Fort Davis posts 'no park' opinion

By HOLDEN LEWIS

FORT DAVIS — If there was any doubt before the town meeting, there's no doubt now — residents of the Davis Mountains don't want their home to be transformed into a national park.

About 400 people — a quarter of Jeff Davis County's population — crowded into a church auditorium and about 20 others stood outside the windows Thursday night to hear about and register their objections to a National Park Service study of the mountains.

The park service started this week in its study of the West Texas area's plant and animal life, geology, scenic value and history to determine whether it would be a good idea to establish a national park, monument, scenic area, scenic parkway, national trail or recreational area.

The service has until Sept. 30 to present to Congress the results of its study and a list of options. One of the options would be to do nothing and allow landowners to keep using their land as they choose.

That option suits the area's ranchers just fine.

"The landowner does a better job of not only managing the land but preserving wildlife," John Wasman, a representative of the Texas Exotic Big Game Hunters Association, said during Thursday night's meeting.

U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman, D-Texas, requested the study at the behest of four unidentified landowners of Jeff Davis County. The study area includes about 1.4 million acres that include most of Jeff Davis County and parts of Reeves, Pecos, Brewster and Presidio counties.

It is some of the most scenic, spectacular terrain in Texas. It is mountainous and green, unlike most of the territory west of the Pecos River. Mountains covered with live oaks rise more than a mile high. Limpia Creek runs through grassy valleys. Cliffs of brown basalt rise 500 feet in some places. State highways 17 and 118, which run through the area, are some of the state's most scenic drives.

Residents want to keep it that way, and they fear interference from the National Park Service could destroy their beautiful, sparsely settled land.

"We've gone into the Gila Wilderness (in New Mexico) and seen beer cans packed 10 miles in," said Carl Ryan, Jeff Davis County Attorney. "We've gone into Yellowstone and fought the travel trailers from the front gate to the park area, and we come back here to Jeff Davis County and lock the gate and say, 'Thank God for private property.'"

A contempt for the federal government and its national-park policies was evident throughout the two-and-a-half-hour meeting. Several people pointed out that landowners put out forest fires as soon as they can, unlike the National Park Service, which allowed fires to burn out of control last year in Yellowstone.

Others said they worried about commercialism and overcrowding.

"Would this mountain be better if it had a tramway ride to the top? Would it be better if it had swings and slides at the bottom?" landowner Clifton Caldwell said. "Would it be better if there was a hot dog stand to serve the people riding on the tramway?"

Many speakers said they felt betrayed by Coleman. The congressman didn't attend the meeting, but his assistant, Jose Luis Sanchez, did. He read a statement from Coleman describing the study, but added a sentence that cheered the crowd: "If the community does not want a park there won't be a park — it's that simple," Sanchez said.

He added later he will report Fort Davis' displeasure with the study and the idea of any federal involvement in the land.

Burst water line again upsets Wadley traffic

By JANE MARLER DEES

Poor Wadley Avenue.

Nearly six months after a $2.1 million repaving project was completed, an underground pipe burst Wednesday sending water spewing and asphalt cracking.

Some occupants at the Wadley Avenue shopping center went without water that day, but had nothing but praise for the city crew's handling of the matter.

"The city was real good to us. They called us and let us know what was happening," said Jimmy Lee, manager of El Chico restaurant.

Faye Thurman, office manager of Plaza Center, said she "appreciated that they notified us and all our tenants" of the problem.

Her office's water was turned off for five hours Wednesday.

News of the water line problem should void any suspicions that the avenue's new pavement is in trouble again.

Don't blame the pavement, blame a water pipe. City officials say that was the reason work crews were out fixing a section of Wadley Avenue on Thursday afternoon.

City, county agree to form dispatch center

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

It's time for city and county lawmen to start working out the details now that they've agreed in principal to the operation of a joint communications dispatch center.

The new operation will be funded with revenue from the city's September bond election.

A joint dispatch center should streamline the flow of emergency calls that currently ring at the police, sheriff's or fire departments, explained Ray Kendall, the city's director of communications and information systems.

Currently, All 911-emergency calls are directed to the Midland Fire Department, but often must be transferred to the police or sheriff's department.

The new effort should alleviate those problems.

The joint dispatch center will be housed in what is now a parking basement at the new Public Safety Building at 601 N. Loraine St., Kendall said.

Construction and renovations likely will begin in August, Kendall added.

He said the facility will be "state-of-the-art" and reduce lag time that results from transferring calls.

Dispatchers representing the city's and county's law enforcement and fire department will be housed at the center.

Plans call for the dispatchers to be cross-trained in all law and fire department operations.

MISD worried it can't handle new arrivals

With their future sights set on a home and children, Alan and Cynthia Baldridge started their new life in Midland in early December.

The move from Clovis, N.M., to here, where Baldridge landed an accounting job with Exxon, has been a pleasant experience, Mrs. Baldridge said.

"We're real pleased with Midland," she said. "We like the people here. We like the way things are located. We like the size of the town."

Like the Baldridges, dozens of young couples every month move to Midland, many bringing with them one or more children, according statistics from the Newcomers Unlimited greeting service of Midland.

But while the families have boosted the city's real estate market, rising numbers of small children have a Midland Independent School District official worried that existing facilities will not hold all the children.

Since January 1987, 2,364 families with 2,052 children have flooded the city.

Eastern passengers seek refunds, new flights

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of Eastern ticket holders, suddenly transformed into creditors, scrambled to get refunds or fly on other carriers as the strike-grounded airline fulfilled its threat of filing for bankruptcy protection.

The action by the nation's seventh-largest airline, announced Thursday on the sixth day of a punishing strike by Eastern's Machinists union in a dispute over wage concessions, was the fifth biggest Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing in history in terms of company assets.

The move sparked a new wave of denunciations by union leaders, who denounced Eastern chief Frank Lorenzo as a "robber baron."

Machinists also called for a public boycott of Eastern's sister carrier, Continental Airlines, set up pickets against Continental in Houston, and said they would oppose Eastern's reorganization plan and any sale of assets.

No pickets were reported at Continental's area of New York's La Guardia airport, but Continental's telephone lines there were jammed as people sought alternate travel arrangements.

■ Carrier's fate in hands of bankruptcy judge; Related story — 5C

The first Eastern Airlines shuttle to leave Boston for New York and Washington today with a new $12 one-way fare in effect had 92 people on board, said a spokesman for the Massachusetts Port Authority, which operates Logan International Airport. Phil Orlandella said previous shuttle flights since the machinists strike carried as few as seven passengers.

Angry and confused passengers, meanwhile, confronted Eastern ticket agents as well as travel agencies, often getting little satisfaction as they learned they might have to wait on a long line of unsecured creditors for a refund or pay higher fares on other carriers.

But many service people, as well as travel agents, were as confused as the ticket holders about the effects of the action in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York, which temporarily frees the airline of the debt obligations.

"This has been one of those days that we all hope would never happen," said Phil Davidoff, president-elect of the 23,000-member American Society of Travel Agents.

In Miami, ticket agent Marion Gordon and two co-workers at Eastern's office could only respond to angry customers by saying they had no money for refunds.

Under the Chapter 11 filing, the bankruptcy court must approve ticket refunds, said Eastern spokeswoman Karen Ceremsak.

Aides say new choice could come quickly

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is meeting with top advisers to find a new nominee for defense secretary following the Senate's rejection of John Tower, with presidential aides saying they expect a speedy decision.

Bush's staff began looking at "various candidates" immediately after the Senate vote Thursday, said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

The president was to meet today with advisers on the issue, and aides said an announcement could come within days — possibly even later today or Saturday.

Among those likely to be considered are former Republican Rep. Jack Edwards of Alabama, National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft, former transportation secretary Drew Lewis and former defense secretary Donald Rumsfeld, administration sources said.

Speculation has also focused on several Republican senators, including John Warner of Virginia, William Cohen of Maine and Warren Rudman of New Hampshire.

"This is a decision we would like to make within the next several days and not one that could be put off for weeks or months," Fitzwater said.

Bush was in New York delivering anti-drug speeches on Thursday when the Senate voted 53-47 against Tower. In a statement, he said the process had been a "cruel ordeal" for Tower and suggested that some senators made up their minds "based on groundless rumor."

"Now, however, we owe it to the American people to come together and move forward," he said.

A new nomination may could come before week's end, a senior administration official said Thursday. The official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said a long informal list of candidates had been compiled even before the Tower vote.

The official noted that some of the names had been compiled late last year, before Tower was finally selected in December. "We're not starting from scratch," the official said.

Fitzwater, however, insisted that Bush himself had not given serious thought to a replacement as long as Tower's nomination was before the Senate.

"He's had discussions with the chief of staff (John Sununu) and Brent Scowcroft in terms of what kind of candidates he's interested in. ... But I would hasten to point out there's some difference between that and actually having a list of candidates," Fitzwater said.

Scowcroft himself has been the subject of much speculation for the defense post. Some members of Congress have even suggested a job switch with Tower — since the national security adviser's post does not require Senate confirmation.

Scowcroft said Thursday he was not in line for the job, but that hasn't stopped the talk.

Among the other contenders, Edwards is popular among lawmakers of both parties. He is former senior Republican on the House defense appropriations subcommittee and his expertise on military matters is widely respected.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Clear skies again forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Weather forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport are predicting more clear skies again for tonight. The low will reach only into the middle 40s and winds will be southerly 5-10 mph.

Saturday will be clear, sunny and warm with the high expected to reach into the middle 80s and winds continuing out of the south 10-15 mph.

Thursday's high of 77 was eight degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 85 set for that date in 1955. The overnight low of 40 was 26 degrees warmer than the record low temperature of 14 set for this date in 1948.

STATE

Clear skies and warm temperatures are expected across all of Texas through the entire weekend.

There will be some fog along the coastal plains early Saturday and some late night and early morning clouds along the coast, but the rest of the state will have clear skies and warmer temperatures.

Lows tonight will be in the 40s over West Texas except in the mountains where the mercury will dip into the mid 30s, in the 40s and 50s across North Texas and in the 50s over most of South Texas, ranging from the 40s in the Hill Country and inland Southeast Texas to the 60s along the coast.

Highs Saturday will be in the 80s over most of West Texas except in the Big Bend area where readings will be in the lower 90s, in the 70s and 80s across North Texas and in the 70s and 80s except along the coast and in the Lower Rio Grande Valley where readings will be around 90.

Dense fog reduced visibility along the coastal bend early today, dropping visibility to about one-sixteenth of a mile at Christi to near zero at Kingsville.

NATION

A storm sent rain and gusty winds across the Northwest today as much of the nation from the Rockies through the Midwest remained under cloudy skies.

Showers and thunderstorms extended from the northern and central Pacific Coast to the northern Rockies. The thunderstorms produced heavy rains in eastern Washington Thursday evening and caused some road flooding.

A precipitation total of .53 inch for Thursday at Glacier Park, Montana, surpassed the previous record for the date of .47 inch set in 1906.

Winds in western Nevada gusted to 69 mph and gusts of 50 mph were reported at Bellingham, Wash. A wind advisory remained in effect for interior sections of northwest Washington.

Can Senate heal wounds of Tower fight?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic-controlled Senate is striving to put the rancorous debate over John Tower's failed nomination behind it, but many Republicans say the wounds are deep and will not easily heal.

"Never in all my years in the Senate have I encountered anything like the feeling of outrage that exists today among my former Republican Senate colleagues," Vice President Dan Quayle said in a speech prepared for delivery today in Indianapolis. "Never have I encountered such anger and bitterness in the Senate chamber."

"This goes into the memory banks," said Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, after the Senate scuttled Tower's bid to become defense secretary and prepared to begin the confirmation process anew for the replacement President Bush will soon select.

Quayle accused Tower's critics of engaging in "a McCarthyite mudslinging campaign" that he said had "degraded the Senate."

Tower's 53-47 rejection on Thursday, just 49 days into Bush's presidency, represented a major setback for his administration and opened the floodgates of speculation on who might be the next choice to run the Pentagon.

On various lists were: former defense secretaries Donald Rumsfeld and James Schlesinger; Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, a principal defender of Tower in the Senate debate; and former Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Ala.

Other names mentioned were Sen. John Warner, R-Va., a former Navy secretary; Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H.; former Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis; Frank Borman, onetime astronaut turned business executive; and Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser and a Bush supporter in the presidential campaign. Brent Scowcroft, Bush's national security adviser, also was mentioned although he said he would stay in his current post.

Edwards, for nine years the senior Republican on the House defense appropriations subcommittee, "is not involved in seeking nor is he interested in being secretary of defense," his law office said in a statement.

Warner, asked on NBC's "Today" show this morning whether he would be interested in the job, said: "I can best serve my president and also the people of Virginia by staying where I am. I'm pledged to fill out this Senate term, and I'm going to stand for re-election (in 1990)."

The naming of a new candidate for defense secretary gains added urgency in light of evidence the Pentagon is close to bureaucratic paralysis because of the time lost in the bruising battle over Tower.

Decisions need to be made across the Pentagon, including the staffing of key positions, Bush's plan to cut almost $6.4 billion from the Pentagon budget, and on a special 90-day strategic military policy review the president has set in motion.

In a statement he read minutes after the Senate vote, Tower said: "I will be recorded as the first Cabinet nominee in the history of the republic to be rejected in the first 90 days of a presidency and perhaps be harshly judged.

"But I depart from this place at peace with myself, knowing that I have given a full measure of devotion to my country," he continued. "No public figure in my memory has been subjected to such a far-reaching and thorough investigation nor had his human foibles bared to such intensive and demeaning public scrutiny."

In the Senate, Democratic leaders turned to damage control to limit the impact of Tower's rejection on the bipartisan spirit that seemed about to bloom in the days immediately after Bush's inauguration.

But many Republicans said the bitterness would linger.

Dole had much to say, condemning a confirmation process he said had become a "hotbed of character assassination" and "a pitched partisan battle."

"The partisan taste of this debate is going to linger," said Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis.

"Bipartisanship is not going to be automatically restored unless the majority wants it restored," said Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska.

But Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine voiced the optimistic view of many senior Democrats when he said: "There will be no long-term adverse effects within the Senate."

Cabinet Rejectees

Eight times before in its 200 years, the Senate voted to deny confirmation to a president's choice for members of his Cabinet. Tower is the ninth.

Lewis, chairman of Union Pacific Corp., was transportation secretary under former President Ford and co-chairman of the recently disbanded National Economic Commission. He would bring to the job considerable management experience.

Rumsfeld served as defense secretary under Ford.

Of the three senators being mentioned, Warner, a former Navy secretary, might be the most easily confirmed — but his nomination would rob Republicans of one Senate seat, since governors fill Senate vacancies and Virginia's governor is a Democrat.

That would not be a problem for Rudman from New Hampshire or Cohen from Maine, since both states have GOP governors.

Administration sources have said that Bush, not wanting to subject another candidate to the grueling experience Tower went through, seemed likely to pick someone either currently or recently in government who had been through the process.

However, the names of some business executives have also cropped up — including Donald Rice of the Rand Corp. and Frank Borman, former astronaut-turned-executive.

And, two who served in the administration of former President Jimmy Carter are also being mentioned as dark-horse possibilities: Zbigniew Brzezinski, who was Carter's national security adviser; and James Schlesinger, who was his energy secretary — after serving as Ford's first defense secretary.

But what scares Larry Lusby, MISD executive director of computer and special services, is that 40 percent, or 823, of those children are under 4 years old and haven't impacted local schools — yet.

"It concerns us from a budget standpoint," Lusby said Thursday. "There will be a need for additions in teachers, supplies and budget."

Lusby said it also could mean additional facilities on top of the new elementary school and classroom additions at 11 other campuses, under construction and funded through an $11.8 million bond sale last year.

Based on gradual enrollment increases since the 1983-84 school year, apparently more young families are moving in than out of Midland, Lusby said. The lower elementary grades have shown an almost alarming growth, where the numbers from 1983-84 to this school year have grown from 1,506 to 1,785 in kindergarten, 1,666 to 2,003 in first grade and 1,523 to 1,873 in second grade.

During the past five years, MISD has seen slight decreases in grades nine through 12, but that likely will change as the elementary pupils move into the higher grades, Lusby said.

MISD projections show that this year's 19,422 total enrollment could grow to 20,844 by 1990-91 and to 22,847 by 1993-94.

Lusby said that this might mean another bond election in a year or two to fund a new junior high and other facility construction to meet state-mandated 22-to-1 ratio of elementary pupils and teachers.

"What we don't know is the number of families moving out," Lusby said. "We have seen through enrollment figures our primary enrollment increases every week."

But while additional school facilities may be needed, plenty of empty affordable houses already await the newcomers, said Kay Sutton, Midland Board of Realtors president.

"I'm seeing quite a few young families moving into homes," Ms. Sutton said. "We've got a good supply of modest-priced homes."

Dana Starnes of Newcomers Unlimited said she usually sees no less than 90 families a month move into both Midland and Odessa. Peak moving time is during late spring and early fall, when the monthly new family count in either city can go as high as 120.

"They're good, nice people, people we can be proud of," said Ms. Starnes, adding that a number of them come because of oil-related business transfers. "It should be a boost to our morale."

Armed with pamphlets promoting Midland and Odessa, Ms. Starnes said Newcomers workers visit incoming families to give them information about schools, voting and entertainment.

Teenage Health Behavior

One-third of young teens have pondered suicide, survey shows

ATLANTA (AP) — One out of every three eighth- and 10th-graders surveyed in 20 states said they have seriously considered killing themselves, and many have poor health habits that include drinking, smoking and ignorance of safe sex.

Thirty-four percent of the 11,000 students — 25 percent of the boys and 42 percent of the girls — reported that they had thought seriously about ending their lives, and 15 percent had gone so far as to attempt potentially fatal injuries, the national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday.

Dr. Lloyd Kolbe, director of the CDC's Division of Adolescent and School Health, said the suicide figures were surprising. "We just didn't think it would be that high," he said.

He said it was the first time the suicide question had been asked in the National Adolescent Student Health Survey, so researchers lacked a bench mark for comparison.

"Many schools in the nation are teaching more about suicide, about how to identify friends who may be suicidal and many school faculty are being trained in how to deal with suicides should they occur," Kolbe noted.

He thought the findings added urgency to such activities. "I think what it means is that we need to begin exploring this a little more and looking at what we can do," Kolbe said.

The 1987 survey addressed questions about alcohol, drugs, violence, suicide and sex to eighth- and 10th-grade students in randomly selected classrooms chosen from a national sample of 217 schools in 20 states.

In the eighth grade, 51 percent had tried smoking and 77 percent had tried alcohol; by 10th grade, the numbers rose to 63 percent for smoking and 89 percent for liquor.

Overall, 22 percent reported smoking in the previous month and about 32 percent reporting having five or more drinks at one time in the previous two weeks.

"Drinking and drug use ... contributes very substantially to homicide and suicide," Kolbe said.

The survey also measured students' knowledge about health-related topics:

—Fifty-one percent thought incorrectly that washing after sex could decrease the likelihood of getting AIDS.

—Only 43 percent were able to figure out from a cereal box which was the chief ingredient, and only 42 percent knew what the date on a milk carton means.

One bright spot was that more than 90 percent knew that having sex with a person infected with AIDS or sharing drug needles increases the chance of transmitting the virus, according to CDC researchers.

SPELLING BEE 1989

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1989 Regional Spelling Bee April 15 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through April 14. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

errand — (noun) If your mother asks you to go to the store, you have an "errand" to do. An "errand" is a trip in order to deliver a message or to purchase or attend to something. Originally, an "errand" was an oral message entrusted to a person. For example, a king would trust his messanger to de. ver an errand for him. The mess nger would often travel for days on foot and endure terrible hardships just to deliver the king's message. "Errand" is derived from the Middle English word "erend" meaning "message or business" and can be traced all the way back to the Old Norse word "arr" meaning "messanger" and the Gothic word "airus."

Businessman donates $1,000 to soup kitchen

FORT WORTH (AP) — The assistant manager of a grocery store was slightly skeptical when a well-dressed man said he was rushing to catch a plane out of town and needed a favor.

"I don't know. What's the favor?" assistant manager Don Baker said he asked the man who appeared at Chicotsky Fine Foods early Thursday.

"Well, you'll like it," the man said.

The man then gave Baker $1,000 in $100 bills and said he wanted Baker to call the Loaves and Fishes Soup Kitchen, which had been burglarized and vandalized earlier in the week.

"Tell them they have $1,000 to pick up some groceries," the man said.

The businessman, who said he was the president of a floor-care equipment business, told Baker he was a neighbor who has done some shopping at Chicotsky's, and gave Baker a business card.

Baker declined to identify the man because "I don't think he was doing this for any publicity."

"It's kind of an unusual thing," Baker said. "I've been in the grocery business 20 years. Nothing like this has ever happened to me."

Helen Voldness, director of the Loaves and Fishes Metroplex Food Bank that supplies the kitchen, said Thursday that as long as she has worked at the soup kitchen, "nobody's ever gone into a grocery store and said, 'Come shop.'"

The cash donation at Chicotsky's, she said, will allow the kitchen to restock foodstuffs stolen or destroyed when vandals broke into the kitchen Tuesday night or early Wednesday, forcing it to close its doors for the first time since its staff began serving meals to the hungry and homeless seven years ago.

Nicaraguans offered special INS handling

BAYVIEW (AP) — Nicaraguans are receiving special handling under a new get-tough procedure for political asylum applicants in southern Texas by which many Central Americans are now being deported.

"We have not deported any Nicaraguans," said INS spokeswoman Virginia Kice. "The Meese directive stands."

Former U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese in 1987 issued a directive calling for special treatment of Nicaraguan political asylum cases. Some INS critics blame the Meese directive for an influx of more than 40,000 Nicaraguans and other Central Americans seeking asylum after crossing the border illegally into southern Texas since last spring.

Ms. Kice said the Meese directive does not prohibit the INS from deporting Nicaraguans, but "it says we need to make a careful and thorough review of cases involving Nicaraguans." However, many from Marxist-ruled Nicaragua have been rejected for asylum.

