

On farm weather station installed south of town

"DAVID JR." — Co-workers of David Workman at Comprehensive Agri Service have named this on-the-farm weather station "David Jr." in honor of Workman, who assembled the new device. The weather station, which feeds data directly into the company's main computer in Lockney, has been installed on the Eddie Teeter farm, six miles south of town. — Staff photo

An on-the-farm weather station which monitors air temperature, relative humidity, rainfall, soil temperature, solar radiation and wind speed?

Could that lie in the future within the next 10 years?

No! C-Agri (Comprehensive Agri Services in Lockney) installed the abovementioned automated weather station on the Eddie Teeter farm, six miles south of town, on Thursday.

The field unit is programmed to relay information directly to the "main computer" in the C-Agri offices in Lockney "for the purpose of computer printouts, which are sent directly to subscribers of the soil and water fertility program and also to aid in utilization of a cotton crop model for cotton and also artificial intelligence that deals with all types of weather scenarios dealing with the production of cotton."

SITE CHOSEN

The unit, which was assembled by David Workman at the local facilities before being placed on the Teeter farm, "provides hourly readings," which are transmitted to the firm's main computer. Data is retained on permanent file.

The nearest such automated weather station was installed last Wednesday at the Texas Tech University research station at Brownfield. A weather station has operated there four years, but highly automated equipment was not available until last week.

Betty Hayes, who is employed in the C-Agri office, points to the "time-saving" advantages of the field weather station.

Last year, she and other C-Agri, personnel daily phoned the U.S. Weather Bureau in Lubbock and secured "Plainview area" weather data. The information then was manually fed into the computer.

Not only does the new innovation feed data directly into the computer and saves employee hours, it affords weather data from this immediate area. South Plains weather observers appreciate the variability of conditions within small areas.

60 YEAR RECORDS

The C-Agri cotton crop model computer has stored in its memory bank South Plains weather records spanning a 60-year period. This storage capability enables C-Agri personnel to "find every weather scenario and crop response" during the 60-year period.

They believe such data is invaluable to farmer clients.

The automated weather station, designed to be "an aid to Comprehensive Agri Service," is seen as a tool "to allow us to better monitor weather conditions for making recommendations for C-Agri's soil and water fertility customers."

In fact, the new equipment relates directly to C-Agri's purpose and plans.

"What we are trying to do is develop a management system that will maintain the development of the cotton plant in balance with the thermal environment," explains Dr. Dan Krieg, crop physiologist with the Plant and Soil Science Department at Texas Tech University and a consultant to C-Agri.

"If you know what controls yield and you know when the plant is developing its yield potential, then you can do something about making sure that it is not suffering any kind of stress at that point."

"What we have seen in recent years is that people are not cutting back on their irrigation water as much as they are cutting back on other things, such as their fertility in the neighborhood of 80 to 100 pounds of nitrogen available in the top two feet of the soil, and you need about 30 to 35 pounds of phosphate available in the soil. To get the second bale, you need only an additional 50 pounds of nitrogen, because you don't have to build much more leaf area or any more stalk."

"The soils around here don't have that much nitrogen and phosphorus in them anymore, and most people have cut costs by cutting their fertility program, which may help explain the trend toward declining cotton yields in the past several years."

IMPROVED MANAGEMENT

To reverse the trend, Krieg is working with a fertility/water management computer program to keep water, nitrogen, phosphorus and heat units in balance to enhance cotton production.

"We can't do anything about the number of heat units available, but we can control the other three. By matching the controllable inputs to the duration of the growing season and making some management decisions during the growing season based upon what we expect to happen in terms of heat units, we can increase cotton production."

Basically, with the assistance of C-Agri — headed by Ricky Kellison — growers are becoming increasingly aware of and using data on the number of heat units that are being accumulate on a day-to-day basis.

Heat unit accumulation is calculated from the daily minimum and maximum temperatures. Daily water use is calculated as a function of the evaporative demand, based on climatic data and the stage of crop development. The water-holding capacity of the soil and how much water the plant can extract out of the soil were measured.

"Then, by using this data in a computer program, we are able to calculate the future water-used rate of the crop and predict when irrigation should be scheduled."

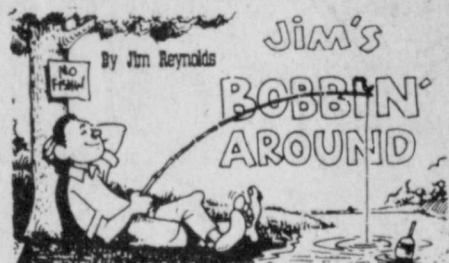

DATA ACCURACY

On-the-farm weather reading, made available by the new weather station, can enhance data fed into the computer.

