A PRISONER THREE YEARS

Gen. Dean Describes Red Threats During Captivity

FREEDOM VILLAGE, Korea, Sept. 4 —UP— Major Gen. William F. Dean returned to freedom Friday, and told how the Communists threatened him with punishment as a war criminal in futile efforts to pry military secrets from him.

Dean, back from 37 months as a prisoner of the Reds, gave newsmen a detailed account of the treatment — both bad and good — he received at the hands of his captors.

The hero of the July, 1950, battle of Taejon which led to his capture a month later said he once was questioned continuously for 68 hours by Reds who sought military information.

Dean said he became so bored in Communist confinement that he worked mathematic problems in his head to kill time.

Heard No English

He heard no English spoken over long periods of time and the only reading matter he received was Communist history, dialectics or propaganda.

Dean gave newsmen such a vivid account of his experiences that they applauded at the end of the interview.

Now gray-haired with wrinkles on a tanned face, Dean told of his capture Aug. 25, 1950, of having wandered hungry through the countryside without food, of endless interrogation by North Koreans and of the surprising good treatment he received toward the end.

Put Into Box

Starting from the beginning, Dean recalled his battle against hopeless odds after being separated from the men with whom he had been fighting.

PW Release Tops Quota

PANMUNJOM, Sept. 4 —UP— The Communists released their prize prisoner, Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, Friday and startled the United Nations by announcing they would free 275 Americans Saturday.

Dean, who was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for his heroism in the battle of Taejon which led to his capture on Aug. 25, 1950, appeared healthy and in good spirits as he returned to freedom.

The announcement that 275 Americans would be repatriated, the most in a single day since the prisoner exchange began, was almost as important a development as the release of Dean.

Releasing Over Quota

Only 3,313 Americans had been scheduled by the Communists for repatriation. The release of Dean and 94 other Americans Friday brought the total to 3,211. The 275 to be released Saturday would lift the total to 3,486, or 173 more Americans than originally scheduled.

Previous returnees had told newsmen the Communists were preparing to release more men than had been expected but these reports had not been confirmed.

The Communists did not indicate whether the 275 were the last Americans to be repatriated. It was possible they were holding more for release Sunday.

Some of the men released Thursday said the Communists were holding 35 "B. W. Boys," men who had "confessed" waging bacterial warfare.

They said the "B. W. Boys" were taken to nearby Kaesong in an isolated group and held separately from prisoners who resisted Communist pressure.

Peiping Radio, voice of Communist China, indicated Americans still were being held as hostages for imprisoned Red leaders of the Koje Island riots last year.

The broadcast said the Communists are giving the United Nations until Sunday to return 401 North Koreans and Chinese whom they said were being detained "forcibly."

Families Of Pampa POWs In High Hopes

Hope-filled anxiety shrouds the Hart and Williams homes here today.

They're the Pampa families of two prisoners of war, Eugene Williams and James Hart, both sergeants first class, who are expected to be released by the Communists.

Mrs. Bill Derrington, 1022 E. Jordan, sister of Hart, said today she hopes that tonight's the night," that the names of Hart and Williams will be among those who gain freedom. Mother of Hart is Mrs. E. C. Hart, 1012 Twiford.

Mrs. Eugene Williams, like Hart's relatives, was in high spirits today, and her husband's possible release "is all I want to talk about."

Both families emphasized that they have had several letters from the Pampa POWs during their captivity. Mrs. Williams has received 18 letters and the Harts have received 30 letters since James was captured in April, 1950.

Last letters were received here July 4, when both men reported they were doing as well as could be expected. They were held in Red Camp No. 4.

Also, the Harts have had encouraging letters from freed POWs from North Carolina, South Carolina, New Jersey and from Sgt. Gerald Neighbors of Hereford, who visited the Harts and Mrs. Williams since he was released in April.

Train Victim Is Still Unconscious

R. W. Riegel, 935 S. Barnes, critically injured Wednesday morning when the car he was driving was mauled by two freight trains, remained unconscious late this morning in Worley Hospital.

Doctors attending the injured man said they were surprised to find from X-rays taken yesterday that Riegel suffered no broken bones, not even a skull fracture as first suspected.

However, they believe he has several concussions causing the lengthy unconscious period. He also has internal injuries.

Riegel was traveling south on Starkweather when he was hit by an east bound freight. The train dragged the car for more than a block, banging it into a passing west bound freight where it was mauled again, tearing the car to shreds.

Texan Killed On Oklahoma Hiway

SHATTUCK, Okla., Sept. 4 —UP— A Texas man was killed instantly on Oklahoma State Highway 15 near Shattuck Thursday night when his automobile skidded sideways 660 feet, overturned on a curve and plunged into a ditch.

The victim was identified by Oklahoma Highway Patrolmen Virgil Estes and B. G. Young as James Rudolph Kirk, 26, of Darrouzett (Lipscomb county), Tex.

Movie Protested By Pampa Women

A letter protesting the movie, "The Moon Is Blue," scheduled to open here on Sept. 6, was sent today by the Holy Souls Altar Society to Paul West, manager of the LaNora Theater.

The letter is signed by 26 members of the society and calls the show "immoral" because of the conversational scenes in it which the letter adds are "very suggestive and not good for our youth."

Mrs. W. B. Herr, president of the society, said the movie has been condemned by the Catholic Legion of Decency and Catholics are expected to follow the legion's advice on what pictures are not to be patronized.

The letter to West said the scenes and the conversation in them are in direct defiance of the Breen Office, the voluntary code of ethics office for Hollywood.

The local society received its information from several sources of Catholic literature on the movie—none of which recommended the picture.

The letter ended with the statement that it is the society's understanding the picture has the backing of the Communist Party.

"We don't think there is any Communism in it," Mrs. Herr said, "but only that it is approved by the Reds."

The picture itself is a takeoff from a stage play by the same name which had a two-year run in New York. Those who saw the play said it centered around an innocent-appearing young girl who asks a lot of questions and receives answers which could be taken in several different ways.

West said the picture is a sophisticated comedy and is strictly an adult picture, treated in an adult manner. Children's admissions will be suspended, he added, during the engagement.

"And, the show is so advertised," the manager added.

"According to the 'Producer Digest,' a section of the 'Motion Picture Herald,' which we go by, the picture has one of the top ratings—it is listed 'very good.'"

The short review written by the digest says:

"It is a clever, brilliantly written, flawlessly acted and directed bedroom comedy in which true love and virtue triumph."

The digest, West added, pans a picture as well as builds one up. The top rating is "excellent," the second "very good," the third "good," and so on down the line.

Firms To Close On Labor Day

Many business houses and government offices are preparing to close up shop Monday, Labor Day.

At least Pampa's two banks and the City Hall will be closed down. As B. H. Cruce, city manager, put it:

"There'll be no labor on Labor Day, here."

We Heard . . .

A smile of pride creeped over the face of Bobby Addington as he displayed a rare pipe sent him from Japan by Carroll Smith, former Harvester football player now in the U. S. Navy. Bobby smoked it once, but is going to place it with his pipe collection.

Fear Of Atomic Assault Voiced

INCHON, Korea, Sept. 4 —UP— Freed American airmen feared Friday maps of American cities they were forced to draw for the Communists might be used in a possible atomic attack.

The repatriates said their captors compelled them to make detailed sketches of several major American cities for Soviet intelligence agents.

The cities they were interested in were Detroit New York, Seattle and Los Angeles.

"I was forced to draw a large picture of the city of Detroit," Capt. Jack E. Perry of (2)100 Canyon Road) Laguna Beach, Calif., said. "I had once lived there. They also had me draw pictures of air fields I had been stationed at throughout the United States."

Forced to Draw Maps

Other officers said they were forced to map other key cities. They said the sketches "definitely" were prepared for the Russians. These officers openly expressed fear of an atomic assault.

"I never was actually interrogated by the Russian officer myself," Perry said. "But the Russians were always there in the background. There was no doubt what they were after."

Lt. Harold A. Steiner of Laguna Beach, Calif., was required to draw sketches of airfields, both in the United States and South Korea.

Another flyer, Lt. Thomas T. Mounts of Phoenix, Ariz., was required to sketch the Pentagon in detail.

Sketches Believed for Russians

"They even wanted me to put in the actual halls and the locations of the offices," Mounts said. "They were very interested in Seattle, San Francisco, New York, Chicago and Detroit. They also worked on the officers attempting to plot the radar network guarding the northern approaches to the nation. I felt quite certain the sketches and information was intended for the Russians."

Steiner seemed skeptical.

"We put oil wells in the desert, ammunition dumps in the ocean and airfields right down the main streets of cities," he said. "The amazing thing is they always seemed satisfied. They never checked accuracy, but were just satisfied with volume."

Contractor Flays County Administration

There will be no more bids on county projects entered by Ernest Lloyd Construction Co. as long as the present county commissioners court is in office, a spokesman for the Fort Worth contractor said here today.

Attacking the court over awarding a contract to the high bidder on a seal coating project in and near McLean on Aug. 19, Ted Smith, local contractor for Lloyd said:

"We feel the awarding of the contract was unjust in light of previous biddings when we saved the county thousands of dollars in low bid contracts during the past few years. As a result we will not bid on any more county projects as long as the present administration is in office."

The contract awarded Aug. 19 by the county to seal coat a county road, in two different places, totaled 3.13 miles. Lloyd bid $3,586 while Bell, Braden, Barker and Gilven, Amarillo, bid $3,775—$189 higher than Lloyd.

Smith declared the work done for the county and state in and around Gray County since 1945 totaled $940,800 of which 60 per cent was in payrolls and repairs to machinery. And of the overall amount 60 per cent was spent in Pampa and Gray County—hiring local men, repairing equipment locally, and purchases of as much raw materials locally as were available.