The INS spokeswoman said cases of Nicaraguans not granted asylum would be referred to the Justice Department in Washington.

Nine Central Americans were taken Thursday from the INS detention center 20 miles northeast of Brownsville, and sent on buses to Houston, Ms. Kice said. The two Hondurans, three El Salvadorans and four Guatemalans will be flown to their countries this afternoon, she added.

"We may not be deporting people every day, but this is the second group we have deported under our new initiative," Ms. Kice said.

The INS on Feb. 21 started immediately detaining rejected political asylum applicants and marking them for deportation in a one-day adjudication process. Those detained are held under deportation bonds of up to $4,000 here, and may resubmit their asylum cases before an immigration judge.

The first Central Americans to be deported under the new procedure left the country Sunday, Ms. Kice said. On that day, 61 were flown out of Houston, including 48 El Salvadorans, 10 Guatemalans and three Hondurans, she said, adding the INS spent $16,553 to send them back.

All the deported asylum-seekers received hearings before an immigration judge, Ms. Kice said.

Of 473 asylum applications submitted in southern Texas since Feb. 21, only 36 had been approved through Thursday. The approvals included 35 Nicaraguans and one woman from El Salvador.

Handicap doesn't stop man from running for mayor

HICO (AP) — This city's mayoral election has attracted only one candidate, but if J.A. "Jim" Whitney is elected, he says it will be a coup for the disabled.

The 35-year-old quadriplegic would become the first mayor of Hico in nearly a year, if elected on May 6.

"This is just to see how acceptable and electable I am," said Whitney, who is the first mayoral candidate since former Mayor J.M. "Mutt" Blakley resigned last July. "This is just a stepping stone."

Hico, a town of 1,375 located about 65 miles southwest of Fort Worth, has had trouble interesting anyone in the mayoral seat since Blakley quit after heated discussions with the five-member council last year over management styles.

Whitney suffered multiple paralysis after a bout with encephalitis some 20 years ago, retaining only limited use of one hand.

A native of Indianapolis, he has worked as a disc jockey, a criminologist and most recently as a high-performance car mechanic in Odessa.

The father of five and grandfather of three, now writes music, does artwork, writes a column for the weekly newspaper and is den leader for the local Webelo Scouts.

Slow-speed chase ends in death for Kilgore man

FORT WORTH (AP) — A chase that never exceeded 20 mph ended in death for a 25-year-old Kilgore man when his car collided head-on with an 18-wheeler early Thursday, police said.

The victim, Eddie Lynn Spencer, was being pursued through Southwest Tarrant County by police attempting to stop him for a traffic violation when his car slammed into a semi-trailer truck at 2:52 a.m.

"Radar clocked him at 18 mph," said a police spokesman.

Forest Hill police officer Clint Turner began following Spencer's vehicle after he noticed it moving erratically in an eastbound lane of Interstate 20, police said.

Turner told investigators he watched the vehicle stop at an exit, then continue on I-20 at the point where it veers off into Interstate 820.

While following the car, Turner saw it stop two more times. It never exceeded 20 mph, the officer said.

Turner then attempted to pull over the car, but it kept going and began weaving across other lanes, police reported.

STATE IN BRIEF

Dispatcher's action leads to lawsuit against city

HALTOM CITY (AP) — The family of a slain man whose call to 911 for help was ignored when a dispatcher was told the call was a joke wants the city to pay them $400,000 for the man's death.

The body of Floyd Stice was found Dec. 18, three days after he phoned 911 emergency for help, by a neighbor who was rounding up Stice's dogs. A dispatcher sent no patrol car to investigate the call because a person at Stice's home told the dispatcher the call was a joke.

Sandra Snow, a veteran Haltom City dispatcher who later resigned, was indefinitely suspended Jan. 10, and a recently hired dispatcher, Doris Burleson, was fired because of the incident, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Thursday.

"Haltom City was negligent in the hiring and training of the 911 operators, and ... the operators themselves were negligent in failing to promptly dispatch police units," said the family's attorney, Jerome Wurst, in a March 1 letter to Haltom City officials.

Stice's death has been ruled a homicide by forced asphyxiation or suffocation, the Tarrant County medical examiner's office said.

Three Haltom City sisters — Sherry Lynn Clouse Cortez, 24; Rebecca Ann Clouse, 20, and Aprial Clouse, 16 — have been charged with murder in connection with the death. The youngest Clouse has been certified to stand trial as an adult.

Sherry Lynn Clouse Cortez formerly had lived with Stice and the sisters were trying to remove her belongings about the time the death occurred, investigators said.

Navy: 2 tried to sell parts

BELLE CHASSE, La. (AP) — Two Navy men accused of espionage at the Naval Air Station in suburban New Orleans tried to sell $150,000 worth of aircraft parts to pay off debts, Navy spokesmen said in disclosing specifics of the case for the first time.

Airman Ronald Dean Graf, 23, Grand Island, Neb., and Airman Apprentice Donald Wayne King, 23, Abilene, Texas, were arrested last week after they turned over stolen parts, manuals and drawings of weapons systems and communication information on A-7 attack planes and P-3A and P-3B patrol planes, the spokesmen said.

The pair also was charged with narcotics violations involving the sale of cocaine.

Graf and King apparently offered to sell the materials because of financial trouble, said Wayne Clookie, a Naval Investigative Service agent.

The aircraft involved are among the oldest in the Navy's inventory, but some of the weapons and electronics on the planes have been modernized. Even old parts could be used by once-friendly nations that were supplied with the planes by the United States, said Clookie.

Iran received U.S. P-3s before the revolution that ousted the shah in 1979, Clookie said.

Nurse held in kidnap plot

MCKINNEY (AP) — A 64-year-old live-in nurse is being held on $50,000 bond in connection with a scheme to kidnap a relative of the woman she cares for, the Department of Public Safety said.

Blanche Lucille Scott of Princeton, Texas, was being held in Collin County Jail on charges of aggravated kidnapping, said DPS spokesman Mike Cox.

Cox said officials learned of the planned kidnapping when an informant tipped Texas Ranger Brantley Foster, based in Mount Pleasant, that a woman was shopping around for a hired kidnapper.

Cox said the woman intended to kidnap a 60-year-old retired Princeton farmer. Foster telephoned the woman and after several conversations arranged to meet her on March 7.

"Without a badge and with a concealed gun and looking very thuggy, our Ranger met with this woman," Cox said. "At this time she paid the Ranger $1,000 in cash and furnished him with some drugs that she said could be used to tranquilize the victim."

Vest bill passes Senate

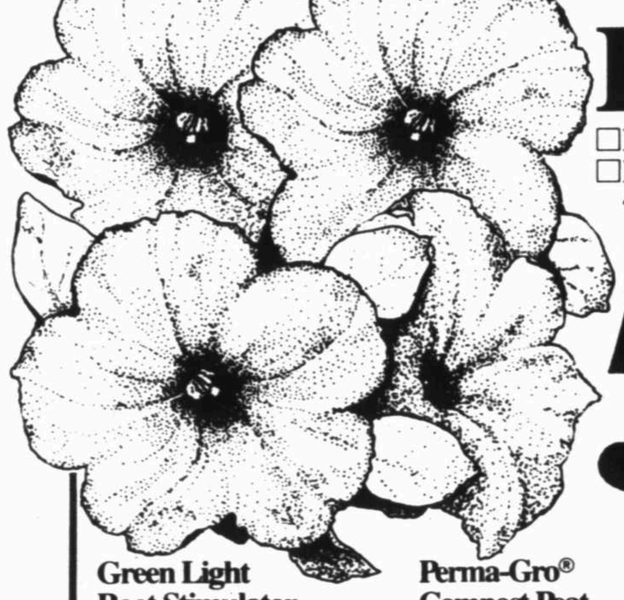

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would require law enforcement agencies to make available bulletproof vests to their officers passed unanimously Thursday in the Senate.

The bill, by Sen. Bob Glasgow, requires state, county and city law enforcement agencies to make the bulletproof vests available to every officer they employ.

Gambling ship ruling likely

CAMERON, La. (AP) — A Texas company's request for a ruling on whether a cruise ship that features gambling can use Cameron as a home port will be heard by a state judge March 22.

Cajun Festival Cruise Lines of Pearland, Texas, has asked District Judge Ward Fontenot for a declaratory judgment on the legality of basing the Panamanian-registered ship in Cameron.

Bush offers Third World debt plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker said today that there is no "magic elixir" to solve the $1.3 trillion Third World debt problem, and he cautioned policy makers against implementing debt-reduction programs that would only make the situation worse.

Volcker said that there was an emerging consensus that some type of forgiveness of debt would be needed as part of a solution to the debt problem. Volcker's remarks to a private conference on Third World debt preceded a speech by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, who was scheuled to provide details of the Bush administration's plans for handling the debt crisis.

While the Bush proposal was being billed essentially as an evolution fo the debt strategy adopted by the Reagan administration, in the key aspect of debt forgiveness the plan was likely to go much farther.

According to sources who have been in discussions with administration officials, the plan will explore various ways to encourage commercial banks to forgive a portion of hte debt they hold.

The Reagan administration repeatedly rejected proposals for broad-based debt foregiveness, but in comments today, Volcker and the leaders of the 151-nation World Bank and the International Monetary Fund all stressed the need for more movement in this direction.

Volcker, however, said, "There is no magic elixir. If not well-managed, a process of debt reduction clearly could be hazardous to the health of debtors and creditors alike."

Volcker said the question that must be answered is whether the value of the Third World debt can be reduced in an orderly manner that would not jeopardize the likelihood of repayment of whatever debt is left after the reductions occur.

Both World Bank President Barber Conable and Michel Camdessus, head of the IMF, said a more flexible approach to the debt problem is needed, contending that debtor countries face economic and political crises without debt relief.

Camdessus said that the riots in Venezuela last week which left 300 dead represented just one of several "time bombs" involving the debt issue which could explode unless solutions are found quickly. Those riots erupted after the government imposed tough austerity measures to please creditors.

"More has to be done urgently by all," he said.

Conable suggested that Mexico would be an excellent candidate to first try the new approaches because of the good-faith efforts it is has made in the past to meet its financial obligations.

Witness says North angry over questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North angrily complained about having to answer "asinine" congressional questions, according to a witness in his trial on charges of lying to Congress about the Iran-Contra affair.

Daniel L. Conrad, the liaison between North and conservative fundraiser Carl "Spitz" Channell, said North made the comment in the fall of 1985 and then told Conrad the two had to stop meeting at North's office.

Conrad's name appeared on a log at the Old Executive Office Building each time he visited North and "he didn't want meetings to be so often," Conrad testified Thursday.

Conrad said North told him the National Security Council recently had received a letter from a congressional committee asking about NSC staff members' involvement in fundraising and other activities for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. At the time, Congress had banned U.S. aid to the Contras.

"He angrily went through the questions and he was irritated that he had to develop answers to these asinine questions," recalled Conrad.

Government joins Northrop suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Justice Department has joined a $60 million lawsuit against Northrop Corp. that alleges the defense contractor falsified tests, raising fears that many of the 1,764 nuclear missiles aboard U.S. bombers may fail.

"Northrop has delivered a guidance system for a nuclear weapons system that very well may not work if used. That is the bottom line," said attorney Rob Kilborne.

Documents released Thursday by U.S. District Court Judge David Kenyon revealed that the federal government joined forces on Feb. 15 with two ex-Northrop employees, whom Kilborne represents, in a $60 million civil lawsuit brought against the aerospace concern in 1987.

The U.S. Attorney's Office, entering the case under terms of the federal False Claims Act, also charges Northrop with breach of contract and fraud.

A federal grand jury in Los Angeles reportedly is conducting a separate criminal investigation of the alleged fake tests, a probe begun by the FBI and Air Force.

"It is alleged Northrop's Western Services Department in El Monte systematically falsified test data, failed to perform certain tests and manipulated test equipment to obtain false results on the guidance system of the nuclear warhead missile," said Mary McMenimen, a spokeswoman fr U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner in Los Angeles.

Guidance system failure means a cruise missile and its nuclear warhead could miss its target, Kilborne said.

The cruise missile is a subsonic, jet-powered missile with small wings and a range of up to 1,500 miles. It is designed to fly close to terrain to avoid radar detection, and can carry conventional or nuclear warheads.

Federal prosecutors said Northrop falsely certified it had performed critical stress tests on flight data transmitters for the U.S. bomber fleet's 1,764 missiles between 1981 and 1986.

Production of the $9,000-per-missile guidance systems started in El Monte in suburban Los Angeles and moved later to Pomona, 20 miles east of downtown Los Angeles.

"These are critical guidance and flight control systems parts for the air-launched cruise missile," said Ms. McMenimen. "These units are on B-52 and B-1 bombers stationed both in the U.S. and overseas."

Asked about government prosecutors entering the case, Northrop spokesman Tony Cantafio cited a November 1987 General Accounting Office report stating the guidance system was "reliable and will perform its intended mission."

Northrop fired a plant manager and three employees after the company "discovered irregularities in the tests," Cantafio added.

Risks necessary in Central America

Secretary of State James Baker has been talking to the bipartisan leadership in Congress about what looks like a fundamental change in U.S. policy toward Nicaragua: away from military confrontation and toward a diplomatic settlement.

Perhaps that's only making a virtue of necessity, given the weak support on Capitol Hill for further U.S. aid to Nicaraguan anti-government rebels. Yet the fact that the Bush administration is talking in such terms marks a significant departure from the policy of Bush's predecessor, a policy best summarized by Ronald Reagan himself when he expressed the hope that the comandantes in Managua would "say uncle!"

The Bush administration's plan, not yet public, apparently is to offer an end to the U.S. economic embargo of Nicaragua, and eventually some degree of U.S. aid, in return for the democratization process — including national elections next year — that President Daniel Ortega has promised his Central American neighbors. The major remaining stumbling block to an agreement, as has been typical throughout the Nicaraguan ordeal, is U.S. support for the rebels.

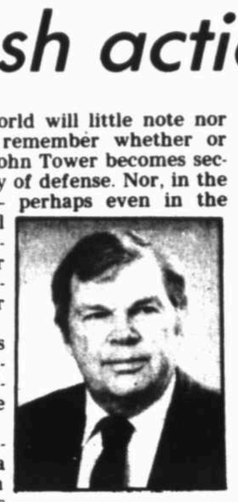

Baker wants new funds from Congress to keep the Contra army intact, albeit not fighting, until Ortega's promise is fully implemented. There are several problems with that. One is that it falls short of what the five Central American governments, including Nicaragua, agreed to on Feb. 14: to develop a plan within 90 days to dismantle the Contras in return for Nicaraguan political reforms. Secondly, there's an apparent consensus in Congress for dispersing the Contra army as an inducement to reform within Nicaragua, not as a reward for doing this country's bidding. Nor are the Sandinistas likely to look with favor on a bargain that leaves a loaded gun pointed at their heads until Washington certifies, if it ever does, the reform process as satisfactory. Regardless, that is the best "insurance" toward seeing that Ortega follows through on his promise.

Despite these hurdles, Baker's conciliatory approach to Congress offers the hope that a unified U.S. policy approach may yet emerge. If that happens, the next step must be to get talks going in Central America aimed at setting up parallel timetables for dissolving the Contra army and introducing durable political freedom in Nicaragua. Reaching that point will require a degree of risk on both sides, but the tragic failures of the past eight years in Central America make it important that such risks be taken.

Bush action needed on debt crisis

The world will little note nor long remember whether or not John Tower becomes secretary of defense. Nor, in the long run — perhaps even in the short — will it much matter whether Eastern Airlines lives or dies.

Tom Wicker

But as these questions dominated the headlines and broadcasts of a journalism that thrives on today:

■ More than 100 nations met in London to pursue a challenge set them by the European Community and the Bush administration to eliminate by the end of the century industrial chemicals threatening the vital ozone layer.

■ In the backwash of anti-austerity rioting that left about 300 dead and 2,000 injured in Venezuela, President Carlos Andres Perez said (though he later tried to retract it) that his country might have to suspend all debt payments to foreign nations, significantly including the U.S.

There's a pair of stories that really matter, and will for years to come — one a sign of international cooperation on an imminent environmental problem, the other a warning signal about the clear and present danger of Third World debt.

But even while they were hauling the bodies off the streets of Caracas, the Bush administration was focused, like its predecessor, on the tired old question of the Contras and the Sandinistas in Nicaragua.

That Reagan-generated conflict never did rise, and certainly doesn't now, to the high level of importance implied by the controversy it has aroused.

When Baker was Treasury secretary, he developed a plan, largely unsuccessful, to ease the Third World debt problem — which hasn't gone away but has grown in severity.

Now, instead of tackling it anew, he asks Congress for more aid to the Contras. That's a slap in the face to the Central American presidents who recently signed a new peace proposal, and a sad commentary on the new administration's regional priorities.

Perez probably won't actually suspend — not yet — all Venezuela's payments on its $33 billion foreign debt, although principal payments already have been halted.

Default would too critically damage his nation's international credit standing. But the rioting that followed his imposition of relatively mild anti-inflation measures suggests that Latin populations — Venezuela's is one of the most democratic — cannot be squeezed forever to pay foreign debts.

The danger is twofold. Tightening austerity measures to enable Latin governments to make huge payments — inflated by high interest rates set a decade ago — to gringo and European bankers ultimately will produce so much popular unrest that default may be forced and democracy could be overthrown.

Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Peru, Venezuela — all bear virtually unbearable debts. Default and upheaval in one could lead to more of the same in the others.

For the U.S., Latin default might threaten the banking system, and the overthrow of democracy obviously would damage hemispheric stability; even if neither happens, forced austerity in Latin America prevents its nations from importing U.S. goods, a heavy burden on the U.S. trade imbalance.

The necessary response, the only effective response, is debt relief — including the stretchout of terms, the reduction of interest rates, even in some cases the forgiveness of loans the Latin nations were pressured into accepting, together with the necessary legislation to make it possible for U.S. commercial banks to take these steps.

If any of that is to happen, Bush and Baker will have to take the lead.

They already provide such leadership on important environmental questions.

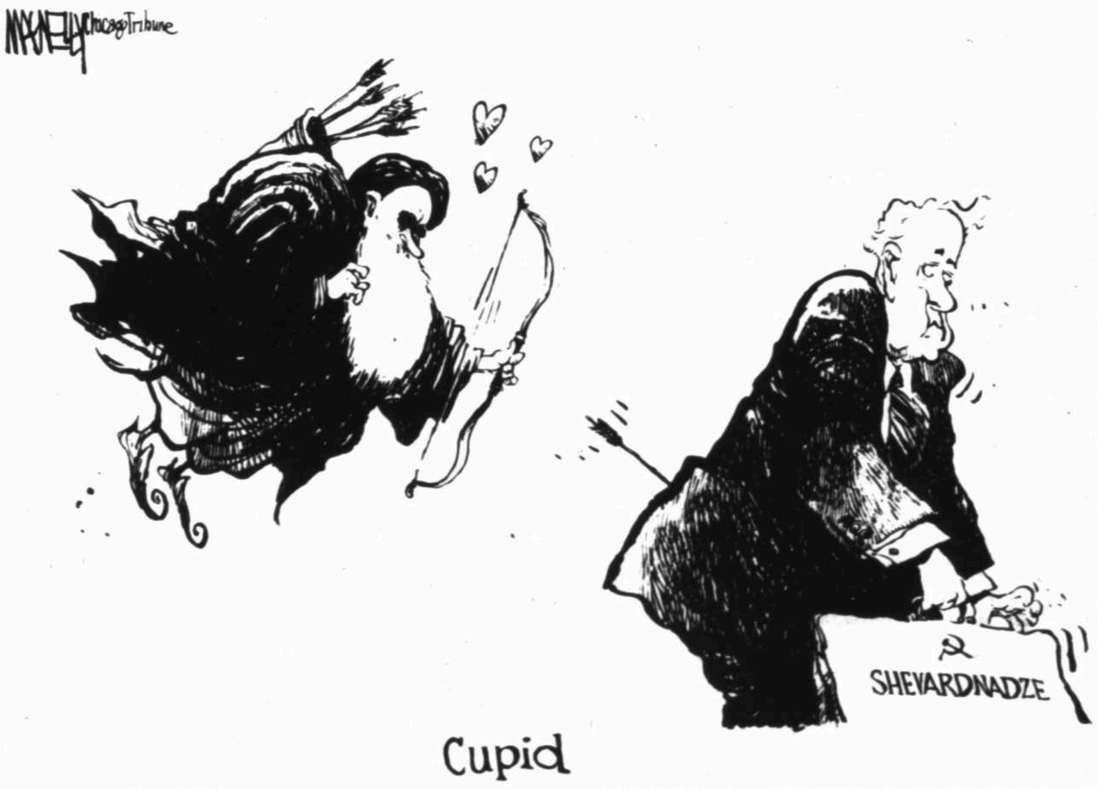

Acid rain prevention is high on Bush's agenda and Baker's first official pronouncement was a commitment to act against global warming. Now William K. Reilly, the director of the EPA, has been sent to London with an important administration commitment to the worldwide elimination of ozone-threatening chemicals by the year 2000.

Ozone depletion allows more ultraviolet radiation from the sun to reach the Earth's surface. That increases the risk of skin cancer and eye cataracts, causes ill effects in crops and aquatic life and may contribute to global warming.

Even after the offending chemicals are eliminated, those already in the stratosphere will continue for decades to attack the ozone layer.

The Bush administration has moved strongly and none too soon against these dangers. A similarly alert response to the debt crisis would make more sense than another dreary round of battle for the Contras — or even for poor old battered John Tower.

Just the fax, ma'am, romancin' the phone

NEW YORK — This town's non-stop social storm is often called the cutting edge of American culture.

Wall Street is a supreme reflection of this worldly sophistication.

Jack Casserly

In addition to the Wall Street Journal, I have lately been perusing the other bible of the Big Board crowd — the twice-monthly Battery News. I live in the Battery, way down south at the southern tip of Manhattan. Most of us gobble up the News because it is blood-and-guts Wall Street — crime, the neighborhood family wars, fires, accidents and lost dogs.

