Fire ants and their tell-tale mounds are fairly new to Midland. They and the dangers which they pose are causing some alarm.

Fire ant's 'deadly force' felt here

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The fire ant is more than a nuisance and a bother. It's aggressive and quick to anger, bite and sting, and most importantly, to protect the prolific queen.

It's a potentially deadly force that has invaded West Texas.

"We'd like for the citizens of Midland County to be aware that we have a fire-ant problem," said Earnest Kiker, the Midland County Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) agent. "This is not to cause a panic or a fright. We do have them and will continue to have them."

The fire ant is about the size of the sweet-loving honey ant (step ant) which occasional climbs into pantries for snacking and feasting.

But the fire ant is not so cute.

It was first noticed in Midland last fall and now is spreading its nests about town and country. The ant, which originated in South America, came into the United States by ship in 1930 at Mobile, Ala., and since has spread throughout many of Southern states. They may hitch rides on railroad ties, plants and firewood in moving across the nation.

"There's one member of the colony we want to kill," said Richard "Rick" Minzenmayer, TAEX entomologist. "That's the queen ant."

And to do that, Minzenmayer and Kiker recommend the pouring of diluted solutions of the insecticides Dursban and Orthene onto the mound. "Be sure to read and follow the label," Kiker said.

He cautioned against spraying ant mounds.

"MIX THE SOLUTION in a bucket and pour it on the mound with as little disturbance as possible," Kiker said.

"If you disturb that mound," Minzenmayer explained, "the ants' first reaction is to get the queen and take her deeper in the ground."

"All those ants live for is to take care of that queen," said Kiker.

MISD budget less but rate hike foreseen

By JULIE HILLRICHS

■ Board hears report on test scores; 1986-87 calendar outlined — 1D

Midland school trustees Tuesday tackled a preliminary budget that calls for a $312,000 payroll increase, a $90,000 increase in insurance costs and a $2.1 million loss in local funds. Even cutting the budget by $1.4 million to $58 million didn't come close to resolving the problem.

School officials say they have been successful in preparing a budget that is $57,000 less than last year's and decreases by 9 percent the effective tax rate certified by the Midland Central Appraisal District. However, the board will be forced to consider a recommendation by Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi to increase the actual tax rate four percent — from 76.8 cents to 79.9 cents.

(The actual tax rate can best be referred to by the rate adopted in the preceeding year or 1985. The effective tax rate is that rate that would produce the same amount of revenue in 1986 as the district produced in 1985 taking into consideration all changes in assessed valuation)

That's an increase of only 3.1 cents per $100 valuation, but because the overall taxable value for the school district is down 10.4 percent, some taxpayers will be paying higher taxes than they did in 1985-86 unless their property decreased more than 4 percent.

And the news gets worse, trustees learned. Financial reforms passed by legislators in a 1984 special session will not only affect this year's budget. Additional losses in federal funding and increased requirements by the state will force the district to ask for the 4 percent increase in local taxes to make up the difference, Baressi said.

His recommendation calls for increasing payroll costs by $312,000 or 7 percent. Those increases include the cost of teacher, administrative and other employee salaries, career ladder supplements, medical insurance and workmen's compensation.

It was also recommended that employees be moved ahead one step on the district's salary schedule — an increase that resulted from the staff's attempt to save money in other areas.

Although Baressi said he was not prepared to discuss teacher salary increases, he suggested the board approve cuts in the local contribution to the teacher retirement system for retiree insurance, educational grants, and adjustments in the annual sick leave rebate for retirees.

State funding increased from about $17.8 million last year to an estimated $19.9 million this year. After including other types of revenue, MISD still needs to raise about $35 million in local taxes, Baressi said.

"We have not just cut fat out of this budget. We are lean and mean in some areas," he said.

Petroleum price predictions 'wishful thinking,' PBEC told

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

A Dallas Federal Reserve Bank economist said Tuesday attempting to forecast crude oil prices is, at best, a precarious practice. Still, he believes those who see oil at $18 to $20 a barrel by the end of this year or early 1987 may be coupling their predictions with a fair degree of wishful thinking.

The remarks of Roger Dunstan came prior to his luncheon address to the Permian Basin Economics Club at Mission County Club. Dunstan expects the price of oil to remain in the "teen range," probably around $15 a barrel, for some time.

However, Dunstan mostly confined his remarks to the impact of oil prices on the national and state employment-unemployment growth.

In Texas, he said, "the rig count falls 25 percent for every $5 drop in the price of oil." The impact on employment of a drop of $5 in the price of oil in Texas, Dunstan said, varies from one economist to another. But, it equates to a decrease ranging from 86,000 to 136,000, according to Dallas Federal Reserve estimates. Dr. Thomas Plaut, head of the University of Texas Bureau of Economic Research in Austin estimates the decrease from 68,000 to 145,000. Dr. Ray Perryman, who heads up the Baylor University economic forecasting center, sets the impact at 58,000 to 81,000.

In a report to Federal Reserve officials in Dallas, Dunstan contrasted projected annualized employment growth rates in Texas and the United States with oil at various price levels. The graphs he used confirmed the obvious: The low oil prices that wreak havoc on the Texas economy produce growth in other areas of the country.

With oil at $25 a barrel, Dunstan's graph showed the U.S. employment growth rate at 2.2 percent, with Texas only 2/10ths of one percent behind that. A drop of another $5, to $20 a barrel, shows the U.S employment growing at a rate of 2.6 percent, while the Texas employment growth rate slips to 1.2 percent.

At $15 a barrel, the U.S. employment growth rate climbs to 2.8 percent and the Texas rate declines to only 5/10ths of one percent. A $10 a barrel oil price, according to Dunstan, turns the Texas employment growth rate negative, to a minus 3/10ths of one percent.

Dunstan's graphs also looked at Texas nonfarm employment. Oil at $25 a barrel results in about 7.1 million employed workers. This slips to slightly more than 6.9 million workers with oil at $20 a barrel and to about 6.8 million workers with oil at $15 a barrel. Ten dollar a barrel crude oil drops the number of nonfram employed workers to about 6.7 million.

About mid-1981, as the price of oil began to slip, total oil and gas extraction employment was at an all time high of about 320,000 workers. A price of $25 a barrel reduces this number to about 205,000, a decrease of nearly 36 percent. The price of oil at $20 reduces the number of oil and gas extraction workers to about 162,000, a $15 price brings the total number of workers to 119,000, while a $10 a barrel price drops the total number of oil and gas extraction workers to only 78,000, a decline of nearly 76 percent.

Also about mid-1981, oil field machinery employment was at an all time high of nearly 90,000, according to Dunstan's graphs, which showed the impact with oil at various prices. A $25 a barrel price reduces this total to only 40,000. At $20 the total drops to only 32,000 workers, while a $15 price decreases oil field machinery employment to only 24,000 workers. With oil at $10 a barrel, this work force declines to 16,000, a decrease of about 60 percent.

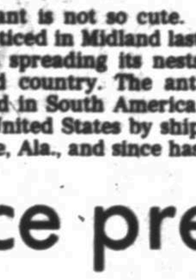
San Marcos man awaits plane bomb sentencing

AUSTIN (AP) — A San Marcos man is awaiting sentencing after pleading guilty to stashing a bomb on a Dallas-bound jetliner that carried his wife and three children.

Albert Lee Thielman entered the guilty plea Tuesday before U.S. District Judge James Nowlin.

Prosecutors said Thielman, who was heavily in debt from gambling, drug use and visits to nude models, stood to receive more than $2 million from life insurance policies on his family.

"We feel we had a strong case. We certainly were prepared to go to trial with it," said FBI agent James R. Echols.



Thielman

Thielman pleaded guilty to a two-count indictiment alleging that he placed a destructive device on an aircraft and caused damage to an aircraft.

Each charge carries a maximum possible sentence of 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

The bomb was hidden in the luggage of Thielman's family. He had accompanied them to the airport and checked their luggage onto the plane, authorities said. His wife, Mary, and children were en route to their grandparents' home in Iowa.

The bomb exploded in the luggage compartment when the plane landed at Dallas, causing minor damage but no injuries to the 154 people aboard.

Thielman, 34, was arrested Dec. 7 in Las Vegas, Nev., a day after he was named in the federal indictment.

Jim DeAtley, assistant U.S. attorney, said Thielman stood to receive $2.6 million from numerous life insurance policies on his wife and children.

In addition, he said, investigation showed that "no person other than Thielman could have placed the bomb into the luggage."

Although the fiery explosion in the cargo compartment occured after landing and caused some damage to nearby luggage and the compartment, DeAtley said, "Had the bomb blown up in flight, the damages and injuries could have been catastrophic."

According to a statement read in court Tuesday, Thielman faced large debts at the time the bomb was placed on the plane.

Mississippi Guard's help sought with goddess

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas National Guard, which couldn't get the job done, has recruited the Mississippi National Guard to try to put the Goddess of Liberty statue atop the Capitol.

The airlift is set for 9 a.m. Saturday, weather permitting.

A Mississippi Guard officer said Tuesday his crew can do the job, no problem.

"We certainly don't look at this as an effort to embarrass Texas. We all wear the same uniform. If we can help, we want to. There won't be any charge. There won't be any ridicule ... oh, we may pick at them a little bit, but nothing serious," said Maj. Milton Stamper, based at Meridian.

The Texas Guard, using a Chinook CH47 helicopter, had no trouble taking the old, weather-beaten statue off the dome last November after it was deemed a potential safety hazard. A 3,000-pound replica was made, but the guard failed in several attempts to take it to the top of the Capitol May 31 and June 1.

The C1147 proved inadequate for the job because the pilot could not see the target.

"Our aircraft is made to deliver cargo or receive it — not to set things down with pinpoint accuracy," said Maj. Gen. James Dennis, Texas adjutant general. "She's got to be threaded down a pole, and the opening in the goddess is only about 12 inches by 9 inches in diameter. So it's got to be a pretty delicate operation."

The Mississippi Army National Guard will use its CH54 — known as a "Sky Crane" — that Stamper said is better suited because it has a suspended line that can be raised and lowered. The Texas aircraft had a fixed line. That meant the pilot had to delicately raise and lower the entire aircraft when minor adjustments were needed.

The CH54 can lift 15,000 pounds, and an auxiliary pilot can see the target as he controls the aircraft.

The Mississippi crew has never put a statue atop a capitol, but Stamper said the helicopter performed well in picking up a stranded Navy airplane in Florida and lowering it onto a small target area on an aircraft carrier in choppy Gulf of Mexico waters.

"The aircraft was designed and built to be real precise," he said, adding that it also provides better visibility for the crew than did the chopper used by the Texans.

One Texas guardsman will be on board with four Mississippi guardsmen when the attempt is made.

Roy Graham, Capitol architect, said, "I still think we can do it with the Chinook, but this is better equipment."

Supreme Court strikes down 5-4 Pennsylvania abortion regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, issuing another ringing reaffirmation of its 1973 decision legalizing abortion, today struck down Pennsylvania regulations that would make abortions more difficult to obtain.

By a 5-4 vote, the court said the Pennsylvania regulations impermissibly interfere with women's constitutional right to end their pregnancies.

The Reagan administration had urged the justices to use the case to overturn their landmark decision legalizing abortion, a bold move even pro-life forces believed had little chance of succeeding.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in 1984 struck down various provisions of Pennsylvania's 1982 abortion control law.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White, William H. Rehnquist and Sandra Day O'Connor dissented.

The court in 1983 strongly reaffirmed its ruling of a decade before as it struck down several state laws and local regulations.

More than 70 persons killed in Sri Lankan bus bombings

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Time bombs today blew up two crowded buses in the eastern provincial capital of Trincomalee, killing more than 70 people, the government's Joint Operations Command said.

A spokesman for the joint command said the buses "were blown to bits." He spoke on condition he not be identified.

One of the buses was headed for Colombo, 160 miles southwest of Trincomalee, and one was headed for Kantalai, about 19 miles south of Trincomalee, when the bombs exploded.

The joint command said more than 70 peor ' were killed, but an official at the the government-owned Ceylon Transport Board, which operated the buses, said the toll could be higher.

The transport official said that most of the victims were likely to be Sinhalese, because of their destinations. He also spoke on condition of anonymity.

There have been a rash of bombings and attacks on Sinhalese in recent weeks, which the government has blamed on militant Tamils who have been fighting for a separate homeland in northern and eastern Sri Lanka.

The Tamils, who are mostly Hindu and make up 18 percent of Sri Lanka's population of 16 million, claim discrimination by the dominant Sinhalese Buddhists.

Trincomalee, the provincial capital of eastern Sri Lanka, is populated by Sinhalese, Tamils and Moslems.

Col. Daya Wijesekera of the joint command said today that Tamil civilians had been among those killed in a clash Tuesday between the army and Tamil guerrillas.

The clash occurred on the island of Mandaitivu off Sri Lanka's northern Jaffna peninsula.

The leading Tamil guerrilla group, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, claimed Tuesday that Sri Lankan navy troops had shot or hacked to death at least 37 Tamil civilians on the island. Another rebel organization, the Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front, put the toll at 40 and said most of the victims were fishermen.

Wijesekera said "terrorists launched the attack on the Mandaitivu island using civilian fishermen as cover, and our troops had no alternative but to repulse the attack, inflicting heavy casualties."

He said that Sri Lankan troops who arrived on the island last month, "did not have the time nor the opportunity to find out who was a fisherman and who was a terrorist."

Shuttle report will become 'map'

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

WASHINGTON — The director of the space shuttle program said today he embraced the Rogers Commission report on the Challenger accident and would use it as a road map to return the shuttle to safe and effective flight.

Admiral Richard Truly, a former astronaut named to head the shuttle program after the Jan. 28 disaster, said many of the recommendations made by the commission Monday already are in the works.

Truly testified before the House Committee on Science and Technology, holding a second day of hearings into the accident that killed seven astronauts.

Lawmakers, whose oversight on NASA has been soft for 25 years, pledged to be tougher on the agency as they seek answers to why the tragedy happened and how the space program can recover.

Truly said he had appointed a 12-person panel, including NASA and industry personnel, to correct the problem with the shuttle's solid fuel booster rocket.

The commission blamed the explosion of the shuttle on a faulty rocket joint and cited management and safety flaws in the space agency.

"The redesign team is currently pursuing several options for redesign of the joint with a tentative date for the preliminary design review this summer," Truly said. "Let me assure you that safety, not schedule, is and will continue to be our primary concern."

He also said the NASA management structure and safety organization were being reviewed.

"I wholeheartedly support the recommendations to reassess and redefine the responsibilities of the shuttle program manager and to assure that he has the specific type of authority suggested in the commission's report," he said.

He said he had appointed astronaut Robert Crippen to head a group "to report to me on the overall management program."

AP Laserphoto

William Rogers, chairman of the Presidential Commission on the Space Shuttle Challenger, and Neil Armstrong, vice chairman, begin hearings on Capitol Hill.

On safety, Truly said, "I pledge to work closely and do what I can to strengthen this most important element of our program."

He also said he is carefully studying commission recommendations concerning improvements in landing safety and maintenance. He also said he is pursuing possible escape modes for astronauts during the critical moments of liftoff and landing.

James C. Fletcher, the new NASA administrator, set July 1987 as the target for resuming shuttle flights.

"We will fly in 1987 if it is safe to do so," Fletcher said., "We will not fly if it's not. The date is not a fixed and inflexible one."

NASA officials were to show the panel a film containing computer-enhanced 70 mm footage of the breakup of the shuttle 73 seconds after it was launched.

Lawmakers said they wanted to ask the NASA officials about the accident and how the space agency plans to respond to the recommendations made Monday by the Rogers commission investigating the accident. Among the commission's recommendations were that NASA redesign the shuttle's solid booster rockets and other shuttle systems and improve agency management and safety.

Commission Chairman William P. Rogers and Vice Chairman Neil Armstrong appeared Tuesday before both the House committee and the Senate Commerce Committee as Congress launched a lengthy series of hearings into the tragedy that killed seven astronauts.

The lawmakers began with criticism of their own past supervision of the agency and promises of a tougher stance in the future.

"Congress has been too shy in finding fault with NASA," said Rep. Robert A. Roe, D-N.J., of the science and technology committee. "As the result of the Challenger accident, Congress and NASA must begin a new era, one in which Congress must apply the same strong oversight to NASA that it does to any other government agency."

Another Democrat, Rep. James Traficant Jr. of Ohio, said, "Everybody should take off the gloves," and get to the bottom of the problems at NASA.

At the Senate hearing, chairman Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said his panel would review whether any of the recommendations by the Rogers commission need to be written into law, but would in any case be "monitoring how promptly and completely NASA is following the commission's recommendations and deciding the propriety of any NASA decisions not to do so."

The Rogers commission report blamed the disaster on a badly designed joint in the shuttle's right booster rocket and faulted the space agency for insufficient safety precautions and bad management.

Rogers said the commission had done its job in pinpointing the cause of the accident and underlining NASA's deficiencies.

"Now it is up to this committee to be watchful," he said. "This committee could be very helpful to make sure there is a reinvigoration of NASA.

Asked if the commission received complete cooperation from NASA in its investigation, Rogers said the only problem was with the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

The Marshall center, which supervised the booster rockets, received considerable commission criticism for the booster design and for its role in approving the launch of Challenger in cold weather.

ANTS

The worker ants, which have an aversion for water, take care of the brood — the eggs and larvae. They will bring the brood, as well as the queen, to the surface to escape rising water. In East Texas, fire ants may build their mounds a few feet above the ground to avoid water and to stay dry.

"They'll bring their brood to the surface," said Minzenmayer, "and that is the only time you can treat them and be effective."

A colony of fire ants may number from 100,000 to 500,000, said Minzenmayer.

Within the colony are the worker ants, who attend the queen, the brood and do housekeeping chores; the drones, whose only function is to mate the queen; supplemental or virgin queen ants, and the primary queen ant.

After rains in April, May and June, the virgin queens will fly from the colony and will be mated by "many" drones. "They do their thing and die," Minzenmayer said. Each newly-mated queen retains the semen, returns to earth, tears off her wings, and starts her own colony, including the hatching of worker ants.

"THE WORKERS will take it from there," said Minzenmayer.

"It may be a year or a year and a half before you'll notice there are fire ants there," he said.

The fire ant, which is a pygmy compared to the larger (quarter-inch) harvester or big red ant which is so common to the Southwest, will run off or kill any intruding harvester ant. In addition to harming lawns and possibly humans, the fire ants pose dangers to agricultural land and crops.

The fire ants are omnivorous and eat most anything to survive.

Their primary diet is other insects, spiders, ground beetles, earth worms, carrion, the honeydew from aphids, fruits and vegetables. The ants are so aggressive that they may swarm over a baby calf which may have lain over a mound and sting it to death. They can invade the calf's respiratory system.

Stings from enough of the fire ants even can kill a small baby, said Minzenmayer.

The fire ant first clamps down on its prey with mandibles and, once firmly planted, inserts its stinger. "Actually," said Minzenmayer, "they'll be getting it from both ends."

Unlike the venom of most insects, the fire ants' venom is alkaloidal — insecticidal, fungicidal, and bacteri cidal active and is low in protein. Venom from most other insects is high in protein. "The body can take care of that better than the venom with the alkaloid."

The fire ants' venom is designed "to immobilize or kill the prey," which becomes foods for the ants, Minzenmayer said.

In the victim, the venom causes intense burning, welts and pustules and may result in nausea, dizziness and possibly shock.

Baby's condition critical following transplantation

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Baby Jesse, the 17-day-old boy initially rejected as a heart transplant candidate, was in critical but stable condition today after receiving the heart of a brain-dead Michigan infant whose parents heard of his plight on television.

Jesse Dean Sepulveda received the heart of Frank Edward Clemenshaw IV, who was born the same day Jesse was, during a four-hour operation late Tuesday at Loma Linda University Medical Center.

Dr. Leonard Bailey, head of the transplant team, said Jesse's blood pressure was good and he was producing adequate quantities of urine. For two weeks, the period in which rejection is most likely, hospital staff will monitor the baby round-the-clock, watching for buildup of toxins in the kidneys and liver — an indication of his body rejecting the transplanted heart, Bailey said.

A spokesman for the boy's family said today on ABC's "Good Morning, America" that the family was "rejoicing in having Jesse have a second chance to life."

"And of course our prayers are still with them and the family is praying that his recovery may be speedy and he'll be strong through that recovery," said lawyer Harry Scolinos, who represents the boy's paternal grandparents.

The grandparents were made Baby Jesse's legal guardians.

MISD

The cuts he suggested were mainly supplies and materials, capital outlay, travel and maintenance repair. He also recommdeded reducing staff — leaving some vacancies unfilled — by 24 positions.

By consolidating some programs, he said, the district can afford to cut 10 teaching positions, a director of special programs, assistant superintendent for administrative services left vacant by Garland Chapman who retired at the end of the school year, coordinator of pupil services, attendance officer, elementary school principal at Pease, an administrative intern, a special education diagnostician and supervisor, bilingual education chairman, Chapter I supervisor, secretary to the assistant superintendent, secretary to coordinators at West, mail clerk at the administration building and a clerk at the material center.

In an effort to further reduce the budget, Baressi also recommended cutbacks in vocational education teaching contracts.

Per pupil expenditures also would be cut despite the anticipated increase of nearly 1,000 students. Instead of allocating $3,336 per pupil, Baressi suggested only $3,160 equaling the 1983-84 cost per average daily attendance.

School officials may call a special public meeting to study the budget and are scheduled to propose a tax rate later this summer. If the district's effective tax rate certified by the Midland Central Appraisal District exceeds 3 percent, public hearings will be called. But as long as the increase is less than 8 percent, MISD will not be subject to a rollback. The budget and tax-rate setting process should be completed by mid-August, Baressi said.

In other action, the board:

- Authorized the district to design a plan that would establish a MISD Foundation to serve as an alternative source of funding.
- Approved on first reading a proposal to offer local merit pay to those district employees not included among the recipients of state career ladder supplements. Given the availability of funds, librarians, counselors/diagnosticians, coordinators/assistant prinicipals, elementary and secondary principals and program directors would receive local merit pay.
- Approved on first reading a proposal to revise the wording of employee contracts.

The overall effect of a $5 drop in oil prices on Texas employment is significant, according to Dunstan. On energy producing industries, it means a loss of 230,000 jobs, while energy consuming industries realize a gain of about 94,000 jobs, which results in a net loss of 136,000 jobs.

A settlement of the war between Iraq and Iran, Dunstan said, would go a long way toward bringing the necessary stability to the Middle East required to encourage stabilization of oil prices, but he doesn't foresee an end to hostilities between the two countries within the next 18 months.

Observing that sales taxes in Texas have traditionally produced about 55 percent of the state's revenue, with severance taxes adding another 23 percent, Dunstan said he would not advise increasing the sales tax because of its regressive nature, though he said consideration might be given to broadening the sales tax base. He observed that Texas might consider a lottery or state income tax as other states have, but he acknowledged that neither of these ideas appeared to have much support.

Texan found shot in hotel room

NEW YORK (AP) — A 27-year-old man was found shot to death today in his room at the famed Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, with a single bullet wound in the back of the head, officials said.

"Hotel security found the body after a friend failed to reached the victim by telephone," said police Officer Vincent Jones. "The phone was off the hook."

There was no sign of forced entry and no gun was found, Jones said. No time of death had been established and no motive was known.

The victim was face down on the floor, dressed in jogging shorts and a sweatshirt, he said.

The victim, who worked for Hotel Development Corp., was apparently in New York on business, Jones said.

The name of the Houston man was withheld pending notification of relatives.

Illegal aliens transported in U.S. mail trucks, officials say

STATE

EL PASO (AP) — Illegal aliens were transported in trucks that carried U.S. mail to Texas and Arizona, according to federal officials who claim they have broken up a 12-year-old smuggling ring.

Ten people were arrested in a week-long sweep by agents of the U.S. Border Patrol here and in Fort Worth, said Jim Selbe, agent in charge of the Border Patrol's anti-smuggling unit in El Paso.

Three others were still at large Tuesday night, officials said.

All 13 were indicted by a federal grand jury in Fort Worth May 27 on "multiple felony violations of federal statutes relating to the transportation and conspiracy to transport aliens illegally into the United States," said a news release Tuesday from the Border Patrol.

The ring started operating in 1974 and has smuggled more than 10,000 illegal aliens from the Caribbean and Central America into the United States, using "safe houses" in Mexico, Texas and Arizona, said Selbe.

The ring has reaped at least $15 million in its 12 years of operation, Selbe said.

"They're not required to keep a set of books, but it averages $1,500 (per alien), a little heavy on some, a little lighter on others," Selbe said. "They've got a good 12 years of good business. They're doing pretty good."

Drivers of two tractor trailers from a private company which contracted with the U.S. Postal Service would load the aliens aboard and take them on regular mail routes to Phoenix, Ariz., or the Dallas-Fort Worth area. The aliens would then board planes destined primarily to New England, Selbe said.

Fidel Pena Gonzalez, 55, of Grand Prairie, Texas; and Jose Flores Olivares, 54, of Kopperl, Texas, the two truck drivers, were arrested and released on bond.

Gonzalez and Flores were employed by the Allen Ritchey Corporation from Valley View, Texas, to drive trucks full of mail between Dallas, El Paso and Phoenix.

Most of the immigrants were from the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Honduras and Belize, officials said.

Aliens would travel in groups from their native countries accompanied by ring members. They would go first to Mexico City and Monterrey, then to Ciudad Juarez, where the ring ran several "safe houses," the Border Patrol said.

From Juarez, on the south bank of the Rio Grande from El Paso, guides would sneak the illegal aliens across the river to another safe house in this border city, where they would be picked up by the mail trucks, the release said.

Investigators hope bodies can be identified

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Investigators are hopeful that autopsies on two burned bodies found in the wreckage of a derailed freight train will provide the identities of the victims.

A Union Pacific Railroad spokesman said all crew members have been accounted for. No one in the area of the accident, which occured about 12:50 p.m. Sunday, has been reported missing, said spokesman John Bromley.

Bromley speculated that the victims may be hobos who were hitching a ride on the train.

The bodies were discovered about 3 p.m. Tuesday as crews worked to douse the still-burning wreckage.

About 700 area residents remained barred from returning to their homes Tuesday night because officials feared further explosions.

Seven tank cars filled with hazardous chemicals were among the 32 railroad cars derailed from the 80-car Union Pacific Railroad train as it crossed a trestle over Salado Creek in San Antonio.

As many as 2,000 people had been evacuated during the ongoing cleanup.

Five of the seven chemical tank cars carried butadiene, used to manufacture synthetic rubber and plastics. Another tanker contained formaldehyde, and the seventh tank car had ethylene glycol, or antifreeze.

One of the tank cars filled with butadiene exploded and a second one caught fire. Two box cars carrying cotton seed and wooden pallets also continued to burn late Tuesday.

Two burned bodies were discovered Tuesday in the still smoldering wreckage of Sunday's train derailment in San Antonio.

As long as the possibility of another explosion exists, people living closest to the train derailment site would not be allowed to go home, Mayor Henry Cisneros said.

The mayor asked people displaced by the explosion "to put up with this for a little while longer" and to keep receipts for hotel rooms and other expenses so that reimbursement claims can be filed with the Union Pacific Railroad.

He said an initial bill of $78,700 for city emergency services had been prepared for Union Pacific, although that figure could rise dramatically depending on the fire's outcome.

Authorities earlier had decided to let the fire burn out, but firefighters began spraying water on the twisted heap of metal Monday night.

Cuts will fall on those least able to cope, report says

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Disabled and elderly people, pregnant mothers and babies will feel the crunch if lawmakers cut funds for health and human services, a report released Tuesday concluded.

Current funding for social services is minimal, reported the Texas Health and Human Services Coordinating Council, an umbrella agency that monitors the state's 17 health and human service departments. And because cuts in some areas, like preventive health care, will cost the state more in the long run, legislators should look elsewhere in balancing the budget, the report said.