C-Agri officials point out that the cotton crop model computer system has the capability — well in advance — of pinpointing the maturity of cotton bolls in a given field and establishing an optimum defoliation date.

Obviously, the more accurate weather data available for the computer, the more reliable will be projections it affords producers.

The computer age is arriving in agriculture...complete with an accompanying on-the-farm weather station!

PAYING US BACK

On one of our "pretty days" last week, a fellow observed that the weatherman was just "paying us back" and "making it right" for that exceptionally windy Monday-Tuesday, April 13-14.

After a two-inch rain, (we hope), the weatherman could do still more "paying us back" as far as we're concerned.

SQUEEZING THE LEMON

The circus came to town and the crowd gathered to "see the sights." A main attraction was the circus strongman squeezing a lemon until every drop apparently was drained.

Then the circus barker announced that a crisp, new $100 bill awaited any man who could persuade a single drop of juice from the drained lemon.

A slightly, built, older man stepped forward. The crowd chuckled at the thought that he could even consider winning the $100.

But as he began to wring the lemon, a drop, then two, and finally six drops emerged.

The circus barker was astonished as the feat he considered impossible. "How in the world could you squeeze juice from that lemon after our strongman had worked on it?" questioned the barker.

The fellow explained that he was experienced at this sort of thing. "I'm the finance chairman at the local Baptist Church," he explained.

DIFFERENT CUSTOMS

Two youngsters — one protestant and the other Catholic — attended Sunday morning services together on consecutive Sundays.

As the protestant lad sat through mass with his friend, he asked questions about the reason behind the priest's various actions.

The following Sunday, his friend wondered aloud about the pastor's actions.

Finally, the preacher was about ready to deliver his sermon and placed his watch at a vantage point atop the pulpit.

"What does that mean?" the Catholic youngster asked of his friend.

"Absolutely nothing," the friend replied.

Senior Citizens schedule sale Thursday and Friday

"We've already got a good variety of clothing and 'what-nots,'" a spokesperson for Lockney Senior Citizens says as the organization prepares for a "giant garage sale" today (Thursday) and Friday at the Senior Citizen Center, 118 West College.

The center is one-half block off Main Street and across the street north of White's Auto.

A variety of items are expected to begin arriving this morning for the April 30-May 1 garage sale, which is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days.

BRISKET MEAL

Senior Citizens served a barbecue brisket meal last Thursday at the Community Center. While "we had plenty of meat, beans and cobbles," the crowd "cleaned out" the other foods, according to reporter Myrt Hill.

A bake sale will be held Friday, May

Cholesterol Screening Clinic set Friday

A Cholesterol Screening Clinic will be held Friday, May 1 at Lockney Lodge Building, (south of the hospital). It will be held from 9:00 a.m. until 12:00 noon.

Jan Hamilton of Plainview, a member of the American Dietetic Association, will be present during the clinic to provide information on serum fatty acid levels and associated coronary heart disease. She is currently involved in research regarding diets and serum cholesterol levels.

The clinic will provide people of the community an opportunity to specifically know their serum cholesterol level. Cholesterol is one indicator of the fatty acid levels in the blood. Increased levels have been associated with increased risk in heart disease.

People who wish to have the test are reminded that they should be fasting prior to testing. There will be a $10.00 charge for the test to cover the associated cost. Abbott Laboratories will be providing the reagents and instrumentation necessary for the cholesterol determinations.

Representatives from Lockney General Hospital will also be on hand to provide free blood pressure screening as a service to the community.

Hamilton also will be at Rotary to give the program on blood cholesterol on the same day.

South African speaks to Rotary

Merlin Bennett of Plainview introduced Winston Wertlen, from New London, South Africa, to the Lockney Rotary Club Friday, April 24. Winston is a foreign exchange student living and going to school in Plainview.

His parents defected from Czechoslovakia in 1968 and moved to Vienna, where he was born. They settled in South Africa because they felt it was the land of opportunity. Winston has two brothers and a sister. He speaks four languages, English, German, Afrikanse and Slovak, which is the language he speaks at home.

He attended a German school which was set up for children whose parents work in a German car manufacturing plant. He said that the discipline in the school is greater than it is here.

"South Africans play lots of sports and are not so carried away with winning," said Mr. Wertlen. "They play more for fun. They enjoy hockey, tennis, cricket, shooting and pedal skiing (a form of surfing)." Winston's favorite hobby is chess and he said his second choice was, "Procrastination."

He said that his country's problems were too complex to sort out in a short time. "The sanctions set up by the United States were viewed with dislike by the South Africans. In many cases when the American companies pulled out, South African countries took their place. The people are very careful about their jobs. There is no welfare and if a job is lost another is hard to find," said Wertlen.