One of the most fascinating parts of the paper — remember that most readers are Wall Streeters — is its "Personal Dialogue." You are not going to believe this but here are a few recent messages for the Battery's adventuresome readers:

And this one: "Jaded female, 40, seeks dominant, personable, experienced, articulate man, 40 plus, who's a gentleman to the world but a true master in private. Call..."

Finally: "White male, 40, toucher, seeks thin white female with beautiful hands and legs for vulcan mind meld and incredibly intimate relationship. Call..."

The subsequent pages offer business opportunities. Some are so complex it would take the graduating class at Harvard's Business School to figure out what they mean.

This is the culture mix in worldly Wall Street? Pardon me while I find my pickup truck, slip my old shotgun into the rack, and drive home to Prescott, Ariz.

Some Wall Street acquaintances tell me I've got it all wrong. That's for the out crowd. The real way to mix socially on Wall Street is the fax machine.

The fax machine? Yes, those wondrous metallic boxes that send copies of messages across phone lines into machines in other offices and homes.

It is The Street's latest love fad. Bars, supermarkets and brushing elbows on subways are out — too chancey. The fax is also an impersonal intro — no rush act or sweet talk. A mere bleep...bleep...bleep... a message with no address or phone listing. Just a fax number.

SinglesFax is a new introductory service for the undaunted. It maintains biographies of clients and puts Fax Number X in contact with Fax Number Y. You can mix business with pleasure right there in the stock brokerage or insurance company. Sure, the boss has agreed to wink at it. It might mean a sale.

There are nearly 1.9 million fax machines in the United States. Multiply that by those with access to the Love Box and you have a crowd that will find the most faraway forlorn.

Busy business executives love it. So do lawyers' secretaries. The bond traders are wild about it. Not to mention the girls in the typing pool.

The fax is flirting with class. The Battery News ads are deja vu. That's '88 and the gate, square. Fax is '89 for the refined.

So this is the cutting edge of American culture?

I have a message for the Fax lovers:

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Will real Ayatollah please remain seated?

I talked to a guy who knows the Ayatollah Khomeini personally. It was just a chance meeting, a stroke of journalistic luck.

Lewis Grizzard

The group didn't have a lot of money, so I agreed to take the bus, and I happened to be sitting next to this guy who said he was waiting on a bus for Houston where he had taken a job as a convenience store clerk.

I noticed he was dressed in an odd manner, even for somebody waiting on a bus to Houston. He looked like a cross between Yasir Arafat and a recently drowned rat.

We started to chat. I introduced myself. He introduced himself.

"My name is Jabbar Abdul Kareem Ahmad Rashad, Jr., but my friends call me 'Lefty' because I lost my right hand as a result of some unpleasantness with the Iranian People's Court."

"You are from Iran?" I asked.

"You know anywhere else where a man can lose his right hand for serving fried eggs with the yellow too runny?"

"You were a cook in Iran?"

"The Ayatollah?"

"The Great Wise Exalted One. Or, how you say in this country, 'The Head Horseshoe.'"

"It's the head 'Honcho,'" I corrected him.

"Whatever," said what's-his-name. "I was the Ayatollah's cook and he doesn't like the yellow of his eggs to run, so when I served him runny eggs one morning, he sent me to court and they ordered my right hand be chopped off.

"After the bleeding stopped I stole a camel and, well, here I am."

I had to ask.

"What's the Ayatollah really like? All we get are a few television shots of him and news of whom he happens to be condemning to death that particular day."

"He's not that bad of a guy until he gets mad," said Jabbar, Etc. "For instance, on my fifth anniversary date as his cook, he allowed me to take a look at one of the girls in the pastry department with her veil off. He had her put to death the next day, of course, but what a thrill for me. I took cold showers for weeks."

"But when he's mad?"

"Oh, Margaret, bar the door."

"That's 'Katy' bar the door," I corrected him.

"Whatever," said my Iranian friend.

"Once some bees got into the Ayatollah's robe. He had some pretty bad stings and had the heads of every exterminator in Tehran cut off.

"Roaches, they were everywhere for weeks. But Oliver North sold us a planeload of Raid, and we were OK after that.

"Then there was the time the Ayatollah's doctor told him his cholesterol was too high and he couldn't eat any more fried goat dung. He sent the doctor to prison."

"And how about when he got the news about the book 'Satanic Verses'?" I asked.

"He went blueberries."

"That's 'bananas.'"

"Whatever. He ranted and developed a terrible case of painful, itching hemorrhoids."

"Is there any way the book's author, Salman Rushdie, could ever get forgiveness from the Ayatollah?"

"That's 'H,'" I said.

"Whatever," said Abdul. "I have to go now, they're calling my bus."

If this doesn't get me a Pulitzer, nothing will.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. only offers 'two sides to same coin'

Probably no one has more misunderstandings about America than Americans.

First of all, most of us don't have time to do a lot of generalized thinking. Unlike those sensible people who take siestas or afternoons off, we Americans think hard work is a virtue. We even work hard at playing, as a casual visit to any golf course, tennis court or campground will verify.

Charley Reese

Secondly, we are blessed with a media who believe their primary function is entertainment. In print and in the ether, the media believe that even the few news stories should be couched in an entertaining format.

Thirdly, we have so designed our public education system that no child, taking American history, ever gets past the Battle of Gettysburg. For generations, American children wondered what happened in that mysterious gap between Gettysburg and their birth, but after a while, since no one they knew ever knew either, they stopped being curious.

Consequently, Americans are full of wrong ideas about their own country. Most think, for example, that we are a democracy when in fact our Constitution was designed to create a republic. The authors of our Constitution were dead set against democracy, figuring that democracies self destruct as soon as people learn to loot the public treasury with their votes. They did not allow everyone to vote and thought we would not be so stupid as to allow it either.

Many people think the American government is against communism, another misconception. Everytime communism has gotten itself into a real trouble, the American government has stepped in to save it. We fed it after the Revolution, sold it machinery during Lenin's New Economic Policy, gave it diplomatic recognition and credit during the economic hard times of 1933, helped Stalin industrialize, helped it defeat its former allies, the Nazis, and so forth up until present.

Communism serves the purpose of justifying a global foreign policy that our forefathers warned us against. Whenever the powers-that-be wish to meddle in the internal affairs of a foreign country, the intervention — which is really for economic reasons — is justified on the basis of our being against communism.

Americans are too busy and the media are too entertaining to wonder why, for example, we had to fight communism in Vietnam, guarantee its preservation in Cuba, and trade with it in Eastern Europe — all at the same time.

Still another misconception is that we have a strong two-party system in the United States when in fact we have two parties, but they are not the ones people think. The two parties consist of them and us. Democrats and Republicans are merely two sides of the same coin. Men with as disparate philosophies as George Wallace, former governor of Alabama, and Gore Vidal, the novelist, have observed there's not a dime's worth of difference between Republicans and Democrats.

Both support the Federal Reserve; both support the present tax system with minor variations based mainly on having slightly different constituencies to reward; both support a global foreign policy. Their differences are on the details and in the degree of competence of their leaders in carrying out basically the same policy.

If you put aside partisan rhetoric, you will be hard-pressed to point out any significant differences between Republican and Democratic administrations going back many decades on the key issues of monetary policy, taxation, and foreign policy.

Finally, just as the American government is not really against communism it is not really for free enterprise. It is for a form of corporate capitalism, run by elites, with a welfare state — paid for by the working class — the purpose of which is to keep the masses relatively content.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On March 10, 1876, Alexander Graham Bell made the first telephone call, telling his assistant in an adjoining room in Boston, "Mr. Watson, come here. I want you."

On this date:

In 1629, England's King Charles I dissolved parliament. He would not call it back for 11 years.

In 1864, Ulysses S. Grant became commander of the Union armies in the Civil War.

In 1880, the Salvation Army arrived in the United States from England.

In 1969, James Earl Ray pleaded guilty in Memphis, Tenn., to the assassination of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. Ray later repudiated that plea.

NATION in brief

Countdown starts for space shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown began early today for a Monday launch of space shuttle Discovery on a flight its commander says will demonstrate "we're a space-faring nation again."

The launch will be the third for the shuttle program since the Challenger disaster more than three years ago, and the first of seven flights scheduled this year as NASA moves toward its target of safe, routine, once-a-month missions by 1992.

"The countdown started right on time," said NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone. The ambitious 1989 schedule is getting a late start, with Discovery's flight delayed nearly four weeks so faulty or suspect engine parts could be replaced.

The countdown clock began ticking at 12:01 a.m. after test conductor Jerry Crute issued the traditional call to stations that summoned members of the launch team to their posts. The initial task was to electrically activate the spaceship's systems.

Charles Henschel, chief of test operations at the Kennedy Space Center, told reporters today the early hours of the count had progressed well and that some checks were running ahead of schedule.

Liftoff is set for 8:07 a.m. Monday.

Soviets protest ouster

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union lodged a "resolute protest" over the expulsion of a military attache allegedly involved in a spy operation aimed at learning how the U.S. government protects computer secrets.

Lt. Col. Yuriy Nikolayevich Pakhtusov, 35, was told to leave Thursday. An FBI investigation had led to his arrest Wednesday night, just a day after the Bush administration opened a high-level dialogue with the Soviet Union.

Pakhtusov was described by a U.S. source as a significant catch because he is a member of the Red Army's GRU intelligence arm. One official said Pakhtusov was caught "red-handed."

But the Soviet Embassy issued a statement saying the expulsion order "could be only qualified as a deliberate provocation against a Soviet diplomatic official."

It denied that Pakhtusov engaged in any wrongdoing and said the embassy has lodged a "resolute protest" with the State Department.

State Department press officer Dennis Harter said the Soviet Embassy was informed that Pakhtusov was being expelled for "activities incompatible with his diplomatic status."

INS chief criticizes policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's immigration chief says he'll use county jails and military facilities to detain Central American refugees if they continue to stream across the Texas border, but a House panel chairman says the policy is an "impending disaster."

Alan C. Nelson, commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, told a House panel Thursday that there's no alternative to detaining the refugees while their claims for asylum are processed, because they'll never be found if given freedom to travel.

"It looks like an impending disaster," said Rep. Bruce A. Morrison, chairman of the House Judiciary immigration subcommittee. He said the INS detention facility at Port Isabel, Texas — now with 1,700 refugees — would soon reach its capacity of 5,000.

The commissioner said the key to slowing down the stream of immigrants depends on "whether the word gets down the line" that "there's no free ride" any more for those crossing the U.S. border illegally.

Nelson said the refugees, coming for economic reasons, are abusing the asylum process by contending they meet the test of a well-founded fear of persecution in their native countries.

Comatose wife transferred

MANHASSET, N.Y. (AP) — A comatose woman who had an abortion last month after an emotional legal battle that reached the U.S. Supreme Court was transferred Thursday to a rehabilitation center.

"I told her we had worked hard to get her into a place that will get her home faster," said Nancy Klein's husband, Martin.

Klein said he does not known how much his wife understands. She suffered severe brain injuries Dec. 13 in a car accident near her home on Long Island and has been comatose since.

Klein, 34, went to court last month and won guardianship of his wife so he could authorize an abortion for her. She was 17 weeks pregnant.

Anti-abortion activists challenged the guardianship and appealed all the way to the Supreme Court, which declined to hear the case.

In a lower court, doctors for both sides disagreed about whether having an abortion could help Mrs. Klein recover.

Party prank leads to jail

MANITOWOC, Wis. (AP) — A taxi company owner and his wife who jokingly spiked a party cake with a laxative have been sentenced to 75 days in jail on a battery conviction.

Martin Yauch, 38, and Lois M. Yauch, 40, originally charged with placing a foreign substance in edibles, pleaded guilty in November to a reduced charge of misdemeanor battery. They were sentenced Thursday.

U.S. allies accused of helping Libya produce weapons

By STEWART M. POWELL
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Dozens of firms based in Japan and other unnamed nations allied with the United States helped Libya's Moammar Gadhafi complete a suspected weapons complex capable of producing up to 40 tons of poison gas a day, members of Congress said Thursday.

The disclosure broadened the responsibility for the controversial Libyan facility and complicated any Bush administration effort to sell sensitive U.S. aircraft technology to a Japanese firm involved in the Libyan project.

Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., a member of the House Armed Services Committee, told Hearst Newspapers that large numbers of companies from a variety of nations assisted Gadhafi's two-year effort about 40 miles southwest of the Libyan capital of Tripoli to complete a complex to be used for making chemical weapons.

Unofficial estimates cited by the House Republican Research Committee suggest participation by firms from as many as 12 countries, including Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, Switzerland, Germany and Japan.

"If you start counting companies and their subcontractors, we're talking about dozens of operations," Hunter said.

Five Japanese firms have been publicly identified so far, according to Rep. Helen Delich Bentley, R-Md., chairman of a congressional task force on the transfer of sensitive U.S. technology overseas, told a news conference.

"However, I have heard that as many as eight other Japanese firms have been involved in construction of the poison gas plant," Bentley said.

She named only Japan Steel Works, Toshiba, C. Itoh, Mitsubishi Trading Co., and Mitsubishi Heavy Industries.

Mitsubishi Heavy Industries, according to classified Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) briefings confirmed by members of Congress, has 50 technicians and engineers working on the Libyan complex to install metal machining equipment for producing steel canisters used to deliver poison gas. Production of the canisters would enable Gadhafi to stockpile poison gas bombs for future use.

"It's absolutely the scariest thing that's ever happened to many of our allies and many Americans to see Mr. Gadhafi, a known terrorist, a known killer of American citizens, to acquire this capability with the help of our friends," Hunter said.

Gadhafi insists the plant produces only pharmaceuticals.

Chemical weapons are widespread with both the United States and Soviet Union having stockpiles. The United States continues to produce chemical weapons. The manufacture of the weapons remains legal while their use is outlawed by an international agreement signed in 1925.

Legislation being prepared to prohibit foreign companies that assisted Gadhafi from doing business in the United States also would require the CIA to identify companies that participated in the multimillion dollar Libyan project, Hunter said.

"I want to make it clear that any corporation, whether it's from Japan, Germany, France or wherever, that is involved in this gas plant should be banned permanently from the American market," Hunter said. "If we don't do that, we'll never establish a deterrent to western corporations that are selling out the West."

Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., a member of the House Armed Services Committee and a former fighter pilot, urged President Bush to bomb the Libyan facility.

Poland's election move gains praise

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Opposition leaders praised a government agreement to create a new national legislature with freely elected members, but they say open elections on the local level must be the next step toward true democracy.

Government and opposition negotiators, in a breakthrough that could give Poland the first democratic national elections in the communist bloc, agreed Thursday to add a second chamber of parliament open to all candidates.

The agreement also calls for 35 percent of the seats in the existing parliament, the Seijm, to be open to opposition candidates.

Additionally, the sides agreed in principle to establish a post of president who would be elected by a majority of both chambers of Parliament, which would form the National Assembly.

Opposition figures cautioned that the tentaive reforms only are a first step toward substantive democratic reform.

"If the process of the democratization is to work, it must include solutions of such problems as local governments which would be elected in completely free elections," said Bronislaw Geremek, head of the opposition group negotiating with the government on political reform.

He also called for opposition access to mass media and freedom to create associations.

"Such reform cannot begin and end at the top authorities," opposition negotiator Zbigniew Bujak told state television late Thursday. "It must also be made from the bottom."

Authorities have insisted on elections in June, leaving the independents little time to mount effective campaigns.

Candidates for the new parliamentary chamber, provisionally called the "senate," can be nominated by an existing group or gather 5,000 signatures to run, said Janusz Reykowski, a government negotiator.

Reykowski is the leader of the government side on the working group dealing with political reforms, part of the broader talks between opposition and the government on Poland's future.

Opposition negotiators said the number of members in the future sentate still remained to be negotiated.

They also said the agreement on free elections to the senate was part of a trade-off for conceding that Poland would have a strong presidency, which likely would remain in Communist Party control.

The powers of the president still are to be debated, but the idea is to combine in the presidency powers now held by the Council of State, such as appointing the head of the army and names ambassadors. The president also would be able to dissolve parliament and call new elections.

There has been wide speculation that if a presidency is established, the post would be filled by communist party First Secretary Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski.

Reykowski said the proposed new election law would be submitted to the Sejm as early as next week. The communist party now has an absolute majority in the Sejm and any laws proposed by the party are assured passage.

The electoral changes are part of a package of political and economic reforms being negotiated since Feb. 6 at the talks between the authorities and opposition.

The talks also have resulted in tentative agreement to restore the banned trade union Solidarity, the farmers' union rural Solidarity and the Independent Students' Association.

Both sides must agree to the entire package for the reforms to take effect.

Water 'rain,' not effluent, Odessan says

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

STANTON — Odessa's environmental-control manager testified Thursday that flood waters southeast of Midland and along Monahans Draw were caused by rain and not by treated waste water — effluent — discharged by Odessa into the meandering draw.

"With all the rain that we had had, I really felt it was rain water," the manager, Debbie McReynolds, testified of flood waters on the Louise Gay property in 1986.

Ms. Gay owns land along Monahans Draw east of the Lee Bell cotton farm southeast of Midland.

Bell, a 35-year-old Midland County farmer, is suing the city of Odessa, which he claims is causing the flooding by discharging treated waste water into the draw from two plants — the South Dixie Water Reclamation Plant, which has been in operation since at least the 1950s, and the East Water Reclamation Plant, built in the early 1980s.

Testimony indicated that Odessa has been granted permits by the Texas Water Commission and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to discharge treated sewer waters into the draw.

Ms. McReynolds said fences on the Gay place were under water and that standing water there appeared to be "lake water."

"We tried to explain to her (Ms. Gay) that most of the water came from the rainfall, and we (Odessa) were discharging" treated waste water under state and federal permits, Ms. McReynolds said.

In his testimony earlier in the week, Bell said draw waters passing through and flooding over onto his farmland are almost "pea-soup" dark green and sometimes carry a rank odor akin to sewage.

Bell had submitted as evidence to bolster his case a quart bottle of an olive-drab liquid from his farm.

And the city of Odessa tendered smaller bottles of clear water, which had been discharged by the treatment plants and "raw" lake water which was piped into Odessa for treatment before being injected into city lines for city-wide use.

The case, to be decided by 12 Martin County jurors in 118th Texas State District Court here, is being presided over by Judge James Gregg of Big Spring. Midland attorney Paul Bohannon is representing Bell and his ex-wife, Debbie Bell, and Austin lawyer Shannon Ratliff is representing the city of Odessa.

Carol Mann stands atop the NCNB Texas Building in downtown Midland where the transmitter for a New Mexico public radio station will be situated. The station will soon be heard in Midland.

Translator will double pleasure of NPR

Device will let locals tune in to Portales public radio

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant City Editor

When it rains, it pours — at least when it comes to public radio.

Less than a month after Odessa College's KOCV radio station changed its format to accommodate some National Public Radio programming, Midland is within a couple of weeks of having another NPR option on the dial.

A low-power translator for KENW-FM radio from Portales, N.M., is expected to be installed atop the NCNB Texas Bank Building within a week or two, according to the woman most responsible for the new station.

Midland native Carol Mann had heard and loved public radio programs when visiting other areas.

Among the stations she had heard was the public station from Eastern New Mexico University, with translators as far south as Maljamar, N.M.

"The New Mexico Legislature is committed to providing public television and radio service to all state residents," Mrs. Mann said.

But when the time came to start looking into getting NPR for Midland, the national organization acknowledged that Midland/Odessa was one of the largest unserved areas in the nation.

Early last year, Odessa College said it wasn't interested in changing from its student-programmed rock format.

On Portales' KENW, "they had an 800 number, which to me is an open invitation," she recalled. Duane Ryan, the director of broadcasting for the university, reciprocated Mrs. Mann's interest in bringing the station's signal into Midland.

He explained the station already serves some towns along the western edge of the Panhandle and all of eastern New Mexico.

The only barrier to Midland service was constructing the translator tower. While the New Mexico government is committed to public TV and radio for its own residents, it won't pay for funding to build a tower to serve West Texans, Mrs. Mann said.

But, if private funds could be found to build the tower, the station agreed to pick up all operating expenses, she added.

"So I asked him 'How much money are we talking?' "she recalled.

Ten- to $12,000 was his reply. "That didn't seem like all that much to raise," so she set out to do just that, calling on long-time friends and acquaintances familiar with NPR and a reputation for supporting the arts.

In return for their donations, more than 35 Midlanders will bring award-winning news programs such as Morning Edition and All Things Considered to their fellow residents.

While KOCV is also a member of National Public Radio, Ryan says there will be little program overlap, with the exception of the news shows — plus Saturday afternoon opera. During the New York Metropolitan Opera season, three stations — the two public stations, plus KWMJ-FM — will be carrying the same operatic performances.

The New Mexico station is also a member of American Public Radio, which adds three- to five-minute information modules three time an hour, Ryan said.

In addition to being available at 88.7 khz on the FM band in Midland, a booster tower in Andrews — constructed for part of the $12,000 total — will broadcast to that town at 90.9 khz on the dial.

After KOCV decided to convert to the NPR format last year, Mrs. Mann went back to her contributors to offer them their money back, but she didn't have any takers, so the group has gone ahead with the Midland antenna.

"I'm tickled pink that we'll have a choice of two non-commercial stations," she said.

The musical formats will differ: KOCV plays "new age" and classical music during the day, with jazz at night; KENW features an easy listening daytime play list with classical selections at night.

Legislation proposes judicial elections from single-member districts

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — From the state's highest appellate courts to local county courts-at-law, benches across the state would be filled by single-member district elections under proposals to overhaul the judicial selection process.

Evans

"The legislation is far-reaching in its consequences and implications," says Rep. Larry Evans, D-Houston, who filed the measures with Sen. Craig Washington, also a Houston Democrat.

"We look forward to working with the (House) speaker and the lieutenant governor and parties on both sides of the isle ... to make sure that judicial reform is indeed meaningful in Texas," Evans said at a news conference Thursday.

The lawmakers filed resolutions calling for repeal of a state constitutional provision requiring judicial districts be no smaller than counties.

Another proposed constitutional amendment would allow state district judges to be elected by single districts in counties with populations of 300,000 or more.