But state Rep. Jim Rudd, House Appropriations Committee chairman, said his budget-writing committee will not set aside any sacred cows, including social programs.

"They (health and human services) are probably going to have to take their lumps just like everybody else," Rudd said. His committee, on orders of House Speaker Gib Lewis, will begin looking for places to cut in all agencies' budgets starting next month.

State Sen. Chet Brooks, a council member and Senate Health and Human Resources chairman, said local governments and volunteer groups could make up for some small cuts, "but when it's all said and done, it doesn't add up to much" in savings, said Brooks, a Democrat from Pasadena.

The report said, "It is the consensus of this council that the overall impact of the proposed cuts in direct services would severely affect the poorest Texans who are least able to care for themselves.

"Because the state provides only the most austere array of health and human services, any further reduction in these critical areas would place the individual recipients in jeopardy," the report said.

The council recommends the Legislature find savings in other areas of the budget before cutting social programs. The panel agreed preventive health care spending often results in long-term savings to the state.

Brooks noted the state could spend up to $150,000 for a baby born with birth defects which $1,500 worth of prenatal care could have prevented.

"We're trying to identify essential services, those who have to have them, and protect them," Brooks said. Gov. Mark White and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby also agree that people who rely on state assistance need protection from possible cuts, Brooks said.

Rudd said all agencies should offer areas in their budgets where legislators can cut, and chided the council for not outlining places to trim health and human service expenses. "They've just made it harder on themselves and on us," he said.

Texas made great strides in welfare programs when oil prices were high and state coffers full, Rudd said. "Now we don't have the money, and we have to step back and decide if that's the way we want to go," he said.

The council's report came in response to White's call for state agencies to chop 13 percent from their budgets to ease the state's cash-flow crunch.

Texas' two largest health-related expenses are Medicare, which the state administers with the federal government, and Aid to Families with Dependent Children, with average monthly benefits in Fiscal Year 1985 of $148 a month per family to more than 400,000 recipients.

Texas Housing Agency
Single Family Mortgage Purchase Program
1986 Series A

The Texas Housing Agency (the "Agency") hereby gives notice that it will hold a public hearing on Wednesday, June 25, 1986, at 10:00 a.m., in the Conference Room of the THA, 411 West 13th Street, Suite 700, Austin, Texas 78701, with respect to its proposed issuance of approximately $90,000,000 of qualified mortgage revenue bonds (the "Bonds") to implement the Agency's Single Family Mortgage Purchase Program, 1986 Series A (the "Program"). The Bonds will be issued to refund certain outstanding bonds of the Agency, thereby permitting a portion of the proceeds of such refunded bonds to be used to finance the Agency's purchase of an estimated 1,400 FHA-insured single family residential mortgages made to eligible low- and moderate-income homebuyers throughout Texas.

For purposes of the Program, eligible borrowers will include individuals whose adjusted gross income does not exceed $33,000 and households and families whose aggregate adjusted gross income does not exceed $42,000. In addition, substantially all of the borrowers under the Program will be required to be persons who have not owned a primary residence during the preceding three years. Mortgage loans purchased under the Program will also be subject to certain other limitations, including limits on the acquisition cost of the residence being financed.

All interested persons are invited to attend this public hearing and to express their views on the proposed issuance of the Bonds. Questions or requests for additional information may be directed to Stan Kantrowitz, General Counsel, Texas Housing Agency, P.O. Box 13941, Austin, Texas 78711, telephone number (512) 474-2974 or 1-800-792-1119. Persons who plan to attend the hearing are encouraged, in advance of the hearing, to inform the Agency either in writing or by telephone. Any interested persons unable to attend the hearing may submit their views in writing to the Agency prior to the date scheduled for the hearing.

Barber helps people shed sin as well as hair

CHICAGO (AP) — When the Rev. Lee H. Ivy isn't converting souls in the church pews, he's likely winning them over in his barber chair — and giving haircuts along the way at his Benevolence Barber Shop.

"Benevolent means good will, so that's why I named the barber shop Benevolent — to express my true feelings toward people," said the 63-year-old Ivy, pastor to 225 people at the Free Will Missionary Baptist Church and barber to scores of West Side residents.

Ivy, the father of seven children and grandfather of 18, bought the shop in 1979 from Lennie Reynolds. Reynolds, now 75 and semiretired, works in the shop in the afternoons while Ivy works in his church office.

"What they (the jobs) really have in common is dedicated service — devotion and dedication to mankind," Ivy said.

In 1958, Ivy organized the church on the city's West Side and has seen its membership grow from 32 to the current 225. He counsels not only his religious flock but also his customers on everything from marital to religious and financial problems.

"I even have performed marriages in the barber shop," he said.

He's about as likely to deliver an impromptu sermon in his barber jacket on weekdays as he is in his clerical robe on Sundays.

"Sometimes, it's more striking from the barber shop than in the pulpit," he said. "In the barber shop, they come upon me unprepared."

"When customers walk in the shop, some don't know I'm a reverend. I can meet them more on-the-level at the barber shop. I can talk to them and lead them to church."

Indeed, one of his barber-shop converts went on to become one of Ivy's associate ministers.

Ivy, who began barbering in 1950, recalled the hectic pace he kept in 1949 as he frantically commuted the 20 blocks or so between Euline Barber College and Chicago Baptist Institute. "Lord, I was tired," he said.

"I came from a religious family, and after I became of age and confessed religion, I was 'called'...to preach the gospel," said Ivy.

Among his favorite biblical passages, Ivy said jokingly, is from 1 Corinthians: "Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?"

Baptists' new leader desires unity

AP Laserphoto

The Rev. Adrian Rogers, center, applauds the podium of Atlanta's World Congress Center during the Southern Baptist Convention that elected him as its president. His wife Joyce is at his left.

ATLANTA (AP) The newly elected president of the Southern Baptist Convention said Tuesday night that the denomination's seminary professors and other employees should share the beliefs of the strictly conservative Baptists who elected him.

The Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis, Tenn., in a news conference after his victory over a more moderate candidate, said he believes in each person's right to interpret God's will for himself and in "liberty with all my heart, and I would never, ever force my views on another person."

"We're not trying to tell any professor what he must believe — that is between him and God," Rogers said.

"But we are saying that those who work for us and those who have their salaries paid by us ought to reflect what the great majority of us say we want taught" as spelled out in a Baptist statement of faith, he said.

He has previously said the denomination's seminaries were infected with "liberal theology," which he defined Tuesday night as doubts about the historical accuracy of various biblical accounts.

He wouldn't do anything directly to deal with that situation since "we have trustees for that," he said. But his victory, giving the denomination's most conservative wing the presidency for the eighth straight year, will mean further opportunities to appoint such trustees, whose terms are for varying lengths of time.

Rogers said he felt Baptists sharing his literalist view of the Bible as history, science and a guide to everyday life actually make up 90 percent of the denomination, much more than the 54 percent of the convention vote he won in his election over the Rev. W. Winfred Moore of Amarillo, Tx.

Reagan applauds Baptists for stalwart commitments

ATLANTA (AP) — President Reagan on Tuesday praised Southern Baptists for opposing abortion, supporting prayer in public schools and helping strengthen "the great basic truths about God and family."

"For this renewed sense of purpose, I am grateful, first to God, of course, but then to people like you, who never lost sight of these truths," he said. "You clung to the 'Rock of Ages' when the winds blew and the tides froze and so many others were swept away."

His message, read to the convention immediately after the fundamentalist Rev. Adrian P. Rogers had beaten out a moderate for the denominational presidency, said "the liberalism that has seemed triumphant has been thrown on the defensive.

"So many of the proud liberal myths about man's self-sufficiency, government's omniscience and our ability to do everything without God have shriveled up and look as though the next strong wind should blow them away."

Commission physicist berates NASA

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — NASA either intentionally misled Congress and the public or lacked common sense by continuing to launch the space shuttle, says a Nobel Prize-winning physicist who served on the commission that investigated the Challenger disaster.

The agency ignored rocket booster problems and exaggerated safety "to the point of fantasy," said Richard Feynman, a California Institute of Technology theoretical physicist, who won the Nobel Prize for physics in 1965.

The Challenger disaster "was a final accident of a sequence of things in which there was warning after warning after warning that something was wrong," he said, calling NASA's behavior a form of Russian roulette.

"It's not the kind of accident that just happened and nobody could have expected."

Feynman said at a news conference Tuesday that managers of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration kept insisting the chance of a catastrophic rocket failure was only one in 100,000, even though low-level engineers pegged the odds at roughly one in 100.

Asked why he thought NASA officials overestimated the safety of the shuttle booster rockets, Feynman said he had two theories.

"One is that they actually misled people," he said. Such deception was meant "to ensure the supply of funds," Feynman said in a written report that will be published as an appendix to the commission report released Monday.

He said the other possibility was that NASA managers "were incredibly lacking in common sense" and fooled themselves about the rockets' safety because of "an almost incredible lack of communication between themselves and their working engineers."

Greenhouse effect closer than we think according to scientists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists are warning Congress that the long-theorized, life-threatening overheating of the Earth from man-made air pollution is now a frightening reality.

"The fact that the greenhouse effect is real is proven," said James Hansen, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Institute for Space Studies.

"Global warming is inevitable — it's only a question of magnitude and time," said Robert Watson, director of NASA's upper atmospheric program. "We can expect significant changes in climate in the next few decades."

Hansen, Watson and other scientists delivered their somber assessments Tuesday as the Senate Environment subcommittee on environmental pollution opened two days of hearings on the greenhouse effect.

Backed by recent findings of severe ozone layer depletion in the atmosphere over Antarctica, they reiterated scientific predictions that the warming threatens the globe with floods, drought, and more skin cancer by the middle of the 21st century.

And for Sherwood Rowland, a chemistry professor at the University of California, the picture further down the road is even bleaker, "If you have the greenhouse effect going on indefinitely, then you have a temperature rise that will extinct human life" in 500 to 1,000 years.

The greenhouse effect is a shorthand term for global warming caused by chemicals such as chlorofluorocarbons, carbon dioxide, methane and nitrous oxide accumulating in the atmosphere and trapping heat. The pollutants also destroy the ozone layer, which helps protect humans from the cancer-causing ultraviolet rays of the sun.

Under the greenhouse scenario, the Earth gets baked. Rich farmlands turn into deserts. Forests wilt and die. Coastal areas are inundated by oceans swollen by melted polar and glacial ice.

Hansen predicted that global temperatures should be nearly 2 degrees higher in 20 years, "which is about the warmest the earth has been in the last 100,000 years."

The pace of atmospheric destruction is increasing steadily and rapidly, said Rowland, who in 1974 published pioneering research on chlorofluocarbons — gases used as refrigerants and aerosol-can propellants. This led the United States to ban their use in spray cans, but it continues elsewhere.

"There is now compelling observational evidence that the chemical composition of the atmosphere is changing at a rapid rate on a global scale," Watson said.

The scientists, calling for curbs on air pollution, said a recently completed five-year study in Antarctica provides an ominous signal to the world. During the period, there was an ozone loss over the South Pole of from 30 percent to 50 percent, they said.

Rowland said the finding proved "the remarkable correlation between this depletion in the Antarctic ozone and the rapid growth in the atmospheric concentrations of chlorofluoromethanes, and the connection is inescapable."

"We now have a hole in the ozone layer which will last for a century or more, even if the entire world were to stop further emissions of chlorofluorocarbons today — which is, of course, impossible," Rowland said.

He said that with an expected doubling of atmospheric carbon dioxide by 2040, the number of days each year with temperatures over 80 degrees would rise from 35 to 85 in Washington, D.C., and Omaha, Neb.

FHA furlough is harmless now, but could cause problems later

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Housing Administration's sixth shutdown in nine months is having little immediate impact on home sales, but industry experts warn it could be troublesome unless Congress acts quickly to put FHA back in business.

"We've been out of business for a month" since last October 1, Silvio DeBartolomeis, FHA's acting administrator, said Tuesday. "Congress has given us a vacation and they didn't even know it."

Since last fall, Congress has granted FHA a series of short extensions of its statutory authority, at times using the legislation as a vehicle to which other bills are attached.

FHA's authority was suspended for 11 days last December and 10 days in March before Congress enacted extender bills.

The latest shutdown came last Thursday, when the agency's statutory authority expired a month after it was extended by emergency legislation signed May 2 by President Reagan. That bill was flown to Reagan for his signature in Tokyo, where the president was attending the economic summit.

The $3.8 billion supplemental appropriation bill passed last week by the Senate would extend FHA's statutory authority until July 25 and raise its insurance limit from $74.4 billion to $132 billion.

The Senate measure must be reconciled with the House's $1.68 billion supplemental appropriation bill. It also faces the threat of a presidential veto due to administration objections to several expenditures.

In the meantime, FHA cannot make commitments to insure new home mortgages but home buyers who obtained approval for a government-insured mortgage before last Thursday can complete their home purchases, DeBartolomeis said.

The shutdown is giving FHA a chance to complete paperwork on the backlog of applications for FHA-insured mortgages that resulted from the boom in home sales sparked by the lowest interest rates in seven years.

Unlike the shutdown from April 30 to May 2, when FHA's insurance limit was exhausted for the first time in its history, the agency can continue to accept new applications, DeBartolomeis said. FHA still has $4.4 billion left of its current insurance authority of $74.4 billion.

Senate supports IRAs, stresses revision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with intensifying calls for action, supporters of a sweeping tax-overhaul bill pending in the Senate have agreed that they may have to go along with restoring tax-deductable Individual Retirement Accounts.

"There is the strong feeling that there should be some changes as far as IRAs are concerned," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

However, Dole and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the Senate Finance Committee chairman, are resisting making the change while the full Senate considers the bill.

Instead, Dole and Packwood are supporting a non-binding resolution that calls for giving the "highest priority to retaining maximum possible tax benefits for Individual Retirement Accounts" when congressional negotiators meet later to work out the differences between the pending Senate package and a tax bill passed late last year by the House.

A vote was expected today on the non-binding resolution offered late Tuesday by Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del.

Still, some senators said the non-binding resolution was meaningless, and they vowed their IRA amendments would not be sidetracked.

"We're being confronted by a ploy. ... It's a tactical ploy to convince the American public that we're taking care of an issue which they are deeply concerned about," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn. "I don't really want to be a participant in this charade."

The action on the IRA amendments was the first sign of life in an otherwise slow-motion proceeding on the landmark tax legislation.

During the first three days of debate on the measure no one would offer amendments.

At one point Tuesday, Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., offered to break the ice with a tongue-in-cheek amendment that "no person over 75 years of age with net income less than $40,000 shall pay any income tax so long as such person's hair does not turn white."

Packwood, who has pursued a no-amendment strategy in an effort to keep the delicate package intact, has talked confidently of having enough votes to defeat any moves to make major changes in the bill.

But there has been growing support for restoring the deduction for IRA contributions.

"If any amendment can win, that amendment is the most likely to succeed," said Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the assistant Democratic leader.

"If we thought this would make it (the bill) come unraveled, we would not be offering it," Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said as a bipartisan group unveiled its amendment to preserve a partial IRA writeoff.

Earlier Tuesday, during a White House meeting, President Reagan urged Republican leaders to keep the bill free of all amendments, including one by Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., that would take away the tax exemption of any institution that finances, performs or provides facilities for abortions.

"The president favors anti-abortion legislation; he also favors a tax bill that does not have any amendments on it," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said.

Nonetheless, many senators are concerned about the IRA issue because the deduction is so popular with middle-income Americans.

McKernan wins Maine despite unsettled issues

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — A proposed anti-pornography law that overshadowed Maine's gubernatorial p[illegible]tions has been rejected by a 3-2 margin, but a supporter of the law said the "crucial issues" have yet to be resolved.

In Tuesday's gubernatorial races, meanwhile, Democratic Attorney General James E. Tierney won a five-way race and Republican U.S. Rep. John R. "Jock" McKernan Jr. defeated a former Reagan administration appointee.

Tierney and McKernan will face off in November to succeed two-term Democrat Joseph E. Brennan, who is barred from seeking a third term.

The conservative Christian Civic League of Maine introduced the anti-obscenity proposal, which would have carried a maximum five-year prison term for anyone convicted of selling or promoting material found to be obscene.

Proponents, including fundamentalist Christian churches and the Roman Catholic Diocese, called it an effective weapon against hard-core pornography. Opponents, including teachers, librarians and civil libertarians, warned it could lead to censorship of legitimate literature.

A jubilant John McKernan wins the Republican primary for governor of Maine. He will face Attorney General James Tierney in the November general election.

"The campaign is ended. The election has been held. The people have spoken," Jasper "Jack" Wyman, executive director of the league, said in a concession statement issued about two hours after the polls closed.

"The crucial issues raised in this campaign have yet to be resolved," he said. "It would be a serious error to interpret these results as an indication of the people's lack of resolve in combating the serious and growing problem of pornography."

Brennan, an outspoken opponent of the proposal who was unopposed for the Democratic nomination to replace McKernan in southern Maine's 1st Congressional District, said he was pleased with the outcome.

Tierney spokesman Jon Reitman said today Tierney was clearly the nominee but would withhold a statement until he talked to his opponents. "There's no way that any of those candidates can beat Jim Tierney," Reitman said.

Tierney has been Maine's attorney general for six years.

Tax overhaul good or bad depending on perspective

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're an average worker and earn $35,000 a year, the Senate's big tax-overhaul bill could cut your taxes by $129. Or, it could raise your taxes by $525.

It all depends on which set of estimates from the Joint Committee on Taxation you believe.

The experts who give Congress technical advice on taxes issued a new set of statistics Tuesday showing how the bill might affect people at various income levels. The figures were so different from an earlier set that they left some senators with serious questions about what the legislation would do.

But can the new figures be believed? David Brockway, director of the committee staff, said they could be seriously flawed because of a lack of data. Those flaws are so serious, Brockway wrote, "that we are unwilling to stand behind them."

Nevertheless, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said the figures are the only ones available to offer any detail on individual winners and losers in the bill. "I asked for the best assessment," he said. "I presume this is it."

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., manager of the bill, would not speculate on whether the figures are to be believed. "If these are the best statistics available, what do you do with them?" he said.

Levin, who asked for the figures to prepare some amendments, asked the same question.

"If these figures are unreliable, we've got nothing" on which to base a judgment, Levin said. "If they are reliable, it's significant too," he added, because they indicate a real possibility of significant tax increases on middle-income people.

During discussion of the tax bill, Levin said, Americans have been given "the very distinct impression that middle-income taxpayers will get a tax cut." In fact, he said, "a very, very significant number will pay more — perhaps 25 percent of them."

Neither set of figures is necessarily wrong, but — as with any estimates involving averages — both have limitations. The set that backers of the bill have relied on is based on dividing taxpayers into nine income levels, starting at "zero to $10,000" and ending at "over $200,000," and estimating how each class would fare if the tax cut were divided equally among all people in that group.

The new set carries the exercise a step further and attempts to determine how many taxpayers at each income level would pay more and how many would pay less.

For example, the original statistics estimated that in 1988, when the tax bill would be fully effective, an average person with income between $20,000 and $30,000 would get a tax cut of around $186.

The new figures indicate that 5.7 percent of the people at that level would see no change; 25.7 percent would face a tax increase averaging $339, and the remaining 68.6 percent would get a tax cut averaging $383.

As a group, those with incomes between $40,000 and $50,000 could expect a tax cut averaging $337, as the experts originally calculated.

NATION IN BRIEF

Washington inspects airmail rivalry woes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is calling for a study of the International Priority Airmail Service to ensure that the U.S. Postal Service plan does not compete unfairly with private companies.

The service, designed for bulk mailers and being tested in 30 cities, is scheduled to become permanent Monday. However, the Justice Department said it wants to delay the action.

The Postal Service has an obligation to assess in a public record whether the IPAS rate covers its cost, the department's antitrust division said in a statement Tuesday.

Agencies aid dropouts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two federal agencies have agreed to spend $8.2 million on joint demonstration programs to help people such as school dropouts and welfare parents get training and enter the job market.

Labor Secretary William E. Brock and Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen announced the joint program on Tuesday. The plan will be matched by some $8.2 million in private foundation grants, with the money earmarked for four state projects and 76 community projects.

All are designed to improve coordination among social services, education, training and jobs programs at the local level to help school dropouts, welfare recipients, teen-age parents and people with developmental disabilities.

New AIDS test is rapid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists say a precise, new test has been developed to allow laboratory researchers to detect and measure the virus which causes AIDS in less time than previous tests.

The Du Pont Co., of Wilmington, Del., said Tuesday it is introducing the first commercially available test kit for the virus that radioactively tags part of the germ's core protein to identify it.

The so-called radioimmunoassay test kit initially will be marketed only for research purposes and not as a clinical diagnostic test, which would require Food and Drug Administration approval following a series of long, costly trials.

Waldheim visit unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Austrian president-elect Kurt Waldheim probably will not visit the United States due to the controversy over his alleged Nazi associations during World War II, say U.S. officials.

"It's extremely unlikely the Austrian government is going to make a test case out of this," a Reagan administration official, who requested anonymity, said Tuesday.

"The whole problem goes away if he's not invited," said another official.

The administration has said there is no legal impediment to a visit by the former U.N. secretary-general.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III is expected to meet later this week with lawyers for Waldheim and make a decision on whether Waldheim can be excluded from the United States. A 1978 law allows U.S. authorities to bar entry to people associated with Nazi persecution.

New treaty encouraged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States should renegotiate the anti-ballistic missile treaty and deploy "Star Wars" defenses around critical military targets, says a former national security adviser.

Zbigniew Brzezinski said, however, that the United States should limit the number of missiles able to hit key Soviet targets.

Full development of Star Wars, also known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, would violate the ABM treaty signed in 1972. The treaty limits the United States and the Soviet Union to 100 defensive missiles around a single point.

The Soviets are modernizing their system around Moscow, but the United States does not maintain such defenses.

Tower plans 'arrogant'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston says plans to build a 52-tower complex less than 10 miles from the center of the nation's capital is "architectural arrogance," and is calling on the Senate to take action.

The California Democrat proposed legislation Tuesday that would force the builders of the 850-foot tower to reduce the structure's size or pay an extra $1 million a foot to put up the skyscraper.

Keep UTPB open

When Midland and Odessa community leaders converge on Austin this Friday, they may rightfully believe they've been in this fight before.

They have.

The "fight" in question is the long-running debate of whether to close the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. This time the topic has been expanded to include either closing it or merging with another university.

Both options are bad simply because UTPB is needed now more than ever and if state officials doubt the university's acceptance in the Permian Basin, their minds should be changed after Friday's meeting of the Select Committee on Higher Education.

If the select committee members' minds are open on the subject, that is.

Although a large entourage from the area is planning to attend the meeting, those who are scheduled to appear before the committee include Tom Wageman, chief executive officer of RepublicBank First National Midland; UTPB President Dr. Duane Leach; Dr. Bob Riley, president of Howard Community College in Big Spring; and State Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock.

Hopefully all that group must do is convince the select committee that UTPB is serving a vital need and is worth its cost to this region's residents. That shouldn't be too difficult. The area literally is scattered with UTPB graduates or current students who are able to perform their jobs better and more efficiently or who owe their very jobs to the education they received at UTPB.

Now when the educational opportunities afforded by the university are desperately in demand because of the job changes brought about by the oil price fall, state officials really should be concentrating on making it easier for the university to help the people of the Permian Basin instead of talking about closing the school or merging with another.

Is UTPB needed? Yes.

Is UTPB "accepted" in the community — the Permian Basin? Yes.

Is UTPB adequately meeting the educational needs of the people of this region? According to UTPB figures, 80 percent of all eligible area community college students transfer to the upper-level university.

The case for keeping UTPB open is clear-cut. The case for closing the university of merging it with another is not nearly so well-defined.

If the decision is made by the select committee to close UTPB or merge it with another university, a terrible injustice will be done to the people of the Permian Basin who have fought so diligently and valiantly to keep the school open.

Hope in El Salvador

Efforts to negotiate an end to El Salvador's civil war have failed before, so one should not get too hopeful about the latest offer by President Jose Napoleon Duarte to talk with the leaders of the guerrilla factions fighting to overthrow him. But there is reason to hope that the two sides may be more flexible now than when the last peace talks were held in 1984.

Duarte must regain the broad public support that he enjoyed two years ago when he first met with representatives of the rebel Farabundo Marti Liberation Front at the village of La Palma. The popular enthusiasm of those days has faded because the initial talks resulted only in a brief holiday truce and because the economic situation in El Salvador has worsened since then. Even as the battlefield situation has improved for the government, Salvadorans have become more concerned with inflation and high unemployment, and their discontent is reflected in strikes and criticism of Duarte by labor and peasant leaders who previously supported his Christian Democratic Party.

For their part, the guerrillas are no closer to victory than in 1984, and if anything may be worse off against an army that is now more aggressive and better-equipped, thanks largely to training and aid from the United States. That may be why the FMLN responded so promptly to Duarte's latest invitation to talk peace. The rebel radio station replied affirmatively within a day, and even announced that the rebellion's leading military commanders would join the FMLN's principal civilian spokesmen at any peace talks. That is an unprecedented concession by the rebels that could bode well.

But if negotiations are to succeed in El Salvador, both sides must be willing to make key concessions on the fundamental issue that divides them — power-sharing. The rebels want a role in the government before laying down their arms. Duarte insists that the rebels must stop fighting first, and then try to win a share of power in elections. Reconciling those positions will be hard. A good first step would be to discuss a cease-fire. At least then the fighting that has claimed almost 60,000 lives during the last six years could come to a temporary halt.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 11, the 162nd day of 1986. There are 203 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 11, 1776, the Continental Congress formed a committee to draft a Declaration of Independence from Britain. The committee was composed of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Robert Livingston and Roger Sherman.

On this date:

In 1509, England's King Henry VIII married Catherine of Aragon.

In 1859, a prospector laid claim to a silver deposit in Six Mile Canyon in Nevada — a claim that later turned out to be the multimillion-dollar Comstock Lode.

In 1919, a horse called Sir Barton won the Belmont Stakes, becoming the first Triple Crown winner in American thoroughbred racing history.

In 1942, the United States and the Soviet Union signed a lend-lease agreement to aid the Soviet war effort in World War II.

In 1947, sugar rationing ended in the United States.

In 1970, the United States' presence in Libya ended when the last detachment left Wheelus Air Base.

In 1979, actor John Wayne died of cancer at age 72.

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford and Ronald Reagan made campaign trips to Missouri, the site of a state Republican convention.

Five years ago: President Reagan told a group of labor leaders at the White House he would reject further compromises in his proposal to cut taxes 25 percent.

One year ago: Karen Ann Quinlan, who lapsed into a coma a decade earlier and prompted a historic right-to-die court decision, died at a Morris Plains, N.J., nursing home at age 31.

Today's birthdays: Broadcast journalist Lawrence E. Spivak is 86. Marine biologist Jacques Cousteau is 76. Opera singer Rise Stevens is 73. Author William Styron is 61. Actor Gene Wilder is 52. Actor Chad Everett is 49. Comedian Johnny Brown is 49. Former auto racer Jackie Stewart is 47. Actress Adrienne Barbeau is 41. Football quarterback Joe Montana is 30.

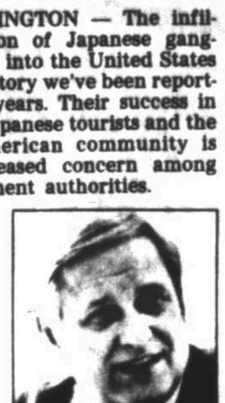
U.S. blamed for 'Yakuza' trouble

WASHINGTON — The infiltration of Japanese gangsters into the United States is a story we've been reporting for two years. Their success in terrorizing Japanese tourists and the Japanese-American community is causing increased concern among law enforcement authorities.



Jack Anderson

Two veteran reporters associated with the Center for Investigative Reporting, David Kaplan and Alec Dubro, have now written a book describing in ominous detail the origins and growth of the Japanese criminal gangs — and the serious threat they pose to our society. The book is titled "Yakuza," the name given to the underworld gangs from the simple card game they played to while away the hours between missions of murder, extortion and other crimes.