Winston commented that, "If people communicate properly solutions can be found."

Asked what he thought of Texas he replied, "Flat..." He is learning "Texanese" and baseball and has enjoyed his stay here. He finds the people very friendly.

Burglars strike at three Lockney area residences

An heirloom .32-calibre pistol, "probably 100 years old," was among items taken during a daylight burglary last Wednesday of the G.B. Johnston residence, eight miles north of Lockney.

The burglar(s) broke a window pane from the back door to gain access to the house. In addition to the pistol, which had belonged to Johnston's father, they took a microwave and "assorted jewelry," according to the Sheriff's Department.

No loss estimate has been established.

The Johnstons say the burglary occurred between 8:10 and 10:05 a.m.

PROVIDENCE BURGLARY

Weldon Graves observed a vehicle at the Johnny B. Griffin home, about a mile northwest of the Johnston residence, last week. His presence caused the vehicle's occupants to depart rapidly.

Independent rabbit show slated in Lockney May 1

Lockney Community Center will be the site on Saturday, May 9, for the county's first independent rabbit show sponsored by Floyd County Rabbit Breeders Association. Four judges have been enlisted.

A rabbit show was conducted by the organization at last year's county fair. Frankie Armstrong, a spokesperson for the sponsoring organization, says the event is scheduled from 8 a.m. until Joe Zorger called the meeting to order. Jerry Cooper led the Pledge of Allegiance and R.C. Mitchell gave the invocation.

R.C. Mitchell gave a report on the Rotary Park at Lake Mackenzie. The Tulsa and Lockney Clubs started a program to furnish playground equipment in certain areas. A luncheon will be held in May for Tulsa and Lockney Rotarians.

Dan Smith discussed a goal for the Polio Plus program, and it was decided to set the goal at three thousand dollars.

The Sheriff's Department continues to request that the public be "observant." Alert action by the public can be highly beneficial to lawmen.

Writing down license plate numbers of suspicious vehicles and immediately contacting officers about suspicious activities is appreciated.

On more than one occasion recently, observant motorists have aided officers in investigations within this community.

PROVIDENCE BURGLARY

The Steven Hayes residence, one-fourth mile west of the Providence intersection, was burglarized "between 12 noon and 11:45 p.m." on Easter Sunday.

The yeggs used the same method of operations as in the Johnston burglary: breaking a glass from the back door.

Approximately $1,850 in property was taken, including a VCR, a 19-inch color TV and four stereo speakers.

"5 or 6 o'clock."

"Anyone" is eligible to submit entries. Registration fee is $1.50 per animal or $1.25 per head for exhibitors entering 25 or more rabbits.

Fifteen rabbit breeds are sanctioned for judging nationally with four classes per breed, although the number of entries in the local show is unknown at this time.

LOONEY LAWS

If you're driving down the streets of Hamlin and your feet get hot, don't stick them out the window to cool them off. If you do, you will be breaking a city ordinance.

This among several other "Loony Laws" were featured in this month's issue of Texas Highways. Robert W. Pelton is the author of the article which was taken from a book by the same name.

Here are some additional "Loony Laws" which may or may not be in force today.

No woman is allowed to drive a car while "wearing a floppy hat" or other headgear that would "scare a timid person" in the city of Graham.

Lamesa law makes it illegal for a husband to beat his wife if she kept him from going to work by filling the car's gas tank with water.

Dalhart retains an old law that makes it illegal for a woman to operate an automobile while attired in a night gown. Similarly, in Wharton no female can operate a car while she's wearing a bathing suit.

In Del Rio you really needn't worry about being caught in an embarrassing situation while being amorous in a parked car. No person, including a law officer, is allowed to walk up and peek in the window without loudly honking three times.

The community of Guthrie make it taboo for a man to hold hands with a girl while driving down the street—but only if she is riding in another car. —Rick Craig, Hamlin Herald

JUST A SHAVE

"I just want a shave," said the guy to his barber. "I just don't have time to listen to a haircut."

NO MOUSTACHE

"Does your boyfriend have a moustache?" asked the girl.

"I don't think so," replied her friend. "If he does, he keeps it shaved off."

TALKED TO WRONG PEOPLE

If nobody knows the trouble you've seen, you are probably talking to the wrong people.

MAKES YOU MAD

A little five-year-old girl was showing her classmate the bathroom scales.

"What is it?" asked the other girl. "I don't know," she said, "All I know is you stand on it and it makes you very mad!"