A third proposal would place each of the nine members on the Texas Supreme Court and Court of Criminal Appeals in an election district, and the chief justice and presiding judge of those courts would be elected by the members.

Currently, Midland County is fighting a federal lawsuit seeking to overturn at-large elections for state district judges in 19 counties.

The lawsuit, filed by the League of United Latin American Citizens, claims the present method of electing judges is unconstitutional.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton is expected to hear the case in July in federal district court in Midland.

Evans said his proposals address concerns about campaign financing, the length of judicial ballots, the high cost of running for judicial office, and candidates not knowing their constituents and vice-versa.

Richburg unlikely to appeal manslaughter conviction

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The attorney for Troy Dal Richburg Thursday said he doesn't see any point in appealing his client's involuntary manslaughter conviction in connection with the deaths of five people after a July 1988 traffic accident.

State District Judge Pat Baskin sentenced Richburg to 10 years in prison Thursday after a jury last Friday found the 24-year-old Odessan guilty on five counts of involuntary manslaughter.

In addition to the 10-year prison term, Baskin suspended Richburg's driver's license for two years.

"At this time, it's hard for me to say that I'm happy about it, but I don't see any reason for an appeal," said Defense attorney Roy Bell of Odessa, referring to the sentence, which was the maximum penalty allowed by law.

Richburg sat motionless through the mid-morning proceeding, choosing not to utter a word as Baskin spelled out the reasons for his handing down the 10-year prison term.

"The court is not at all persuaded that you were mean and vicious that night, or that you are mean and vicious today," Baskin said. "However, the jury has found that this accident would not have happened but for your intoxication."

The judge stressed two rules of sentencing during the 30-minute proceeding: to keep the criminal at arms length from the rest of society, and to deter others from committing the same sort of crime.

Richburg was convicted in the deaths of Ascension "Chon" Ramirez Sr., 38; his two daughters, Amy Ramirez, 16, and 11-year-old Amanda Rose Ramirez; Derek Ryan Sanchez, 7, of Pasadena, and 16-month-old Amanda Kay Hiarker of Sugarland.

After hearing testimony, the jury determined Richburg was drunk at the wheel of a pickup that smashed into a four-door sedan, driven by Yolanda Sanchez Ramirez.

The Ramirez party had attended a birthday celebration in Odessa and was headed to Midland on U.S. Highway 80 near Midland International Airport when the borrowed car in which they were traveling stalled.

Ramirez tried to push the car across the westbound lane crossover, but never made it.

During the brief punishment phase of the trial last week, Richburg had asked Baskin to grant him a probated sentence.

Team to march in parade

Doug Sehres/Reporter-Telegram

Angie Seltzer, an eighth-grade student at Goddard Junior High School, will board an airplane bound for Dublin, Ireland, Saturday as a participant of the National Cheerleaders Association's Spirit of America Team that will perform in the St. Patrick's Day Parade. The youngest cheerleader represented on the team, Miss Seltzer is the daughter of Charles W. "Bro" and Susan Seltzer.

From Staff Reports

Angie Seltzer, daughter of Charles W. "Bro" and Susan Seltzer of Midland, will be among the 112 select participants of the National Cheerleaders Association's Spirit of America Performance Team that is performing in the authentic St. Patrick's Day Parade in Dublin, Ireland.

Of the 112 members of the NCA Performance Team, 31 are dance/drill team members, 54 are cheerleaders, 25 are pom pon girls and two are flag representatives.

The St. Patrick's Day Parade is expected to draw more than 750,000 people along the streets of Dublin. The NCA Spirit of America Performance Team also will perform at the Castle of Kilkenny in Kilkenny, Ireland, and at the Lord Mayor's Ball.

The NCA Spirit of America Performance Team has participated in the St. Patrick's Day parade for the past seven years. Team members are chosen to participate by virtue of their being selected as "outstanding individuals" at NCA Summer Camps. Each attended a NCA Superstar Dance-Drill Team, Cheerleading or Pom Pon Camp this past summer.

The carefully choreographed routines that will be presented at the St. Patrick's Day Parade culminate five days of intensive rehearsals in Ireland, where the students meet for the first time as a group.

These are conducted each summer on college campuses throughout the nation. Their instructors teach precision dance, cheerleading and pom pon routines to junior high, high school and college-level dance drill teams, cheerleading and pom pon squads throughout the U.S. and Europe.

Miss Seltzer is the youngest cheerleader in the U.S. selected to perform with the team; the rest being from high school and college squads. Her selection was based on her cheerleading, gymnastics and dance skills.

Man indicted for assault on IRS agent

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 44-year-old Midland man, Robert Cleon Brown, who on Feb. 21 allegedly twice slammed the door on an Internal Revenue Service tax-collector, has been indicted by a federal grand jury in Midland for assault and impeding an IRS agent in carrying out her duties.

The IRS agent, Lelia Pando, had entered Brown's Midland house that had been seized by the IRS and was slated to be sold for back taxes. After the alleged assault, Ms. Pando was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital for injuries to her back.

Brown's indictment was one of five handed down Thursday by a federal grand jury in Midland.

Brown, an oil-field pumper, has been released on bail and could be sentenced up to four years in prison and fined $253,000 should he be convicted.

DEATHS

Ellen Heard

Funeral services for Mrs. Ellen Heard of Midland will be held at 1 p.m. Friday at the Fairmont Park Church of Christ with Ralph Gates and Ray Sibert officiating. Graveside services are set for 10 a.m. Saturday at the Crestview Memorial Park in Wichita Falls with Larry Suttle officiating.

Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Heard died Thursday night at a local hospital.

She was born Sept. 23, 1913, in New Castle. She was raised in New Castle and Hollis, Okla. As a young girl she moved with her family to Wichita Falls. She later met Luther C. Heard and they were married in Walters, Okla., on July 25, 1931. The Heards made their home in Wichita Falls.

Mrs. Heard worked as a secretary for many years for the Justice of the Peace in Wichita County. She was appointed interim justice of the peace for two years in the late 1960s. Her husband preceded her in death in April 1975. Mrs. Heard retired in 1977 and moved to Midland to be near her family.

She was a member of the 10th and Broad Street Church of Christ in Wichita Falls and was a member of the Fairmont Park Church of Christ in Midland.

Survivors include two sons, Howard W. Heard of Redmond, Wash., and Tom C. Heard of Fort Worth; a daughter, Mrs. Nelda Eakins of Midland; a brother, Don Munsey of Vernon; eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to the Library Fund at Fairmont Park Church of Christ, 3813 N. Midland Dr., Midland, Texas, 79705.

Randal Allen Palk

Services for Randal Allen Palk have been set for 9 a.m. Saturday at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ with Tom Vermillion and Gary Grady officiating. Graveside services will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday at the White Church Cemetery, Taylor County, under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Palk

Palk died Thursday at his home.

He was born Nov. 3, 1950, at Monahans to Albert E. and Ruth Palk. He was raised in San Angelo and Midland and was a graduate of Bakersfield High School in 1968. He then moved to Lubbock to attend Lubbock Christian College. He lived in Denver, Colo. before he moved to Midland in 1977. He worked at Midland Memorial Hospital in the Radiology Department.

He was a member of the Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A.E. Palk of Midland; two sisters, Mrs. Ann Harlow of San Angelo and Mrs. Beth Littrell of Plano; a niece and two nephews.

Frankie Bolen Powell

Funeral services for Frankie Bolen Powell of Big Spring have been set for 3 p.m. Saturday at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity with the Rev. Robert L. Bonnington, pastor of St. Mary's Episcopal Church of Big Spring officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Powell died Thursday morning at a local hospital.

She was born Feb. 19, 1912, in Ennis, and was raised there. She moved to Colorado City where she met E.L. "Son" Powell. They were married in Hobbs, N.M., on Aug. 11, 1933. They lived on a ranch in Glasscock County until moving into Big Spring in 1951.

She was a member of St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Big Spring.

Survivors include her husband; a son, Frank B. Powell of Midland; a brother, Col. George O. Bolen Jr. of Bossier City, La.; two sisters, Mrs. R.L. (Nell) Green of San Angelo and Mrs. Harvey (Bertha) Parker of Abilene; two grandchildren, Stacy Powell and Brent Powell, both of Midland; and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests that memorials be directed to St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Big Spring.

Melissa D. Pearson

Services for Melissa D. Pearson of Midland have been set for 2 p.m. Monday at the Coker-Mathews-Peters Funeral Home chapel in Greenville. Burial will be in the Merritt Cemetery in Greenville. Mrs. Pearson's body will lie in state at the Ellis Funeral Home until Friday evening.

Local arrangements are being handled by Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Pearson died Wednesday at a local hospital.

She was born Aug. 2, 1901 in Titus County, and was reared in Hunt County. She married the late George M. Pearson in 1920. He was a Baptist minister, and they pastored churches in a number of places, including Sparenburg, Roswell, Magdalene and Gallup, N.M., where he retired in 1965. They moved to Midland the same year. He died in 1975.

Mrs. Pearson was a member of the First Baptist Church in Midland.

Survivors include a son, George W. Pearson of Midland; a brother, Mitchell Davis of Allen; a sister, Mrs. Jessie Watts of Greenville; and three grandchildren.

Loop 250 accident

A Midland man was treated for minor injuries and released from Midland Memorial Hospital following a two-car accident early today near the intersection of Loop 250 and Midkiff Road. The accident occurred about 7:30 a.m., police said.

Fire may have been set to cover up burglary

From Staff Reports

Fire department investigators believe culprits may have set a west Midland home on fire Feb. 25 to cover up a burglary.

There currently are no suspects in the case, also being investigated by the Midland Police Department, said Fire Marshal Jerry Petree.

The fire at 2905 Godfrey Ct. was reported shortly before 2 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 25.

Carpet was destroyed in several rooms in the house and there was major heat and smoke damage throughout, Petree said.

The suspects apparently also turned on the electric oven and placed a plastic gas container inside, the report indicated.

The homeowner reported several items missing from the home which led investigators to believe the fire was set to cover up a burglary, he continued.

Midland Police Sgt. Andy Glasscock is investigating the suspected arson, though his investigation is still in the early stages, he said today.

State tries to comply with Medicare laws

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — State officials said Thursday they are attempting to comply with federal laws that require them to pay out-of-pocket Medicare expenses for tens of thousands of poor, elderly Texans.

Mike Mason, the Texas Department of Human Services official responsible for the program, said last-minute changes in the law in mid-November added thousands of people to the list of those eligible for the payments. However, the change meant his office had little time to make needed computer adjustments.

Under the current Medicare catastrophic policy, Medicaid must pay the out-of-pocket Medicare expenses for individuals who make less than about $380 per month, or 85 percent of the federal poverty limits.

However, when the original provisions of the law went into effect in late July, they excluded from this coverage people who have qualified for Medicaid under other programs, Mason said.

INDICT

Last September, Ms. Pando, who is an IRS tax collector in Midland, and her IRS group manager, Lou Schwartz, had called upon Brown and his wife, Phyllis, to collect income taxes due from 1983 through 1987, Ms. Pando said in an affidavit, now a part of the court record.

The IRS then determined the Browns could pay back taxes if they sold their residence.

The IRS had demanded payment last Nov. 4 and repeatedly made demands for payment, the affidavit stated.

"The taxpayers were advised that if they failed to pay, the residence would be seized and offered for sale," Ms. Pando wrote.

The IRS decided that the Browns had "an ability to pay based on the equity in their home," Ms. Pando noted.

Sale of the Brown house had been scheduled for March 2, public notices were posted in the Midland County Courthouse and Midland Post Office, and the IRS had lined up bidders on the house.

The alleged assault took place on Feb. 21 when Ms. Pando took two of the bidders to inspect the house at 4303 N. Parkdale Drive.

Ms. Pando said Brown had ordered her and the bidders off his property.

Ms. Pando was following the couple out the door when "Mr. Brown slammed the door into my back," she said. "After the door bounced off my back, he slammed it again into my back."

In other indictments handed down by the grand jurors:

■ John Bradley, a 59-year-old ex-convict who had served prison time for robbery and burglary, and Chris Johnson, 33, were indicted for conspiracy to possess methamphetamine in March 1988 and for possessing the drug with intent to distribute it. Bradley is being held in federal custody without bail, and Johnson is a fugitive. Additionally, Bradley is charged with possessing firearms, which a felon cannot legally hold.

■ Midlander Larry O'Neal Franklin, 34, also known as Terry Winston, has been indicted for conspiracy to possess cocaine, for possessing the drug and with distributing the drug. Franklin, who had been under surveillance by Ontario, Calif., police, was arrested at Midland International Airport this week after he and his 17-year-old brother had flown into Midland on a Southwest Airlines flight. The 13 ounces of cocaine found on the brothers was valued at $50,000 in "street" sales and supposedly was to be converted to "crack."

■ Howard Medearis, 73, Irene Oreta, 39, Enrique Urias-Caballero, 51, and Carolina Montoya De Urias, 46, all of Midland, were indicted for making fraudulent work-permit applications in November 1988 for U.S. Immigration and Naturalization undercover agents who were posing as illegal aliens seeking agricultural work in the United States.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Beery of Midland presented evidence to the grand jury.

JUDGES

He also said the measures would increase the voting power of blacks and Hispanics, which is "diluted" in at-large elections.

Evans said there has never been a black on the Texas Supreme Court or the Court of Criminal Appeals. He said only two blacks have served on the 14 courts of appeal in Texas.

Black district judges represent less than 2 percent in the state, and figures for the Hispanic population are "substantially the same," Evans said.

In addition, said Washington, the legislation would address issues being considered in two federal lawsuits challenging the at-large elections of appeals judges and district judges in Texas.

"The court will refrain from acting where the constitutional violation has been cured by legislative action," Washington said.

Washington criticized recommendations by Supreme Court Chief Justice Tom Phillips to change the system to appointment with subsequent retention elections.

"It seems to us that rather than take away from the people that vested constitutional right to elect people, ... we think that they are intelligent enough to continue to elect judges. All we're changing is the method of selection," Washington said.

State Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle said at the news conference, "I am convinced single-member districts will ultimately be mandated by the courts if the Legislature fails to act.

"I would rather see Texans in this Legislature determine how these judicial districts are made up — not a federal court," he said.

Former Pecos investigator to be sentenced for assaulting family

From Staff Reports

PECOS — Edward Nunez Tersero, a former investigator with the Pecos Police Department, is to be sentenced April 4 in federal court in Pecos for the July 20, 1988, assault on a local family.

Tersero, 29, pleaded guilty this week before U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton, who could sentence Tersero up to 12 months in prison.

Tersero was charged by information with firing two rounds from his .45-caliber semi-automatic pistol into the house of Saucedo Esparza while Esparza, his wife, and two children were living there and did "deprive" Esparza of his constitutional rights.

The shooting occurred almost two years after Tersero and Esparza had been involved in a scuffle when officers were trying to arrest a relative of Esparza and came only days after the ex-investigator had been exonerated in court of any wrong-doing in the dispute.

Esparza had filed a civil-rights complaint against Tersero.

RICHBURG—

Evidence during the trial indicated Richburg's blood-alcohol level the night of the accident was .14, which is above the .10 level considered intoxication in Texas.

Prior to the accident, he had been at a Midland nightclub with his brothers enjoying a "5-cent Beer Night" promotion. Both brothers testified that he wasn't drunk, and Richburg testified that he could not avoid the Ramirez vehicle.

Runoff election set for House seat

AUSTIN (AP) — A runoff election between two Houston candidates vying to fill the unexpired term of David Patronella in the Texas House of Representatives has been set for March 21.

Ken VanderVoort, a retired chemical engineer, is the Republican nominee, and Kenneth Yarbrough, a labor union representative for business, is the Democratic candidate.

VanderVoort, 60, defeated one other Republican contender for the 138th District seat in an election Tuesday in Houston, and Yarbrough, 51, beat four other Democrats.

USDA foreign attaches not noted for linguistics, agency says

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — In most cases, says a federal review, the people hired by the Agriculture Department to be the eyes and ears of American farmers in foreign countries can't talk turkey unless the conversation is in English.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative agency of Congress, found the language gap in the Foreign Agricultural Service, which has maintained an overseas network of agricultural attaches for more than 30 years to help promote U.S. farm commodities.

During the 1988 fiscal year, which ended last Sept. 30, the service — primarily at U.S. embassies — operated 65 posts and 14 agricultural trade offices overseas with 103 attaches responsible for representing U.S. farm interests in more than 100 countries.

AGRICULTURE

The agency also employs about 160 foreign nationals to help attaches in those offices. Last year's budget for those foreign operations was $24.8 million.

Rep. E. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, asked for a review of the attache system. The GAO report was submitted to him last month.

Historically, the report said, the criticism of the USDA agency has focused on requirements that the attaches make too many reports that take time away from market development functions. Recent changes have helped ease that situation, but further improvements should be made.

One of the most glaring deficiencies in the Foreign Agricultural Service involves language skills, the GAO said, which are necessary "to effectively communicate" in host countries.

"The service has not formally set minimum proficiency levels for the principal language of the country to which the attache is assigned," the report said. "The service believes that a speaking-reading proficiency level of 3 (based on a 0 to 5 scale) is sufficient to perform the general business activities of attaches but that a higher proficiency level is required to conduct sensitive or technical negotiations."

Among 93 attaches assigned as of September 1987 to countries with non-English languages, only 24 — 26 percent — had at least the level 3 proficiency, the report said.

By comparison, a list of 1,021 State Department employees assigned to Foreign Service jobs showed that 676, or 66 percent, showed at least a level 3 language proficiency.

The FAS told investigators that some of the attaches (which included trade officers and higher-ranked agricultural counselors for purposes of the review) had not yet completed five years of foreign service, the minimum time allowed for achieving language proficiency.

Others had been commissioned as attaches in languages different from that required in posts at the time of the review, and sometimes under different standards prior to current requirements.

Also, the agency said, "foreign service nationals," or FSNs, can readily provide translations needed to gather and read information in a foreign language in the overseas posts.

The GAO report concluded that attaches "generally appear to possess acceptable levels of education and experience" when they are accepted as overseas candidates but that "the majority of attaches seem to fall short in their ability to communicate effectively in the principal foreign language practiced in their host countries."

Thomas O. Kay, administrator of the Foreign Agricultural Service, said in a letter responding to the GAO report that the agency "fully concurs" that language efficiency should be improved.

"And we are already doing more," he said. "We have designated five languages — Japanese, Chinese, Korean, Arabic and Russian as hard languages — and we are now providing a year's language training."

Kay said the agency's policy is to rotate overseas staff back to Washington more frequently before going out to another job and that this will also help "assure that they get more adequate language training."

But Kay said that "due to personnel and monetary restraints" the agency cannot provide extensive training in seldom-used languages that attaches would be only expected to serve once in their careers, or in posts where English is widely used.

Milton Engelke, a turf researcher for Texas A&M University, shows a bed of grass at the school's Dallas facility, where he and other scientists are trying to find a high-quality, low-maintenance grass.

AP Laserphoto

Texas A&M turf breeders in search of perfect grass

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — As a plant, grass is taken more or less for granted. It grows. It gets mowed, watered and fertilized. It grows more.

"There's not just that much attention to it," said Milton Engelke, a turf researcher for Texas A&M University. "But everybody's got grass to cut."

Engelke, who estimates he's one of just a dozen turf breeders in the United States, would like to see the care given to grass become even easier. He and a staff of 11 have 20 acres of grass in College Station, Dallas and El Paso.

One objective of their research is to give the homeowner "a much higher quality plant with less input, less care, less maintenance," he said. "And in the program we're introducing grasses that won't have to be mowed as frequently or grasses that produce little or no clippings."

Engelke also hopes to come up with ideal grasses for areas with critical water supplies or pollution from fertilizer and chemicals.

"I've been working for the last eight years on different environments," he said. "We irrigate or not. We fertilize or not. We're mowing or ndt mowing. "The goal is to reduce water. It really is. In the past year we've had a drought that was more severe in other parts of the country. And they are definitely going to be looking for new grasses."

Last summer's drought, he said, was "like a Sunday school picnic. It's going to get a lot worse."

So the amount of water communities use to keep grass green comes under close scrutiny. A&M researchers estimate 50 percent of potable water used by municipalities goes on landscapes. An 18-hole golf course may require as much as 1.5 million gallons of water daily during the peak summer heating periods.

"We can't afford to put that much water out there," Engelke said. "So some of the research we're doing is to learn how much water these plants really do require and then to identify plants that require even less."

And while all that water is being applied to make the grass grow, clippings from cut grass account for up to 40 percent of trash taken to landfills between March and September, according to surveys in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"The people who build all these lawn mowers did us a great disservice when they put the bag on the lawn mower," Engelke said. "Let's put the clippings back on the grass. We don't need to pick it up."

Homeowners, though, aren't the only people who stand to benefit from Engelke's research. Most people believe turf is just there to look pretty, but its main purpose is to stabilize and conserve the landscape.

"How would you like to be taking off from an airport that doesn't have grass adjacent to a runway," he said, "and suck all that dust and dirt into the jet engines? So it's an amenity grass as well as a turf grass and directly affects us — every one of us — every day."

The United States Golf Association is contributing $1 million to the research with an eye on savings on fertilizer, water and pesticides. "But the successes are not just in the golf industry. There are so many other people — industrial parks, parks and recreation departments, soccer fields, football fields, the homeowner," Engelke said.

"Everybody is going to get to take advantage of it."

Engelke hopes to introduce two new grasses this year to the grass-growing industry — a $25 billion business nationwide. One is a buffalo grass capable of growing from South Texas to the northern United States; the other is a zoysia grass adaptable along the southern tier of states from California to Georgia.

The buffalo grass will be introduced to growers this year and available to the public in about three years. It would grow to only about four inches, need little or no fertilizer and pesticides, and crowd out less desirable grasses.

Engelke wants it to be called "Prairie Buffalo Grass" because it reminds him of the rippling, wind-blown grass crossed by prairie schooners.

Engelke, who's traveled around the world in grass research, even finds a place in his laboratory for Astroturf. "We use that to clean our shoes."