Our associate Donald Goldberg has reviewed an advance copy of the book, which is based on the largest file on Yakuza in this country. Here are some revelations of particular concern to Americans:

— After Japan's crushing defeat in World War II, the Yakuza gangs were in almost total disarray. One development that helped them survive was recruitment of gang members by U.S. intelligence officers. The American authorities used Yakuza members to spy on and disrupt the supposedly leftist labor movement in Japan.

Several incidents traced to Yakuza thugs in the pay of the U.S. government were aimed at union members in Japan in the late 1940s and 1950s. In one case, saboteurs derailed a Japanese National Railways train, killing three people and injuring scores. Twenty railway workers were convicted of the crime, despite evidence that their prosecution was a setup. They were finally exonerated in 1963.

— Yakuza gangsters working for the CIA kidnapped a well-known leftist writer, who was held by the agency for more than a year. Other intimidations of this sort are also described in the book.

— Congress is indirectly responsible for the arming of the Japanese underworld, by virtue of its relaxed gun-control legislation. Until recently, Japan's strict gun controls had made the country virtually free of handguns and extremely low in the incidence of shooting fatalities.

Recently, however, a multimillion-dollar gun trade between the United States and Japan has opened up, with thousands of American pistols flooding into Japan. The Yakuza are understandably in the vanguard of this lethal, lucrative and illegal trade. Handguns that cost $100 in this country fetch as much as $2,000 in Tokyo. The well-armed Yakuza gangs have been indulging in some of the bloodiest battles of their long history. Japanese Yakuza leaders told the authors they can no longer control their gang members.

— Roughly half the Yakuza's enormous illicit income is derived from drugs, with methamphetamines, or "speed," the drug of choice. As many as 600,000 Japanese are addicted to "shabu," as the drugs are called in Japan — a level proportionate to the number of heroin junkies in the United States. Thanks in large degree to the Yakuza, Japan's drug-abuse rate is now among the world's highest.

Kaplan and Dubro conclude that the United States must shoulder a large share of blame for the resurrection of the Yakuza. The main responsibility rests on shortsighted U.S. officials, who — like their colleagues in postwar Germany — fancied they could use the worst elements of the occupied nations' society to bring stability and to combat communism.

U.S. intelligence officials sowed the whirlwind when they revived the Yakuza after the war; now U.S. law enforcement authorities are reaping the whirlwind as the Japanese gangs expand their operations into this country.

HALL OF SHAME: Rep. Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla., has introduced a bill demanding that Philippines ex-president Ferdinand Marcos and his party repay the $207,000 tab they ran up at U.S. air bases in Guam and Hawaii during the first month of their exile. Despite the 21 kilos of gold bars Marcos brought with him, he and his group charged everything, including $20,000 in long-distance phone bills. The Marcoses owe the Air Force $147,899 for housing, meals and miscellaneous services. The $39,101 worth of merchandise they charged at post exchanges included lingerie, makeup, toilet water and hair dryers — and $1,424.93 worth of shoes.

DANGER? WHAT DANGER?: Congressional cost-cutters have taken aim at the "danger pay" currently authorized for Foreign Service personnel stationed at the embassy in San Salvador. The extra pay can be as much as 25 percent of the employee's base salary. Critics argue that El Salvador can't be so dangerous if diplomats' families are still living there, although Congress decreed a couple of years ago that the mere fact that families are allowed would not rule out "danger pay." There has been no visible rush by members of Congress to investigate the situation in person.

MINI-EDITORIAL: We don't usually count on the earnest do-gooders of the American Civil Liberties Union to take the witty approach. But we've got to hand it to Barry Lynn, an ACLU lawyer commenting on the explicit nature of the report produced by the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography. With a vicious twinkle in his eye, Lynn declared stoutly: "Although I personally find much of the material in this volume highly offensive, I would nevertheless defend absolutely the federal government's right to publish it."

The most curious revelation comes from Warsaw. The cynical and sarcastic official spokesman, Jerzy Urban, belied his own leader's repeated claim that the decision to impose martial law in December 1981 was taken only after a breakdown of efforts to come to terms with the then-legal union Solidarity.

Urban's purpose was to discredit the U.S. by showing that it could have foiled the plans, which he now admits Warsaw had meticulously prepared, because Washington knew all about them from a high-level spy. American intelligence sources do not deny advance knowledge, but say the U.S. could do nothing because it didn't have the date of D-day.

There's eyewash on both sides here. Urban goes much too far in suggesting that the Reagan administration deliberately protected the Warsaw regime's secret because it expected a "bloody conflict" in Poland after martial law, and thought that preferable to warning Solidarity. Since it now seems the U.S. did have all the details, it ought to have known how effective the surprise blow was likely to be in paralyzing opposition.

But the Polish spokesman certainly has a point when he says the carefully laid plans would have been ruined if the U.S. hadn't, in effect, connived by keeping silent. A lot of people would have escaped arrest, and underground communications and transport so painfully put together afterward would have been prepared.

It is impossible to judge what might have been better for Poland. Perhaps if the Warsaw regime felt it couldn't succeed with its own elaborately organized blow, Soviet forces would have intervened. But neither that eventuality nor the flimsy argument that there was nothing to be done for Solidarity explains Washington's behavior.

The purpose of intelligence is put in question. The likeliest reason for Washington's inaction is the classic compulsion of spy masters not to let the other side know what they have learned. Warsaw knew that Col. Wlodzimierz Kuklinski and his family had disappeared, but Washington probably wasn't sure if Warsaw realized he was a spy, that he was in American hands, and that he had given away the operation.

There is often an obsessive tendency in this business to keep secrets for the sake of secrets, to try to get secrets for the sake of getting secrets, without too much concern for the use of information pried out or denied.

Once when Nikita Khrushchev was visiting the U.S., he told President Eisenhower that since both sides hired so many double agents, they could save a lot by splitting the cost. There is a realistic edge to the joke. To a considerable extent, spies on each side serve to keep the other side in work.

Intelligence is important in a dangerous world, and it has a proper purpose — to provide warning, not only of military but also of political, economic and other surprises that can do damage to the whole nation.

All countries seek to find out what they feel they desperately need to know. There isn't the vast moral difference presumed in probing the secrets of adversaries and those of friends, which can also hold threatening possibilities. It is certainly distasteful to learn that Israel, which relies so heavily on American aid money, bought U.S. secrets. But it is disingenuous to call it exceptionally sinful.

Not knowing what is really happening with friends can be as harmful as not being warned about foes. There was a massive U.S. intelligence failure in the last years of the shah's reign in Iran, in order to please the shah by not going behind the back of his secret police.

Washington didn't even know the shah was terminally ill until after he fled Iran, nor was it adequately informed on the scale of the opposition and its various movements. U.S. policy would have had to be different, instead of disastrously trying to prop up the dying shah, and the result might well have been a quite different regime from that of the Ayatollah Khomeini. America and a vast number of other people would have been far better off.

It is not unreasonable to seek warning on grave issues, by spying if there's no other way. But the point is to make better policy and protect people. Otherwise, it's expensive dirty tricks without justification.

No-shows at weddings really take the cake!

It's June and weddings are busting out all over. The one thing I notice is that many parents tend to be more upset with those guests who don't come to the wedding than pleased with those who do.

Art Buchwald

And so it was with Bob and Kathie Parrish of Sag Harbor, N.Y., whose lovely daughter Kate was married last week.

I found Bob and Kathie standing on the porch overlooking their palatial garden, filled with wedding guests. I expected them to be happy since everything was going so smoothly.

"Great party," I told them.

"Ben and Hannah Mazer didn't come," Kathie said.

"How do you know that with so many people here?" I asked.

"They called and said they had jury duty."

"On Saturday?"

"Exactly. They could have told the truth and said they were going skydiving."

"Dave and Laurie Kramer aren't here. We went to their daughter's wedding, and we hadn't seen her since she was 2," Bob said. "I guess Dave's golf game is more important than listening to 'Oh Promise Me.'"

"You people are really keeping score, aren't you?"

Bob said, "I've given up many a weekend to go to the weddings of my friend's children, even when I had tickets to a Jets game. I expect them to give me the same courtesy."

Standing on her toes, Kathie said, "I don't see the Sokals."

"They probably found a better wedding to go to after they accepted," Bob said.

"Wait a minute," I said. "I see Judy Sokal over there by the gazebo. You have to give her credit for being here."

Bob said, "We're only keeping track of people who didn't come."

Kathie's eyes were sweeping the crowd. "I knew it, I just knew it. The Chancellors didn't make it."

"Maybe they had to go out of town?" I suggested.

"They RSVP'd that they would be here."

"That's the last Pontiac I buy from Chancellor," Bob said.

"Give him a break," I pleaded. "People are still arriving. He could have been held up in traffic."

"Don't kid yourself," Kathie said. "The way Chancellor drives, he would have been here by now."

"Do you see Mary Anne and Carlos Sullivan?" Bob said to Kathie.

"Why should I see the Sullivans? I told you we were wasting a stamp when we sent them an invitation. They're much too hoity-toity to come to a wedding on Long Island. If it isn't Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson's nuptials, they're not interested."

"Forget the Sullivans, and give credit to those who are here like the Flicks, the Schicks and the Wicks."

Bob said, "We gave the Sullivans a damn nice wedding present, and never even got a thank-you note."

"In spite of everything," I told them, "you have a lovely group of people here, and I doubt if you could accommodate any more guests."

"The ones I hate the most," Kathie said, "are the friends who call up at the last moment and tell you that they have swine flu."

"Why do you hate them?" I asked her.

"Because we still have to pay the caterer whether they come or not."

"You're ruining your day keeping score of all the no-shows at your reception," I said.

"Not me," said Bob, "I never take anything personally."

Gadhafi warns of U.S. plans to invade Libya

Associated Press

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi today made his first public appearance since he escaped a U.S. air raid on Tripoli April 15, and warned his nation that Washington is planning to invade Libya, the Libyan news agency JANA reported.

He spoke at an all-night rally held in Darna, a coastal Mediterranean city in northeast Libya, in "Liberation from American Imperialism" ceremonies marking the 16th anniversary of the Libyan takeover of the U.S. Air Force Wheelus base near Tripoli. It was once the major American air base in the central Mediterranean.

Gadhafi apparently returned to his Azizia barracks in Tripoli last week, following a long and unexplained absence.

His return was unannounced, without the usual television coverage or the slogan-chanting crowds of supporters. There was no mention of it by the official JANA news agency, nor any announcement of where or when today's main ceremonies were planned.

But some diplomats were officially notified that the "guide of the revolution" was back in the fortified Azizia barracks, which was attacked by U.S. jets in April. U.S. warplanes also attacked Benghazi, Libya's second city.

JANA quoted Gadhafi as declaring Darna and the Libyan coastline "a military zone...Where the mountains shall turn into volcanos that erupt if the Americans try to approach."

"No American soldier will ever set foot on Libya soil. We shall defeat the Americans," JANA, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted Gadhafi as saying.

But he warned that the American air strikes on Tripoli and Benghazi will be repeated.

"America is seeking to occupy Darna, because it believes this city is isolated and strategically important," he declared.

"I warn you again that the aggression could be repeated as long as American imperialism exists and is plotting to occupy the southern Mediterranean area where our country is located," he said.

"Therefore, we must prepare barns in which we shall put all these American sheep and slaughter them," he was quoted as saying.

Libyan state radio and JANA reported that similar anniversary rallies were held in all other major Libyan cities. The radio quoted the demonstrators as chanting "damned is America," and "No to peace, no to surrender."

Less than 24 hours before today's ceremonies, there was no indication where Gadhafi would deliver the speech promised by Libyan officials when they invited Western reporters, scores of whom were expelled after the April 15 U.S. air attack on Libya.

Gadhafi appeared on television three times in the days following the air raid, denouncing the United States and pledging to "stike back at imperialism," but this was his first public appearance since then.

Vigilantes, militants wage war among ruins

EDITORS NOTE — AP Reporter David Crary was among a group of reporters caught in the middle of a battle between thousands of rival blacks over control of the Crossroads squatter camp. Crary escaped uninjured, but four other journalists did not.

By DAVID CRARY

CROSSROADS, South Africa (AP) — It was a battle without glory between two nervous, ragged armies fighting shack-to-shack with clubs, slingshots and machetes for control of a black squatter camp already half burned to the ground.

When the fighting ended Tuesday afternoon, after at least 14 deaths, the prize for the winning side was a chance to burn down the shacks that still stood.

The clash, witnessed at close range by about 15 reporters caught in the thick of the combat, was the second explosion of violence in less than a month between conservative vigilantes and militant "comrades" in Crossroads, a sprawling shantytown 12 miles east of Cape Town that the government has been trying to bulldoze for years.

The conflict is rooted in disputes between young anti-apartheid militants and the older, more conservative vigilantes, accused by the militants of cooperating with the government in order to remain in Crossroads.

Vigilantes are loyal to Johnson Ngxobongwana, head of the committee that has controlled the camp since it was founded in 1975. Younger activists in outlying sections have challenged the committee in recent months, accusing it of corruption.

Reporters watched the battle develop from positions near the militants.

Tuesday's battlefield was "KTC," a section named after a local store. As in the previous clashes, the vigilantes carried the day, routing their more numerous rivals when police fired tear gas and birdshot at the militants.

AP Laserphoto

An unidentified man fires a pistol Tuesday during fighting between rival groups of black squatters in Crossroads, South Africa. Hundreds of shanties in the settlement were burned during the second day of fighting between the groups.

The only firearms I saw among the militants were a pair of homemade revolvers. One frantic young man dashed through the ranks yelling, "Where is a machine gun? We need a machine gun."

Knots of men, wrapped in blankets and carrying clubs or iron bars, talked of fighting while huddled beside fires as a cold, chilly dawn broke.

Later, as squatters whose homes were burned down Monday searched through the ashes for debris worth saving, men with loudspeakers told women and children to leave the area because a battle was imminent.

The militants took positions among the burned-out shacks along a low, sandy ridge where vigilantes had struck on Monday. More than 1,000 of them formed an irregular line along the ridge, some taking cover behind slabs of corrugated metal.

There was no sign of fear when the first groups of vigilantes, distinguished by white arm bands, appeared on the streets below the ridge. One band of militants sent several dozen vigilantes fleeing with a brief charge down the hill, hurling stones and brandishing clubs.

But as more vigilantes moved in, a standoff developed, with rocks thrown from long distances and occasional gunfire.

Armored police and army vehicles prowled through the area where the vigilantes had assembled, and overhead a police helicopter circled, apparently radioing information to officers on the ground about where the combatants were positioned.

The militants became increasingly unnerved as the standoff progressed, sometimes scurrying off the ridge at the sound of a gunshot before being urged back to the top by some of their colleagues.

The standoff ended when a convoy of armored police vehicles lumbered through the shacks behind the ridge. Officers fired tear gas and birdshot as the militants found themselves confronted on two sides, and the ridge suddenly emptied as the defenders and reporters fled through the maze of narrow, muddy streets from an all-out vigilante charge.

Twice, turning to look for the photographers I had been with, I saw rocks and iron bars sailing towards me, and I could see the vigilantes running in my direction.

But I was lucky, taking a path through the shacks that led me to a highway which formed a perimeter of the combat zone. Four other reporters were less fortunate. Two were wounded in the arm by gunfire and two were slashed with machetes by attackers who colleagues said were vigilantes.

Within moments after the retreat, clouds of thick black smoke rose from the combat zone as hundreds of shacks which survived Monday's fighting were set ablaze.

Police repeatedly have denied allegations from residents, clergymen and relief workers that they are siding with the vigilantes in an effort to tighten government control of Crossroads.

But the police operation Tuesday clearly contributed to panic among the militants trying to defend KTC and did nothing to deter the vigilantes from sweeping in afterwards to set the neighborhood on fire.

De la Madrid reviews options on Mexico's debt

MEXICO CITY (AP) — With concern escalating at home and abroad about Mexico's financial plight, President Miguel de la Madrid is reviewing what options the government has to meet payments on its $98 billion foreign debt.

In Washington, Assistant Treasury Secretary David C. Mulford told a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee Tuesday that he was confident an accord eventually could be reached to rescue Mexico from the economic woes worsened by the 50 percent plunge in world oil prices this year.

In the last week alone, the Mexican peso dropped almost 30 percent in value. It stabilized late Monday.

"With our support, Mexico's own efforts to grapple with its difficult economic problems, and with the assistance of the international financial institutions and private banks, we are confident that Mexico can stabilize the situation and return to sustainable economic growth," Mulford said.

In 1982, the U.S. government put together a $9 billion package of assistance to help Mexico with its foreign debt, which Mulford said was fully repaid by the Mexicans at no cost to the American taxpayer.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed Tuesday that U.S. Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker visited Mexico City to meet with Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog and Miguel Mancera, head of the Central Bank of Mexico. Mexican and U.S. officials gave no details of Monday's talks.

But one source closely following the negotiations said high-level discussions were under way to try to find a solution to Mexico's problems that is amenable both to the Mexican government and to its foreign creditors. The source spoke on condition of anonymity.

Mexico has been holding talks with the International Monetary Fund on an aid package worth about $1 billion, but the discussions have been held up by disagreements on Mexico's red-ink spending. The government doesn't believe it can pare the federal deficit below 13 percent of the gross national product, while the IMF wants it slashed in half.

Commercial bankers are insisting that Mexico get an agreement with the IMF before they even consider giving new loans to Mexico.

It is unclear how much money Mexico needs to get through the current money crunch. But foreign bankers and government officials have estimated the bankers are likely to come with about $2.5 billion and agree to further postponement of $950 million in principal payments.

A debt package might also include as much as $3 billion in credits, assistance and concessions from industrialized nations and international financial organizations like the World Bank, the officials have said.

De la Madrid, in a television interview aired nationally Tuesday, said the collapse of oil prices has altered the way the government looks at the debt.

"Until now it seemed to us that it was not advantageous for the country to fail to fulfill its obligations," he said in the interview, which was conducted last Thursday at Los Pinos, the presidential residence.

"But like I have said, the impact of the oil changes the panorama. We have stopped collecting the resources (from oil), and we don't have a way to substitute for them in a rapid way," he said.

"Then, I am now directing negotiations with foreigners that are aimed at adjusting the effective payments of the service of the foreign debt with our own capacity to pay," he said.

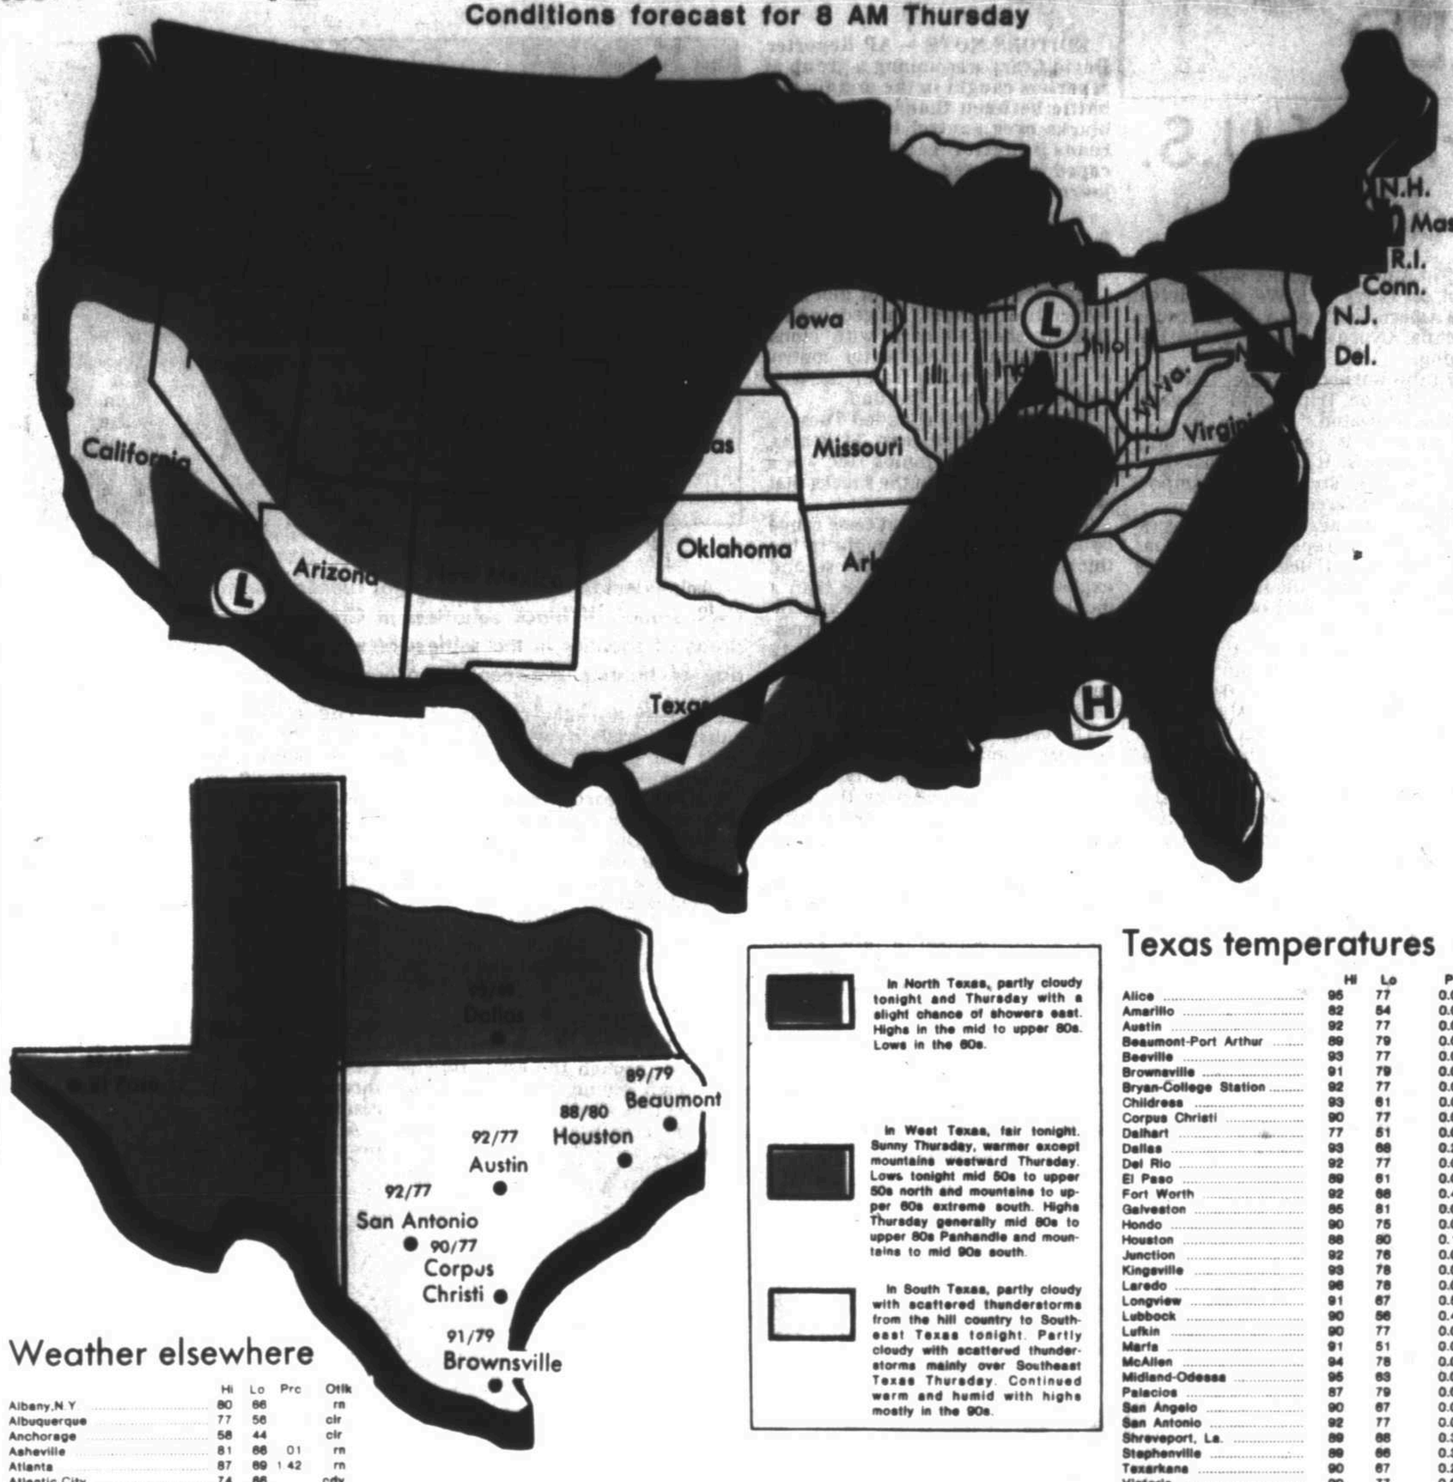
WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

Conditions forecast for 8 AM Thursday



In North Texas, partly cloudy tonight and Thursday with a slight chance of showers east. Highs in the mid to upper 80s. Lows in the 60s.

In West Texas, fair tonight. Sunny Thursday, warmer except mountains westward Thursday. Lows tonight mid 50s to upper 50s north and mountains to upper 60s extreme south. Highs Thursday generally mid 80s to upper 80s Panhandle and mountains to mid 90s south.

In South Texas, partly cloudy with scattered thunderstorms from the hill country to Southeast Texas tonight. Partly cloudy with scattered thunderstorms mainly over Southeast Texas Thursday. Continued warm and humid with highs mostly in the 90s.

Sunny skies anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Permian Basin area residents can expect sunny skies and very warm temperatures Thursday. According to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, the high should be near the 90-degree mark.

Fair skies and mild temperatures are in the NWS forecast for tonight. With a low in the middle 60s, winds will be out of the southeast at five to 10 mph. Southeasterly winds at five to 10 mph will continue on Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 95 was eight degrees below the record high set in 1956. This morning's low was 12 degrees above the record low of 51 set for this date in 1975.

STATE

Intense thunderstorms erupted over North Central Texas Tuesday night, bringing threats of tornados, hail and damaging winds after a week's worth of heavy rains.

A line of thunderstorms developed along a weak cold front extending across western Oklahoma and the low rolling plains into southwest Texas, the National Weather Service said.

A tornado watch was posted for the northwest part of North Central Texas Tuesday night, and Wichita, Archer and Clay counties were under flash flood warnings until 3 a.m.

Four to six inches of rain fell during late afternoon in Wichita Falls, and ground saturated with recent rains forced excess water over creek banks and onto low-lying roads.

About 50 Wichita Falls residents were evacuated near the Holliday and McGrath creeks, and high winds knocked out power to as many as 5,000 businesses and homes Tuesday night.

Wind gusts of up to 60 mph knocked trees onto streets, blew out car windows and toppled sheds, officials said.

By late Tuesday night, 2,000 customers were still without power, said Helen Burt, a Texas Electric Service Co. spokeswoman.

Other showers and thunderstorms were still occurring in the warm tropical air mass over southeast Texas and along the mid- to upper Gulf Coast.

NATION

A cold front sent thunderstorms across the upper Mississippi Valley and central and southern Plains today, while heavy rain raised fears of flooding in sections of Texas and Wyoming.

Thunderstorms also rumbled across the upper Ohio Valley and southern Appalachians.

Fair skies prevailed from the Rockies to the Pacific Coast.

K.C. Jones calls 1986 Celtics 'Greatest'

Coach of World Champs finally admits it's so

By SAM GOLDAPER
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Through 82 victories, 67 during the regular season and 15 in the playoffs, Coach K.C. Jones, his aides, and Red Auerbach, the club's president, were repeatedly asked whether the Boston Celtics were the best team ever assembled in the 40-year history of the National Basketball Association.

Their responses were always the same. "It's the deepest and the most talented team," they would say. But they would skirt "best" by saying "We haven't won anything yet."