Care Center Capers

by Lanita Cantwell

Many of you have already heard that there is a new activity director at Lockney Care Center. I have been working since April 6, but have been very busy learning and have not had an opportunity to properly introduce myself. My name is Lanita Cantwell. My husband, Elton, and I live on a farm southwest of Silverton. He is a native of Briscoe County, and I am a transplant of Austin. However, I now feel like a native, since I have been here almost 34 years. During the years of my marriage I have been a full-time homemaker and mother, in addition to being a farmer's wife. Our four children are now grown and have homes of their own. They have also given us four lovely grandchildren. We are members of the Church of Christ and have been active members of the Rock Creek congregation for many years.

In addition to my husband, my family and my church, I have spent time in leading 4-H groups and in Extension Homemaker Club work. I am not an expert in the field, but I have a lot of hobbies and interests. I hope these will be beneficial to my performing my job as activity director successfully. This is a brand new experience for me, and I welcome help and suggestions from the community.

The residents at the care center have been helping to get prepared for the busy month of May. Several ladies kept the scissors and glue busy making decorations for our doors and bulletin board. We plan to have everything bloomin' by Friday. When we aren't working we find time for lively exercise sessions, Bingo games and bus rides. Come by and join us sometime. We want to thank Neta Hollums for bringing us the lovely bouquet of lilacs last week. They were so pretty and smelled oh so sweet.

Vegetable marketing key to success

The key to success for the vegetable producer isn't production, it's marketing, speakers at the annual West Texas Vegetable Conference in Hereford stressed.

"We have to grow what we can sell, rather than try to sell everything we grow," said Gordon Powell, economist and fruit and vegetable marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Analyzing market windows, the periods in which a crop can be produced and sold for a profit, can help the grower determine which crops to produce and assess the financial risks involved, advised a team of agricultural economists from Texas Tech University.

Progress in development of a marketing order for potatoes produced in 23 West Texas counties and 10 in eastern New Mexico was reported by Bill Weeks, executive vice president of the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Growers Assn., and Jim Wendland, Agricultural Marketing Service-USA, McAllen.

The smart producer will actively assist the persons marketing his vegetables, Powell said. He said this includes exploring new markets, making personal contacts, keeping in touch with buyers, providing produce which exceeds USDA quality standards, assuring proper handling and timely delivery, and advertising and promoting the commodity.

"Once you've sold it, you still should have an interest in it once it gets to the store," he said.

Wendland, officer in charge of the AMS marketing field office at McAllen, said any final proposal would have to be accepted by the Secretary of Agriculture under formal proceedings and be favored by two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum. He noted there are 48 other marketing orders in the U.S. which cover 36 commodities in 37 states; the first was established in 1937.

Developing new markets while retaining existing outlets is another skill producers must develop, said Dr. H.L. Goodwin, assistant professor of agricultural economist at Texas A&M University.

Other speakers discussed new varieties suitable to the Texas High and Rolling Plains, research efforts, irrigation and fertilization requirements, disease and insect control, and storage of vegetables.

Projecting his outlook for vegetables this season, Powell said the total supply and the overall price should be up. But he cautioned that the overall price increase will be because some commodities will be higher, while others will decline from last year's levels.

One of the big increases this year, in both demand and price, will be "exotic" vegetables popular in Asian cul-

Friends support vo-ag program

Vocational agriculture has faced and is continuing to face many rough and rocky times. With the implementation of House Bill 72, new rules and regulations, and the governor proposing 50 percent budget cuts to vocational education, "vocational agriculture needs all the friends and support it can get."

Friends of Vocational Agriculture/FFA was designed with that purpose in mind.

"Friends was specifically organized to support the vocational agriculture program and its activities," said James Roden, president of Friends of Vocational Agriculture/FFA.

Friends is an organization directing its goals and objectives to enhancing the promotional, educational and research activities of the vocational agriculture program in Texas.

After learning of the organized efforts to de-emphasize the vocational agriculture program in 1984, and the detrimental changes proposed in the educational reforms, Friends organized in 1985 to present a united front to support agricultural education.

Friends works closely with the director of Agricultural Education, Jay Eudy, and the Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association of Texas, to serve as a support group to aid the vocational agriculture program.

Friends, operated by a 50-member board of directors and a team of officers, represents a widely diverse segment of the agricultural industry, including agricultural educational and agribusiness. Friends' board of directors and officers includes representation of agricultural commodity groups, related trade associations, Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association of Texas, former vocational agriculture teachers, past state FFA officers and FFA alumni.

Since the organization of Friends in 1985, many positive actions and steps have been made by the non-profit corporation. The goals of Friends may not have been totally reached at this time, but through continued efforts, Friends can and will succeed, said Roden.