The Pampa office manager for Lloyd added that since 1945 his firm has done $264,000 worth of work for the county in four separate projects—one for $130,000; another for $41,000; one at 66,000; and a small one at $27,000.

"But with all that money in contracts from the county," Smith added, "we have spent more than $400,000 locally since 1945—more than we got from the county." The firm, he continued, has done more than $678,800 worth of work for the state on 10 projects in and around Gray County, one of them the state Highway 70 job, north of Pampa, known as the Pampa-Perryton Highway.

County Judge J. B. Maguire was not available this morning for comment on the action.

Football Chills, Baseball Thrills

Football weather is in the air.

But that didn't stop the Pampa Albuquerque Dukes in a doubleheader Thursday night in temperatures that dropped to a low of 49 degrees early this morning.

Thursday's high mercury reading was 63. By mid-morning today it had risen from the low to 62. The barometer read 29.6 and the humidity, 38.

The forecast? It's anyone's guess.

'INCREDIBLE INTERVENTION'

Socialists Attack Dulles For German Election Stand

BONN, Germany, Sept. 4—UP—The Socialist opposition charged Friday the open backing of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer by United States Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was "incredible intervention" in next Sunday's West German elections.

American high commission officials were upset by the statement. They recalled the furor caused just before the elections in Italy three months ago when United States Ambassador Clare Booth Luce made a similar remark.

Adenauer himself tried to take the edge off the election. The 77-year-old Christian Democrat leader told an election rally in Bonn Thursday night that Dulles, after all, was speaking for and to the American people — not the Germans.

Political observers believed election day was so near the American secretary's statement Thursday at a Washington press conference would have little effect on balloting since voters' minds were already made up.

But the Socialists from party leader Erich Ollnhaur down tried to make political capital out of the remark that defeat of Adenauer would dim possibilities of unifying Germany.

The Socialists sought to damage the position of the pro-Western chancellor by plastering posters throughout the country calling the Dulles statement proof that Adenauer was an "American tool."

The Communists maintained their efforts to hurt Adenauer by resorting to violence in an effort to sabotage the elections.

A third wave of Red agitators was reported streaming to the border in preparation for crossing into West Germany. Travelers told of seeing 1,000 young "goons" en route to Marienborn on the border of the Iron Curtain where they were put up overnight in trains.

Farmers Requested To Watch Leaders

MINERAL WELLS, Tex., Sept. 4 —UP—House minority leader Sam Rayburn warned the nation's farmers Thursday they must watch government administrators "because there is danger of some programs being damaged or wrecked."

Rayburn and Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson, Democratic leader in the U.S. Senate, spoke before some 400 persons, mostly managers and directors, at the 13th annual meeting of Texas Power Reserve Electric Co-operative.

Rayburn didn't identify the new Republican administration as the force responsible for demands of conversion from public to private power, but the Democrat left no doubt he held the GOP responsible.

Rayburn said so far as he could tell, Congress will not go along with proposals to turn public power over to private industry.

The former speaker of the House strongly defended farm parities. He said "every farmer in the months to come should be on the watch tower, because there is danger of some programs being damaged or wrecked."

The Texas Power Reserve Electric Co-operative elected Leo Forrest of Hereford its new president; Pratt Spence of Kaufman, vice president; and Johnny Ammons of Roby, secretary - treasurer.

Osie Cauble of Corsicana and T. R. Qualls of Denton were named new directors, while the organization re-elected directors W. W. Cardwell of Bandera and Fain McDougal of Cuero.

Severe Hurricane Screaming At Sea

MIAMI, Sept. 4 —UP—The season's most severe hurricane wallowed slowly along Atlantic shipping lanes Friday with top winds of 150 miles an hour but far enough at sea not to pose immediate danger to any land.

In a 9 a.m. cst advisory, the Miami Weather Bureau said the big storm was located about 1,000 miles southeast of Miami, moving northwestward at about 15 miles an hour. Hurricane force winds screamed outward from the center 75 miles, with gale winds reaching out as far as 200 miles to the north.

The advisory said the howler probably would continue moving at the same speed for the next 12 hours, slowly curving to a more northerly course.

Closest land to the storm was Puerto Rico, 425 miles away.

An Air Force plane was ordered to make a reconnaissance flight into the hurricane later in the morning to find whether there had been any increase in the 150-mile-per-hour winds clocked by plane Thursday.

Watson added the date for that joint meeting will be set at the Sept. 8 session. Tentative date for the joint meeting was mentioned as Sept. 21 at the general B-I-E meeting yesterday.

War Hero's Body Due

The body of a Pampa war hero is scheduled to arrive in Pampa at 6:50 p.m. Saturday aboard a Santa Fe train from San Francisco.

Sgt. Milo William Bird, 27, of the J. B. Bowers lease south of Pampa, was killed in action July 8 on Korea's Porkchop Hill.

Funeral arrangements are pending the arrival of the body with the Duenkel - Carmichael Funeral Home.

Born Aug. 30, 1926, in Okmulgee, Okla., Sgt. Bird was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Milo Bird.

His first enlistment in the Army came Dec. 3, 1944, and he served with the First Cavalry Division in the South Pacific till October, 1946. Re-enlisting in 1950, the Pampa serviceman served in Korea till March, 1952.

Re-enlisting again, Sgt. Bird landed in Korea June 8—one month to the day before he was killed. His outfit was Company E, 32nd Infantry Regiment, Seventh Division.

A graduate of Pampa High School in the class of 1945, the sergeant played football with the Pampa Harvesters for the three years before graduation.

He was a member of the Central Baptist Church in Pampa.

Surviving are his parents; two brothers, Robert D. Bird and Walker Bird, both of Pampa; three sisters, Mrs. Sally Thompson, Bloomington, Mrs. Barbara Brant, Pampa, and Mary Ellen Bird, Pampa; and a grandmother, Mrs. William E. Davis, Pampa.

Former Nurse Dies In Electric Chair

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 4 —UP— Mrs. Earle Dennison, hollow-cheeked former nurse, was electrocuted early Friday for poisoning her two-year-old niece with arsenic to collect $5,500 insurance.

The 55-year-old widow declared, "God has forgiven me for all I have done," then with apparent resignation but no sign of fear she became the first white woman to die in the Alabama electric chair.

She was pronounced dead at 12:12 a.m. cst, several hours after Gov. Gordon Persons denied her clemency with a statement that "there is no doubt in my mind of Mrs. Dennison's guilt—may God rest Mrs. Dennison's soul."

Mrs. Dennison earlier had lost a legal battle to prove herself insane after confessing she murdered Shirley Diann Weldon by giving her a drink of poisoned orange soda while visiting the Weldon farm home.

She was also indicted for murdering the child's sister, Polly Ann Weldon, in the same way two years before but was not brought to trial for this. She had insured the lives of both children, naming herself beneficiary.

IN CALIFORNIA

Election Race Set

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 4—UP—Earl Warren's decision to retire as governor of California turned the 1954 gubernatorial election into a wide-open race Friday.

The governor's statement Thursday—a 26-line mimeographed handout which he refused to amplify—also left unanswered the question of whether the 62-year-old Republican will finish out his term which is not due to expire until January of 1955.

Warren may clarify his future plans if he holds his regular Friday press conference. But it is extremely unlikely he will endorse or even hint at supporting any of the likely 1954 gubernatorial candidates.

Lt. Gov. Goodwin J. Knight, an announced candidate for governor, expressed pleasure at Warren's announcement he would not seek an unprecedented fourth term.

Knight very nearly campaigned against Warren in the 1950 election.

"The field is wide open and Governor Warren's decision not to run for re-election pleased me greatly," Knight said. "It increases my chances for the nomination."

Some political observers disagreed. They expressed the thought that Warren's early decision to get out of state politics would encourage several candidates to get in the race—both in the Republican and Democratic party—and thus detract from Knight's strength.

Whether Warren finishes out his term or not also will have considerable bearing on the 1954 election picture.

If, as frequently rumored although never hinted by the White House, Warren is in line for a Supreme Court appointment and leaves office before the '54 election, then Knight will have the added advantage of running for governor as the incumbent.

Regardless of whether Warren leaves state service before his term expires or waits until 1955, he is eligible to start receiving a $10,000-a-year lifetime pension from the state when he reaches his 63rd birthday next March.

Firemen Receive New Apparatus

City firemen sent for a price list on resuscitators and received not only the list but a working sample of one this morning.

The apparatus is a portable, oxygen-operated mechanism which can be used on any person from a newly-born child on up. Firemen say it is so simple to operate a child could learn to use it in five minutes. Since there has been no money set up in the budget for such a machine, firemen are going to try and collect the money to buy it.

Hundreds Pay Last Respects To Gen. Jonathan Wainwright

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 4—UP—Additional hundreds filed past the body of Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, an old cavalryman whose deeds gained the respect of the nation, as it lay in state Friday before burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

The line, which included armed service brass, civilians and children, was sorrowful, but there was no open grief for the hero of Corregidor and Bataan, the man they nicknamed "Skinny."

The general was dressed in an olive drab green blouse with four rows of ribbons. His cap, with the gold-encrusted bill of a four-star general, lay in the casket with the body. The casket was flanked by soldiers and flags in Fort Sam Houston Chapel. A bank of flowers grew higher behind the coffin.

Wainwright, who remained behind to "pay the price for his country's unpreparedness," Wednesday died of a clot in a blood vessel of his brain. He died in Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston at the age of 70.

It was at Fort Sam Houston that he began as a second lieutenant his 45-year military career, and he retired there in 1947 to enter the insurance and cattle business.