After the Celtics won their 16th championship in 30 years Sunday afternoon by eliminating the Houston Rockets, four games to two, Jones was again asked the question.

"Times change and the game changes," said Jones, who earned his 15th championship as a collegian, an Olympian, a pro player and a pro coach. "But during the time I've been around, I would have to say this is the greatest team ever assembled. Not only does it have great chemistry but they are the most intense and determined team I have ever been associated with."

How did Kevin McHale, who has played on three championship teams in his six Celtic seasons, rank this team?

"Call it a magical season," said the 6-foot-10-inch forward, and the leading scorer (155 points) in the final series. "Our goal from day one of training camp was to regain the championship. Long after I and everyone in this locker room is through playing, we'll look back at this season and wonder how it happened."

A year ago in the Boston Garden, McHale's 32 points and Bird's 28, were not enough as the Celtics lost their title to the Los Angeles Lakers, 111-100.

The loss highlighted the issues of age, lack of bench strength and poor outside shooting.

Auerbach found a way to solve the problems again. He traded to get Bill Walton for bench strength and Jerry Sichting for outside shooting off the bench. With the 6-11 Walton providing needed rest, 32-year-old Robert Parish played younger than his age.

No team has repeated as champion in 17 years and next season Walton will be 34 years old and Parish a year younger. But the Celtics have the second pick in a deep draft which has several good big men, McHale has proved time and again he is the best power forward in the league and Dennis Johnson's defense gets better with the years. And as long as Larry Bird can dominate a game with his passing, scoring, rebounding and defense, the way he did Sunday, the Celtics could be the team to do it.

"Bird is the best," said Jim Petersen, the Rockets' backup center-forward. "I've never seen anyone with his ability to demoralize a team. He is what the Celtics are all about. They can beat you in so many different ways and he's the answer. Teams will be chasing them again next season and we're going to be one of them."

The Rockets reached the final by eliminating the defending champion Lakers in the Western Conference final and showing that their young legs were better than the Lakers' old ones.

While the champagne was flowing in the Celtics' dressing room Sunday, Robert Reid, the Rocket guard, was saying: "There is a lot to be said about this club. We are young and we will be back next year."

Several coaches and general managers believed Reid, but they also believed that Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson, the Twin Towers, were not enough. Most believed the biggest need was for a guard who can penetrate and take some of the pressure off the big guys up front.

They also discounted Ralph Sampson's poor series in which the 7-4 center-forward scored only 89 points. Instead, they were in agreement that the experience Sampson gained in the championship series would make him a better player.

If the San Antonio Dodgers were hoping for a letdown after the Midland Angels' dramatic ninth-inning win Monday, they got it.

But it didn't do the Dodgers any good as the streaking Angels tagged San Antonio with its fourth straight loss, a ho-hum 4-1 affair Tuesday night at Angels Stadium.

The win closed the gap between the stalking Angels and the Texas League West leading El Paso Diablos to 1½ games as the crucial six-game set closing the first half of the season draws nearer. Midland travels to infamous Dudley Field for the deciding series beginning Thursday night.

Until then, Midland has some work to do with the Dodgers, and after a series-opening loss last Friday, the Angels have done the job on San Antonio, winning four straight, picking up two games on the Diablos.

"I WAS worried we would come out flat tonight after that very emotionally draining game Monday, and we did," said manager Joe Maddon. "But we got exactly what we needed — a real strong pitching performance to take the brunt off the offense. And we had the defensive plays to back it up."

The pitching came in the form of 6⅔ gutsy shutout innings from Sherman Corbett, 3-4, and the defense came in the form of three gems by second baseman Mark McLemore to choke off potential San Antonio rallies in the first three innings.

"After we picked up a game on Monday night, I think we started looking forward to playing in El Paso a little bit," Corbett said. "We didn't hit the ball like we have been. We have a lot of guys who are very competitive here, though. We're looking forward to the challenge of playing there."

The explosive hitting fireworks of the past three nights was absent Tuesday as the Angels squeezed across four runs on just four hits off Bob Hamilton, 2-3.

James "Sap" Randall continued his one-man wrecking crew imitation, however, with a home run, No. 11, in the first inning, and an rbi single in the seventh. The homer gave Sap homers in three consecutive at bats.

McWilliams' rebuilding task begins with discipline

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

David McWilliams, Texas Tech's new football coach, expects the Red Raiders to "compete" immediately and Gerald Myers, coming off two Southwest Conference basketball championships, hopes folks won't mind if he takes this year to catch his breath.

"I feel we can compete next year," says McWilliams, adding "I don't see any reason why we have to wait two or three years."

Myers returns four seniors and the rest of the squad will be composed of 10 players who are sophomores and freshmen. "It's a group that will develop into a good team....eventually. Their really good years are two or three years away."

McWilliams, Myers and Athletic Director T Jones were in Midland Tuesday for the annual Tech golf day and dinner. McWilliams, who comes to Tech after serving as an assistant at the University of Texas since 1970, has spent much of the last two months on the road, playing golfing, meeting alumni and explaining the philosophy he brings to Tech.

Yesterday San Angelo, today Midland, tomorrow Hobbs...."In July, I'm going to get away from it all and go to Colorado for a couple of weeks of fishing at Gunnison and Lake City, a couple of my favorite places."

McWilliams' football philosophy begins with discipline, "And discipline begins in the class room. That's the reason they are here, to work toward a degree. We want them in the class rooms. A lot of players think just putting on a football uniform is discipline. We are going to lose a lot of those players."

McWilliams adds, "I don't want players who will be around only one or two years. You can't build a program like that."

Tech will switch offensively from the Wishbone "where lineman have their tails up and heads down" to the I formation "where linemen will have their heads up and their tails down."

"We'll throw the ball more because we have the quarterbacks and receivers for a passing game. In the Red and Black game this spring, we threw 72 times."

As a result, Billy Joe Tolliver will get the nod at quarterback over Aaron Kissee simply because he had the better spring game. Travis Price, the freshman quarterback find from Wink last season, shifts to tight and flex end where he will receive and run with the ball, his forte.

"A spot player? Not on your life. Tyrone Thurman will be an integral part of our offense. We want to get the ball to him as often as we can on passes, reverses, punt returns, how ever we can to exploit his talents. And a lot of people aren't aware of it, but the Smurf is one of the best blockers on our team," says McWilliams of the former Lee star who will be a Tech sophomore this season.

McWilliams also is expected big things from a couple of other Lee grads, Isaac Garnett, who has been shifted to fullback, and defensive end Calvin Riggs, who had an excellent spring.

Biggest draw back. "We lack size in the offensive line, but we have pretty good depth at every other position." Injuries last year may help at at defensive tackle. Young players were forced to fill the gap and now with the injured players returning, a lot of returnees have experience.

After winning the SWC league race and tournament in 1985 and winning the tournament in 1986 to put Tech in the NCAA tournament each of the last two seasons, Myers is rebuilding and one of the newcomers will be Jerry Mason. "He will have a chance to prove himself, but he will be competing with three good senior guards."

Myers looks for Mason to make the most of the three-point basket, which will be in effect next season.

"A lot of people feel the 19 feet, nine inches is too close. In the NBA it is 22 feet. But I think that will make it more of a weapon. It won't be something a team resorts to in the final two minutes when it finds itself 10 points down.

"I also think it will loosen the congestion under the basket. The defense knows they can make the baskets from that distance and they'll have to come out and defend against the shot."

Myers says Proposition 48, the rule which requires a higher grad average and SAT test for college entrance, didn't hurt this season in recruiting, "But it will in the future."

With Tech playing championship basketball in the SWC, a sincere effort is being made to upgrade the caliber of non-conference opposition. "But in our position, we have to go there before they come here," Myers explains. "This year we got to Kansas, Kwntucky and Clemson while Wyoming will come to Lubbock."

RAIDER QUICKIES— Johnny Ringo, Greg Frazier, Dan Irons and Bill Worley teamed up to win the Scramble at Hogan Park with a 59....McWilliams said Tech recruited just one quarterback this year, but got the one it wanted in Tuey Rankin, who led Lee into the 5A playoffs last season...Bowls? Tech will be in one the second game of the season...the Orange Bowl against Miami...The Raiders open against Kansas and also face New Mexico in preconference tests. "I've followed the Tech-New Mexico series for several years and no matter what kind of team New Mexico has, they always give Tech a fit," says McWilliams...

No more blind allegiance?

Maybe the NCAA is powerless to do anything, but maybe the fans can.

The stench surrounding college athletics has fans asking where their "donations" are going. Are they really going to athletic scholarships or do they wind up as part of a slush fund for illegal payment to players?

Some, perhaps alarmed at what is going on in college athletics, are no longer sending money-no-questions-asked to athletic foundations.

They want to know if it's legitimate.

SOME University of Texas old grads are upset by the rocketing price of ticket-parking privileges and by the way they are being treated after all these years.

"Once we could get tickets in pretty good locations. Now they are in the end zone," one ex-two sport Longhorn complains. "But that really doesn't bother me as much as what it's costing. The Longhorn Foundation is charging as much as $4,000 and up. And pretty soon everybody in the conference will be doing it."

It may be that everybody in the conference is doing it already, especially at the state schools where athletic departments get their funds through tickets sales, alumni, tv and booster groups.

What has the T-man fuming is a letter from the "Longhorn Foundation" which details a preferred ticket-privilege plan to raise fund for the University of Texas athletics.

The tariff ranges from Varsity Circle ($150-$299) to Gold Card ($4,000 and up). In between are Victory Circle ($300-$449), Coach's Circle ($450-$599), Orange & White Circle ($600-$999), Bronze Card ($1,000-$1,900) and Texas Tower Club ($2,000-$3,999).

According to the brochure, "The primary purpose of the Longhorn Foundation is to provide scholarship funding for student-athletes in all varsity sports."

This particular prospect rebels when it comes to the arm-twisting area of the brochure.

Benefits, it tempts the reader, "A gift to the Longhorn Foundation of $150 or more establishes, or continues your participation and provides recognition opportunities as outlined in the Annual Recognition Benefit Chart....

"Every dollar contributed will accrue one point for recognition purposes...

"Opportunities for seat assignments (football, basketball and baseball) on a season basis will be based on the current contribution (point total) and the cumulative total when improvements are requested....Once season ticket locations have been assigned, you may continue to retain that location by making the same annual contribution and purchasing season tickets...

The pitching matchup between California's Don Sutton and Chicago's Tom Seaver on Monday night featured a combined victory total of 604. That was one less than the record set on Aug. 25, 1923, when Washington's Walter Johnson, with 303 victories, and Chicago's Red Faber, with 197, faced each other. Johnson defeated Faber 3-2, and Sutton beat Seaver 3-0.

Carter's 5-for-5 sparks Indians

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

In Kansas City, Detroit, Chicago and Milwaukee, it was raining. For George Brett and Joe Carter, it was raining basehits.

Brett and Carter both went 5-for-5 in victories Tuesday night, an evening dominated by downpours in the American League. Four games were held up at the start by showers.

After a rain delay of almost two hours, Brett recorded his five-hit game and led Kansas City over Seattle 9-5. Brett hit a double and four singles, scored three runs and drove in one as Kansas City broke the Mariners' seven-game winning streak at Royals Stadium, dating back to Sept. 9, 1984.

"It's good to get a win any time, but I guess we ought to be especially happy with this one," Royals Manager Dick Howser said.

Carter, who misplayed a grounder at first base that helped Oakland score three unearned runs in the first inning, drove in four runs with two doubles and three singles as the Cleveland Indians downed the A's 8-7.

"I said, 'Well, I've got to get three hits and knock in three runs just to get even,' " Carter said.

Carter doubled home the tying run with one out in the ninth inning and scored the game-winner on a single by Mel Hall. Carter's first five-hit game — which came one day after the end of his 21-game hitting streak, the longest in the major leagues this season — sent Oakland to its seventh straight loss.

Oakland took a 6-0 lead after two innings in Cleveland before the Indians began their comeback. Carter's third run-scoring single of the game tied it 6-6 in the seventh.

Dave Kingman, who hit a two-run double off Phil Niekro in the first inning, hit his 13th homer of the season with two outs in the top of the ninth to put the A's ahead 7-6.

But the Indians rallied again in the bottom of the ninth. Tony Bernazard singled with one out off Jose Rijo, 2-4, and Carter followed with an RBI single that made it 7-7. After Andre Thornton walked, Hall hit a line drive that fell in front of diving center fielder Stan Javier for the game-winning hit.

"I like to atone for my errors, and today I got a chance to do it," Carter said.

Rangers 14, Twins 10

Geno Petralli drove in five runs and Pete O'Brien homered, keying a 17-hit attack that carried Texas over Minnesota.

Petralli, O'Brien and Toby Harrah had three hits each for the visiting Rangers. The Twins lost despite getting 20 hits, including three doubles by Gary Gaetti and four singles from Kent Hrbek.

Texas took the lead for good in the seventh inning, scoring three times to erase a 9-8 deficit. O'Brien hit a leadoff homer that tied the score, an error by shortstop Greg Gagne put the Rangers ahead and Harrah delivered an RBI single.

Petralli hit a two-run double, his second of the game, in the ninth inning and Gary Ward added a sacrifice fly for his third RBI of the game.

Yankees 6, Tigers 3

Don Mattingly's homer keyed a four-run fourth inning and Mike Easler hit a pair of RBI doubles that led New York over Detroit.

The loss, which came after a 52-minute delay, was the Tigers' ninth defeat in 11 games.

Mattingly, who had homered twice at Tiger Stadium on Monday night, had three hits.

Joe Niekro, 7-3, gave up five hits in 6 2-3 innings. Dave Righetti got the final two outs for his 13th save.

Brewers 6, Orioles 3

Rookie Bill Wegman pitched a six-hitter and Ernest Riles hit a two-run homer as Milwaukee beat Baltimore for its fourth straight victory.

White Sox 7, Angels 3

Harold Baines hit a two-run triple and Carlton Fisk added three hits, including a two-run single, giving Chicago its victory over California.

Royals 9, Mariners 5

Brett combined with Jorge Orta, who drove in three runs with two doubles and a pair of singles, to highlight an 18-hit attack that carried Kansas City over Seattle.

Red Sox 4, Blue Jays 3

Mike Stenhouse drew a bases-loaded walk from Toronto reliever Mark Eichhorn in the top of the 10th inning, nudging Boston past the Blue Jays.

Dyer loses cool in heat of chase

Associated Press

Duffy Dyer, manager of the El Paso Diablos, was mad after his team's 9-8 loss to Beaumont Tuesday night in El Paso.

He escorted the umpire crew off the field after the game, chewing them out along the way, then bowled over the bat rack before ducking into the clubhouse.

But once there, Dyer was ready to write off the crucial loss as "just one of those nights" — a night in which opportunity was wiped out repeatedly, often on a controversial call by umpires.

Dyer's frustrations began in the fourth inning, when Beaumont hit for the cycle in the fourth inning with a single, double, triple and home run, scoring four runs. The double and triple both hit chalk down the right field line.

In El Paso's half of the fourth, the Diablos got three hits and Beaumont committed an error, but the Diablos failed to score. John Gibbons, who led off with a double, was thrown out at the plate after Charlie O'Brien singled.

In the sixth, Alan Cartwright appeared to have caught a fly ball in the sixth, but it fell to the ground. Cartwright said he dropped the ball after the catch while pulling it from his glove. The umpire disagreed and Bill Wrona wound up scoring an unearned run to put the Golden Gators ahead 8-5.

Gibbons led off the bottom of the ninth with a double, but was thrown out at third on an attempted sacrifice bunt by O'Brien. Dyer, coaching at third, argued that Gibbons was safe. After Bob Nandin walked, Bates hit a foul home run, then walked. Steve Stanicek followed with a single to left, but O'Brien was thrown out at the plate.

"Everybody in the park new he was safe except the umpire," Dyer said. "He started to call him safe, then rang him up."

The streak hitting Randall carries an eight game hitting streak with 11 rbi while going 19-for-32 (.594).

Randall's homer put Midland ahead, 1-0, and it looked like that might be enough for a while. But a pair of errors by Dodger shortstop Gary Newsom, one in the fifth and one in the sixth, helped Midland tack on solo runs for a 3-0 edge.

MEANWHILE, CORBETT was working in and out of jams all evening, spreading seven hits and three walks while San Antonio stranded six runners in the first six innings. But when the big lefty got into a jam in the seventh, Maddon had seen enough.

Once the late innings came around, DeWayne Buice was there to mop up. Buice came in to strike out the righthanded Michael Devereaux to end the seventh, then finished up the eighth and ninth — allowing the lone run on a pair of hits — for his sixth save of the season.

"I didn't really have good stuff to begin the game with, but I got my fastball working down and in. Then my slider kicked in and then the slider was it in the later innings," said Corbett, the Texas A&M product.

NOW WITH just one game left at home before taking off for the Border City, the Angels are looking forward to putting some pressure on the front running Diablos.

For those who like countdowns, the "magic number," the mathematical elimination figure in most pennant races, is a gray area in this case because the two teams will not play the same number of games. Because of rainouts, Midland will play one less game than the Diablos and the first half title will be decided by winning percentage.

The easiest way to describe the Angels' plight is this: No matter what the two teams do tonight, Midland is faced with winning at least four games on the Diablos' home field.

Duncan makes Franco see red

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

Cincinnati relief pitcher John Franco saw the Dodgers' Mariano Duncan dash home from second base with the winning run on a ground ball. And then saw red.

Duncan's daring ninth-inning baserunning gave Los Angeles a 1-0 victory and the Reds cause for protest Tuesday night.

Duncan led off the bottom of the ninth with a single and advanced to second on a sacrifice. Enos Cabell was intetionally walked by Franco and Bill Madlock followed with a hard grounder to third baseman Buddy Bell.

What followed was a page right out the Maury Wills' playbook.

Bell threw to second for the force on Cabell and when Madlock was called safe at first by umpire Terry Tata on a bang-bang play, Duncan kept coming, never breaking a stride.

First baseman Tony Perez, surprised by Duncan's dare, winged home a throw to catcher Bo Diaz. On came Duncan and the call from veteran umpire Harry Wendelstedt: Safe!

"I don't mind losing, but it was a bad call," an angry Franco said. "There were two bad calls on one play. Duncan was out by three feet."

"I think the guy at first base (Madlock) was out, too," Perez said.

When the dust had cleared, Franco, Diaz, Manager Pete Rose and several Reds charged Wendelstedt to argue as the Dodgers celebrated.

"I was right on top of the plate," Wendelstedt said. "I called it the way I felt it was. I thought the runner's feet got to the plate before their man tagged him. So I called him out. That's all you can do."

"I think I was safe," Duncan said. "He tagged me right here (pointing to his upper chest) and my foot was on the plate."

The Reds' Chris Welsh retired the first 13 batters before Mike Marshall grounded a one-out single through the hole between third and short in the fifth inning.

Cincinnati couldn't generate much offense either against Rick Honeycutt. The Dodgers' left-hander allowed five hits over the first eight innings but was helped by double plays in the first three innings.

"I thought the man (Duncan) was out," said Rose. "I know the throw beat him and that Bo was on top of the plate.

"Harry's a real good umpire, but I can't convince myself the guy was safe. If he was, my pitcher's not going to react that way, my catcher's not going to react that way and my second baseman is not going to react that way."

Mets 8, Phillies 4

Tim Teufel hit his first major-league grand slam with one out in the 11th inning to lift the Mets.

With the scored tied 4-4, Teufel, hitting for Wally Backman, hit a 2-0 pitch from reliever Tom Hume over the left-field fence. The Phillies used a five-man infield and two outfielders in an effort to cut down the winning run, but Teufel made sure nobody on the field would have a chance.

"It was a great feeling," Teufel said. "It couldn't have happened at a better time. Last night I had a chance to come through but I didn't. Tonight I reversed it and did the job."

Gary Carter drove in the Mets' first four runs with his ninth and 10th homers of the season and an RBI single.

Expos 4, Cardinals 2

Tim Wallach drove in three runs with a double and a sacrifice fly and Jay Tibbs combined with two relievers on a five-hitter to drop the defending NL champions 16 games behind first-place New York in the NL East.

St. Louis for the 32nd time in 54 games scored fewer than four runs, a statistic that left Manager Whitey Herzog admittedly perplexed.

"We've got a chance," Herzog said when asked if the Cards are headed toward setting some type of record for futility. "We're just not a good baseball team. I don't know if we're not thinking, or what."

Tibbs won for the first time in eight starts since April 30, striking out five and walking two over six innings. Tim Burke came on after Mike LaValliere walked and Ozzie Smith singled in St. Louis' seventh, and Jeff Reardon pitched two scoreless innings to record his 14th save.

Pirates 6, Cubs 4

Sid Bream hit a three-run homer and Rafael Belliard drove in three runs as Pittsburgh defeated Chicago.

Belliard is batting .218 on the season, but 9-for-17 (.429) against Chicago.

"I'm seeing the ball real well at the plate," Belliard said. "When men are on base, I'm trying to hit the ball to right field and move the runners up and the ball is falling in."

Bob Kipper allowed seven hits in seven innings, striking out six and walking one. Cecilio Guante came on with the bases loaded to record the final two outs for his second save.

Astros 12, Padres 1

Bob Knepper became the NL's first 10-game winner by tossing a four-hitter against San Diego.

Knepper, 10-3, did not walk a batter and struck out five in recording his sixth complete game of the season. His shutout bid was dashed in the eighth inning when Terry Kennedy led off with his fourth homer.

"Ten wins doesn't mean that much ... it just means you've had a good first couple of months," said Knepper, who has started 5-0 the last two seasons.

Kevin Bass and Bill Doran paced a 15-hit Astro attack with home runs.

Giants 3, Braves 0

For the second time this season San Francisco's Vida Blue and Jeff Robinson teamed up to pitch a shutout.

Shinnecock awes pros

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — Flags whipped from their poles and the tall, golden beach grass bent in the bright sunshine Monday as a 20-mile-per-hour northwest wind turned the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club course into a near perfect example of what a links course is supposed to be.

So on this first official day of practice for the 86th U.S. Open that starts Thursday, the course presented itself to competitors in all its beauty and majestic strength and drew rave reviews from the world's most uncompromising critics in golf — those touring pros who must play in the Open later this week.

Frank Hannigan, senior executive director of the U.S. Golf Association, said: "If only this would hold all week. Then what an Open it will be."

David Graham, the Australian who won the 1981 Open at Merion in Ardmore, Pa., said, "This is the finest course I have played in the United States except possibly for Pine Valley."

Peter Jacobsen, who tied for 11th in the British Open on a stormy Royal St. George's last July, said, "This reminds me so much of Royal St. George's and the other fine links courses we play in Europe."

It may be too much to expect this weather to hold all week. But golf under conditions like Monday's would make this one of the finest Open tests in history. The chances are there will be days with calm weather and some time with more violent winds when survival will be more important than skill.

Graham, however, acted as if he was in golf heaven.

"The thing that really stands out to me is the design of the greens," he said. "The par-4 greens are open in the front. There is not a lot of trouble through the greens. All the trouble is left of the greens and all the trouble is right of the greens.

"The wind, of course, is very difficult. But this golf course was designed so you can play in the wind. If you have the ability to keep the ball low and bounce it on the green in the wind, you can play here. They do not force you to hit a high shot over junk and bunkers in front of greens the way they do on so many courses that don't take wind into account.

"But miss the greens — look out."

"It is much more than I expected," said Mark McCumber, the Floridian who has four victories on the PGA Tour. "They talk about how we haven't played an Open in this country on this kind of course. Heck, we haven't played any kind of tournament on this kind of course in the eight years I've been on the tour. It's going to be fun. The whole atmosphere feels like a British Open to me. And there's nothing wrong with that. I like it."

Forget that assault charge

OROVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Boxer Bobby Chacon and the woman he is accused of assaulting are home from their honeymoon.

The 34-year-old fighter told the Enterprise-Record in Chico Tuesday that he and Renee Vincent, 25, exchanged wedding vows Saturday in a private ceremony at a town near Reno.

"It was just great," said the two-time world boxing champion.

Chacon said he couldn't recall the name of the town or the chapel where the pair were married, but said the marriage took place in California because of restrictions placed on him by a judge.

His new bride will testify at his preliminary hearing scheduled Thursday, said Chacon, adding that she will say that he slapped her, and didn't hit her with his fist, after she struck him as they drove in his car near Chico.

Chief Deputy District Attorney Michael Ramsey said last week that Chacon's bride would not be automatically immune from testifying by invoking the right not to testify against a spouse. He said she had knowledge of the alleged attack before their marriage.

Chacon denied striking his wife with his fist, as she had been quoted as saying in initial police reports. According to hospital reports, she suffered a fractured nose.

"Hell, no," he said. "I wouldn't hit a woman with a punch. I must have slapped her pretty hard though to cause those injuries."

Chacon said they had been to dinner at a Chico restaurant and began arguing. He said she told him that she wanted to move out of his Oroville home, but that he didn't get upset until she slapped him.

"I told Renee, 'I would slap you if you don't leave me alone,'" he recalled. "I slapped her once and she didn't do it no more."

FUND

"PARKING will be available based on the amount of the annual contribution and whether or not you are a season ticket-holder in a specific sport. As an example, if you contribute $150 to football then you must be a season ticket holder to receive parking. For individuals who are season ticket holders in football, basketball and baseball, a gift of $450 would be necessary to receive parking in each sport...."

The foreword of the letter is by AD DeLoss Dodds, but "They don't identify any of the people handling the contributions or those actually in charge. As far as I'm concerned that just isn't enough explanation."

"I've talked with Ernie Koy and Harrison Stafford and they are upset as well. We all feel there are a lot of questions that have gone unanswered."

Koy, of course, is a Texas legend, a football and baseball star who went from Austin to the Brooklyn Dodgers back in the 1930s. His son played in the Wishbone backfield national championship team of 1969.

In checking with a Texas alumnus, closely associated with athletics, but not connected with the Longhorn Foundation, the explanation is that the Foundation is legitimate enough. "And Mike Campbell is in charge. If any one lives by the rules, it's Mike."

If nothing else, the turmoil at virtually every SWC school over the last couple of years has some fans asking who, why, where and what for? That may not be the cure for the woes in college athletics, but may be it's a start.

JIM MURRAY

They called him Frantic Francis

They called him frantic Francis. They couldn't keep him in the pocket, not two generations of coaches, not relays of 250-pound defensive ends, blitzing linebackers, not life itself. He gave elusivity a new dimension.

The eyes give him away. He's not physically prepossessing at 5 feet 11 inches and 190 pounds, but the eyes are the eyes of a forest creature on the prowl for food and on the lookout for enemies. Or of a guy with his own deck looking for suckers. They are survivors' eyes, wary, inquisitive, quick.

This is the look of a guy asked to go through Indian territory at night with only a map and a canteen, which is a fair description of his life in the NFL. You can tell that every sense is alert. He looks like a guy who never sleeps and rarely stands still.

He is football's equivalent of Bugs Bunny. His whole career was a Saturday afternoon serial. He made "The Perils of Pauline" look like "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

In the NFL, the suspense is supposed to be whether anybody can catch the ball. With Francis, the suspense was whether he would ever throw it. He ran for more yards than any quarterback whoever lived. And that was only the ones beyond the line of scrimmage. If you counted the yards behind, he has more than any running back who ever lived.

He wasn't fast, he didn't have the strongest arm. He tended to dart, duck, twist and squirm. "Hit 'em where they ain't" was baseball player Wee Willie Keeler's motto. Francis threw it where they weren't.

By any yardstick you want to use, Francis Asbury Tarkenton was the best quarterback pro football ever had. He threw for more touchdowns, 342; more yards, 47,003, and more completions, 3,686, than any other quarterback who ever lived. He took his team to three Super Bowls in four years. He ran for 30 more touchdowns and 3,669 yards.

Which makes you wonder why Fran Tarkenton didn't get into the Pro Football Hall of Fame till this year, three years after his initial eligibility. He threw for 52 more touchdowns than any quarterback who ever played, had nearly 1,000 more completions and almost 7,000 more yards. You would think the Hall of Fame would have come to him.