Working with generous contributions from agricultural education supporters from around the state, Friends has coordinated activities not only for new legislation concerning the vocational agriculture program, but also to improve the overall image of agricultural education.

Friends was also instrumental in coordinating the activities of other support groups of vocational agriculture to help continue and improve the program.

"One of Friends' main objectives is to establish local Friends organizations in communities around the state," said Roden. "Through these local groups, we expect to develop the grass-roots support necessary to achieve our goals of keeping and improving agricultural education."

For more information concerning Friends of Vocational Agriculture/FFA, contact Public Relations Director Cara Jernigan, at P.O. Box 1695, Denton, Texas 76202, (817) 387-8010.

El Progreso Club hears Copeland review book

The El Progreso Study Club met in the home of Faye Ferguson with the theme "Friendship and Love Blossom When Shared" for friendship day. After refreshments were served from a lovely table, each member introduced her guest as roll call.

After a short business meeting presided over by president Mary Blanchard, Arla Copeland was introduced to give a book review. The book, "Wind-swept" by Mary Ellen Chase is a delightful book about a family who had immigrated from Europe to a huge track of land in Maine out on the windswept shores of the ocean - of their joys and sorrows and how this barren land influenced their lives.

The next meeting will be May 6, 1987 in the home of Alice Mitchell with a luncheon.

Guests present were Marie Henderson, Eva Whitfill, who was a charter member; Lucille Frizzell, Ruth Mitchell, Ann Handley, Barbara Mathis, Gayle Hamilton from Australia, Virginia Byrd, and Mary Ansley.

Members present were Fay Ferguson, Pauline Sams, Dimon Schacht, LaVerna Sams, Kathleen Thornton, Mary Blanchard, Bobby Kellison, Cornelia Johnson, Arla Copeland, Merle Mooney, Edith Clark, Hazel Johnson and Kathrine Ball.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Every summer, over 300 young people between the ages of six and eighteen attend a very exclusive camp near Gainesville. The entrance requirements are strict: the child must have diabetes.

Camp Sweeney is a place for the diabetic to learn while having fun. All the activities of a regular summer camp are offered. Sandwiched between the fun things are interesting sessions on medical and dietary information to help the campers take care of themselves and learn to live productive lives with their affliction under control. Diets are formulated to each individual's needs.

Located on the rolling wooded acreage, 10 miles northeast of Gainesville, the site is bordered on the south by a 34 acre lake. Three, three-week sessions are held every summer, with the opening session scheduled for June 7. Others begin June 28 and July 19. A medical staff and experienced counselors are always present and keep a close eye on the campers.

The camp is a United Way agency and scholarships are available for any child whose family is unable to pay the full tuition. For additional information and application forms write to Camp Sweeney, Southwestern Diabetic Foundation, Inc., P.O. Box 918; 101 S. Culberson; Gainesville, Texas 76240, or call 817-665-9502.

Thank you for your attention,
Betty Stephenson
P.R. Director, Southwestern Diabetic Foundation

Loans available for Texas

Authority is available to guarantee loans for Texas rural residents for use in creating new business or expanding existing enterprises, J. Lynn Futch, FmHA state director, says.

"Although the Farmers Home Administration guarantees a loan made by a commercial lender, we are interested in the economic health of our rural communities and welcome inquiries about this program," Futch says. "Our business and industry program was created primarily to provide jobs in rural communities and towns up to 50,000 in population."

"There may be many people in rural areas of Texas who are not familiar with the opportunities available under the B&I program, especially the fact that we can guarantee loans for a variety of sizes of business, including family-size enterprises," he adds.

"We are especially interested in anything we can do to help improve job opportunities for farmers who are trying to find new occupations."

Futch said information about the program can be obtained from the FmHA office located at 107 W. California, telephone number 806-983-2430.

Reduction of sweets urged

Parents who are worried about their small children eating too much sugar should also be concerned about their intake of the sugar-substitute aspartame.

"Many mothers are giving aspartame-sweetened drinks to small children to cut down on sugar," says Mary Kinney Sweeten, a nutritionist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

According to the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), 23 milligrams of aspartame per pound per day is an acceptable daily intake for both children and adults.

Sweeten says this amounts to 920 milligrams for a 40 pound child. Five 8-ounce glasses of powdered aspartame-sweetened drink mixes in one day would contain that amount of the sweetener.

"As families eat more diet foods and aspartame is added to more products, it's possible that the amount consumed by some children could exceed an acceptable daily intake of the sweetener," cautions the nutritionist.

Aspartame is sold under the brand names Equal and Nutrasweet and is used in gelatin and pudding mixes, dry cereals, instant coffees and teas, dairy toppings for dining table use, desserts, dessert toppings, powdered beverage mixes and chewing gum, in addition to carbonated beverages.