He died eight years to the day after he stood aboard the USS Missouri and witnessed the signing of the Japanese surrender.

Those who passed his casket included World War Commanders Gen. Walter Krueger, commander of the Sixth Army; during World War II; Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, who headed the First Army; Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson of the Ninth Army; and Maj. Gen. Haydon L. Boatner, acting Commander of the Fourth Army, and his chief of staff, Mj. Gen. N. H. Watson. Krueger, Hodges and Simpson are now retired.

The San Antonio city council voted to close all city offices Saturday, when Wainwright's funeral will be held from the Post Chapel.

The funeral will be private, with admittance by invitation only, but a ceremonial procession was planned from the Chapel to the Grayson Street gate of Fort Sam Houston.

The parade will include, traditionally, the old cavalryman's horse, with an empty saddle and Wainwright's empty boots reversed in the stirrups.

Hollywood Vet Tapering Off

By ALINE MOSBY

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 4 — UP—Fredric March, back in Hollywood after two years, said today he's quit the theater and will do only one picture a year "because I want to taper off a bit."

"I'd retire completely if my wife had her way about it," reflected the two-time Oscar winner. "But I will want to do enough to keep my hand in.

"It's the ham in me, I guess," he smiled.

March celebrated his 56th birthday last week by beginning a role in "Executive Suite" in 1951. Last year he starred in "Man on a Tight Rope" in Germany.

Since then he's traveled in Greece, seen his 21-year-old daughter engaged and vacationed on his Eastern farm with his actress wife, Florence Eldridge.

"We're not looking for any plays" said March as he daubed on greasepaint in his dressing room, a portable trailer that he's carted from picture to picture for 17 years.

"Yes, there's the glamour of opening night," he mused. "But you kind of get wise to yourself after a while. That business of night after night can get kind of boring. I'd rather travel and settle down on the farm for a rest."

Hiller paid a $50 fine for turning in a false alarm.

DALLAS, Sept. 3 —UP—U. S. Treasurer Ivy Baker Priest will arrive in Dallas from Oklahoma City Sept. 18 to speak at the installation of officers of the County Treasurers Association of Texas.

Veteran Jack Benny Begins New Radio-Television Season

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—UP—The old—39, that is — virtuoso from Waukegan is in prime shape to start another radio-television season next Sunday and he attributes this happy state of affairs to the attitude of himself and staff toward their work.

"We work always with the idea of doing the best we can," Jack Benny explained, "but we don't fret about it. If we happen to hit a low spot one week—and everyone does now and then—we don't get into a panic and tell ourselves the next show has to be extra good to make up for it. We just try to make the next one good.

"Also, if we happen to have an unusually good program, we don't begin to press with the idea that the next one has to top it or we'll look bad."

Most Active TV Season

The comedian and his usual radio family will be operating at the old CBS stand every Sunday night. This will be Benny's fourth season on TV and his most active. This time he will do a Sunday TV show every three weeks instead of one a month as last season.

"The radio shows will be taped in advance, as we have been doinb for some time," Benny said. "Most of the television shows will be 'live' but we have put four of these half hour programs on film already and we will spot them when circumstances make it difficult for me to do a 'live' show.

"Funny thing, doing a half hour TV show of my type is tougher than if I did an hour show. In an hour show you can make clean breaks for the commercials. With the half hour type you have to integrate the commercials so you don't lose any more time than necessary.

Public Didn't Like Sketch

"Everything in a half hour show has to be dovetailed and pointed to getting in the most in that space of time. I have to keep punching every minute. With an hour show, I could wander in and out from time to time, use a long sketch if I wanted to, and other performers would get more of a chance.

"Now, last season we did a long Jekyll-Hyde sketch on one program. Writers and directors who saw it said it was the best thing we'd done. But the public's reaction wasn't nearly so good. You know why? The sketch used up nearly all of the 30 minutes and there wasn't time for the usual fooling around that the audience has come to expect from me when I'm out there just as Jack Benny. Which points up what I meant about the advantages of an hour program where the sketch would have taken up just part of the time."

President Slates Two Conferences

DENVER, Sept. 4—UP — President Eisenhower scheduled two conferences at his summer offices at Lowry Air Force Base Friday as he continued the routine of his half-work, half-play Colorado vacation.

The President was to meet Gen. Joseph T. McNarney of San Diego, Calif., head of the Consolidated Aircraft Corp., first and then confer with Sen. Eugene D. Milliken (R-Colo.).

Mr. Eisenhower had a busy day Thursday before he got away from office routine for his customary afternoon of golf.

He appointed Louis B. Toomer, 60, head of one of the two Negro banks in Savannah, Ga., as Register of the Treasury. Toomer has been active for several years in the Republican organization of Georgia.

Toomer's appointment was seen as a compromise by prominent Republicans since his earlier selection as Georgia's customs collector was blocked by Sen. Walter F. George (D-Ga.). Toomer said his appointment shows "what the GOP thinks of the Negro compared to what the Democrats thought."

The President also authorized the use of 10,000 tons of grain held by the Commodity Credit Corp., for famine relief for the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan. The assistance was permissible under a law of last march allowing disaster aid to "friendly peoples" within a $100 million limit.

Harold E. Stassen, director of the Foreign Operations Administration, was put in charge of the Jordan relief program, which was expected to be a new and major factor in the East-West tug of war for support of the Arabian countries.

Twister Hits Tulsa Homes

A brisk cold front whipped up showers in some Southwestern states Friday, and spawned a small tornado in the Tulsa area Thursday.

The Tulsa twister hit a residential district, uprooting trees and damaging roofs, but there were no injuries and police said damage was not extensive.

Missouri received some locally severe thunderstorms, and the telephone company reported some minor power failures in the Joplin-Neosho, Mo., vicinity Thursday.

Colorado, New Mexico and Wyoming, meanwhile, had cool temperatures and little or no moisture, while heavy to medium showers were reported Friday in Texas.

Lightning made a direct hit on a radio station tower, streaked into a studio and struck an engineer on the arm during a violent electrical and thunderstorms that dropped 2.44 inches of rain into Gainesville, Tex., Thursday.

Much of North Texas received heavy thunderstorms Thursday and South Texas Friday.

The direct hit by lightning was on radio station KGAS' tower, putting the Gainesville station off the air an hour and 35 minutes. Engineer J. O. Miller's arm was numbed, but not seriously injured.

Forecasts for the Southwest predicted showers only in the eastern and southern portions of Texas, while fair or partly cloudy skies and cooler temperatures were expected in Texas and slightly warmer readings elsewhere.

Thursday's high temperatures included 102 degrees at Presidio, Tex., 93 at Columbus, N. M.; 78 at Grand Junction, Colo.; and 67 at Fort Bridger, Wyo.

Women's Hat Used To Be Heavy Load To Support

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—UP—Today's hats, mere dabs of this and that, rest lightly on the heads of today's women.

In great-grandma's day it was different.

'Way back yonder a fellow named Arthur Munchausen of Independence, La., got to thinking about the heavy load the ladies had on their heads and put their mind to inventing. His invention, still on file at the U. S. Patent Office, was called "hat."

It wasn't a hat, exactly — Munchausen described his innovation as a "means for supporting ladies bonnets." The invention, he said, put a lady's headgear "above and out of contact with the wearer."

Weighed More Than Hat

It took the weight of the towering toppers of old off a woman's head and put it on her shoulders. The gimmick consisted of some steel braces which must have weighed more than the hat. They rested upon the shoulders and propped the hat up.

Moreover, Munchausen said, his invention kept the wearer "head-cooled."

The inventors of old had imagination. Consider C. M. French and W. H. Francher of Waterloo, N. Y., who in 1862 came up with something that would allow a farmer to farm and make war at the same time. It was a combined plow and gun and, the inventors said, could be used either way. They said it would be useful "in savage feud or guerrilla warfare."

Cow Scaring Device

In 1860, Stephen Scotton of Richmond, Va., took to fretting about cows that made a nuisance of themselves taking naps on railroad tracks. So he invented what he called "an improved device for shooting gravel at cows upon the tracks."

The gravel was fired at the bosses, "via force of steam." The gadget worked "like a gun barrel." Scotton guaranteed the gravel would not harm the animals or cut their milk production. It just scared them back to pasture.

The old-time invention that I particularly liked, though, was the brain child of Friedrich Bardele, of Milwaukee, who thought up a new kind of rat exterminator.

No Flaws in This One

Let Bardele describe it as he did in 1897:

"Take some ground cork, some salt, pepper or other thirst-inducing substance and a palatable food like butter or lard mixed with flour and sugar.

"The rats will eat the mixture. The cork swells inside them and the rats will seek water.

"After they find water the pests will swell up and break open.

"The wonderful part about my invention is that the rats when they become thirsty will leave the building and run off to die elsewhere."

Lions Speaker Declares Good Driving Is Good Citizenship

"We can't live without the automobile.

"And we are not doing a good job of living with it."

That's the opinion of Texas Highway Patrol Sgt. Pat Spier, Amarillo, who told members of the Pampa Lions Club Thursday noon that "accidents don't just happen—they are caused occurrences—somebody fell down."

One of the instructors in the Pampa police school, underway this week and next in the corporation courtroom, Sgt. Spier maintained there are three types of bad drivers: (1) those who can't do any better, (2) those who don't know any better; and (3) those who do know better but won't do any better.

"Good driving is good citizenship," the sergeant summed up.

In his opening remarks, Spier spoke on jury duty, insisting that to serve was "one of the greatest civic duties."

"To serve wisely and judiciously on juries," he reiterated, is a "great step toward law enforcement and the American way of life."