Beef producer offers healthy choice

By WENDY E. LANE

CHILDRESS (AP) — Representing the fourth generation of a cattle ranching family whose history dates back to the days of the XIT Ranch, Mary Lou Bradley is breaking new ground by producing beef the way her forebears did — with nothing artificial added.

Ms. Bradley's beef, raised in the Panhandle, is certified by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to be free of hormones, steroids, preservatives or antibiotics or any other artificial residue.

And while many other beef producers have denounced state Agriculture Secretary Jim Hightower's proposal that Texas sell hormone-free beef to Europe, Ms. Bradley welcomes the idea.

Her company, B3R Country Meats Inc., couldn't begin to supply the 10,000 metric tons that is the European Ecnomic Community's annual U.S. beef trade quota, but interest in a hormone-free beef has grown among consumers and retailers in recent weeks, said Ms. Bradley, who is president and part owner of the company.

"The opportunity's been given to us and we're trying to make the most of it," said the 27-year-old ranchwoman who began selling beef from the family herd after guests to her ranch commented on the richly flavored beef she served.

A defacto beef embargo has existed between the United States and Europe since Jan. 1, when the 12-member EC said it would no longer except U.S. beef that contained artificial growth hormones. Beef industry officials have angrily disputed the EC's claim, based on some scientific studies, that hormone-treated beef poses a health hazard.

Careful to avoid that controversy, B3R doesn't take a stand on the potential of hormones as a health risk, saying it just wants to offer an alternative.

"By no means are we out to change the industry," said B3R General Manager Cal Herrmann. "But there's a market for people who want as clean a product as possible."

B3R, with more than $2 million in sales in 1988, supplies all-natural grocery stores and speciality restaurants and sells retail.

Launched in 1986, B3R produces about 60,000 pounds of all-natural beef per week, equaling 55 head of cattle, and maintains strict control over all phases of production, from feeder cattle purchases to the fresh ribeyes that are sold from its retail outlet.

About half of B3R's cattle are purchased from outside ranchers who must certify that their cattle are drug-free. The animals are then corn-fed at the B3R feedlot and slaughtered at the company's plant here.

"This gives us complete control over the quality of our product," said Herrmann, adding that the close management eliminates the need for antibiotics or growth hormones.

"We feel that it's not always necessary to implant in the cattle are good cattle to begin with," he said.

The setup also enabled B3R to receive the special USDA certification, held by only a handful of all-natural beef producers in the nation. The USDA requires routine tests of B3R's cattle and carcasses to ensure than no artificial residues are present, and no hormones or antibiotics must be administered during the last 100 days an animal is on feed.

Getting the certification has enabled B3R to compete with Colorado-based Coleman Natural Beef Inc., the nation's largest producer of all-natural beef. Herrmann estimated that B3R is second in production to Coleman.

However, the supply of B3R beef is limited. Recent expansions have increased the operations slaughterhouse and retail capacity, but B3R remains a speciality producer due to the high price of feeder cattle and the stringent certification procedure for feed animals on its 1,500-head capacity feedlot, Herrman said. If exports to Europe are approved by U.S. and European trade officials, "there's only about 10,000 to 15,000 pounds a week that we could sell to Europe," he said.

Along with the emphasis on chemical-free beef, B3R is using high technology to get a leaner meat. Later this spring, B3R cattle will be ested with a sonogram to determine the amount of fat and muscle the animal is carrying, Herrmann said.

The experimental process will allow cattle raisers to determine when an animal is ready for slaughter or what genetic types yield the leanest meat, much like a sonogram picture is used to detect birth defects or other characteristics of human fetuses.

B3R's innovative efforts have impressed its biggest customer, Austin-based Whole Foods Markets.

1988 receipts likely up slightly from 1987

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher prices for last year's drought-reduced vegetable harvests probably boosted growers' receipts slightly from the record level of $9.2 billion in 1987, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

"Total output of vegetables probably fell about 4 percent in 1988 because of declines in potato, dry bean and processing vegetable production," the department's Economic Research Service said in an outlook report. "Assuming normal weather, output should rebound in 1989."

While projecting higher overall income for vegetable farmers last year, the department's report — a summary of another report, not yet released — did not have a figure for projected 1988 income.

The report released Tuesday also said that per capita use of vegetables, which probably declined in 1988 because of smaller production, is expected to return to pre-drought levels this year.

"Utilization probably will continue to be enhanced by general economic conditions in the United States," the report said. "With real disposable incomes and employment remaining relatively strong, domestic demand for all types of vegetables should continue robust."

Exports of fresh vegetables, which soared in 1988, are expected to continue rising this year, reflecting the decline in the dollar and growth in the Japanese market, the report said.

One reason for the export increase is a rise in french fry shipments to Pacific Rim countries.

Insecticides can be mixed into soil before planting

As vegetable gardeners in Midland County prepare for spring planting, their first step should be to control soil insects. Soil insects can reduce vegetable quality and yields if left uncontrolled.

Kiker

For effective control, mix insecticides into the soil at a depth of 4-6 inches at least two weeks before the garden plot is planted.

Among destructive soil insects are wireworms, white grubs, seed corn maggots, cabbage maggots, mole crickets, sowbugs, slugs, snails and cutworms. Some destroy plant seeds, roots, tubers and underground stem parts while others cut off young plants at or near the soil surface.

Most soil insects can be controlled with diazinon 25 percent liquid concentrate or Spectracide 6000 applied as a 5 percent granule. Granules usually give the best control. If cutworms or sowbugs become a problem after the garden has been planted, broadcast 5 percent Sevin bait over the soil surface.

Garden sites planted for the first time or those previously in grass or weeds are more likely to harbor damaging numbers of soil pests. Before treating with an insecticide, inspect the garden site by taking soil samples at several locations to a depth of 5 to 6 inches. Remove one square foot section of soil from each location and record the number of soil inspect pests present. As a general rule, an average of one or more soil inspects per sample suggests the need for insecticide treatment.

ENTERTAINMENT

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Lean on Me," the glorified look at baseball-bat-wielding high school principal Joe Clark, beat a pair of time-traveling youths to become the nation's most popular movie last weekend.

"Lean on Me," which casts the tough-as-nails New Jersey principal in a heroic light, brought in $5 million in its debut week. "Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure," a comedy about teen-agers who travel though time, brought in $4.5 million.

In third place last weekend was "The 'burbs," featuring Tom Hanks as a suburban homeowner driven to madness by unusual neighbors, with $4.3 million.

"Rain Man," the Tom Cruise-Dustin Hoffman drama, continued its strong showing, grossing $3.9 million for fourth place. It was followed by "Dream a Little Dream," a comedy about a rejuvenation experiment gone awry, with $2.6 million.

The comedy "Three Fugitives," featuring Nick Nolte and Martin Short as criminals on the run, collected $2.52 million to finish in sixth place.

Here are several of last weekend's top movies as tallied by Exhibitor Relations Inc., with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

1. "Lean on Me" Warner Bros., $5 million, 894 screens, $5,629 per screen, $5 million, one week.
2. "Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure," Orion, $4.5 million, 1,314 screens, $3,390 per screen, $17.4 million, three weeks.
3. "The 'burbs," Universal, $4.3 million, 1,835 screens, $2,355 per screen, $24.6 million, three weeks.
4. "Rain Man," United Artists, $3.9 million, 1,580 screens, $2,442 per screen, $121.8 million, 12 weeks.
5. "Dream a Little Dream," Vestron, $2.6 million, 1,019 screens, $2,521 per screen, $2.6 million, one weeks.

Producers concerned with money, not plays, author says

By THOMAS MURPHY

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Backstage at the American Conservatory Theater, August Wilson takes a pull on a cigarette and ponders the differences between regional theater and Broadway.

"One is about the work, and the other is about money," says the Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright. "Broadway and Broadway producers could care less about the work, about the content of the work."

"Their concern is 'How are we going to get people into the theater to see whatever it is?' It could be the worst thing imaginable. ... That's the way the producers think."

He allows that there are some "happy coincidences" when quality and profit overlap.

Wilson's Pulitzer Prize-winning play "Fences" enjoyed a successful Broadway run and won a New York Drama Critics Circle Award and a Tony.

He won another Critics Circle award for "Ma Rainey's Black Bottom," which ran for six months but didn't make a profit. A third Broadway show, "Joe Turner's Come and Gone," closed at a loss after a brief run.

Those three plays are part of a cycle of 10 works Wilson is writing about the black experience during each decade of the 20th century. It was ACT's production of "Joe Turner" that brought Wilson to San Francisco, and he liked what he saw in a cast led by Roscoe Lee Browne.

He has just completed the first draft of his play about the 1960s, tentatively titled "Two Trains Running," and is working on the screenplay for "Fences." He also has plans for some short stories, a mystery novel, more poetry and a performance piece called "Seven Guitars" that he says will diverge from his more traditionally structured plays.

All this work flows from a man who grew up on the poor side of town, dropped out of school in ninth grade, worked at odd jobs and got started as a writer by jotting down lines in restaurants and bars.

But it is that background that makes Wilson what he is: a keen observer of the sweat, grit, pain and injustice that marks life in America's underclass.

Although his father "had a presence in the household," Wilson was raised by his mother in Pittsburgh's Hill District, a melting pot of Jews and Syrians, blacks and whites where he shared two rooms with three sisters and two brothers.

His first poems were written anonymously in the seventh grade to a pretty classmate named Nancy Ireland.

"I would write these poems and leave them on her desk," he says. That lasted until Nancy took up with a boy named Anthony. "I always figured that she thought Anthony was the one writing the poems."

Nancy's loss was the world's gain as Wilson continued to write poetry. Some were published in anthologies, and the author found he "could always pick up a few dollars reading some poems here and there."

But mostly he worked odd jobs. Terrible jobs. For some terrible bosses.

"One time I was an elevator. I was not an elevator operator. I was the elevator. A men's clothing store was on the third floor and my job consisted of running from the first floor to the third floor when anyone came in (to pick something up). They had three tailors up there, so they stayed pretty busy.

"I didn't mind because I would read until someone came in."

In 1968, as black Americans were debating the character of their culture and looking for ways to change their role in society, Wilson felt a need to contribute as an artist and, with a friend, founded the Black Horizon Theater. He knew nothing of theater at the time. "So the first thing I did was to go to the library and find a book on how to direct a play.

"Since we had a theater, I ran right home and said 'Let me write a play.' Well, I sat down and wrote a play and the characters did not talk. And I said, 'Well, this playwriting business is not for me.' "

To this day, he says he's familiar with only one play by Shakespeare and one by Chekhov. He has never seen a play by Henrik Ibsen, David Mamet or Sam Shepard. "I've never read 'Raisin In The Sun,' either. I saw the movie."

The foundation of Wilson's writing, he says, is the blues.

"The reason I'm able to do what I do is because all the ideas and characters come out of the blues. I listen to the music, which I see as a cultural response of an entire people to the world that they find themselves in."

SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: There will be fewer distractions to contend with. You finally reach your goals in many areas. Lower your expectations a bit in the financial arena. As long as you avoid acting impulsively, you will enjoy a wonderful period of growth. Look forward to record business gains in October and November. It is best to leave difficult relationship decisions to someone else now.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: publisher Rupert Murdoch, musicman Lawrence Welk, outfielder Phil Bradley, Rev. Ralph Abernathy, correspondent Sam Donaldson, actress Dorothy Gish, conductor Mercer Ellington.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Another person's emotional hangups could spoil some of your plans today. Enjoy the fruits of your past labors but keep an eye on your current objectives. Retain your humility and romance will find you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could play a leading role in an unfolding family drama. Your communication skills will be tested but you meet the challenge. A savvy suggestion will help save the day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will have to insist that everyone involved face up to a financial dilemma. Try an intimate candlelit dinner to win the heart of member of the opposite sex. Travel is best postponed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Try not to let your moodiness spill over into your weekend social plans. One phone call or letter could change everything, putting you on cloud nine! Leave any money worries behind.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel possibilities are not promising. Plan less expensive entertainment at home. When you put your charisma and charm on the line, romance quickly follows. Know your own heart.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can be very persuasive, and that helps ease a financial crunch. Make a shopping list and stick to it when you buy groceries. Shed your conservative image and romance will blossom.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good day to catch up on home repairs. You get a real sense of accomplishment from finishing a complex project. Dress the part when attending a dinner or party this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You could end up spinning your wheels unless you have a specific plan to follow this weekend. Wishful thinking will not do it. Relax and be sociable. Satisfy an urge to call someone special.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be perfectly clear about your weekend plans. Family responsibilities must come first. Give a child a choice. Your exquisite taste may put a purchase beyond your means. You are prepared to wait.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will have an exhausting, but satisfying, weekend. Tasteful entertainment delights you. Think seriously about a financial proposal. Focus on short-term goals. The future is bright with opportunity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will have to work like a beaver to get chores out of the way. Afternoon is the best time for socializing. Shopping could turn up bargains in antiques, clothing and appliances.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There are fewer pressures on a relationship now. Withdraw from a project you are no longer comfortable with. A young friend who is headstrong needs your help today. Give it without lectures.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

One of our favorite definitions of a pessimist is that he is someone who has spent some time with an optimist! Certainly, at the bridge table it pays to view life through dark glasses.

South had a difficult bid at his second turn. His club suit was perhaps a whisker weak for a jump bid, but his overall strength merited strong action and to jump in diamonds with only three-card support was unattractive. North bid what he expected to make on power, and chose the suit contract because it might have offered more maneuverability in case of a bad trump split.

West led the queen of spades, and to those who see only the pleasant things in life, there is no problem. They win and bang out the ace-king of trumps, and dolefully concede down one when the cards lie as in the diagram.

The pessimist realizes that a 4-1 trump break could endanger his contract. If West holds four trumps, declarer would need X-ray vision and a very fortunate lie of the cards to salvage the contract, unless East had a bare honor. But if East were to hold four trumps ...

After winning the king of spades, declarer cashed a high trump just in case a singleton honor happened to fall. When only low cards appeared, declarer elected to take a safety play against the possibility that East held all the remaining trumps. He crossed to the table with a heart and led dummy's last trump, inserting the nine when East followed with the eight. When that held, he claimed his slam, conceding only one trump. (Had West won the second trump, that would have meant that only one trump was outstanding, which declarer could draw as soon as he regained the lead.)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Band director William P. Foster thought he'd done it all, from Macy's Thanksgiving Day parades to more than 200 football halftimes. But now he was lifting his baton for the challenge of a lifetime.

With help from a global TV hookup, Foster conducted what promoters billed as "the world's largest concert." He led no fewer than 7 million school kids in a songfest Thursday that spanned the United States and reached from Tunisia to the Philippines.

Natty in a high-collared white uniform with gold buttons, he mounted the podium in the Kennedy Center's Grand Foyer to conduct 400 local school children in a half-hour choral program performed simultaneously by millions of other youngsters via television.

Among them were the "Singing Bears" of Coral Park Elementary School who sang along at a shopping mall in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. In Ohio, the Columbus Symphony Youth Orchestra played host for 2,800 local school children, and more than 4,000 youngsters from across Colorado gathered at three sites in the Denver area to join the singing.

One hundred children from 20 countries who attend an American school in Tunis sang under Foster's televised baton at the U.S. Embassy in the Tunisian capital. Others chimed in from West Germany, Guam and American Samoa.

Although it was midday Thursday in Washington, it was nighttime when 170 singers and band members performed from schools in the Marshall Islands, 2,400 miles southwest of Hawaii. Nearly 600 pupils chimed in from an elementary school at the U.S. naval base at Subic Bay in the Philippines.

They all followed Foster's conducting cues on seven selections including Woody Guthrie's "This Land is Your Land" and Irving Berlin's "God Bless America." The same music had been performed by 2,400 children in a performance taped last November in the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

The concert was broadcast Thursday by 315 public broadcasting stations nationwide and by the Armed Forces Radio and Television network to American schools at military bases and U.S. embassies overseas.

HOUSTON (AP) — Kermit Beahan, who said he wanted to retain the distinction of being the last man ever to drop an atomic bomb on humans, has died after suffering cardiac arrest. He was 70.

Beahan

Beahan was the bombardier on the plane that dropped an atomic bomb on Nagasaki, Japan, on Aug. 9, 1945, killing an estimated 70,000 persons.

Beahan died Thursday, a day after he underwent prostate surgery in a hospital in Nassau Bay, near his home in suburban Clear Lake.

In 1985, on the 40th anniversary of the bombing, Beahan told reporters he hoped to retain that dubious distinction.

He said he would never apologize for his deed, adding that 25 Japanese sought him out a few years ago and told him the bombing was the "best way out of a hell of a mess."

Beahan, a native of Joplin, Mo., attended Rice Institute, now Rice University on a football scholarship and hoped to be a professional football player until World War II came along.

Beahan joined the U.S. Army Air Corps, hoping to be a pilot, but became a bombardier after washing out as a pilot candidate.

He took part in 40 missions over Europe, including the first B-17 raids. His B-17 unit was commanded by Paul W. Tibbets, who later assembled the team that dropped the two atom bombs on Japan.

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — Thousands of Barbadians cheered Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, who addressed the Senate in a ceremony marking the 350th anniversary of this eastern Caribbean island's parliament.

Elizabeth

"Any nation which can boast of the continuous existence of their parliament for 350 years has sure grounds for pride," she said Thursday at a joint session of the House of Assembly and Senate.

Crowds gathered in Bridgetown's Trafalgar Square, adjacent to the parliament buildings, and applauded Elizabeth and her husband, Prince Philip, as they stepped out of their limousine and entered the Senate.

She said that the "small band of expatriate Englishmen" who established Barbados' House of Assembly in 1639 "believed that a a self-governing system formed according to the principles of individual liberty would bring more order and comfort to their lives in an unfamiliar environment."

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Columnist and TV commentator George F. Will has resigned as a University of Maryland regent under pressure, but Gov. William Donald Schaefer said he isn't ready to accept Will's departure.

Will

Schaefer said he will decide whether to ask Will to remain on the Board of Regents after he talks to board Chairman Peter O'Malley.

The Evening Sun of Baltimore has reported that Will attended none of the seven regents' meetings since he was appointed last July and has not attended subcommittee meetings.

"I think he thought he was under pressure from the press and others as to why he didn't attend," the governor said.

But he said Will made it clear when he agreed to accept the appointment last summer that he would miss many meetings because of his busy schedule. Will writes a syndicated newspaper column and is a comentator for ABC-TV.

Will resigned March 2, saying the demands of his profession were "incompatible" with service on the board.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu is running for the Harvard Board of Overseers to push for the university's total divestment from companies doing business in his homeland.

"Harvard is a great leader in world education. The time has come for Harvard to become a moral leader as well in the worldwide struggle against apartheid," Tutu said Thursday in a prepared statement.

"With her help, and the help of men and women of good will throughout the world, we shall one day soon transform my beautiful and troubled land into a genuinely democratic, non-racial society," Tutu said.

Andrews bows to Austin Travis

AUSTIN (AP) — Robert Harris came up with 22 points for Travis to help the Rebels to their first trip to the Class 4A final with a 73-62 victory Thursday night at the 69th Boys' State Basketball Tournament.

Travis, which came in with the worst record of any team in the tourney at 24-12, won their 13th straight and, after trailing 6-4 early, led the entire game.

Andrews, 31-5, got as close as 61-58 with 3:27 remaining, but the Rebels responded with eight straight to take a comfortable 69-58 lead.

Travis, in its first trip to the final four, hit 10-of-18 shots in the first quarter which helped them to a 24-16 lead.

The Rebels, playing in Class 4A for the first time, led 33-24 with three minutes left in the half, but Andrews hit nine unanswered points to tie the game at 33-33.

Andrews closed the gap to three, 48-45 in the third, but once again Travis pulled away with a pair of feild goals and two free throws and led 54-47 after three.

AUSTIN (AP) — Port Arthur Lincoln squeaked to its ninth consecutive State Tournament win with a 57-55 victory over Highland Park in a Class 4A semifinal game, setting up a chance for a fifth state title.

The Bumblebees counted on the stretch shooting of Brandon Tyler, who scored eight of the team's last 12 points including two free throws with four seconds left Thursday.

Lincoln, 30-7, will face Austin Travis in the 4A finals on Saturday after the Rebels defeated Andrews 73-62 in the other semifinal.

In Class 3A games Thursday, San Antonio Cole beat Hearne 69-56 and Clarksville defeated Brownfield 61-53. In Class A, Moulton beat New Home 65-61 and Fannindel was an 82-72 victor over Eula.

Class 2A semifinals scheduled today include Farwell vs. Edgewood and China Spring vs. Tidehaven. Class 5A semifinals this afternoon were San Antonio Jay vs. Dallas South Oak Cliff and Fort Worth Southwest vs. Houston Clear Lake.

Finals in all classes are scheduled Saturday at the University of Texas' Frank Erwin Center.

Lincoln has never lost a game in the state tournament, but had to rally from behind to beat Highland Park, 31-4.

Travis will be making its first trip to the final after coming into the tourney with the worst record of any team, 24-12.

Unbeaten San Antonio Cole was led by 7'0" center Shaquille O'Neal, who scored 38 points and had 20 rebounds, in beating Hearne, 31-4. The 35-0 club faces Clarksville, 29-2, in the final.

Clarksville sank six 3-pointers in the third quarter to pull away from Brownfield, 31-4, after being tied 32-32 at halftime.

Moulton, 33-4, was sparked by Eddie Nieto's 25 points, including four during a go-ahead run in the fourth quarter, to overtake New Home. New Home, 31-3, pulled to within a basket, 58-56, with 1:40 to play, but Moulton began a 6-2 run that iced the win.

Fannindel, 24-2, staked out an 18-9 first-quarter lead and never trailed. Eula finished 35-2.

Albuquerque scores upset over Hobbs

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Gary Goldsmith scored 32 points, including 14-for-14 free throw shooting prefection to lead Alamogordo to a 75-67 win over Albuquerque Highland in Thursday's quarterfinal round of the Class AAAA State Basketball Tournament.

Albuquerque La Cueva, 22-1, and the No. 1 ranked team during the regular season, met No. 3 Albuquerque Sandia, 20-3, in the first round finale.