Last year the FDA approved the use of aspartame in four new food categories — frozen novelties, frozen and refrigerated juices, ready-to-serve tea and breath mints, she says. Other categories still awaiting FDA approval include bulk frozen desserts, frozen cheesecake, yogurt, flavored milk, wine coolers, fruit spreads and syrups.

"Parents who are concerned about their children getting too much aspartame can still help them avoid excessive sugar," Sweeten maintains.

"Try substituting nutritious drinks, such as fruit juice, milk and even water," she suggests. "Rather than aspartame-sweetened breakfast cereals or desserts, try low-sugar varieties of both. In home-prepared recipes, cut down on the amount of sugar used."

Aspartame was approved by the Food and Drug Administration in 1981 after reports of extensive studies established its safety. The FDA says it has received few complaints about any adverse effects of aspartame in children, she notes.

South Plains News

Monday, April 27:

Beautiful, perfect weather has been with us all week-end. The farmers are beginning to need rain for the crops they are wanting to plant, after the ground is made ready.

Funeral services for John L. Hooten, 53, were held this Monday at 2 p.m. at the Third Street Church of Christ in Lockney, with Frank Duckworth, minister, officiating. He was a salesman for Davis Lumber Company in Lockney for many years. Mr. Hooten had been ill for a long time, and passed away at his home here in Lockney.

We had good exercise this Monday morning and this afternoon we will have a splendid ride in our new bus. It is always filled. You have to hurry to get on and get a seat.

Visitors here Sunday afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. Terry Julian and Dickie Julian of Sweetwater, and Mr. and Mrs. Kendis Julian of South Plains, who visited the boy's mother, Mrs. B. Julian at the Lockney Rest Home.

Rev. M.G. Baumgarten pastor at Silverton, Texas came to Lockney Rest Home Sunday afternoon to hold services here.

Mrs. Letha Mulder visited here at the Lockney Rest Home Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Bonnie Julian. She lives in Floydada.

May 5 is when the Vacation Bible School will begin for children here.

Here at the home we have been happy to have all our men and women well and they are happy with many new things in the kitchen such as dishes, silverware and cookware.

In times like these... By Mary Jo Fielding

Fortress Wadi Doum was all impregnable — or so Muammar Kaddafi must have thought. The Libyan air base in northern Chad boasted land mines, radar, Soviet-built tanks, SAM missiles and 4,000 troops. Yet in less than two hours the early part of this month, Chadian forces overran the stronghold, killing or capturing more than 1600 Libyans and scattering the rest. Chad's recapture of the garrison Faya-Largean meant the virtual end to Kaddafi's three-year occupation of northern Chad — a humiliation that could soon haunt him in Libya.

It was the latest in a string of defeats that began after Kaddafi's Chadian ally, rebel leader Goukouni Queddes broke with Libya last autumn. Goukouni's men joined forces with Chadian President Hissene Habre. Reinforced by French and American aid the Chadians captured the northeastern oasis at Fada in January, then marched for Wadi Doum. Their success bolstered France's credibility as a protector of its former African colonies. And it gave a rare lift to the Reagan administration, which had recently rushed $15 million worth of material to Chad — "the best $15 million we ever spent," said a U.S. official.

Providing child care in homes

People who enjoy children and would like to earn additional income, may be interested in starting a business by providing child care in their homes.

Setting up a group day care home provides an opportunity to do both. To begin a group day care home business requires a minimal amount of expense. This type of business, in your home, reduces the expenses of maintaining a separate building and hiring additional staff.

Group day care homes provide care for 7 to 12 children for less than 24 hours a day and are required by law to be licensed.

Individuals who want additional information regarding group day care homes may contact Texas Department of Human Services, Day Care Licensing, at 806/747-9500 or write Day Care Licensing, P.O. Box 10528, Lubbock, Texas 79408.

I'm Sure He Is Alive Because...

By J.C. Bailey

How much difference would it make if more people really believed in the resurrection of Jesus Christ? The apostle Paul answered the question by showing how much difference it would make if Christians didn't believe in the resurrection. He isolated one cause for discouragement and doubt when he asked in 1 Corinthians 15:12b, "...how can some of you say that there is no resurrection of the dead?"

- The following are some of the consequences if Christ is not raised:
1. Apostolic preaching and every Christian's faith is useless (15:14,17).
 2. The Apostles were false witnesses (15:15).
 3. Everyone is still in sin (condemned) (15:17).
 4. Those who have preceded us in death are lost (15:18).
 5. Christians are to be pitied more than all men (15:19).
 6. The authority and meaning for baptism is lost (1 Peter 3:21; 1 Corinthians 15:29).
 7. The Apostles and other Christians needlessly risked their lives (15:30-32).
 8. There is little incentive to restrain one from sinning (15:34).