The rap against Fran Tarkenton has always been that he threw short passes, that his completions were just complicated handoffs. The spuriousness of this argument can be seen in the yards rolled up, 4 to 20 miles more than other Hall of Fame quarterbacks like John Unitas, Sonny Jurgensen or Roger Staubach.

Tarkenton rebuts the charge. "In the first place, the long ball is the easiest to throw," he says. "The Hail Mary is a test of luck, not skill. It's like putting a note in a bottle and launching it over the side. If the arm were all there were to quarterbacking, a guy named Rudy Bukich was the greatest quarterback who ever played. He could throw the ball overseas."

Tarkenton also says that his scrambles were actually artful geometric patterns. They looked on paper like a chart of a Rube Goldberg invention: Player A takes ball to Point B where he bumps into Defensive End C and reverses his field to Point D where water is dripped into hole which makes Linebacker E slip and allows Player A to duck under arm (F) and release ball (G) into air where it skids off helmet (H) of Cornerback I into waiting arms of Tight End J, who falls over Safety K into end zone for touchdown.

"I was never out of control back there," says Tarkenton.

"You see, what the drop-back quarterbacks would do, they would peel back 20 yards or roll right 15 yards, then they would throw to a wide-out who had gone down the field 15 yards and then ran an 'out' to the left sideline. So, what you're talking about is a 50-or 60-yard pass to make 10 or 15 yards.

"I would scramble to a prepared position. I would never release a ball 30 or 35 yards behind the line of scrimmage. My purpose in scrambling was twofold: tire out the pass rushers and psych out the secondary.

"So, the theory gained credence: If Tarkenton has to scramble and run, he must not be a very good passer. If you can punch, why box? One time, the Green Bay Packers decided, 'OK, we won't rush him.' They stopped their pass rush. I picked them apart. The next time, they came in with their ears laid back and growling again.

"A quarterback is a passer, not a thrower. Fernando Valenzuela doesn't need a 100-m.p.h. fastball. Putting the ball where you want it is more important than putting it in orbit."

The world still can't keep him in the pocket. Tarkenton was through town the other day and he still manages to go through a hotel lobby as if it were stacked with Deacon Joneses, who used to say he trained for a game against Tarkenton by locking himself in a room full of mosquitoes and turning out the lights. You find Tarkenton by looking for the nearest cloud of dust.

He looks at an interviewer as if he were deciding whether a down-and-out, a simple swing pass or a quarterback sneak were called for. His television career – "That's Incredible" and "Monday Night Football" – behind him, he is now concentrating on his advertising and motivational business, Tarkenton Production Group.

"We deal in telling company executives how to be executives," he said. "We tell them you cannot ignore good behavior and only attend to the bad behavior, which is the way most people seem to run their businesses – and lives."

No records kept on Cougars' 'gifts-in-kind'

HOUSTON (AP) — About $2.5 million in gifts-in-kind was given to the University of Houston Athletic Department, but no records were kept on who received the money or how it was spent, the Houston Chronicle reported Tuesday.

Houston's athletic department has only skimpy records for another $500,000 in gifts collected in the 1984-85 school year, with few receipts showing how the money was spent, the Chronicle reported in a copyright story.

Before the 1984-85 athletic year, records don't exist, athletic department officials said.

Tom Ford, who resigned Friday as athletic director, said the school's central administration was at fault for not keeping records in earlier years. In 1979, the university hired Ford as a fund-raiser for the athletic department.

The school's Cougar Athletic Fund raised $7.3 million between 1980 and 1985. About $3 million of that amount was gifts-in-kind, which the athletic department refers to as trade-outs, school officials said.

The gifts included automobiles, vans, dental care, furniture, accounting and legal services, podiatry services, air tickets, clothing, jewelry, liquor, beer, food and liquor in restaurants, coffee and 1,600 rib-eye steaks, the newspaper said.

Radio stations donated air time to publicize the Cougars, and the university received thousands of dollars in billboard space.

In the 1983-84 academic year, almost as much was given in trade-outs — $829,787 — to the Cougars as in cash — $869,749, the newspaper said.

The newspaper made repeated requests under the Texas Open Records Law stretching over a two-month period. Houston's athletic department said through a spokesman that no records of how those gifts were disposed of were ever made before last year.

The university did provide records of what trade-outs were given to the school, but even the records of the specific gifts were usually lacking in detail, the Chronicle reported.

The list includes lodging in hotels and apartments, and tickets from the operator of one of Houston's adult theaters.

Ford said the athletic department had not devised a system to keep track of the gifts before the 1984-85 year.

"We requested assistance from the treasurer's office and gift records across campus," Ford said. "They didn't want to be bothered with it. So we utilized those gifts-in-kind as we needed them. Some were used and some were not."

MDs studying Ormsby case

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Hospital officials said today they are waiting for distance runner Kathy Ormsby's condition to stabilize before transferring her to Duke University Medical Center.

Ormsby suffered spinal damage and permanent paralysis of her legs in a jump from a 50-foot bridge last week.

Ormsby, 21, a pre-med student at North Carolina State, was injured last Wednesday after dropping out of the women's 10,000-meter run at the NCAA Track and Field Championships. She ran from the Indiana University Track Stadium and jumped from the nearby New York Street bridge over the White River in an apparent suicide attempt, police said.

Karen Wilczewski, a spokeswoman for Wishard Memorial Hospital, said Ormsby remained in stable condition today.

Ormsby's father, Dale Ormsby, has said he wanted his daughter transferred to the Durham, N.C., hospital so she could be closer to the family's home in Rockingham.

Argentina, Italy past soccer wins

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Defending champion Italy and 1978 winner Argentina, looking shaky and sometimes lethargic, eased into the second round of the World Cup Tuesday with victories.

Argentina beat Bulgaria 2-0 to clinch Group A, while the Italians wound up second in the division after a 3-2 decision over South Korea. With a 2-0-1 record, the Argentines secured a berth opposite one of the four third-place qualifiers for the next round. That game will be played next Monday in Puebla.

At Puebla on Tuesday, Italy upped its record to 1-0-2 behind a hat trick by Sandro Altobelli, who has scored all five of his team's goals in the tournament. The Italians will face European champion France here next Tuesday.

FIFA, the international governing body for soccer, confirmed Tuesday night that Mexico, Paraguay and West Germany also have made the next round after the results of Monday and Tuesday. The hosts and Paraguay each have three points and the worst they could do — even with Wednesday losses in Group B to Iraq and Belgium respectively — is earn one of the berths awarded to the four best third place teams.

West Germany can finish no worse than third in Group E with its three points and that would be enough to advance.

Argentina scored early and late to down the listless Bulgarians, who showed virtually no attack. Bulgaria has never won a World Cup game in 15 tries, going 0-9-6.

Can beseiged city take another victory?

MEXICO CITY (AP) — With a barricade placed around a central monument vandalized in the first outburst of World Cup revelry, the city braced for a major celebration after the national team's Wednesday game against Iraq.

Mexico already has qualified for the second round of the 24-team tournament but was hoping for a victory over Iraq, which would clinch first place in Group B.

A victory would give fans a chance to celebrate with the enthusiasm that was stolen from them in the final minutes of Saturday's disappointing 1-1 tie with Paraguay.

A late goal by Paraguay, followed by a missed penalty kick by Hugo Sanchez — the nation's soccer hero who appears in advertisements for everything from automobiles to soft drinks — took the life out of what had been expected to be a weekend-long fiesta.

By the end of Saturday night, the parties were reduced to small groups of die-hard revelers mostly offering catcalls for Sanchez instead of the previous exuberant shouts of "Mexico, Mexico."

Security measures already were in place after the initial outburst of World Cup celebration ended with a clash between police and about 2,000 people in the pre-dawn hours June 4 at the Angel of Indendence. The soaring column atop a crypt containing remains of Mexican independence heroes was damaged in those celebrations.

Police said some of the celebrants doused the eternal flame on the monument and broke off pieces of statues from its base, which is in a traffic circle on the broad Reforma Boulevard.

Since then, the number of security agents on duty following Mexico's games has been increased. Six areas were designated as sites for celebration.

Those sites include entertainment as part of the effort to decrease congestion and avoid a repeat of the first, spontaneous celebration that brought at least 100,000 fans onto downtown streets.

There has been widespread criticism, however, of the behavior of some of the Mexican fans.

Pele, who led Brazil to the championship when Mexico hosted it in 1970, is among the critics.

"I have praised and cheered the genuine emotions of the Mexican public ... but when the emotions degenerate into unruliness I have to draw the line," Pele said.

Pele added: "I deplore the type of aggression that the minority (visitors) are experiencing on the part of the Latin Americans, especially the Mexican rioters."

Corner Kick

It was hot in Dallas last Saturday with both the temperature and humidity in the 90s, but Brandon Lang and Chris Gordon, two Midland Soccer Association goalkeepers, were even hotter in leading their teams in the Texas Open Youth tournament.

Lang surrendered only three goals in five games as the Midland Terrors won the U-10 boys division. The Terrors won in Group D Saturday, defeating Garland in the second round and Fort Worth in the quarterfinals. The Terrors were winning their semifinal 1-0 when rain halted play Sunday.

The Terrors' 27 goals in five previous games was best in the tournament and earned the Midlanders the state title when play could not be resumed....

The U-14 Silver Bullets advanced from Group D Saturday with the help of Gordon's three straight shuouts. Although the Bullets were losing their quarterfinal when the rains came Sunday, their play in the tournament was still impressive....

Midland's U-19 Vikings tied champion Dallas 2-2 in Group A play Saturday, but did not advance as Dallas scored better in previous games....

Although MSA youth teams have posted impressive results in out-of-town tournament play the last few years, the Terrors' championship was the first Open title for a Midland Youth team in the nine-year history of the MSA.

Neither vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ?

"There are no blind opening leads; just deaf opening leaders," wrote the bridge scribe. This hand bears eloquent testimony to his observation.

Since North-South can make a slam in either minor suit, the auction could hardly be described as a thing of beauty. Perhaps South could have been a little more enterprising at his third turn. However, minor-suit slams are notoriously difficult to bid, especially at duplicate, and when this hand was played in a pair tournament, the popular contract was three no trump, usually making three overtricks.

At one table, however, West had paid due attention to the auction. North's spade bid showed a feature, not length—had he had a genuine spade suit he would have introduced it at the one-level. And South seemed to have been waiting to hear about a spade stopper for no trump purposes; certainly his jump to three no trump indicated he was not worried about clubs.

Therefore, West decided that he would lead a spade, and he found the killing card: the ten! No matter what declarer elected to do, he had no way to prevent the defenders from scoring four spade tricks and the ace of clubs.

Note that, if declarer guesses the position, he can make the contract with any other spade lead. If West leads the king, declarer can win the ace and force out the ace of clubs—the jack of spades is safe from attack. And if West chooses the low spade declarer can come to two tricks in the suit simply by playing low.

Brother of hostage eulogized

BATAVIA, N.Y. (AP) — Glenn R. Anderson Jr., the brother of Middle East hostage Terry Anderson, was eulogized as a brave man who struggled against cancer most his life before succumbing to the disease.

In an emotional appeal videotaped from his hospital bed last Tuesday, Glenn Anderson pleaded with his brother's abductors in Lebanon to release Terry so they could see each other one more time.

But Glenn, 46, died of lung cancer Saturday while being flown from Batavia to spend his final days at his home in Ocala, Fla. His taped plea was played Tuesday on Lebanese state television.

Terry Anderson, 38, the Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped from a Beirut street on March 16, 1985. He is among five Americans abducted in Beirut and believed still being held.

Anderson's sister, Peggy Say, who has been the chief family spokesman in the struggle to win freedom for her brother, spoke in a sometimes choked voice to about 100 family members and friends at a memorial service Tuesday for Glenn Jr. in a Batavia funeral home.

"Each member of our family has shown strength and courage beyond what any of us should be reasonably expected to display during our lifetime," she said. But Glenn Jr., she said, showed "a special brand of courage."

She tearfully recalled how her mother died 10 years ago while undergoing an operation she knew she wouldn't survive. Mrs. Say's father, Glenn Sr., 69, died on her birthday last Feb. 15, she said, while struggling to live so he might see Terry again.

Glenn Jr., whom she called Rich, had cancer at 15 and wasn't expected to live, but he survived, only to be stricken by Hodgkin's Disease in his early 20s, she said. With chemotherapy he overcame that, too, she said, because he "willed himself to live. But finally he faced a battle he was destined not to win."

DENVER (AP) — Rain forced the party inside, but the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band celebrated its 20th anniversary with a star-studded concert including Emmylou Harris, Ricky Scaggs and others.

"Get up on your feet right now. We're going to have a big time tonight," Skaggs told the appreciative audience before he introduced the Dirt Band during Tuesday night's concert-celebration.

"We decided that we'd make a big deal out of ourselves for one night and we're awfully honored that they're coming in here to play with us," said one of the Dirt Band's members, Jimmy Ibbotson, earlier Tuesday.

"These are people whose paths have crossed ours in the past 20 years," said John McEuen, another member of the group. "Everybody who could make it agreed to come."

The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band first performed together in Orange, Calif., on May 13, 1966, and four years later roared up the charts with its signature song, "Mr. Bojangles."

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Astronaut James Irwin's condition has been upgraded to fair four days after he suffered cardiac arrest while jogging near his home, hospital officials say.

Irwin, who was the eighth American to walk on the moon, will spend at least another week in Penrose Hospital, his cardiologist, Dr. Richard Mootheart said Tuesday. "He's improving very well. He'll be up to anything he wants to do."

Irwin was conscious Tuesday and still "somewhat disoriented," said Kitty Bethune of the Penrose community relations office.

Doctors expect total recovery of Irwin's brain functions, Mootheart said.

Irwin, 56, suffered his first heart attack in 1973, at age 43, while playing handball. He underwent cardiac bypass surgery in 1977, but later that year suffered a second heart attack.

Geldof

LONDON (AP) — Irish rock star Bob Geldof, awarded an honorary knighthood for his work on behalf of the starving people of Africa, says he hopes "to be the first knight in the charts."

Queen Elizabeth II made the award Tuesday. Because he is not a British citizen, Geldof will not be Sir Bob Geldof, but Bob Geldof, KBE — which stands for Knight Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire.

The award was made on the recommendation of Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe because of the work Geldof has done in organizing Band Aid, Live Aid, and last month's Sport Aid, rallying worldwide support and contributions of millions of dollars to help the drought-stricken countries of Africa.

The absence of Geldof's name from the queen's regular list of knighthoods and other honors at New Year's brought sharp public criticism of the government, which selects the people to be honored by the queen.

Geldof, contacted by telephone in Los Angeles, Calif., where he is visiting, said, "I am delighted and deeply honored, and would like to thank her majesty very much."

Vincent

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — Jan-Michael Vincent, star of television's "Airwolf," will not be charged with drunken driving because there's is not sufficient proof he was under the infuence of alcohol, a prosecutor says.

Vincent's blood-alcohol level was 0.08 percent when he was arrested May 15 in Moorpark, 30 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles, said Deputy District Attorney Robert Irmas on Tuesday. The legal limit is 0.10 percent.

Vincent's manager, Jim Golden, said the actor was "just very, very pleased" by the decision.

Dollar declines

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar suffered heavy losses on European currency exchanges today, yielding three pfennigs to the West German mark and losing nearly two cents to the British pound. Gold retreated after gaining strongly earlier this week.

No clear reason for the dollar's decline was evident, although dealers said prospects of higher British interest rates were boosting the pound. New York dealers said earlier that renewed fears of a Mexican debt crisis and expectations of U.S. economic indicators showing lower activity also worked against the dollar.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar resumed its decline after a brief rebound, closing 1.65 yen down from Tuesday at 166.70.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.532, compared with $1.5135 Tuesday.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

—2.2055 West German marks, down from 2.2385

—1.818 Swiss francs, down from 1.8405

—7.0275 French francs, down from 7.10

Gold was lower after gains of up to $6 Monday prompted by fears of worsening crisis in South Africa, the world's biggest gold producer.

Platinum was also down in London, from $440.50 a troy ounce to $436.50.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $347.50 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $348.70. A mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $347.50.

In Zurich, the noon bid price was $347.50, down from $348 late Tuesday.

Hong Kong markets were closed for a holiday. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery fell $3 to close at $348.10 an ounce.

Despite the addition of 202,000 sq. ft. of additional retail space with the construction of Midland Plaza, occupancy rates at Midland shopping centers remains stable.

Retail occupancy remains stable

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Local retail centers are experiencing slightly higher occupancy rates, despite the effects of the oil crunch on Midland's economy, according to a recent survey conducted by the Chamber of Commerce.

Even with the addition of two new centers this year, and the expansion of another, occupancy rates at the city's retail centers remain stable.

With approximately 2,620,033 square feet of retail space available to Midland shoppers, including the addition of new Midland Plaza, occupancy stands at just over 76 percent. This compares to 75 percent in a survey conducted in September by the Reporter-Telegram.

However, since then, two new shopping areas have been added to the inventory. One, the Midland Plaza, with a total of 202,000 sq. ft. of shopping space available, is 70 percent leased, as a result of its two anchor stores, Mervyn's and Service Merchandise. The strip in the complex is still in the process of completion and rental. Both Mervyn's and Service Merchandise have reported good sales in spite of the downturn in the economy.

One of the strongest occupancy showings from recently completed shopping centers comes from Market Manor which has added 21,315 sq. ft. of retail space on Midland's northwest side, and is enjoying an 80 percent occupancy rate. Classified as a specialty center, its tenants include doctor's offices, a dental clinic and a pharmacy, as well as a 24-hour emergency clinic.

Additional shopping space was added with the expansion of Westwood Village on the city's southwest side, but the 25,000 sq. ft. expansion is yet to add tenants. Anchors in the entire center are Safeway and Revco.

Lone Star Plaza continues to flounder, posting only a 5 percent rate of occupancy. A year ago, surveys indicated 10 percent occupancy at the center. Also continuing to struggle is Mission Square Plaza, with only 18 percent of its space being leased. But some improvement may be seen here if rumors that a restaurant facility is soon to occupy the former People's Restaurant hold true.

New loan package for Mexico likely

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Agreement on a $5 billion to $6 billion package of new loans to help Mexico cope with its debts and deteriorating economy is near, Reagan administration and international banking authorities indicated Tuesday.

"I think a decision is pretty likely soon," said a senior officer of a multilateral lending institution, who like others insisted on anonymity, "I think it will come within days."

A representative for an organization of the world's leading commercial banks added, "It looks like it could happen this week."

Such officials said the prolonged deliberations over Mexico's difficulties, partly brought on by the plunge in the country's revenues from oil exports, had reached a new urgency in recent days with a 30 percent collapse in the peso's value before it stabilized late Monday.

Mexico owes its foreign creditors $97 billion, of which $74 billion is owed to commercial banks and the rest to governments. A third of the $74 billion is owed to American banks.

In testimony Tuesday before a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee, David C. Mulford, assistant Treasury secretary for international affairs, spoke less harshly of the Mexico's economic management than such officials often have in the past. He cited the earlier economic "sacrifices of the Mexican people" and their "onerous" adjustment to this year's 50 percent fall in oil prices.

Mulford declined to say when an agreement would be completed. But in his appearance before the Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs, he suggested that the details of a one-year agreement had been largely resolved.

He said the accord included "something like" $1 billion from the International Monetary Fund; $1 billion from the World Bank; $2.5 billion to $2.7 billion from banks in the United States and other industrial nations; $600 million to $900 million from an informal association of major-country treasuries known as the Paris Club, and an amount he declined to specify for an unusual feature of the package, a trade-promotion loan from the government of Japan.

The Reagan administration, which had been viewing the Mexican economy primarily in strict financial terms, has now become concerned over the political damage that falling wages, as well as other distress resulting from the peso's decline, might cause a neighboring ally that is the United States' third-largest trading partner.

American Airlines celebrates 5th anniversary at Midland

From Staff Reports

American Airlines today celebrated its 5th anniversary of service to Midland/Odessa.

The anniversary was marked by a cake-cutting ceremony at Gate 2 of Midland Regional Airport in which Midland Mayor Carroll M. Thomas and Odessa Mayor Don Carter were honored.

"Our anniversary ceremony provides American Airlines an opportunity to acknowledge and to thank the Midland/odessa communities for their support these past five years," said Paul Tryson, the airline's West Texas sales manager.

"Midland/Odessa has been an outstanding market for American," said Tryson. "In the past five years, American has boarded approximately 750,000 passengers at Midland/Odessa.

He said an indication of the success of this market came on May 1, when American added a 5th daily nonstop flight to Dallas/Ft. Worth.

American began service at Midland/Odessa on June 11, 1981 with three nonstop flights to Dallas/Ft. Worth.

The link to Dallas/Ft. Worth is an important one for Midland/Odessa passengers, according to Eric Downward, American's general manager at Midland/Odessa.

"Travelers to our major hub at Dallas/Ft. Worth are able to make convenient connections to key destinations throughout the U.S., Hawaii, Mexico, Canada and western Europe," Downward said. "At DFW, American has 310 flights a day to 93 cities. When our American Eagle commuter operations are included, the number of destinations served from DFW grow to 1,11."

American serves Midland/Odesssa with Boeing 727 and McDonnell Douglas Super 80 aircraft.

Local firm reports earnings

From Staff Reports

Midland Southwest Corp. reported significantly improved results for the first quarter of 1986, despite the plunge in oil prices.

Gail Siler, chairman and president of the Midland-based petroleum company, credits corporate restructuring in late 1985 and early 1986 with the improvement, along with operational and marketing efficiencies. The firm worte down its deep drilling equipment and exchanged its long-term debt for cumulative convertible preferred stock, eliminating interest expense and significantly reducing depreciation expense. Siler, in his letter to shareholders in the quarterly report, wrote, "We have made the adjustments in staffing and operations that are necessary to weather what may prve to be an extended retrenchment in the industry."

For the first quarter of 1986, ended March 31, Midland Southwest reported revenues of $15.2 million, down from $5.3 million for the first quarter of 1985. However, total cost and expenses for the first quarter of 1986 were $6.1 million, down from $8.0 million in the same period of 1985. This figures to a loss of $942,000 after extraordinary item - the gain on extinguishment of debt, or a loss of $.54 per common share.

New York futures market now leads way in pricing world oil

By JOHN C. GIVEN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The frenzied din of the New York Mercantile Exchange has the atmosphere of a big time prize fight, but it is the world price of oil at stake and not a boxing title.

Shouting, screaming, waving their arms, traders jostle one another in three circular pits to buy and sell contracts for crude oil, gasoline and heating oil.

In the three years since crude oil trading began at the exchange — and especially since prices began to collapse in late November — the three rings have emerged as a major focal point of the world oil trade.

The New York Mercantile is just one of several futures exchanges sharing a trading floor the size of a sports arena. Trading in gold, silver, cotton, coffee, cocoa and sugar goes on around the room at the same time.

At the crude oil pit, traders deal in contracts calling for the future delivery of 1,000 42-gallon barrels of West Texas Intermediate, the major U.S. grade.

After each sale, sellers jot down the price, the contract month and the buyer's name, then flip the note into the center of the pit. Exchange employees, sometimes wearing goggles to protect their eyes from flying paper, pick them up for recording on a big electronic board high up on the wall.

Prices can change many times a minute. Each time, the price flashes simultaneously on other boards and video screens around the world.

In recent weeks, daily transactions have averaged about 32 million barrels of crude — or the equivalent of about three-fourths of the estimated 44.1 million barrels the non-Communist world is consuming each day.

An additional 18 million barrels of refined products have been trading every day.

Each crude contract usually calls for delivery up to 18 months later at any pipeline or storage facility in Cushing, Okla.

But in fact, less than 1 percent actually results in the physical transfer of "wet barrels," since the industry still relies mainly on the cash market for such transactions.

New nursery opens in northwest Midland

By MELLA McEWEN

Warm weather seems to draw people outdoors to their yards. For those thinking of doing some yard work, THE ENCHANTED GARDENS at 4621 Sinclair is now open.

Native Midlanders Vic and Amanda White, who have had a nursery of some sort for the last three years, offer trees and shrubs, and operate a greenhouse where flowers and bedding plants are grown. The nursery also has hybrid Bermuda or Saint Augustine grass, according to co-owner Amanda.

Vic is also licensed for pest control and is an arborist - able to diagnose and treat trees and shrubs. The Whites can also do pruning, and design and install landscapes.

THE FRAMING SQUARE, which has been in business seven years as a general contractor, has expanded, opening a lumberyard at 4905 Andrews Highway.

Owner Russell Jones said, "I saw no point in laying off some of my workers when we could be doing something else," so he opened the lumberyard, which is geared to retail, walk-in customers and keeps hours convenient to businesspeople. "My feeling is noone around town is secure enough to leave his job during working hours," Jones noted. The lumberyard is open 8 to 8 on weekdays, 8 to 5 on Saturday and 1 to 5 on Sundays.

According to Jones, business started slow but sales and traffic have increased the last five days. Customers can find lumber, plywood, sheetrock, roofing, a light hardware line and power tools.

SAMS BAR-B-Q, which already has a location at Scharbauer and Lamesa, is celebrating the grand opening of its second location in the Clay-Desta National Bank building.

The new location will be serving the same basic barbecue as the Lamesa location, according to owner Lee Hammond, who pointed out that his food is barbecued with mesquite. Hungry Midlanders can find beef, sausage, ribs or chicken, or fried catfish or homemade beef stew if they're not hungry for barbecue. Hammond said the new location is doing real well at lunch, but he wanted to point out that the restaurant is open until 7 p.m. for the dinner crowd.

The grand opening is scheduled for June 13 at 5 p.m., and there will be beer and a barbecue buffet.

Gas-oil ratio is 894:1.

Permitted as a 6,400 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 6,200 ft. and plugged back to 5,775 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 3,057 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,410 ft., include the Yates at 1,581 ft., San Andres at 2,536, Tubb at 4,147, Wichita-Albany at 4,597, Devonian at 5,735, and the Silurian at 6,056 ft. Pay was topped at 5,738 ft.

Location is 9,300 ft. from northeast and 660 ft. from northwest lines of Section 31, Block 1, H&TC survey, 26 miles southwest of Crane.

Economic reform in China having worldwide impact

TULSA (SWN) The economic reform which is now going on in China is having world-wide impact, particularly for the oil industry, according to HE Weiling, chief representative, National Economic Reform Institute of China.

"China holds great opportunity for the industry," said Mr. HE, "but there are many cultural and social differences. We understand those differences and are looking for a way that businesses and corporations can bridge that gap."

Mr. HE, one of the highest-ranking Chinese officials to visit Tulsa, was here to visit Martin Mumma, president, Professional Training Resources International, which trains oil industry management and technical personnel.

Mr. HE also met with representatives of American Association of Petroleum Geologists, Society of Exploration Geophysicists, Helmerich and Payne, Parker Drilling Company, Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists, Cities Service Oil and Gas Corporation and Amoco Production Company.

One of the concerns brought out by the oil industry representatives was whether or not the open-door policy which has been established so recently would continue beyond the current regime.

"We have come so far with our reforms, it is unlikely that we will ever go back to what we were," said Mr. HE. "The world will see continued gradual progress made in this area in China.

"It will take many people to serve as a bridge to international understanding," he said. "Years ago, there was no cooperation in anything but offshore exploration and drilling," Mr. HE said. "But now we have a number of American companies working inland."

Among the companies now working on inland China exploration is Parker Drilling Company, Tulsa, which has two projects involving five wells.

Wisdom Energy, Ltd., which is affiliated with Myung & Associates, Inc., Tulsa, will finalize an agreement as the first land concession given to a foreign company for oil and gas exploration. The concession is in Bo Se Basin, Guang Xi Province and is a joint venture with the Chinese National Oil Development Corporation.

Such ventures will enable China to grow – and aid the entire industry at the same time. "We are concerned about strategic planning and looking at oil exploration from a long-term view," Mr. HE said.