Prior to Spier's speech, Miss Ann Jordan, Lions Club pianist for the last two years, presented Miss Jackie Robertson, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Robertson, 448 Graham, to the club. Miss Robertson, a Pampa High School senior, will be club pianist for the coming year.

Before Miss Jordan was able to get away from the meeting, however, she was presented a few tokens of the club's appreciation: eraser, scissors, pad, pencils, ink, crayons, paste, big lollipop—and, finally, a leather suitcase for use when she goes to college in Canyon in the near future.

Ed Myatt, first vice president, did the presentation honors.

DEAN

overpower him alone but failed.

"I thought I was a pretty good wrestler," he said. "But before I could get my arms released about 20 people were on me. They were North Korean soldiers and homeguards.

"They wrenched my arms behind my back, tied me up and put me in the hoosegow, and then into a box about the size of this table."

He pointed to a table about three feet square.

Lost Boots

Dean said his feet were swollen and he took off his boots.

"That gave them the idea, so they took them and gave me some rubber shoes without bottoms. I had to stuff in newspapers. It was a long time before I could find any shoes big enough for me."

Following his capture, Dean said, he was taken from town to town and from house to house.

Dean said the Communists held him at Mampo until Jan. 12, 1951, and then took him back to the North Korean capital of Pyongyong where he remained until Feb. 6, 1953.

He said he reached Kaesong Aug. 6.

Lived Well in Kaesong

"I lived like a plutocrat in Kaesong," Dean said. "I stayed in the old Seventh Division cutpost there. It's a beautiful place. It even had a waterfall. I bathed in the waterfall three times a day.

"They gave me a Chinese cook. All I wanted. They gave me a drink I had tea, meat, bread and butter. of vodka every night."

The treatment was not so courteous in the early days, though, Dean recalled.

Shortly after the North Koreans learned his identity, they held a press conference. The newsmen present were local Korean correspondents, he said.

Questioned for 68 Hours

Dean said military officers threatened him but did not beat him. The Reds used teams of interrogaters who took turns questioning him.

"It was 68 hours the first time," he said. "The interpreters wore out. They gave me a respite. Next time it was only 44 hours. The third go was 32 hours."

On Oct. 2, 1950, he said, the Communists gave up trying to get information from him.

Segregation Ends In Topeka Schools

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 4—UP—Segregation in elementary schools of Topeka was ended Friday in a school board session that lasted into the early morning hours.

The surprise move came by a vote of 5 to 1.

There has been no segregation in high schools or junior highs for it had become cause for a Supreme Court suit that still is pending.

The Topeka board of education, consisting of five men and one woman, was about to approve Negro bus transportation for the coming year, when Board President Jacob Dickinson introduced a resolution to halt all school segregation.

The single negative vote was cast by Mike Oberhelman, past president of the board, who said he was "not against ending segregation, but I think the motion is ill-timed."

The resolution states: ". . . it is the policy of the Topeka Board of Education to terminate maintenance of segregation in the elementary grades as rapidly as practicable."

The about-face in policy came less than a month after a changed school board, consisting of three new members, took office. Attempts to introduce similar resolutions in the previous board never came to a vote because of lack of a second, or addition of riders that made those supporting the measure unable to approve it.

It was not known what effect the action would have on the segregation case, one of six pending before the Supreme Court. A second hearing is scheduled in December.

We believe that one truth is always consistent with another truth. We endeavor to be consistent with truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments and the Declaration of Independence.

Should we, at any time, be inconsistent with these truths, we would appreciate anyone pointing out to us how we are inconsistent with these moral guides.

Free World Trade

In a recent debate conducted by Facts Forum on wheher or not tariffs should be abolished, the following argument was used in favor of tariffs:

"Antimony is a vital mineral. Suppose a foreign nation would like to destroy America's antimony industry. By using slave or near-slave labor and subsidizing production, it would sell antimony in our market way below cost.

"American producers couldn't possibly compete. They would have to shut down. Skilled labor would be dispersed into other industries. Plants and mines would fall into ruin.

"When it had thus achieved a monopoly on our market, the foreign nation would raise its prices. The American consumer would have enjoyed a brief period of low prices at foreign expense; but in the end he would pay for it a thousand times over."

This argument for tariffs contains so many subtle, hidden errors, many readers will not readily see them, except those of you who are used to examining arguments closely to find the flaw.

We list the flaws by number in the order of their appearance:

1. Antimony is no more "vital" to national defense than any thing else. As the economist W. M. Curtiss says in The Tariff Idea: "Once the door is opened to the granting of special favors there is no logical point at which to stop.

"What industry is NOT essential to national defense? In two global wars, we have discovered that more than men and guns and tanks and planes are essential. Yes, even peanuts!

"If such national defense reasoning is followed, the logical end is to close our borders to the importation of everything."

2. Slave labor might produce antimony below Russian cost. But not necessarily below American cost. We are rapidly developing mechanized mining. It would be possible to reach the point soon in which labor is not the major cost of mining. ONE American working with a machine such as the "Col-Mol" can produce coal cheaper than 20 SLAVES of any country. Such machines would be available for all mining.

3. "When it had thus achieved a monopoly . . ." is exactly the same argument used back in the eighties about the advantage of big corporations over small corporations. It was feared that by these tactics big corporations could drive all small producers out of business.

This never happened to any dominant degree. The nearest thing to monopoly we ever had in the steel industry was when U. S. Steel controlled 50 per cent of steel production. At the same time there were nearly 1,000 steel producers of all kinds who refused to be driven out of business.

4. "Briefly . . . it would be impossible for a foreign producer of antimony or anything else to drive an unprotected American producer out of business in a brief time. It would take years.

Before the Americans gave up the fight they would have experimented with substitutes, new machine techniques, and probably wouldn't be driven out at all. But suppose they were. It wouldn't be briefly. Say for the sake of the discussion, that it would take the foreign competitor five years to drive all the Americans out of business.

During that five year period we would be buying from the foreigner all the antimony we needed. If war were approaching we could stockpile the antimony we bought from abroad. If it were produced cheaply enough to drive Americans out of the business, then we would make a great saving on antimony in those five years. We could spend the money we saved on something else, some other industry, and get rich on our invested savings.

At the end of five years the foreigner has driven out the American producer, so he raises his prices sky high. We can do several things!

First: We don't need the antimony immediately because we've been stock-piling it at cheap prices.

Second: Trade is a two way street. We don't become dependent on the foreigner unless he becomes dependent on us. We pay him dollars for his antimony and he pays the dollars back to us for something he needs.

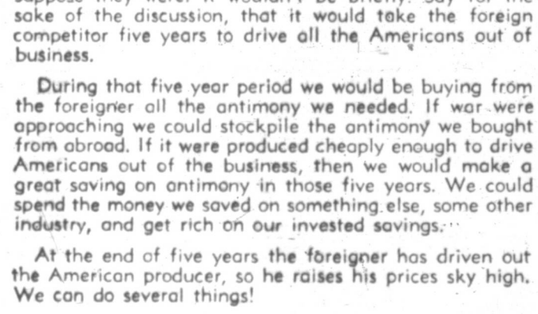

Chances are, since he's using slave labor, he doesn't have many machines: he buys them from us and so becomes dependent on us for machines. We stage a buyers' strike on antimony, telling him his prices are too high. During the period we stop buying, he receives no dollars. He has to stop buying machines.

He'll do anything to get the machines, because he's more dependent on us than we are on him. After all, a free economy can produce more of anything than a slave economy.

The more dependent he becomes the less likely he is to start a war. In fact, if governments never lent any money to each other it would be very doubtful that the totalitarian nations could build up a war machine.

They can't do it through trade because they become dependent on the free nations for machines.

Free trade always discourages wars. If you are dependent on the grocer for your groceries, you aren't likely to set fire to his store.

"The State The Enemy"

III

Here is the last comment on Sir Ernest Benn's book "The State The Enemy."

Under his chapter on "The Stature of Man," which I wish every reader could read, he observes: "If the State machine, from its nature, can have no more moral sense than a Juggernaut or a railway engine, what must we expect in the way of morals from the State - ridden citizen? There are still those who delight in the new world of the common man, to be managed, not by profit - making business people, not by individuals with personal stakes in their doings, not by people who depend for their living upon any form of personal responsibility, but by 'intellectuals' and 'experts' who, being free of all these sordid restraints, are presumed to be full of the milk of human kindness and to be good impartial judges of the public weal. * * *

"There is an urgent need for a clear-cut division between those things which in all circumstances belong exclusively to the individual citizen and those other things, the ordering and arrangement of which the citizen has either permanently or temporarily placed in the hands of State. Unless that line is drawn so clearly that all can see and understand it, we may cease to have the stature of a British citizen and, like Germans or Russians to whom everything is forbidden unless specifically permitted, sink back into indifference, lethargy, and robotism. In the result, our moral and mental stature will shrink.

Stature Of Civil Servant

"The civil servant is the natural weakling, the unadventurous, the security seeker; unless he indulges in serious misbehavior he is assured of his pay and his pension; he takes no chances and runs no risks. The form - fille.s are the people who provide everything for themselves and for him. It is an obvious miuse of language to speak of stature when referring to the functionary who sorts out kitchen sinks from census papers or smudges stamps on passports; but the danger to the stature of the working citizen who must submit himself to the pleasure of these parasitical nonentities is an active and definite threat to the maintenance of the national character. The discussion of control, for which there is a good deal to be said upon both sides, tends to leave out of account the practical difficulty that, in the last analysis, it is the control of the strong by the weak, and the imminent risk that the strong will dwindle and diminish while the weak multiply."