These references clearly show that a belief in Christ's resurrection is essential to Christian living.

The following are some reasons we can be certain that Christ is alive today:

1. The holy scripture says so (15:14).
2. Eyewitnesses (over 500) testified (15:5-8).
3. Jesus' enemies paid to cover up the truth (Matthew 28:11-15).
4. The obvious conviction of the Apostles and other Christians (Acts 23:6).
5. The doctrine of the resurrection is a reasonable solution to the predicament of physical death and condemnation:
 - a. Since sin and death entered the world through Adam (Romans 5:12) it is reasonable that life again would enter by Christ (1 Corinthians 15:21).
 - b. Since all died in Adam then all can be made alive in Christ (15:22).
 - c. The resurrection is the victory over the last enemy, death (15:23-28).
6. The principle of the resurrection is already firmly established in nature (15:35-37). The life cycle of wheat proves the principle. Life is found in the seed form, which then transforms to the plant form, but in the process the seed experiences death. So every human will live, will then die, and then will live again in the resurrected life form. The only exception will be those that are alive when Christ comes (15:51) who will not die, but will be changed. Therefore death is a temporary experience between two life forms.
7. The possibilities for different life forms are also established in nature (15:38-39). Since life already exists in different fleshly forms (human, animals, fish, and birds) what is difficult about believing that we can exist in a different life form beyond death?

8. Each kind of body (biological or otherwise) is unique (15:40-41). The sun, moon, stars, and all biological bodies have their own special features. So we'll not be disappointed with our resurrected bodies. They'll be perfectly suited for our next dwelling.
9. Death actually has only the appearance of being the end of life (15:42-44). "If there's a natural body, there is also a spiritual body."

So, is Christ really alive today? Will we be raised some day? Reasonable and abundant evidence from the scriptures confirm his resurrection. Even nature itself declared the possibility of the resurrection.

"Amazing Grace" presented by First United Methodist Church

Friday, April 17, the "His Kids" choir presented "Amazing Grace," an Easter program with songs and skits with the children showing ways of God's grace.

The children that participated were: Missy Anderson as Grace, Jennifer Anderson, Amy Anderson, Coye Robbins, Joyce Robbins, Kori Kellison, Corbin Kellison, Kristin Kellison, Aubrey Kirk, Becca Kirk, T.J. Allen, Krystal Allen, Tim Mitchell, Tyson Evans, Jason Perales and Jennifer Collins.

The program was directed by: Eleanor Schacht, Ann Anderson and Kathy Allen. The program was presented with the help of Robbie Latimer and others who gave memorials in the name of Royce Latimer.

This memorial fund purchased the church a sound system that enabled the group to present this program and future programs.

The program will be presented again on May 17 for morning worship services.

Employers must comply with new immigration laws

Provisions of the nation's new immigration control law take effect June 1. They will affect all employers, including farm employers, regardless of the number of people they hire or the seasonality of the work.

"Few people realize the scope of the new law," notes C.H. Fields, an American Farm Bureau Federation assistant director of national affairs. "Anyone who hires a worker, regardless of whether the person is assumed to be a naturalized citizen, must verify that the person is eligible for employment. The verification involves checking the proper forms of identification and maintaining a record of that verification."

Both employers and employees will have to fill out a form, known as an I-9, that verifies the worker has a right to be employed in the U.S. The employer will have to keep the I-9 on file for three years, or for one year beyond the worker's last day of employment, whichever is later.

The importance of record-keeping cannot be overstated since it's proof that an employer did not "knowingly" hire an illegal alien—the employee has to attest he can legally work in this country. After all, the major thrust of the new law is to prevent employers from "knowingly" hiring illegals. Fields says it's "unlikely" that an employer who keeps an I-9 on file would be charged with violating the immigration law.

There will be an 18-month grace period before the INS enforces sanctions against agricultural employers. However, those who are found to repeatedly hire illegals during that period could receive fines. Search warrants will be required before INS agents are allowed to enter private farm property. Undocumented workers who can prove they have been in the U.S. before Jan. 1, 1982.

It also contains a legalization path for agricultural workers. Undocumented workers who have worked here harvesting perishable crops can become legal under special provisions. Aliens may apply for the Seasonal Agricultural Worker Program (SAW) if they can prove they have been employed in U.S. perishable agriculture for at least 90 days during each of the three years ending on May 1, 1984, 1985 and 1986, and have maintained residency in the U.S. for six months in each of those years. The first 350,000 eligible workers who apply can become permanent residents after one year.