Mr. HE is an economist who has played a major role in the reform of China's economy. He has been in the United States under the auspices of the Chinese Research Institute for Institutional Systems Reform, which is under the direct guidance of Premier Zhao. His tour is sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency, and his visit to Tulsa is handled in conjunction with the Tulsa Council for International Visitors. Tulsa was one of only eight cities included on his tour.

Texas Eastern to buy Boston pipeline company

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Eastern Corp. officials announced Tuesday they had signed an agreement to buy Algonquin Energy, Inc, a Boston-based natural gas pipeline company.

The Houston-based company already owns 28 percent of Algonquin common stock and is its main supplier of natural gas, Texas Eastern officials said.

They declined to disclose how much they paid to the company's three other stockholders — Eastern Gas & Fuel Associates, Commonwealth Energy System and Providence Energy Corp.

The sale is pending federal review and approval of the Commonwealth board, Texas Eastern officials said.

Lower first quarter earnings reported by Mitchell

The Woodlands — Mitchell Energy earnings were $4,156,000, or 9 cents per share, in the first quarter of its current fiscal year, down from $10,393,000, or 22 cents per share, in the same period a year earlier.

Revenues for the quarter, which ended April 30, amounted to $168,495,000, compared with $207,472,000 in the corresponding prior-year period.

Report shows decline in New Mexico oil industry

SANTA FE — The New Mexico Oil & Gas Association's annual statistical report confirms that 1985 was a "downer" for the industry in the state, as production, sales, taxes, royalties and drilling rig activity all indicated declines.

"There was a general deterioration last year in most of the industry's vital signs," said NMOGA executive Darwin Van De Graaff.

NRM offers discounted variable-rate notes

DALLAS — NRM Energy Co., announced the filing of a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission relating to a proposed public offering of variable rate deferred coupon senior notes due July 1, 1989. The principal amount of the debt securities at maturity is approximately $117.6 million. Net proceeds will be used primarily to pay in full the partnership's currently outstanding bank debt. Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. will serve as underwriter of the offering.

The notes will be offered at a discount from their principal amount and there will be no periodic payments or interest.

GSU hires bankruptcy specialist

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — A bankruptcy specialist will be helping Gulf States Utilities Co., suffering from two states' refusal to grant rate hikes, ride through rough economic times, according to a GSU spokesman.

David White, at GSU's headquarters in Beaumont, Texas, said the company's board of directors on Friday hired the attorney to "explore the alterntives that are available to us."

GSU repeatedly has warned it needs rate relief from Texas and Louisiana to help it pay the utility's tab for its $4.5 billion investment in River Bend nuclear plant near St. Francisville.

Failure to obtain adequate and timely relief may force the company to "seek appropriate relief," the company said.

The company also has announced it may omit dividends on common stock when the board meets Aug. 7. The board in March voted to lower common stock dividends by 15 cents per share, marking the first time dividends have been cut since the company began issuing them in 1983.

White said GSU hired the Dallas-based bankruptcy specialist because the utility is facing a long wait before it receives rate relief in Texas and Louisiana.

The company last week filed an appeal of the Louisiana Public Service Commission's rejecton of GSU's $360 million two-year rate increase request. GSU asked a state district court for an "expedited" hearing.

Meanwhile, GSU is facing an annual loss of about $80 million in Texas revenues. That state's Public Utility Commission has approved a $25 million per year reduction in base rates and a $55 million decrease in consumer costs. The latter reduction is pending until the PUC decides whether a contract GSU has with Southern Companies is "prudent."

The $55 million reflects the Texas cost: of GSU's power purchase contract with the Atlanta-based utility conglomerate.

FUTURES

The New York Mercantile is used mainly for dealing in "paper barrels" — both to hedge against price declines and for speculation.

"About 50 percent of all trading here is done by the industry — international major oil companies, trading companies, independent refiners, producers, users and municipalities," said Rosemary McFadden, the exchange's 37-year-old president. The balance is accounted for by speculators.

For contacts carried from one day to the next — the "open interest" — 70 percent are held by the industry, hedging product or their anticipated needs, she said.

Perhaps the most widely celebrated example of successful hedging was conducted by T. Boone Pickens Jr., chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co.

Believing oil prices were in for a plunge, Pickens sold contracts in November to deliver at a future date about 3 million barrels of crude at the then-prevailing price of $26.50 a barrel. That was the equivalent of almost all of Mesa's projected crude production for 1986.

The market collapsed. Several months later, Pickens bought contracts to buy 3 million barrels at an average $16.50 a barrel.

By offsetting the promise to deliver oil for $26.50 a barrel with the contract to buy the same amount for $16.50, Pickens realized a net gain of $10 a barrel, or a total of $30 million profit for Mesa.

Of course, had oil prices risen instead of declined — and stayed higher when his promise to deliver came due, Pickens would have lost money.

But in the event of such a rise, he could have cut his loss by buying a contract for immediate delivery sometime between the date he first sold the contract to sell the oil and the date the initial contract came due.

In any case, the device enables a company to reduce the risks of wild swings in the market, much as the agriculture industry has for years.

For the oil industry, however, the idea of petroleum as a commodity — like hog bellies, gold, soybeans, wheat or corn — is something new.

Ever since the first well was drilled in Titusville, Pa., in 1859, petroleum has often been controlled by one power block or another.

John D. Rockefeller's Standard Oil Trust emerged in the first 50 years to dominate the young domestic industry until it was broken up by the Supreme Court in 1911.

The next two decades marked a period of boom and bust.

After prices hit 10 cents a barrel in 1933, the Texas Railroad Commission moved in.

Officially, the board's purpose was to regulate production to prevent the premature depletion of Texas' oil fields. But in matching output to the oil companies' estimates of demand, it set the world's price for oil.

Meanwhile, as international demand outstripped Texas' surplus supply, the major companies extended their prospecting overseas.

Within two decades, the major American and British oil companies were setting the prices they paid other nations for their crude, then presiding over pricing decisions all the way to the gas pump.

The companies' grip began to weaken in the 1960s as oil-producing countries grew more insistent about controlling their own resources.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, born in 1960, grew stronger. Producing nations, led by Libya in 1970, began to nationalize their oil industries.

In 1973, OPEC, which produced more than half the non-Communist world's oil, finally wrested control of the market from the major oil companies after the Arab oil embargo disrupted world supplies. The price of oil soared nearly 12½ times, from $2.55 a barrel to a peak of $34.16 by the end of 1981.

But the high prices encouraged energy conservation, pushing consumption down. And major new oil fields were discovered outside OPEC, including finds in the North Sea, Alaska's North Slope and Mexico.

The cartel tried to keep its grip on oil prices by limiting its own production. But the growing glut in world supplies overwhelmed those efforts.

Companies, which once had to sign contracts for OPEC oil at OPEC prices, turned to the spot market to buy oil at cheaper prices.

Trying to hold onto customers, some OPEC members ignored the cartel's price structure by offering discounts.

Then last year, Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest exporter, began selling oil at prices linked to the value of refined products.

Finally, OPEC announced in December that it was abandoning production quotas to seek a higher market share, and prices collapsed.

While OPEC was struggling to retain its control of the market in the early 1980s, the New York Mercantile was a minor commodities exchange for potatoes, two minor metals, gasoline and heating oil.

It added crude oil to its small portfolio on March 30, 1983, drawing little interest initially, with 323,153 crude contracts changing hands by the end of the year. But interest has soared with the problems of the oil market. In the first five months of this year, trading had mushroomed to 2.9 million contracts.

Speculation is a definite part of the action. But, unlike a gambling casino, the exchange does not play the role of "the house."

Abilene firm to build solar collectors

ABILENE, Texas (UPI) — The world's largest solar collector, with a $1 million price tag, is being built by Lajet Energy Co., an oil company which has diversified into solar energy.

The Department of Energy recently awarded a contract to Lajet to construct the Innovative Concentrator, which will measure 65 feet in diameter, stand 70 feet tall and generate enough electricity to power 10 homes.

Carl Williams, president of the third-generation company, said the firm had the foresight to diversify before the present oil price slump.

"We had always been in the oil business — in refining, transportation and marketing," Williams said. "But in 1978, when oil was good, we decided that the oil business was going to change and another energy source would be on the horizon.

"I was commissioned to look at all the alternatives and decided that the ultimate energy source is from the sun," Williams said.

The company already has a large solar energy project providing electricity in Southern California, Solarplant 1, in Warner Springs.

The 700 solar collectors which sit at the base of the Palomar Mountains in San Diego County help provide electricity to the San Diego area. The Innovative Concentrator is similar to the those at Solarplant 1, Williams said.

The collectors look like heavy satellite dishes with mirrors, but the "mirrors" actually are thin plastic film stretched across an aluminum hoop. The film is made concave by a small vacuum hose underneath it and the mirrors are angled toward the top of the collector where the heat is stored until it is used. Robotics move the collectors to follow the path of the sun, Williams explained.

Williams said it took five years to design and build the San Diego project, but that technology allowed Lajet to receive the government contract.

"The Innovative Concentrator will have the capability of collecting about 100-150 kilowatts of electricity. A home uses about 5 kilowatts a day, so 10 homes could be handled with just one device," Williams said.

"Our purpose is to build one for prototype testing and for us to evaluate for further use," he said.

Despite the cheap fuel prices today, Williams said that the Innovative Concentrator will be able to compete with fossil fuels.

"The value of this is its size, which will reduce the cost of the kilowatt hour generated by solar energy by 30 percent. If we are in a market where a kilowatt hour sells for 10 cents, we can cut that by 30 percent to seven cents an hour," he said.

Another plus for the project is that it will provide local jobs in Abilene for welders, heavy equipment operators and skilled and unskilled laborers, which Williams hopes to continue to employ after the project is complete.

"We are bidding on other pojects so we hope to keep the work coming in on a continuous basis," he said.

"We'll be building and constructing it here in Abilene and doing preliminary tests here. Then it will be shipped to Albuquerque to the DOE for long-term testing," Williams said. The device should be in New Mexico by March or April of 1987.

Williams said that oil and gas companies and other segments of the oil and gas-based economies have viewed solar energy as a threat, but that should not be the case.

REAL ESTATE BRIEFS

Texas realtors attend El Paso convention

Real Estate professionals from all corners of the state will converge on El Paso, June 17 to 21 for the 66th annual convention of the Texas Association of Realtors (TAR).

The Realtors will learn the latest tips and techniques in education sessions and workshops, and will be motivated by some of the nation's best speakers, including Og Mandino, Matt Weinstein and others. The convention will also provide an opportunity for participants to network with peers from around the state.

Appraisal hysteria may result in new license laws

The rash of recent failures of Savings & Loan Association and Banks, caused in part by poor real estate lending practices, has resulted in substantial bad publicity for real estate appraisers, according to Dr. Marvin T. Deane, president of National Association of Master Appraisers (NAMA).

A number of authorities are now calling for some sort of licensing for appraisers. During the past year, California, Texas, Florida and Louisiana legislatures have been looking into the possibility of licensing real estate appraisers. A majority of states do not regulate real estate appraisers, allowing appraisers to practice who have little or no formal education in the field.

Texas Commerce establishes mortgage company

HOUTON — Texas Commerce will enter the residential mortgage business this month with the creation of Texas Commerce Mortgage Co.

The company has already received approval from the office of the Comptroller of Currency and expects to receive certification from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development shortly.

"We expect to generate about $8 to $10 million in mortgage loans each month by the end of the year, and handle about 4,500 loan applications annually," stated Terry Pruden, president of Texas Commerce Mortgage.

Adjustable rates becoming more attractive

RIVERDALE, NJ. — Adjustable rate mortgages (ARMs) may begin to look more attractive in coming weeks, as fixed rate loans continue to rise, according to the latest national survey of mortgage rates.

HSH Associates reported that the average conventional (fixed rate) home loan reached 10.39 percent for the week ending May 30, while the average adjustable rate mortgage remained unchanged at 8.57 percent. The firm conducts a national survey of 2,000 mortgage lenders every week.

Expert says property management is key

Despite the "tremendous overbuilding" of apartments and office buildings around the country, one expert believes that creative, quick-thinking property managers can make the difference between a good investment and a failed one.

"The keys to creating real estate value are buying at low prices, building adequate financial reserves and having strong property management ot compete in difficult markets," stated Gary Langedoen, CPM.

"Real estate construction is a business driven by the availability of capital more than by consumer demand," he explained.

LOAN

The administration, according to officials, has been pressing the IMF to work out a loan agreement with Mexico so that the other pieces of a rescue plan can be put into place. Mexico and the IMF have been at loggerheads for months over the fund's requirement, as a condition for new funds, that Mexico agree to reduce its budget deficit sharply, from 12 percent of its gross national product, to 6 percent.

The banks, meanwhile, have been awaiting a Mexico-IMF agreement before extending new loans of their own.

Mulford said he saw "a very good possibility" that Mexico and the IMF would settle their differences. Once that is achieved, he said, "I have no doubt that the banks would step up their commitment of new funds."

Sources here speculated that while Mexico might agree to the IMF's requirement, the administration would turn a blind eye if the country failed to live up to the pledge fully, given the political difficulties that would be caused by the associated cuts in Government spending.

Given the American pressure, the IMF, too, would be expected to be less rigid in enforcing its demands, these sources say. They noted that under political pressure the IMF had treated some other third world lenders, notably Argentina, more leniently.

The IMF declined to make any public comment Tuesday.

Commenting on the 6 percent deficit target, Norman A. Bailey, a former senior member of the President's National Security Coiuncil staff and now a consultant in Washington, said, "Mexico sees no way of getting the thing down like that."

Meanwhile, however, Treasury and multinational lending officials said they expected Mexico to agree to some adjustments in its economy that meet the lending criteria laid out last October by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III.

Judge may dismiss suit by Pemex

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge threatened to dismiss a civil lawsuit Pemex filed after accusing officials of the Mexican-run oil company of deliberately withholding key documents.

"My patience is running out," U.S. District Judge John Singleton declared at Tuesday hearing. "I have heard enough to conclude that Pemex efforts to hide documents were willful and intentional."

The judge's harsh words came during a hearing of a civil lawsuit Pemex filed against Houston-based Crawford Enterprises Inc., which was convicted along with its owner, Donald Crawford, last year of paying $10 million in bribes to top Pemex officials.

Crawford officials have complained that the government-run oil company is withholding documents key to their company's defense.

But Pemex officials said that most of the thousands of documents requested in a 1985 court order were either destroyed in a 1982 fire or during the clean-up efforts afterward.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Investing with firm not likely to bring 30 percent return

By BILL DOYLE

Q. An out-of-state investment advisory firm suggests I could hope to reap an income of $90,000 a year by investing $300,000 with them in a diversified portfolio — $150,000 in stocks, $60,000 in futures contracts, $60,000 in real estate and $30,000 in coins.

They say, "The larger the investment, the less the risk." What is your opinion of this? I have only $40,000 available to invest with them until next year. The balance of my money is in real estate, where it is yielding 12 percent.

A. The only redeeming features in that outfit's sales pitch are the words "suggests" and "hope." That indicates there's no real promise of that fat income, which works out to 30 percent.

There's no way in the world you can be sure of getting that kind of income from any investment. You might get it from "total return" — a combination of income and appreciation in value of investments.

Doyle

But an annual 30 percent, even in total return, is a case of "high hopes," which seldom pan out. Last year, the Dow Jones Industrial Average, the most popular measurement of stock market performance, was up 27.66 percent. And 1985 was one of the market's best ever. Over the latest five years, that average rose a total of 60.45 percent.

It's possible that you might achieve a 30 percent annual total return by entrusting money to that advisory firm. But I'd count it as unlikely. Always be wary of any outfit that holds out hopes of spectacular investment results.

You're doing well with your present investments. Assuming your real estate is good property, it should be increasing in value, as well as providing that nice 12 percent yield. You obviously have some experience in investing in real estate on your own. Why not stick with what you know?

My suggestion is to sit tight until next year. Then, get a report on that investment advisory firm's most recent performance results — if you can obtain accurate data. Some outfits have been known to fudge.

After a year's wait, I suspect you'll be happy you didn't send off a bundle to that firm.

Q. I have literature from a firm urging me to buy silver dollars from them and hold the coins only until next year. The firm guarantees I can lose no money because, after one year, it will buy back the coins at my purchase price or pay me interest. Can this be true?

A. Try "too good to be true." This smells of a typical scam by con artists promoting outright frauds in silver, gold, diamonds and other collectibles.

Newspapers have carried many stories about gullible people being duped out of their savings in similar deals.

• • •

Q. I bought a stock about 20 years ago and sold it at a loss seven years later. Recently, I received a letter from a law firm stating that a stockholders' class action suit against the company and its president has been settled. To participate in the settlement and receive a check, I must show proof of my purchase and sale transactions in the form of brokerage confirmation slips, statements or similar documents.

I have long since discarded all such records. Is there any way I can get copies?

A. You can try the brokerage house through which you bought and sold the stock. That firm might be able to provide copies of purchase and sale confirmation slips.

The stock's transfer agent, usually a big bank, might be able to come up with records of the dates on which the shares were transferred into and out of your name.

But you might strike out at both attempts. Many brokerage firms and transfer agents don't keep such records from way back when. If you get lucky and either the brokerage or the transfer agent can accommodate you, you'll probably have to pay a fee for the time and effort of searching old records.

Wandering car misses other cars

DETROIT (AP) — Margaret Henderson's car has a homing instinct.

She used her 1980 Oldsmobile last weel to deliver some tomato plants to a friend who lives a block away. While delivering the plants, she left the car running at the curb.

But the car apparently slipped into reverse and took off.

"Who's in your car?" asked her friend, Georgia Middlebrook, as she watched the car roll away.

The driverless Olds continued backward along the street and through an intersection, missing all other cars. It finally ended up hitting a tree in front of the house where it started.

"Everybody thinks it's a miracle," Ms. Henderson said.

Audit reveals problems with Ford transmissions

WASHINGTON (AP) — An audit shows the government "falsely reassured" people about the safety of millions of 1970 to 1979 cars from Ford Motor Co. that allegedly can slip from park to reverse, the head of a House panel on consumer protection said.

"Let's stop playing games and face the fact that people are still dying because of the Ford transmission defect," said Rep. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., who ordered the report by the General Accounting Office. "These cars should be off the road as soon as possible."

The GAO report, released Tuesday, said the cars' alleged tendency to switch gears may be linked to the deaths of 162 people in the first 4½ years after the government's decision not to seek a recall.

Under a December 1980 agreement, the Department of Transportation closed its defect investigation and the automaker agreed to send warning labels about proper parking procedures to 22 million owners of automatic transmission Fords.

In comments included at the back of the auditors' report, Helen Petrauskas, Ford's vice president for environmental and safety engineering, said the company had made an extensive investigation of the alleged problem and was "completely satisfied that the vehicles in question do not contain any safety-related defect that would account for the reports of unexpected movement of driverless vehicles."

The GAO, Congress' investigative arm, said it found the fatality rate for all 1970-79 Ford vehicles to be 4.5 times greater than that for cars from General Motors Corp., 3.2 times greater than for Chrysler Corp. and 2.5 times greater than for American Motors Corp.

Ford says it believes its fatality figures are higher than those for other automakers because of extensive publicity about the transmission case and better reporting efforts on accidents involving the alleged defect. It maintains that similar problems occur on all automatic transmission cars, and can be traced to drivers' failures to park the vehicles properly.

Wirth said the report raises serious questions about the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's handling of the transmission case.

"For the past five years, NHTSA has falsely reassured the public that these cars are safe," said Wirth, who chairs the House subcommittee on telecommunications, consumer protection and finance. "The GAO report strikes down that lie, and recommends that DOT take further action to stop this continuing carnage."

The congressional auditors suggested no specific strategy, but said one option was for NHTSA to begin a new investigation to determine whether a defect exists and, if so, to order a recall.

Eating Outdoors Can Make Dieting Enjoyable...

There's something about eating food outdoors that seems to make it taste better. Whether it's a backyard barbeque, a picnic in the park or a clambake on the beach, fresh air and food go together. But how can dieters manage to enjoy a hearty meal outdoors without straying from their eating plan?

There's room for all foods on The Setpoint Diet, an eating and exercise program for lasting weight control, developed by a team of General Foods scientists. On the Diet, you eat the foods you love. You simply control the number and size of portions and select from each of the basic food groups daily to ensure proper nutrition.

Combining this eating plan with 30 consecutive minutes of moderate daily exercise, anything from brisk walking to aerobics to dancing, lowers your weight setpoint — the set amount of weight your body strives to maintain. Moderate exercise causes you to burn calories at a faster rate for hours afterward, and actually helps decrease appetite — an extra bonus!

For a delicious "taste" of The Setpoint Diet, why not sample the nutritious recipes below, and discover how satisfying eating outdoors can be! You can easily obtain a Setpoint Diet kit, including program book and two-week menu planner with additional recipes, by sending $2.75 in check or money order payable to "Setpoint Diet" to: Setpoint Diet, PO Box 999, Bradley, IL 60915.

Salads make good meals in hot weather

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press

Salads are being eaten more and more the year round, but the season for these cool dishes is now at its peak.

The range is almost without limit, from chilled lettuce and greens, with cucumbers and radishes, to elaborate mixtures of meat or fish and vegetables, such as a Chef's Salad, which is a meal in itself.

A hot weather salad can be a very colorful dish with bright red tomatoes, green or black olives and white radish slices. Sliced hard boiled eggs are also a welcome addition in such a summer mixture.

Lettuce, the mainstay of most salads, ranges from iceberg to loose-leafed Boston.

There are also delicious hot salads, like German potato with Italian dressing and bacon strips, but this is not the season for them. However, this salad can also be served cold.

Here is a recipe for "beefy" potato salad, from a book on potato cookery that I published several years ago.

BEEFY POTATO SALAD

1 pound lean cooked beef, trimmed
3 tablespoons wine vinegar
2 tablespoons sherry wine
1 tablespoon ketchup
½ teaspoon prepared mustard
2 medium potatoes, peeled, cooked and cubed
¼ cup raw mushrooms, sliced
¼ cup dairy sour cream
Lettuce leaves

Cut beef into ½-inch cubes. In large bowl, combine beef, vinegar, sherry, ketchup and mustard. Marinate in refrigerator for 2 hours, stirring occasionally. Add potatoes, mushrooms and sour cream. Toss gently. Chill and serve on lettuce leaves. Serves 2 to 3 people.

WHAT'S COOKING

Teen's brownies 'totally awesome'

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Cari Claiborne, who will be a sophomore at Lee High School in the fall, is a girl of many interests. A self-confessed appreciator of athletics, she plays tennis and has been shortstop and pitcher for the Midland Gold Team-Cathy's Bed and Bath softball team for five years.

When school starts, she will be a cheerleader on the eight-member Junior Varsity cheerleading squad. This summer the group will attend a week-long cheerleading camp.

As one of the more petite of the squad, Cari said she often ends up on the top of elaborate formations, such as pyramids.

Drama is a main interest in her life, and she would like to work with Midland Community Theatre, although she hasn't yet.

Her busy lifestyle has led her into the kitchen, because "I'm usually in such a big hurry to go places, I have to cook my own meals."

The following recipe is one of the favorites in the Clairborne home, Cari said, and is one she often "makes for my mom on Mother's Day.

"It doesn't take very long — you cook two things separate," ahe added.

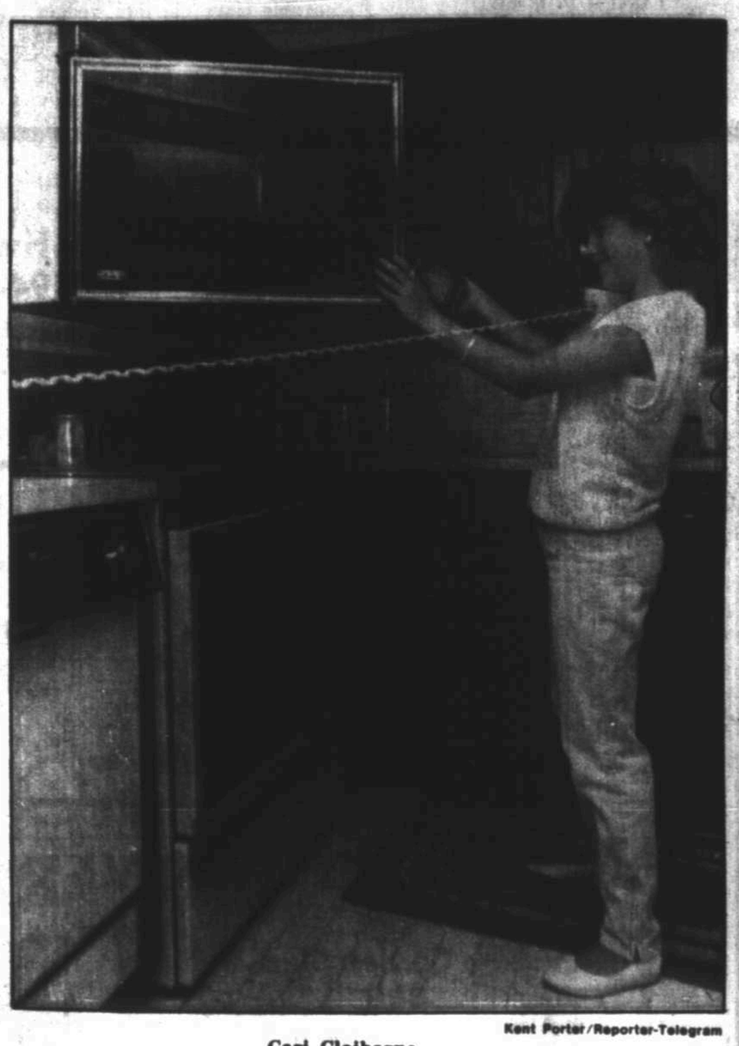
TOTALLY AWESOME BROWNIES

1 German chocolate cake mix (or Swiss chocolate)
1 package (14 ounces) caramels
⅓ cup evaporated milk
1 cup pecans
¾ cup melted butter
1 package (6 ounces) chocolate chips

Melt caramels with ⅓-cup evaporated milk in double boiler.

In large bowl, mix most of cake mix, remaining milk and butter. Add nuts.

Place half of cake mixture in bottom of slightly-greased pan. Bake 6 minutes at 350°.



Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Cari Claiborne

Pour caramel mixture over cake mixture in pan and sprinkle chocolate chips on top. Crumble remaining cake mix on top.

Bake 18 minutes. Refrigerate 30 minutes.

TEATIME FARE
Jam Cupcakes
Tea

JAM CUPCAKES

1 cup stirred cake flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ cup butter
¼ cup sugar
1 large egg
¼ cup buttermilk
½ cup apricot preserves

Put a fluted paper baking cup in each of 12 (each ⅓-cup size) muffin-pan cups. Stir together flour, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg.

Cream butter and sugar; beat in egg; stir in flour mixture and buttermilk just until flour mixture is moistened. Stir in apricot preserves. Spoon into baking cups — each will be about ⅔ full.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about 15 minutes.

Rice pudding paired with berry cream

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

If you enjoy a rice pudding that has a firm texture and only a slight interlacing of custard, this recipe may appeal to you. As an accompaniment to it, there are directions for making Strawberry Cream.

The pudding is hearty enough to serve after a light main dish.

RICE CUSTARD AND STRAWBERRY CREAM

Strawberry Cream, see recipe
1 cup water
⅓ cup long-grain rice, rinsed and drained
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 teaspoons grated lemon peel
¼ teaspoon salt
3 large eggs
⅓ cup sugar
1¼ cups milk

Prepare Strawberry Cream; cover and refrigerate.

In a 1-quart saucepan combine water, rice, butter, lemon juice, lemon peel and salt. Bring to boiling; stir with fork, cover and simmer over very low heat until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed — about 20 minutes. Remove from heat.