It is evident from the above that Sir Ernest Benn doesn't think too much of the man who wants to get on the government payroll for security.

In the same chapter he remarks:

"Liberty is a moral conception, not a mere matter of pounds, shillings and pence or of the right to do as we like. The trouble is that in a state of liberty some people will do wrong. That only emphasizes the value of liberty and its necessity; for if, in order to prevent some people doing wrong, all people are to be put in a position where they cannot do wrong, the moral damage to those who in no case would do wrong is simply incalculable.

"If the assumption is that the majority from their nature would do wrong, then the outlook for humanity and for civilizatoon is indeed a poor one, and a scheme of government based on that assumption is in itself a condemnation of the nation and the race."

Then he remarks:

"Most of our people may be excused for forgetting that when we were all of us free to render service—or do damage—as seemed good to each of us, our trade reached comparative heigh t which have never since been touched, and our unemployed never exceeded the figure of half a million — a figure which included all the unemployables.

"Liberty is a strictly personal possession which each one of us can cherish and which bring out the best. Control is an external arrangement imposed upon us from outside, which sets up a natural reaction, invites even the best to find the means to evade it, and therefore tends to bring out the worst in all of us. * * *

"Liberty breeds personal pride. Control develops the inferiority complex and the spirit of the underdog. Liberty is a lasting quality, cherished and preserved by the man or woman owning it. It is a quality on which credit, confidence, stability and a plan of life can be founded. State control, on the other hand, possesses none of these advantages. It is a temporary and changing affair, and must always be so, as it serves its purpose. As circumstances alter, so control must be amended, varied and rearranged."

Profits And Losses

Under his chapter on "Profits and Losses" he points out that one of the things that profit does is to pay for losses. If there were no profits, he asks, who would pay the losses?

He observes:

"A very large proportion of these losses are incurred by the State; not only the losses which the State always makes when it enters into the realm of trade and industry, but such losses as are inevitable in the maintenance of criminals and prisoners, the provision for the insane, and so on. However, regarded, these matters are losses — economic charges which produce no corresponding economic credits."

I know of no American citizen with means who sees the blessings of free enterprise and can explain them as well as Sir Ernest Benn.

There was a little rabbit who, as he ran out of the forest fire, cried: "Hooray, I've been defurred."

Stevenson Rally May Turn Out To Be A Flop For Democrats

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Stevensonian Democrats have received premonitory hints that their homecoming hero's 1956 ambitions, if any, may be buried rather than resurrected at the Sept. 14-15 rally in Chicago. It may turn into a tragedy for the 1952 nominee and the party, as so often happens when out-of-power politicians try to harmonize with broken instruments and too many leaders of the band.

As originally planned, the Midwest conference was designed to provide a stage for Stevenson's terpsichorean but purposeful reentry as the interim director of Democratic policies and affairs.

The full spotlight was to have been reserved for him. He was to make the only principal address, which was to be a deft but non-partisan report on his world trip and prospects. There was to be no sharp attack on the Eisenhower administration.

In addition, Stevenson was to confer with regional leaders in a nearby suite in the Conrad Hilton Hotel. Without treading on any individual's or faction's toes, he was to assume a firm control of the organization's machinery. It was anticipated that his personal charm would captivate every regional podesta who did not exert himself on his behalf last November.

NONPOLITICAL GATHERING? — The original program did not contemplate that ex-President Harry S Truman should be invited. As official justification for this omission, the Chicago affair was booked as a nonpolitical gathering. Stevenson's speech at the Chicago Opera House will be delivered under the auspices of the "Bipartisan Civic Committee," with many Republicans as members.

It was quickly noted by politicians, political writers and commentators that Truman would regard such neglect as a mortal affront. Moreover, it would be interpreted as an admission that Stevenson Democrats were not too proud of the former President's record, which would be true.

Never in the campaign, and not even now, has Adlai been able to reconcile his principles with Harry's hard-boiled, backroom concepts.

BELATED INVITATION TO H.S. T.—Within a week after this ringside speculation on the Stevenson-Truman relationship, Democratic National Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell sent a belated invitation to Independence, Mo. Truman accepted by return mail. Thus, there will be two main acts on the bill, which make it as embarrassing for political as for vaudeville managers. Two stars on the same stage are too many.

A former President cannot be kept in a rear row or sneaked around Chicago through back alleys, especially Harry S Truman. For appearance's sake, he must be accorded 21-gun salutes.

But the Stevensonians' gnawing fear is that "Whistlestop" Harry will cut loose with a vicious and ill-tempered outburst against the popular Eisenhower. That will offset settled political and congressional strategy of gentle and loyal opposition to the White House, until Ike has begun to slip in public esteem.

Finally, as forecast here, Dixie's most prominent Democrats have not been invited, or will not attend, even if asked to be on hand. They will not honor any party celebration held under Stevenson-Truman-Mitchell auspices.

Obviously, a Democratic convention without Byrd of Virginia, Byrnes of South Carolina, Holland of Florida, Shivers of Texas and their friends will be like Hamlet without the Prince, the King, the Queen and the weepy Ophelia!

TRUMAN - CHAPMAN APOSTLES OUT — Despite Interior Secretary Douglas McKay's vague pronouncements on power policy—that is, public versus private development he has removed Truman-Chapman apostles of government expansion from key positions in his department. He does not want high-level decisions to be hamstrung by New Dealers in the lower echelons.

He promptly dismissed Evelyn N. Cooper, Chapman's former secretary, in the general reorganization. He got rid of Leland S. Olds, F.D.R.'s power adviser since Albany days. A former member of the Federal Power Commission, Olds was refused Senate confirmation for reappointment because of his radical theories. Chapman then made him a field program adviser at $11,800 a year. Another field man ousted was Roy F. Bessy of Portland, Ore.

McKay had no compunction over these removals when he discovered that Miss Cooper, Olds and Bessy had immediately caught on to the payroll of the Hells Canyon Association, representing it at FPC hearing on whether this project should be handled by the Government or the Idaho Power Company. The trio changed employers overnight, but not their colors.

TRAFFIC HASTE AND WASTE

The Split-Second Drivers Never Save A Minute

(THE ATLANTA JOURNAL)

A man of Atlanta struggled home the other afternoon in the midst of the five o'clock traffic. He shoved in ahead of other people. He slammed his bumper almost against the bumper in front, preventing anyone else from easing into the line. He glowered at those people stranded on a side road who inched forward, trying to find a place in the traffic. He swung in and out of lanes and muttered at drivers who blew their horns in protest.

He whirled into his driveway and spun his car into the garage. He stalked into the house and spurned the wagging dog. He forgot to kiss his wife. He went straight to the cupboard and poured a big drink.

That night he got to wondering. Beginning the next afternoon he tried an experiment.

For a week he followed the same slam-bang tactics, risking his automobile and his life, ignoring the rights and the needs of other people. He totaled up his travel time and divided it by the number of days. He found that his average for getting home was 22 minutes and 19 seconds.

The next day he allowed the frantic people — as he had been—to pass him. He held back courteously and permitted other drivers, who also wanted to get home, to slide into the line ahead of him. He held to his own lane and nodded pleasantly to a man who swung close to him.

He drove into his garage and strolled into his house. He patted his dog. He kissed his wife. He ate an apple.

For a week he drove according to this plan. His average time—22 minutes and 19 seconds.

-As one sage sizes up the distinction, a stateman works and prays for good government; a politician merely promises it.

BID FOR A SMILE

When the retired locomotive engineer and his wife went on vacation, she was determined to get his mind off railroading. She figured she had succeeded one day as they stood looking down into the vast depths of the Grand Canyon. The old throttle-puller's eyes bugged wide and his jaws slacked.

Wife — Isn't it stupendous?

Hubby — Boy, oh boy, wouldn't I like to moan my old steam whistle in a hollow like that!

Fair Enough'...

Damon Runyon Jr. Chided For Things He Said About Mother

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

I cannot understand how any man could bring himself to write as horribly about his mother as Damon Runyon, Jr., has in an article of short-book length entitled "Father Dear Father." He depicts her as a shallow, brutal drunkard who finally died of drink, without due allowance for the wretchedness of a wife and mother cast aside by a terribly selfish, philadering husband who had been a spectacular sousé himself and a burden on the patience of his friends.

Father, Dear Father lacked the love and charity to bear with one driven to drink by his own meanness.

Bill Corum wrote, when Runyon died, that he had worked with Damon for 25 years but could not rightly say he knew him. I can say the same and my acquaintance went back to 1915 when Jess Willard was training for his ten-rounds with Frank Moran at the Old Garden. Damon had been up in the majors a couple of years then and he was a sort of idol to other goggle-eyed cubs from the sticks. We were out of the old Western league, he from Pueblo and I from Desmoines, but success and celebrity had singled him out like a spotlight whereas I was confused, timid and scrambling around on all kinds of assignments from fires in the Erie Basin where the Germans were burning British freighters to a quick look at Willard "on your way in to the office."

Runyon was very kind. Like many other New York stars of those days, he took the initiative to be helpful, I say he was kind and he was, but he had a streak of cruelty which rambles like a vein through his son's weird story. He could write beautiful sentimentality and some of his verse, which his son low-rates, was real poetry. He proved beyond question that he knew the importance of kindness to children and the pain of slight and neglect. Toward his end he revealed in one of his few personally cutting paragraphs that for about 30 years he had hated a supercilious pundit on the old Tribune who had a habit of pouncing on petty errors of grammar by sport-writers and throwing them into prominence for, no other purpose than to hurt. He had pinked Damon for some such lapse and Damon never forgave. Runyon was more sensitive than any of us realized, for he was not a confiding man, and his work expressed a gentleness which his son and unfortunate daughter, who later went "mental," never enjoyed.