The semifinals Friday will pit Santa Fe, 19-8, against Albuquerque High, 18-6 and Alamogordo, 17-9, against the La Cueva-Sandia winner.

Guard Greg Brown scored 27 points and Hobbs once again brought out the best in Albuquerque High as the Bulldogs eliminated a Hobbs team that appeared ready to win a third straight title.

Albuquerque High, which has played some of its best games in the tournament when paired as an underdog against Hobbs, denied the Eagles a shot at three-state titles behind the cool and calculated outsiding scoring of Brown and the inside finesse of senior center Eddie Flores.

Flores added 24 points and teamed with Brown to lead an Albuquerque High team that repelled one Hobbs surge after another with a steady stream of free throws.

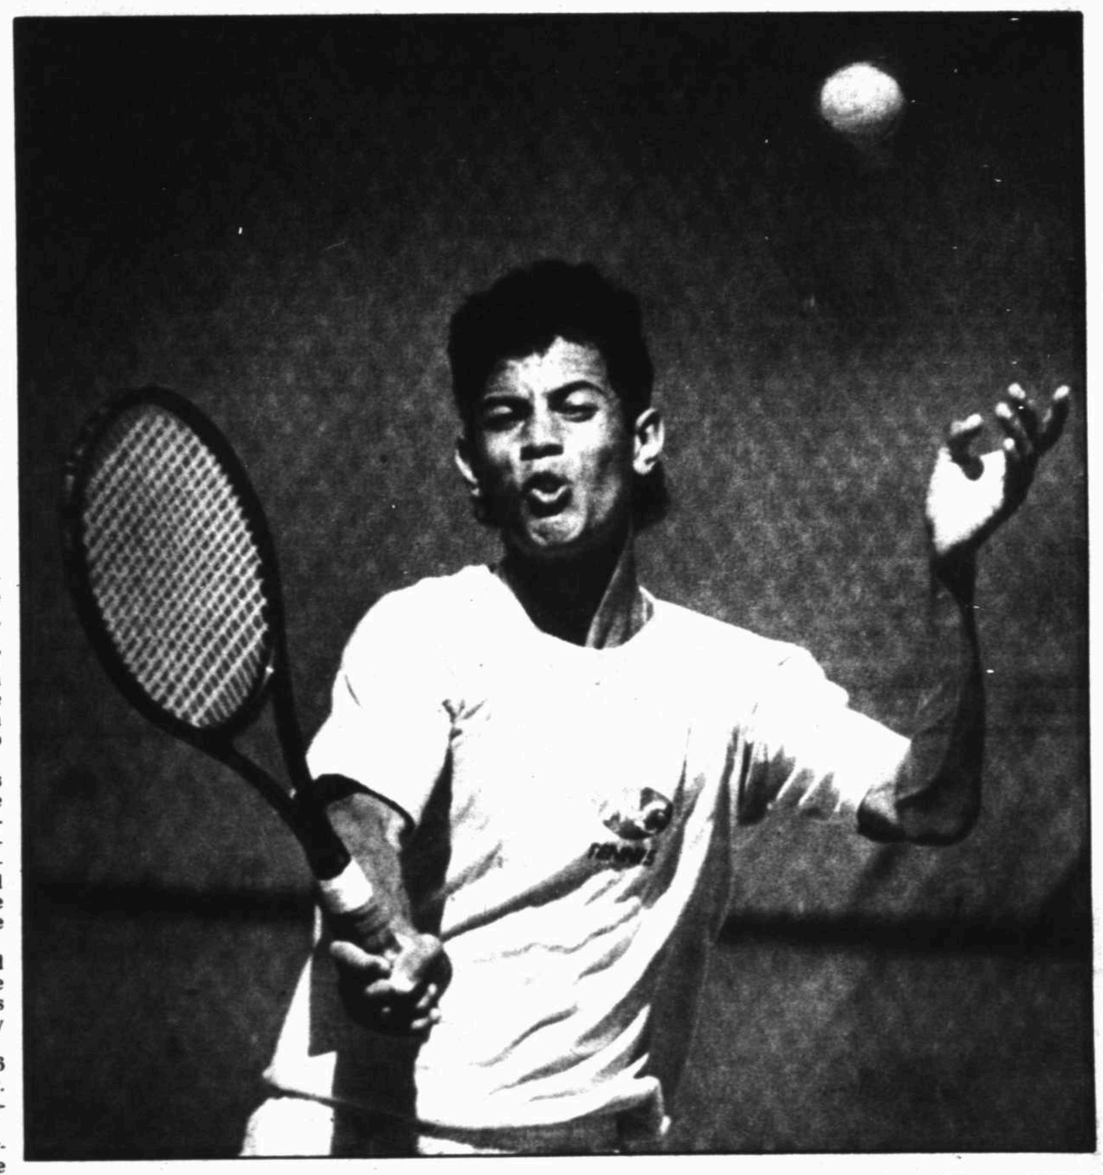

The Bulldogs, now 18-6, hit 14 of 16 free throws in the fourth quarter. Brown was 6-of-7 at the line and Flores 5-of-6.

Hobbs, which went into the tournament ranked No. 2 in the state behind Albuquerque La Cueva, ended the year at 20-5.

It was the sixth time in 11 State Tournament meetings that Albuquerque High has beaten Hobbs.

Hobbs was led by Patrick Hutchings with 17 points. But the Eagle point guard was held well below his season average of 25 points a game

Chaparral in Action

Mohammed Ridaovi, Midland College's No. 1 singles player, returns a serve by Ricardo Herrera of Odessa College in WJCAC match at MC Thursday. The Chaparrals, ranked No. 1 in the nation on the courts, defeated the Wranglers, as expected, but now must do it again at Odessa College Tuesday.

No. 1 Chaps top OC in tennis, 7-2

That the Midland College's men's tennis team defeated Odessa College Thursday wasn't a surprise. But the 7-2 victory for the No. 1 ranked Chaps with a patchwork lineup had MC coach Joe Williams smiling occasionally.

Williams was without Tonny van de Pieterman and David Fontaine, who play numbers one and five respectively in singles. Pieterman also makes up half of the nation's No. 1 junior college doubles tandems.

He is suffering from a leg injury, while Fontaine was sidelined with flu.

But the Chaps battled to a 4-2 edge in the singles and swept the doubles for the victory on the MC courts. That gives them a 6-0 team match record for the season.

Pepe Garcia of Midland lost in a long three-setter to Edmond Rincon at the No. 5 singles, but Tommy Heiting fought back from a set deficit to win in three sets over Russell Burnam at number six.

Perhaps the best match for spectators was the straight set victory by Midland's Mohammed Ridaoui and Scott Randolph over Ricardo Herrera and Scott Peebles. Both sets came down to tie-breakers, which the Midland team won 7-0 and 7-3. Ridaoui and Randolph normally play the No. 2 spot, but moved up for this match to No. 1.

Amine Boustani, normally teamed with van de Pieterman, played for the first time with Pepe Garcia. But their 6-3 6-2 victory looked almost easy. The fact both are lefthanders, as is van de Pieterman, helped with the exceptional teamwork they displayed.

The Chaparral men go to Odessa to play on the Wranglers' home courts Tuesday at 2 p.m.

Army medics want ring KO

CHICAGO (AP) — Boxing put soldiers into the hospital 401 times over six years and caused at least one death, prompting doctors to urge that the sport be drummed out of the military just as cigarettes and hazing were.

But a former military boxing coach argued Thursday that the sport probably produces fewer serious injuries than college football or wrestling, especially with improved safety equipment, and provides excellent training.

Army men spent 2,056 days in the hospital and logged 3,581 sick days because of boxing injuries from 1980 through 1985, the doctors said in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Head injuries accounted for 68 percent of all boxing-related hospitalizations and 81 percent of (boxing-related) injuries to U.S. Military Academy cadets," said the doctors, led by Maj. Robert W. Enzenauer, an eye doctor at Fitzsimons Army Medical Center in Aurora, Colo.

INSTRUCTIONAL boxing is mandatory at U.S. service academies. Among military graduates known for their boxing prowess as undergraduates are former Navy Secretary James Webb and retired Marine Col. Oliver North.

One soldier died after complications from bleeding inside the skull, and another was blinded in one eye, they said.

"Evidence that boxing produces irreversible brain damage is now as indisputable as the link between cigarette smoking and lung cancer," the doctors said.

Concussions, bruising of brain tissue, bleeding inside the skull, broken facial bones and eye injuries were among the types of head trauma recorded.

Upper-body injuries ranked next, accounting for 17 percent of hospitalizations. They included dislocated shoulders, elbows and wrists and broken arms and hands.

THE DOCTORS did not reveal how much the hospital care and lost productivity amounted to in dollars but said the cost "is certainly considerable."

Military boxing has served as a springboard to some spectacular careers, including that of Leon Spinks, who was a Marine when he won a gold medal at the 1976 Montreal Olympics. He later beat Muhammad Ali for the world heavyweight title.

But an editorial accompanying the study said the notion that boxing can be credited for "lifting" individuals to success or elevating "entire ethnic groups up the socioeconomic ladder" is a "cruel hoax."

Most boxers make relatively little money, and "boxing is alone among major sports in not providing pension plans, health benefits, assistance for substance abuse problems, or compensation for career-ending injuries," said the editorial, by Jeffrey T. Sammons, a researcher at Rutgers University in Camden, N.J., and a self-described former boxing fan who now opposes the sport.

Bulldogs stay alive in soccer, 5-1

By BILL GRIMES

Tom Esikhati thought Thursday's Midland High-Midland Lee soccer showdown would be close, but the Midland High mentor said he got confident when people not named Shaun Savas started scoring.

"We had to show that there's more than Shaun Savas at MHS," Esikhati said. Savas got two goals, but so did fellow forward David Allen, and the Bulldogs rolled to a 5-1 win over the last-place Rebels Thursday at the Hogan Park Soccer Complex.

MHS, 4-2 in District 3-5A play, has a chance to take the district lead with a win against front-running Abilene High Saturday. The AHS Eagles invade the Complex at 2 p.m. with a half-game lead over Midland High, but an MHS win would reverse the standings and put the 'Dogs in the driver's seat for a playoff spot.

Lee, 1-5, slipped further into last place with Thursday's loss. But Esikhati said his Bulldogs went into the gamr thinking LHS would provide formidable opposition.

"I expected this match to go down to the wire," Esikhati said.

It wasn't even close. The Rebs showed flashes of offensive brilliance in the first half, but Savas got the 'Dogs on the board with a header in the game's sixth minute and MHS never looked back.

"You never know what to expect when you play Lee," Savas said. "We wanted to come into the game playing aggressively."

Aggressive indeed. The Bulldogs committed 21 fouls, while Lee was whistled for only nine infractions. But MHS also outshot the Rebs 10-5, and LHS was hampered by infractions within their own penalty area — all but giving MHS two of its five goals.

After Savas' first goal, MHS increasingly dominated possession. Nevertheless, it took almost 20 minutes for the 'Dogs to get their second score, which came on a penalty kick by Jeff Lanning in the 24th minute.

Still, Lee had its moments, giving MHS goalkeeper Bryant Mueller some close calls in the first half. The Rebels just couldn't punch anything over until Daniel Ferguson took advantage of a Mueller muff to ruin the shutout in the 34th minute of the second half.

By then, it was far too late. Allen essentially broke open the match with his goal in the third

JIM MURRAY

Quiet man had most to tell world about

Murray

He was quiet, modest, unassuming, quite unlike almost any football coach you ever saw. He never raised his voice, threw his weight around. All he did was win.

People who came around the team camp for the first time thought he was the trainer. Or, at best, an assistant in charge of the kicking teams.

He won two Super Bowls, four division championships and two conference championships. He never had a nickname like Hoss or Bull or Grizzly. No one ever called him Genius. In fact, few called him Coach. He was just Tom. And he left the job rather unceremoniously after only the second losing season of his career.

Tom Landry?

No, Tom Flores.

I DON'T think there's any doubt Tom Flores was the most underrated football coach of all time.

You see, the problem with being the coach of the Los Angeles Raiders is Al Davis. If it is true an institution is but the lengthened shadow of one man, then the Raiders are the lengthened shadow of Al Davis.

But someone has to translate those X's and O's off the drawing boards and into the end zone. No Raider coach did this any better than Tom Flores.

If the public perception of him was that of a complicated foreman, that was all right with Tom. He had less trouble with his ego than any coach you will ever meet.

His was the only wild-card team that ever won a Super Bowl. When he went to New Orleans in 1981, the Raiders were widely held to be just a bunch of league renegades, thugs who played the game the way their eye-patched pirate logo suggested, outside the law.

FLORES WAS so low key, it was hard to believe he was the leader of this cutthroat crew. It was freely predicted that he would be outsmarted by the cerebral boy wonder of the Philadelphia Eagles in Super Bowl XV, Coach Dick Vermeil.

It wasn't even a contest. Flores' Raiders played a mistake-free, impeccable game and thrashed the Eagles thoroughly and professionally.

Success didn't spoil Tom Flores. The victory went to the team's head — the Raiders were 7-9 the following year — not his.

Two seasons later, he was back in the Super Bowl again, this time against the canny Joe Gibbs, supposedly the next Lombardi. Once again, Flores was, if anything, undermatched. The Raiders won in the worst wipeout to that date in Super Bowl history, 38-9. It was, incidentally, the last Super Bowl won by the AFC.

If there was one thing a Tom Flores team wasn't, it was over-coached. The Raiders were a quick-striking, take-no-prisoners force, and their philosophy was to get the other team into a looking-over-both-shoulders-at-once mode with a My-God-they're-coming-in-the-windows! frame of mind.

TO DO this, you need a quarterback and the Raiders were fresh out in 1978 when Flores, then an assistant coach, was sent to check out a supposedly burned-out San Francisco reject, Jim Plunkett.

Plunkett was universally believed to have lost his confidence and maybe throwing ability at the time but Flores, a one-time quarterback himself, couldn't believe what he found. Not only was Plunkett's all-league arm intact, so were his competitive instincts. Flores urged that he be signed.

When Flores became head coach a year later, he handed the ball to Plunkett and some of the Raiders' finest hours began. The team went 9-7, 11-5, 7-9, 8-1, 12-4, 11-5, 12-4 and then 8-8 and 5-10. They got in two Super Bowls, missed another by three points and made the playoffs five seasons.

TOM FLORES left the Raiders after the '87 season. He insists it was his own idea but there is no evidence management put up much of a fight.

"I was physically exhausted," Flores says. "It was not burnout as such, but it got so I hated to go to work. I had told Al (Davis) the year before that I was looking at only a 10-year commitment and this was nine years.

"I knew the team needed rebuilding and I wasn't sure I had the energy to go through it. Usually, you end a season physically and emotionally exhausted, but you recharge during the off-season. I didn't recharge.

"What's wrong with the Raiders? Well, I actually feel the strike in '87 sort of took the personality out of the team. I know it drained me. You had the vets outside picketing and you had the heart of your team — or maybe the soul — torn apart. I don't think any of us, coaches or players, got back on the same page after that."

FLORES MADe the news again last week by announcing that he is coming back into football. He is to be the new president and general manager of the Seattle Seahawks, a franchise purchased by a longtime friend from his days in the Bay Area.

Tom also is going to be honored to night at the Sheraton Grand hotel by the Salesian Boys (and Girls) Club of East L.A. This is another franchise in need of rebuilding. The earthquake of '87 damaged the gymnasium and swimming pool and this 1,500-youth facility that seeks to provide an alternative to street gangs is in dire need of funds.

Flores will gets the Merit of Excellence Award — along with Jaime Escalante, the famed schoolteacher of the film "Stand and Deliver."

The word macho needs re-defining. It doesn't mean a guy on horseback with a fierce mustache and banderillas and a mocking laugh. It can mean a quiet, patient, somber guy who just beats your brains out without getting particularly excited about it, who will help you up when he's through.

Pete Lewis added 16, Billy Fagan scored 14 and Joel Ellis 13. But as a team, the Eagles shot just 42 percent.

"We were ready for the press," said Brown, who repeatedly stutter-stepped his way through the Eagles for open jumpers. "For two weeks we've worked on the press."

Flores, who also had 13 rebounds, said the Eagles played into Albuquerque High's game plan.

"We knew we had to control the tempo and the boards," Flores said.

The two teams traded early leads through the first quarter. The Bulldogs provided an omen of what was to come by outscoring the Eagles 15-3 in the final four minutes of the first half for a 51-44 lead. Brown scored the final five points of the period, including a jumper with two seconds left.

Braves prove they are best of worst

Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves won the battle of 1988's biggest losers on Thursday.

The Braves, who lost 106 games last season, worst record in the National League, shut out the Baltimore Orioles, 107-game losers in the AL 4-0. Tom Glavine, Dave Miller, Charlie Puleo and Joe Boever limited the Orioles to three hits, while Ron Gant homered for the Braves.

It was the fourth win in six games this spring for the Braves, who have also tied one game.

Dodgers 4, Twins 2

Mike Marshall's two-run home run gave the Dodgers their victory in a game shortened to five innings because of rain, high winds and cold weather.

Marshall's homer, his first of the spring, capped a three-run uprising off loser Fred Toliver and provided Los Angeles ace Orel Hershiser with his first exhibition win.

Astros 7, Mets 2

Billy Hatcher hit a three-run homer off Ron Darling in the first inning and went 3-for-3, extending his string of consecutive hits to six for the Astros. It followed singles by Rafael Ramirez and Kevin Bass.

Reds 9, Pirates 2

Eric Davis went 2-for-3 with a triple and bases-loaded double as the Reds had 14 hits and took advantage of five Pittsburgh errors.

Tom Browning pitched three shutout innings for the victory, Barry Larkin had two hits and scored three runs and Todd Benzinger had a two-run first-inning triple for the Reds.

Rangers 8, Cardinals 1

Kevin Brown, Craig McMurtry and Drew Hall limited the Cardinals to five hits and Pete Incaviglia's two-run double highlighted a five-run fourth off Jose DeLeon.

AP Laserphoto

Brown allowed just two hits and an unearned run in four innings and McMurtry limited the Cards to one hit in his four innings. Rookie third baseman Dean Palmer had a leadoff homer in the eighth for the Rangers.

Yankees 11, Expos 6

Hal Morris' two-run double and Bernie Williams' run-scoring single highlighted a seven-run eighth inning for the Yankees, who trailed 5-4 entering the inning.

Tim Burke was the loser.

Blue Jays 6, White Sox 4

Tony Fernandez and Fred McGriff drove in two runs apiece to lead the Blue Jays and leadoff man Lloyd Moseby reached base three times, stole two bases and scored three runs.

Toronto broke a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning with back-to-back RBI singles by Fernandez and McGriff off John Pawlowski.

Tigers 5, Phillies 5

Bob Dernier's RBI infield single capped a four-run eighth inning as Philadelphia rallied to tie Detroit 5-5 in a game called after 11 innings because the Tigers ran out of pitchers.

Detroit took a 2-0 lead in the second inning on Matt Nokes' homer and got three more in the seventh, two on Alan Trammell's single.

Athletics 6, Mariners 5

With one out in the 12th, Ron Hassey doubled off losing pitcher Luis DeLeon. Buddy Pryor went in to run for Hassey and Beane singled to left. Doug Jennings singled and pinch-hitter Joe Savarino singled to score Beane.

Athletics (ss) 9, Angels (ss) 3

Angels 7, Giants 1

Brewers 7, Cubs 1

Mike Birkbeck pitched five scoreless innings and B.J. Surhoff went 3-for-3 to lead Milwaukee.

Birkbeck, 1-0, has not allowed a run against the Cubs in 13 exhibition innings dating back to last spring. Surhoff, who had three singles, scored twice and drove in a run and Eddie Diaz contributed a two-run triple.

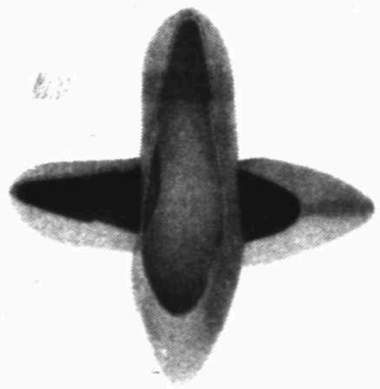

Shriver eases past Slims foe

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Pam Shriver says she got a "little bit funny" for a few games in the second set, but still had a relatively easy time in her match against Anne Minter.

The third-seeded Shriver beat Minter 6-2, 6-3 Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals of the $250,000 Virginia Slims tournament.

In second-round upsets at the Hyatt Grand Champions Resort, seventh-seeded Nicole Provis of Australia lost 3-6, 7-6, 6-3 to Jana Novotna of Czechoslovakia, and No. 8 Natahlie Tauziat lost 5-7, 6-2, 6-3 to Isabelle Demongeot in a match of French players.

In other matches, Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden defeated Akemi Nishiya of Japan 6-2, 6-3, and Jenny Byrne of Australia downed Terry Phelps 6-4, 6-4.

Picking champ is the tough job

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

This year, there seems to be two dozen teams capable of winning it all. But CBS commentator Billy Packer says one stands above the rest.

"I think Georgetown is the team to beat," he said. "With their defense, you don't get any easy shots. ... They don't blow many people out, but they usually find a way to win."

"Last year, I didn't think Kansas had a chance," he said. "But there were so many upsets in their bracket, they had a pretty easy path to the Final Four. That's what makes it so hard to predict."

Packer will have more to say about the tournament Sunday when the NCAA announces the 64-team field. He will join Brent Musburger and Jim Nantz in New York to analyze the seedings and pairings on CBS' selection show from 5:30-6 p.m. EST. Tim Brant will report live from Kansas City, Mo., where the field will be announced.

In addition to Georgetown, Packer has a few other favorites for the Final Four.

"I like Arizona and either North Carolina or Duke from the ACC," he said. "And I think one of the Big Ten representatives has a good chance to make it."

"They have experienced backcourts, which is very important in the tournament because there's so much pressure," he said.

ABC, which is looking for sports programming to replace baseball and the Olympics, is about to snatch the Pan American Games from CBS.

