimated 17 percent of all Americans.

Unlike most human functions, the harder you work at sleeping the worse you can get at it.

Mahowald said insomniacs are trapped in a sleepless cycle: preoccupation with the need to rest aggravates their restlessness. They gyrate sharply awake from bedtime rituals that lull the average person to sleep in 15 minutes.

Clinicians teach patients to remold bad sleep habits by following regular patterns when they go to bed and get up, and by avoiding naps. If these habits are practiced, insomniacs can "learn" their way to sound sleep.

Anyone who is frequently too sleepy during the day has a sleep disorder, Mahowald said.

"We're getting tired of seeing healthy 35-year-olds getting canned from their jobs because of undiagnosed disturbances," he said.

Two-fifths of the patients treated at the Minneapolis clinic have sleep apnea, characterized by repeated periods of arrested breathing while asleep. The spells last 10 seconds or longer and occur 200 to 600 times a night. Symptoms include heavy snoring, flailing limbs during sleep, morning headaches and personality changes.

APNEA IS MORE common in obese people, afflicts 60 percent of elderly people and is a possible cause for sudden infant death syndrome in babies, researchers say. Scientists speculate apnea comes from abnormalities in the brain stem that only show up during sleep.

Doctors prescribe weight loss for heavy patients, surgery to clear airway passage obstructions, nocturnal oxygen delivered through a special mask and various drugs.

Night terrors and sleep-walking afflict a small percentage of the clinics' patients. Both conditions are more common in children and are no cause for parental alarm, Mahowald said.

Occasional episodes of sleep-walking are also considered normal in children, although adult sonambulism is more serious, possibly the result of epilepsy or mental stress, Mahowald said.

Contrary to appearances, tooth-grinding (bruxism) is not linked to stress, researchers say. It can be hard on the teeth, however, and about the only solution is to have the patient wear a rubber mouth guard.

The Dayton clinic is revolutionizing the way doctors treat bed-wetting, which is "the No. 1 reason military recruits get rejected," Scharf said.

Scharf reports a 91 percent success rate with a program that includes bladder-stretching exercises, wetness alarms and behavior modification.

The sleep researchers say all humans respond to circadian rhythms, inner clocks which can be "reset" through chronotherapy, a practice of marching waking times forward or backward.

More than anything else, doctors are discovering that sleep is highly idiosyncratic. Preferences range from cold to warm sleeping conditions, hard mattresses to water beds.

Alarm clock silenced with shout

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — When the alarm goes off in the morning, why not roll over and just tell it to "shut up!" Because most people have learned that alarm clocks do not respond well to that. They need to be touched.

Not Braun. The German appliance maker has developed three alarm clocks that can be silenced, temporarily, with a shout. The clocks are voice-activated; and they have been calibrated to shut off when they receive a sound that is somewhere between normal bedroom noise and street noise. No louder noise is necessary.

The clocks are set like normal alarm clocks, but when they ring, noise will turn them off for 4 minutes. They ring again, and another shout silences them for another 4 minutes. This can go on for 40 minutes, before the alarm shuts off for good — or it can be switched off by hand.

The clocks work just like the telephone. When a caller speaks into the phone receiver, the telephone turns the sound waves into electrical impulses that are then transmitted over the phone lines and turned back into sound waves by a listener's telephone. The alarm clock has an electronic component on its printed circuit board that, similarly, turns sound waves into electric impulses that trigger the alarm to shut off.

There are some drawbacks to the clock. A loud snorer might shut off the alarm, according to Tom Evans, Braun's technical operations director in Lynnfield, Mass.

Zitomer Pharmacy, at 998 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y., sells two models of the clock, the AB-312vsl for $40, and the larger, Braun Silentime AB-45vsl for $44.95. The AB-30VS sells for $34.50 at WestSide Basics, 285 Amsterdam Avenue, New York, N.Y.

Bedtime 'hot toddies' disturb sleep

Copley News Service

Insomnia may drive you crazy, but don't allow it to drive you to drink. Consuming a few "hot toddies" before bedtime may relax you, but sleep patterns will become disturbed later in the night.

Why? For one thing, alcohol disturbs the rapid eye movement cycle of sleep, according to sleep researchers. The REM cycle is the deepest — and most restful — part of the sleep cycle.

Insomnia expert Milton Erman also says alcohol can trigger or aggravate "sleep apnea," a potentially fatal disorder characterized by snoring and periods of not breathing during sleep.

Filipino students, workers protest leftists's death

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Thousands of students and workers marched on military headquarters today to protest the murder of a leftist leader. The nation's largest labor organization called a general strike.

President Corazon Aquino vowed to punish the killers of Rolando Olalia "regardless of the cost in political terms."

Police announced no arrests in the murder Olalia, 52, leader of the country's largest legal left-wing political party and the nation's biggest trade union movement. His mutilated body and that of his driver were found Thursday in a ditch on the outskirts of Manila.

Olalia's supporters in the Partido ng Bayan, or People's Party, and the militant May 1st Movement, a labor federation, blamed the killings on followers of Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile.

About 3,000 protesters, chanting "strike, strike" and carrying banners reading "Mr. Enrile Resign," marched down a busy highway to the military headquarters at Camp Aguinaldo to protest the killings.

About 100 helmeted policemen armed with shields and riot sticks stood by but did not interfere with the march.