Young Damon became a souse, too, and finally saved himself through Alcoholics Anonymous, but the young man takes too little blame to himself for his sloppy start in life and journalism. Other failures come readily to mind, children of friends and colleagues, who were raised in affectionate homes by parents who set them an example of honor and decency. In my set, once a boy turned his back on home and went out "to seek his fortune," he never wrote home for money. He would sling hash, push a wheelbarrow, join out with a circus or fight preliminaries.

But he would not send home for money. This young man was not ashamed to accept $200 a month from a father dying terribly of cancer and he even married when he was out of a job, and not yet making traction. Others among the children of my friends have done about the same, with no sense of shame or shortcoming. One couple, having given their children much better treatment than duty called for, have gone into old age paying for divorces for these shiftless tramps, staking them to new starts in life out of their savings and declining income, and raising assorted grandchildren. So, it can hardly have been neglect and lack of understanding that made a bum and a lush of Damon, Jr. He himself provided the raw material.

Slavish to a sense of truth which sometimes seems captious, I have often corrected individuals who spoke of Damon's generosity to bums; as his son does here. A kid who had been an office boy and later a hustler around the fight racket, broke down and sob bed in my room at the Drake in Chicago. I had met him at the Stadium and had asked the usual question: "What do you hold?"

"No pair," he said, "I can't seem to pair anything."

I offered him $10 and he gave me the proud no-no but next morning he was at my door. He was actually hungry. But that wasn't why he cried. He cried because after running a hundred errands for Damon at many ringsides, Damon had responded to his touch with $2. "A two-dollar touch" is a synonym for a "bum" in that set.

Jack Kearns had the same experience when the snow melted and Dempsey had spent lavishly on Damon on a trip to Europe.

Young Damon really has got going with this piece. It is the sort of thing that people mean when they say, "That's Ibsen!" although I never read a page of Ibsen, finding gloom readily enough without trying that hard. Even if my mother had been the rum-pot that he says his mother was, there would not be enough money in the world to pay me to write that way of her, but Eleanor Roosevelt's hawking of the moral debility of her father and her uncles may have established a new standard.

Young Damon could do us a public service by demolishing the sentimental figure of the loyal pal in the night clubs and the Broadway underworld which has no reference to any character living or dead. His father died friendless and the late Bob Barry, who squandered thousands while well-known fourflushers ducked the grunt, had only one visitor from Toots Shor's in the four dreadful years that he took to die of multiple sclerosis.

That one wasn't any old pal of Bob's prosperous days. He was Rex Smith, of American Airlines.

LOOKING SIDEWAYS

By WHITNEY BOLTON

REMAINDERS:

No one is doing much about him, but if I were in the business of looking for a man who can be funny in print I'd take a plane and go see a fellow in Los Angeles named Mike Connolly, who does some words for a local film trade paper and seems happy to be doing it. . .We used to know each other and our conversation always was brilliant, like this: "Hell, Mike, what's new?" . . . "Not much," he'd snap right back, "and you?" . . .That kind of scintillating stuff. . .But don't get touted off Connolly because, at the time, both of us were so bored with our respective lots that conversation with anyone wasn't worth the effort. . .Connolly is the kind of man who sees a picture like "Titanic" and says nothing until four months later when, suddenly, his entire comment on it is this: "Come to think about it, what were the Astors doing with an inside cabin?" . . .Or, stuck for a final line for the day, will slowly type: "This is my Last Will," cried the actress. "From now on I'm going out with guys named Bob." . . .He is also a man who gets curious as to what effect the sale of an entire novel to LIFE magazine has on total sales of a book like Hemingway's "The Old Man and the Sea" or Michener's recent one, "The Bridges at Tokori." . . .Mike discovered that Hemingway's superb book only sold 40,000 copies across the counters which proved to Mike, at least, that it is deadly for a top author to sell his novel outright to LIFE where people can read it for 20 cents instead of $3 . . .He also gets fascinated by what minor distresses arise in the life of a much - publicized woman — any much-publicized woman. . .He investigated into Rita Hayworth's life, for example, and discovered that she has a tough time getting insurance on her car . . Nothing cosmic, just a facet no one else ever thought about.

The other man who gets my attention and who is rising fast in the cosmic business is a lad named Herb Shriner. . .I have been beating drums for Shriner for several years now, in the hope that his plain, Middle West humor will reach print. . .Any man who can stand up in front of an audience and get rocking laughs merely by saying with bucolic simplicity, "I come from the kind of town where on Saturday nights the boys say 'Let's go watch hair cuts,' " is a man who is a born comic in prose or on stage or anywhere else. . .He is an authentic clown. . .It is claimed that Shriner patterns too plainly after the late and certainly great Will Rogers, but I can't see that any more. . . Shriner has his own brand of small town American humor and I would say that he is his own man without any overtones of Rogers or even the deathless, to me, Kin Hubbard whose Abe Martin was one of the brilliant creations of true Americana. . .Shriner has a rueful innocence that is his own style and his commentary is always fresh and pertinent. . .Shriner has the one about two bums philosophizing on a park bench and one says: "I like that wall-to-wall carpeting." . . "What are you waiting for?" says the other. . ."Walls, says the first. . .It's not hilarious but it is elemental, true humor.

No one ever accused Errol Flynn of being a fast man with a quip, but the fact is that the old fascinator can be very funny and, in interviews, the jokes run swiftly, usually too swiftly for print. . . There was a time when an astonishing serious lady was interviewing Flynn for a major magazine and asked him what it was like to be a romantic star. . ."Oh, it's not bad," said Flynn, "except for the nightmare. It is written in somebody's contract, not mine, that whenever I make a picture one certain line of dialogue must be in it. The same line. All of the writers use it. The scene always has me running ahead of the gang, suddenly stopping, looking back and saying: 'All right, men, you know what you have to do now.' " . . .The lady was breathless and said: "And what is that, Mr. Flynn?", . ."Get up and get out of here!" said Flynn, and fled from her as from the plague.

Local Teenagers Stage Style Show

A style show Thursday evening at the Singer Sewing Center featured dresses made by local teenagers who studied this summer under Mrs. Christine Baker, sewing instructor.

The girls entertained their parents at the showing, and costumes were judged by Miss Edith Kral, Miss Mary Moorman, home economics teacher and Miss Helen Dunlap, Gray County Home Demonstration agent.

Participating in the informal show were Miss Joanne Jones, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Calvin Jones; Carolyn McLaughlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McLaughlin; Linda McDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. McDonald, Jr.; Donna Brand daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Eugene Brand of Skellytown; and Miss Nancy Goodnight, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray D. Goodnight.

The event was held at 6 p.m. in the local Singer shop.

RUTH MILLETT

A widow of 65 who says she is in good health and financially secure, asks: "Just how is a woman my age supposed to fill her days and evenings when her children are busy with their own lives and nobody in the world needs her any more?"

Perhaps the loneliest and saddest words in the world are "Nobody needs me any more." But is a woman ever justified in believing them?

Certainly not until she has looked beyond her own kin to find needs she can fill.

Just because a woman feels her own children "don't seem to need her," doesn't mean she hasn't anything to offer anyone in the world.

And granted it is best to be needed by the persons one loves, does that rule out a second best—to be willing to give what one has to offer wherever needed?

Older women who don't rule out that second best are the happy ones. They look around them to find others who are as lonely as they are and in doing something for them to ease their own loneliness.

They see needs beyond their own families and instead of saying, "It's too bad," about someone who needs a helping hand—they pitch in and help.

There is so much in any neighborhood or town or city that an able-bodied woman can do that no woman should ever convince herself that nobody needs her.

If a woman is able to look beyond her family, she can always find people who need her.

And in finding new ways of being useful she may learn a valuable lesson: her own family still needs her, but in a different way. Even though they may not need her help with their affairs, they need to know that she is useful and happy and doing something with her life.

Waist Cincher Is Not Slimming Like Girdle

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

Does anyone in your crowd wear a waist cincher (elasticized belt) with the intention of slimming her waist?

If so, you've probably observed that this way around the weight problem is the wrong one. Don't you agree that trying to take in inches by super-tightness about the waist gives the look of a sausage squeezed in the middle? The hourglass silhouette is not in style, especially for teen-agers.

Waist-cincher belts have the advantages of staying put, holding skirts up well, and looking pretty on small waists. They weren't made to to a girdling job or to take a tuck in a girl's flesh. If you're keen on this type of belt—and many girls seem to be—get one that fits you with ease and doesn't squeeze you.

If you're on the bulky side, you'll look slimmer with a non-elastic belt that can't do any squeezing. Get the type called "contour." These belts are made to conform to the curve of the body and give you a good fit. A belt that's tapered in circumference, particularly if it's wider in back than in front, is another good slimmer.

MATURE PARENT

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

There's a tear in the coat of the new school suit. We stare at it, throw down our dish towel and cry, "Didn't I tell you to change that suit before you went out to play? Didn't I tell you that?"

We don't expect an answer and give our son no chance to find one. Instead we cantinue with mounting wrath, "Go upstairs to your room. When you're ready to say 'I'm sorry,' you can come down. Such carelessness! No thought ever for what it costs to keep you looking decent at school! No thought . . ."

We pile dishes in the closet furiously—but as the afternoon wanes and no sound comes from upstairs, we begin to feel uneasy. By the time we're ready to set the table, our rage has subsided. So we go to the foot of the stairs and call, "You better tell me you're sorry for disobeying! Dinner's nearly ready . . ."

The door does not open. We start the gravy a little nervously. A tray? There's something wrong about the tray. What then? He has to eat. But you can't force a child to say "I'm sorry" if he doesn't want to.