Meanwhile, in a large bowl whisk eggs and sugar to blend thoroughly; whisk in milk. Gradually stir hot rice into egg mixture. Pour into buttered 5- to 6-cup casserole or souffle dish. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until top is golden and edges are set — 35 to 40 minutes. Cool on wire rack. Spoon warm custard into dessert dishes. Serve with chilled Strawberry Cream.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Strawberry Cream: Thaw a 10-ounce package frozen sliced strawberries in syrup. In an electric blender combine half the strawberries with ¼ cup heavy cream and 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel; whirl until smooth. Stir in the remaining strawberries.

Makes about 1¼ cups.

Cookies 'nutty'

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

CHOCONUT COOKIES

½ cup butter
½ cup, packed, light brown sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1¼ cups stirred all-purpose flour
1 cup finely chopped walnuts
½ cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces

Cream the butter, sugar and vanilla; gradually stir in flour; stir in nuts and chocolate. Using 1 tablespoon for each, shape into balls. Place 1 inch apart on an ungreased cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven about 15 minutes. With a spatula, remove to a wire rack to cool. Makes about 2½ dozen.

Father's Day treats children can make

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Some things about being a kid are just great: like being allowed to stay up late with a bowl of popcorn to watch a scary movie on TV. And not having to have a job.

Not having a job does, of course, have its drawbacks, and most kids don't have a very plentiful supply of spending money. So that come Christmas, birthdays, or any other gift-giving-type holiday, they're at rather a disadvantage. After all, you can only save up so much lunch money, and with prices the way they are these days, I feel for all the kids who are scrounging to come up with a Father's Day gift.

As a child, I found Mother's Day much easier to handle. You could always hunt around the neighborhood for a good garden and stealthily pluck a one-of-a-kind bouquet to go with your hand-decorated card. No money involved there.

But Father's Day sent me into a tizzy. You can't get a decent tie for $3 (painstakingly saved by resisting the song of the ice cream truck). And Dad didn't need another tie, anyway.

But food — now that's another story. You can bet that Dad will appreciate something made by the kids, especially when they tell him how they've slaved over a cool microwave for a whole 10 minutes!

The following recipes, so easy a child can prepare them, should provide your kids with a sweetly inexpensive way to say "I Love You" to Dad this Father's Day.

PINEAPPLE UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE
¼ cup butter or margarine
½ cup brown sugar, packed
6 slices canned pineapple, drained
6 maraschino cherries
1 (9 oz.) package yellow cake mix (with ingredients called for)
Whipped cre (for garnish)

Place butter or margarine in 9-inch round glass baking dish. Microwave, uncovered, on HIGH 1 to 1½ minutes, until melted. Stir in brown sugar until dissolved.

Arrange pineapple slices over brown sugar mixture, and place a cherry in the center of each.

Prepare cake mix according to directions. Pour evenly over pineapple. Microwave, uncovered, on MEDIUM for 7 minutes. Then reset to HIGH and microwave 3 to 4 minutes longer, or until toothpick inserted near center comes out clean.

Let stand 1 minute before inverting onto serving plate. Serve warm or cool with whipped cream, if desired.

Serves 4 to 6.

S'MORES — AND MORE
½ cup butter or margarine
12 graham crackers
3 small bars milk chocolate, broken in pieces
1 cup chopped walnuts or almonds
3 cups miniature marshmallows
1 (15 oz.) can sweetened condensed milk
2 cups graham cracker crumbs

Place butter or margarine in small bowl and microwave, uncovered, 1½ to 3 minutes, until melted.

Pour half of melted butter (¼ cup) into an 11x7x2-inch glass baking dish. Arrange crackers atop butter and sprinkle evenly with chocolate pieces.

Sprinkle nuts and marshmallows over chocolate, then drizzle condensed milk over all.

In small bowl, combine remaining ¼ cup melted butter with the 2 cups graham cracker crumbs. Sprinkle evenly over mixture in pan, patting down gently with hand or back of wooden spoon.

Microwave, uncovered, 7 to 9 minutes, until set. Let cool, then cut into squares for serving.

Serves 8 to 12.

FAMILY SUPPER
Tacos, Rice & Beans
Shortcake & Beverage

TACO STUFFING
¾ pound ground beef
1 sweet and 1 hot Italian link sausage, casing removed
1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 large green pepper, finely chopped
1 large rib celery, finely chopped
1 large clove of garlic, finely chopped
2 eight-ounce cans tomato sauce
¼ cup water

Repeated by request.

Woman chef wins Cajun cookoff

LAFAYETTE, La. (UPI) — Sandra Calais was so short at 5-foot-2 she was turned down for a cooking job because she couldn't see over the serving line.

Calais persevered, however, eventually landing a job as head chef at the Poet's outlet in Lafayette. Most impressively, she recently took Best of Show honors over many better-known Cajun chefs at the Acadiana Culinary Classic.

The victory for Redfish Moreau marked a happy ending for the first participation by Calais in a cooking contest anywhere. She was delighted to share her winning recipe, once she recovered from shock.

REDFISH MOREAU
2 8-ounce redfish fillets
2 eggs
1 pint Half and Half
6 ounces unsalted butter
1 cup flour
½ pint whipping cream
¼ cup chopped green onions
½ cup sliced mushrooms
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
½ teaspoon red pepper
¼ teaspoon minced garlic
1 teaspoon paprika
6 ounces crawfish, boiled, seasoned and peeled

Season redfish fillets with liberal amounts of salt, white pepper, red pepper and garlic. Beat together eggs, Half and Half and more of the same seasonings to make a batter.

Place butter in a skillet over medium heat. Dip fish in batter, then in flour. Brown in butter on both sides, about 3 minutes on each side. Place fish on plates and keep warm.

In a clean skillet, combine whipping cream, green onions, mushrooms, salt, white pepper, red pepper and garlic. Cook over high heat to a thick consistency, about three minutes.

Add paprika, stir and remove from heat. Add crawfish. Top fish fillets with crawfish sauce. Serves 2.

DEAR ABBY

Mountain of socks upsets bride-to-be

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My fiance is in the Army, stationed in England. He will be coming home in three weeks and our wedding is scheduled for exactly one week later. He shipped all his clothes home for me to launder. One of the boxes had a funny smell when it arrived, and when I unpacked it, I found a large pile of socks at the bottom. You probably won't believe this, but there were 203 pairs of dirty, black dress socks in that box. I counted them — 406 dirty socks!

My question: Should I go ahead and marry a man who would leave such a dirty job for a woman to do? I am afraid that this might be symbolic evidence of an unconscious lack of respect for women, and after we are married I will be expected to do the dirty work.

Hurry your answer, because if you agree with me maybe I should call off the wedding. — NOT SURE IN LOUISIANA

DEAR NOT SURE: I advise you to cancel the wedding plans until you know him better. Maybe your fiance just doesn't like to wash his socks, which is evidence that he's lazy — or a bit of a slob. But to assume that he's a male chauvinist who will expect you to do all the dirty work may be unfair. So don't sock it to him till you're sure.

DEAR ABBY: My granddaughter who is 2 years old goes to nursery school five days a week. The problem is that the children hit her. She doesn't hit back. She goes and tells the teacher. The lady in charge says, "You should hit them back!"

Abby, why do babies have to start fighting in nursery school? I find that so very sad. Please comment. — DELAWARE GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Our society has become a violent one, and while I am opposed to hitting, I think it's a good idea for all children to learn how to defend themselves. (Martial arts — karate?)

I would disagree with the "lady in charge." Rather than teaching the children to "hit back," she should teach the hitters to communicate verbally.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for informing your readers that the effectiveness of birth control pills can be diminished or canceled out if the woman takes antibiotics.

As a practicing certified nurse and midwife, I have known this to happen many times. The woman then says, "But nobody told me!"

The problem is that the doctor who prescribed the antibiotics is not the same doctor who prescribed the birth control pills. Also, when a doctor asks a patient, "Are you on any kind of medication?" the patient says, "No" — not thinking of the pill as "medication." — SOUTH CAROLINA MIDWIFE

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a German, and lately our breakfast conversation has gone to the dogs. Please settle this dispute. We have been watching reruns of the old "Lassie" shows. My husband says that Lassie was not a collie; she was a mixed-breed dog with a collie "costume" attached.

I say the original Lassie was a pedigreed collie. Also, there were several look-alikes who played "Lassie" in the movies.

Was our beloved Lassie a mixed-breed imposter or not? Please settle this argument for us. — PHYLLIS FEUCHT, PARIS, TEXAS

DEAR PHYLLIS: According to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the tale about Lassie wearing a costume must have been a put-on. While the original Lassie was not a purebred collie, she certainly looked like one. There were six look-alikes who later portrayed Lassie. All of them were purebred collies who so closely resembled Lassie that when it came to telling Lassie from her imposters, only her hairdresser knew for sure.

THE BUTCHER

Lamb from Australia available fresh in U.S.

By MERLE ELLIS

Lamb is one of my favorite meats, and fortunately for folks like me there is an abundance of good fresh American lamb available all year long. We get the early lamb crop during this time of year from California, Arizona, certain sections of the South and Northwest where the climate is fairly mild. Later in the summer and fall, the late lamb crop from the colder high mountain country of Colorado and Montana will be on the market. The old idea that good lamb is only available in the spring is no longer valid.

Thanks to modern technology we also have good quality lamb available from other parts of the world. New Zealand has for years exported its lamb to the United States, as has, to a lesser extent, Australia. Until recently, imported lamb was easily distinguishable from American lamb because the imported product came to the market frozen. That is no longer the case. Again, thanks to modern technology, it is now possible to ship lamb fresh from halfway around the world. The good news for lamb-loving consumers is that fresh lamb from Australia is sometimes as much as 50 percent cheaper than fresh American lamb. That's even considerably cheaper than frozen New Zealand lamb. The bad news is that some markets might not be telling us when they're selling us Australian lamb.

All meat sold in this country is inspected for wholesomeness by the USDA, and that includes imported meat which is checked at the point-of-entry. Some markets have been reported as selling lamb labeled "USDA Inspected Fresh Lamb" without telling their customers that the lamb came from Australia. The implication is that the meat is "Fresh American lamb" and that, it would seem to me, is misrepresentation.

There is, I'm sure, nothing wrong with fresh lamb from Australia, but according to studies conducted by the American Lamb Council in Baltimore and Boston: "Most people prefer fresh American lamb."

Rodger Wasson, Executive Director of the American Lamb Council, attributes the preference to several factors. "Some people," he said, "simply want to buy American and they're willing to pay a premium to do so ... Many expressed concern about the 'freshness' of a product shipped that far compared to a homegrown 'fresh product' ... and some expressed dissatisfaction with what they perceived as a stronger, more 'muttony' flavor."

The difference between lamb and yearling mutton is determined in the United States by the presence of what is called in the trade as the "break joint." In young carcasses, when the trotter (foot) is removed, the lower foreshank bone will display four distinct well-defined ridges at the cartilaginous junction, the "break joint."

Older, more mature carcasses are identified by the presence of the "spool" or "mutton joint." This joint is hard, smooth and white with two prominent ridges, and is in no way similar to the "lamb" or "break joint" situated about three-eighths of an inch higher up on the foreshank of younger animals. By the time a sheep reaches the age of 12 to 14 months the cartilagionus junction, i.e., "the break joint," has ossified.

In Australia, according to representatives of the lamb industry, the teeth rather than the "break joint" are used to distinguish between lamb and yearling mutton. Because of the difference in the system used, it is possible in Australia for a carcass up to 2 years of age to be classified as "lamb."

That would account for the possibility of fresh Australian lamb having a somewhat stronger flavor than fresh American lamb. To make Australian lamb more acceptable to American tastes, the Australian government last year convinced the United States Department of Agriculture to implement a program to begin the USDA grading of Australian lamb.

It is now possible to buy not only USDA Inspected lamb, but USDA Choice lamb from Australia. In order to receive that prestigious award, however, lambs from Australia must be presented for inspection as are American lambs, trotters intact so the "break joint" can be examined. This should improve the quality of Australian lamb on the American market.

So it seems that there will continue to be an abundance of good lamb on the market, frozen and fresh, for the growing numbers of us who enjoy the meat. It seems to this butcher, however, that there should be some regulations regarding some form of "truth-in-labeling" so that American consumers realize when they are being sold fresh lamb that, in spite of all the USDA labels, is not fresh American lamb!

Chef teaches technique

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BALTIMORE — For Baltimorean-turned-Bostonian Steven Raichlen, this is a time of celebration.

His Taste of the Mountains Cooking School, located in the 100-year-old Bernerhof Inn in New Hampshire's Mount Washington Valley, is entering its sixth year of operation, with both weekend and five-day classes.

He has just completed a cookbook, the culmination of seven years of teaching his craft.

And recently he returned to his hometown, not only to plug "A Taste of the Mountains Cooking School Cookbook" (Poseidon Press, $16.95), but to research the art of making matzo balls and gefilte fish in the home of his 78-year-old Aunt Annette for his next book, on holiday foods.

As Raichlen frankly admitted, however, his culinary pursuits were hardly home-inspired. "My mother was a terrible cook," he said.

Rather, it was the influence of his aunt — not to mention a scholarship in 1975 to study medieval cookery in France, followed by training at Cordon Bleu and La Varenne in Paris — that nurtured him from the canned soups and TV dinners of his childhood to professional culinary status.

"When I came back to the United States, I became a French clone, making creme fraiche from heavy cream," he offered as an example.

Raichlen even tried teaching nouvelle cuisine, then at its peak, but became disenchanted with "all the advance preparation and last-minute cooking" the style entailed.

"Finally, I realized I was living in the U.S. and had to adapt to what was available and how people actually cooked," Raichlen said.

"A Taste of the Mountains Cooking School Cookbook" is patterned after the courses developed at Raichlen's cooking school, each chapter beginning with an overview of the food and a historical note, followed by a master recipe and variations on the theme.

Said the chef, "Mine is the cuisine of technique, rather than French or American."

Fudge cake wins Chocolatier dessert contest

NEW YORK (UPI) — Across the nation and around the world, there are millions of people who would consider judging a chocolate contest paradise.

In truth, eating through a dozen semi-finalist desserts chosen by Chocolatier magazine requires a fair amount of survival skill — especially if one wishes to taste Entry No. 12 as fairly as Entry No. 1.

The recent contest was sponsored by Chocolatier and judged by a panel including Pierre Franey of The New York Times, former White House pastry chef Albert Kumin, syndicated TV food personality Burt Wolf and Food Editor John DeMers of United Press International.

The winner was Andrea's Fudge Cake, credited to Ben Marx and Belltown Cafe in Seattle.

ANDREA'S FUDGE CAKE

12 ounces semisweet chocolate, coarsely chopped
5 tablespoon espresso or strong coffee
2 tablespoon granulated sugar
1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter
6 large eggs, separated, at room temperature
1 cup all-purpose flour

Position a rack in the center of the oven and preheat to 350 degrees. Lightly butter a 9-inch springform pan. Dust the pan with flour and tap out the excess.

In the top of a double boiler over hot (not simmering) water, melt together the chocolate and espresso, stirring occasionally. Remove the pan from the heat and cool until tepid.

In a large bowl, using a hand-held electric mixer set at medium-high speed, cream the sugar and butter together until light and fluffy. One at a time, add the egg yolks to the mixture, beating well after each addition. Beat in the flour.

In a large grease-free bowl, using a hand-held electric mixer set at medium-high speed, beat the egg whites until they form stiff, shiny peaks. Fold one-fourth of the egg whites into the chocolate mixture to lighten.

Then fold in the remaining egg whites. Fold in the butter and flour mixture.

Scrape the butter into the prepared pan and bake 60-70 minutes, or until the top is crusty and cracked and the middle is still slightly moist. Remove the cake to a wire rack to cool completely.

Remove the sides of the springform pan and transfer the cake to a serving plate. If desired, place a doily on top of the cake and sprinkle with confectioners sugar. Remove the doily to form a pattern.

Champagne season: Springtime bubbles over with celebrations

GUERNEVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — New Year's Eve may be a champagne night, but weddings, graduations and new homes make spring the champagne season.

Whether you're planning a champagne toast at a large banquet or an intimate champagne reception for a few friends, you should know the dos and don'ts of the bubbly before you pop the cork.

Korbel Champagne Cellars, the California vintner chosen for the 1984 presidential inaugural, offers these tips:

■ The standard champagne bottle contains four generous glasses. For a toast or dessert, the rule is one glass per guest, so allow one bottle per four guests. For cocktails or as an aperitif, the rule is one to two glasses per guest. For an entire evening, one-half bottle per person should be sufficient.

■ The best way to cool champagne is in ice cubes rather than in a refrigerator. A wine bucket filled with ice and water will chill champagne in 30 minutes; a refrigerator will do the job in an hour.

■ The proper method for opening champagne is to tilt the bottle at a 45-degree angle and twist the bottle (not the cork) slowly so the cork glides out gently.

■ To pour, hold both bottle and glass at a 45-degree angle. Pour a small quantity into each glass and allow the foam to subside before filling two-thirds full.

MidTran buses will be a rare sight within 120 days after the City Council voted Tuesday to disinvest itself from the public transportation program.

Council votes to end support of MidTran service

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

About 400 daily users of MidTran will be scrambling to find other sources of transportation within the next month after the City Council's unanimous vote Tuesday to disengage itself from a five-year experiment with public transportation.

Citing a $255,000 deficit and a "substantial" drop in riders, the council accepted a proposal from the Public Transportation Advisory Committee to withdraw support from the bus service.

"MidTran has required subsidization from the general fund to make the system break even," said Mike McGregor, assistant city manager.

The transportation committee, a former adamant supporter of MidTran, did an about face Tuesday and recommended that the city withdraw from the busing business. However, the committee asked the council to give riders a one month notice and senior citizen users a 120-day notice.

Committee member Stephen Orr said, "All we're asking is that some time be taken to do it right."

"We made the proposal to try to cushion the blow to the group that depends on transportation," Orr said.

Orr said the committee realized MidTran would be on the "chopping block" when the city formulated next year's budget because its ridership has dropped 20 percent from Oct. 1, 1985, to March 31. MidTran needed $255,000 from the city to continue operating. It also needed $265,000 in federal funds to pay for a total deficit of $520,000.

Senior citizens, the handicapped and clients of the Permian Basin Center for Mental Health & Mental Retardation will be hurt the most when MidTran service is discontinued, Orr said.

About 55 to 60 senior citizens use MidTran to get to free meals every day at Casa De Amigos, said Lael Cordes Pitts, Casa's executive director.

"It creates a need as far as the people are not going to be able to continue to come to morning meals," Ms. Pitts said.

She said a group of senior citizens were informed Tuesday about the bus service's future cutoff and "It was just a somber, somber mood in here."

Along with using MidTran to get to free meals at Casa, many use the service to pay bills, pick up donations of cheese and butter and to visit doctors.

Another group affected by the cutoff includes up to 40 people who use MidTran for transportation to counseling and work training programs at the Mental Health & Mental Retardation Center.

"I don't know how we're going to get around, because they had us dismantle our system several years ago," said Clyde McLean, the center's executive director.

McLean said the center turned its van over to MidTran when the city's public transportation service began in 1980.

Jerry Tschauner of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, said the commission may be willing to coordinate transportation for agencies losing the service.

"As far as operating MidTran, I doubt very seriously the planning commission would be in position to take it over.

"But we could help coordinate some type of transportation to take care of the agencies that have been relying on MidTran," Tschauner said.

The McDonald Transit System, a Fort Worth-based company that operates the bus service, will not continue to operate the service without subsidization from the city, state and federal government, said Sylvester Cantu, general manager of MidTran.

"It's going to be a deficit. We're a private company. We couldn't do it here in Midland or anywhere else without losing money," Cantu said.

MidTran, with a $622,274 budget, operates 12 buses and charges $2.50 per ride or $50 for a coupon book of 44 rides. Senior citizens ride free under a Title III state grant.

City picks firm to find chief candidates

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

City Council members Tuesday selected a Washington firm to search for a new police chief.

Jensen-Oldani of Bellevue, Wash., will conduct a search to replace Police Chief Wayne Gideon. Gideon resigned after a critical study of the police department was released in May. The $75,000 study said the department was overstaffed, mismanaged and poorly organized.

Jensen-Oldani will conduct a nationwide search, narrowing candidates down to six for an interview with the council. The council will then select three candidates for special interviews, said city manager James Brown. The selection process may take up to three months, Brown said.

In other action, the council was told that a two-man police unit has been assigned to patrol Hogan Park on the weekend.

A May 11 shooting at the park that critically injured a 17-year-old Midland man prompted a group of Midlanders to request extra police patrols. At its May 28 meeting the council was presented with 300 signatures requesting extra police surveillance.

In a memo to the city, Capt. Jim Colburn said, "Beginning the weekend following the shooting, I instructed the Patrol lieutenants to increase activity in Hogan Park."

The park is patrolled from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Other officers covering districts near Hogan Park on Wadley have been instructed to periodically check it. A K-9 patrol has also been assigned to patrol the park on Saturday and Sunday evenings, the memo said.

The petitioners' spokesman, Vernon Williams, said the group was very happy with the police surveillance at the park.

"They've done an excellent job since we went to the City Council. We've been very pleased with what we've seen," Williams said.

The council also deferred motion for two weeks on an ordinance providing for a six-month trial left turn lane on Golf Course road at Garfield.

A proposal to widen Garfield by adding a left turn lane was protested at the council's May 28 meeting by a group of citizens. The group said widening Garfield by adding a left turn lane would promote traffic in the area.

MISD students show superior scores

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Bright Side

Compared to youngsters across the nation, Midland school students are achieving at a superior level. That's according to the results of the California Achievement Tests presented Tuesday to the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees.

At each grade level, MISD students scored substantially above the national average even though the district's average Intelligence Quotient is only slightly above the national norm. And not only are the scores above expectations, they are the highest they've been since MISD began administering the CAT in 1978.

When following the 1978-79 second-grade class through a seven-year period, the CAT scores show the actual gain in grade equivalent scores was seven years and six months in reading, nine years in mathematics and eight years and five months in language.

This year's gains range from four months above the national norm in reading at the third-grade level to one year and four months above the norm at the eighth-grade level. Math scores vary from seven months above the norm for grades 1-3 and 4 to two years and three months above the norm at the ninth-grade level. Language scores show a range from three months above the norm at the first-grade level to two years and seven months above the average at the fifth-grade level.

"Midlanders have reason to be proud of their public schools," said Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi. "Clearly, the scores are the result of a a lot of hard work on a lot of people's part."

The CAT is administered each spring to students in grades 1-9 and the lower half of the tenth grade class. The test is used to determine a student's strengths and weaknesses against other students and how well the school district's curriculum compares with other district's across the nation.

In both categories, MISD ranks high. "The test results are testimony to the high quality of education provided by teachers in Midland public schools," Baressi said. "They show our teachers' commitment to excellence and their determination to provide the best for our children even in a difficult year.

"And this was an extremely difficult year for teachers as they implemented reforms and took tests to prove their competence. You heard a lot of grumbling about lesson plans and essential elements, but in the end, I think it paid off," he said.

On the Texas Education Assessment of Minimum Skills test, which was administered to the third, fifth, seventh and ninth grade for the first time this year, MISD students performed at the state average.

The TEAMS test measures minimum skills and, therefore, tends to identify problems of low achievers without reflecting the abilities of high achievers, Baressi said.

Board approves next year's calendar

From Staff Reports

Midland Independent School District students and employees will observe Memorial Day as a holiday next year and school will end one day later than previously scheduled, under amendments approved Tuesday by school trustees.

The amended calendar is as follows:

Sept. 2 — first day of classes; Nov. 26-28 — Thanksgiving holiday; Dec. 22-Jan. 2 — Christmas vacation; Jan. 19 — teacher preparation day/student holiday; Feb. 16 — holiday or snow make-up day; March 16-20 — spring break; April 17 — Easter recess; April 20 — Easter recess or snow make-up day; May 25 — Memorial Day holiday; June 4 — last day of classes/graduation.

In addition to amending the calendar, trustees also approved on second reading a proposal to change school hours for half-day kindergarten students with an amendment to change hours for junior high school students as well.

Hours for all-day kindergarten students are from 8:15 a.m.-2:30 p.m.; half-day kindergarten, 8:15 a.m.-11:15 a.m. and 12:40 p.m.-3:40 p.m.; fourth and fifth grade, 8:40 a.m.-3:40 p.m.; sixth grade, 8:10 a.m.-3:10 p.m.; junior high school, 8:15 a.m.-3:30 p.m.; Lee Freshman High School, 9 a.m.-4 p.m.; Midland Freshman High School, 8:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m.; and high school, 8 a.m.-3 p.m.

Hot air balloon rides to benefit AirLifeLine

By HOLLY LONGABERGER
Staff Writer

Harrigan's restaurants in Midland and Odessa are sponsoring hot air balloon rides to benefit the West Texas Chapter of AirLifeLine Corp.

The AirLifeLine Corp. is a nonprofit organization made up of private pilots and their planes. They volunteer to fly blood, serum, vaccines, tissues, doctors and medical technicians and, on rare occasions, patients to medical centers.

Balloon pilot Tom Sluder of Lubbock said there will be two types of balloon rides which will begin today and end July 5 or 6.

During the tethered ride, which costs $5, the balloon rises, floats for two minutes, and then is lowered to the ground, he said.

The other type of ride is the free-flight ride, which lasts about 45 minutes to an hour. It costs $200.

"You must understand that balloon flying depends completely on the winds, so location of the rides can be different," he said.

It is best to fly in the morning, he explained, but by 9:30 or 10 a.m. it is too windy. No rides are scheduled for the afternoon, Sluter added, although evening rides begin about 7 p.m.

The tethered rides will take place at the Harrigan's restaurants in Midland and Odessa.

But Sluter stressed that rides and location will depend on the weather.

KODM-FM will announce the location of the balloon rides throughout the day or people can call the station at 563-2626 for location information.

Curtis Pool, president of the three-week-old West Texas chapter of AirLifeLine Corp., said there was a critical need in this area for AirLifeLine.

Before, when there was a medical emergency, he said, people did not have any real contacts and would try to call upon corporate planes.

"When an emergency arises, time is critical, especially with a transplant organ," he said.

Twelve-year-old Midland girl killed in one-vehicle mishap

From Staff Reports

BIG LAKE — A 12-year-old Midland girl was killed Tuesday night in Reagan County when a truck, driven by a 12-year-old Odessa youth, lost control and ran off the road, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

DPS officers said Tonya Smith, of County View Estates #6, was the passenger of a 1976 Ford pickup truck when it went out of control and she was thrown from the vehicle, which then rolled over and struck her. She was taken to Reagan County Memorial Hospital in Big Lake and pronounced dead on arrival at approximately 9:30 p.m. The driver of the truck, Samuel Mark Coleman of Odessa, was treated and released, according to a hospital spokesman.

The accident occurred at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday on County Road 123, 23 miles north of Big Lake. Bill Franklin, DPS investigating officer, said the vehicle was traveling north at an undetermined speed, but said speed did not appear to be a factor in the accident and that neither youth was wearing safety belts. He said the registered owner of the truck was the driver's grandfather, a Reagan County resident with whom the youth was staying.

Odessa firm may lose license after failing to report incident

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An Odessa company could lose a license it needs to stay in business for failing to report the exposure of a former employee to radioactive materials almost two years ago.

Officials representing B.F. Industrial X-Ray, formerly B.F. Inspection Services, appeared at the Texas Department of Health hearing Tuesday to testify on the matter. David Dickerson, the former employee who was exposed to the radiation while on the job in April 1984, testified on his own behalf.

Neither party contests that Dickerson was exposed to iridium, a metallic chemical element the company uses in X-rays to measure pipe wall thickness and welds. However, no one involved in the case — including the Health Department's Bureau of Radiation Control — knows precisely how much of the substance Dickerson was exposed to.

At least one point became clear at Tuesday's hearing in Austin: B.F. Industrial X-Ray did not report the incident to the Health Department as required by state law. Bob Free, who helps conduct investigations of exposure for the bureau, said the company's failure to report the incident warrants revocation of its license.