ABC has reportedly agreed to pay $7 million for the TV rights to the 1991 Pan Am Games in Cuba, a big increase from the $4.5 million CBS paid for the 1987 Games in Indianapolis.

Neither network would talk about the negotiations. But CBS Sports president Neal Pilson said losing the Pan Am Games would not be a major blow because the network recently added major league baseball and the 1992 Winter Olympics to its lineup.

ABC is expected to share Pan Am coverage with Turner Broadcasting, which is nearing a $2 million deal for the cable rights.

The USA Network will replay the Hector Camacho-Ray Mancini bout three times next week, making it the second basic cable network to air a fight originally shown on pay-per-view television.

Camacho's split decision over Mancini will air Sunday from 8-10 p.m. EST. Wednesday from 11 p.m.-1 a.m. and Saturday from 1-3 p.m.

ESPN recently replayed the Roberto Duran-Iran Barkley bout, which also was a live pay-per-view event.

Senator holds little hope for gas tax

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON – Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., predicted Thursday that Congress would accept a painful, across-the-board spending cut before increasing the federal gasoline tax to meet limits on the budget deficit.

Wallop told an oil policy seminar sponsored by the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation that a 10 cent per gallon federal gasoline tax increase would put thousands of people out of work and hurt the poor the most.

Currently, the federal gasoline tax is 9 cents a gallon. On average, about 25 percent of the current U.S. retail price for gasoline consists of federal and state taxes.

A number of proposals for increasing the federal tax on gasoline have been floated as means for reducing the federal budget deficit. The proposed increases generally considered to have a reasonable chance for being debated range from 10 cents to $1.00 per gallon.

It has been estimated that about $1 billion in increased federal revenues could be realized for each cent per gallon increase in the gasoline tax.

Wallop said he believes political pressures would work against a gasoline tax.

Calling a gasoline tax increase " more regressive than any other" that could be imposed, Wallop said it would have "a fairly major regional impact."

In Wyoming, he said, it would hurt the tourist industry more than "the fires in Yellowstone National Park" last year.

Because Wyoming drivers frequently travel as far as 400 miles a day to work, Wallop said that a gasoline tax would impose an unfair burden on them.

He also said that state governors view the gasoline tax as "their" tax and will fight any attempt at a federal increase.

Attention has focused on a gasoline tax because current energy prices are relatively low and because other potential sources of new federal revenue appear to be unacceptable either to Congress or the Bush administration.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., last December suggested a gasoline tax of 15 cents a gallon. He conceded, however, that while such a tax might be "good economic policy and good energy policy," it is not "good politics."

Sen. LLoyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who is chairman of the Finance Committee, is on record as saying there will be no new taxes unless leaders of both parties, and the administration, agree to it.

Wallop discounted a budget scenario being discussed on Capitol Hill that would have Congress "dithering until October" when a "snapshot" of the budget deficit problem by government economists would reveal how much spending must be cut or revenue raised to meet the $100 billion deficit ceiling mandated by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law for fiscal 1990.

According to the scenario, Congress would then turn to a gasoline tax as the easiest means for meeting the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit limit.

Wallop contended, however, that "many people will be more willing to accept a decline in spending than to add a gasoline tax."

Oil expert: Bush plans not enough

Industry will need more incentives

ODESSA — President Bush's "shopping list of energy stimulators," while beneficial if it gains Congressional approval, won't be enough to make a significant difference in the industry, according to a leading oil and gas consultant.

"Elimination of the 80 percent preference (of intangible drilling costs under alternative minimum tax laws) is a relatively good stimulus for the industry because it offers across-the-board benefits to large and small producers," said Michael O'Donnell, managing director of worldwide oil and gas services for Arthur Andersen & Co.

"But the others are not that significant," the accounting and consulting firm officer told members of the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce at a Thursday luncheon.

With most small producers operating "in the red" to start with, nonrefundable tax credits are of limited value.

Regarding the proposed increase in the depletion allowance, O'Donnell said, "more deductions won't benefit the small independent producer if he's not operating profitably anyway."

The presidential energy proposals are "only a beginning" and alone cannot make significant changes in the infrastructure of the energy industry.

O'Donnell estimated that it would take two to four years to rebuild the energy infrastructure enough to offset an unexpected import shortage.

The only hope for preparing the nation for an interruption in the flow of imported oil, which now accounts for "forty-something percent of U.S. supplies," is a comprehensive and cohesive national energy policy.

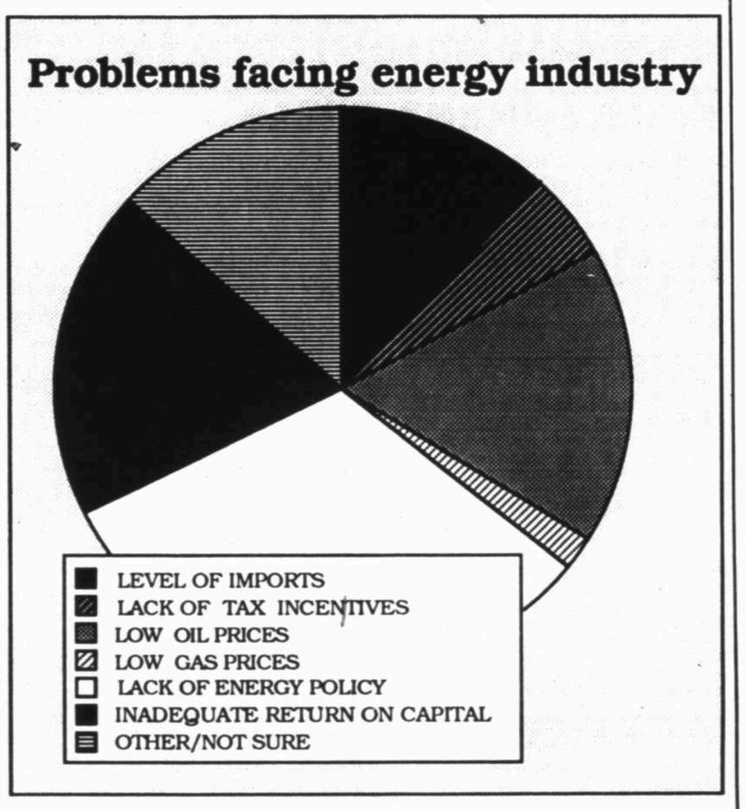

Andersen & Co. surveyed nearly 700 top oil and gas executives late last year. More than any other answer, the energy executives picked the lack of a national energy policy as the single greatest problem facing the domestic energy.

O'Donnell characterized the current period of relative global quiet as a "window of opportunity" for devising an energy policy before an unexpected supply disruption arises.

"Unfortunately ... national policy is born out of crisis, not by design," he said. "Just because we aren't in the throes of long gas lines nor being held hostage by foreign powers, Congress is impotent to act."

EASTERN

Judge will decide Eastern fate

NEW YORK (AP) — Eastern Airlines could dump billions of dollars in assets or sell itself whole if the carrier, pushed to the brink of collapse by union walkouts, can convince a U.S. bankruptcy judge it can't otherwise survive.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton R. Lifland is the key figure now in determining the future of Eastern, which said it was losing $4 million a day mainly due to the strike until it sought protection from creditors Thursday under Chapter 11 of federal bankruptcy laws.

The filing places in the judge's hands the pending $365 million sale of Eastern's Northeast shuttle to New York developer Donald Trump. It also delays USAir's proposed $85 million purchase of Eastern gates in Philadelphia and routes from that city to Toronto and Montreal.

"If they have to raise cash to operate week-to-week or month-to-month they can get by with the sale of a couple planes," said Richard Lieb, a New York bankruptcy lawyer.

Jobless rate lowest in 15 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate in February plunged to 5.1 percent, the lowest point in 15 years, as employers created 289,000 new jobs in a sign of the economy's continued strength, the government reported today.

The jobless rate was down 0.3 percentage points from December, hitting 5.1 percent for first time since May 1974, the Labor Department said. The rate last was lower in December 1973, when it hit 4.9 percent.

At the same time, employers created 289,000 new nonfarm jobs last month, with the gains confined to service-producing industries, according to a separate survey of business payrolls.

February's job-growth figure reflected some fallback after payrolls grew by a robust 415,000 jobs in January, when employment was spurred by unusually mild weather. January's figure was revised upward from an initial estimate of 408,000 new jobs.

The latest figures provided fresh evidence that the economy continues to command strength in the seventh year of its record peacetime expansion despite widespread anticipation of an impending slowdown.

The unemployment rate had hovered around 5.3 percent and 5.4 percent for the prior five months.

Lorenzo was once a Teamster

Lorenzo

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo, embroiled in a bitter battle with Eastern Airlines' unions that finally forced the carrier's management to seek bankruptcy protection, earned an anti-union reputation years ago when he fought organized labor at Continental Airlines, Eastern's sister.

Eastern, whose parent is Houston-based Texas Air, filed for protection from creditors in a New York federal bankruptcy court Thursday morning, the sixth day of a strike by Machinists that virtually shut down the nation's seventh-largest carrier and cost it up to $7 million a day.

Striking Machinists have made Lorenzo the target of their hatred. Picket signs carried at various airports this week have read, "Lorenzo is scum," "Labor Yes, Lorenzo No," and "Lorenzo Makes Millions at Eastern's Expense."

Pickets have chanted "Eastern yes! Lorenzo no," and some even have burned signs carrying his name.

FDIC takes over 21 Texas thrifts

HOUSTON (AP) — Twenty-one troubled savings and loans with total assets of $7.32 billion were taken over by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and officials say an additional 17 thrifts will be put under conservatorship next month.

The thrifts taken over Thursday brings to 36 the number of Texas savings and loans under federal supervision. In all, 45 institutions in 24 states with total assets of $13.6 billion were taken over Thursday.

Business at the ailing institutions, however, will remain as usual, said Ken Blincow, an FDIC spokesman.

"No changes are anticipated in officers or employees," he said.

Blincow said the S&Ls will remain open as usual and that all deposit accounts up to $100,000 are fully protected by federal insurance.

Included in the latest wave of takeovers were Benjamin Franklin Savings Association of Houston, with assets of $2.64 billion, and Commonwealth Savings Association of Houston, with assets of $1.7 billion.

Other Texas thrifts taken over Thursday include: Western Gulf Savings and Loan Association, Bay City; Citizens of Texas Savings and Loan Association, Baytown; Century Sav-

Oil futures post modest decline

From Staff and Wire Reports

Futures prices continued drifting lower today, with the contract for April delivery of West Texas Intermediate slipping 5 cents to stand at $18.47 at midmorning on the NYMEX. It had fallen 2 cents Thursday to $18.52.

Crude oil and gasoline contracts posted moderate losses while wholesale home heating oil lost nearly a penny a gallon in volatile trading Thursday.

Andrew Lebow, an energy analyst with E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc., attributed the heating-oil decline largely to technical factors following a recent price runup.

He said prices started out stronger, but met resistance at certain levels and then steadily declined. That helped bring down prices of other petroleum products, he said.

"I think that the underlying fundamentals seem to be bullish, though, especially with the cold weather," Lebow said.

The April contract for heating oil fell 0.99 cent to settle at 50.38 cents a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange, after rising as high as 51.75 cents earlier in the session. The contract had gained 0.29 cent Wednesday.

Dollar lower in thin trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar lost ground in thin European trading this morning as the market waited for the release of the latest U.S. unemployment figures. Gold prices rose about $5 an ounce.

Foreign exchange dealers said the market had come to a virtual standstill in anticipation of the U.S. unemployment statistics for February, which were to be released later today.

Some traders said the U.S. unemployment report could shake the market out of its current lethargy if the figures come in significantly above or below expectations.

But others doubted that the report would be capable of lifting the market out of its current doldrums.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7235, compared with $1.7183 late Thursday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $395 a troy ounce and at midmorning the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $397, both up from $391.55 bid late Thursday.

Stocks drift 4 points lower

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted to a small loss Thursday while Wall Street kept a vigil for Friday's monthly report on the employment situation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 4.11 points to 2,291.43.

Declining issues slightly outnumbered advances in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 675 up, 764 down and 541 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 143.16 million shares, down from 167.62 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 170.25 million shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $1.12 billion, or 0.04 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dipped .09 to 165.36.

Ford grandson announces retirement

Ford

DEARBORN, Mich. (NYT) — William Clay Ford, vice chairman of the Ford Motor Co., on Thursday retired from active management and several policy-making committees at the No. 2 auto maker.

At the same time, he indicated that his son William Clay Ford Jr. and nephew Edsel Ford 2d would be appointed to committees of the board within the year.

Ford executives, speaking unofficially, confirmed that Donald E. Petersen, Ford's chief executive, had agreed to name the Ford cousins, who serve in middle management positions and on the board of directors, to the powerful committee assignments.

Emhart board rejects takeover bid

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Emhart Corp.'s board of directors rejected an investment group's unsolicited $2.4 billion takeover offer and said it had received rival buyout bids from other parties.

Peter L. Scott, Emhart's chairman, recommended shareholders not tender any of their stock to Topper Acquisition Corp., whose investors include oil heir Gordon P. Getty and New York developers Lawrence and Zachary Fisher.

Democrats willing to consider training wage

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel approved legislation to add $1.30 an hour to the $3.35 minimum wage over the next three years as Democratic leaders said they are willing to compromise with the Bush administration by adding a reduced "training wage" for new workers.

The move to raise the minimum for the first time in eight years was approved Thursday on a party-line vote by the House labor standards subcommittee. The bill is nearly identical to one approved by the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee on Wednesday.

Apple order canceled over Alar controversy

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — A Taiwanese exporter said it had canceled a large order for Washington apples because of concerns over the health effects of the chemical Alar, the latest sign of slowing sales due to the controversy.

W.L.H. Group of Seattle this week canceled an order for 5,000 boxes of Washington apples and may not order any more U.S. apples the rest of the season, Sue Lin, an employee in the Seattle office, said Thursday.

Tax breaks for thrift buyers opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration said it opposes the continuation of preferential tax breaks that federal regulators have been using to attract buyers for insolvent savings and loan associations.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Wolfcamp find pumps 17 barrels

From Staff Reports

A modest Wolfcamp discovery has been completed in Lea County.

TERRA RESOURCES INC. potentialed the No. 1 Terra Exxon "23" State to pump 17 barrels of crude, 240 Mcfd and two barrels of water from perforations 10,354 to 10,376 ft.

The well was drilled to 11,000 ft. and plugged back to 10,600 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,949 ft. Pay was topped at 10,354 ft.

Roosevelt project yields Wolfcamp well

YATES PETROLEUM CORP. has completed a new Wolfcamp producer in the Todd field of Roosevelt County, N.M.

On potential test, the No. 1 Crossroads "AFX" Federal pumped 94 barrels of 36.8 gravity crude, 30 Mcfd, and 16 barrels of water from perforations 7,594 to 7,616 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,500 gallons of 20 percent acid. Gas-oil ratio is 319:1.

Permitted as an 8,300 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,100 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 7,642 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 4,194.6 ft., include the San Andres at 5,380 ft., Tubb at 6,002, Abo at 6,739, Wolfcamp at 7,378, and Pre-Cambrian at 7,984 ft. Pay was topped at 7,594 ft.

Drilling continues in Foor Ranch field

Development drilling continues in the Foor Ranch field of Eddy County, N.M. as YATES PETROLEUM CORP. completes another Pre-Permian gas producer in the field.

The No. 1 Energy "AFY" State was tested to flow 3.8 Mmcfd on a 1/2 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 600 psi. The well flowed from perforations 6,047 to 6,060 ft., which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons of 15 percent acid.

Drilled to 6,086 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 6,082 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,840.2 ft., formation tops include the San Andres at 1,200 ft., Glorieta at 2,347, Yeso at 2,412, Abo at 4,594, Wolfcamp at 5,266, Pennsylvanian at 5,920, Cisco at 5,780, Mississippian at 5,995, and Pre-Permian at 6,040 ft. Pay was topped at 6,047 ft.

Oxy completes gas well for 2.01 Mmcf

OXY U.S.A. INC. has completed a new Morrow gas producer in the East Hess field of Eddy County.

The No. 1 State "EB" was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.01 Mmcfd on various chokes. Flowing tubing rpessure was 3,032 psi and the well flowed from perforations 10,316 to 10,359 ft. The interval was acidized with 6,000 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFeHCL acid.

Drilled to 10,757 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 10,500 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 4,366.7 ft., include the Bone Spring at 5,202 ft., Delaware at 7,119, Pennsylvanian at 7,444, Cisco at 8,520, Strawn at 9,340, Atoka at 9,650, Morrow at 10,321, and Barnett at 10,682 ft. Pay was topped at 10,316 ft.

Three wells added to Eddy County field

The Grayburg-Jackson field of Eddy County gained three new producers as HONDO OIL & GAS CO. completed some activity in the area.

Hondo tested the No. 16 H.E. West "A" to pump 189 barrels of crude, 61 Mcfd and 41 barrels of water from perforations 3,415 to 3,953 ft.

On potential test, the No. 37 H.E. West "B" pumped 56 barrels of crude, 28 Mcfd, and 205 barrels of water. The well produced from perforations 3,410 to 4,009 ft.

Also, the No. 38 H.E. West "B" was completed, pumping 51 barrels of crude, 20 Mcfd and 197 barrels of water from perforations 3,364 to 3,910 ft.

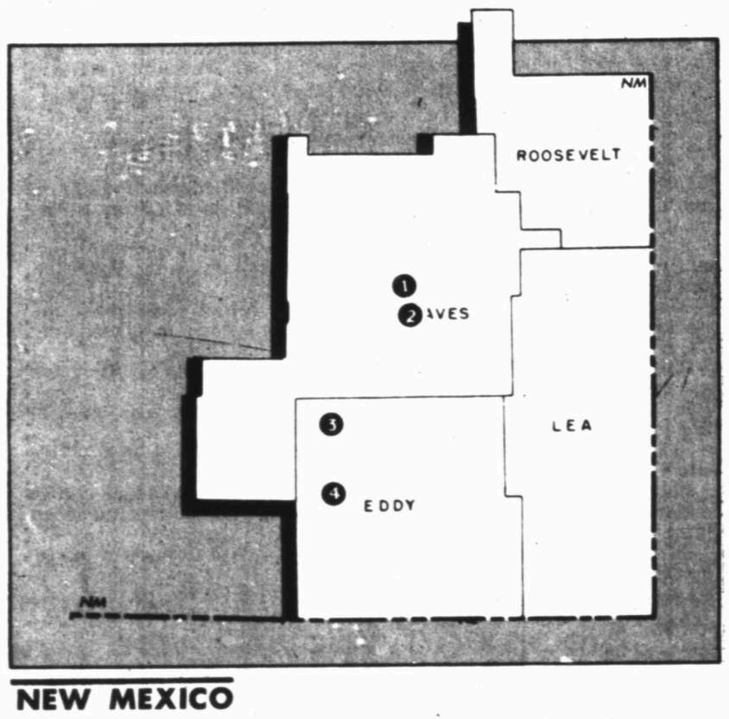

Operators plug two King County dry holes

HARBERT ENERGY CORP. plugged the No. 3-E Masteron at 4,100 ft. Location is 12 ft. from north and 2,497 ft. from west lines of Section 37, Block A, R.M. Thompson survey, 15 miles north of Guthrie.

TERRA RESOURCES INC. abandoned the No. 12 Ross Eustis at 2,940 ft. It was located 2,991 ft. from northwest and 1,922 ft. from southwest lines of Section 2, J.G. Eustis survey, 18 miles southeast of Guthrie.

Geodyne finals acquisition of oil interests

TULSA (SWN) — Geodyne Resources, Inc. has completed the acquisition from Primary Fuels, Inc. of interests in producing oil and gas properties on behalf of the PaineWebber/Geodyne Energy Income Programs. The final purchase price was $72.7 million.

The acquisition includes interests in approximately 1,300 properties located primarily in West Texas, New Mexico and the Oklahoma panhandle.

BUSH

A global surplus of oil and gas will keep the opportunity window open until the end of the century, barring unilateral action by foreign suppliers, said O'Donnell.

That same surplus will keep the "real price" of oil flat for a long time, probably through the year 2000. The industry has to accept that if it is going to move ahead over the next decade, O'Donnell commented during a brief post-luncheon interview.

He called the recent joint venture of Texaco Refining & Marketing with the Saudi Arabian government "a natural evolution," as supplies are being moved to find a market.

Such "vertical integration" from the Middle Eastern wellhead to the U.S. gas pump nozzle is apt to continue, however, with increasing concerns over surrendering large chunks of economic control, future deals will likely be smaller ones.

JOBLESS

Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said in testimony prepared for Congress that "many wondered whether it was possible for the rate to decline any further or whether the labor market had already expanded as far as it could go."

She said that while the decline was important, most of the decrease was among groups whose jobless rates tend to be erratic, notably youth and Hispanics.

Overall, the civilian labor force contracted by 247,000 people last month to 123.2 million, while 142,000 workers found jobs, according to the department's monthly sample of households, from which the jobless rate is calculated.

With the rise in employment, 62.9 percent of working-age Americans held jobs, matching the record high level set in January.

February's job growth was paced by gains in service-producing sectors, while employment in goods-producing industries decreased slightly due to a weather-related decline in construction.

There were 321,000 new jobs in the service-producing sector of the economy, including gains in health and business services.

Construction employment was down 22,000 jobs due to harsh weather after a strong surge in January that had been attributed largely to mild weather.

Manufacturing employment was down 8,000 jobs after steadily increasing since September.

In figures closely watched for signs of inflation, the report showed that seasonally adjusted average hourly earnings of nonsupervisory employees were up a slim 0.1 percent and average weekly earnings declined 0.2 percent in February.

A separate unemployment calculation including the 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States also stood at 5.1 percent in February, down from 5.4 percent a month earlier.

In the civilian population, the jobless rate among whites was 4.3 percent last month, down from 4.6 percent in January, while the unemployment rate for blacks was 11.9 percent, down from 12 percent.

The jobless rate among Hispanics plunged to 6.8 percent from 8.4 percent in January.