This is the dilemma in which we find ourselves when we go in for emotional, thoughtless ultimatums.

When we do indulge our appetite for them, they are bound to involve us in exposed positions from which there is no escape except through humility.

In this case, we have left ourselves no out that I can see but to go upstairs to the closed door, open it and say "Jimmy, I had no right to demand you to tell me you are sorry for disobeying. Your feelings about what you did are your private affair. But I do think it is fair to require you to pay part of the re-weaving bill for your coat. How much do you think you can afford to pay every week from you allowance?"

When we and Jim have decided on an amount that seems just to us both, he should be asked to come down to his dinner.

Nearly always our refusal to reverse treatment of a child is due to our fear of losing face. Perhaps we ought to remember that empire builders who were so concerned with losing face that they couldn't retreat from bad decisions have lost the empires.

Some years ago, my work brought me into contact with a psychiatrist of distinguished reputation among his colleagues.

One day, I had occasion to read the case record of one of his child patients whom many clinics had failed to help. Toward the end of it, I came upon several pages recently dictated by the psychiatrist. They were headed "Reversal of Treatment Procedure." The opening paragraph began:

"My judgment of this child's needs has been mistaken . . ."

Did he finally succeed in reaching the unreachable child? Of course he did.

Our refusals to alter treatment of a youngster can bring us great confusion and unhappiness. If we are not worried about our child's opinion of us, but are interested in teaching him what he should learn, we should not find it hard at all to alter our unproductive treatment so that it serves our youngster instead of our personal prestige.

The reputation of the distinguished psychiatrist is not widely known beyond his own profession. He was one of the three or four people I have known in my life who was almost completely free of a need to justify himself. This disinterest in his reputation, in his personal prestige, freed his fine mine to serve many children.

After reading his dictation in that case record, I not only knew why he was respected as a technician, but why he was revered as a human being. Watching him in operation did much to teach me what power lies in humility.

Unless we reach for some of it, too, we won't be able to correct the positions into which impulse and anger betray us.

Fruity hot coffee cake, fresh and aromatic from the oven, has always been popular fare for breakfast or brunch. In fact, any meal will be a special occasion if you serve an Easy Pineapple Kuchen. It is quickly made with a package of hot roll mix and the delicious, fruity flavor of crushed pineapple and Maraschino cherries coated with brown sugar.

PINEAPPLE KUCHEN

1 package roll mix
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
¼ cup butter or margarine
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup Maraschino cherries
1 (9 oz.) can of crushed pineapple
2 tablespoons flour

Make sweet dough of the roll mix. (Follow directions on package.)

After the first rising, pat half the dough in a greased, 10-inch, tube cake pan. Sprinkle with half the sugar, butter and cinnamon and the cherries that have been cut in quarters.

Add rest of dough, patting down evenly. Spread with drained pineapple. Combine remainder of sugar, butter and cinnamon with the flour and sprinkle over top.

Let this double in size. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees, for 40 to 45 minutes.

This will make a 10-inch kuchen (about 8 to 10 servings).

Two In One For Trucks

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 —UP— It's been two different seasons in one year for pitcher Virgil Trucks, who had a 5-4 record with the Browns but has a 13-2 mark as a member of the White Sox. Since being traded to the White Sox, Trucks' only losses came in games in which the White Sox were shut out — 2 to 0 by Washington and 3 to 0 by New York.

Locke In 4th Iron-Man Role

By UNITED PRESS

Amarillo's Ed Locke, a hard-throwing right hander reminiscent of the early "iron-men" pitchers of baseball, pitched and won his fourth doubleheader of the season Thursday night.

Locke gave up only nine hits in pitching 14 innings of one-run baseball at Lubbock as the Gold Sox won the first game 9 to 1 and captured the second 2 to 0. By scattering four hits in the opener and five in the nightcap, Locke won his 20th and 21st games.

Pampa's Sad Sam Williams, the West Texas - New Mexico League's leading pitcher, won his 25th game against Albuquerque, but he was also charged with a loss.

Williams was batted from the box as the league-leading Dukes won the opener at Pampa 11 to 2, but returned in the second game in relief to take credit for a 7 to 6 Pampa victory.

Sad Sam Gets 25th Win In Nightcap

By BUCK FRANCIS
Pampa News Sports Editor

The Oilers kept their playoff hopes alive once again last night by coming from behind to notch a 7-6 eight-inning decision over the Albuquerque Dukes in the second game of a doubleheader after the Dukes had captured the opener, 11-2.

There will be lots of pre-game activity before tonight's game between the Abilene Blue Sox and Pampa Oilers at Oiler Park.

Several special events, being held in conjunction with "Radio Appreciation Night" are on tap.

Feature portion of the program will be the blind-folded wheelbarrow race between Manager I. B. Palmer of the Blue Sox and Porky Pawelek of the Oilers. The managers will be blind folded and given a wheel barrow, and, starting from centerfield, will race to see who can find homeplate first.

Rev. Dick Crews will give a rendition of "Casey at the Bat," which he is becoming famous for.

Other events will include a base running and base walking race; a hitting contest; a throwing contest between the two catchers, Palmer and Pawelek and the appearance of the umpire's friend, "I. B. Hershel Pawelekseitz.

The pre-game activities will begin around 8 p.m. The game will start some 15 minutes later.

The win finished the Oiler-Duke meetings for the season with the Dukes holding a slight 11-9 edge for the year. The Oilers held a 7-3 advantage over the Dukes in games played here but the Dukes took eight out of 10 at Albuquerque.

Last night's split enabled the Oilers to keep in sight of the first division. Fourth place Clovis divided a doubleheader with cellar dwelling Abilene to retain their 2½ game edge over the Oilers in the battle for a first division berth.

Abilene moves in to Oiler Park tonight to open a two-game series. Tonight is "Radio Appreciation Night" at Oiler Park. Several special evenis are on tap.

Rolando Rodriguez, who hurled brilliantly in relief last night in the second game of the twinbill, will get the starting nod for the Oilers tonight. Rodriguez pitched 2 1-3 innings of hitless and runless ball last night against Albuquerque after relieving starter Eddie Hughes in the fifth. Rodriguez, however, was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh and Sad Sam Williams hurled the eighth inning to gain credit for the win.

It was Williams' 25th win of the year against 12 setbacks. The Negro rookie righthander had started first game of the doubleheader only to receive faulty support afield by his mates to lose his 12th game of the year. Only one of the eight runs charged against Willaims in the opener was earned.

Quincy Barbee and Manny Temes were the men of the hour following last night's uphill Oiler victory in the nightcap. Barbee brought the Oilers from behind in the seventh inning when he led off the bottom of the seventh with a homerun to tie up the game and sent it into overtime. The blast, Barbee's 13th roundtripper of the year, was a line drive over the straightaway centerfield wall and tied the score at 6-6.

An inning later, Temes crashed a single between third and short with the winning run. Williams had led with a walk and was sacrificed to second by Eddie Krewall.

The Dukes held a 4-0 lead after one inning of the nightcap and were leading 6-2 in the fourth when the Oilers began to play catchup.

Albuquerque had easy going in the first game after five Oiler errors had accounted for seven unearned runs in the first four innings to give the Dukes a comfortable 8-1 lead. Veteran Lloyd Brown protected the lead by spinning a nifty 6-hitter to gain his third win for the Dukes.

The Oilers knocked the Dukes' unbeaten pitcher, George Socha, from the box in the seventh inning of the nightcap but the big right-hander wasn't charged with the loss. Socha entered the game with a 13-0 record. The loss went to Joe Hinchman who relieved Socha after Barbee's homer in the seventh and a single by Max Molberg.

Molberg, filling in at shortstop in the second game, received a badly skinned knee from a slide into second base on an attempted steal.

Pony, Duke Managers Top 1953 Pilots

ABILENE, Tex., Sept. 4 —UP— Tom Jordan of Albuquerque and Jackie Sullivan of Plainview shared honors Friday as Managers of the Year in the West Texas - New Mexico League.

The Class C baseball league's president, Hal Sayles, announced Friday that the two managers tied in Manager of the Year voting by managers, sports writers and radio broadcasters in the circuit.

The Albuquerque Dukes were chosen by sports writers and radio men at season's start to finish on top of the West Texas - New Mexico League standings and that's where Jordan had them Friday.

Sullivan's Plainview Ponies were rated no better than seventh, but Friday were firmly entrenched in third place in the standings.

Trabert, Rosewall U. S. Net Favorites

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 4—UP—Tony Trabert of Cincinnati and little Ken Rosewall of Australia were favored to sweep into the semi-finals of the U. S. Tennis championship Friday as the list of survivors is slashed to three Americans and three dangerous foreign threats.

Four Americans — Trabert, Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, Budge Patty of Los Angeles and Gardnar Mulloy of Miami—fought their way into the quarter-finals Thursday but one must go out Friday in a showdown between the second-seeded Trabert and Patty, the 1950 Wimbledon champion who upset Australia's Mervyn Rose to gain his berth in the quarters.

Four foreigners also advanced but there, too, a cut is coming as Rosewall takes on rangy Sven Davidson of Sweden, conqueror of lefty Art Larsen.

Patty Plays Superbly

On Saturday, top-seeded Seixas tangles with Kurt Nielsen of Denmark in a repeat of their Wimbledon final and Mulloy plays Lew Hoad of Australia to complete the semi-final brackets.

Patty played superb tennis to upset the veteran Rose, 7-9, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 and his meeting with Trabert was expected to produce the most sizzling match so far. Trabert whipped Ian Ayre of Australia, 6-2, 7-5, 6-2.