Leaders of the May 1st Movement announced plans for a general strike, possibly on Monday, in the Manila area. They said details were still being finalized.

Conservatives claim both the party and the union movement are fronts for the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines.

Enrile's criticism of Mrs. Aquino's policies, including peace overtures to Communist rebels, fueled widespread coup rumors throughout Manila last week.

Mrs. Aquino, whose husband Benigno was the victim of an unsolved 1983 murder, deplored the "senseless killing of Filipinos" and promised that her government would spare no effort to find the killers.

"We shall pursue this investigation wherever it leads and mete out swift and unequivocal justice whatever the cost in political terms," she told reporters following a cabinet meeting. "Every resource and power of my government will be brought to bear in bringing the perpetrators of Olalia's murder to justice."

Government officials said they feared Olalia's slaying could trigger a leftist backlash and provoke a confrontation between leftists and the military.

Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales said Mrs. Aquino had created a commission including Constabulary commander Maj. Gen. Renato de Villa to coordinate the investigation.

"You can be sure ... that the government has the political will to go to the bottom of this, that there will be no coverup," Gonzales told reporters.

He said the investigation would cover "all aspects of the killing," including leftist claims that Enrile's associates were responsible.

Asked about the charges before the Cabinet meeting, Enrile replied, "Let the police do their thing." On Thursday, before the missing Olalia's body was found, Enrile denied that the military was responsible for his disappearance.

To protest the killing, the Communist-dominated National Democratic Front canceled today's meeting with government negotiators on a cease-fire in the 17-year Marxist rebellion.

"People Power" refers to the civilian-military uprising that ousted Ferdinand Marcos and installed Mrs. Aquino in the presidency in February.

British minister traveling to America

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher travels to Washington today for talks with President Reagan expected to focus on West European worries about being left vulnerable if nuclear arsenals are drastically reduced.

West Germany, Britain and other countries fear they would be at the mercy of the Soviet bloc's superiority in tanks and other conventional arms if sweeping proposals on nuclear weapons cuts proposed during last month's superpower summit in Iceland were ratified.

Mrs. Thatcher is scheduled to meet with Reagan at Camp David on Saturday following meetings late Friday with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Vice President George Bush. She is due back in Britain early Sunday.

The British domestic news agency Press Association said Mrs. Thatcher was determined to argue in favor of retaining Britain's independent nuclear deterrent despite pressure by some U.S. defense experts to make a deal with the Kremlin to abolish all ballistic missiles.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Rhine residents protest slick

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — Environmental groups in nations along the Rhine launch a series of protests today to highlight the damage caused by a toxic spill from a Swiss chemical plant fire.

A West German group, the Union for the Environment and Protection of Nature, called for demonstrations at several Rhine bridges in North Rhine-Westphalia state.

About 30 tons of chemicals washed into the Rhine on Nov. 1 when firefighters doused a blaze at a Sandoz warehouse near Basel.

A 25-mile-long slick drifted down the 820-mile river to the North Sea, killing an estimated 500,000 fish and eels, harming other aquatic life and endangering drinking water.

In a statement, the West German group warned that though the immediate crisis may be over, the toxic chemicals had settled on the river floor or flowed into the North Sea and would enter the food chain through fish.

The protests, which are to continue Saturday, seek to focus attention on allegedly lax safety precautions in chemical industries, the group said from a regional office in Ratingen, West Germany.

Man charged in editor's shooting

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A man who had just bought a house from an editor of Le Monde Diplomatique was charged Thursday with premeditated homicide in his shooting death, the government news agency Notimex said.

Rodolfo Limon Boyseth also was charged in the 31st Mexico City Criminal Court with robbery, carrying prohibited weapons and attempted fraud in the death of Ivan Menendez, 38, who edited the Spanish edition of the French newspaper, Notimex said.

The District Attorney's office said Limon Boyseth was arrested Wednesday, and later admitted shooting Menendez a few hours after he paid him in cash and checks for the house in southern Mexico City.

Menendez' body was found Nov. 6 in the trunk of his car.

Mexico awaits loan approvals

MEXICO CITY (AP) — One of Mexico's top foreign debt negotiators says he expects agreement in the next several days from private banks on $6 billion in new loans for the financially ailing nation.

Angel Gurria, the Treasury Department credit director, said 75 percent of the 500 creditor banks have accepted the plan and signatures by the "critical mass" — banks providing 90 percent of the new money — "is practically a fact."

Gurria spoke before leaving Wednesday for weekend meetings with the bankers in New York.

Herzog cancels visit to Manila

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Israeli President Chaim Herzog canceled his planned visit to the Philippines, citing recent political developments, the Israeli Embassy announced today.

Herzog was scheduled to arrive Sunday.

In Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia about 250 Moslem youths demonstrated in front of Singapore's embassy to protest Herzog's visit to Singapore scheduled for next week, while another 10 in front of the U.S. Embassy burned the American and Israeli flags.

A prayer to the Holy Spirit. Holy Spirit, you who made me see everything and showed me the way to reach my ideal. You, who gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you, who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everyting and confirm once more that I never want to be seperated from you no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpectual glory. Amen. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Persons must pray the prayer three consecutive days without asking your wish. After third day wish will be granted no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this dialogue as soon as this favor is granted. I will never stop trusting in God and his power.