Other workers who have worked 90 days, between May 1, 1985, and May 1, 1986, but not 90 days for the three years, are also eligible for legalization under a temporary worker status. They can become permanent residents at a later date. There are other provisions in the law to authorize additional aliens to work in perishable agriculture if a shortage of Special Agriculture Workers

While those are some of the general provisions of the new law, the specifics are still being hammered out. The final regulations will be issued June 1. Still to be determined are such things as how aliens go about the legalization process; whether both labor contractors and farmers have to verify workers; and whether employers have the right to refuse to hire individuals referred by state employment offices that do not document the status of their referrals.

In general, the INS' proposed regulations met with the approval of Farm Bureau. However, many of the proposed rules could pose problems for both aliens seeking legal status and employers who want to make use of the new law's special agricultural provisions.

For example, the INS has proposed requiring aliens eligible for the SAW program who have entered the country since last Nov. 6 to return to their homes and apply for the program from there. However, they also would be prevented from coming to the U.S. to obtain the documentation they need about their work history.

In addition to making it difficult for such agricultural workers to become legal, the rules would have the effect of keeping out aliens who traditionally come here to work in agriculture during the time they are needed this year, said Farm Bureau and other agricultural groups in comments to the INS.

The farm groups also said the form that potential agricultural workers must fill out is "unfair and ambiguous" and "will ultimately discourage aliens who wish to apply" for the special program.

The groups also urged INS to prevent non-immigrant temporary foreign workers who come in under the H-2A program from applying for the SAW program while they are in the U.S. Non-immigrants such as temporary workers declare their intention to return to their homes, the groups noted, while temporary residents, such as the special workers, intend to stay here. H-2A workers who change their status would violate their visas and leave the employers who contracted for them unable to meet their labor needs.

"There is a lot of work to be done to implement the new program and some problems can be expected," says Fields.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service will establish an estimated 90 field offices for aliens to apply for legalization. In addition, non-profit organizations and individuals, including some state and county Farm Bureaus, will serve as "qualified designated entities" to aid in the documentation process.

The application period for amnesty begins on May 5. The application for seasonal agricultural workers begins on June 1. Those workers planning to apply for legalization should carry affidavits signed by their employers indicating past employment. —Farm Bureau News

1986 and 1987 LOAN PROGRAMS, AMERICAN UPLAND COTTON

The schedule of loan program premiums and discounts released April 15 for 1987-crop cotton are a mixed bag, say officials of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock.

Compared to the 1986 program there are both increases and decreases among the discounts that will apply to almost all High Plains cotton this fall, notes PCG Executive Vice President Donald Johnson, "but it appears the preponderance of High Plains qualities will be discounted a little less than last year."

PCG's analysis shows discounts from 5 to 45 points lower than last year in all staples graded Strict Low Middling Light Spot (42) and Low Middling Light Spot (52). "And for the past 10 years those two grades on average have accounted for almost 54 percent of the cotton classed at Lubbock," Johnson adds.

Slight improvement is seen also in low micronaire penalties, with a decrease in all groups except short staple 2.6 and below and 3.3 through 3.4, Johnson points out.

Location differentials specifying the base loan rate for each approved U.S. warehouse will be issued later, USDA announced. The chart below shows a comparison of premiums and discounts for the 1986 and 1987 loan programs.

4-H helps with life skills

Results of a nationwide study reveal that 4-H, the "learning-by-doing" program for youth between the ages of 9 and 19, has made a positive impact on the life skills needed by adults to become self-directing and productive members of society. Conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in cooperation with Texas A&M University's Department of Rural Sociology, the study was funded by a grant from the Extension Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture. A total of 1,761 individuals were part of a randomly selected sample of individuals participating in the study.

Beef short course set for Aug. 10-12

Producing beef that is acceptable to the consuming public today and in the future will be the thrust of a Beef Cattle Short Course at Texas A&M University, Aug. 10-12. Theme of the two-day educational activity will be "Beef: Gearing Up for the '90s," notes a meats specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. Short course subjects should be of interest to a broad audience of beef producers, feeders, packers, retailers, health professionals and consumers.

Hogs can be 'mortgage lifters'

With good management, hogs can make money for producers and serve as "mortgage lifters," Charles Sewell of Abilene, a seasoned swine producer, told several hundred swine operators who attended the recent annual Texas Swine Short Course staged in Seguin. It is the responsibility of the grower to produce the type of product the consumer wants, and it goes without saying that producers should raise the best hogs possible, he told the swine producers. Another phase of the short course concerned pork products and their promotion.