The rate for teen-agers dropped by 1.6 percentage points to 14.8 percent, while the unemployment rate for young adults aged 20 to 24 fell 1.2 points to 8.1 percent.

Analysts have long been forecasting an economic slowdown, but most reports at the start of 1989 have indicated the economy continues to demonstrate strong momentum.

"We've had strong growth in employment that suggests we're going into the first quarter with significant gains already in our pocket," economist James Annable of First National Bank of Chicago said in advance of today's report. "We're not going to get a significant slowdown in growth in the first quarter."

Analysts now expect the slowdown to materialize later this year as higher interest rates begin to take their toll.

The Federal Reserve Board for a year has been pushing up interest rates in an effort to restrain excessive economic growth and keep inflation in check.

The Fed's latest round of credit-tightening came after reports showed consumer prices rose 0.6 percent during January and wholesale prices shot up 1 percent. Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan blamed the increases in part on acceleration of wage increases in the tight labor market.

Bush's goal is to have the FDIC, which regulates commercial banks, take over the sickest S&Ls, with the goal of minimizing losses while Congress considers the administration's proposal to rescue or close such institutions.

The FDIC plans to take control of about 100 more institutions in the country within the next month, including the 17 in Texas, Blincow said.

Blincow said between five and 10 FDIC officials will go into the ailing Texas thrifts to work with existing management to pinpoint and try to solve the institution's problems. After about a week, four or five will remain as an advisory management group.

"Every facet of the business will be reviewed," he said. "It's hard to say what exactly will be done."

He said no layoffs are anticipated at any of the thrifts, unless the review calls for it.

Blincow also said no drastic change in interest rates at the thrifts will be seen in the near future.

LORENZO

tern's unions, which he accomplished shortly after putting Houston-based Continental under bankruptcy protection in 1983.

Lorenzo's interest in airlines began at an early age. The son of Spanish immigrants who lived in New York, Lorenzo already owned stock in Trans World Airlines when he graduated from high school in 1957.

Lorenzo studied economics at Columbia, where some fraternity brothers called him "Frankie Smooth Talk." He received a master's degree in finance from Harvard Business School in 1963.

He helped pay for his education by driving a delivery truck, a position that required him to join the Teamsters Union.

Lorenzo lives in Houston's exclusive River Oaks neighborhood with his wife, three daughters and a son. He is an avid runner and has a private pilot's license.

He avoids the spotlight and rarely grants interviews.

Robert T. Sakowitz, president of the Sakowitz Inc. retail chain and a member of Continental's board of directors, told the Houston Post this week that Lorenzo is "very intense, extremely intelligent and very zealous about his family and everything he undertakes."

Lorenzo began his career in the airline industry in 1963 working as an economic analyst for TWA, but he left in 1965 to become manager of Eastern's financial analysis department. In 1966, he and Harvard classmate Robert Carney formed a financial advisory firm.

"But if it's a very significant transaction, there is some real doubt whether it could happen."

Filing for bankruptcy protection gives Eastern a chance to fly again without worrying about its debt, but it doesn't stop the strike-torn carrier from shutting down for good.

Eastern's papers filed at bankruptcy court in Manhattan listed $4.5 billion in assets, $3.39 billion in liabilities and 15,696 creditors.

The filing doesn't specify how Miami-based Eastern plans to resurrect its crippled operations, but analysts said the sale of the carrier — possibly to Trans World Airlines owner Carl C. Icahn — or a piece-by-piece dismantling were possibilities.

Some believe bankruptcy court was a better option for Eastern than holding an auction of routes, planes, gates and landing slots on the open market, where buyers probably would have bid rock-bottom prices.

"Now because bankruptcy court is protecting the company and the creditors, Eastern will only accept an offer that is a fair offer," said James Carey, vice president for research for Airline Economics Inc.

Chapter 11 is designed to allow companies to operate normally during reoganization, but assures nothing.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Martial law marks Tibetan anniversary

BEIJING (AP) — Chinese troops rounded up suspected separatists and kept a tight lid on Tibet today as the embattled region marked the 30th anniversary of a failed attempt to cast off Chinese rule.

Police and the military already had detained many Tibetans in house-to-house searches and planned to move swiftly to crush any demonstrations to commemorate the anniversary, according to Tibetan and foreign sources.

China imposed martial law in Lhasa on Tuesday to quell three days of anti-Chinese riots that took 16 lives, according to official count. Western travelers say most Tibetans put the death toll at between 20 and 30. Some estimates ranged much higher.

All foreign tourists were ordered to leave Lhasa by Thursday. It was believed the last group departed this morning.

British sport new noses

LONDON (AP) — Britain's stiff upper lip broke into a big grin today as millions of people put on red plastic noses, wallowed in baked beans, donned gnome suits and pretty much turned the day into a big laughing matter.

Despite the outbreak of mass silliness, organizers of some worthy causes will be laughing all the way to the bank if today's "Red Nose Day 2" is as successful as last year's inaugural charity drive, which raised $27 million.

The idea behind the fund-raising effort, which was organized by a group of British comedians and run by a coalition of groups called Comic Relief, is to get Britons to loosen their pursestrings while they laugh.

Two-thirds of this year's cash will go to Third World projects and to Princess Anne's Save the Children Fund, and the rest to programs in Britain to help young people and the elderly.

Ties to plant severed

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — A Swiss engineering company today said it has cut its business links with a military-industrial complex in Egypt that reportedly plans to build a plant to produce poison gas.

The company said it believed the parts it shipped to Egypt would be used to produce pharmaceuticals but that it severed its business relationship with the Egyptian complex on the advice of the Swiss government.

The comment by Krebs A.G. followed a news report in The New York Times today saying that U.S. officials believe Egypt is assembling Swiss-made parts that could be used to create a chemical weapons plant.

Gander probe denied

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada's transport minister has ruled out holding a special judicial inquiry into the cause of the 1985 Newfoundland airplane crash that killed 256 Americans.

The Canadian Aviation Safety Board concluded in a report last year that the disaster was caused by ice on the wings of the Arrow Air DC-8.

However, four of the board's nine members cite evidence of a bomb or fire that they believe may have been the work of terrorists.

They have pushed for a new investigation, but Transport Minister Benoit Bouchard rejected their demands Tuesday. "We don't have any reason to believe that (an explosion) happened," he said.

He said no compelling reasons were found to question the majority report.

The plane went down shortly after a refueling stop at Gander. It was carrying 248 soldiers of the 101st Airborne Division to their home base in Fort Campbell, Ky. Everyone on board, including eight crew members, was killed.

It was Canada's worst air disaster.

Salinas marks 100th day

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Carlos Salinas de Gortari today marks the 100th day of his presidency as a more powerful leader whose political skills have earned respect even from critics.

The bald, mustachioed 40-year-old economist won the slimmest victory in the history of his party, which has controlled Mexican politics for most of this century. He then struggled through rocky early days when his opponents claimed the election was rigged.

Since then, however, he has widened his support with measures aimed at restoring economic confidence and political stability in advance of vital negotiations over Mexico's foreign debt.

"He has gained credibility," said Pablo Emilio Madero, former presidential candidate and a leader of the conservative National Action Party. The party is the country's second largest behind the government's Institutional Revolutionary Party.

Salinas took office after a fraud-marred election in which he polled barely more than 50 percent. The governing party ended up with a 260-240 margin in Congress, its lowest ever, and a vocal leftist coalition that predicted Salinas wouldn't last.

Rights stand examined

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Soviet treatment of human rights probably will never be tested before the World Court and Moscow's willingness to obey court rulings carries more symbolism than substance, U.N. and State Department legal experts say.

Pieter Kooijmans, U.N. special investigator on human rights, said Soviet acceptance of the court's authority in six major human rights treaties "is the shattering of a 40-year-old taboo."

Interviewed in Leiden, the Netherlands, Kooijmans added: "It would be a real breakthrough for human rights if the Soviet Union would recognize the right of individuals" to file complaints of rights abuses.

Court won't make ruling

OTTAWA (AP) — The Supreme Court of Canada declined on Thursday to rule whether the unborn child has constitutional rights and handed the job of writing a new abortion law back to the elected politicians.

The Conservative government responded by saying it would study the matter, the Liberals called for action but did not say what kind of action, and the New Democrats suggested the best thing may be to do nothing.

In a unanimous 7-0 ruling, the high court refused to decide the issues raised by anti-abortion crusader Joe Borowski, who argued that the fetus has rights to life, liberty, security of the person and equality before the law.

The judges decided that fetal rights can't be examined in the legal vacuum that has existed since January 1988, when the court struck down previous federal restrictions on abortion as a violation of the rights of women.

With the old law gone, there is no way to assess either the rights of women or the rights of the fetus in a concrete and practical way, Justice John Sopinka wrote on behalf of the court.

FAMILY MATTERS

Columnist apologizes to family

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR READERS: Last week I made a serious mistake. I intended for my column to be a tribute to a lady whom I greatly admired. Instead, the column has proven to be an embarrassment to her family and friends. For this I am greatly sorry.

Ludy was not and had never been an alcoholic. I misunderstood. She was very positive about the 12-step program and how it could help, but she was not a recovering alcoholic herself.

I know that this is not sufficient to make amends for the damage done, but I pray that it will be a start. I would like once again to try and pay tribute to someone who meant so much to me and many others.

I met Ludy when she had her first bout with cancer. Through the years, we became good friends. I was always touched by her attitude and her acceptance, and by her willingness and desire to fight her cancer. She came to "I Can Cope" cancer meetings and shared her battle and hope with others.

She helped many women just like herself. In a physical sense, Ludy lost her battle with cancer, but she found peace through her faith. When I talked with Ludy toward the end, she was at peace — with her family, her friends, her God and herself. She was surrounded by friends, all trying to be there for Ludy like she was there for us.

Ludy had a wonderful, contagious optimism. The last time I heard her speak at a cancer support group, she told of the "advantages" of no hair and being bloated as a result of treatments. The hair would grow back and she would thin down. She had nowhere to go but up, and she could hardly wait to see what her "new" hair would be like. It was black and baby soft.

I will miss Ludy. She was a wonderful friend. She spread the good news that others might find God and themselves. She lived the hope that she found. She fought the good fight and is now at peace. God bless Ludy.

DEAR READERS: The next session of "I Can Cope" is beginning. While a diagnosis of cancer can be devastating to patients and their families, the "I Can Cope" program is designed to teach the patient and his or her family about living with the chronic disease of cancer.

The program focuses on physical, social and emotional effects of the disease. Professionals speak to the group on an informal basis about these issues. Patients and their family members are encouraged to ask questions, to clarify the myths associated with cancer.

The program offers patients and their families an chance to talk with others who have similar concerns.

"I Can Cope" meets 7-8 p.m. for the next seven Tuesdays at Allison Cancer Center, 2200 W. Illinois, in Midland. Call 685-1559 for more information.

DEAR ABBY

Children inspired to clean up

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You need to know how much good you do with your column. I teach a class of special children. There are 12 children, grades 1 through 5, at Skeen Elementary School in Leesburg, Fla.

A letter in your column stimulated them to get involved. We call our program "Litter Perfect."

They want you to know what they (along with family and friends) have done about cleaning up their surroundings since Nov. 29, 1988.

I am enclosing a letter from that class. I hope you have room for it. — THEIR TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: I made room. Here's their letter:

DEAR ABBY: Our class is studying ecology. We read your list of how long it takes things to rot.

We are helping to clean up America. We are recycling. We have recycled 140½ pounds of cans, 23 pounds of scrap aluminum, 966 pounds of glass and 4,370 pounds of newspaper.

Sincerely, EDDIE DAY, MRS. AYIS' CLASS

DEAR EDDIE: Hooray for your class. And congratulations to Mrs. Ayis. You may have given other teachers and students an excellent idea.

DEAR ABBY: What do you say when someone walks up to you and says, "I'll bet you don't remember me, do you?" — ON THE SPOT

DEAR ON: I say, "You win! Won't you please refresh my memory?"

CONFIDENTIAL TO "BORN AGAIN" IN COLUMBIA, S.C.: No one said it better than Harry Emerson Fosdick: "Vital religion is like good music. It needs no defense, only rendition. A wrangling controversy in support of religion is as if the members of the orchestra should beat the folks over the head with their violins to prove that the music is beautiful."

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send a self-addressed stamped envelope, your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage is included.

Children's opinions on day care surprisingly mature

By TRISH HALL
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Parents often talk about the stress of juggling work and children, of searching for child care that is high quality but affordable, consistent rather than erratic.

But what about the children who are living through the social upheavals that are taking place? What do they think of the arrangements that are being made for them?

The voices of young children are rarely heard in the reams of research on child care. To get their viewpoints, about 60 children between the ages of 5 and 10 were interviewed in two settings: in classes at the Cathedral School, a private school on the Upper West Side of Manhattan, and at the after-school program of the Watchung Elementary School in Montclair, N.J., a suburb of New York City.

While children may not be able to imagine a life that would be better or different, many of them are strikingly articulate about their experiences.

While the younger children said they enjoyed organized programs, some of the older ones felt bored and would rather be at home. As for the baby sitters who care for them either regularly or sporadically, the children liked those who played with them, and disliked those who read newspapers or sat around drinking tea.

ALL OF THE CHILDREN interviewed are accustomed to the idea that both their mother and father work outside the home, and they accept as normal the lives they lead, even if they would not seem that way to people raised 20 or 30 years ago. Indeed, they find it odd when asked whether their mothers have always worked.

"Of course she did," said Mick Leslie, 6. "She gets money for working and she buys groceries and all that food is in my stomach."

Reed Weeden, 7, also saw the results of what her parents do: "I wouldn't be able to go to gymnastics if they didn't work." She admitted that there are drawbacks when her parents are at work and she wants to tell them something she has done that day, but she tries to compensate. "Sometimes," she said, "if my baby sitter lets me, I call up."

The children generally know what their parents do, often giving explanations that present a more distilled truth than an adult might.

When asked what her parents do, Puleng Mnumzana, 7, said: "They help free countries." Her father is the chief representative of the African National Congress to the United Nations.

Paul Stone-Jansen, who said his father teaches at Rockland Community College in Suffern, N.Y., described it as a great job: "There's lots of fresh air," he said, "and golf and tennis."

The childrens' lives are almost as complicated as those of their parents.

Aran Nulty, who is 8, gave this answer when asked what he did after school: "On Monday I go to computer class and on Tuesday I go to the library and on Wednesday I go to the library and on Thursday I help the kindergarten teacher clean her room and on Friday I take piano lessons."

MANY OF THE children have parents who are divorced, and they spend time with both mothers and fathers as well as the various spouses, girlfriends and boyfriends of their parents. They generally go to after-school programs or are picked up by relatives or babysitters who take care of them until their parents arrive home, well after the school days ends at 3 or so.

Chris Chiappinelli, who attends programs both before and after school in Montclair, said he would like to skip the early session and simply sleep until 8:15. "I get up at 5 because my Dad works, and it's in New York," he said.

He can't stay home with his mother, he said, because his parents don't live together; he spends four nights with his father, and three with his mother.

Most of the children are clear about what they do — and do not — like in the babysitters who take care of them after school, or in the evenings when their parents are out.

"My favorite was Brenda," said Genny Bergeret, a first-grader at Cathedral. "She was with me most of my life. She took me to the Museum of Natural History and the zoo and skating."

Jonathan Conlon-Glatt, 10, likes the babysitter who plays Nintendo with him. "My parents don't," he said. "My mom can't even get past the first screen."

Certain activities make babysitters especially unpopular.

"I don't like really old people who just sit around knitting," said Jenny Murch, 10. Paul Stone-Jansen says he hates the babysitters who call their friends but "never call for playdates for me." And Isabel Leonard, 6, was unhappy with the babysitter who "sat down and read the newspaper, and I was in my room doing nothing."

GENERALLY, the children tell their parents when they dislike a babysitter, although parents and children don't always agree.

"I liked one but my mother didn't want her because she had a sleazy boyfriend," said Andres Hernandez, a second-grader at Cathedral.

When Francey Hart, 7, had a babysitter she didn't like, "Usually, I just went in my room and played by myself. I told my Mom, and she said she was looking for another babysitter."

Even children who like their babysitters don't seem to long for the ones who are gone. "I think I never saw my babysitters," said Alex Cruzet, 6. "I forgot all about them."

The younger children are generally less articulate about their babysitters, and they may be less likely to tell their parents what they are feeling.

David Gordon, a kindergarten student at Cathedral, said he never liked his babysitters because "they never played with me." But he said he didn't tell his parents; he just played with his pet snail.

Research on child care has focused on pre-school children, and has generally used tests and other measures to assess development.

Children are not asked for their perceptions, according to Deborah Phillips, an assistant professor of psychology at the University of Virginia. "They are too young to reflect on their experiences and to articulate them," said Phillips, who edited "Quality in Child Care: What Does Research Tell Us.," published in 1987 by the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

MICHELLE SELIGSON, director of the School-Age Child Care Project at Wellesley College, said older children may appear to be happy in an after-school program but will nevertheless say they want to be home.

"There is a tug," she said. "They're beginning to develop, to test limits, and to want some autonomy and independence," she said — but they nevertheless may want an adult to be available.

That feeling was very clear in talks with the older children at the Cathedral and Watchung schools, who were more likely than younger children to say they didn't like the after-school programs; some said they would escape if they could.

"I'm getting bored with drawing," said John Monaghan, 9, who attends the Montclair program. If he could change anything in his life, he said, "I'd get out of this. I'd go home and play outside."

Alyssa Lees, also 9 and a student in Montclair, said she gets bored and would rather be at home, where there is more to do. "Here, there's hardly any crafts," she said.

Christian Martin, 9, who attends the after-school program at Cathedral, also finds it tedious. "I wish I could go home, but I can't. I'd play Nintendo, or my computer."

One 10-year-old girl who found the program boring because "they do the same things over and over" persuaded her parents to let her walk home alone. She likes that set-up. So, too, does a 9-year-old boy who goes home to an empty apartment. "It makes you feel more grownup," he said.

BUT ANOTHER 9-year-old boy said he goes home to an empty house one day each week with mixed feelings. "I think I like it better when there's someone there," he said. "It's safer. It's not as lonely."

Younger children seem more satisfied with the after-school programs. In Montclair, where about 30 children are supervised by Susan Lennon and Kathy Rizzie, four little girls in Montclair sat outside crushing rocks in the dirt and said they liked the program.

"It's fun," said Emily DeMuro, who is 6. "It's boring at home. You don't know what do do."

Inside, Leah Pransky, 6, ate a butter crunch cookie and drank apple juice. "It's better here than at home because you get snacks. Daddy doesn't let me get snacks."

Jinja Bailey, 7, also said she liked being at the program. "I'm always stuck with my homework at home," she said. "My mother doesn't let me watch TV."

The children seem to accept the demands of work and the complexities of family life not only without resentment, but sometimes with great sympathy.

Kisha McRae, 10, lost both of her parents and lives with an aunt and great-grandmother. Her aunt, a nurse who works at night, will sometimes play with her, but then will have to stop to do chores.

"I don't think it's really fair to her," Kisha said. "She only gets four hours of sleep."

Some children conceded that they occasionally beg their parents not to go to work. Rebecca Vitone, who is 7 and wears purple nailpolish because it is the color of her birthstone, said she sometimes asks her mother to stay home and play with her.

"I really don't like going to school and doing all this work," she said. But when she asks her mother to stay home and play games with her, "She says no, I have to go to work," Rebecca said.

AND WHEN SHE grows up, Rebecca expects to say the same things to her children. "I'm going to say, 'I have to go to work,'" she said. "Because I will have to work a lot when I get to be a grownup."

Children need to cope with death

New York Times News Service

I left the library with a load of books written by experts and felt like I was suddenly an unwilling pupil in a course on death. I was determined not to be caught offguard by my children's questions about death and dying.

It was not an unexpected task. We had watched for many months as my father grew weaker in his struggle to stay abreast of cancer, and many of the children's questions had already been addressed.

But I was sure that at his death last week, new and tougher queries and situations would be raised. Would they cry? Would they be frightened? Would they have nightmares? Would they be angry? I felt totally prepared yet wholly inadequate for the task.

So it was with relief that I watched our children and their five cousins at the funeral home. They walked matter of factly to the casket and stood quietly, without tears or questions, looking at the man who was their grandpa. They observed his blue silk tie, knotted neatly over his white shirt just as he would have wanted it.He had been of the school of thought that dress shirts should only be white and ties should be worn for most occasions, except when mowing the grass or fishing.

They were interested in the position of his hands, one that was restful and yet strangely still. They were used to seeing his hands busy.

They were pleased to see that his favorite navy blue L.L. Bean fishing hat was with him. He had been one of those persistent, but not totally successful fishermen who seemed to haunt the waterways, not for the fish, but for the solitude. They liked the idea that perhaps he was already doing that in his new home.

I have a feeling their calm reaction was tempered by the fact that grandpa had lived several hundred miles away and visits had been limited to several a year, augmented by phone calls and letters.

If they had known him longer and better, perhaps their grief would have been more keen.

As it was, they were accepting. They didn't blow me away with confounding questions, but their natural resiliency and faith went into high gear, helping them to adjust to the fact that a wise God had prepared a new home for their grandpa where he was much happier and no longer sick.

It was very obvious to them that this man, dressed in a black, pinstripe suit with the quiet expression and the still hands, was not their grandpa.

Copley News Service

Ever wonder how kids learn — really learn — about money? Sure, there are lessons in math class that teach children how to count money, but where do they learn about what money represents and how to use it? How can teachers give children the tools they need to understand and manage money more responsibly?

Those are questions fidelity investments help answer with You and Money, a curriculum program designed to teach elementary school students the basics of money.

The program contains a week of lesson plans, in-class activities and take-home assignments that allow students to explore the current and historical uses of money and to develop a practical understanding of money concepts. This unit gives students the opportunity to learn how to create a budget based on their weekly expenditures, chart the data to see how the money is spent and calculate how long it will take to save for a special purchase.

This freebie's a great investment. Give it to your students and you may see some change — in dollars and cents sense. Call (617) 523-1919 and ask for You And Money.