Rosewall downed Tom Brown of San Francisco, 9-7, 7-5, 6-2, but Davidson spent a good part of the afternoon earning the right to meet Rosewall with his five-set upset of Larsen, frittered away a commanding lead and never recovered, with Davidson winning, 1-6, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4.

Seixas, Wimbledon champion, played perhaps the greatest match of his career in whipping unseeded Billy Talbert of New York. After pulling up 2-2 in the first set, Talbert failed to win another game as Seixas rattled out a 6-2, 6-0, 6-0 triumph.

Richardson Loses in Straight Sets

Nielsen came back to whip Fred Kovaleski of Washington, 6-3, 5-7, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, while Hoad was putting out Ham Richardson of Baton Rouge, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, and Mulloy was gaining an impressive victory over bearded Torben Ulrich of Denmark 3-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-2.

In the women's singles, second-seeded Doris Hart of Coral Gables, Fla., shoots for a place in the quarter-finals against Katherine Hubbell of Conway, N. H., Mrs. Baba Lewis of Newtonville, Mass., plays Mrs. Jean Rinkel-Quertier of Great Britain and Mrs. Helen Perez of Encino, Clif., plays the top-seeded foreigner, Mrs. Helen Long of Australia.

They're trying to catch up with defending Champion Maureen Connolly of San Diego, Calif., Althea Gibson of New York, Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, and Mrs. Margaret Osborne DuPont, Wilmington, Del., who reached the quarters Thursday.

Miss Connolly defeated Jeanne Arth of St. Paul, Minn., 6-1, 6-3; Miss Fry defeated Laura Lou Kunnen of Clearwater, Fla., 6-2, 6-1; Miss Gibson ousted Helen Fletcher of England, 4-6, 7-5, 7-5 and Mrs. DuPont defeated Angela Mortimer of Britain, 6-3, 6-0.

AN ACE IN THE CROWD — Dick Oden of Amarillo, center, was the talk of the day at the Pampa Country Club course yesterday for his hole-in-one on the par 4 13th hole during pro-amateur tourney. It was the first ace at the local country club on a par 4 hole. Oden's team in the pro-am event, captained by R. M. Samples of Pampa, finished nine-under par 62 to tie for third. Oden's party above, left to right, are Samples, Johnny Johnston of Quanah, Oden, Dr. W. R. Ballard of Amarillo and Lefty Carithers of Borger. (News Photo)

Unknown Has Early Lead In Celebrities

By PAUL SOUTHWICK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—UP—Sharp-shooting Milton Marusic, 37-year-old Herkimer, N. Y., pro, who claims "the heat doesn't bother me too much," led a field of 27 par-busters in Friday's second round of the 72-hole $15,000 National Celebrities Open golf tournament.

Marusic, who said the intense 100-degree temperatures didn't bother him too much after the first few holes, shot a five-under-par 67 in Thursday's opening round while Lew Worsham of the famed $25,000 Tam O'Shanter wedge shot, carded a 68 when he overshot the pin by 20 feet to bogey on the last hole. Worsham of Oakmont, Pa., sank an identical shot on the last hole of the Tam O'Shanter from 140 feet out to gain a one-shot victory.

Undismayed by the sizzling weather and confident he could keep up the pace on the sun-baked Woodmont course at nearby Rockville, Md., Worsham said, "It's plenty hot, but I can take it three more days."

Bracketed for third with 69's Leo Biagetti of Baltimore, Mike Homa of Rye, N. Y., and Jim Turnesa of Briarcliff, N. Y.

Jimmy Demaret of Kiamesha Lake, N. Y., who won the Celebrities Open last year, dropped out because of the heat, while Sam Snead of White-Sulphur Springs, W. Va., still a popular favorite to cop the $2,500 first prize money, carded a 73.

Perez, Gallardo Clash In F'weight Battle In Garden

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—UP—Lulu Perez, Brooklyn's young featherweight sensation, will fight higher-ranked Dave Gallardo of Los Angeles Friday night at Madison Square Garden for a Nov. 13th shot at top-rated Willie Pep.

Perez, 20, will be risking his string of 19 consecutive victories against the more experienced, 23-year-old California state champion, as nationally televised and broadcast Friday bouts are resumed. The scrap is a 10-rounder.

Speedy, aggressive Gallardo is the fifth-ranking contender for Soldier Sandy Saddler's 126 - pound crown, and Perez is eighth. But classy Lulu was so solidly backed the odds favoring him soared to 3½ to 1.

Gallardo is trained by ex-Champion Chalky Wright, who lost his title to Pep in 1942. Wright has been praying for a Gallardo victory, "so Dave can get at Pep in November and take him apart for me."

Perez claims a winning streak of 21, but Editor Nat Fleischer of the Ring Record Book announced "officially," "his string is only 19."

Regardless of the statistics, handsome, black-haired young Perez shapes up as the classiest young boxer-puncher in any division. He has attracted much favorable comment since he turned pro in June, 1951.

Tribe On Warpath; Eyes 1954 Season

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—UP—Watch out for the Cleveland Indians next year if there is anything to baseball axiom a strong finishing team in one season should be a contender in the next.

The Indians have one-way tickets for a trip to nowhere as far as the current pennant struggle is concerned, even though they now have moved up to tie the White Sox for second place.

But they have won 15 out of their last 17 games and have played good ball while doing it, so things could be considerably better in 1954. And one of the big reasons for the expected improvement is Negro rookie Dave Hoskins, the kid righthander up from Dallas, who has hurled eight victories for the Indians.

Hoskins scattered 10 hits Thursday to defeat the Athletics 9 to 4, getting a four-run cushion when the Indians put on a rally in the fourth inning. Jim Hegan hit a three-run double for the big blow.

The White Sox dropped back into a tie with the Indians when they lost a 5 to 1 decision to the Washington Senators in a night game. Bob Porterfield allowed the Sox only three hits until he tired after six innings with a strained back and Johnny Schmitz permitted only one in the last three innings.

The Indians and White Sox open a hand-to-hand battle for second place in Cleveland Friday night with Billy Pierce seeking his 18th win for the Sox and Mike Garcia of the Tribe trying for his 17th.

The Yankees stretched their league lead to 10½ games with an 8 to 3 victory over the Browns as Ed Lopat gained his 14th victory against only three losses, although he worked only five innings.

Milwaukee made it two in a row over Brooklyn and cut its National League lead to nine games with a 6 to 1 victory achieved as Ed Mathews smashed his 44th homer with two men on base in the eighth to break a 1 to 1 tie. Jim Pendleton also hit a homer, as Carl Erskine was saddled with his first defeat of the year in Brooklyn after 11 consecutive victories.

Radio Program Producer Has Had Some Trying Experiences

By ALINE MOSBY

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 4—UP— The oldest radio dramatic program, the Lux Theater, begins its 20th year Monday, and considering its narrow squeaks the record is a victory, its producer sighed today.

Nineteen years ago, John Boles and Miriam Hopkins launched the series with "Seventh Heaven." Since then more than 800 one-hour versions of popular movies have been broadcast, starring every big movie luminary except Charlie Chaplin and Greta Garbo.

"But we've had some catastrophic events," producer Cornwall Jackson said with a shake of his head.

"Burt Lancaster forgot to change his watch to daylight savings time and arrived 12 minutes after the program started. A bit player named Ira Glosser read Burt's role—cold—and then Lancaster took over the part.

"I was listening at home and couldn't tell the difference.

"Ira," he added, "became Jeff Chandler."

Van Johnson showed up a minute before broadcast time, causing Jackson to consider switching to the shoe business. This scare was surpassed, however, when a star dropped her false teeth in the middle of a speech but popped them back in her mouth without missing a beat.

Helen Hayes did "Peg O' My Heart" without one rehearsal after Margaret Sullavan became ill. On another program, Edward Arnold was blissfully ignorant of introducing "Rasil Bathbone."

Not counting wayward actors, Jackson's biggest headache is finding movies sutiable for broadcast. Most are "too adult" for a family radio show, he said.

The show has become such an institution that some fans think producer C. B. DeMille still is master-of-ceremonies. He quit in 1945 rather than pay a $1 union fee. He was succeeded by William Keighley and later, Irving Cummings.

Loretta Young and Fred MacMurray hold the record with 25 Lux appearances; Olivia DeHavilland makes her 20th Monday with "My Cousin Rachel."

It's Your Deal

We have received a number of requests for an explanation of the doubling principle in backgammon. One reason is that this principle can be used in many other games for two people.

Let's suppose you're playing a two-handed game with your neighbor or your spouse. Maybe you're playing for a small stake, or perhaps you keep a running score to make the game more interesting. This is important, since otherwise the double is meaningless.

For the sake of argument, let's say that you are playing for one chip per game. Just before it is your turn to act you have the right to say "Double," thus offering to increase the stake to two chips per game.

In backgammon you must make this offer just before it is your turn to roll the dice. In a card game, you would double before drawing a card or before melding, depending on the nature of the game.

If your opponent accepts the double, the game proceeds normally. You are now playing the game for two chips instead of only one chip. If your opponent refuses the double, he must resign. In this case, you win that game and collect the one chip that it was being played for. You then start a new game.

Whenever a player accepts a double, he acquires the right to redouble. If the position looks good to him, later on, he may redouble—thus bringing the stake up to four chips for the game. If the redouble is refused the refuser must resign—thus losing the two chips that the game was then being played for.

This principle continues ad infinitum. In theory, each player may keep doubling until the stake gets fantastically high. In practice, you seldom have a good enough position to double after your opponent has liked his position well enough to increase the stake. If both of you want to increase the stake, one of you is probably wrong—or perhaps the position is so uncertain that both of you are wrong!