Robert Fitzgerald, radiation safety officer for the company, testified he did not have enough information about the exposure to report it to state officials.

"I should have asked somebody else to come in and help me figure out exactly what had happened," Fitzgerald said. "We realize that we are in violation for not reporting this, but the handling of the radioactive materials that led to this incident were out of our control."

Fitzgerald said Tuesday that he believes Dickerson caused the accident by improperly operating the X-ray equipment. Dickerson conceded that that scenario is possible, but said he doubts it is true.

Dickerson finally reported the incident last fall when burns on his hands re-occurred. At that time, he was working as a radiographer for another Odessa company.

Although details of the incident are hard to pin down, testimony introduced into the record Tuesday indicates that Dickerson could have exposed himself to some of the radiation by his actions.

By his own account, Dickerson said he and an assistant took several X-rays of pipe welds on the morning of April 20, 1984. Sometime before lunch, Dickerson dropped the X-ray camera, he said, which might have dislodged the iridium from its lead-protected casing. Dickerson said he took two more X-rays before placing the camera inside the bucket of a front-end loader on the job site and going for lunch.

He acknowledged that leaving the equipment unattended during the break violated established rules for licensed radiographers in the state. When the two men returned, Dickerson noticed that the radioactive unit was disconnected from its normal position. Again, he admitted that he violated rules of procedure by reconnecting the iridium, rather than closing off the job site and notifying the company and/or state officials.

"I probably wouldn't have been burned as much if I hadn't re-connected it," he said. "But I wanted to get it back in a safe place. I see now I should have called the state and the company before doing that."

Dickerson said he returned to the company shop and tried to contact Fitzgerald, but could not. Fitzgerald testified that either he or his father — also a company employee — were available, but did not hear from Dickerson.

Fitzgerald also said he took Dickerson, who did not show visible signs of injury, to a local hospital for treatment. At that time, he said, he knew he had been exposed to a dangerous amount of radiation. It wasn't until about 10 days later, Dickerson said, that his fingers began to swell and the skin began to peel off.

Finance Commission adopts rule contradicting Mattox's decision

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Saying Attorney General Jim Mattox's opinion prohibiting certain banking practices will hurt banks' customers, the state Finance Commission Tuesday announced it has adopted an emergency rule that contradicts Mattox's decision.

A spokesman for Mattox said the attorney general actually welcomes the commission's rule because it is consistent with his decision to give banks "a reasonable period of time" to comply with his formal opinion.

On Friday, Mattox ruled unconstitutional a 1965 law that allows banks to establish almost-full-service branches nearly four miles from their main offices. He said the law violates the constitutional prohibition against branch banking. That opinion touched off a storm of protest from the banking community.

On Monday, the Banking Section of the Finance Commission adopted an emergency rule that "creates the legal foundation necessary to the continued operation" of the drive-in and walk-up banking offices banks have created since the passage of the 1965 law.

"In a legal and technical sense" the commission's rule contradicts the attorney general's opinion, Mattox spokesman Ron Dusek said Tuesday. "But it doesn't matter and it doesn't bother us because, in a practical sense it is consistent with what the attorney general did in saying that he is not going to enforce the law until the Legislature meets."

Dusek said Mattox will wait and see if the Legislature proposes a constitutional amendment allowing some form of branch banking or decides to stand behind the attorney general's interpretation of the Constitution. "The contradiction will exist if the Legislature says, 'No,' to the banks and says it will not change the Constitution," Dusek said.

The Finance Commission noted four "negative practical effects" of Mattox's opinion. They include:

— A reduction in the banks' ability to provide services to the public if they must close the offices opened under authority of the 1965 law.

— Forcing the closing of about 30 such offices "at some considerable cost," which is "particularly relevant in view of attempts throughout banking to control expenses."

— Requiring the mergers of several pairs of banks "to be unwound at some expense" and with the loss of "the economies of consolidation of operations." The merged pairs have operated one of the original banks as the main office and the other as a "detached facility."

White, Clements get early start on campaign

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White and his November challenger, former Gov. Bill Clements, are getting an early start on their campaigns.

Clements, who won the Republican nomination to challenge the Democrat who ousted him in 1982, Tuesday charged that under White's leadership the Texas business climate has deteroirated.

In an attack of his own, White said Clements as govenor was more interested in enhancing his own office than he was in education.

According to a new survey by the Grant Thorton Co. of Chicago, Texas' ranking has fallen from No. 2 to No. 18 since White took office, Clements said.

"Texas continues it's decline under Mark White. Texas is ranked 18th in business climate. Mark White's economic policies are an absolute disaster for Texas," Clements said in a statement released by his campaign headquarters.

"The lower ranking today comes on the heels of horrible May unemployment figures," he added, noting that Texas joblessness last month hit a record high 9.6 percent, two points higher than the national average.

"Mark White has followed the path of big government. Increased taxes, increased bureaucracy, ever-increasing crises. The time for change is clear," Clements said.

White, meanwhile, issued a statement of his own charging that Clements in 1979 urged substantial cuts in state spending for education and denial of a teacher pay raise despite near double-digit inflation.

"It is particularly ironic to note that while Clements was suggesting that education be cut, he was, at the same time, proposing more money for himself," White's campaign said in a written statement.

Among those increases, White said, were a governor's salary hike of $13,300, more than the average salary of teachers that year, and $1.5 million in increased funds for travel, salaries and operating expenses for the governor's office.

"Bill Clements claims to be a businessman. The record suggests that, as governor, Bill Clements was in business for himself and not in business for education or the future of Texas," the White statement charged.

Monday night in Huntsville, Clements said retired military veterans, including Texas' prison director, should not be working for the state corrections department.

When asked if his objections meant he would seek the resignation of Texas Department of Corrections Director O.L. McCotter, a former Army officer, if elected governor, Clements replied, "Yes."

Clements said he objects to retired military working in the prison system because the principles of military criminal justice differ from the way the state wants its prison system operated.

McCotter, 44, spent 21 years in corrections administration. He served as commandant of the United States Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and was commander of the military's only maximum security prison.

TDC spokesman Charles Brown said Tuesday that McCotter was not available to comment on Clements' remarks.

Mauro says he'll 'run all out' for second term

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — After questioning the credentials of his Republican opponent, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro Tuesday said he nevertheless will "run all out" in November for a second four-year term.

Mauro, addressing reporters at a Capitol press conference, said he is worried that fellow Democrats Gov. Mark White and Attorney General Jim Mattox might have their hands full in the November general election.

"I'm absolutely concerned that the whole ticket's got problems," Mauro said Tuesday. "I'm very concerned about it. I'm going to run all out."

Mauro touted his record as land commissioner, pointing to $1.6 billion his office has collected from state lands since 1982 as evidence of his managerial strength. He also claimed that programs for Texas veterans have accomplished more during his term than in previous years.

"These Texas Veterans programs have had the three most productive years in the history of the program," he said. "These Texas Veterans programs have created jobs and built homes — all at no cost to the Texas taxpayer."

Mauro said his Republican opponent, M.D. Anderson of Seven Points, is not a qualified candidate for the office, and criticized Anderson for parlaying his name into a shot at a position in state government. Anderson has the same name as a famous cancer hospital in Houston. Anderson's initials stand for Marion Dudley.

"My opponent would lead you to believe he has something to do with this great, respected institution," Mauro said. "He would like you to associate his name with those who dedicate their lives to treating the sick and comforting the dying. But the truth is, the only thing he has in common with this great hospital is the same letters of the alphabet."

Anderson, a dance hall manager in Henderson County, says several well-known Dallas Republicans close to former Gov. Bill Clements recruited him for the race.

"They convinced me that Garry Mauro was a scalawag and that I ought to run," Anderson said last week.

Anderson has accused Mauro of spending state funds wastefully and says his top priority if elected would be to try to cut back on the cost of government.

The company again sent him to an Odessa hospital, this time for blood tests to determine whether he had been exposed to dangerous levels of radiation. The tests were inconclusive.

After about two months, Dickerson testified, the swelling and peeling disappeared and he returned to his regular duties.

In early 1985, Fitzgerald said, Dickerson was fired when Odessa police arrested him for DWI while in a company truck. Dickerson does not deny that incident, but insists he was not drinking on the day the exposure occurred.

Asked why he filed a complaint against B.F. Industrial X-Ray, Dickerson said, "I went through seven months of serious pain," he said, "and if I can prevent it from happening to anyone else it would be worth my time."

He said he thinks B.F. Industrial X-Ray's license should be revoked "because they never reported (the April 1984 incident). People that do business like that shouldn't be allowed to handle dangerous materials."

Fitzgerald would not comment on Tuesday's hearings.

Hearings Examiner Lilla Bell said she would prepare a recommendation in the case by no later than July 10. Parties involved in the case will have time to respond to her recommendation before the bureau's director rules on whether B.F. Industrial X-Ray's license will be revoked. Ms. Bell said that decision will be made by August 15.

Mother contradicts testimony that son attempted suicide

KERRVILLE (AP) — The mother of a man allegedly tortured to death and burned on a Hill Country ranch where prosecutors claim drifters were forced into slavery has contradicted earlier claims that her son once shot himself in the eye in a suicide attempt.

Joann Loftis of Huntsville, Ala., the mother of Anthony Bates, testified Tuesday in the organized crime trial of rancher Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr., son Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr., and former ranch hand Carlton Robert Caldwell.

Prosecutors allege the defendants lured Bates and other drifters to the ranch with the promise of work, then forced them to stay.

They also allege that Bates was tortured with a cattle prod before he was beaten to death and burned in March 1984. A corpse was never found.

A tape produced by prosecutors recorded an alleged torture session in which Bates was shocked with a cattle prod on the tongue, in his eye socket and elsewhere.

An FBI special agent, who also testified Tuesday after analyzing a cattle prod introduced, said the instrument packs up to 4,000 volts and that its current is better conducted by moist skin like a tongue.

In the tape, Bates pleaded for mercy, saying he would suffer a heart attack.

Revelers dance, sing, cry at Shamrock Hilton's wake

HOUSTON (AP) — They danced, sang and cried during the Irish Wake at the Shamrock Hilton Hotel, paying their last respects to the Houston landmark that closed its doors Tuesday after 37 years.

An estimated 1,000 people went to Monday night's wake and party to say goodbye to the hotel, which many say helped put the city on the map.

"It's a day of mourning at the Shamrock," said Lane Conway, who wore a black jumpsuit and a green grass skirt. "You're supposed to either wear green or black. I wore a combination so I can be frolicking a bit and also be respectful."

Ms. Conway said the gathering had all the elements of a wake for person.

"You're praying for their souls, but they're going to heaven," she explained. "So there is nothing to be sad about."

The 1,100-room hotel was built in 1949 by wildcatter Glenn McCarthy. The Hilton Corp. took over in 1955, then sold the hotel and its adjoining 22 acres to the Texas Medical Center late last year.

Medical Center officials have not announced plans for the Shamrock.

The 78-year-old McCarthy was scheduled to appear at the wake but did not attend and could not be reached for comment.

"He said he wasn't feeling well, so he wasn't going to come," Tom Horan, organizer of the wake, said. "I talked to his secretary and apparently the whole thing was too emotional for him."

Trial of former Midlander for sexual assault continues

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The trial of a 33-year-old former Midland man accused of kidnapping a 13-year-old girl from Water Wonderland in June 1985 and repeatedly sexually assaulting her continues in 244th District Court today.

William Mitchell Dyer, who was residing at a mobile home park on Highway 80 at the time of the alleged incidents, was indicted on four counts of aggravated sexual assault of a child and one count of kidnapping. Bond was initially set at $50,000 on each count. District Judge Joe Connally, acting on a motion from Dyer's attorney, Tom Hirsch, reduced the bonds to $3,000 cash each for a total of $15,000 cash and Dyer returned to Paris, Texas, to live with his family pending trial. Dyer also faces a charge of aggravated sexual assault of a child in Andrews County in connection with the alleged incidents.

Dyer is accused of having abducted the girl, now 14 years old, about 7 p.m. June 13, 1985, and repeatedly raping and sodomizing her as he allegedly held her captive for more than two hours as he traveled from Midland to Andrews County and then into Ector County, where he released her in Gardendale.

During an investigation by Ector County sheriff's deputies, the girl was hypnotized and subsequently was able to describe her assailant.

On July 23, as deputies continued to seek the suspect she described, the girl spotted the man she said kidnapped and assaulted her in a TV promotional spot filmed by a local television station at the man's place of employment, located only a short distance from Water Wonderland on Highway 80. He was later indicted by an Ector County grand jury on the five charges.

Underground dope farm located

RUSK (AP) — Almost 6,000 marijuana plants have been found growing in a 100-foot-long, artificially lighted room beneath a nearly completed quarter horse stable, authorities said Tuesday.

Cherokee County Sheriff Allen Horton said Kyle Hoodenpyle, 26, and his girlfriend, Marcia Lee Robertson, 23, both of Austin, were arrested when officers executed a search warrant at the farm early Sunday.

What the officers found was a steel-reinforced concrete greenhouse accessible only through a narrow shaft, Horton said.

He said officers found a 4,000-square-foot area divided into three rooms and a long hallway. Marijuana plants of differing sizes were being grown with water piped from above and a diesel generator fueling rows of artificial "suns."

Because the lights were powered by the generator, there were no large electric bills to raise suspicions, Horton said.

Once in full operation, the above-ground farm was to have been a front for the year-round operation capable of producing high-grade pot, Horton said. The 150-foot-long barn already contained stables.

Charges against secretary dropped

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Inability to locate a key witness prompted 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater Tuesday to dismiss theft charges against a former Ector County peace justice secretary.

Ater dismissed two charges of theft and two charges of misapplication of funds against Frances Rios, 26, 1520 N. Sam Houston Ave., when the district attorney's office informed the judge the case could not be prosecuted because a key witness could not be found.

Ms. Rios and Audelia Sturgeon, 35, 612 S. Crane Ave., were indicted in June 1985 as the result of a Texas Ranger investigation of alleged bookkeeping discrepancies in the peace justices offices.

Ms. Rios, who worked as secretary to Peace Justice Jimmy Harris, was accused of the misapplication of $70 in county funds on two separate dates.

Ms. Sturgeon, who worked as secretary to Peace Justice Manuel Valles, was accused of misapplying $157 in county funds.

The trial of Ms. Sturgeon was scheduled to begin this morning but indications are this case too may be dismissed because the same key witness can not be located.

Pool said that the pilots of AirLife-Line volunteer to furnish the transportation, fuel, maintenance and insurance at their own cost.

"This service is at no cost to the recipients," he added.

The money raised from the balloon rides will help with the pilots' expenses.

Right now there are 10 pilots in the West Texas chapter, although there are 200-300 licensed pilots in the area. Pool said he hopes to see more people involved.

Their first and only mission so far was to organize the transporting of a patient who was in a coma from San Angelo to Amarillo for special treatment.

KTPX seeks substitute weathermen

From Staff Reports

KTPX-TV, channel 9, will be holding auditions for substitutes while weatherman Rick Wells is on vacation in June.

All residents of the Permian Basin are eligible to audition at the Channel 9 studios any time from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday. Contestants will be videotaped performing a mock weathercast and a panel of judges will select five people to appear on "Eyewitness News" for the week of June 23rd.

"I know this is an unusual thing for a TV station to do, but we thought it would be fun for our viewers as well as the people chosen to forecast the weather. It's something different that hasn't been done on television in this market," Wells said.

KTPX-TV is located between Midland and Odessa just off of Highway 80, at Coors Road at 10900 County Road 125 West.

Cattle brands still serve as mark of ownership

EL PASO (AP) — Lloyd Otten's 300 cattle were having a rotten time.

One by one, each yearling sidled suspiciously into the narrow metal corral and let out an uninspired bleat.

But as Otten's son Larry connected the redhot "LO" branding iron with the animals' hides, each bolted, bellowed and spewed angry gobs of spit.

The smell ofburning hair and searing flesh filled the air as Otten's helpers sawed off horns and stuck the cattle with deworming injections for good measure.

When it was all over, each yearling stumbled off with an angry red, bald "LO" on its shoulder.

It was branding time, and the cattle weren't too happy about it.

But then, neither were the folks who mailed out the poster tacked to the bulletin board of Otten's Lower Valley business, El Paso Livestock Auction.

Be on the lookout for a man who's gone through Texas stealing hundreds of head of cattle, it said.

The animals were, "mostly unbranded," the poster added mournfully.

This might be the late 20th century, but livestock brands still are good for a lot more than those cute designs you see burned into steakhouse walls.

"I live less than two miles from the Mexican border and ocasionally the cattle go through the fence. I have to have a way to prove they're mine," said George Porter, a Fabens rancher.

He was in the El Paso County clerk's office last week to add his brand to a big book that currently registers 153 different designs.

Porter's sketch, a "2+2," is his official brand now. For $5 it will stay on the books for five years.

Porter's brand is new, but some in the clerk's book go back generations in El Paso history.

Lloyd Otten's "LO," for instance, was first registered in 1940.

And the "wineglass" design currently used by Lower Valley rancher John Richard Orr graced the flanks of his father's cattle, and before that, his grandfather George Orr's horses.

Eddie Bob Black, who raises 300 head of cattle east of El Paso, recently listed his first personal brand, an "EB" logo topped by a half moon.

Black registered just in time to burn his brand onto a spring herd of calves.

"You have to wait until they're 3 or 4 weeks old, old enough to follow their mothers and to where the mothers won't be hiding them on the range," Black said.

It takes practice to brand cattle just right, he said.

"You want to make sure when you make that first contact that it sticks. If you mess up it'll be muddy or the hair will grow back over it...and if you go too deep it'll hurt the animal," Black said.

Brands are read from left to right or from bottom to top. Some common symbols are bars, rails, rafters, circles, half circles and rocking chairs. A letter written on its side is "lazy," and written with curving extra strokes on each end is "running."

Many ranchers seek a fast, perfect brand by using modern electric irons.

"They give a more uniform burn," Larry Otten said.

Others use frozen nitrogen, but "it's more for show cattle because after you brand, their hair comes back in white," Otten said.

But Black still prefers to "dig us a hole, build us a fire, put the iron in and get it real red and hot."

No matter what kind of branding irons they use, U.S. ranchers follow a design lore that's been handed down among cowboys for more than a century.

A letter written on its side is "lazy," and written with curving extra strokes on each end is "running."

Texas, giant King Ranch, for instance, uses a "running W" brand that is known throughout the country, said Jess Burner, owner of the Tornillo Feed Yards.

But brands are a part of life in both the Upper and Lower Valleys, Burner said.

He pointed out dozens of rusty irons hanging in his feed lot among dust, old sawed-off horns and some confused-looking young cattle.

Burner's workers make the irons for his customers all over Texas, the United States and Mexico.

"Here's JL. Here's a dollar sign," said Burner.

"In the United States, brands have designs you can describe," Burner said.

"But the tricky ones are out of Mexico because they want something beautiful and complicated."

Burner pointed to one of his Mexican customers' irons. It looked sort of like a snake with a couple of thingamajigs off to the side.

"I sure can't read this. And when I ask the owners of these things what they mean, sometimes they just say, 'Quien sabe?'"

WWII hero believes in patriotism

Logan

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — During Word War II, two Texans won both the Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross, a sort of "Oak Leaf Cluster" to the nation's highest award.

One was the famous Audie Murphy.

The other is a quiet, unassuming man who doesn't like to brag about his awards — James M. Logan, 65, of Kilgore.

According to the "Fighting 36th Historical Quarterly," the Armed Services awards only one Medal of Honor per man. Most other decorations have Oak Leaf Clusters as follow-up awards for additional acts of heroism.

But in the case of the Medal of Honor, a second award in the nation's highest category earns one the Distinguished Service Cross. Murphy and Logan were the only ones so decorated in World War II.

Not many soldiers have lived long enough to earn the DSC. Most of the heroes are killed in earning the Medal of Honor.

"I'm proud of them," Logan said of his awards. But, he said, he doesn't like to "go around bragging" about them. When asked if he would do the same thing over again, his answer was short and sharp — "Yep!" But Logan doesn't reminisce too much about World War II. He thinks "everybody lost interest" in patriotism and America's GIs during the Vietnam War. "I felt sorry for those boys," he said of the men who fought in Vietnam.

Logan believes Americans should be more patriotic, and that American patriotism is on the rise. "We're seeing a lot more patriotism now, but it's still not enough," he said.

Logan had joined the National Guard while living in his hometown of Luling. On Nov. 25, 1940, the 36th Division, then the Texas National Guard division, was called into federal service.

It was Sept. 9, 1943, that Logan, then a private in Company A, 3rd Battalion, 141st Infantry Regiment, earned the Medal of Honor.

He was in the first wave that hit the beach at Salerno, first action in the invasion of the Italian peninsula. Logan and his comrades-in-arms were met with fierce resistance in the form of heavy artillery barrages. And the German infantry was dug in and stubborn.

The fire caught the men of the 36th while their landing craft still were trying to make it to the beach. Despite heavy losses, Logan and some of his men made it ashore and to slight cover from the enemy bullets and artillery shells.

The German counterattack was not long in coming. Logan shot down the first three enemy soldiers to burst through a hole in a rock wall not far from the beach, exposing himself to rifle and machine gun fire.

The official citation notes that Logan was splattered with dirt and splinters of rock torn out by bullets.

After downing the enemy soldiers, Logan raced about 200 yards as bullets continued to tear up the ground around him. He made it to the shelter of another wall, then crawled until he was near the machine gun position. His accurate fire cut down two more Germans.

Then, the citation continues, Logan seized the machine gun and turned it on the Germans, causing them to flee with heavy losses.

Afterwards, Logan managed to capture a German officer and a soldier.

Later on that same historic morning, Logan raced into a building in the face of a hail of bullets and killed a sniper.

Some time later, Logan earned the DSC at Velletri, during the 36th Division's campaign to capture Rome. His unit came under a fanatic counterattack by a German SS unit, an elite group of paratroopers. According to the citation, Logan took up a Browning Automatic Rifle and attacked the Nazis.

Logan was hit by a shell fragment as he was helping carry a badly wounded soldier to a medical aid station.

This was in June 1944, after the Allied forces had taken Rome from the Nazis. Logan received the Cross of Valor from the Italian government and then was sent home for an official tour in which he and other heroes helped sell war bonds.

Returning home after the war, Logan worked as a roughneck for Exxon Corp. 35 years before retiring.

And still, he is modest about his achievements: "I just did what needed to be done."

Egyptian government plans to cut subsidies

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — At the urging of its main Western creditors, the Egyptian government is planning to cut subsidies that for years kept consumer prices down on some basic foods and other essentials.

It is doing so with some concern. When subsidy cuts were made nearly a decade ago, serious rioting broke out and 79 people were killed and more than 300 were injured.

An Egyptian economist close to the government estimated that the subsidy reductions will almost double consumer prices for many basic foodstuffs in a country with an annual per capita income of about $600.

The United States, Egypt's main source of foreign aid, and major international lenders, chiefly the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, have long urged sharp reductions in the subsidies, which now cost the government about $1.47 billion a year.

Memories of the 1977 riots have frightened previous governments from major reductions in subsidies. But with a foreign debt now estimated at $32 billion, the government believes it has no choice but to accede to the lenders' demands in order to qualify for financial help.

"The government had to make the decision to bring the commodities to their market price," said an Egyptian source familiar with the deliberations but demanding anonymity. "It is an ultimatum set by the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund to continue working with the Egyptian government."

The present system supports directly or indirectly a large assortment of items, including train and bus services and the country's three television channels.

Under the subsidy program a kilogram (2.2 pounds) of sugar costs consumers the equivalent of 7.5 U.S. cents. The same amount of rice is 12 cents, frozen meat $1.80, beans 12 cents, and lentils 22.5 cents.

Most essential of all in Egypt is bread, that is sold in loaves resembling buns and cost two cents each. The Egyptian economist said that because bread is so sacrosanct an item, he doubted its subsidy would be cut.

Following closed-door meetings with the IMF, President Hosni Mubarak's government has been spreading word that the subsidies must be reduced but has not revealed details.

Some commodities, including bread, gasoline and flour, are sold to everyone at the subsidized price, with the government picking up the difference.

Prime Minister Aly Lutfy has said that under consideration is a plan whereby the very poor will receive cash payments in lieu of subsidies.

U.S.-backed Contras release eight West Germans

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — U.S.-backed Contra rebels released eight West Germans they had held captive for almost a month a half hour after the expiration of a deadline set by the leftist Sandinista government.

The government confirmed the release Tuesday night as did the rebel Nicaraguan Democratic Force, or FDN, from its offices in Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

Manuel Espinoza, spokesman for President Daniel Ortega, said he did not know when the Germans would arrive in Managua, but added they would hold a news conference today.

In an announcement over the government Voice of Nicaragua radio, Espinoza said the Germans and 15 Nicaraguan civilians were released at 6:30 p.m. (7:30 p.m. CDT) at the hamlet of Presillitas, near where they had been captured.

That was 30 minutes after the expiration of a deadline issued by Ortega, who had threatened military action if the Germans were not freed by then.

FDN spokesman Frank Arana told The Associated Press the eight "were released safe and sound and in a perfect state of health." The U.S.-backed FDN is the largest of several rebel groups known as Contras battling the left-wing Sandinistas.

The four men and four women were volunteer workers building low-cost housing.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Two more people die of injuries after Cairo crash

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Authorities said today two more people have died of injuries suffered in the fiery crash of an Air Sinai passenger plane, raising the death toll to 22.

The Fokker-27 carrying 25 passengers and crew crashed at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday as the pilot tried to make an emergency landing in a raging sandstorm after reporting an engine was on fire.

The twin-engine aircraft plowed into the compound of a construction company about 750 yards from a Cairo airport runway, said Montaser Sadeddin, deputy commander of a local police station. He said the plane exploded after crashing.

Air Sinai authorities said all of the passengers and crew members were Egyptians. The company said that among the dead was flight attendant Ashgan Attia, who had survived last November's hijacking of an EgyptAir jetliner to Malta in which 60 people were killed.

Iraq blasts oil tanker

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi navy gunboats blasted an oil tanker in a missile attack Tuesday and Iraqi warplanes and anti-aircraft gunners shot down two Iranian jet fighters, a military spokesman reported.

Meanwhile, Iran's international telecommunications system remained in a shambles following an Iraqi air raid Sunday on Iran's largest satellite ground station in the northern Assadabad region.

In Bern, Switzerland, postal authority spokesman Alfred Bissegger said telecommunications links between Iran and most Western countries, including the United States, were down. He said it was assumed that the Assadabad ground station was not working and it might take several days before service is restored.

Telex and telephone operators in Bahrain and other Persian Gulf countries said they could not contact Tehran, the Iranian capital.

An Iraqi military spokesman, in a communique broadcast by Baghdad Radio, said Iraqi gunboats early Tuesday attacked a "large maritime target," meaning an oil tanker, and scored "accurate and effective hits."

Man convicted in bombing

LONDON (AP) — A Northern Ireland man was convicted Tuesday of murdering five people in the bombing of a Brighton hotel in an IRA plot to kill Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her Cabinet.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the attack shortly after the bomb was set off Oct. 12, 1984 during the annual convention of the governing Conservative Party.

The verdicts against Patrick Magee, 34, were delivered by a jury of six men and six women in London's Old Bailey Court. After deliberating for 5½ hours on the 24 days of testimony they convicted him of of planting the time bomb and causing the explosion.

Magee faces several life terms in prison, but will not be sentenced until verdicts are returned on further charges against him and his co-defendants.

High reading due to error

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Finland's Bureau of Nuclear Radiation Safety today said faulty instruments probably were responsible for a mysteriously high radiation reading at a coastal monitoring station near the Soviet Union.

"The most likely explanation for the peak measurements at Kotka is at the moment a fault in the measuring devices," a five-paragraph government statement said.

On Tuesday, officials said the measuring instruments were not to blame for Monday's six hours of unusually high recordings of radioactivity. For 10 seconds the readings were even higher than those recorded after the Chernobyl nuclear accident in the Soviet Ukraine.
